Transcript:

Governor Christie: Every city needs a rebirth. Cities as old and as historic as Trenton go through many of them over the course of our history. The rebirth of Trenton has begun. These projects are an indication of it. But not just the money we're spending and investing but it is also because of the enthusiasm and the commitment of the people of this community, to have a mayor you can be proud of, to have a city council you can be proud of, to have a school board you can be proud of who want to work in concert with the state administration to make sure this city becomes in its rebirth, even greater than it's been in its past. I'm confident that's going to happen. I'm happy to have "Tornado Pride," and so I'm taking this with me now. I don't know if I can take it with me or not but we'll slap this baby on the back of that state vehicle on the way out of here. And I want all of you to understand that I'm not only committed to a new building but a new approach to the way we educate our children supporting our principal and the people who work for her and with her every day so that the families of Trenton do not have to have dreams that are any smaller than the dreams of parents for their children in any other part of this state. That's what I've always been committed to. That's why I've been trying to bring change to the educational system in this entire state. Sometimes politely, sometimes less politely, but nonetheless, my motivation all along has been to help the parents and the children of our state. All of you in this partnership with me are making that happen. I want to thank you for that and I thank you for having me here today.

And now, I guess we're going to get a chance to throw some dirt around and so that's always fun. Thank you all for coming today. I appreciate it very much.
