A prior incident occurred at the South 17th Street School on April 12, 1990. A.S., then 13 years old and in seventh grade, was a student in Courtney's fourth period shop class. Both sides agree that Courtney sent A.S. and two other youths to the office for misbehaving, although A.S. maintains that they were only making noise and eating candy in class, whereas Courtney claims that the three were "taunting and teasing other students." Witnesses gave markedly different accounts of what transpired next. A.S. testified that he secured a note from the vice principal authorizing his readmittance to class, but Courtney insists the three returned without any note. Insofar as the truth can be independently ascertained, Vice Principal Donald Wright confirms that he sent A.S. back with a note allowing reentry.

For whatever reason, Courtney refused to readmit A.S. Courtney contends that the three boys remained outside his class room "cursing and hollering." A.S. says that a passing group of boys started banging on the door and that Courtney, mistakenly thinking that A.S. and the other two were responsible, warned them not to do it again. Depending on who is believed, either A.S. and friends "snuck" back into the classroom and deliberately destroyed several projects on which other students were working (Courtney's version); or A.S. knocked on the door and Courtney ordered three bigger and older students to chase him down the hallway (A.S.'s version).

In any event, three larger students did pursue A.S. and caught him on or near the stairs. Meanwhile, Courtney had been occupied with dangerous power machinery, which he had to turn off before he leave the room. By the time he got to the scene, the larger students were, in Courtney's words, "punching and slapping"

A.S. in retaliation "for [his] messing up their projects." Courtney claims that he intervened to protect A.S. and that he chastised the attackers "for taking the law into their own hands." A.S. paints an entirely different picture, claiming that Courtney "grabbed [A.S.'s] right arm," "twisted it back up," and forced him "to hit [himself] in the face" with his own hand until he started crying. He added that Courtney "pushed [him] down on his left leg," which was already sore due to an unrelated accident. Courtney denies that he ever grabbed A.S., and instead indicates that he physically removed the other children who were beating A.S. After the incident, the school nurse put an ice pack on A.S.'s bruised arm, and by the next morning he was feeling better.

I FIND that Courtney did twist A.S.'s arm and forced him to hit himself in the face in order to make him cry. Inappropriately, Courtney used force as a form of punishment rather than to protect one student from possible harm at the hands of others. A.S.'s testimony was credible because he candidly recognized when he was personally in the wrong, as when he admitted knocking on the door after having been told not to by his teacher. Moreover, A.S.'s version squares better with the vice principal's recollection of events leading up to the encounter and with the bruises on A.S.'s arm immediately afterwards. There is no evidence suggesting that A.S. bears any personal animosity against Courtney or had any ulterior motive to get him into trouble.

(C) Incident on March 13, 1990

Only one month earlier, during the last period on March 13, 1990, Courtney was implicated in a playground incident involving another of his students at the South 17th Street School. Courtney's class and a second class taught by a teacher named Mathews were sharing playground facilities. D.L., age 13, was in Mathews' class at that particular moment, although he also happened to be a student in one of Courtney's other classes. By all accounts, a fist fight broke out between D.L. and another boy under Courtney's supervision. Proofs indicate that D.L. left the area of Mathew's class and came over to pick a fight, even though the other boy was bigger than him. D.L. doesn't remember how or why the fight started, although he acknowledges that "punches were thrown."

Since Courtney was one of the teachers in charge, he properly interceded to stop the fight. Initially, he "grabbed each by their shirt collar and separated them." Both boys continued to swing at each other until Courtney, still holding onto each by the arm, managed to calm down his own student.

What happened next is the subject of controversy. D.L. testified that, after the fight had already ended and the two boys were apart, Courtney "grabbed me by the neck" and "put me in a choke hold." Although D.L. purportedly was not offering resistance, Courtney "applied pressure" until the other teacher, Matthews, told him "to let me go." As he "dragged [him] upstairs," Courtney informed D.L. that he was taking him to the office.

Courtney, on the other hand, asserts that D.L. "started swinging at me," "punching me in the stomach area" and "tried to kick me in the groin." At which point, Courtney says, he let go of the other student and put D.L. in what he described as a "head lock, not a choke hold." If Courtney is to be believed, somehow D.L. "worked his head underneath my arm." Equally unbelievable was Courtney's contention that D.L. somehow must have "twisted and wound up banging his head against my chest." Once D.L. quieted down, Courtney "released him, held onto his arm and took him to the office."

Contrary to Courtney's story, Vice Principal Wright recalled that, during an investigation following the incident, Courtney admitted that he had "grabbed [D.L.] by the neck." Further, Wright described D.L. as an "average student" who occasionally got into trouble but was "no more disruptive than any other student at school." It should also be noted that D.L. was small in stature, stood approximately five feet tall, and weighed about 100 pounds.

I FIND that Courtney intentionally put D.L. in a choke hold after the student fight was over and the use of force was no longer necessary. Additionally, the choke hold is an unacceptably severe form of force to employ against an unarmed little boy and had the foreseeable effect of causing gratuitous pain. Courtney was not truly acting in self-defense, but was attempting to escort the recalcitrant student to the office. Not only was Courtney's testimony inherently implausible, but also it was inconsistent with his own prior explanation shortly after the event.

(D) Incident on February 27, 1990

Courtney had been involved in a prior classroom incident with the same student only two weeks before, on February 27, 1990. As D.L. portrayed this incident, he was at his assigned table in shop class and wanted to borrow a magazine, belonging to Courtney, which the boy next to him was reading. While he was "reaching for it," the magazine "ripped." Courtney, who was seated nearby, came over and said words to the effect, "If you ripped my magazine, you have to pay for it." Then Courtney allegedly picked up a "ruler"or "yardstick" and struck D.L. with it on his left leg, causing him to cry out in pain. Even though D.L.wore long pants that day, the impact left a "red bruise" on his leg which lasted about a week. Vice Principal Wright verified that D.L. came to his office on the date in question and complained that Courtney "had hit him with a stick." School officials referred the matter for investigation by the state child welfare agency, as is the standard practice in such cases.

Remarkably, Courtney denied that the entire incident had ever occurred and, in his answers to interrogatories, stated that D.L. "was not in my roll book and was not scheduled for shop." At the hearing, he suggested that D.L. had been his student during the previous school year and not during 1989-90. However, he did not produce his roll book or other documentation which might help to substantiate his defense. Moreover, the testimony reveals that the classroom was occupied by combined shop and home economics classes on February 27, 1990, so even the absence of D.L.'s name in Courtney's roll book would not be conclusive proof that D.L. was missing from the room.

I FIND that Courtney hit D.L. on the leg with a ruler on February 27, 1990 in retaliation because D.L. had damaged the teacher's magazine. Again, the action was taken purely for punishment and not to protect the safety of persons or property.

(E) Incident on December 2, 1987

Neither the alleged victim nor any eye witness testified on behalf of the Board about the incident which occurred on December 2, 1987 at the Martin Luther King School. Instead, the Board's proofs consisted of hearsay statements, personal observations made after the event, and admissions by Courtney. Ernest Thompson, building principal for 22 years, reported that T.T., a seventh grader, came to his office with "some sort of markings on his neck." T.T. told Thompson that Courtney had "grabbed him by the neck." Shortly afterwards, on December 4, 1988, Thompson held a conference attended by T.T.'s mother and uncle. During that conference, Courtney claimed that he was only "playing" with T.T., but that T.T. "did not want to play." T.T., however, felt that Courtney "meant to hurt him" and the conference abruptly ended "when tempers got hot."

The Board's only other witness was investigator Lucie Rowlette. She took an unsigned statement from Courtney on January 14, 1988, in which Courtney acknowledged that he started the interaction when he lightly "cuffed" T.T.'s legs, that T.T. "jumped up in my face" and later "grabbed me by the collar," and that the episode escalated to the point where Courtney "picked up" T.T. and "set him on the counter."

In his testimony, Courtney embellished his story somewhat, but the essentials remained largely unchanged. Immediately before the encounter, T.T. had been "horsing around" in an area filled with electric saws, grinding wheels and other power tools. When T.T. deliberately hit another child in the neck, Courtney came over and "cuffed" or "patted" his legs. One thing led to another and before long T.T. had "kicked [Courtney] in the stomach" and Courtney had "reached up and grabbed him in the throat." While Courtney did not notice any marks or scratches on T.T.'s neck, he did not deny that they may have existed.

I FIND that there is insufficient competent evidence to establish that Courtney's conduct was unreasonable or that he intended to hurt T.T. Certainly the circumstances are highly suspicious and raise questions about the wisdom of Courtney's disciplinary techniques. Absent testimony by someone with first-hand knowledge, however, the only evidence introduced under a hearsay rule exception is Courtney's self-serving declaration that he acted to stop a dangerous situation and meant no harm by his actions. There is not enough on the sparse record to make any other finding.

(E) Incident on September 22, 1987

Lastly, a reliable adult witness observed an encounter between Courtney and S.G., a seventh grade student. Julia McDowell was a teacher and co-worker of Courtney at the Martin Luther King School. On the morning of September 22, 1987, she was in the hallway talking to Courtney when S.G. came to the second floor to rejoin his class. Before her eyes, Courtney suddenly walked away, accosted S.G. and pushed him through the double doors. Ms. McDowell was standing only about 20 feet away and had a completely unobstructed view. She is certain that S.G. was not making any threatening moves and that Courtney initiated the confrontation. Ernest Thompson, the school principal, offered a possible motive for Courtney's unprovoked attack, namely that S.G. was on his way back to class after having complained to him about Courtney's abusive language.

Courtney's story was radically different and related to a separate episode involving an elbow shoving match, a chase down several flights of stairs, and the throwing of metal garbage cans. Whatever may have previously happened, it appears to be undisputed that S.G. was not doing anything wrong at the time Courtney nabbed him outside of McDowell's classroom.

I FIND that Courtney assaulted S.G. in the hallway, without apparent reason or provocation. Regardless of what transpired earlier, S.G. posed no immediate threat and the use of force cannot be justified. McDowell was a sincere and forthright witness. Despite dark intimations of McDowell's complicity in a plot against him, Courtney gave no good reason why she would fabricate her testimony.

(2) Verbal Abuse of Students

Numerous witnesses cited examples where Courtney made demeaning or degrading comments to impressionable young school children. Illustratively, McDowell mentioned that Courtney referred to students as "inferior, substandard or sub-human." Unable to recall his exact words, she testified that he compared children to "animals, or savages, or things of that nature." Esther Elliott, principal of Hawthorne Avenue School, overheard Courtney tell a student to "get your ass in line." She immediately took Courtney aside and reprimanded him for using such vulgar language when talking to students. Courtney responded that it is the only language which they understand and that if "you speak nicely to them, they won't respond."

Even more dramatic was the reaction of the children themselves. S.W., the little girl, was understandably offended because her teacher used the "F-word" in class. On one occasion, he told her to "shut up." Another time, he told her friend to "get the hell out of the room." Although she acknowledged that kids use that kind of language, she realized that it is inappropriate "for a teacher to say it to a child." A.B., the door-banger, didn't like it when Courtney called him a "punk" or when he said "get your ass away from the girls." A.B. agreed that Courtney "cursed at most of the girls" and that he "used the F-word all the time."

I FIND that Courtney regularly used insulting language, engaged in name calling and spouted obscenities in the presence of his students. Young children are vulnerable to authority figures who treat them as if they are worthless and incapable of achieving success. Teachers are expected to be good role models and to instill positive values and attitudes in the students entrusted to their care and supervision. Courtney's lack of respect and his verbal abuse render him unfit to teach.

(3) Excessive Absenteeism

Attendance forms kept by the Board disclose that, in the last six months of the 1988-89 school year, Courtney took 8½ sick days; 9½ funeral days; 2 court days, and a ½ personal day. In the 1989-90 school year, he took 14 sick days; 3 personal days; and 7 funeral days. And in the 1990-91 school year until his suspension in February, he took 15½ sick days; 3 personal days; and 2 funeral days. All together, in the space of two years he was absent from work for 65 days. On its face, this absentee rate would appear excessively high.

Apart from the number of absences, however, the record is virtually barren of details regarding the legitimacy of these absences and the impact on continuity of instruction. No one has suggested that sick leave was being misused or that Courtney failed to furnish any medical substantiation which the Board requested. Very little evidence was presented regarding efforts to provide counseling or to warn Courtney that continued absences would not be tolerated. In November 1989, Esther Elliott, principal of Hawthorne Avenue School, sent Courtney a letter advising him that his absences exceeded the allowable state standard and expressing the hope that his attendance would improve. She also discussed the problem with him in two or three private conferences, but she cannot recall the dates. None of Courtney's supervisors sent any follow-up warnings or apprised him of the consequences if his attendance did not conform to district policy. Nor did the Board seek to impose any lesser disciplinary sanction for this offense, such as the withholding of Courtney's salary increment.

I FIND that Courtney has an unusually high number of absences which, in itself, raises serious doubts about his professional commitment and responsibleness. Nevertheless, the Board has failed to exhaust less drastic remedies for correcting the perceived problem.

Conclusions of Law

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the Board has sustained its tenure charge of unbecoming conduct against Courtney and that the appropriate penalty is dismissal.

Tenure protects teachers from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). It is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording to teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Ed., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Toward that end, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides that no tenured individual shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause." Additional procedural safeguards, including the right to a list of charges, a sworn statement of evidence, and an impartial hearing, are written into the law.

Physical and verbal abuse of students falls within the broader category of "unbecoming conduct." In re Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988). N.J.S.A 18A:6-1 prohibits school employees from inflicting "corporal punishment" on a student, without precisely defining that term. However, the statute provides clarification of its meaning by authorizing the use of such force as may be "reasonable and necessary" to quell a disturbance threatening injury to others; to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects; for the purpose of self-defense; or for the protection of persons or property. Generally, the Commissioner equates "corporal punishment" with "any punishment causing or intended to cause bodily pain or suffering." Craze v. Allendale Bd. of Ed., 1938 S.L.D. 185, 186.

Unfitness for a position in the school system may be shown by a single incident, if sufficiently flagrant, but is "best shown by numerous incidents." Redcay v. State Bd. of Ed., 130 N.J.L. 369, 371 (Sup. Ct. 1934), aff'd 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944). Here the Board has successfully proven a series of five separate incidents in which Courtney has employed unnecessary roughness and violence to hurt children of tender years or "make them cry." In view of the fact that students, teachers and administrators at three schools brought similar accusations, the seriousness of the situation cannot be discounted as an isolated loss of control. School officials need not wait until some child is badly injured before removing a teacher prone to violence. See, In Re Alfano, 1979 S.L.D __ (Comm'r Oct. 23, 1979), upholding the dismissal of a shop teacher who used corporal punishment on a systematic basis. Accord, In re Gaus, 1980 S.L.D. 1490 (St. Bd. 1980), rejecting a monetary penalty and ordering dismissal of an elementary teacher who committed several instances of misconduct, including pulling the hair of a pupil, throwing a book at a student, handling two girls in a rough manner and knocking down a student.

Adding insult to injury, Courtney verbally abused his students by calling them vile names and regularly using four-letter words in class. Psychological damage from steady exposure to such verbal abuse from a teacher may be longer lasting than the scars from physical abuse. In determining what penalty is warranted, factors to be considered include the nature and gravity of the offense and any extenuating or aggravating circumstances. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 420-422 (App. Div. 1967). The fact that Courtney mistreated some of his students verbally as well as physically is an additional ground for removing him permanently from the classroom.

Order

It is ORDERED that the tenure charge of unbecoming conduct is sustained.

And it is further ORDERED that Charles Courtney is dismissed from his teaching position in the Newark school district.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF CHARLES COURTNEY, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by respondent (hereinafter "Courtney"), to which no reply was submitted by the Board.*

Courtney contests the initial decision primarily on the grounds that insufficient evidence was produced to warrant the ALJ's findings on the alleged incidents of corporal punishment. He further contends that in order for charges of corporal punishment to be sustained, there must be an indication of causing or intending to cause bodily injury or suffering, and no such indication was given herein. Specifically, Courtney cites the following deficiencies as fatal to the ALJ's conclusions: the Board's failure to produce the student who allegedly witnessed the November 28, 1990 incident, the three boys involved in the chase that allegedly occurred on April 12, 1990, the teacher who purportedly was present at the time of the March 13, 1990 incident, any witness to the alleged incident of February 27, 1990, and the student allegedly accosted in September 1987; the ALJ's failure to properly weigh D.L.'s instigating conduct; and the Board's failure to demonstrate that the pushing/accosting incident of September 22, 1987 resulted in any injury to the alleged victim. Finally Courtney contends that the incidents of "verbal abuse" cited by the ALJ do not rise to the level of warranting dismissal from tenured employment.

Upon careful review of the record, the Commissioner adopts the recommendation of the ALJ for the reasons expressed by him in his initial decision. The objections raised by Courtney above were previously argued before the ALJ (in a post-hearing brief) and considered by him in his weighing of the evidence brought at hearing. Based on credibility determinations which the Commissioner has no basis on which to challenge (it is noted that transcripts were not provided) and on convincing corroboration in the evidence that was presented, the ALJ properly found that most of the alleged incidents did in fact occur, that they constituted corporal punishment within the meaning of controlling statute and case law, and that, taken together, they and the proven incidents of verbal abuse amply proved Courtney's unfitness for teaching. (Initial Decision, at pp. 12-15)

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing Charles Courtney from tenured employment as of the date of the Commissioner's decision is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein. This matter is further referred to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6(a)1 for action against Courtney's certificate as it deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: April 24, 1992 Decided: May 8, 1992

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on August 7, 1991 as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A hearing was to be held on June 19, 1992 at the Office of Administrative Law in Newark.

Prior to the date of the hearing, the parties agreed to settle this matter and submitted the attached Stipulation of Settlement and Dismissal indicating the terms of settlement.

I have reviewed the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement disposes of all issues in controversy, is in the interest of the parties and public, and comports with Cardonick v. Bd. of Ed. Boro. of Brooklawn, State Board Decision (April 8, 1983).

I therefore CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms of settlement and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Respondent having reassigned Petitioner to a full-time position as a teacher under an instructional certificate teaching under her elementary endorsement before the commencement of the 1991-92 school year, and this matter having thereby been rendered moot, the parties agree to resolve this matter on the following basis:

1. Petitioner agrees to withdraw the Petition of Appeal, and acknowledges that she suffered no loss of pay or benefits.

2. Said withdrawal does not constitute a waiver of Petitioner's claim that her tenure status included the right to be assigned to a position requiring an elementary endorsement, as alleged in the Petition, or of any tenure or seniority rights that she has under her elementary endorsement.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning unsuccessful candidate in the annual school election held in the Pennsauken Township School District on April 30, 1991 requested an inquiry into alleged violations of election law.

ALJ found illegal ballots were cast but petitioner did not carry his burden of proving for whom the illegal votes were cast or that they affected the outcome of the election. Petition of Appeal was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 9655-91
AGENCY DKT. NO. 365-10/91

I/M/O THE INQUIRY INTO THE 1991 ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE PENNSAUKEN TOWNSHIP SCHOOL DISTRICT

Lee B. Laskin, Esq., for petitioner Bernard Kirshtein (Laskin & Botcheos, attorneys)
Thomas Parker, Esq., for Pennsauken Board of Education (Parker, McCay & Criscuolo, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 18, 1992 Decided: May 4, 1992

BEFORE DANIEL B. McKEOWN, ALJ:

Bernard Kirshtein (appellant) was an unsuccessful candidate in the annual school election held in the Pennsauken Township School District on April 30, 1991. He requested of and was granted by the Commissioner of Education a recount of the ballots cast which affirmed as follows the results announced by the Board Secretary on April 30, 1991 following the election:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Mark Schott	1,095	6	1,101
Margie Baxendale	1,073	10	1,083
Timothy M. Robinson	1,055	7	1,062
Bernard Kirshtein	1,049	10	1,059
Ester Bliss	928	12	940
Robert E. Terres	537	10	547

Candidates Schott, Baxendale, and Robinson were declared successful candidates for election to membership on the Board.

Petitioner then requested of the Commissioner that an inquiry be conducted into alleged violations of school election laws which were to have occurred during the conduct of the election. After the Commissioner dismissed the request for an inquiry on the grounds that it was not filed timely, the State Board of Education reversed and ordered that an inquiry be conducted because

> The violations alleged by petitioner, which include the filing of false voting affidavits, are of such character as not to have been facially apparent at the time of the election  Moreover, we find these allegations to be of such in nature and gravity as to warrant further proceedings in the public interest. Petitioner, who lost by three votes, cites six specific instances of alleged voting fraud, which, if demonstrated, could alter the outcome of this election.
> (State Bd. of Ed., Slip Opinion, Oct. 2, 1991)

Thereafter, the matter was transferred October 16, 1991 to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provision of N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A hearing was scheduled to be conducted December 12, 1991 but was adjourned at petitioner's request because he was scheduled out of town. The matter was rescheduled and heard February 28, 1992 at the Pennsauken Municipal Court, Pennsauken.

Findings are reached in this initial decision that certain irregularities occurred and certain illegal votes were cast during the conduct of the election but that the record contains insufficient proof to show the will of the electorate was thwarted. Therefore, the conclusion is reached that the announced results of the election must stand.

ISSUE PRESENTED

During January 1992 a telephone conference call was conducted with the parties, the substance of which was memorialized in writing as, in part, follows:

> The substance of the case appears to be that Mr. Kirshtein argues six individuals cast ballots who were not properly registered to do so and that the ballots so cast had an effect upon the results of the election to the extent that the will of the electorate was thwarted. It was pointed out to Mr. Kirshtein that he has the burden to establish the truth of his allegations by a preponderance of credible evidence. Such proof may be by way of documentation and/or live testimony from individuals who have personal knowledge surrounding the factual allegations made. Mr. Kirshtein appears to have well understood his burden.

FACTS

The basic facts established at hearing are not is dispute between the parties and they are as follows. Of the six individuals who cast disputed ballots, one voted by way of absentee ballot. The allegation is that a James R. Carr received an absentee ballot based on an affidavit he filed stating a particular street address in Pennsauken. Petitioner alleges that Mr. Carr had not lived at that address for several years but, in fact, resides in Cinnaminson. Consequently, petitioner says that Mr. Carr filed a false affidavit.

The Board moved to strike petitioner's allegations regarding James R. Carr and the false affidavit from consideration on the basis the Commissioner has no jurisdiction regarding absentee ballots.

The Board's motion to strike from consideration the absentee ballot, and the asserted false affidavit filed by Mr. Carr, must be granted. While absentee ballots are authorized for use in annual school elections, N.J.S.A. 18A:14-25, et seq., the application for such a ballot is to made under the provisions of the Absentee Voting Law (1953), L. 1953, c. 211, N.J.S.A. 19:57-1 et seq. N.J.S.A. 19:57-24 provides in part as follows:

> Disputes as to the qualifications of military service or civilian absentee voters to vote or as to whether or not or how any such military or civilian absentee ballot shall be counted in > such elections shall be referred to the Superior Court for determination.

The Commissioner has consistently held he is without jurisdiction to review absentee ballots. See In re Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Township of Monroe, 1973 S.L.D. 212, 216, aff'd St. Bd. of Ed., 1974 S.L.D. 1413. Consequently, allegations surrounding the impropriety of an absentee ballot which may have been filed by James R. Carr shall not be considered here.

Facts surrounding allegations leveled against the five remaining voters, Delma Perez, Martin Barrett, Gertrude Barrett, Michael Jaffe and Mary Jo Jaffe, are these.

Delma Perez presented herself to election officials to cast a ballot at this election. Election officials could not locate her permanent registration form. Consequently, Delma Perez completed and filed with the election officials an affidavit (C-1, at p.5) in which she attests that she is qualified to vote at the annual school election held in Pennsauken April 30, 1991 and that she was permanently registered at 2818 Raritan Avenue in Pennsauken. Tom Conley, the assistant superintendent of elections in Camden County, testified at hearing that his search of permanent registrations revealed no such registration for "Delma Perez" now or in the past. Mr. Conley did locate permanent registrations for three individuals with the Perez surname at 2818 Raritan Ave, Pennsauken, but no such registration exists for "Delma Perez". Delma Perez signed the school election poll list at school election district number six (C-1A, at p.3) and, presumably, received a voter authorization slip, and cast a ballot. Delma Perez was not subpoenaed to testify under oath regarding the circumstances of filing the affidavit, nor is there any evidence to disclose for whom Delma Perez may have voted other than petitioner's testimony which is unrevealing. Petitioner testified that the evening before the hearing he telephoned a Delma Perez, asked for whom she voted, to which Delma Perez was to have responded she did not know but that she thinks she voted for a "white women" and was uncertain of her other choices.

Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe, whose ballots are also contested here, are married to each other. Presently, they reside at 2645 Corbett Avenue, Pennsauken. Their previous residence was at 2661 Union Avenue which is within the same general election district of Pennsauken Township.

According to Mr. Conley, his search of permanent registrations maintained by the Camden County Board of Elections revealed that Michael Jaffe, while he was a resident on Union Avenue, had permanently registered during September 1986. Mr. Jaffe cast ballots at the 1986, 1988 and 1989 general elections. In 1990 when the County Board of Elections mailed sample ballots to registered voters in the Pennsauken District, the sample ballot addressed to the Jaffes was returned to the Board of Elections. As is the practice, the Board of Elections caused to be published the names of the Jaffes in newspapers. An election investigator confirmed that the Jaffes no longer resided at 2661 Union Avenue. Consequently, the names of Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe were removed from the permanent registry.

It is agreed that Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe presented themselves at the 1991 annual school election for Pennsauken and claimed their right to vote. Election officials could not find their permanent registration cards in the official signature copy register. Consequently, Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe filed affidavits (C-2, pp. 3, 4) claiming they were qualified to vote at the election and were permanently registered at 2645 Corbett Avenue, Pennsauken. Mary Jo Jaffe signed the annual school election poll list (C-1, p. 15) and, presumably, received a voter authorization slip and cast a ballot. While it is agreed between these parties that Michael Jaffe also cast a ballot, I cannot locate his name in the school election poll list. Nevertheless, for purposes of this case it is presumed Michael Jaffe also cast a ballot.

Because the Camden County Board of Elections had removed the names of Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe from the signature copy register which contains permanent registrations in 1990, petitioner says their filed affidavits claiming their right to vote and permanent registration are false and therefore their ballots should not be counted. It is noted there is no evidence in this record for whom the Jaffes cast their ballots other than petitioner's testimony that Michael Jaffe was to have told him he, Michael, "pleads the fifth amendment" and will not otherwise disclose how he voted. According to petitioner, Michael also told him that his wife, Mary Jo, would say the same thing if subpoenaed.

The Board maintains that votes cast by the Jaffes are proper under N.J.S.A. 19:31-11 because they moved from one residence to another within the same general election district and the last time both had cast ballots was in 1990. The 1991 annual school election was within two years from the date of their moving. Consequently, the Board concludes that the ballots cast by the Jaffes are proper.

Martin Barrett and Gertrude Barrett are married to each other. Presently, they reside at 2656 Manall Avenue, Pennsauken. Prior addresses listed for the Barretts individually and jointly include an address on 43rd Street, Grant Street, and finally the Manall Avenue address.

Mr. Conley explained that his search of County records revealed Martin Barrett had been a consistent voter in general elections through 1982. There is no record of his having participated in elections from 1983, though he cast ballots in elections conducted between 1984 and 1988. Mr. Conley says that Michael Barrett's name was removed from the signature copy register in 1990 while he was at the Grant Avenue address because the 1990 sample ballot was returned because Michael Barrett changed his residence. Mr. Conley testified he located no registration for Gertrude at anytime at any address. Martin Barrett re-registered at his present Manall Avenue address on May 6, 1991 while Gertrude Barrett registered at her present Manall Avenue address on July 15, 1991. There was testimony from Mr. Conley that either at the time of registration or at some subsequent time, both Barretts came to his office very upset because of petitioner's contention here that they illegally cast ballots at the annual school election. Mr. Conley testified that he overheard a remark from the Barretts that the only reason petitioner was filing a complaint against them was because he knew for whom they worked. Aside from that assertion, the record is absent of any evidence with for whom the Barretts cast ballots other than petitioner's testimony as to his perception of Martin Barrett during the election.

In this regard, petitioner testified that he happened to be present at the time Martin Barrett claimed his right to vote by way of affidavit at the annual school election. Petitioner acknowledges when the election officers could not locate Martin Barrett's permanent registration in the signature copy book, he advised Barrett that if he were truly registered he could always file an affidavit which Mr. Barrett did. Martin Barrett works with petitioner's son-in-law. When petitioner had asked Martin Barrett whether he had talked to his son-in-law, Martin Barrett was to have turned away in a "rough" manner. In petitioner's view Martin Barrett's body language suggests to him that Martin Barrett cast his ballot for Timothy Robinson who, petitioner claims, was supported by the Democratic Party of Pennsauken.

On the foregoing facts regarding the Barretts, petitioner claims they filed false affidavits and, as such, their votes may not count.

The Board says that while the Barretts may have filed false affidavits and cast illegal ballots there is no evidence to show for whom either Barrett or Delma Perez voted for and, consequently, the election results as earlier announced and as confirmed by the recount must stand.

ANALYSIS

New Jersey Rules of Evidence, R. 31, provides "Every person has a privilege to refuse to disclose the tenor of his vote at a political election unless the judge finds that the vote was cast illegally." In this case, petitioner was separated from a winning candidate in total number of votes received by three votes. Furthermore, in this case, it is obvious that Delma Perez, Martin Barrett, and Gertrude Barrett filed affidavits in which they individually attest to their being permanently registered at their present addresses. The facts disclose such affidavits are false in that they were not permanently registered at their present addresses and, in fact, Gertrude Barrett was never registered at any address. Thus, the affidavits are false under N.J.S.A. 18A:14-66 which provides "Any person signing any affidavit pursuant to section 18A:14-52, which includes false statement of fact, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor." N.J.S.A. 18A:14-44 states that no person shall be permitted to vote at any school election unless, in part, he shall have been registered to vote in an election district included within the school district prior to the election. Here, neither the Barretts nor Delma Perez were registered to vote prior to the election. Consequently, their votes are illegal.

Whether, as the Board contends, N.J.S.A. 19:31-11b applies to the Jaffes thereby rendering valid the ballots they cast need not be decided here for this reason. Despite the finding above that the ballots cast by Delma Perez, and Martin and Gertrude Barrett being illegal as contrary to Title 18A, Education Law, and even if the Jaffes' vote be declared illegal, there is no competent evidence in this record to show for whom these five individuals voted nor is their any showing by petitioner that any attempt had been made to obtain their testimony. What this record does show is that petitioner had requested and was authorized to serve subpoenas on Delma Perez, Martin and Gertrude Barrett, Michael and Mary Jo Jaffe on January 28, 1992. However, and for whatever reason, petitioner elected not to serve the authorized subpoena in order to compel their attendance.

In Application of Murphy, 101 N.J. Super 163, 167 (App. Div. 1968), cert. den., 52 N.J. 172 (1968) N.J.S.A. 19:29-1(e) was interpreted to require that "[w]hen  an election is contested on the sole grounds that 'illegal votes have been received  the contestant has not only the burden of showing that illegal votes were cast in numbers sufficient to change the result  but also the burden of showing, to the extent possible under the circumstances, for whom the illegal votes were cast." See, also, Matter of Mallon, 232 N.J. Super 249 (App. Div. 1989).

While I have reviewed a recent administrative decision, In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in Chesilhurst, OAL DKT. EDU 4952-91 regarding the voiding of an election where fraud exists, that case is distinguishable. Here, petitioner did not carry his burden to attempt to show for whom the illegal votes were cast. No subpoenas were served to anyone of the five individuals involved and insufficient evidence is presented upon which his desired inferences as to how the five individuals did vote could be drawn.

For all the foregoing reasons, while I find illegal ballots were cast in this election, the results of the election earlier announced by the Board Secretary as affirmed by the recount of the ballots cast, must be and are AFFIRMED. The matter of affidavits which, on this record, appear to be false as filed by Delma Perez, Martin Barrett and Gertrude Barrett are referred to the Camden County Prosecutor for whatever action is deemed appropriate. No such referral is made regarding Michael or Mary Jo Jaffe.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Upon careful review of the record, the Commissioner concurs that notwithstanding the demonstration of certain ballots having been illegally cast in this matter, no showing was made as to how the individuals involved voted or that their votes affected the outcome of the election. There is, therefore, no basis on which to conclude that the will of the electorate was thwarted.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law affirming the announced results of the April 30, 1991 school election in the Township of Pennsauken is adopted as the final decision in this matter, which is hereby referred to the Camden County Prosecutor's Office consistent with the directives of the ALJ.

Record Closed: May 1, 1992 Decided: May 4, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE

Ruth M. Rozansky, petitioner, a member of the Kingwood Township Board of Education, alleged Open Public Meetings Act violations, inconsistencies and improprieties in minutes, violations of Board policies and procedures, and other irregularities by one or more other Board members.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on February 7, 1992 for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A series of prehearing conferences and status conferences was held by telephone. On May 1, 1992, the parties reported the matter settled and supplied the attached stipulation of settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

CONCLUSIONS

Settlements are favored under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules and the policy of the State. It is preferred that parties settle contested cases rather than proceed to adjudication, particularly if the parties must continue a relationship after the case. Such are the circumstances here. The parties have agreed to resolve the matter amicably and to refrain from public exchanges concerning the settlement. Given the nature of the working relationship between and among Board members, this is appropriate.

The parties are reminded that the good offices of the Hunterdon County Superintendent of Schools are available to them.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

RUTH ROZANSKY filed this petition with the Commissioner on January 3, 1992. It was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on February 7, 1992.

The matter was scheduled for a prehearing conference. At the conference, the petitioner and the attorney for the respondent indicated that a settlement was possible. The parties had discussions and reported to the Court that a settlement had been concluded.

Therefore the parties agree as follows:

1. Neither the petitioner nor the respondent admit any wrongdoing or fault.

2. The petitioner withdraws her petition.

3. The respondent withdraws its request for counsel fees.

4. Neither party will discuss this settlement nor the circumstances surrounding the filing of the petition or its withdrawal. The parties have drafted the attached press release which will be issued as the sole comments of the parties. All board members and the Superintendent and Board Secretary/Business Administrator including the petitioner agree to be bound by this confidentiality provision. Each of the individuals acknowledge acceptance of this provision by signing the stipulation.

5. This stipulation will be included in a recommended decision of the Administrative Law Judge assigned to this case.

6. This settlement does not become final until the initial decision of the Administrative Law Judge is approved by the Commissioner of Education.

PRESS RELEASE

On January 3, 1992, Ruth Rozansky filed a Petition with the Commissioner of Education. In that Petition, Mrs. Rozansky questioned certain practices and procedures of the Kingwood Township Board of Education.

The Board of Education filed an Answer to the Petition. In its Answer, the Board denied that it violated any State law, rule, regulation, or the policies of the Board.

Mrs. Rozansky and the Board both acknowledge that the best interests of the students and their education are their primary concern. Neither intend to let differences of perspective and/or personalities interfere with that objective. For that reason Mrs. Rozansky and the Board agree that the continued pursuit of the Petition through the hearing process does not serve the best interests of the students. Legal costs in defense of the Petition could be better utilized for other important educational needs of the students.

Therefore, Mrs. Rozansky and the Board have agreed to file a Stipulation of Settlement with the Commissioner of Education.

Mrs. Rozansky and the Board agree that it serves no useful purpose for either side to discuss these matters publicly. Therefore, they have agreed to issue this joint press release and Mrs. Rozansky and all members of the Board have agreed not to discuss the Petition, the circumstances surrounding its filing, or resolution. This press release articulates their common collective sentiments.

For Petitioner, Michael Molinaro, Esq. (Doner, Coffey & Doner)

For Respondent, Robert Budesa, Esq. (Berry, Kagen & Sahradnik)

This matter has come before the Commissioner by way of a Petition of Appeal for Emergent Relief filed by Petitioner R.T., seeking an Order from the Commissioner that her daughter, E.M., who was diagnosed in 1989 as having multiple sclerosis but is not classified as having an educationally handicapping condition, be permitted to attend the graduation ceremonies to be held on Wednesday, June 17, 1991, notwithstanding her admission that E.M. has failed to complete the graduation requirements in that she failed English 4, and is thus two and a half credits short of meeting the state's high school graduation requirements.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law without Answer June 12, 1992, and the hearing on emergent relief was conducted on Tuesday, June 16, 1992.

No exceptions were filed by the parties pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The Commissioner of Education has designated his authority to hear and decide this matter to Deputy Commissioner John C. Woodbury pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33.

Upon a careful and independent review of the tape of the oral proceedings on emergent relief conducted by the Office of Administrative Law, the Deputy Commissioner affirms the findings and conclusions of the ALJ below that petitioner has failed to meet her burden of demonstrating those standards articulated by the Court for pendente lite restraints as set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

The Deputy Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that based on the record developed at hearing petitioner has failed to establish a likelihood of success on the merits in that no basis has been advanced to hold that the Board's denying E.M. participation in the district's graduation ceremonies was unreasonable given E.M.'s long history of absences, the genesis of which predated her diagnosis of multiple sclerosis by approximately three years and given the fact that when it became aware of such condition, the Board made extraordinary efforts to accommodate E.M.'s circumstances. In so finding, the Commissioner notes with approval the ALJ's observation in her oral decision that despite the existence of E.M.'s poor attendance record, petitioner has failed to demonstrate sufficient proof that such absences were related to her daughter's illness in that while she was absent from school without excuse for prolonged periods of time, particularly from December 1991 through February 2, 1992, she held a part-time job as a cashier at a supermarket and thereafter, despite continuing school absences, she continued to participate in school-sponsored social activities.

Moreover, the Commissioner finds that petitioner has failed to demonstrate irreparable harm. Case law has consistently held that attendance at graduation ceremonies is a privilege, not a right, that may be withheld in the interest of maintaining an orderly and efficient school system. See R.H., a minor by his parent and guardian ad litem v. Board of Education of the Township of Delanco, Burlington County, 1974 S.L.D. 655. See also, James Kenngott v. Lower Camden County Regional Board of Education, Camden County, 1975 S.L.D. 489, 490.

Finally, in balancing the equities of this matter, the Commissioner finds and determines that the Board's interest in maintaining its academic standards outweighs petitioner's interest in having her daughter be included in the graduation ceremonies under circumstances where the Board has contended that no student has ever been permitted participation in the graduation exercises who has not completed the graduation requirements, and where petitioner does not contest that E.M. is two and one half credits short of meeting the state and local high school graduation requirements.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the oral decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law in this matter, as augmented herein, the Motion for Emergent Relief is DENIED, and because the prayer for relief sought will be extinguished by the Decision on Motion herein, the instant Petition of Appeal is dismissed, with prejudice.

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

R.T., on behalf of her daughter, E.M., filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) requesting emergency relief, specifically that her daughter be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremonies with her classmates on June 17, 1992. Permission to participate in the graduation ceremonies was denied by the respondent, the Board of Education of the Southern Regional HIgh School District, Ocean County, on the basis that E.M. did not have enough credits to graduate. R.T. did not dispute that E.M. needed to repeat an English course during the summer in order to get a diploma; however, she requested that her daughter be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremony.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative on June 12, 1992, for a determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 e seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On June 16, 1992, I heard the parties' oral arguments regarding the petitioner's request for emergency relief, and on that date, I issued an oral order denying said emergent relief.

Since E.M.'s participation in the graduation ceremony is the only issue in this matter, I hereby CONCLUDE and ORDER that the matter is now moot.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that this matter has been rendered moot by the Commissioner's prior decision on motion for emergent relief, wherein he denied petitioner's request to participate in impending graduation ceremonies. As such participation was the sole issue in controversy herein, no further proceedings are warranted.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein and the instant Petition of Appeal dismissed for reason of mootness.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE ROSELLE BOARD OF : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
EDUCATION, UNION COUNTY. : DECISION

JUNE 18, 1992

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE ROSELLE BOARD OF : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
EDUCATION, UNION COUNTY. : DECISION

Nathanya Simon, Esq., for petitioner (Schwartz, Simon & Edelstein)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on April 10, 1992 through the Roselle Board of Education's filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Roselle School District on April 7, 1992. The Board's amended petition naming the governing body of the Borough of Roselle as a participant was filed on April 21, 1992. On May 28, 1992 notification was received from the Board that the governing body did not choose to participate in the matter based upon the certification of John Fleretino, Borough Administrator. Having received the Board's position statement relative to the appeal, the record in the matter closed on May 28, 1992 given the decision of the governing body not to participate in the matter.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the current expense and capital outlay budget approved by the voters of the Borough of Roselle on April 7, 1992 in the amount of $12,035,697 and $25,093 respectively, the cap waiver in the amount of $1,000,178 which was defeated by the voters at said election is necessary for it to provide a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Roselle School District. Hence the amount of tax levy in contention in this matter before the Commissioner is as set forth below.

Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education		Amount of tax levy approved by the voters
Current Expense	$12,035,697.00	$12,035,697.00
Capital Outlay	$ 25,093.00	$ 25,093.00
Cap Waiver	$ 1,075,178.00	$ -0-

Amount in dispute before the Commissioner of Education:

Current expense	$ -0-
Capital outlay	$ -0-
Cap Waiver	$1,000,178.00

On March 4, 1992 Acting County Superintendent Michael Maddaluna conditionally approved the Roselle School District's proposed 1992-93 school budget subject to the cap waiver of $1,000,178 as set forth below which was deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education. An additional $75,000 in cap waiver monies, although allowed to be put before the voters, was not deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by the acting county superintendent and is, thus, not appealable to the Commissioner.

Current Expense		$1,000,178
Salary, Instructional	213	496,586
Salary, Other Inst.	214	71,148
Salary, Other Aides	216	43,310
Textbooks, Instructional	220	47,573
Library/AVM	230	12,774
Supply, Instructional	240	6,711
Other Expense, Instructional	250	18,674
Purchase Tech Services	260b	5,250
Other Expense, Health	420	10,000
Trips, Field	520c	14,120
Insurance/Judgments	820	274,032
Capital Outlay		0

Pursuant to the Opinion of the State of New Jersey Attorney General rendered on July 8, 1991, the Commissioner has not only the authority but the duty to review the cap waiver appeal of a school budget conditionally approved by the county superintendent to determine what monies, if any, are necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Roselle School District.

In support of the need for the $1,000,178 cap waiver sought by the Board, the following information is provided by the Board.

Line 213 - $496,586.00

> At the Board meeting held Tuesday, April 28, 1992, the Roselle Board of Education adopted a resolution providing written notice of non-renewal to 38 of its employees, 25 of which are certified and 13 of which are non-certified support staff. This action was necessary in light of the lack of the monies identified above to support the continued employment of approximately 16 instructional personnel teaching students from K through 12. Included on this list and part of the dollars represented in the Cap Waiver identified in this section include, 2 art teachers, 2 librarians, 1 music teacher, a Guidance Counselor, a speech teacher, and a special education teacher. It must be specifically emphasized that the art and music programs will be severely and negatively impacted as a result of this reduction.
> Additionally, library services will not be available to each child in each building as a result of this cut. The necessary social/ guidance services represented by the work of one Guidance Counselor will be negatively affected by the loss of one Guidance Counselor. The Roselle School District submits that equal opportunity education will not be available in Roselle if these cuts must be sustained into the 1992-93 school year.

> This sum supports the services of personnel whose primary responsibility is in the area of Basic Child Study Team Services. The Board has RIF'd two School Psychologists, one Learning Disability

Teacher Consultant, and one Social Worker. This will devastate severely the provision of Special Education Services to the students of Roselle. Additionally, it could place the Board in serious jeopardy with the Federal and State legal requirements concerning time lines for referral classification, development of IEP's and implementation of placement and program. As of October 15, 1991, the total student population numbered 2,374 of which 246 utilized Special Education Services. Further, it is noted that 172 Special Education students are eligible for transportation and there are 100 Special Education students placed out-of- district. As of December 1991, there are 364 students who have been identified as eligible for Special Education Services. An additional 136 students receive speech correction services. In the past, the Board has employed four full teams which, would be dramatically reduced to less than 3 full teams in the absence of restoration of the funding requested in this Cap Waiver appeal. The district needs to maintain these positions as part of the basic Child Study Team services in order to assure compliance with federal and state law in this very critical area, as well as to maintain services already established in IEP's and other programs.

This money represents the support of employment of non- certificated support staff of teacher aides. In many instances these aide positions are required as a matter of Federal and/or State law due to class size. In other instances the aide may be required due to an individualized educational plan for a particular student. These teaching aide positions are critically needed to maintain programs and ensure compliance with law.

This money is needed in order to replace, maintain and provide appropriate text books to the students. Specifically, the money will be utilized for the following:

K to 4 - to implement a comprehensive modern day reading program and complement with an expressive writing program.

Science - to replace text books which are over ten years old in order to meet course objectives per curriculum guides. Also, to purchase additional texts due to increased enrollment.

Social Studies - to replace text books which are over ten years old and to meet course objectives per curriculum guides. Psychology texts need to be replaced completely because current text is no longer in print.

Physical Education - To update text to go with curriculum as follows: First Aid and Personal Safety (Grade 10); Understanding Your Sexuality (Grade 12); and What You Should Know About Drugs (Grade 9).

Grades 8, 9, and 10 - text books, particularly in mathematics, now being used do not address the skills which are tested on the new statewide standardized 8th grade (Early Warning test) and 11th grade HSPT.

Furthermore, current text books in use in Roselle are not in line with the State Core course grades 9 through 12 proficiencies or the NCTM Standards. This also includes monies for all college preparatory texts damaged or lost which need to be replaced.

Industrial Arts - to replace, maintain and continue up-dating departmental program in accordance with current vocational trends.

Business - replacement additions are needed of new/additional texts in the areas of shorthand, keyboarding, and automatic accounting for the micro-computer.

Reading - "Best Short Stories" is a middle-level text which provides a particular literature focus currently unavailable in Roselle. Additional text which would be purchased if this money were available include viewpoints on "Drugs and Sports," "Alcohol: Understanding Words in Context." These are critical thinking texts in that relevant social, economic and political issues are addressed. These materials are essential for our students being prepared to pass the 8th grade Early Warning tests and grade 11 HSPT.

This money will be utilized in the library of the School District. The collection at the library now shows significant signs of age and neglect. Many materials are extremely out-dated (over 10 years old) and thus of little or no appeal to young readers. The fiction sections are inadequate concerning topics such as Holidays, The United States and Nations of the World. It is absolutely critical that the collection at the library be expanded and strengthened by way of update. Video tapes/film strips are needed to incorporate and illustrate the rich multi-cultural heritage of the student body and to reinforce literature utilized in the classroom. Software is needed to enhance and reinforce target language vocabulary and to expose students to State of the Art learning technology.

This money is earmarked for educational supplies which are expendable on a yearly basis. These daily teaching supplies are needed for implementation of Board approved and state mandated programs. For example, business materials are necessary to operate the Business Department's time-testing in typewriting skills and shorthand.

Line 250 - $18,674.00

This money is also earmarked for educational supplies which are expendable on a yearly basis. The supplies in this account would include report cards for each student in the district. These supplies are needed to maintain and continue educational programs through supporting effective instructional tools. It should also be noted that the original Cap Waiver request included an additional $10,000.00 in this line item which cannot be appealed due to the current status of the law as set forth in the applicable controlling Attorney General's opinion regulating Cap Waiver appeal. Thus the Board will need to adjust this line by a reduction of $10,000.00 below anticipated need even if the line is fully funded pursuant to this appeal. Any further cut would significantly and detrimentally affect the operation of the school district with respect to the provision of educational supplies.

Line 260[b] - $5,250.00

This money is needed to purchase CSI Computer Technical Services. These services keep all attendance records in the Attendance Office for all our students and serve as the basis for our ASSA State Reports. The use of these Computer Services saves many, many, hours of manual labor. Additionally it assures accuracy and efficiency with respect to the record keeping of student attendance. This contract is truly a critical and mandatory aspect of the district operation.

Line [420] - $10,000.00

This money is utilized for related services as mandated by N.J.A.C. 6:28 et seq. in the areas of occupational therapy, physical therapy, and medical evaluations. The Board could be in serious jeopardy with respect to meeting Federal and State statute and regulation requirements in this area if these monies are not available.

Line 520c - $14,120.00

This money will be utilized to reinforce and enhance instruction in the areas of English, computers, science, and music by allowing students to participate in off-grounds educational activities. Additionally, this money would be utilized to provide the students an opportunity to visit local colleges in order to expose the students to admission and financial procedures. Some of the field trips planned include the opportunity to see a Shakespeare play, to visit the Franklin Institute in Philadelphia, the IBM Think Innovation, AT&T Infoquest, and the Museum of Natural History and Hayden Planetarium in New York. It would also provide the funding for students to participate in various academic and artistic competitions, participate in choral performances before selected groups, and participate in local, regional, and statewide parades of importance. It has been noted over the years by the Commissioner of Education that a field trip is an integral part of the instructional program employed by teachers as a device for teaching and learning. Field trips are an important ingredient in the instructional program and the expenses of such approved expeditions are required to be furnished without cost to pupils. The learning and educational value of these experiences is beyond question.

> "Teaching is more effective and learning is enhanced when it is not confined to activities within the classroom and the school building, but [moves] out into the child's environment and employs actual observation and experience > to supplement and enrich classroom procedures. Such a field trip is a proper and desirable element of the school curriculum. It is not a holiday, recess, a reward or a vacation from school work even though it might be a welcome change from ordinary routine, and pupils may find it interesting, exciting and enjoyable. Learning occurs most effectively when such conditions are present. A field trip is, or should be, a valuable learning experience, planned, carried out, and followed up as an integral part of the course of study with clearly understood objectives and terms of learning. ... The Commissioner holds that field trips which supplement and enrich pupils' classroom learning are an important and desirable element of the school's program of instruction and as such are a proper cost of instruction. . . ."

Pursuant to current agreement as the result of negotiations between the various bargaining units and the Board of Education, the Board has agreed to provide individual and full family health care insurance coverage for all employees of the Board whose regular assignments exceed 20 hours per week, which shall include: Blue Cross, Blue Shield, Major Medical and Rider "J". Additionally, the Board contributes approximately $425.00 per employee for a Family Dental Plan. Additionally, the Board pays for a Family Prescription Plan which is $3.00 co-pay for named drugs and $-0- co-pay for generic drugs.

The increase in premium costs for the 1992-93 school year to continue these coverages, far exceed the Cap imposed upon the spending level in Roselle. Based upon current projected premium costs, it is estimated that the district will expend $8,000.00 per employee per year to maintain current level of benefits. Reference is made to memo of January 1992 to participating employers of the State Health Benefits Program from the State Health Benefits Bureau concerning State Health Benefits premium rates effective July 1, 1992. It is noted therein that the State advises its participating public employers that "the overall premium rate increase for the traditional plan is 16.8%." It should be additionally noted that this line item has already been cut $65,000.00 as the result of the defeat of the Cap Waiver question and the inability of this Board to appeal that amount due to the controlling applicable Attorney General's opinion concerning Cap Waiver appeals. It is respectfully submitted that this money as part of this Cap Waiver appeal is critically needed in order to insure maintenance of health coverage currently in place and guaranteed by negotiated contracts with the various bargaining units in the school district. See Cliffside Park Board of Education vs. Mayor and Council of Cliffside Park, 100 N.J. Super. 490 (App. Div. 1968).

(Board's Position Statement, at pp. 2-8)

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

In reviewing the record of this cap waiver appeal submitted by the Roselle Board of Education, the Commissioner finds and concludes that the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that the additional $1,000,178 in current expense tax levy sought for the 1992-93 school year is necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of that district for the expenditures specifically set forth herein. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966), Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that the Union County Board of Taxation adjust the Roselle current expense tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $1,000,178.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

CONSENT ORDER

For Petitioner, J. R. Powell, Esq.

For Respondent, Russell E. Paul, Esq.

On September 16, 1991 the respondent, Board of Education of the Township of Harrison, took Board action to rescind its existing busing policy. On October 3, 1991 the Petitioner, C.C. on behalf of her minor child, T.C., brought a Petition of Appeal with Motion for Emergent Relief before the Office of Administrative Law acting on behalf of the Commissioner of Education. Petitioner sought a stay of the Board decision of September 16, 1991 rescinding its existing busing policy.

On October 3, 1991 the Commissioner of Education issued a Decision on Motion which granted a preliminary injunction to the petitioner during the pendency of the transmittal of this matter to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing to determine whether, under the facts of this case, the respondent, Board of Education, failed to give adequate notice and whether the Board's action in ceasing its discretionary practice was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable due to insufficient notice, and if so, what remedy would be appropriate under the circumstances.

Subsequent, thereto, on October 11, 1991 the petitioner filed a Motion for Interlocutory Appeal, with Brief, to the State Board of Education (Docket No. 51-91). Petitioner contended that the Commissioner of Education had failed to hear and decide certain alleged Constitutional issues. The respondent contended that the matter was moot in that the Commissioner of Education had heard and decided the case except as to adequate notice.

On February 5, 1992 the State Board of Education issued a decision in the above captioned matter (Docket No. 51-91) and remanded the entire matter back to the Commissioner of Education through the Office of Administrative Law for a full hearing on the merits of the substantive claims raised by the petitioner subject to any jurisdictional limitations as to constitutional matters , and also a hearing as to the question of adequate notice. Said hearing before the Office of Administrative Law was scheduled for April 14, 1992. Pending the recommendation of the Administrative Law Judge to the Commissioner of Education and the Commissioner's of Education Decision, the status quo is to be maintained and the Board of Education is not permitted to amend its existing busing policy.

Prior to the aforementioned hearing then scheduled for April 14, 1992, the respective parties have held settlement conferences in an effort to resolve the instant matter to the satisfaction to all parties without the necessity of further proceedings. The parties recommend to the Commissioner of Education and the State Board of Education that they adopt a rule embodying the procedure set forth below for all school districts in the State of New Jersey which seek to change existing busing policy.

Based on the above, for purposes of judicial efficiency, for deciding this matter pursuant to the entire controversies doctrine, and for good cause shown

THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY does hereby on this day of April, 1992 ORDER as follows:

1. The Commissioner of Education shall and does hereby rescind its injunction restraining the respondent, Board of Education of the Township of Harrison, from amending its existing busing policy for the purpose of permitting said respondent to adopt a proposed amendment to its busing policy as attached hereto and as set forth on Schedule "A" being Transortation Policy 7:9 and Transportation Policy 7:10.

2. The Commissioner of Education further Orders the proposed amendment to the busing policy as set forth on Schedule "A" shall be adopted in accordance with the following procedures which shall be deemed to be mandatory in the future for adoption of the particular changes to the existing busing policy as set forth on Schedule "A" and shall also be mandatory in the future for any change in any busing policy.

Respondent shall be required prior to any change in any busing policy to adopt any proposed change to any busing policy at a regularly scheduled school board meeting on first reading, and prior to any final adoption a second reading must be held at a regularly scheduled school board meeting, which second meeting shall be no less than 20 days or no more than 40 days after the first reading, and a third and final reading of said proposed change to any busing policy shall be held at a regularly scheduled meeting of the board of education which shall be no less than 50 days and no more than 70 days after the first reading of same, and that any actions taken at the aforesaid three regularly scheduled meetings shall be in accordance with the Open Public Meetings Act of New Jersey (N.J.S.A. 10:4 et seq), and notice of the aforesaid change in any busing policy must be publicly placed at the place adopted by the board of education for public notices immediately following the first reading.

3. Upon the respondent carrying out the procedures as above set forth for a proposed change in its existing busing policy as set forth in Schedule "A" attached hereto, the within captioned action shall be dismissed with prejudice.

JOHN ELLIS,

DATED: , 1992.

The attorneys for the Petitioner and the Respondent having read the above proposed Consent Order do hereby consent to same as to form and content.

J. R. Powell, Esq., Attorney for Petitioner,

Russell E. Paul, Esq., Attorney for Respondent, Board of Education of the Township of Harrison, Gloucester County.

TRANSPORTATION - ELIGIBLE PUPILS

The Harrison Township Board of Education will provide transportation for public school pupils eligible under New Jersey Law remote from the school as well as the following:

A. Those students who are educationally handicapped, and have transportation specified in their Individual Educational Program (I.E.P.).

B. Those students whose routes to school are deemed hazardous by the Board of Education.

C. All approved field trips between the hours of 8:30 AM and 3:00 PM.

D. All eligible non-public school pupils who meet the necessary specifications, as prescribed by law.

Legal Reference N.J.A.A. 18A:39

TRANSPORTATION - ROUTES & SERVICES

Responsibility for developing all transportation routes lies with the Transportation Coordinator, with final approval of these routes the responsibility of the Board of Education. The Transportation Coordinator will be responsible for the development of all runs, including transportation to locations other than legal residences on established routes, taking into consideration safety, time elements, and economics. All regular routes shall be established after July 1, and up to the regularly scheduled Board of Education meeting held in August, taking into consideration the transportation needs of all students.

Any adjustments to the regular routing procedures after school opens in September will only be made under the following circumstances:

A. All special transportation requests after school opens in September must be limited to those that can be made within the limits of established bus transportation routes, and must exclude those buses which are filled to capacity.

B. In the event a need exists to have a child picked up and dropped off from other than the legal residence, a special transportation request form must filed no later than July 1 with the details of this request placed in writing. The new designated stop must be the same stop for the pick-up and/or drop-off each school day (180 days). Once approved, this stop will remain in effect for the entire year.

C. In the event of an unforeseen change on the part of the parents' circumstances, a formal written special transportation request asking for the change will be presented to the Board of Education for their consideration in regard to approval, which shall not unreasonably be withheld.

D. If a parent/guardian provides a written special transportation request to the Superintendent, and the request is approved by the Superintendent, a pupil may exit or enter from his/her regularly assigned bus at a different, already-established stop along that approved route.

E. No special transportation requests for changes in bus assignment will be considered on a daily basis.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HARRISON, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered in the form of a joint stipulation of settlement have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review of the terms of the document submitted by the parties, the Commissioner must reject the following aspects of the accord and remand for further action.

Term No. 2 of the stipulation states:

> 2. The Commissioner of Education further Orders the proposed amendment to the busing policy as set forth on Schedule "A" shall be adopted in accordance with the following procedures which shall be deemed to be mandatory in the future for adoption of the particular changes to the existing busing policy as set forth on Schedule "A" and shall also be mandatory in the future for any change in any busing policy. (emphasis supplied)

While the Board is within its authority to adopt a policy governing transportation in the district, this Board may not bind a future board in carrying out its responsibilities to the district as it deems appropriate. Thus, the instant Board, no matter how laudable it believes its procedural position on the matter may be, has no authority to dictate to future boards what procedure shall be used in revising a policy extant in the district. See, e.g., Skladzien v. Bayonne Bd. of Ed., 12 N.J. Misc. 602 (Sup. Ct. 1934), aff'd 115 N.J.L. 203 (E.&A. 1935).

Of a more technical drafting nature, the Commissioner notes that the accord of the parties represents a stipulation of settlement, not a consent order. Therefore it is inappropriate to declare that the "Commissioner of Education Orders the proposed amendment." Rather, his review is to ensure that that agreement reached by the parties is in accord with law, not to order the parties.

Finally, and also of a technical nature, should the parties arrive at terms agreeable to them upon remand of this matter, it is noted that the Commissioner of Education is not bound to accept the recommendation suggested in the paragraph preceding the terms of the settlement that he and the State Board of Education adopt a rule embodying the procedures set forth in the parties' proposed settlement for all school districts in New Jersey which seek to change existing busing policy.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed above, the instant settlement is rejected and the matter is remanded for further action consistent with the decision herein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

For Petitioner, Joan Embrey-Johnson, pro se

For Respondent, Michael Gross, Esq., (Kenny, Gross & McDonough)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on June 19, 1992 by way of a Petition of Appeal and Motion for Emergent Relief filed on behalf of petitioner by his parent, Joan Embrey-Johnson, seeking an order that he be allowed to graduate on June 22, 1992, notwithstanding his having failed to pass physical education (PE).

Petitioner seeks an order that he be allowed to graduate based upon the fact that in February 1992, after he failed PE with a grade of 49 the first marking period and received a grade of 62 the second marking period, he was informed by his guidance counselor and PE teacher that he would still be able to graduate if he passed the remainder of the year. The basis for the failing grade was failure to come prepared to class (no gym clothes) and failure to participate in gym for approximately 30 days.

On June 18, 1992, petitioner was informed that he was not graduating because, even though he subsequently improved his grade during the last marking period, he had failed the course since his final grade was only 60. Petitioner was further informed that he could attend summer school for PE, at a cost of $250, and graduate in August.

Petitioner seeks reversal of this decision because he does not have $250 and attendance at summer school will interfere with his work and post-secondary education plans. Moreover, he argues that he did not participate in gym during the marking period in question because it dealt with activities that involved small balls (tennis and badminton) and he has an eye condition which causes difficulty with certain physical activities since it creates an inability to focus on small objects. While acknowledging that he is at fault for not communicating this difficulty to school personnel, he believes that extenuating circumstances exist warranting the grant of emergent relief.

On June 19, 1992, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law. A hearing on the Motion for Emergent Relief was conducted on June 22, 1992 resulting in an oral decision by the Administrative Law Judge granting emergent relief in part to petitioner to participate in the graduation ceremonies because of petitioner's good faith effort to improve based on what he was told by his guidance counselor and PE teacher.

The Commissioner, pursuant to his authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 designated John Woodbury, Deputy Commissioner of Education, to decide the Motion for Emergent Relief.

Upon review of the record, including the papers submitted by the Board at hearing, the oral argument of the parties and the ALJ's oral decision, the Deputy Commissioner finds and determines that emergent relief shall be DENIED due to petitioner's failure to meet the standards for emergent relief set forth by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J., 126 (1982) given that he has failed to demonstrate (1) a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of his claim; (2) he will suffer irreparable harm in that attendance at graduation ceremonies is a privilege, not a right; (3) in balancing the equities he will be harmed greater than respondent who has to uphold standards of academic achievement, order and uniformity of policy; or (4) the public interest compels granting the relief sought. The matter shall proceed, therefore, for hearing on the claims for issuance of a diploma.

IT IS SO ORDERED this 22nd day of June 1992.

For Petitioner, Joseph R. Morano, Esq. (Rand, Algeier, Tosti & Woodruff)

For Respondent, JoAnne Butler, Esq., (Young, Tarshis, Dimiero & Sayovitz)

This matter has come before the Commissioner of Education by transfer from Superior Court, Chancery Division, Morris County, dated Monday, June 22, 1992 on Motion for Emergent Relief averring that the Board's action in prohibiting G.S. from participating in the graduation ceremonies scheduled for tonight, June 22, 1992, was arbitrary and in violation of its own policies. Said Motion for Injunctive Relief avers G.S. was stricken by the instigator of a fight, was suspended short term, reinstated by the principal, but was thereafter denied participation in graduation ceremonies as well by said principal without a full Board hearing as G.S. claims is required by Board Policy 5610, paragraph 3 of the Student Handbook. Petitioner contends that pursuant to the standards enunciated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) he will suffer irreparable harm if not permitted to attend graduation tonight, has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of his claim and that the balance of equities enures in his behalf in seeking pendente lite restraints.

The matter was transmitted from Superior Court for hearing on Monday, June 22, 1992 to the Office of Administrative Law without Answer. The Board's Answer was thereafter faxed to the Commissioner on June 22, 1992. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

The Commissioner of Education has designated his authority to hear and decide this matter to Deputy Commissioner John C. Woodbury pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record gathered in this matter, the Deputy Commissioner finds that petitioner has failed to meet those standards for pendent lite restraints articulated in Crowe v. DeGioia, supra. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed by the ALJ in his oral decision of June 22, 1992, emergent relief is DENIED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MULLICA TOWN- : DECISION SHIP, ATLANTIC COUNTY. :

This matter concerned conduct of an inquiry into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed election procedures.

Initial decision found vacancy in the membership of the Board was as a consequence of improper election procedures. (N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(d)) Moreover, ALJ concluded notwithstanding Mr. Butterhof's superior write-in vote, he could not automatically fill the seat on the Board under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15. ALJ concluded a special election was required to fill the single vacant seat on the Board.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision since by law the vacancy must be filled by the electorate.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 2837-92
AGENCY DKT. NO. 93-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MULLICA TOWNSHIP, ATLANTIC COUNTY

William Cappuccio, Esquire, for the Board of Education of the Township of Mullica
Anthony Butterhof, the Challenger

Record Closed: May 22, 1992 Decided: May 29, 1992

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

On April 7, 1992, the solicitor for the Board of Education of the Township of Mullica, Atlantic County (Board) addressed a letter to the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) requested that the Commissioner conduct an inquiry into certain alleged irregularities concerning the annual school election held on April 7, 1992, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12.

On April 8, 1992, Anthony Butterhof, a write-in candidate for a seat on the Board also addressed a letter to the Commissioner asserting, among other things, that he had received the third highest number of votes cast in the Board's annual school election and, therefore, should fill one of the three seats on the Board for a three year term.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 22, 1992, for the conduct of an inquiry into alleged violations of statutory prescribed election procedures. N.J.A.C. 6:24-6.1(c). The hearing and inquiry was held on May 22, 1992, at the Atlantic City OAL, Atlantic County Civil Courthouse, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The hearing record closed on May 22, 1992.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The relevant facts in this matter are neither contested nor in dispute. Therefore, the following constitutes my FINDINGS OF FACT:

The Mullica Township School District is a Type II with an elected Board of nine (9) members, each member to serve a term of three (3) years.

On or about January 27, 1992, the Board accepted the resignations of two seated Board members; Susan Franklin and Herman Henderson. Susan Franklin's term on the Board expired in April 1992 while Herman Henderson's term is to expire in April 1993.

The Board advertised the two vacancies in newspapers seeking individuals to apply to it to fill the unexpired terms of the members who had resigned. Subsequently, the Board interviewed those individuals who demonstrated, in writing, an interest in serving on the Board.

On February 10, 1992, the Board, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15f., filled the two vacancies by appointing John Gandy and Maryann Agnew to the Board. The Board did not, however, specify which vacant seat Mr. Gandy or Ms. Agnew were to fill.

Nomination petitions for election to a seat on the Board were required to be filed with the Board's Secretary no later than February 13, 1992 for the election to be held on April 7, 1992. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-9. Three seats on the Board were to be filled as a consequence of the annual school election to be held on April 7, 1992. However, only two incumbents filed nomination petitions; i.e., Barbara H. Para and Shellie Panarello.

Prior to the date of the election (April 7, 1992) Anthony Butterhof, Jr., became aware that only two individuals were nominated to fill seats on the Board and that one seat remained open. Mr. Butterhof had previously served on the Board but was not a sitting Board member in 1991-92. Mr. Butterhof commenced a campaign to have his name on the ballot as a write-in candidate for a seat on the Board.

The announced results of the balloting for seats on the Board of the annual school election held on April 7, 1992 in the Mullica Township were as follows:

Candidates by Petition	At Polls	Absentee	Total
Barbara Para	171	1	172
Shellie Panarello	154	1	155
Write-in Candidates
Anthony Butterhof	9	--	9
Tony Butterhof	4	--	4
Butterhof	2	--	2
Albert Butterhof	1	--	1
A. Butterhof	1	--	1
Butterhof, Anthony J.	1	--	1
Butterhof, Anthony, Jr.	1	--	1
Grunow, Joni	1	--	1
Galli, Marcia	1	--	1
Stewart, Robert	1	--	1

On April 9, 1992, the Board called a special meeting at which it ratified the appointments of appointed Board members John Gandy to fill the seat of Susan Franklin and Maryann Agnew to fill the set of Herman Franklin. Consequently, Ms. Agnew, to remain on the Board, should have filed her nominating petition for the position on or before February 13, 1992. Ms. Agnew did not do so. Therefore, as of the Board's reorganization meeting, Ms. Agnew's seat on the Board was declared vacant and she no longer sits on the Board.

Mr. Butterhof seeks to fill the vacancy on the Board as a consequence of the number of write-in votes he received at the annual school election held on April 7, 1992.

Martin Ney served as the Superintendent of Mullica Township Board of Education during the period in January 1992 when the two Board members resigned and the two replacement Board members were appointed by the Board. In or about April 1992, Martin Ney assumed the position of Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The controlling statute in this matter is found at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15, which provides as follows:

> Vacancies in the membership of the board shall be filled as follows:
> a. By the county superintendent, if the vacancy is caused by the absence of candidates for election to the school board or by the removal of a member because of lack of qualifications, or is not filled within 65 days following its occurrence:
>
> b. By the county superintendent, to a number sufficient to make up a quorum of the board if, by reason of vacancies, a quorum is lacking;
>
> c. By special election, if in the annual school election two or more candidates qualified by law for membership on the school board receive an equal number of votes. Such special election shall be held only upon recount and certification by the commissioner of such election result, shall be restricted to such candidates shall be held within 60 days of the annual school election, and shall be conducted in accordance with procedures for annual and special school elections set forth in chapter 14 of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes. The vacancy shall be filled by the county superintendent if in such special election two or more candidates qualified by law for membership on the school board receive an equal number of votes;
> d. By special election if there is a failure to elect a member at the annual school election due to improper election procedures. Such special election shall be restricted to those persons who were > candidates at such annual school election, shall be held within 60 days of such annual school election, and shall be conducted in accordance with the procedures for annual and special school elections set forth in chapter 14 of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes;

> e. By the commissioner if there is a failure to elect a member at the annual school election due to improper campaign practices; or > f. By the board in all other cases.
> Each member so appointed shall serve until the organizational meeting following the next annual election unless he is appointed to fill a vacancy occurring within the 60 days immediately preceding such election to fill a term extending beyond such election, in which case he shall serve until the organizational meeting following the second annual election next succeeding the occurrence of the vacancy, and any vacancy for the remainder of the term shall be filled at the annual election or the second annual election next succeeding the occurrence of the vacancy as the case may be.

Mr. Butterhof argues that by virtue of his superior count of votes at the polls as a write-in candidate, the Commissioner should certify him as a member of the Board under section e. of the statute. Butterhof contends, and the facts bear him out, that he was in receipt of the third highest number of votes cast for a seat on the Board at the annual school election. There is no issue as to Butterhof's write-in votes which identified him as "Tony," "Butterhof," "Butterhof," "Albert Butterhof," "A. Butterhof," among other names. In his letter brief, Mr. Butterhof asserts he is known in the community as both Tony and Anthony, as well as Anthony J. Butterhof, Jr. He acknowledges that Albert Butterhof is his brother, however, he believes the votes were cast for him because he was the only candidate who campaigned for the seat on the Board by way of write-in votes. In any event, the Commissioner has, on many occasions, validated the write-in votes of candidates under similar facts and circumstances. In the matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Township of Hopewell, Cumberland County, 1978 S.L.D. 204, 206. In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Borough of Victory Gardens, 1978 S.L.D. 272, 273. See also, In re: Fifteen Registered Voters County of Sussex, 129 N.J. Super. 296 (App. Div. 1974).

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the write-in votes cast for Anthony J. Butterhof at the polls on April 7, 1992, numbered twenty (20) votes and represents the third highest vote count in the election.

The Board contends, among other things, that the Commissioner should fill the vacancy on the Board under section e. of the statute or, in the alternative, the Board should be granted the authority pursuant to section f. It rejects Butterhof's request to fill the vacancy by asserting that the vacancy was not advertised and, therefore, the vacant seat on the Board was not on the ballot. Butterhof did not petition for the seat nor did he demonstrate any interest in the vacancies which occurred in January 1992.

The Board argues that the Atlantic County Superintendent of Schools should not fill the vacancy under section a. of the statute. The Board contends that a selection by the County Superintendent could be viewed as a conflict because he served as the Board's Superintendent of Schools during the period of January to April 1992. Such a conflict of interest, whether real or imagined, would not serve the best interest of the Board.

The Board rejects the notion of a special election under section d. of the statute. It contends that its annual school election is generally held in cooperation with the Oakcrest High School with which it has a sending-receiving relationship. The cost of the election is shared between the two school districts. A special election would cost the Mullica Board between $3,000 and $4,000; an amount which would be prohibitive under its present budget.

The Board asserts there was no bad faith on its part when its Secretary failed to advertise for the election of the third seat then held by Ms. Maryann Agnew. It requests, therefore, that rather than a special election, the Commissioner or the Board fill the vacant seat on the Board.

A close reading of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15 would necessarily focus on sections a. and d. of the statute under the circumstances of this matter. While the Board contends the vacancy was caused by the absence of candidates for election, Mr. Butterhof argues that his superior write-in votes was sufficient to establish his candidacy and, therefore, his election to the vacant seat on the Board.

On the other hand, was the failure to elect a member of the Board due to "improper election procedures?" N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15 d. The facts clearly demonstrate that the Board's Secretary failed to give proper notice of the offices to be filled at the annual school election as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:14-19 (2). This failure to give proper notice cannot be attributed to the Board's failure to specify which of the two newly appointed members in February 1992 were to replace which of the two resigned members seat on the Board. Rather, one of the two seats became vacant by operation of law. The Board Secretary, therefore, should have given notice that three seats on the Board were to be filled by the annual school election held on April 7, 1992. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-19 (2).

I CONCLUDE that the vacancy in the membership of the Board was as a consequence of improper election procedures. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15 d.

Notwithstanding Mr. Butterhof's superior write-in vote, I CONCLUDE he may not automatically fill the seat on the Board under the prescription of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15.

I CONCLUDE that the election of Barbara H. Para and Shellie Panarello was proper, in accordance with the law and, therefore, should not be disturbed.

I CONCLUDE that the application of section e. of the statute is inappropriate because the failure to elect was not due to improper campaign practices.

I CONCLUDE, moreover, that due to the vacancy having been caused by improper election procedure, a special election is required to fill the single vacant seat on the Board. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15 d.; In the matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Borough of Victory Gardens, supra.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the Board Secretary of the Board of Education of the Township of Mullica immediately advertise such notices for the special election to held in accordance with the procedures for annual and special school election as set forth in chapter 14 Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

LETTER BRIEF BY ANTHONY BUTTERHOF

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MULLICA TOWNSHIP, ATLANTIC COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.*

Upon review of the record, the Commissioner adopts the findings and conclusions of the Administrative Law Judge. Accordingly, for the reasons set forth in the initial decision, the Mullica Township Board of Education shall conduct a special election to fill the vacancy for the Board seat which expired in April 1992, a seat for which the Board improperly failed to give notice for election on April 7, 1992. The requirements of law, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(d), mandate that the vacancy be filled by the electorate, not, as the Board would have it, by the Commissioner or the Board itself. That the Board believes the costs for a special election ($3,000 - $4,000) are not economically feasible under its school budget does not provide a legal basis for the statutory requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-15(d) to be set aside.

* A letter was filed by the Board's counsel on June 16, 1992 stating the Board did not authorize the filing of exceptions but he wished to reiterate the request that the Commissioner or county superintendent fill the vacancy since the cost of a special election was economically unfeasible under its current budget.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning teacher, who intervened in breaking up a fight between two pupils, requested Neptune Board of Education to conduct expulsion hearing for alleged pupil assault. Board sought dismissal as the incident did not constitute an assault within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2 and N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1.

ALJ applied Kaprow, finding and determining petition was filed untimely. Petition of Appeal was dismissed.

Commissioner agreed with and adopted as his own the findings and conclusion of the ALJ granting summary judgment to the Board for the reasons stated in the initial decision.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners Elizabeth Markulin and the Neptune Township Education Association (Association) allege that Ms. Markulin was assaulted by a pupil under the direction and control of the Neptune Township Board of Education (Board) and seeks, among other things, an order from the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) to require the Board to convene and conduct an expulsion hearing regarding the pupil assault, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1.

Petitioners filed a verified Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner on January 29, 1992. Issue was joined with the filing of the Board's Answer on February 14, 1992. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 25, 1992, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq.

The Board advanced a Motion for Summary Decision Dismissing the Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner, on February 21, 1992. The Commissioner's representative transmitted the Motion to the OAL on or about February 26, 1992. On April 6, 1992, the undersigned was in receipt of petitioners' brief and exhibits. Oral argument was held on April 20, 1992, which constitutes the close of the record.

MOTION

The Board's Motion for Summary Decision seeking Dismissal of the Petition of Appeal is grounded upon the following:

1. No sufficient cause for determination has been advanced by petitioners within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.9.

2. The Petition of Appeal was filed beyond the 90 day time limitation established by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2.

Petitioners oppose the Board's Motion.

BACKGROUND FACTS

The relevant facts are neither contested nor disputed and are set forth as follows:

1. On June 14, 1991, A.S., a sixth grade pupil in the Neptune Middle School, was involved in a fight with S.C. , a pupil attending the school.

2. Approximately, 20 to 30 pupils were gathered at the scene and some pupils attempted to separate A.S. and S.C.

3. Pupil N.S., A.S.'s sister was one of the pupils attempting to separate the fighting pupils.

4. Petitioner Elizabeth Markulin, a teaching staff member in the employ of the Board, heard the commotion and hurried to the scene of the fight.

5. Petitioner Markulin commenced to escort pupils A.S. and S.C. to the school's Vice Principal's office. During the escort, pupil A.S. continued to verbally and physically assault pupil S.C.

6. Pupil A.S. picked up a metal garbage can and raised it above her head in an attempt to throw it in the direction of S.C. who was standing behind petitioner Markulin.

7. N.S., A.S.'s sister, and another pupil grabbed the garbage can and removed it from A.S.

8. A.S. continued her assault on S.C. who was behind petitioner Markulin. A.S. could not reach S.C. and began kicking in S.C.'s direction.

9. During this kicking in the direction of S.C., A.S. kicked petitioner Markulin.

10. Subsequently, petitioner Markulin executed a Worker's Compensation incident report in which she stated, among other things, "student kicked me when trying to kick another student" (Board's Exhibit B).

11. On June 4, 1991, while petitioner Markulin was on escort with pupils A.C. and S.C., teaching staff member Richard Wright appeared upon the scene and agree to complete the escort to the Vice Principal's office.

12. During Wright's escort, pupil S.C. intentionally assaulted Mr. Wright.

13. Pupil S.C. was immediately suspended from school and the Board instituted expulsion proceedings against S.C., pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1.

14. As a consequence of the expulsion proceedings, S.C. was placed in an out of district school commencing the 1991-92 school year.

15. On August 28, 1991, Lucille Alfano, president of the Association, wrote a letter to Superintendent of Schools Michael T. Lake requesting a date and time for the expulsion hearing of pupil A.S. (Board's Exhibit E, Petitioners Exhibit N)

16. On September 4, 1991, Superintendent Lake advised Association President Alfano by letter that, "■■■we have no record of any further Board of Education proceedings in the matter of Middle School or High School pupils." (Board's Exhibit F, Petitioners' Exhibit O).

17. On September 5, 1991, petitioners attorney wrote to the Board's attorney requesting advice as to what course of action the Board was taking concerning expulsion hearings Ms. Markulin, Mr. Penchuk and other staff members who have been assaulted by pupils but who had not yet received the "statutory required expulsion hearing." Mr. Cige expressed his hope to shortly receive a listing of hearings with possible dates. (Board's Exhibit G, Petitioners' Exhibit P).

18. On November 11, 1991, Mr. Hundley wrote to Mr. Cige wherein he stated, among other things, that:

> Both the accident report signed by Mrs. Markulin and the statement given to Mr. Torres indicate that Mrs. Markulin was inadvertently kicked by the student (sic) while breaking up a fight. No serious injury was suffered by the teacher. It is the Administration's opinion that the incident did not constitute an assault within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 and N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1. As a result, no expulsion proceedings were instituted in this case. (Board's Exhibit H, Petitioners' Exhibit Q).

19. On January 27, 1992, petitioners filed a Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner seeking, among other relief, an order declaring that the Board had violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 by failing to institute expulsion proceedings against pupil A.S. as a consequence of the June 14, 1991, incident.

20. The Petition of Appeal was filed 227 days after the June 14, 1991, incident and 206 days subsequent to the expiration of the 21 day limitation for instituting expulsion proceedings under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

The Board's Position

POINT I

The Board cites the regulation at N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 (c),which provides as follows:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

In the instant matter, the "action by the district board of education ... which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing" is the alleged failure of the Board to comply with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 to institute expulsion proceedings against pupil A.S., as a consequence of the June 14, 1991, incident involving petitioner Markulin. The statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 mandates that the local board of education institute expulsion proceedings "...no later than 21 calendar days following the day on which the pupil is suspended."

The Board observes that petitioner Association was aware that an expulsion hearing had been held in the matter of pupil S.C., the other pupil involved in the June 14, 1991, incident. Both the petitioners, President Lucille Alfano, and petitioners' attorney appeared at pupil S.C.'s August 14, 1991, expulsion hearing.

Thereafter, the Association President wrote to the Superintendent on August 28, 1991, requesting information concerning the date and time for the expulsion hearing of A.S. Superintendent Lake responded by letter dated September 4, 1991, asserting that the Board had no record of any further proceedings.

The Board contends that the September 4, 1991, letter from the Superintendent to the Association President clearly advised petitioners that expulsion proceedings had not been instituted against pupil A.S. It argues that the September 4, 1991, letter was a notice of "action by the district board of education" within the meaning of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 (c). The Board observes that the Petition of Appeal was filed on January 27,1992; 145 days subsequent to the September 4, 1991 notice and 55 days after the 90 day limitation imposed by the regulation.

POSITIONERS' POSITION

Petitioners reject the Board's contention that the Superintendent's letter to Association President Alfano dated September 4, 1991, constitutes the Board's official notice. Petitioners observe that Superintendent Lake's September 4, 1991 letter is in response to Ms. Alfano's letter dated August 28, 1991, wherein the Association President specifically refers to the alleged pupil assault on petitioner Markulin and requests information as to the date and time of the expulsion hearing for pupil A.S. Moreover, petitioners contend that the Superintendent does not refer to Ms. Markulin by name but, rather, merely states that based upon a review of " student disciplining cases" the Board had no record of any further Board proceedings. Petitioners assert that the Superintendent's letter is unclear as to what "student disciplining cases" or what "have no record" means. Due to the lack of clarity, petitioners' counsel wrote to the Board's attorney on September 4, 1991 as follows:

> Please advise what course of action is being taken toward scheduling expulsion hearings for Mrs. Markulin, Mr. Penchuk and other staff persons who were assaulted by students (sic) but who have not yet received the statutory required expulsion hearing. I would hope to receive a listing of hearings with possible dates shortly. (Petitioners' Exhibit P).

Petitioners observe they did not receive a response from attorney Cige's September 5, 1991 letter until Board attorney Hundley's response dated November 11, 1991. Therein, Mr. Hundley stated, in part, as follows:

> Both the accident report signed by Mrs. Markulin and the statement given to Mr. Torres indicate that Mrs. Markulin was inadvertently kicked by the student (sic) while breaking up a fight. No serious injury was suffered by the teacher. It is the administrator's opinion that the incident did not constitute an assault within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 and N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1. As a result, no expulsion proceedings were instituted in this case.

> The student (sic) was suspended and it is believed that this constituted a proper disposition under the circumstances of this incident. (Petitioners' Exhibit Q)

Petitioners argue that the Board's attorney letter of November 11, 1991, is the only real notice that no action was being taken by the Board and, consequently, the 90 days clearly starts to run from this point. Petitioners contend that the September 4, 1991 letter from Superintendent Lake did not clearly advise the petitioners that expulsion proceedings would not be instituted against pupil A.S., only that nothing had been done to date. The November 11, 1991, letter, however, did clearly advise the petitioners that the Board did not contemplate instituting expulsion proceedings against A.S. Thus, petitioners argue, November 11, 1991, constitutes the "notice" which triggered the running of the 90 day rule.

Petitioners contend, therefore, that their Petition of Appeal was filed with the Commissioner on January 27, 1992, within the 90 day time constraint pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 (c).

The Board's Rebuttal

The Board contends that Superintendent Lake's letter of September 4, 1991, was in response to a direct inquiry by Association President Alfano of August 28, 1991, concerning petitioner Markulin and pupil A.S. The September 4, 1991 letter constitutes the Board's notice of its action. The November 11, 1991 letter from the Board's attorney to the Association's attorney is merely an explanation of the reasons why the Board did not institute expulsion proceedings against pupil A.S.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

I

The Board seeks to dismiss the instant matter by way of summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. Petitioners oppose the Board's motion contending, among other things, that the instant matter is not ripe for summary decision.

The Administrative Rule, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, concerning summary decision is substantially similar to New Jersey Court Rules, R. 4:46-1 et. seq. R. 4:46-2, which has been subject to judicial interpretation and provides that upon motion duly filed, summary judgment "shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

In Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Company of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), the Supreme Court set forth the purpose of the Summary Judgment Rule and established the standards a court should follow in applying the rule. The Court emphasized that the movant has a very heavy burden to clearly establish that no genuine issue of material fact exist. Justice William J. Brennan, writing for the Court observed, among other things, that the role of the judge on a motion for summary disposition is first to determine whether there is a genuine issue of material fact, but not to decide the issue if he/she finds it to exist. Judson at 73.

Justice Brenner continues in Judson to observe that summary judgment procedure is designed to provide for the prompt, businesslike and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause which clearly shows no genuine issues of material fact requiring disposition at a trial, after a discriminating search of the merits of the pleadings, depositions and admissions on file, together with affidavit submitted. Id. at 74. The Court also held, among other things, that where the party opposing a motion for summary disposition offers only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, the court may grant summary judgment, "...taking as true the statement of uncontradicted facts in papers relied upon by the moving party, such papers themselves not otherwise showing the existence of any issue of material fact." Id. at 75.

More recently, the Supreme Court noted that "excessive caution would undercut the purposes of a motion for summary judgment, which provides a means for piercing the allegations in the pleadings to determine whether there are issues requiring disposition at trial." Pierce v. Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. 84 N.J. 58, 65 (1980)

Having carefully examined the whole record before me, I CONCLUDE there are no genuine issues of material fact extant in the instant matter.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the herein matter, pursuant to the Board's motion, meets the Judson criteria for summary disposition.

II

The threshold issue is whether the Petition of Appeal is time barred by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2, which requires that such petition be filed with the Commissioner within 90 days of the challenged action of the Board.

The Appellate Division of Superior Court dealt with this issue most recently in the matter of Maurice S. Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 255 N.J Super. 76 (App. Div. 1992), wherein Kaprow, a tenured Assistant Superintendent was terminated as the result of reduction in force (RIF) on June 30, 1981, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. The Board did not advise Kaprow of any position for which he might qualify by virtue of his tenure status nor did it create a preferred eligibility list at the time of the RIF and as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12. Subsequently, on September 9, 1986, the Board appointed a new Assistant Superintendent for Administrative Services. The Board did not advise Kaprow of such appointment. The new Assistant Superintendent remained in the position until July 1, 1987, at which time he was appointed Superintendent of Schools by the Board.

On February 23, 1988, Kaprow inquired of the Board as to whether any administrative appointments had been made subject to his RIF. On the same day, the Board's secretary advised Kaprow of the September 9, 1986 appointment.

On February 28, 1988, Kaprow replied to the Board's secretary's letter asserting his right to the position of Assistant Superintendent, among other positions. Kaprow received no response to his letter, consequently he wrote a second letter dated April 25, 1988, again asserting his claim to the position. Kaprow stated that he did not believe any purpose would be served in an adversarial proceeding and, therefore, requested the Board to respond by May 16, 1988.

The Board did not respond by May 16, 1988, however, its attorney addressed a letter to Kaprow dated June 14, 1988. replying to both the February 28 and April 25, 1988 letters.

Thereafter, Kaprow filed his verified petition before the Commissioner on August 1, 1988, asserting his claim to the position of Assistant Superintendent, among others.

With respect to the issue of the 90 day rule, the Appellate Division disagreed with Kaprow that the Board's attorney's letter of June 14, 1988, constituted the order, ruling or action taken by the local Board on his claim. The official action occurred on September 9, 1986, when it appointed the new Assistant Superintendent. However, because of the Board's unexplained failure to create a preferred eligibility list and its failure to notify Kaprow of the position opening, the Appellate Court sustained the State Board and held that the Board's secretary's letter of February 23, 1988, constituted the controversy to which Kaprow was obliged to file his Petition of Appeal within 90 days. Kaprow waited until August 1, 1988, more than five months after receipt of the February 23, 1988 letter from the Board's secretary. Thus, Kaprow's claims were time barred. See also Paul Gordon v. Passaic Township Board of Education, 1983 S.L.D. 1141, aff'd in part/rev'd in part, 1985 S.L.D. 1929 (State Board), aff'd App. Div. Dkt. A-3294-84T7 (May 27, 1986), cert. den. 105 N.J. 534 (1986); Riely v. Hunterdon Central High Board of Education, 173 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1980).

The instant matter is similar to the Kaprow case. Here, the Superintendent responded on September 4, 1991 to a specific request by Association President Alfano concerning petitioner Markulin and pupil A.S. Thus, petitioners had 90 days from September 4, 1991, in which to file their Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner. Ninety days from September 4, 1991 fell on December 3, 1991. The herein record demonstrates that the Petition of Appeal was filed on January 27, 1992.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that the herein Petition of Appeal is time barred, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2.

I CONCLUDE that it is not necessary to address the remaining issues raised by petitioners' Petition of Appeal.

I CONCLUDE that Summary Decision must be entered on behalf of the respondent Board.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that SUMMARY DECISION be entered on behalf of the Board of Education of the Township of Neptune and that the herein Petition of Appeal be and is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioners' exceptions were timely filed pursuant to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Upon review of the record and the exceptions filed by petitioners, the Commissioner agrees with and adopts as his own the findings and conclusion of the Administrative Law Judge granting summary judgment to the Board for the reasons stated in the initial decision. Contrary to petitioners' exceptions, the Commissioner finds the ALJ appropriately applied Kaprow, supra, because the circumstances in the instant matter are similar to those in Kaprow not Polaha v. Buena Regional Sch. Dist. 212 N.J. Super. 628 (App. Div. 1986) wherein circumstances existed for relaxation of the 90-day filing requirement of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).

Accordingly, the Peititon of Appeal herein is dismissed.

HEARING OF CHRISTINE BRADY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MORRIS,	:	DECISION
MORRIS COUNTY.	:

Board certified charges of unbecoming conduct against special education teacher due to her alleged offensive and irrational actions during incidents both in the classroom and at school-related events.

In light of testimony from students and supervisor and audio-tape of respondent's classroom, ALJ found respondent did engage in rude and ill-mannered conduct at in-service meeting and toward supervisor, did act emotionally and irrationally with students and as representative of school at fashion show event, and did engage in crude language with students. ALJ noted conduct unbecoming can be established by series of incidents or one incident. (Fulcomer) ALJ found respondent did have propensity to yell, to lose control and to participate in conversations of a sexual nature with students. Respondent was ordered dismissed from her tenured position.

Commissioner adopted the findings and determination in initial decision. Respondent was ordered dismissed as of the date of Commissioner's decision. Commissioner directed that matter be referred to State Board of Examiners for appropriate action.

Record Closed: December 10, 1991 Decided: March 10, 1992

BEFORE DANIEL B. McKeown, ALJ:

At a meeting held on August 27, 1990 the Morris School District Board of Education (Board) certified charges to the Commissioner of Education under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 against Christine Brady (respondent), a teacher with a tenure status in its employ. Respondent filed an Answer to the charges with the Commissioner on September 20, 1990 after which the matter was transferred October 2, 1990 to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The case was then assigned to former administrative law judge Christopher Dietz who, during the pendency of the matter, was confirmed for appointment to the New Jersey Superior Court. Before his confirmation, Judge Deitz had scheduled, but then adjourned, several hearing dates. Upon Judge Dietz's final confirmation, the case was then assigned this judge to conduct a plenary hearing. A hearing was conducted on ten separate days between September 16 through October 25, 1991, after which the parties filed briefs in support of their respective positions. The record closed December 10, 1991. An extension of time within which to issue this initial decision was granted.

Findings are reached in this initial decision that the Board established by a preponderance of credible evidence respondent has engaged in a certain course of conduct upon which the conclusion is reached that that conduct justifies the extreme sanction of her dismissal as a teacher in the Board's employ.

CHARGES

The statement of charges certified by respondent by the Board as filed with it by her immediate supervisor, Gayle Conlin who holds the position of department chair for special education grades six through 12 at Morristown High School where respondent had been assigned, is attached hereto and incorporated herein as if set forth in full. Because of the length of the statement of charges, it is sufficient to note here that a thorough reading of the statement discloses seven instances of alleged conduct by respondent which, individually or collectively, the Board contends demonstrates respondent's unfitness to continue as a teacher in its employ. A brief overview of the background facts of the matter will be helpful prior to a consideration of the record proofs.

OVERVIEW

Respondent, who is and has been during all relevant times in possession of an instructional certificate with endorsements as a teacher of English and as a teacher of the handicapped, began her employment with the Board September 1, 1984 as a teacher of supplemental instruction. According to the record evidence, respondent's performance during 1984-85 and 1985-86 was, at the very least, satisfactory for her employment was renewed for 1985-86 and for 1986-87. Gayle Conlin began her initial employment with the Board September 1, 1986 as department chair of special education and, as such, became respondent's immediate supervisor. During 1986-87 respondent was assigned to a self-contained perceptually-impaired class from her prior assignment as supplemental teacher.

During 1986-87 supervisor Conlin formerly evaluated (R-7, R-1, R-2) the classroom performance of respondent on three separate occasions and, on each occasion, found her performance to be, at the very least, satisfactory if not more than satisfactory on each occasion. Conlin's annual, or summary, evaluation of respondent's performance for 1986-87 was, again at least satisfactory for she recommended the continued employment of respondent into 1987-88. Respondent's continued employment into 1987- 88 resulted, of course, in respondent acquiring a tenure status under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In addition to the positive evaluations of respondent's performance during 1986-87, supervisor Conlin also authored at least seven memoranda (R-9, R-10, R-11, R-12, R-13, R-14, R-15) throughout that year complimenting respondent on her lesson plans. Conlin also sent a memorandum (R-8) to high school administrators complimenting respondent on her cooperation and because respondent is a "pleasure to work with".

Despite the apparent foregoing praise of respondent's performance by Conlin during 1986-87, three of the eight instances now used as the bases of tenure charges were simultaneously occurring during the 1987 spring months. While the incidents will be addressed in more detail later, it suffices here merely to refer to those three incidents as (1) the N.C. incident, (2) the S.B. incident, and (3) the incident which was to have occurred during an in-service meeting on April 28, 1987 for which, it is noted, respondent received a written reprimand (R-41) the following day.

Respondent was reappointed by the Board for 1987-88 upon the recommendation of Conlin which recommendation was approved by high school vice- principal James Galbraith, the high school principal and superintendent before reaching the Board. Thus, respondent acquired tenure the first day she reported to work in September 1987. Conlin's formal evaluations (R-21, R-22) of respondent's teaching performance during 1987-88, and an evaluation (R-20) done by the high school principal, were at least satisfactory as was Conlin's annual or summary evaluation (R-23) of her performance. There are no incidents of conduct in which respondent engaged during 1987-88 which forms the bases of any complaint in the statement of charges.

The 1988-89 year, at least for purposes of this case, was a repeat of 1987-88. That is, supervisor Conlin found respondent's classroom performance to be at least satisfactory (R-24, R-25), and in the annual or summary evaluation (R-26) found respondent's performance to be at least satisfactory. Moreover, in a separate memorandum (R-27) to respondent, supervisor Conlin commended her on an "excellent statement of plans * * *". The statement of charges does not set forth any incidents in which respondent was to have been involved during 1988-89.

The 1989-90 academic year is the year in which certain conduct engaged in by respondent was found to be so offensive by Conlin that she filed the tenure charges with the Board. The charges were filed despite statements in Conlin's formal evaluations (R- 28) on November 29, 1989 that respondent presented an "excellent class" and on March 1, 1990 (R-29) in which respondent's performance was at least found to be satisfactory by Conlin. The four incidents which occurred during 1989-90, which when coupled with the three incidents in 1986-87, total the seven incidents complained of in the statement of charges. The 1989-90 incidents may be regarded to as (1) the G.H. incident, (2) the police department matter, (3) the Project graduation matter, and (4) verbal exchanges between respondent and male pupils which were surreptitiously audio recorded by a female pupil who was in class attendance during May 1990.

This then presents an overview of the background in which the charges were certified against respondent. The proofs of the parties on each incident will now be presented, followed by a finding on each incident.

THE N.C. INCIDENT

Supervisor Conlin recalls that during March 1987 executive vice-principal Galbraith advised her that one of respondent's pupil, N.C., reported he and respondent were not getting along. Galbraith directed Conlin to follow-up on the matter. Upon her departure from Galbraith's office, Conlin happened to meet respondent in the corridor at the bottom of the senior stairs. According to Conlin five or six teachers and/or pupils were nearby when she told respondent of the so-called N.C. report and asked respondent to come to her, Conlin's, office. As both began walking towards Conlin's office, respondent's voice became loud and she began waving her arms while exclaiming in a loud, crying voice that she, Conlin, always takes the side of pupils against her. Respondent screamed at Conlin that N.C. had struck her or pushed her the day before. Eventually both reached Conlin's office where respondent explained that she likes N.C. but that N.C.'s conduct is the cause of any problem which exists between them. Conlin recalls that she and respondent did me with vice-principal Galbraith to discuss N.C.'s complaint and to discuss respondent's outburst near the senior stairs.

Respondent's recollection of the incident is that Conlin came to her classroom immediately upon the conclusion of the school day and stated that executive vice-principal Galbraith wanted to see her immediately. When she asked why, Conlin said she would explain on the way. On the way to the office, Conlin explained that

N.C. claimed she had hit him. Respondent recalls explaining to Conlin that N.C. had struck her two times in the chest after a fire drill; that she had assigned N.C. one week of detention for such conduct; that N.C.'s allegation she, respondent, had hit him was his effort to escape punishment for his own conduct; and, that N.C. was "manipulating" her and vice-principal Galbraith. Respondent says she was shocked at the allegations against her and stated her "dismay" to Conlin near the senior stairs in a voice, she says, which may have been elevated. Respondent acknowledges that students were nearby but that she did not want to appear in distress. Consequently, respondent says she does not believe she was screaming as Conlin says she was.

Respondent says that both she and Conlin went directly to the conference room of vice-principal Galbraith's office where N.C. was already present. According to respondent, vice-principal Galbraith repeated N.C.'s assertion that she had hit her to which respondent replied N.C. had hit her at the end of the school day. However, as respondent was testifying at hearing she now claims that N.C. had hit her two times on her arm, not her chest as she had earlier explained. Nevertheless, according to respondent, the vice-principal was satisfied with her explanation that she did not hit N.C. but both Conlin and the vice-principal had asked her to try to be friends with N.C.

Respondent denies screaming at either supervisor Conlin or vice-principal Galbraith and she claims that her earlier conduct at the senior stairs did not create any disturbance between and among the students and/or staff members who were present despite the fact she was "tearful".

FINDINGS

This charge is not at all concerned with whether N.C. struck respondent or respondent struck N.C., although it is recognized that respondent's claim N.C. struck her is presented as justification or mitigation of whatever conduct she did engage in during the conversation with Conlin near the senior stairs. This charge does concern respondent's asserted conduct of raising her voice, or yelling, or screaming at or to Conlin during their conversation regarding N.C. before having reached the office.

I am persuaded by the testimony of supervisor Conlin and respondent's own testimony that respondent did, in fact, raise her voice as she manifested her 'shock' and 'dismay' at having been informed of N.C.'s claim. I further find that the level to which respondent raised her voice may be fairly characterized as 'screaming' and in a very emotional state. While respondent seems to justify this conduct on the basis that N.C. had struck her the day before and upon her belief, not proven true in this record, that Conlin takes the side of the pupils against respondent and that consequently she was emotionally upset , such justification is wholly rejected. Screaming at a supervisor who had merely related a complaint registered by a pupil is not the type of discourse expected of a mature adult. Such conduct is all the more offensive when it occurs in a school corridor with teachers and staff present.

It is recognized that a respondent asserts she generally speaks in a loud voice and that perhaps Conlin erroneously believed she was screaming or yelling when she was merely speaking loudly to this charge and other charges is rejected. At no time during the hearing did respondent speak in a manner that may be fairly characterized as yelling or screaming nor is there evidence that respondent normally speaks in a screaming, yelling manner as charged and as proven true here.

In summary I find the essence of paragraphs one and two to allege that respondent screamed in an emotional state at supervisor Conlin regarding the N.C. incident. I find that charge to be proven true by a preponderance of credible evidence. I further find that respondent's conduct of screaming at Conlin occurred in the presence of staff and students.

THE S.B. INCIDENT

Supervisor Conlin testified that one day during the 1987 spring semester near the end of the school day while she was in her office, she received a telephone call from respondent who was supposed to be teaching a class. Respondent was crying and, in Conlin's view, emotionally upset. Respondent began complaining to Conlin that student S.B. went the office to complain to the "man" regarding her, respondent. Respondent then said that she believed that the "man" to whom S.B. was going to complain was vice-principal Galbraith. Despite the fact respondent's class was still in session, Conlin did not know from which telephone or where the telephone was located from which respondent placed the call. Conlin specifically recalls that respondent was screaming on the phone regarding S.B. and the "man". Conlin recalls meeting later with respondent in the main office with vice- principal Galbraith and S.B. The matter was discussed between and among all. Respondent, in Conlin's words, finally calmed down from the crying and screaming voice with which respondent began the meeting.

Respondent's recollection of the S.B. matter is substantially similar to that of supervisor Conlin's recollection and Conlin's testimony reported above. Respondent acknowledges telephoning Conlin on or about April 24, 1987 while her class was in session because, as respondent says, S.B. was acting out. Respondent tried to discipline S.B. but he left the classroom in order to report her to the "man". Respondent then telephoned Conlin from an office phone which, at the time, was the special education office located three steps, according to respondent, from her classroom. While respondent left her classroom, she testified that an aide, Peggy Stack, was in the classroom with her pupils.

Respondent acknowledges that when she telephoned Conlin she was annoyed, agitated, and that her voice was elevated. However, respondent absolutely denies yelling.

FINDINGS

Respondent's own testimony that she was annoyed, agitated, and her voice was elevated belies her denial that she was not yelling during this telephone conversation with supervisor Conlin. Moreover, to the extent the telephone from which the call was placed by respondent was located three steps from her classroom leads to the strong inference that more likely than not those in the classroom together with anyone who happened to walk by the office would have heard respondent's complaints regarding S.B. during the time she was yelling at Conlin.

I find the essence of the charges contained within the paragraphs three and four to be respondent left her classroom during the regular school day, though an aide was present, in order to use a telephone in an adjoining office to call supervisor Conlin and in a yelling manner complained to her of a student in her class. I find that the essence of this charge has been proven true by a preponderance of credible evidence.

IN SERVICE MEETING INCIDENT

On April 28, 1987 supervisor Conlin arranged for a Dr. Bergner, the sister of a teacher of special education at the high school, to speak at an in-service staff meeting for the teachers of special education. All 14 teachers were in attendance at this staff meeting and were seated in a semi-circle facing Dr. Bergner. Respondent was in attendance as well. Supervisor Conlin complains that respondent was rude and ill-mannered during the presentation because she, respondent, turned her body to the side during the general presentation. She did not look at Dr. Bergner during the presentation though she otherwise engaged herself by completing an application for a summer job; she talked to others around her, she joked and laughed all the while Dr. Bergner was putting on her presentation. According to supervisor Conlin, all others in attendance were trying to pay attention to Dr. Bergner.

After the in-service meeting ended, Conlin says that Dr. Bergner and her sister who was the teacher of special education at the high school, Elaine Lewis, expressed embarrassment at the conduct of respondent. The following day supervisor Conlin issued respondent a memorandum (R-41) which may be fairly characterized as a reprimand for her conduct during the in-service meeting.

Respondent's recollection of the in-service meeting is as follows. At one time respondent and Elaine Lewis were friends. In fact, respondent lived with Ms. Lewis during 1986-87 for about three weeks while respondent searched for her own apartment. However, friction developed between the two when respondent lost her keys after she had moved out of Ms. Lewis' home. According to respondent, supervisor Conlin became aware of the friction when Ms. Lewis took over her classes one day. Ms. Lewis was to have circulated a petition to support another teacher for tenure acquisition in special education at or about the same time respondent was being considered for tenure.

When the in-service program occurred on April 28, 1987 respondent knew Dr. Bergner was Ms. Lewis' sister. During the meeting respondent says she was seated at a table with her back to the door while her side was to the speaker. Respondent says that about 18 people were present. She was at the table because she had to leave the meeting at 3:30 p.m. in order to go on home instruction for a pupil in the district. At or about the beginning of the meeting or during the meeting a colleague had told her of a summer job opening. Respondent explained that she then began draft writing a letter application and continued to do so a few minutes after Dr. Bergner had begun her presentation because she wanted to get the application in that day. At one point during the meeting, respondent says Dr. Bergner asked her the pointed question "Are you leading [this discussion] or am I?"

Respondent says she replied "Pardon me. I thought I was in a group discussion" Beyond that, however, respondent denies making faces, gestures, or laughing. Respondent acknowledges receiving the letter of reprimand accusing her of unprofessional conduct and she claims she wrote a two or three paragraph memorandum in response. However, a copy of such a document is not now available.

After Ms. Lewis and Dr. Bergner had subsequently complained to supervisor Conlin, and a meeting then occurred between Conlin and respondent, respondent says Conlin had asked her to telephone Ms. Lewis in order to patch up their differences. Respondent agreed and placed the telephone phone call to Ms. Lewis from Conlin's office telephone. However, Ms. Lewis rebuffed respondent's attempt at reconciling their differences. Consequently, respondent became agitated, embarrassed, and angry and told Conlin not ever to make her "do that again".

FINDINGS

The essence of the charge contained within paragraph five is that respondent conducted herself at the in-service meeting held April 28, 1987 in an unprofessional manner and that her conduct was rude and unacceptable. The finding is reached, based upon the testimony of respondent and of supervisor Conlin, that respondent engaged in activities more to her liking than being attentive at the in-service meeting arranged by supervisor Conlin, and that respondent adopted a course of conduct to manifest her displeasure at being obligated to attend a meeting being conducted by the sister of Elaine Lewis with whom respondent was not then getting along. The evidence shows that respondent engaged in writing a job application during the time Dr. Bergner was speaking; that she engaged in unilateral conversation in an attempt to encourage her colleagues to respond; that more likely than not she did "make faces" and engage in various conduct designed to let her irritation be known. I CONCLUDE that such conduct is rude and ill-mannered conduct and, as such, I further conclude that given the circumstances in which such conduct occurred, a professional staff meeting, respondent conducted herself in an unprofessional manner.

Despite the preceding three occurrences during respondent's third year of probationary employment during 1986-87, supervisor Conlin ultimately recommended respondent's continued employment for the 1987-88 year and, hence, tenure acquisition. Prior to that recommendation being acted upon by the Board, but after Conlin had made it to vice-principal Galbraith and the high school principal, a meeting was held in Galbraith's office to discuss respondent's behavior. Mr. Galbraith recalls that he was concerned that respondent would from time-to-time demonstrate irrational conduct and she would become emotional. The meeting was attended by Conlin, Galbraith, respondent, James Ward who is a representative of the Morris County Teachers Association, and the high school principal. It is agreed by the parties and by those who appeared before me that the meeting was held for the purpose of discussing respondent's conduct within the context of rescinding the earlier recommendation to award tenure. The result of the meeting, and recollections differ as to how this result came about, was for respondent to attend a Board sponsored Employee Assistance Program carried out through Family Service of Morris County. (See, R-16 and R-34) Respondent did attend the Program though no record of treatment given, if any, is available.

The fact remains respondent was continued in her employment for 1987-88 and, hence, she did acquire tenure. As noted earlier, nothing untoward occurred during 1987-88 nor in 1988-89. 1989-90, however saw five earlier referenced incidents occur. The proofs of the parties regarding the five occurrences in 1989-90 shall now be addressed.

THE G.H. INCIDENT

The essence of the charge surrounding this incident is that one of respondent's pupils G.H., was accused by respondent of bringing weapons into class and while supervisor Conlin was to have made good faith efforts to catch G.H. with weapons she was unsuccessful in so doing. Nevertheless, the charge is that respondent's conduct between October through December 1989 regarding the G.H. incident was marked by screaming and yelling at Conlin as well as a high state of emotional and irrational behavior. (See paragraphs 9 through 22 of the Statement of Charges)

Supervisor Conlin testified that in or about October 1989 she received a telephone call from respondent requesting her to come to the classroom because G.H. had a knife in his position. Conlin went to respondent's classroom and found vice-principal Galbraith and school security personnel there. Respondent was there with her class. Respondent said that G.H. had had a knife in his possession, although she did not see the knife. Respondent believed it was a knife because G.H. had something in his pocket which he would not show her. In the meantime, G.H. went home. Respondent was upset and was loud though Conlin admits on this occasion respondent was not as loud as she could have been. When G.H. reported to school the next day, Conlin summoned him to her office and directed him to empty his pockets. G.H. emptied his pockets though he had no knife in his possession. G.H. did tell Conlin that he had a "pen knife" on his person the previous day. Conlin admonished him not to bring any such instrument to school again.

Conlin requested the school psychologist, Margaret Meltzer, to evaluate G.H. to determine whether he presented a threat to himself or to others. Ms. Meltzer interviewed G.H. for approximately 30 minutes in an effort to determine whether he had negative feelings toward respondent. Ms. Meltzer concluded that G.H. had no negative feelings toward respondent nor did she consider him a threat to respondent. However, Ms. Meltzer acknowledged under oath that during the day of the interview G.H. did show her what she considered to be a key ring, or a Ninja-like T shaped instrument. Ms. Meltzer concluded that the Ninja-like T is what respondent thought was a weapon so she, Meltzer, asked G.H. not to bring that instrument to school again. Ms. Meltzer, despite the fact the horizontal portion of the T was approximately one inch in size, she considered it to be a toy because G.H. said he had a wall full of similar instruments at home (See R-49).

When supervisor Conlin learned of the conclusion reached by Ms. Meltzer, she told respondent of Meltzer's conclusion. Respondent, according to Conlin, became annoyed and upset and said that she, Conlin, did not care what happened to her; that Conlin was nonsupportive; that Conlin was going to allow her to be killed; that Conlin sounded like the police when her, respondent's, husband use to beat her; and that she, Conlin, would not do anything until someone was dead. According to Conlin, respondent did say that another teacher, Hilda Weitzman, had also seen G.H. in possession of a knife. Conlin, however, did not talk to Ms. Weitzman.

Thereafter, Supervisor Conlin met with the mother of G.H. to relate the concerns of respondent that G.H. was bringing 'weapons' to school. The mother advised Conlin that her son, G.H. had a room full of such items. After this conference, supervisor Conlin personally appeared at respondent's classroom in order to observe the interaction between respondent and G.H. According to Conlin, G.H. was standing at lectern when she entered the classroom presenting a paper of some type to the class. Respondent made several corrections as G.H. was making his presentation and, in Conlin's view, he was receptive to those corrections. He continued with his presentation through conclusion and when he took his seat he began making the corrections to his written work as recommended by respondent.

Conlin testified that she perceived both G.H. and respondent to be in harmony with each other and that G.H. was actively involved in the educational process because he was cooperative and respective to constructive criticism from respondent.

On November 17, 1989 supervisor Conlin wrote respondent an informal memorandum (P-8) advising that she believes G.H.'s behavior has improved between the time of the meeting with his mother and her, Conlin's, recent visit to her class. Conlin referred to the conduct of G.H. during her class visit as that of a well-behaved student who complied with classroom standards of behavior and living up to teacher expectation. Conlin did add that if reality painted a different picture, to please advise. It appears that respondent, having received Conlin's memorandum, wanted to meet with Conlin. Prior to that meeting, however, another special education teacher requested Vice-principal Galbraith to report to respondent's classroom to quiet her down because she was hysterical. Apparently a meeting then occurred among respondent, Galbraith and Conlin during which respondent became very upset and emotional, crying and screaming. Respondent stated that G.H. had said he was going to kill her although she did not recall when that threat was made and that no one was doing anything to help her meet that threat.

In the meantime Supervisor Conlin frequently checked to determine if G.H. was in possession of any knives or weapons and only on one occasion, early on in this incident, did she find the Ninja key ring on his person as was described above by the psychologist, Ms. Meltzer. Ultimately, G.H. was reassigned from respondent's classroom to another classroom to a teacher who had had him prior to his assignment to respondent. According to Conlin, the new teacher had no difficulty with G.H. being assigned to her classroom.

In or about December 1989 another pupil had told respondent that G.H. had a knife on his person. Respondent says she attempted to report this to supervisor Conlin but could not locate her. When Conlin checked G.H. she found nothing. When Conlin had advised respondent in early December 1989 that G.H. was to be reassigned from her classroom, respondent screamed at her "whose life are you putting in jeopardy now." This screaming occurred in or about the teacher's work office, with teachers present, which is located three steps away from Conlin's office. According to Conlin, respondent was hysterical, screaming, and crying.

Respondent testified that she was very "worried and scared" for her safety, the safety of other pupils, and the safety of G.H. because the weapons he was bringing to school. Respondent says that on several occasions she overheard G.H. discuss his "Ninja" collection and the fact he was bringing weapons to school. Respondent says that on four separate occasions G.H. brought weapons into school and, despite a school policy (R-33) which calls for discipline to be imposed upon weapon-carrying pupils, neither supervisor Conlin nor any other administrator took any such action against G.H.

Respondent described the four in-school weapon possession incident by G.H. as follows. The first incident occurred in mid-October 1989 when a teaching colleague whispered to her as she entered her classroom to check what G.H. had in his pocket. Respondent asked G.H. what he had in his pocket and he said "nothing". Respondent said she asked "is it a weapon?", to which G.H. replied " "nothing". Respondent says she merely said to G.H. that he was forcing her to take him to the office. Respondent says her fellow teacher used her key to telephone the office, in response to which supervisor Conlin came to her classroom. Despite the absence of testimony from respondent that she actually saw what was in the pocket of G.H., she testified that she explained to Conlin that she and her teaching colleague "saw a black metallic object that he slipped in this pocket ". Moreover, respondent testified, which testimony I find incredible, that she then said to supervisor Conlin "[l]et's not jump to conclusions. I really wasn't sure [of what the object is]".

The incident occurred toward October when G.H., according to respondent, was to have arrived in class with handcuffs and a metal pronged item with a key chain on the end of it. Ostensibly, in response to a demand from respondent, G.H. handed her the metal pronged item and refused to return it to G.H. According to respondent, G.H. then lifted up the desk and threw it across the room which was supposed to have been witnessed by another student. Thereafter, respondent was to have escorted G.H. to supervisor Conlin's office with the handcuffs and the metal pronged item where Conlin took possession of them.

The third incident occurred when, according to respondent, G.H. appeared at school with a "ninja star." A ninja star is described as a star shaped metal item with points in the shape of a star. Respondent says she asked G.H. why he continues to bring such items to high school in response to which G.H. was supposed to have said out of fear. According to respondent, G.H. was subject to daily emotional ups and downs with significant mood swings.

It was supposed to have been after these three incidents occurred that she met psychologist Meltzer in the hallway sometime before Thanksgiving. Respondent acknowledge having raised her voice to Ms. Meltzer, although she denies screaming, yelling, or being out of control.

The last, or fourth, incident regarding G.H. occurred in early December when another student, E.E., reported to her that the day before G.H. had displayed a knife to him. In response, respondent says she took all three of her students to the office to speak with supervisor Conlin who was not available. She then told her students to sit down and she then called vice-principal Galbraith on the phone and told him exactly what E.E. had told her regarding G.H. possession a knife the day before.

While respondent claims she wrote a report of the first incident and personally put a copy of the report of supervisor Conlin's desk as well as the desk of Vice-principal Galbraith's secretary, no copy of that report is available. Regarding G.H. possessing handcuffs and a ninja key ring, respondent says she took G.H. to supervisor Conlin's office where she, supervisor Conlin, and G.H. met. Supervisor Conlin, according to respondent, immediately telephoned G.H.'s mother and advised her of what G.H. was bring to school and that she, Conlin, wanted to have a conference with her.

Respondent denied at any time yelling or screaming or having raised her voice to a level which characterized as yelling or screaming to either supervisor Conlin or Vice-principal Galbraith regarding G.H. and his weapons. Respondent denies ever having manifested a state of being out of control regarding the entire incident, although she acknowledges having raised her voice, albeit in fear, during a meeting with Conlin and Galbraith when she expressed her concern regarding G.H. Respondent also acknowledges having "confronted" supervisor Conlin after E.E. had told her of G.H. having possessed a knife in school, of having "projected" her voice into supervisor Conlin's office; and, having raised her voice to supervisor Conlin because the two of them were debating the issue of danger presented by G.H.

FINDINGS

Having considered the evidence regarding the G.H. incident, I specifically find respondent's testimony to be incomplete, close to having been manufactured to meet the evidence of the Board, because the essence of this charge has to do with her controlling what may be loosely referred to as her temper. While respondent claims she raised her voice, that she confronted supervisor Conlin, that she projected her voice into Conlin's office, or that she engaged Conlin in a debate, respondent's insistence that she never screamed, yelled, or lost control rings hollow. Particularly in light of the persuasive testimony of supervisor Conlin. There is no evidence to suggest supervisor Conlin has any reason whatsoever to misrepresent under oath what it is that she specifically and clearly recalls regarding respondent's conduct surrounding the G.H. incident. It must be remembered that this charge has to do with respondent's control of her emotions when handling a particular situation in school.

While media reports of pupils carrying weapons into our schools are becoming all to frequent, the fact is that until such time school authorities find a way to get the cooperation of society in general to control such conduct, teachers must use rational and nonemotional behavior in recognizing that a problem may exit in any given situation. Respondent surely could have handled this entire matter with G.H. in an entirely different manner other than screaming, yelling, and simply losing control when she was expressing her concerns to either Conlin or to Galbraith. No benefit is to be achieved by a teacher becoming highly emotional when a particular problem is confronting them regarding any pupil under their charge.

To the extent that this charge alleges, once again, that respondent screamed, yelled, and lost control of her emotions surrounding the entire G.H. incident, I find such charge to be true in fact by a preponderance of credible evidence.

THE POLICE INCIDENT

The essence of the tenure charge against respondent flowing from this incident in contained in the last sentence of paragraph 23 of the Statement of Charges which is reproduced here.

> This advice to her class as to this investigation, as well as her behavior in police custody, was inappropriate and unprofessional particularly under the circumstances from which it apparently evolved [being arrested for driving under the influence].

Supervisor Conlin testified that between 3:00 and 4:00 a.m. on April 5, 1990 she received a telephone call from the Morris Township Police who had respondent in custody for driving under the influence and, subsequently, for refusal to submit to a breathalyzer test. The police advised Conlin that the superintendent of schools told them to call her in an effort to calm respondent down. Conlin heard respondent screaming in the background during this conversation with the police officer. The officer told Conlin that respondent needed a ride home because she refused their offer to take her home and that unless someone calmed respondent down not to expect her at school the next day. Apparently respondent did calm down because her son eventually went to the police station and took her home. The following day respondent did report to school.

The evidence in this record shows respondent did not refuse to take a breathalyzer test; rather, she did take the test while in custody and on two separate occasions her breathalyzer reading was .01. Both readings refute the charge of refusal to take a breathalyzer test and neither reading would not support a charge of driving while under the influence of alcohol. (See R-35, R-36) On April 10, 1990 respondent gave a statement (R-38) to the Morris County Prosecutor regarding her allegation that she was sexually assaulted on April 5, 1990. The fact is a suspect in the assault has been indicted for sexual assault upon respondent, and other females, and is to be tried on those charges.

Respondent testified that she gone out to a night club on April 5, 1990 when she met a man with whom she danced for awhile. When they left the dance floor, the man asked her if she wanted another drink and as she went to sit at the table the man went to the bar to order her drink. The next thing respondent knows is that she began to get dizzy, the man suggested he take her outside for some air, and she vaguely recalls being placed into a vehicle were she says she was sexually assaulted. When the Morris Township police officer pulled her over she was driving home from that incident. She was in a highly agitated state because what had occurred to her though no claims of sexual assault was made that evening. When the police officer was convinced she was driving under the influence of alcohol, she was taken to police headquarters where she was processed for the offense charged. Respondent acknowledges that the Morris Township police officer called supervisor Conlin and the police attempted to have her take the telephone to talk with Conlin she simply said "no" meaning that she did not want to talk to Conlin.

It is noted that the evidence in this record shows that the charges of refusing to take a breathalyzer test and driving under the influence were subsequently dismissed.

In regard to that portion of the charge regarding 'advice to her class', supervisor Conlin testified that pupils told her that respondent told them the police had put a tap on her home telephone because of crank calls she was receiving and that she, respondent, has caller identification. Respondent, to the contrary, testified that at no time did she mention to any of her pupils the fact that police had a tap on her home telephone or that she had caller identification. Respondent explains that the police did, in fact, have a tap on her telephone and that she does have caller identification due to numerous calls she received April though June 1990 from individuals who, when she answered the phone, would hang up on her.

Having considered the proofs in support of this charge, I find no evidence to suggest respondent's behavior while in police custody was inappropriate or unprofessional. The police officer who telephoned Conlin did not testify. Conlin's testimony she heard respondent yelling in the background does not by itself support such a finding. Furthermore, there is no competent evidence to support supervisor Conlin's charge that respondent made any mention to her class regarding "this investigation". Therefore, this charge must be and is DISMISSED.

PROJECT GRADUATION FASHION SHOW INCIDENT

This charge relates to respondent's asserted conduct at a local womens' clothing store which was providing clothes to worn by teacher volunteer models during a PTA sponsored fashion show to be held on school premises. The fashion show was one of several fund-raising events held in support of "Project Graduation", a drug and alcohol free graduation party held on school property for graduating seniors at the evening of Graduation Day.

Respondent volunteered to be a model for the fashion show. Joanne Ruffing, who is affiliated with the clothing store, coordinated the fashion show.

Respondent volunteered to be a model for the fashion show. She went to the clothing store to select whatever outfit she chose to wear for the show. Supervisor Conlin testified that when respondent did go to the store, the store keepers were unable to find clothes for her which fit her to her liking. According to Conlin, she was later told that respondent removed shoulder pads from clothing, through hangers about in the dressing room, and screamed profane things. Conlin asked both the store owner, Doris Crater, and the fashion show coordinator, Joanne Ruffing, to send her a letter regarding respondent's conduct. (See P-18, P-19)

Joanne Ruffing testified that it was she who scheduled respondent's appointment to appear at the clothing store at a particular 1990 spring evening at 7:30 p.m. Two other models were present along with Ms. Crater, the store owner, and another student from a local private school. According to Ms. Ruffing respondent appeared at the store and she was asked to look around to see if she was attracted to anything. As respondent was looking about the store, she began voicing complaints regarding the merchandise, referring to it as "cheap" and "teeny bopper". In Ms. Ruffing's view respondent was agitated and very angry. She refused to try on certain merchandise and when she finally agreed to at least try on some outfit, she went into the dressing room. Respondent was still very angry and while she was in the dressing room alone it sounded to Ms. Ruffing as if respondent was arguing with someone though no one else was in the dressing room with her. Ms. Ruffing did hear respondent slamming hangers about the dressing room when respondent emerged from the dressing room, Ms. Ruffing testified she was still agitated and angry though Ms. Ruffing had no idea why. Eventually, respondent exclaimed that she did not want to be in the fashion show any longer because she could make $200 a night. With that, Ms. Ruffing testified that respondent exited the store and slammed the front door so hard she thought the plate glass windows were going to break. When Ms. Ruffing went into the dressing room after respondent's exit, she found hangers strewn about on the floor, one hanger was broken, and shoulder pads were seeming ripped from the new merchandise being tried on by respondent.

Respondent's recollection of this incident is to the contrary from that reported above. That is, respondent testified that when she was asked to look around for outfits that attracted her she did do so. In the meantime, respondent said that Ms. Ruffing was busy with someone else in the dressing room. Respondent says that she then selected four outfits only to be told by Ms. Ruffing that she cannot use any one of those four because other models had already selected them. Ms. Ruffing then selected an outfit and respondent went into the dressing room, tried it on and discovered she was not satisfied with its fit. According to respondent, the outfit contained a mini skirt which she refused to wear and the jacket "exposed her person." Respondent continued to look around, found a black silk jumpsuit, tried it on and, having looked at herself in a three way mirror in the front of the store, declared she did not like the fit of this outfit either. Respondent says she told Ms. Crater and Ms. Ruffing that she does not need a fashion consultant to tell her if she does not look good in something. Ms. Ruffing, according to respondent, then told her the store would be closing. Respondent went back to the dressing room and changed into her own clothes. Respondent says she not only placed the black silk jumpsuit on a hanger but she also brought the suit out of the dressing room with her. Respondent denies removing shoulder pads from any garment, she denies throwing hangers about the dressing room, she does not believe she raised her voice to either Ms. Crater or Ms. Ruffing, and the only other thing she said was that in her view the clothes at the store were geared to younger people. Respondent explained that she did say she would not return to the store because she had an evening job teaching the Scholastic Aptitude Test review course and that by not going to class that evening she lost about $200. Respondent denies having slammed the front door on her exit from the store, although she did hear the rattling of glass which she attributes to her catching one of her heels on the step outside the door. Finally, respondent says that at no time from that evening until the time charges were filed against her did supervisor Conlin call to her attention any concern regarding her conduct in that store that evening.

FINDINGS

There is no doubt in my mind that the evidence here supports the charge that respondent removed shoulder pads from clothing, threw hangers about in her dressing room, screamed, raised her voice, uttered comments about merchandise that in the ordinary normal discourse one would not expect to hear in a retail clothing store, and in other ways conducted herself in an obnoxious manner. Ms. Ruffing had no reason to fabricate her testimony while respondent has every reason in the world to fabricate her testimony regarding the incident at this clothing store. Respondent's recollection of this incident, I am convinced, has been tempered by her own self interest in preserving her employment with the Board. Thus, I find the evidence sufficient to establish that respondent's conduct this particular 1990 spring evening at the women's clothing store was as charged.

RESPONDENT'S CONDUCT IN A CLASSROOM AS REVEALED BY AN AUDIO -TAPE RECORDING

Paragraphs 25 through 27, except the last paragraph of the Statement of Charges, essentially allege that despite having been forewarned of the use of sexually explicit and gutter-type language by male pupils in her class, respondent tolerated the use of such language and, moreover, used such language in a particular class during May 1990 as revealed in an audio-tape recording (P-25) surreptitiously made by a female pupil.

According to supervisor Conlin's testimony, the background to this charge is as follows. On or about May 17, 1990 Conlin received a telephone call from Ms. A., the mother of L. A. who was in respondent's resource room English class. This class, it is noted, had four pupils in it, three boys and L.A.. In anticipation of the requested conference with Ms. A., Conlin informally met with respondent for about 30 minutes prior to the meeting to inquire whether anything occurred in class that, she, Conlin should know about for the meeting.

While paragraphs 25 though 27 suggest that some relationship exists between respondent's classroom conducted as revealed by the audio-tape and a meeting during February 1990 regarding respondent having made derogatory comments to the son of Mrs. W., there is no evidence whatsoever in this record to support that assertion. Moreover, there is no legally competent evidence to establish that respondent was hysterical on March 21, 1990 when the same Mrs. W. appeared at a parent-teacher conference during the evening to have a meeting with respondent. While it is true supervisor Conlin attended the conference between Mrs. W. and respondent that evening, her testimony is that the conference went smoothly and respondent was calm and that nothing untoward happened. To the extent the Board views the conference with Ms. W. as a separate charge, this charge is dismissed.

However, the proofs do reveal that Ms. A. telephoned supervisor Conlin for a conference May 17, 1990 because of her real concerns with what was happening in her daughter's English class, which contained four pupils. Ms. A. had advised Conlin that her daughter, L.A. had taped an actual class being conducted by respondent. After listening to that audio-tape, Ms. A. concluded that the students were out of control. Respondent was in attendance at this meeting.

The following day, Ms. A. called and told supervisor Conlin that she was concerned with the entire class, not just the boys, and she wanted a second meeting because things were said on the tape by the teacher which she found very offensive. However, Ms. A. would not bring the audio-tape with her, although she did bring her notes of what she heard on the tape for Ms. Conlin's review. The following day, Ms. A. contacted vice-principal Galbraith. A meeting between and among Ms. A., Conlin, and the vice-principal was held. Finally, Ms. A. released the audio-tape to supervisor Conlin for her review. L.A. made the tape in reaction to respondent's persistent advice to the boys in the classroom that they would be shocked if they heard themselves on tape. L.A. decided to put a tape recorder in her book bag which she placed on the floor behind her desk in order to tape record exactly what occurred in the class. A transcript of both sides of the audio-tape, as is discernible to this judge is attached as Exhibit B and incorporated herein as if set forth in full.

Suffice it to say here that male pupils can clearly be heard discussing in class, while respondent was in charge, "hot looking chicks", "naked women", crude references to a female vagina and a male penis, while respondent, whose voice is clearly identifiable on the tape, asked the boys if the women in the picture at which they were looking were naked. In apparent response to the question whether respondent wanted to look at the naked women, replied "Why do I want to look at naked * * * naked men I might be interested in or seeing, you know * * *"

Elsewhere, the audio tape reveals the tolerance respondent had for the male pupils to discuss their sexual fantasies with females as well tolerating the boys suggesting that respondent was involved with a married man. As respondent introduced the lesson for the day, the long short story, the tape discloses that the boys particularly had full run of the classroom in the sense that they continuously focused on matters dealing with their sexual interest. At one point, the audiotape discloses that respondent, having been challenged by one of the boys that she "couldn't get anything from nobody that night at the prom", explained that she did go out after the prom and did not get home until 3:00 a.m. and that she had gone out on a date "last night" with a man she had just met several nights earlier and that she was going out with another man Thursday night that week. Finally, the tape reveals respondent did make the following comments to one of the two boys who were then present in the classroom:

> You are, do you realize that you are literally led around by your sexual organ, [Mr. W.], that you don't have the mental growth to be able to keep your brain on anything other than your dick? Does it ever occur to you that something is really the matter with you?

Finally, the tape discloses that respondent had been urging one of the boys, A.V. ,to remove a hat he had been wearing in the classroom. A.V. resisted attempts by the respondent to remove his hat, saying such things as it his "thinking cap". A.V. is of Cuban heritage because his father was born in Cuba. Respondent finally made the following comment directly to A.V.

> You are not comprehending, does it have to be Spanish? Would you take that hat off or I'll have you down in ESL [English as a Second Language] where they'll speak to you in any language they you can comprehend, which at this point may be Martian.

A.V. appeared at hearing and testified under oath. He was graduated from Morristown High School during June 1991 and during his junior year 1989-90, respondent was his teacher. A.V. recalls that respondent would from time-to-time discuss in class a male teaching colleague whom respondent claimed was good looking, that she could make him very happy, despite the fact that person was already married. While he cannot recall respondent ever using "cuss words" in class, he does recall her making the claim that she could snap her fingers and have any man that she wanted.

A.V. acknowledges that he and D.W., the other male pupil in the class at the time it was tape recorded, always talk of sexual matters as is revealed on this particular tape. He recalls that respondent would kind of smile or laugh but would take no action to stop their conversation. While A.V. believed that this tape recording was made by L.A. at the beginning or the middle of the school year around Christmas time, there is no reason for me to dispute L.A.'s testimony or the testimony of Mrs. A., or for that matter supervisor Conlin, that the tape was made sometime in May 1990.

L.A., who made the tape recording, told respondent after class of the tape recording. According to L.A. respondent asked her to destroy it because she would get into trouble. The following day, after L.A. had played the tape for her mother, she told respondent who asked her again to destroy the tape. In L.A.'s view, respondent was very nervous regarding the existence of the tape. With respect to the language recited above, attributed to respondent regarding 'thinking only with their sexual organ', L.A. testified that this was the only occasion she heard respondent use such language and she otherwise thought respondent was a "good teacher".

Respondent testified that both male pupils, A.V. and D.W., did talk consistently about sex before this audiotape was made. However, respondent denies ever having talked in the manner captured on the tape on any prior occasion. She specifically denies telling L.A. to destroy the tape and claims L.A. is lying.

In regard to sexual talk by D.W. and A.V., respondent claims to have reported her concern over the total attention on sexual matters to the school social worker and to the learning disability teacher consultant. Furthermore, respondent says that she privately talked to the boys in the corridor and told them to stop such talk. Prior to L.A. taping the class, respondent claims that she herself tried to tape the class so that the boys could hear how terrible they sounded.

In mitigation of the language respondent is heard to use on this tape, she claims she was under great stress because of the asserted sexual assault upon her person and the fact that her mother died December 29, 1989.

FINDINGS

I specifically reject respondent's claims of mitigation that she was under great stress because of the sexual assault and the fact that her mother had died during December 1989. There is no corroborating evidence whatsoever from respondent, or from the record as a whole, that respondent was under any greater stress than any public school teacher is, or any other citizen is, in dealing with daily life. When one considers the testimony of A.V., which I find believable, that respondent would from time-to-time discuss her relationships with men and discuss specifically men she finds attractive, I find it difficult to accept respondent's position that two boys were continuously talking about sex in her classroom and that despite her good efforts she could not prevent it. To the contrary, I find that because respondent tolerated such conversation in her classroom the boys continued with it. Furthermore, it is of little importance that respondent may not have used the slang term used here for the male sexual organ on any prior occasion. Rather, by the mere fact respondent allowed boys to use sexual innuendoes as well as gross sex terms, as are liberally sprinkled through the transcript of this tape recording, leads me to believe that anyone who may have been assigned to respondent's resource room English class who did no appreciate such language would in fact be subjected to it without control by respondent. L.A. herself is subjected to crude remarks by these two boys and yet respondent, as the teacher, took no action whatever to stop it. Reference to A.V.'s heritage is simply not justified. A.V., hopefully, will have learned that his crude, rude, and offensive language is not acceptable.

I find that a preponderance of credible evidence shows respondent did, in fact, acquiesce to the use of derogatory comments by students about students and acquiesced to extraordinary gutter and sexually explicit language, as well as actively participating in such conversations with those students. That it is to say, I specifically find respondent discussed her personal life, dates, her ability to get "anything" she wants by snapping her fingers, and making highly inappropriate comments to students regarding sexual organs, as well as tolerating sexually-laden 'gutter-talk' in her classroom.

Prior to presenting a summary of findings, mention must be made of the classroom observations and evaluations of respondent's performance prepared by supervisor Conlin in the absence of comment therein on any of the incidents from which these tenure charges have emerged.

Supervisor Conlin explained that when she began with the Board in July 1986, she was instructed by her superiors only to record in observations that which she actually observed in the classroom setting and to prepare the evaluations only upon that basis. Consequently, supervisor Conlin made no mention of any of these incidents in any observation or evaluation because she did not observe such conduct while in a formal observation setting. Vice-principal Galbraith, respondent's direct supervisor, received copies of all observations and evaluations of teaching staff members as prepared by Conlin and, because he was involved in several of these incidents, was equally as aware of that standard under which Conlin observed and evaluated respondent because no mention was made by him to Conlin regarding the absence of comment of incidents with which he had personal knowledge. While vice-principal Galbraith now takes the position that he would not have recommended respondent receive tenure, and was only persuaded by the positive recommendation received by supervisor Conlin, the fact is at the time he had the choice of whether to recommend to his supervisor, the high school principal, respondent receive tenure. That he did recommend respondent receive tenure suggests that supervisor Conlin was fulfilling her task of observation and evaluation of teaching staff members in a manner expected of her.

The absence of comment in evaluations of respondent's performance regarding the incidents now forming the tenure charges does not render the tenure charges invalid. There is no suggestion by respondent that she was prejudice in any manner because the incidents were not mentioned in her formal evaluations. It is recognized that most, if not all, evaluations of her performance are positive as was recited earlier in this decision.

SUMMARY OF FINDINGS

In sum, I find that respondent screamed, yelled, and became emotional as charged in the N.C. incident, the S.B. incident, and that respondent engaged in rude and ill-mannered conduct at an in service meeting conducted April 28, 1987. Furthermore, I FIND respondent engaged in screaming, yelling, emotional, and irrational behavior regarding the G.H. incident and the Project Graduation fashion show incident. In regard to the latter incident I FURTHER FIND respondent conducted herself in an obnoxious manner by removing shoulder pads from clothing, throwing hangers about a dressing room, screaming, raised her voice, and conducted herself in a generally obnoxious manner while representing the Morristown Public Schools. I FIND respondent did engage in highly inappropriate conduct by acquiescing to the use of derogatory comments by students and about students during a regularly scheduled class and she acquiesced to the pupils' use of extraordinary gutter, sexually explicit language, and that she participated in such language with male pupils. Finally, I FIND that respondent in an inappropriate manner discussed her personal life, evening hours, her ability to get "anything" she wants by snapping her fingers, and that she used highly inappropriate references to the male sexual organ in class.

The issue, obviously, to be resolved is whether respondent's conduct as proven true by a preponderance of credible evidence constitutes conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause for which some discipline must be imposed. As noted by the Board, the Commissioner had this to say regarding the standard against which a teacher's conduct is to be measured when, in In the Matter of Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, 1972 S.L.D., 302, 321, he said

> [Teachers] are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that his trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development for each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment. As one of the most dominant and influential forces in the lives of the children, who are > compelled to attend the public schools, the teacher is an enormous force for improving the public weal. Those who teach do so by choice, and in this respect the teaching profession is more than a simple job; it is a calling.

There is no doubt, as pointed out by respondent, that charges against an individual may not be examined in a vacuum; rather, the charges must take into account relevant events leading up to the allegations made against an employee which may help to explain the situation. This is so for a teacher, who has acquired a tenure status, is to be protected in employment when subjected to unfair and improper charges or when they are unable to perform efficiently because of conditions not of their own making or beyond their control. Within that context, it is also acknowledged that conduct unbecoming or other just cause for imposing some discipline upon a tenure employee may be established either through a series of incidents or the occurrence of one incident, if sufficiently serious and flagrant. In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super 404, 421- 42 (App. Div. 1967). That some of these incidents occurred away from school grounds or outside the view of pupils does not render such charges meaningless. In In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Robert H. Beam, 1973 S.L.D. 157, the Commissioner said

> The teaching profession is chosen by individuals who must comport themselves as models for young minds to emulate. This heavy responsibility does not begin at 8:00 a.m. and conclude at 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, only when school is in session. Being a teacher requires, inter alia, a consistently intense dedication to civility and respect for people as human beings ***

Against this backdrop, the issue becomes clear whether respondent's proven conduct constitutes conduct unbecoming or other just cause for which some discipline should be imposed. Initially, recall that the three incidents in 1986-87 essentially address respondent's propensity to yell, scream, engage in irrational behavior, and to lose self-control when presented what may reasonably be called routine situations occurring in any high school throughout the state. Surely there was no need for respondent to scream in a very emotional state at supervisor Conlin near the senior stairs with other teachers and pupils present regarding the N.C. incident. Such conduct is not the conduct pupils should be encouraged to emulate. The S.B. incident also essentially addresses respondent's loss of self-control, and, more critically, the fact that the loss of self-control by yelling at supervisor Conlin occurred within earshot of her classroom. The in-service meeting incident in April 1987 in which respondent engaged in rude and ill-mannered conduct during a professional staff meeting is symptomatic of respondent's inability to control her emotion when something does not go her way or when respondent is in a situation which she does not particularly enjoy.

Note that these preceding three incidents occurred well before respondent's mother died during December 1989 and well before respondent's asserted sexual assault in April 1990. Obviously, the conduct proven true after her mother's death and after the asserted sexual assault was very similar to the conduct in which respondent engaged during 1986-87. It is recognized that there is an absence of evidence surrounding similar conduct engaged in by respondent during the intervening years of 1987-88 and 1988-89. Nevertheless, the bridge between 1986-87 and 1989-90 in which respondent engaged in such conduct is a relatively short period of time particularly in light of the fact respondent has but five years teaching experience in this district.

As noted earlier, recent media reports regarding pupils carrying weapons into schools are becoming more and more prevalent. In fact, there have been recent reports of pupils doing harm, including homicide, against other pupils with weapons brought into the schoolhouse. However, the incident of G.H. bringing weapons into the school is not the real issue presented in this charge. Rather, the Board urges that respondent's proven conduct of yelling, screaming, loss of control, and irrational behavior is again showing to be characteristic so ingrained within respondent that she has lost her effectiveness as a teacher. Respondent justifies her proven conduct by arguing that she was put in mortal danger for her physical wellbeing and whatever conduct she engaged in was solely as the result of that fear. Respondent's expressed fear of being put in mortal danger and that that fear prompted her to confront Conlin, to project her voice into Conlin's office, to elevate her voice a little bit, to debate Conlin, are rejected as defenses to the fact she did yell, scream, lose control, and acted irrationally in her reaction to this entire incident. There is no competent evidence to suggest any reasonable basis upon which respondent feared G.H. or that G.H. was attempting to harass her in any sense. Recall that this entire matter began when a teaching colleague whispered to respondent to check what was in G.H.'s pocket and from that point forward respondent's emotion overtook her good sense.

The Project Graduation matter is a situation in which respondent behaved in a highly offensive manner and she was doing do while being a representative of the Morristown school district. It cannot be said under any argument that that kind of conduct is expected or to be tolerated by a mature, well educated, intelligent teacher who is entrusted to mold the minds of our youth so that we all may continue to live a civilized society.

Finally, the matter of respondent's tolerance for and participation in dialogue as was audio-recorded by L.A. Respondent's explanation that that was an aberration of true character or that she was under great stress because of the death of her mother and/or the asserted sexual assault is not at all persuasive. Recall that this dialogue occurred in a resource room English class with three pupils present, two boys and one female. The fact that such dialogue occurred in a resource room shows that these three pupils were in need of special education. For a teacher to tolerate clearly made comments from pupils, male or female, regarding 'hot looking chicks', 'naked women', crude references to a vagina or a penis, an acknowledgement that she might be interested in seeing naked men, tolerating a suggestion by a pupil in hearing of the entire class that she may be involved with a married man, that respondent was willing to respond to a pupil who commented she 'couldn't get anything from nobody', or that a pupil is being led around by his sexual organ, or sarcastically asking a pupil if he would understand if she spoke in Spanish, suggests that this occurrence is not the first occurrence of similar nature with respondent. Such conduct is outrageous, abhorrent, and clearly conduct unbecoming a teacher under law.

In short, the conduct proven true against respondent Christine Brady, ranging from the N.C. incident to the latest incident regarding her acquiescence to and participation in a conversation with pupils with significant gross sexual comments and overtones, constitutes inexcusable conduct unbecoming a teacher and other just cause to impose some discipline.

DISCIPLINE

It was noted earlier that conduct unbecoming can be established either through a series of incidents to the occurrence of one incident, if sufficiently serious and flagrant. Fulcomer, Supra. In this case, if the incidents regarding screaming and yelling and loss of control were the only instances of unbecoming conduct in which respondent engaged, a discipline short of termination of employment would more likely than not be imposed. However, when one considers those instances from 1986-87 and including those in 1989-89, in the context of the gross sexual dialogue in which she participated during May 1990, such conduct taken as a whole, the screaming, yelling loss of control, and irrational behavior coupled with the dialogue, constitutes such outrageous behavior that termination of employment must be imposed. It cannot be said on this record that respondent's behavior is an aberration, nor can it be said that more likely than not such conduct would not be repeated in the future. Respondent's testimony has already been declared to be incomplete and manufactured which reveals to this judge her refusal to accept responsibility for the conduct complained of herein.

Therefore, in consideration of the seriousness of the conduct proven true against Christine Brady it is ORDERED that respondent Christine Brady forfeit her tenure employment as a teacher in the employ of the Morris School District Board of Education. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

EXHIBIT A STATEMENT OF CHARGES

Gayle M. Conlin, Department Chairperson for Grades 6-12 within the Special Education Department for Morristown High School and Frelinghuysen Middle School, makes written Tenure Charges against Christine Brady, a teacher primarily assigned during the 1989-90 school year as a Teacher of the Handicapped at Morristown High School, and recommends dismissal of said teacher for reasons including incapacity, unbecoming conduct and other just cause and as otherwise provided in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq.

1. On or about March 10, 1987, the undersigned was advised by N.C., a student in Ms. Brady's class, that she was unable to get along with the teacher although she was trying very hard. The undersigned stopped Ms. Brady at the senior stairs of Morristown High School and requested a meeting with Ms. Brady and N.C. to address these concerns. Ms. Brady immediately responded by screaming extremely loudly and generally creating a significant disturbance in the school hallway in the presence of students and staff.

2. On or about March 11, 1987, the undersigned met with Ms. Brady, in her office, to discuss the unprofessional behavior exhibited by Ms. Brady the previous day. Ms. Brady again began screaming and crying in an uncontrollable fashion at the undersigned. She refused to calm down when requested and generally disturbed numerous guidance counselors, secretaries and students in the surrounding guidance department.

3. On or about April 24, 1987, the undersigned received a telephone call during the school day from Ms. Brady. Ms. Brady had abandoned her class, gone to a nearby telephone and called the undersigned. She was also uncontrolled and yelling that a particular student, S.B. had told her that he was going to report her to "the man", and apparent reference to Mr. Galbraith. This occurred between 1:06 p.m. and 2:15 p.m.

4. On or about April 24, 1987, the undersigned met with Ms. Brady in her office to discuss the problem of her responding to student behavioral problems. Ms. Brady became hysterical, and began screaming uncontrollably at the undersigned. Although the door was closed, the undersigned was advised that others had heard what she said.

5. During the 1986-87 school year, Ms. Brady had been involved with a dispute with another teacher, Ms. Elaine Lewis. Ms. Brady had been cautioned on a number of occasions that her vociferousness with respect to this dispute was unprofessional. Notwithstanding the foregoing, on or about April 28, 1987, during a department meeting attended by approximately fifteen (15) teachers for purposes of being addressed by an expert in the teaching of the handicapped, Dr. Babbett Bergner, Ms. Brady was rude, unprofessional and conducted herself in a manner unacceptable. All the participants in the meeting were in a circle and Ms. Brady continually turned away from the speaker, speaking out loud to various persons about subjects irrelevant to the meeting. The foregoing was apparently related to the fact that Dr. Bergner was the sister of Mr. Lewis. Once again Ms. Brady was advised that her behavior was unprofessional and unacceptable.

6. On or about May 11, 1987, the undersigned met with Ms. Brady together with Mr. Galbraith, the Executive Vice-Principal of Morristown High School. Ms. Brady was advised that this conduct was unprofessional, unbecoming a teacher and unacceptable.

7. On or about May of 1987, a meeting was conducted attended by Mr. Telesco, then director of the handicapped program in the Morris School District, presently Assistant Superintendent of Schools, the undersigned, Ms. Brady and Ms. James Ward, an officer of the teacher's union, T.E.A.M. and Mr. Galbraith, Vice-Principal at the high school. Ms. Brady was advised that her behavior and activity was unbecoming conduct and unprofessional and would not be countenanced. She was advised and she agreed to take advantage of the employee assistance program.

8. On or about May of 1987, the undersigned in a meeting with Mr. Galbraith, assigned Ms. Brady classes with a less difficult or aggressive group of students which was the case particularly for the 1989-90 school year during which time Ms.Brady appeared to the undersigned to show the requisite capacity and not to show conduct unbecoming a teacher. Ms Brady continued to be assigned classes with the less difficult group of students for the 1989-90 school year.

9. On or about the end of October 1989, Ms. Brady contacted the main office to indicate that a student in her 9th period class had a weapon. Ms. Brady stated that although she did not see a weapon the student had something in his pocket which he refused to show her. Mr. Galbraith, a security guard and the undersigned immediately went to Ms. Brady's classroom to find that the student had left. All security was advised to "be on the look-out for G.H. and to bring him to the main office when found." Mr. Galbraith and the undersigned checked the grounds outside during the search. The student had gone home.

10. On or about October 1989, school psychologist Meg Meltzer, at the request of the undersigned, interviewed G.H. to assess the problem described by Ms. Brady. Ms. Meltzer did not feel that the student poses any threat to the teacher or the other students in the class. She found him cooperative and pleasant.

11. On or about November 1, 1989, the undersigned met with G.H.'s mother, Mrs. S. to address concerns raised by Ms. Brady. G.H. was interviewed by the undersigned, exhibited no knowledge or no appearance of knowledge as to any dislike for Ms. Brady. The undersigned did ask whether he had anything in his pocket and without any reluctance he pulled all the contents of his pockets out. There was so-called "Ninja key ring" which Ms. Brady viewed as a weapon; although clearly the student did not see it as such. He was advised by the undersigned that it was inappropriate that this be brought to school, and was told to keep it at home. He was subsequently searched a number of times by the undersigned and nothing was found.

12. On or about October 1989, Ms. Meltzer was met by Ms. Brady in the hallways of Morristown High School. Ms. Brady was extremely agitated and was behaving in a manner unprofessional and unbecoming a teacher. She expressed her concern that no one in the school was going to do anything about G.H. until she was dead. Upon request of the undersigned, Ms. Meltzer, the school psychologist, observed the class on or about November 1989 and observed no problem in the interaction or behavior of G.H. in this very small class. The class was a resource room class containing only two students working on their papers with no interaction with the teacher at all.

13. On or about November 16, 1989, the undersigned observed G.H. in Ms. Brady's class. Three students were present in the class. G.H. was observed at the front of the room reading his journal entry aloud to the class. The student corrected his work when advised by the teacher, took his seat when requested, and independently began seat work.

14. On or about November 17, 1989, the undersigned directed to Ms. Brady a memo wherein she confirmed the apparent lack of substantial problem with G.H. after the activities that had been carried out including the parent conference with Mrs. S., the mother, to resolve any perceived problem.

15. On or about November 21, 1989, Ms. Brady requested a conference with the undersigned during Period 7. During the undersigned's fifth period observation of another teacher, Special Education teacher Daphne Iglesias requested that Mr. Galbraith come to Room 319 to quiet Ms. Brady, who was hysterical. Subsequently, Ms. Brady was uncontrollable, crying and screaming during a sixth period meeting with the undersigned and Mr. Galbraith. Her concern related to the student, G.H. Mr. Galbraith instructed Ms. Brady to report all incidences, which would be handled appropriately. Ms. Brady then informed Mr. Galbraith and the undersigned that the student had said he would kill her. Ms. Brady stated that she did not remember when he had made the statement. When pressed she advised he had threatened her sometime between the conference with the student's mother on November 1 and the meeting which is the subject of this paragraph, November 21, 1989. The undersigned requested that Ms. Brady make specific notes of the student's behavior and provide her with a copy of the same and to tell her immediately of any behavioral problem or any threat. The undersigned again met with Ms. Brady during Period 7 to reinforce the foregoing. Despite the aforementioned request, no such notification or notes were ever received from Ms. Brady.

16. Notwithstanding the foregoing, and the apparent lack of any problem, the undersigned made the decision to remove the relevant student from Ms. Brady's ninth period class till a scheduled change could be implemented. The undersigned also spoke to prior teachers.

17. On or about December 4, 1989, the undersigned called Mr. Reedy of Morris County Vocational-Technical High School, where the student took some classes, to ask the student's status. The discussion was positive including a statement that the student had received the highest in a recent class test and seemed happy. The only discipline issue was that he had brought two "Walkmans" into school. These, apparently, are radios.

18. On or about December 5, 1989, a meeting was conducted between the student's mother, Mrs. Rosendorf, Child Study Team member and Mr. Simmons, Guidance Counselor and the undersigned, so as to facilitate the change in program that would permit the student to be assigned from Ms. Brady's ninth period class permanently. This was successfully completed and subsequently, the student, who had not been in Ms. Brady's class since near the end of November, was assigned to another teacher. The teacher to whom the student was assigned was told of the circumstance. She advised that she had no problem taking the student and that she knew him to be no particular problem. Subsequently there have been no problems with respect to this student.

19. On or about December 6, 1989, Ms. Brady, again extremely agitated, approached the undersigned and advised her that one of Ms. Brady's freshman students had told her that G.H. had been seen in Ms. Brady's classroom with a knife. The undersigned interviewed the student who made the allegation immediately. He described the "knife" as looking like a gun handle that opened and that G.H. had showed it to him and put it back in his jacket pocket making no threats. The undersigned met with G.H. and asked him to hand over this apparent Ninja toy. He said he didn't have it with him, that he had brought it yesterday by accident and had left it home today. He was told never to bring these items to school. His locker was also checked by Mr. Galbraith. Once again he was advised never to bring any of these key chain type items to school because they may be perceived by people as weapons. This student G.H. has been checked many times subsequently and none of these items have been found.

20. During the undersigned's interview with the student who had seen the "weapon", he stated, that Ms. Brady had told his class that this student was bringing weapons to school. This statement to her class by Ms. Brady, that a student was carrying a weapon, is extremely unprofessional.

21. On or about December 6, 1989, Ms. Brady, in a meeting with the undersigned, was advised that the student, G.H., had in fact been transferred to another class pending county office approval. After this meeting Ms. Brady screamed at the undersigned from her office in Room 319 to the undersigned's office (not in the same room), "Whose life are you putting in jeopardy now?! I cannot believe the cavalier way in which the administration has dealt with this." She began crying loudly and screaming, "My family will sue you if anything happens to me. He is going to kill me. I'm a single parent." The undersigned asked Ms. Brady to come to her office, and when she did, Ms. Brady was asked to stop screaming. She was asked to calm down and act in a professional fashion. Ms. Brady's reply, still screaming, was "Do you want me to die professionally? My family is very upset. My ex-husband used to threaten me. The police said there was nothing they could do -- Gayle dear, do you know what you sound like. You sound just like the police. You're all lucky I've haven't been killed" Ms. Brady continued crying and screaming. It was again repeated that G.H. was out of her class and she should calm down. She was inconsolable and continued crying and screaming. She was cautioned not to discuss these things in class; she denied doing so, but did not object when the undersigned advised that a student had told her that, in fact, Ms. Brady had discussed this with her class. She was also not to discuss this matter, involving a handicapped student, with other departments except as necessary. She said she didn't and was advised she had, in fact, told members of the English Department. Ms Brady responded that she could not help it if the members of the English Department were listening while she was having a conversation with a friend. She continued crying and yelling, and Mr. Galbraith was called. When she could not be controlled, the undersigned requested that she go home for the day; her class was covered by another teacher. G.H., of course was kept out of her class and as mentioned, subsequent checks of his pockets found no weapons or even items that may be used as such.

22. On or about December 8, 1989, after receipt of the County Office waiver permitting the transfer of G.H., the undersigned met with Mrs. Hazelwood, a teacher of the handicapped who would provide English instruction to G.H. The circumstances, including the allegations as to G.H.'s behavior, were described. Mrs. Hazelwood was asked if she was comfortable with G.H. in her class. She advised that she had him in the previous year and there had been no problem. The undersigned asked Ms. Hazelwood to notify her immediately if there was a weapon or any threat or problem. Mrs. Hazelwood indicated that she expected none. In fact, subsequent to that date, no problem has been noted.

23. On or about April 5, 1990, the undersigned received a telephone call at 4 o'clock in the morning from a police officer advising that Ms. Brady was in the custody of the police. They had called first the school superintendent and now her to determine whether something could be done for Ms. Brady who was in their custody as a result of being arrested for driving while impaired. The police officer told the undersigned they could expect that Ms. Brady would not be in school tomorrow and that she was being abusive and offensive to the police officers. Ms. Brady could be heard in the background yelling and crying. The undersigned has no knowledge as to the resolution of the claims resulting from that evening's arrest. However, Ms. Brady has advised her classes that the police had a wiretap on her phone as a result of claims she had made relating, apparently, to that evening and unwanted telephone calls she had received. This advice to her class as to this investigation, as well as her behavior in police custody, was inappropriate and unprofessional particularly under the circumstances from which it apparently evolved.

24. On or about April of 1990, Ms. Brady once again acted in a manner unacceptable to a teaching staff member of the Morris School District. Annually, Morris School District high school students hold a drug and alcohol-free graduation party called "Project Graduation". To raise money for this effort, among other events, a fashion show is held with respect to which Morris School District teachers, among others, participate. With respect to the participation in this school project, Ms. Brady was sent to D.J. Crater, a small clothing store in Chatham, for a fitting. During this fitting, she behaved in a totally unacceptable and unprofessional manner. She yelled and screamed insults at the owner and made derisive comments about the clothing. She ripped out portions of the clothing she was trying on and threw hangers around forcefully in the changing room.

25. On or about May 17, 1990, the undersigned received a telephone call from a parent of a student assigned to Ms. Brady's English class. The parent asked for a conference with the undersigned. The undersigned told Ms. Brady that the parent wanted to discuss her child, L.A.'s English class. Ms. Brady then told the undersigned that two students had been using sexually explicit language in the class. The undersigned immediately recalled that on or about February of 1990, a parent, Mrs. W., had contacted the undersigned with respect to complaints that Ms. Brady had made derogatory comments to her son, D.W. The undersigned had told Mrs. W. that this district was very concerned about self-esteem and said that she would check with the teacher. Ms. Brady advised that there was no substance to the charges and that the relationship with the son, D.W. was acceptable. Notwithstanding the foregoing, however, on March 21st, the evening Parents' Night, just before Mrs. W. was to meet with Ms. Brady, Ms. Brady literally began screaming in the school that she wouldn't meet with Mrs. W. without the undersigned being present. Another teacher who heard the screaming, came to the undersigned to advise as to the uncontrollable screaming and the apparent substance of the problem. The undersigned attended the conference with Mrs. W. and Ms. Brady.

26. As mentioned, the undersigned recognized that Mrs. A. was calling with concerns about the same class which had been the subject of Mrs. W.'s concern. A meeting was conducted with Mrs. A., Ms. Brady and the undersigned on 11 a.m. on or about May 18, 1990. Mrs. A. advised that students in the class, in particular two boys, were continually using sexual explicit and gutter type language in the class. One of the boys was the aforementioned D.W. Ms. Brady said that she had tried to stop this language but had been unsuccessful. The boys were suspended and later apologized to the class and others involved.

27. On or about May 22, 1990, Mrs. A. again met with the undersigned. She brought with her a friend, apparently for support, and was obviously shaken and upset. She advised, as she mentioned earlier, that her daughter had made a tape of the class in question and that she was, to put in mildly, greatly concerned with the behavior and statements of the teacher, Ms. Brady. She advised that Ms. Brady had talked about taping the class and that her daughter and simply taken her up on it. After a number of different requests to Mrs. A., the undersigned was permitted to listen and make a copy of the tape of the class. The review of the tape by the undersigned, and conference with some of the children, evidenced not only substantial acquiescence to the use of derogatory comments about the students and extraordinary gutter, sexually explicit language by the students but active participation, in a substantial number of instances by the teacher, Ms. Brady. Ms. Brady's discussion of her personal life, her evening hours, her ability to get sex anytime she wants by just picking up the phone, statements of student such as "you are literally led around by your sexual organs" and "don't have annual growth to keep your brain on anything other than your dick" and many other comments constitute incapacity, unbecoming conduct and other just cause for dismissal as a teaching staff member of the Morris School District.

I have considered this Tenure Charge very carefully. My responsibility is to the students of the Morris School District and in this case, in particular, handicapped students who are significantly fragile. My conclusion is that Ms. Brady, despite a multitude of warnings and expressions of concern, is a person who is inappropriate and unacceptable as a teaching staff member in the Morris School District. The foregoing constitutes reasons for her dismissal including incapacity, unbecoming conduct and other just cause.

S- Sure. Why do you want a copy?

T- (inaudible)

S- (inaudible)

S- I'd eat her out. Brady, Brady was getting jealous cause I was holding her.

T- Jealous?

S- Brady was like, I wish I was there, I wish Mr. Kenner would hold me like that (inaudible)

T- Mr. Kenner is a married man.

S- So what? A married schleit feels very comfortable. (inaudible)

T- We're going to be talking about a long short story, guys.

S- Brady, Lynne's smoking. Saw smoke (inaudible)

T- Did you take pictures of yourself?

S- Hell yeah, I took pictures of myself, I took loads of them.

T- (inaudible)

S- (inaudible) . . .my tux with my slide hangin' out.

(inaudible)

T- Can you please turn to page 502 please, get your notebooks out. You will be responsible for the information.

S- (inaudible)

T- Excuse me.

S- (inaudible)

T- You're going to be having to spend some time writing logs, reviews of characters. We're reading a novel, a short novel, or a long short story depending on how you want to look at it. Listen up!

S- What!

T- You're gonna be responsible for each, um, segment of this in a summary of character and what happens. Ten sentence minimum.

S- Aw, come on!

T- (inaudible) summary and a list of characters, and who they are and how they are related to each other for each segment. You will be having quizzes on each segment. O.K., so, this is also going to be on your final exam. I suggest you make sure you take notes. You're gonna need literary terms, you're gonna have to answer questions and you're gonna be responsible for a lot.

S- (inaudible)

T- So you'll read it and understand it.

S- (inaudible) . . .so where did you see me this morning Brady while I was brushing my hair?

T- You were in your car, hardly paying attention to the road, mostly paying attention to your hairdo. . . .down the hill, on the corner, making the turn by McDonald's Pontiac. As I was about turning the bend myself and I thought yep, that's Dave. Watch out everybody else. Dave. . . (inaudible)

S- You're supposed to be watching the road not you're. . . . . .

S- Dude, my hair, dude, my hair has to be brushed before I pick up any girls. My hair has to be. . . .

S- Shutup! (inaudible) . .and Brady was there all jealous again.

T- Jealous? (inaudible) . . . . .what did you say? What did you say? I can't get what?

S- You couldn't get anything from nobody that night at the prom.

T- Sweetheart, I went out after the prom and I didn't get home until three in the morning. What do you think I (inaudible)

S- (inaudible)

T- As a matter of fact, last night I went out with a man that I met on Saturday night, and I'm going out with another man on Thursday night.

S- (inaudible)

T- What?

S- Big ol' dukie face.

T- I can get anything I want whenever I want. All I have to do is pick up the phone sweetheart, I can get anything I want (inaudible) So, ya know, I don't what you think you're looking at here, kid.

S- Laughter. Oh, we got a senior citizen. Laughter.

T- Yeah, well give me another eight or nine years. At any rate, moving on. You guys are just beginning (inaudible)

S- Brady, I'm in my sexual prime. Laughter (inaudible)

T- Yeah, well just image this is your prime before . . . . . (inaudible)

S- What did you say is like wine?

S- You age like wine.

T- You age like wine, yeah, it depends whether or not you have a rotten batch of grapes to begin with.

S- That's not what I heard of. This is what I heard is, the tender it is the tastier it goes. (inaudible) Hi ho silver! Bronco Billy!

T- I can't image any woman reducing herself to be with a man like. . . .

S- (inaudible) . . . . . what's your handle, big buddy? Stiff peters or big weeners.

T- Can we go on?

S- Yes, Chris you may go on.

T- (inaudible)

S- No, Lynne likes it. . . . . .

T- . . . . . thinking that those four men are so hopeless they absolutely cannot think about anything else.

S- Yeah, but look, Lynne likes it.

T- You are, do you realize that you are literally led around by your sexual organ, Mr. Waldren, that you don't have mental growth to be able to keep your brain on anything other than your dick? Does it ever occur to you that something is really the matter with that?

S- (inaudible) . . what was that movie I saw the other night. . . .

T- Can we get on, please, our topic at hand here?

S- (inaudible) . . . . topic here. And the girls was there and, and . . . . . Laughter (inaudible she's nude. . . . . .Laughter. Oh shit, do you remember that movie, um, that movie you were telling us about . . . . . that was on Monday?

S- Yeah, I know, I saw that last night (inaudible)

T- The questions for the final exam on information that I am going to impart now, if you don't listen, you don't get it. OK? Lynne I think you better turn around and stop paying attention to these two clowns. The more we give them the floor the more they think they can chat. So, those who want to pay attention will learn something, those who don't will never learn something. (inaudible) So if we can move on, um, what is a long short story? If you turn to page 502 you'll know what I'm starting to refer to. Page 502, Lynne.

S- Where did you get these books from Brady?

T- The shelf.

Laughter.

S- The shelf. Hey look, (inaudible)

T- If you turn to page 502 . . . the elements of a long short story which will. . . . .

S- Brady, we done all of this at the beginning of the year.

T- We did some of it, yes. Some of it you did have, some of it you didn't. A short story has some elements of a long short story has too, but I want you to understand (inaudible)

S- Brady, what is this about?

T- I am about to impart that to you if I could just have the floor for a little while.

S- It's wide open at any rate. (inaudible)

T- I suggest that you head your notebook paper the long short story.

S- No, we are not going to head it a long short story on the notebook paper. (inaudible)

T- Lynne, do you have a piece of paper?, pencil, let's get one out.

T- Take you hat off, or it's mine.

S- It's my thinking cap, how many times do I have to tell you?

T- If you don't take it off, the only thing you will be thinking about is how you are gonna get it back. Now would you please take it off.

Laughter.

S- (Inaudible)

T- You are not comprehending, does it have to be in Spanish? Would you take that hat off or I'll have you down in ESL where they'll speak to you in any language they think you can comprehend, which at this point may be martian.

S- (inaudible)

T- You're gonna comprende alright, senor.

S- (inaudible Este Loca! (inaudible) . . . twenty of. . .

T- We're staying here 'till the bell rings (inaudible)

S- A long short story. .

T- A long short story. Sometimes a story is too long to be read in one sitting and so we have either the short novel or the long short story.

S- You can't have those two put together, Brady. It's either long or short. (inaudible) So what you're saying is that I can read one page and stop.

T- No, that's not what I am saying (inaudible)

S- I gota zit right here, man. . . . . if I pop it.

S- I'll piss in your damn nose. (inaudible)

. . . . . your evil eyes. . . . . .(inaudible)

T- I didn't even know it was there (inaudible) Oh shit,

S- (inaudible)

T- a BMW? (inaudible) Man, I wouldn't trust you with a oil filter, air cleaner or anything else.

(inaudible) Can we get moving now please?

S- No man, ... (inaudible)

T- OK.

S- I approach to work about (inaudible)

T- Like the short story, the long short story (inaudible) it's not simple and not complicated, every detail counts just as in a short story. . . . . a kind of a short story but a little bit longer than a . . . . . um, it's similar to not only the long short story is similar to a short story, it's also similar to a novel. Novels first appeared . . . . . 18th century but they differed from earlier literature in that they told about lives of ordinary people like you and me. Novels covered long periods of time and dealt with dozens of different intimate settings and characters. A long novel (inaudible) one of my favorite long novels in Gone With the Wind . . . tremendous amount of years . . . time and you get to know a lot of characters rather intimately well and they are very, very, intimately, intimately developed. . . . . .Great stuff . . . Occasionally . . . . . developed a story that was not clearly even a novel or a short novel. They were not as complex as novels, but the were not short enough to be called short stories, so they called them long, short stories. So, they are pretty good reading in any case. The elements of a short story you are responsible for, elements, guys, write this down. Elements of a short story, a long short story.

S- How do you spell elements of a short story?

Side 2:

T- . . . . . .sit down and don't open your mouth, unless I ask you to. (Moving of desks) You made me break a nail, twisting your rearend back where it belongs. (inaudible) You're being insubordinate on top of everything else, now you're being insubordinate.

S- I'm in the row.

T- You'll sit right there, you budge and you can see Mrs. Conlin, you got that one?

S- (Inaudible)

T- You're sitting right there.

S- Brady I'm not even in the row

T- You are now. Move the row, right behind you, make you real happy. OK?

S- (inaudible)

. . . . . .If there's a fire drill I ain't tripping

T- If there's a fire drill I might make you trip.

S- (inaudible)

T- You're gonna open your book, take some paper out and get busy and . . . . . with the students

S- It's my prerogative if I want to learn.

T- It's my prerogative to get you out of here if you're gonna disrupt everybody else and insult everybody else in this room. And you'll be next there Mr. _____, you are on the next list.

S- No, don't even think about trying that.

T- Don't start, you and he are having a ball together, don't even try to open your mouth.

S- (inaudible)

T- (inaudible) I didn't do nothing.

T- You did enough. I didn't do nothing.

S- (inaudible)

T- Right here in this second, no, but you have been doing it all period. And you have been doing it for months and months and months.

S- 10 months Brady.

T- OK? So you are not going to do it anymore and neither is this clown. Take that hat off, off!

S- It's it's my thinking cap! God!

T- You're not gonna need a thinking cap if you don't have a head there kid. OK?

Laughter

T- You don't have a head, you have no need for a hat and you don't have any need for a thinking cap.

S- Brady, you look cute when you're mad.

T- I know. Well, you're about to see me get down right beautiful because I'm gonna get furious in about three seconds.

S- Is that possible?

S- (inaudible)

T- You have to understand that a conflict, that you have an external conflict. What's an external conflict, do you remember this? From the short stories we read? What's an external conflict?

S- You never told us what conflicts are.

T- Yes, I did. I told you, they are right here.

(inaudible)

S- between what?

T- Forces.

S- Right.

T- Fine, don't learn it.

S- It's my preogative.

T- An external character is between characters or a character and an outside force.

S- Brady, I can't think with that motor going.

Laughter.

S- Brady? Can I change my seat, there are people walking through the halls and its disturbing me.

T- Internal characters, internal conflicts.

S- Alright, I'll behave.

T- What's that? Anyone know what that is? What?

S- (inaudible) I want to move back, move over.

T- . . . .conflict, a mental conflict.

S- C'mon Brady, (inaudible)

T- I don't care about your complaints. I don't care if you're miserable sitting there because you're sitting there. You have made everybody else miserable where you were sitting before so now you can be miserable and the rest of us might learn something.

S- (inaudible) Brady, can you please move your torso. Thank you. Watch out for your chair. Brady, is that new. nute?

S- Where?

S- I don't know, like I don't understand that letter there. It's like a reversed "n", we're not in Russia (inaudible)

T- Point of view, v-i-e-w.

S- Well how the hell was I supposed to know? I can't help that I can't understand your writing. (inaudible)

T- Sharon may pass, you may not.

S- Pass, yes, hello. Already got connections already lined up.

T- You do?

S- Yup.

T- Oh yeah, who are you paying off?

S- (inaudible) . . . two hundred dollars for a one minute job. (inaudible)

T- A point of view is the view, refers to the eyes and mind from which somebody. . . .

S- Oh, this really stinks, man. It's great out. Crap.

S- The clouds are supposed to come.

S- (inaudible) Is that true Brady?

T- I'm not a doctor.

S- (inaudible)

T- First person point of view, uh, as a narator, um, of the person telling a story is (inaudible)

S- Someone just threw a piece of chalk at me, Brady. I don't appreciate it very much. So Brady, are you recording today some comments?

T- Third person point of view . . . . . (inaudible)

S- What's the that word? to wins, to what?

T- Wait, I'll (inaudible)

S- It's 10 o'clock, have you called your children yet?

T- . . . . . What, what do you want to know?

S- Is it ten o'clock?

S- Eyes and mind through which . . .

T- Eyes and mind through which someone, something is written.

T- Um, third person point of view is someone outside the story (inaudible)

S- (inaudible)

S- Brady, I have a headache, can I lay down?

T- No.

S- Why not?

S- (inaudible)

T- (inaudible) You have to know the difference between dynamic and . . . characters.

Whistling.

S- Aw, shit!

T- . . character stays the same throughout the story. Another character, um, changes (inaudible)

S- Brady, what's the whole point of this?

T- I suggest that you know, this is elements of how you read a short, the elements of a short story. (inaudible)

S- I already know how to read a story. (inaudible)

T- Well, when I tell you how to do it you don't want to listen about it. This is why you have to know this, Dave. Tomorrow you're gonna have a quiz on all the information. I am gonna ask you, I'm gonna list these terms and you're gonna have to give the definition. So I suggest you get them down. You can be sure that there will be a quiz on this tomorrow when you walk into class and it won't be open book.

S- I'll have an open book

S- Are we actually gonna use this in life?

T- You gonna use it in here mister, in your English class, so I suggest you get to know it good. (inaudible)

S- I'm getting the hell outta here.

T- You can leave, right now.

S- (inaudible) get the hell out of here.

S- It's 9:56 and 24 seconds leave me alone.

(inaudible)

S- So what else do we have to write, Brady?

S- Well I'm out of here then, audi 9000.

S- Where do we put this?

T- In your notebook.

S- I don't have one. I lost mine (inaudible) Darrin touched it. Is that it for today's lesson?

T- I don't want this, Dave. It's for you.

S- I don't want no extra paper riding around with me.

T- (inaudible) . . . gonna start reading the story. . . .

S- Thank God.

S- (inaudible) . . .kowabunga dudes! I'm gonna go see if my girlfriend is out there, ...wants me to give her a ride in her chair (inaudible)

S- Brady, what's wrong? (inaudible)

T- Nothing is wrong, get bust (inaudible)

S- You should have heard what Dave said about Mrs. Brady.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF CHRISTINE BRADY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF MORRIS,	:	DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative law have been reviewed. Respondent filed timely exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, and the Board filed timely reply exceptions.

Respondent cites seven exceptions. Point I speaks to the G.H. incident, and excepts, inter alia, to the ALJ's finding that respondent "manufactured" (Exceptions, at p. 1) evidence concerning the possession of weapons by G.H.; that respondent's conduct in relation to her supervisor's lack of appropriate action towards G.H. was improper; and that Supervisor Conlin had no reason to misrepresent the facts concerning this charge under oath. Rather, respondent argues, the ALJ ignored an affidavit from another teacher who was subsequently assigned to have G.H in her class expressing that she observed G.H. carrying a weapon, that she did a write-up of that fact to Supervisor Conlin and Executive Vice Principal Galbraith but that nothing was done. Respondent cites Exhibit A-6, paragraph 22, and Tr. IV-7, Tr. VII-63 and R-49 in support of her claim that the new teacher's testimony was evidence of Supervisor Conlin's having lied under oath, because she testified that after G.H. was transferred to the new teacher's classroom, there was no further difficulty with G.H. Respondent then recites passages from the transcript in support of her contention that G.H. was seen with weapons in school for a period of 2 1/2 months, that the student flaunted the district policy against weapons in school and that the ALJ erred in concluding that "respondent surely could have handled this entire matter with G.H. in an entirely different manner other than screaming, yelling and simply losing control when she expressed her concerns to either Conlin or to Galbraith." (Exceptions, at p. 13, quoting the Initial Decision at p. 15) It is respondent's contention that this charge should have been dismissed and the administration sanctioned for having considered respondent's behavior to be inappropriate under the circumstances whereby she claims G.H. was in possession of deadly weapons in school and the administration turned a blind eye and deaf ear. She claims that under such circumstances, to the extent respondent raised her voice, it was justified.

Point II avers that while the ALJ properly dismissed the charges relating to the police incident, he failed to properly weigh and credit respondent's affirmative proofs that the aftermath of her having been drugged and sexually assaulted directly impacted on her conduct in school for the balance of the school year. Respondent summarizes that testimony adduced at hearing, which she claims demonstrates she was victimized by a series of harassing telephone calls, sexual assaults and numerous other offenses against her and other women victims. She claims a multi-count indictment was filed against an individual alleged to have committed such offenses. Along with the fact that her mother had died during January 1990 and in light of the incident concerning G.H., respondent suggests that it was improper for the ALJ to reject such evidence as mitigation of the charges and as relevant to the assessment of penalty. She cites In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jude Martin, School District of the Township of Union Beach, 1985 S.L.D. 1800, among others in support of this proposition.

At Point III, respondent contends that the acceptance of inferences in favor of the Board when no competent evidence existed, while at the same time failing to accept inferences favorable to respondent when competent proof did exist constitutes reversible error. Respondent offers examples in exceptions suggesting that the ALJ inferred certain facts notwithstanding a complete absence of competent proof from which to infer said facts. Respondent also faults the ALJ for having made inferences that because she referred to the existence of reply memoranda she wrote that were not available at trial that either they did not exist or that she was manufacturing the evidence. Finally, in regard to this point, respondent harkens back to her earlier point that Supervisor Conlin allegedly lied about G.H. and that upon his having been reassigned to another teacher, nothing else happened. Respondent claims that the other teacher's testimony represents "clear evidence of clandestine attempts to squelch favorable documentary evidence to respondent." (emphasis in text) (Exceptions, at p. 19) Respondent avers this exception supports the conclusion that the ALJ's determinations were against the weight of the evidence and thus constitute reversible error.

At Point IV, respondent submits that the ALJ's findings and conclusions concerning the 1986-87 incidents are against the weight of the evidence adduced at hearing and should be reversed upon review by the Commissioner. In exceptions respondent makes two points about the three incidents involving N.C., S.B. and the in-service meeting. She claims that in the charges and at trial, Supervisor Conlin sought to show that all three incidents preceded her tenure recommendation, all had been deemed unprofessional and warranting group meetings, and all had played a part in respondent's participation in the Employee Assistance Program (EAP). Respondent submits however, that the Board's post-hearing briefs did a complete "about-face" (Exceptions, at p. 19) concerning the 1986-87 incidents. Respondent avers that the Board's brief "effectively admitted" that Conlin had both the sequence and import of these events jumbled. (Id.) Respondent submits with that being so, it was error for the ALJ not to find that respondent's affirmative proof as to the de minimis nature of these events and that they were improperly pled because they were "non-events." (emphasis in text) (Id.) Respondent strongly contends that she demonstrated justification for her actions in these three incidents and that her responses were not unmanageable or widely disproportionate as cast by the Board.

Secondly, respondent contends that the Board's post-hearing brief sought to diminish the probative worth of the system of evaluation of tenured staff mandated by N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.21, because every observation and evaluation performed on respondent was superlative. Such records and Conlin's admissions of their authorship, respondent avers, undermined the Board's claims of incapacity or claim of a teaching staff member who was consistently out of control. Respondent argues strongly against the Commissioner's accepting the Board's contention that "the process of compiling personnel records means nothing because it was 'not until recently did Ms. Colin become aware of the appropriateness of including documentation, other than classroom observations, in preparing annual evaluations.'" (Id., at p. 20, quoting the Board) Respondent submits that the Board's arguments in this respect were "an exercise in contortionistic semantics" (emphasis in text) (id.) and that the ALJ had to twist and contort the record evidence to make something out of the 1986-87 incidents. Respondent submits that her proposed findings of fact as stated in her post-hearing brief in regard to these three episodes should be adopted as the Commissioner's own in regard to the 1986-87 incidents.

At Point V, respondent avers the ALJ's findings and conclusions concerning the Project Graduation fashion show are against the weight of the evidence adduced at trial and should be reversed. Respondent avers the ALJ made inappropriate inferences, such as that she removed shoulder pads from clothing, threw hangers and engaged in other assorted conduct one would not expect to see in a retail store. Referring to her own Proposed Findings of Fact, respondent seeks reversal of the ALJ's conclusion that her behavior in the dress shop demonstrated conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member.

At Point VI, respondent contends that notwithstanding her admission of having made the statement she did on the audio-tape recording, the ALJ failed to credit additional mitigating factors concerning this incident. Respondent cites those conditions extant in her life at that time of the audio-tape recording mentioned in her post-hearing submission. (Respondent's Brief, at p. 35) She thereafter submits her proposed findings of fact as found in her post-hearing submission and in her reply brief as alleged facts the ALJ failed to note in his decision regarding the taping issue. She seeks the Commissioner's consideration of such aspects of the testimony and his adopting her position regarding the taping incident.

Finally, at Point VII of her exceptions, respondent contends that based on all of the record, which she asks the Commissioner to review de novo, the sanction of dismissal is not warranted in this case. She submits that other than the taping incident, all other charges against her should have been dismissed because the Board failed to prove conduct unbecoming, incapacity or other just cause. She claims the conduct on the day of the taping was an aberration which occurred in the face of unique mitigating circumstances. While advancing that she does not expect that conduct to be excused, she submits that in the face of her employment record, she should not be dismissed. Averring that her evaluations, memoranda and observations conducted of her show she is an excellent teacher, respondent seeks a reversal of the initial decision and a finding that she is an excellent teacher.

The Board's reply exceptions cast respondent's exceptions as alleging bias on the ALJ's part, which it claims is not the pivotal issue, and that such allegation is without support.

The Board further posits that respondent's points in exceptions are restatements of the same arguments previously set forth at hearing and in respondent's post-hearing submissions. It claims repetition of her position does not establish or support the alleged merit of respondent's mitigation claim or prove Ms. Conlin was lying. The Board contends instead that analysis of the relevant facts and credibility determinations made by the ALJ, as well as the applicable case law, proves that there is no content to respondent's arguments and that the ALJ accorded her and other witnesses' testimony the proper weight. It argues for affirmance of the ALJ's decision.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, which includes transcripts of the hearing below, the tape (Exhibit P-25) of Ms. Brady's Special Education class, recorded by L.A. and the briefs and exceptions filed by the parties, the Commissioner adopts as his own those findings and determination of the Office of Administrative Law. In reviewing those arguments raised by respondent in her post-hearing submission, mirrored in her exceptions, the Commissioner will address the incidents made the subject of the instant tenure charges in the order presented in the initial decision.

The Board's reply exceptions encapsule well the essence of the concern that formed the basis of the count regarding N.C. "the problem with Brady's conduct was the manner in which she handles situations. It simply is not appropriate for a teacher to raise her voice, or yell or scream in manifesting her 'shock' and 'dismay' with regard to a student's version of an incident." (Reply Exceptions, at p. 10) Similar concern is evident in the incidents concerning S.B. and G.H.. All three episodes add the dimension of whether respondent's reaction to a situation involving a student was appropriate where respondent feared retaliation from a student.

The Commissioner's review of the transcripts comports with the ALJ's assessment that in all three cases, respondent's conduct bordered on hysteria, was overreactive and professionally inappropriate. See Initial Decision, at pp. 6-7 and 14-15.

Respondent's exceptions regarding the N.C. incident focus on objecting to the ALJ's crediting Supervisor Conlin's charge that the alleged screaming by the senior staircase occurred in the presence of students and staff, causing disturbance of others. While respondent also denies having screamed at all, or in any way having conducted herself inappropriately, the Commissioner, like the ALJ, finds Ms. Conlin's testimony more credible regarding respondent's shrieking tone of voice when confronted with information from her supervisor that a pupil alleged respondent struck her, than respondent's contention that this incident constituted a "non-event" (Exceptions, at p. 19) merely because no other witnesses of this incident were called by the Board. Executive Vice Principal Galbraith testified credibly that Supervisor Conlin approached him following this episode to arrange a meeting in March 1987 to discuss respondent's outburst at her on the steps. See Tr. IV-86-88. Similarly, a second meeting was held, Mr. Galbraith credibly testified, in April 1987 to discuss "concerns about Ms. Brady's behavior [b]ehavior which often was irrational, sometimes extremely emotional, and "concerned [me] about  her dealings with students." (Tr. IV-91) The Commissioner accepts as the Board's concerns at such second meeting Ms. Brady's "outbursts hysterical behavior with emotional ranklings" which the Executive Vice Principal was concerned "might be projected into the classroom." (Tr. IV-95) From such meetings, it is noted, a plan was agreed to by respondent to attend the Employee Assistance Program (EAP) for counseling, which she attended for at least four sessions. (Tr. IV-97) (See also Tr. VII-46, 48, Tr. IX-62 and Tr. X-4.) From such testimony, the Commissioner concludes as did the ALJ that notwithstanding whether anyone observed the fracas on the senior staircase, or in the hall concerning S.G., respondent was guilty of temperamental outbursts in the incident regarding N.C. that constitutes unbecoming conduct.

The same can be said of the S.B. incident. Whether or not any other student was actually witness to the conversation between respondent and Supervisor Conlin regarding S.B.'s alleged threat to report respondent to "the man," the Commissioner finds Supervisor Conlin's recitation of the incident more credible than respondent's for the reasons expressed in the initial decision in the absence of further documentation from respondent as to the memo she purportedly filed with Conlin on the incident.

Similarly, although respondent may have had cause to be concerned about G.H.'s brandishing "toy" (Tr. IV-30) ninja paraphernalia, possession of which may have constituted violation of school policy, careful review of all the witnesses' accounts of the events that transpired over the course of more than two months concerning G.H.'s behavior nonetheless convinces the Commissioner that respondent's reactions to this situation in October through December 1989 were likewise marked by excessiveness bordering on irrationality. Like the ALJ, the Commissioner finds respondent's testimony regarding these episodes fractured, ringing hollow particularly in that she admits she confronted her supervisor, projected her voice into Supervisor Conlin's office and engaged her in a debate over the subject, while yet adamantly denying that she screamed, yelled or lost control. See Tr. IX-89-90, 93-94, 98, 101, 104-105. Despite respondent's conviction that she "may have raised [my] voice in the firmness of my convictions, yes" (id., at 105), Mr. Galbraith's credible evidence of such meetings regarding G.H's behavior indicates that respondent was "extremely upset and I would say emotionally distraught." (Tr. IV-102) When asked to describe the volume of respondent's voice, Mr. Galbraith answered, "It was very loud, penetrating. I found it almost to the level of being offensive, sir an exaggeration of the normal." (Id.) Supervisor Conlin's testimony comports with that of Executive Vice President Galbraith's. See Tr. IV-71. Inarguably, weapons of any sort will not be tolerated in the public schools. The record reveals that the administration took all measures possible to both seek out the truth of the allegations levied by respondent against G.H., and to remove the student from her class. Thus, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's finding that to the extent that the charge concerning G.H. levied against respondent alleges that respondent screamed, yelled, and lost control of her emotions, the charge is found to be true by a preponderance of the credible evidence, and that such behavior is deemed to represent conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member.

Little needs to be added to the ALJ's concise recitation of the events concerning the Project Graduation fashion show. Like the ALJ, the Commissioner's review of Ms. Ruffing's testimony supports a finding that in this case as well, respondent, who was acting in a capacity as an agent of the school district, lost her temper, and conducted herself in a highly offensive and obnoxious manner, but in an atmosphere unlike those concerning S.B., N.C. and G.H where she alleged fear for her safety or physical contact with a student. While it is not clear from the Commissioner's review whether, in fact, she removed shoulder pads from clothing, or broke hangers in the dressing room, it is clear from the testimony elicited from a witness who was entirely objective, that respondent's behavior represented conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member. The Commissioner so finds.

Likewise, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that sufficient evidence was brought to the record to sustain a finding that respondent's behavior at the in-service meeting was "rude" and unprofessional. (Initial Decision, at p. 9) Respondent does not contest the fact that she chose to disregard the speaker and instead fill out an application for summer employment, and engaged in asking questions of her colleagues rather than paying attention to the speaker. (Tr. IX-43, 44) For the reasons expressed by the ALJ, as evidenced by respondent's own testimony as stated above, the Commissioner concludes that such charge is sustained and constitutes conduct unbecomimg a teaching staff member.

However, the Commissioner concurs that the charge levied against respondent involving the police on April 5, 1990 cannot be sustained, for the reasons set forth in the initial decision. Yet, he finds scant evidence in the record to suggest that due to the events of that evening or due to her mother's death, during that school year, respondent's behavior from April 1990 is somehow to be excused or is mitigated by such events, more specifically relative to the allegations as evidence on the audio-tape of respondent's class made by L.A. (Tr. III-46) Not only was testimony adduced from A.V. that similar coarse or obscene comments were not uncommon from respondent and that explicit conversations were commonplace in the classroom, (Tr. VI-5-7) but also, the tape indicates that respondent seemed at ease talking of her personal life, which belies her assertion that her alleged sexual assault on April 5, 1990 or her mother's death produced aberrant behavior warranting mitigation of the seriousness of the charge concerning the audio-tape. The Commissioner thus concurs with the ALJ that respondent failed to meet her burden of demonstrating that she was under "any greater stress than any public school teacher is or any other citizen is, in dealing with daily life" (Initial Decision, at p. 23) warranting mitigation of the charge concerning the taping of her special education class.

In regard to such charge, the Commissioner cannot express strongly enough the inappropriateness of respondent's conduct in her class composed of special education students. Such commentary as is reproduced on the L.A. tape would be unacceptable under any circumstances in a school setting, but becomes an absolutely reprehensible breach of professional behavior -- indeed highly shocking -- among students whose handicapping conditions could have been based on emotional, psychological or learning disabilities that would render them particularly sensitive and vulnerable to use of or exposure to sexually explicit and racist language. In this regard, the Commissioner concurs with the Board's evaluation of respondent's behavior in that class as exhibiting a total lack of judgment, restraint and teaching skills during such class. Accordingly, based on the preponderance of credible evidence adduced at hearing regarding this incident, the Commissioner finds the charge to be true as stated and the behavior exhibited by respondent highly unbecoming a teaching staff member.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision and accepting the findings of fact and conclusions of law established by the ALJ below, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision. In consideration of the seriousness of the conduct proven true in this case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, and notwithstanding her otherwise commendable teaching record in the district, the Commissioner hereby directs that respondent be dismissed from her tenured employment as a teacher in petitioner's district as of the date of this decision. He further directs that this matter be referred to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6(a)1 for further action as it deems necessary.

For the Board, Martin R. Pachman, Esq.

For Petitioner, Zazzali, Zazzali, Fagella and Nowak
(Richard A. Friedman, Esq., of Counsel)

This matter has come before the Commissioner of Education on motion for stay of the decision of the Commissioner of Education rendered in the above-captioned matter on July 2, 1992. Said motion was filed by the Board in the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on August 20, 1992, having been misdirected and filed by mistake with the State Board Office of Appeals on July 29, 1992. Similarly, petitioner filed an answer and affidavit in response to the Board's application for stay on August 10, 1992, which was also misfiled with the State Board Office of Appeals on August 6, 1992. The Bureau of Controversies and Disputes received such submission on August 20, 1992.

As noted above, the Commissioner decided this case on July 2, 1992 with a ruling holding that petitioner, having met the precise requirements of the tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, was tenured, notwithstanding her having taken sick leave during the 1988-89 and 1989-90 school years. The Board was ordered to reinstate petitioner with mitigated compensation, based on Dorothy Kletzkin v. Board of Education of the School District of Spotswood, decided by the Commissioner July 30, 1990, aff'd with modification State Board February 5, 1992.

The Board's moving papers seek a stay of the Commissioner's decision pending appeal to the State Board of Education noting that the State Board decision in Kletzkin is now on appeal to the Appellate Division of the New Jersey Superior Court. The Board believes it has a likelihood of success in its appeal of this matter to the State Board based on the exceptions it filed previously before the Commissioner, including allegations of misinterpretation and misapplication of the State Board ruling in Kletzkin to this matter; the likelihood that the Appellate Division will modify, if not overturn the State Board decision in support of the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin; and the alleged inappropriate retroactive application of Kletzkin to the instant matter.

Further, the Board's moving papers suggest it will suffer immediate and irreparable harm if a stay is denied and the Board is forced to reinstate petitioner prior to a final ruling in this matter because it has selected and hired a teacher, whom it wants, to teach the classes to which petitioner now claims entitlement. Further, it argues that if the stay is not granted, and the Board reinstates petitioner, but the Commissioner's decision is later reversed by the State Board, it will suffer irreparable harm in having to find a new teacher to replace petitioner, because it could not force petitioner to return salary she has already been paid and, finally, because petitioner could also not compensate the district for having a teacher in the classroom whom it did not want there. Thus, the Board could not be made whole.

Finally, the Board argues the public interest in having only those teachers in classrooms who it has determined are needed is compelling. It claims that until a final ruling is made that the Board's determination to not rehire petitioner is illegal, the citizens of Bernards Township are best served by having only those teachers, whom it has hired, teaching its children. By contrast, the Board claims that petitioner's damages, if she prevails, are purely financial, and thus she can be made fully whole.

Petitioner's affidavit submitted in opposition to the Board's request for stay contends the Board cannot make the requisite showing for the grant of a stay pursuant to the standards set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) and she finds support for such proposition in the Commissioner's decision rendered on July 2, 1992. She claims that both the ALJ and the Commissioner rejected the Board's claims in this case, and thus, that it cannot make a showing of a likelihood of success on the merits, or that Kletzkin, supra, does not govern this matter.

Further, petitioner claims it is she, not the Board, who would suffer irreparable harm were the stay granted, arguing, inter alia, that because the Commissioner rendered his decision in this case on July 2, 1992, the Board can still easily reinstate her without interfering with the continuity of instruction, and further that if she does prevail on appeal, but the Board hired someone else to her position in the interim, the Board would have expended two salaries unnecessarily. Petitioner claims that such an expenditure of funds is unwise and unwarranted.

Finally, petitioner argues the equities of the matter favor her position, not the Board's, for the reasons expressed above and also because the law favors her position, even prior to the State Board's earlier decision in Kletzkin because similar leave had been held in other cases to be creditable for tenure. Thus, petitioner claims, the Board acted at its own peril in this matter, and the equities do not favor it.

The Commissioner has considered the arguments of the parties and finds no basis on which a stay would be warranted, as the Board has failed to meet those standards articulated by the court in Crowe, supra, for the extraordinary relief afforded by the grant of a stay, particularly because the Commissioner's decision rendered on July 2, 1992 fully considered and rejected those arguments now advanced by the Board in its request for stay, and because a Commissioner's decision is final unless and until reversed on appeal. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-25.

Accordingly, IT IS therefore ORDERED on this 24TH day of September 1992 that the Board's Motion for a Stay is DENIED and that the Commissioner's decision in this matter shall stand unless and until reversed on appeal.

Petitioner, teaching staff member, sought reinstatement with back pay and interest, claiming Board violated her tenure rights. Board contended petitioner was not reemployed because she was not tenured.

In light of Kletzkin State Board decision, ALJ found the two-month sick leave taken by petitioner did not deprive the Board of adequate time to evaluate petitioner's performance. State Board stated that N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 sets forth in plain terms that tenure is achieved after "employment" for a specified period with no limitations upon the word "employment." Thus, petitioner met precise requirements of statute and was awarded tenure. ALJ ordered Board to reinstate petitioner with mitigated compensation. Interest was not granted as it was not proven that Board acted in bad faith.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision noting that leaves for both 1988-89 and 1989-90 were less than a year in duration. Board was ordered to reinstate petitioner with mitigated compensation.

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This tenure and seniority case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Department of Education on July 12, 1991, as the result of the filing by Judith Apollony of a petition of appeal wherein she alleged that the failure by the respondent Board to continue her in employment for the 1991-92 school year was in violation of her tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, 18A:28-10 et seq., and 18A:6-10 et seq., as well as in violation of her seniority rights in her category of employment under N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10 et seq. Accordingly, Apollony demanded reinstatement with back pay and all other benefits, together with pre- and post-judgment interest. The Board then filed an answer denying petitioner's allegations or her entitlement to any relief.

A telephone prehearing conference was conducted by the undersigned administrative law judge on November 26, 1991, and it was agreed that the following issue was to be resolved: "Did petitioner acquire tenure and/or seniority in the respondent school district and, if so, to what relief is she entitled?" During the course of the prehearing conference, it also was agreed that the matter was susceptible to disposition by way of cross-motions for summary decision. Accordingly, a schedule for the filing of such motions was set forth in the prehearing order and, thereafter, a detailed joint stipulation of facts and cross-motions for summary decision were filed.

In a letter opinion, dated April 8, 1992, I reviewed the undisputed facts and the applicable case law cited by counsel. Attached hereto is a copy of that letter opinion, which is incorporated by reference. As I explained in that letter, in light of the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin v. Board of Education of Spotswood, 1990 S.L.D. ____, decided July 30, 1990 (OAL DKT. EDU 4064-89), both motions for summary decision had to be denied. My determination rested upon the view that the joint stipulation of facts did not provide an adequate enough record for me to rule comfortably in connection with one of the decisional criteria which the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin set forth in matters of this sort; namely, the impact of leave time upon the ability of the school district to have adequate time to evaluate the staff member's performance. Although I determined that none of the other criteria mentioned by the Commissioner in Kletzkin stood in the way of summary decision, that particular factor, in light of the circumstances, required live testimony.

On the day following the mailing of my letter opinion to counsel, I received a telephone call from the attorney for the respondent, who advised me that the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin, which had been the primary focus of attention by both sides in their briefs, had been reversed in February 1992 by the State Board of Education and neither counsel had been aware of the reversal. Thus, at my request, a copy of the State Board's decision in Kletzkin was forwarded to me for review. Also, I directed counsel to submit supplementary memoranda setting forth their respective positions in light of the State Board's decision.

The underlying facts essential to a determination in this case are set forth in the letter opinion attached hereto and need not be repeated. Suffice it to say that the issue addressed by me in that opinion related to the question of whether the Board's decision not to continue Apollony in its employment following the conclusion of the 1990-91 school year was a violation of her tenure rights. More particularly, the issue narrowed to whether or not an approximate two-month sick leave taken by Apollony during the period October 28, 1989 to January 3, 1990 deprived the Board of the ability to adequately evaluate her performance and, therefore, the time could not be counted toward acquisition of tenure. If that period was included, then, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c), she would have accumulated more than three academic years within four consecutive academic years of employment in the district.

The analysis which I set forth in my letter opinion tracked that articulated by the Commissioner in his decision in Kletzkin. The State Board reversal on appeal in Kletzkin rejected that analysis. Specifically, the State Board found that the Commissioner's decision failed to employ the correct legal standard. Contrary to the Commissioner's view, the State Board held that acquisition of tenure depends solely upon fulfillment of the precise conditions set forth by the Legislature in the tenure statutes, and the administrative agency was not free to create exceptions to that clear and unambiguous language based upon its own "policy" considerations.

In particular, the State Board stated that N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 sets forth in plain and unambiguous terms that tenure is achieved after "employment" for a specified period — there are no exceptions to or limitations upon the word "employment." Thus, relying upon the language of the New Jersey Supreme Court in the case of Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63 (1982), that neither the courts nor the Commissioner are at liberty to presume that the Legislature intended anything other than that which is expressed plainly in the tenure statute, the State Board in Kletzkin held that the Legislature meant exactly what it said when it determined that a period of mere employment for the equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years provided a sufficient period of scrutiny to evaluate the suitability of a teaching staff member.

Specifically, the State Board noted that given the liberal construction to be applied to the Tenure Act, it would not presume that the Legislature intended its express language to "impose special requirements on the relationship so as to exclude periods of sick leave such as involved here from the calculation of time creditable towards tenure." Kletzkin, State Board decision, at 11. In light of the State Board's decision overruling the Commissioner, I believe that I must now grant summary decision in favor of the petitioner.

In the supplemental memorandum filed by the Board, two arguments were raised. First, since the State Board decision in Kletzkin will be appealed to the Appellate Division, I should take no action until that appeal is decided. Second, that the facts in Kletzkin differentiate that case from the matter sub judice since Apollony was not "terminated"; rather, she simply was not "reemployed."

Neither argument is persuasive. The decision by the State Board represents the present state of the law and I will follow it. Moreover, I see no meaningful difference between the facts in this case and those in Kletzkin insofar as the legal issues are concerned It is undisputed that Apollony has been "employed" within the meaning of the Tenure Act for more than three academic years within a period of four consecutive academic years. Thus, since the precise requirements of the tenure statute have been met, Apollony should be awarded tenure.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth herein, I FIND that the petitioner, Judith Apollony, has acquired tenure as a teaching staff member in the respondent school district. Accordingly, Apollony's motion for summary decision is granted and she should be reinstated to a teaching position, provided that her seniority qualifies her for the same. Also, she should be awarded such back pay and other emoluments of which she was deprived, minus any mitigation by way of other employment, etc. I will not recommend the award of any interest since the Board's action was taken in good faith and, indeed, was in accord with the established case law prior to the State Board's Kletzkin determination. The Board's cross-motion for summary decision is denied.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Judith Apollony v. Board of Education of Bernards Township

Dear Counsel:

The following letter opinion constitutes my decision with respect to the pending cross-motions for summary decision in this case.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Department of Education as a "contested case" on July 12, 1991, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. It concerns a petition of appeal filed by Judith Apollony alleging that by virtue of her total creditable service as a teaching staff member employed by the respondent school district between September 1987 and June 1991 she has obtained tenure. In addition to seeking reinstatement, Apollony also requests back pay, benefits and both pre- and post-judgment interest. The Board's answer denied Apollony's claim that her total creditable service was sufficient to give her tenure and maintained that its decision not to renew her employment for the 1991-92 school year was proper.

A telephone prehearing conference was conducted by the undersigned administrative law judge on November 26, 1991, at which time the following issue was set forth: "Did petitioner acquire tenure and/or seniority in the respondent school district and, if so, to what relief is she entitled?" During the course of the prehearing conference, both counsel indicated that possibly the matter could be submitted on a joint stipulation of facts and cross-motions for summary decision. See, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. Thereafter, a joint stipulation of facts was filed, together with cross-motions for summary decision.

JOINT STIPULATION

The joint stipulation sets forth the following facts which, together with certain attached documents, provide according to counsel an adequate basis for the grant of summary decision. Those agreed facts are as follows:

1. Petitioner is an appropriately certified teaching staff member.

2. Petitioner was initially employed by respondent in September of 1987 for the 1987-88 school year.

3. Petitioner worked the entire 1987-88 school year, utilizing one sick leave day.

4. Petitioner was re-employed for the 1988-89 school year.

5. By letter dated October 2, 1988, petitioner applied for a "maternity leave" to commence December 12, 1988 and to continue through the end of the school year. By that same letter, petitioner advised the Board of her intention to exhaust all accumulated sick leave with pay (19 days) prior to the commencement of her unpaid leave, so her actual last date of work was to be November 11, 1988 (Exhibit A). A medical note followed on October 5 (Exhibit B).

6. At its meeting of October 24, 1988, the Board granted the requested unpaid "maternity" leave and acknowledged petitioner's right to use her sick leave for disability (Exhibit C). No additional paid leave was requested by petitioner or granted by the Board.

7. Notwithstanding the planned leave as set forth above, petitioner suffered an emergency hospitalization on October 28 and did not return to work until January 3, 1989 (Exhibits D and E). From that date until the end of the school year, petitioner was absent on three additional days due to illness.

8. Thus, during the 1988-89 school year, petitioner worked during the month of September, worked all but one day during the month of October, and did not work during the months of November and December, and worked January through June except for three days missed due to illness.

9. As a result of a clerical error, petitioner suffered no loss of pay throughout the 1988-89 school year. This clerical error was not discovered until January of 1990.

10. Petitioner was re-employed for the 1989-90 school year and began to work in of September 1989.

11. Petitioner was out ill for one-half day on October 12 and full days on October 13, 16 and 17, 1989. On October 18, 1989, petitioner was hospitalized and did not return to work for the balance of the 1989-90 school year.

12. On November 27, 1989, the Board, pursuant to a request dated November 8, 1989 (Exhibit F), granted a medical leave without pay retroactive to October 18, 1989 and continuing through January 24, 1989 (Exhibit G and H).

13. On January 22, 1990, the Board, pursuant to a request dated January 14, 1990 (Exhibit I), granted a child rearing leave effective January 25, 1990 and extending through June 30, 1990 (Exhibit J). No paid leave was requested or granted for either leave.

14. Thus, during the 1989-90 school year, petitioner worked only from the beginning of school in September through October 12 (one-half day).

15. As a result of a clerical error, petitioner was paid for all absences through the month of November. This error was discovered in January of 1990.

16. Petitioner was contacted regarding the 1989-90 overpayment in February of 1990 and, after negotiations by mail and telephone, was granted credit for ten sick days and two personal business days. Petitioner reimbursed respondent for one month and 1.5 days of net salary (Exhibits K-O).

17. Petitioner was re-employed for the 1990-91 school year.

18. Petitioner worked the entire 1990-91 school year except for the sporadic use of four sick leave days.

19. On April 29, 1991, respondent voted not to renew the employment contract of petitioner for the 1991-92 school year (Exhibit P).

20. There are no issues of procedural irregularity pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 et seq. The sole issue herein is whether, upon the above outlined work record, petitioner acquired a tenure status within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 et seq.

DISCUSSION

As counsel for Apollony aptly observes in the brief in support of her motion for summary decision, the "$64,000 question" in this case is whether any portion of petitioner's leaves during the 1988-89 or 1989-90 school years can be credited for tenure purposes. Indeed, the inquiry is even more limited. As set forth in the joint stipulation, petitioner's absences during the 1989-90 school year equaled more than eight months, the bulk of the school year. Thus, petitioner concedes that, ". . . it seems logical not to credit it [the 1989-90 leave time] for tenure purposes. . . ." Brief of Petitioner, p. 5. However, if Apollony's 1988-89 leave of about two months' duration is credited, she claims she should have been considered tenured. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c).

Petitioner correctly observes that the Tenure Employees Hearing Act is to be liberally construed, and all reasonable doubts concerning acquisition of tenure are to be resolved in an employee's favor. See, e.g., Spiewak v. Board of Ed. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63 (1982). The most recent case concerning the type of issue involved in the matter sub judice, and one which Apollony believes should be "controlling," is the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin v. Board of Ed. of Spotswood, 1990 S.L.D. _____, decided July 30, 1990 (OAL DKT. NO. EDU 4064-89). In Kletzkin, the Commissioner articulated standards which he believed govern the question of whether leave time should be counted toward acquisition of tenure and he observed that none of the prior cases established absolute standards for crediting leave time. Rather, they stand for the proposition that each must be judged in accordance with the specific facts applicable to it. Specifically, the significant factors to be considered include: (1) The length, placement and nature of the disputed leave; (2) its concomitant impact on the district's ability to evaluate the affected staff member; and (3) the type of position from which the leave was taken. Kletzkin, supra, at p. 14. In determining, in Kletzkin, that the employee's disputed leave time was creditable for tenure purposes, the Commissioner concentrated on the second factor, the ability of a Board to evaluate the employee's performance. Thus, the Commissioner noted that in prior cases crediting leave time, the inquiry properly focused on whether the break in service materially interfered with the district's obligation to evaluate. Of particular importance to the Commissioner was that the board had, ". . . ample opportunity to evaluate her over the past three years, and it is difficult to conceive that much would have changed if the Board had been able to conduct one last evaluation just prior to the tenure acquisition date." Kletzkin, supra, at p. 15.

Thus, the first element to be considered in determining the tenure acquisition consequences on Apollony of her leave is its "length, nature and placement." Again, the leave in question was for child birth purposes and originally was to commence on December 12, 1988, and continue to June 30, 1989. Unfortunately, petitioner had to be hospitalized on October 28, 1988 for pre-term labor. On November 30, 1988, she dispatched a letter to the superintendent setting forth the circumstances surrounding the unanticipated early commencement of the leave and asked that she be permitted to return to her teaching position on January 3, 1989. The Board granted that request and Apollony returned to work on that latter date. Thus, according to petitioner, the "length, nature and placement" of this two-month leave does not militate against her since the leave arose out of a medical matter of emergent proportions and occurred at a time during the school year wherein Apollony missed relatively few days in respect to the total number of work days in the school calendar.*

In response, the Board maintains that an analysis of the length, placement and nature of Apollony's 1988-89 leave reveals that it was significantly adverse to the public interest. First, petitioner missed approximately 20 percent of the entire school year, and while it is true that certain holidays and professional leave days fell within that time period (Veterans' Day, Teacher's Convention and the Christmas-New Year's break), the days missed were consecutive and fell in the middle of the school year. In essence, according to the Board, since the absence encompassed the last half of the "fall semester," it interfered substantially with the notion of continuous teaching for a full academic year and the first element noted in Kletzkin must be resolved in its favor.

The second element to be considered with respect to the impact of Apollony's leave during 1988-89 is whether it interfered materially with the opportunity to evaluate her performance in a meaningful way. This was the area upon which the Commissioner concentrated in Kletzkin.

Petitioner maintains that the stipulated facts demonstrate beyond reasonable debate that her leave did not significantly interfere with the District's ability to evaluate her. Thus, petitioner notes that not only was she evaluated three times during the 1988-89 school year, she also received a favorable year-end evaluation and a PIP which was discussed with her at the beginning of the 1989-90 school year (Exhibits Q-5, Q-6, Q-7, Q-8 and R-2). Beyond that, evaluation of her performance during that school year led to a recommendation for reemployment for 1990-91. Given these "positives," petitioner questions how respondent can claim that its inability to evaluate her during two months in 1988-89 was so significant. Also, Apollony notes that in Kletzkin, too, the disputed leave was for a period of only two months, and since there was no impermissible interference with the Board's ability to evaluate Klētzkin, the same result should obtain here.

*Petitioner therefore missed two school days in October, 18 school days in November and 16 school days in December. There were 186 school days for staff in 1988-89. Thus, the absences constituted 36/186 or 19 percent of the total (Exhibit S-2).

The Board, in response, maintains that the three evaluations it conducted in 1988-89 were not sufficient to provide it with an adequate opportunity to gauge petitioner's overall performance since there are less than the number of evaluation-type contacts which the Board expects to take place. To that end, the Board points to the provisions of the collective negotiations agreement in effect during 1988-89 which provided that there would be a minimum of two visitations per semester, or four per year. So too, the Board notes that a policy in effect at the same time also required four observations.

Finally, the Board again observes that the particular timing of the 1988-89 leave represented a significant break in the continuity of Apollony's service and therefore precluded the administration from, ". . . conducting sequential evaluations throughout a consecutive period of years . . . ." See, Brief of Respondent, p. 7.

The third standard referenced by the Commissioner in Kletzkin has to do with the "type of position" involved. Apollony maintains that this element is of minor significance since she was not an administrator and her leave had no meaningful impact on the overall operations of the school district. The Board counters that consideration of the "type of position" must take into account the other criteria mentioned by the Commissioner in Kletzkin. Accordingly, since Apollony was a 10-month employee rather than a 12-month employee, it had less time to undertake its evaluation. Compare with, Goebel v. Board of Education of Maywood, 1984 S.L.D. 1638.

As the result of my review and consideration of the stipulated facts, the briefs of counsel and the principles applicable to motions for summary decision, for the reasons which follow I do not believe that given the present posture of the case I can render summary decision in favor of either petitioner or the Board. Accordingly, the cross-motions are denied and this matter will proceed to a plenary hearing on the date previously scheduled--July 20, 1992.

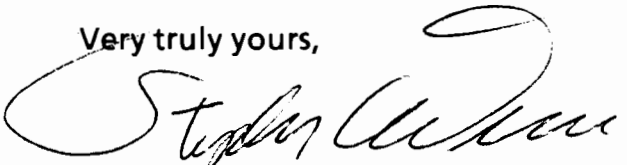
The principles applicable to motions for summary decision are set forth in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). Basically, summary decision may be rendered where the moving papers, together with any affidavits, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. See also, Rule 4:46-2. There is not, in this case, a mere "metaphysical" doubt as to a material fact. See, Matsushita Elec. Industrial Co., Ltd. v. Zenith Radio Corp., 475 U.S. 574, 586-587 (1986). Specifically, a very real issue persists as to the nature and extent of the Board's opportunity to evaluate petitioner's performance during 1988-89. That inquiry depends upon a variety of factors which are subjective in nature, particularly suited to live testimony and not yet addressed adequately. There is, in short, ample reason for me to exercise caution with respect to granting summary decision. See, Baer v. Sorbell, 177 N.J. Super. 182, 1985 (App. Div. 1981), certif. den. 87 N.J. 388 (1981); Shadel v. Shell Oil Co., 195 N.J. Super. 311, 316-317 (Law Div. 1984).

Simply put, there appears to me to be a genuine, unresolved dispute as to an important evidentiary fact--the ability of the Board to carry out an effective evaluation during the 1988-89 school year. The fact that both sides have moved for summary decision does not create any obligation to grant summary decision to one party or the other. See, e.g., Home Insurance Co. v. Aetna Casualty and Surety Co., 528 F.2d 1388 (2nd Cir. 1976); Rhoads v. McFerran, 517 F.2d 66 (2nd Cir. 1975). After reviewing the joint stipulation and drawing all reasonable inferences, I am convinced that with respect to the second standard articulated by the Commissioner, there is a need to take live testimony to determine whether the Board had the full opportunity it claims it needed to evaluate the petitioner. While "excessive caution" can undercut the purposes of the summary decision rule, see, Pierce v. Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp., 84 N.J. 58, 65 (1980), that situation does not pertain in this case.

I appreciate the efforts made by counsel in developing the detailed joint stipulation of facts and in preparing the briefs. However, I must reiterate that absent from the record is what I believe to be a critically important element--live testimony from Board personnel responsible for the evaluation process concerning how Apollony's 1988-89 absence impacted adversely and in a significant way on their ability to analyze her performance. At this point, the "evidence" in respect to that critical issue is mainly theoretical and consists primarily of conclusory arguments of counsel. In order for an adequate record to be made for review by the Commissioner, I believe it is necessary for such testimony to be offered as to this major fact issue, and an opportunity provided for examination and cross-examination by counsel and, if appropriate, questions from the undersigned administrative law judge. In light, therefore, of the importance which the 1988-89 leave has in this case, I would be remiss if I granted summary decision to one side or the other on the present record.

Accordingly, both the motion by petitioner for summary decision, and respondent's cross-motion, are denied. Counsel will prepare an appropriate order embodying this determination, incorporating this letter by reference and providing for interlocutory appeal by either party to the Commissioner if they so desire. See, N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10. This letter should be attached to the order.

Very truly yours,



Stephen G. Weiss

JUDITH APOLLONY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BERNARDS, SOMERSET COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The Board filed timely exceptions and petitioner provided timely reply exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

The Board argues that the ALJ incorrectly applied Dorothy Kletzkin v. Board of Education of the School District of Spotswood, Middlesex County, decided by the Commissioner of Education July 30, 1990, aff'd with modification State Board February 5, 1992, and that the State Board did not address what is "the equivalent of more than three academic years." (emphasis in Exceptions, at p. 3, quoting N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c)) The Board finds that there is no reason to carry over the State Board's analysis in Kletzkin to this matter because that case was based on a consecutive employment pattern which began just shortly after Kletzkin's start of the 1986 calendar year. The Board argues that to follow such reasonings would, in its extreme, grant tenure to a teaching staff member who worked one day at the beginning of each year of his/her contract for four consecutive academic years, with no consideration of what the equivalent of an academic year is. The Board argues that to follow Kletzkin to its extreme, petitioner in this case is to be credited for a full academic year of teaching in 1989-90 after working only 27 1/2 days and having only one evaluation.

Citing Canfield v. Bd. of Ed. of Pine Hill Borough, 51 N.J. 400 (1968), the Board further argues that Kletzkin contradicts the well-established case law that if a nontenured teacher is contracted for a fourth academic year, assuming a subsection b situation, but that contract is rescinded by the Board before the date on which the teacher would have received tenure, the result is that tenure is not acquired. The Board contends that while the facts of Canfield are not similar to the facts in this matter, it cites the case for the point that the Supreme Court in Canfield clearly indicates that the two words "employment" and "contract" are not synonymous and that under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c) "employment  for the equivalent of more than three academic years" means an employee must provide services for the equivalent time requirement, not just be under a contract.

The Board also reiterates its argument that the State Board decision in Kletzkin is on appeal to the Appellate Division and thus is not a final controlling decision. The Board suggests the ALJ erred in deciding the matter based on the State Board decision in Kletzkin and should rather proceed to take facts at the hearing in the instant matter, which can then be applied to any Appellate Division decision.

Further, the Board argues that the ALJ should have granted its Motion for Summary Judgment based on the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin, and that he should have found, based on the Commissioner's decision, that there was a significant break in petitioner's service that requires denial of her Motion for Summary Judgment.

Finally, petitioner argues assuming arguendo that the ALJ correctly interpreted the Kletzkin decision, it should be applied only retroactively and not in the instant matter. The Board suggests those criteria established by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Rutherford Educ. Assoc. v. Bd. of Educ., 99 N.J. 8 (1985) to be used to determine when a ruling should be applied prospectively only. It claims those prongs are: (1) evaluating whether a new rule of law has actually been announced by the case; (2) evaluating the reliance placed on the old rule by the parties and communities; and (3) evaluating the effect the new rule of law would have on the administration of justice. The Board submits that permitting petitioner's reinstatement under these criteria would "create administrative chaos involving not only that teacher but also other teachers in the system." (Exceptions, at p. 12, citing Rutherford, at 29) Thus, the Board contends the rule of Kletzkin, whatever it is, or becomes, is not applicable to the case at bar.

The Board seeks reversal of the initial decision.

Petitioner's reply exceptions first suggest that the ALJ's initial decision should be affirmed. She argues that the Board is wrong in contending that the State Board decision in Kletzkin is not controlling, and she cites Tietjen v. Bd. of Ed. of the Township of Bethlehem, Hunterdon County, decided by the Commissioner June 3, 1983, rev'd/rem'd St. Bd. October 26, 1983, Decision on Remand May 1, 1984 for the statement that the Commissioner could not assume that the Court would reverse the Appellate Division's decision because current law is that set forth by the State Board and Appellate Division decisions.

Second, petitioner submits that the State Board decision in Kletzkin controls this case. She contends the principle of that case is that if an individual is issued an employment contract and takes leave of absence for part of the school year, the individual acquires tenure credit. She claims the Board's contention that Kletzkin applies only in cases arising out of one section of the Tenure Act is "absurd." (Reply Exceptions, at p. 2) Petitioner contends the same term, "employment" (N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5) is used in each section of the Act and there exists no basis to distinguish among the sections of the statute in determining when Kletzkin applies. She adds that the hypotheticals suggested by the Board are not likely to arise because most collective bargaining agreements do not permit nontenured teachers to take extended leaves of absence for part of a school year, if at all.

As to the Board's reliance on Canfield, supra, petitioner submits that regardless of the Board's reading of Canfield, the Commissioner is bound by the State Board's reading in Kletzkin. Moreover, she contends that if a Board is not satisfied with a teacher's services or wishes to preclude a teacher on leave of absence from acquiring tenure, it can do what the Board did in Canfield, terminate the nontenured teacher in accord with the contractual notice provisions. In such event, petitioner argues, the Board is responsible only for contractual mandated pay, but tenure would not be acquired.

Further, in response to the Board's retroactivity argument, petitioner suggests that under the case law as it existed before the State Board's decision in Kletzkin, she was entitled to prevail noting that in the Commissioner's decision in Kletzkin, petitioner prevailed, and Goebel, a case noted in Petitioner Apollony's brief, was decided and affirmed by the State Board in 1985.

Also, petitioner submits that even if the Board's argument of retroactivity is relevant, the instant matter stands in contrast to Rutherford. She claims in Rutherford, in determining that its prior decision in Spiewak v. Bd. of Ed. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63 (1982) should not apply retroactively to teachers terminated before Spiewak, the Supreme Court overruled that line of cases holding that Title I teachers cannot acquire tenure. Thus, petitioner claims, the law was clearly different from that applied in Spiewak, which overruled all prior law. By contrast, petitioner suggests that the State Board did not overrule prior law, but rather affirmed a Commissioner's decision which had concluded that a teacher on leave of absence acquired tenure credit for the period of the leave. Thus, petitioner argues, under circumstances similar to those at bar, the Commissioner found petitioner's leave was creditable for tenure, and the law favored petitioner in this matter even before the Board riffed her, the Commissioner having decided Kletzkin over a year before she was terminated. Accordingly, petitioner finds the Board's reliance on Rutherford, supra, misplaced because the law was already in her favor and because there was no real change or break in the prior law.

Petitioner submits the ALJ acted correctly in granting petitioner summary judgment. In the event, however, that the Commissioner deems there is to be a retroactivity issue, petitioner claims she would at minimum be entitled to the benefit of the Kletzkin rule as enunciated by the ALJ, and the case would have to be remanded for further proceedings, through use of the test articulated by the Commissioner in his Kletzkin decision. She seeks affirmance, however, of the initial decision.

Upon careful and independent consideration of the record of this matter, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law.

Initially, the Commissioner rejects the Board's retroactivity argument. The Commissioner is compelled to apply the time of decision rule and to decide this matter in the face of the State Board's decision in Kletzkin, which it is noted, merely modified the Commissioner's holding in favor of Petitioner Kletzkin. See, e.g., Tietjen, supra. The modification articulated by the State Board spoke to the point that because the leave of absence enjoyed by petitioner in that matter was less than a full year in duration, no such considerations, such as number of evaluations during the time served during that year, could impact on the acquisition of tenure. See State Board decision in Kletzkin at pp. 6-7. Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects both the Board's retroactivity argument and its Rutherford position as being inapposite to this matter.

Similarly, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ in his assessment that notwithstanding the time petitioner herein was on leave of absence, both in the 1988-89 school year and in the 1989-90 school year, she served for more than three academic years within a period of four consecutive years and, thus, she has fulfilled the precise requirements of the tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c). Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects the Board's break-in-service argument as being without merit.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision signed May 14, 1992, as amplified herein, the Commissioner directs that petitioner be restored to her tenured position with back pay and all other benefits due and owing her. However, like the ALJ, the Commissioner denies pre- and post-hearing interest insofar as no showing of bad faith has been made and no unnecessary delay in the rendering of the initial decision has been demonstrated.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning social studies teacher alleged violation of his tenure and seniority rights by the Board when it reduced him from full-time to part-time position, failed to assign him to other part-time teaching positions which would have provided him full-time employment and was also allegedly subjected to retaliation from Superintendent for pursuing tenure and seniority rights.

ALJ concluded that petitioner should have been retained as kindergarten teacher for 1990-91 school year instead of nontenured teacher. Capodilupo, Bednar. ALJ determined there was no proof that the Superintendent maneuvered petitioner's reduction from full-time to part-time hoping to force resignation of petitioner. ALJ concluded that Ms. Carey's seniority was superior to that of petitioner's in elementary education and therefore her appointment to basic skills teacher was correct and not an abuse by Board.

Commissioner affirmed in part and rejected in part the initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law. Commissioner did not agree with the ALJ's assessment that Ms. Carey had accrued seniority in the elementary category. Because her service was in a departmentalized sixth, seventh and eight grade setting, seniority was accrued in the secondary category. N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(1)(19) Commissioner affirmed findings and conclusion of ALJ that petitioner was entitled to kindergarten position and therefore directed the Board afford petitioner all back pay which he would have earned for the 1990-91 school year and all other emolument lost as a consequence of this Board action.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SEA GIRT AND WILLIAM J. PENTONY, SUPERINTENDENT, MONMOUTH COUNTY

Respondents.

Joel D. Rosen, Esquire, for petitioner, (Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys)

Frank M. McDonough, Esquire, for respondent, (Kenney, Gross & McDonough, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 29, 1992 Decided: May 18, 1992

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner alleges that the Board of Education of the Borough of Sea Girt (Board) violated his tenure and seniority rights when it reduced him from a full-time to a part-time position and failed to assign him to other part-time teaching positions which would have provided him full-time employment; and, that the Superintendent retaliated against him for pursuing his tenure and seniority rights.

The instant matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 3, 1990, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq. Subsequent to two adjournments requested by counsel for the parties, a telephone prehearing conference was held on September 24, 1991.

Thereafter, respondent Board propounded and served a Notice of Motion for Summary Decision alleging a violation of the 90 day rule with regard to three claims in Count One of the Petition of Appeal and that the Commission of Education (Commissioner) lacked subject matter jurisdiction over claims in Count Two. Having considered the parties arguments, the undersigned advised the parties by letter dated January 7, 1992, that the matter was not ripe for summary decision and, pursuant to the criteria in Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Company of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954), denied the Board's motion.

The hearing was held on March 18, 1992, at the Spring Lake Municipal Court. The parties requested, and were granted, leave to submit post hearing memoranda. The last submission was received on April 29, 1992, which constitutes the close of the hearing record.

ISSUES

The issues to be determined by this tribunal, as agreed upon by the parties, are these:

1. Whether the Board violated petitioner's tenure and seniority rights by reducing him from a full-time to a part-time teaching position for the 1990-91 school year?

2. Whether the Board violated petitioner's tenure and seniority rights by denying him a position for which he held greater seniority when the Board employed a nontenured teacher for the position of halftime kindergarten teacher for the 1990-91 school year?

3. Whether the Board's Superintendent of Schools wrongfully, intentionally and/or maliciously interfered with petitioner's present and future economic advantage by reason of the following acts which were arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable and beyond the statutory and regulatory authority vested in the Superintendent:

a. Whether the Superintendent maneuvered petitioner's reduction from full-time to part-time position in hopes of forcing petitioner to resign?

b. Whether the Superintendent denied to petitioner teaching positions for which petitioner held greater seniority, in hopes of forcing petitioner from the Sea Girt School District?

c. Whether the Superintendent wrongfully influenced the Board to deny petitioner's application for sabbatical leave of absence for educational purposes?

d. Whether the Superintendent intentionally created for petitioner a 1990-91 teaching schedule which required petitioner to teach longer hours than the afternoon session, while receiving payment for a halftime position?

e. Whether the Superintendent manipulated the schedules to continually deny petitioner's request for a full-time teaching position for which he was qualified for the 1990-91 school year?

f. Whether the Superintendent threatened petitioner that he would never forget petitioner's alleged challenge to the authority of the Superintendent?

4. Whether petitioner's claims, are barred by the 90-day rule? N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).

5. Whether petitioner's claims,as set forth in Count II, are barred by lack of subject matter jurisdiction?

6. Whether petitioner's claims for relief are barred by subject matter jurisdiction?

BACKGROUND FACTS

Based upon the testimony and other evidence adduced at the hearing the following background facts are adopted as my FINDINGS OF FACT:

1. The Board operates an elementary school district comprised of grades kindergarten through eight (8) with a 1991-92 school year enrollment of 147 pupils.

2. The school is organized around three divisions; i.e.: Primary - grades Kindergarten through grade two (2); Intermediate - grades three (3) through five (5); prehigh school - grades six (6) through eight (8), which are departmentalized.

3. Petitioner has been in the Board's employ since on or about September 1, 1975 under a standard New Jersey instructional certificate with an endorsement in grades K-12 social studies issued in June 1976. In December 1988 petitioner was issued an endorsement in Elementary Education.

4. Petitioner acquired a tenure status effective September 1, 1978.

5. As a consequence of the defeat at the polls of the Board's 1989-90 current expense budget and a decline in pupil enrollment, the Board determined to reduce teaching staff size and increase pupil class size. (Enrollment in social studies classes in grades 6 through 8 averaged between seven (7) and nine (9) pupils).

6. On April 9, 1990, the Board took official action to abolish the following full-time teaching positions: one science teacher for grades 6-8; one social studies teacher for grades 6-8; and, one teacher aid for grades 2 and 3. As a consequence, petitioner's full-time position as a social studies teacher was abolished with the Board taking action to terminate petitioner and Jeanne Carey, science teacher for grades 6-8. Petitioner spoke at the public Board meeting in opposition to the Reduction in Force (RIF).

7. The Board thereafter created two, half-time positions and, by virtue of their respective tenure status, appointed petitioner to the half-time social studies 6-8 grades position while appointing Ms. Carey to the half-time science grades 6-8 position.

8. On April 10, 1990, petitioner was given notice of the RIF and the offer for the half-time teaching position.

9. On April 11, 1990, petitioner applied for a sabbatical leave commencing September 1990 for the 1990-91 school year. Petitioner wished to obtain certification in student personnel services (guidance and counseling) and learning disability instruction (reading and mathematics basic skills).

10. On April 30, 1990, petitioner accepted the one half-time social studies teaching position for the 1990-91 school year.

11. In or about May 1990, Mary Wassmer Gleason, formerly a prehigh school team leader, now teacher of grade one; prepared the 1990-91 schedule of classes for the entire elementary school. The schedule included, among other things, providing teachers with planning periods, balancing the teaching schedules of full-time and part-time staff members; i.e., reading and art, among others.

12. Grades 6, 7 and 8 had a combined enrollment of approximately 50 pupils. A class of 24 pupils might result in 12 different schedules.

13. Petitioner requested that his one-half social studies teaching class schedule be scheduled in the morning in order to provide him the opportunity to acquire outside employment in the afternoons.

14. Ms. Gleason complied with petitioner's request and completed the school schedule prior to the close of the 1989-90 school year for distribution to the teaching staff members before the summer recess.

15. On May 17, 1990, petitioner was advised by letter the Board had rejected his request for a sabbatical leave on May 7, 1990, for the 1990-91 school year.

16. On July 17, 1990, petitioner wrote a letter to the Superintendent to apply and be considered a candidate for two newly created teaching positions; i.e., supplementary teacher and basic skills teacher.

17. On July 19, 1990, Superintendent Pentony advised petitioner the Board had assigned Jane Richards to the half-time position of supplementary teacher and Jeanne Carey as the half-time basic skills teacher. Superintendent Pentony asserted that both of these tenured teaching staff members had seniority rights superior to petitioner under their K-8 instructional certificates.

18. As a consequence of Ms. Richards' assignment to the half-time position of Supplementary Teacher, a half-time vacancy in the Kindergarten class was created.

19. On July 24, 1990, petitioner informed the Superintendent by letter of his intention to apply for the half-time kindergarten position. (Superintendent Pentony was unaware that petitioner held an endorsement in K-8 Elementary Education).

20. On July 30, 1990, Superintendent Pentony responded to petitioner by letter as follows:

> Thank you for your letter of July 24, 1990, expressing an interest in the kindergarten position. As you know, the half-time position of Kindergarten Teacher has always been a morning session situation in this school. There are several educational reasons for this, including developmental needs of five year olds, total instructional time advantages, productive a.m. hours vs. p.m. hours, etc.
> Your intention to apply for the kindergarten slot would conflict with your half-time social studies assignment in this school since, at your request and for various educational purposes, the social studies schedule is concurrent with the morning kindergarten schedule. Any further alteration of these schedules would impact negatively upon the continuity of instruction, cause a ripple effect on elements of the K-8 curricula and generally vitiate the educational program.

21. On August 14, 1990, petitioner wrote to the Superintendent asserting he was ready and willing to discuss a full day teaching position consisting of the morning kindergarten and afternoon social studies/computer class. Petitioner was certain a schedule could be arranged. Petitioner also asserted he intended to contact his lawyer.

22. On August 17, 1990, the Superintendent responded to petitioner's letter of August 14, 1990 asserting, among other things, that the reasons expressed in his letter dated July 20, 1990, (P-3) foreclosed any further discussion relative to a change in petitioner's schedule.

23. On August 27, 1990, the Board appointed Ms. Maria Schloeder, a nontenure teacher, to the position of half-time kindergarten teacher for the 1990-91 school year.

24. On August 27, 1990, the Board appointed Jane Richards to the half-time position of supplementary teacher and Jeanne Carey to the half-time position of basic skills teacher.

25. On November 20, 1990, the Commissioner was in receipt of petitioner's Petition of Appeal alleging, among other things, a violation of his tenure and seniority rights.

26. Jane Richards possesses a standard New Jersey instructional certificate with an endorsement as a K-8 teacher.

27. Jane Richards served as a half-time kindergarten teacher with the Board from September 1, 1966 until June 30, 1990.

28. Jane Richards acquired a tenure status with the Board on or about September 1969.

29. Jeanne Carey possesses a standard New Jersey instructional certificate with an endorsement as a K-8 teacher.

30. Jeanne Carey served as a full-time science teacher in a departmentalized sixth, seventh and eight grade organization from September 1985 through June 30, 1990.

31. Jeanne Carey acquired a tenure status on or about September 1988.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

I

WHETHER THE BOARD VIOLATED PETITIONER'S TENURE AND SENIORITY RIGHTS BY REDUCING HIM FROM FULL-

TIME TO A PART-TIME TEACHING POSITION FOR THE 1990-91 SCHOOL YEAR?

Petitioner concedes that his RIF is not at issue in this matter. (See, Petitioner's Proposed Findings of Fact and Conclusions of Law, para. 2) Therefore, there is no need to consider the Board's legal arguments with regard to its managerial rights, discretionary authority and good faith in authorizing the RIF, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board's authority effecting a RIF to reduce petitioner from a full-time to part-time teaching position for the 1990-91 school year is not at issue in the instant matter.

II

WHETHER THE BOARD VIOLATED PETITIONER'S TENURE AND SENIORITY RIGHTS BY DENYING HIM A POSITION FOR WHICH HE HELD GREATER SENIORITY WHEN THE BOARD EMPLOYED A NONTENURED TEACHER FOR THE POSITION OF HALF-TIME KINDERGARTEN TEACHER FOR THE 1990-91 SCHOOL YEAR?

The facts of this matter demonstrates that at the time of petitioner's initial employment commencing September 1, 1975, petitioner did not possess a valid New Jersey teacher certificate. Petitioner had taught in the States of California and Oregon prior to moving to New Jersey. Subsequently, in June 1976, petitioner was issued a K-12 Social Studies endorsement under a standard New Jersey instructional certificate by the Board of Examiners.

Petitioner was assigned by the Board to teach social studies in grades six, seven and eight in a departmentalized organization under his special field endorsement. Subsequently, petitioner acquired an endorsement in elementary education on his instructional certificate in December 1988. He, however, did not teach in a contained classroom setting for the Board under this elementary education endorsement. Rather, petitioner continued to teach social studies in the departmentalized organizational structure.

The facts further demonstrate that subsequent to the Board' abolishing petitioner's full-time social studies position and petitioner's acceptance of a part-time social studies teaching position, petitioner requested that his part-time social studies classes be scheduled in the morning. Petitioner made this request in order that he might pursue employment outside of the school district in the afternoons.

The record also shows that Mary Gleason was assigned to prepare and publish the school's master schedule for the 1990-91 school year. This preparation, which took two full weeks to complete, involved requests of teaching staff members to state their preference of schedule as to time and days for classes and class preparation periods. Ms. Gleason attempted to accommodate the requests where special circumstances demanded; i.e., one teaching staff member taught both reading and art. Petitioner approached Ms. Gleason concerning his special request and Ms. Gleason was able to accommodate petitioner by arranging his 1990-91 social studies classes in the morning. Ms. Gleason prepared, and with the approval of the Superintendent, distributed the master schedule and individual teaching schedules for the 1990-91 school year to all teaching staff members prior to the close of the 1989-90 school year, which ended in June 1990.

On July 24, 1990, after the close of the 1989-90 school year and Ms. Gleason, a ten month employee, was no longer on duty; petitioner advised the Superintendent of petitioner's intention to apply for a part-time kindergarten teaching position occasioned by the transfer of Ms. Richards from part-time kindergarten to part-time Supplementary Teacher. For educational reasons, the kindergarten classes had always been scheduled for morning sessions. In general, the younger pupils were more alert and receptive to learning in the mornings rather than afternoons, among other things. On July 30, 1990, Superintendent Pentony responded to petitioner by letter asserting the educational reasons for morning kindergarten classes and observed the conflict with petitioner's requested and established morning schedule of his social studies classes for the 1990-91 school year. The Superintendent asserted the negative impact a change in schedule would impose upon the continuity of the instructional program. This negative impact of a schedule change at this late date was also observed by Ms. Gleason in her testimony at the hearing. Ms. Gleason testified, credibly, that it was not possible to change the schedule of one class. Rather, a change of one class would impact the whole school schedule. Therefore, no change in schedule resulted.

It is well settled that the reduction in force (RIF) of tenured or nontenured teachers is entirely within the authority of the board of education if done for reasons of economy. Klinger v. Cranbury Township Board of Education, 190 N.J. Super. 354, 357 (App. Div. 1982); In re Maywood Board of Education, 168 N.J. Super. 45, 55 (App. Div. 1979); Jamison v. Morris School District Board of Education, 198 N.J. Super. 413, 415 (App. Div. 1985); Page v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, et al , 1973 S.L.D. 704, 707 (1973); N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, 10. Reduction in force includes reduction in hours or compensation as well as abolishment of position. Klinger 190 N.J. Super. at 357; Page 1973 S.L.D. at 706. The rights of a tenured teacher are entitled to prevail over the rights of a nontenured teacher with the same certification in a reduction in force. Capidilupo v. West Orange Township Board of Education, 218 N.J. Super. 510, 515 (App. Div. 1987). A requirement of "good faith" on the part of school boards has also been implied into the statute. Popovich v. Board of Education of the Borough of Wharton, Morris County, 1975 S.L.D. 737, 739 (1975).

In Klinger v. Cranbury Township Board of Education, petitioner was a tenured teacher whose full-time physical education teaching position was reduced to 3 1/2 days per week and seven-tenths salary as a bona fide RIF. Klinger, 190 N.J. Super. at 356. Petitioner challenged the Board's hiring of a second, nontenured part-time teacher with the same reduced teaching load rather than retraining petitioner as a full-time teacher in charge of the physical education program. Id. at 357.

Despite Klinger's tenure and greater seniority, the Appellate Division affirmed the State Board's decision upholding the action of the school board, citing its language with approval:

> The law is well established that unless the local board's action to reduce full time positions to part-time was taken in bad faith or constituted an abuse of discretion, its determination to abolish or change positions may not be disturbed by the Commissioner or the courts. We do not find it arbitrary for a local board to decide when having to reduce its physical education program to have two part-time teachers rather than one full-time. The tenure and seniority rights of an incumbent cannot prevail against the authority of the board when exercised in good faith and with some rational basis. The mere fact that petitioner was qualified to handle the entire physical education program is not material; nor is the fact that the Board might have organized its physical education differently. Id. at 357 (emphasis supplied)

The court further affirmed the school board's right to effect a reduction in force, and held that so long as petitioner had not been treated in an inferior manner, he had no legitimate complaint. Id. at 358.

This language has been interpreted to mean that a board of education has no obligation to reorganize its program at the expense of other tenured teachers in order to accommodate the subject of a RIF, Sheridan v. Board of Education of the Black Horse Pike Regional School District, Camden County, OAL Dkt. EDU 6899-83 (June 7, 1984) adopted, Commissioner of Education (July 20, 1984). Klinger has been recognized as "a case in which the petitioning teacher's rights could not be accommodated without changing the board 's longstanding educational approach and the existing pupil schedules." Valinski v. Board of Education of Garwood, Union County, OAL Dkt. EDU 5930-84 (January 22, 1985), rev'd, Commissioner of Education, (March 11, 1985), rev'd, State Board of Education, (November 8, 1985). In addition,

> Case law has clearly established that there is an obligation on the Board's part to accommodate an individual's tenure and seniority rights so long as it does not require the Board to take extraordinary steps to provide that person with a position in the category within which he or she may have entitlement. Balczun v. Board of Education of Medford Lakes, Burlington County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 8077-86 (June 1, 1987), rev'd, Commissioner of Education, July 16, 1987.

However, in Capidilupo v. West Orange Township Education Board 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), the Appellate bench agreed with the State Board of Education that a tenured teacher is entitled to retention (after a RIF) as against a nontenured teacher under the tenure law. The Capidilupo court said:

> ... To hold otherwise would defeat the purpose of tenure which was to give a measure of security to teachers after the prescribed number of years of service. Id at 515 (citation omitted)

The Appellate Court continued to state:

> Our review of the record satisfies us that the State Board was within its delegated authority when it ruled that a tenured teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is > entitled to preference in a RIF as against a nontenure applicant with the same certification ... Id. at 515

Moreover, in Ellicott v. Board of Education, 251 N.J. Super. 342 (App. Div. 1991), the Appellate Court endorsed the State Board's determination in Capidilupo that a tenured teacher is entitled to retention as against a nontenured teacher regardless of seniority, in the event of a RIF. 218 N.J. Super. at 514-515. The Ellicott court continued to say that:

> We held that "a tenured teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is entitled to preference in a RIF as against a nontenured applicant with the same certification." Id. at 515, 528 A.2d. 73 (emphasis added). This was so despite the fact that the tenured teacher had no "demonstrable experience" under the endorsement. Id. at 513, 528 A. 2d. 73 ... 251 N.J. Super. 349

The tension between the authority of a local board of education not to change its pupils schedules to accommodate a tenured teacher subject to a RIF and the entitlement of a RIFFED tenured teacher to preference of retention within the endorsements on his or her certificate as against a nontenured teacher remains unsettled. The courts have sustained both views. However, the latter position appears to be more persuasive. This is so because our Supreme Court in Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63 (1982) observed the well-established principle that tenure is statutory, 90 N.J. at 72, and, "The Tenure Act should be liberally construed to achieve its beneficent ends." 90 N.J. at 74. "To hold otherwise would be to defeat the purpose of tenure..." Capidilupo, 218 N.J. Super. at 515.

In Capidilupo, the Appellate Division of Superior Court agreed with the State Board that petitioner Capidilupo had acquired a tenure status "in all positions for which his instructional certificate qualified him ..." Id. at 514. The Court also agreed with the State Board that district boards of education are obliged to take into consideration the tenure right of individuals affected by a RIF.

In the instant matter little, if any, consideration was afforded petitioner's tenure status by the Superintendent or Board with regard to the kindergarten class opening. The Board created the kindergarten vacancy after petitioner's RIF and subsequent to the close of the school year. The Superintendent, in response to petitioner's expressed interest in the kindergarten position, failed to consider petitioner's tenure. Rather, the Superintendent relied upon the established class schedules as the reason not to consider petitioner's application. There is nothing on the record to demonstrate that the Superintendent attempted to revise or modify the 1990-91 class schedule in any fashion. Instead, the Superintendent ignored petitioner's tenure as an elementary teacher and, used the established class schedule as the reason, without more, to reject petitioner's claim to the part-time kindergarten position.

I CONCLUDE that the Superintendent and Board erred when they failed to consider petitioner's tenure status with regard to the kindergarten vacancy for the 1990-91 school year.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner should have been retained as the kindergarten teacher as against a nontenured teacher for the 1990-91 school year.

III

WHETHER THE BOARD'S SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS WRONGFULLY, INTENTIONALLY, AND/OR MALICIOUSLY INTERFERED WITH PETITIONER'S PRESENT AND FUTURE ECONOMIC ADVANTAGE BY REASON OF THE FOLLOWING ACTS WHICH WERE ARBITRARY, CAPRICIOUS, UNREASONABLE AND BEYOND THE STATUTORY AND REGULATORY AUTHORITY VESTED IN THE SUPERINTENDENT.

a. WHETHER THE SUPERINTENDENT MANEUVERED PETITIONER'S REDUCTION FROM FULL-TIME TO PART-TIME POSITION IN HOPES OF FORCING PETITIONER TO RESIGN?

Petitioner failed to prove this allegation. The facts clearly demonstrates that the school district had experienced a decline in pupil enrollment. This decline in enrollment, coupled with a defeat of its 1990-91 current expense budget at the polls by the electorate, compelled the Board to abolish two (2) full-time teaching positions and one (1) full-time teacher aid position. Petitioner was one of the two full-time teachers subject to the RIF. There was no showing or proof that the Superintendent "maneuvered petitioner's reduction from full-time to part-time position in hopes of forcing petitioner to resign." The facts are too the contrary.

The Board caused the RIF of petitioner's full-time position based upon a legitimate and good faith reason of economy.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, there is no merit to petitioner's allegation with regard to this issue.

I FURTHER CONCLUDE that this allegation be DISMISSED.

b. WHETHER THE SUPERINTENDENT DENIED TO PETITIONER TEACHING POSITIONS FOR WHICH PETITIONER HELD GREATER SENIORITY IN HOPES OF FORCING PETITIONER FROM THE SEA GIRT SCHOOL DISTRICT?

Petitioner argues that by reason of his tenure and seniority he was entitled to the part-time positions of basic skills teacher, and/or kindergarten teacher under the rational expressed in Grosso v. Board of Education, Borough of New Providence, Union County, (decided, State Board, March 7, 1990); Capidilupo v. West Orange Township Board of Education, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), cert. den. 109 N.J. 514 (1987); Bednar v. Westwood Board of Education 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987), cert. den. 110 N.J. 512 (1988). Petitioner contends that Maria Schloeder, who was employed as the kindergarten teacher, had no prior teaching experience in the school district, thus, she had no tenure or seniority. He asserts that Jeanne Carey, who was hired as the Board's basic skills teacher, did not achieve a tenure status until September 1, 1988. Petitioner, on the other hand asserts he achieved tenure with the Board on or about October 1, 1978.[1] Petitioner, therefore, claims that his seniority is superior to both Schloeder and Carey and, thus, he should have been appointed to one of the two part-time positions.

Petitioner's claim as to the kindergarten part-time position has been discussed in detail in Section II above. Therefore, no further discussion is required here.

The Board observes that petitioner has served his entire teaching career in the Sea Girt School District under the social studies endorsement of his instructional certificate. He has taught exclusively in a departmentalized organization, assigned to to grades six, seven and eight. Petitioner has never been assigned to teach all of the subject areas in a contained classroom under his elementary education endorsement of his instructional certificate with the Board. The Board argues that petitioner's assignment and K-8 social studies certificate places him in the category of secondary teacher and he did not accrue seniority within the elementary category for the period prior to the issuance of the elementary education endorsement in or about December 1988.

The Board cites the regulations for determining seniority at N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10, which provides at N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(1) > 19. Secondary. The word "secondary" shall include ... grades seven and eight in junior high schools and grade seven and eight in elementary schools having departmental instruction.

> i. Any person holding an instructional certificate with subject area endorsements shall have seniority within the secondary category only in such subject areas endorsement(s) under which he or she has actually served.

The regulations continue to provide, at N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(1) > 20. Elementary. The word "elementary" shall include Kindergarten, grades one through six and grades seven and eight without departmental instruction.

The Board observes that Jeanne Carey acquired a tenure status under her elementary K-8 teacher certificate on or about September 1, 1988, some three months prior to petitioner. Notwithstanding that Ms. Carey taught science in a departmentalized six, seventh and eighth grade organization; by virtue of her teaching under her K-8 certificate, her seniority in the elementary category is superior to that of petitioner.

The Board also argues that petitioner's seniority claim with respect to the part-time supplemental teacher position was out of time, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), commonly referred to as the "90-day rule." The Board grounds its argument upon the Superintendent's letter to petitioner, dated July 19, 1990, wherein Superintendent Pentony advised petitioner of the Board's intention to assign Ms. Carey to the position of supplemental teacher and that Ms. Carey had seniority rights superior to petitioner.

The facts in this matter clearly demonstrate that the Board took official action to assign Ms. Carey to the position of supplemental teacher on August 27, 1990. The applicable regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), provides, in pertinent part, as follows:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

The operative term is "final order." Here petitioner's Petition of Appeal is dated November 19, 1990. It was received by the Commissioner in his Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on November 20, 1990. The 90th day from the Board's final action to appoint to the position of Supplemental Teacher on August 27, 1990, was November 25, 1990. Therefore, the Superintendent's letter to petitioner dated July 19, 1990, is of no moment. Rather, the significant date of November 20, 1990, was well within the 90th day from the Board's action on August 27, 1990.

Accordingly, the Board's argument that the Petition of Appeal was filed out of time, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) is without merit and must be DISMISSED.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's Petition of Appeal with regard to his seniority claim concerning the part-time position of supplemental teacher was filed with the Commissioner within the time prescribed by N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c).

There is neither question nor doubt that petitioner acquired a tenure status in the positions of social studies teacher and elementary teacher by virtue of the endorsements on his instructional certificate. See, Ellicott v. Board of Education, 251 N.J. Super. 342 (App. Div.. 1991); Bednar v. Westwood Board of Education, 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987); Capidilupo v. West Orange Township Education Board, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987). The threshold issue is whether petitioner acquired superior seniority over Ms. Carey to lay claim to the position of supplemental teacher. The Appellate Court observed in Bednar that, "under current regulations, seniority is measured by years of employment in specific job categories which are normally narrower than the subject fields which are endorsed on teachers' certificates. See N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5; N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b)"

In the instant matter, Ms. Carey acquired a tenure status as an elementary teacher under he K-8 elementary education endorsements on or about September 1988, notwithstanding that she had taught science in grades six through eight in a departmentalized organization. Petitioner, on the other hand, did not acquire the K-8 elementary education endorsement to his instructional certificate until December 1988. Although petitioner acquired tenure as a social studies teacher under his social studies teacher certificate in or about September 1978, he did not have seniority superior to Ms. Carey in the field of elementary education. Ms. Carey's seniority is superior to that of petitioner by approximately three months.

Petitioner's argument that he acquired tenure in all positions for which his instructional certificate qualified him without regard to whether he had any demonstrable experience under the endorsement is not disputed. Ellicott, supra. Conversely, petitioner's argument that it is of no consequence that Jeanne Carey had greater seniority in the elementary category than petitioner is rejected. Prior to December 1988, petitioner was not properly certificated to be employed by the Board as an elementary teacher in a contained classroom "authorized to teach the common branch subjects such as reading, writing, arithmetic, and spelling ..." N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.2(a)6.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that Ms. Jeanne Carey's seniority is superior to that of petitioner's in the field of elementary education.

Consequently, I CONCLUDE that the Board's action to appoint Ms. Carey to the position of basic skills teacher over petitioner was correct and not an abuse of its authority.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's claim to the position of basic skills teacher on the basis of superior seniority is without merit and must be DISMISSED.

Petitioner presented no proofs to support the changes as set forth in Issue #3 c.d.e. and f.

ISSUE 3.c

Petitioner produced no evidence that Superintendent Pentony had influenced the Board to deny petitioner's request for a sabbatical leave of absence. The Board's proofs demonstrate that it had no need for the program of study petitioner wished to pursue at the Board's expense. See, George Cafarelli and the Long Beach Island Teacher's Association v. Long Beach Island Board of Education, Ocean County, 1976 S.L.D. 989. The Board, therefore, rejected petitioner's application for the sabbatical leave in good faith and within its discretionary authority.

I CONCLUDE there is no basis in fact to support petitioner's allegation that the Superintendent influenced the Board to deny petitioner's request for a sabbatical leave.

ISSUE 3.d.

The facts are to the contrary with regard to petitioner's allegation that the Superintendent created a schedule which required petitioner to teach longer hours in his part-time position while receiving payment for a half-time position. The facts clearly demonstrate that the Superintendent provided petitioner with a teacher assignment which exceeded one-half of the school day in order that petitioner would be eligible for health benefits. Petitioner admits that he received such health benefits during the 1990-91 school year. Petitioner concedes that had he been assigned to less than one-half time teaching assignments, he would not have been eligible for the benefits.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's allegation as set forth in Issue #3, d., are without merit and must be DISMISSED.

ISSUE 3.e.

The record clearly shows that it was petitioner who requested and was granted a morning schedule to teach his social studies classes. There was absolutely no showing that the Superintendent manipulated petitioner's teaching schedule for the 1990-91 school year. The record does demonstrate, however, that there was no review or reconsideration of the 1990-91 school schedule subsequent to petitioner's request to be considered for the kindergarten class and/or the basic skills teacher position.

I CONCLUDE, however, that the proofs fall far short of supporting an allegation that the Superintendent "manipulated" petitioner's teaching schedule for the 1990-91 school year, and, therefore, this charge must be DISMISSED.

ISSUE 3.f.

This issue was not addressed at the hearing nor briefed by the parties. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE there is no substance to support the allegation and, therefore, it is hereby DISMISSED.

MITIGATION

In In the Matter of Juanita Zielenski v. Board of Education of the Town of Guttenberg, Hudson County, 1981 S.L.D. 759, 769, the Commissioner recognized the common law principal of mitigation of damages where the illegally dismissed teaching staff member sought full recovery of her salary and other emoluments withheld from her. See, White v. North Bergen, 77 N.J. 538 (1978); Talman v. Board of Trustees of Burlington County College, 169 N.J. Super. 535 (App. Div. 1979). Mitigation is the deduction of other income received from the amount of back pay otherwise recoverable and, where other income is not actually received, the amount of back pay that may be reduced by the amount the discharged employee could or should have received by reasonable and sincere efforts to locate other employment. Zielenski at 762.

In the instant matter petitioner testified, credibly, concerning his efforts in attempting to find part-time employment in the field of education. Petitioner's testimony was supported by Superintendent Pentony who wrote letters of recommendation for petitioner and inquired of other Monmouth County school administrators of position openings on petitioner's behalf. (Under the doctrine of mitigation, petitioner was not obligated to seek employment in any line of service other than that which he was employed by the Board as a teacher. Edgecomb v. Traverse City School District, 341 Mich. 106, 67 N.W. 2d. 87 (1954)). Petitioner was unsuccessful in his attempts to secure part-time employment to supplement his part-time tenured position with the Board. (P-8).

Petitioner claims that his loss of earnings amounted to $23,000 due to the Board's action to employ a nontenured kindergarten teacher over him. The Board, on the other hand, seeks to strike petitioner's evidence relative to the issue of mitigation based upon petitioner's lack of response to discovery requests by the Board. The facts demonstrate that petitioner denied the Board any discovery relating to the issue of mitigation prior to the scheduled hearing asserting that the Board's inquiry was "irrelevant and not reasonably calculated to lead to the production of relevant material." Board's Initial Interrogatories ; Question #12, et. seq. notwithstanding the Board's arguments, this tribunal ruled that no prejudice was visited upon it by petitioner's tardiness in supplying the Board with documents relating to mitigation. Consequently, I CONCLUDE the Board's request to strike petitioner's evidence relative to the issue of mitigation is without merit and is DISMISSED.

Having fairly considered all of the evidence in this matter and having concluded that the Board should have appointed petitioner, a tenured teaching staff member, to the part-time position as kindergarten teacher rather than a new nontenured employee, I now CONCLUDE that petitioner has successfully demonstrated his attempt to mitigate damages as a result of his RIF and nonretention in the position to which he was entitled.

ORDERED

Accordingly, it is hereby ORDERED that the Board afford petitioner all back pay which he would have earned for the 1990-91 school year had the Board properly assigned petitioner to the part-time position of kindergarten teacher together with all other emoluments lost as a consequence of the Board's action.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

subjects in an elementary school. Yet, neither Ms. Carey nor petitioner has seniority entitlement to bump a basic skills or supplemental instructor who is tenured and has accrued seniority in the elementary category.

In this regard, the Commissioner rejects the initial decision which found that Ms. Carey's seniority accrued in the elementary category as a result of her holding an elementary endorsement. In all other regards, the initial decision is adopted, for the reasons set forth therein.

Accordingly, the Commissioner directs the Board afford petitioner all back pay which he would have earned for the 1990-91 school year had the Board properly assigned him to the part-time position of kindergarten teacher together with all other emolments lost as a consequence of this Board action. Because petitioner has been made whole as a result of his prevailing on the issue of his entitlement to the kindergarten position, there is no need to address any entitlement petitioner might have to the basic skills position held by Ms. Carey, an entitlement, it is noted, that petitioner did not seek among his prayers for relief.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

JULY 2, 1992

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF PEMBERTON TOWNSHIP : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION BOARD OF EDUCATION, BURLINGTON : DECISION COUNTY. :

For Petitioner, Frederick W. Hardt, Esq.

For Respondent, John C. Gillespie, Esq., (Ferg, Barron & Gillespie)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on April 27, 1992 through the Pemberton Township Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Pemberton Township School District on April 7, 1992. On June 22, 1992, the Mayor and Council of the Township of Pemberton submitted notification that there was no objection to the relief requested in the cap waiver appeal. On that date as well, the Board submitted its position statement setting forth its basis for the need for the cap waiver monies sought; thus, it was on June 22, 1992 that the record in this matter closed.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the current expense and capital outlay budgets approved by the voters of Pemberton Township on April 7, 1992 in the amount of $8,097,556 and $901,350 respectively, there is a need for an additional $1,134,257 in current expense and $383,048 in capital outlay in order for the district to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students. The amount in contention in this matter before the Commissioner is set forth below:

	Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education	Amount of tax levy approved by the voters
Current expense	$ 8,097,556	$8,097,556
Capital Outlay	$ 901,350	$ 901,350
Current expense	$ 1,134,257	-0-
Capital expense	$ 383,048	-0-
Total	$10,516,211	$8,998,906

On March 5, 1992, County Superintendent Arthur Merz conditionally approved the Pemberton Township School District's budget subject to the cap waiver amounts set forth below which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by him.

Current Expenses

Account Title	Account No.	Amount
Administrative Salaries	010110	$ 20,497
High School Teacher Salaries	0102131	40,000
Elementary Teacher Salaries Grades 6-8	0102132	33,000

Improvement to Site	031220	$ 211,870
Remodeling	031230	171,178
Additional Capital Outlay Appropriation		$ 383,048

Upon review of the record of this matter, including the extensive documentation provided by the district in support of the necessity of the current expense and capital outlay cap waiver funds, which is incorporated herein by reference, the Commissioner finds and determines that the requested relief shall and is hereby granted, as the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that these funds are required for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of this special needs school district. (N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-3) East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, the Burlington County Board of Taxation is hereby ordered to adjust the Pemberton Township tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $1,134,257 for current expense and $383,048 for capital outlay which results in a total tax levy of $10,516,211, $9,231,813 of which is for current expense and $1,284,398 for capital outlay.

APPEAL OF THE MANALAPAN-	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE MANALAPAN- : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ENGLISHTOWN REGIONAL SCHOOL : DECISION
DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY. :

For Petitioner, John I. Dawes, Esq. (Cerrato, Dawes, Collins, Saker & Brown)

For Respondent Township of Manalapan, Robert F. Munoz, Esq. (Lomurro, Davison, Eastman & Munoz)

For Respondent Borough of Englishtown, Mitchell J. Ansell, Esq. (Ansell, Zaro, Bennett, Kenney & Grimm)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on May 11, 1992 through the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District on April 7, 1992. On June 1, 1992, the Mayor and Council of the Township of Manalapan submitted notification that took no position on the cap waiver appeal. On June 15, 1992, notification was received from the Borough of Englishtown that while it was not filing an Answer to the cap waiver appeal, it wanted to officially state it was opposed to the cap waiver being requested by the Board. Of this it states that while the budget was passed by the voters of the Borough of Englishtown, it is clear the public is opposed to the cap waiver, not only by the voters' defeat of the cap waiver referendum but by the public outcry at various public meetings in connection with the budget. On June 19, 1992, the Board notified the Commissioner that it would rely on its submissions which accompanied the petition to set forth its basis for the need for the cap waiver monies sought rather than filing a position statement; thus, it was on June 19, 1992 that the record in this matter closed.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the current expense budget approved by the voters of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District on April 7, 1992 in the amount of $17,519,744, there is a need for an additional $500,000 in current expense in order for the district to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students.

On March 5, 1992, Milton Hughes, Monmouth County Superintendent of Schools, conditionally approved the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District's budget subject to the cap waiver amounts set forth below which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by him.

Current Expenses	213	Teacher Salaries - K	$ 30,800
	213	Teacher Salaries - 1 thru 5	277,200
	213	Teacher Salaries - 6 thru 8	154,000
	810C	Social Security	5,000
	820	Insurance	33,000
		TOTAL	$500,000

In addition to the foregoing, there was $220,000 in current expense cap waiver monies sought by the Board at the April 7, 1992 annual school election but those monies were not deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by the county superintendent. The amount of tax levy in contention in this matter is, therefore, as set forth below:

	Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education	Amount of tax levy approved by the voters
Current expense	$17,519,744	$17,519,744
Capital Outlay	-0-	-0-
Cap waiver (T&E)
Current expense:	$ 500,000	-0-
Capital expense:	-0-	-0-

The Board urges that the $500,000 in cap waiver monies set forth above is necessary for it to try to keep existing programs and staffing and to provide a new district alignment, including a new 235,000 square foot middle school. Opening the new middle school will complete a three-year T&E objective which was necessary to vacate sub-standard facilities (rooms and modular classrooms) as required by statute and to accommodate increased enrollment. It is the Board's belief that without the $500,000 to hire the additional professional staff for the middle school and fringe benefits, it will have to reduce staff and cut current programs well below existing levels.

Upon review of the record of this matter, including the documentation provided by the district in support of the necessity of the cap waiver funds, which is incorporated herein by reference, the Commissioner finds and determines that the requested relief shall and is hereby granted as the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that these funds are required for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966);

Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, the Monmouth County Board of Taxation is hereby ordered to adjust the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District's tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $500,000 for current expense which results in a total current expense tax levy of $18,019,744.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, BERGEN	:	DECISION
COUNTY.	:

For Petitioner, J. Dennis Kohler, Esq.

For Respondent, James P. Logan, Esq. (Logan and Logan)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 6, 1992 through the Alpine Borough Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Alpine School District on April 7, 1992. On May 29, 1992, notification was received from the Borough of Alpine that the Alpine governing body had determined that it was in the best interest of the citizens of the Borough to take no active participation in the matter.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the budget for current expense, capital outlay and the capital outlay cap waiver approved by the voters of the Borough of Alpine on April 7, 1992 in the amounts of $2,241,635, $4,700 and $100,000 respectively, the cap waiver in the amount of $114,895, which was defeated by the voters at said election, is necessary for the Board to provide a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Alpine School District. The amount of tax levy in contention in this matter before the Commissioner is as set forth below:

	Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education	Amount of tax levy approved by the voters
Current expense	$2,241,635	$2,241,635
Capital Outlay	$ 4,700	$ 4,700
Cap waiver:
Current expense	$ 114,895	$ -0-
Capital expense	$ 100,000	$ 100,000
Total:	$2,461,230	$2,346,335

Acting County Superintendent Alfred Marbaise conditionally approved the Alpine School District's proposed 1992-93 school budget subject to the current expense cap waiver of $114,895 and capital outlay cap waiver of $100,000 which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education. The current expense cap waiver which is the subject of appeal herein was approved for the following purposes:

ACCOUNT TITLE	ACCOUNT NO.	AMOUNT

Excerpts from the Board's resolution relative to the need for a current expense cap waiver summarize the basis upon which the Board seeks the above-referenced $114,895.

> (1) Whereas, the Alpine Board of Education has an obligation to fund the following mandated costs, and
> (2) Whereas, the Alpine Board of Education will experience an increase of 5% in the number of students sent to Tenafly High School (up from 60 budgeted in 1991-1992 to 63 for 1992-1993), and

(3) Whereas, Tenafly has notified the Alpine Board of Education that the per pupil tuition rate is to increase by 6.5% ($7735 to $8240), and

(4) Whereas, the budgeted tuition to Tenafly High School has increased by $49,815 representing a 10.6% increase over the 1991-1992 budget, and

(5) Whereas, K-8 enrollment in 1991-1992 increased by 5% and will increase by 7% in 1992-1993, and

(6) Whereas, the Alpine Board of Education has budgeted for the 1992-1993 the addition of the equivalent of one full-time teaching position K-8 to meet expanded enrollment, and

(7) Whereas, budgeted mandated transportation for costs to the district for non-public school students have increased by 24% or $16,555, and

(8) Whereas, costs to the district for State Health Benefits Premiums have increased by 16.8% or $25,868, and

(9) Whereas, the Alpine Board of Education anticipates a shortfall in tuition income and interest of $30,000 for the current year and must anticipate the remaining free balance will be $84,259 which represents 3% of the total budget and should not be further dissipated, and

(10) Whereas, the following reductions, amounting to $110,600 have already been made in the proposed 1992-1993 budget:

- reducing two full-time positions (Assistant Principal and Child Study Team Chair/ Learning Disabilities Teacher Consultant) into one and one third positions,
- combining two prekindergarten classes into one class,
- eliminating one transportation aide, and

(11) Whereas, a CAP Waiver is necessary to allow the Alpine School District to:

- provide two first grade classes,
- maintain local support of Basic Skills Improvement Programs in mathematics, writing and reading that will enable pupils to acquire mathematics, reading and communication skills appropriate to grade level and individual ability,

- maintain differentiated mathematics classes that permit pupils to acquire knowledge and facility in mathematics appropriate to grade level and ability,
- maintain foreign language instruction that allows pupils to acquire an understanding of a foreign language, geography and culture and develop basic communication skills in that language,
- maintain general and instrumental music classes that enable pupils to acquire knowledge necessary for further education and skill and understanding that permit him/her to play a satisfying role as producer and consumer, as well as develop an understanding of his/her own worth, abilities, potentialities and limitations, and

(12) Whereas, these programs are necessary for the Alpine School District to achieve the following "Thorough and Efficient Outcome Goals" of the State of New Jersey that will enable each pupil to:

(13) Whereas, these programs are necessary for the Alpine School District to achieve the following State approved "Thorough and Efficient Outcome Goals" of the district which will enable each pupil to:
- acquire reading skills appropriate to grade level and individual ability,
- achieve communication skills necessary to become proficient in listening, speaking and writing appropriate to grade level and individual ability,
- acquire knowledge and facility in mathematics appropriate to grade level and ability
- acquire an understanding of a foreign language, geography and culture and develop basic communication skills in that language,
- acquire effective study skills appropriate to grade level and individual ability. Now

(14) THEREFOR, be it resolved that the Alpine Board of Education hereby requests a CAP Waiver for the 1992-1993 school year in the amount of $114,895 for current expense to achieve State and District "Thorough and Efficient Outcome Goals" through

- two first grade classes
- local support of Basic Skills Improvement Program in mathematics, writing and reading
- maintain differentiated mathematics instruction
- maintain foreign language instruction
- maintain general and instrumental music instruction.

In reviewing the record of this cap waiver appeal submitted by the Alpine Board of Education, the Commissioner finds and determines that the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that the additional $114,895 in current expense tax levy sought for the 1992-93 school year is necessary to provide a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Alpine School District. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that the Bergen County Board of Taxation adjust the Alpine current expense levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $114,895 which results in a total tax levy of $2,461,230, $2,356,530 of which is for current expense purposes and $104,700 for capital outlay.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP :
WAIVER APPEAL OF THE BOARD OF : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF : DECISION
ALLENHURST, MONMOUTH COUNTY. :

For Petitioner, Sanford D. Brown, Esq. (Cerrato, Dawes, Collins, Saker & Brown)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 1, 1992 through the Board of Education of the Borough of Allenhurst's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Allenhurst School District on April 7, 1992. On June 4, 1992, notification was received from Vito D. Gadaleta, Clerk-Administrator of the Borough of Allenhurst, that the Allenhurst governing body had determined through resolution not to participate in the matter by letting the record, including the resolution regarding the defeated budget (Resolution 6) and the resolution relative to the cap waiver (Resolution 7), speak for itself.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the current expense budget rejected by the voters of the Borough of Allenhurst on April 7, 1992 in the amount of $172,716, the cap waiver in the amount of $82,547, which was defeated by the voters at said election, is necessary for it to provide a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Allenhurst School District. Since the Allenhurst governing body reduced the budget by only $1.01 to $172,714.99, the amount of tax levy in contention in this matter before the Commissioner is limited solely to the cap waiver as set forth below.

Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education		Amount of tax levy in dispute before the Commissioner
Current Expense	$172,716	-0-
Cap Waiver	$ 82,547	$82,547
Total	$255,263	$82,547

On March 4, 1992, County Superintendent Milton Hughes conditionally approved the Allenhurst School District's proposed 1992-93 school budget subject to the cap waiver of $82,547 which was deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education, $78,335 of which was deemed necessary in Account 520: Transportation-Contracted Services and $4,212 in Account 550: Transportation-Other Expenses.

The affidavit of the Board Secretary, Nancie Senet, indicates the need for the cap waiver monies for transportation is related to increased transportation costs because the State has increased the nonpublic school transportation maximum by 24%. Based on past practice, this would increase actual costs in the same proportion. Increases were also necessary in light of added special education requirements.

In addition to the above, the Board was advised subsequent to the annual school election that new expenses in the amount of approximately $19,000 would be incurred for special education tuition which had not previously been anticipated.

In reviewing the record of this cap waiver appeal submitted by the Allenhurst Board of Education, the Commissioner finds and determines that the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that an increase in current expense tax levy is necessary for the 1992-93 school year to meet the transportation obligations of the district as approved by the county superintendent. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989) In reaching this determination, the Commissioner has taken into consideration the resolutions of the Allenhurst governing body but finds that the record more than adequately documents the need for the cap waiver revenues for transportation. However, given that the recent enactment of P.L. 1992, c. 33, adopted June 30, 1992, sets the maximum reimbursement for nonpublic school transportation for 1992-93 at $675 rather than $836, it is determined that $5,635 (35 students x $161) of the cap waiver request for transportation is no longer necessary. Consequently, a $76,912 increase in current expense tax levy is approved as opposed to the $82,547 requested.

Accordingly, it is ordered that the Monmouth County Board of Taxation adjust the Allenhurst current expense levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $76,912 which consequently sets Allenhurst's current expense tax levy for 1992-93 at $249,626.99.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JOSE BARRIOS, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY

Philip Feintuch, Esq., for petitioner

Karen A. Murray, Esq., for respondent
(Murray, Murray & Corrigan, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 22, 1992 Decided: May 28, 1992

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This tenure case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Department of Education on December 17, 1991, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The matter arose as a result of the filing by the respondent of tenure charges of incapacity and chronic and excessive absenteeism against Barrios, which charges were certified to the Commissioner in September 1991.

A prehearing conference was conducted by the undersigned administrative law judge on January 30, 1992, and hearings were scheduled to take place before me on March 24, 1992 and March 25, 1992

New Jersey is an Equal Opportunity Employer

Prior to the dates scheduled for commencement of the hearing, the undersigned was advised that the matter had been the subject of successful settlement negotiations. Thereafter, a stipulation of settlement was submitted to me for review.

The settlement agreement provides that respondent immediately will submit his written resignation, to be effective June 19, 1992. Upon receipt of that resignation, the State-operated School District will withdraw the tenure charges. Also upon receipt of the resignation, Barrios will be considered to have been returned to the payroll, effective March 1, 1992, and will be placed on a leave with pay status until June 19, 1992, the effective date of his resignation.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of the settlement, and I FIND:

1. The settlement agreement has been entered into voluntarily by respondent and without any coercion.

2. The agreement, signed by the parties and by counsel, is fair and reasonable and in the public interest.

In recommending this settlement to the Commissioner for approval I am aware of the requirements set down by the Commissioner and State Board regarding this process. In particular, no settlement should be approved where, for example, there is a gift of public funds or where no basis exists in the record to support such a resolution. In this case the charges against Barrios stemmed from his lengthy absences over a period of time while employed in the respondent State-operated School District. Those absences increased substantially during the 1989-90 and 1990-91 school years. In his answer, respondent maintained, inter alia, that they were due to legitimate illness. Trial of this matter would have taken at least two days and the cost in terms of financial considerations and human resources would substantially have exceeded the amount involved in the settlement. Accordingly, in light of the totality of the circumstances, I am satisfied, as set forth above, that this settlement agreement is an appropriate one for the Commissioner's approval.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The parties hereby agree as follows relative to the tenure charges filed against José Barrios by the State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City:

1. Mr. Barrios will immediately tender his written resignation to be effective June 19, 1992.

2. Upon receipt of Mr. Barrios' written resignation, the State-Operated School District will withdraw the tenure charges filed on September 30, 1991 with the Commissioner of Education, Agency Ref No. 357-9/91, and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law under Docket No. EDU 11214-91N.

3. Mr. Barrios will remain on the School District's payroll without pay until February 28, 1992.

4. Upon receipt of Mr. Barrios' written resignation, he will be returned to the payroll, effective March 1, 1992, on leave with pay until the end of the 1991-1992 school year, June 19, 1992.

5. Mr. Barrios submits his resignation and enters into this Settlement Agreement voluntarily and without coercion.

Sheldon H. Pincus, Esq., for respondent
(Bucceri & Pincus, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 14, 1992 Decided: May 27, 1992

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This tenure matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Department of Education as a contested case on February 20, 1991, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. Respondent is a tenured custodian employed by the Orange School District who had been arrested in March 1990 on a charge of illegal possession of cocaine. A few days later, respondent appeared in Orange Municipal Court, admitted the conduct, and in light of the totality of the circumstances, including the fact that he was a "first offender," was admitted into a pretrial intervention program. See, N.J.S.A. 24:21-27(b). Nevertheless, the Board thereafter certified a charge of unbecoming conduct against Andriola.

A telephone prehearing conference was conducted with counsel by the undersigned administrative law judge on May 29, 1991, and hearings were scheduled to take place on January 13 and 14, 1992. Andriola had not been suspended and he continued in employment during the entire pendency of the proceedings.

Prior to the scheduled commencement of the hearing on January 13, 1992, counsel conferred with their respective clients concerning the possibility of settlement. As a result of those discussions, an amicable resolution of the dispute tentatively was achieved.

Thereafter, counsel submitted a stipulation of settlement signed by the president of the Board of Education, by the respondent and by respondent's attorney. Attachments to that stipulation of settlement included the municipal court complaint against respondent, copies of evaluations of his work performance, an excerpt from the transcript of the municipal court proceedings, a letter from respondent's probation officer attesting to Andriola's successful completion of supervisory treatment and attendance at "AA" meetings, a letter of commendation from the Board's director of special services, a letter of commendation from the former superintendent of schools attesting to respondent's positive performance, an order terminating Andriola's supervisory treatment for the six-month period between March and September 1990, a copy of his latest performance evaluation and a copy of his 1990-91 attendance record.

There is no doubt that employees of boards of education who become involved in drug-related activities, including custodians, place their employment in extreme jeopardy by such conduct. See, e.g., Arocha and Gonzalez v. Board of Education of the Hudson County Area Vocational-Technical School District, Hudson County, OAL Docket No. EDU 9293-83, 1985 S.L.D. _____, decided April 8, 1985. The Legislature, of course, has clearly expressed its strong position regarding the special nature of the school setting vis-a-vis drug offenses by establishing a "drug free school zone" concept. See, N.J.S.A. 2C:35-7; State v. Ogar, 229 N.J. Super. 459, 467 (App. Div. 1989); see also, N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-1 et seq.

Nevertheless, involvement by a school employee in drug activity does not automatically require termination of employment. Where, for example, a substitute teacher convicted of possession of controlled substances demonstrated over a five-year period that she had not used drugs or alcohol, had become extremely active in AA, had sought private counseling and successfully completed a lengthy Mercer County TASC project, the Commissioner determined that she had demonstrated such rehabilitation that her teaching credentials could be restored. See, Dept. of Education v. Skwanek, OAL Docket No. EDU 1045-91, decided October 25, 1991. Thus, each case must be reviewed on its own individual set of facts.

The stipulation of settlement submitted in this case reveals the following positive aspects of the proposal to maintain respondent in his employment. First, even though Andriola was charged with possession of a controlled dangerous substance, there was no criminal conviction and the Board after certifying the charge determined not to suspend him from his custodial duties. He has continued to perform as head custodian assigned to the Board's administration building.

When respondent appeared in Orange Municipal Court, he was permitted to enter the pretrial intervention program and was placed on supervisory treatment for a period of six months, during which time he reported to the Essex County Probation Department The reports of his probation officer all note his positive adjustment, his openness and honesty as to his weekend drinking problem as well as the isolated, one-time instance of cocaine possession. During that supervisory period he submitted to urine monitoring on a random basis which showed no evidence of further drug use. He also attended AA meetings and has agreed to continue to attend them on a regular basis.

In addition, both before and after the incident, respondent has received positive assessments of his performance and his attendance at work has been excellent. As of September 1, 1991, he had accumulated 55 sick days. Commendations on respondent's behalf also have been submitted by the Board's director of special services and by its former superintendent of schools. Respondent's work station is the administration building and therefore he has no regularized, significant contact with the student population.

Finally, at no time throughout these proceedings has respondent denied the conduct complained of, or otherwise attempted to justify it. To the contrary, he has taken the position that he is most fortunate to have been able to obtain help for his substance abuse and is convinced that he has demonstrated total rehabilitation.

In respect to the specific terms of the proposed settlement, respondent agrees that for a period of six months following the date of the Commissioner's approval, he shall continue to submit himself to a schedule of alcohol and drug testing and counseling as determined by the Director of the Orange Drug and Alcohol Abuse Program. Respondent will pay the entry and session fees for participation in this program. For its part, the Board has determined that in consideration of its agreement to withdraw the tenure charge, Andriola will not contest the withholding of his 1992-93 salary and adjustment increments.

The stipulation of settlement and the supporting documents are attached to this initial decision and speak for themselves. Clearly, on its face, the drug-related conduct in which respondent engaged in March 1990 was serious. As noted, the Commissioner, the State Board, the courts and the legislature all look severely upon conduct by school employees which involves drugs. Nevertheless, given the totality of the circumstances, I agree that Andriola has demonstrated that he is rehabilitated and no purpose would be served by rejecting the settlement and requiring this case to proceed to plenary hearing with its attendant costs in terms of fiscal and human resources. Certainly, Andriola's employment as a custodian poses no threat to the student body, particularly given his work station at the administration building.

In recommending that the Commissioner approve the settlement in this case, I am aware of decisions wherein the Commissioner has rejected settlements which involve, as here, agreement by the respondent to have increments withheld. See, e.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Mary Katherine Kennedy, School District of the Township of Barnegat, Ocean County, decided August 21, 1981; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Fred Calabrese, School District of the Borough of Ridgefield, Bergen County, decided April 5, 1982; Sisto v. Bd. of Ed. of Kenilworth, OAL Docket No. EDU 3942-87, decided February 9, 1988. In those cases the Commissioner rejected settlements of tenure cases which involved the withholding of an increment as an alternative penalty upon the basis that such a resolution either presupposes a finding of malconduct whereby the Board would improperly step into the role of prosecutor and judge, or where the approval would bind a future board to restore an increment.

However, I believe the particular circumstances of this case are distinguishable. In this case, unlike in Kennedy and Calabrese, there was no denial by Andriola of the facts underlying the charge of unbecoming conduct. Thus, there is no factual dispute requiring a plenary hearing on the "merits." Here, the conduct was admitted and I believe the Commissioner fairly can review the documentation to determine that a fitting sanction would be the withholding of an increment rather than dismissal or some other alternative penalty.

So too, the problem in Sisto was that the successor Board would have been obliged to reinstate a previously withheld increment if the teacher's performance was satisfactory. Here, of course, Andriola is agreeing in advance to the withholding and thus there is no prejudice to the Board's or to the public interest.

In short, the terms of the settlement reached by the parties are appropriate and result in a resolution which is in the best interests of the Board, Andriola and the public, including the students in Orange. I therefore recommend that the Commissioner approve the settlement.

Accordingly, I have reviewed the record and terms of the settlement and FIND:

1. The parties voluntarily have agreed to the terms of the settlement as evidenced by the signatures of the parties and/or counsel which appear on the stipulation of settlement; and

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy, is in the public interest and is consistent with law.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

This Agreement is made this 13th day of April 1992, by and between the Board of Education of the City of Orange, with offices at 369 Main Street, Orange, New Jersey 07050, hereinafter referred to as the "Board"

AND

Conrad Andriola, residing at 18 South Jefferson Street, Orange, New Jersey 07050, hereinafter referred to as "Andriola"

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, Andriola is a tenured custodian employed in the School District of the City of Orange, and

WHEREAS, on December 18, 1990, tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a custodian were filed against Andriola based upon:

(a) Andriola's arrest, in March, 1990 for possession of a controlled dangerous substance to wit: cocaine (one white druggist fold) in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10) (Exhibit R-1);

(b) Andriola's subsequent application for, and admission to, The Pretrial Intervention Program, as a first offender, and

WHEREAS, on January 22, 1991, the Board certified the charge of conduct unbecoming a custodian to the Commissioner of Education for a hearing, and

WHEREAS, at the time the Board resolved to certify the charge to the Commissioner of Education, it did not elect to suspend Andriola from his custodian's duties pursuant to N.J.S

18A:6-14, and consequently, he has continued to perform his duties as Head Custodian assigned to the Board's Administration Building, and

WHEREAS, in lieu of proceeding with the tenure charges in accordance with the Tenure Employee's Hearing Law, the Board and Andriola desire to enter into an agreement settling the dispute and, subject to certain conditions, permitting Andriola to remain in the employ of the Board, and

WHEREAS, the Board and Andriola acknowledge that the terms of this Agreement are contingent upon the review and approval of both the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education, and

WHEREAS, in reviewing and determining whether to approve the terms of settlement in this matter, Andriola, without objection from the Board, submits the following facts and exhibits in demonstration of why this Settlement Agreement should be approved:

1. Andriola was placed on supervisory treatment by the Orange Municipal Court for a period of 6 months (R-1)(R-4) during which time he reported to the Essex County Probation Department (R-5)- (R-8);

2. The reports of the probation officers notes his positive adjustment, and his openness and honesty as to what was a weekend drinking problem, as well as an isolated instance of cocaine use. During his supervisory treatment Andriola submitted himself to urine monitoring, which testing showed no evidence of further drug use. Moreover, he regularly attended Alcoholics Anonymous Meetings for purposes of addressing the alcohol problem (R-5) (R-8);

3. Andriola has and will continue to attend Alcoholics Anonymous on a regular basis. He was, moreover, prepared to produce witnesses attesting to his regular attendance and positive efforts and adjustments in this respect;

4. Before the filing and certification of tenure charges, Andriola received extremely positive assessments of his work performance (R-3);

5. During the pendency of these tenure charges, Andriola has continued to receive extremely positive assessments of his work performance (R-2) (R-9);

6. During the pendency of these tenure charges, Andriola's attendance at work has been excellent (R-10) (R-11) and he has 55 accumulated sick days as of September 1, 1991;

7. Andriola has received positive character references from the Board's former Superintendent of Schools (R-7) and its Director of Special Services (R-6). Moreover, Andriola's present direct Supervisor was prepared to testify about Andriola's good work performance and why he is an asset to the district.

8. Andriola's work station at the school district's Administration Building does not require his regular or frequent contact with students. There is no evidence to suggest that any students have knowledge of this incident, or that Andriola's continued employment, in the face of his addressing his health problem, would serve to portray an improper role model.

9. At no time throughout these proceedings has Andriola sought to deny the conduct complained of. To the contrary, it has been Andriola's position that he is thankful he was able to obtain help and that the above facts and evidence show clearly and convincingly that he has rehabilitated himself in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1(e); and

WHEREAS, in view of the above, the parties reasonably believe that interests of the Commissioner of Education and the public shall be served by the settlement of this matter,

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promise of the parties and in exchange for the consideration more particularly noted below, it is hereby agreed:

1. Andriola agrees that for a period of six (6) month from the date the Commissioner of Education approves this matter he shall submit himself to a schedule of alcohol and drug testing and counseling as determined by the Director of the Orange Drug and Alcohol Abuse Program, 301 Main Street, Suite #1, Orange, New Jersey. Andriola shall be responsible for paying the entry fee and session fees for his participation in this program.

2. Andriola agrees to a withholding of his 1992-93 salary and adjustment increments in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14.

3. Andriola shall continue in the employ of the Board as a tenured custodian.

4. The Board and Andriola acknowledge that the terms of this Agreement are contingent upon the review and approval of both the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education. In the event that either agency disapproves of the terms of settlement, this Agreement shall be null and void and the parties shall return to the same positions which they held prior to this settlement.

5. The parties recognize that each has been represented by legal counsel of his or its own choosing and that each signs this Agreement as their own voluntary act and deed, and that they fully understand the duties and obligations enumerated herein.

6. This Agreement shall be subject to the laws of State of New Jersey.

7. All terms of this Agreement are deemed material. This document may not be altered, amended or modified or revoked except by an instrument executed in writing by the parties.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have hereunto set their hands and seals the date and year aforesaid.

THE COURT: Conrad Andriola.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Your Honor, Mr. Andriola is -- has no priors of any kind. I'm asking you to consider -- permitting him to enter into a conditional discharge program without benefit of --

THE COURT: No.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: The Shackleford option?

THE COURT: I wouldn't care about the Shackleford option. We treat each case independently. And Mr. Andriola is entitled to first offender.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Yes, he is.

THE COURT: But what bothers me more than anything else --

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Yes? Is what?

THE COURT: And I think you know what it is.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: What?

THE COURT: What do you do for a living?

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Board of Education.

THE COURT: Yeah. Around the kids.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Well, what --

THE COURT: That bothers me more than anything else.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: What gives rise to your --

THE COURT: I mean, that bothers me that --

MR. ANDRIOLA: I'm not with the kids, Your Honor. work in the administration building.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. ANDRIOLA: I'm not around kids all day.

THE COURT: I'll give him first offender. What about that?

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: All right.

THE COURT: First offender.

MR. ANDRIOLA: And I'm receiving treatment as soon as possible.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: That's true. I mean, the man is 31 years old, no priors of any description. He's admitting himself voluntarily.

THE WITNESS: I tried for three weeks. It seems when I drink I get in trouble. But I know I can't do it by myself so I'm going to get help.

THE COURT: If he's going to go to a rehab --

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Yes.

THE COURT: -- I don't know which one it is. He says there's alcohol.

MR. ANDRIOLA: They have out patient recovery centers.

THE COURT: He's been charged with --

THE WITNESS: And they do both.

THE COURT: Both?

MR. ANDRIOLA: Yes.

THE COURT: You're going to have to tell them this, both. The problem is there on both.

MR. ANDRIOLA: Yes, both, definitely. It seems, Your Honor, when I do get in trouble is when I, when I'm drinki And I know I have a problem and I want to take care of it.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: You wouldn't consider suspending the proceedings pending the -- his release from the --

THE COURT: Uh.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: -- treatment center? You know, there aren't too many people who come before you with a plan. You know, most people just want to get the minimum in penalties. He's already arranged to address his problem.

You could attach that as a condition of his probation.

Judge, --

MR. ANDRIOLA: Your Honor?

THE COURT: Yes?

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: This is his dad. He'd like to say a few words.

MR. ANDRIOLA: This is my son, and this is the first time he's ever been in trouble with the, with the law. And I will take full responsibility to make sure that he goes to the rehabs and whatever is necessary. He has been really a good kid all these years.

And this is the first time he's really been in trouble. And it's the drinking problem. And I would make sure that he attends all these classes. And anything else I c possibly do.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Judge, I wouldn't ask you for the extremely -- for the extreme option of no plea if it wasn't for the fact that he does have this support and this plan. This is not something I would ask on behalf of every defendant.

The first offender program is breaking up. Except in this case I think he deserves a little more.

THE COURT: All right. I'll tell you what, I'll do it just the same way Judge Fullilove did it.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Thank you.

THE COURT: He's admitting that it was drugs, and he knew what it was.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Yes.

THE COURT: I'll give him six months supervisory. $500 DETA, $50 laboratory, $45 application fee.

Let the record indicate I'm giving him a copy of the complaint.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Thank you very much, Your Honor.

MR. ANDRIOLA: Thank you, Your Honor, for your leniency. We really appreciate it.

THE COURT: Let him have this. Let him see the probation officer. He has to pay the $45.

DEFENSE ATTORNEY: Today.

MR. ANDRIOLA: Thank you, Your Honor.

RE: Conrad Adriola

To Whom It May Concern:

I have known the above named person (custodian) for the past eight (8) years as an employee of the Orange Board of Education. During these years he was always courteous, very responsible and responsive to all request from my office. At no time during the eight years was there any evidence of him being under the influence of controlled substance. Therefore, I do not hesitate to recommend him for continuance of employment.

Since my Department is responsible for staff assistance I was unaware that he needed any such help. His demeanor and appearance did not suggest he needed this kind of assistance.

If you need any further information please feel free to call me.

Sincerely,

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is being written on behalf of Conrad Andriola whose job performance I had knowledge of from 1983 until my leaving in 1989 in my previous position as central office administrator for the Orange Public Schools.

During that time, Conrad consistently demonstrated an above average, if not exceptional, work ethic. He was conscientious, dedicated, productive, considerate and honest! I recall Conrad always both willing and able to do everything that was asked of him.

In my role as Superintendent of Schools, I worked many days late into the night. Conrad was always present and never complained. One of many things I remember about Conrad was that he always kept working during these late hours, even when all he was responsible for was to unlock and lock the doors. Weekends were no different. If we needed him, he was always there.

As a person I found Conrad to be genuine in his love for the system, in his respect for the staff and his concern for the children. His loyalty and dedication to the system, in my opinion, was second to none. If I were given the opportunity, I would hire Conrad to work for me right now.

It is without reservation that I give Conrad Andriola my highest endorsement and rate him in the top ten percent of custodians I have known in my twenty six years as an administrator.

Sincerely,

Patrick J. Pelosi
Superintendent of Schools

EDWARD CERATO,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Anthony P. Sciarrillo, Esq., for petitioner

Robin T. McMahon, Esq., for respondent
(Marvin L. Comick, General Counsel, Newark Board of Education)

Record Closed: May 19, 1992 Decided: 5/29/92

BEFORE ARNOLD SAMUELS, ALJ:

On July 2, 1991, petitioner Edward Cerato filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education, which contested the respondent's withholding of his salary for the period from May 6, 1991 to May 31, 1991. (Two additional claims contained in the petition were previously resolved between the parties and were no longer considered to be contested issues.) In defense of its action against petitioner, the Board claimed that salary was not paid to petitioner for the period in question because of his failure to report to a new assignment in a different location.

On July 30, 1991, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing and determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held on November 4, 1991, and a prehearing order was entered, defining and limiting the issue to be decided, fixing a hearing date on March 26, 1992, providing for discovery and regulating other procedural aspects of the forthcoming hearing.

The hearing was held, as scheduled, on March 26, 1992 at the Office of Administrative Law in Newark, New Jersey. Four witnesses testified, including the petitioner. Documentary exhibits were also marked in evidence, and the hearing was concluded. Posthearing briefs and memoranda were requested from counsel within 30 days after the hearing. However, the parties continued to confer for purposes of settlement, and on April 16, 1992, this judge was informed by counsel that a settlement had been reached. A written stipulation of settlement was prepared, signed by the parties, and filed with the Office of Administrative Law on May 19, 1992. A copy of the stipulation of settlement is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

Having reviewed and considered the issue involved in the dispute, it is CONCLUDED that the parties have voluntarily and knowingly agreed to the settlement, as evidenced by the attached stipulation. It is further CONCLUDED that the settlement is fair and fully dispositive of all issues in controversy between the parties.

It is therefore ORDERED that the settlement be approved and the matter dismissed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF ANNE BOYD, MATAWAN-	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ABERDEEN REGIONAL SCHOOL	:	DECISION
DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:

Board certified charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher against respondent, tenured elementary teacher with 25 years of service, for alleged use of corporal punishment in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

In light of testimony of witnesses and such cases as In re Ostergren, ALJ found unbecoming conduct charge was true but as it was a single incident and not premeditated, cruel, or vicious, the conduct did not warrant dismissal from position. ALJ concluded proper penalty was forfeiture of 120 days' pay already withheld and denial of increments for 1991-92 school year.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6394-91
AGENCY DKT. NO. 219-6/91

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ANNE BOYD, MATAWAN-ABERDEEN SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Vincent C. DeMaio, Esq., for petitioner (DeMaio & DeMaio, attorneys)

Arnold M. Mellk, Esq., for respondent (Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 13, 1992 Decided: May 21, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Tenure charges against a teaching staff member alleging corporal punishment of pupils.

On April 15, 1991, the deputy superintendent of schools of the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District preferred tenure charges against Anne Boyd, respondent. On June 10, 1991, the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District Board of Education (Board) reviewed a copy of the charges, the evidence in support of the charges and a copy of Boyd's sworn statement in opposition. The Board determined that the charges and the evidence in support of the charges are sufficient, if true in fact, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. The Board secretary filed the charges and all papers in support thereof with the Commissioner of Education on June 14, 1991. The respondent filed her answer on June 21, 1991.

On June 27, 1991, the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A prehearing conference was held, by telephone, on September 20, 1991. It was determined that the issue to be resolved is whether the charges or any of them are true in fact and, if true in fact, sufficient to warrant reduction in salary or removal from position.

The specific charges are:

1. Anne Boyd did on March 11, 1991, administer corporal punishment at the Lloyd Road Elementary School, Aberdeen, New Jersey to a student E.B., by the use of unnecessary and unwarranted force and with the intent to punish him in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

2. Anne Boyd did during the week of March 11, 1991 engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, by the following conduct:

   (A) Discussing with her classes and/or with groups of students the March 11 incident with E.B. in a manner which was ridiculing in nature and which prompted concern on the part of the students;

   (B) By interrogating students who participated in the follow-up investigation by the school administration of the incident involving E.B.; said interrogation by the teacher was done in a threatening and intimidating manner and created a hostile environment in her classroom;

   (C) By taking an individual student out of the classroom and discussing with that student a claim that the student was circulating rumors about the teacher and the incident involving E.B.

3. Anne Boyd, at various times prior to the week of March 11, 1991 did engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, by addressing students in an inappropriate manner, ridiculing individual students/staff by calling them "stupid" and/or "jerk", or referring to them in other belittling terms.

The matter was heard on February 18 and 26, 1992, at the Aberdeen Township Municipal Court. Counsel filed posthearing memorandums and the record closed on April 13, 1992.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE

Counsel provided the following joint stipulations of facts and documents admitted in evidence by consent.

1. Anne Boyd is a tenured teacher in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District.

2. Charges were filed against her by Michael K. Klavon, Deputy Superintendent of Schools and were certified by the Board of Education (Exhibit A, Charges; Exhibit B, Certificate of Determination).

3. The written statement of position of Anne Boyd (Exhibit C).

4. Anne Boyd was suspended without pay.

5. Anne Boyd has received unemployment compensation from the state of New Jersey.

Fourteen pupils witnesses testified. E.B., the pupil principally involved, stated that on March 11, 1991, he was in front of the respondent's classroom door during a class change. He and another pupil blocked the door with their feet. Pupils in the classroom could not exit. The respondent approached the door and E.B. and his friend backed away. The first pupil at the door exited, followed by the respondent. The respondent stated, "How dare you?" and struck E.B. on his left cheek with her open right hand. She pushed him farther away and he hit a drinking fountain. The respondent directed him to the school office and he went.

E.B. spoke to the school nurse who called the principal. E.B. stated that a teacher hit him. He was crying while at the nurse's office. The principal took E.B. to the principal's office where they talked for a brief time.

E.B. recalled speaking to the deputy superintendent of schools several times, but could not recall the dates other than to say that it was soon after the incident. The witness also reported a meeting with his parent, the Board attorney, the deputy assistant superintendent and a court reporter. E.B. called blocking the door a game and acknowledges that he was suspended from school in connection with the incident.

The deputy superintendent who investigated the charges made by E.B. stated that the child's mother came to his office and complained. The deputy superintendent spoke to the building principal, the school nurse, a representative from the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS), the Board attorney and E.B.'s parents' attorney.

The witness set up interviews and received names of pupils who were in or near the area. He contacted their parents and interviewed the pupils one-by-one, with at least one parent present in each case. As pupils gave statements, additional names came up. The respondent's union representative wanted all pupils in her class interviewed. The deputy superintendent set up those interviews through the building principal. The respondent was not present at pupil interviews.

The witness interviewed the respondent with a union representative present. He then filed the present charges.

The 13 other children who testified, some of them emotionally, varied in their recollection of the event. J.S. testified similarly to E.B. He also stated the respondent did not discuss the matter in class that day. Later, however, she tried to make a joke of it.

The witness now recalls the respondent "bumped" K.C., a pupil in her room, out of the way in order to get at the door. The witness also recalled a meeting with the deputy superintendent, Board attorney, parents and children. He recalls the deputy superintendent and Board attorney stressed the importance of telling the truth.

M.O. testified that he was approaching the respondent's classroom when the incident occurred. He saw E.B. block the door with a foot. He also stated he saw the respondent exit and strike E.B. She pushed E.B. into a water fountain and ordered E.B. to the school office. The witness did not notice E.B. crying. He recalled that the water fountain was to the left of the classroom door, that the door opens into the hallway toward the right as one faces the door. There were perhaps six pupils in the area and some noise. There was less noise when the respondent appeared. The witness did not see the respondent strike E.B. He stated he heard a slap and saw a push. He returned to the respondent's class after the incident. She did not discuss the incident that day. However, on another day, she asked pupils what they said to school authorities. The respondent said words to the effect that she knew pupils gave information to the principal.

J.O'H. stated she was in the hallway near the respondent's room at the time of the incident. She saw the respondent exit, and push or strike E.B.'s chest. E.B. went into the water fountain and moved to one side. The respondent sent him to the office with S.J. E.B. was in front of her and, in her opinion, looked scared. The witness could not say how many pupils were in the hall at the time. She did see E.B.'s foot against the door. Pupils inside the classroom could not open the door. The witness could not recall any exchange of words between E.B. and the respondent. There was no discussion among pupils in the hallway.

K.C. stated he was the first pupil at the respondent's door trying to leave the classroom immediately before the incident. The door has a window and the witness saw E.B. outside. The witness tried to open the door and E.B. blocked it. Both boys were laughing. K.C. pushed the door firmly. The respondent came to the door, pushed him aside and forced the door open. The respondent made a slap toward E.B.'s face and pushed him backward. He went into the water fountain. The respondent sent E.B. to the office and the witness could not recall anyone going with E.B. The witness recalled no further mention of the incident by the respondent.

S.J. stated he was in the hallway coming from one class, going to another. He and E.B. blocked the door to the respondent's classroom. The respondent came to the door, pushed aside a pupil who was standing there and forced the door open. As she exited the room, she shoved E.B. who went backwards, but did not fall. The respondent said only, "How dare you?" E.B. said, "What about him?" meaning the witness. The respondent sent both boys to the school office.

In a subsequent class, the respondent mentioned the incident. She asked S.J. what he said about the incident to the deputy superintendent and principal. The witness was fairly sure the respondent mentioned statements under oath. She told her class, "I'm not in trouble."

Both in deposition and at hearing, the witness stated he does not believe the respondent slapped E.B.

W.H. stated he had the respondent for mathematics. He was immediately behind her in the classroom near the door at the end of the period. K.C. was in front of him. K.C. tried to open the door, but could not. The witness could not see from his vantage point why K.C. could not open the door. The respondent came over, told K.C. to move and tried to open the door. She "put a lot of force into it." The door opened rapidly. The respondent saw E.B., grabbed him at the shoulders, shook him and pushed him into lockers. The witness could not recall the exchange between the respondent and E.B. He does recall that E.B. was sent to the school office. This witness stated the water fountain was to the right of the door. He did not see E.B. go into the water fountain. He saw the respondent push hard to open the door and later learned that E.B. was holding the door closed. He saw no slap, but saw the respondent's hands on E.B.'s shoulders. He heard no exchange at that time.

He later learned of a rumor about the respondent being fired when the respondent mentioned it. The witness recalled that the respondent spoke to other children at the time of the incident, but he cannot remember who they were.

A.C. testified about coming from reading class and going to the respondent's classroom. She saw E.B. next to the door with other pupils. She saw the respondent open the door and ask E.B. what he was doing. The witness stated the respondent "abused" E.B. She hit his face and pushed him into a fountain. The witness recalls no conversation other than the respondent asking, "What are you doing?" The respondent sent E.B. to the office. She believes E.B. went with S.J. She could recall no discussion of the incident in class that day or on any subsequent day.

This witness believed the water fountain was to the left of the door. The witness made statements to the assistant superintendent but did not discuss the matter with E.B. or S.J.

C.B. testified that she recalled the incident. She was going to the respondent's class and saw nothing of the incident. Upon entering the classroom everything seemed normal. There was some conversation about the incident among pupils, but the witness cannot recall what was said.

On a subsequent occasion, the respondent talked about the incident. Although the witness could not recall exactly what was said, she believed the gist was that it was unfair for people to say the respondent had done something. The witness recalls the respondent brought up the subject. She also asked pupil witnesses what they thought about the incident.

K.G. testified that she was in the respondent's classroom at the time of the incident. The first pupil at the door could not open it. Then a male pupil, K.C., opened the door, but it closed again. The respondent told pupils to get out of the way and opened the door. She took two boys outside and pushed one into the water fountain.

The witness sits by the door at the end of a table. She could not see all of the action in the hallway. She heard the respondent yell and saw the respondent "take" E.B. by the neck and push him around the doorway. From that point forward she could see nothing.

The witness recalled no discussion that day of the incident. A few days later, the respondent stated that she should have started taking karate lessons. The witness spoke to the deputy superintendent after the respondent made the karate remark. The witness believes E.B. put his foot into the open doorway. She also believes K.C. opened the door and did not actually see the respondent touch E.B.

J.S. stated she was in the respondent's classroom at the time of the incident. Because taking a test, she sat near the door. The respondent asked her to open the door. The pupil opened the door and turned around. Almost immediately, the door closed. The respondent asked her again to open the door. K.C. opened the door before she could get to it. E.B. stopped the door with his foot. The witness then turned as the respondent went through the doorway. She could not see into the hallway. She heard the respondent yell and heard E.B. "like cry."

The witness had more classes with the respondent that day. Nothing was said about the incident. Approximately a week later, the respondent asked pupils what office personnel had asked them. She told pupils to raise their hands if they had been called to the school office about the incident. The respondent said she was not getting into one bit of trouble and that she would get a whole script of what pupils had said. The witness told one of her friends not to say anything.

The witness also recalled that people from another classroom came into the hall at the time of the incident to see what was going on. She was firm in her testimony that K.C. opened the door part way and E.B. caught it. The respondent then pushed it completely open. Although the incident caused much conversation in the school, that conversation did not influence her testimony.

D.C. stated that she was in the respondent's classroom during the incident. She saw the respondent try to open the door. The witness had a clear view of the door. The door eventually opened, but the witness could not see or hear the event. A few days later, the respondent said something about the incident. She can't recall if the respondent asked questions. The witness recalled speaking to the deputy superintendent but can't recall telling him about the respondent questioning her. The respondent did say witness were spreading rumors about her. The respondent asked the witness about spreading rumors and the witness denied it. The respondent seemed to accept her answer.

K.M. stated she was inside the classroom near the door at the time of the incident. K.C. tried to open the door but could not. The respondent did. The witness could not see outside into the hallway. After the respondent opened the door, the witness heard some things but did not see the incident. She does not believe there was any comment or question by the respondent on the day of the incident. She did recall the respondent making a remark about karate. The witness took it as a joke or at least an exaggeration.

T.W. testified that she was inside the respondent's classroom in the corner near the doorway. She could see people at the door, but could not see the door itself. She saw the respondent come to the door and move someone out of the way. The respondent leaned against the door and then fell through the doorway. As the witness left the room, she saw the respondent hug E.B. and say, "I'm sorry, I'm sorry." The respondent and some pupils were laughing.

The witness could recall no discussion of the door incident. There were rumors around the school about the incident and at one point the respondent announced to her class that the rumor was not true that the respondent had slapped a child purposely. The witness stated she did not know what rumor the respondent was talking about until the respondent explained it involved E.B.

Anne Boyd testified that she has been a teacher for more than 25 years and for 23 years in Aberdeen-Matawan. She has had no previous disciplinary action against her, no increments withheld and there have been no accusations of corporal punishment or improper touching. The Board alleges she corporally punished E.B. unnecessarily and with unwarranted force. She did not do so. She had no intent to punish E.B. physically.

On the date of the incident, she was teaching mathematics. As the period ended, K.C., at the door, could not open the classroom door and he so advised her.

She tried the door and could not open it. She told whoever was holding the door to stop. She pushed as hard as she could for perhaps a minute. The door suddenly opened. She flew through the door into E.B. in the hallway. Their bodies collided, but there was no other physical contact at that time. She may have put an arm on his shoulder and said "I'm sorry you did this, you must go to the office" or words to that effect.

The respondent denies slapping, pushing or striking E.B. She denies any intent to punish or to physically hurt him. She sent E.B. to the school office and he returned to class later that day. She told him that what he did could have been dangerous to others.

The respondent denies any discussion or use of ridicule at any time. Although she did discuss the incident with her homeroom class, she did not interrogate, threaten or intimidate pupils. Pupils were upset. DYFS personnel were in the building. Pupils asked if the respondent were going to be fired. The witness responded that she was not. Pupils wanted to discuss the matter and the witness stressed the importance of telling the truth. Later, and during a mathematics class, she took D.G. into the hallway and asked her about rumors. D.G. denied telling rumors and the respondent returned the child to class. The respondent did tell her class, "I want you to know I did not hit E.B. and I am not going to be fired" or words to that effect.

In recounting the incident a second time, the witness was quite specific about not being able to open the door on her first attempt. She did not know E.B. was on the other side at that time. She again tried to open the door and the door opened suddenly. As it flew open, she flew out into the hallway with it. Many pupils were present in the hallway because classes were changing. The witness does not know if any pupils were close enough to be touched by the door. She flew into E.B., but does not recall if the door hit him. Before the door opened she surmised someone was holding it closed. After it opened, she knew E.B. had held the door because as she was flying into him, he was flying backwards. The witness believes E.B. was the closest pupil to the door. The respondent says she did not grab or touch E.B. When she flew into him, she probably touched him somewhere, and it could have been his neck because "I was propelled into him." When she collided with E.B., she believes he went sideways. She has no recall that he hit a water fountain or lockers. She does not recall saying, "I'm sorry." She may have said, "How dare you?" She believes she said, "I'm sorry, you'll have to go to the office." E.B. said S.J. "was doing it, too." S.J. approached her and said he was also blocking the doorway. E.B. went to the office when sent.

When the witness went to the office to write a disciplinary slip, S.J. was there; however, she cannot remember sending him to the office.

At some point, the respondent learned the deputy superintendent was interviewing many or all pupils. She did not ask pupils what they said and she did not ask pupils what they were asked. She did discuss the matter with her class because they were expressing concern. She believed it was appropriate to discuss in class because many children were upset. She did ask if anyone wanted to say something. No one volunteered and some expressed a fear of questioning. The witness told her class that it was important to tell the truth in this matter.

The respondent probably made the karate remark in the hallway coming from lunch. She cannot recall exactly what she said. Her remark had nothing to do with the E.B. incident.

The witness questioned D.G. in the hallway about spreading rumors because she did not want to discuss the matter in class. The witness hoped she could quell talk about disciplinary action. D.G. did not appear nervous at the time of the conversation.

The witness could not recall if the deputy superintendent asked her if she discussed the incident with her class. Nor could she recall the deputy superintendent saying anything about class discussions. She denies she told the deputy superintendent that she mentioned karate in class. She could not recall telling the deputy superintendent that the karate remark was a joke.

Photographs were introduced showing the interior and exterior views of the respondent's classroom door (R-1, R-2). The photographs show that the glass portion of the door is nearly, but not completely, obscured by posters.

On rebuttal, the deputy superintendent stated that he had a question and answer session with the respondent on March 14, 1991. Two union representatives were present. He asked the respondent to describe the incident. He asked if she could identify who was holding the door and she stated that she could. While the door was being opened she saw a sneaker and knew the child was E.B. because he wore unique sneakers. She opened the door and came through the doorway. E.B. was going backwards. She grabbed him to steady him. She may have touched his neck. While opening the door and moving forward she said, "What you're doing is dangerous."

The respondent told the deputy superintendent she had had no discussion of the incident with her class and it would be inappropriate to do so. She stated she made a comment about karate but as a joke. She stated that she had asked questions of only one child.

ARGUMENTS

Petitioner's Arguments

The Board maintains there is agreement on some matters. As a sixth grade class was about to change classrooms, E.B. and perhaps one other pupil engaged in a prank. E.B., who was about to enter the respondent's room as the pupils in her prior period were about to leave, placed his foot against the door in a way that kept it from opening. E.B. was fully aware that another pupil was trying to open the door so that he and his classmates could exit. E.B. admits all of this and was suspended from school for his conduct. It is also undisputed that the respondent ultimately opened the door and entered into the hallway where E.B. was.

What is disputed are the events that took place in the hallway. The witnesses were E.B., the respondent and several students, some of whom were in the hallway and some of whom were in the classroom. The pupil testimony was inconsistent on some details. This is completely understandable in consideration of the fact that they did not all have the same viewing angle and that human observation is less than perfect. Sixth grade pupils do not make poised, articulate witnesses, particularly in the presence of an authority figure such as their teacher. This is perhaps accentuated in the strange environment of a courtroom. Notwithstanding the variances in testimony, something more than an accidental collision took place in the hallway. While the respondent may contend that students have colluded and collaborated against their teacher, the Board submits that if they had done so, their stories would much more nearly match than they do.

The respondent claims she did not lose her temper and yell, despite testimony to the contrary. In order to cover that base, she remained breathless and silent for a while. Only subsequently did she recover enough to ask E.B., "How dare you?" The physical contact with E.B., she states, was accidental and unintended. However, on balance, the testimony of the pupils establishes that the respondent lost her temper as a result of the prank played by E.B. and that she did have inappropriate physical contact with him. Slapping in anger without anything more is sufficient to constitute corporal punishment.

Further, the respondent engaged in unbecoming conduct in the classroom subsequent to the incident. Her testimony attempted to minimize her participation in interrogating her pupils as to what they told the administrator who was investigating the initial charge. She further denied that she had ever discussed the charges in a ridiculing manner, specifically stating that her discussion about karate took place in the hall coming from lunch and did not take place in the classroom. She had no clear recollection of what triggered the conversation, but stated clearly it had nothing to do with E.B.

One pupil said there was a discussion of karate but that she felt the respondent was joking or exaggerating. Another pupil testified that the respondent made an in-class comment about karate and that the pupil believed the respondent was serious. These varying reactions demonstrate the inappropriateness of the comment and that, contrary to the respondent's fussy recollection, the comment was made in class.

With respect to her alleged out-of-class interrogation of pupils, she admitted that she called one pupil, D.G., out of class into the corridor to inquire about spreading rumors. With respect to in-class interrogation, the respondent said the only time there was an in-class discussion was when it was triggered by questions from the pupils. As a response, she asked if anyone wanted to talk about anything that was bothering them and "Nobody seemed to want to. So then what I said was, I said, well, you know, the important thing is to tell the truth in these situations and not tell a falsehood. An that was the extent of the discussion . . . ." (T II 68).

However, this was inconsistent with the testimony of several pupils. One, for example, testified that on the day following his meeting with the deputy superintendent who was investigating the incident, the entire class was interrogated by the respondent. Another pupil testified that the respondent asked him about his testimony in class and she stated she was "not in any trouble because I really didn't really mean to hurt him. I just want you to know that." (T II 93-94).

Still another member of the class stated that after everyone was questioned at the office, the respondent asked them what questions they were asked. (T II 157).

The testimony of the pupils establishes that the respondent's recollection of in-class interrogation is faulty. It clearly took place and not in the context she attempted to create. Instead of trying to alleviate student concerns about her, what occurred was that she was determined to find out what the pupils had told the administrator about her. This is inappropriate behavior for a classroom teacher. If, as the respondent testified, only some of the pupils had already spoken to school authorities, her behavior clearly intended to intimidate and influence by warning the pupils that she would find out what they had said about her. Even those who had testified were intimidated and that is why J.S. warned a friend not to tell anything. Pupils realize that teachers with their ability to impose discipline and their influence over grades and extra curriculur activities can affect them in very important ways.

The respondent stated it was not appropriate to discuss the E.B. incident in class when she said, "Normally I don't believe I would have, but I was upset that day." (T II 65).

The Board submits that the respondent was guilty of both corporal punishment and conduct unbecoming a teacher and that appropriate discipline should be imposed.

Respondent's Arguments

The respondent argues that she did not administer corporal punishment to E.B. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 forbids any person engaged or employed in a school or educational institution to inflict or cause to be inflicted corporal punishment upon a pupil, but any such person may, within the scope of his employment , use and apply such force as is reasonable and necessary to quell a disturbance threatening physical injury to others, to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of the pupil, for the purpose of self defense and for the protection of persons or property. These acts are not construed as corporal punishment in the meaning of the statute.

The respondent contends that intent is an essential ingredient of the offense of corporal punishment by analogy to assault. Liability cannot attach in the absence of either guilty intent or negligence. State v. Chiarello, 69 N.J. Super. 479, 494 (App. Div. 1961), certif. den. 36 N.J. 301 (1962). Also, the corporal punishment statute, being in derogation of common law and a penal act, must be strictly construed. Marley v. Borough of Palymra, 193 N.J. Super. 271, 291 (Law Div. 1983).

Because liability is precluded in the absence of guilty intent, the relevant standard for the finding of assault applies. A person is guilty of simple assault if he/she "attempts to cause or purposely, knowingly or recklessly causes bodily injury to another." N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1 (a). Culpability requires that the respondent has acted knowingly. The lack of culpability standard in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 requires knowing conduct. State v. Demarest, 252 N.J. Super. 323, 326-334 (App. Div. 1992). The appellate panel, in construing the offense of endangering the welfare of a child, N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4(a), held that the statute's lack of a culpability standard required proof that the defendant acted knowingly in order for there to be a conviction of endangering the welfare of a child. In the present case, the respondent can only be found to have violated N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 if she intended to punish E.B. corporally

It is uncontradicted that E.B. was holding the respondent's classroom door closed with his foot. It is also uncontradicted that two of the respondent's pupils said they could not open the door because of E.B.'s action. In these circumstances, the respondent went to the door and tried to open it but could not do so. She pushed as hard as she could and the door flew open, E.B. obviously having jumped away. The respondent "flew out the door", colliding with E.B. Shortly thereafter, she [illegible]er arm on E.B.'s shoulder and sent him to the office for his misbehavior. She has categorically denied slapping him, putting her hand on his throat, grabbing his shirt and pushing him, choking him, hitting him or striking him in anger.

Touching E.B. in these circumstances was an accidental collision caused by E.B.'s own inappropriate behavior. The respondent simply did her duty in trying to open the door. She intended no harm or corporal punishment.

Against the respondent's description of the event is the testimony of several pupils. E.B. said the respondent hit him across the face with an open hand, pushed him and grabbed his shirt. He added that he hit the water fountain. He denied discussing the incident with his classmates or friends at any time whatsoever.

J.S. testified that he saw the incident from the hallway outside the classroom. He told the deputy superintendent that the respondent hit K.C. inside the classroom. On cross-examination he changed his story and said the respondent bumped E.B., but did not hit him. Inspection of the photographs of the subject doorway suggest there could be no clear view of events in the classroom from the hallway. J.S. also contradicts E.B. regarding discussion of the incident between them. He admits to having talked about the incident with E.B. The remarkable similarity of description by the two youths of the incident certainly allows a negative inference to be drawn from their testimonies.

M.O., who was in the hallway, stated he could not see much because of the number of pupils who were outside the classroom door waiting to get in. He did state that he saw the respondent push E.B. into the water fountain.

J.O'H. was in the hallway at the time of the incident and saw E.B. holding the classroom door closed. She saw the respondent fly out of the room. The respondent contacted E.B. with her right hand, four to five inches below his throat.

K.C., a friend of E.B., was in the classroom when E.B. was holding the door closed. K.C. had been attempting to open the door and could not do so. Although K.C. had to have been behind the respondent at the time she exited the classroom, he said the respondent slapped E.B. He also admitted talking to other children about the incident. J.S., however, who was in the hall, testified about K.C. and the respondent leading one to the conclusion that K.C. and J.S. prepared their stories together.

S.J., who was identified as E.B.'s cohort in the door holding incident and was therefore in close proximity to E.B. at the time of his contact with the respondent, did not see the respondent slap E.B. In addition, S.J. testified that after the contact, he did not think that E.B. hit anything.

B.H. was in the classroom and saw that the respondent had to "put a lot of force" into getting the door open, and the door opened rapidly. He then stated that the respondent grabbed E.B. by the shoulders and started shaking him and pushed him into the lockers. He further stated he never saw the respondent slap E.B. Rather, the respondent went into E.B. with her hands on his shoulders.

A.C. testified she was in the hallway and she saw E.B. "standing next to the door and [K.] was next to him. Ms. Boyd comes to the door, opens the door and asks him what he was doing, on the side of the door, and she was abusing him." She added that "she hit him on the face, choking him with her hand on his throat and pushing him into the water fountain." However, A.C.'s lurid description is either false or confused. It can be assumed the E.B. and A.C. prepared their versions of the event together.

C.G. testified that she was in the classroom at the time the door was being held closed. She described the opening of the door as follows, "and then [K] . . . came and he opened the door and [E.B.] pushed free and the door and the teacher came over and they took, and she took and put him into the water fountain." She reiterated that K.C. opened the door and that it was open when the respondent got to it. She further said she saw the respondent take E.B. by the neck. However, on cross-examination, she admitted that she did not see anything that happened in the hallway between the respondent and E.B. The witness further admitted that her testimony was the result of having talked to other children about the incident.

T.W. testified that she was in class on the date of the incident and saw the respondent "trying, leaning against the door trying to get it open and all of a sudden she fell through . . . ." The next thing she observed was the respondent "hugging [E.B.] saying, I'm sorry . . . ."

The Commissioner of Education has long recognized the need to examine the testimony of children with great caution. Such caution is required here all the more because of the wildly conflicting statements of the pupil witnesses, their bias and the circumstances and fears created by the deputy superintendent's investigation.

The Board has made no principled argument in support of the corporal punishment charge. The respondent did not contravene N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, even if it were to be determined that her physical contact with E.B. was not inadvertent.

In this case, the Board has presented no credible evidence that can support a charge of corporal punishment. In fact, this charge is unwarranted and should be dismissed.

The Board has shown neither unbecoming conduct nor other just cause pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. The charge simply adds insult to injury. Accusing the respondent, as it does, of ridiculing students and intimidating and threatening them is beneath contempt. It is abundantly clear that any concern on the part of the pupils prompted by the incident of March 11 was due to the sledgehammer approach of the deputy superintendent in responding to Ms. B.'s complaint that her son had been hit.

Subsequently, the deputy superintendent spoke to the building principal, the nurse, called the Board's secretary, called DYFS, spoke to the superintendent, arranged for a court reporter to come to the school, spoke to E.B.'s attorney, proceeded to contact the parents of children whose names he obtained and arranged for the interrogation of the pupils at the grammar school. The deputy superintendent got around to contacting the respondent after he preferred the charges against her. In this context, the children came to the respondent with their concerns, a reasonable response given the circumstances.

In support of this charge, the Board has relied upon the testimony of five pupils. The Board apparently has referred to the respondent's discussion concerning karate as her discussing the charges in a ridiculing manner. The Board cites testimony of K.M. The relationship between the discussion and the ridiculing charge is incomprehensible. It should be noted that K.M. understood any discussion of karate to be a joke and an exaggeration. In addition, K.M. never believed that the respondent was learning karate in order to hurt the children.

C.G. testified that the respondent mentioned she should start karate lessons. The witness was led by counsel to testify that she took the discussion to be serious. She had nothing further to say about the discussion and remembered nothing further about any conversation in the classroom.

M.O.'s testimony did not go to intimidation or threats. According to M.O., when the respondent allegedly asked pupils what they had said to school authorities, he did not answer.

S.J.'s testimony about discussion in class after interrogations at the school office explains nothing more than the respondent has testified to herself. S.J. said that the respondent informed him in class that she was not in trouble, that she did not mean to hurt E. B. and she wanted S.J. to know that. This is consistent with the respondent's explanation of the need to deal with the matter.

Finally, the Board in support of subpart C of this charge presented D.G. Her testimony was that the respondent spoke to D.G. privately, out of the classroom, concerning rumors that the respondent was going to be fired because she had struck E.B., and that D.G. was spreading the rumor. D.G. was, in fact, aware of the rumors although she denied spreading them. Thereupon, the conversation with the respondent ceased.

Consistent with its lack of argument as to the corporal punishment charge, the Board has here made no principled argument in support of the unbecoming conduct charge. It has not meaningfully analyzed the testimony presented or cited any authority in support of its conclusion. Communications between the respondent and her students were the direct result of the deputy superintendent's response to Ms. B.'s complaint. The Board having certified these charges, in these circumstances, is a manifest abuse of its discretion.

The tenure charges against the respondent must be dismissed in their entirety. The Board has completely failed to prove the charges. The Board must be ordered and directed to reinstate the respondent to her teaching position along with her back pay, interest thereon, and all benefits and emoluments to which she is entitled.

DETERMINATION

Initially, the respondent's argument that intent is an essential ingredient of the offense of corporal punishment by analogy to assault is rejected. Chiarello, above, states, as argued, that intent is an essential ingredient of the crime of assault. The offered analogy, however, does not follow. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 is a civil statute and N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(a) is a criminal statute. As the respondent correctly notes, the corporal punishment statute must be strictly construed. Marley, above. However, it is to be strictly construed but not in a way that defeats the legislative purpose. Id. at 291. The legislative purpose has been explained in Tenure Hearing of Lomakin, 1971 S.L.D. 331, 334:

> While the Commissioner understands the exasperations and frustrations that often accompany the teacher's functions, he cannot condone resort to force and fear as appropriate procedures in dealing with pupils, even those whose recalcitrance appears to be open defiance. The Commissioner finds in the century-old statute prohibiting corporal punishment (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1) an underlying philosophy that an individual has a right not only to freedom from bodily harm but also freedom from offensive bodily touching even though there be no actual physical harm. Tenure Hearing of Ostergren, 1966 S.L.D. 185, 186. [Emphasis added.]

and

> [T]hat such a philosophy with its prohibition of the use of corporal punishment or physical enforcement does not leave a teacher helpless to control his pupils. Competent teachers never find it necessary to resort to physical force or violence to maintain discipline or compel obedience. If all other means fail there is always a resort to removal from the classroom or school through suspension or expulsion. The Commissioner cannot find any justification for, nor can he condone the use of physical force by a teacher to maintain discipline or to punish infractions. Ibid.

> Thus, when teachers resort "to unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact with those in their charge [they] must expect to face dismissal or other severe penalty." Ibid.

This language was approved again in Tenure Hearing of Jackson OAL DKT. EDU 3438-87 (Mar. 7, 1988), adopted Comm'r of Ed. (Apr. 18, 1988), aff'd St. Bd. of Ed. (Nov. 1, 1988).

The respondent's argument that she was simply doing her duty in trying to open the door is also rejected. Accepting her testimony as true for the purposes of this aspect of the analysis, the respondent told whoever was holding the door to stop holding the door when she discovered she could not open it. Yet, she pushed as hard as she could against the door. The two acts are inconsistent with common sense. One better course of action was simply to demand that whoever was holding the door open it. It was likely that a teacher could discover who was holding the door closed in a variety of ways. One of those ways was to look through the unobscured portion of the window in the door. Yet neither the respondent nor any pupil testified that the respondent attempted this simple expedient.

As a result of both demanding that the door be opened and pushing against it, the respondent flew, in her words, into the hallway when the door was released. That was not doing her duty. E.B.'s so-called prank was ill-conceived, ill-bred and potentially dangerous. Appropriately, he was punished for it. Nevertheless, this precisely the type of situation teachers are called upon to deal with. More than 20 years ago, the Commissioner said > [Teachers] are professional employees to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of tens of thousands of school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment." [Emphasis added.] Tenure Hearing of Sammons, 1972 S.L.D. 302, 321.

It is also true, as the respondent contends, that the Commissioner recognizes the need to examine the testimony of children with great caution. In this case, testimony conflicts in some areas and is consistent in others. This is to be expected in consideration of the number of pupils involved and the different prospectives they had. This does not render their testimony incompetent, however.

This case turns to a certain extent on the credibility of the witnesses. Credibility does not depend on the number of witnesses and the finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re: Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). In an administrative proceeding, testimony may be disbelieved but it may not be disregarded. Middletown Tp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962). The best evidence, of course, is a credible witness coupled with credible testimony. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6 (App. Div. 1955). The trier of fact may accept or reject, in whole or in part, the testimony of any witness. Application of Howard Sav. Bank, 143 N.J. super. 1 (App. Div. 1976).

Generally, I FIND the testimony of pupils other than E.B. and S.J. credible and worthy of belief. The respondent's recall was selective. Although I believe the bulk of her testimony, I do not accept it all, particularly her version of what occurred in the hallway immediately after the door opened. Nor does the weight of the evidence support her contention that she did not discuss the matter, except in a very limited way, with pupils in the days following the incident.

Having considered the entire record, I FIND:

1. On March 11, 1991, pupils E.B. and S.J. held closed the respondent's classroom door as a change of classes was about to take place.

2. A pupil trying to exit could not and he advised the respondent of the fact.

3. The respondent went to the door.

4. The respondent did not strike or push out of the way the first pupil attempting to exit.

5. The respondent did not attempt to see through the unobscured portion of the door window who was preventing the door from being opened.

6. The respondent simultaneously demanded that the door be released and pushed on the door with considerable force.

7. When the pupils released the door, it opened quickly.

8. The respondent's own efforts propelled her into the hallway.

9. The respondent struck E.B. at or near the shoulders with at least one hand.

10. E.B., who was already moving away from the door, was further propelled by the blow.

11. The respondent discussed the event with pupils on at least two occasions in the days following the incident.

12. The respondent took a pupil from the classroom and asked the pupil if the pupil were spreading rumors about the respondent and the incident.

The third charge was dismissed at hearing upon motion and oral argument. The judge found no evidence adduced in support of the charge.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent inappropriately touched E.B. on March 11, 1991, that she inappropriately discussed the event with pupils on at least two occasions and that she removed a pupil from a class and questioned the pupil about spreading rumors concerning the incident.

These determinations are serious. For the following reasons, however, I do not recommend dismissal. The respondent already has paid a very heavy penalty as a consequence of these charges. She has suffered professional and personal embarrassment and has lost 120 days' salary. She will have to work with careful and unremitting attention to all her actions to restore her professional reputation. This penalty does not condone any of the acts proved in this case. Nor does it trivialize or treat as a justification the underlying pupil behavior.

Rather, it recognizes 25 years of unblemished service. As the Appellate Division of Superior Court remarked in In re: Fulconer, > Although such conduct certainly warrants disciplinary action, the forfeiture of the teacher's rights after serving for a great many years in the New Jersey school system is, in our view, an unduly harsh penalty to be imposed under the circumstances. 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967).

And, as in Ostergren above, the primary tenure charge here does not arise from a series of incidents. It constitutes one incident which comprised no more than a few minutes. Of course, a single incident may be the basis for dismissal of a tenured teaching staff member. See, Redcay v. State Board of Education, 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b. 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944). Nevertheless, it is necessary to take into consideration the nature of the offense, any mitigating circumstances and the teacher's record. Tenure Hearing of Kittell, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541.

Having considered all of these factors, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's actions were rash, but not premeditated, cruel or vicious. While there undeniably was a ripple effect from the incident, there is nothing in the record to show that the respondent's actions had any lasting effect on the operation of the school or on the pupils involved.

I further CONCLUDE that the conduct of the respondent herein, although serious and unprofessional, does not warrant the forfeiture of tenure. Therefore, I ORDER that the respondent be continued in her tenure status as an employee of the Matawan-Aberdeen School District, that she forfeit 120 days' pay already withheld and that she be denied her salary and adjustment increments for the 1991-92 school year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ANNE BOYD, MATAWAN-ABERDEEN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent filed timely exceptions and the Board filed timely reply exceptions pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent first claims the ALJ's penalty, forfeiting 120 days' pay and denying her salary and adjustment increments for the 1991-92 school year, is too severe. Additionally, respondent submits the ALJ should have made a specific finding that this matter did not concern corporal punishment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

Citing In re Eddie Lee Harrell, 1979 S.L.D. 479, 485, respondent claims the Commissioner held that the appropriate penalty for "the 'use of undue physical force  to maintain discipline ' was the loss of two weeks' pay." (Exceptions, at p. 1 citing Harrell, at 485) Respondent claims there is no reason why Harrell should not guide this case in the event the Commissioner affirms the ALJ's findings at paragraphs 9, 11 and 12, which constitute the basis, she claims, for his conclusion that she behaved improperly.

Respondent further argues that review of the testimony and proofs leads to the conclusion that she neither violated N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 nor 18A:6-10, and that she should be held harmless in the circumstances. In support of this contention respondent affixes her post-hearing brief.

The Board's reply exceptions seek affirmance of the initial decision, and the ALJ's findings that respondent inappropriately touched E.B., did enlarge the area of confrontation to include her class when she made the incident with E.B. a matter of class discussion, and acted inappropriately when she removed a pupil from class and interrogated the pupil about spreading rumors concerning the incident.

The Board disagrees with respondent's exception that the penalty meted by the ALJ was too severe. Noting that the ALJ found respondent's behavior to be "serious" (Reply Exceptions, at p. 1, quoting Initial Decision at p. 21), the Board cites In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick L. Ostergren, School District of Franklin Township, Somerset County, 1966 S.L.D. 185 for the proposition that when "teachers  resort to unnecessary and inappropriate physical contact with those in their charge, [they] must expect to face dismissal or other severe penalty." (Reply Exceptions, at pp. 1-2, quoting Ostergren at 187) In response to respondent's argument that her conduct was not found to be premeditated, cruel or vicious, and that therefore, the penalty was too harsh, the Board submits respondent's comment sets much too low a standard for acceptable conduct of adequate teaching performance. Under all the circumstances, the Board submits that the ALJ's conclusion both on the merits and as to penalty are proper and should be affirmed.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner adopts as his own those findings and conclusions of the Office of Administrative Law in this matter. It is noted that the record does not include a transcript of the proceedings below. See In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987).

The Commissioner concludes that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member and assesses a penalty of forfeiture of her 1991-92 salary and adjustment increments and 120 days' pay already withheld.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: June 1, 1992 Decided: June 2, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH F. FIDLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Thomas Darrah filed a verified petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education, challenging the withholding of his 1991-92 increments by the Board of Education of the Borough of Avon. The Board then certified to the Commissioner charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher and inefficiency against Thomas Darrah, a tenured teaching staff member, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. Darrah filed a counterclaim, alleging that the Board suspended him from his teaching posotion and sought to termiante his employment discriminatorily

These matters were transmitted from the Commissioner to the Office of Administrative Law on October 28 and November 4, 1991, for determination as a contested cases. Counsel for the Board moved for consolidation of these matters. Counsel for Thomas Darrah consented and consolidation was granted during the telephone prehearing conference which was held on January 16, 1992.

Prior to commencement of the scheduled hearing on June 1, 1992, counsel and the parties engaged in discussion concerning the possibility of a settlement disposition. To avoid the burden, expense, delay and uncertainties of the pending litigation, the parties agreed to settle and resolve the matter in a manner fair to the parties and consistent with the public interest and the law. After discussing the matter with legal counsel, the parties agreed to the following settlement terms on the record:

1. Thomas Darrah shall submit a letter of resignation and shall resign from his position as a tenured teaching staff member with the Board, effective June 30, 1992, which resignation shall be accepted by the Board. The Board will continue to pay Thomas Darrah until the effective date of his resignation.

2. Thomas Darrah shall execute and submit a release of his counterclaim against the Board charging discrimination. Upon receipt of the executed release and approval of the settlement terms by the Commissioner of Education, the Board shall pay Thomas Darrah the sum of $10,000 in full payment for making the release.

3. In conclusion of the matter, the parties agree that the above-captioned actions pending before the Commissioner of Education shall be withdrawn with prejudice.

Counsel for the Board of Education represented on the record that the Board consents to all of the terms and conditions of this settlement. After being placed under oath, Thomas Darrah stated that he fully understood and consented to all of the terms and conditions of the settlement. Darrah understood that he was entitled to a full hearing if he had not voluntarily agreed to the settlement terms. The parties understand that the proposed settlement agreement will only become effective if and when it is approved by the Commissioner of Education.

THE CARDONICK STANDARD

In Re Cardonick, decided by the Commissioner April 7, 1982, aff'd State Board April 6, 1983, states in part:

> We believe a proposed tenure settlement or a withdrawal of tenure charges with its attendant terms and conditions, should be submitted to the Commissioner of Education for his prior scrutiny and approval. The proposed tenure settlement or withdrawal should be accompanied by supporting documentation as to the nature of the charges, circumstances justifying a settlement, consent or authorization by the Board of Education and the teacher to the proposed agreement, the Administrative Law Judge's findings that the teacher entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights, and that the agreement is consistent with the public interest.

The nature of the charges in this matter are fully described in the Board's certification to the Commissioner. The charges are related to the teacher's physical condition and handicap and problems arising therefrom. The settlement is fully justified based upon the teacher's age and many years of service and it is fully consistent with the public interest.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

Having reviewed and considered the entire record before me in this matter, including the terms and conditions of the settlement agreement described above, I FIND that:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement on the record.

2. Thomas Darrah has entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his rights and obligations.

3. The settlement agreement is fair to all parties, fully disposes of all issues in controversy, and is consistent with the public interest and the law.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. I further CONCLUDE that the settlement should be approved.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

JULY 10, 1992

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE SEASIDE HEIGHTS : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION SCHOOL DISTRICT, OCEAN COUNTY. : DECISION

For Petitioner, David M. Casadonte, Esq.

For Respondent, Thomas M. Savon, Esq. (Gilmore & Monahan)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on June 8, 1992 through the Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Seaside Heights School District on April 7, 1992. On July 8, 1992, respondent filed an answer to the cap waiver appeal. However, on July 10, 1992, respondent notified the Commissioner that it no longer opposed the cap waiver appeal because it agreed that the monies were necessary for the roof replacement sought by the Board.

On March 5, 1992, Joseph Zach, Ocean County Superintendent of Schools, conditionally approved the Seaside Heights School District's budget subject to $150,000 in capital outlay cap waiver monies being available for roof replacement which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by him.

On July 10, 1992, the Board requested that the matter be decided on an emergent relief basis because of the water damage being sustained and the need to have an immediate order of the Commissioner for an increase in the tax levy so as to enable the Board to secure immediately the roof replacement.

Upon review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner finds and determines that the requested relief shall and is hereby granted as the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that these funds are necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Seaside Heights School District. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, the Ocean County Board of Taxation is hereby ordered to adjust the Seaside Heights School District's tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $150,000 for capital outlay.

DECISION

Robert F. Garrett, III, Esq., for Petitioner (Loveland, Garrett, Russell, & Young)

Paul J. Baldini, Esq., for Respondent

This consolidated matter was opened before the Commissioner on June 2, 1992 through the filing of an amended Petition of Appeal of a defeated budget by the Dennis Township Board of Education (Board) pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:24-7.1 et seq. and a Petition of Appeal of its defeated cap waiver. On June 5, 1992, respondent submitted its Answer to the petitions. Position statements were filed by the Board and respondent on June 5 and June 15, 1992 respectively. The record closed on July 1, 1992 upon receipt of all papers of the parties.

On April 7, 1992, the voters of the Dennis Township School District defeated the current expense tax levy proposed by the Board in the amount of $2,762,740. They likewise defeated a proposed current expense cap waiver of $217,669, a cap waiver which the Cape May County Superintendent of Schools, Patricia Horton, approved on March 6, 1992 as necessary for a thorough and efficient education of the students of Dennis Township and which resulted in Dr. Horton granting only a conditional approval of the district's budget for the 1992-93 school year. The specific line item accounts for the T&E cap wavier are as follows:

Account Title	Account No.	Amount
Grades K-8 Salaries - Teachers	213	$137,190
Custodial Salaries	610	16,000
Insurance/Judgments	820	29,000
Transportation (Contract)	520A	7,000
Student Body Activities	1010	15,500
Supplies	250	6,000
Staff Development	250	6,979
	TOTAL	$217,669

Subsequent to the defeat of the budget by the voters of Dennis Township, the Board and respondent, pursuant to the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:22-37, consulted on the defeated budget whereupon respondent reduced the current expense budget by $45,000. Consequently, the monies in contention in this consolidated matter are as set forth below:

	Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education	Amount of tax levy certified by governing body
Current Expense	$2,762,740	$2,717,740
Capital Outlay	-0-	-0-
Cap Waiver:
Current Expense	$ 217,669
Capital Outlay	-0-
Total	$2,980,409	$2,717,740

Amount in dispute before Commissioner:

Defeated Budget	$ 45,000

I. DEFEATED BUDGET

In rendering judgment relative to budget appeals, the Commissioner notes that the Constitution of the State of New Jersey requires the Legislature to provide a thorough and efficient system of education. The Legislature by way of statutory scheme has delegated the responsibility for providing such thorough and efficient education to local boards of education. Additionally, the Legislature pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, 22-14, 22-17 and 22-37 has authorized the Commissioner to review and decide appeals by boards of education seeking restoration of budgetary reductions imposed by governing bodies. East Brunswick Board of Education v. Township Council of East Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94 (1966) and Board of Education of Deptford Township v. Mayor and Council of Deptford Township, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

In reviewing such appeals the Commissioner must determine whether a district board of education has demonstrated that the amount by which a specific line item reduction imposed by the governing body is necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education.

In the instant matter, respondent, upon defeat of the 1992-93 current expense budget established the aforesaid tax levy by imposing the following line item reductions:

Line Item		Amount
510	Bus Drivers Salaries	$ 8,000

This reduction was based upon the fact that in reviewing the 1991-92 budget, respondent found that $8,000 was unexpended. It therefore believed that an appropriation of a similar amount for the 1992-93 school year would also go unspent since there was no staff increase from the prior year.

Line Item		Amount
530	Replace Vehicle	$35,000
	Upon review of the 1991-92 budget, respondent believed it became obvious that there was sufficient excess funds for the replacement of vehicles. It therefore concluded there was no reason for the replacement of the vehicles for the 1992-93 school year.
550A	Other Expenses (Transportation)	$ 2,000
	Respondent reduced this line item because it believed that there was an excess balance for the salaries for bus drivers in the 1991-92 budget and when a similar amount was budgeted for 1992-93, respondent concluded that with no additional planned routes, there would be a similar amount of funds unspent in the 1992-93 budget. Consequently, respondent concluded a reduction in that budget was necessary.

In presenting its position relative to the budget reductions made by respondent, the Board states, inter alia, that:

> The Dennis Township Board of Education has consistently spent less money per student than any school district in Cape May County according to per pupil cost figures certified by the New Jersey Department of Education pursuant to provisions of N.J.A.C. 6:20-3.1. The most recent figures available show Dennis Township spent $3,990 per pupil in 1990. Figures released by the Department of Education in the 1992 School Report Card show Dennis Township spends on average less per child than other districts in the region and state. The proposed 1992-93 current expense budget reflects an increase of only 1%. The Board of Education anticipates a free balance of only $38,000. The Board has sincerely made an excellent attempt to limit budget growth despite a 16.8% increase in insurance costs, a 34% increase in tuition for high school students, and a 3.5 - 4% inflation rate. Additionally, the Board of Education's negotiated agreement with the local NJEA affiliate expires in June, 1992. The current expense budget includes salary increases of only > 5 - 5.5% for all employees. The Board of Education has clearly proposed a budget that reflects current difficult economic conditions.

> (Board's Position Statement, at p. 1)

As to Line Item 510, Bus Drivers Salaries, the Board urges that the monies reduced by respondent are necessary because the contract with the Dennis Township Education Association, which represents the drivers, expired on June 30, 1992. The current expense budget reflects a 5% increase in negotiated salaries which the Board contends is demonstrative of its "frugal approach to spending." (Id., at p. 2) The Board also avers that student population increases may necessitate the addition of a part-time driver.

The governing body denies that there will be an increase in such salaries for current bus drivers, an assertion which the Board rejects as being unreasonable. Respondent denies as well that there will be an additional one-half route.

With respect to Line 530, replacement of vehicles, the Board avers that contrary to respondent's position delaying the purchase of a bus will necessitate the purchase of three buses in the 1993-94 budget rather than only two as planned. Moreover, the bus identified for replacement during this school year meets the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6:21-1.4 which stipulates that buses "shall not be utilized for pupil transportation purposes beyond the end of the twelfth year from the year of manufacture  or at the end of the school year in which that year falls, whichever is later." The manufacture date of the targeted bus is 1979. Further, it is the Board's contention that it is not cost effective to spend thousands of dollars on a bus to enable it to pass in-depth Division of Motor Vehicle inspection.

The Board likewise urges that the $2,000 reduction effectuated by respondent in Line Item 550A, Other Expenses (Transportation), cannot be sustained because $3,000 had already been reduced from the 1992-93 budget and it points to the fact that the buses travel not only many miles in the Township, but also transport high school students approximately 20 miles round trip. Further, it avers that continued increases in student population, concurrent with increases in gasoline, oil, tires, etc., would not justify a further reduction to this line item.

Respondent argues, however, that since there was a balance of $2,000 in the gasoline account in the 1991-92 budget, and since no additional routes were planned for the ensuing school year, a reduction is warranted.

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

Upon review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner finds and determines that the $45,000 reduced by the governing body must be restored. The Board's position relative to the replacement of a bus (Line Item 530) this school year is both reasonable, prudent and consistent with state regulation. As to the remaining line items for transportation, the Commissioner finds and determines that the amounts allocated by the Board in both accounts are necessary for the thorough and efficient operation of the district's transportation program. As correctly pointed out by the Board, it is reasonable and prudent to plan for an increase in Line Item 510 for drivers' salaries for the 1992-93 school year, as well as the possibility that another half-route may be called for the ensuing year, given the increased enrollment the district has had and continues to experience. In view of the fact that there is an anticipated free balance of only $38,000 out of a net budget of nearly $7 million dollars, the $2,000 reduction for other transportation expenses (Line Item 550A) and the $8,000 reduction for drivers' salaries (Line Item 510) cannot be sustained.

II. CAP WAIVER

In setting forth its position with respect to the $217,669 it seeks in current expense cap waiver monies, the Board emphasizes that the amount is not for additional staff or programs but to maintain existing educational staff and programs. It reiterates that it is a district that spends less per pupil than all other districts in Cape May County and is below both the regional and state average in per-pupil expenditures. The cap waiver monies would provide for the following:

- 4 full time equivalent teachers
- 1 custodian
- instructional supplies
- staff development
- student body activities
- transportation
- insurance

More specifically, the Board urges that the elimination of four classroom teachers would adversely impact on the provision of a thorough and efficient education because of the negative effect on class size that would occur. It urges, inter alia, that:

> Pupil enrollment continues to increase in the Dennis Township School District. Available district data shows there has never been a decrease. A two million dollar addition was opened in September 1989 to ease over-crowding and that is filled. The Board of Education is currently negotiating to acquire land to build a new school. The existing facility, with the > recent addition, is filled to capacity causing the Board to apply each year to use substandard classrooms. Five substandard classrooms are now being utilized for instructional purposes. The Board Office was moved out of the school to create classroom space. Basic skills teachers are forced to move their "classrooms" according to where space can be found. The Pinelands Commission established the school's maximum occupancy at 699. The occupancy is currently over 800. The district's Long Range Facility Plan  shows enrollment figures demonstrating the need for more staff, not less.

> Dennis Township's socioeconomic status places it in the bottom third of all districts in the state. Our children, regardless of their socioeconomic condition, need to be given an opportunity to participate in these activities. (May 26, 1992 Letter from Superintendent, at pp. 2-3)

As to staff development, the Board stresses that it spends less than 1% of its budget for staff development and has reduced this line item each of the past three years, a trend it seeks to reverse given the importance of staff development to the professional growth of its staff. Regarding this, the Board asserts that further reduction of opportunities for its staff to receive training is not consistent with the priority such training must have. In support thereof, it cites to portions of the Quality Education Report (1992) which speaks to the need for teachers to have high quality of continuing professional development opportunities.

The Board seeks $15,500 for extracurricular activities, the basis for which is set forth below.

> Student body activities are scheduled to be eliminated if the cap waiver is not approved. It is clear some children come to school to participate in extra-curricular activities (i.e. basketball, field hockey, soccer), and this motivates them to perform in academic subjects. Additionally, while the primary purpose of our school is to teach academic subjects, effective > schools research points out the need for children to have positive experiences in school that can be transferred to other aspects of the child's schooling experience. Extra-curricular activities is sometimes the vehicle to effect that positive transfer. Again, the $15,500 allocated for student body activities is indicative of the Board's frugality. (Board's Position Statement, at p. 5)

The governing body neither admits nor denies the contentions of the Board with respect to the requested cap waiver monies and leaves the issue for the Commissioner to determine. (Answer, at p. 1, No. 2)

Upon review of the Board's position and supporting documentation, the Commissioner finds and determines that the record amply establishes that the $217,669 in current expense cap waiver monies sought by the Board are necessary for the district to provide a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Dennis Township School District. East Brunswick, supra; Deptford Township, supra Accordingly, the Commissioner directs that the Cape May County Board of Taxation increase the 1992-93 current expense tax levy for Dennis Township to reflect a restoration of the $45,000 reduction effectuated by the governing body and an additional $217,669 in cap waiver monies, which sum amounts to $262,669. Therefore, the total 1992-93 current expense tax levy for Dennis Township shall be $2,980,409.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER APPEAL OF THE SOUTH ORANGE-MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE SOUTH ORANGE- : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
MAPLEWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, ESSEX : DECISION
COUNTY. :

For Petitioner, Sidney Sayovitz, Esq. (Young, Tarshis, Dimiero & Sayovitz)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on April 10, 1992 through the South Orange-Maplewood Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver denied by the Board of School Estimate of the South Orange-Maplewood School District. On April 14 and May 12, 1992, the Board of School Estimate of South Orange-Maplewood was notified of the timelines for responding to the petition. Having received no response thereto, the Board of School Estimate was informed on June 2, 1992 that unless an Answer to the petition was received within ten days, the matter would be decided by the Commissioner on a summary judgment basis with each count of the petition being deemed admitted. No such Answer was received; thus, the record in the matter closed on July 7, 1992 upon receipt of the Board's position statement required under N.J.A.C. 6:24-7.8(a)2.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the $33,970,314 local tax levy approved for current expense by the Board of School Estimate for the 1992-93 school year and $65,402 in capital outlay, there is a need for an additional $266,718 in current expense in order for the district to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students.

On March 4, 1992, Peter Carter, County Superintendent of Schools, conditionally approved the South Orange-Maplewood School District's budget subject to the cap waiver amounts set forth below which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by him.

Current Expenses: $266,718

Line Account	Amount
213 (Grades 1-5)	$ 37,500
213 (Grades 9-12)	102,500
214 (G&T)	80,000
220 (Textbooks)	14,000
810 (Employee Benefits)	21,000
1020 (Student Activities)	45,000*

*less $33,282 (to be appropriated from surplus)

In addition to the foregoing, there was an additional $33,282 in current expense cap waiver monies (Student Activities) sought by the Board. However, the county superintendent determined that those monies could be made available through a reallocation from surplus. The monies in contention in this matter are, therefore, as set forth below.

The reasons for the cap waiver monies sought by the Board are summarized below.

A. ACCOUNT 213 (GRADES 1-5) - $37,500

In the Jefferson School, 112 students are enrolled for the fourth grade beginning September, 1992. Four more students are expected to enroll thereby bringing the total fourth grade class in the Jefferson School to 116 students. The budget, excluding the CAP Waiver, provided only four fourth grade teachers which would result in 28-29 students per class, in excess of Board policy limiting fourth grade class to 25 students. The requested amount of $37,500 will permit the Board of Education to employ another teacher thus creating five sections of the fourth grade and permitting the Board to provide services in accordance with Board policy relating to class size.

B. ACCOUNT 213 (GRADES 9-12) - $102,500

The requested Cap Waiver of $102,500 concerns the employment of 2.8 teachers in grades 9-12. Without the requested CAP Waiver, 1.5 vocational positions would be eliminated in the industrial arts portion of the high school. Specifically, courses in commercial art, desk-top publishing and woodworking and other wood/carpentry courses would be eliminated. The remaining 1.3 positions are in the basic skills area for English and math. If 1.3 basic skills positions were eliminated, the small class sizes required for remedial type instruction would be significantly increased. As a result of such increases, the effectiveness of the basic skills program would be severely reduced. The Board of Education strongly believes that the 2.8 positions at the high school would impact upon (i) those students who often do not attend college and choose vocational programs and (ii) those students who are most in need and require basic skills programs. The Board of Education has concluded that the elimination of 2.8 positions will have a material adverse effect on these students.

C. ACCOUNT 214 (GIFTED AND TALENTED) - $80,000

The rejection of the CAP Waiver of $80,000 will result in the elimination of 2.3 gifted and talented teachers. This program would be severely impacted and would result in alternatives which are clearly unacceptable to the Board of Education. The in-school program would be eliminated and after school activities may have to be substituted. The 2.3 positions are required for the implementation of a gifted and talented program.

D. ACCOUNT 220 (TEXTBOOKS) - $14,000

The school district has adopted a new mathematics curriculum. New textbooks must be ordered, and the existing budget line item does not contain sufficient funds for the required textbooks. Unless $14,000 is provided through the CAP Waiver, a significant number of students will be left without the required textbooks.

E. ACCOUNT 810 (EMPLOYEE BENEFITS) - $21,000

The $21,000 contained in this line item represents the health benefit premiums associated with the 6.1 employees referred to earlier in this position paper. These employees are as follows: 1 teacher at Jefferson School; 1.5 vocational teachers; 1.3 basic skills teachers; and 2.3 gifted and talented teachers. The $21,000 is a conservative estimate of the premiums associated with the aforementioned teaching positions.

F. ACCOUNT 1020 (STUDENT ACTIVITIES) - $45,000

The loss of these monies from the student activities account will have the following results: (a) the marching band will be unable to travel to the away football games and other away events; (b) the district will be unable to pay the entry fees for students who participate in certain track meets; and (c) the interscholastic football team will be unable to participate in certain scrimmages which have [been] found to be an important part of the training program.

Upon review of the record of this matter, including the extensive documentation provided by the district in support of the necessity of the cap waiver funds, which is incorporated herein by reference, the Commissioner finds and determines that the requested relief shall and is hereby granted as the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that these funds are required for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of the South Orange-Maplewood School District. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, the Essex County Board of Taxation is hereby ordered to adjust the South Orange-Maplewood School District's tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $266,718 for current expense which results in a total current expense tax levy of $34,237,032.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, industrial arts instructor, claimed Board improperly withheld his increment and pay increase for 1990-91 school year due to alleged improper supervision of classroom and insubordination for failure to sign and return letter of reprimand.

ALJ found good cause existed for recommendation to withhold employment increment. Board's action to withhold increment was a reasonable exercise of its discretion. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner set aside findings and determination in initial decision. Commissioner determined that the performance-related aspect of the Board's withholding was arbitrary and unreasonable, leaving only alleged insubordination as its basis for action. Commissioner declined to render judgment on this aspect as withholding for disciplinary reasons is subject to contractural grievance procedure negotiated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 34:13A-5.3 and subsequent appeal to PERC. Commissioner remanded matter to Roxbury Board for consideration of whether alleged insubordination was itself reasonable basis for withholding. Commissioner did not retain jurisdiction.

TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY BOARD OF EDUCATION, MORRIS COUNTY,
Respondent.

Record Closed: July 29, 1991 Decided: May 27, 1992

BEFORE GEORGE PERSELAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner appeals the withholding of his increment and pay increase for the 1990-1991 school year by the respondent.

By letter dated June 12, 1990, the petitioner was advised by the superintendent of schools that the respondent board of education would conduct a closed conference session on June 25, 1990, at 7:30 p.m., to consider the administration's recommendation that petitioner's salary for the 1990-1991 school year be frozen at the 1989-1990 level. Petitioner was further advised that he could make a presentation and that final action would be taken on June 25, 1990.

By letter dated June 26, 1990, the petitioner was advised that the respondent board of education adopted a resolution which froze his salary for the 1990-1991 school year at the 1989-1990 level. The reasons for the board action was stated and a copy of the resolution was attached.

By petition dated September 17, 1990 and mailed September 20, 1990, the petitioner filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education. By letter dated October 10, 1990, the respondent filed an answer to the petition which was received by the Commissioner of Education on October 11, 1990. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Adminstrative Law (OAL) where the matter was marked filed on October 17, 1990.

Hearings were held on April 2, 1991 and June 11, 1991, at which time the record closed.

The issue to be determined in this matter is set forth in an agreement between the parties dated February 20, 1991, as follows:

> "Was the withholding of petitioner's increment and pay increase for the 1990-1991 school year by respondent arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable and in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14?"

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Based upon the testimony and evidence received at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact:

1. The petitioner has been employed as a tenured member of the teaching staff of the respondent board of education since September 1976, serving as an industrial arts instructor.

2. On March 29, 1990, the superintendent of schools observed an incident of alleged improper supervision in petitioner's classroom, as more fully set forth in a letter to petitioner dated April 9, 1990 (Exhibit A) attached to the petition and (P-5) in evidence. The said letter is attached hereto as Exhibit A and made a part hereof as though fully set forth herein.

3. I FIND the superintendent's statement of his observations to be the facts in this case relating to the petitioner's conduct in the classroom at the time of the superintendent's several observations on March 29, 1990. I further FIND that the superintendent acted appropriately, in the absence of the petitioner's supervision of his students at the work tables, when students were about to engage in reasonably unsafe activities but were stopped by the actions of the superintendent, and not by the actions of the petitioner.

4. On March 30, 1990, the superintendent met with the principal of the school, the petitioner, and a teacher's representative to discuss the incident. During the discussion, the superintendent indicated an intention to withhold a salary increment. The principal of the school requested the opportunity to speak with the petitioner. As a result of the principal's meeting with the petitioner, the principal issued a memorandum to the superintendent, dated March 30, 1990 (P-4).

5. In the principal's memorandum of March 30, 1990, signed by the petitioner, there is a recitation of undisputed facts concerning supervision of the class. The petitioner's signature appears thereon as to knowledge of the memorandum, but not necessarily agreement with the memorandum.

6. The petitioner testified and set forth his version of inaccuracies relating to the superintendent's recitation of events. In his testimony, the petitioner stated that P-4 is accurate and was signed by him. He further testified that discussion of withholding his salary increment was discussed in several conferences with the superintendent and others. As a result of the meeting with the superintendent, as stated in P-5, the superintendent said he would seek no further disciplinary action other than the letter of April 9, 1990, being placed in the petitioner's personnel file.

7. The petitioner had previously received two letters of reprimand, dated March 1, 1989 and March 22, 1989. He had attached his written rebuttal to both of them.

8. The petitioner failed to return the April 9, 1990 letter of reprimand signed by him as having been read. He was aware that a copy was being placed in his personnel file. On April 30, 1990, the superintendent advised the petitioner that he had not received a copy of the April 9, 1990 letter (R-5). By letter dated May 7, 1990, the petitioner advised the superintendent that the April 9, 1990 letter was under attorney review (R-6).

9. By letter dated May 9, 1990, the superintendent wrote to the petitioner stating the purpose of his signature upon the letter and stating that there was no reason for further delay. The letter requested the immediate return of a signed copy (R-7). This letter was responded to by petitioner with a handwritten note dated June 8, 1990, again advising that the matter was under attorney review and that the requested information would be forwarded as soon as possible. By date of June 11, 1990, counsel for the petitioner advised the superintendent of his representation and referred to the April 9, 1990 letter indicating that the attorney would respond, including the acknowledgment of the letter, by the end of the month. The counsel's letter was received by the superintendent on June 13, 1990.

10. On June 12, 1990, before the receipt of R-9, counsel's letter of June 11, 1990, the superintendent forwarded a memo to the board withdrawing his recommendation for a salary increase for petitioner for the 1990-1991 school year.

11. The petitioner and his attorney attended the respondent's meeting on June 25, 1990, submitted the letter of April 9, 1990 with the petitioner's signature appended thereto and set forth the petitioner's rebuttal to the factual statements contained in the superintendent's order of April 9, 1990.

12. The petitioner received notice of appointment to the staff for the 1990-1991 school year at a salary of Step 12 in the BA guide and was requested to return three copies of the form by May 4, 1990, which he accepted and returned (P-25).

13. The superintendent was critical of the "free time" provided the petitioner's class in which the incidents of March 29 occurred. He stated that the students were to be in an educational mode at all times. As a result, the petitioner's plan book was reviewed which disclosed the "free day due to tremendous effort on their part. Few students to finish projects. No machines or hand tools to be used. Projects are to be handed in today." The petitioner testified that it was the last day of a cycle and that the free time was a common practice within the school. The school principal corroborated petitioner's testimony as to free time as positive discipline and as reward for good production, behavior and achievement.

14. As a result of the review of the petitioner's plan book, the petitioner admitted in his testimony that there was a lack of individual class plan set forth in the plan book for the months of January and February for the 7th and 8th grades. The plan book does contain various entries under grade 8 during that period of time and some entries for the 7th grade.

15. At the time the superintendent entered the class room on March 29, 1990, none of the students were wearing safety glasses.

DISCUSSION

The petitioner admitted the accuracy of the principal's report to the superintendent, dated March 30, 1990. He further acknowledged discussion about withholding a salary increment. He was further aware of the superintendent's understanding and acknowledgment that the letter of reprimand would be the sole action taken as a result of the events of March 29, 1990.

The petitioner had been reprimanded twice before. He had signed and returned those letters of reprimand. No reasonable explanation was extended by the petitioner as to his failure to sign and return the April 9, 1990 letter to the superintendent between his receipt on April 9, 1990 (personally delivered) and June 25, 1990 other than review by his attorney. Indeed, counsel's letter to the superintendent (R-9) dated June 11, 1990, indicates that the letter would be acknowledged by the petitioner and returned to the superintendent.

The superintendent stated that it was the practice of his administration to receive a copy signed by the teacher relative to matters being placed by the administration into the personnel record of the teacher. The practice was the suggested preferred policy recommended by the New Jersey Association of School Administrators for record purposes only. The acknowledgment by the teacher constituted no admission of the facts therein alleged or contained.

Having submitted to the practice on two prior occasions, the uncertainty of the petitioner in this instance is, in the opinion of this Administrative Law Judge, without foundation. The administrator indicated that when he made a request of a teacher, he anticipated that the request would be fulfilled. In that sense, the failure to abide the request, without in any way compromising his position, constitutes insubordination on the part of the petitioner.

Insubordination is defined by Black's Law Dictionary, 720 (5th Ed. 1979), as being "disobedience to constituted authority; refusal to obey some order which a superior officer is entitled to give and have obeyed. The term imports a willful or intentional disregard of the lawful and reasonable instructions of the employer."

"Disobedience" is defined in the Random House College Dictionary, 382 (Rev. Ed. 1980) as neglect or refusal to obey. "Obey" is defined in the same dictionary as:

1. To comply with or follow the commands, restrictions, wishes, or instructions of

2. To comply with or follow (a command, restriction, guiding principle, etc.)

My understanding of insubordination is as set forth in the cited definitions. In my mind, it involves an order or instructions or request as to one's employment responsibility or duty to perform a certain task which is reasonable and lawful and which the employer can reasonably expect to be performed.

At the hearing, the petitioner acknowledged the accuracy of the principal's report relating to his lack of supervision of the class and failure to ensure that students wear proper eye safety equipment on March 29, 1990, at the time of the superintendent's visit. Between April 30, 1990 and June 11, 1990, the petitioner had advised his principal that he had in fact returned the letter to the superintendent. The superintendent requested the office staff to search for the letter bearing the petitioner's signature. It was not found. At the hearing in this matter, the petitioner acknowledged he had never sent the letter.

The issue to be determined in this case is whether the act of withholding the increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which authorizes the withholding of increments uses the word "may" and states the reasons for withholding as "inefficiency or other good cause." The withholding requires a majority vote of the full membership of the board of education recorded by a roll call vote. When such occurs, the board shall notify the member concerned with written notice of such action within ten days. The scope of review by the Commissioner of Education is not to substitute his judgment for those who made an evaluation, but to determine whether they had reasonable basis for their conclusion. It is not for the Commissioner of Education to determine for himself whether the teacher had, in fact, been unsatisfactory. Kopera v. Bd. of Ed., West Orange, Essex Cty., 60 N.J. Super. 288, (App. Div. 1960).

A review of the evidence in this case reveals that the 1986-1987 evaluation report of the petitioner contains the following:

> 3. I recommend that Mr. Backer arrive in all classes ahead of students so that no student is left unsupervised.
>
> 10. Plans need to be completed on a regular basis.
>
> 12. Safety is No. 1 priority and is stressed in all aspects of the shop environment. Rules and procedures are clearly stated and enforced consistently.

The petitioner was late in filing a signed copy of his letter of reprimand dated March 22, 1989.

The petitioner had submitted as P-14 the Summative Evaluation Report of 1988-1989. In paragraph 2, entitled Performance Areas Needing Improvement, the first paragraph relates to "bell to bell activity period" for the learner. Secondly, the second paragraph deals with a "follow-up adjustment to your planning that will allow for student participation for a full 41-minute period."

In P-15, the Summative Evaluation Report for 1987-1988, the Performance Areas Needing Improvement reads as follows:

> "A continual recommendation for professional development of Mr. Backer is to arrive to class on time and to provide constant supervision of the learners in the instructional area. This area is of paramount importance where learners are exposed to dangerous machinery, shop equipment, and materials. This growth area was highlighted during the 1986-1987 evaluation cycle and further refinement is still apparent."

The petitioner filed a memo dated March 4, 1988 in which he set forth comments on the Summative Evaluation Report. He did not agree with the comments in section 2, Performance Areas Needing Improvement.

In a teacher observation form dated October 16, 1986, the observer complimented the petitioner for his adherance to safety rules and general decorum. The following appears:

> "Plans have not been presented to administration on a regular basis. Those which were presented are not complete in the format requested. I have suggest [sic] that we discuss the format and frequency of presenting the daily lesson plans."

In an observation report (P-19) dated January 25, 1988, the growth objective reads as follows:

> "Maintain constant supervision of each student assigned to you in the confines of the classroom for the duration of each class period."

In an observation report dated January 9, 1989 (P-20), the growth objective reads as follows:

> "Give some thought to planning that allows for bell-to-bell teaching in each of your classes. Class makeups are such that, in certain instances, some classes will complete tasks much more quickly than others."

The Summative Evaluation Report 1989-1990 compliments the petitioner for well-planned lessons which do not deviate from selected objectives. The 1990 report indicates that there are no performance areas needing improvement. This evaluation is most complimentary. The report is dated March 15, 1990 by the supervisor and March 16, 1990 by Mr. Backer. The evidence which formed the basis of this petition occurred two weeks later.

The import of the evaluations referred to in the preceding portion of this decision suggests that supervision and planning for "bell-to-bell" are sometime concerns of the petitioner in his performance and presentations. These observations give credibility to the observations made by the superintendent for which the letter of reprimand was issued.

Count 2 of the petition claims that the withholding of the employment increment was in direct retaliation for petitioner's failure to acknowledge the said letter in a timely way. It must be noted that the petitioner's conduct in advising the return of the letter on or about May 8, 1990 was conduct less than that to be anticipated from a professional. It was a simple prevarication which the petitioner acknowledged at the hearing in this matter. The petitioner's failure of forthrightness suggests that the imposition of the penalty imposed was a penalty which considered the petitioner's length of service to the educational district.

Count 3 alleges retaliation for the petitioner's seeking advice of an attorney, thereby depriving him of fundamental due process in his rights under the constitutions of the State of New Jersey and the United States. As I have indicated previously in this decision, the signed acknowledgment of having read the letter of April 9, 1990 could have accompanied counsel's letter of July 11, 1991. Accordingly, I FIND the allegation in Count 3 to be without merit.

The petitioner was adequately notified of the respondent's intention to consider withholding his employment increment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 by the June 12, 1990 letter addressed to the petitioner (Exhibit G of the petition).

The petition sets forth the offer of employment in April 1990 (P-25) and suggests that the respondent is committed to the salary therein set forth. While the document may constitute an offer and acceptance, therefore a contract in basic terms, it necessarily follows that the contract is conditioned upon continued satisfactory performance of the petitioner.

At the time of P-25, the gravamen of petitioner's insubordination had not yet taken place. The petitioner admits misstating the events between May 4, 1990 and June 12, 1990: 1) returning the letter of April 9, 1990 with his signature thereon; 2) stating that Dr. Elovitz suggested petitioner should see a lawyer (R-6); 3) failing to respond to the superintendent's order contained in the May 9, 1990 letter (R-7). The suggestion that respondent was not free to act as it did because of the offer and acceptance in P-25 is clearly without merit. Petitioner's admissions in his testimony speak for themselves.

CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the foregoing findings of fact and discussion, I CONCLUDE that good cause existed for the recommendation to withhold the employment increment of the petitioner for the 1990-1991 school year. The resolution indicates that a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board of education approved the resolution withholding the petitioner's employment increment.

I further CONCLUDE that petitioner was insubordinate in not responding to the superintendent in a timely manner in response to the superintendent's May 9, 1990 letter, having previously indicated to the principal that he had signed and returned the letter.

The use of the word "may" supplies discretion in the board of education. I cannot CONCLUDE that the exercise of discretion by the respondent board of education in a proper meeting was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. I CONCLUDE the respondent's action to withhold petitioner's increment was a reasonable exercise of that discretion under the circumstances of this case.

I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner was not deprived of nor denied fundamental fairness or due process as set forth in Counts 2 and 3 of the petition.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the action of the respondent board of education in withholding the employment increment of the petitioner for the school year 1990-1991 is APPROVED and AFFIRMED.

It is further ORDERED that the petition of the petitioner be DISMISSED with prejudice.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Mr. Donald Backer

Dear Mr. Backer:

On Thursday, March 29, 1990, at approximately 11:45 A.M. while walking through the halls at the Middle School, I noticed you sitting at your desk leafing through a magazine while the class was present. I walked down the hall and returned a few minutes later and observed that you were still sitting there and that the students were sitting around the worktables. One girl was in the back of the room working on a band-saw. On both occasions you lifted your head and saw me pass by. After the second observation, I started towards Mr. Knapp's office to inform him of what I had observed. It should be noted, that earlier in the year, I observed you reading a book while your class was in progress and had reported what I had seen to Mr. Knapp.

While heading for Mr. Knapp's office, I changed my mind and turned to return to your class. When I entered the room I observed you standing and talking to another adult whom I did not recognize. You acknowledged my presence and walked over to a student with the magazine in your hand. As I scanned the room, I noticed very few students engaged in any type of activity. At the table nearest the door, I observed a student with a screwdriver in one hand and a hammer in the other prepared to strike at a small cube of wood which appeared to be attached to another piece of wood on the worktable. Approximately six other students surrounded this boy, some with their chins on their hands on the table directly at eye level with the cube to be struck. Only one other student at that table appeared to be working on something that looked like a paper model. I walked over to the boy with the hammer, put my hand on his shoulder to stop him and asked the students where their protective goggles were. The boy responded that his glasses contained safety lenses. I indicated that I was concerned for all of the students around the table. At that point, you overheard what was happening and began to yell at the students and admonished them for not wearing their glasses. One comment was, "Haven't I told you that you are to wear safety glasses any time I'm wearing mine?" At that point I left the room and proceeded to my next scheduled appointment.

When I returned to Central Office, I shared the incident with Mr. Heim and called the Middle School to schedule an appointment with you for the very next day. Mr. Knapp was not in and I spoke with Mr. Toale. I outlined the incident with him and told him that I wanted to see you during your preparation period the very next day and to inform you that you may be represented by the Association. That evening I called and discussed the incident with Dr. Markowitz.

The next day, Frida I met wi you, Knapp Mrs. Vignola to discuss the incident and listen to your de of story. The comments began with my asking you to explain what I saw. u became indignant and offensive immediately saying, "I don't know what you saw, why don't you tell me what you saw." I proceeded to relate my observation of the previous day being interrupted numerous times by you. You waved the magazine, raised your voice and all in all did not take the allegations very seriously. You informed me that the students had all been given instructions in safety, held up copies of the contracts that the students sign, and the copy of the law on eye safety that is distributed to them. When I indicated that nobody in the classroom was wearing safety glasses, you said I was wrong that you were wearing safety glasses. I indicated that my concern at that time was more for the students and that your lack of supervision placed the safety of students in jeopardy. You did not agree with my estimation and felt that you were performing properly because you were looking through a magazine at your desk for a student instead of walking around and supervising the tables. You indicated that it was the day before the end of the marking period as an excuse for why almost all of the students in the class were not engaged in any learning activity. You also indicated that there was not another adult in the room as I entered, which is totally untrue.

I told you that I would listen to everything you had to say and when that was finished I thanked you and said I would consider your comments when deciding upon any further discipline.

During the conference, I brought to your attention the fact that there are two letters of reprimand already in your file regarding improper supervision of students. You dismissed this with the idea that you had sent letters of rebuttal to both of the documents. You also indicated that in your 13 years in the district, you never had an accident in your room.

After you and Mrs. Vignola left, I discussed disciplinary actions with Mr. Knapp. Mr. Knapp requested a chance to bring you around to understanding the dangers that your lack of supervision could lead to and the fact that you were placing yourself personally and the school district at jeopardy by not properly supervising students. I indicated that I would take no action until I heard from Mr. Knapp.

On Friday, March 30, 1990, you met with Mr. Knapp and Mrs. Vignola to discuss the incident further. A memorandum outlining what took place at that time is attached. Shortly thereafter you called and made an appointment to speak with me further about the incident. During that meeting, attended by Mr. Heim, you indicated your own concern for the safety of your students and an understanding of what might have occurred. You agreed that, in the future, you will not sit behind your desk for any reason while students are involved in activities at their worktables. You also indicated that activities will be provided to ensure that the students are meaningfully engaged through the last day of the cycle. Also, that you would step up your efforts to ensure that students were wearing safety glasses whenever they are required.

Because I believe that you were sincere, and that you will make a concerted effort to ensure that your students are well supervised and meaningfully engaged, I have decided to impose no discipline further than this letter. However, any future incident of this nature may result in further disciplinary action. I am confident that this will not be necessary.

Sincerely,

Leonard H. Elovitz, Ed.D.
Superintendent of Schools

I have read this letter and am aware that a copy has been entered in my personnel file.

DONALD C. BACKER,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Exceptions were timely field by petitioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. No reply was filed by the Board.

While taking issue with certain factual details and noting the ALJ's delay in issuing his initial decision, petitioner's exceptions essentially allege the following: 1) Petitioner was specifically advised in writing on April 9, 1990 (Exhibit P-5, at p. 3, appended to initial decision) that no further disciplinary action would be taken against him if future incidents of the same type did not recur, and no such incidents did occur prior to the superintendent's June 12, 1990 decision to reverse his prior determination and instead recommend withholding of petitioner's increment. 2) Petitioner's refusal to return a signed acknowledgement did not constitute insubordination, as no law or written district policy required such return and petitioner was given neither a definite time frame in which to respond nor an indication that failure to respond would be considered insubordination. 3) Finally, the superintendent's recommendation, having no other good basis for determination, was obviously made in retaliation for petitioner's deciding to consult an attorney.

Upon consideration of this matter, the Commissioner initially observes that the increment withholding under dispute herein is based on multiple grounds, three of which relate to teaching performance and one of which arises from petitioner's alleged insubordination in failing to sign and return a letter of reprimand.

With respect to the withholding as it arose from petitioner's teaching performance, the Commissioner cannot sustain the Board's action. The record is clear that petitioner's performance remained unchanged between the time the superintendent determined, in writing, not to take further disciplinary action based on the matters discussed in the crucial April 9, 1990 letter of reprimand (Exhibit P-5, supra), provided that the problems specified did not recur; those problems, including references to petitioner's prior letters of reprimand on related issues, were precisely those listed as the first three bases for the instant withholding. Neither did the Board find any reason not to offer petitioner, later in April, continued employment at a salary that did not reflect a withheld increment. The Board's June 25, 1990 decision and the superintendent's recommendation upon which it was based, then, to the extent that they relied on performance factors, must be deemed arbitrary and unreasonable.

What did change in the intervening weeks, and what clearly prompted the superintendent to reconsider his prior determination, was petitioner's repeated failure to sign and return the letter of reprimand, which failure the superintendent and Board deemed to be an act of insubordination. The ALJ recognized at pp. 10-11 of the initial decision that this omission was the turning point in the chain of events leading to the disputed withholding, and indeed, relies upon it as the lynchpin of his finding that the Board had reasonable cause and the gave petitioner reasonable notice of the disputed withholding. However, with the performance-related aspects of the withholding rejected by the Commissioner above, the question of petitioner's alleged insubordination now becomes the central issue of this matter. Whether viewed narrowly as a response to petitioner's failure to return the reprimand or more broadly as a judgment that petitioner's actions in so failing did not reflect the cooperative attitude anticipated in the letter of reprimand, the withholding as it arose from petitioner's handling of the reprimand can only be viewed as disciplinary in nature. As such, and notwithstanding that it came before the Commissioner in a context initially characterized as performance-related, as a discrete issue it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction pursuant to P.L. 1989, c. 269, which provides that withholdings for disciplinary reasons shall be subject to the contractual grievance procedure negotiated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 34:13A-5.3 and subsequent appeal to the Public Employment Relations Commission.

The Commissioner determines, therefore, to remand this matter to the Roxbury Board of Education for consideration of whether petitioner's alleged insubordination was itself a reasonable basis for withholding his 1990-91 increment. Should it so determine and once again vote to withhold the increment, petitioner's recourse is the contractual grievance procedure with appeal to PERC as set forth in P.L. 1989, c.269.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law affirming the Board's action in withholding petitioner's 1990-91 increment is set aside, as the Commissioner cannot sustain the Board's performance-related bases for withholding and the sole remaining basis is outside the scope of his authority to decide. The matter is remanded to the Board as set forth above and the Commissioner does not retain jurisdiction.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DONALD C. BACKER,	:
PETITIONER-RESPONDENT,	:
V.	:	STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT-APPELLANT.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, July 14, 1992

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Paul E. Griggs, Esq.

For the Respondent-Appellant, Rand, Algeier, Tosti & Woodruff (David B. Rand, Esq., of Counsel)

This case was initiated when Donald Backer (hereinafter "petitioner") filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the action taken by the Roxbury Township Board of Education (hereinafter "Board") to withhold his salary increase for 1990-91. This action was rooted in several incidents involving petitioner's performance in supervising students.

The first incident occurred during lunch period on February 23, 1989, when petitioner was assigned to cafeteria duty, and resulted in a letter of reprimand from the Assistant Principal on March 1, 1989. P-10, in evidence. On March 21, 1989, another incident occurred, this one involving supervision of petitioner's classroom. As a result of this incident, a letter of reprimand from the principal was issued on March 22, 1989. P-12, in evidence.

Then, on March 29, 1990, the District Superintendent observed an incident where petitioner's attention was diverted and one of his students engaged in an activity which threatened the safety of the others. This incident led to three meetings. The first involved the District Superintendent, the Principal, and petitioner, who was accompanied by his union representative. The second was between the Principal and petitioner and his union representative. The third, held at petitioner's request, was between petitioner and the District Superintendent.

Following the second meeting, the Principal issued a memorandum addressed to the District Superintendent, which was placed in petitioner's file after he signed it.

Following the third meeting, which involved petitioner and the Superintendent, the Superintendent wrote a letter which was to be included in petitioner's file. P-5, in evidence. This letter synopsised events from the time of the March 29 incident. The Superintendent concluded this letter as follows:

> Because I believe that you were sincere, and that you will make a concerted effort to ensure that your students are well supervised and meaningfully engaged, I have decided to impose no discipline further than this letter. However, any future incident of this nature may result in further disciplinary action. I am confident that this will not be necessary.

Although, as per the District's practice, petitioner had signed the past letters of reprimand, he did not sign this one. As reflected by the Superintendent's memorandum of June 12, 1990 to the members of the district board, petitioner's failure to return a signed copy of the letter caused the Superintendent to withdraw his previous recommendation that petitioner be "granted a salary increase for the 1990-91 school year." R-10, in evidence.

After apprising the Board members that he was withdrawing the recommendation, the Superintendent summarized events from the March 29 incident he had observed and provided the Board members with copies of the letters and memorandum pertaining to that incident. He also supplied the Board members with copies of the letters of reprimand relating to the two earlier incidents, indicating that he believed that these documents also supported petitioner's deficiencies. The Superintendent then detailed those deficiencies as follows:

1. Failure to supervise students properly.

2. Failure to plan educational activities to keep students engaged through the entire cycle.

3. Failure to ensure that students wear proper eye safety equipment.

4. Insubordination in not signing and returning the letter of reprimand as requested.

R-10, in evidence.

The Superintendent ended his memorandum with the recommendation that, therefore, petitioner's salary should be maintained at its then current level for 1989-90. Id.

On June 25, 1990, the Roxbury Board acted by resolution to "freeze" petitioner's salary at his 1989-90 level. As previously indicated, petitioner challenged that action by Petition of Appeal filed with the Commissioner of Education.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Following two days of hearings, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued his Initial Decision, finding that the Superintendent's observation of the March 29 incident, which had resulted in the April 9 letter, was accurate. After examining petitioner's failure to return a signed copy of the letter and concluding that this failure constituted insubordination, the ALJ turned his attention to whether the Board's action in withholding petitioner's increment was arbitrary or capricious.

The ALJ found that petitioner's problems in the area of supervision had been reflected in his evaluation report for 1986-87, his Summative Evaluation Reports for 1987-88 and 1988-89, as well as in observation reports from 1986, 1988 and 1989. The ALJ acknowledged that petitioner's 1989-90 evaluation was most complimentary, but concluded that the earlier evaluations supported the observations of petitioner's performance which the Superintendent had made in relation to the incident on March 29, 1990. The ALJ rejected petitioner's claims that the Board's action was in retaliation either for his failure to return a signed copy of the Superintendent's letter of April 9 or for seeking an attorney's advice. He also rejected petitioner's contention that the Board's offer to him in April 1990 of a teaching contract barred the subsequent withholding of his increment. The ALJ therefore recommended that the Commissioner "approve" the Board's action.

The Commissioner rejected the ALJ's recommendation. He reasoned that except for petitioner's failure to return a signed copy of the Superintendent's April 9 letter saying that he would take no further disciplinary action, petitioner's performance remained unchanged, and that, therefore, to the extent the Board's action was based on petitioner's performance, it was arbitrary and unreasonable.

The Commissioner then determined that petitioner's alleged insubordination could "only be viewed as disciplinary." He concluded that although the case had come before him in a context characterized as performance related, the disciplinary aspect of the matter was outside of his jurisdiction. The Commissioner therefore remanded the matter to the district board so that it could decide whether petitioner's alleged insubordination was itself a reasonable basis for withholding his 1990-91 increment. The Commissioner stressed that should the Board once again vote to withhold his increment, petitioner's recourse would be to the contractual grievance procedure.

For the reasons that follow, we reverse the Commissioner's decision.

Under N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, "[a]ny board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year...." The leading case setting forth the standards to be applied and the factors to be weighed in evaluating a decision by a local board to withhold a teacher's increment is Kopera v. Board of Education of the Town of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960), in which the court emphasized that the only question open for review in such cases is whether the board had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion. Id. at 295. Accordingly, in reviewing a board's action in withholding an increment, the Commissioner of Education and State Board may not substitute their judgment for that of those who made the evaluation, but should only determine: (1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was unreasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts. Id. 296-97. The burden of proving unreasonableness is upon the party challenging the Board's action. Id. at 297.

After a thorough review of the record, we conclude, as did the ALJ, that petitioner in this case has not met his burden of proving the unreasonableness of the Board's action in withholding his increment for the 1990-91 school year.

We emphasize that it is the district Board's action which is under review and not the recommendation of the Superintendent. Although we do not read the Superintendent's April 9 letter as precluding him from updating his recommendation, we reject the notion that the Superintendent's letter could have barred the Board from withholding petitioner's increment under the circumstances here.

The Board's action was based not on the Superintendent's recommendation alone, but also on documentation of the March 29 incident, the letters of reprimand issued in the two earlier incidents, and petitioner's previous evaluations and observations. As the ALJ found, the evaluations and observation reports show that petitioner had ongoing problems in the area of student supervision. These deficiencies were not eradicated by the fact that petitioner's 1989-90 evaluation was complimentary, especially in view of the March 29 incident. Clearly, the information it had before it provided the Board with a reasonable basis to withhold petitioner's increment for 1990-91 whether or not he returned a signed copy of Superintendent's April 9 letter. The fact that petitioner did not return the letter merely reinforces the reasonableness of the Board's action.

Given this conclusion, we do not pass upon the Commissioner's determination that this agency would not have had the jurisdiction to decide the disciplinary aspects of this matter had we agreed with him that petitioner's performance alone did not provide a reasonable basis for the Board's action.[1]

Margaret M. Bennett abstained.

[1] The Commissioner's determination was apparently made in consideration of amendments to N.J.S.A. 34:13A which became effective January 4, 1990. We note that, as amended, the statutes provide that any increment withheld for predominately disciplinary reasons are subject to the grievance procedure. N.J.S.A. 34:13A-26. The statutes entrust the Public Employment Relations Commission with the jurisdiction to resolve any dispute as to whether a withholding of an increment is predominately disciplinary. N.J.S.A. 34:13A-27(c). If the Commission determines that the reason, as was the case here, relates predominately to teaching performance, the individual affected may then file a petition of appeal to the Commissioner of Education, who then would decide the matter in its entirety. SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board challenged Division of Finance's determination to assign four pupils incarcerated in state correctional facilities (J.F., E.R., A.J. and W.W.) as residents of the Board's school district under The State Facilities Education Act of 1979 (N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-1 et seq.).

ALJ determined entire matter was based upon hearsay evidence. The Board, however, did produce two competent and credible witnesses. Thus, ALJ found Board met its burden of meeting the residuum rule and of demonstrating that the information supplied by Department of Human Services upon which State made its determination was unreliable as to three of the four pupils at issue. ALJ concluded J.F.'s residence was within Board's jurisdiction and Board was ordered to assume fiscal responsibility for his tuition. ALJ concluded there was insufficient evidence to determine residences of E.R., A.J. and W.W. Thus, the State was ordered to assume fiscal responsibility for them.

Commissioner adopted findings and determinations in initial decision.

BEFORE LILLARD E. LAW , ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Board of Education of the City Atlantic City (Board) challenges the determination of the New Jersey Department of Education, Division of Finance (Division) to assign four pupils incarcerated in State correction facilities as residents of the Board's school district, under The State Facilities Education Act N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-1 et. seq.

The four matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as contested cases, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq. This administrative tribunal consolidated the four cases, sua sponte. A prehearing conference was held on November 21, 1991, followed by a plenary hearing held on May 4, 1992. The hearing record closed on May 4, 1992.

ISSUE

The sole issue to be determined by this tribunal is whether the four named pupils by the Division were bona fide residents of the Board's school district on September 30, 1990?

TESTIMONIAL EVIDENCE

Donna Epperson, Program Coordinator for the New Jersey Department of Corrections (Department) testified on its behalf asserting, among other things, that she was responsible to oversee all educational programs conducted in all Department facilities. Educational programs are conducted for pupils who are incarcerated in State facilities as a consequence of a court of competent jurisdiction placement of the pupil.

Each year, prior to October 1, Ms. Epperson is responsible for the conduct of a survey of all school-aged children under the direction and control of the Department for the purpose of identifying each pupil's home school district for funding of the Department's educational programs. The Department conducts educational programs in 15 major facilities and 45 day programs, among others. The survey consists of the pupil's name and home address which is then submitted to the Division. The Division thereafter calculates the amount to be deducted from the pupil resident school district for the cost of education at the State facility.

Ms. Epperson testified she submitted the names of the four pupils under the Department's care to the Division. The Board challenged the assigned educational costs of the named pupils. As a consequence, Ms. Epperson conducted a second review and, satisfied that the original information was correct, she resubmitted the names of the four pupils to the Division as Atlantic City resident pupils.

Ms. Epperson testified, on inquiry by this tribunal, as to the source of information which formed the basis of the Department's assigning a pupil under its care to the resident school district. Ms. Epperson asserted that two sources of information were in use; (1) directly from the pupil or, (2) court commitment papers.

Ms. Epperson did not submit any court commitment papers as proof of any of the four pupil's resident address at the hearing. Moreover, she testified she did not know whether or not the commitment papers were in the pupils files at the Department's facility.

Ms. Epperson's investigation of the Board's challenge was to telephone the Department's facility in which the pupil was incarcerated and a representative of the facility would confirm the pupil's resident address. The Division does not send its personnel to investigate or verify addresses supplied to it.

Pupil J.F. (EDU 6176-91).

J.F. is a 17 year old male assigned to the Department's Ocean Residential Group Center, Forked River, New Jersey. The Department's Residential Intake Form (R-2) indicates, among other things, that J.F.'s residential address to be 31 South Connecticut Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey. It also states that J.F.'s parents are divorced and that his father's address is 126A Metropolitan Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey. The Department's Exhibit R-2, was used by it to verify J.F.' s address. No further investigation was conducted by the Department. It is noted here that the Department's Exhibit R-1 lists J.F.'s address as 301 South Connecticut Avenue.

The Board's School Social Worker, Rosemary Czech, testified that she, personally, went to the address, 31 South Connecticut Avenue where she met and talked with a custodian of the known premises. The custodian asserted that the police had conducted a drug raid at the known premises prior to October 1990 and that V.C., J.F.'s legal guardian, had left the premises and returned to Puerto Rico.

Subsequent to the Board's first challenge, Ms. Czech returned to 31 South Connecticut Avenue where she was unable to locate anyone who knew J.F. or V.C. Ms. Czech then went to the 126A Metropolitan Avenue address, identified as J.F.'s father's address (R-2). The Social Worker testified that she talked with J.F.'s aunt who reported that J.F. 's father did not live at the address and that J.F.'s mother lived in Puerto Rico. She testified that J.F.'s father now lived in Mays Landing, New Jersey. Ms. Czech testified she had a conversation with J.F. who related to her that his mother moved to Puerto Rico shortly after J.F. entered the Ocean Residential Group Center in August 1990.

Pupil E.R. (EDU 6251-91)

Pupil E. R. was 15 years of age when he was placed in the Lloyd McCorkle Training School for Boys/Girls, Skillman, New Jersey, on July 13, 1990. On his initial admission, E.R.'s address was listed as 36 North Maryland Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey and his parent/legal guardian as J.H. (R-3)

Subsequent to the Board's challenge of E.R.'s residence, Ms. Epperson telephoned the Training School and was advised of a change of address for E.R. The Training School forwarded to the Department its "New Admission Notice" (R-4) which indicated the change of address to E.R.'s grandmother at 25 Rhode Island Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Sylvia B. Harris, School Social Worker for the Board, testified that E.R.'s mother, J.H., was E.R.'s legal guardian. In or about October 1990, Ms. Harris made a home visit to 36 North Maryland Avenue where she met and talked with E.R.'s sister who asserted that the mother did not live at that address. E.R.'s sister reported that the grandmother was E.R.'s legal guardian and she lived at Collins Lake. The telephone number listed for the grandmother on the "New Admission Notice" (R-4), is an exchange in the Hammonton, New Jersey area.

Pupil A.J. (EDU 6253-91)

Ms. Epperson testified she relied upon the State Facilities Pupil Count and Assignment Report as of October 15, 1990 (R-5) for the address of pupil A.J. The Report indicated pupil A.J.'s address to be 402 North New York Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey. On October 15, 1990, pupil A.J. was 20 years of age and he had been assigned to the Mountainview Correctional Center since October 13, 1989. (R-5).

Ms. Epperson testified that the Board challenged the Department's assignment of A.J. as a resident of Atlantic City. Thereafter, Ms. Epperson contacted Mountainview which sent to her its Intake Interview form. (R-6) The Intake Interview Form indicated, among other things, A.J.'s nearest relative was A.J.'s sister, Y.J., and gave the address as 402 North New York Avenue, Atlantic City. The Intake Interview form also indicated that A.J.'s father was deceased and that his mother, J.J., " was somewhere in Atlantic City." (R-6)

School Social Worker Harris testified that J.J., A.J.'s mother, was A.J.'s legal guardian. In early November 1990, Ms. Harris made several visits to the premises known as 402 North New York Avenue and was unable to make contact with anyone. On her fourth visit, Ms. Harris was advised that J.J. had never lived at the address. However, A.J.'s sister occasionally babysat at the address.

The Board offered A.J.'s Atlantic City Schools cumulative record which demonstrated that on January 5, 1982, when A.J. was a pupil in the sixth grade, A.J. was voluntarily transferred from the Atlantic City Schools to Elwood, New Jersey, Mullica Township School District. (P-1) There is no further school record for A.J. in the Atlantic City School District.

Pupil W.W. (EDU 6175-91)

Pupil W.W. was 18 years of age on October 15, 1990, and had been admitted to the Pinelands Residential Group Center, Chatsworth, New Jersey, approximately ten (10) months. Ms. Epperson testified she relied upon the State Facilities Pupil Count and Assignment Report as of October 15, 1990, as the source of her information that W.W.'s address was 4437 Kingston Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey (R-7). The Report also indicated that W.W.'s sister, B.S., was W.W.'s legal guardian.

Ms. Epperson produced a letter, dated January 16, 1990, from the Pinelands Regional Group Center Social Worker addressed to W.W.'s sister, B.S., at 4437 Kingston Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey. (R-8) Ms. Epperson did not produce a response to the letter

Ms. Epperson also produced an unsigned memorandum dated June 21, 1991 (R-9) which indicated the most recent address for B.S. was 2603 Atlantic Avenue, Atlantic City.

The Board's School Social Worker Czech testified she attempted to locate W.W.'s sister, B.S. However, there is no such address as 4437 Kingston Avenue, Atlantic City. Thereafter, Ms Czech believing an error had been made, attempted to locate alternative properties at 44 North and South Kingston Avenue and 37 North and South Kingston Avenue, without success. Subsequently, Ms. Czech could not locate B.S. at the 2603 Atlantic Avenue address and contacted the Social Worker at the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS) in the attempt to locate B.S. The DYFS Social Worker advised Ms. Czech that B.S. is not W.W.'s legal guardian but, rather, W.W.'s father, who lives in Mays Landing, is W.W.'s legal guardian.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the testimony of the witnesses and other evidence adduced at the hearing, I FIND the following FACTS in this matter:

1. The Department offered a Residential Intake Form (R-2) as evidence that pupil J.F. resided at 31 South Connecticut Avenue, Atlantic City, prior to his admittance to the Ocean Residential Group Center on August 9, 1990.

2. There is no indication on R-2 as to who completed the Residential Intake Form nor who supplied the information contained thereon.

3. The Board's School Social Worker discovered that J.F. 's mother, V.C., had left the known premises prior to October 1990 to return to Puerto Rico.

4. It is presumed that J.F.'s mother is J.F.'s legal guardian.

5. Nonetheless, the Board's School Social Worker investigated J.F.'s father's whereabouts and discovered that the father lived in Mays Landing, outside of the Board's jurisdiction.

6. The Board offered no affidavits or other documents to support its claims that J.F.'s mother moved to Puerto Rico prior to October 1990 and/or that J.F.'s father resided in Mays Landing.

7. The Department offered a New Admission Notice (R-4) as evidence that pupil E.R. resided at 36 North Maryland Avenue, Atlantic City, prior to his admission to the Lloyd McCorkle Training School for Boys/Girls on July 13, 1990.

8. The Department's New Admission Notice (R-4) indicates that pupil E.R.'s mother, J.H., is E.R.'s legal guardian. It also indicates an address change of E.R.'s residence to his grandmother, at 25 Rhode Island Avenue, Atlantic City.

9. The Department offered no evidence as to who completed the New Admission Notice (R-4) nor who supplied the information as to R.F.'s guardian, the guardian's address or the change of address to R.F.'s grandmother.

10. The Board's School Social Worker made a home visit to 36 North Maryland Avenue address where E.R.'s sister was to have asserted that E.R.'s mother did not reside at this address.

11. The Board's School Social Worker was also advised by E.R.'s sister that E.R.'s grandmother is E.R.'s legal guardian and that the grandmother resides in Collins Lake, outside the Board's jurisdiction.

12. The Board offered no written documents, by way of affidavits, that E.R.'s mother did not reside at 36 North Maryland Avenue; that E.R.'s grandmother is E..R.'s legal guardian; or that E.R.'s grandmother resides at Collins Lake outside of the Board's jurisdiction.

13. The Department offered its Intake Interview form (R-6) as proof that pupil A.J. resided at 402 North New York Avenue, Atlantic City prior to his admission to the Mountainview Youth Correction Facility on October 13, 1989.

14. The Department's Intake Interview form (R-6) indicates that A.J.'s mother, J.J., is "somewhere in Atlantic City" and that A.J.'s sister, Y.J., resides at 402 North New York Avenue.

15. The Board produced A.J.'s Atlantic City School cumulative record which demonstrated that A.J. transferred to the Mullica Township School District, Elwood, New Jersey, on or about January 5, 1982 (P-1).

16. The Board's School Social Worker asserted that J.J., A.J.'s mother, was A.J.'s legal guardian.

17. The Board contends that A.J. had never resided at the premises known as 402 North New York Avenue. Rather, it asserts that A.J.'s sister, Y.J., occasionally babysat at the address.

18. Neither the Department nor the Board proffered affidavits with regard to the information each had in their possession with respect to the residence at 402 North New York Avenue. The Department's Intake Interview form indicates a Social Worker signature dated 11-9-89. However, it produced no documentation as to who supplied the information which is recorded on its Intake Interview form (R-6). Similarly, the Board produced no sworn documentation with regard to the residents of 402 North New York Avenue.

19. The Department relies upon a letter written on January 16, 1990 and addressed to B.S., pupil W.W.'s legal guardian (R-8) in support of its contention that W.W. is a resident of the Atlantic City Board. The letter is addressed to B.S. at 4437 Kingston Avenue, Atlantic City.

20. In addition, the Department executed the State Facilities Pupil Count and Assignment Report as of October 15, 1990 (R-7) and listed B.S. as W.W.'s legal guardian at the 4437 Kingston Avenue address.

21. The Board's School Social Worker testified, credibly, that the address of 4437 Kingston Avenue does not exist.

22. The Department did not produce any evidence that B.S. responded to its letter dated January 16, 1990 (R-8).

23. The Department produced a handwritten Memo, date stamped 21 June 1991, indicating a change of address for B.S. to 2603 Atlantic Avenue, Atlantic City, New Jersey (R-9).

24. The Board's School Social Worker testified, credibly, that she could not locate B.S. at the 2603 Atlantic Avenue address.

25. The Board's School Social Worker contacted DYFS in an attempt to locate B.S., and was advised that B.S. was not W.W.'s legal guardian but, rather, W.W.'s father who resides in Mays Landing is W.W.'s legal guardian.

26. The Board produced no affidavits or written statements from DYFS, B.S. or W.W.'s father to support its position that W.W.is not a resident of the Atlantic City Board.

DISCUSSION

This entire matter is based upon hearsay evidence. The rule governing hearsay evidence is found at N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5, Hearsay evidence; residuum rule and provides as follows:

> (a) Subject to the judge's discretion to exclude evidence under N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1(c) or a valid claim of privilege, hearsay evidence shall be admissible in the trial of contested cases. Hearsay evidence which is admitted shall be accorded whatever the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability.
> (b) Notwithstanding the admissibility of hearsay evidence, some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness.

The Department complains that the Board's hearsay evidence is absent a residuum of legally competent evidence and, therefore, it has failed to meet its burden of proof.

In his treatise on Administrative Law and Practice, the Honorable Steven L. Lefelt, ALJ (now JSC) addressed the issue of the Residuum Rule at §209 and said, in part:

> The residuum rule applies to evidence which is inadmissible under the Court rules of evidence but is allowed into evidence in an administrative proceeding where the strict rules of evidence do not apply. The residuum rule is most often associated with the admissibility of hearsay evidence in administrative hearings. Notwithstanding the > admissibility of hearsay evidence, the residuum rule requires some legally competent evidence exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness. [1] Under this rule, hearsay, "may be employed to corroborate competent proof, or competent proof may be supported or given added probative force by hearsay testimony. But in the final analysis for a court to sustain an administrative decision, which affects the substantial rights of a party, there must be a residuum of legal and competent evidence in the record to support it." [2]

>
> The residuum rule does not require each fact to be based on a residuum of legally competent evidence. Such a reading of the rule would seriously undermine the APA's dictate that all relevant evidence is admissible. What the rule does focus on is the entire decision or ultimate findings of fact. ▪▪▪
> 39 S. Lefelt, New Jersey Practice, Administrative Law and Practice, §209 (1988)

At Section 208, Judge Lefelt observes that the regulation N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5 provides that hearsay "shall be accorded whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and generally, its reliability." Judge Lefelt continues to observe that outrageous and/or improbable assertions will, therefore, receive little weight.

> Evidence that responsible persons are accustomed to rely on in the cause of important affairs may be given equal weight with non-hearsay evidence, even if technically hearsay. [Western v. State, supra.] Thus statements by a teller to a bank official will receive greater weight than would rumors from unknown sources. Statements by nameless, faceless declarants may be admissible but will carry minimal persuasiveness.

1. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b)

2. Western v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 51, 286 (1972)

In the instant matter, the Department's claims against the Board is hearsay without a residuum of legally competent evidence to support such claims. The record demonstrates the Department's Program Coordinator contacted each of its facilities subject to the Board's challenge of the pupil assignment to the Board's school district. The Division offered no affidavits sworn under oath, that the addresses of each of the assigned pupils were, in fact, the bona fide address for that pupil. Rather, the Department proffered a series of hearsay documents, by unknown declarants for the purpose of proving the addresses asserted. In one instance, the address given for pupil W.W. was nonexistent (R-7). This error in address was subsequently modified by a second hearsay document (R-9).

The Department could not assert, with any degree of certainty, as to how, or by whom, the information concerning the pupils addresses was derived. It suggested that the information could have been supplied by the pupil, the pupil's guardian or a duly executed court order. It produced no court orders with regard to any of the four identified pupils. Nor could it produce any information as to how the addresses for each of the pupils was transmitted. Further, the Division engaged in no independent investigation to ascertain the truth of the information asserted.

The Board, on the other hand, produced two competent and credible witnesses who testified as to their personal knowledge and observations with regard to each of the reported pupil addresses and/or the location of the pupils' legal guardian. Mattero v. Silverman, 79 N.J. Super. 449 (App. Div. 1963) cert. den. N.J. 115 (1963). I FIND and CONCLUDE that such personal knowledge and observations is competent evidence and satisfies the Board's burden of meeting the residuum rule.

THE LAW

The State Facilities Education Act of 1979 provides at N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-2 as follows:

> For each child who is resident in a district and in a State Facility on her last school day in September of the prebudget year, the Commissioner of Education shall deduct from the State Aid payable to such district an amount equal to the State average net current expense budget per pupil plus the appropriate categorical program support ....

Section 12 of the Act provides, in pertinent part, that:

> For school funding purposes, the Commissioner of Education shall determine district residence as follows:
>
> b. The district of residence for children who are in residential State facilities, or who have been placed by State agencies in group homes, private schools or out-of- state facilities, shall be the present district of residence of the parent or guardian with whom the child lived prior to his most recent admission to the State facility or most recent placement by a State agency.
>
> If this cannot be determined, the district of residence shall be the district in which the child resided prior to such admission or placement.
>
> c. If the district of residence cannot be determined according to the criteria contained herein ▪▪▪ the State shall assume fiscal responsibility for the tuition of the child.

Pupil J.F. (EDU 6176-91)

The facts concerning pupil J.F. demonstrates that prior to October 1990, V.C., J.F.'s legal guardian resided at 31 South Connecticut Avenue prior to her return to Puerto Rico. The Board's witnesses, School Social Worker Rosemary Czech testified she was in conversation with the custodian of the known property who advised Ms. Czech of V.C.'s former presence.

Notwithstanding that the Board's School Social Worker was able to ascertain that J.F.'s father lived in Mays Landing, Ms. Czech was not able to identify which of the parents had legal custody of J.F. Giving the Department all favorable inference with respect to the guardianship issue, I CONCLUDE that its assertion that J.F.'s mother, V.C, is J.F.'s legal guardian, must stand.

I CONCLUDE that under the circumstances, J.F.'s residence is within the jurisdiction of the Board by virtue of §12b. of the Act for the purposes of N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-2.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the Board assume the fiscal responsibility for the tuition of J.F. at the Ocean Residential Group Center for the 1990-91 School Year.

Pupil E.R. (EDU 6251-91)

I CONCLUDE there is insufficient evidence to demonstrate, under the criteria set forth in §12b of the Act, that pupil E.R.'s parent or guardians resided within the jurisdiction of the Board or, that E.R. resided in Atlantic City prior to his admission to the Lloyd McCorkle Training School. The Department was uncertain as to who supplied it with the information of the original address given for pupil E.R. or the subsequent change of address.

The Board's School Social Worker, Sylvia Harris, through a direct contact and observation, was able to ascertain that neither E.R.'s mother, J.H., nor his grandmother lived at either of the reported addresses at 25 Rhode Island Avenue or 36 North Maryland Avenue. The record establishes that E.R.'s sister resides at 36 North Maryland Avenue. It also demonstrates that she advised Ms. Harris that E.R.'s grandmother was E.R.'s legal guardian who resided at Collins Lake, outside of the Board's jurisdiction. The telephone number supplied for the grandmother by the Department does, in fact, show a telephone exchange for Hammonton, New Jersey.

Consequently, I CONCLUDE that E.R.'s residence within the Board's jurisdiction has not been established pursuant to the criteria under §12b of the Act.

I CONCLUDE that E.R.'s school district of residence cannot be determined and, therefore, "the State shall assume fiscal responsibility for the tuition of" E.R. for the 1990-91 school year. N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12c.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Pupil A.J. (EDU 6253-91)

The facts in this matter clearly shows that the address of pupil A.J., as provided to the Department, was not nor could it have been the pupil's address at any time.

The direct observation of School Social Worker Harris demonstrates that the only contact A.J.'s family had with 402 North New York Avenue was A.J.'s sister occasionally providing babysitting service there.

In addition, the Board produced A.J.'s Atlantic City School cumulative record which demonstrated that A.J. voluntarily transferred out of the Board's jurisdiction on January 5, 1982. Neither party proffered any evidence to show that A.J. had reentered the jurisdiction of the Board.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, it has not been established that A.J.'s residence is within the jurisdiction of the Board for purposes of tuition to the Mountainview Youth Correction Center, pursuant to §2 of the Act.

Accordingly, under §12c of the Act, it is ORDERED that the State assume fiscal responsibility for A.J.'s tuition for the 1990-91 school year.

Pupil W.W. (EDU 6175-91)

The herein record demonstrates that the Department had been given a fictitious address for pupil W.W. upon his admittance to Pinelands Residential Group. The Board's School Social Worker diligently search for W.W.'s sister at the reported address without success. It was through Ms. Czech's diligence that she discovered it was W.W.'s father who is W.W.'s legal guardian and lives in Mays Landing outside of the Board's jurisdiction.

I CONCLUDE there is no proof that W.W. is or has been a resident of the Board's School District.

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that pupil W.W.'s school district of residence cannot be determined.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the State shall assume the fiscal responsibility of W.W. pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12c. for the purposes of N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-2.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE,	:	DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent Division of Finance of the New Jersey State Department of Education (Finance) filed timely exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Finance agrees with the ALJ's determination that the Atlantic City Board of Education is responsible for the tuition for J.F. because his mother clearly resided in Atlantic City before returning to Puerto Rico and because the Board could not prove that the mother moved before September 30, 1990. However, as to the other three children at issue in this matter, and the matter of which entity is responsible for tuition pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-2, Finance avers the ALJ erred in assessing the burden of proof in this matter. Finance asserts it was not incumbent upon the Department to prove where the child lived prior to commitment to a state facility or to have to present any case at all. Neither, it claims, was it charged with having to do an independent investigation to prove that the information provided to establish residence of the parent or guardian with whom the child lived prior to admission to a state facility was correct.

Rather, Finance submits, in choosing to appeal the matter, the burden was on the Board to convince the court that the district of residence decision by Finance was incorrect, because it was the Board which sought to prove that the district of residence determination made by the Department of Education based on the information provided by the Department of Human Services was in error. Further, Finance argues that in meeting its burden, the Board failed to meet the residuum rule in seeking to demonstrate that the district of residence of the three remaining cases was not Atlantic City.

Finance claims the ALJ erred in concluding that there is insufficient evidence to demonstrate that any of the three remaining pupils' parents or guardians lived in Atlantic City, because the ALJ accepted the hearsay testimony of the social worker, without more in the way of affidavits or documentation to support the social worker's unsubstantiated testimony regarding her interviews concerning each child's former residence.

Finance avers the Board failed to provide anything except hearsay testimony that the district of residence determination was improper, and for that reason, Finance seeks reversal of the ALJ's determination as to E.R., A.J. and W.W. for failure to meet its burden of proof in this matter.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner adopts as his own those findings and determinations as set forth in the initial decision. The Commissioner concurs with Finance's assessment that the ultimate burden of proof in this matter rests with petitioner, because the Board challenges the determination regarding domicile made by the Department of Education based on the information provided by the Department of Human Services. However, the Commissioner finds and determines that a mere reiteration of its original documentation relied upon by the State is simply inadequate in the cases of E.R., A.J. and W.W. to withstand the inferences to be drawn against the State's determination by virtue of testimony elicited from the social worker assigned to investigate the circumstances of the domicile of each child's parent or guardian.

The Commissioner so finds taking into account the cogent discussion proffered by the ALJ on the residuum rule. The Commissioner finds such explication dispositive of the Division of Finance's exceptions regarding the residuum rule and adopts such findings as his own.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed by the ALJ, as supplemented herein, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision as the final decision in this matter. He directs that the State assume fiscal responsibility for W.W., A.J. and E.R. pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12c, and that petitioner assume fiscal responsibility for J.F.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :
APPEAL OF THE RIDGEFIELD PARK : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY. : DECISION

IN THE MATTER OF THE CAP WAIVER :

APPEAL OF THE RIDGEFIELD PARK : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

_____:

For Petitioner, James L. Plosia, Jr., Esq. (Sills, Cummis, Zuckerman, Radin, Tischman, Epstein & Gross)

For the Village of Ridgefield Park, Michael T. Durkin, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner on May 13, 1992 through the Ridgefield Park Board of Education's (Board) filing of an appeal of the cap waiver defeated by the voters of the Ridgefield Park School District on April 7, 1992. On June 24, 1992, Michael T. Durkin, Attorney for the Village of Ridgefield Park, notified the Commissioner that it would not participate in the appeal because under the provisions of Chapter 62 of the Laws of 1991, it believes the Legislature has not conferred on it the authority to so participate and given that the budget was not submitted to the governing body for its review, it believes that any participation in the proceeding would be largely procedural, not substantive. It further states that:

> Furthermore, the Governing Board of the Village of Ridgefield Park does not question the authority of the Commissioner of Education in his role to mandate expenditures for a school district where those expenditures are necessary for a thorough and efficient education of the students within the district. Indeed, in our particular case, according to the information > that has been received by the Governing Body through newspapers and informal discussions with the members of the Board of Education, a number of teachers within the School District will be laid off if the cap waiver is not granted. We believe, however, that the Commissioner of Education has a duty to make that determination and the Governing Body of the Village of Ridgefield Park has no authority in this particular matter because of the statutory language on cap waivers.(Durkin's Letter, at p. 2)

On July 7, 1992, the Board submitted its position statement pursuant to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6:24-7.8(a), thus it was on that date that the record in this matter closed.

It is the Board's contention that in addition to the current expense budget approved by the voters of the Ridgefield Park School District on April 7, 1992 in the amount of $8,440,810, there is a need for an additional $238,000 in current expense in order for the district to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students.

On February 27, 1992, Alfred Marbaise, Bergen County Acting Superintendent of Schools, conditionally approved the Ridgefield Park School District's budget subject to the cap waiver amounts set forth below which were deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by him.

ACCOUNT TITLE	ACCOUNT NO.	AMOUNT
Business Teacher Junior-Senior High School	04-213	$ 54,829
Foreign Language Teacher Junior-Senior High School	04-213	54,829
Elementary Music Teacher	02-213	37,202
Elementary Guidance Teacher to go to full time	05-214	21,140
Director of Curriculum	05-211	70,000
Total		$238,000

In addition to the foregoing, there was an additional $26,000 in current expense cap waiver monies sought by the Board at the April 7, 1992 annual school election but those monies were not deemed necessary for a thorough and efficient education by the acting county superintendent. The monies in contention in this matter are, therefore, as set forth below.

	Proposed tax levy adopted by Board of Education	Amount of tax levy approved by the voters
Current expense	$8,440,810	$8,440,810
Capital Outlay	-0-	-0-
Cap waiver: (T&E)
Current expense	$ 238,000	-0-
Capital expense	-0-	-0-
Total	$8,678,810	$8,440,810

The reasons for the Board's belief that the $238,000 in cap waiver monies set forth above are necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to its students is set forth in specific and comprehensive detail for each line item in the affidavit of Robert J. Sipos, the Interim Superintendent of Schools, and the Board's brief in support of its cap waiver appeal, both of which are incorporated herein by reference. In summation, the Board states, inter alia:

> The funds Ridgefield Park seeks to have restored exclusively provide certified personnel and, as such, go to the very heart of a school district's mission: the offering of educational services. Second, not only are the positions being lost in conjunction with a zero-growth budget and with numerous reductions in other line items, but the District is being asked to provide services for a growing student population with a considerably smaller staff than before. See Exhibit P-6.
> Finally, even if the cap waiver is granted in its entirety and the funds are thereby restored to the District, the overall budgetary increase with > the cap waiver funds only amounts to an increase of approximately 1.7% over the 1991-1992 budget. See Sipos Cert. at Para. 23. Given the increase in fixed costs inherent in any school budget, this increase even with the cap waiver funds will not prevent the Board from losing ground in terms of educational offerings. The cap waiver funds, however, will at least allow the Board to stave off the most drastic and educationally damaging changes for the 1992-1993 school year, thereby allowing the Board to have an educationally viable base from which it can hopefully build in future budget years. (Board's Brief, at pp. 10-11)

Upon review of the record of this matter, including the extensive documentation provided by the district in support of the necessity of the cap waiver funds, which is likewise incorporated herein by reference, the Commissioner finds and determines that the requested relief shall and is hereby granted as the Board has borne its burden of demonstrating that these funds are necessary for the provision of a thorough and efficient education to the students of the Ridgefield Park School District. East Brunswick Township Board of Education v. East Brunswick Township Council, 48 N.J. 94 (1966); Board of Education of the Township of Deptford v. Mayor and Council of the Township of Deptford, 116 N.J. 305 (1989)

Accordingly, the Bergen County Board of Taxation is hereby ordered to adjust the Ridgefield Park School District's tax levy for the 1992-93 school year to reflect an increase of $238,000 for current expense which results in a total current expense tax levy of $8,678,810.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF ROSELLE, UNION COUNTY,
Respondent.

James M. Weinberg, Esq., for petitioner

Nathanya G. Simon, Esq., for respondent
(Schwartz, Simon & Edelstein, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 2, 1992 Decided: June 9, 1992

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. on April 29, 1991. The petitioner, Richard Brazil, is a custodian employed by the respondent who alleged that the Board's intention to terminate his employment would be in violation of his tenure. The case originally was assigned to Administrative Law Judge Steven Lefelt. However, following Judge Lefelt's appointment to the New Jersey Superior Court, the matter was reassigned to the undersigned administrative law judge

As a result of discussions between counsel, the terms and conditions of a tentative settlement were negotiated and an agreement containing those provisions, signed by the parties, has been submitted to me for review.

Based upon my review and consideration of the entire file in this matter, I believe that the terms of the attached settlement are fair and reasonable and should be approved. That agreement provides in essential part that for purposes of acquisition of tenure, the Board will recognize Brazil's periods of service, except for a certain six-month suspension period, and his tenure will be as of January 16, 1992. Also, he will be placed upon the step on the guide that he would have been on but for the suspension. Brazil will dismiss, with prejudice, his petition of appeal, as well as a request for arbitration he previously filed with the American Arbitration Association.

Accordingly, I FIND that:

1. The parties voluntarily have agreed to the terms of the settlement as evidenced by the signatures which appear on the settlement agreement; and

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with law.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

ROSELLE EDUCATION ASSOCIATION, (On behalf of Richard Brazil) Petitioner vs. ROSELLE BOARD OF EDUCATION, Respondent.	AMERICAN ARBITRATION ASSOCIATION DOCKET NO. 18 390 00224 91D

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement is executed this 26 day of May 1992 by and between Richard Brazil (hereafter "Brazil"), Roselle Education Association (hereafter "Association"), and Roselle Board of Education (hereafter "Board");

WHEREAS, on or about December 20, 1990, Brazil was suspended with pay based on an incident at Harrison School on December 19, 1990; and

WHEREAS, on January 15, 1991, Brazil was suspended without pay effective January 15, 1991 to June 30, 1991; and

WHEREAS, effective July 1, 1991, Brazil returned to employment with the Board; and

WHEREAS, a petition of appeal was filed before the Commissioner of Education contesting the Board's actions and further the actions taken by the Board were grieved to arbitration on behalf of Brazil by the Association; and

WHEREAS, Brazil, Association and the Board desire to fully and finally resolve and settle all claims between them arising out of the incident involving Brazil which occurred on or about December 19, 1990 at Harrison School.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises and covenants contained herein, the parties do hereby agree as follows:

1. For purposes of acquisition of contractual tenure as set forth in Article IV, Paragraph E of the negotiated Agreement between the Board of Education and the Roselle Education Association, the Board of Education will recognize all periods of service by Brazil except for his six (6) month suspension without pay. Thus, tenure will attach on or about January 16, 1992 pursuant to the following formula:

October 1, 1988 to October 1, 1989 = 1 year credit; October 1, 1989 to October 1, 1990 = 1 year credit; October 1, 1990 through January 15, 1991 = .35 credit; July 1, 1991 to January 16, 1992 = .65 credit; for a total of three (3) years of service.

2. For the 1991-92 school year, Brazil shall be given credit for purposes of step movement on the guide such that he shall be placed on the step he would have been on but for the suspension without pay. Brazil shall receive the pay differential for the 1991-92 school year for days worked.

3. Brazil and the Association will withdraw and dismiss with prejudice the Petition of Appeal now pending before the Commissioner of Education/Office of Administrative Law, and the request for arbitration filed with the American Arbitration Association.

4. Brazil and the Association do hereby release and discharge the Board from any and all claims, rights and causes of action of any nature whatsoever arising from or in anyway connected with the facts and circumstances surrounding the employment actions taken by the Board, its agents, servants or employees, in December 1990 and January 1991. This Release expressly terminates all proceedings which Brazil and the Association now have, and includes any and all claims for any expenses, damages, salary, fringe benefits and/or other expenses incurred by Brazil and/or the Association on behalf of Brazil to date. However, it is specifically acknowledged and agreed that this settlement does not waive any rights either party may have based on any new employment situation and/or action.

5. Each party hereto expressly acknowledges that each has had appropriate competent representation concerning the terms and conditions of this settlement, that each knows and understands the contents hereof and enter into this Agreement voluntarily and without any undue influence or duress. This Release and Settlement Agreement contains the entire understanding of the parties. This Agreement is binding on the parties, their heirs, executors, administrators and assigns. This Release and Settlement Agreement shall be governed by the Laws of the State of New Jersey. This Agreement shall not be modified except by a writing to be signed by both parties.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereunder set their hands and seal.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning defeated candidates for school board requested inquiry into alleged violations of education law in connection with certain mailing which did not identify the sending party as required by law. Petitioners did not challenge the outcome of the election.

ALJ determined that petitioners identified and made public the existence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97 but that the record was inconclusive regarding who was responsible. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the mailing in question did not meet the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97, and that a violation of election law occurred but was not sufficient to affect the outcome of the election. However, regarding personal responsibility for the violation, the Commissioner was unable to render a decision as his role is limited to determining solely whether a violation has occurred. (Old Bridge) Commissioner further noted that petitioners were free to bring allegations regarding campaign contributions to the Election Law Enforcement Commission, which has jurisdiction over such matters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:44A-22.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 2998-92
AGENCY DKT. NO. 104-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE TOMS RIVER REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, OCEAN COUNTY

Martin Fotusky and Vincent DeGennaro, petitioners, appearing pro se

Milton H. Gelzer, Esq., on behalf of Toms River Regional School District (Gelzer, Kelaher, Shea, Novy & Carr, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 28, 1992 Decided: June 3, 1992

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter arises out of a complaint filed by petitioners, defeated candidates in the April 1992 School Board Election held by the Toms Regional School District. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. An inquiry was conducted on May 28, 1992, at the Pine Beach Municipal Hall, after which the record closed.

The question presented is whether violations of the education law were committed during the April 1992 school board election in connection with a certain mailing.

Initially petitioners stipulated that their complaint did not seek to disturb the results of the election. This satisfied the interests of the Toms River Regional School District. After a brief legal presentation concerning the proofs necessary to overturn a school board election, and the undisputed representation that the candidates who prevailed did so by substantial margins, Mr. Gelzer and his client withdraw from the proceeding.

Petitioner Martin Fotusky testified that he received a postcard in the mail advancing the candidacy of the incumbents and suggesting passage of the budget without any attribution. He believed that this was likely sent by a coalition of local teachers and submitted a newsletter called "United School Employees" Volume III, No. 2, dated March 23, 1992 to support this assessment. This newsletter endorses the incumbents as "people we can work with" and sets out a campaign strategy. The newsletter indicates that letters would be sent to New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) members who live within the Toms River School District to be followed by postcards just before the election as a reminder.

Mr. Fotusky testified that he brought this matter to the attention of the county prosecutor; an investigation was commenced, but apparently no action was taken.

Vincent DeGennaro testified that he too received this postcard without attribution. He believed that the incumbents bear responsibility, whether they had actual knowledge of the mailing or not; it was done for their benefit.

Harold Eccles testified that the cost of this mailing should have been reported to the Election Law Enforcement Commission (ELEC) as an "in kind" contribution and this was not done.

Robert L. Kernasovic is one of the incumbents who was reelected. He testified that he spoke for himself as well as for the other two candidates, Thomas Baxter and Thomas D. Miserendino, who were unable to attend the hearing because they were working. Mr. Kernasovic testified that the literature he prepared or authorized contained all proper disclosures and that he was not aware of where the postcard in question came from. He does not know who prepared it, paid for it, or mailed it. This is the substance of the record.

N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97 et seq. provides that campaign materials used in connection with school board elections must be attributed in a prescribed manner. The postcard in question does not provide a clue as to its orgin, and thus I FIND that there has been an infraction of the school laws. The record is, however, inconclusive on the question of who is responsible. We cannot simply deem the candidates responsible; they deny involvement and there are no proofs to the contrary. The record suggests that the United School Employees may have had a role in this, but no one from that organization appeared, and apparently no subpoenas were issued in the matter. The newsletter alone is an insufficient link.

Thus petitioners' have correctly identified and made public the existence of a violation; they must be satisfied with this as the compensation for their efforts. As the matter has already been referred to the prosecutor there is no point in pursuing that avenue; the Commissioner may wish to consider referring the matter to ELEC for further inquiry.

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that this matter be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL	:
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE TOMS	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
RIVER REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	DECISION
OCEAN COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioners' exceptions, which attempt to bring further information to the record, request a hearing transcript and urge the Commissioner to undertake an independent investigation to determine who was responsible for the contested mailing, were timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Upon review of the matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the mailing in question clearly did not meet the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97, so that a violation of election law occurred but was not, as conceded by all parties, sufficient to affect the outcome of the election. With respect to the question of personal responsibility for the violation, however, the Commissioner cannot pass judgment; rather, his role is limited to determining, as he has herein, if a violation occurred and whether it affected the outcome of the election. As the State Board of Education held in In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Township of Old Bridge, Middlesex County, decided July 6, 1988, > N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12 does not entrust the Commissioner with the responsibility for or the authority to adjudicate the guilt of individuals who may be responsible for violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97 occurring during an election subject to inquiry pursuant to that statute.

> Accordingly, that aspect of the Commissioner's decision relating to whether Mr. Hagerty was responsible for the irregularity at issue must be considered to be merely dicta, and his decision does not in any way represent a legal conclusion as to the culpability of any individual for purposes of imposition of the penalties prescribed by N.J.S.A. 18A:14-104.
> (Slip Opinion, at pp. 4-5)

Because the question of whether a violation occurred and if it affected the outcome of the election was answered to petitioners' satisfaction by the ALJ in findings adopted herein, no purpose would be served by further proceedings as requested by petitioners. The Commissioner is under no obligation to review hearing transcripts when he takes no exception to the ALJ's factual findings and transcripts have not been provided to him by the parties pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.11. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987) Further, in matters of election inquiry, the Commissioner's role is an adjudicative, not an investigative one, so that the burden to prove allegations would rest with petitioners even if the Commissioner did have authority to make a determination of personal guilt.

Finally, the Commissioner notes that the initial decision makes reference to testimony suggesting possible violation of laws governing campaign contributions. While no conclusions can be reached as to that matter herein, the Commissioner observes that petitioners are free to bring their allegations to the Election Law Enforcement Commission, which has jurisdiction over such matters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 19:44A-22.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law, finding that a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97 occurred but otherwise dismissing the instant inquiry as a controversy before the Commissioner, is affirmed as amplified herein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BEFORE ARNOLD SAMUELS, ALJ:

On February 4, 1992, the petitioner, Carol M. Fletcher, filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education, alleging that she was entitled to retroactive pay for services rendered as a cafeteria worker prior to her termination by the respondent, and that respondent did not remit the amount claimed along with her termination pay.

Respondent filed an answer on February 18, 1992, and on February 25, 1992, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing and determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On May 29, 1992, counsel for respondent advised that the matter had been amicably resolved. On June 3, 1992, a written stipulation of settlement and withdrawal of request for hearing was filed with the Office of Administrative Law. A copy of the document, signed by the petitioner and respondent's attorney, is attached hereto and made a part hereof.

Based on the foregoing, it is CONCLUDED that the dispute has been resolved, and that petitioner has withdrawn her request for hearing and relief

It is therefore ORDERED that the withdrawal be approved pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.2. Therefore, I ORDER the Clerk to return this matter to the agency for appropriate disposition.

SYNOPSIS

Following RIF, petitioner, who served as home economics teacher for 17 years, acquired endorsement on her instructional certificate to serve as an elementary teacher. Petitioner contended respondent therefore was obligated to rehire her for position of elementary school teacher whenever one became available. Respondent argued petitioner did not acquire endorsement until after RIF.

ALJ found Board improperly and illegally denied petitioner an elementary teaching position and, further, failed to notify petitioner of vacancy. Board was ordered to reinstate petitioner with compensation regardless of her lack of experience.

Commissioner reversed findings and determination in initial decision and dismissed petition of appeal. Commissioner found petitioner had no entitlement to the claimed elementary position as date of employee's RIF must serve as date certain on which the employee's rights are reckoned for future entitlement purposes. John T. Barbour, Esq., for the respondent (Barbour & Costa, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 4, 1992 Decided: June 8, 1992

BEFORE AUGUST E. THOMAS, ALJ T/A:

A petition of appeal was filed with the Commissioner of Education in this matter on October 1, 1991. Thereafter the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

Petitioner is tenured, having served as a home economics teacher for 17 consecutive years beginning on or about September 1972. In April 1989, petitioner's position was terminated by the Board of Education (Board) in a reduction in force (RIF), effective for the 1989-90 school year. In January 1991, the New Jersey Department of Education, State Board of Examiners, issued to petitioner an "emergency certificate" authorizing her to serve as a teacher of the handicapped from January 1991 through July 1991. Petitioner was employed by the Board as a teacher of the handicapped at its Salem High School from January 2, 1991, through June 30, 1991. While so employed, the State Board of Examiners in April 1991 issued to petitioner an endorsement on her instructional certificate to serve as an elementary school teacher.

Subsequent to petitioner's acquisition of her elementary school teacher endorsement, a vacancy occurred in respondent's school district in the position of elementary school teacher. Additionally, other vacancies occurred in the district. Nevertheless, petitioner was notified in July 1991 that she would not be offered employment in the school district in the coming year. The Board hired nontenured teachers (six) to fill the vacant positions.

Petitioner demands employment in the district under the tenure laws stating that she is qualified to teach and that teachers who lose positions as a result of a RIF are to be placed upon a "preferred eligible list" for reemployment in their districts whenever a vacancy occurs.

Respondent, while admitting petitioner's history regarding her employment in the district, denies that she is qualified there for employment and moved to enjoin in this litigation the nontenured teachers employed after petitioner received notice that she would not be employed, asserting that their rights may be affected if petitioner is reinstated.

Respondent moved for a hearing arguing that there are "educationally sound reasons" for the Board's actions and that petitioner did not have the required certification at the time of the events that now trigger her claim to entitlement to the contested positions.

The State Board of Examiners has determined that petitioner is qualified as an elementary school teacher and is authorized to teach in the public schools of New Jersey. Therefore, in my judgment the question to be answered is whether or not the endorsement earned on petitioner's teaching certificate after the termination of her position as the result of a RIF meets the legal requirement for her continued employment under the tenure statutes. This is not a factual dispute.

Based on this rationale, respondent's motion to enjoin the six nontenured teachers and to hold a hearing in this matter was denied by Order dated March 11, 1992. There was no appeal.

Petitioner seeks reinstatement in any position for which she is qualified, back pay, and pre-judgment interest pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16. Petitioner asserts that the Board acted in bad faith after being notified of her statutory entitlement to the position she requested (see Exhibits 1 & 2 attached to petitioner's letter brief in support of summary decision).

DISCUSSION

Statutory law in New Jersey allows for a reduction in force for economic reasons in a school budget. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, Reduction of force; power to reduce and reasons for reduction, states:

> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article.

Here, for economic reasons, the Board abolished its home economics department.

Petitioner is a "teaching staff member" defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1 as:

> a member of the professional staff of any district or regional board of education, or any board of education of a county vocational school, holding office, position or employment of such character that the qualifications, for such office, position or employment, require him to hold a valid and effective standard, provisional or emergency certificate, appropriate to his office, position or employment, issued by the state board of examiners . . . .

Petitioner acquired tenure in the school district. Therefore, she had tenure in all positions for which her instructional certificate qualified her In Ellicott v. Board of Education of Frankford, 251 N.J. Super. 342, 349 (App. Div. 1991), a teaching staff member filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education asserting her tenure right to a newly created position as a full-time learning disabilities teacher, which the school board had filled with a nontenured teaching staff member. The Superior Court, Appellate Division, held that she was entitled to the position since she had the endorsement on her teacher's certificate, regardless of her experience in the position, stating that "a teaching staff member has tenure in all positions for which his instructional certificate qualifies him."

New Jersey's statutes afford protection for tenured individuals who lose their jobs as a result of a RIF. Specifically, courts have held that the tenure act should be liberally construed to achieve its beneficial ends. Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63, 74 (1982); see also, Bednar v. Westwood Board of Education, 221 N.J. Super. 239, 241 (App. Div. 1987), where the court held that, the tenure statute "should be liberally construed to further its beneficial purpose of affording security to teaching staff who meet its standard of length of service." Additionally, the court has stated that "the tenure provisions in our school laws were designed to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording to principals and teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service." Viemester v. Board of Education of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (1949). According to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, Dismissal of persons having tenure on reduction; reemployment:

> If any teaching staff member shall be dismissed as a result of such reduction, such person shall be and remain upon a preferred eligible list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person shall be qualified and he shall be reemployed by the body causing dismissal, if and when such vacancy occurs and in determining seniority, and in computing length of service for reemployment, full recognition shall be given to previous years of service . . . . [Emphasis added]

Thus, when a teaching staff member loses her position due to a reduction in force, it is mandatory that the individual be placed on a waiting list to be placed in a position for which she is qualified. Petitioner acquired an endorsement on her teacher's certificate for teaching elementary school. Hence, after losing her position as a home economics teacher as a result of a RIF, respondent was obligated to rehire petitioner for the position of elementary school teacher when it became available.

Respondent's main argument for not hiring petitioner as an elementary school teacher is that petitioner is not qualified since she does not have experience. Specifically, respondent argues that educational standards must be met, such as "certain student performance levels on State mandated testing at the third and sixth grade levels. . . . In order to meet these student proficiencies, it is crucial, particularly in the respondent's setting, to have the strongest elementary teachers possible." Respondent's brief at 4. Petitioner allegedly scored poorly in her National Teacher's Exam. Thus, respondent argues, it has a right to reject her application since the Board's emphasis is on strong preliminary education. Further, respondent argues that petitioner did not acquire her endorsement until after the RIF.

It is necessary to note herE, that petitioner successfully passed the National Teacher's Exam and was determined qualified by the State Board of Examiner which issued the elementary school teacher endorsement on her instructional certificate.

Respondent's arguments are not supported by case law, where the court has held that a tenured teacher is to be provided the opportunity for reemployment. In Dennery v. Passaic Valley High School, 251 N.J. Super. 144 (App. Div. 1991), the court held that a former guidance counselor's tenure rights were violated when she was denied a position as class supervisor after her position was abolished following a RIF and the school board hired another applicant from outside of the school district who never held such a position and did not have tenure rights in that school district. "A tenured teacher is entitled to retention against a nontenured teacher . . . in the event of a RIF." Ellicott, supra, at 349.

A case similar to the present matter is Capodilupo v W. Orange Tp. Education Board, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), in which the court held that a tenured secondary school physical education teacher was entitled to reinstatement to an elementary school teaching position held by nontenured teachers, upon a reduction in force of teaching staff, even if he had not acquired any demonstrable experience. "[A] tenured teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is entitled to preference in a RIF as against a non-tenured applicant with the same certification." Id., at 515. See also, Ellicott, supra, at 349, where the court held that "a tenured teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is entitled to preference in a RIF as against a nontenured applicant with the same certification . . . despite the fact that the tenured teacher had no 'demonstrable experience' under the endorsement." Thus, the tenured physical education teacher was entitled to reinstatement as an elementary school physical education teacher.

In dictum, the court has noted that a board of education may balance a tenured person in a RIF against "sound educationally based reasons for its decision to retain a non-tenured teacher." Capodilupo, supra, at 515-516. However, this approach was questioned in Ellicott, in which the court stated that even if the board balances tenure against "'sound educational policy,' it erodes tenure rights 'which appear plain on the face of the statute, which [the Court is] bound to recognize and which can be removed only by the Legislature.'" Ellicott, supra, at 351, quoting Bednar, supra.

SUMMARY

In this matter, after being "riffed," petitioner acquired an endorsement on her certificate, making her eligible to teach handicapped children. She was temporarily reemployed by the respondent, teaching handicapped children, during which time she acquired an endorsement to teach elementary school. Subsequently, six elementary school teacher positions became available in the district and petitioner, by statute, had a right to be offered one of those positions. Respondent, however, did not offer a position to petitioner. Rather, respondent hired six nontenured individuals. This action was inappropriate. As previously stated, statutory and case law require that respondent offer one of these positions to petitioner, who is tenured and has the appropriate endorsement on her teacher's certificate, regardless of the fact that she lacks experience in elementary education.

Accordingly, a tenured teacher who is riffed and acquires an endorsement on her teacher's certificate subsequent to a RIF can seek reinstatement against nontenured teachers in her new job category. After a RIF, the statutes and case law require that the school board rehire a tenured teacher with the appropriate endorsement over a nontenured teacher, regardless of whether the individual has had any actual experience in that category. In the present matter, petitioner has the appropriate certification but does not have any actual experience in elementary education. Nonetheless, respondent is required to rehire her in one of the elementary school teacher positions now available.

CONCLUSION

Based on the analysis of the above-cited cases and the undisputed facts in the present case, I FIND that the Board improperly and illegally denied petitioner an elementary teaching position when one first became available. The Board failed to notify petitioner of the vacancy, which it was obligated to do.

Accordingly, petitioner is to be reinstated immediately to any position for which she is qualified in accordance with the statutes and the above-cited cases. Her reinstatement shall include all back pay and emoluments she would have received had she been reemployed at the time of the initial vacancy.

PRE-JUDGMENT INTEREST

The Commissioner may award pre-judgment interest in any circumstance in which a petitioner has sought such relief and has successfully established a claim to a monetary award. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16. Subsection (c) of this regulation specifies that pre-judgment interest shall be awarded by the Commissioner "when he or she has concluded that the denial of the monetary claim was an action taken in bad faith and/or has been determined to have been taken in deliberate violation of statute or rule."

In the pre-judgment interest application I FIND the following facts:

1. The Board was aware of petitioner's tenure status.

2. The Board was aware that petitioner had acquired an endorsement on her instructional certificate to serve as an elementary school teacher.

3. The Board had employed petitioner as a teacher of the handicapped at its Salem High School between January 2, 1991, and June 30, 1991, and knew that petitioner was available for reemployment.

4. The Board was put on notice of petitioner's claim and legal position by letter dated August 13, 1991, from petitioner's counsel (Exhibit "1").

5. Petitioner advised the Board and its counsel that she would seek pre-judgment interest by letter dated December 9, 1991 (Exhibit "2").

However, I also FIND as fact that the Board believed that petitioner had no legitimate claim to the elementary teacher position for which she earned an endorsement on her instructional certificate after she lost her position due to a RIF. I FIND also that the Board screened and/or interviewed 109 applicants for the six positions and judged petitioner to be less qualified than all of the successful candidates.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that there is no showing of bad faith or deliberate violation of the statutes. Accordingly, petitioner's application for pre-judgment interest is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties

ELLEN FRANCEY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF SALEM, SALEM COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Exceptions were timely filed by both parties pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Petitioner also submitted a timely reply to respondent's exceptions.

In its exceptions, the Board contests the conclusions of the ALJ and reiterates its prior arguments that 1) no statute, regulation or case law prohibits it from considering valid educationally based reasons in determining whether to appoint petitioner to the positions disputed herein, and that 2) existing case law as relied upon by petitioner (and the ALJ) is inapposite to the instant circumstances, where the necessary certification was obtained by claimant subsequent to her RIF from the position out of which her entitlement arises. In reply, petitioner urges acceptance of the ALJ's decision and reiterates precedent decisions establishing the broad scope of statutory tenure protection, particularly as against nontenured employees.

Petitioner's exceptions urge rejection of that portion of the initial decision finding that pre-judgment interest was not warranted, arguing instead that the Board had clear and continuous notice of petitioner's rights and cannot be deemed not to have acted in bad faith in denying her a position.

Upon review, the Commissioner initially notes that the instant case is one of first impression, raising the threshold question of whether a tenured employee's rights to recall are frozen at the time of RIF or continually expandable through acquisition of subsequent additional endorsements. Upon consideration of this question, the Commissioner cannot concur with the ALJ that petitioner is entitled to a position for which she was undisputedly not qualified at the time of her RIF.

In applying the protections of the tenure statutes, which concededly confer a preferred status upon tenured employees who lose their employment through no fault of their own, the Commissioner must also balance the Board's legitimate need to be able to rely upon the determinations of individual employee entitlement made at the time of a RIF. Within the statutory scheme, it is clear that the act of reducing a tenured staff member's employment is the distinct and self-limited event that triggers the affected party's entitlement, the evaluation of his or her individual entitlement status and the consequent assignment to either another position in the district or the preferred eligibility list; nor is it of any import that the latter is strictly speaking a creature of seniority entitlement, as the concept of a fixed list from which subsequent vacancies are to be filled is applicable to tenure entitlement as well.

In this context, the date of an employee's RIF can be the only reasonable date certain on which the employee's rights can be reckoned for future entitlement purposes. To deprive boards of this certainty by permitting riffed staff to continually revise and expand their entitlements at will would at the very least pose an unreasonable administrative burden on the district, and, of more concern, would likely lead to amassing of endorsements following RIF, reduce to chaos any attempt by a district to ascertain its legal responsibilities upon the arising of a vacancy, and unduly restrict boards in their efforts to provide a thorough and efficient education by choosing the most qualified staff for open positions. Nor do the protections of the tenure statutes require such a result, as the Commissioner and Courts have recognized that changed legal status does not confer enhanced or retroactive entitlement on one whose rights had been duly determined at the appropriate time of calculation and that boards of education need not go to extremes to accommodate employment rights when all known and reasonable entitlements have been honored at the time of RIF. Thomas S. Marshall v. Board of Education of Township of Neptune, Monmouth County, Superior Court Appellate Division, Dkt. No. A-2595-85T1, unpublished, March 10, 1987; Paul Fitzpatrick et al. v. Board of Education of the Township of Weehawken, 1982 S.L.D. 1500 (App. Div.); Dorothy Godwin Davis v. Board of Education of the Township of Ewing, Mercer County, decided by the Commissioner April 29, 1985, aff'd State Board September 4, 1985

Having thus found that petitioner had no entitlement to the claimed elementary position(s), it is unnecessary to reach herein to the issues of valid educationally based reasons for denying such entitlement and awarding of pre-judgment interest.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is reversed for the reasons expressed above and the instant Petition of Appeal consequently dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF SALEM, SALEM COUNTY,

RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT.

STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, July 22, 1992

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Selikoff & Cohen
(Stephen R. Cohen, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Barbour & Costa
(John T. Barbour, Esq., of Counsel)

Ellen Francey (hereinafter "petitioner") was a tenured teaching staff member who held an instructional certificate with an endorsement in home economics and had served for 17 years as a home economics teacher. Petitioner's teaching position was abolished in April 1989 by the Board of Education of the City of Salem (hereinafter "Board") as the result of a reduction in force ("RIF") effective for the 1989-90 school year.[1] In April 1991, petitioner acquired an additional endorsement on her instructional certificate in elementary education. Thereafter, vacancies occurred in the district for elementary school teachers. Petitioner sought such employment, but the Board hired six nontenured individuals to fill those vacant positions. Petitioner alleged that such action violated her tenure rights.

1 We note that petitioner does not challenge in these proceedings the legitimacy of the Board's decision to reduce its staff.

August 7 1994

On June 8, 1992, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") agreed with petitioner, finding that the Board had been obligated to offer her one of the elementary teaching vacancies since she had acquired an endorsement in elementary education and was entitled to reinstatement as against nontenured individuals. The ALJ recommended that petitioner be reinstated with back pay and emoluments to any position for which she was qualified. The ALJ denied petitioner's request for pre-judgment interest, finding that there had been no showing that the Board had acted in bad faith or in deliberate violation of statutes. N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16.

On July 22, 1992, the Acting Commissioner of Education rejected the Initial Decision, concluding that petitioner was not entitled to reinstatement in a position for which she had not been qualified at the time of the RIF in 1989. The Acting Commissioner found it necessary, in applying the protections of the tenure statutes, to balance the preferred status conferred upon tenured employees who lost their employment through no fault of their own with the Board's need to be able to rely upon determinations of individual employee entitlement made at the time of a RIF. The Acting Commissioner reasoned that the date of an employee's RIF could be the only reasonable date certain on which the employee's rights could be reckoned for future entitlement purposes. He also found that the tenure laws did not support petitioner's position, pointing out that changed legal status did not confer enhanced or retroactive entitlement on a staff member whose rights had been duly determined and that it was not necessary for district boards to go to extremes to accommodate employment rights when all known and reasonable entitlements had been honored at the time of the RIF. Consequently, the Acting Commissioner dismissed the petition.

Petitioner has filed the instant appeal to the State Board from the decision of the Acting Commissioner, arguing that, since she had obtained an elementary endorsement, the Board had been obligated to reemploy her in one of the elementary teaching vacancies held by nontenured individuals. Simply stated, petitioner seeks to expand the scope of the position in which she had achieved tenure to encompass an endorsement obtained on her instructional certificate after her tenured position was abolished in a reduction in force.

After a thorough review of the record, we agree with the ultimate determination of the Acting Commissioner that petitioner had no entitlement to the controverted elementary assignments. We, however, modify the Acting Commissioner's analysis. In so doing, we find it necessary to revisit some of the basic concepts embodied in the tenure laws.

Tenure is a legislatively conferred right, Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed. 90 N.J. 63, 72 (1982), and is achieved only upon satisfaction of the precise statutory conditions. Howley v. Board of Education of the Township of Ewing, decided by the Commissioner of Education, 1982 S.L.D. 1328, aff'd by the State Board of Education, June 1, 1983. In order to be eligible to achieve tenure, the Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 et seq., requires that an individual be a "teaching staff member," i.e., employed in a position of such character that the qualifications therefor require possession of the appropriate certificate, N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1, and serve in such capacity for a specified probationary period. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. The purpose of the tenure laws is to protect teaching staff members from dismissal for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons and prevents schools boards from abusing their superior bargaining power over teachers in contract negotiations. Spiewak, supra, at 73.

In Capodilupo v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., decided by the State Board of Education, 1986 S.L.D. 3010, aff'd, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), certif. den., 109 N.J. 514 (1987), we concluded that, by virtue of his tenure status, a teaching staff member whose position as a high school physical education teacher had been abolished in a reduction in force was entitled to an assignment teaching physical education at the elementary level as against a nontenured individual, although he had no seniority in the elementary category. We emphasized that tenure was achieved in a particular "position," see Howley, supra, and that the category or categories in which a staff member accrued seniority were not necessarily congruent with the position in which tenure was achieved. The scope of the position to which tenure protection attached was initially limited by the scope of the certificate the staff member was required to possess in order to satisfy the qualifications for such employment. Further definition of the scope of a position in which tenure could be achieved was provided by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

We pointed out that while a district board could not transfer a teaching staff member from one separately tenurable position to another without his or her consent, it could reassign teachers to serve in any capacity in which they were qualified by virtue of their endorsements so long as such assignment was within the scope of the certificate required for the tenurable position. We explained that because the assignments that a staff member was qualified to fill were limited by the scope of his or her endorsements, the scope of the position in which such staff member would be entitled to the security of tenure protection was likewise limited by the scope of his or her endorsements.

Consequently, tenure is achieved in and tenure protection attaches to all endorsements upon a staff member's instructional certificate, and not just those under which the individual has actually served for the requisite period of time pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 or 18A:28-6. Grosso v. Board of Education of the Borough of New Providence, decided by the State Board of Education, 1990 S.L.D. 1750, appeals dismissed, Dockets #A-4360-89T5 and A-4359-83T5 (App. Div. 1990); accord, Dennery v. Board of Educ., 131 N.J. 626 (1993).

Rights emanating from the achievement of tenure are triggered at the time of a RIF. Edison Township Education Association v. Board of Education of the Township of Edison, decided by the Commissioner of Education, 1984 S.L.D. 1073, 1083, aff'd by the State Board of Education, 1984 S.L.D. 1085, aff'd, Docket #A-2030-84T7 (App. Div. 1986). As a result, district boards are required to recognize the tenure rights of affected parties as they existed at the time of its action. Parker and Pellegrino v. Board of Education of the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, decided by the State Board of Education, May 2, 1990.

The precise conditions for the achievement of tenure rights are provided in Article 1 of the Tenure Act, "Acquisition and Effect of Tenure," particularly N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, "Tenure of teaching staff members," and 18A:28-6, "Tenure upon transfer or promotion." Article 3 of that Act, "Effect of Reduction of Force Upon Persons Under Tenure," provides for effectuation of the rights achieved under Article 1, authorizing boards to reduce the number of their teaching staff members for reasons of economy, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, but requiring that dismissals resulting from such reductions be made on the basis of seniority. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 mandates that those staff members who are dismissed be placed on preferred eligibility lists for reemployment in order of seniority in vacancies for which they are qualified.[2] It does not provide authorization for the acquisition of rights beyond those achieved pursuant to the specific provisions of Article 1, but, rather, establishes the mechanism for reemployment of those tenured staff members dismissed as the result of a reduction in force.

Accordingly, while the rights afforded a tenured teaching staff member affected by a reduction in force are not diminished by the mere fact that the vacancy occurs while the individual is on a preferred eligibility list, rather than at the precise time of the RIF, Mirandi v. Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, decided by the State Board of Education, April 5, 1989, there is no authority in the statutory scheme to accrue additional rights in a tenured position after dismissal therefrom in a RIF.

Petitioner herein achieved tenure as the result of her service in the district in satisfaction of the precise conditions set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. The inchoate rights emanating from such status were triggered by the Board's determination in April 1989 to reduce its teaching force pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and, therefore, to abolish petitioner's position. As a result of her achievement of tenure in a teaching position, petitioner's attendant rights and protection triggered by the RIF attached to those endorsements then upon her instructional certificate. Since petitioner did not obtain an elementary endorsement until April 1991, two years after her position was abolished, the scope of her tenure protection at the time of the RIF did not extend to the assignments now sought. Likewise, since she was not qualified therefor by virtue of her certification, the Board could not have reassigned her during her employment in the district to an assignment requiring an elementary endorsement, a limitation on the scope of protection afforded staff members by the achievement of tenure. Capodilupo, supra.

2 We note that, notwithstanding a staff member's seniority rights in the applicable regulatory category, such individual must still satisfy the threshold qualifications for service in an assignment by holding the certification required in order to be authorized by statute and regulation to perform the duties attending that particular assignment.

To grant the relief sought herein would be to recognize a statutory entitlement to reemployment by virtue of tenure in an assignment outside the scope of the tenure protection acquired pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In that the statutory scheme does not provide for the extension of such entitlement, we conclude that the scope of petitioner's tenured position was determined at the time of the RIF, when her rights were triggered, and her subsequent acquisition of an elementary endorsement did not operate to enlarge the tenure rights she had achieved pursuant to the Tenure Act during, and as a result of, her employment in the district.

Consequently, while we agree with the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition in this matter, we do so for the reasons expressed herein.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

MORRIS-UNION JOINTURE COMMISSION, PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH RIVER, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning jointure commission sought order compelling South River Board of Education to pay for bedside instruction provided by commission to one of respondent's students at cost of $2,000. Respondent contended charge was excessive and that petition was untimely filed.

ALJ found letter of July 3, 1991 issued by South River to petitioner was sufficient to constitute notice of final action of refusal to pay fee. Thus, petition, which was filed beyond the 90-day period from said cause of action, was untimely. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

Record Closed: May 1, 1992 Decided: June 8, 1992

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

This is an appeal by the petitioner (Morris-Union) resulting from a petition which it filed before the Commissioner of Education on February 7, 1992. The petition seeks an order compelling the respondent (South River) to pay for bedside instruction provided by Morris-Union to one of respondent's students, for the months of February and March 1991, totaling approximately $2,000.00. Petitioner requests that payment be ordered by the State Board of Education pursuant to a formula utilized and reflecting the actual billing.

On February 27, 1992, respondent filed its answer, which among other things, denies any obligation on its part to pay petitioner for the services at issue, asserting as well that if arguendo such obligation did exist, the rate sought by the petitioner is excessive. In addition, and central to the opinion, respondent argues that the petition should be dismissed as untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2.

On March 6, 1992, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq.

On April 2, 1992, South River submitted its brief in support of its motion for dismissal, which was received by the Office of Administrative Law on April 6, 1992. On April 10, the OAL received Ms. Caterson's brief in opposition to the motion for dismissal, dated April 9, 1992. It was not until April 16, 1992 that the case file in this matter was transferred directly to my office. On April 22, 1992 Mr. Golum submitted a reply brief and on May 1st, Ms. Caterson submitted a sur-reply. Finally also on May 1, 1992, Mr. Golum submitted a letter brief responding to Ms. Catersons sur-reply brief. Accordingly the record in this matter closed upon receipt of both counsels final arguments, May 1, 1992.

The fact in this matter as they relate to the motion by South River to dismiss the petition as untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 are as follows. I FIND:

The first relevant correspondence in this appeal between Morris-Union and South River was initiated by the petitioner in a letter dated February 25, 1991 (petitioner's attachment B). This letter informed respondent that a student from its district had begun receiving bedside instruction and enclosed a contract for use in authorizing this instruction. On March 4, 1991, a telephone call between the parties involved a discussion of the costs for such services. On March 5, 1991, the bill for February services ($504) was sent to South River. (Petitioner, Att. C). Respondent then sent a letter, dated March 7, 1991, to Fair Oaks Hospital (copy to petitioner) which stated that the contract request would not be finalized. (Petitioner, Att. D). It also stated that South River did not feel responsible for the "exhorbitant charge" submitted by petitioner, while indicating that it might be open to other options not to exceed a maximum payout of $180 per week. Respondent followed this with another letter, this one addressed to petitioner, dated March 18, 1991, stating that it never approved or expected any of the petitioner's services. (Petitioner, Att. E).

The petitioner responded with a letter on March 19, 1991 informing South River that it had stopped bedside instruction for the student as of March 19. (Petitioner, Att. F). Respondent replied with a letter, dated March 25, 1991, again stating that it never requested the petitioner's services and that the petitioner had overstepped its authority. (Respondent's Exh. A). On March 28, the bill for March services ($1,512) was sent. (Petitioner, Att. G).

An "Account Overdue" letter, for the total amount $2,016, was sent to petitioner on May 30, 1991. (Respondent's Exh. B). Petitioner contends and South River admits for purposes of this motion that such "Accounts Overdue" letters were sent monthly. In response to the bill, South River sent a letter, dated June 5, 1991, reminding petitioner that it did not authorize the services and requesting petitioner to give it a "credit memo" on its account. (Respondent's Exh. C). The petitioner's reply, dated June 13, 1991, informs respondent that the bill "remains valid." (Respondent Exh. D). Also, it is acknowledged that during this time period discussions of a possible compromise had been conducted.

On July 3, 1991, South River, through its Superintendent of Schools, informed petitioner that it believes that it is "not responsible for this charge" on the basis of four reasons listed. (Respondent's Exh. E). This letter also states, in closing, that respondent regrets to inform the petitioner that it does "not accept responsibility for the unauthorized service."

Subsequent to this letter, the petitioner sent respondent four "unanswered" letters--(1) July 10, 1991: containing responses to the four reasons along with the mention of seeking possible parental payment and a reminder of the petitioner's lack of authority to accept less than full payment; (2) November 4, 1991: from petitioner's attorney, stating that counsel had been advised of South River's refusal to reimburse and that a continuance of such refusal would prompt legal action; (3) November 21, 1991: containing citations and reasons why respondent should pay; (4) January 10, 1992: declaring that if no response is made by January 31, 1992 the petitioner will consider such non-response to be a refusal to pay. (Respondent's Exhibits F-1).

South River did not respond by January 31, 1992; instead, it sent a letter dated February 3, 1992, which refers to the July 3, 1991 letter as indicating then that it had no intention of paying the claim. (Respondent's Exh. H). This letter also mentions that a possible compromise had been discussed prior to the July 3rd letter but that no negotiations had taken place since then. The petitioner, however, contends that there had been continuing contact, noting especially the "Accounts Overdue" letters.

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 prescribes that "[t]he petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling, or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." Prompt filing of actions before the Commissioner serves to preserve the immediacy of the record and to stabilize existing relations, thereby avoiding disruption of the educational process. Newman v. Bd. of Ed. of Spring Lake Heights, 1984 S.L.D. _____ (Comm'r Jan. 19, 1984).

Neither party disputes the application of the 90-day provision to this action seeking reimbursement for the bedside instruction of the South River student. The parties, however, disagree as to when the 90-day period commenced. Petitioner urges that the 90 days began to run on January 31, 1992, after the petitioner had received no response to its letter of January 10, 1992, which stated that it would deem a non-response by that date to be a refusal to pay. South River maintains that petitioner's cause of action accrued as early as March 1991 (upon receipt of Dr. Marino's March 7, 1991 letter) and at the latest upon receipt of its superintendent's July 3, 1991 letter.

The key to deciding the timeliness question is obviously determining when the cause of action did accrue. A cause of action accrues and the 90-day period begins only after receipt of notice by petitioner of the action concerning which the hearing is requested. See, e.g., Delk v. Pemberton, BOE, 1985 S.L.D. _____, (Comm'r Aug. 19, 1986). It has also been stated that a cause of action accrues, so that the applicable period of limitation commences to run, when the party seeking to bring the action has an enforceable right. Andreaggi v. Relis, 71 N.J. Super. 203, 235-36 (Ch. Div. 1979).

In the instant case, South River argues that the four letters it wrote concerning this matter, beginning with the one written March 7, 1991, to Fair Oaks Hospital (copy to petitioner), should each have been sufficient to put petitioner on notice of respondent's refusal to pay. Respondent further asserts that even if these four letters did not provide notice, the letter of July 3, 1991, written by South River's Superintendent, and sent to Dr. Parmelee, Morris-Union Director of Operations, provided clear notice to the petitioner of respondent's action.

When was the petitioner reasonably placed on notice of South River's refusal to pay? While the latter may assert that the March 7, 1991 letter and the three subsequent letters were sufficient to provide such notice, the various attempts to possibly compromise and settle the claim made during this time period undercut such assertion. Clear notice of an absolute refusal to pay could not be accomplished amidst the receipt of these various mixed signals. The position, however, of South River that the July 3, 1991 letter unequivocally reiterating the position that it would not accept responsibility for the services is in my view sufficient to have reasonably placed the petitioner on notice as of that date that respondent was absolutely refusing to pay for the disputed charges.

The terms of the July 3rd letter should have reasonably conveyed to Morris-Union that South River refused to pay and refused to entertain any compromise. The letter from petitioner's counsel of November 11, 1991 noting that counsel had been advised of South River's refusal to reimburse would also reasonably indicate that the petitioner was on such notice of refusal to pay. In my judgment the July 3, 1991 letter was sufficiently unambiguous to constitute notice of action by South River so as to commence the running of the 90-day statute of limitations set forth at N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2. If, following the July 3, 1991, letter an action were instituted by Morris-Union for breach of contract, no reasonable argument could have been made that such cause of action had not yet accrued. Also, merely because an argument might be raised that settlement discussions could have indeed continued and followed the July 3, 1991 letter would not in any way eviscerate the determination that the letter was tantamount to a refusal to pay, resulting in the joinder of issue for purposes of a cause of action possessed by the petitioner.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the July 3, 1991 letter issued by South River to the petitioner was sufficient to constitute a notice of final action of refusal to pay so as to commence the running of the 90 day period under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2.

Petitioner argues that if a determination were made that the 90-day period had expired under the foregoing regulation, the rule should be relaxed in the present case. The Commissioner of Education does have the authority under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15 to relax the application of the 90-day rule "where strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice." Exceptions to the 90-day rule should, however, be granted sparingly, and only where there exists compelling circumstances to justify enlargement or relaxation of the time limit. See, e.g., Riely v. Bd. of Ed. of Hunterdon Cent. H.S., 173 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1980). The Commissioner of Education has described these circumstances as follows:

> Where a substantial constitutional issue is presented, where judicial review is sought of an informal administrative determination, and where a matter of significant public interest is involved. (Citations deleted). Miller v. Morris School District, 1980 S.L.D. _____ (February 25, 1980).

In the instant case, none of these circumstances apply since the matter involves the mere payment for services. Additionally, while it may be said that no real injustice will be done to South River in requiring it to go through a hearing on this matter at a time somewhat beyond the 90-day period from the accrual of the cause of action (since the components that will go into the record will not have gone stale), it is petitioner's burden to show that it will suffer injustice if the 90-day rule is strictly enforced. Here, the petitioner presents no such compelling reasons--its arguments concerning a continuing duty to pay and that petitioner somehow relied upon South River's settlement attempts are not persuasive. The Respondent's Reply Brief effectively distinguishes the cases cited in support of these tenuous arguments. See, Respondent's Reply Brief, pp. 12-16.

Accordingly and based upon the foregoing the respondent's motion for dismissal is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

MORRIS-UNION JOINTURE COMMISSION, PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH RIVER, MIDDLESEX COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner's cause of action arose no later than its receipt of respondent's July 3, 1991 letter, wherein petitioner was clearly and unequivocally informed that respondent did not accept responsibility for the bill in question. The Commissioner further concurs that there is no significant public interest or other consideration that would warrant relaxation of the 90-day rule in this matter.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the instant Petition of Appeal for reason of untimeliness is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, nontenured supervisor, claimed her nonrenewal was improper.

Initial decision found that although petitioner's performance generally improved while she was employed by the Board, and the superintendent did recommend her reappointment, the Board has virtually unlimited discretion in hiring or renewing nontenured teaching staff members. (Dore) Moreover, her nonrenewal violated neither procedural due process nor any other constitutional right. (Donaldson) Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determinations in initial decision emphasizing applicability of Dore and distinguishing Brescia and Rotondo. Board has authority to reject the recommendation of the chief school administration (CSA) to renew an individual and based upon its own considered information, decide not to renew but the Board may not employ an individual who has not been affirmatively recommended by the CSA.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SPOTSWOOD,
Respondent.

Philip H. Shore, Esq., for respondent, (Shore & Zahn, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 9, 1992 Decided: June 11, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Marjorie Stevens, petitioner, claims her dismissal as a nontenured teaching staff member in the Spotswood Public Schools (respondent) was improper. She seeks reinstatement with all emoluments.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education when the petitioner filed a verified petition of appeal on June 4, 1991. The Spotswood Board of Education (Board) filed an answer on June 21, 1991. On June 27, 1991 the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A prehearing conference was conducted, by telephone, on December 9, 1991 and the matter was set down for hearing on June 5, 8 and 9, 1992 at the Office of Administrative Law facility at Quakerbridge Plaza, Mercerville. Upon the parties' representation that certain witnesses were not available, the June 5 hearing date only was adjourned. The matter was heard on June 8 and 9, 1992. The record closed on June 9.

PRELIMINARY MOTIONS

The petitioner survived a motion to dismiss for failure to state a claim and, after the petitioner's opening statement, a motion for involuntary dismissal on the basis that the opening statement must set forth allegations that would make a prima facie case. Reilly v. Spiegelhalter, 100 N.J. Super. 276 (App. Div. 1968).

RELEVANT EVIDENCE

The parties provided a stipulation of 15 facts with nine exhibits attached. All were deemed admitted in evidence by consent. The stipulated facts are these:

1. Petitioner began her employ with the Respondent, Spotswood School District on March 17, 1988 as a Supervisor of Social Studies, Health and Physical Education.

2. Petitioner continued serving as the Supervisor of Social Studies, Health, and Physical Education from March 17, 1988 through July of 1989.

3. In or about July of 1989, petitioner was named as the Supervisor of Social Studies and Fine Arts.

4. Petitioner continued to serve as the Supervisor of Social Studies and Fine Arts through March 14, 1991.

5. Petitioner's last evaluation was completed on January 18, 1991. In each of the categories found in the evaluation Petitioner was determined to have either met "standard" performance or exceeded standard performance. Exhibit A.

6. Petitioner was then recommended for reemployment by the Superintendent of Schools, Ronald Chiste and William Dunigan, the Director of Curriculum and Instruction.

7. On February 5, 1991, Petitioner was advised by Ronald Chiste, Superintendent of Schools, that she would be the subject of discussion by the Board of Education on February 12, 1991. Exhibit B.

8. On or about February 8, 1991, Petitioner advised Mr. Chiste that she wished to have the discussion as it related to her employment, take place in executive session with her present at the meeting with a representative of her professional association. Exhibit C.

9. On February 27, 1991 Petitioner was again advised that the Board of Education would discuss her employ on March 12, 1991. Said discussion had been carried from the earlier February 12, 1991 date. Exhibit D.

10. On or about March 4, 1991 Petitioner advised Mr. Chiste that she wished to have the discussion of her employ scheduled for March 12, 1991 to take place in public. Exhibit E.

11. At its public meeting of March 12, 1991, the Spotswood Board of Education initially voted to discontinue petitioner's employ as a Supervisor beyond March 20, 1991. At the same meeting, in a second action, the board rescinded its original resolution terminating petitioner's employ as of March 20, 1991 and thereafter passed another Resolution terminating her employ as an employee of the Spotswood Board of Education effective March 14, 1991. Petitioner was so advised by the Superintendent of Schools by a letter dated March 21, 1991. Exhibit F.

12. On or about March 15, 1991 petitioner requested a written explanation of the reasons for the termination of her employ. Exhibit G.

13. By way of a letter dated April 12, 1991 the Superintendent of Schools advised petitioner of the reasons for the respondent's determination to discontinue her employ. Exhibit H.

14. On or about April 24, 1991 petitioner asked for a public hearing before the Board of Education to discuss the reasons for her non-renewal. Exhibit I.

15. Thereafter, petitioner was given a public hearing before the Board of Education.

Marjorie Stevens, petitioner, testified that she met with the director of curriculum and instruction in December 1990 or January 1991. The director evaluated her on January 18, 1991. They met again on January 25, 1991 and discussed the evaluation. At the meeting, the director stated he would recommend her for reemployment.

Stevens also met with and discussed her evaluation with the superintendent in early January 1991. The superintendent told her would recommend her reemployment but there might be problems with the Board.

As seen in the stipulations, above, there were problems. On March 12, 1991 the Board voted to discontinue the petitioner's employment effective March 14. The petitioner requested reasons for the termination and was supplied Exhibit H.

At hearing, Stevens and the director both testified concerning Exhibit H. The petitioner stated her director assured her that her level of performance in the areas covered by items 2-10 was satisfactory. The petitioner also testified with more particularity as to each of the areas The director stated he had seen Exhibit H, but had not been asked for input. In the winter and spring of early 1991 he believed the petitioner was performing properly. He also testified concerning items 2-10 and stated the petitioner's performance was at least satisfactory in each area.

The petitioner also testified that she had some teaching duties when she joined the district but that, subsequently, all supervisors were assigned full-time to supervision. It was known among staff that the Board wanted better articulation and communication between and among its schools and curriculum areas. The petitioner also stated that earlier evaluations done by the high school principal and a former superintendent of schools mentioned her need to improve oral communication skills. At or near the beginning of her last year, her Personal Improvement Plan created as a goal the provision of model lessons to teachers she supervised. This is related to communication skills in that her November 1990 evaluation mentions anxiety when speaking before a group and that this interferes with her model lesson presentations.

After wide examination on several aspects of her job, the petitioner stated that her superiors expressed to her their satisfaction with her performance in early 1991. The director's testimony was generally consistent with the petitioner's.

The superintendent testified, among other things, that he notified the Board in May 1990 that the Board would have to discuss petitioner's tenure early in the coming school year because of her hire during March rather than July or September as is the usual case. In a February 1991 memorandum to Board members he stated he would recommend the petitioner for tenure. The Board sent appropriate notices to the petitioner concerning the discussion of her employment.

Concerning Exhibit H, the superintendent stated that he signed the document but did not write the specifics. Neither did he assist in formulation of any of the reasons for dismissal. He was not asked for input. He had, however, been asked at times prior to preparation of the letter about some of the topics covered. He had, for instance, observed that the petitioner was too much a teacher representative and not enough an educational leader. He discussed this with her. In February 1991, supervisors came under the superintendent's direct control through a reorganization. Shortly thereafter, the Board decided, against his recommendation, not to give a tenure contract to the petitioner. Ordinarily, the Board Secretary would have answered the request for reasons for nonrenewal. However, because of injury, the secretary was not available. The document had to be sent to the petitioner, so the superintendent signed Exhibit H. This is the only case he can recall of a request for a statement of reasons for nonrenewal. He signed the letter as the Board's representative knowing what the Board had voted and knowing that the petitioner had requested reasons for nonrenewal. He did not discuss the contents with any Board member or with the director.

When the superintendent recommended reemployment, he did not give specific reasons. He stated he thought he had seen growth and saw potential. The January 18, 1991 evaluation of petitioner had some support value for his recommendation.

The high school principal who had been the petitioner's immediate superior until the February 1991 reorganization testified about the petitioner's strengths and weaknesses mentioned in earlier evaluations. The evaluations pointed out several areas where the petitioner could make improvement. The principal would have expected any new supervisor to exhibit areas in which improvement could be made. Generally, the evaluations from May 1988 through November 1990 do show improvement and growth while, concededly, showing additional room for professional growth. His April 1989 evaluation showed two areas in need of improvement. He characterized the overall evaluation as positive. The December 1989 evaluation showed a need for improvement in decision making, yet stated the petitioner met standards in that area. All supervisory areas were deemed at least satisfactory in that evaluation. Similarly, later evaluations showed the petitioner meeting standards while pointing out areas that could be improved farther.

The principal supported the petitioner's reappointment without qualification. He saw professional growth, believed she took direction well, thought programs under her supervision were moving forward and had a generally positive feeling about her abilities.

MOTION TO DISMISS FOR FAILURE TO STATE A CLAIM ON WHICH THE COMMISSIONER CAN GRANT RELIEF

Upon conclusion of the petitioner's case, the Board moved to dismiss arguing that the facts presented when measured against the law show no case for the petitioner. Absent constitutional infirmity or procedural deficiency, which the parties agree are not present here, the petitioner has shown nothing to justify disturbing the Board's decision not to award a tenure contract. The best picture possible is of an improving supervisor, someone with potential. The Board did not want to take a risk with a person who needed more time and experience.

The petitioner opposed, arguing that the system of evaluation of nontenured teaching staff members is in place for good reasons. It gives the administration and Board some measure of a member's performance. It illuminates the members also. It tells them how supervisors view their performances and how those performances can be improved.

There are protections against arbitrariness, as well. Personnel decisions must be based on evaluations and recommendations made by the administration. The petitioner came into the district in March 1988. She was evaluated soon after by the high school principal and the former superintendent. She was later evaluated by the director of curriculum and instruction. The evaluations were not perfect and showed room for growth. Over nearly three years, growth was demonstrated. As of January 1991, her performance was commendable. Three supervisors directly and the superintendent indirectly agreed she should be recommended for reemployment. In personnel matters, the Board must act upon the recommendation of an administrator. Administrators are paid to make judgment calls. The Board can reject an administrator's recommendation, but cannot evaluate teachers. Here, the statement of reasons given the petitioner was based on performance. The reasons given in Exhibit H do not come from the superintendent or the director. The Board must have reached to something else.

While the Board is free to disagree with its administration, it cannot come up with reasons based on performance when there are layers of administration between the Board and the teaching staff member. Here, all administrators recommended tenure based on observations of and their work with the petitioner. The Board came up with reasons not based on the January 18, 1991 evaluation that is a summation of the road the petitioner traveled. The reasons stated in Exhibit H are stipulated to show they exist, not for the truth or falsity of what they say.

DETERMINATION

The petitioner relies on Brescia v. Pemberton Bd. of Ed., OAL DKT. EDU 1333-90 (Dec. 27, 1990), rev'd, Comm'r of Ed. (Apr. 1, 1991). In that matter, the Commissioner specifically stated that a board of education must act in personnel matters upon the recommendation of its chief school administrator. It is within its legal right to reject such a nomination, but it may not arbitrarily act in the absence of a nomination. I can see no infirmity here. The chief school administrator made a nomination and the Board rejected it.

The Board relies on Bd. of Ed., Tp. of Wyckoff v. Wyckoff Ed. Assoc., 168 N.J. Super. 497 (App. Div. 1979), certif. den. 81 N.J. 349 (1979), for the proposition that virtually any grounds for nonrenewal are permissible except constitutionally protected ones. This includes general and subjective reasons. See, Donaldson v. North Wildwood Bd. of Ed., 65 N.J. 236, (1974).

Even though the petitioner's last evaluation showed some improvement in communications, this area alone could constitute sufficient reason for nonrenewal. The Board has virtually unlimited discretion in hiring or renewing nontenured teaching staff members, or not. Dore v. Bedminster Tp. Bd. of Ed., 185 N.J. Super. 447, 453-54 (App. Div. 1982). For this reason, the petitioner's argument that the Board cannot "evaluate' must be rejected. While rules require observations to be conducted by and formal evaluation instruments to be completed by appropriately certified personnel, a Board certainly does evaluate personnel, both formally and informally. Donaldson, above. Here, the superintendent reliably testified that Board members had access, within his offices, to teaching staff evaluations and that some Board members did review evaluations. That being established, the rest lies within the discretion given to boards of education by statute and case law.

On the basis of this record, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the petitioner has shown that her performance generally improved while she was in the employ of the Spotswood Board of Education. She has not made out a case sufficient to clear the hurdles created by Wyckoff and Donaldson, above. Inasmuch as her nonrenewal violated neither procedural due process nor any other constitutional right, the Board's motion to dismiss must be GRANTED. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby file this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

MARJORIE STEVENS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SPOTSWOOD, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioner filed timely exceptions and the Board filed timely reply exceptions pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner's exceptions state she does not challenge the Board's ultimate authority to employ or not employ personnel. Rather, relying on her interpretation of Brescia v. Board of Education of the Township of Pemberton, Burlington County, decided by the Commissioner of Education April 1, 1991, petitioner submits the Board erred in relying on its own statement of reasons without the benefit of advice of its chief school administrator (CSA) in making its decision to terminate her employment.

Petitioner dismisses the ALJ's conclusion that in terminating her employment, the Board merely rejected the superintendent's recommendation. Rather, she claims that a more accurate description is that the Board ignored the superintendent's recommendation, the evaluation of January 18, 1991 and the recommendation of Mr. Karycki, petitioner's previous supervisor. She claims the Board acted on its own without the recommendation of those charged with supervising her, and thus, she claims that the Board's action to terminate her oversteps the bounds between policy and administration, just as in the Brescia matter.

Petitioner seeks reversal of the initial decision and requests reinstatement to the position of supervisor with all back pay and emoluments owing.

The Board's reply exceptions aver petitioner misapplies Brescia, and argues that the Board fulfilled the obligation of Brescia which it contends stands for the proposition that a precondition to action by a board to transfer, appoint or by extension, terminate a teaching staff member, must be a recommendation from the CSA. Like the ALJ, the Board claims, the Board received such recommendation, but rejected it.

Further, the Board reiterates its position that a series of cases, including Dore v. Bedminster Township Board of Education, 185 N.J. Super. 447 (App. Div. 1982) and Donaldson v. Board of Education of North Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236 (1974) holds that a board has virtually unlimited discretion, absent constitutional infirmity or procedural deficiency, with respect to renewing nontenured teachers, and the board's right to reach its decision may be premised on a broad base of input derived from a variety of people including members of the public, a board member's own knowledge of a teacher even if that knowledge is acquired through having a child in the teacher's class. Thus, the Board contends these cases refute petitioner's argument regarding the board of education's obligation to make a nonrenewal determination based solely on performance evaluations.

Also, the Board claims petitioner's version of the evidence elicited at hearing has been subtly modified, perhaps due to the lack of a written transcript. In refutation, the Board relies on the recording of the proceedings and the findings of the ALJ.

Finally, the Board contends that the position espoused by petitioner would effectively make boards of education rubber stamps for their administrative staff. The Board herein rejects such position and insists on the right to exercise its judgment.

Accordingly, the Board submits that the initial decision should be affirmed.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, which, it is noted, does not include a transcript or a tape of the proceedings below, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision for the reasons stated therein, and adds the following.

The Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that in the instant matter, the Board received the recommendation of the superintendent of schools pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.2(a)6vii. It merely rejected such recommendation and asserted its own authority pursuant to Dore, supra, to choose not to reemploy petitioner.

In so deciding, the Commissioner notes that the instant matter is distinguishable from Brescia, supra. In Brescia, the Commissioner held that a board may not act to transfer a teaching staff member under circumstances where the CSA did not recommend such transfer. In another recently decided matter, Joyce Rotondo v. Board of Education of the Carlstadt-East Rutherford Regional High School District, Bergen County, decided by the Commissioner May 8, 1992, the Commissioner held that a board may not act to employ any person not finally recommended by the CSA, whether on first consideration or after the board's rejection of other candidates or after the CSA's initial recommendation not to rehire.

Such case law is opposite the facts of this matter, wherein the CSA did recommend the renewal of petitioner's contract. Under such circumstances, the Board was entirely within its province to reject such recommendation and, based upon its own considered information, decide not to renew. In other words, a board may reject a recommendation of a CSA to employ an individual, but may not employ an individual who has not been affirmatively recommended by the CSA. The only restriction upon a board's prerogative in nonrenewing an individual with the superintendent's recommendation to hire is when there is an allegation, not present in the instant matter, of violation of the employee's constitutional or statutory rights. See, Dore, supra:

> [board is within its] right to reach its conclusion about a nontenured teacher on a broad base of input received from a variety of people, including members of the public, parents of students and a board member's own knowledge of a teacher even if that knowledge is acquired through having a child in the teacher's class. (at 454)

> absent constitutional constraints or legislation affecting the tenure rights of teachers, local boards of education have an almost complete right to terminate the services of a teacher who has no tenure and is regarded as undesirable by the local board. (at 456)

See also Donaldson, supra.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision, as amplified herein, the initial decision is adopted and the Petition of Appeal dismissed, with prejudice.

BEFORE GEORGE PERSELAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner filed a petition for declaratory judgment alleging a conflict of interest on the part of Mr. Cancel, who is a member of the juvenile bureau of the City of Passaic Police Department (Police Department) and an elected member of the City of Passaic Board of Education (Board). The alleged complaint arises from Mr. Cancel's assignment as a security officer at the Passaic High School where he may be called upon to investigate criminal acts and allegations by juveniles against school personnel or by school personnel against juveniles.

The petition is dated May 8, 1990 and was received at the Commissioner of Education's office on May 11, 1990. The Board was not a named party and upon request by the Commissioner, the petitioner joined the school district of the City of Passaic.

By letter dated September 8, 1990, the Commissioner advised all parties that upon review of the petition for declaratory judgment, he had determined not to decide the matter on a declaratory judgment basis. The Commissioner stated issues raised in the petition are fact sensitive, necessitating the creation of a factual record, and that the matter was being transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing.

The matter was transmitted to the OAL and marked filed at OAL on September 10, 1990.

A hearing was held December 12, 1990, and the record remained opened until December 17, 1990 when the Board submitted a copy of a resolution concerning appointments list, confidential employees and nonbargaining employees.

The date for filing the initial decision was extended to June 22, 1992.

The issue to be determined in this case is whether a conflict of interest exists on the part of respondent Pedro Cancel because he is a member of the juvenile bureau of the City of Passaic Police Department and he is assigned as a security officer at the high school which is under the jurisdiction of the respondent Board of Education.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Based upon the testimony and evidence received at the hearing, I make the following findings of fact:

1. The petitioner at the time of hearing was an elected member of the Board and was a retired officer of the City of Passaic Police Department.

2. Respondent Pedro Cancel at the time of hearing was a member of the City of Passaic Police Department and was an elected member of the City of Passaic Board of Education.

3. Officer Cancel was elected to the Board on April 5, 1988 for a three-year term. He was assigned to the juvenile division of the city police department approximately two years prior to the date of hearing and was assigned as a security officer at the high school for the school year 1989-1990. Prior to his assignment in the juvenile division, he was assigned to the patrol division.

4. The wife of the Police Chief of the police department is a tenured confidential employee of the Board whose salary, prior to the year 1990-1991 was a "gray employee" whose salary was set on an individual basis by the Board. She is a confidential administrative secretary to the superintendent of the City of Passaic Board of Education.

5. Since school year 1990-1991, the confidential administrative secretary, the police chief's wife, has been represented by a bargaining unit and her salary is no longer set individually by the Board.

6. Shortly prior to the filing of the petition in this matter, there was an incident in which a copy of the High School Proficiency Test (HSPT) was stolen and the petitioner alleges that respondent Cancel was responsible for the investigation or was part of the investigative unit that investigated the incident, sat in judgment of the student involved and participated in the verdict in the case which was guilty. As a result, the unanimous Board determination was to expel that student.

7. Mr. Cancel did not participate in the investigation nor was he given any knowledge of the investigation nor any related event prior to the presentation to the entire Board. The investigation was conducted by Detective Sergeant Henderson of the juvenile division.

8. Any juvenile complaints are referred to the detectives assigned to the juvenile division "downtown" (at police headquarters) and are not referred to the security officers at the high school, such as respondent Cancel.

9. The petition was amended at the opening of the hearing to allege a conflict of interest on the part of Mr. Cancel in voting for salaries for the wife of the chief of police.

DISCUSSION

Based upon the testimony received at the hearing, respondent Cancel was not involved in any manner other than in his official capacity as a Board member in the incident involving the theft of the HSPT test. The allegations of the petition in this matter assume his possible involvement in the investigation, his predetermination or a position to prejudge for or against the subject being investigated, and that he may make a predetermined disposition of any case because he is assigned to the juvenile division.

The allegations of the petition are purely speculative, and, in fact, are erroneous speculations, in the matter of the HSPT theft.

The petition contains an allegation of conflict of interest on the part of Mr. Cancel because his salary is allegedly paid one-half by the City of Passaic and one-half by the Board of Education. I am satisfied from the evidence presented that Officer Cancel's salary is paid by the City of Passaic and that he is paid as a police officer and member of the police department.

The respondent Board provided background information on a contribution made to the City of Passaic by the Board of Education for security officer reimbursement. While it is true that the Board receives its funding from the City, there came a time in 1983 when the salary of crossing guards was the subject of concern to both the Board and the municipality. At that time, the Board was advised that it could not provide crossing guards and pay their salaries as a Board expense. The Board was advised by the Assistant Commissioner of Education at the time that they could enter into an agreement with the municipality and reimburse the municipality for the cost of such services. As a result of that information, the City of Passaic and the Board agreed, with the approval of the Director of Local Government Services, that the Board would provide the sum of $46,000 for security officer reimbursement; and the municipality passed Resolution No. 5340-89, dated May 30, 1989, including the sum of $46,000 to be received from the Board for security officer reimbursement to be included as an item of general revenue in the 1989 budget.

The evidence is clear that respondent Cancel receives his salary from the City of Passaic Police Department. The City receives the sum of $46,000 for security officer reimbursement from the Board as an item of general revenue. The salary of respondent Cancel is not paid by the Board. Accordingly, any conflict of interest based on this allegation must necessarily be dismissed.

The amended charge that Cancel is in a conflict of interest because he votes on the salary of the wife of the chief of police is moot; that matter is moot because the employee is now a member of a bargaining unit. As to any votes which may have been taken prior to her inclusion in the bargaining unit, Mr. Cancel testified that he had never met the chief of police, had never had any conversations with the chief of police, no conversations regarding the chief's wife's position and salary, and that he had never received a request of any kind dealing with the matter. He testified that he abstained from a vote at a closed session of the Board, and that he abstained publicly at a meeting of the committee of the whole with regard to the salary resolution. He stated he was present at the time the salary resolution was presented for passage, but he did not recall whether he voted or abstained at that time. His reason for such action was a suggestion by several teachers that any vote by him would be a sign of impropriety because of his presence in the school.

A conflict of interest must be "substantial and materially sufficient," to bar a person from holding office. In re Bayless, 1974 S.L.D. 595, rev'd St. Bd. of Ed., 1974 S.L.D. 603.

In Elms v. Mt. Olive Bd. of Ed., 1977 S.L.D. 713, the Commissioner held that potential conflicts of interest on the part of Board members can be cured by abstention.

The petitioner has submitted a letter dated June 14, 1989 from the then-Attorney General of the State of New Jersey to an assistant prosecutor in the Camden County Prosecutor's Office relative to an inquiry concerning a possible "prohibition of political activity by municipal police officers." I have attached that letter of suggested guidelines as an appendix to this decision. The suggestion is made that the prosecutor recommend to municipal police chiefs certain possible restrictions with respect to political activities by police officers. The guideline appears on page 2 of the letter as Guideline 1. There is no evidence of such guideline being a State policy, or a policy of the Attorney General of the State New Jersey having application to every police officer or department throughout the State. It is true that such a guideline may have application to any police department in the State, but there has been no showing that the chief of police of the City of Passaic has issued such guideline prior to the filing of the petition, and, indeed, the election of the respondent Cancel on April 5, 1988.

I am satisfied that Mr. Cancel is a person of substantial credibility. The allegations of conflict of interest made against him, based on the evidence, appear to be without foundation.

CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the foregoing findings of fact, general discussion, and the evidence presented at the hearing, I CONCLUDE that there is no evidence of a substantial and materially sufficient conflict of interest on the part of respondent Pedro Cancel which should disqualify him from being a member and participating in Board of Education determinations nor serving as an elected member of the City of Passaic Board of Education. I further CONCLUDE that the petition in this matter should be DISMISSED, with prejudice.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Dear Mr. Muhlbaier:

As requested in your letter of May 17, 1989, we have reviewed your inquiry concerning a possible prohibition of political activity by municipal police officers. In particular, you asked that such a prohibition could extend to: campaigning; donating funds; and endorsing candidates for office in any general or primary election or for the adoption or rejection of any public question in any election.

There is very little precedent or authority specifically treating this subject concerning municipal police officers. Nevertheless, we believe that, in general, it is necessary to strike a balance between the rights of a public employee and the legitimate interest of the public employer. " . . . it has been settled that a state cannot condition public employment on a basis that infringes the employee's constitutionally protected interest in freedom of expression." Conmick v. Meyers, 103 S.Ct. 1684 (1983).

It would appear that the trend in recent years has been to afford the public employee greater latitude with respect to participation in political activities. For example, the 1986 revision of the civil service laws eliminated the former prohibition against a person holding a position in the classified service from participating in political activities or campaigns at any time ". . . so as to impair his usefulness in the position in which he is employed . . ." N.J.S.A. 11:7-2 (c.f. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-23).

More specifically, with respect to law enforcement personnel, this year the Department of Law and Public Safety revised its Code of Ethics. This revision liberalized permissible political activities by Department employees, including those with authority to enforce criminal laws, compared with the prior Code which incorporated the regulations adopted by the County Prosecutors' Association.

Mindful of the paucity of authority, but at the same time aware of a trend toward less restriction on permissible political activities by public employees, we would suggest the following as guidelines for the Prosecutor to recommend to municipal police chiefs with respect to political activities by police officers:

1) a police officer shall not be a candidate for or hold office in an elective public position or political organization within or inclusive of the jurisdiction in which he is employed. But, for example, it would be permissible for a police officer in one municipality to be on the school board in another municipality. This proposal is adopted for the reasons set forth in Fitzgerald v. Mathesius 136 N.J.Super. 93 (Law Div. 1975) and on the grounds that a police officer's responsibilities and those of an elected public official or political party officer could result in incompatibility of offices. See also Hickman v. City of Dallas, 475 F.Supp. 137 (1979); MacKenzie v. Snow, 675 F.Supp. 1333 (1987);

2) a police officer may contribute funds or any other thing of value to a candidate for public office subject to the provision of any law governing such contributions;

3) a police officer shall not engage in any political activity while on duty or at any other time if to do so would conflict with his official duties, interfere with the operation of his department or impair his ability to perform his duties;

4) a police officer shall not directly or indirectly use or seek to use his official position to influence the political activity of another person;

5) a police officer shall not engage in any polling duties except in the performance of his official duties; and

6) a police officer shall not display any political campaign material on any government property or on his person while on duty or in uniform.

In recommending the above, we are also aware of the decision of the New Jersey Supreme Court In the Matter of Randolph, 101 N.J. 425 (1986) in which the Court upheld its own Rule 1:17-1 which bans political activity by all court personnel. However, it would appear that this opinion is restricted to an interpretation that the New Jersey Constitution requires " . . . the complete separation of politics from the judiciary . . ." and is not intended to necessarily apply to all governmental employees. Moreover, the constitutionality of this Rule is at present being challenged in the federal court.

Lastly, we would suggest that in acting upon the above guidelines, the Prosecutor should take into consideration the appropriateness of any municipal ordinances, police department rules and regulations or contractual provisions regarding this subject.

Very truly yours,

James M. Keating, Jr.

ITALO N. UBALDINI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
PEDRO CANCEL AND THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PASSAIC, PASSAIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENTS.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner affirms the findings and conclusions of the Office of Administrative Law that petitioner has failed to meet his burden of demonstrating, by substantial credible evidence in the record, that Respondent Cancel stands in conflict of interest in that he is employed by the Passaic County Police Department attached to the juvenile bureau, and serving as a security officer at Passaic High School, while a member of the Board of Education of the same district. In this regard, the Commissioner relies on the findings of facts adduced by the ALJ at hearing and upon careful inspection of the exhibits brought to the record.

Further, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that petitioner's claim, made by way of amendment of his Petition of Appeal, that Respondent Cancel is in conflict of interest because he votes on the salary of the wife of the city chief of police, is moot by virtue of the fact that the employee is now a member of a bargaining unit. See, for example, Patsy Salerno v. Board of Education of the Township of Old Bridge, Middlesex County, decided by the Commissioner April 23, 1984.

Finally, it is noted that while the record closed in this matter on December 17, 1990, the initial decision was not rendered until June 17, 1992. The record establishes that Respondent Cancel was elected to the Board on April 5, 1988 for a three-year term. Such term would have expired in April 1991. The record does not make plain whether Respondent Cancel sought or was elected to office as a board member thereafter, raising the spectre of whether this matter in toto is moot. However, if Respondent Cancel currently is a member of the Board of Education in Passaic while assigned as a security officer at Passaic High School by the Passaic Police Department, he should be guided, in general, in the event that he is assigned to investigate a student infraction, by the principle that a board member should not only avoid conflicts of interest, but also potential conflicts of interest or even the appearance of a conflict of interest. See Elms et al. v. Mt. Olive Twp. Bd. of Ed., 1977 S.L.D. 713. See also N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. The rule of thumb to be followed in potential conflicts of interest on the part of board members can be cured by abstention in voting. Thus, were he to be involved in the investigation of a student in his capacity as a police officer, Respondent Cancel should abstain from voting on such incident should it come before the Board for action to avoid the appearance or potential of a conflict of interest.

With such caveat extended, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision for the reasons stated therein and dismisses the Petition of Appeal.

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, July 29, 1992

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Hill Wallack
(Rocky L. Peterson, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Appellant, Margaret C. Murphy, Esq.

For the reasons expressed in the decision below, the State Board of Education affirms the Commissioner's determination that Respondent engaged in unbecoming conduct warranting dismissal from his tenured position as superintendent of schools. In affirming this determination, we stress, as did the Commissioner, the seriousness of Respondent's conduct in absenting himself from the district for vacation during the period in which the Board was preparing its 1990-91 budget. This breech of professionalism is of such consequence that, in our view, it alone justifies Respondent's dismissal.

RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former full-time learning disability teacher-consultant (LDT-C), alleged Board improperly abolished her full-time position despite recommendation of the superintendent. Petitioner contended RIF was not for reasons of economy.

ALJ found Board did improperly abolish her full-time LDT-C position. Board changed special education plan without approval. Board was ordered to reinstate full-time LDT-C position for 1992-93 or immediately secure approval on its changes. No back pay was awarded to petitioner as she rejected other full-time employment. Otherwise, petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision noting that Brescia and Rotondo are not implicated in this matter, which dealt with a reduction in force.

Record Closed: March 19, 1992 Decided: June 19, 1992

BEFORE DANIEL B. McKEOWN, ALJ:

Sally Primka (petitioner), employed by the Jamesburg Borough Board of Education (Board) as a learning disability teacher-consultant (LDT/C), filed a three count Petition of Appeal to the Commissioner of Education alleging that following a reduction in force for asserted reasons of economy which resulted in her full-time employment being reduced to part-time the Board refuses to properly recognize her tenure and seniority, that the Board abolished her full-time position in the first instance because of her refusal to amend four individual educational programs (IEPs) in order to return out-of-district pupils to in-district, and that the asserted reasons of economy are false, and that contrary to N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.3(a)(6)(bii) the Board alone determined to abolish her full-time position as LDT/C despite the contrary recommendation of the then superintendent. After the Commissioner transferred the matter August 1, 1991 to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14f-1 et seq., a hearing was conducted January 30, 1992 at the Jamesburg Municipal Building after which the parties filed memoranda in support of their respective positions. Requested extensions of time within which to issue this initial decision have been granted.

Findings are reached in this initial decision that petitioner failed to establish the Board's reduction of her full-time position to part-time was in anyway retaliation against her asserted refusal to amend four IEPs; that the Board did entertain the then superintendent's contrary recommendation regarding the reduction of petitioner's full-time position to part-time but determined to initiate the reduction; but, petitioner did establish the Board violated her tenure rights. Nevertheless, petitioner is not entitled to back pay for her failure to mitigate lost wages.

FACTS

Having considered the testimony of witnesses produced at the hearing, together with having reviewed all documents, I find the following facts:

1. Petitioner has been employed by this Board for more than 19 years as a teacher. During that time she has been assigned as a teacher of reading at the elementary level, a resource room teacher, and since 1979 she has been employed on a full-time basis as the LDT/C.

2. On or about November 2, 1989, the Board, as obligated under N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.2, filed with the Department of Education through the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools its three part special education plan for 1990-91, 1991-92 and 1992-93.

3. The Board states in Part One of the plan that it intended for those three years "To maintain existing child study team personnel." (P-2A)

4. Part Two of the Plan states that at the time of filing the Board's child study team consisted of a full-time LDT/C, a full-time school social worker, and a part-time school psychologist.

5. This special education plan was implemented as stated above during the 1990-91 school year. However, during that same year when the Board was putting together its proposed 1991-92 current expense budget which ultimately was to be placed before the electorate at the annual school election, it determined to reduce the full-time positions of its child study team, including petitioner's full-time LDT/C position to part-time, for reasons of economy.

6. The then superintendent of schools, Anthony Nami who retired July 1, 1991 disagreed with the reduction of the LDT/C position from full to part-time. Nami let that view be known to the Board and to the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools.

7. Nami told the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools in a letter dated March 28, 1991 (P-9) that he would not sign the proposed 1991-92 budget until the Board explained to him why his recommendation on how to maintain the LDT/C position on a full-time basis would not be followed.

8. Nami's recommendation as explained to the County Superintendent is reproduced here in full:

> The elimination of one tuition student from Monroe High School resulting in a $36,000.00 savings, should provide the necessary funding to return three part-time special education aids to the budget. The return to the district of three more out-of-district placements will result in a savings of another $80,000.00 (approximately) which can restore the Child Study Team to full-time and secure another teacher to facilitate bringing the above mentioned students back to the district. This was and continues to be my recommendation to the Board of Education.

9. A three-way telephone conversation between and among Board President, the Board Secretary, J.M. Main, and the Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools was had. The Board secretary believed following that conversation that Nami would sign the proposed budget if his recommendation were followed.

10. The Board Secretary explained to the Board in a memorandum (P-3) to it on April 9, 1991, a date prior to the public hearing on the proposed 1991-92 current expense budget, amendments to the budget which would have to be made in order to follow Nami's recommendation. Petitioner was in attendance when the Board discussed the memorandum and learned of the intention to reduce her full-time employment.

11. The superintendent signed the budget. The Middlesex County Superintendent of Schools approved the proposed budget, as signed by the superintendent, but with funds available only for a part-time LDT/C. (But see P-10)

12. Superintendent Nami left active employment with the Board on April 21, 1991. The Board named Allan Drapczuk as acting superintendent of schools.

13. Initially, Drapczuk believed that a full-time child study team was necessary. However, he changed his view based on his observation of how the child study team and the LDT/C functioned efficiently during 1991-92.

14. The Board entered the 1991-92 year with a part-time LDT/C and other part-time child study team positions. The Board also appointed a new coordinator of special services, Stephanie Belinker. Belinker assumed administrative duties otherwise performed by petitioner when she was a full-time LDT/C which, in the Board's view, allowed petitioner to devote her part-time LDT/C position to performing the functions of that job. (But see P-16 on petitioner's case status.)

15. Petitioner filed this action against the Board on June 24, 1991.

16. During June 1991 counsel to the parties entered discussions regarding full-time employment for petitioner. These discussions were memorialized in writing (R-3) by Board counsel to petitioner on July 26, 1991 wherein he requested petitioner to either accept or reject a proffer of full-time employment or to make a reasonable counteroffer.

17. By letter (R-4) dated August 1, 1991 petitioner advised the Board that she would accept a 3/5 LDT/C position along with a 2/5 resource room position.

18. By letter (R-5) dated September 4, 1991 the Board reminded petitioner of a conversation had during the middle of August regarding its counteroffer of 3/5 LDT/C position with a 2/5 teacher of reading in the six, seventh, and eighth grades. Petitioner, it appears, was out-of-state at the time. Nevertheless, the Board advised petitioner's counsel that it determined on September 3, 1991 to formally appoint petitioner to the position of a 3/5 LDT/C and as a 2/5 teacher of reading at a combined salary of $39,525, or the amount she otherwise would have received had she continued as a full-time LDT/C.

19. In a near identical letter (R-7), the superintendent advised petitioner of the action taken by the Board at its meeting September 3, 1991. The superintendent also included in that letter the reading assignment schedule she would be following. That reading assignment schedule had petitioner teaching three reading classes each day, Monday through Friday with her LDT/C duties being performed after her reading assignments ended each day.

20. There is no dispute that had the part-time reading schedule and LDT/C schedule been followed as outlined above, petitioner would have been teaching more than a full-time teacher is otherwise assigned. However, the evidence shows that not only did petitioner refuse all offers of full-time employment at the salary she otherwise would have made had her LDT/C position not been reduced to part-time, petitioner made no effort to adjust the schedule so that she would not be teaching more periods per day than a regularly employed full-time teacher.

21. Petitioner's calculation (P-5) that with federal aid her position as LDT/C on a full-time basis would cost the board in local money $30 more than it costs on a part-time basis is accurate on its face. Nevertheless, that figure by itself does not undercut the Board's abolition of a full time LDT/C for reasons of economy.

22. There is no evidence in this record that the Board ever moved before the Department of Education to amend its special education plan filed on November 2, 1989.

23. Despite requests from the County Superintendent for information on the composition of the child study team for 1991-92, the Board failed to respond. (See P-11, P-12, P-13, P-14)

24. There is no evidence in this record whatsoever that either the Board or present school administration ever attempted to force, coerce, or manipulate petitioner or the child study team to redraft individual educational plans for any child out-of-district in order to place them in-district. The only evidence in this regard is that that was the sole recommendation of former superintendent Nami who was called by petitioner to testify in support of her position in this case.

25. Though the Board apparently did not take the official action until October 15, 1991 (P-15) to reduce petitioner's employment to part-time, petitioner does not allege nor does she argue that timeliness of official action is an issue here.

Initially, it is noted that the Board erroneously states in its reply memorandum that petitioner is not a "tenure" LDT/C because "there is no statute or regulation for a tenure LDT/C". Tenure is conferred by statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to 18, which "should be liberally construed to achieve its beneficent ends." Spiewak v. Board of Educa. of Rutherford., 90 N.J. 63, 74 (1982). N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 defines with specificity the conditions under which teaching staff members are entitled to the security of tenure. It provides that the services "all teaching staff members including  teachers  and such other employees as are in positions which require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the board of examiners," shall be under tenure upon satisfying one of the requisite statutory probationary terms set forth in the statute. See Ellicott v. Board of Educ. of Frankford Tp., 251 N.J. Super. 342, 347 (App. Div. 1991). Consequently, petitioner has acquired a tenure status in the position of LDT/C.

In count one of the petition, petitioner complains at paragraph six that the Board refuses to recognize her seniority by permitting nontenure, or less senior teachers, to remain in the district. On that basis, petitioner says her seniority was violated. There is no evidence in this record that the Board retains in its employ any nontenure teacher to the detriment of petitioner. Consequently, it cannot be said on petitioner's argument that her seniority was violated.

Petitioner alleges in count two that on or about March 25, 1991 "respondent" advised her it would reduce her full-time LDT/C position unless she and other members of the child study team redrafted individual educational plan for four out-of-district pupils. The evidence brought forward by petitioner does not support that allegations in any manner.

Count three of the petition alleges that because the Board reduced petitioner's LDT/C position to part-time and such determination was not made upon the recommendation of the then superintendent, the Board violated N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.3(a)(6)(vii). That rule provides

> The chief school administrator shall recommend to the District Board of Education formal appointment of all teaching staff members.

Petitioner reads the regulation to mean that the Board may not abolish full-time positions in favor of part-time positions without the affirmative recommendation of the superintendent.

The Board is obligated to consider the recommendation of the superintendent under this rule and under the Commissioner's interpretation of the rule in Brescia v. Board of Ed Pemperton Tp., 1991 SLD-(April 12, 1991). The Board is not bound by the recommendation of the superintendent. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 provides boards of education with the authority to reduce the number of teaching staff members when, in its judgment, it is advisable to do so for reasons of economy. To require the Board to rigidly follow the recommendation of the superintendent would infringe its power to abolish positions under that statutory authority. Moreover, in this case, recall that the superintendent's recommendation was based solely upon his plan to change the placement of youngsters out-of-district to in-district placements. To arbitrarily determine that the placement of a youngster in need of special education shall be changed, without prior consultation of the parents involved, appears on its face to be highly improper. Consequently, I conclude on the evidence in this record that while the Board received the recommendation of the superintendent, there is no evidence produced by petitioner which would show that it arbitrarily rejected that recommendation.

Petitioner contends that the Board had no real reasons of economy upon which to reduce the full-time LDT/C to part-time because, in essence, it only saved $30. The Board says, to the contrary, that the operation of its child study team is more efficient now with a coordinator of special services that it had been when petitioner was a full-time LDT/C. I am more inclined to accept the argument of the Board that the efficiency of the child study team is higher now than it had been earlier without more evidence from petitioner that somehow the Board's reasons for economy are false. It is petitioner who carries the burden of persuasion and, in this regard, there is simply insufficient evidence and argument produced by petitioner for her to prevail on this point.

Despite all the foregoing, the Board committed a grave error by unilaterally changing its filed and approved special education plan during 1991-92 without the prior approval of the Department of Education through the Middlesex County superintendent of schools. This is so for N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.2(c) specifically states "If there are any changes to parts one or three of the plan they shall be prepared in accordance with the requirements of this section. " The rule requires each district board of education to develop a written plan for special education which shall conform with the State plan for the educationally handicapped. The plan once developed, with reasonable opportunity for the participation of professional staff, parents, community members, handicapped individuals and groups representing the handicap population, shall be submitted for approval to the Department of Education through its county office. While the Board had in existence an approved plan, the very fact it determined not to maintain its child study team personnel at the level which existed at the time the plan was approved constitutes a change in the plan. The change in the plan occurred when the Board determined to reduce the LDT/C position to full-time to part-time. Consequently, the Board is out of compliance with N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.2. Thus, it abolished petitioner's full-time LDT/C position improperly and, therefore, violated her tenure rights.

Notwithstanding this turn of events by which the conclusion is reached the Board failed to comply with N.J.A.C. 6:28-1.2 in regard to the reduction of the LDT/C position from full to part-time and the consequent violation of petitioner's tenure rights, petitioner is not entitled to back pay for this reason. The evidence demonstrates the Board had every intention of insuring petitioner full-time employment during 1991-92 by its two separate offers to her. Petitioner is properly certificated to teach reading at the elementary level and to be a LDT/C. Petitioner rejected the last proffered assignment because her schedule would have called for her to teach more than a full day. There is little doubt that once that situation was called to the attention of the superintendent, it could have been adjusted so that she would be teaching a full schedule. Petitioner rejected the offered full-time employment out of hand. Consequently, to award petitioner back pay in these circumstances would be to expend public funds for services not rendered.

In summary, while a board of education has authority to abolish positions for reasons of economy, when the position abolishment affects special education the Board must take special care to adjust its plan for special education accordingly and to get the adjustments approved. In this case, because the Board failed to adjust its plan and to receive approval on that adjustment, it must either restore the position of LDT/C to full-time for 1992-93 or, alternatively, immediately secure approval on its change. In all other respects, the petition of appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF JAMESBURG, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions were untimely filed at the Department of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 in that the express mail, next-day-service verification indicates the exceptions were mailed on July 9, 1992, the due date for the exceptions. The time-receipt stamps in the Commissioner's office and in the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes denote that the exceptions were filed on July 10, 1992, one day beyond the regulatory period provided for by N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by virtue of the decision having been mailed on June 26, 1992. By faxed transmission received in the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on July 20, 1992, petitioner's attorney submitted his certification stating that notwithstanding three calls to OAL between June 23, 1992 and June 30, 1992, he did not receive a copy of the decision with the cover letter, which showed that the decision was mailed on June 26, 1992, until July 7, 1992 although he indicates in said certification that OAL faxed him a copy of the decision on June 30, 1992. It is clear from such certification that petitioner's counsel was obligated by no later than July 9, 1992, to contact Controversies and Disputes to seek an extension to file exceptions if he believed he could not meet the regulatory deadline. N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8(b) No such request was timely forthcoming. Consequently, such exceptions and the Board's reply exceptions are not made part of the Commissioner's review.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner adopts as his own the findings of fact and conclusions of law established by the ALJ. In so concluding, the Commissioner would clarify that the holdings in Brescia v. Board of Education of the Township of Pemberton, Burlington County, decided by the Commissioner April 1, 1991 and in the recent case captioned Rotondo v. Carlstadt-East Rutherford Regional High School District, Bergen County, decided by the Commissioner May 8, 1992 address the superintendent's role under N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.2(a)(6)vii, which states the chief school administrator shall recommend to the district board of education formal appointment of all teaching staff members. Brescia dealt with the transfer of a teaching staff member, Rotondo with a nonrenewal. Because the instant matter deals with a reduction in force, neither N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.2(a)(6)vii nor such cases as Brescia or Rotondo are implicated in this matter.

With such clarification, the Commissioner adopts the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law for the reasons stated therein and directs either the restoration of the position of LDT/C to full time for the 1992-93 school year or, alternatively, to immediately secure approval on its special education plan.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BEFORE RONALD I. PARKER, ALJ

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In this matter, petitioner, S.R. by his guardian ad litem, J.R., through a Petition of Appeal with Motion for Emergent Relief, sought to stay the respondent's action of expelling S.R. and sought to reinstate S.R.'s tutoring program during pendency of a hearing on the merits.

On April 23, 1992, I was assigned by the Director of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-5o, to hear this emergent relief matter. The hearing was originally scheduled to be held at the OAL, Newark, New Jersey, at 1:30 p.m. on April 27, 1992, but was adjourned at the request of the parties. A response brief was received on April 27, 1992, and a status conference was held on April 30, 1992.

At that time, respondent's counsel indicated and subsequently confirmed later that day that the respondent would continue to provide tutoring services while the parties attempted to negotiate a settlement. On May 8, 1992, during a continued status conference, the undersigned was notified that the matter had tentatively been settled subject to the approval of parties.

On June 10, 1992, an executed Stipulation of Settlement (see J-1, attached) was received by the undersigned. Counsel for both parties have by their signatures indicated that their clients have fully agreed to the terms of the agreement and that it was entered into freely and voluntarily.

I have reviewed the terms of settlement, and I FIND:

(a) that the settlement is voluntary,
(b) that it is consistent with the law, and
(c) that it is fully dispositive of all issues in controversy

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Consequently, I CONCLUDE that the attached Stipulation of Settlement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, and I approve same. In conjunction therewith, I ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

vs.	DOCKET NO.: EDU-2890-92
MORRIS HILLS REGIONAL DISTRICT BOARD OF EDUCATION, Respondent.	STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

The matter in controversy having been amicably resolved between the parties, it is agreed as follows:

1. Morris Hills Regional District Board of Education shall permanently remove any and all records from the school files of S. R. indicating that he had been expelled on April 13, 1992;

2. That S. R. shall receive tutoring until the end of the 1991-92 school year. Said tutoring shall be administered with a frequency to allow S. R. to complete and receive final grades for all of the school subjects in which he was registered as of January 13, 1992;

3. That S. R. shall dismiss the Complaint filed under Docket No.: EDU-2890-92;

4. That S. R. shall be excluded from any schools operated by Respondent, effective immediately, and S.R. shall withdraw from said schools effective June 30, 1992;

5. That S.R. shall never return to nor enroll at any public school operated by the Board of Education of the Morris Hills Regional School District and hereby waives any rights that he may have, now or in the future, to return to the aforementioned public school system; and

6. That neither party shall make disclosure of the contents of this agreement to any third party, including but not limited to, any newspaper or publication which may be circulated among the general public. However, S.R. shall be permitted to disclose information as necessary to further his admission into other educational institutions.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF MORRIS REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law in the form of a joint stipulation of settlement have been reviewed. No exceptions therefore, were filed by the parties.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner rejects the instant settlement for the reasons that follow.

Paragraph one of the settlement states:

> Morris Hills Regional District Board of Education shall permanently remove any and all records from the school files of S.R. indicating that he had been expelled on April 13, 1992.

Paragraph six of the settlement states:

> That neither party shall make disclosure of the contents of this agreement to any third party, including but not limited to, any newspaper or publication which may be circulated among the general public. However, S.R. shall be permitted to disclose information as necessary to further his admission into other educational institutions.

The Commissioner is constrained to prevent in this case what amounts to the withholding of information in a pupil record that S.R. was expelled. Indeed, the terms of the instant settlement would preclude any other public school district in New Jersey in which S.R. may seek enrollment from acquiring knowledge of such expulsion. The Commissioner will not condone the deliberate suppression of the kinds of information required to be kept as a mandated record. (N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1 et seq.) N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1(a)iii, requires that a pupil's mandated record include a description of pupil progress. In this case, S.R.'s mandated record would reflect the reasons for which his program assignment while attending respondent's schools was terminated, i.e. as a result of explusion. Such information at the present time is unquestionably, educationally relevant for any local district to which he may seek enrollment.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19a such mandated records are subject to transfer as part of the pupil's record upon request from the chief school administrator of a district where a child seeks to enroll. Thus, they may not be suppressed.

Moreover, as regards the terms of the instant settlement, it must be emphasized that such terms are part of the Commissioner's decision in this matter and are also public information pursuant to N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1 et seq., absent a determination to seal a record, which the Commissioner finds inappropriate under the circumstances of this matter.

Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects the instant settlement and remands for further action. Should the parties not be able to amicably reach terms of a settlement in accord with the observations noted herein, the matter is to proceed to an adjudication on the merits of all claims.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent and Participant New Jersey Education Association (hereinafter petitioner) sought declaration that Board violated N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 and 14, perverted compulsory attendance laws of New Jersey, and failed to provide thorough and efficient system of free public schools in favor of commercial interests by entering into contract with Whittle Communications Educational Network for reception of Channel One news program. Channel One consists of a 12-minute news and information program and two minutes of commercial advertising. New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA) was also granted participant status.

Having found this case turns on application of education laws, and in light of testimony of witnesses and exhibits submitted in evidence, ALJ concluded the commercial content of Channel One broadcasts is inappropriate for use in homeroom or any other school day period. An arrangement that cumulatively takes more than a school day of instructional time (over a year) from children for commercial purposes is not efficient. Thus, it violates art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of New Jersey Constitution (thorough and efficient clause). ALJ further found nonprofit educational statues N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 were not violated by the contract. ALJ determined compulsory attendance statute (N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25) is offended as even the indirect benefits to Board cannot justify compulsory viewing of commercial advertisements by children who are compelled to attend school. ALJ dismissed pupil records argument under N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1 et seq. as being without merit because Whittle's access to data regarding pupils was limited to general numerical data related to numbers of pupils attending the school. ALJ also dismissed constitutional challenge under art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 of New Jersey Constitution of 1947 because arguments and clause were improperly raised. ALJ ordered Board to cease performance under contract or to reform the Whittle contract to remove infirmities.

Commissioner affirmed in part/reversed in part the ALJ's initial decision. Initially, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's dismissal of the pupil records argument because petitioner did not prove violation of N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.5. In addition, Commissioner concurred that constitutional challenge under art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 was untimely lodged. Commissioner adopted as his own ALJ's conclusion that N.J.S.A. 18A: 51-13 et seq. was not relevant to type of contract under examination in this matter as that statute provides for nonprofit television contracts. In all other regards, the initial decision was rejected and the petition was dismissed. Commissioner found Board had discretionary authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 to contract for Whittle's services and that Board's determination that benefits gained by such contract with Whittle outweighed exposing pupils to two minutes of commercials was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Moreover, construing N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, the compulsory education statute, the Commissioner determined that pupils are not actually compelled to watch the Channel One programming. Further, Commissioner rejected ALJ's analysis and conclusion that art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution of 1947 was violated because, allegedly, students lose instructional time by watching commercials, finding that instructional time remains the same with or without Channel One because programming is not shown during instructional period. Moreover, Commissioner relied on State v. Whittle Communications, 328 N.C. 456, 464 (1991), finding that no student is compelled to even pay attention to the programming or the commercials. Therefore, the thorough and efficient clause of the New Jersey Constitution was not implicated in this case. Commissioner limited holding to facts of this case and cautioned that under facts where more commercial intrusion existed, decision could find board's action unreasonable and arbitrary. Commissioner recognized the need not to impair a board of education's ability to avail itself of modern technology. However, he further emphasized the sanctity of the continuity of instruction and his concern for the abuse of intrusion on instructional time. Therefore, Commissioner cautions boards of education that they must assiduously guard against the potential for abuse that exists relative to the intrusion of commercialism within the schoolroom setting, especially as it impacts on instructional time.

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Prior to commencement of the 1990-91 school year, the Trenton Board of Education (Board) entered into a contract with Whittle Communications Educational Network (Whittle), under which Whittle installed equipment, including wiring and television sets within classrooms, for transmittal and reception of Channel One news programs. Channel One consists of a 12-minute news and information program "designed to make the news relevant to the concerns and studies of teenagers." Whittle Affidavit at 2. The program contains approximately two minutes of commercial advertising. The Network offers other educational programs without commercial advertising.

The petitioners filed a verified petition with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) dated February 22, 1991, seeking a declaration that the Board perverted the compulsory attendance laws of New Jersey; failed to provide a thorough and efficient system of free public schools within its district; abrogated its mandated duties and responsibilities in favor of commercial interests, and breached the privacy rights of petitioners Jamilh Ali and Khadijah Ali. The petitioners additionally sought a judgment declaring the contract between the Board and Whittle null and void as against the public policies and laws of New Jersey and the United States. The petitioners seek to enjoin and restrain the Board from performing upon the contract with Whittle. The petitioners filed an amendment to the verified petition, dated March 19, 1991, requesting that the Commissioner hear and determine that the matter is a controversy under school law and the contract between the Board and Whittle is incompatible with the policies, rules or regulations governing public education in New Jersey established by the State Board of Education.

The Board filed its answer and separate defenses on March 22, 1991.

Whittle filed a motion to intervene with the Commissioner dated March 26, 1991. The petitioners filed a brief in opposition alleging that Whittle's interest in the case is inconsequential and not connected logically or inherently to the issues.

The Department of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. After reviewing the arguments regarding the motion to intervene, this judge ordered Whittle admitted as a party intervenor.

After notice, a prehearing conference was held on August 27, 1991. Among other things, it was agreed that the Board and Whittle would file prehearing motions on NJEA's standing and the Commissioner's jurisdiction over a contract issue.

On September 24, 1991, before moving papers were received, the petitioners amended their petition pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-6.2 to add as a petitioner Aginah Ali, the daughter of petitioner Abdul-Malik Ali, who entered Trenton Central High School in September 1991. The amendment conforming to the rule, this judge approved it by letter order dated October 31, 1991.

On November 25, 1991, this judge issued an order dismissing so much of the appeal as goes to the commercial contract between the Board and Whittle and dismissing the New Jersey Education Association as a party.

On December 20, 1991, the Commissioner affirmed, having reviewed the judge's decision on an interlocutory basis at the request of the petitioners. The Commissioner stated that the judge's decision did not dispose of the case in that the claims of the petitioning parent and his children remained. The Commissioner concluded those claims did not arise from the terms of the contract but reached to the provision of a thorough and efficient education and to the nature of public schooling in the State. The Commissioner also found that the context in which the constitutional questions arose was such as to call for the Commissioner's expertise in interpretation.

Whittle moved before the State Board for leave to appeal, seeking dismissal of the matter entirely. The State Board considered the appeal and decided that the remaining claims in the case turn on application of the education laws. Therefore, the matter falls within the Commissioner's jurisdiction. The State Board agreed that there was no jurisdiction over purely contractual disputes. However, the State Board emphasized that the Commissioner does have incidental jurisdiction to interpret the contract so as to fulfill his obligation to resolve the education claims involved. While recognizing that the Commissioner and State Board do not have jurisdiction to decide constitutional claims, the Board emphasized its responsibility to make the administrative determinations necessary for proper disposition of the matter and to ensure an adequate record on appeal.

The State Board concluded

> Finally, in affirming the determination that NJEA has not demonstrated a direct interest sufficient to provide it with standing as a petitioner, we note, as did the ALJ, that NJEA may apply for participant status in this matter. (Slip opinion at 4).

The New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA) had previously applied for and been granted participant status. Subsequently, NJEA was granted participant status.

The matter was heard on March 18, 19 and 24, 1992, at the Office of Administrative Law, Trenton. The matter was thoroughly briefed and the record closed on May 8, 1992.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE

Seven persons testified and nine exhibits were admitted in evidence.

Abdul-Malik Ali testified that two of his children attend Trenton Public Schools and that he is familiar with the Channel One program. He does not want his children exposed to commercial advertisement. He was not involved in the decision making process until the Board decided to let the contract to Whittle. He and others were called in on "the last day" for a screening. He believes he was asked to be there because he is considered a parent-teacher organization leader.

On the day of viewing he protested the entire concept. He also tried to raise the question through parent-teacher organizations and personal contacts with school personnel. He stated he received no response. His objections go to the news content as well as what he calls subliminal messages in the advertising. He believed current event news is "slanted." He does not send his children to school to watch commercials.

He has never asked that his children be excused from the homeroom period in which Channel One is watched. He does not want his children branded as different or stigmatized in any way. He has never, on any grounds, tried to exempt or remove his children from any class or activity.

A.A., petitioner's daughter, testified. She attends Trenton Central High School and sees Channel One in her homeroom period which runs from 8:35-8:45 a.m. She does not like the commercials, but has never asked to be excused. She has never been advised by school personnel that she could be excused from watching the program. Announcements are made routinely on a variety of matters, but the witness has never heard an announcement that she could be excused from watching the program. Homeroom period attendance is mandatory. The witness recalled one incident when a few pupils asked if they could leave homeroom period and were denied permission. She could not say, however, why they wanted to leave homeroom. She candidly stated that pupils are required to be in homeroom, but are not required to pay attention to Channel One.

Program volume is always audible throughout the room. The Trenton Central High School update immediately follows Channel One. The update includes announcements of activities, events, important dates and the like. The witness watches the update and finds it valuable. It tells her what is going on in her school.

Laura Eshbaugh, vice chairman of Whittle for more than 20 years testified. She performs and has performed a wide range of duties in the corporation. She knows the workings of the education division. She is familiar with Channel One.

The contract between the Board and Whittle (J-1) is typical. All equipment is provided free of charge and free maintenance is provided. Equipment is installed in each school building and the district provides a person to be available during installation only. This person usually is consulted in matters of equipment placement.

Teachers are users of the equipment. Whittle trains an equipment operator for the district. Usually one or more school people are involved in screening and operating programs. Pupil viewing is required. If there were no pupil viewers, there would be no contract.

The programs are provided to impart information. The advertisements are separate and are used to underwrite the costs of programing. The network is funded by commercial sponsors, "like ads in a magazine."

According to the contract, the school must show the broadcast each day in its entirety or not at all. This includes the advertisements. In an affidavit dated March 25, 1991, the witness stated the contract does not require any pupil to view Channel One (J-2). The contract does provide, however, that Whittle may terminate the agreement if the number of pupils in the school declines at any time during any three-year term of the contract by more than 15% from the number of pupils at the outset or if the school shows Channel One on fewer than 92% of the days on which the school is in session and the program is available in any calendar month or on fewer than 95% of the number of days on which school is in session and the program is available in any calendar quarter. Whittle may also determine that installation of the school is not economically justified to Whittle and, on that basis, terminate the contract.

This does not mean that every child must watch the program. A Board can specify, for example, that 50% of its rooms will be equipped. For however many rooms are equipped, Whittle wants pupils watching.

The witness does not know the ratio of pupils to sets in Trenton. Whittle knows how many pupils are in school when a contract is entered into. If Whittle can terminate because of a drop in viewership, it has to know the numbers of pupils watching. The witness does not, however, provide information to sponsors concerning individual schools. If a school does stop participating, there are other schools on a waiting list. The witness does tell sponsors of the total number of pupils reached daily. Presently that number is approximately 6,000,000.

Whittle's termination clause (J-1 at 6) is a condition of contract. The witness made these requirements because Whittle wants to be sure schools that want Channel One get it. Rates charged to sponsors, however, do directly relate to the numbers of pupils in the audience. Audience age also relates to rates. If advertisements were shown at a different time and place during the school day, that is, not during the Channel One program, that would depress the rates charged.

Although Whittle requires boards to give it access to monthly attendance figures (J-1), that is not the practice. The clause is in the contract because that is how the contract originally was drawn--to provide for many contingencies. In practice, Whittle does not need monthly figures. It may ask for annual update figures.

Concerning advertisements, the witness stated they are geared to a teenage audience. Some products have been excluded from advertising by corporate decision. Whittle used a teacher panel for input in deciding the question. Some advertisements may directly promote sales; others may just keep the product in pupils' minds. The witness cannot speak with expertise about the advertisements.

Teachers' Guides and Media Specialists' Guides (I-1, I-2) are sent to all schools that use Channel One. The guides deal with Channel One and with the Classroom Channel and the Educators Channel, which are also transmitted to the schools and do not contain commercial messages. During installation, the schools' operator is instructed in how these channels work and how the schools may use them.

Whittle now has about 9,500 schools equipped and approximately 1,000 waiting. There are 240 systems in New Jersey, approximately 50 of which are parochial schools. The witness is not aware of any terminations anywhere. Whittle has never sought personnel records, only statistical information. The data they mainly need are annual attendance figures and changes in enrollment.

Channel One was tested in 1989 and went into operation nationally in March 1990. Whittle has three educator panels. An advisory panel deals with policy, an educators' panel deals with program content and an advertising review panel made up of parents and educators screens all prospective advertisements for appropriateness to the audience. The contract lists proscribed products.

A brochure (I-3) giving an overview of services and programming options is provided to schools while they are considering Channel One.

David H. Winogron, a video specialist in the Trenton Public Schools, testified. He serves 23 buildings and is familiar with the Whittle contract.

Before the district entered the contract, Winogron attended several meetings, viewed programs with district administrators and parents and provided input. One of his responsibilities was to look over technical requirements. He testified that concerns about commercial content were "for the most part" addressed in the contract.

The witness believes the Trenton Schools received their first reception in autumn 1990. The system has been expanded so that the district can broadcast over an open access cable channel. (Addendum to J-1).

Channel One is broadcast each morning at about 8:30 a.m. at the high school and four middle schools. Local school news follows. Prior to the Channel One contract, there was a once-a-week broadcast at the high school only. Each school is equipped with one color television per 23 pupils.

The district has used many programs from commercial sources including films and video tapes. There is usually a message at least identifying the company sponsoring production and what the company sells. The witness believes the commercial messages in Channel One are in good taste and appropriate to the pupils' age levels. The Channel One audience is the commercials' target. Television and VCR use has greatly expanded since the contract was entered into. If the sets are removed, the district will suffer irrespective of the reason.

Julie D. Thomas, executive director of school operations and a 35-year district employee testified. She oversees the work of principals, is involved in board policy, programs in schools and public relations. She is knowledgeable of the Whittle contract.

The witness stated she was involved initially when the superintendent put her in contact with Whittle. She got materials ready and set up meetings with staff and parents. She evaluated the program and spoke with Whittle's representatives. Because advertising is present, the witness decided community involvement was necessary. Meetings were held to which she invited all parent-teacher groups, teacher groups, pupil groups, administrators and other community groups. Two or three meetings were held. The groups saw a tape supplied by Whittle. Mr. Ali attended one session and expressed concern about the portrayal of Arabic/Muslim countries. He also objected to a soft drink commercial.

The witness contacted districts using Channel One. She had some concern about the commercial component in that it was new and different. She got parent and pupil feedback. She weighed the news and educational content against a maximum of two minutes of advertising.

Channel One is shown in homeroom periods. These periods are to accomplish attendance taking and announcement making. They are not instructional. Pupils are required to attend homeroom, but may be out for legitimate reasons. Pupils are not required to watch the television sets while Channel One is being broadcast. The witness stated that early in the process she told principals in writing that there was no requirement of pupils to look at the television sets while Channel One was being broadcast.

The witness has observed homerooms many times. There is a great range of interest among pupils. She cannot say how much they are taking in. She has received no complaints concerning advertisements since the program began and knows of no pupil requests to be excused.

Concerning homeroom excuses, a pupil would have to approach the teacher and present a parent note or an oral reason. The principal would usually make a decision and, if there were a problem, would contact the witness. There are rooms in each school to which pupils could be sent that do not have television sets. Homeroom excusal, in the witnesses' opinion, is not stigmatizing. Many pupils are out of homeroom on any given day.

The witness has surveyed staff and student opinions of Channel One (R-1a through 1e). Results were compiled by her office from responses from the high school and middle schools. The witness considers feedback necessary. On an objection to admission, this judge ruled that the district should produce the original results rather than distillations, if they exist, on March 24. The documents can be admitted to show what the district had done. They are not per se unreliable.

So far as the witness knows, the only data provided to Whittle were provided preinstallation.

The district uses many contributed resources. For example, attendance incentives are provided by the McDonalds Corporation. Publications such as Time and Sports Illustrated provide incentives. Core States Bank, as one example, is involved in an adopt a school program. No advertisements are removed from Sports Illustrated magazines used in the incentive program. Nor are advertisements removed from newspapers used in current events classes. Any support for instruction is important. If Channel One were removed, that would represent a loss to the instructional program.

When the witness gave her professional input to the Board prior to letting the contract, the Board considered and addressed commercials. Commercials are not consistent with educational goals and the educational environment.

However, they were discussed in the total context of values. The witness knows of no writings to pupils carrying any cautions or instructions concerning advertisements.

A school year consists of approximately 1,170 hours. If Channel One were shown on 180 days, that would total 30 hours of news and six hours of commercials.

On March 24, it was represented that the originals of Ms. Thomas' survey were not available. This judge admitted Exhibits R-1a through -1e for the limited purpose of showing followup that the district had done.

The respondents presented James Caulfield, Union Township Superintendent of Schools. The witness testified as to his involvement with Whittle Communications. Union Township has a contract similar to Exhibit J-1. The witness also serves on Whittle's Educators' Advisory Committee. Exhibit I-3 describes the Educators' Advisory Board. Members view programs and send comments to Whittle periodically (I-5). He attends two meeting per year of the advisory board and is compensated for his time. His travel costs are paid by Whittle.

Murray H. Rothman, a Pennsauken teacher for 22 years testified. He is television coordinator in that district which has entered into a contract with Whittle. The witness also is a member of the Educators' Advisory Board. He regularly previews programs and provides comments to Whittle (I-5).

He has been a member of the Advisory Board for one year and has met with the Board twice. Advertising is discussed at meetings. He can recall no specific objections to advertisements, but they know "people out there" object to advertisements of any kind. Some of the advertisements in the two-minute segment are public service advertisements as distinguished from pure commercials.

ARGUMENT

Petitioners

The petitioners maintain that the contract between the Board and Whittle is illegal. N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 provides:

> Every board is hereby authorized to make use of television as an educational aid by contracting for the services of any noncommercial, nonprofit educational television station located within or without the state but such contract shall not require the board to incur expenses in any one year. In excess of an amount equal to $2.00 per pupil in resident enrollment in the district.

This limitation, permitting contracts only for the services of noncommercial, nonprofit educational television stations has been in effect since 1962. Its language is plain. Therefore, it must be enforced according to its terms. It is a limitation on a board's powers because N.J.S.A. 18A:51-14 sets forth additional authority to participate in the organization and operation of noncommercial, nonprofit educational television stations. Channel One is a commercial and profit making television network. The contract, therefore, is ultra vires the Board and defies a clear statutory proscription.

New Jersey school children cannot be compelled to attend a school in order to be "sold" to commercial advertisers. "The right of a sovereign state to adopt legislation to direct the paths of its children to seek education for enlightenment and literacy, so as to enjoy full and complete life, is so fundamental as to relieve the need for judicial citation." Knox v. O'Brien, 7 N.J. Super. 608, 610 (Cty. Ct. 1950). N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 compels parents to cause children between the ages of six and 16 to regularly attend the public schools. A parent who fails to comply with the compulsory attendance law is subject to prosecution. In New Jersey, compelled attendance is grounded in the State's duty to educate children. N.J.Const., (1947), Art. VIII, §IV, par. 1. This public purpose circumscribes the duties and obligations of those bodies entrusted with implementation of a thorough and efficient system of public schools. It is a limitation on what can be done to children when they attend free public schools.

Laura Eshbaugh, Vice Chairman of Whittle, testified, "I do tell my advertisers that I have a program that is reaching--the school is reaching 6,000,000 students." The purpose for which this information is given to advertisers is obvious. Exhibit J-1, p. 6, para. 5 sets forth the circumstances in which Whittle may cancel a contract. The most important factor is the provision of school children to watch commercial advertisements. In return for equipment and programing, the Board has given Whittle's advertisers exclusive access to its pupils for two minutes per day 180 times a year. This is not a legitimate use of the time for which children are compelled by law to attend school.

The Board has given Whittle the right of access to pupil records, contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19. In the contract (p. 5, para. 8), the Board agrees to maintain reasonable records showing its conformity to the agreement and will permit Whittle reasonable access to its premises, pupils, teachers and monthly attendance records. In its summation, Whittle argued that the statute is not enforceable by private petitioners. This is not so. The purpose of the statue is to provide the right of both pupil and parent or guardian to reasonable privacy as against other persons and the opportunity for the public schools to have the data necessary to provide a thorough and efficient system of education for all pupils. N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19.

Granting Whittle access to mandated pupil attendance records is incompatible with the limited use to which the records may be put; that is, to allow public schools to have the data necessary to provide a thorough and efficient educational system. The Board's pupil records cannot, on demand, be given to Whittle or any other corporate enterprise for the evident purpose of validating its advertising rates.

The contract between the Board and Whittle contravenes paragraphs two and three of Section 3 of Article VIII of the New Jersey Constitution. The Constitution prohibits, specifically, any governmental subdivision to give money, property or credit to or in aid of any corporation. It also prohibits donation of land or appropriation of money for the use of any corporation. Section 3 is designed to ensure that public money is used for public purposes. The mere fact that a public expenditure benefits a private party does not mean it violates this clause. However, the determination of violation or not must be reached with reference to the object sought to be accomplished and to the degree and manner in which the object affects the public welfare. Here, the object is Whittle's equipment and programming. But the price is too high. The Board's infrastructure--its buildings, pupils, employees--all to be utilized for the profit of Whittle. "If Whittle determines that installation of the School is not economically justifiable to Whittle," it may terminate the contract (J-1). This is not a purpose envisioned by New Jersey's system of compulsory public education.

The contract also is incompatible with Article VIII Section 4, para. 1 of the Constitution. That paragraph states

> The Legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for the instruction of all children in the State between the ages of five and eighteen years.

The concept of a thorough and efficient education continually evolves. Nevertheless, there is one constant. All of the money that supports education is public money, local money no less than state money. It is authorized and controlled, in terms of source, amount, distribution, and use, by the State. Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287, 375 (1990). Funding is a State obligation and cannot be supplemented by a scheme that depends on the economic self-interest of private corporations. If television sets and satellite communications are good educational tools, then it is the State's obligation to make certain that the money for such equipment is provided. Robinson v. Cahill, 62 N.J. 473, 520 (1973). Furthermore, the Commissioner has authority to compel a local district to meet the financial commitments necessary to satisfy thorough and efficient education standards. Robinson v. Cahill, 69 N.J. 449, 461 (1976).

The obligation to fund public schools is statewide, not local. It is the obligation of government through taxation. The scheme between the Board and Whittle, with its taxation upon the children accessed to Channel One is unprincipled and unconstitutional.

The Board

The Board argues that its contract with Whittle does not violate the petitioners' right to a thorough and efficient education under the New Jersey Constitution. The education clause does state that the legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools. The ultimate goal is recognized and articulated by the Legislature in the Public School Education Act of 1975, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. That statute, commonly called the Thorough and Efficient or T. and E. legislation, provides a State program to implement a thorough and efficient system of free public schools.

The petitioners' reliance on the clause is misplaced and subrogates the constitutional and statutory meaning of what constitutes a thorough and efficient system of public education. The services provided to the Board under the Whittle contract promote and further a thorough and efficient education.

The meaning of a thorough and efficient education system has been articulated in two major Supreme Court decisions, Robinson v. Cahill, 62 N.J. 473 (1973) (Robinson I), and Abbott v. Burke, 119 N.J. 287 (1990). In Robinson I, the Court addressed the then existing system of school financing:

> The Constitution's guarantee must be understood to embrace that educational opportunity which is needed in the contemporary setting to equip a child for his role as a citizen and as a competitor in the labor market. 62 N.J. at 515.

More recently, the Abbott Court held that the Public School Education Act was unconstitutional as applied to poor, urban districts. The Board says the Court stated

> The constitutional requirement of a thorough and efficient education encompasses more than instruction and the basic communications and computational skills, but also requires that students be given at least a modicum of variety and a chance to excel. 119 N.J. at 365. [This language appears in a headnote, not on p. 365, but does convey the essence of that part of the decision.]

These standards, in the Board's opinion, are not violated by the Board's contract for Channel One and other services. The petitioners apparently argue that because the Board has contracted with a corporation that provides services financed by commercial advertising, it violates its duty to provide the same services without commercial advertising. The statutes, Constitution and judicial decisions do not restrict the board from providing educational and instructional video services through private corporate sponsorship. Here, the educational and instructional services provided through the effort of a partnership with a private corporation enhance rather than undermine the scheme of a thorough and efficient education.

Thorough and efficient education requires that pupils be provided programs and activities that give them a solid foundation for successful adult lives. Channel One programming of current events and information is consistent with this goal. The Board decided that the educational benefits derived from Channel One and related programs and equipment far outweigh the two-minute commercial component of Channel One that enables Whittle to provide the services. This decision is appropriately made by a board of education. The Board thoroughly analyzed the positive and negative aspects of Channel One. The programming was reviewed by parents, teachers, principals and other administrators to determine whether the Board should contract with Whittle. The Board continued to evaluate Channel One by surveying students, teachers and principals four months after programming commenced. The Board uses the equipment provided by Whittle for many purposes. As one example, pupils have been able to view live news coverage of noteworthy events such as the Gulf War and Supreme Court nomination proceedings.

The Board denies that its contract with Whittle violates N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13. It rejects the petitioner's arguments relying on the statute. The Board argues that the clear intent of the statute is to provide that a board of education may contract with the noncommercial, nonprofit educational television system for a maximum amount of money per pupil. This does not prohibit boards from contracting with profit making educational television producers or companies to provide educational programming and equipment free of charge because the program is financed through limited advertising.

New Jersey boards of education have broad powers to supervise, control and manage public schools and public school property. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1. Similarly, boards are authorized to make rules and regulations for the government of the public schools and the public school property in their districts provided such actions are not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The broad and expansive nature of board powers was set forth in Att'y Gen. Form. Op., 1962-No. 2. The opinion determines that local boards of education have implied powers to enter into contracts with educational television systems for a maximum per pupil cost. In reaching this decision, the Attorney General determined there are powers of a board that may be fairly implied from or incidental to expressly conferred powers. A board would have the power to enact programs or regulations that were incident to powers expressly conferred provided that they are not inconsistent with or prohibited by Constitution or statute.

N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 prescribes the standard by which a Board may charge pupils for an educational television program. It is necessary to authorize a fee for educational services because of the underlying scheme of a free public education that students are not charged for educational programs. The statute does not limit or prohibit a board from providing educational television services provided by profit making corporations where there is no charge to the students.

The Board also argues that its contract with Whittle does not violate the compulsory attendance laws. The petitioners contend that they are compelled to watch commercial advertising in school in violation of the statutory requirement that children between the ages of six and sixteen must regularly attend school. Because they must attend school, they should not be forced to watch the two minutes of commercial advertising shown in the 12-minute Channel One broadcast.

The law requiring compulsory attendance does not place any limitation on the content of educational programs and activities that can be provided to students. The sole purpose of the statute requires children between the ages of six and sixteen to attend school to obtain an education. The petitioners have cited no legal basis for arguing that the law supports any other requirement. The petitioners also argue that showing commercials exploits school children for commercial purposes. This argument is not supported by any testimony produced at hearing. The petitioners are required to attend school; they are not required to view the Channel One program. Nor is there any support for their allegations that students are a captive audience. One of the petitioners has admitted that she has not requested to be excused from watching Channel One programs even though she believes the commercials attempt to influence her to purchase the advertised products. No pupils have requested nor have parents requested that their children be excused from watching Channel One.

The Board's executive director of school operations testified that pupils would be excused if a request were made to be excused from watching Channel One because of its advertising content. There currently is no Board policy to address a request to be excused from having to watch Channel One. There is no such policy because there has not been any need for one. No request to be excused has ever been received even though the Board showed the Channel One program with its two-minute commercial component to parent leaders. Not one excuse from watching Channel One has been received in the year and a half that the program has been viewed in the district. Policies are enacted when there is a need or a perceived need that must be addressed. Policies are not created in a vacuum where no need has existed or been perceived. Presently, there is no policy allowing pupils to be excused on the basis of the two-minute commercial component of Channel One because there has been no indication whatsoever that any excuse was requested.

Petitioner Ali testified he did not want his children stigmatized by being excused from watching Channel One. However, there is no factual support for this allegation. The Board's director testified there would be no stigmatization if a pupil were excused from homeroom because this happens routinely for a variety of reasons. Homeroom class does not serve any educational or instructional benefit outside of showing Channel One. Attendance is taken and announcements made. Excusal would have no impact on the educational or instructional programs provided by the Board as required by law and the reason students are required to attend school.

No pupil record confidentiality is violated by the Board's contract with Whittle. The petitioners contend the contract provision providing Whittle with reasonable records concerning attendance violates the confidentiality of pupil records required by N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19. The statute, and the regulations that flow from it, limit access to pupil records to maintain individual privacy. The contractual provision the petitioners claim violates the privacy of pupil records pertains to total numbers of pupils in a respective school, not individual records. No records of petitioners have been revealed or are contemplated by the contract to be revealed. Both the Board's director and Whittle's vice chairman underscored this.

The petitioners contend that the New Jersey Constitution is offended because the Board is giving a benefit of value to a corporation. This argument was not raised in the pleadings or during the hearing. Without waiving any objections to the improper raising of this issue, the Board maintains these constitutional provisions are irrelevant and do not bar the contract in question. They prohibit the use of public resources to benefit a private corporation. However, the New Jersey Supreme Court has held in Whalen v. N.J. Power & Light Co., 45 N.J. 237 (1965) this constitutional provision prohibits the use of public property where the public benefit is secondary to the success of the private corporation aided by a contract. Moreover, a government decision that a contract meets the needs and demands of the public is consistent with the constitutional provisions the petitioners point out even though a private corporation receives a profit from the agreement.

In the present case, the Board has not expended any public money or property under the contract. In addition, the Board has properly determined that the benefits it derives from the contract outweigh any benefits that Whittle derives from the contract.

Intervenor

Whittle asserts the legislative history of N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 acknowledges boards of education have implied powers to enter into contracts for educational television services and to incur the necessary expenses for such services. The statute removes any doubt as to the authority of boards to operate in this sphere and also to limit the expenditure of public funds for educational television services to $2.00 per pupil.

The Attorney General's opinion adverted to above reviewed this very issue and stated that local boards of education have the implied authority to enter into contracts if the purpose is within the scope of local board purposes. Thus, there is no doubt that local boards have plenary authority to enter into contracts with commercial enterprises for various services required by the schools and to make decisions concerning their school systems. Local board decisions will not be interfered with unless shown to be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

The petitioners' contention that there must be a specific statutory authorization before a board may enter into a contract is baseless. Boards are to be granted the same powers of home rule as municipalities under Article IV, § 7 of the New Jersey Constitution. If a contract is related to an educational purpose, it can be limited only by a specific statutory prohibition.

N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 does not prohibit local boards from entering into contracts with commercial enterprises; rather, its sole purpose is to limit the amount of funds to be expended for participation in educational television programs. On its face, it does not apply to the contract between the Board and Whittle. The petitioners cannot dispute that Whittle provides the necessary equipment, maintenance and programming free of charge (J-1). The statute simply does not apply in the absence of a public expenditure.

It is clear that the Board entered the contract after extensive research and investigation. It solicited feedback from all sectors of the community. The director's testimony affirms that the Board took careful steps to ensure that a proper decision was made that would address needs and concerns of the district. The Board got feedback on the program. Thus, it did not act arbitrarily or capriciously or unreasonably.

Statutes cannot be interpreted to infer an absurd result. Yet, this is what the petitioners seek. They would have N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 construed to mean that a "cap" on per pupil expenditures for educational television programs is an absolute bar to providing a school district with tens of thousands of dollars worth of television equipment and programming, without any expenditure of public funds.

This tribunal has been asked to terminate an invaluable educational program that has been applauded by students, teachers and administrators. It should be noted that the North Carolina Supreme Court held an identical Whittle contract was consistent with the provisions of a free public education in that state. State v. Whittle Communications, 402 S.E. 2d 556 (N.C. 1991). That Court found boards to have discretion to contract for such services in the absence of specific statutory prohibition.

The petitioners have failed to demonstrate a violation of the compulsory education law. The petitioners' argument is that pupils are compulsorily required to watch Channel One. Not even the petitioners' own testimony supports this argument. There is little case law that defines the dimensions of compulsory education. Yet, there can be no doubt that in the context of this case there is simply no compulsion to view Channel One. As the North Carolina Supreme Court noted, "[T]he contract clearly provides that students are not required to watch the program, and the students do not have to 'spend their time' watching the program if they do not wish to do so." 402 S.E. 2d at 564.

All testimony in this case has shown that pupils are not required to watch Channel One. It is broadcast in the Trenton district during homeroom period, a time for taking care of the housekeeping details of the day. Pupils are not required to view Channel One and may take care of other school matters during homeroom period. The Board's director stated she has instructed the principals that pupils are not required to watch Channel One. Whittle's vice chairman confirmed there is nothing in the contract that requires pupils to view the program.

NJEA, participant, has never protested a commercial learning and educational tool that is similar to Channel One. Scholastic magazine (I-6), devotes approximately 30% of its content to commercial advertising, while Channel One contains less than 20%. In addition, the Whittle network provides a host of other telecommunication services, such as The Classroom Channel with no advertising at all. Ironically, it is Scholastic magazine that is the beneficiary of the compulsory education law as it is assigned reading in Trenton School District English Classes.

Whittle maintains that the petitioners' argument seems to be that while pupils are in the school building, any exposure to commercialism or advertising somehow violates the compulsory education law. If that position were upheld, then all materials with any advertisement, logo or trademark references to a commercial enterprise would be banned from public schools. The petitioners' position would require the elimination of sport shoes bearing conspicuous names or labels donated to an athletic team, scoreboards containing a sponsor logo, food products with advertisements on the containers, Scholastic magazine and a multitude of other goods and services. The point is the school district would be unable to replace these goods and services from its own resources. If the Commissioner construes the compulsory education law as prohibiting exposure to the commercial advertising within a public school, it would follow that all forms of advertising must be eliminated as well, without consideration of educational impact.

This argument is unreasonable and unacceptable. The petitioners' assertion of a violation of the compulsory education law must fail as baseless and untenable.

The confidentiality provision of the pupil record law has never been violated by the contract between the Board and Whittle. The petitioners assert that somehow there has been a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19. The claim is merely an assertion and is devoid of any evidential support. In contrast, the consistent testimony has been that there is no violation of the confidentiality provisions of the statute. Eshbaugh verified, without dispute, that the information Whittle seeks is purely statistical. It relates to the number of pupils enrolled on an annual basis. The Board is not authorized to release any confidential student information and any such release would be contrary to law.

The yearly enrollment information provided by the Board to Whittle does not rise to the level of a pupil record as that term is defined and understood. N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1 defines "pupil record" as > information related to an individual pupil gathered within or outside the school system and maintained within the school system, regardless of the physical form in which it is maintained. Essential in this definition is the idea that any information which is maintained for the purpose of second party review is considered a pupil record. Therefore, information recorded by any certified school personnel solely as a memory aid, not for the use of a second party, is excluded from this definition.

In GBD v. Ramapo-Indian Hills Bd. of Ed., 6 N.J.A.R. 480 (1983) the judge noted there were no decisions, administrative or court, construing the meaning of pupil records. He looked to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974

(FERPA), 20 U.S.C. 1232g, for the definition of pupil records. The federal definition is

> Those records, files, documents and other materials which,
>
> (i) contain information directly related to a student; and
> (II) are maintained by a educational agency or institution or by a person acting for such agency or institution.

The judge stated that while there were distinctions between the New Jersey administrative code definition and the FERPA definition, the rule making history of N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1 shows an intent to harmonize the New Jersey definition with the federal. The judge concluded

> Therefore, pupil record information must relate to an individual as a pupil or student in the school. . . . for any document to be a pupil record, the document must relate to an individual in his/her status as a pupil in the school which has maintained the document. Id. at 493.

Information must relate directly to an individual pupil. The Board here provided Whittle with statistical information on the number of pupils annually enrolled. Information regarding the number of pupils enrolled in a school district on an annual basis cannot be considered information relating to an individual in his/her capacity as a pupil. Whittle has never sought access to sensitive or confidential pupil information. The "report cards" required by the Quality Education Act of 1990, encompass a socio-economic profile of students and their parents, specific standardized testing results, student performance data and other highly subjective materials. All of this data is available to the press and the public. Inasmuch as this disclosure is mandated, it cannot be argued that the enrollment summaries provided to Whittle violate student privacy.

The petitioners have presented an argument that Article VIII § 3 of the New Jersey Constitution has been violated. Yet, the argument was not raised in prehearing motions and orders for the express purpose of defining the issues in this hearing. Despite the posture of this case, the petitioners now argue for the first time that the contract somehow violates Article VIII, §§ 2 and 3 of the New Jersey Constitution.

The Attorney General opinion referred to above clearly holds that contracts between the school board and a commercial enterprise are valid if supported by adequate consideration. The New Jersey Supreme Court has held that Article VIII prohibits the donation of public property where the public benefit is secondary to the success of an entrepreneur aided by a contract. Whelan v. N.J. Power & Light Co., 45 N.J. 237 (1965). However, when the government has decided on a course of action that will meet the needs and demands of citizens, Article VIII does not prohibit a contract merely because the private contracting party may make a profit. The Board has not incurred any expense pursuant to its contract with Whittle. This newly coined argument fails to salvage the petitioners' strained interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13.

In fact, in the North Carolina case reported above, the Court rejected the very argument that public funds were being spent to support a commercial enterprise in violation of the North Carolina Constitution. The North Carolina constitutional provision at issue in that case is analogous to Article VIII of the New Jersey Constitution. In rejecting that argument, the Court stated > Plaintiffs cite no authority for their contention that this contract results in the expenditure of tax money, and we find no authority which supports their contention. Aside from the money which is spent to furnish the electricity to run the machinery required for showing the Channel One program, which would be nothing more than a de minimis expenditure, we see no expenditures of tax money for showing the program. The contract provides that Whittle will furnish all of the equipment necessary to show the program, and the school system only provides the records showing the number of days the program is shown and the number of students watching it. The money spent for running busses and paying teachers is the same amount that would be spent if the local school board did not contract with Whittle to show Channel One; no further tax money is being expended to support this contract. Thus, the plaintiff's original premise that tax money is being spent to subsidize private business is incorrect. 402 S.E. 2d at 563.

Raising a new argument in the post-hearing brief violates the prehearing order of August 28, 1991. During the interim, counsel, the administrative law judge, the Commissioner and the State Board of Education relied on that order in disposing of prehearing motions framing the proper scope of this matter. It is fundamentally unfair for the petitioners to preclude Whittle from exploring examples of the expansive uses of Whittle equipment by various school districts and then to raise the alleged inadequacy of consideration for the first time in its post-hearing brief.

The Whittle Network aids in the fulfillment of a thorough and efficient education. The concept of a thorough and efficient education must necessarily evolve with changing needs. In Robinson v. Cahill, 63 N.J. 473 (1973), the Court considered this requirement and stated, "The Constitution's guarantee must be understood to embrace that educational opportunity which is needed in the contemporary setting to equip a child for his role as a citizen and competitor in the labor market." Id. at 515. That decision recognized that the concept of a thorough and efficient education must develop to meet changing needs. Contrary to the petitioners' assertions that the Whittle Network somehow violates the provisions of a thorough and efficient education, the testimony of two experienced Trenton educators confirms that the Whittle Network enhances the educational curriculum. The Whittle Network also assists 190 other public schools throughout the State. Any voiding of the Whittle contract would not only undermine rather than advance the principle of a thorough and efficient education, but would do so on a wide-scale basis throughout New Jersey.

Participant NJSBA

The New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA) asserts that the Commissioner is not the proper forum to determine the constitutionality of a contract between a local board and a private entity. The Commissioner's expertise is limited to matters bearing directly upon education and not commercial matters. Padukow v. Jackson Township Bd. of Ed., 1968 S.L.D. 263. While this matter involves a local board, the rule making authority for the Department of Education has held that a dispute does not arise under school laws merely because one of the parties is a board of education. Larsen v. Piscataway Bd. of Ed., OAL DKT. EDU 1445-81 (Jan. 7, 1982), aff'd, Comm'r of Ed. (Feb. 18, 1982), rev'd, St. Bd. of Ed. (Oct. 6, 1982).

The Commissioner's authority over educational matters flows from Title 18A. At N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, the Legislature gives the authority to hear and determine controversies and disputes under the education laws. The participant concurs that the Commissioner's authority over education matters is broad and his powers to effectuate a thorough and efficient education in the public schools are expansive. In re: Trenton Bd. of Ed., 176 N.J. Super. 553 (App. Div. 1980), aff'd 86 N.J. 327 (1981). However, in recent cases, the Commissioner has defined and limited that jurisdiction to matters directly arising under the school laws. The Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to decide issues arising from an employment contract between a janitor and a school board. Larsen, above. He does not have jurisdiction to decide issues arising from a contract between a milk supplier and a board. Rainer's Dairies v. Bd. of Ed. of Collingswood, 1967 S.L.D. 260. Nor can he exercise jurisdiction over a contract dispute between an architect and a board of education, Poole v. Passaic, 1978 S.L.D. 1039 or interpret a contract in a tenure dispute, Salley v. Newark, 1984 S.L.D. 1714.

The Commissioner may decide matters alleging violations of the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.SA 10:4-6 et seq. as they relate to the termination of a school employee. Sukin v. Northfield Bd. of Ed., 171 N.J. Super. 184 (App. Div. 1979). And the Commissioner and the Division on Civil Rights have concurrent jurisdiction over complaints alleging discrimination in public school curriculum. Hinfey v. Matawan Regional Bd. of Ed., 77 N.J. 514 (1978). Similarly, concurrent jurisdiction over complaints alleging discrimination in employment by a school district. Jameison v. Bd. of Ed. of Rockaway Tp., 171 N.J. Super. 549 (App. Div. 1979). In this case, the petitioners elected to bring the complaint before the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq.; 18A:38-25; 18A:36-19, and 18A:51-13. However, the participant asserts that the essence of this case involves the validity of a commercial contract. That issue must be resolved through application of general contract law principles. There is no primary education issue presented that requires the Commissioner's administrative expertise.

The State Board first disclaimed the Commissioner's jurisdiction in contract matters in Rainer's, above. The Board challenged the Commissioner's jurisdiction, stating that the controversy did not arise under school laws. The Commissioner ruled that his jurisdiction arose from his authority to control school cafeterias. The State Board reversed and dismissed, stating

> We believe that the traditional jurisdiction of the courts in matters involving contracts, breach, damages and specific performance should not be disturbed except in cases arising directly under school laws. 1976 S.L.D. 260.

The participant states that in instances such as the present case, where the essential issues involve a determination and interpretation of a contract, the Commissioner is without jurisdiction.

Participant NJEA

N.J.E.A. joins in and urges this judge to accept and adopt the positions the petitioners set forth in their posthearing brief. The participant also cites a news report published in the New York Times, April 23, 1992 concerning a study done by the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research, paid for by Whittle, that attempts to measure the impact of Channel One, educationally, on pupils watching it. The newspaper reports that Whittle refused to pay the researchers to study the impact of commercials. Whittle has attempted to argue that the benefits of Channel One far outweigh its commercial aspects. This is not so. The teachers of this State should not be required to lend themselves to making profits for Whittle and its advertisers.

DETERMINATION

Jurisdiction

The State Board decision on motions of March 4, 1992 is clear that this case turns on application of the education laws. If this were purely a contract case, all agree that neither the State Board nor the Commissioner could exercise jurisdiction. However, incidental interpretation of the contract necessary to resolve the education claims is properly done by the Commissioner. In addition, the initial decision and Commissioner's decision--and the State Board decision, if there is one--must include such administrative determinations as are necessary to proper disposition of the matter and necessary to ensure an adequate record on appeal. See, Abbott v. Burke, above.

Jurisdiction, as delineated in the State Board decision, necessarily resides in the Commissioner and, derivatively, this tribunal.

N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 and 14

In 1962 and 1967, respectively, the Legislature passed and the governor signed into law two measures dealing with nonprofit educational television. The statutes provide

>
> Every board is hereby authorized to make use of television as an educational aid by contracting for the services of any noncommercial, nonprofit educational television station located within or without the state but such contract shall not require the board to incur expenses in any one year period in excess of an amount equal to $2.00 per pupil in resident enrollment in the district.

Every board, in addition to the powers set forth in section 18A:51-13 and subject to the rules and regulations of the state board, may participate in the organization and operation of a noncommercial, nonprofit, educational television station in this state and utilize the services therefrom, and in order to effectuate such purpose, every board is authorized:

(1) To enter into any contractual arrangement agreeable to the board with any other public or private agencies or organizations, including membership in a noncommercial, nonprofit corporation or association duly organized under the laws of this state to operate such a station;

(2) To designate one or more representatives to the board of trustees of such corporation or association, and otherwise to participate in its affairs in compliance with the charter and bylaws of such organization;

(3) To procure for the public schools under the board's jurisdiction the services of such a station, by subscription or otherwise, and

(4) To incur such expenses as the board may deem advisable for such purposes, by way of dues, subscription charges, assessments, capital contributions and otherwise, but in amounts not exceeding in any one year $2.00 per pupil in resident enrollment in the district.

These statutes accomplish just what a plain reading of them reveals and no more. They authorize, and place some limitations on, school district contracts with noncommercial, nonprofit educational television stations and school district participation in organizing and operating the same. There is nothing here to even suggest that the Legislature intended, by express authorization of involvement with noncommercial enterprises, to exclude all involvement with commercial entities. The oft-quoted maxim, expressio unius est exclusio alterius (the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another), is to be used only with great caution. Petition of Keogh-Dwyer, 106 N.J. Super. 567, 573 (Law Div. 1969), aff'd 54 N.J. 523 (1969). There are many statutes dealing with a board's powers. To read one or two in isolation can lead, as here, to an inappropriate result.

Briefly stated, a reading of the statutes prescribing board powers reveals nothing that prohibits a contract of the type under examination here. If an untoward educational effect flows from the contract, that is another matter.

Finally, the Board seems to misread N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13: "It is necessary to authorize a fee for educational services because of the long standing underlying scheme of free public education is that students are not charged for educational programs." Board's brief at 13. The statute does not contemplate a charge to children. It authorizes boards to make expenditures on a per pupil basis in return for educational television use.

Compulsory attendance

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 provides

> Every parent, guardian or other person having custody and control of a child between the ages of six and 16 years shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school.

The statute has existed in more or less the same form since 1914. It has been tested and approved. Everson v. Bd. of Ed. of Ewing Tp., 133 N.J.L. 350 (E. & A. 1945), aff'd 330 U.S. 1 (1947); Stephens v. Bongart, 15 N.J. Misc. 80, 189 A. 131 (D. Ct. 1937); Knox, above.

In Knox, the court stated

> The right of a sovereign state to adopt legislation to direct the paths of its children to seek education for enlightenment and literacy, so as to enjoy full and complete life, is so fundamental as to relieve the need for judicial citation. 7 N.J. Super. at 610.

And in Jackson v. Hankinson and Bd. of Ed. of New Shrewsbury, 51 N.J. 230, 235 (1968), the Court stated

> It must be borne in mind that the relationship between the child and the school authorities is not a voluntary one but is compelled by law. The child must attend school and is subject to school rules and disciplines. In turn the school authorities are obligated to take reasonable precautions for his safety and well-being. (Citations omitted).

Thus, the compulsion to attend cuts both ways.

In a large sense, pupils are a captive audience. The Board maintains, "The law requiring compulsory education attendance does not place any limitation on the content of educational programs and activities [that] can be provided to students." Board's brief at 14. The assertion is too broad. There are limitations that the State can create and enforce. The State has the power to require that certain studies plainly essential to good citizenship be taught and that nothing be taught which is manifestly inimical to the public welfare. 79 C.J.S., Schools, § 485 at 428. In State Bd. of Ed. v. Bd. of Ed. of Netcong, N.J., 108 N.J. Super. 564 (Ch. Div. 1970), a religious exercise case, the court asked a provocative question

> There is an absolute duty . . . to teach to our youth honesty, cooperativeness and truthfulness and to impart sound moral consciousness. If this is the prime purpose of the Netcong Board . . . why then should any student be allowed to absent himself from so important a part of the educational process -- something that should be common and compulsory for all children . . . ?

The same question may be asked here. If Channel One is of educational value, why may pupils, as the Board's director testified, so easily be excused? Surely Whittle does not want pupils excused. If Whittle exercises its rights under the contract and determines that a particular installation "is not economically justified to Whittle," because too many pupils are excused from watching the program, Whittle incurs a cost. Whittle either leaves behind equipment or it pays to remove and retain equipment. Whittle wants "The Channel One program . . . shown by the School in a single showing at a single time set by the School when students are present in class or homeroom. . . ." "The School agrees to receive the Channel One daily broadcasts from Whittle and to show the daily broadcast on all installed television sets in its entirety or not at all (i.e. the School will not show only a portion of any broadcast and will not show the broadcast on fewer than all installed television sets)." (J-1).

The right to education is subject to some restrictions. Pupils must submit to the authority of their teachers, must pursue their prescribed courses of study and must comply with the rules established for governance of their schools. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-1. To pupils attending public schools today, television is no novelty. When a teacher turns on a television set in the classroom, pupils may logically presume that what they see and hear is part of their studies. But what of commercial advertisements?

It is too glib to say pupils will skim over televised advertisements as they will magazine advertisements. Colored light can enrapture, even at 8:30 a.m. Is there any direct or incidental educational effect?

Viewing the tape recordings in evidence, one sees advertisements for bubble gum, a deodorant, electronics products, an acne preparation and a candy bar. The advertisements are not clustered, but appear at two different points in the 12-minute programs. They are clearly advertisements and there is little likelihood they would be confused with the news and current affairs parts of the programs. Yet, they are commercial advertisements. This judge can so no direct educational benefit in them.* The indirect benefit is that they pay the bill for the other things Whittle provides. Even though the indirect benefit represents a great deal of money, that alone cannot justify compulsory viewing of commercial advertisements. It must be noted here that the record shows unrebutted testimony that principals were advised, in writing, that there was no requirement for pupils to view television during homeroom period. The writing was not produced. There is also a stipulation on the record that there is nothing in the contract that does not require pupils to watch Channel One programs. This may be an area in which social science research does or will give insights. No party or participant has cited any.

Lacking clear statutes or rules covering the situation, the Board was faced with an alluring dilemma: shall we trade six hours of each involved pupil's instruction time each year for equipment and programs. The answer was yes, but only after the Board solicited input from staff and community--although the record fails to show how many persons were involved and in what distribution. It is black letter law that a board is responsible for the legality of its acts to the Commissioner and State Board and responsible for the wisdom of its acts to its constituents. The segment of the community touched by the Board, except for petitioner Ali, may have believed the trade wise. As a matter of law, this judge cannot say the Board acted in the best interests of its charges.

If one removes pieces of candy from a box one piece at a time, each decrement seems inconsequential. But at the end of an interval, the cumulative effect is seen. This judge does not believe parents or professional staff would approve putting pupils before televisions and subjecting them to more than a school

*Advertisements of many kinds can be used for educational purposes, of course. Comparison of two supermarket advertisements can aid in arithmetical comparisons--"Which is the better buy?" All advertisements can be examined from an artistic point of view and can be analyzed for pursuasive technique and copy style, to name only a few. There is no suggestion the subject commercial advertisements are used in this way.

day of commercial advertisements. The allure is surely less when the matter is viewed as taking more than a whole school day from legitimate educational pursuits and turning it over to commercial interests, irrespective of the quid pro quo.

As a matter of educational policy, this cannot be approved. The scheme is offensive to the sound reasons for compulsory attendance.

The Board's assertion that there was no testimonial support for this argument is irrelevant. If something offends the law, it does so irrespective of the quantum of parol evidence about the thing.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the commercial content of the Channel One broadcasts is inappropriate fare in homeroom or any other school day period.

N.J. Const., (1947), Art. VIII. § 3, pars. 2 and 3

As the respondents correctly point out, these clauses were not raised in the pleadings or at prehearing. The argument concerning them will not be addressed because improperly raised.

Similarly, NJEA's attempt to introduce a newspaper article through its posthearing memorandum and Whittle's attempt to inject what Caulfield would have testified through a footnote in its posthearing submission..

Pupil records

Exhibit J-1, § C, par. 8 states

> The School agrees to maintain reasonable records showing its conformity to this agreement and will permit Whittle reasonable access to its premises, students, teachers, and monthly attendance records to monitor implementation of the Educational Network.

Nothing defines monthly attendance records. Presumably, these could be provided in summary form. Nothing in the record indicates that Whittle has ever asked for more than enrollment numbers. The contract nevertheless creates the right to reasonable access, again an underfined term.

I FIND there has been no abuse of pupil records in this matter. I also FIND the potential exists for conflict between the contract and N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19 and N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.5. If the board maintains a contractual relationship with Whittle, it must be vigilant that whatever data the contract says Whittle may have access to and whatever data the Board provides do not run afoul of the statute and administrative code.

N.J.Const., (1947), Art. VIII, 4, par. 1

The paragraph reads

> The Legislature shall provide for the maintenance and support of a thorough and efficient system of free public schools for the instruction of all children in the State between the ages of five and eighteen years.

For the reasons set forth in the compulsory attendance section, above, the Channel One scheme cannot be efficient even if it were, arguendo, thorough. An arrangement that takes more than a school day of instructional time from children for commercial purposes is not efficient. A fortiori where the quid pro quo is not merely equipment and programs, but includes pecuniary profit to a corporation organized for profit making. Children are paying for the equipment and programs just as surely if they were asked for money, but the specie is more dear: it is time that could be instructional time.

The states, under the Tenth Amendment, are not limited to enumerated powers, but have all legislative powers capable of being exercised by any government. The exceptions are a limitation or bar imposed by the U.S. Constitution or federal preemption of the particular subject matter. Under this broad police power concept, the states may, in all their law making, promote the health, safety, morals, peace and good order of their people. New Jersey did that in the education area by, among other things, N.J.Const., (1947), Art VIII, § 4, par. 1 and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25. Children--and their parents--accept some limitation of their rights in entering the public school relationship. But all rights and protections are not shed at the schoolhouse door. Tinker v. Des Moines School District, 393 U.S. 503 (1969). Nothing in the law suggests that the right to be protected from commercial exploitation is surrendered. Inasmuch as the benefits that derive from the Whittle contract are not free or paid for from ordinary school district revenues, I FIND and CONCLUDE that the contract violates Art VIII, § 4, par. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution.

Other matters

The Board argues it has no policy concerning excusal from watching Channel One broadcasts because there has been no need for one. Good educational practice would have been to have such a policy in place knowing that children would be required to watch commercial advertisements. The testimony indicates the Board anticipated no objections based on its two or three meetings with community and staff. Hindsight, usually 20/20, shows the decision was incorrect. That, however, can be corrected. More importantly for today's consideration, the lapse violates no constitutional, statutory or administrative code provision.

Peculiarly, the Board argues that excusal from watching Channel One "would not have any impact upon the educational and instructional programs provided by the Board. . . . " Board's brief at 16. If this is so, Channel One has, in the Board's view, no particular value to its educational and instructional programs. Therefore, compelling pupils to watch it is all the more a gratuitous act.

In its last argument, the Board asserts it "has not expended any public property under the contract with Whittle. In addition, . . . the Board has properly determined that the benefits its students derived from the Whittle contract, such as Channel One, Classroom Channel, Educators Channel and the television monitors outweigh any benefits that Whittle derives from the contract." Board's brief at 19. These leave out a step. The first question should always be do the advantages to pupils outweigh the disadvantages to pupils. Then the consideration is whether a contract improperly benefits a corporation.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

This decision finds and determines that the Commissioner and State Board of Education have jurisdiction over the educational effects of a contract between a board of education and a commercial enterprise; that the educational television statutes N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 and -14 are not violated by the subject contract; that the compulsory attendance statute is offended by the present contract; that the potential exists for pupil record problems, but no problem has been demonstrated; that paragraphs 2 and 3 of Article VIII, § 3 of the New Jersey Constitution have not been properly raised in this case, and that the free, thorough and efficient clause, Article VIII, § 4, par. 1, of the New Jersey Constitution is violated by the contract between the Trenton Board of Education and Whittle Communications, L.P.

Accordingly I ORDER the Trenton Board of Education to either cease performance under the contract or to reform the contract with Whittle Communications, so as to remove the infirmities set forth above.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

NEW JERSEY EDUCATION ASSOCIATION (PARTICIPANT), ABDUL-MALIK ALI, JAMILH ALI AND K.A., MINORS BY THEIR GUARDIAN, ABDUL-MALIK ALI, PETITIONER, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY, RESPONDENT, AND WHITTLE COMMUNICATIONS, L.P., INTERVENOR-RESPONDENT.	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. All parties, including Participant New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA), filed timely exceptions and timely reply exceptions pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner and Participant NJEA (hereinafter petitioner) find the ALJ correctly determined that the relationship between Whittle Communications, L.P. (hereinafter Whittle) and the Board of Education of the City of Trenton, (hereinafter Board) violates N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, violates art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution (1947) and violates, in potentia, N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19. However, petitioner avers the ALJ did not correctly decide the impact of N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 et seq. upon the Whittle contract.

Petitioner contends the ALJ's reliance on the maximum "expressio unius est exclusio alterius" (the expression of one thing is the exclusion of another) (initial decision, at p. 26) for the proposition that N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 does not address the Board's involvement with all noncommercial entities, may not be used to the exclusion of the principle that "'It is the sole function of the courts to enforce [a statute] according to its terms.' Sherran v. Nationwide Mutual Insurance Co., Inc., 80 N.J. 548, 556 (1979)." (Petitioner's Exceptions, at p. 2) Stressing that N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 permits school boards to contract for the services of any noncommercial, nonprofit, educational television station, petitioner submits that the limitation on a board's powers created by N.J.S.A. 18A:51-14 makes it clear that the Legislature recognized in passing this legislation, that the general grant of power of a board is not broad enough to authorize boards to participate in television-based programming. Thus, petitioner claims, the Legislature created these television statutes, limiting the boards' participation in such activity, which position, petitioner claims, is supported by reference to Attorney General's Formal Opinion 1962-No. 2. Therein, petitioner advances, it is stated that in discussing the legality of a board's entering into an agreement for educational television, that consideration "should be given to the prohibitions found in Article VIII, Section 3, par. 2 and par. 3 of the New Jersey Constitution of 1947." (Exceptions, at p. 3, citing Attorney General's Formal Opinion 1962-No. 2) Petitioner claims these constitutional proscriptions preclude boards from aiding private corporations through use of public money, property, credit and the like. Petitioner further claims that such aid is exactly what the Trenton Board of Education has done through the provision of public resources including buildings, utilities and even its school children to Whittle Communications for its profit making. Thus, petitioner submits, the educational television statutes preclude, by exclusion, the Whittle contract.

Petitioner seeks reversal of that portion of the initial decision below interpreting N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 et seq. as not precluding the subject contract.

Intervenor Whittle contends that in reaching his recommended initial decision, the ALJ failed to apply the proper standard of review, instead substituting his personal judgment for that of the Trenton Board, misapplied statutory and constitutional provisions, exceeded his authority and relied upon clearly erroneous factual findings. Whittle requests that the Commissioner reject the recommended findings and conclusions of the ALJ and conclude that the contract between Whittle and the Board does not offend the compulsory attendance statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, and that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction to determine whether the Trenton Board's agreement with Whittle violates the thorough and efficient education clause as set forth in art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution. Alternatively, if the Commissioner determines that he may decide the constitutional question, Whittle requests that he conclude that the Educational Network agreement with the Board is consistent with the thorough and efficient clause of the New Jersey Constitution.

More specifically, Whittle avers the ALJ made fundamental errors of law which require rejection of his initial decision. The first error, Whittle claims, is that he applied the wrong standard for administrative review of local school board decisions. Claiming actions of boards cannot be disturbed unless there is an affirmative showing that the action is arbitrary, on which the petitioner bears the burden of proof, Whittle contends the ALJ substituted his judgment for that of the local board, which constitutes error. Whittle contends if the ALJ had applied the proper standard of review to the facts, he could not have concluded that the Board's decision to contract with Whittle violated the compulsory attendance law or the thorough and efficient clause of the New Jersey Constitution because there was no evidence that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Second, Whittle claims the ALJ erred in excluding relevant evidence showing bias for the local Board's exercise of its decision to enter into the Whittle contract including testimony about educational programming in addition to Channel One and testimony from educators outside Trenton who are using the Whittle Network in their schools. Intervenor submits the error of the ALJ in failing to review the Board's decision to contract with Whittle in light of the arbitrary and capricious standard is magnified by his error in excluding relevant evidence bearing directly on the basis for that decision.

Third, Whittle contends the law is clear that the ALJ did not have jurisdiction to rule upon the constitutionality of the Board's action. Contending that it is a fundamental principle of administrative law in New Jersey that the courts, not administrative tribunals, have exclusive jurisdiction to rule upon constitutional issues, Whittle argues that the ALJ exceeded his authority and jurisdiction by concluding that the Whittle contract violates art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution.

Fourth, Whittle avers the ALJ misapplied both the thorough and efficient clause and the compulsory attendance law to the facts of this case. The thorough and efficient constitutional provision, Whittle submits, concerns equitable funding among school districts, not a school board's curriculum and equipment decisions. Similarly, Whittle advances, the compulsory attendance law is a penal statute designed only to ensure school attendance by students of a certain age. It submits the Whittle program is contrary to neither the express language nor the purpose of the compulsory attendance statute.

Whittle's exceptions further advance its position that the ALJ's decision regarding the compulsory attendance statute and the thorough and efficient clause was predicated on two factual findings for which there is no evidence in the record. Whittle alleges that the ALJ's conclusion that the Board's contract with Whittle violates the compulsory attendance law and the thorough and efficient clause is predicated upon his findings 1) that students are required to watch advertisements included in Channel One newscasts; and 2) that the time during which Channel One newscasts are shown reduces instructional time. Whittle claims these findings are erroneous. Citing the transcript, Whittle contends the uncontroverted testimony in the record is that students are not required to watch commercial advertising and that Channel One is shown in homeroom when no instruction takes place.

Further, Whittle avers the ALJ also erred by mischaracterizing or ignoring evidence concerning (a) the effect that the loss of the Whittle program would have on the Trenton School District; (b) a Board witness' testimony that the Whittle program saved instructional time; (c) professional and community input into the Trenton Board's decision; and (d) the actual terms under which Whittle or a school board may terminate the contract.

The Board's exceptions reflect many of the same arguments brought to bear by Whittle. In emphasizing that the contract between the Board and Whittle does not violate the compulsory attendance act, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, the Board suggests the initial decision misapplies court decisions to justify invalidation of the contract. It counters the ALJ's reliance on Jackson, supra, which it claims, deals with a district's obligation to take reasonable precautions for pupil safety and well-being, by citing State v. Massa, 95 N.J. Super. 382 (Law Div. 1967) for the proposition that the compulsory attendance act is not intended to deal with curriculum content or instructional activities; rather, it ensures that all children attend school to receive an education.

Further citing Smith v. Ricci, 89 N.J. 514 (1982) wherein the Board avers the State Supreme Court upheld a regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:29-4.2, requiring each local school district to develop and implement a family life education program from which students could be exempt based on conscientious objection to sincerely held religious beliefs, the Board claims permitting pupils to be excused from objectionable parts of the program did not diminish the educational value of the family life program and did not violate religious freedom of Free Exercise and the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. Therefore, the Board rejects the ALJ's reasoning that "If Channel One is of educational value, why may pupils, as the Board's director testified, so easily be excused?" (Initial Decision, at p. 28), (Board's Exceptions, at p. 5)

The Board also objects to the ALJ's purported misapplication of the facts in holding that the benefits derived from the Whittle contract do not justify compulsory viewing of commercial advertisements. (Board's Exceptions, at p. 6), (Initial Decision, at p. 29) It claims this holding is confusing because it contradicts the acknowledgement by the ALJ on page 29 of the initial decision that the evidence presented at the hearing proves that students are not compelled to view Channel One. Since there is no requirement that students view the program, the Board submits, there is no basis to conclude that there is compulsory viewing of commercial advertisements. In so stating, the Board emphasizes that except for Petitioner Ali, there has been no measurable objection to Channel One programming or its commercial advertisement content. Thus, it claims, there is no basis for the ALJ to state he does not believe parents or professional staff would subject students to a school day of commercial advertisements. The Board objects, therefore, to what it casts as the ALJ's imposing his own personal belief as to whether he feels pupils should be permitted to view commercial advertisements.

In so stating, the Board notes its awareness that commercial advertising is not foreign to other educational components provided to students in the past. It refers to Scholastic Magazine, and Voice, two magazines containing advertising which are used for all English classes at Trenton Central High School, as well as Sports Illustrated, Time, and Yes, which are distributed to students for educational purposes. These publications, too, contain advertisements, the Board admits. Additionally, corporations such as MCI, McDonald's, Burger King, and Wendy's, together with local corporations, such as CoreStates and Deborah Heart and Lung Hospital, also provide incentive and adopt-a-school programs for the district's students.

The Board claims that the effect of the initial decision is that all aspects of commercial advertisements in public schools would be prohibited. Hence, the Board casts the ALJ's conclusion that "the Board did not act in the best interest of its charges" as inconsistent with the compelling and uncontroverted evidence presented by the Board, as well as the laws governing a local school board's authority. (Exceptions, at p. 10) It cites N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 and Parsippany-Troy Hills Ed. Ass'n. v. Bd. of Ed., 188 N.J. Super. 161, 166-167 (App. Div. 1983) for the proposition that boards of education in New Jersey have broad powers to supervise, control and manage public schools and public school property in this district.

Referring to Attorney General of New Jersey, Formal Opinion 1962-No. 2, for a statement of the broad, extensive nature of boards of education's powers, including the power to enter into contracts with educational television systems for a proposed pupil cost of $.50, the Board submits that in contracting with Whittle, it made the decision that the educational benefits derived from Channel One, 220 or more television monitors, Classroom Channel and Educators Channel, outweighed the two minutes of commercial advertisement of Channel One, which enable Whittle to provide the service. The Board urges that this is a decision which should be made by a board of education. Given the multitude of valued uses that the Board derives from the contract with Whittle, the Board claims it would be devastating to lose Whittle. It submits it appropriately determined the educational policy in this district, and its decision should not be disturbed by the ALJ's initial decision.

The Board's second exception alleges there is no basis in law or fact that the contract with Whittle violates a thorough and efficient education pursuant to art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of the New Jersey Constitution of 1947, in that there is no basis in law or in the evidence presented to conclude that the contract is not efficient, thereby violating a thorough and efficient system of public schools by taking away more than a school day of instructional time.

Claiming there is no statutory reference or case law which provides any guidelines as to what is meant by "efficient," the Board claims the ALJ's contention that Channel One is not efficient appears to be fictionalized because the ALJ provides no legal analysis of any statutory or constitutional scheme which reasonably or even remotely suggests that commercial advertising under the Channel One scheme is not efficient. Further, the Board stresses that its students are not deprived of any instructional time, because Channel One is shown during homeroom period which occurs between 8:30 a.m. and 8:45 a.m. each school day during a time when "one takes care of the minutia[e] for the day" and where students are regularly excused from homeroom. (Board's Exceptions, at p. 14) Given such testimony as that of Ms. Thomas, Executive Director of School Operations, the Board claims there is no factual basis to conclude that instructional time is being used for commercial purposes. The Board contends the ALJ overlooked this uncontroverted testimony and further failed to address the "thorough" part of the constitutional concept.

The Board claims its decision to contract with Whittle is consistent with the goal of providing a thorough and efficient system because it felt that the news and information benefits provided by Channel One were valuable and that the 200 or more television monitors enabled the district to keep up with the contemporary video age.

In response to petitioner's attempt to raise the argument that the contract violates art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 of the New Jersey Constitution because it uses public resources to benefit a private corporation, the Board claims the initial decision's analysis of the alleged violation of the thorough and efficient clause of the constitution while using the standards which apply to art. VIII, sec. 3, of the New Jersey Constitution is confusing. The Board alleges that while this constitutional provision prohibits the use of public resources to benefit a private corporation, a contract is valid where the use of public property for private benefit is secondary to the success of the public agency aided by the contract. The Board cites Whelan v. New Jersey Power & Light Co., 45 N.J. 237, 247 (1965) in support of this proposition, and concludes that there is thus no prohibition against a contract between a public and private corporation.

The Board finds the ALJ's rationale misplaced which suggests that the children of the district are paying for the equipment and program by losing time that could be instructional time by watching advertisements on Channel One for two reasons. First, it states again that instructional time is not being used to show Channel One. Second, it claims there is no legal support for concluding that art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 of the New Jersey Constitution equates students' time with public property. Thus, the Board submits there is no basis for determining that the contract herein violates such section of the Constitution. Since there are no public funds used to primarily benefit the private entity, the contract between the Board and Whittle is valid, it claims.

The Board seeks a reversal of the initial decision.

Participant NJSBA's exceptions seek reversal of the decision below. NJSBA concludes in exceptions that the effect of the ALJ's ruling is to undermine the local board's authority to determine the content of its curriculum, a duty clearly delegated to the local board by the Legislature. Participant NJSBA submits that to carry out its duty, the board must be able to look to nontraditional sources for the most up-to-date technology to keep pace with the changing nature of our society. It submits the fundamental question in this case is whether the daily "benefits" of accessibility to current events and availability of video equipment outweigh the "burden" of daily review of two minutes of commercials. (NJSBA's Exceptions, at p. 13) It is NJSBA's position that in this instance, the benefits clearly prevail. Said exceptions also ask the Commissioner to review the timely brief submitted April 30, 1992 which NJSBA claims the ALJ neglected to consider before making his determination, relying instead on an earlier brief, submitted on different issues on September 26, 1991.

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

Upon a careful and independent review of the record, the Commissioner affirms in part and rejects in part the initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law in this matter.

Initially, the Commissioner adopts as his own that conclusion of the ALJ that because petitioner's arguments, predicated upon the New Jersey Constitution, art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 were not raised in petitioner's pleadings or at prehearing, they will not be addressed because they were belatedly and, therefore, improperly raised for the first time in post-hearing submission. Similarly, the Commissioner does not address petitioner's exception to the ALJ's conclusion concerning the lack of applicability of N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 et seq. to the Whittle-Trenton contract to the extent that petitioner relies on and provides for the first time a copy of the Attorney General's Formal Opinion 1962-No. 2. The Commissioner deems such exhibit inappropriately before him in the absence of the ALJ's having considered it admissible to the record.

Likewise, the Commissioner rejects the attempt on the part of Whittle to submit exhibits into the record via reply exceptions in the form of legislative statements and a Governor's Conditional Veto Message insofar as such exhibits were not brought to the record timely before the ALJ. The Commissioner also rejects such exhibits because they are offered in support of Whittle's arguments rebutting petitioner's claims under art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3, in the event that the Commissioner chooses to consider petitioner's arguments in this regard. Because the Commissioner adopts the ALJ's conclusion that arguments related to art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 of the New Jersey Constitution are untimely, Whittle's belated submissions are not considered in the disposition of this matter.

In considering the remainder of the issues before him in this case, the Commissioner adopts as his own the ALJ's conclusion that N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 et seq. is not relevant to disposition of this case. The Commissioner concurs with the ALJ, Whittle and the Board that "[t]hese statutes accomplish just what a plain reading of them reveals and no more. They authorize, and place some limitations on, school district contracts with noncommerical, nonprofit educational television stations and school district participation in organizing and operating the same." (Initial Decision, at p. 26) It is well established that the meaning of a statute first must be sought in the language of the statute. (Sheeran v. Nationwide Mutual Insurance Company, Inc., 80 N.J. 548 (1979) If the language of a statute is clear and unambiguous on its face, we may not go beyond the words of the statute in order to devine the Legislature's intent. State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220 (1982) In such cases, the language of the statute is the full expression of what the Legislature intended, and although legislative history may be used to provide reassuring confirmation of literally apparent meaning, e.g., Gauntt v. City of Bridgeton, 194 N.J. Super. 468 (App. Div. 1984), extrinsic materials may not be used to create ambiguity or to determine that the Legislature intended something other than that which it actually expressed. Safeway Trails, Inc. v. Furman, 41 N.J. 467 (1964), appeal dismissed and cert. denied, 379 U.S. 14 The Commissioner finds the words of the statutes involved here are clear and unambiguous -- the statutes are limited in their application to noncommerical, non-profit enterprises. As stated by the ALJ, there is nothing therein even suggesting that the Legislature intended, by express authorization of involvement with noncommerical enterprises, to exclude all involvement with commercial enterprises. Should it so seek to address the interaction between New Jersey school districts and for-profit business interest, it lies within the Legislature's power to do so. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts as his own the ALJ's findings and conclusions that N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 et seq. have no application to the type of contract under examination here.

Having determined that no statutory bar exists under N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13, it is found and determined that the Board had discretionary authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 to determine whether to contract for the services provided by Whittle. However, the Commissioner is persuaded that if any alleged untoward educational effect flows from such exercise of that discretionary authority in entering into such contract as the one between Whittle and the Board of Education of the City of Trenton, it lies squarely within his authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 to address any educational concerns flowing from the education laws. In this regard, the Commissioner is duly sensitive to his obligation and that of the boards of education of this state to jealously guard against intrusions of any kind into the instructional process, not just with respect to commercial instrusions. It cannot be overemphasized that instructional time is precious. Therefore, zealous protection of instructional time is a major responsibility of all boards of education. In this sense, boards of education have the duty and responsibility to monitor and preserve instructional time for teachers to instruct in a coherent fashion without undue intrusion on that instruction by excessive announcements, excusal of students from instruction or cancellation of instruction.

It is with this mantle of concern that the Commissioner examines the instant matter. Under such examination the Commissioner is mindful, too, of the State Board's determination in this matter dated March 4, 1992 emphasizing his incidental jurisdiction "to interpret the contract between Whittle and the Board so as to fulfill his obligation to resolve the education claims that are the subject of this litigation. [Citation omitted] [and] to make the administrative determinations necessary for proper disposition of the matter and to ensure an adequate record on appeal" on constitutional claims over which he has no jurisdiction. (State Board Decision on Motions, dated March 4, 1992, at p. 4)

In accord with these parameters, the Commissioner agrees with the Board that it has properly adjudged, under its plenary authority, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, that the benefits of contracting for Whittle's services, including securing expensive and highly technical equipment for which the Board has many worthy uses in promoting education in its schools, coupled with the educational benefits the Board feels are imparted to the students by contracting for Channel One was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable when weighed carefully through the Board's planned review by educational professionals and the local community. (See TR. II 163, 164, 166-167 and TR. IV-29-38, 65 and 71-75.) The Commissioner is convinced upon careful review of such screening process and the testimony of the witnesses that the Board did not exceed its authority nor act inconsistently with the goals of public education in striking the contract with Whittle.

The Commissioner has previously said in Boult and Harris v. Board of Education of the City of Passaic, 1939-49 S.L.D. 7 (1946), aff'd State Board of Education 15, 135 N.J.L. 329 (Sup. Ct. 1947), aff'd 136 N.J.L. 521 (E.&A. 1948):

> it is not a proper exercise of a judicial function for the Commissioner to interfere with local boards in the management of their schools unless they violate the law, act in bad faith (meaning acting dishonestly), or abuse their discretion in a shocking manner. Furthermore, it is not the function of the Commissioner in a judicial decision to substitute his judgment for that of the board members on matters which are by statute delegated to the local boards. Finally, boards of education are responsible not to the Commissioner but to their constituents for the wisdom of their actions. (at 13)

In so determining, the Commissioner has also carefully considered petitioner's claim that the contract between Whittle and the Board violates N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25, the compulsory education act. In the Commissioner's judgment, such statute has not been compromised or violated by the instant contract.

Here, again, a plain reading of the statute in question bespeaks a requirement imposed upon parents and guardians to submit children between the ages of six and sixteen for regular attendance at school. (State v. Massa, supra) N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 states:

> Every parent, guardian or other person having custody and control of a child between the ages of six and 16 years shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school.

The ALJ would derive authority from this statute to prevent the Board from entering into said contract because students, who are required to attend school, and are thus a "captive audience" (initial decision, at p. 27), should not be subject to commercial advertisements while in school, especially because the effect of the two-minute periods of advertising in the 12-minute segments of Channel One programming is cumulative and compulsory, amounting over the course of a school year, to a full day of what could be instructional time. (Initial Decision, at p. 29)

Such authority is lacking under the circumstances herein factually and legally. First, the record establishes that homeroom is not an instructional module. See Tr.III-101. Further, it is uncontested that students are regularly excused from homeroom for various reasons. Tr.III-102 Moreover, the ALJ acknowledged and referred to testimony stating that even for students who are present in homeroom, none are required to actually watch the Channel One broadcasts (initial decision, at pp. 5, 6, 8, 9, and 19), and that there are rooms without television in each school to which those students who do not wish to watch the Channel One broadcasts may be sent. See Initial Decision, at p. 9. Thus, the ALJ's conclusion that the two minutes of commercials embodied in the Channel One programs amount to a full day of instructional time over the course of a school year is suppositional, at best, made in reliance upon a false premise that homeroom time is instructional time. Such conclusion cannot be sustained because the record establishes no compulsion directed by the Board for students to actually watch the programming.

Further, the ALJ's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 in questioning the value of the programming of Channel One results in too tenuous a nexus between the State's obligation, shared with the parents through application of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 to oblige children between the ages of six and sixteen to attend school, and the Board's inherent authority to establish rules for its own governance and to do all things proper for the conduct of its district. As noted above, such Board managerial prerogative more accurately derives from N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-1 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6:8-1 et seq. The Commissioner concurs with Whittle and Participant NJSBA that the ALJ's citation of such cases as Everson, supra, and Netcong, supra, are inapposite to this matter. Everson concerned transportation of parochial school students in Trenton, with the issue being separation of church and state under our federal and state constitutions. Netcong dealt with whether a period for the free exercise of religion via a meditation period represented an unconstitutional establishment of religion in the schools. (Id., at 566, 568) Both cases are cited by the ALJ as a foundation to question the educational value of the Channel One programming, purportedly under the guise that Netcong and Everson bespoke moral and educational safeguards with which a board must be concerned in providing a free, public education.

However, the Commissioner finds that the fact that students may be excused from programs offered by a board is no necessary reflection on the merit of the content of such subject matter. See Smith v. Ricci, 89 N.J. 514 (1982), wherein the New Jersey Supreme Court upheld a regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:29-4.2, dealing with a requirement that districts develop a family life education program, while remaining cognizant of N.J.S.A. 18A:35-4.6, the Right of Conscience Act, which permits parents to remove their children from any objectionable part of the family life program, pursuant to the Free Exercise Clause and the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment of the United States Constitution. (N.J.A.C. 6:29-4.1(e)4) Thus, the Commissioner finds no relationship between permitting pupils to be excused from Channel One programming and its educational value.

The Commissioner further finds and determines that the contract herein does not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 because the programming in Channel One is not part of the curriculum of the Board. The Commissioner finds Channel One information as bespoken in the record before him to be comprised of informative current events and news, intended to be a supplement to the overall educational environment created by the Board for the enrichment of its pupils, notwithstanding the two minutes of commercials. Thus, no argument can reasonably be made that pupils "indirectly" (initial decision, at p. 29) "pay the bill for the other things Whittle provides." The Commissioner so finds.

As to the two minutes of commercials during the 12-minute Channel One programming, the Commissioner agrees with that statement made in Participant NJSBA's brief filed on April 30, 1992 wherein it contends:

> [T]he presence of advertising is not a new concept for today's public schools. As indicated by counsel for Whittle, the Trenton Board and witness testimony, many other media are present within the schools which contain some form of advertisement. [TR. III-32-40, and 138-142] In the face of dwindling federal and state aid for education, schools must search for new and innovative relationships with business entities to provide necessary services. Many districts contract with outside vendors for services and/or equipment, which may bear the logo or slogan of the sponsor. Amicus submits that this exposure to advertising does not rise to the level of exploitation petitioners allege. Petitioners' Brief p. 7. If this court invalidates this > contract, the impact would affect all forms of advertising within the schools regardless of the educational value. (emphasis in Brief)

> (Id., at p. 9)

In this district, it is a matter of record that Scholastic Magazine, Time and Newsweek are used as supplements to the instructional program. All three such publications include advertisements. See TR. III-139. Another program finds the Board purchasing and providing local newspapers, which contain advertisements, to pupils. See TR. III-140. Similarly, school boards are encouraged to establish partnerships with businesses as a means of obtaining quality supplies, equipment and data that might otherwise be beyond the reach of local district budgets. See TR. III-138 regarding Trenton Board of Education's adopt-a-school program for the district's students. As noted earlier under the facts extant in this matter, the Commissioner finds and determines that the Board's procedure for screening Channel One broadcasts, including its commercials, both before entering into the contract with Whittle and thereafter, reveals no abuse of its authority to manage and provide services to the pupils of the district to the extent warranting the Commissioner's substituting his judgment for the Board's in this regard. See TR. III-12, 13, 99-100.

Neither can the Commissioner find that the thorough and efficient clause of our New Jersey Constitution, art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1, is implicated in this matter.

The Channel One arrangement herein cannot be cast, as the ALJ would have it, as "inefficient" use of instructional time. (Initial Decision, at p. 31) The amount of instructional time students receive at Trenton High remains the same, whether Channel One newscasts are shown or not. The ALJ notes under the section of the initial decision captioned "RELEVANT EVIDENCE" at pp. 8-9 of the initial decision the testimony of Ms. Thomas, Executive Director of School Operations, that homeroom is not instructional. Rather, homeroom has been demonstrated to be a short, 15-minute module, separate from the instructional periods of the school day intended to efficiently dispose of ministerial housekeeping, "where one takes care of the minutia[e] of the day" (TR. III-101). Similarly, Mr. Winogron, the district video specialist, testified that students are allowed to do other things while in homeroom than watch Channel One. See TR. III-20. Hence, no instructional time is lost by providing pupils exposure to the Channel One programming, particularly where there is no requirement that they pay attention to it.

Further, the Commissioner does not accept the ALJ's reasoning that the Whittle contract violates art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of New Jersey's Constitution because the benefits of Channel One are not free, "[c]hildren are paying for the equipment and programs just as surely [as] if they were asked for money, but the specie is more dear: it is time that could be instructional time." (Initial Decision, at p. 31) The ALJ relies, apparently, on that portion of the thorough and efficient clause of art. VIII which provides that the Legislature will provide "a thorough and efficient system of free public schools." (emphasis supplied) The Commissioner notes that argument presented in the Whittle exceptions citing the North Carolina Supreme Court decision dealing with Whittle Communications which rejected the same argument as raised under art. VIII, sec. 4, para. 1 of our constitution regarding whether the services provided by Channel One are free. Therein the North Carolina Court stated:

> According to plaintiffs, the equipment provided by Whittle to the schools is not free because students pay for it with the time they spend watching commercial advertising for Whittle's financial benefit and the benefit of the Channel One advertisers.
> [P]laintiffs provide no authority for their contention that the students are being "charged" to watch Channel One by the time they spend watching the program. Furthermore, the contract clearly provides that students are not required to watch the program, and the students do not have to "spend their time" watching the program if they do not wish to do so.  We do not find convincing plaintiffs' argument that students are being made to pay for the contract through their time spent in watching the program, and we reject this argument. (State v. Whittle Communications, 328 N.C. 456, 464 (1991))

The Commissioner notes with accord Whittle's argument herein that in addition to the contract provisions in the Trenton contract indicating students do not have to watch the Channel One programming if they choose not to, they are likewise not required to watch the commercials. (See TR. III-56, 110, TR. III-20 and 102.) Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's conclusion that the Channel One programming is not free because students are exposed to two minutes a day of commercials as part of the Channel One programming shown in homeroom.

While stating that children and parents accept some limitation on their rights when entering the public schools, the ALJ suggests that our state constitution provides protection through its police power to promote health, safety, morals, peace and good order for the proposition that "[n]othing in the law suggests that the right to be protected from commercial exploitation is surrendered"

(initial decision, at p. 31), the Commissioner concurs with NJSBA wherein it states that there exists no constitutional right to be free from commercials.

> To merely articulate that an individual possesses some right, does not make it so, and does not automatically elevate such a "right" to the same level as those guaranteed by the federal constitution. The ALJ engages in "bootstrapping" to reach this conclusion, for which he has provided no support.
> (NJSBA's Exceptions, at pp. 10-11)

The Commissioner concurs that the ALJ's attempt to analogize the right to be free from "commercial exploitation" is insubstantial, and thus is rejected. (Initial Decision, at p. 31)

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's findings and conclusions that there has been no abuse of pupil records in this matter, but that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.5, boards must be ever vigilant to ensure that whatever data is to be provided to Whittle, if the contactual relationship is to continue, does not run afoul of the statute and administrative code concerning pupil records and confidentiality.

In this case, the Commissioner has determined that the Trenton Board of Education has not abused its managerial authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 by contracting with Whittle to provide Channel One programming to its students. However, it must be clearly understood that this decision is reached based upon the factual circumstances prevailing in this matter, i.e., a 12-minute segment with two minutes of commercials offered during homeroom, a noninstructional period in the Trenton school district. It must be emphasized that such a ratio of commercials to news content is, in the Commissioner's judgment, the limit tolerable to justify use in the schoolroom setting, even during a noninstructional module such as homeroom herein. Were a fact pattern presented anew to the Commissioner which had a more extensive commercial intrusion, it might give rise to a determination that a board of education's actions were unreasonable in permitting such programming because the balance of educational value would be overwhelmed by commercial intrusion. The Commissioner so states notwithstanding his full appreciation that in this era of rapid technological change, particularly in the area of audiovisual technology, boards of education should not be unduly restricted in acquiring those technological benefits a contract of the sort herein discussed can bring to a district and its students.

In summary, while there are troubling questions associated with the issue of commercial television and intrusion on the sanctity of instructional time in our public schools, it is the Commissioner's judgment that under the facts of this matter they do not rise to the level of finding the Trenton Board's actions unreasonable or arbitrary.

In so ruling, let it be clearly understood that this decision does not represent an unfettered right of boards of education to engage in contracts with commercial television companies. Therefore, the Commissioner cautions boards of education that they must assiduously guard against the potential for abuse that exists relative to the intrusion of commercialism within the schoolroom setting, especially as it impacts on instructional time.

Accordingly, the initial decision is affirmed insofar as the ALJ found that N.J.S.A. 18A:51-13 is not applicable to the contract in question in this matter. The initial decision is also affirmed in finding that arguments related to art. VIII, sec. 3, pars. 2 and 3 (1947) were not raised in the pleadings or at prehearing and thus are not addressed in this decision, and further that the pupil records law, N.J.S.A. 18A:36-19, and N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.1 et seq. have not been implicated under the facts of this matter. In all other regards, however, the initial decision is rejected.

Accordingly, the instant Petition of Appeal is dismissed, with prejudice.

DECISION

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, August 6, 1992

For the Petitioners and Participant-Appellants, Wills, O'Neill & Mellk (Arnold M.Mellk, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Sumners, Council & Innis (Thomas W. Sumners, Jr., Esq., of Counsel)

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This action involves a challenge by petitioner to his assignment to a teaching position following the abolishment of his prior position, and alleges a violation of his tenure and seniority rights for failure to appoint him as a vice-principal.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on November 4, 1991, for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A telephone prehearing conference was held on January 16, 1992, and a prehearing order was entered on January 21, 1992, scheduling the hearing in this matter for June 25 and 26, 1992.

Prior to the scheduled hearing date, the parties agreed to settle this matter and have prepared the attached Settlement Agreement indicating the terms of settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the terms of settlement and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

John Rizzo, residing at 70 Swamp Road, Phillipsburg, New Jersey, and the State Operated School District of the City of Paterson with offices at 33-35 Church Street, Paterson, New Jersey, desiring to amicably resolve this dispute, hereby agree as follows:

1. Effective July 1, 1992, Mr. Rizzo shall be appointed to a vice-principal position.

2. Effective July 1, 1992, Mr. Rizzo shall be paid at the step 4 of the high school vice-principal salary guide (doctor equivalency level) pending negotiations with the Paterson Administrators Association for the 1992-93 school year. Mr. Rizzo will also receive longevity of $2,200 based upon his years of service in the District in addition to his base salary of $60,191. Unless a new collective agreement is in effect as of July 1, 1992, Mr. Rizzo will be compensated $62,391 per annum effective July 1, 1992. Any right to additional salary in the event of a subsequent collective agreement will be the same as for any other vice-principal.

3. Mr. Rizzo will accrue seniority credit as a vice-principal from the date of his original appointment as vice-principal, August 1, 1988.

4. Mr. Rizzo hereby expressly releases any and all claims he may have for any additional compensation or other benefits for the 1991-92 school year and any prior years. Mr. Rizzo does not release his tenure or seniority rights.

5. This agreement is subject to the approval of the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education.

6. In return for compliance with this Agreement, Mr. Rizzo agrees to the dismissal, with prejudice, of the litigation known as John Rizzo v. The State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson, Agency No. 367-10/91, O.A.L. Docket No. EDU 10222-91.

On or about June 21, 1991, petitioner, William Schwenck, filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education alleging that respondent, the Board of Education of the City of Summit, arbitrarily, capriciously, and without good cause withheld his salary and adjustment increments.

Respondent filed an answer on July 19, 1991, denying the allegations and alleging that the Board's action was permitted pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 and within its discretion as part of its management prerogative to operate the school district.

On July 23, 1991, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A telephone prehearing conference was held on October 30, 1991, at which time the issues were isolated and a hearing scheduled for May 21, 26, and 27, 1992, at the Office of Administrative Law. In consideration for the Release given by the Board, the Hendels shall pay the sum of Three Thousand Dollars ($3,000), which payment shall be held in the Trust Account of Robinson, St. John & Wayne, pending approval of this Stipulation of Settlement and Dismissal ("Settlement"), by the Commissioner of Education for the State of New Jersey ("Commissioner");

3. In consideration for the Release given by the Hendels, the Board shall dismiss all claims that it has brought or could have brought against the Hendels and their representatives in the civil action entitled Board Education Regional High School Dist. No. 1 v. Hendel, Superior Court of New Jersey, Union County, Law Division UNN-1-620-91, and transferred to the Office of Administrative Law, docketed as EDU-09156- 91N; and

4. Fully executed Releases shall be held in escrow by counsel and, within five (5) days of the approval of this Settlement by the Commissioner, the Releases shall be exchanged and the sum of $3,000 shall be simultaneously delivered to the Board.

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law by the Department of Education on February 28,1991, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq In his petition, Joseph Chieco maintained that he enjoyed tenure as a custodial/janitorial employee pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A 17-3 and that the respondent's determination to terminate that employment was in violation of his tenure rights. Petitioner further maintained that the Board's effort in April 1990 to place him on a six-month probationary period was ineffective.

Respondent filed an answer in opposition to the petition alleging that its action in his case was in conformity with established statutory and case law.

The matter originally was assigned for hearing to Administrative Law Judge Christopher R. Dietz. However, upon his appointment as a judge of the New Jersey Superior Court, the matter was reassigned to the undersigned administrative law judge whose own schedule required an adjournment of the original hearing dates. Accordingly, hearings were established for January 1992.

On the date scheduled for the hearing, I met with counsel and, as a result, the parties reached agreement on the terms and conditions of a tentative settlement. Thereafter, a copy of a fully executed settlement agreement was submitted to me which is attached hereto and made part hereof.

The agreement provides in essential part that petitioner will dismiss his petition with prejudice. In consideration for the withdrawal of his petition, the respondent will pay to petitioner the sum of $15,000 in full and final payment.

I have reviewed the file in this matter and the terms and conditions of the proposed settlement. I FIND that:

1. The parties voluntarily have agreed to the terms of the settlement as evidenced by the signatures which appear on the settlement agreement; and

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with law.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

Agreement made this 2nd day of April, 1992, between the Guttenberg Board of Education, Township of Guttenberg, County of Hudson and State of New Jersey, referred to as "Respondent" and Joseph Chieco, residing at 218 New York Avenue, City of Union, County of Hudson and State of New Jersey, referred to as "Petitioner."

Petitioner had been employed by the Respondent as a custodian. Petitioner was terminated from his position as a custodian in the Guttenberg School District on or about November 14, 1990.

A controversy exists between the Respondent and Petitioner as to the circumstances surrounding the termination of said Petitioner.

The parties desire to avoid the costs and uncertainties of litigation by compromising and settling all claims and controversies between them.

It is understood that the Respondent, by agreeing to this compromise and settlement in no way admits liability to Petitioner of any kind. Petitioner understands that the Respondent has not agreed or promised to do or omit to do any act or thing not contained in this Agreement.

Now, therefore, in consideration of the several covenants and releases by each of the parties set forth in this Agreement, Petitioner and the Respondent agree with one another as follows:

1. Petitioner for himself and his heirs, legal representatives and assigns, hereby releases and forever discharges the Respondent, its members, servants, agents and/or employees, both jointly and severally, or in the alternative or individually, its successors and assigns, of and from any and all manner of action and causes of action, suits, claims and demands whatsoever, whether in law or in equity, which now exist or may hereafter arise from any matter, fact, circumstance, happening or thing whatsoever occurring or failing to occur from the beginning of Petitioner's employment to the present specifically including, but not limited to whatever rights Petitioner may have had pursuant to the tenure laws.

2. Petitioner agrees to dismiss his petition filed with the State of New Jersey, Office of Administrative Law, with prejudice thereby relinquishing any and all rights and claims he may have had as a custodian in the Guttenberg School District.

3. Petitioner agrees to not disclose any information regarding the terms of settlement agreement nor comment on said settlement agreement.

4. Petitioner will be paid a total of $15,000.00 in full payment for making this Release and agrees not to seek anything further, including any other payment and any additional covenants, terms and conditions.

5. Petitioner hereby agrees that any breach of this Agreement specifically with regard to paragraph four concerning nondisclosure will result in the forfeiture of his settlement monies in the amount of $15,000.00 and shall entitle the Respondent to damages and such other relief as may be deemed equitable.

6. Petitioner states that no representation of fact or opinion was made to him by the Respondent or anyone on the Respondent's behalf to induce this compromise as to any rights the Petitioner may have. Petitioner understands that the $15,000.00 to be paid by the Respondent was agreed to as a compromise to avoid expense and to terminate all controversy or claims for damages of any nature, known or unknown, in any way growing out of or in connection with the facts and claims set froth above. Petitioner expressly agrees that his acceptance of such payment by the Respondent shall be a complete bar to all claims or suits for damages of any nature resulting or to result from the employees termination.

Sanford Luber, petitioner, pro se

Richard K. Sacks, Esq., for respondent

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

The following is a transcript of an oral ruling which I issued on July 6, 1992, in chambers, as an incident to an order which was issued by my office on the same date, denying the motion submitted by Sanford Luber for emergent relief in the above-entitled matter.

The Commissioner of Education transmitted Mr. Luber's appeal to the Office of Administrative Law on July 1, 1992, on his petition seeking emergent relief in the form of a stay of action contemplated by the respondent Board of Education. The action of the Board which is the subject of Mr. Luber's motion has not yet taken place; a decision by way of a vote and resolution is not expected before the evening of July 6, 1992. Essentially Mr. Luber is anticipating a resolution of the Board inconsistent with his position and is seeking a stay of the Board's action which, in his view, would result in the privatization or "out-sourcing" of various support services to private contractors. These services include busing, custodial, maintenance and security. In support of his motion, Mr. Luber has submitted a 12-page petition and supplemented that by way of oral argument. Mr. Sacks, counsel to respondent Board, submitted an answer on July 6, 1992, denying that Mr. Luber has in any way set forth facts upon which any relief can be granted and, further, that the action of the Board which is the subject of Mr. Luber's motion are presumed to be correct and were not arbitrary and/or capricious.

The standard in governing the current motion is similar to, if not identical to the standard set forth by court rule. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 a motion for emergent relief shall be granted only if the moving party can demonstrate: (1) that he will suffer immediate and irreparable harm should the relief be denied; and (2) a reasonable likelihood of prevailing on the merits. See, Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Should the moving party fail to establish both these criteria by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence, then the motion for emergent relief must be denied.

Addressing first the issue of whether Mr. Luber has established that immediate and irreparable harm will befall him should his application for emergent relief be denied, it is my view that he has failed to establish this criterion. Mr. Luber, as a taxpayer of Lakewood Township, is attacking action which the Board has not yet taken. He is speculating that on the evening of July 6, 1992, the Board will vote to privatize the various services described. But as Mr. Sacks, counsel for the Board represents, there is no way of knowing at this time exactly what it is the Board will do. Its choices are varied. It may vote to privatize some but not all of the services at issue. It may vote to privatize all of the services at issue. It might vote to modify the process of privatisation. Or it may vote not to privatize any of the services at issue and to maintain the status quo. Unless and until the Board acts through appropriate vote and resolution, it is to engage in crystal-ball gazing to determine the injury Mr. Luber alleges he will suffer much less its immediacy and irreparability. Furthermore, Mr. Sacks has represented that even were the Board to vote to privatize, in respect to the issue of busing, that contract will not be executed until September 1992. In respect to the various other services provided for, it will be a full two-week period between the vote of the Board and its execution of a variety of contracts before those services will result in out-sourcing. Given the speculative nature of what the Board will or might or might not do, there is a serious question as to whether Mr. Luber has raised a justiciable issue in these proceedings.

Secondly and in respect to the substantive issue underlying the motion, it is also my judgment that Mr. Luber has been unable to successfully demonstrate that there is a reasonable likelihood that he will prevail on the merits. It should at the outset be noted that the scope of review by the administrative law judge (ALJ) in respect to whether the action (at this time only contemplated) by the Board in respect to privatization should be upheld is not a de novo standard; rather, it is the ALJ's obligation to determine whether the action of the Board is reasonable rather than arbitrary and capricious. Thus even were the ALJ to disagree with the decision of the Board to privatize (at this time, again, hypothetical) that would not, as a matter of law, serve as a basis for the ALJ's decision to reverse the Board. In addition, of course, if the Board's actions are those with which Mr. Luber disagrees, that also does not provide a legal basis to overturn its decision.

One must engage in the presumption that the actions and activities of the Board are reasonable unless and until evidence is forthcoming to demonstrate the contrary. I have reviewed Mr. Luber's petition. Much of it is conclusory. In addition, much of it is an expression, albeit sincere, of Mr. Luber's personal disagreement with action that the Board contemplates. It should also be noted that Mr. Sacks stated for the record that the Board contracted with a consulting firm which prepared a report directing itself to both the transportation and maintenance issues and it is upon this report that the Board presumably will exercise its discretion and make a judgment. Mr. Sacks also formally represented on the record that this report was not based on inaccurate or erroneous information. Mr. Sacks also reaffirmed the principle that public entities are permitted to out-source and privatize a variety of services provided that they comply with a variety of procedures. See In re IFPIE Local 195 v. State, 88 N.J. 393 (1982). Mr. Sacks further represented that these various procedures were complied with by respondent Board in respect to the issues before me.

Thus while Mr. Luber may indeed have legitimacy in disagreeing with a decision (which may or may not ensue) resulting in privatization, that disagreement is not necessarily legally actionable unless it is also intertwined with unlawful activity. Mr. Luber has not made a showing of unlawful activity such that the law would conclude that he has a reasonable likelihood of prevailing on the merits.

Lastly it should be noted that Mr. Luber's argument that a significant number of Lakewood citizens have signed a petition opposing the possible privatization is unavailing. Merely because the electorate may disagree with a position taken by a public governing entity does not mean that the entity is acting improperly or unlawfully. If a constituency is dissatisfied with policies formulated by an elected official or an elected body, the remedy is not to seek an adjudication (unless of course the activity of the body rises to the level of unlawfulness); the remedy is to elect other representative officials. If the Township of Lakewood is so dissatisfied with the actions of its Board of Education, they must make that dissatisfaction known through the ballot box.

Accordingly, and based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that he has a reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits of this matter should it proceed to plenary hearing.

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the petitioner's motion seeking emergent relief be and hereby is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

This matter having come before me on July 6, 1992, pursuant to an application made by the petitioner for a motion seeking emergent relief in the form of a stay of respondent's action to contract out services for busing, custodial, maintenance, and security pursuant to Board action contemplated on July 6, 1992, and good cause not having been shown, it is ORDERED that petitioner's motion for a stay be and is hereby DENIED.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, including a tape recording of proceedings at hearing, the transcript of the ALJ's oral decision on motion, and the ALJ's written order denying emergent relief, have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has not met the standard for grant of emergent relief in this matter, which appears to be essentially a disagreement regarding Board policy decisions for which the appropriate remedy is, as noted by the ALJ, the ballot box rather than legal action.

Moreover, the Commissioner has confirmed that, in accord with the directive of the ALJ's written order, petitioner has notified the Office of Administrative Law that he does not wish to pursue this matter to plenary hearing.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law denying emergent relief is affirmed for the reasons well expressed in the ALJ's oral decision on motion; and, in view of petitioner's communication with the ALJ regarding further proceedings, the instant matter is deemed withdrawn as a controversy before the Commissioner.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, unsuccessful candidate for seat on the Board, requested inquiry into alleged violations of annual school election pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12.

ALJ found that not all violations void election results; however in this matter there was evidence of significant misinstruction and substantial confusion regarding the write-in ballot process resulting in disqualification of 97 write-in votes, 87 of which had been cast for petitioner, placing her within 4 votes of winning. ALJ found will of electorate was thwarted. ALJ recommended that Board conduct new election as soon as practicable.

Commissioner concurred with ALJ that new election was warranted, citing closeness of result and evidence of significant error in instructing voters. (Green Brook)

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 2993-92
AGENCY DKT. NO. 106-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL BOARD ELECTION HELD IN THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, ATLANTIC COUNTY

Janet Smith, petitioner, pro se

Joseph M. Assan, Esquire, for respondent, Hamilton Township School Board (Lisitski & Assan, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 15, 1992 Decided: June 22, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH E. KANE , ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Janet Smith, an unsuccessful candidate for a seat on the Board of Education of Hamilton Township, submitted a written request to the Commissioner of Education on April 10, 1992, requesting an inquiry into alleged violations of the annual School Board election held on April 7, 1992, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on April 29, 1992 for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq. The hearing was conducted at the Office of Administrative Law, Superior Courthouse, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey on June 10 and 15, 1992. The record was closed on June 15, 1992, and a decision was rendered on June 22, 1992.

ISSUES

Petitioner alleges that the following irregularities occurred in the conduct of the school board election held on April 7, 1992.

1. The school board erred in not extending the poll hours longer than 5:00 p.m. to 9:00 p.m.
2. The voting machines were not inspected by poll workers after each vote was cast and the voting machines were not in their proper location as prescribed by N.J.S.A. 19:52-2.
3. A mechanically operated model of the voting machine was not on display for instructional purposes in violation of N.J.S.A. 19:53A-11.
4. Poll workers were not instructed, by the school board, in the use of the voting machine in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-6.1.
5. Names of voters were not properly checked, and addresses were not completed on the voting registration books in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101.
6. Poll workers intervened, or impeded the voting process, by providing voters with incorrect information as to how to register a write-in vote on the voting machine.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Approximately two weeks before the election held on April 7, 1992, petitioner decided to seek a seat on the Hamilton Township School Board. Having missed the filing deadline which would have placed her name on the ballot, she decided to mount a write-in campaign. This was the first time petitioner had ever sought public office.

The three incumbents, whose names were on the ballot, were all returned to office. Petitioner received the fourth highest number of votes.

The results of the election, as certified by the Commissioner of Education were as follows;

Candidate	At Polls	Absentee	Total
William B. Carll	317	3	320
Jeri-Lynn Gatto	401	3	404
Peter E. Fraleigh	445	3	448
Janet Smith (write-in)	221	3	224
John Lenhart (write-in)	184	0	184
Joseph G. Marshello, Jr. (write-in)	71	0	71
Larry Fatcher (write-in)	24	1	25
Harvey Kessalman(write-in)	2	0	2
20 Write-in with one (1) Vote Each	20	0	20

All of the witnesses that testified for both petitioner and respondent agreed that the lines at the polls were very long from the time voting began at 5:00 p.m., until the polls closed at 9:00 p.m. A poll worker considered this voter turnout to be the heaviest she had seen in many years, primarily due to the proposed 32 cent tax increase.

Two elections were being conducted simultaneously. One was for the Regional Board of Education while the second was for the local Hamilton Township School Board. As a result, there were two voting machines at each location. After voters registered to vote, they were given a white and a blue authority. Witnesses testified, and poll workers agreed, that the voting machines were not marked with a designation of either regional or local election. Many voters surmised that the machine with the longest line was the local election; however many voters were not aware of which line they were in until they entered the voting machine.

The combination of the long and slow moving lines, and the non-designation of the voting machines, caused many voters to leave the voting line prior to casting their ballot. Witnesses for the petitioner testified that several voting locations were in a state of confusion caused by a general misunderstanding on the part of voters as to how write-in ballots should be cast. Frustrated voters were urging other voters not to hold up the line by casting write-in ballots. Witnesses for the petitioner, as well as poll workers, uniformly testified that many voters were unaware of how to implement the write-in process for more than one candidate.

The voting machines utilized in this election are supplied by the Atlantic County Board of Elections, and are manufactured by Shouptronic.

In this election, there were three seats available on the school board. As a result, a voter had the option of casting a ballot for any one of the three candidates whose names appeared on the face of the Shouptronic voting machine. The voter also had the option of casting a ballot for three write-in candidates, or splitting the ballot between any number of write-in candidates, and those appearing on the ballot.

The Shouptronic, which is an electronic voting machine, is programmed to accept only three ballots in any combination of either write-in or a name appearing on the ballot.

The write-in instructions appearing on the voting machine read "Press write-in button associated with office. Press flashing red button in upper right hand corner of machine. Write-in slot will open. Write-in your vote. Close write-in slot."

Frances L. Hagel has been a poll worker in various elections for the last 18 years. In this election, she was an election judge of districts one and five, the voting location at the Duberson School. As the election judge, she supervised the other poll workers whose duty it was to check names and signatures when voters registered, and to oversee the operation of the voting machines. She arrived at the polling location at approximately 4:15 p.m. She described the lines as long, with many voters being confused as to how to implement the write-in process.

Mrs. Hagel testified that the Atlantic County Board of Elections instructs her, and other poll workers, on a yearly basis concerning the use of the voting machines. She recalled that Atlantic County had been utilizing the Shouptronic machine for approximately six years.

Mrs. Hagel testified that the Atlantic County Board of Elections instructed her in the method to be used when a voter wanted to cast one write-in ballot; however, she stated that the Board of Elections never went over the procedure when multiple write-in ballots were to be cast.

Ms. Hagel testified that she, and other co-workers at the Duberson School, as well as other locations, were instructing voters who wanted to cast multiple write-in ballots to place all the names on one ballot.

The instructions given by Mrs. Hagel, as well as other co-workers, were in contravention of the procedure utilized by the Shouptronic voting machine. Each polling place is supplied with a booklet which sets forth answers to questions concerning the operation of the machine. The instructions contained therein at page 12 state:

> "2. HOW DO I CAST A WRITE-IN VOTE? ANSWER: The place for "writing-in" a person's name is provided on the Shouptronic voting machine behind a sliding window located near the top above the ballot. To cast a write-in vote, the voter must do the following:
>
> a. Push the button in the write-in block on the ballot for the appropriate office. (Note: The voter may at this point change his mind by pressing the button again thereby canceling the write-in selection. The voter may not change his mind after he completes stop; "b" below).
>
> b. Go to the top of the machine, above the ballot, and press the blinking red button which will open a window exposing a paper roll. (Note: As stated, the voter may not change his mind once the window is open).
>
> c. Next, the voter may write the name of the person of his choice onto the paper roll and pull the window to its down position to cover said name.
> d. Write-in voting is now complete for the office selected and the voter may proceed to cast his ballot for other offices, etc.

NOTE: THE VOTER MUST COMPLETE HIS WRITE-IN PROCEDURE AND CLOSE THE WRITE-IN WINDOW BEFORE HE WILL BE ABLE TO CONTINUE VOTING.
THIS PROCEDURE MUST BE FOLLOWED FOR EACH WRITE-IN. "

Several witnesses for the petitioner testified that when using the write-in procedure the door would not open and they had to force the door to open and to close. Of the voters who experienced this difficulty, all testified that they were able to complete the voting procedure.

Lawrence Bouchonville testified that he contacted the Board of Education in advance of the election, to inquire into the procedure to utilize when casting write-in ballots. He said that the instructions provided to him by the School Board were incomplete, in that he was not instructed to cast more than one write-in ballot. Mr. Bouchonville's wife, Antoinette, asked a poll worker how to file a write-in ballot, to which the poll worker responded "I don't know."

Poll worker Deborah Doernbach assigned to the Duberson School voting location districts seven and eight testified that at some point between 5:00 p.m., and 9:00 p.m. she copied the write-in instructions, found on the face of the Shouptronic voting machine, onto the blackboard which was located in the room where voting was occurring. She remembers at one point a voter commented to her that the instructions were not clear, at which point Mrs. Doernbach added further explanatory instructions. She did not remember the exact language however she believes that it was to the effect that when conducting a multiple write-in, the process would have to be repeated several times.

Jay McKeen, a detective with the Hamilton Township Police Department, voted at the Duberson School, districts seven and eight. He arrived at this polling location approximately 6:00 p.m. and was through voting at approximately 7:45 p.m.

While standing in line inside the room where the voting machine was located, he recalled that a poll worker stated to the line of voters "You have to stop the write-in votes, it's holding up the line." The poll worker went on to ask "How many of you are going to cast write-in votes." One of the voters in the line responded "That's none of your business." Detective McKeen then stated to the poll worker that he intended to cast a write-in ballot. At this point, the poll worker stated to DetectiveMcKeen "You are holding up the line." Detective McKeen testified that he was able to successfully cast a write-in ballot.

Two poll workers and one election judge assigned to Duberson School, district seven and eight, testified that they themselves never told any voters not to cast write-in ballots. They were unaware whether any other poll workers may have made such a statement, however, no such instructions were given in their presence that they were able to hear.

Angie Johnson, election judge of district seven and eight, corroborated the testimony of all the witnesses that appeared in this matter that the lines were long, and the voters waiting in line were frustrated, and noisy. Deborah Doernbach testified that in her opinion, there were more people in the room at any one time waiting to vote then the Fire Marshall would allow. On an average, it took the voters who testified in this matter from a minimum of one hour up to two hours to vote from the time they arrived until the time they exited the voting machine.

Witnesses for the petitioner testified, and the poll workers corroborated the fact, that the voting machines were not marked as to whether they were for the local or the regional election. As a result, those voters who had intended to vote in the local election, but had mistakenly waited in the regional line, left without voting, because they had to get to work.

Petitioner has complained that the conditions within the rooms where voting occurred was very cramped, crowded and that the voting machines were not located as prescribed by N.J.S.A. 19:52-2. Witnesses and poll workers agreed that the voting machines at the Duberson Avenue School were not placed three feet from a wall or partition and were not at least four feet from a table where election officers were registering voters. Election judge Francis Hagel testified that for most of the night, she was standing shoulder to shoulder between the two machines, and that one machine was only two feet away from the registration table.

A poll worker and an election judge testified that due to the crowded conditions, and the amount of individuals waiting to vote, machines were not inspected after each voter cast his or her ballot as required by N.J.S.A. 19:52-2.

The poll workers observed that one of the machines had been defaced when a voter wrote the name of a candidate directly on the write-in box door. Election judge Francis Hagel noticed this vandalism and immediately took steps to remove the name from the voting machine.

All of the poll workers testified that they had been trained in the use of the voting machine, including election law procedures, at least once a year. Many of the poll workers had extensive experience in all forms of elections.

Witnesses for the petitioner observed that several individuals voted by placing their names in the voter registration books, but did not include their address. These witnesses conceded however, that these voters were voting in the proper district.

At the Laureldale Fire House voting location, voting began approximately ten minutes late because the election judge wanted additional books to be delivered. The secretary to the Board testified that each voting machine displayed a sample ballot on the outside, as well as on the inside.

All of the voters who testified in this manner uniformly agreed that despite the long lines, crowded conditions and confusion over the write-in ballot process, they all were able to vote.

CONCLUSIONS

The voters in this election were subjected to long lines and frustrating conditions. This in and of itself is not sufficient to void an election. Not all violations rise to such a level that it could be stated that the will of the people and the election process has been thwarted. It can not be anticipated that every election will be conducted in accordance with the letter of the law. Minor deviations from statutory requirements are not sufficient, in an of themselves, to void election results.

In the instant matter, however, there was substantial confusion over the method by which write-in ballots were to be cast. One of the election judges testified that she specifically instructed voters who wanted to cast multiple write-in ballots to affix each name to a single ballot. These were the instructions which were also carried out by poll workers which ultimately resulted in the disqualification of 97 write-in votes due to multiple names appearing on one ballot.

Additionally, misinformation provided to voters, coupled with confusion over the write-in process, caused some voters to register only one write-in ballot, when the voter intended to cast two to three write-in ballots.

The testimony of Detective McKeen demonstrates that one poll worker within the election process, admonished voters not to hold up the line by casting write-in ballots. Three poll workers, present at McKeen's voting location, testified that they never told him, nor any other voter not to cast a write-in ballot. They admitted, however, that they were very busy processing voters, and it is possible that they did not hear the statements of co-workers at all times. I FIND that the testimony of Detective McKeen to be unrefuted, and credible.

It was reasonable for the Board of Elections to anticipate a heavy voter turnout considering the proposed 32 cent tax increase, which was the highest increase ever proposed within Hamilton Township. As such, since the Board was unable due to school schedules to expand the voting hours beyond the statutory periods set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12, additional voting machines should have been provided. At the very least, if only two voting machines were to be utilized, they should have been clearly marked with a designation of local or regional election. In this manner, voters who only had time to stand in one line would have been given an opportunity to cast their ballots in the election of their choice. A wait of one to two hours is excessive within the context of a school board election. The board had been advised prior to the election that a heavy turnout was anticipated, however, a request made at a school board meeting to extend the voting hours was denied.

In stepping back and examining the entire election, it is clear that voters were confused by the write-in process and were provided with incorrect instructions by poll workers which resulted in invalidation of 97 votes. Voters, while standing in line, at one point were advised by a poll worker that they should stop the write-in process.

Accordingly, I FIND that such conduct has interfered with the full and free expression of the popular will, and has influenced the result of the election. I herein recommend that the School Board of Hamilton Township conduct, as soon as practicable, a new election.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL	:
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF HAMILTON	:	DECISION
TOWNSHIP, ATLANTIC COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by the Board, as was a brief reply thereto by petitioner urging acceptance of the findings and conclusions of the ALJ, pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In its exceptions, the Board contends that the ALJ ignored the testimony of some witnesses, accorded undue weight to others and incorrectly concluded that the will of the electorate had been thwarted when in fact there was no evidence that petitioner's allegations, to the extent that they were true, had affected the outcome of the election.

With regard to allegations of poll workers harassing voters about casting write-in votes, the Board argues that Officer McKeen's testimony was refuted by the testimony of poll workers in the room where McKeen voted, and that there is evidence to show that the comments in question were actually made by voters rather than poll workers. Moreover, even if the alleged harassment had occurred exactly as McKeen described, there still was no evidence to show that it affected the outcome of the election. (Board's Exceptions, at pp. 4-11)

With regard to improper instructions being given by poll workers, the Board argues that this occurred only at certain locations, and even then it did not affect the outcome of the election. As the results of the election on recount and the testimony of witnesses undisputedly showed, the lowest vote-getting incumbent was elected with 320 votes, while petitioner received 229.* She therefore would have needed 91 additional votes to tie the successful incumbent, and the Board's exhibits clearly demonstrate that only 87 of the 97 multiple-name write-in votes discarded on recount included a vote for petitioner. Moreover, the Board avers, it cannot be assumed that all the discounted write-in votes were the result of instructional error, as more votes were cast in the polling districts where correct instructions were given than in the two locations where the instructions were admittedly faulty. (Id., at pp. 12-14)

With regard to petitioner's remaining allegations, specifically that the Board and/or its agents provided for insufficient polling hours, confused voters by failing to clearly differentiate regional machines from local, neglected to ensure that voting machines were inspected after each vote, placed machines in a manner not in compliance with statute, failed to display a mechanically operated voting machine model for instructional purposes, neglected to instruct poll workers in the use of voting

* The Commissioner here notes that the election results cited by the ALJ at page 3 of the initial decision are those originally announced, not the results certified by the Commissioner in his decision on recount dated May 18, 1992. On recount, as correctly stated by the Board in its exceptions, petitioner received 229 votes rather than 224. Other minor variances in tally also occurred, but none significant for purposes of the within inquiry.

machines and failed to properly check names of voters and obtain addresses for registration books, the Board argues that even in the few instances where minimal violations may have occurred, there was absolutely no basis on which to conclude that such violations affected the outcome of the election. (Id., at pp. 16-20)

Turning to its legal arguments (Id., at pp. 20-24), the Board contends that the established standard for deciding matters of this type requires petitioner to prove not only that irregularities occurred, but also that they specifically affected the outcome of the election; that is, that the results of the election would have been different but for the demonstrated irregularities. The Board argues that even gross irregularities, when not amounting to fraud, do not vitiate an election and that election worker errors are insufficient grounds for voiding an election where the will of the people has not been thwarted. Rather, an election will be set aside only when deviations from statutory procedure are so gross as to produce illegal votes which would not otherwise have been cast or so as to defeat legal votes which otherwise would have been counted, thereby making it impossible to determine the will of the people; mere speculation that the results of an election might have been different if conditions were different is insufficient to meet this standard. Love v. Board of Chosen Freeholders, 35 N.J.L. 269 (1871); Stone et al. v. Wyckoff et al., 102 N.J. Super. 26 (App. Div. 1968); Petition of Clee, 119 N.J.L 310 (Sup. Ct. 1938); In Re Livingston, 83 N.J. Super. 98 (App. Div. 1964); In re Wene, 26 N.J. Super. 363 (Law Div. 1953); In re Hackensack Recall Election, 31 N.J. 592 (1960); In the Matter of the Election Inquiry Held in the School District of the City of Garfield, Bergen County, 1977 S.L.D.

771; In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of Riverside Township, Burlington County, 1968 S.L.D. 73

The Board further cites a number of school law decisions where confused conditions and irregularities, which the Board characterizes as much like those at issue herein, were specifically found insufficient to warrant a new election because the number of contested votes, even granting every inference to the challenger, could not have changed the results of the voting. In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, Monmouth County, Commissioner's decision of October 20, 1987; In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional School District, Somerset County, Commissioner's decision of October 23, 1986, affirmed State Board January 7, 1987; In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Borough of Emerson, Bergen County, Commissioner's decision of June 4, 1987; In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of Ringwood, Passaic County, 1974 S.L.D. 591. These cases are distinguished from others where the number of votes discounted was large enough to alter the result of the election. In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Borough of Middlesex, Middlesex County, Commissioner's decision of May 14, 1987, and In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of the Township of Green Brook, Somerset County, 1985 S.L.D. 1933 (State Board decision reversing Commissioner's decision at 1984 S.L.D. 1358) As petitioner herein has failed to demonstrate that anyone was intimidated or otherwise prevented from voting as the result of alleged improprieties and has moreover been shown to have received insufficient votes to be elected even if she were granted all 87 ballots rejected for multiple listings but including her name, the Board concludes the ALJ's determination that a new election is warranted must be set aside by the Commissioner.

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the assessment of the ALJ and affirms his recommendation that the will of the electorate in this matter was thwarted so as to require the conduct of a new election.

As the Board rightly argues in its exceptions, two conditions must be met for such relief to be warranted: that irregularities be proven to have occurred and that they be further shown to have specifically affected the outcome of the election. In this case, the first five irregularities alleged by petitioner (initial decision, at p. 2) were duly examined by the ALJ and, even where violations were found to have occurred, these were judged insufficient in themselves, either singly or collectively, to warrant a new election. (Initial Decision, at pp. 8-9) The Commissioner concurs with this assessment, and in so doing, finds the Board's exceptions in these regards actually to be consonant with the decision of the ALJ.

With respect to petitioner's allegations of the voting process being impeded or thwarted by the actions of election officials regarding the casting of write-in votes, however, the Commissioner rejects the Board's contention that the facts of this matter do not meet the two-prong standard set forth above. It is undisputed that erroneous instructions for the casting of write-in votes were given by poll workers, including the judge of elections, at at least two of the five polling places. While the correctness of the instruction given at the other three locations is disputed by the parties, the numbers of incorrect multiple-vote ballots cast at those locations (Exhibits R-2 and R-3), together with the confusion and varied attempts at explanation attested to by poll workers and voters present there, support the ALJ's fact finding and credibility assessments, thereby undermining the Board's arguments that erroneous or confusing instructions cannot be directly linked to more than a few of the rejected ballots.

The Commissioner likewise rejects the Board's attempt to argue that, even if the alleged erroneous or confusing instruction did occur, the undisputed fact that only 87 of the 97 rejected multiple-name ballots included a vote for petitioner defeats any claim that such error affected the outcome of the election because petitioner needed 91 votes to tie the lowest number of votes received by an incumbent. Given the total number of votes cast in this election, the significant number of rejected ballots and the combined effect of the proven erroneous instructions, mass confusion and other violations (notwithstanding that the latter were not in themselves fatal to the election), the Commissioner judges a four-vote margin too close a result to permit any conclusion other than that the will of the electorate was unable to be fairly expressed or determined in this matter. Green Brook, supra Accordingly, a new election is fully warranted even under the more carefully refined legal standard articulated by the Board.

Nor is this conclusion altered by, or inconsistent with, the line of cases cited by the Board to demonstrate that election results will not be overturned by the Commissioner, even where irregularity is proven, if such irregularity cannot be shown to have directly and specifically affected the outcome of the voting. Bridgewater-Raritan, supra, dealt with casting of three illegal votes, none of which could be proven to have been cast for the incumbent who defeated petitioner by one vote; Emerson, supra, dealt with electioneering which could not be directly linked to any votes actually cast; Ringwood, supra, dealt with confusion regarding write-in votes, but the effect of the error (having to do with the set-up of machines) was to prevent votes for the winning candidates rather than to preclude write-ins, so that the error did not alter the outcome of voting. The case mainly relied upon by the Board, Matawan-Aberdeen, supra, while similar in some respects, is distinguishable from the instant matter in that in Matawan, petitioners were unsuccessful in demonstrating that alleged irregularities, other than minimal infractions having little or no effect on voting, actually occurred; based on evidence and assessment of witness credibility, the ALJ and Commissioner concluded that there had been no widespread error or omission by election officials with regard to instruction for write-in voting and that, at most, only 34 instances of rejected ballot or inability to vote could reasonably be construed to have been the result of the sporadic difficulties that did occur. Those 34 votes, even when fully credited arguendo to the tally of the highest vote-getting challenger, left a margin of over 100 votes between that challenger and the successful candidate; thus leading the ALJ and Commissioner to the conclusion that the errors proven had no effect on the outcome of the election. In the instant matter, in contrast, widespread error and omission were proven in the area of instructing voters on casting of multiple write-in votes, and 97 of 102 rejected ballots were discarded for this reason, 87 undisputedly cast for petitioner; thereby leaving her with a four-vote margin of loss in an election pervaded by confusion and misinformation regarding write-in balloting. This situation, in the Commissioner's view, cannot be dismissed as mere speculation that results might have been different if different conditions had prevailed.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law directing the Hamilton Township school district to conduct as soon as practicable a new election for members of the Board of Education is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein as further explicated above.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: June 18, 1992 Decided: June 29, 1992

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ:

Petitioner, an 18 year old senior at Highland High School, filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) requesting emergency relief, specifically that he be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremonies, on June 18, 1992, as a National Honor Society student. The respondent, the Black Horse Pike Regional High School District, Camden County, argued that the petitioner was not entitled to this privilege since his membership in the National Honor Society had been revoked, after a hearing. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative on June 17, 1992, for a determination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 e seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On June 18, 1992, I heard the parties' oral arguments regarding the petitioner's request for emergency relief, and on that date, I issued an oral order denying said emergent relief.

Since petitioner's participation in the graduation ceremony as a National Honor Society student is the only issue in this matter, I hereby CONCLUDE and ORDER that the matter is now moot.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the issue of petitioner's participation in graduation ceremonies as a member of the National Honor Society has been rendered moot by the Commissioner's prior decision denying petitioner's motion for emergent relief. While a review of petitioner's papers in that matter leaves some question as to whether petitioner intended to pursue his dismissal from the National Honor Society and seek a plenary hearing on the merits of that issue apart from the question of participation in graduation exercises, in view of petitioner's failure to submit exceptions to the ALJ's determination of mootness herein, the Commissioner must assume that petitioner no longer wishes to pursue this matter.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed and the instant Petition of Appeal dismissed for reason of mootness.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning teaching staff member claimed she acquired tenure as Learning Disabilities Teacher/Consultant (LDT/C), and that Board violated her seniority rights by continuing employment of those with lesser seniority. Board held she acquired seniority only in the elementary category.

ALJ found that petitioner did not serve the requisite period of time as an LDT/C to have acquired tenure. ALJ concluded that service as a Learning Specialist could not be used as basis upon which petitioner acquired tenure as LDT/C. ALJ also concluded county school business administrator is without authority to consider or decide what certification and qualifications are required in an unrecognized title because such responsibility lies solely with the county superintendent of schools pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3.

Commissioner affirmed that part of the initial decision finding that duty to review and determine qualifications and certification for unrecognized titles is vested solely in county superintendent of schools. Pursuant to his authority to review such matters when there has been a failure to do so by the county superintendent or where an error is alleged (Pezzullo), Commissioner rejected ALJ's finding that the Learning Specialist position in respondent district and that of the LDT/C position were distinguishable for seniority purposes. Commissioner found LDT/C position comports with those functions of Learning Specialist and noted that an LDT/C does not serve exclusively on the child study team. N.J.A.C. 6:11-11.13(c) and 6:28-3.1(a)5(c) Commissioner directed Board to acknowledge petitioner's tenure and seniority rights and that she be assigned to a position as an LDT/C if her seniority so warrants. Commissioner also directed retroactive compensation for salary lost according to her proper placement on the salary scale, as result of Board's failure to properly appoint her to such a position effective with the start of the 1990-91 school year. Commissioner denied award of interest.

MARJORIE LEVY,
Petitioner,
v.
MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION,
Respondent.

Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., for petitioner (Klausner, Hunter & Cige, attorneys)
Frances J. Campbell, Esq., for respondent (Kalac, Newman, Lavender & Campbell, P.C.)

Record Closed: April 4, 1992 Decided: June 22, 1992

BEFORE DANIEL B. McKEOWN, ALJ:

Marjorie Levy (petitioner), who is employed by the Middletown Township Board of Education (Board) as a teaching staff member, was assigned during 1990-91 as a reading teacher at the 8th grade level and in 1991-92 as a resource room teacher. She claims that she had acquired tenure as learning disability teacher-consultant (LDT/C) and following an unchallenged reduction-in-force effective 1990-91 the Board continued one or more LDT/C with lesser seniority than she. Consequently, petitioner concludes that the Board violated her seniority rights. The Board, to the contrary, denies petitioner acquired tenure as LDT/C and maintains that whatever seniority she may have is limited to the category of elementary.

After the Commissioner transferred the matter December 20, 1990 to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq., a plenary hearing was scheduled to be conducted July 24, 1991. However, that hearing was canceled upon the representation of counsel to the parties that the matter more likely than not would be settled. The matter did not settle. The parties nevertheless agree that the issues presented may be adjudicated on cross-motions for summary decision including agreed upon facts, exhibits of the parties, and memoranda of law.

Findings are reached in this initial decision that petitioner did not acquire tenure in the position of LDT/C. Consequently, the conclusion is reached that the Board did not violate petitioner's seniority following a reduction in the number of LDT/C positions effective with the 1990-91 year.

FACTS

The following facts are not in dispute between the parties and they are as set forth in petitioner's memorandum, as amended.

1. Petitioner is a tenure teaching staff member in the employ of the Board.

2. Petitioner's employment with the Board is as follows:

   1984-89 learning specialist
   1989-90 LDT/C
   1990-91 eight grade reading teacher
   1991-92 resource room teacher

3. Petitioner possess the following endorsements:

   LDT/C Elementary
   Social worker/visiting teacher
   Teacher of Reading
   Reading specialist
   Principal/supervisor
   Nursing school
   Teacher of English
   Teacher of the handicapped

4. During the course of petitioner's employment with the Board her responsibilities included the monitoring of basic skills program, the development of intervention plans for students, coordination of computer programs involving in-service staff work shops, the coordination of work responsibilities with resource persons in the district, the selection and purchase of instructional materials in special and mainstreamed areas, curriculum development in all areas, performing consultant responsibilities for the administrative staff, students, and parents, and the assistance of staff with grant writing assignments.

5. The job description for the position of learning specialist which petitioner held between 1984 through 1989 required her to have a minimum of five years experience, three of which had to be in an elementary classroom. In addition, petitioner had to possess a masters degree, an elementary endorsement on an instructional certificate, although an LDT/C and/or reading certifications were preferred.

6. As a learning specialist, petitioner reported directly to her assigned building principal and she had the overall job goals of serving student and teacher needs as a curriculum and program resource specialist.

7. The job description for learning specialist (Exhibit A) lists 12 functions related to the overall job goals, only one of which specifically mentions a child study team. Function four states that the learning specialist is

> To recommend with teacher's assistance program services for students such as Child Study team referral English as a Second Language, basic skills and Gifted and Talented.

8. The position, learning specialist, is not a recognized title for purposes of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3. That rule obligates boards of education to seek approval of the county superintendent of schools to use unrecognized titles before making appointments thereto.

9. Sometime in the 1989 Spring, an assistant superintendent of schools for the Board requested approval from the county superintendent of schools to use the learning specialist title. On June 14, 1989 the county school business administrator wrote the assistant superintendent as follows:

> Based upon my review of the Learning Specialist job description, this position would not be considered unrecognized since it would be covered under the endorsement Learning Disabilities Teacher/Consultant (N.J.A.C. 6:11-12.15). The person occupying the position of Learning Specialist would would (sic) be considered to have the recognized job title Learning Disabilities Teacher/Consultant for seniority purposes.

10. As noted above, petitioner was assigned as LTDT/C for 1989-90. She was assigned as a reading teacher at the eighth grade level for 1990-91 and as a resource room teacher for 1991-92.

11. Petitioner does not challenge the reduction in force regarding the number of LDT/C positions for 1990-91. Petitioner does say there are individuals with lessor seniority than she who continue in the position of LDT/C.

12. In response to a written request after memoranda of the parties were filed, the Board submitted its job description for the position LDT/C which it had adopted on August 16, 1985. That job description states that the qualification for appointment as an LDT/C requires a master's degree, LDT/C certification, and three years successful teaching experience. One who is appointed as a LDT/C reports directly to the director of Special Services. The overall job goals of the LDT/C states that the primary responsibility

> [I]s to assist school personnel in helping students develop behaviors which will assist in their acquisition of subject matter and/or skills that will contribute to their development as mature, able and responsible men and women. Using their professional expertise and other resources provided, the learning disability teacher/consultant assists school personnel in accordance with the goals, policies and curriculum adopted by the Board of Education. These primary responsibilities include the following:

1. Serves as a member of the basic Child Study Team.

2. Assesses and analyzes the learning characteristics and achievement levels of students referred to the basic child study team.

3. Acts as an educational consultant to school personnel, parents, students and other professionals.

4. Demonstrates evidence of professional development and growth.

5. Performs other appropriate functions of LDT/C nature as assigned by the Director of Special Services and [G]uidance.

ANALYSIS

On the foregoing facts petitioner says she acquired tenure as an LDT/C and, as such, following a reduction in force the Board may not continue the employment of an LDT/C with lesser seniority than she nor may it continue the employment of one who has not yet acquired tenure. The strength of petitioner's case, or lack thereof, depends in large measure on the legal efficacy of the determination reached by the Monmouth County school business administrator that the learning specialist position constitutes the recognized titled position of LDT/C.

The determination reached by the Monmouth County business administrator is of no legal consequence for two reasons. One, only the county superintendent of schools is authorized, subject to appeal, to approve the use of unrecognized professional titles or determine that the duties of a position with an unrecognized title is, for seniority purposes, the duties of a specific position with a recognized title. N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3. Two, even if the letter (Exhibit B) of the county business administrator could be read that he was merely conveying a determination reached by the county superintendent, and it cannot be so read, the determination is erroneous.

Reviewing the job description (Exhibit A) of learning specialist with the subsequent job description filed for the position of LDT/C, the primary responsibilities of an LDT/C focus on a select pupil population; that is, youngsters in need of special education, their parents, teachers, and administrators. The primary focus of a learning specialist as that position is defined in the job description is on the pupil population in general of the school district. Moreover, the job description is specific that a learning specialist required only an elementary endorsement on an instructional certificate. While an LDT/C endorsement, or reading specialist endorsement, was preferred, the fact remains that under the job description learning specialist as it was presented and as the duties are so described, an elementary endorsement was sufficient for one to be appointed learning specialist.

The duties of a learning specialist are not the duties of an LDT/C whose primary focus is on the needs of youngsters in need of special education. That petitioner is certified as an LDT/C and was employed one year as a LDT/C does not translate into having acquired a tenure status under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 nor 18A:28-6. Petitioner simply did not serve the requisite period of time as an LDT/C to have acquired tenure. Petitioner's service as a learning specialist cannot be used as a basis upon which it can be fairly said she acquired tenure as an LDT/C. The Board's argument that even if petitioner had acquired tenure as an LDT/C, her seniority would not begin to count until after the date of the county school business administrator's letter, June 14, 1989, on the strength of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 need not be considered in light of the above conclusion.

For all the foregoing reasons, the petition of appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

MARJORIE LEVY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MIDDLETOWN, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioner filed timely exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The Board filed timely reply exceptions.

Petitioner reasserts in exceptions two arguments considered below.

Exception #1 claims:

> THE ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE ERRED IN CONCLUDING THAT A DECISION SIGNED BY A DESIGNEE OF THE COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS WAS NOT BINDING ON THE BOARD OF EDUCATION PURSUANT TO N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3

Petitioner claims it is axiomatic that department heads and other high-ranking administrators in public service internally delegate many decision-writing functions. Petitioner claims that an otherwise appropriate opinion rendered pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 should not be rendered a nullity for purposes of seniority entitlements solely because the county school business administrator, not the county superintendent of schools, signed his name instead of the name of the county superintendent, to a memorandum prepared in response to school board inquiries made pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3. Petitioner adds that because Mr. Miklus' letter finds the position of Learning Specialist would not be considered an unrecognized title because it would be covered by the endorsement for Learning Disabilities Teacher/Consultant (LDT/C) under N.J.A.C. 6:11-12.15, the prescriptions of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 were not violated because someone other than a county superintendent issued an opinion with regard to a recognized title.

Last, under this exception, petitioner claims at no point did the Middletown Board seek to challenge the statements contained in the June 14, 1989 letter issued by Mr. Miklus, by filing a petition for declaratory judgment before the Commissioner of Education, nor did it challenge the ability of Mr. Miklus to approve the renewal of several unrecognized job titles for the 1989-90 school year which were the subject of a renewal request from the Middletown Township's superintendent's office.

Exception #2 states:

> ASSUMING THAT THE PRESCRIPTIONS OF N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 WERE FULLY APPLICABLE TO THE INSTANT MATTER THE DECISION OF A DESIGNEE OF THE COUNTY SUPERINTENDENT WAS BINDING ON THE MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR SENIORITY PURPOSES

Relying on the case law cited in her brief, petitioner contends the ALJ ignored the deference accorded to the county superintendent's office pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 in his decision holding that the duties of a Learning Specialist differed from those of an LDT/C. Petitioner also claims the ALJ erred in finding that in light of the differences in job functions, Mr. Miklus' opinion was in error which found that "the person occupying the position of Learning Specialist -- would be considered to have the recognized job title Learning Disabilities Teacher/ Consultant for seniority purposes." (Exceptions, at p. 3, Citing Exhibit B) She claims a review of the decisions cited in her brief establishes that there can be substantial differences in the duties and functions of employees with different titles whose seniority entitlements are still subsumed within the same position for seniority purposes.

Petitioner also claims that case law establishes that an administrative law judge cannot simply disagree with decisions of the county superintendent of schools, based upon the prescriptions of N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3 solely because the ALJ concludes that the duties of the position at issue are different. She relies again on those cases cited in her post-hearing brief in support of this proposition.

Finally, because the Board failed to seek clarification of the June 14, 1989 letter from Mr. Miklus or to ask for a declaratory judgment from the Commissioner, the Board should be bound by the decision set forth within such letter. She seeks an order assigning her to an LDT/C or Learning Specialist position within the district, retroactive compensation for any economic loss effective with the start of the 1990-91 school year with interest, and appropriate adjustment to her seniority entitlements consistent with the decision sought in this matter.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner affirms in part and rejects in part the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law.

The Commissioner adopts that finding of the ALJ below that only the county superintendents of schools are authorized, subject to appeal, to approve the use of unrecognized professional titles or to determine that the duties of a position with an unrecognized title are, for seniority purposes, the duties of a specific position with a recognized title. N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.3(b) The regulation permits no exceptions, delegations or substitutions of the county superintendents' assumption of such duties and evaluations.

However, should the county superintendent fail to conduct such a review upon being solicited by a board to consider an unrecognized title, or if an error has occurred such as those alleged under the facts of this matter, that is, that the review of the job description was assigned to and determined by other than the county superintendent, the Commissioner is vested under his plenary authority to hear and adjudicate controversies arising under the education laws, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, to consider what certification is appropriate for any unrecognized title and in what category seniority accrues under such unrecognized title. See State Board decision at page 7 in Joseph Pezzullo v. Board of Education of the Township of Willingboro, Burlington County, decided by the Commissioner January 23, 1987 and November 5, 1987, affirmed with modification State Board March 1, 1989. Hence, rather than remand the matter, the Commissioner herein undertakes a review of the job description for a Learning Specialist submitted to the record, as well as the stipulation of facts provided by the parties and made a part of the initial decision at pp. 2-5.

Upon review of such documents and stipulations, the Commissioner rejects that finding of the ALJ that the position held by petitioner herein as a Learning Specialist is that of a teacher rather than one of educational services as an LDT/C. In this regard, the Commissioner specifically rejects that statement of the ALJ found on page six of the initial decision wherein he states that an LDT/C's primary focus is on the needs of youngsters in need of special education. The State Board regulations do not limit either the training or function served by an LDT/C as to serving on a child study team as an advisor to special education pupils exclusively or primarily. See also N.J.A.C. 6:11-11.13(c). See, for example, N.J.A.C. 6:28-3.1(a)5(c).

In the instant matter, a review of the Learning Specialist position in this case indicates that the requirement that such title "serve as a consultant to teachers, administrators and parents in the evaluation of educational data and programs" is well beyond the training and responsibility of one who holds solely an elementary instructional certificate. (Exhibit A) The Commissioner finds and determines that those duties specified in Exhibit A comport with those functions provided by an LDT/C.

Petitioner concedes that as Learning Specialist within the Middletown School District, she "perform[ed] certain duties vis-a-vis classified students in addition to the other duties assigned to this particular position." (Petitioner's Brief, at p. 25) The Commissioner concurs with her argument that blending the two roles for seniority purposes is required under the circumstances extant in this matter. The Commissioner concurs with petitioner also, that insofar as the Board assigned her after the abolition of the Learning Specialist position to the position of LDT/C in 1989-90, the inference is strong that the positions, Learning Specialist and LDT/C, and petitioner's qualifications and certificates were amenable to construing both positions as the same for calculating seniority entitlements.

Accordingly, the Commissioner affirms that portion of the initial decision finding that Exhibit B, the letter signed by the county business administrator, does not meet the requirements of N.J.A.C 6:11-3.3 for the reasons expressed in the initial decision. However, he reverses that portion of the initial decision finding that the position of Learning Specialist cannot be used as a basis upon which it can be fairly said that petitioner acquired tenure as an LDT/C.

Thus, the Commissioner hereby directs that the Board acknowledge petitioner's having acquired tenure and seniority rights as an LDT/C, that she be assigned a position as a Learning Disabilities Teacher/Consultant within the district if her seniority based on the above conclusion so warrants. He further directs that she be retroactively compensated for any salary lost according to her proper placement on the salary scale, as a result of the Board's failure to properly appoint her to such a position effective with the start of the 1990-91 school year. In so concluding, however, the Commissioner denies petitioner's request for interest on such salary insofar as she has failed to make the requisite showings pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.16.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: July 8, 1992 Decided: July 9, 1992

BEFORE JAMES A. OSPENSON, ALJ:

Patricia Monaghan, a tenured elementary teaching staff member in the employ of the Board of Education of the Township of Kearny, Hudson County, was given notice by the Board on April 26, 1991 that her employment would be terminated at the end of the school term and thereafter would not be renewed for 1991-92. In a petition of appeal filed in the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the Department of Education on July 17, 1991, she alleged Board action in retaining less senior/non-tenured elementary staff contravened her rights of tenure and seniority under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and 28-10. Petitioner sought reinstatement and differential back pay.

In answer, the Board admitted her employment and notice of termination but denied its action contravened petitioner's statutory rights.

Before hearing, the parties advised that the matter had been settled amicably. Thereafter, a stipulation of settlement and dismissal was submitted.

I have reviewed the record and stipulation of settlement and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures on the agreement;

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy, is in the interest of parties and public and should be implemented forthwith.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and accordingly I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

Respondent having reassigned Petitioner to a full time position as a teacher for the 1991-92 school year, and recognizing that Petitioner will be re-employed for the 1992-93 school year, and having reached agreement with Petitioner regarding the nature of all of Petitioner's service in the Respondent school district, the parties hereby agree to resolve this matter on the following basis:

1. Petitioner agrees to withdraw the Petition of Appeal, and acknowledges that she suffered no loss of pay or benefits;

2. The parties agree and recognize that all of Petitioner's employment in the Respondent district, commencing with her employment on September 1, 1985, was as a teaching staff member, in a position requiring an instructional certificate, and was creditable for tenure and seniority;

3. Petitioner agrees to accept her current assignment, and does not challenge the propriety of such assignment;

4. The withdrawal of the petition does not constitute a waiver of Petitioner's claims regarding her seniority calculation. The parties recognize that Petitioner is tenured, that all of her service counted toward the acquisition of tenure in the Respondent school district, and that all of it was creditable for seniority;

5. If it becomes necessary to calculate Petitioner's seniority, the parties agree that such seniority shall be computed in accord with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10 et seq.

6. This agreement shall not constitute a waiver or reduction of any tenure rights that Petitioner may have, in the event of a future reduction in force or of hours, relative to any other teachers.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, two riffed tenured teachers, alleged their tenure rights were violated by Board's employment of nontenured staff to fill vacancies for which they held proper endorsements. The endorsements, however, were acquired subsequent to their RIF's.

Commissioner rendered his decision on a summary basis. Commissioner dismissed consolidated petitions, finding petitioners had no entitlement to positions requiring elementary endorsement as they obtained their endorsements following the Board's action to reduce their employment. Citing Francey, Commissioner found tenured employee's rights to recall are frozen at time of the Board's decision to RIF and are not continually expandable through acquisition of subsequent additional endorsements.

RESPONDENT.	:

For Petitioners, Richard A. Friedman, Esq. (Zazzali, Zazzali, Fagella & Nowak)

For Respondent, Stephen J. Mushinski, Esq.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education by way of Petitions of Appeal filed by Petitioner Johnstone and Petitioner Heberley on August 12, 1991 and August 27, 1991, respectively, against Respondent Cinnaminson Board of Education. Both alleged violation of their tenure rights by the Board's employment of nontenured staff to fill vacancies for which they held the necessary endorsements, those endorsements having been obtained in Johnstone's case subsequent to her RIF determination but prior to actually leaving the Board's employ and in Heberley's case subsequent to cessation of her employment; but in both cases prior to the effective dates of the vacancies to which they claimed tenure entitlement. The Board filed answers denying that petitioners had tenure in, or entitlement to, the positions in question, averring instead that the Board had in all respects acted pursuant to applicable law.

The Commissioner subsequently granted the parties' request that the two matters be consolidated and decided on a summary basis, as they involved closely related questions of law and no disputed facts. A joint stipulation of facts was filed on November 8, 1991, followed by briefs and replies according to the schedule established for this purpose.

On December 3, 1991, petitioners proposed to amend their filings to include entitlement to a newly posted Basic Skills/ English position. On February 13, 1992, petitioners advised the Commissioner of respondent's acceptance of this amendment and of the parties' intention to rely on briefs previously submitted notwithstanding the amendment. On May 18, 1992, petitioner submitted additional comments on a recently decided case (Lammers, infra), to which the Board replied on June 19, 1992. At this time, the record of these consolidated matters was deemed closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The following facts have been stipulated by the parties and are adopted herein as the controlling facts of this matter.

1. Lynn Johnstone, as of August 4, 1991 held an Instructional Certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners with endorsements as a Teacher of French, K-12, Spanish, K-12 and Elementary Education, K-8.

2. Lynn Johnstone acquired these certificates as follows: Teacher of Spanish (April, 1979), Teacher of French (April, 1979), Elementary School Teacher (June, 1991), a notice of certificate issuance being received by the Burlington County Superintendent of Schools on July 8, 1991 and brought to respondent on the same date.

3. C. Gloria Heberley holds an Instructional Certificate, issued by the State Board of Examiners with endorsements of General Business Studies, Data Processing, Bookkeeping/Accounting, Distributive Occupations, Business Occupations, Teacher Coordinator/Business Education/ Cooperative Vocation, and Elementary Education, K-8.

4. C. Gloria Heberley acquired these certificates on the following dates: General Business Studies (February, 1981), Data Processing (February, 1981), Bookkeeping/Accounting (February, 1981), Distributive Occupations (September, 1981), Business Occupations (February, 1982), Teacher Coordinator/Business Education/Cooperative Vocation (August, 1987) and Elementary School Teacher (July, 1990), a notice of certificate issuance being received by the Burlington County Superintendent of Schools on July 30, 1990.

5. Lynn Johnstone commenced employment with respondent on or about December 1, 1981. She did not teach during the school year 1982-83. Lynn Johnstone taught Foreign Language as a part-time (.4) Teacher in 1983-84 and 1984-85. She taught Foreign Language as a part-time (.8) Teacher in 1985-86 and 1986-87. She became a full-time Foreign Language Teacher in 1987-88 and held that position until an April, 1991 reduction in force, which was effective June 30, 1991.

6. C. Gloria Heberley became employed in September, 1984 as a part-time (.4) Business Education Teacher. She remained as a part-time (.4) Business Education Teacher until being riffed on April 24, 1990, effective June 30, 1990.

7. Both petitioners held the requisite Instructional Certificates with the proper endorsements for each assignment during the course of their employment with the respondent.

8. Both petitioners obtained tenure in their respective employment positions with respondent.

9. Petitioner Heberley, on or about May 5, 1990, took the National Teachers' Examination in an effort to acquire an Elementary Endorsement. Petitioner Johnstone took this exam on May 4, 1991.

10. Respondent's Superintendent of Schools, Joseph Carol, on November 29, 1990 offered Heberley full-time employment in an elementary position in September, 1991, said offer being withdrawn prior to April, 1991.

11. Since the date of their respective RIFs, neither petitioner has been employed by respondent.

12. Prior to June 20, 1991, four (4) teaching positions requiring Elementary Endorsements became vacant in respondent's school district, such vacancies all being for the 1991-92 school year.

13. One teaching position was filled on or about June 18, 1991, the second position was filled on or about July 16, 1991 and the third and fourth positions were filled on or about August 13, 1991 through the hiring of nontenured teachers under Instructional Certificates with Elementary Endorsements.

14. Petitioner Heberley requested appointment to a position by letter dated October 15, 1990 but did not receive such appointment. Heberley also verbally requested appointment to the vacant positions enumerated in Paragraph 16, but did not receive such appointment.

15. Petitioner Johnstone, by letter dated June 11, 1991 requested appointment to "available positions" under an elementary certification, but did not receive such appointment.

16. The salary of Petitioner Lynn Johnstone for the 1990-91 school year was $31,500.00.

17. The salary of Petitioner C. Gloria Heberley for the 1989-90 school year was $10,540.00.

Based upon the papers filed in conjunction with petitioners' amendment, the Commissioner further finds the following as fact.

18. On or about November 22, 1991, a vacancy effective January 6, 1991 was posted for a split position encompassing .5 Basic Skills (Reading/Language Arts) and .5 English at the middle school level. Elementary endorsement was required with Reading or Reading Specialist preferred. Sometime before February 11, 1992 the position was filled by a nontenured teacher.

PETITIONERS' POSITION

In essence, petitioners claim that because they acquired tenure under instructional certificates which now have elementary endorsements thereon, they are entitled to vacancies arising under those endorsements notwithstanding that the endorsements were acquired after they were riffed from their prior positions. Over and above the settled principle that tenure rights are to be liberally construed, petitioners contend, it is now well established that teachers acquire tenure under their instructional certificates and that such tenure extends to all endorsements thereon. Capodilupo v. West Orange Board of Education, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), cert. denied 109 N.J. 514 (1987); Bednar v. Westwood Board of Education, 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987), cert. denied 110 N.J. 512 (1988); Grosso v. Board of Education of New Providence, State Board decision March 7, 1990; Ellicott v. Board of Education of Frankford, State Board decision November 19, 1990, aff'd Superior Court 251 N.J. Super. 342 (App. Div. 1991) It is further established, they aver, that this rule applies regardless of the date on which the endorsement was obtained, as a tenured teacher who begins employment under one endorsement and later acquires additional endorsement(s) is tenured under those endorsements as well. Grossman v. Board of Education of the Borough of Ramsey, Superior Court, App. Div. unreported, Dkt. No. A-3270-88T1 (decided May 17, 1990)

In petitioners' view, the fact that endorsements were acquired after petitioners were riffed does not alter this holding, as the disputed vacancies arose after the RIF determination and involve application of recall rights, so that petitioners' tenure entitlements are not controlled by their status at the time of RIF, but rather by their status at the time of the relevant vacancy. Marshall v. Board of Education of the Twp. of Neptune, State Board decision January 10, 1986, aff'd Superior Court App. Div., Dkt. No. A-2595-85T1 unreported (decided March 10, 1987); Mirandi v. Board of Education of West Orange, State Board decision April 5, 1989; Schienholz et al. v. Board of Education of Ewing Township, unreported, App. Div. Dkt. No. A-2905-89T3 (decided November 19, 1990), cert. denied __ N.J. __ 1991; Herbert v. Board of Education of Middletown, unreported, App. Div. Dkt. No. A-318-90T1 (decided May 22, 1991). Petitioners hold that all that is necessary for them to claim the disputed positions by tenure right is for them to have been riffed, to have expressed their interest in the vacancies at issue and to hold the requisite certification for them; liberal construction and the clear intent of the law to protect tenured teachers who lose their employment through no fault of their own can permit no other result. Bodine v. Board of Education of the Twp. of Burlington, Commissioner decision February 23, 1989, aff'd State Board July 6, 1989; Catherine Lammers v. Bd. of Ed. of Borough of Pt. Pleasant, Superior Court, App. Div. Dkt. No. A-5494-90T1, unpublished, May 12, 1992. Neither can the Board claim surprise or prejudice by the necessity to honor petitioners' entitlements, they claim, as it was fully aware of both their interest and their certification status before it filled the disputed vacancies; consequently it faced no risk of conflicting commitments or liabilities in so acting. Cf. Marshall, supra.

BOARD'S POSITION

The Board in turn argues that tenure protection should not extend to endorsements which were never served under nor held at the time of RIF; neither should it extend to endorsements held for less than the requisite period for tenure acquisition or endorsement under which claimant has served. Initially, the Board contends that the major cases relied on by petitioners, Capodilupo, supra, Bednar, supra, and Gross, supra, stand for the proposition that tenure protection extends to all instructional endorsements held at the time of RIF and can be distinguished from the present matter in that petitioners herein did not acquire their endorsements until after riffing. It is well established, the Board avers, that a RIF is accomplished when a Board has properly acted to abolish a position, and it is at this point that the Board must determine the entitlement of affected teachers to other positions within the district. Marshall, supra; Carmen DiSimoni v. Board of Education of Passaic County Regional High School District No. 1, Commissioner decision November 20, 1990, aff'd State Board April 3, 1991. To hold otherwise, the Board claims, would allow riffed teachers to continually broaden their tenure priority by amassing additional endorsements and certificates after being riffed, with the result that members of one privileged group would be allowed to claim any vacancy that happened to arise in the district and thereby continually narrow the number of potential positions available to nontenured applicants, even those with better qualifications and more experience in the position sought.

The Board further cites a number of cases which it believes support the proposition that persons without the requisite certification, or persons who have not served in the position to which they lay claim, cannot seek entitlement to such position by tenure right and that tenure priority should not extend to endorsements which are substantively different from any endorsement under which the claimants have served. Maurice Kaprow v. Board of Education of the Township of Berkeley, Ocean County, Commissioner decision November 29, 1989; Savarese v. Board of Education of the Borough of Bernardsville, Somerset County, Commissioner decision July 24, 1989; Grossman v. Board of Education of Ramsey, Somerset County, Commissioner decision November 7, 1988, aff'd State Board March 1, 1989; Bosco v. Board of Education of the Northern Highlands Regional School District, Bergen County, Commissioner decision August 3, 1990; Dennery v. Board of Education of Passaic County Regional High School District No. 1., Passaic County, decided July 2, 1990; Thomas L. Brusky v. Neptune Township Board of Education, Monmouth County, Commissioner decision February 1, 1990 Finally, the Board rejects Lammers, supra, as inapposite in that it deals with a vacancy claimed by a person properly certificated for the position at issue at the time of her RIF.

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

The threshold question of this matter, whether the scope of a tenured employee's rights to recall are frozen at the time of RIF or continually expandable through acquisition of subsequent additional endorsements, was recently addressed by the Commissioner in the matter of Ellen Francey v. Board of Education of the City of Salem, Salem County, decided on July 22, 1992. In that decision, which the Commissioner noted to be one of first impression, the Commissioner considered arguments similar to those raised by petitioners herein and concluded as follows:

In applying the protections of the tenure statutes, which concededly confer a preferred status upon tenured employees who lose their employment through no fault of their own, the Commissioner must also balance the Board's legitimate need to be able to rely upon the determinations of individual employee entitlement made at the time of a RIF. Within the statutory scheme, it is clear that the act of reducing a tenured staff member's employment is the distinct and self-limited event that triggers the affected party's entitlement, the evaluation of his or her individual entitlement status and the consequent assignment to either another position in the district or the preferred eligibility list; nor is it of any import that the latter is strictly speaking a creature of seniority entitlement, as the concept of a fixed list from which subsequent vacancies are to be filled is applicable to tenure entitlement as well.

In this context, the date of any employee's RIF can be the only reasonable date certain on which the employee's rights can be reckoned for future entitlement purposes. To deprive boards of this certainty by permitting riffed staff to continually revise and expand their entitlements at will would at the very least pose an unreasonable administrative burden on the district, and, of more concern, would likely lead to amassing of endorsements following RIF, reduce to chaos any attempts by a district to ascertain its legal responsibilities upon the arising of a vacancy, and unduly restrict boards in their efforts to provide a thorough and efficient education by choosing the most qualified staff for open positions. Nor do the protections of the tenure statutes require such a result, as the Commissioner and Courts have recognized that changed legal status does not confer enhanced or retroactive entitlement on one whose rights had been duly determined at the appropriate time of calculation and that boards of education need not go to extremes to accommodate employment rights when all known and reasonable entitlements have been honored at the time of RIF. Thomas S. Marshall v. Board of Education of Township of Neptune, Monmouth County, Superior Court Appellate Division, Div. Dkt. No. A-2595-85T1, unpublished, March 10, 1987; Paul Fitzpatrick et al. v. Board of Education of the Township of Weehawken, 1982 S.L.D. 1500 (App. Div.); Dorothy Godwin Davis v. Board of Education of the Township of Ewing, Mercer County, decided by the Commissioner April 29, 1985, aff'd State Board September 4, 1985 (Slip Opinion, at pp. 10-11)

Applying these holdings to the matter within, it is clear that petitioners have no entitlement to positions for which they were undisputedly not certified at the time of the Board's action to reduce their employment. Nor is it of any import that, in Petitioner Johnstone's case, the necessary certificate was acquired while petitioner was still in the Board's employ, as she neither held nor was eligible for the certificate at the time of the Board's action to reduce her employment (April 1991), which action served as the point at which her entitlement rights were set notwithstanding that the effective date of the reduction was June 30, 1991.

With regard to the Board's arguments to the effect that even when the required endorsement is duly held, a staff member must have served under it in order to claim a position by tenure right, although these arguments are rendered superfluous in the instant matter by the holdings above, the Commissioner is obliged to observe that it is now well established that tenure protection extends to all endorsements on the instructional certificate regardless of whether or not a teacher has actually served under them. Grosso, supra Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines for the reasons set forth above that petitioners have no entitlement to position(s) in the Cinnaminson School District requiring the elementary endorsement. The Petitions of Appeal in this consolidated matter are hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

PETITIONERS-APPELLANTS,	:
V.	:	STATE BOARD OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF CINNAMINSON, BURLINGTON COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT-RESPONDENT.	:

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, August 12, 1992

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, October 21, 1992

For the Petitioners-Appellants, Zazzali, Zazzali, Fagella & Nowak (Richard A. Friedman, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Stephen J. Mushinski, Esq.

The facts herein are not in dispute. Petitioner Lynn Johnstone commenced employment with the Board of Education of the Township of Cinnaminson (hereinafter "Board") in 1981 and taught Foreign Language until her position was abolished in a reduction in force ("RIF") in April 1991, effective June 30, 1991. Johnstone was issued an elementary endorsement on her instructional certificate in June 1991. Petitioner C. Gloria Heberley commenced employment with the Board in 1984 and served as a Business Education teacher until her position was abolished in a reduction in force on April 24, 1990, effective June 30, 1990. She received an elementary endorsement in July 1990. Both petitioners achieved tenure status in the district.

Oct. 5, 1991

In August 1991, the petitioners each filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education alleging that the Board had violated their tenure rights in appointing nontenured individuals to elementary teaching vacancies for the 1991-92 school year. Petitioners claimed that since they had achieved tenure under their instructional certificates and had obtained elementary endorsements thereon, their tenure rights entitled them to assignments requiring possession of elementary endorsements notwithstanding the fact that they had not acquired such endorsements until after the Board had acted to abolish their positions.

On June 10, 1992, the petitioners jointly filed another petition with the Commissioner in which they asserted similar tenure claims to vacancies for the 1992-93 school year requiring elementary endorsements.

The Commissioner granted the parties' request to consolidate the petitions claiming entitlement to vacancies in 1991-92 and to decide them on a summary basis. On August 12, 1992, the Commissioner dismissed those consolidated petitions, relying on the decision of the Acting Commissioner in Francey v. Board of Education of the City of Salem, decided by the Commissioner of Education, July 22, 1992, aff'd with modification by the State Board of Education, August 3, 1994, appeal pending (App. Div.). In a letter decision dated October 21, 1992, the Commissioner dismissed petitioners' joint petition asserting entitlement to vacancies in 1992-93 on the ground of res judicata, concluding that the underlying issue of petitioners' legal entitlement to assignments claimed under their elementary endorsements had already been addressed and determined in his decision of August 12.

Petitioners have filed the instant appeals to the State Board of Education from the August 12 and October 21, 1992 decisions of the Commissioner.

Initially, we consolidate these two appeals so as to decide them together.

After a thorough review of the record, we affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner that petitioners' tenure rights did not provide them with entitlement to elementary teaching assignments. However, in view of our modification of the Acting Commissioner's analysis in Francey, supra, we also modify the Commissioner's analysis in this case.

In Francey, a tenured teaching staff member who acquired an endorsement on her instructional certificate in elementary education two years after her position as a home economics teacher had been abolished in a RIF, alleged that she was entitled by virtue of tenure to reemployment in an elementary teaching vacancy as against non-tenured individuals. The Acting Commissioner concluded that petitioner was not entitled to reinstatement in a position for which she had not been qualified at the time of the RIF.

In applying the protections of the tenure statutes, the Acting Commissioner balanced the preferred status conferred upon tenured employees who lost their employment through no fault of their own with the district board's need to be able to rely upon determinations of individual employee entitlement made at the time of a RIF. The Acting Commissioner reasoned that the date of an employee's RIF could be the only reasonable date certain on which the employee's rights could be reckoned for future entitlement purposes. He also found that the tenure laws did not support the position of the petitioner therein, pointing out that changed legal status did not confer enhanced or retroactive entitlement on a staff member whose rights had been duly determined and that it was not necessary for district boards to go to extremes to accommodate employment rights when all known and reasonable entitlements had been honored at the time of the RIF.

We modified the Acting Commissioner's analysis. We stressed that while the rights afforded a tenured teaching staff member affected by a reduction in force were not diminished by the mere fact that the vacancy occurred while the individual was on a preferred eligibility list, rather than at the precise time of the RIF, Mirandi v. Board of Education of the Township of West Orange, decided by the State Board of Education, April 5, 1989, there was no authority in the statutory scheme to accrue additional rights in a tenured position after dismissal therefrom in a RIF. We pointed out that the rights emanating from the achievement of tenure were triggered at the time of a RIF and that, as a result, district boards were required to recognize the tenure rights of affected parties as they existed at the time a board acted to reduce its force.

Reiterating that tenure was a legislatively conferred right which was achieved only upon satisfaction of the precise statutory conditions, we explained:

> The precise conditions for the achievement of tenure rights are provided in Article 1 of the Tenure Act, "Acquisition and Effect of Tenure," particularly N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, "Tenure of teaching staff members," and 18A:28-6, "Tenure upon transfer or promotion." Article 3 of that Act, "Effect of Reduction of Force Upon Persons Under Tenure," provides for effectuation of the rights achieved under Article 1, authorizing > boards to reduce the number of their teaching staff members for reasons of economy, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, but requiring that dismissals resulting from such reductions be made on the basis of seniority. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 mandates that those staff members who are dismissed be placed on preferred eligibility lists for reemployment in order of seniority in vacancies for which they are qualified. It does not provide authorization for the acquisition of rights beyond those achieved pursuant to the specific provisions of Article 1, but, rather, establishes the mechanism for reemployment of those tenured staff members dismissed as the result of a reduction in force.

Francey, supra, slip op. at 5-6.

Petitioners in the instant case achieved tenure as the result of their service in the district in satisfaction of the precise conditions set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. The inchoate rights emanating from such status were triggered by the Board's determinations to reduce its teaching force pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and, therefore, to abolish petitioners' positions. As a result of their achievement of tenure in teaching positions, petitioners' attendant rights and protection triggered by the RIF's attached to those endorsements then upon their instructional certificates. Since they did not obtain elementary endorsements until after the Board had acted to abolish their positions, the scope of their tenure protection at the time of the RIF's did not extend to the assignments now sought. Likewise, since they were not qualified therefor by virtue of their certification, the Board could not have reassigned them during their employment in the district to assignments requiring an elementary endorsement, a limitation on the scope of protection afforded staff members by the achievement of tenure. See Capodilupo v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., decided by the State Board of Education, September 3, 1986, aff'd, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), certif den., 109 N.J. 514 (1987).

To grant the relief sought herein would be to recognize a statutory entitlement to reemployment by virtue of tenure in an assignment outside the scope of the tenure protection acquired pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In that the statutory scheme does not provide for the extension of such entitlement, we conclude that the scope of petitioners' tenured positions was determined at the time of the RIF's, when their rights were triggered, and their subsequent acquisition of elementary endorsements did not operate to enlarge the tenure rights they had achieved pursuant to the Tenure Act during, and as a result of, their employment in the district. See Francey, supra.

As in Francey, the petitioners herein obtained elementary endorsements on their instructional certificates after the Board had determined to reduce its teaching force pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 and, therefore, to abolish their positions. Consequently, the scope of their tenure protection at the time of such RIF's did not extend to elementary teaching assignments. In that the statutory scheme does not provide for reemployment by virtue of tenure in an assignment outside the scope of the tenure protection acquired pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and 18A:28-6, petitioners' subsequent acquisition of elementary endorsements did not operate to enlarge the tenure rights they had achieved in the district pursuant to the precise terms of the Tenure Act.

Nor is it of any moment that petitioner Johnstone received her elementary endorsement in June 1991, prior to the effective date of her RIF. The scope of her tenure protection was determined at the time of the RIF in April 1991, when her rights were triggered. See Francey, supra.

Consequently, while we agree with the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition in this matter, we do so for the reasons expressed herein.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP : DECISION OF HAINESPORT, BURLINGTON COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Following review of letters of complaint from defeated candidates, Commissioner determined to conduct inquiry into annual school election as to arrangement of polling places and presence of candidate in polling area.

ALJ concluded no irregularity sufficient to alter result of election occurred but Board was directed to correct certain practices for future elections.

Commissioner concurred with findings and conclusions of ALJ, noting that situations complained of did not rise to level of serious irregularity and that no evidence was presented to support claims that will of electorate was thwarted. (In re Wene) Petition was dismissed; however, Commissioner endorsed ALJ's prospective remedial directives to guard against recurrence of certain situations in future elections.

AND 111-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAINESPORT.

Janet Law, Esq., for Shirley H. Powell and others (Schlesinger, Mintz & Merovitz & Pilles, attorneys)

John A. Zohlman, Esq., on behalf of poll workers (Ferg, Barron & Gillespie, attorneys)

William Evans, complainant, pro se

Record Closed: June 10, 1992 Decided: June 26, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Pursuant to letters of complaint, one from several voters including defeated candidate Shirley H. Powell and one from defeated candidate William Evans, the Commissioner of Education determined to conduct an inquiry in the annual school election held on April 7, 1992, in the school district of the Township of Hainesport.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. An inquiry was conducted by the undersigned on June 10, 1992 in the Mount Holly Municipal Court. Nine persons were heard and one document was admitted in evidence.

Three seats for full terms of three years each were to be filled at the annual school election held on April 7, 1992. The announced results of the balloting were:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Shirley H. Powell	295	3	298
Raymond Hall	358	13	371
Carole Clark	314	14	328
John C. Bradley	333	13	346
Bill Evans	319	4	323

By letter dated April 10, 1990, candidate William Evans requested a recount of the ballots cast. The recount was conducted on April 30, 1992, at the Burlington County Board of Elections office in Mount Holly and at the Burlington County Superintendent of Elections' office in Lumberton. At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood unchanged.

Two irregularities were noted. First, there were no voting authorities enclosed in the sealed election packet. Second, 605 names appeared on the poll list, one more than the number indicated by the voting machine counters.

The Commissioner's representative determined that although there was a disparity between the number of names appearing on the poll lists (605) and the number of ballots cast (604), it appeared that one prospective voter did not cast a ballot. There was also one name on the poll list without a voting authority number recorded next to it. It appeared that the irregularity was attributable to a clerical oversight.

In addition, there were sufficient mechanical controls within the voting machine that provide for two separate voter counts which, in this instance, did not exceed the number of names appearing on the poll lists. The Commissioner's representative concluded that, while irregularities did exist in this matter, they are not of such magnitude to have caused the will of the electorate to be thwarted. The Commissioner adopted his representative's report and declared Raymond Hall, John C. Bradley and Carole Clark elected to three-year terms on the Hainesport Board of Education. The Commissioner's determination is dated May 14, 1992.

At the inquiry, two general complaints pervaded the testimony. The first was that candidate Bradley was one of the persons conducting a bake sale at the entrance to the voting room. The second was that the voting machines for the Hainesport election and referendum and the voting machine for the Rancocas Valley Regional School Board election and referendum were only some five to eight feet apart (P-1). Candidate Clark was operating the regional board machine as she has in past elections. Most witnesses objected to the fact that voters standing in line to use the machines had to pass Clark in order to reach the Hainesport machine. Candidate Clark was observed, and does not deny, speaking to persons waiting in line.

Several witnesses, including the Hainesport Board secretary testified that in prior years the machines were in the same room but at a great distance from each other. The secretary stated that after last year's vote, she was advised that the regional board poll workers could not check signature registers. She conferred with the business administrator at the regional district. She learned that a nearby district puts one local and one regional district person on each signature copy register.

This year, there were not enough workers. Three workers had to cover four signature registers. The room was set up as indicated in P-1 to compensate for the shortage of poll workers. The election ran smoothly even though lines were long at times.

The secretary also stated that candidate Clark has been an election worker for Rancocas Valley Regional three times. The witness has checked to see if this presents any problem. Inasmuch as Rancocas Valley Regional hires Clark, the witness checks with them. They have advised her that there is no problem. This year, however, Hainesport voters did have to pass Clark to get to the Hainesport voting machine. Clark did speak to many persons in the line, but the witness was unaware of any electioneering.

There was other testimony from voters and from Ms. Clark that conversation consisted entirely of exchanging pleasantries.

Ms. Clark also testified that she asked the business administrator at Rancocas Valley Regional if there were any problem with her being a poll worker for the regional election. The business administrator checked with the Board attorney and replied that there was no problem provided she "did not work the books." The witness freely conceded that she spoke to almost everyone in line.

William Evans, who failed to take a seat on the Board by five votes believed Clark's mere presence was improper. Bradley, who "ran with" Clark was also present. The witness stated that he was asked to leave the voting room by Joan S. Lynch. He was conversing with a friend and perhaps overstayed his time in the poll area. When reminded by Lynch, he left immediately. Clark and Bradley, he maintains, were in or near the polls throughout voting hours. The witness went to the Board secretary and asked why Bradley and Clark were not instructed to leave the polling area. The secretary replied that Clark's machinery responsibilities were proper. Bradley injected, "I left when I heard Lynch tell you to leave."

Evans also maintains that the lines were long because only one machine was in use. A statute provides that if greater than 500 persons voted in the prior two elections, more than one machine should be provided. Using one machine, thereby creating long lines, discouraged older voters. Clark was advantaged by standing near the machine with her name on it. The witness also stated he believes absentee ballots were forged. At this point in the inquiry I advised Mr. Evans that such a claim was not within the Commissioner's jurisdiction or mine.

By way of rebuttal, the Board secretary stated that the use of more than one machine is mandated when more than 500 voters in a voting district vote in two consecutive elections. Last year, the Board did use two machines and found the process cumbersome. The Board returned to using one machine upon her recommendation.

DETERMINATION

Elections with voting machines are conducted as far as possible in the same way as general and municipal elections. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-40. At a regular meeting at least 40 days before the election, the Board must appoint such election officers as are necessary. The officers must be chosen from the members of the district election boards comprised within the boundaries of the polling districts insofar as practicable. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-6.

Polls must be open between the hours of 5:00 and 9:00 p.m. and during additional time which the Board may designate between the hours of 7:00 a.m. and 9:00 p.m., and as much longer as is necessary to permit those present to vote. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-45.

In this case, there clearly was some confusion at the polls. It is also clear that the confusion was in great measure caused by requiring the voters, in a single line, to pass the tables containing poll lists and signature registers and then to file past the regional and local voting machines. This does not, however, rise to the level of an irregularity. Even if it were an irregularity, however, it would have had to be the producing cause of illegal votes which would not otherwise have been cast or of defeating legal votes which would have been counted but for the irregularity, and to such an extent as to change the result of the election. Alternatively, the irregularity would have to be shown to have influenced the election in some other way so as to repress a full and free expression of the popular will. In re Wene, 26 N.J. Super. 363 (Law Div. 1953).

That the arrangement of the polling place did not thwart the will of the electorate does not mean that it cannot and should not be addressed. The Hainesport Board of Education is directed to assure an adequate number of poll workers who are adequately prepared at future elections. The Board is further directed to consult with the Board of Education of the Rancocas Valley Regional School District and, if necessary, to consult the County Superintendent of Schools, to insure that both districts' voting machines are adequately staffed so that they may be physically separated as in the past.

Last, the matter of candidate Bradley's presence at a parent-teacher group bake sale immediately outside the polling area. There is no evidence in this record that the candidate engaged in improper activity. However, he cannot have failed to know that his mere presence and visibility to voters was an advantage not available to other candidates. As a Board member with many years' experience, he may be presumed to know that N.J.S.A. 18A:14-81 prohibits electioneering within the polling place or room or within a distance of 100 feet of the outside entrance to the polling place or room. John Bradley is DIRECTED, if he shall choose again to be a candidate, to refrain from the activity complained of here or any similar activity that would put him in or within 100 feet of a polling place for longer than the time ordinarily required to cast a ballot.

In consideration of the foregoing, I FIND and CONCLUDE as a result of this inquiry that no irregularity that could have changed the result of this election occurred. Accordingly, this inquiry is ADJOURNED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAINESPORT, BURLINGTON COUNTY.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. A letter of exception was timely filed by petitioners pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4; however, it gave no indication of service upon the Board and raised no new arguments for consideration herein.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ for reasons well stated by him in his initial decision. While it is clear that the logistical arrangements for the instant election should have been better and that Candidate Bradley's presence at the parent-teacher bake sale was contrary to the spirit of the law if not its letter, it is equally clear that these situations did not rise to the level of serious irregularity and that no evidence was presented to support claims of their having thwarted citizens' ability to vote or having impacted on the outcome of the election within the meaning of that standard as applied to grant of the extraordinary relief sought by petitioners. In re Wene, supra Further, the ALJ's prospective remedial directives, which are hereby fully adopted and endorsed by the Commissioner, adequately address any legitimate concerns that the situations complained of might be permitted to recur in future elections.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the instant Petition of Appeal is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Philip Feintuch, Esq., for Diane Adams
(Feintuch, Porwich & Feintuch, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 22, 1992 Decided July 7, 1992

BEFORE JAMES A. OSPENSON, ALJ:

The State-operated School District of Jersey City, Hudson County, on August 14, 1992 filed and certified to the Commissioner of the Department of Education tenure charges of incapacity and chronic and excessive absenteeism against Diane Adams, a tenured teaching staff member in its employ, which, if sustained, were sufficient to warrant her dismissal or reduction in salary, in accordance with the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. Respondent was suspended without pay. The charges were filed in the Department of Education on August 16, 1991. Respondent's answer in general denial was filed there on September 5, 1991. The Commissioner transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law on September 11, 1991, for hearing and determination as a contested case in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

On December 19, 1991, a telephone prehearing conference was held and an order entered.

At the request of counsel for the school district, hearing dates scheduled for April 1992 were adjourned. Prior to rescheduling, the parties advised the administrative law judge the matters at issue had been amicably resolved, subject to approval of the administrative law judge and the Commissioner of the Department of Education.

CONCLUSION

Based on the above, I CONCLUDE as follows:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures on the agreement, as well as the signature of the superintendent of of the school district;

2. Settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy, is in the interest of parties and public and comports with Cardonick v. Bd. of Ed. Bor. of Brooklawn, 1983 S.L.D. -- (slip op. at 2); and

3. The school district's filing and certification of tenure charges are hereby DISMISSED, being in accordance with settlement pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, subject to effectuation of its terms.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

full entitlement for any wages and/or benefits for that year. She agrees that she has no actual and/or potential claims against the District and will make no claims for any compensation of any kind and/or benefits beyond what she has already received.

5. In consideration for the District not litigating further the tenure charges filed against her, Ms. Adams agrees that if she uses, without written authorization from her appropriate supervisor, any leave time, paid or unpaid, beyond the paid sick and personal days provided under the Collective Bargaining Agreement, she shall be deemed to have resigned her position, effective the day she uses any leave time beyond the paid sick and personal days provided under the CBA.

6. Ms. Adams agrees to request and use any and all leave time, paid or unpaid, consistent with the applicable provisions of the contract. Ms. Adams agrees that if she uses any leave time, paid or unpaid, without the required authorization, she shall be deemed to have resigned her position, effective the day she takes any unauthorized leave.

7. The tenure charges certified by the State District, the suspension and all pleadings and documents related thereto shall remain part of Ms. Adams personnel file along with this settlement agreement.

8. Should Ms. Adams be deeded to have resigned under the terms of Paragraphs 5 and/or 6, such resignation shall be immediate and unconditional, with no provision for severance beyond what the Collective Bargaining Agreement might then provide.

9. The terms of this Agreement, especially Paragraphs 5 and 6 shall continue in effect for the duration of Ms. Adams employment with the State Operated School District or the Jersey City School District.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former Chairperson of Industrial Arts Department, claims right to newly created position of Department Chairperson for Careers and Occupations as he was a tenured supervisor.

ALJ granted summary decision to petitioner and ordered Board to appoint petitioner to Department Chairperson position with compensation. ALJ found petitioner held appropriate certification and met the tenure requirement so as to have acquired tenure in position of supervisor. (N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and 6)

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision, further noting that petitioner's industrial arts endorsement met Board's "area content" instructional certification requirement. (Timko State Board decision)

(Ashley & Charles, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 3, 1992 Decided: June 25, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, a former chairperson of the industrial arts department, challenges respondent's failure to appoint him to the newly-created position of chairperson of the career/occupational department as violative of his rights of tenure and seniority protected by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and -6. He seeks appointment to that position together with back pay and emoluments.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 24, 1991, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The matter was assigned to the undersigned administrative law judge (ALJ) on January 31, 1992, and was scheduled for a telephone prehearing conference on March 24, 1992. On that date, a telephone prehearing conference was held and a Prehearing Order, settling the procedures to be followed in this matter, was entered on April 3, 1992. The Prehearing Order scheduled a hearing for September 1, 1992.

On April 28, 1992, attorney for petitioner filed a Notice of Motion for Summary Decision. On May 26, 1992, respondent filed a brief in opposition thereto together with a certification of Dr. Maxine J. Pijeaux. Attorney for petitioner filed a responding letter memorandum on June 3, 1992, whereupon the record was closed and the matter was submitted to the undersigned ALJ for decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For purposes of deciding this motion, the following facts are not disputed. Petitioner is an employee of respondent's school district and was initially employed in 1961 as a classroom teacher. Beginning with the 1983-1984 school term, petitioner served as department chairperson for industrial arts. A position description established the duties and requirements for this position (Exhibit A), which required a supervisor's certificate.

Petitioner continued to serve as department chairperson until July 24, 1991, when respondent adopted a new organization structure. Petitioner's former position of department chairperson for industrial arts was combined with business under a new position called department chairperson for careers and occupations. A position description for this new position was established (Exhibit B).

Petitioner applied for the new position, and he was interviewed on September 5, 1991. However, on September 10, 1991, Ms. Bernice Woods-Brown was selected to fill the position because she held teaching certificates in cooperative education and business and she had extensive experience in both fields at the secondary level. (Certification of Dr. Pijeaux.) Ms. Brown has never held a position in respondent's school district which required a supervisor's certificate, although she held a principal/supervisory certificate as of June 8, 1986.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Tenure is a legislative status, not acquired in any specific assignment, but in the "positions" enumerated in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. This statute provides in relevant part that teaching staff members may acquire tenure in the positions enumerated in the statute and in such other positions which "require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the Board of Examiners. . . ."

In this case, petitioner held a certificate as supervisor when he served as a department chairperson from the 1983-84 school term until July 24, 1991. Thus, based on his years of service in a supervisory position, petitioner has met the tenure requirement so as to have acquired tenure in the position of supervisor.

Notwithstanding the fact that petitioner has acquired tenure as a supervisor, respondent appointed a nontenured teaching staff member, Ms. Brown, to the position of department chairperson in charge of the department of careers and occupations. Petitioner asserts that since Ms. Brown has never served as a department chairperson or in any other supervisory capacity, she does not have tenure as a supervisor, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and N.J.S.A. 18A:28-6.

Consequently, petitioner contends that as compared to the nontenured individual currently in the position of department chairperson for careers and occupations, he has a greater entitlement to be appointed to the position. Petitioner relies upon Capodilupo v. West Orange Board of Education, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987); Bednar v. Westwood Board of Education, 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987); Grossman v. Board of Education of Ramsey, (N.J. App. Div., A-3270-88T1, May 17, 1990) (unreported); Schienholz v. Ewing Township Board of Education, (N.J. App. Div., A-2905-89T3, Nov. 19, 1990) (unreported); Herbert v. Board of Education of the Township of Middletown, (N.J. App. Div., A-318-90T1, May 22, 1991) (unreported).

In his brief in opposition to petitioner's motion for summary decision, attorney for respondent argues that when respondent determined that petitioner should not be appointed to the newly-created position, it determined that petitioner did not possess the requisite qualifications to support such an appointment. Moreover, respondent determined that the person appointed to the position was more qualified to fill the vacancy.

In support of its position in this matter, respondent refers to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18:28-9, which authorizes a board to reorganize its district by reducing the number of teaching staff members whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy, or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district, or for other good cause.

In addition, respondent relies upon language found in Capodilupo, supra, where the court stated that > the Board's obligation to consider tenure in a [reduction in force] could be balanced by "sound educationally based reasons for its decision to retain a non-tenured teacher. . . ."

> Id. at 515-16.

Attorney for petitioner responded to this argument in his letter memorandum dated May 29, 1992, by referring to Herbert, supra, and Schienholz, supra. I have reviewed these cases as well as the Capodilupo case, and I agree with petitioner's position.

In Capodilupo, supra, the court upheld the decision of the State Board of Education that a tenured teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is entitled to preference in a RIF as against a nontenured applicant with the same certification. The full text of the language used by the court, id. at 515-516, is as follows:

> We recognize that, in upholding the Board's decision to retain Savage, the State Board also made a finding that the Board's obligation to consider tenure in a RIF could be balanced by "sound educationally based reasons for its decision to retain a non-tenured teacher." Savage's retention, however, is not the subject of a cross-appeal and the Board advanced no "educationally based reasons" to retain Reilly, beyond his > experience as an elementary teacher. Accordingly, we find it both unnecessary and inappropriate to address the merits of this portion of the State Board's opinion.

From the above language, it is clear that the court in Capodilupo never reached the issue as to whether the State Board of Education was legally correct in its finding that a local board's obligation to consider tenure in a RIF could be balanced by sound educationally-based reasons for its decision to retain a nontenured teacher. The subsequent decisions by the Appellate Division, albeit unreported, clearly indicate that the Appellate Division has rejected such a balancing. Thus, in the Schienholz case, supra, the Appellate Division indicated:

> We can only remind one, however, that the Legislature, in its wisdom, has chosen to protect such a [tenure] right in omnibus fashion with the passage of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 and we are not privileged to change that basic decision, even if we were inclined to do so.
> Id. at 6.

In the Herbert case, the Appellate Division quotes from the Schienholz case and confirms the results.

In this case, the certification of Dr. Pijeaux indicated that the nontenured applicant was selected to fill the vacancy because she had certifications in cooperative education, business, and supervision, and because she had extensive experience in both fields at the secondary level. Dr. Pijeaux indicated that the newly-created position is geared toward preparing students for a professional career as opposed to a vocational career, and that the nontenured applicant was better able to relate educational and occupational objectives necessary for entry into the workplace, in addition to a vast array of programs and activities which Ms. Brown devised in order to accomplish that goal.

Dr. Pijeaux also states that Ms. Brown has experience in both the public and private sector and that she demonstrated extensive knowledge with respect to business-systems procedures and methods and that the implementation of her knowledge was extensive, innovative, and contemporary. On the other hand, Dr. Pijeaux indicated that the petitioner demonstrated little if any knowledge concerning many fields and was found not to possess any of the qualifications necessary to assist the district in achieving its goals.

Despite the foregoing, petitioner is certified and has tenure in a supervisory position, and the nontenured appointee does not. As was indicated in the Schienholz and the Herbert case, the problem is created not by the tenure statute, but with the implementing regulations concerning the certifications. If a certification existed for the position of department chairperson of careers and occupations, and if petitioner held a certification as a department chairperson for industrial arts, we would not be involved in this controversy. However, that is not the case.

Based upon the undisputed facts in this matter, I FIND that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact in dispute. I FIND that based upon the undisputed facts, petitioner has tenure as a supervisor and is entitled to appointment to the position of chairperson of the department of career and occupations over a nontenured supervisor. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's motion for summary decision is GRANTED and that respondent shall forthwith appoint petitioner as chairperson of the career/occupational department. It is further ORDERED that petitioner is entitled to back pay and emoluments effective as of September 10, 1991.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ORANGE, ESSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the analysis of the ALJ and concludes that the Board's desire to appoint a candidate of different background and experience cannot serve to defeat petitioner's tenure right to a position for which he is properly certificated. Further review in light of the State Board's July 1, 1992 decision in Michael Timko and John J. Mikush v. Board of Education of the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional School District, Somerset County, confirms this conclusion, as the job description for the newly created position of Department Chairperson for Careers and Occupations calls for supervisory and "area content" certification and exhibits no basis upon which the endorsement in industrial arts could be rejected as an inappropriate area content certification. Robert Herbert v. Board of Education of the Township of Middletown, Monmouth County, State Board decision of August 1,

1990, affirmed N.J. Superior Court Appellate Division, May 22, 1991, Dkt. No. A-318-90T1

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law, directing the Board to appoint petitioner forthwith to the position of Department Chairperson for Careers and Occupations, together with back pay and emoluments from September 10, 1991, is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein, along with the additional reasons set forth above.

Record Closed: June 24, 1992 Decided: July 7, 1992

BEFORE ELINOR R. REINER, ALJ

On January 22, 1991, petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education requesting that the Commissioner determine that the attendance patterns policy of the Elizabeth Board of Education adopted on or about September 14, 1989, is void. It further asks that the Commissioner direct that any letters of conference reports placed in teaching staff personnel files as an outgrowth of the policy be removed.

On February 13, 1991, respondent filed an answer alleging, in essence, that its actions were proper and requesting that the petition be dismissed with prejudice. On February 21, 1991, this matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The case was assigned to the undersigned judge on April 15, 1991, and a telephone prehearing conference was scheduled for May 16, 1991.

On that date, the issues were isolated and the parties indicated that no hearing was necessary. A stipulation of facts was to be filed on June 28, 1991, and cross-motions for summary decision filed on July 26, 1991, to be answered on or before August 23, 1991. By letter dated August 13, 1991, counsel for respondent requested an extension of the time limitations set out in the prehearing order. Thereafter, a conference call was held and the case was scheduled for hearing on January 2, 1992.

On December 30, 1991, the parties advised that a settlement had been reached, and the hearing was adjourned. The settlement was subject to ratification by the parties. The parties have prepared the attached settlement agreement and amendment, indicating the terms of settlement. Upon request of the undersigned, the parties advised by letter dated June 23, 1992 that all the terms of the agreement have been met.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms, and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be and are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

Record Closed: June 22, 1992 Decided: July 14, 1992

BEFORE ELINOR R. REINER, ALJ:

On or about November 20, 1989, the Board of Education of Palisades Park certified charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent, George Fasciano, Superintendent of Schools. On December 28, 1989, respondent filed an answer denying the charges and requesting that the tenure charges be dismissed. On January 5, 1990, the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

A telephone prehearing conference was scheduled for February 27, 1990, before Judge Ken Springer, and was rescheduled to March 13, 1990, before Judge Ward Young. A prehearing conference was held with Judge Young, and a hearing was scheduled for August 1, 2, 6, 7, 8, 9, 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1990, at the OAL. The matter was reassigned to the undersigned judge on June 21, 1990, and was scheduled for hearings at the OAL on January 8, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, 22, and 23, 1991.

As a result of settlement conferences held between the parties, a settlement was reached on January 8, 1991, and the hearing dates were adjourned. By letter dated January 14, 1991, Mr. Schwartz, attorney for Nicholas Rotonda, confirmed that the Board of Education had adopted a resolution agreeing to the settlement. As a result of a request by the undersigned judge, a signed settlement agreement was filed on June 22, 1992. The parties have prepared a settlement agreement, which is attached and fully incorporated herein, indicating the terms of settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms, and I FIND that:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

AGENCY REF. NO. 347-11/90

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF GEORGE FASCIANO, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF PALISADES PARK, BERGEN COUNTY

WHEREAS , the charges do not allege moral turpitude, corporal punishment or incompetency, but involve one incident in which the incoming Board believed the Superintendent should have used his discretion and statutory authority in a different way;

WHEREAS, the aforementioned charge did not result in a suspension of the Superintendent;

WHEREAS, the parties have reviewed the Commissioner's decision in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frank Cardonick, School District of the Borough of Brooklawn, Camden County.

WHEREAS, the parties hereto recognize that if the charges were to proceed to a hearing, it would undermine the effective administration of the school district and would cause to be incurred substantial costs at taxpayer expense;

WHEREAS, the Superintendent and the Board agree to continue the work that they have begun that has resulted in a better Board/Superintendent relationship in the past eighteen months;

WHEREAS, the parties to the above matter have determined that it is in the best interest of the respective parties and the taxpayers of the Borough of Palisades Park to voluntarily settle all the issues which are, or could have been involved in the above-captioned matter;

WHEREAS, the parties hereto have been represented by independent legal counsel of their respective choice;

WHEREAS, none of the parties hereto makes any admissions as to any liability or wrongful conduct; and

WHEREAS, the parties hereto desire to reduce their voluntary consent, settlement and stipulation of dismissal with prejudice to writing and to submit the agreement to the Commissioner of Education for review and adoption as to the final order and decision in this matter;

NOW, LET IT BE KNOWN that the parties hereto do hereby voluntarily agree as follows:

1. Petitioner will withdraw its tenure charges against respondent filed on November 15, 1989 with the Commissioner of Education.

2. Nicholas Rotonda will withdraw his federal action entitled Rotonda v. Fasciano and Zuckerman, 892777AMW, U.S. District Court, District of New Jersey, and defendant Janette Zuckerman will withdraw her counterclaim against Rotonda. All third party actions against the Board of Education will be dismissed.

3. The Palisades Park Board of Education agrees to submit all reasonable legal costs to its insurance carrier for reimbursement. All parties will fully cooperate in obtaining said insurance coverage. In the event, however, they are not covered the Board agrees to reimburse the Superintendent for all reasonable expenses incurred in any legal action which has arisen out of the same facts and circumstances as the instant matter.

4. The Superintendent agrees that he will not bring any action in any court of law against the Board with respect to the facts and circumstances surrounding the instant matter.

5. The Superintendent believes that his actions at the time of the suspension were in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6, though there may have been some error in judgment as to its implementation. If his actions caused anyone unnecessary hardship, he expressly states his understanding and empathy for the aggrieved parties.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

WHEREAS, the parties hereto wish to amicably resolve the dispute between them and terminate all litigation, it is hereby stipulated and agreed, as follows:

1. In return for compliance with this Agreement, petitioner hereby withdraws his application for varsity head football coach for the 1992-1993 season.

2. The Board agrees to pay petitioner the sum of $6,261.00 representing the stipend that would have been paid to the petitioner had he been named varsity head football coach for the 1991-1992 season, 1991 summer weight coach and 1991-1992 winter weight coach. Petitioner waives interest on said sum.

3. Inasmuch as the petitioner is the only district employee who has applied for the position of 1992 summer weight coach, 1992-1993 winter weight coach, and 1993 spring weight coach, the Board agrees to appoint petitioner to said positions at its June 17, 1992, regular school board meeting.

AUGUST 14 1992

IN THE MATTER OF THE SPECIAL :
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH OF : DECISION
LAUREL SPRINGS, CAMDEN COUNTY. :

The announced results of the balloting for one member of the Board of Education for a full term of three years at the special school election held on July 7, 1992, in the School District of the Borough of Laurel Springs, Camden County, were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Veronica Mulhearn	173	7	180
Michael J. Caccia	165	18	183

Pursuant to a letter request from Veronica Mulhearn dated July 14, 1992, the Commissioner of Education directed an authorized representative from the Office of the Camden County Superintendent of Schools to conduct a recount of the paper ballots cast. The recount of paper ballots was conducted on July 29, 1992 at the Camden County Board of Elections, Pennsauken, New Jersey, as was a recount of the absentee ballots by the Superintendent of Elections.

At the conclusion of the recount, the tally stood as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEE	TOTAL
Veronica Mulhearn	173	8	181
Michael J. Caccia	166	17	183

Although there were some minor changes on recount, the name of the winning candidate remained the same as derived from the balloting of July 7, 1992. Therefore, it is recommended by the Commissioner's representative that the results as announced at the conclusion of the election remain unaltered.

This concludes the report of the Commissioner's representative.

* * * *

The Commissioner has reviewed the report of his authorized representative and adopts it as his own.

Accordingly, the Commissioner finds and determines that Michael J. Caccia has been elected to a full term of three years on the Board of Education of the Borough of Laurel Springs, Camden County.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SCOTCH PLAINS-FANWOOD SCHOOL DISTRICT, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, high school teacher with 37 years of experience in district, alleged Board improperly withheld her increment on basis of an incident involving herself and a student (K.W.), which resulted in filing of assault charges that were later withdrawn.

ALJ found Board properly withheld increment. Although Board failed in past to take any action against petitioner for problems in dealing with students, an April 1989 incident with student K.W. was the "straw that broke the camel's back." ALJ affirmed the increment withholding.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision, emphasizing that the withholding was not for the single incident discussed (which occurred in the prior school year) but for petitioner's ongoing inflexibility, insensitivity and lack of rapport with students as noted in her 1989-90 evaluations. Petition was dismissed.

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for petitioner Dr. Joan Byorek (Balk, Oxfeld, Mandell & Cohen, attorneys)

Casper R. Boehm, Jr., Esq., for respondent Board of Education, Scotch Plains-Fanwood School District, Union County

Record Closed: June 12, 1992 Decided: June 30, 1992

BEFORE WALTER F. SULLIVAN, ALJ:

This matter concerns the withholding of a salary increment for Dr. Joan Byorek (Byorek) for the 1990-1991 school year. Byorek, a high school teacher with 37 years' experience in the district, had enjoyed a previously unblemished record with respect to salary increments before the Board withheld this increment for reasons in the general area of insensitivity and lack of compassion towards students. The Board acknowledged that one incident involving a student of Byorek's (K.W.) was the "straw that broke the camel's back." Byorek appealed and, after a period of inactivity during which Byorek exhausted administrative remedies in another state agency, the matter was heard on April 29, 1992. Briefs were submitted and the record closed on June 12, 1992.

Kopera v. The Board of Education of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960) sets forth in both general and particular terms the scope of review pertinent to the Commissioner's responsibilities with respect to the reviewing of increment determinations. The court noted:

> As the Attorney General's brief says, "Under this view of the substantive law, the Commissioner could not properly redetermine for himself whether petitioner had in fact been unsatisfactory as a teacher; that issue would be irrelevant as a matter of law. The only question open for review by the Commissioner would be whether the Board had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion." We hold that the quoted statement accurately defines the review required here. 60 N.J. Super. 288, at 295, 296.

As indicated in the statement of the case, the Board acknowledged that one incident involving the student K.W. led to the determination to withhold Byorek's increment. I will discuss this incident first and then turn to the supportive evidence which the Board adduced to conclude that the withholding was justified.

The exact details of the Byorek's J.W. incident are not susceptible to total resolution. K.W., for example, did not testify in this matter. On the other hand, the broad outline of the incident is ascertainable and was the object of testimony by Byorek together with that of Mr. Travlos Assistant Principal at the time. The incident gave rise to a complaint and (for all practical matters) a counter complaint between Byorek and K.W. in the Scotch Plains Municipal Court and an expulsion hearing for K.W., following which K.W. was returned to student status.

The incident arose in the school library or multi-media room on an afternoon when Byorek was assigned essentially monitoring duties. Byorek testified that she saw two pairs of feet occupying the ground under the same library carousel, which she understood to be contrary to school policy. She went to the students, who turned out to be K.W. and her boyfriend, I.D., and admonished them to study properly. Byorek testified that at this point K.W. approached her and pushed her with both of K.W.'s arms on both of Byorek's shoulders. Byorek then stated that she telephoned the vice principal for discipline, who asked her to write up a report of the incident. At this time (and for the subsequent 45 minutes) K.W. was engaged in conversation with teacher's aide Jennings.

The record does not show the nature of that conversation, but it suffices to observe that no one fled or acted with or proffered further physical contact.

Byorek testified that she then telephoned Dr. Riegel, the school principal, to seek help. Dr. Riegel was unreachable at the moment and his secretary stated that he would call back. He did not do so and Byorek testified that she telephoned the Scotch Plains police department to seek help. The Scotch Plains police officer arrived in about ten or fifteen minutes and offered her the opportunity to fill out a complaint.

Byorek did not submit the complaint immediately, but instead waited five days for K.W. to apologize, an event which has never occurred. With this, Byorek filed charges against K.W. and the case proceeded into the Scotch Plains municipal court.

Testifying on behalf of the Board, Travlos indicated his firm belief that K.W. had done little and had been bated into it by Byorek, who had telephoned her home to object to K.W.'s boyfriend. Byorek indicated that he learned this from K.W.'s mother who was offended by Byorek's call. There is no competent evidence of the mother's words but Travlos indicated that he saw a pattern of harassment of Byorek upon K.W.

Byorek testified that after she filed charges, she was the subject of constant pressure from different people to withdraw them. Indeed, it is her theory of the withholding that she was denied the increment because she had refused to withdraw the charges. (As a matter of law it is not quite clear to me how a complainant has the capacity to withdraw charges, but apparently everyone in the school system thought they did.) Byorek indicated that the nature of the pressure arose from varied sources, such as board members, Dr. Riegel, the principal, Dr. Travlos and others who urged her to do the same course of action. I would not characterize this as pressure, unless there is some thing proposed as a sanction or and act of harassment.

Byorek offers two observations that addressed the Board's position on the K.W. incident. In the first place, Byorek cites Pierce v. Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp., 84 N.J. 58 (1980) that an employee has a valid cause of action when an employer takes an adverse action contrary to public policy. Byorek argues that she was assaulted by K.W. and that criminal behavior is not to be sanctioned and that a complaint arising from criminal behavior are not to be punished.

Be this as it may, there is no criminal behavior on the part of K.W. that can be shown through a judgment of any court of competent jurisdiction in the state of New Jersey. The record here reveals that both K.W. and Byorek withdrew their complaints and that the withdrawal was approved by the municipal court. Hence, just as I declined to determine that K.W. was in the right since that issue was not heard in full before me, I decline to determine that K.W. was in the wrong.

For practical purposes, the Board of Education, which had a legitimate interest in reviewing K.W.'s status, determined her to be without blame and Byorek's testimony indicated that she withheld filing a criminal complaint in the hope and expectation that K.W. would apologize.

Byorek is free to take the means she might to gather her apology, but upon the dismissal of the criminal complain in the only court in which it was filed, the allegations of criminal activity evaporate.

Byorek's second contention against the withholding arises from Borrelli v. Rutherford Board of Education (State Board of Education, September 26, 1983), which is cited for the proposition that a 1990-91 withholding must be based on activities taking place within that year. Byorek is correct that the K.W. incident occurred in the prior school year. Byorek is further correct in noting that the Board's witnesses described the K.W. incident as the straw that broke the camel's back.

Be that as it may, I do not read the camel's back metaphor to indicate causation. Riegel testified that the Board had seen alot of negativity in Byorek over the decades and had not done a great deal about it. Certainly the Board never withheld an increment. Read in this context, Riegel's comment addresses the question of why the Board, having failed to take action over the decades, chose a different path at this time. Borrelli is cited accurately in the unfairness of reaching back in time for incidents upon which to impose a sanction, but I find Riegel's testimony to be candid as a statement of why the Board acted in a way different from its past history. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that while the K.W. incident might have been either a motive or a crystallization of what the Board did not find agreeable in Byorek's performance, it was not a sanction for the performance.

As to the performance itself, Byorek gave evidence of how she was a harsh disciplinarian. Neither my views nor the views of the Kopera supra. suggests that teacher personnel policy on these matters is within the range of review. What is within the range of review is whether or not the Board activity withstood the criticism of Byorek. I FIND that it did since it is one thing it be harsh and another thing to be self defeating in demanding typing excellence standards of perfection that have no counterpart in the world outside Byorek's classroom, that is to say letter perfect typing.

As a result, I CONCLUDE that Byorek's salary was properly withheld and the decision of the Board is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board acted within the scope of its lawful discretion in withholding petitioner's increment. While the April 1989 incident involving K.W. may have been a catalyst for the district's determination to finally take action in view of petitioner's long history of problems with students, it is clear that the actual basis for the 1990-91 withholding was not that incident itself but rather petitioner's ongoing "insensitivity, lack of concern for the well-being ofstudents and inflexibility" (Letter of Board intent to discuss petitioner's employment, Exhibit P-4) and her continuing "lack of respect, compassion and understanding of students, and a lack of proper rapport with students" (Notice of Board action to withhold increment, Exhibit P-5) as discussed in her 1989-90 interim and summary evaluations of teaching performance (Exhibits R-1 and R-2).

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed by the ALJ as further explicated above, the Commissioner affirms the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the instant Petition of Appeal.

The Cities of Linwood and Somers Point are sending districts to the Mainland Regional School District. Tom Oliver was an unsuccessful write-in candidate for membership on the Regional Board from Somers Point in the annual school election held on April 7, 1992. Edward Michael was an unsuccessful candidate for membership on the Regional Board from Linwood in the same election. Both candidates submitted a written request to the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) requesting an inquiry into alleged violations of the statutes and regulations governing school elections. The matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 29, 1992, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq., N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq. , N.J.A.C. 18A:14-63.12 and N.J.A.C. 6:24-6.1 et. seq. A plenary hearing was scheduled for May 26, 1992, and postponed at the request of the candidates. The matters were convened on June 3, 1992, and the inquiry was completed.

Somers Point

Judith Wolf, a Somers Point resident and voter, testified that on April 7, 1992, she voted at the Jordan Road School and handed out Tom Oliver literature. She said when she was in the polling place she observed Les Lindenbaum, later identified as the president of the Mainland Regional School Board, standing with Melvin Clark, a candidate for the School Board and eventual winner of the seat from Somers Point. She said that Les Lindenbaum, apropos of nothing, said in a loud voice: "Who called you a nigger?" Clark responded: "Mr. Oliver." She identified Clark as an African-American (she said "black"). She observed that several persons expressed shock. She recalled that earlier Clark asked her if she knew that Oliver had called him a nigger. She also recalled that some persons present said that they "did not know that Oliver was a racist."

Rita Montagno voted in Somers Point at the New York Avenue School. She was handing out literature there for Tom Oliver from 2:00 p.m. until 9:00 p.m. She observed that Les Lindenbaum was a challenger for Clark and that he greeted voters within 15 feet of the polling place.

Montagno also reports that at 8:55 p.m. she peered through the school windows and observed a person named Schulties standing behind a voting machine and making notes. She concluded that he was taking a tally from the machine; she sought to enter, and was ordered out of the premises by election officials because the polls were still open. On cross examination Montagno acknowledged that she did not hear anything Lindenbaum may have said to any voter.

Joanne (Jody) Youngblood is a Linwood resident and voter. She assisted Tom Oliver by writing and printing his campaign literature. She also distributed literature for Oliver at the Jordan Road School in Somers Point. She said that Mel Clark approached her, examined her literature for Oliver and complimented her on its quality. Immediately thereafter, she reports, he moved to within less than 100 feet of the polling place to approach a voter with the literature and tell her that Oliver and the people who wrote his literature are saying: "vote for the white man, don't vote for the nigger." Youngblood reports that she immediately confronted him and the woman voter with the news that she personally wrote the literature and neither she nor Oliver ever used the expression "nigger."

Tom Oliver testified that he did not "run a racial campaign." He said Clark approached him and accused him of telling voters: "don't vote for the nigger -- vote for the white boy." He said to Clark: "You must have started that." He said at least fifteen people confronted him with the statement and others reported to him that Les Lindenbaum and a person named Ludeke were saying it in the polling place. He was also concerned that some voters wrote his name in the Somers Point election rather than the Mainland Election because the two polling booths were not identified. He also reported that when one supporter exited the voting booth, Lindenbaum told him, according to the voter, "I hope you forgot how to write." Oliver also said that Mrs. Ludeke was a judge of the election, and that she allowed her husband to roam about the polling place at will, electioneering.

Linwood

Alfred Arena is the Superintendent at the Mainland Regional School District. He received a tip that two employees of the district were coming into the school before the election to photocopy campaign literature. Arena and a private detective videotaped the culprits and seized the literature. The literature extolled the virtues of Jack Helmer, a retired teacher and Linwood candidate to the Regional Board. The literature bore the legend "Authorized for Publication By Committee to Elect Jack Helmer, 503 Davis Avenue, Linwood, NJ 08221." (There was testimony from candidate Edward Michael that his copy was deposited in his mailbox without the legend). The culprits were disciplined by the Board.

When Youngblood testified concerning the Somers Point election, she also testified to events concerning the Linwood election. She had also written and prepared Michael's literature and was active in his campaign. When she learned that the Mainland School employees had used school facilities and equipment on behalf of Jack Helmer, Michaels opponent, she made the information public. On Tuesday, April 1st, 1992, she received a telephone call warning her that if she "went public with the information, there would be repercussions to her children." She panicked and called an FBI agent who gave her erroneous information about tracking telephone calls. She received a second call on the next night. On the third and following night, she received the telephonic message "we have your child." She felt frightened and intimidated.

Edward Michaels testified that Youngblood told him that his children were also threatened in the telephone calls made to Youngblood. He reported the telephone threats to the Prosecutor's Office. He testified, as did Youngblood, concerning the Helmer literature and opined that it did not meet the requirements of the law. He also reported his confrontation with Helmer concerning the veracity of statements contained in Helmer's literature.

The uncontested testimony of the unsuccessful candidates was that Oliver lost by approximately 100 votes and Michaels lost by approximately 50 votes.

STATUTE AND RULE

N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12 provides for an inquiry "into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections, to determine if such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election."

The regulation implementing the statute is N.J.A.C. 6:24-6.5 It requires the Commissioner to order appropriate relief if irregularities occurred in the election "sufficient to influence the outcome."

In order therefore, for the Commissioner to order appropriate relief, the unsuccessful candidates must meet two tests. (1) Was there a violation of the statutes governing school board elections (an irregularity); and (2) was it sufficient to affect or influence the outcome of the election?

The facts of this case satisfy the first part only. The violations of statute, and the irregularities, did not affect the outcome of the election.

There was credible testimony that "electioneering" occurred within 100 feet of a polling place or room contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-81. This occurred when Clark criticized his opponent in the polling room by alleging that he, Clark, had been called a nigger by Oliver. Youngblood immediately confronted Clark, and denied the allegations.

There is also credible evidence that some flyers advertising candidate Helmer were released to the public without the name and address of the person causing it to be printed or the name of the person bearing the cost for such printing on the material contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97.

Youngblood testified that she had been threatened on the phone with harm to her children and to candidate Michael's children if she "went public" with the information concerning the flyers for Helmer which were photocopied on the school's equipment.

While the threats were a serious violation of law and ought to be vigorously pursued by the County Prosecutor, it did not appear as though it influenced either Michael's or Youngblood's vote. No one else was threatened.

While electioneering inside polling rooms is a violation of the statutes governing school board elections, it does not necessarily follow that the outcome of school elections is affected thereby.

Citizens who are interested enough to vote in school elections do not vote for the last name they hear on their way into the booths, nor are they intimidated by electioneering. They may be offended by it, but it is rare, if ever, that electioneering inside a polling room affects the outcome of an election. It is mere disorderly conduct and recognized as such by the legislature which provided a proper penalty enforceable in the municipal court.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that statutes governing school elections was violated in the Somers Point and Linwood elections for the Mainland Regional School Board.

It is however, not sufficient that violations occur in order to set aside an election. The will of the people must be thwarted. That is the ultimate test of whether the outcome of an election was affected by the irregularities. In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Township of Pittsgrove, Salem County, 1976 S.L.D. 585 at 589.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that violations which occurred in the annual school elections of 1992, in Somers Point and Linwood for the Mainland Regional School District DID NOT AFFECT the outcome of that election.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE MAINLAND REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, CONSTITUENT DISTRICTS OF SOMERS POINT AND LINWOOD, ATLANTIC COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioners pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. A reply to these by various school employees and Board Member Lindenbaum was untimely filed and consequently is not considered herein.

In their jointly submitted exceptions, petitioners argue that the ALJ erred in having found incumbent Helmer's campaign materials to be in violation of statute and then failing to provide any remedy for those violations. In particular, they argue that since these materials were submitted to Linwood voters in mass mailings, they of necessity must be found to have so tainted the campaign results that the conduct of a new election is required. In a separate letter included with the joint exceptions, Petitioner Michael further argues that, since his literature would have been the only material received by Linwood voters had Helmer's improperly produced and labeled literature not been disseminated, it is not unreasonable to suppose that he might have gotten sufficient additional votes to win the election if circumstances had been different.

Upon careful review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that violations of election law were proven to have occurred in this matter, but no demonstration was made that they affected the outcome of the election within the meaning of that standard as long interpreted by the courts. With regard to the proven violations, as properly pointed out by the ALJ, the Legislature has specified both the means of prosecuting such violations and the appropriate penalties to be imposed upon violators; both statute and case law preclude the Commissioner from usurping that function for himself. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-72, 18A:14-104; In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Township of Old Bridge, Middlesex County, State Board decision July 6, 1988.*

With regard to petitioners' claims that the violations demonstrated herein necessarily tainted the results of the election, the Commissioner emphasizes that in order for the extraordinary remedy of a new election to be granted, petitioners must prove that the violations at issue either produced illegal votes which would otherwise not have been cast, or defeated legal votes which would have been counted but for the violation, and which would, if counted, have changed the outcome of the election. In re Wene, 26 N.J.Super. 363 (Law Div. 1953), aff'd 13 N.J. 185 (1953) Mere speculation that results might have been different if conditions had been different will not suffice to meet this standard. In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the School District of Riverside Township, Burlington County, 1968 S.L.D. 73

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein and the instant matter referred to the Atlantic County Prosecutor for action as deemed appropriate regarding the aforementioned violations of election law.

SCHOOL BUDGET ELECTION HELD IN	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
THE MORRIS SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	DECISION
MORRIS COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Board sought to have school budget election declared null and void by the Commissioner and a new election ordered due to use of inaccurate net valuation figure used in tax impact projection provided to taxpayers.

Commissioner concluded he was unable to grant extraordinary relief sought by Morris Township Board of Education. The result of an election is unimpeachable where acts and omissions on part of local election officials are void of evidence of malconduct, fraud or corruption. (Chesilhurst School Elect) Further, there was no proof of violation of statutorily prescribed election procedures for school elections and no proof that will of the people was thwarted (Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District)

Commissioner concluded there was no provision in law upon which the Commissioner could grant a new election under factual circumstances presented herein. Petition was dismissed.

AUGUST 18, 1992

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL	:
SCHOOL BUDGET ELECTION HELD IN	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
THE MORRIS SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	DECISION
MORRIS COUNTY.	:

For Petitioner, Fredric J. Sirota, Esq., (Wiley, Malehorn and Sirota)

For Morris Township, John M. Mills, III, Esq. (Mills, Hock, Dangler & Mills)

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education through the filing of a Petition of Appeal by the Board of Education of the Morris School District (Board) on May 13, 1992. The Board seeks to have the April 7, 1992 school budget election declared null and void by the Commissioner and a new election ordered. Such relief is sought because subsequent to the election it was learned that the tax impact projection provided to the taxpayers by the Board prior to the election was based on an inaccurate net valuation figure for the Town of Morristown.

Upon review of the petition, the Board was notified that (1) the petition must be served on the governing bodies of the Township of Morris and the Town of Morristown informing them of their right to participate in the proceedings and (2) that the matter would be decided by the Commissioner as a petition for declaratory judgment. The Board was also informed that it was required to submit a memorandum of law or letter brief addressing the basis upon which the Commissioner has the statutory authority to order a new election under the facts presented in this matter. The governing bodies were accorded the opportunity to submit replies to same.

On May 15, 1992, the Deputy Town Clerk of the Town of Morristown, Matthew Stechauner, submitted three certified copies of Resolution No. R-68-92 of the governing body supporting the action of the Board in seeking a new election.

On June 1, 1992, the Board submitted its brief and affidavits. On June 1, 1992, Robert L. Mast, Fourth Ward Councilman of the Town of Morristown, submitted correspondence in support of the Commissioner authorizing a new election. On June 12, 1992, John M. Mills, III, Esq., entered his appearance on behalf of the Township of Morris and reserved the right of the Township of Morris to take a position with respect to the Board's petition, although at the time it chose not to do so.

The basis upon which a new election is sought is set forth below.

> 1. On April 7, 1992, an annual school election was held wherein the voters of the Morris School District voted upon a school budget pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:22-33.
>
> 2. Prior to the school budget election, the Board of Education of Morris School District held public hearings on the school budget pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:22-32. During these hearings and up until the time of the election on April 7, 1992, the Board provided the voters with certain information regarding the tax consequences of the proposed budget for each of the Township of Morris and the Town of Morristown.
>
> 3. Specifically, the Board informed the voters of Morris School District that, if the school budget was approved, the result would be that taxpayers of the Town of Morristown would receive an estimated tax decrease in the amount of 3.5 cents per hundred of assessed valuation. The voters were advised simultaneously that adoption of the budget would create an identified increase in the Township of Morris taxes.

4. On April 7, 1992, each category of the budget was approved; the majority of voters in both the Town of Morristown and Township of Morris voting in favor of the budget as follows:

Town of Morristown

A.	Current expenses:	359	Yes
		237	No
B.	Capital outlay:	343	Yes
		244	No

Township of Morris

A.	Current expenses:	792	Yes
		613	No
B.	Capital outlay:	765	Yes
		613	No

5. Subsequent to ten (10) days after the school election on April 7, 1992, the Board was made aware by its Deputy Superintendent that the information provided voters with respect to the affect of the proposed budget on the Town of Morristown taxes had been incorrect because an inaccurate net valuation taxable figure for the Town of Morristown had been utilized in the projection. The taxpayers of Morristown received an estimated tax increase of 4.7 cents per hundred of assessed valuation rather than the estimated decrease. The projection of the effect on the Morris Township taxpayers by the budget was confirmed to have been accurate.

6. It did not become known to the Board of Education that an erroneous net valuation taxable figure had been used when calculating the projected impact of the proposed school budget upon the taxpayers of the Town of Morristown until substantially after the school budget had been passed on April 7, 1992. Once the Board learned of the error, it immediately informed the public.

7. At a minimum, the process used by the District to obtain the net valuation taxable figure relating to the Town of Morristown was seriously flawed and the District feels itself responsible for the error and the unintentionally incorrect information offered the voters of the Town of Morristown. The figures relating to the Morris Township net valuation taxable were accurate and Morris Township taxpayers were informed of the correct estimated tax impact.

8. The Morris School District, prior to the election, informed taxpayers that those residing in the Town of Morristown would receive a tax decrease of 3.5 cents per hundred of assessed valuation, resulting in a $35.00 tax decrease per $100,000.00 of assessment. However, because of the unintentional use of the incorrect figure for net valuation taxable, the taxpayers of the Town of Morristown will in fact be affected by an estimated tax increase of 4.7 cents per hundred thousand dollars of assessed valuation. The total discrepancy of the impact upon the taxpayers of the Town of Morristown is that they will receive an estimated tax increase of 4.7 cents per hundred of assessed valuation resulting in a tax increase in the amount of $47.00 per hundred thousand dollars of assessed valuation rather than a $35.00 reduction. Thus, the projection was off by an approximate total of 8.2 cents per hundred.

9. Although the time to challenge the election has expired, the Board of Education of Morris School District requests that the Commissioner consider the impact that this unintentional error will have upon the voters and the election process and, based thereon, declare the April 7, 1992 budget election null and void and order a new budget election.

10. The Board of Education of Morris School District is, by terms of the New Jersey Constitution, required to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students. The Board's adopted budget, it is felt, meets those needs. The 1992-93 budget included tightly controlled spending as well as a reduction in the number of employees. This was the budget that was voted upon by the voters of Morris School District and passed. Nonetheless, voters of the Town of Morristown had been advised that they would be receiving a tax decrease if they approved the budget - a statement which was, albeit unintentionally, untrue.

11. The Board of Education of Morris School District believes that it is imperative that it maintain its credibility with the voters not only > with respect to the 1992-93 budget but for future budget elections and other requests of the voters. It is important that the voters maintain their faith in the credibility of the Board of Education so that the Board may operate in the best possible manner to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students. The Board believes a new election would secure the voters' faith in the election process and assure the credibility of the Board and would therefore be in the best interest of its students.

As to the basis upon which the Commissioner is authorized to order a new election under the facts of this matter, the Board argues, inter alia, that the New Jersey Supreme Court has recognized the broad authority of the Commissioner of Education. Jenkins et al. v. Tp. of Morris School District and Bd. of Ed., 58 N.J. 483 (1971) Such "powers [include] the 'supervision of all schools of the state receiving support or aid from state appropriations' and the enforcement of 'all rules prescribed by the State Board.'" (Id. at 494, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:4-23)

The Board also points to the fact that the Commissioner has jurisdiction over school elections as evidenced by N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12 which provided that the Commissioner "shall inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections, to determine if such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election." It likewise points out that the Commissioner has the authority to "order such relief as is appropriate" if he finds an error on the recount of the election vote which altered the results of the election. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.13

Further, the Commissioner has not only been granted jurisdiction by the Legislature over controversies and disputes arising out of the school election process, but he is also vested with the power to decide budget disputes between a board of education and governing body as to whether the budget fulfills the requirements of a thorough and efficient education. Such authority includes the power to direct appropriate corrective action by the governing body or to fix the budget on his own within the limits of the budget originally proposed by the board of education. Bd. of Ed. of East Brunswick Tp. v. Tp. Council, E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94 (1966)

The Board acknowledges that there is no specific statutory authority which empowers the Commissioner to declare an election null and void and order a new election because of the unintentional dissemination of incorrect information. However, it urges that the Commissioner does have such authority under the broad powers vested in him by the legislature. In support of this it cites In the Matter of the Application of the Bd. of Ed. of Upper Freehold, Monmouth County, 1978 S.L.D. 300, wherein the Commissioner authorized the issuance of bonds even though there was no statute which authorized him to do so. It cites, inter alia, the following ruling of the Commissioner:

> There exist, however, no directives of the courts and no specific statutory delegation of power which directs the Commissioner to review and certify to a county board of taxation any or all of a supplemental budget appropriation proposed by a board at a special school election and defeated by the voters. Nevertheless, the courts have held in certain instances that, despite a lack of specific statutory provision, the Commissioner's authority as delegated by the Legislature was sufficiently broad to require that he act in compelling circumstances to effectuate the constitutional and statutory mandates as applied to the public schools. In the Matter of the Application of the Upper Freehold Regional Board of Ed., Monmouth County, 1978 S.L.D. 300, 312.(Petitioner's Brief, at p. 8)

The Board further argues that a new election is necessary for it to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students as set forth below.

> In order for the Board of Education of the Morris School District to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students, it must be able to carry out its functions. It is important that the credibility of the election process be maintained so the Board can perform its duties. If the voters do not have faith in the credibility of the Board of Education and the election process, the Board will be unable to operate with respect to future budget elections and other requests of the voters.
>
> Without the voters' faith in the election process and the Board's credibility, the Board will be unable to operate in the best possible manner to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students. The Commissioner has the authority to exercise his broad powers and declare the election null and void and order a new election so as to enable the Morris School District to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students.
>
> As a result of the flaw in the process used by the District to obtain the net valuation taxable figure relating to the Town of Morristown, a cloud lingers over the election results. This cloud could prove to be damaging for future budget elections which are so vital to the provision of a thorough and efficient education. A new election would secure the voters' faith in the election process and remove the cloud from the school budget election held on April 7, 1992. Further, it would restore the credibility of the Board and therefore, be in the best interest of the students of the Morris School District. The Commissioner has jurisdiction to inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections and may order such relief as he deems appropriate. Since the Legislature has seen fit to delegate this responsibility to the Commissioner, it was their intent to delegate to the Commissioner supervision of school budget elections. Therefore, because compelling circumstances exist, the Commissioner should exercise his broad authorities and discretion and exercise jurisdiction of this controversy arising out of the 1992 school budget election held in the Morris School District on April 7, 1992.
>
> (Id., at pp. 9-10)

The Mayor and Council of Morristown, as indicated in the resolution set forth in pertinent part below, urge that the Commissioner grant a new election.

> WHEREAS, the Board of Education have authorized a petition to John Ellis, the Commissioner of Education, to permit a new election for submission of the School District budget to the district voters based upon correct information being provided to the voters relative to the impact of the school budget on the Morristown tax rate; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Mayor and Council of the Town of Morristown believe that the voters relied upon the incorrect tax rate information presented by the School District and that the voters are entitled to have an accurate statement of the impact of the School District budget upon the Morristown tax rate prior to their vote to approve or disapprove the School District budget; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Mayor and Council support the action taken by the Morris School District to petition for said new budget election; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Mayor and Council believe that it is in the best interest of the Morristown community for the Commissioner to approve the School Board's petition and to order a new budget election; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Mayor and Council of Morristown further believe that democratic institutions of our society are disserved when the electorate is misinformed by public officials conducting an election of material facts relating to the proposition voted upon; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Mayor and Council further believe that the credibility of the Morris School District will be greatly enhanced by the approval of the petition seeking a new School District budget election;
>
> NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the Town Council of the Town of Morristown that the New Jersey Commissioner of Education, John Ellis, is urged to grant the Morris School District petition seeking a new School District Budget election for the fiscal year commencing July 1, 1992.

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

The Commissioner has undertaken a thorough examination of the Board's factual recitation in this matter. He has likewise carefully considered all of the Board's arguments and the information submitted by the governing bodies in light of the laws with respect to school elections set forth in state statute, regulation and legal decisions.

Upon such review, the Commissioner is in full agreement with the Board that he is vested with broad powers with respect to the provision of a thorough and efficient system of public education in New Jersey, including the power to order whatever relief he deems warranted with respect to school elections if there are irregularities in the school election procedures. That authority flows specifically from N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12 which reads:

> Upon written request within 5 days of the announcement of the result of an election by any defeated candidate, or, in the case of a question, proposition or referendum, upon petition of 10 qualified voters at any school election, the Commissioner of Education or his authorized representative shall inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections, to determine if such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election.

It must be emphasized, however, that in deciding election matters it is the clear intent of the law that elections must be given effect whenever possible because the Courts of New Jersey have held that even gross irregularities, when not amounting to fraud, do not vitiate an election. Love v. Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 35 N.J.L. 269 (Sup. Ct. 1871); Stone et al. v. Wyckoff et al., 102 N.J. Super. 26 (App. Div. 1968)

Hence, the voiding of a school election is an extraordinary relief which can be ordered only under the most stringent of circumstances as set forth by the Courts of New Jersey in In re Wene, 26 N.J. Super. 363 (Law Div. 1953), aff'd 13 N.J. 185 (1953) which reads in pertinent part:

> The rule in our State is firmly established that if any irregularity or any other deviation from the election law by the election officials is to be adjudged to have the effect of invalidating a vote or an election, where the statute does not so expressly provide, there must be a connection between such irregularity and the result of the election; that is, the irregularity must be the producing cause of illegal votes which would not have been cast or of defeating legal votes which would have been counted, had the irregularity not taken place, and to an extent to challenge or change the result of the election; or it must be shown that the irregularity in some other way influenced the election so as to have repressed a full and free expression of the popular will.
> (26 N.J. Super. at 383)

Thus, absent malconduct or fraud, a concluded election will not be overturned "unless in all human likelihood the irregularity has interfered with the full and free expression of the popular will, and has thus influenced the result of the election." In re Hackensack Recall Election, 31 N.J. 592, 595 (1960) Wene, supra 13 N.J. at 196

Further, as set forth by the Administrative Law Judge in In re Annual School Election Held in the District of Chesilhurst, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 213, 216, aff'd State Board July 1, 1992.

> It is only when the deviations from statutory procedure are so gross as to produce illegal votes which would not have been cast or to defeat legal votes which would have been counted, so as to make impossible a determination of the will of the people, that an election will be set aside. In re Garfield, 1977 S.L.D. 771, 775-776.
> Acts and omissions to act on the part of local election officers may render them liable to > indictment. Yet, absent malconduct, fraud or corruption, the election result is unimpeachable. Wene v. Meyner, supra at 196. Irregularities pleaded must be sufficient, if established by proof, to warrant the relief sought. Proofs must operate per se to disqualify a nominee or alter the results of the election. Id. at 197-198.

Given the above, the threshold issue to be decided herein is whether or not there has been violation of statutorily prescribed election procedures for school elections. If shown to exist, it then becomes necessary to ascertain if there has been a demonstration that the will of the people was thwarted. Moreover, as set forth in In the Matter of the Annual School Election Held in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, Monmouth County, decided October 20, 1987, a determination as to whether petitioner has borne its burden of proof "is a case by case determination on evidence which leads a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion, Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Company, 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Guess or conjecture is insufficient, and the evidence must demonstrate that the offered hypothesis is a rational inference permitting a conclusion grounded in a preponderance of probabilities according to common experience. Joseph v. [Passaic] Hospital Ass'n, 26, 557 (1958)" (at p. 22)

As to the first inquiry, it becomes apparent that there has been no violation of statutorily prescribed election procedures for school elections alleged in this matter. Although tax impact is an important piece of information provided to the voters by a board of education in explaining its proposed school budget to the educational community of the school district, the fact remains that the projected impact of a proposed school budget on the local tax levy is not required to be on an election ballot. Nor is such information required to be part of the mandatory school budget information which must be advertised prior to the school election. N.J.S.A. 18A:22-8 and 11

At the annual school election, the electorate is asked to vote either in favor of or against the amount of the proposed budget which the district board of education believes is necessary to provide a thorough and efficient education to its students, a budget which has to be approved by the Commissioner through the county superintendent as sufficient for such purpose (N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-27, N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.2(a)10). Thus, tax impact information cannot be properly characterized as a statutorily prescribed election procedure.

Of even more importance, perhaps, is the fact that no allegation has been made that the erroneous tax impact information was the result of willful malconduct or fraud. On the contrary, it is undisputed that it was not learned until after the election that district personnel had relied upon erroneous net valuation information received to calculate tax impact and that such error was unintentional.

There is likewise no allegation of malconduct or fraud on the part of the unknown individual who provided the erroneous information. What appears to have occurred in the instant matter is that school personnel relied upon the information without further verification or update. This is unfortunate in that the misinformation resulted in the electorate of the Town of Morristown voting on a proposed budget with the belief that their taxes would decrease $35.00 per $100,000 assessed valuation when in fact there was an increase of $47.00 per $100,000 of such valuation. As regretable as this may be, it does not, however, alter the finding and determination that no illegality or irregularity in statutorily prescribed election procedures has occurred under the facts of this matter.

To reiterate Chesilhurst, supra, as quoted above, the result of an election is unimpeachable where acts and omissions on the part of local election officials are void of evidence of malconduct, fraud or corruption. No less can be said of acts, omissions or misinformation by the Board or school personnel absent a demonstration of malconduct, fraud, corruption or other willful action that affects the outcome of the school budget election.

Accordingly, for the reasons set forth above, the Commissioner is unable to grant the extraordinary relief sought by the Morris Township Board of Education, namely the voiding of the April 7, 1992 annual school budget election and the conduct of a special election. This determination is reached only after the most thorough examination of the issues and the Board's grave concern that the ability to provide a thorough and efficient education in the future would be jeopardized because of a lack of faith on the part of the electorate next year. It is hoped, however, that the electorate of the Morris School District will cast their vote for the 1993-94 school budget with the knowledge that the Board of Education of the Morris School District has done everything in its power to forthrightly acknowledge the unfortunate error that occurred with respect to the 1992-93 budget question and to attempt to correct for that error by seeking the conduct of a new election on the school budget. The Board's deep sense of responsibility and sincere regret over the mistaken information provided to the voters are commendable. There is, however, simply no provision in law upon which the Commissioner can grant a new election under the factual circumstances presented herein.

Consequently, the petition is hereby dismissed.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL :
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH : DECISION OF WALDWICK, BERGEN COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning qualified voters sought inquiry into alleged violations of school election laws.

Initial decision found irregularities (mechanical difficulties and trouble with casting affirmative vote for current expense portion of budget) did not affect outcome of election. ALJ further found that superintendent's action in attempting to identify for purposes of the within inquiry parents who may not have been able to vote did not constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4. ALJ affirmed results of annual school election and dismissed petition.

Commissioner adopted findings and conclusions of ALJ, emphasizing, however, that boards and their agents should avoid actions which may violate the spirit of school election laws.

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3006-92

AGENCY DKT. NO. 126-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH OF WALDWICK, BERGEN COUNTY

Aleta V. Adler, Anne McCarthy, and Robert C. Taschler, petitioners, appearing pro se

Rodney T. Hara, Esq., for respondent school district (Fogarty and Hara, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 19, 1992 Decided: July 10, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

By petition signed by 12 qualified voters at the annual school election held on April 7, 1992 (Exhibit C-1), and by a letter signed by petitioner Robert C. Taschler, a qualified voter at the annual school election held on April 7, 1992 (Exhibit C-2), filed with the Commissioner of Education on April 15, 1992, petitioners requested that the Commissioner of Education inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections to determine if such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election. The petition and letter were filed on April 15, 1992, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 29, 1992, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

Since the Commissioner of Education requested that the matter be scheduled as expeditiously as possible, the matter was scheduled for hearing on June 4, 1992. On that date, a hearing was held and concluded and the record was closed.

On June 9, 1992, following the close of the record, the undersigned administrative law judge (ALJ) received a facsimile transmission from the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Exhibit C-3). This requested that I consider the allegations set forth in a letter from Ms. Shirley Feldman, a citizen of Waldwick, to the Commissioner of Education (Exhibit C-4) in the inquiry being conducted in this matter. Accordingly, the record was reopened for the limited purpose of considering these allegations. For reasons indicated in this Initial Decision, no additional hearing was scheduled regarding these allegations. Accordingly, the record closed on June 19, 1992.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The essential facts in this matter are not disputed. Accordingly, the facts set forth herein are determined to be findings of fact.

At the commencement of these proceedings, it was noted that Robert C. Taschler did not execute the petition filed with the Commissioner of Education (Exhibit C-1). However, Mr. Taschler submitted a letter to the Commissioner (Exhibit C-2) forwarding the petition and alleging facts which supported the request for an inquiry. Accordingly, it was determined that Robert C. Taschler is also to be designated as a petitioner in these proceedings.

Three of the petitioners who signed the petition and letter attended these proceedings.

The first petitioner to testify was Aleta Adler, a registered voter who resides in the Borough of Waldwick. The essence of Mrs. Adler's testimony is that on April 7, 1992, she arrived at the designated polling place at the Traphagen School to vote in the school election held on that date. She explained, by referring to a sample ballot (Exhibit R-1), that there was no candidate for membership to the Board of Education for an unexpired one-year term. When she attempted to write in the name of a candidate for this position in the personal-choice column, the write in window in the column would not open.

After consulting with election workers, she was advised to insert the name of her write-in choice in the personal-choice space located immediately to the left of the current expense question. When Ms. Adler's slid open this window and wrote in the name of her personal choice at this location, she found that the current expense voting levers would not move. Ms. Adler notified the election worker of this, and the worker attempted to resolve the problem. In the meantime, Mrs. Adler was in the voting booth in excess of 15 minutes.

Ms. Adler testified that when she first went into the voting booth, there were four or five people behind her. While she was in the voting booth, the line of people waiting to vote grew until there were approximately 15 to 20 people. Many of the people in line were yelling to her that her two minutes were up, and were telling her to vote and get out. However, she refused to leave until efforts were made to try to resolve the problem.

Eventually, because she had a committment to pick up her daughter from school and transport her to a previously scheduled appointment, she was forced to record her vote and leave. However, she testified that she was prevented from voting on the current expense portion of the budget, for which she would have voted in the affirmative. Ms. Adler indicated that she did not see any of the prospective voters in the line leaving; however, because she was not paying close attention, they could have left without her noticing. Ms. Adler also signed a certification as to her inability to cast her vote concerning the current expense portion of the budget (Exhibit R-7).

Anne R. McCarthy, a registered voter and resident of the Borough of Waldwick, also testified in this matter. She voted at the annual school election held on April 7, 1992, by going to her polling place at the Crescent School. She arrived at approximately 2:00 p.m., and she was the second or third person to vote. She indicated that she attempted to write in the name of an individual for membership on the Board of Education for the one-year unexpired term, but she was unable to do so. She then called to the election judge, Mrs. Washofer, indicating that she was having a problem moving the personal-choice window.

Mrs. Washofer began to look through instruction material. In addition, the election clerk who was collecting voting authority certificates from voters came into the voting booth and attempted to assist Mrs. McCarthy by moving slots. In the meantime, Mrs. Washofer contacted the Election Board in Hackensack and spoke to Mrs. Feldner, Superintendent of Elections. Eventually, Mrs. McCarthy attempted to push the current expense lever down but was unable to move it.

Mrs. McCarthy testified that she was in the voting booth for over one-half hour. During this period, the line was getting quite long. A great deal of confusion occurred and she was quite vocal in her assertion that she intended to cast her ballot. As a result, the other voters were quite aware of the problem. During this time, there were two lines of voters with 12 to 15 people in each line. She personally observed three or four other prospective voters come in, look at the line, and leave. In addition, she is aware that one or two voting authority certificates were given back to election workers by people who indicated they were leaving and would come back. Eventually, she was required to leave the voting booth after waiting one-half hour because she had a prior commitment. As a result, Mrs. McCarthy was unable to vote on the current expense portion of the budget and was unable to cast a write-in vote for board membership for the one-year unexpired term.

Robert C. Taschler testified that he is a resident of the Borough of Waldwick and is a registered voter therein. He indicated that on April 7, 1992, he was an unpaid alternate challenger at the Traphagen School polling place. He arrived at the school at 1:55 p.m. to commence his duties as a challenger. He testified that he had no authority to participate, but simply observed what was going on.

Mr. Taschler testified that the third or fourth voter who attempted to vote had a problem casting a write-in ballot. He indicated that the election workers were unsure as to what to do. They indicated that they had a manual as to procedures to be followed but that they were unfamiliar with the voting machines. As a result, a call was made to the school business administrator, Mr. Mallen, for instructions. In the meantime, the election workers continued to permit voters to vote. When voters advised the election workers of a problem with write in votes, the election workers advised the voters to open up the window of the next slot down in the personal-choice column and write in the name of their choice. It was his understanding that using this procedure would lock out the current expense levers. As a result, the voting continued, but there was much confusion and tension and there was no clear order. Because of delays in voting, he observed a number of people leave, and he also indicated that some people surrendered their voting authority tickets.

Eventually, a voting machine mechanic, escorted by a Sheriff's officer, showed up at the polling place. He worked on the machines while prospective voters stood by waiting to vote. The voting mechanic advised the election workers that the machines had not been set up properly. By 4:30 p.m., all of the machines had been fixed. Mr. Taschler indicated that he remained at the Traphagen School polling place until approximately 6:15 p.m.

Mr. Taschler testified that the election workers were all well-meaning and that they encouraged voters to vote. However, their training was meaningless because they did not know how to deal with the mechanical problems being experienced with the voting machines.

Mr. Taschler indicated that while he observed the problems with the machines, the voting lines grew to 20 to 25 voters. He was aware that some of the voters left and that some of them indicated that they would return. However, quite a few prospective voters left the polling place. He personally observed four people who directly told him that they were leaving. He observed another four or five people leaving. He indicated that there could have been others who failed to vote because of the mix-up.

Mr. Taschler then testified that he went to vote at his voting district's polling place at the Waldwick High School, Greenberg Center. When he arrived there, everything was fine. He had no problem with a write-in vote or a vote with regard to the current expense portion of the school budget. However, he spoke to the election workers there, and they indicated that there had been problems, buth that they were corrected by an election machine mechanic.

Mr. Taschler testified that quite a few people contacted him after the election and advised him that the above-described problem lasted approximately two hours on election day. Mr. Taschler testified that all 12 petitioners who signed the petition in this matter had difficulty casting an affirmative vote on the current expense budget in the school election. Others who had problems because they were unable to cast their write-in votes were not permitted to sign the petition since the petition was narrowly written to deal only with the current expense budget vote.

Paul E. Cottrell, a resident of and registered voter in the Borough of Waldwick, also testified. Mr. Cottrell is the president of the School District Board of Education. He testified that on April 7, 1992, he went to vote in the annual school election at the Waldwick High School, Greenberg Center. He indicated that he arrived at 2:20 p.m., signed in, and was given a voting authority ticket. He was accompanied by his wife, who voted first. While voting, his wife indicated that she had a problem with a write-in vote but that she was able to cast her vote on the current expense portion of the budget. However, she was unable to cast a write-in vote for the one-year unexpired term on the school board.

When Mr. Cottrell entered the voting booth and attempted to vote, he could only vote on the top two of the three candidates for membership to the Board of Education for three-year terms. Neither the third lever nor any other lever on the machine was able to be moved. When he advised the election worker of this, he was told to try again. When the levers were unable to be moved, the election judge was contacted. She then contacted the County Election Board and arranged to have an election machine mechanic repair the machine. Mr. Cottrell waited in the voting machine for the repair to be made.

Mr. Cottrell testified that when he first entered the machine, there were three or four people in line. The lines grew to approximately 20 people at about 2:50 p.m. At that point, the election officials stopped taking voters and stopped issuing voting authority tickets. Some of the voters who had been waiting in line surrendered their voting authority tickets, with certain of them indicating that they would return later.

At 3:10 p.m., the election judge received authority to allow District 6 voters to use the District 2 voting machine. Mr. Cottrell testified that he personally observed that some voters had trouble with the personal-choice column of the District 2 voting machine.

Mr. Cottrell indicated that an election machine mechanic arrived at approximately 3:20 p.m., looked at the machine, and made various adjustments. Approximately 10 minutes later, the mechanic advised the election judge that it would be necessary to clear Mr. Cottrell's vote. He was then permitted to obtain a new voting slip. At 3:50 p.m., Mr. Cottrell was finally able to vote and make the selections that he wished. He was able to cast a write-in vote as well as to vote on the current expense portion of the budget.

Mr. Cottrell testified that he was subsequently made aware of problems concerning the column personal-choice with other machines, because he was a challenger at the Traphagen School polling place commencing at 4:00 p.m. When he arrived there, the election workers advised him of problems with the machines. The workers had advised voters to use another column for any write-in votes.

Mr. Cottrell testified that he had been involved in campaigning for the write-in candidate, Mrs. Phyllis Bieger. Mrs. Bieger received 201 write-in votes for the unexpired one-year term. However, in a prior election, she had received over 1,100 votes. Mr. Cottrell also indicated that he observed at least 12 people leave the polling place, and he felt that this had an impact on the election.

James Mallen, school business administrator and board secretary, testified for respondent. He indicated he is responsible for receiving nominating petitions. As a result of the receipt of nominating petitions, three candidates were included in the school election of April 7, 1992, for membership on the Board of Education for the full three-year term. However, the position for membership on the Board of Education for an unexpired one-year term was not the subject of a nominating petition; therefore, no nominee appeared on the ballot (Exhibit R-1).

Mr. Mallen indicated that he was aware of a campaign by incumbent trustee Phyllis Bieger to be elected as a write-in candidate for the one-year unexpired term. Because of this, he wrote to Mr. Bill Branagh, chief custodian of voting machines, on March 3, 1992 (Exhibit R-2). At that time, he advised Mr. Branagh that he expected a large number of write-in ballots and requested that Mr. Branagh insure that the voting machines would be able to accommodate a large number of such votes. Mr. Mallen also advised the election workers that he expected a large number of write-in ballots and recommended that they attend an election worker's seminar to be conducted by the Bergen County Board of Elections (Exhibit R-3).

Mr. Mallen indicated that on the day of the election, voters called his office complaining about voting problems. Mrs. Anne McCarthy called his office and he spoke to her concerning the problems she encountered. Mr. Mallen then contacted Superintendent of Elections Eileen C. Feldner. Specifically, Mrs. McCarthy had inquired as to whether she would be permitted to vote again since she was unable to vote on the current expense proposition. However, Mrs. Feldner advised that voters could not be permitted to vote twice.

Mr. Mallen then contacted Mr. Branagh, who apologized profusely and advised Mr. Mallen that a mechanic had been dispatched since election workers had also called him. Mr. Mallen indicated that he later contacted Mr. Branagh again and confirmed that Mr. Branagh had received his letter of March 3, 1992. Mr. Branagh advised Mr. Mallen that he specifically instructed his technicians to make sure that the voting machines had been set up to accommodate write-in votes, and he was profusely apologetic for the error in the voting machines. Mr. Mallen indicated that Ms. Branagh did not dispute that there was an error in the setup of the voting machines.

Mr. Mallen testified that if the personal-choice slide is opened in order to permit a voter to write in the name of a candidate, the voting levers on the same line are locked and unable to be voted. He indicated that this is to prevent someone from writing in the name of a candidate, not pulling the lever for that write-in vote, and then voting for another candidate whose name appears on the ballot.

Mr. Mallen testified that as a result of the election, Phyllis Bieger was elected to the school board as the write-in candidate for the one-year unexpired term. However, the current expense portion of the budget was defeated by a vote of 896 yes, 928 no. It should be noted that the total number of votes counted on the current expense question was 1,824, and the total number of votes counted in the election was 1,826 (Exhibit R-4).

Mr. Mallen indicated that there was a recount conducted on April 27, 1992, which confirmed the initial election results. At that time, Mr. Mallen met with the head mechanic, who admitted that the machines had been set up improperly and that there had been human error, on the part of the voting machine technicians. Mr. Mallen indicated that Mr. Branagh and Michael Gass, the mechanic who worked on the machines, were supposed to be present at the hearing of this matter, but they did not appear.

Superintendent of Schools Dr. Patrick Piegari also testified. He indicated that he is involved with voter turnout and voter registration, and he maintained that it is important to get the parents of school children out to vote. As a result, he generated school activities and programs designed to have parents visit the schools in order that they would be able to vote on the day of the election.

Dr. Piegari testified that he became aware of voting problems and that these were very upsetting to him because of his efforts. He communicated with individual parents after the election and they told him that the timing of the problems could not have been worse. It was during the voting hours when parents would pick up their children and would vote that the machine problems occurred. He indicated that he is aware that the machine malfunction impacted on the ability of many voters to vote.

Dr. Piegari testified as to efforts he made to contact the parents of school children to determine the impact of the voting machine malfunction on their vote. He indicated that on May 27, 1992, he sent a letter addressed to the parents of school children (Exhibit C-5) inquiring whether they had experienced problems when voting. The letter was sent home with students, and he acknowledged that this is not a reliable way of getting information. As a result, he received from 14 individuals certifications concerning the impact of the malfunction on their ability to vote.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

This proceeding was commenced pursuant to the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12, which provides that upon written request within five days of the announcement of the result of a question, proposition, or referendum, upon petition of 10 qualified voters, the Commissioner of Education or his authorized representative shall inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections, to determine that such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election.

Elections with voting machines are conducted as far as possible in the same manner as general and municipal elections. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-40. Polls must be open between the hours of 5:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m. and during any additional time which the Board may designate between 7:00 a.m. and 9:00 p.m. and as long as it is necessary to permit those present to cast ballots. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-45. A board member, or the absence of a board member, the judge of the election, or, in the absence of both, the secretary of the board, declares the polls open and voting continues without recess until the time the polls close. N.J.S.A. 18A:14-46.

School elections may not be set aside in the absence of conclusive proof that irregularities constituted so major a factor as to nullify the expression of the voters. In re Wene, 26 N.J. Super. 363, 383 (Law Div. 1953); Sharrock v. Keansburg, 15 N.J. Super. 11, 19-20 (App. Div. 1951). Elections are to be given effect whenever possible, and irregularities and deviations from election laws by election officials provide insufficient ground for voiding an election if the will of the people has been fairly exposed and determined and has not been thwarted. In re Livingston, 83 N.J. Super. 98, 107 (App. Div. 1964).

Petitioners have the burden of establishing that the will of the people has been suppressed. Mere speculation that improved conditions would have afforded a different result is not enough. In the Matter of the Annual School Election held in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, Monmouth County, 1987 S.L.D. 254, October 20, 1987. The real intent of the voters must be established and such expression of intent must be read in light of the surrounding circumstances proven by reliable evidence. In re Fifteen Registered Voters, County of Sussex, 129 N.J. Super. 296, 300-301 (App. Div. 1974). Petitioners must show this by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). It is not necessary to show how the rejected voters would have voted, but merely that the number of votes rejected was sufficient to have altered the outcome. See, Application of Murphy, 101 N.J. Super. 163 (App. Div. 1968), certif. den. 52 N.J. 172 (1968).

Voters discouraged by long lines are not rejected under N.J.S.A. 19:29-1(e). "A voter who fails to vote because instant access to a polling booth is not provided cannot claim 'rejection' under the election contest statute." In re 1984 Maple Shade General Election, 203 N.J. Super. 563, 590 (Law Div. 1984). The term "rejection" for the purposes of the election statutes has been defined "to include any situation in which qualified voters are denied access to the polls including a denial because of shutdown of a voting machine." Magura v. Smith, 131 N.J. Super. 395, 399 (Law Div. 1974). The Appellate Division has clearly stated that where "a voter must wait in line to vote" and where he "gives up his suffrage right because of inpatience or inconvenience," such circumstances "could not serve as a ground for setting aside an election on the basis that a legal vote was rejected." In re Petition of Hartnett, 163 N.J. Super. 257, 268-69 (App. Div. 1978). Such a vote is not considered "rejected" but is, rather, the result of the voter's voluntary decision. Id. at 269. Thus, petitioners cannot rely upon the mechanical difficulties resulting in voters allegedly leaving the polling place to contest the election.

It is now necessary to examine the evidence produced in this matter to determine if it is sufficient to change the election results. During the hearing of this matter, only two voters, Adler and McCarthy, testified that they were prevented from voting on the current expense question. Thirteen other individuals submitted certifications in lieu of affidavits (Exhibit R-7) asserting that they were unable to cast a vote in favor of the current expense portion of the budget. It is noted that Ms. Adler testified in this matter and signed a certification. In addition, eight other individuals signed the petition which gave rise to these proceedings. It is noted that four signatories to the petition also signed certifications. Thus, a total of 23 individuals have come forward asserting that as a result of their casting a write-in ballot, they were unable to vote in the affirmative on the current expense portion of the budget question. Setting aside the question of whether the certifications of 13 of the voters and the execution of the petition by eight of the voters is legally competent evidence upon which to base a determination that their votes were not accepted, it is clear that this number of votes is not sufficient to have altered the outcome of the school election on the current expense budget question. The margin of defeat on this question was 32 votes.

All of the witnesses indicated that they believed that there were other voters whose voting attempts were thwarted. However, to attempt to determine from this testimony the impact on the election would be speculation. It may have been that certain of these other voters who did not come forward attempted a write-in vote and were unable to cast a negative vote on the current expense portion of the budget. Others may have been able to cast an affirmative vote on the current expense question, but may have been thwarted in attempting to write in the name of a candidate. Or, it may be that few, if any, voters were thwarted in such a manner. Such speculation serves no useful purpose and should not form the basis for deciding to void an election.

ALLEGATIONS OF VIOLATION OF N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4

As indicated above, I have been requested to consider in the within inquiry the allegations set forth in the letter from Ms. Shirley Feldman dated June 1, 1992 (Exhibit C-4). In her letter, Ms. Feldman alleges that Waldwick School Superintendent Dr. Patrick

Piegari, by letter dated May 27, 1992 (Exhibit C-5), actively and selectively solicited the parents of the children in Waldwick's schools to make formal complaint of either an inability to vote because of inconvenience or an inability to properly record their votes because of machine malfunction.

Ms. Feldman further asserts that the parent who informed her of Dr. Piegari's actions was outraged and felt intimidated, afraid that her child would be regarded as uncooperative if the parent did not respond positively to the letter. The parent additionally felt that because challengers were present at the polling places, the superintendent knows which parents did not vote, and many of the parents would feel obliged to provide the superintendent with the cooperation requested in his letter.

In her letter, Ms. Feldman further asserts that Dr. Piegari's actions violated N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4 by requesting school children to carry the certification forms back to school, and by stating in the letter that school personnel will witness the forms. Finally, she alleges that the use of public funds and publicly paid school personnel to print and mail the letter of May 27, 1992, and its attachments constitutes another violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4

N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4 provides as follows:

> No literature which in any manner and in any part thereof promotes, favors or opposes the candidacy of any candidate for election at any annual school election, or the adoption of any bond issue, proposal, or any public question submitted at any general, municipal or school election shall be given to any public school pupil in any public school building or on the grounds thereof for the purpose of having such pupil take the same to his home or distribute it to any person outside of said building or grounds, nor shall any pupil be requested or directed by any official or employee of the public schools to engage in any activity which tends to promote, favor or oppose any such candidacy, bond issue, proposal, or public question. The board of education of each school district shall prescribe necessary rules to carry out the purposes of this section.

Ms. Feldman also refers to Citizens to Protect Public Funds v. Bd. of Ed. of Parsippany-Troy Hills Tp., 13 N.J. 172 (1953) as authority for her assertion that the use of school funds to espouse an adversarial position on a public matter is forbidden.

Ms. Feldman's letter raises a number of questions regarding the propriety of Dr. Piegari's actions in this matter. However, not a single one of Ms. Feldman's assertions involves an allegation that the school election held on April 7, 1992, violated statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections. All of her allegations involve conduct on the part of Dr. Piegari which occurred approximately seven weeks after the school election. In addition, Dr. Piegari admitted to engaging in the conduct alleged by Ms. Feldman. It is for these reasons that no additional hearing was scheduled regarding these allegations.

The request of the Department of Education that I consider these allegations requires some analysis of their import. The above-quoted language of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4 prohibits the use of public school pupils for the purpose of distributing literature or engaging in any activity which promotes, favors, or opposes any candidate or proposal at any election. However, the clear implication of this language is that this activity is prohibited before an election. In the present case, Dr. Piegari's actions were undertaken after the election for the purpose of determining whether potential voters were discouraged or prevented from exercising their right to vote. On its face, this does not appear to be a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4. In fact, his purpose appears to be laudable since he was attempting to identify voters who may have been thwarted in their attempts to vote for a candidate or question according to their choice.

On the other hand, Dr. Piegari's efforts appear to have been directed solely to those voters who were more likely to favor the approval of the current expense portion of the school budget, i.e., parents of school children. In addition, the language of the certifications prepared by Dr. Piegari would permit them to be executed only by those voters who favored the school budget. Such an inquiry should be directed at all voters, and not only at those who favor one position or the other. However, even such a one-sided inquiry does not appear to violate N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4.

Based upon the above reasons, I FIND that Dr. Piegari's conduct did not violate the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4. and did not cause a violation of statutorily prescribed procedures for the school election held on April 7, 1992. Finally, I FIND that Dr. Piegari's actions had no impact upon the outcome of this inquiry.

FINDINGS AND CONCLUSIONS

Based upon the foregoing legal discussion and analysis, I make the following findings and reach the following conclusion in connection with this matter:

1. Any voters who may have been discouraged by long lines caused by mechanical difficulties experienced by other voters using the voting machines are not "rejected" voters and the election may not be set aside on this basis.

2. Assuming that it was established by legally competent evidence in this matter that the 23 voters who either testified, executed certifications in lieu of affidavits, or signed the petition were prevented from voting in the affirmative on the current expense question of the school budget, their 23 affirmative votes would not have affected the outcome of the election.

3. Under all the facts and circumstances set forth in this matter and based upon the finding that the irregularities did not affect the outcome of the election, the election results should be affirmed.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the results of the annual school election held in the school district of the Borough of Waldwick, Bergen County, on April 7, 1992, is AFFIRMED, and petitioners' request for an inquiry in this matter be and the same is hereby DISMISSED.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3006-92

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL	:
SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	DECISION
OF WALDWICK, BERGEN COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ for the reasons stated by him in his initial decision that the difficulties experienced by a number of voters in attempting to vote on the current expense budget were insufficient to warrant setting aside the election in this matter and that mere speculation as to a different outcome if conditions had been different cannot serve to void the within election results. He further concurs that the superintendent's actions in attempting to seek out parents who may have been prevented from voting for the school budget neither had a bearing on the outcome of the election nor constituted a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4. In so doing, however, the Commissioner strongly cautions boards of education and their agents against actions which may violate, or even have the appearance of violating, the spirit of laws which are clearly intended to ensure that school district involvement in matters relating to public elections is strictly nonpartisan.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing petitioners' request for inquiry is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein as amplified above.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning parent requested change of a failing grade in physical education received by his child for the first semester of the 1990-91 school year.

ALJ found the grading policy for physical education was reasonable and nondiscriminatory, and that it was properly applied to petitioner's child. ALJ further concluded that the Board of Education need not have adopted a formal codification of its grading system for physical education in order for that system to be found valid and enforceable. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and dismissed Peition of Appeal for reasons stated in the initial decision.

Record Closed: June 4, 1992 Decided: July 14, 1992

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Daniel Demers, respondent, is the petitioner's gym teacher at the Delsea Middle School of the respondent Southern Gloucester Regional School District (Board). M.M. Sr. sought to obtain a change of his child's physical education grade, a 69, for the first semester of the 1990-91 school year. He alleges that the policy under which the grade was determined was not adopted by the Board or, in the alternative, he argues that the policy is too discretionary and is open to abuse by individual teachers. M.M. filed his petition on May 2,1991 and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 7, 1991, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq., N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et. seq.

and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 et. seq. The record closed on June 4, 1992, after briefs were received from the parties.

The prehearing Order inartfully described the issues to be resolved in this hearing. At the hearing and in final arguments the parties redefined the issues in accordance with the proofs and the law: whether the grading system in physical education classes at the Delsea Middle School was formally adopted by the Board and whether it was unreasonable or discriminating.

Respondents Daniel Demers and Terry Ann Vanaman, who is the Middle School principal, testified that the grading policy used in physical education classes at the Delsea Middle School had developed over a period of twenty years and was adapted from a policy developed at the high school. It is a simple system which recognizes the great disparity in children's ability to perform in athletic contests. Each child begins the marking period with 100 points, a perfect grade, and loses points for behavior which does not conform to a code of conduct. The code of conduct is explained to the pupils in the beginning of the year and is also explained to parents at various PTA and home and school functions during the year. The code of conduct stresses proper attire, sportsmanship and promptness in arriving at the playing field. Under sportsmanship was a subcategory which penalized the player for swearing. (profane language)

Demers produced his calculation for deducting points from the petitioner's initial grade of 100. It revealed that M.M. was not dressed properly on September 18, was late in arriving at the playing field on September 28, October 11, 12, 22, 25, 31 and November 5, used profane language on September 26, October 2, October 18 and November 7. On October 18, M.M. did not properly participate in a game. He said that five points were deducted for improper dress, up to five points were deducted for profane language or not playing fairly and one point was deducted from a student's score for lateness in arriving at the playing field.

Demers further distinguished between profane language on the basis of the shock value of the exact profanity used, I presume, because he said "the "F" word was worth five points but the "S" word was worth two points."

When Demers was cross examined as to the difference between the marking policy and discipline he explained that if a student used profanity in the heat of the contest, that was not sportsmanship, but if a student directed the profanity at him, that was an occasion for administrative discipline. The difference appeared to be crucial because parents are notified when a child is disciplined but not notified when a child loses grade points in physical education until the report card arrives.

M.M. testified that his son was unable to dress appropriately on September 18 because his gym clothes were stolen. This was however, news to Demers. M.M. also explained that his sons subsequent high grades in physical education were the result of his telling his son to "kiss Demer's ass." This may reveal why his son lost points for profane language; he did not consider it to be unacceptable. However, every indication was that M.M., Jr. was a well qualified student in all classes and respects. Demers had testified that M.M., Jr. was also a good football player.

M.M., Sr.'s and his wife's major complaint was that they just did not know their son was losing points in physical education class until it was too late. They did not, however, meet with the gym teacher on back to school night. It would have been the better practice for Demers to have sent home a note so that the matter could have been corrected earlier rather than later, but he did not. This does not render the policy unsound however. More home and school communication is what is required.

Counsel for petitioners was unable to point to any requirement of law that the Board publish it's grading policy. The grading system is the prerogative of local school boards and need not be formally codified; although it must be reasonable and nondiscriminating. Dooner v. BOE of Toms River, 1976 SLD 619; Tarlarsky v. Edison Twp. BOE, 1977 S.L.D. 862; Salutz, 1979 unpubished opinion.

This grading policy was reasonable and nondiscriminating. It addresses sports related issues. As counsel for the Board pointed out in his brief:

> Everyday experience is replete with examples of penalties being assessed to the individual, and consequently to the team, for behavior that is beyond the scope of the event. For example, technical fouls are frequently assessed in a basketball game for the use of profanity during the course of the event. This is certainly, if not written, an unwritten rule of the event.
>
> Another example would be that a team is required to be in a position to compete when the event is set to begin. For example, one must understand that in a football game everyone must be in a position to play > before the competition can begin. Failure to do so results in a penalty assessed by the referee.

> Finally, it is obvious that one must be appropriately attired for the event in almost every sport. Failure to have the appropriate equipment in place can result in a penalty and/or disqualification.

While I FIND that the grading policy for physical education at the Delsea Middle School is reasonable and nondiscriminating, Demers' variations on the policy ought to be curtailed. Demers made some attempt to discriminate between expletives; between the "F" word and the "S" word. One is reminded of Mort Sahl's treatment of television's ban on seven words. But if the "F" word is more shocking to Demers, the "C" word may be more shocking to another teacher. Mere use of profanity ought to be the measure, not the shock value of the word employed. There does not appear to be anything unreasonable or discriminating about teaching students that a school playground is not a proper place to engage in profanity which might be offensive to other students, to faculty or to parents.

I CONCLUDE that the petitioners have failed to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that the Board of Education of respondents Daniel Demers et al and the Southern Gloucester Regional School District, were required to formally adopt a grading policy for physical education.

I FURTHER CONCLUDE that the petitioners failed to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the grading policy was unreasonable and discriminating.

I DISMISS the petition and ORDER that the grade of 69 remain.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the grading policy at issue herein need not have been formally codified by the Board and that it was reasonable and nondiscriminatory both in itself and as applied to M.M.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :
HEARING OF PATRICIA JO MURPHY, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF : DECISION
NEW BRUNSWICK, MIDDLESEX COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Board certified tenure charges against respondent, first grade teacher, for two counts of alleged corporal punishment.

ALJ concluded corporal punishment did occur both in the February 1989 and the April 1990 incidents. However, without sufficient evidence in first count as to respondent's intent and in light of respondent's past unblemished record and her admission that during the second incident she was physically unwell and trying to control a disruptive child, ALJ found dismissal from employment was not warranted. ALJ upheld suspension but ordered respondent reinstated with salary frozen without any adjustment or increment.

Commissioner adopted findings in initial decision regarding incidents underlying tenure charges but imposed a heavier penalty. To impress on respondent and others the seriousness of conduct at issue, Commissioner modified ALJ's determination to include forfeiture of 120 days' salary withheld during respondent's suspension upon certification of tenure charges.

Stephen E. Klausner, Esq., for respondent (Klausner, Hunter & Cige, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 10, 1992 Decided: July 16, 1992

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

The Board of Education of the City of New Brunswick certified charges to the Commissioner of Education asserting probable cause to take action against the tenure held by Patricia Jo Murphy, who was employed as a teacher in the district. The Commissioner transferred the case to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1*et seq.* Following transmittal a prehearing conference was held on April 11, 1991 before Honorable Steven L. Lefelt, ALJ. A prehearing order was issued by Judge Lefelt on April 22, 1991. Thereafter, Judge Lefelt recused himself from the case and the matter was transferred for hearing to Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin. A hearing was held on September 11, 1991. Thereafter, at the request of the respondent the matter was continued in order to permit certain examinations. Once these were concluded the matter was heard again on February 24 and 25, 1992 at the Sayreville Municipal Court. The record closed following submission of briefs, the last of which was received by the Administrative Law Judge on June 10, 1992.

THE CHARGES

According to the statement filed in support of the tenure charges by Steven Farkas, Assistant to the Superintendent/Personnel of the New Brunswick Board of Education, the board charged Ms. Murphy with having engaged in conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member on February 24, 1989 and April 30, 1990 when it alleged that she had failed to act appropriately within her classroom in a manner which expressed a lack of self-control within the classroom and a lack of good judgment. Specifically, the charges were > (a) On February 24, 1989 Ms. Murphy allegedly struck a student on the head. She also allegedly shook a student by the arms. These allegations were reported to the Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit/Central Office, New Jersey Division of Youth and Family Services by a confidential source.

> (b) On April 30, 1990 Ms. Murphy allegedly struck a student on the leg and grabbed the student by both shoulders and struck her. The student struck her head against the radiator, causing a bump behind her left ear.

Following the incident of February 24, 1989 Ms. Murphy was verbally reprimanded by the superintendent of schools and the school principal and instructed that such incidents were not to be repeated. Following the April 30, 1990 incident Ms. Murphy was sent home with pay and on May 15, 1990 was suspended with pay by the board.

The prehearing order entered by Judge Lefelt listed the following issues for consideration at the hearing

> A. Whether Ms. Murphy on February 24, 1989 and April 30, 1990 conducted herself in a manner that was unbecoming a tenured teaching staff member and, if so, what is the appropriate punishment?

B. Whether the New Brunswick Board of Education discriminated against Ms. Murphy because of a larynx and menopausal physical handicap in violation of N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 et seq. and 29 U.S.C. 701-794?

C. Whether the charges must be dismissed because the New Brunswick Board of Education failed to comply with the tenure law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq., by (a) providing Ms. Murphy with a packet of evidence which differed from the packet of evidence which was filed with the Commissioner; and (b) suspending Ms. Murphy with pay in the spring of 1990 but not certifying charges against her until the fall of 1990?

On the first day of hearing counsel for Ms. Murphy advised that he was withdrawing issue B. from consideration. Although issue C. was never withdrawn the respondent does not appear to have argued this claim. Therefore, it appears that the primary issues for consideration in this decision revolve around the evidence concerning the incidents of February 24, 1989 and April 30, 1990 and whether they, individually or taken together, indicate that the respondent had conducted herself in a manner which was unbecoming a tenured teaching staff member and therefore required that some action be taken against her tenure.

BOARD'S EVIDENCE

The board presented testimony from Rashidah Ali, a secretary for the Demonstration Daycare Center in Redshaw School, a school building operated by the New Brunswick Board of Education. Ms. Ali is the grandmother of T.G., who attended Redshaw as a first grade student in Ms. Murphy's class. Ms. Ali works in the basement of the building, but on April 30, 1990 she had occasion to come up to the classroom and look inside the closed, partially glass door. At that time she noted that her granddaughter was seated at a desk and was whining. She heard Ms. Murphy tell the child to "please be quite" and to come up to the chair by her desk. At that point Murphy yelled at the child, who stopped crying. Murphy then slapped the child's thigh and then slapped her face and grabbed her. When she did so the child went backwards, hitting her head on a radiator.

Ms. Ali acknowledged that her granddaughter suffered from Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder("ADHD") and that sometimes she acted out her behavior. It was because of this that Ms. Ali occasionally came up to the classroom to check on her.

According to the witness there is a window in the doorway and she was able to hear both her granddaughter whining and also hear voices from inside the classroom. When she observed Murphy slap the child on the leg she thought that this might possibly stop the child's behavior, but then Murphy appeared to "lose it."

After observing all of this, Ms. Ali entered the classroom and said "Ms. Murphy, will you please send T. to me." She started to take the child to the office of Mr. Lawrence Falzone, the school principal. When she met him and told him about the incident she asked that Ms. Murphy be removed from the building. She took the child to the nurse, "Pat," who observed a bump on the back of her left ear. The nurse applied an ice pack and told her to call her doctor.

Later that day Ms. Ali passed Ms. Murphy in the hallway. Murphy said that she was "very, very sorry about what happened." Mr. Falzone was present at this time and Ali asked Falzone to "get her out of my face."

Prior to the incident of April 30 Ali and Murphy had a "good relationship." When Ali first became aware of the possibility that her granddaughter suffered from ADHD she advised Mr. Falzone and Ms. Murphy about this possibility and asked them to keep a behavior chart on T. in order to see if they "could modify her behavior."

When Ms. Ali observed Murphy hit her granddaughter she did not observe that T. was kicking or swinging, but she was sitting in her chair "moving about." No one was in the classroom except the students and the teacher.

The witness testified that the teacher's desk was situated opposite the door "diagonal right where you can look in the classroom, all the children were facing the front, there was a small chair to the left of Ms. Murphy's desk." She estimated that the desk was 2 1/2 to 3 feet from the chair and that the chair was not far from the cast iron radiator, approximately 9 inches. The radiator was approximately 3 feet high and had no cover on it. Ms. Murphy was seated. At first she called T. up to her desk where the chair was and told T. to sit in the chair.

Murphy remained at her desk, reached across the desk "moved back from her desk and went to hit her on the leg. . ." She further described the incident by stating that Ms. Murphy slapped T. on the thigh and then

> T. got a little bit louder, she turned back to her, whap like that, she grabbed her hands and pushed her back.

The witness was questioned as to whether Murphy had gotten up from her chair when she did this. She never actually answered the question directly. When asked

> Q And she pushed her while she was seated?

she answered

> A Grabbing, jerk like that. That's what I saw.

The chair in which T. was seated did not topple over, but instead went backwards and at that point T., who was still in the chair, hit her head on the radiator.

T. G., who is a second-grader at the Lincoln School, testified that Ms. Murphy was her teacher in first grade. She recalled that she was seated in a chair by the radiator and that she hit her head on the radiator. When asked how her head got on the radiator she said that she thought that Ms. Murphy "pulled me." She said that there was a math problem and that she, T. kept bugging Ms. Murphy. The child recalled having been taken to the school office by her grandmother.

Mr. Lawrence Falzone, an employee of the board of education for 32 years and principal of the A. Chester Redshaw School for 8 years, testified that on the morning of April 30, 1991 he arrived at work prior to 9:00 and heard Ms. Murphy yelling and screaming. His office was about 60 feet from Murphy's classroom and he went there to see if there was a problem. He asked her if she needed a break. She said that she did not and that she would be all right. She then seemed to calm down.

At about 10:45 a.m. Ms. Ali came into Falzone's office with her granddaughter, claiming that she had been slapped by Ms. Murphy. Ali said that she had seen the slapping occur. Mr. Falzone went to Ms. Murphy's room. Murphy seemed "a little nervous" and said that she "didn't know what happened to her."

She told Falzone that she "tapped the child in the face, saying that the child was not paying attention and that she didn't know why she did it. She mentioned something about being on medication. I mentioned I noticed she was uptight this morning, if there was a problem."

Mr. Falzone noted that he had gone to Murphy's room within two minutes of Ms. Ali bringing the incident to his attention. When he arrived Ms. Murphy appeared as if nothing had happened. He agreed that Ms. Murphy has a tendency to speak loudly.

When Falzone spoke with Murphy he asked her whether she would like to write up an incident report regarding what had occurred in her classroom. He never received any response in writing.

Mr. Falzone acknowledged that he had previously reprimanded Ms. Murphy regarding an incident in February 1989 which had resulted in an investigation by DYFS. He was present when children were interviewed by an investigator from DYFS.

When the hearing resumed on February 24, 1992 Mr. Falzone was recalled for further examination. He testified that after he learned of the incident he asked Ms. Murphy to step into his office where he told her what had been explained to him by Ms. Ali. She responded

> I don't know why I did it. I've been on some medication and I just don't know why I did it.

Falzone further clarified this following additional questioning and said that Ms. Murphy told him "'I don't know why I slapped her.' That she said to me directly." When Falzone asked the student what had happened she said that the teacher shook her and slapped her and she banged her head against the radiator.

Mr. Falzone testified about the prior incident of February 1989. At that time a DYFS investigator came to the school and said that he was there to investigate some allegations. He was present when the DYFS worker interviewed a child. Apparently a student from Rutgers University serving as an intern in Ms. Murphy's class had seen something occur which he had reported to a professor who reported the matter to DYFS. Falzone was not permitted to testify as to the details of what he heard the child say to the DYFS worker because of the confidentiality of the DYFS investigation.

On cross-examination the witness was queried concerning the physical setup of the classroom. He noted that there was a desk to the rear of the room on the left-hand side, but that Ms. Murphy rarely sat there. There was a reading table by the front left side of the room. T.G. had advised him that she was sitting by the radiator near the window where he believed there was a desk and a chair about one foot from the radiator. The radiator was parallel, not directly behind the desk. He estimated that the edge of the desk might be a foot from the radiator and the chair approximately 18 inches. He thought that the radiator was approximately 28 to 30 inches high and that the chair was a typical first grade chair approximately 15 inches high. There were student desks by the window and a large meeting table in the front of the room. It was at this table that T.G. was originally seated before she was asked by the teacher to move.

When Mr. Falzone first saw T.G. after Ms. Ali told him about the incident, he did not observe any redness on her face. He believes that she had hit her head on the radiator behind the left ear. T.G. did not attend school the following day. No claim was ever received for medical reimbursement from the grandmother.

At the time that Mr. Falzone spoke with Ms. Murphy she did not tell him that T.G. was kicking or that she, Ms. Murphy, had grabbed the child's leg in order to stop her from kicking. Mr. Falzone did not interview any other children from the classroom. Later in the day he spoke to Mrs. Brenda Hughes, a basic school teacher assistant, to see whether she had been present in the room. She said that she had been, but was assisting other children and didn't observe anything. She said that "she heard Mrs. Murphy raising her voice and she heard her yell out, but she didn't observe the incident." She did not indicate that she heard any slapping or that she heard a "crash or bang" on the radiator.

Mr. Falzone testified that he observed a bump behind the child's ear, but he did not see any bruising. He could not recall exactly what the nurses report showed.

Victoria DeAngelo, of Mount Holly, now employed as a special education teacher at the Ridgeway School, testified that she was a student at Rutgers College, New Brunswick, until May 1990. She was involved in a pre-student teaching program at Redshaw Elementary School in February 1989. In that capacity she would perform some minor tasks assigned to her by the classroom teacher, but she was not performing official teaching duties. She worked on one occasion in Ms. Murphy's classroom in February of 1989. At that time she observed Murphy yelling at a student. The noise caused her to look up from what she was doing and she heard Murphy tell the class that the child was not living with her mother or something to that affect. At that point she saw Murphy hit the child on the head with a book. DeAngelo was seated in the back of the classroom and had been taking notes when this incident began. Ms. Murphy was in the front of the classroom, teaching the students who were coming up to her one or a couple at a time. Ms. DeAngelo did not recall the name of the student who was hit, except that she was a small black girl. The child reacted to being hit on the head by crying. The girl just "stood there" and then the class was dismissed because the bell rang. Ms. DeAngelo was scheduled to have another observation in another classroom and she therefore left Murphy's classroom as well. Ms. DeAngelo did not report this incident to anyone until her next class at Rutgers with the professor for whom she was doing this observation and at that time she told the professor about what she had observed. The professor was quite upset and DeAngelo believes that it was the professor who called DYFS. DeAngelo was never contacted by DYFS and this was the last she heard of the incident. Although she made some notes about what had occurred she no longer has them. She did not speak to Mr. Farkas about the matter.

On cross-examination the witness asserted that the book with which the child was hit was a "thick, red book." She specifically heard the sound when the book hit the child's head. She did not recall Ms. Murphy having told her before class began that she was having problems with certain students in the class. However, she did remember that Murphy told her that the girl who ultimately was involved in the incident "had been left with her aunt by the mother about a week before." She described the entire incident as taking about three to five minutes. She did not recall whether Murphy was engaged in a reading lesson with the entire class when the incident supposedly occurred. She recalled that the other teacher whose class she had to attend was a Miss Lewis, who was teaching a special education class.

Counsel queried Ms. DeAngelo on the reason for her failure to report what she had observed to anyone until she attended the professor's class some time later on after the incident. She explained that she was "personally . . . very intimidated by authority and my professor seemed to be the least threatening to me." She acknowledged being rather hazy about what she had done the rest of the school day, but believed that she had gone to another class in the building that day.

Mr. Falzone was cross-examined following Ms. DeAngelo's testimony. He had no direct knowledge of the first incident. With regard to T.G., he testified that he saw a bump behind the ear, but that it did not look to him to be a keloid scar.[1]

With regard to Ms. DeAngelo, Mr. Falzone noted that DeAngelo worked for half a day with Ms. Murphy's class and half a day with the daycare center. She believed that the program worked out with Rutgers called for 13 to 14 visits, half a day a week per class. He thought that the incident involving Ms. Murphy had occurred somewhere in the middle of this and that her visits to Murphy's class were abbreviated because of the incident. He did not recall Ms. DeAngelo working with the special education teacher because Ms. DeAngelo suffers from cerebral palsy and has a speech impediment which he believed would be a distraction. He recalled having driven Ms. DeAngelo from school to George Street in New Brunswick where she was able to get a college bus back to campus. Ms. DeAngelo never told him about any problem regarding Ms. Murphy.

1. A keloid is defined in Stedman's Medical Dictionary as "a nodular, frequently lobulated, unusually firm, moveable, nonencapsulated, generally linear mass of hyperplastic scar tissue . . ." which "occur in the dermis and adjacent subcutaneous tissue, usually after a traumatic injury or a burn . . ."

Falzone asserted that if one were looking into the classroom from outside the closed door, which is contained in a recessed alcove about 30 inches deep, one can see all of the classroom except the far left-hand corner. He acknowledged that teachers do decorate doors, but teachers are asked to keep a section open so that someone from the outside can look into the classroom. He had no reason to believe that Ms. Murphy's door did not conform to this requirement and one looking in would have a "pretty good wide view." Mr. Falzone also noted that while he did not immediately recall her he did remember that there was a Mrs. Lewis assigned to his school as a special education teacher for a short time before she went out on maternity leave. This woman was teaching learning disabled students and although Ms. DeAngelo was not directly assigned to her she was in her classroom in order to get exposure to these students.

Steven Farkas, Assistant to the Superintendent for Personnel for the board since January 1988 and an employee of the district since 1956, testified that with regard to the April 30, 1990 incident he received a telephone call from Mr. Falzone on that morning regarding the allegations that Ms. Murphy had struck T.G. He advised Falzone to have Murphy report to his office, which he did. He spoke to her and related to her the nature of the allegation which had been made against her. She told him that she did strike the student and that she was on medication for her larynx and a menopausal problem and that "perhaps she would have been better off not having been at work, and she should have been at home for the last several weeks." When he advised her that he understood that she had struck a student and that this had been witnesses by Rashidah Ali "she (Murphy) indicated she did do it. She didn't know why she did do it." Ms. Murphy appeared to be very upset and in an emotional state. Mr. Farkas contacted the superintendent of schools and told him about the incident and the fact that she had admitted her involvement. Farkas and the superintendent then met with her and asked her to hand in a written report regarding the incident. She was suspended with pay. He understood that she had a doctor's appointment scheduled for the next morning.

Following the initial interview there were several meetings held concerning the matter. Ms. Murphy, the school superintendent and Mr. Totten, the union president at the time, were present. During these meetings Ms. Murphy continued "to affirm that she did do it in the early stages of the conferences."

Mr. Farkas explained that no charges were brought against Murphy in regard to the initial incident of February 1989 because she was a "good teacher, had been for a long time, and it had been the first incident and the understanding was that we were hoping that it was an isolated incident and that things would work out." The charges were brought in regard to the second incident

> Because it was a repeated incident where there was an eyewitness, and we felt that after two incidents within a one-year span charges had to be filed.

Mr. Farkas was not aware of whether the letter of reprimand which had been prepared by the superintendent of schools in regard to the February 1989 incident had ever been given to Ms. Murphy.

Mr. Farkas could not recall whether Ms. Murphy had told him during his meeting with her on April 30 that the child was "disruptive." She did indicate that she had asked the child to come up to the front of the room, but he could not recall whether she stated that the child started kicking another student and shouting. She told him that she slapped the child's "thigh, her leg." She then indicated that she grabbed the child by the shoulders, but did not say why she did it.

The school board voted to suspend Ms. Murphy in May 1990. Thereafter, the DYFS report was received in September. According to Farkas that report was used to verify the incident. The charges were not certified to the Commissioner until November 1990. According to Farkas the reason for waiting from May until the end of November was > because we felt at that time we had an agreement with the union president acting as a liaison with Ms. Murphy that she would retire.

This understanding was not in writing.

Dr. Ronald F. Larkin, superintendent of schools for New Brunswick for 11 years, testified that he received a call from DYFS regarding the 1989 incident and helped them with their investigation. After it was concluded he issued a letter with a strong warning to Ms. Murphy that if such an incident occurred again sterner actions would be taken against her. This letter was placed in her file and was ultimately removed due to an ongoing procedure with the union to expunge such documents if requested. Mr. Totten had requested its removal. Mr. Larkin explained that the letter was to be issued by the principal at the time of the conference when he would provide the warnings to Ms. Murphy under direction from Larkin. In Larkin's view the letter of reprimand issued was appropriate and no further action was necessary following that incident. The reason for this was that there are times that a teacher will engage in inappropriate behavior in a classroom, but given Ms. Murphy's length of service it was agreed that the particular action "did not warrant any more than a bawling out by the principal . . ."

With regard to the second incident involving T.G., Mr. Larkin became aware of this incident from Mr. Farkas and Mr. Falzone. He met with Rashidah Ali and told her that he would investigate the situation. When Mr. Farkas advised him that Ms. Murphy had come to Farkas' office and that she was quite upset he met with Murphy and asked her what had happened. He noted that she was "highly agitated and in an emotional state." He continued

> She told me she was on medicine, that she should not have come to school, that she is a dedicated teacher, she should have just taken off.
>
> That she, in fact, did hit the youngster, but denied banging her head against the radiator, said that she was upset, she was sick, and she apologized at that time for hitting the youngster, but the youngster was screaming and she didn't know how to settle her down.
> She was out of control and that she felt she took appropriate action, that she knew it was wrong, but she had to do something to quiet the youngster.

Mr. Larkin explained that following the incident he had some meetings with Mr. Totten and an attempt was made to work out an arrangement that would allow Ms. Murphy to finish one more year of service so that she would have 25 years and could retire. This thought that was in consequence of her being "a good teacher." The arrangement would be that Ms. Murphy would not work with children in the schools of New Brunswick and that no criminal charges would be pursued against her by Ms. Ali. Although there was some thought that this arrangement had been consummated, in November it became apparent that Ms. Murphy was not indicating any intention of submitting her retirement and as a result the board proceeded to certify charges. In further discussion of the reasons for the board's action following the second incident, Mr. Larkin explained

> We have a teacher who served us well that was out of control. She was not herself. She had now admitted to hitting a child. This was the second time.
>
> I had assured DYFS and others that I would take appropriate action based upon the first time I heard it. If I let it go a second time, I don't know what would have happened. I had to take the appropriate action. She was at that time in my opinion asking us for help. There was no reasons why we didn't offer it to her.
>
> She was still an employee of the Board of Education. We were concerned about her, but at the same time youngsters had to come first in our mind and that's why I did it.
> I mean one time I could allow it. Two times I just could not allow and the Board when I presented it to them based upon the fact we had worked through this idea about a settlement we were not going to take her certificate away from her. She could if, in fact, get herself together, go on teaching some place else, but just not New Brunswick. That's why we took the action and then when that fell apart, I had no choice.

On cross-examination Mr. Larkin noted that he was aware that Ms. Murphy had advised Mr. Falzone that she was in the habit of hugging students and patting them on the head because they needed encouragement. However, when asked whether he had any reason not to believe her he said that he did. He explained that she was told following the DYFS investigation of the first incident that children were not to be tapped on the head in the future.

Mr. Larkin acknowledged that the reading books used in the first grade classrooms are soft-covered and about 1/4-inch in thickness. However, other books used in the classroom may not be soft-cover.

Mr. Larkin was asked a hypothetical question as to whether a teacher was supposed to physically restrain and try to calm down a hyperactive child who "loses it." He would not agree with that statement. Finally, he did not have any documents to corroborate that Mrs. Murphy sent T.G. to the school office at 10:00 a.m. that morning.

RESPONDENT'S EVIDENCE

Patricia Jo Murphy testified that she has been a teacher with the board of education for 26 years and is certified as an elementary school teacher, K-8, and is a special education teacher, K-12. She was employed as a first grade teacher during the winter of 1989 when Mr. Falzone approached her about taking on a student observer from Rutgers. Falzone told her that the student had a handicapping problem and that it would be best for her to be involved with students on a lower grade level. The purpose was to see what the student was capable of doing. Ms. Murphy agreed to take on the student as a "favor" to Falzone. She was introduced to Ms. DeAngelo in January 1989. She explained her classroom and its workings to Ms. DeAngelo, who was to come in half a day in the mornings. According to Ms. Murphy's recollection, Ms. DeAngelo came in more than two or three times. Ms. Murphy had to sign some paper work from Rutgers regarding Ms. DeAngelo's activities. When Mr. Falzone advised her that Ms. DeAngelo was not coming back to the classroom any more, he came and took the paper work from her.

Regarding the alleged incident of February 24, 1989, Ms. Murphy claimed to have had no knowledge of any such incident, except what she heard from Ms. DeAngelo at the hearing. She noted that the first grade reading and spelling books are soft-covered and that she has a large teacher's manual notebook which weighs about five or six pounds, but that she doesn't carry it around because of it's weight. She noted that the procedure for reading instruction involved first grade reading groups and home group instruction. During the home group instruction all students are in their seats and Murphy goes through a program where she introduces vocabulary words and then a story is read orally or silently following which questions are reviewed. After this instruction the class would go into the study book program where the children would work with her, going through different skills in a reading program. The reading book itself is about a 1/4-inch to 1/2-inch in thickness and is very small, lightweight and soft-covered.

According to Ms. Murphy, when Ms. DeAngelo first came to her class Ms. Murphy explained to her that she had certain children in the classroom who had problems who were assigned to her class because she was trained in special education. Ms. Murphy noted that she wanted to make sure that Ms. DeAngelo would not get "too excited" if the children started to act up so she pointed out specific children to her.

Murphy commented that she asked Ms. DeAngelo to correct papers and that it took her quite some time to do so. This indicated to Ms. Murphy that Ms. DeAngelo would have problems and difficulties doing paper and pencil-type tasks and that it would be necessary to give her more time to work with the children.

The witness testified that in the course of her teaching career she did touch students on the head. She explained

> Yes, all the time because I do what is called friendly patting, friendly hugging, you know, rubbing, back rubbing, shoulder rubbing, heads things of that kind as an approval because these children need that. They are looking for that.
>
> They got to have the positive--I can't think of the term, but the positive feedback . . . yes, reinforcement, right, because these children are striving--they are looking for that constantly.
> If they don't get that from me as a teacher, they become upset.

She asserted that Mr. Falzone was aware of her habit of patting children on the head and that she had told him about this on a number of occasions. After Ms. DeAngelo's allegation became public she was told that she should not touch children on the head or shoulders, a decision with which she did not agree from an educational standpoint. She never received a direct reprimand from Mr. Falzone, but at the end of the year she went to him and asked him about the DYFS investigation and he said that he had heard nothing. He asked whether she had gotten a copy of his memo to her. When she told him that she had not, he said that he thought that he had given it to her. As a result he made a copy of it and gave it to her.

The witness diagramed her classroom prior to the hearing and presented the diagram as an exhibit. R-4. She noted that there was a bookcase approximately five feet high and five to six feet wide which ran parallel to the wall which contained the door. The desks were slanted away from the radiators because these could become quite hot. The reading table is placed quite a ways out from the radiator, probably 2 1/2 to 3 feet. The radiator ends near the third chair from the right at the reading table and the bookcase ends near the second chair. T.G. was at the first chair, facing across the table. There were three other children on the opposite side and no children sitting next to T.G. At the time of the incident involving this child, T.G.'s left shoulder was toward the blackboard and her left ear would have been on the opposite side from the radiator.

The witness denied that she ever picked up the student and threw her against the radiator. If she had fallen straight back she would not have hit the radiator. The radiators are very heavy and if one hits them it would make a noise.

Ms. Murphy denied that she ever told anybody on April 30, 1990 that she was taking medications. She saw a doctor the following morning. On April 30 she was not taking any medication for her throat or her larynx.

The witness described T.G.'s conduct on the morning of April 30. She had a problem with the child, who was very disruptive. At first she was able to settle T.G. down, but then T.G. began to act up again and finally got to the point where she had to be sent to the office because she was disturbing other children. A little while later she came back to the classroom and sat at her desk. She began to have a "real temper tantrum. . . screaming and carrying on." Ms. Hughes told her to be quite. She became even more agitated. In order to remove her from the area where Mrs. Hughes was working with a child, Mrs. Murphy directed T.G. to come up to the reading table. She did so, but would not calm down. There was a little boy seated across from T.G. on the other side of the reading table. He suddenly pushed his chair back and moved away from the table. At this point Murphy > knew that she was kicking and with that I reached over and grabbed her shoulder and said to her "stop that."

> I reached down and pushed her legs around and away from him because I was afraid that she was going to kick him again and then also possibly kick me because her legs > were swinging wildly under the table. . . . Then I went back to the correcting. She was sitting there kind of crying a little bit and is was just, you know, five or ten minutes, I'm not sure of the time, I glanced up at her grandmother. . . came in and with that I just glanced up and her grandmother motioned to her to come, and I said to her "go with grandma."

The witness explained that the reason she touched the child on her shoulders and her leg was to keep her leg from swinging and to get her attention. T.G. was screaming and "you have to get the children to look at you."

The witness recalled that when she was summoned to meet with Mr. Falzone he told her that Ms. Ali told him that she, Murphy, had hit T. Her response was to ask him where and when this had supposedly occurred and he was unclear in his responses. He told her that he was relieving her from duty and that she would have to go down to the central office. She never told him that she was taking medications. He knew that she had a doctor's appointment the following day because she was having trouble with her sinuses and throat. However, she denied telling him that she was so sick that she needed a medical leave of absence or that she was taking medication.

The witness examined exhibit P-1, which is Mr. Falzone's report to Dr. Larkin concerning the April 30 incident. She stated that it did not accurately describe what she had said on April 30. She denied that Mr. Falzone had come to her room and asked her to come to his office. In fact, a basic skills teacher had done so.

With regard to exhibit P-2, which is Mr. Farkas' report regarding the April 30 matter, she told Farkas that she was not on any kind of drugs, but that she had a doctor's appointment the next day and had a sore throat. She did advise Farkas that she had shaken the child and pushed her legs away because she was kicking and the child was out of control. She also told him that she had sent the child to the office earlier in the morning.

The witness noted that upon observations made of the child prior to the incident she had noted that she had a lump under her left ear and that there were keloid scars around the head, face, shoulder, back and the back part of the head.

She also saw them on the back of the shoulder and the top of the head, legs and arms and around the hairline in back of the head behind the ears.

Ms. Murphy went to the doctor on May 1 and he ran some gynecological tests because she was having a lot of bleeding. She was given no medications that day and was not placed on any stress medications subsequent to May 1, 1990. She had no psychological or psychiatric treatment.

Finally, the witness testified that in 1989 the school did not use any red textbooks for first graders because red is a color that had been found to be threatening to children. She denied any wrongful touching of any child in 1989 or 1990.

On cross-examination the witness was asked to review the colors of the textbooks that were used. She began her answer "red--excuse me, not red." She then listed blue, yellow, green, orange, tan, a light pink. To her knowledge there was no textbook that was colored red. She denied that there were any library books on the reading table or any reference materials. Ms. Murphy also denied that her head tapping procedure ever was performed with any reading books.

The witness was further questioned concerning her medical condition on April 30. She noted that she had had bleeding problems for about three weeks and that she had made an appointment with the doctor about a week before the incident. It was not normal for her to bleed like that and she was tired, run down and the situation was "very abnormal." She never before had such a problem. The doctor took tests and told her to wait a week and come back. When she did, she was placed on medication to stop the bleeding. She returned one week later and not again. She was also having a periodic problem with her larynx which recurred about three or four times during the year. She was having some difficulty talking and had a bad sore throat and was having difficulty swallowing.

DISCUSSION

The board of education charges Ms. Murphy with having engaged in conduct unbecoming a tenured teaching staff member in connection with two incidents of corporal punishment allegedly occurring in February 1989 and April 1990. In regard to the first incident, the only evidence presented by the board in support of its charge was the testimony of the then Rutgers College student Victoria DeAngelo, who is now a special education teacher employed outside the New Brunswick district. Ms. DeAngelo was present in Ms. Murphy's classroom as part of a pre-student teaching program. Although she only recalled being in Ms. Murphy's classroom on the one occasion when she purportedly observed Ms. Murphy hit the student on the head with a red book, Ms. Murphy recalled that she actually was in the classroom on several occasions.

The issue concerning the February 1989 incident appears to come down to one of perception and credibility. There is absolutely no evidence to suggest that Victoria DeAngelo had any reason to invent a tale concerning a teacher hitting a student on the head. Ms. DeAngelo was a college student who had no personal relationship of any sort with Ms. Murphy and had nothing to gain by alleging that Ms. Murphy had engaged in corporal punishment on a student. Thus, I FIND that Ms. DeAngelo actually did observe something occur in Ms. Murphy's classroom. The question that must be answered is whether what she actually observed is what she reported having seen or whether she merely misinterpreted what she saw and made something of a very innocent nature into something which has a more serious and negative connotation.

According to Ms. DeAngelo, the incident came to her attention when she was sitting in the back of the room taking notes and then heard Ms. Murphy yelling at a student. When she looked up she heard Ms. Murphy telling the class "that the child wasn't living with her mother" or something to that effect. Ms. Murphy then hit the child on the head with the book and the child cried. She had no doubt that the teacher that she observed performing this action was Ms. Murphy and not Ms. Lewis, whose class she went to after the bell rang ending the period.

Ms. Murphy's testimony regarding this incident simply amounted to a denial that she had hit a child on the head with a textbook. She did acknowledge that she often had physical contact with her students, engaging in "friendly" hugging, patting, rubbing of backs, head, etc., all in an attempt to give the children positive feedback and reinforcement. It was only after the DeAngelo allegation became public that she was told by school authorities not to engage in such touching. According to the respondent, there were no red books in her classroom and thus Ms. DeAngelo's recollection of the color of the book is wrong.

Ultimately, the resolution of the question of whether Ms. Murphy did "hit" the pupil on the head with a book comes down to whether Ms. DeAngelo saw nothing, or she saw what she claimed, or possibly simply saw Ms. Murphy pat a child on the head and mistakenly thought that Ms. Murphy touched the child not only with her hand, but also with a book. Perhaps Ms. DeAngelo was confused and mistakenly thought that a pre-classroom discussion regarding the family status of this child had actually taken place just at the moment when the alleged touching took place. Or, perhaps, Ms. Murphy, if not telling the truth, either has purposely misstated what she did or has simply forgotten that on this occasion, if on no other, her "friendly" tapping was not simply a "pat" on the head with her hand, but was a more "threatening" and "dramatic" act, performed with a book.

Although it is certainly possible that Ms. DeAngelo confused the color of the book and perhaps misidentified a book which was orange, or pink, or some other color as red, on the whole, I am convinced that her version of the incident is accurate. As a pre-student teacher assigned to the classroom, Ms. DeAngelo had particular reason to take notice of what occurred in the classroom. She was there specifically to make observations and "learn" from the teacher whom she was observing. The incident as she described it, that is, a teacher yelling at a student, making a specific statement about the student's family situation and then hitting the child on the head with a book, is certainly the kind of incident which would be both dramatic enough in itself and significant enough to one observing the actions and procedures of the teacher to have imprinted itself upon Ms. DeAngelo's memory. While she acknowledged that she was hazy about exactly what she did after she left Ms. Murphy's class that morning and while she had some vague recollection that Ms. Murphy might have told her about this child before class, nevertheless, on a whole, I FIND that Ms. DeAngelo did observe an incident in which Ms. Murphy yelled at a student and touched her on the head with a book. Whether one would characterize the touching as a hit, a tap, or by some other designation is difficult to assess. While the student cried, it is not clear whether the touching was actually done in an attempt to cause the student some pain or was simply a "placing" of the book on the top of the student's head which, if done simply with the hand, might accurately be described as a pat. Ms. DeAngelo's recollections were not so detailed as to lead to a conclusions as to the force with which the book was brought upon the child's head. That the child cried is not in and of itself any proof that the force was significant. Since the child did not testify and since it is impossible to make any judgments as to the emotional status of the child at the time or exactly why or how she reacted to what was done to her, I ultimately must simply find that Ms. Murphy touched the child on the head with a book and that the child reacted to this, or perhaps to other circumstances in conjunction with the touching, by crying.

Although Ms. Murphy denied that she engaged in this conduct, it is clear that she had a habit of touching her children. She did this for reasons for which she thought to be educationally and psychologically valid. Without passing judgment on whether her opinion has some educational validity, nevertheless, it is clear that this habit and custom of hers was one which she felt comfortable with. It would not be inordinately surprising to find that on occasion Ms. Murphy might touch a soft-cover book to the student rather than simply using her hand. Once again, such a touching would almost undoubtedly have occurred for the same reasons and with the same intent as the hands-only pat or touch. Ms. Murphy might well commit the act in such a manner that the touch would be light and non-threatening and it is even possible that under the right circumstances the student in question in this particular incident might not have reacted by crying, but might simply have accepted the touching as non-threatening.

Based on the evidence presented with regard to the February 1989 incident, I CONCLUDE that Ms. Murphy did touch her student on the head with a book. I decline, however, to draw any conclusions as to the strength of that touching and I CONCLUDE that Ms. Murphy had no malicious intent.

As regards the April 30, 1990 incident involving T.G., Ms. Murphy does not deny that she touched the child. She asserts that she was simply attempting to control a child who was acting out and was "out of control" in apparent consequence of attention deficit disorder hyperactivity. She claims that she did so when T.G. was kicking under the table, an action which caused the child sitting opposite her to pull back from the table. According to Murphy, her contact with T.G. involved initially grabbing her shoulder and then reaching down and pulling her legs around as they swung wildly under the table. She denied that it was possible for the child to have fallen back against the radiator in such a way as to strike behind her left ear due to the position of the chair and the radiator which would have made such contact impossible. In addition, Murphy asserted that this particular child had been disruptive earlier that morning and as a result had been sent down to the main office after Ms. Murphy had written a referral as required by procedure.

In opposition to this version of the incident the board presented Ms. Ali's testimony, in which she characterized her observations through the door as having involved her hearing Murphy tell T.G. to be quiet, then yelling at her to stop crying and then slapping her on the thigh, then across the face, and then grabbing her, which resulted in the chair going backwards and the child striking her head against the radiator. T.'s own testimony was naturally limited in detail. She recalled that she was sitting in a chair by the radiator and that she hit her head on the radiator, because she thinks that Ms. Murphy pulled her. Other than that she did not recall anything else that happened.

Perhaps the most dramatic and significant testimony presented with regard to this incident is that of Messrs. Falzone, Farkas and Larkin. Each of these gentlemen testified that when they met with Ms. Murphy following the complaint from Ms. Ali, Ms. Murphy admitted having hit the child and also stated that she did not know why she had done so. Each of them characterized Murphy as emotional, upset, and distraught at the time of their initial meeetings with her. Of particular significance, Mr. Falzone presented his recitation of the events which occurred early on the morning of April 30, prior to the time that the incident with T.G. occurred. This testimony, that Falzone went to Murphy's classroom prior to 9:00 a.m. because he heard Murphy yelling and screaming and that when he asked her whether she needed a break she said that she would be all right, suggests that perhaps whatever was affecting Ms. Murphy that early in the morning may have played a role in her actions later in the morning regarding T. G. Indeed, if Ms. Murphy was upset, emotional and perhaps somewhat out of control prior to 9:00 a.m. it would not be shocking to learn that she continued to be so later on in the morning. In fact, the circumstances as described by Ms. Murphy, that is, a frustrating experience with an ADHD child who was acting out, might well be the type of circumstance which would trigger and/or exacerbate whatever underlying difficulties might have been affecting Ms. Murphy earlier in the morning and might have led her to having a reaction toward T.G.'s conduct which was unreasonable, out of proportion, and inappropriate.

The fact that Ms. Murphy did not immediately advise either Mr. Falzone or Mr. Farkas of the reasons why she had touched T.G., but instead told them that she did not know why she had hit the child, is significant. Having considered the testimony of these witnesses, I found them to be credible individuals. Neither had any reason to want to hurt Ms. Murphy. In fact, both would probably have been happy to see her finish out her career with the district. Although one can recognize the delicate situation of school administrators faced with an allegation by a parent and school employee that a teacher was striking children, there is no reason to believe that any one, or the group of administrators, attempted to falsify or shape the evidence in such a fashion so as to make Ms. Murphy look bad. Instead, I FIND that their testimony concerning Ms. Murphy's reaction to them was honest and as complete as their recollections permitted. I FIND that when Ms. Murphy was confronted by Mr. Falzone in his office Ms. Murphy did say that she had slapped the child in the face, but that she did not know what had happened to her. I FIND that she was taking medication, although it may have only been an over-the-counter remedy. I FIND that for whatever reason Ms. Murphy did strike the child on the face and did grab her by the shoulders, which apparently caused the chair to go backwards. Whether the bump behind the ear was or was not evidence of the child striking the radiator, whether it was a bump or a keloid scar, is not ultimately crucial to the decision. The issue is whether Ms. Murphy touched the child in a fashion which was inappropriate and which constituted unbecoming conduct on the part of a tenured school teacher.

I FIND that when Ms. Murphy met with Mr. Farkas in his office and he told her of the allegation against her, she did tell him that she struck the student, that she was on medication and that she might have been better off staying home. I FIND that at the time that she made these statements she was very upset.

Finally, I FIND that when Ms. Murphy appeared before Dr. Larkin she was highly agitated, that she told him that she was on medication and that she stated that she should have taken the day off. She also said that she did hit the student, but she denied that the student banged her head against the radiator. At this time she did advise Dr. Larkin that the child was screaming and out of control, but she also told him that, although she had to do something to quiet the child, she knew that what she had done was wrong.

Based on the evidence presented I CONCLUDE that on April 30, 1990 T.G. became disruptive, that Ms. Murphy reacted to this by attempting to calm her, but that she did so in a fashion which was inappropriate in its intensity and its severity. While there was evidence which would suggest that under certain conditions it would be appropriate for a teacher to physically touch and attempt to control an out-of-control, acting-out student, nevertheless there are limits on what a teacher may do to attempt to bring a child under control, particularly in the absence of any real indication that the child is an immediate threat to the physical safety of the teacher, the out-of-control child, or other students. While the student seated across from T.G. may have pushed back from the table because T.G. was kicking under the table, there is no evidence that any real physical threat existed to that student or any other. For Ms. Murphy to slap the child across the face and grab the child so forcefully that the child's chair fell backwards was simply an overreaction to the incident. Given the believable evidence that Ms. Murphy was having difficulty controlling herself earlier in the morning and that she was physically drained and spent due to her physical condition at the time, it is not surprising to find that even this otherwise good and devoted teacher acted toward T.G. in frustration and failed to control herself properly.

For the reasons expressed, I CONCLUDE that both in February 1989 and on April 30, 1990 Ms. Murphy did physically strike or touch students. The question that must now be considered is whether these physical contacts were inappropriate and whether they constituted conduct unbecoming a tenured school teacher.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 provides

> No person employed or engaged in a school or educational institution, whether public or private, shall inflict or cause to be inflicted corporal punishment upon a pupil attending such school or institution; but any such person may, within the scope of his employment, use and apply such amounts of force as is reasonable and necessary:
>
> (1) to quell a disturbance, threatening physical injury to others; . . .
>
> (2) . . .

> (3) for the purpose of self-defense; and
>
> (4) for the protection of persons or property;
>
> and such acts, or any of them, shall not be construed to constitute corporal punishment within the meaning and intendment of this section. Every resolution, bylaw, rule, ordinance, or other act or authority permitting or authorizing corporal punishment to be inflicted upon a pupil attending a school or educational institution shall be void.

In interpreting the statutory provision in the context of actual cases, the Commissioner of Education has shown concern for the intent of the teacher in circumstances where an incident of possible corporal punishment has occurred. Where the teacher intended to inflict pain and suffering on a pupil with possible resulting physical harm the commissioner has viewed the matter severely. Where the circumstances indicate that the contact "was not of a punitive nature" then, depending upon all the circumstances, the commissioner has considered the matter to be less serious and to require a more measured response in terms of the penalty to be imposed. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Samuel Ivens, School District of Toms River Regional, Ocean County, 1977 S.L.D. 960, 965; In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Basil Fattell, School District of Paterson, Passaic County, 1977 S.L.D. 941. In assessing the question of whether a teacher has acted improperly the commissioner has shown concern for the "significant differences in cases involving the specific circumstances surrounding the corporal punishment of pupils" Fattell, supra, at 950, considering

> The circumstances under which the episode occurred, its provocation, the nature of the incident, the age of the pupil, the teacher's record, his attitude and the prognosis for his continued effective performance and usefulness in the school system. . . In the commissioner's opinion each such matter must be judged in the light of all of the circumstances. The kind and degree of penalty will necessarily vary also according to the particular problem. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frederick L. Ostergren, 1966 S.L.D. 185, 188.

Keeping in mind the above, the findings with regard to the conduct of Ms. Murphy must be assessed to determine (1) whether the touchings involved constituted incidents of corporal punishment and thus violated the statutory prohibition against such action and (2) if the matters did involve corporal punishment, what the proper penalty should be.

In regard to the first incident involving the unidentified student who Ms. Murphy touched on the head with a book, the testimony does not specifically identify a motivation for this conduct. According to Ms. DeAngelo's credible testimony the episode came to her attention when she noted that Ms. Murphy was yelling. It is not clear exactly what she was yelling about or what provoked this action. This yelling appears to have involved a statement concerning the child's current family condition. Why Ms. Murphy was mentioning this to the class is entirely unclear. The subsequent "hitting" of the child on the head with the book appears to lack any motive or provocation. In sum, it is impossible from the testimony to determine whether Ms. Murphy was acting as she did in reaction to something which the child had done, some internal provocation of an unexplained nature, some action on the part of some other students, whether she was in some way defending this child against some seemingly inappropriate conduct on the part of another student, and whether her placement of the book upon the head was done out of anger, as a means of attempting to control the child, or out of some well-intentioned, but misguided, attempt to "positively reinforce" the child. Based on the limited evidence concerning this incident it is really impossible to determine whether the intent was to inflict pain and suffering and possible injury on the student or whether there was some other motivation involved. It is unclear whether the action was of a "punitive nature" or whether the incident simply exhibits a "lack of self-control" and a lack of circumscription and control on the part of the teacher. The evidence is insufficient to support a conclusion that the intent was to "inflict pain and suffering," the kind of intent which the commissioner has considered to be intolerable. According to Dr. Larkin the board's response to this incident was to issue a written reprimand to Ms. Murphy which was placed in her file, which was to have been delivered to her (although it is not clear that this was initially done) and which was ultimately removed from the file in accordance with an agreement with the Union. Under the circumstances of the first case, and in the absence of evidence that may be contained in the DYFS report which is unavailable, it appears that this response was a properly measured reaction to an unfortunate, but unclear, episode involving an otherwise well-respected educator with long service in the district.

The evidence concerning the incident of April 30, 1990 is somewhat more clear and therefore it is somewhat easier to characterize the respondent's conduct. Based upon that evidence it appears that Ms. Murphy's conduct toward T.G. was motivated at least in part by this young child's inability to completely and satisfactorily control herself. This provocation apparently caused Ms. Murphy, who appears to have perhaps been under some stress as a result of her ongoing physical difficulties, to react out of frustration and perhaps out of anger and to have caused her to slap and shake the child. That Ms. Murphy did not intend to inflict injury on the child is, I think, evident. Her intention was to somehow obtain T.G.'s undivided attention and to get her to calm down. However, the manner in which Ms. Murphy undertook to do this, which might have been appropriate in an extreme instance of acting out with some real evidence of a threat to the physical safety of others, was, under the circumstances, inappropriate. Although the definition of corporal punishment contains a specific exclusion for actions of a reasonable and necessary nature undertaken in order to prevent the threat of physical injury to others and protect persons and property and specifically notes that those actions "shall not be construed to constitute corporal punishment" in the present instance the circumstances do not bespeak the level of disturbance and threat which would allow a teacher to slap and shake a child. This action constituted corporal punishment. While surely Ms. Murphy had the right and duty to take steps necessary to ensure that T.G. either calmed down or to remove her from the class so as to allow her to instruct other students without disturbance, this right did not permit her to physically assault the student in the absence of the kinds of threats and need for protection which constitute the exception to the definition of corporal punishment in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent's actions with regard to the unidentified student in February 1989 constituted corporal punishment. However, I FIND that within the context of the evidence which has been presented in this case the conduct which occurred was sufficiently limited in scope and its purpose and intent was sufficiently clouded such that the limited action taken by the board of education in response thereto, that is, the written reprimand, was an adequate and appropriate response. With regard to the incident of April 30, 1990, I FIND that that incident constituted corporal punishment. I CONCLUDE that although the respondent's actions were not motivated by an intent to cause pain and suffering or injury to the student they were nevertheless inexcusable.

PENALTY

The board seeks dismissal of Ms. Murphy from her position with the district. In its brief, it argues that this penalty is necessary because of the seriousness of Ms. Murphy's conduct, particularly when taking into account the fact that the incident of April 30 was the second incident of corporal punishment within just over a year's time. The board's concern for the safety of its students is obvious and understandable.

Perhaps the most difficult question that needs be addressed in connection with the penalty to be imposed is the question of whether Ms. Murphy's conduct manifests some inability on her part to control her actions and conduct. With regard to the first incident of February 1989, this opinion concludes that the motivation for the conduct cannot really be determined. The evidence is simply not detailed enough to allow a conclusion as to why Ms. Murphy acted as she did. As for the second incident, the evidence does suggest that in that particular occasion Ms. Murphy was certainly physically and probably emotionally stressed due to her physical ailments and that this may well have played a part in the nature of her response to T.G.'s disruptive activity.

Based upon all of the evidence, I CONCLUDE that the circumstances involved in these two incidents do not require that Ms. Murphy be removed from her position. With regard to the first incident, the board took appropriate action given the limited facts available to it and its obvious concern that Ms. Murphy not touch her students in a manner which, while perhaps well intentioned, could lead to difficulties. As for the second incident, the circumstances suggest that Ms. Murphy was not physically or emotionally in the best of health at the time that she was dealing with the student, who was unfortunately acting in a manner which might be difficult to deal with even had Ms. Murphy been feeling well physically and emotionally, and that Ms. Murphy did not willfully and deliberately act in a manner calculated or intended to inflict pain and suffering and injury to the child. While the conduct was inexcusable, it nevertheless appears to be an isolated manifestation in an otherwise highly commendable career. Undoubtedly the experience of this process has driven home to Ms. Murphy once and for all the fact that except in the most extreme and absolutely necessary circumstances touching her pupils is simply unacceptable. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the proper penalty to be imposed in this case is that Ms. Murphy be reinstated to her teaching position at the same annual salary that she was paid during her suspension, without benefit of any adjustment or increment which might otherwise pertain. See Ivens, supra. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF PATRICIA JO MURPHY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF	:	DECISION
NEW BRUNSWICK, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by both respondent and the Board of Education pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Respondent's exceptions aver that, with regard to the February 1989 incident discussed above, the ALJ disregarded a critical weakness in the Board's case: the Board, which bore the burden of proof in this matter, failed to bring forward student witnesses or seek a court order authorizing the DYFS investigator to testify; the Commissioner must therefore infer that such production would have been adverse to the Board's interest. Further, the ALJ erred in accepting the testimony of witness Victoria DiAngelio* without substantiating evidence such as the purported "red book" or notes of class observations, and without considering the improbability of DiAngelio's witnessing a supposedly upsetting incident and then failing to report it to school administrators. In sum, the Board failed to prove that an incident of corporal punishment occurred and the resultant charge should be dismissed.

With regard to the April 1990 incident, respondent contends that the ALJ wrongly rejected her testimony and instead credited witness accounts that ignore the physical impossibility of a child receiving the type of injury alleged under the circumstances and the improbability that if such an incident had occurred it would not have been witnessed by the other adults present in the room and caused the young children in the room to become upset and report the incident to parents or other teachers. Rather, respondent avers, what the proofs show is that she was properly attempting to control an out-of-control child, just as the law permits and the superintendent testified he expected his teachers to do; therefore this charge must also be dismissed.

With regard to the penalty imposed, respondent cites a number of cases wherein physical contact was not found to constitute corporal punishment or where minimal incidents did not result in serious sanctions, contrasting these to cases where dismissal did result as a consequence of several incidents far more serious than the incidents alleged herein.

The Board, on the other hand, urges acceptance of the ALJ's findings regarding the incidents underlying the tenure charges, but seeks a heavier penalty than that imposed by the ALJ. The Board notes that a close examination of respondent's testimony and briefing position will indicate that she essentially denies much of what the ALJ found to be true based on his assessment of witnesses whose credibility he had the opportunity to judge directly. Particular note is made of the fact that three witnesses testified that, immediately following the April 1990 incident, respondent admitted striking the child, stated that she was on medication and attributed her inexplicable conduct to her stressed physical condition, all of which respondent now denies. Moreover, the Board observes, although the ALJ found that the experience of litigating the within charges had demonstrated to respondent the unacceptability of her conduct so that a lesser penalty should suffice under the circumstances, respondent in her exceptions objects even to this penalty and disavows all responsibility for any improper actions. In view of this, the Board argues, the very least that is warranted is forfeiture of the 120 days' pay withheld during suspension, in addition to loss of an increment as recommended by the ALJ.

Upon careful review of this matter, including the transcripts of hearings before the ALJ, the Commissioner affirms the findings of the ALJ regarding the incidents underlying the tenure charges, but determines to impose a heavier penalty than that recommended in the initial decision.

In so doing, the Commissioner rejects respondent's contentions that the Board failed to prove the charges at issue herein. That it elected not to pursue certain avenues of proof (such as compelling first-grade students, or a DYFS investigator by court order, to testify to events otherwise witnessed by adults within the school system) in no way detracts from the proofs and testimony that were presented, which the Commissioner, like the ALJ, finds sufficiently convincing in their own right. Neither does the Commissioner find any basis in the hearing transcripts or elsewhere to question the credibility assessments made by the ALJ, particularly regarding the testimony of Ms. DiAngelio and the disparate accounts of the immediate aftermath of the April 1990 incident. To the contrary, the ALJ has taken great pains to carefully weigh and analyze the situations underlying the tenure charges, both as to what actually occurred and as to proper penalty in view thereof.

With regard to such penalty, however, while the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that dismissal is not warranted in this matter, he disagrees with the ALJ's recommendation that withholding of increment is a sufficient consequence for respondent's behavior. Even though respondent's record is otherwise unblemished and it appears that there was no premeditation, cruelty or deliberate attempt to injure children in the actions underlying the charges against her, inappropriate touching and loss of control of the type demonstrated in this matter cannot be countenanced in public school teachers under any circumstances. Therefore, to impress upon respondent and others the seriousness of the conduct at issue herein, the Commissioner directs that in addition to the employment and adjustment increments recommended by the ALJ, respondent shall forfeit the 120 days' pay withheld from her during her suspension following certification of charges to the Commissioner. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Anne Boyd, Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, Monmouth County, decided July 10, 1992

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein in all respects except as to penalty imposed, where the determination of the ALJ is modified to include forfeiture of the 120 days' salary withheld during respondent's suspension upon certification of charges to the Commissioner.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

OF HIGHLAND PARK, MIDDLESEX	:
COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Board certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a school employee against respondent, custodian since 1977, for theft of upholstered chair from faculty lounge.

Initial decision concluded respondent did engage in conduct unbecoming a school employee. ALJ found although value of chair was slight, there was an unlawful taking and a dishonest act by a public employee that violated public trust. Respondent was ordered removed from his tenured custodial position as of date of final decision.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF GERALD DEPASQUALE, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF HIGHLAND PARK.

James L. Plosia, Jr., Esq., and Karen M. Sorrell, Esq., for petitioner (Sills, Cummis, Zuckerman, Radin, Tischman, Epstein & Gross, attorneys)

Stephen E. Klausner, Esq., for respondent (Klausner, Hunter & Cige, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 19, 1992 Decided: July 15, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

The Highland Park Board of Education, petitioner, certified to the Commissioner of Education tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a school employee against Gerald DePasquale, respondent, a tenured custodian in the Board's employ. The respondent filed an answer and the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. After notice, a prehearing conference was held on September 27, 1991. The matter was set down for hearing and was heard on April 13, 1992, at the Highland Park Municipal Court.

THE CHARGES

The respondent was assigned to work the second shift at Highland Park High School in the 1990-91 school year. The Board alleges that on March 8, 1991, at approximately 5:30 p.m. the respondent removed a large upholstered chair from the faculty lounge at the school and took it from Board property. It is undisputed that the chair eventually reappeared in the faculty lounge. The issue to be determined is whether the respondent by his actions or by his responses to school administrators or both engaged in conduct unbecoming a school employee.

The burden of proof lies with the charging party.

RELEVANT EVIDENCE

Joseph Blaszczyk testified. He was a Highland Park High School janitor until June or July 1990. He left his position after an incident in which a child was slapped. No charges were preferred against Blaszczyk.

On March 8, 1991, he drove by the high school on North 5th Street. He saw the respondent struggling with a chair. He pulled into the parking lot. It was 5 or 6 p.m. on a Friday evening and there were a few other cars in the lot. The witness asked the respondent if the respondent needed help. He helped the respondent place the chair in the witness' car. They drove the car around the building to the front door. DePasquale told the witness the chair had to be repaired. He also said there was a practice going on in the auditorium and he could not make any noise in the area. The witness left as the respondent took the chair into the building.

Sandra Jean Krupinski, who has been a chemistry teacher in the school for six years testified. She returned to the high school on March 8, 1991, at approximately 4:30 p.m. She parked in the administrative parking area, entered the school, went up two flights to the science wing and got some materials from her room. She retraced her steps to the first floor and went to the school office, which she found locked. She observed the faculty room door being held open by Blaszczyk and another, rather large, man. She walked into the faculty room and observed the subject chair in the middle of the room. She asked Blaszczyk, "Where's Gerry?" She also stated she needed to get into the office. Blaszczyk pointed and the witness saw the respondent coming down the hallway pushing a handcart. She asked the respondent to let her into the office and he did. She entered, got the materials she needed, noted the photocopy machine numbers, turned out the lights, locked the door and left. She went back to her room for a book and lesson plans. There was no one near the main office when she left.

Upon returning to the first floor, the witness saw DePasquale, Blaszczyk and a third man trying to get the chair through a door. They stopped to let her through. While going to her car, she noticed a brown station wagon with the tailgate down parked next to her vehicle. She saw no one else while she was in the building and she knew of no other activities going on in the building.

Younan Greiss, a custodian since 1988, testified. On March 8, 1991, he and three others were working the 3 p.m. - 11 p.m. shift. At about 4 p.m., the witness took boxes outside using the administrative parking lot exit. He saw the respondent and Blaszczyk with the chair on the stairway to the exit. The witness put his trash out and observed the men carrying the chair from the steps to the parking lot to the car. He then went back to work and observed nothing else.

A few days later, the witness heard that DePasquale had been questioned by the high school principal about the chair. No school official ever asked Greiss if he had helped move the chair. The witness did make a statement to school officials about what he had observed.

Joseph L. Hood, principal of the school for five years, testified. In 1990-91, three custodians worked 7 a.m. - 3 p.m. and four custodians worked 3 p.m. - 11 p.m. Custodians DePasquale, Greiss, Jones and Tofte worked the second shift.

On Monday, March 11, he spoke to Krupinski and she reported the chair missing from the faculty room. She told the principal she had seen the respondent removing the chair on the prior Friday. The principal checked the faculty room and observed that the chair, indeed, was not there. He asked the head custodian about it. The head custodian reported there was no reason for the chair to be gone.

The principal spoke to the respondent. He stated he didn't know about the chair being missing. He then suggested that the principal check with the drama coach, presumably because the coach could have used the chair as a stage prop. The principal advised DePasquale that the chair, "Needed to come back to the faculty lounge." DePasquale stated he removed the chair to clean the room and then noticed it missing. The principal told DePasquale that he had been seen taking the chair from the building. DePasquale repeated that he took the chair out of the room to clean the room and when he was finished, the chair was missing. He stated he would look for the chair and again stated he did not know where the chair was. On the morning of March 12, the chair was back in place. The principal contacted the chair of the local education association and stated that he wanted to see DePasquale that afternoon and asked that a union representative arrange to be present. The meeting was held that afternoon.

The principal stated he was concerned about the removal of the chair from the school. DePasquale stated the chair was back and there was no need to worry now. The principal said he was still concerned that the chair was removed at all and that the matter should not have occurred. At some point, the respondent stated he did take the chair from the building and removed it to a storeroom by going around the building and entering through another entrance. This, of course, was different from his statement of the previous day. DePasquale asked several times who had told the principal that he took the chair from the building. The principal stated he would have to report the matter to the superintendent and advised the respondent to consult his union.

The storeroom in question is on the Montgomery Street side of the building, down a short flight of stairs. There were no activities going on in the building on the late afternoon of March 8, 1991, that the principal was aware of. Rug cleaning is usually done during the summer. If it were needed during the school year, it would be done on longer breaks such as the December vacation. During cleaning, furniture is stored in hallways. The witness also reported no change in the condition of the faculty room rug between March 8 and March 12.

Superintendent Peter J. Bastardo testified. He discussed the chair incident with Principal Hood. Hood reported he had checked into the matter of the chair disappearing and then reappearing. The superintendent received the principal's report and waited until he had a full report before taking any action. At some point later in March 1991 he sent a letter to the respondent directing that he come in with his attorney and have a meeting. The respondent declined to participate without a list of witnesses against him being supplied. He was given the list and the meeting was scheduled. DePasquale's attorney appeared, but DePasquale did not. Theft was denied and it was asserted that Greiss had helped DePasquale. After the meeting, the superintendent checked with Greiss, who denied giving any assistance to the respondent.

The witness had no personal knowledge of DePasquale's employment history. DePasquale was suspended without pay and, 120 days later, the Board ordered him back to work when it resumed paying him, per statute. The respondent was assigned to a smaller school and has keys only for the areas in which he works.

The Board survived a motion to dismiss and the respondent put on his case.

Gerald DePasquale stated that he removed the chair from the faculty room on March 8, 1991 on a hand truck and took it to another area to repair it. He got locked out of the building and because the locks are old, his keys did not work. He took the chair from the parking lot to the front door with Blaszczyk's help. He then put the chair in a stockroom, resumed work and forgot about the chair.

On Monday, March 11, the principal asked the respondent where the chair was. The witness testified that Hood questioned him extensively. The witness stated, "All things like that he put against me."

The respondent stated Blaszczyk was never in the building. He came into the parking lot as the respondent was repairing the chair. Blaszczyk helped the respondent get the chair to the front door and from the front door to a storage room. The respondent then was called away to help Greiss.

DePasquale stated that Krupinski was wrong about three men being at the faculty room. He also stated he had no intention to take the chair, he intended to repair it outside the building because play practice was going on and the coach would brook no noise; that the chair was fixed before Blaszczyk drove by; and that the witness was struggling to "walk" to the front door and reenter the building. He also stated putting the chair in the stockroom was the fastest way to take care of the chair from the front door. He never got a chance to clean the faculty room and the chair stored in the stockroom left his mind. He did not want to leave the chair in the hallway while pupils were in the building. He could have put the chair in the school office, but did not. He took it upon himself to shampoo the faculty lounge rug but did not complete the job and did not remove any other furniture. He never told anyone he removed the chair to repair it, but fixed the chair "on my own."

The witness also testified that the principal told him if the chair were returned, the principal would forget about the incident. The chair was returned and then, about two weeks later, the respondent started to get letters from the principal. Eventually, tenure charges were filed. The witness identified his affidavit which he signed in his attorney's offices. He did not read the affidavit before he signed it. His own attorney did not let him see the affidavit. At hearing, the witness stated that the affidavit contained answers he did not agree to. He also testified that, contrary to paragraph five of the charges, he never stated that he removed the chair from the faculty room so that he could clean the carpet in the lounge. He agrees, however, that the principal asked about the chair.

The witness was questioned extensively about the charges and his answer and the parts of which he agreed with and those parts that he did not. The witness also signed the first set of answers to requests for admissions and interrogatories, but says he did not admit "to all these things."

The witness again testified about events of March 8, 1991. He now stated he asked Greiss to help him get the chair into the storeroom, but Greiss declined to be involved. The chair was in the front-door area at the time. He never saw Krupinski inside the building and denies she asked to be let into the office. The witness testified further, generally repeating his earlier testimony.

Donald Ralph, a guidance counselor since 1969, testified. He is president of the Highland Park Education Association and is a member of the New Jersey Bar. As a staff member, he was involved in decorating the faculty lounges. The furniture in the lounges was bought and donated by the faculty. The faculty made no complaints to the administration about missing furniture. The witness has dealt with the respondent, who apparently has reading comprehension difficulties. He has assisted the respondent with documents, sometimes successfully, sometimes not. As union representative, he attended some of the meetings with the respondent's attorney. There are some questions concerning the respondent's comprehension. His first response is always, "I understand." Then, on further questioning, he admits he does not comprehend.

The witness could not say that the chair was in disrepair in March 1991. He knew, after the fact, that Krupinski had told the principal of a problem. DePasquale's attorney took special care to elicit facts from him. The respondent knew that theft was the gravamen of the charges against him. The witness also took special care to explain the situation to the respondent.

Younan Greiss, recalled, testified that the respondent did not ask him at any time on March 8, 1991, to help carry or move the chair. Neither did the respondent help Greiss move bleachers on that day.

DETERMINATION

Having heard and observed the witnesses as they testified and having reviewed all the documents in this case, I FIND:

1. On March 8, 1991, Gerald DePasquale removed a chair from the faculty lounge at Highland Park High School and took it from the building into a parking lot.
2. The chair was placed in a vehicle and removed from school premises.
3. The chair was not in place on Monday, March 11, 1991.
4. Upon being advised of the situation, the principal properly conducted an inquiry.
5. During the course of the inquiry, the principal advised the respondent that the chair should be in its place.
6. On the morning of March 12, 1991, the chair reappeared in the faculty lounge.
7. The respondent's version of the events is not credible.
8. The proofs presented by the Board are both credible and convincing.

In consideration of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the Highland Park Board of Education has shown that Gerald DePasquale, a tenured custodian in its employ, engaged in conduct unbecoming a school employee in the period March 8-12, 1991.

The value of the chair involved in the incident is likely very slight. A more important consideration, however, is that there was an unlawful taking, however brief. This cannot be condoned. A board of education has the right to presume the basic honesty of its employees. A dishonest act by a public employee violates the public trust.

I ORDER Gerald DePasquale removed from his tenured custodian position with the Highland Park Board of Education effective on the date of a final decision in this matter.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GERALD DE PASQUALE,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE BOROUGH	:	DECISION
OF HIGHLAND PARK, MIDDLESEX	:
COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, as were replies thereto by the Board.

In his exceptions, respondent first contends that the ALJ improperly ignored the testimony of witness Blaszczyk to the effect that respondent only took the chair to repair it and was in the process of returning it to the building when observed by the witness. He further renews the arguments of his post-hearing submission to the effect that, even crediting the Board's version of the facts, no "theft" occurred because there was no extended deprivation as required by N.J.S.A. 2C:20-1a(2) and the property at issue was owned not by the Board but by the faculty association, which lodged no complaint against respondent. In reply, the Board observes that the ALJ did not "ignore" Blaszczyk's testimony, but rather credited the conflicting testimony given by other witnesses. The Board then notes that neither actual property ownership nor standards for criminal prosecution are applicable to a tenure matter where the basic issue is the Board's need to rely on the honesty of its employees.

Upon careful review of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that respondent must be dismissed from his tenured employment.

The initial decision's findings of fact were properly based on credibility determinations which the Commissioner finds no reason to challenge in either the record before the ALJ* or respondent's exceptions. Nor is the Commissioner persuaded by respondent's arguments that no "theft" occurred because the chair at issue was purchased by the faculty association and was promptly returned when its disappearance was brought to respondent's attention. As the Board properly notes, the chair was taken from district premises and respondent lied repeatedly to avoid the consequences of his actions. Such dishonesty is, as noted by the ALJ, inherently incompatible with public employment and cannot be countenanced by the Commissioner.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein and respondent's tenured employment is terminated as of the date of this decision.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former Science Department Supervisor whose position was abolished, challenged appointment of nontenured individual to new position of Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance. Board contended it needed to hire female so as not to cause disparate impact on basis of sex in violation of Title 7 of Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended by Civil Rights Act of 1991.

ALJ found petitioner was entitled to supervisory position by virtue of tenure law. ALJ found mere disparity in numbers of male versus female administrators, which may or may not be related to impact of tenure entitlement laws, cannot serve as basis for denying employment claims of a staff member who is clearly entitled to a position by tenure right. Board was ordered to appoint petitioner to position of Departmental Assistant as of September 1, 1991.

Commissioner concurred with findings and determination in initial decision and directed petitioner's appointment with compensation and benefits retroactive to September 1, 1991.

Record Closed: June 1, 1992 Decided: July 15, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH F. MARTONE, ALJ.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter petitioner alleges that respondent violated his tenure rights by abolishing the position of Science Department Supervisor held by petitioner and by appointing a non-tenured supervisor as a Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 6, 1991, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The matter was assigned to the undersigned administrative law judge (ALJ) on October 18, 1991, and was scheduled for a telephone prehearing conference, which was held on December 9, 1991. A prehearing order was entered on December 11, 1991, settling the procedures to be followed in this matter and scheduling a hearing for March 18, 1992.

Prior to the scheduled hearing date, the attorneys for the respective parties agreed to submit a joint stipulation of all relevant facts and further agreed that no hearing would be required. After the submission of a stipulation of facts and the receipt of the legal arguments from the attorneys for the respective parties, and after affording the ALJ an opportunity to review these submissions, the record closed on June 1, 1992.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

A complete statement of all facts deemed to be relevant by the parties to these proceedings is set forth in the stipulation of facts (Exhibit J-1) and the exhibits annexed thereto (Exhibits J-2 through J-5). For purposes of this Initial Decision, I will outline and summarize the facts which I found to be relevant.

Petitioner was first employed by respondent in September, 1971, as a science and math teacher. He continued to teach science and math until June 30, 1976 Beginning in September, 1976, his teaching responsibilities were limited to science, which continued through December, 1980. In January, 1981, petitioner was appointed as Science Department Supervisor and was reassigned to the Fort Lee High School. He held that position continuously from January, 1981, until June, 1991.

Petitioner has a Teacher of Science Certificate and a Teacher of Mathematics Certificate, both issued in December, 1972. He also has a Principal and a Supervisor Certificate issued in March, 1981.

On April 30, 1991, the school district's annual budget for the 1991-1992 school year was rejected by the voters. On May 16, 1991, the Borough of Fort Lee, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:22-37, certified an amount for the 1991-1992 school budget which was $586,689 less than the original proposed current expense budget which had been rejected. This included a reduction of $33,896 in the account for supervisors' salaries.

By resolution dated May 23, 1991, respondent eliminated the title of Department Supervisor. On May 24, 1991, respondent advised petitioner that the position of Department Supervisor had been abolished and that petitioner would be reassigned to a classroom position.

By resolution dated June 3, 1991, (Exhibit J-4), respondent created the position of Departmental Assistant, and on June 4, 1991, respondent advertised for applicants to that position.

On June 12, 1991, respondent requested approval from the county superintendent's office for the creation of the title of Departmental Assistant (Exhibit J-2).

On June 13, 1991, petitioner applied for the position of Departmental Assistant. However, respondent decided not to employ petitioner in this position but instead employed a non-tenured Supervisor as Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance.

On October 29, 1991, the Acting County Superintendent of Schools approved the title of Departmental Assistant indicating that the authorizing endorsement for the title was Supervisor, and the legal title of Departmental Assistant was also Supervisor (Exhibit J-3).

The qualifications for the title of Departmental Assistant require the holder to have a New Jersey Teacher's Certificate, Supervisor's Certificate, Masters Degree from an accredited college or university, and a minimum of three years teaching experience (Exhibit J-4). Petitioner received a Bachelor of Science Degree from Fairleigh Dickinson University in 1960, and a Master of Science Degree from New York University in 1965

The professional staff employed by respondent, exluding central office and building administation and supervisors, totals 254 employees of which 191, or 75.2 percent are female and 63, or 24.8 percent are male.

The total central office administration, building administration and supervisors employed by respondent are 19 employees of which five, or 26.3 percent are female, and 14, or 73.7 percent are male.

The number of male and female administrative/supervisory staff includes a female Departmental Assistant appointed by respondent, having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance. This Departmental Assistant is not tenured and was appointed effective for the 1991-1992 school year.

The female appointed to the position of Departmental Assistant began her service as a Supervisor in September, 1991. She previously had served in a non-supervisory, teaching staff position since 1963.

Respondent asserts that if petitioner is appointed to the position held by the non-tenured female Departmental Assistant, it would result in increasing the percentage of male administrative/supervisory staff to 78.9 percent and decreasing the female administrative/supervisory staff to 21.1 percent. Respondent asserts that it is subject to the requirement of N.J.A.C. 6.4-1.6(a)(b) to create gender balance throughout the district, including approved goals for the appointment of females to administrative/supervisory positions.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Tenure is a legislative status, not acquired in any specific assignment, but in the "positions" enumerated in *N.J.S.A.*18A:28-5. This statute provides in relevant part that teaching staff members may acquire tenure in the positions enumerated in the statute and in such other positions which "require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the board of examiners . . ."

In this case, petitioner has had a supervisor certificate since March, 1981. Thus, based on his years of service as Science Department Supervisor, petitioner has met the tenure requirement so as to have acquired tenure in the position of Supervisor.

Notwithstanding the fact that petitioner acquired tenure as a Supervisor, respondent appointed a non-tenured Supervisor as Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance. Consequently, petitioner contends that as compared to the non-tenured individual currently in the position of Departmental Assistant for math, science and guidance, he has a greater entitlement to be appointed to that position. Petitioner relies upon Capodilupo v. West Orange Board of Education, 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App.Div. 1987); Bednar v Westwood Board of Education, 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App.Div. 1987), Schienholz v. Ewing Township Board of Education, 1989 S.L. D., June 19, 1989, affirmed in part and reversed in part, State Board of Education, February 2, 1990, affirmed by the Appellate Division (N.J. App.Div., A-2905-89T3, Nov. 19, 1990) (unreported); Herbert v. Board of Education of the Township of Middletown, 1989 S.L.D., July 25, 1989, affirmed, State Board of Education, August 1, 1990, affirmed, Appellate Division (N.J. App.Div., A-318-90T1, May 22, 1991) (unreported); Dennery v. Passaic Valley High School, 251 N.J. Super. 144 (App.Div. 1991).

In its Letter Brief, respondent through its attorney argues that respondent and now the Commissioner of Education through the OAL, is forced to choose between the somewhat diametrically opposed obligations imposed by different provisions of New Jersey Laws dealing with public education. Respondent points out that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-6 prohibits discrimination based on sex in the formulation of wages, compensation, appointment, assignment, promotion, transfer, resignation, dismissal or other matter pertaining to the employment of teachers in any school supported by public funds. Respondent argues that this obligation appears to be in conflict with the requirement of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 which grants teaching staff members such as petitioner seniority rights when tenured positions are abolished as a result of a reduction in force.

Respondent points out that no case appears to be directly on point in this jurisdiction. However, it argues that there is no question that respondent has been placed in the position of being accused of violating both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-6 as well as the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1991 if it appoints petitioner to the supervisory position of Departmental Assistant. It asserts that while the selection of petitioner could have been made without intentional, sexual discrimination by respondent, the disparate impact of such a decision in favor of tenure rights, given the wide disparity in the ratio of total female employees to total female supervisors, could subject respondent to such a challenge.

Respondent asserts that the unequal number of male supervisors compared to the number of female professional staff employees can only continue if tenure rights are given preference over attempts to cure disparities which exist in the number of female supervisors compared to female employees. Respondent indicates that should petitioner's complaint be upheld, respondent will have no choice under current fiscal constraints but to reassign the non-tenured female employee back into the ranks of the teaching staff population, thereby perpetuating the inequality of the current situation.

In the present case, petitioner is a tenured supervisor who has been removed from a position as a result of a reorganization by the respondent. Respondent has filled the position of Departmental Assistant for science, math and guidance with a non-tenured supervisor despite the fact that petitioner has tenure. This is clearly a violation of the tenure law.

Respondent appears to argue that the tenure statute and respondent's use of tenure as an employment practice has caused a disparate impact on the basis of sex, in violation of Title 7 of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended by the Civil Rights Act of 1991. However, see 42 U.S.C A. § 2,000 e-2(k)(1)(A)(i) which provides that an unlawful employment practice based on disparate impact is established only if a complaining party demonstrates that a respondent uses a particular employment practice that causes a disparate impact on the basis of sex, and the respondent fails to demonstrate that the challenged practice is job related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity. In order to prove disparate impact, a plaintiff must first identify the specific employment practice being challenged, and then show that the practice excluded the plaintiff, as a member of a protected group, from a job or promotion opportunity. Waisome v. Port Authority of New York & New Jersey, 948 F.2d. 1370, 1375 (2nd Cir. 1991). In this regard, statistical evidence of disparities may be probative if they are so great that they cannot be accounted for by chance. Id.

However, there has been no proof of disparate impact caused by the Teacher Tenure Law, and no complainant has come forward to claim that the Teacher Tenure

Law results in disparate impact on the basis of sex. Once violations of the Civil Rights Act are established, then respondent may be ordered to take appropriate action to remedy such violaions. However, the statistical evidence of disparities which may or may not be related to enforcement of the New Jersey Teacher Tenure Law may not be used as a basis for ignoring the provisions of the tenure law.

Petitioner is certified and has tenure in a supervisor's position and the non-tenured appointee does not. Accordingly, based upon the undisputed facts in this matter, I FIND that petitioner has tenure as as supervisor and is entitled to appointment to the position of Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science and guidance.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing it is hereby ORDERED that respondent shall forthwith appoint petitioner as Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibilities for math, science, and guidance. It is further ORDERED that petitioner is entitled to back pay and emoluments effective as of September 1, 1991.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that mere disparity in numbers of male versus female administrators, which may or may not be related to the impact of tenure entitlement laws, cannot serve as a basis for denying the employment claims of a staff member who is clearly entitled to a position by tenure right.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law directing the Board to forthwith appoint petitioner, with back pay and emoluments from September 1, 1991, to the position of Departmental Assistant having supervisory responsibility for math, science and guidance, is affirmed for the reasons well expressed therein.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged denial of English endorsement by Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification. Petitioner had been given outdated information from county office. A 1985 amendment to N.J.A.C. 6:11-5.1 had changed rule to require 30 semester-hour credits instead of 24.

ALJ concluded petitioner failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that respondents must issue him an endorsement to teach English as he did not meet the current requirements for such issuance. Moreover, ALJ found petitioner was owed a coherent explanation of why his coursework was insufficient and directed an evaluation of petitioner's credentials by the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification.

Commissioner concurred with ALJ that petitioner had not met requirements for the endorsement. Commissioner, however, modified initial decision's directive that the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification provide petitioner a credentials evaluation as current regulations leave the decision as to what constitutes a "coherent sequence" in a subject area to the approved college of attendance.

Record Closed: June 9, 1992 Decided: July 17, 1992

BEFORE EDGAR R. HOLMES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Joseph LaRosa, Jr., petitioner, graduated from Glassboro State College in 1976 with a Bachelor's Degree in Communications. He worked in the field of communications for more than ten years. First as a tourist representative for the Cape May County Department of Public Affairs and later, with Bally's Park Place

Casino. In 1989 he managed Farley State Marina for the Trump Castle Casino. At that time he determined to return to Glassboro State College and obtain certification as a social studies teacher.

During the time when petitioner returned as a student to Glassboro State College in order to be certified as a social studies teacher, he visited the Office of the Cape May County Superintendent of Schools in Cape May Court House, in order to obtain the information necessary to be accredited as an English Teacher too. However, he was given materials which were outdated.

The materials petitioner received explicitly stated that to receive an institutional certificate endorsed "Teacher of English" one was required to have, among numerous other requirements, "24 semester-hour credits in English ..." The paragraph went on to allocate the number of minimum hours required in the areas of Composition, Literature, Speech Arts or Dramatics and Communication Arts. The first three were required areas according to a footnote.

Unfortunately, a 1985 amendment to N.J.A.C. 6:11-5.1 the source for the requirements for certification, changed the rule to require 30 semester-hour credits instead of 24.

After petitioner obtained his certificate in social studies through Glassboro State College, he forwarded his application to be certified in English to the Office of Teacher Certification and Academic Credentials through the Cape May County Superintendent's Office. On February 13, 1991, he received a letter advising him that the regulation had been changed and now required "30 credits in a coherent sequence in the subject field."

Thereafter, a lengthy correspondence followed between petitioner and Department of Education officials culminating in the petitioner filing a demand to be certified in English. His demand is the petition filed herein on December 5, 1991 with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 7, 1992, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et. seq. and N.J.S.A. 14F-1*et. seq.* to be heard as a contested case. The matter was heard on June 9, 1992.

At the hearing petitioner relied upon the fact that the Cape May County Superintendent supplied him with an outdated summary of the certification requirement as the basis for his demand that he be certified.

Apparently, he relies upon unformed notions of detrimental reliance, estoppel, or specific performance. He argued that as a result of the Department of Education's failure to certify him he was unable to get a job as a school teacher, because persons certified only in social studies are "a dime a dozen." He asserts that had he also been certified in English he would have been more employable.

On cross examination petitioner acknowledged that he never discussed English certification with Glassboro State College officials or his advisor. He also admitted that it is a "bad job market" for teachers. He was working at the time of the hearing as a REACH Coordinator, employed by the Vineland Board of Education. He told us that funding for this position would shortly expire. Finally, the petitioner advised that he has satisfactorily passed the National Teacher Examination in English.

The Legislature has empowered the State Board of Examiners with the authority and responsibility to "issue appropriate certificates" to teachers. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-38. It is a heavy responsibility because the Constitution requires that our students receive both a "thorough and efficient education." N.J. Constitution, article VIII, Section IV, para.1.

This policy should not be thwarted by traditional notions of contract law or liability. Indeed, the State would be immune from tort liability for the action complained of here. N.J.S.A. 59:2-5.

To compel the Department to certify the petitioner would defeat the public policy expressed in the Constitution and the Statute. See Summer Cottager's Ass'n of Cape May v. City of Cape May 19 N.J. 493; City of Hackensack v. Winner, 82 N.J. 1, 30. Unqualified teachers, just as unqualified surgeons, should not be licensed to practice under any condition.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to prove by a preponderance of the evidence that the respondents must issue a certification to teach English.

Nevertheless, the petitioner is entitled to more than he received. The deputy apologized on behalf of the County Superintendent for the mistake in supplying him with an outdated regulation as has the County Superintendent herself. But the petitioner had not yet received a coherent explanation of why he was not eligible to be certified as an English teacher. He ought to have received at minimum a credentials evaluation which lists the courses he has completed and which the Department considers count towards the 30 hours required in English Certification. Only with such information can the petitioner intelligently plan for the future since it is the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification which has the final say in matters of certification. Of course such an evaluation may be appealed to the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes.

I therefore ORDER that the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification evaluate the petitioner's college transcripts and advise him in writing which courses and semester hours he has successfully completed and which it considers count toward the 30 hours in English required for certification.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that, while it is unfortunate that petitioner was given outdated information on certification requirements at the time of his initial inquiry, the State's interest in licensing only teachers who have fully met such requirements cannot be thwarted by circumstances such as those herein. Accordingly, the Commissioner affirms that portion of the initial decision dismissing the Petition of Appeal on this basis.

The Commissioner cannot, however, concur with the ALJ's directive that the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification provide petitioner with a credentials evaluation listing the completed courses which the Department deems to count toward the 30-hour "coherent sequence" requirement so that petitioner can intelligently plan for the future. This is so because current regulations, which were in effect at the time of petitioner's application, leave the decision as to what constitutes a "coherent sequence" to the approved college of attendance rather than to the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification, which has no discretion to disagree with the determination of an approved college teacher preparation program in this regard. N.J.A.C. 6:11-5.1(a)2, 6:11-5.2(b), 6:11-7.1, 6:11-7.3(b) Therefore, there is nothing further that petitioner could learn from any review by the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification. Petitioner's proper course of action would be to consult with approved college(s) of his choice, present his completed coursework and fulfill whatever obligations remain to meet his chosen college's coherent sequence standard. Such action would remove any impediment to petitioner's certification application resulting from failure to meet the 30-credit requirement.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed in its ultimate dismissal of the Petition of Appeal, but modified as set forth herein as to the ALJ's directive to the Division of Teacher Preparation and Certification.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board sought declaration that S.K., child of respondent parents who resided illegally year-round at a campsite violating rules and regulations of campground condominium association, did not qualify for free education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. Respondents contended they were domiciled within Middle Township and thus S.K. was entitled to free education therein.

ALJ dismissed petition finding parents had "all-year-round dwelling place" in district even though residency was carried out in defiance of association's bylaws. (Orange Board of Education v. New Jersey State Department of Education) Thus, respondents should be deemed domiciled therein for school attendance purposes.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

Record Closed: June 29, 1992 Decided: July 20, 1992

BEFORE JOSEPH E. KANE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Middle Township Board of Education, petitioner, filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) seeking a declaration that K.K and P. K., respondents, are not legally domiciled within Middle Township, New Jersey, and as a result, their child, S.K. does not qualify for a free education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. Respondents contend that they are domiciled within Middle Township, New Jersey and as such, their child is entitled to a free education within the school district.

The Commissioner on February 13, 1992 transferred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The matter was conferenced at the Atlantic City OAL, 1201 Bacharach Boulevard, Atlantic City, New Jersey on June 8, 1992 at which time, the parties agreed that the matter should be determined based on the submission of stipulated facts and briefs. Briefs and a stipulation of facts was filed and the record closed on June 28, 1992. A decision was rendered on July 20, 1992.

ISSUE

WHETHER RESPONDENTS HAVE ESTABLISHED A DOMICILE SO AS TO ENTITLE THEIR CHILD TO A FREE EDUCATION PURSUANT TO N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 ET SEQ. WHEN THEY HAVE BEEN LIVING IN A CAMPGROUND YEAR ROUND, THE OCCUPANCY OF WHICH VIOLATES STATE REGULATIONS, LOCAL ORDINANCE AND THE RULES AND REGULATIONS OF THE CAMPGROUND CONDOMINIUM ASSOCIATION.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The petitioner filed a petition with the Commissioner seeking an order declaring that the respondents are not domiciled within Middle Township, New Jersey and thus, their child is not entitled to a free education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. Additionally, petitioner also requested that respondents be ordered to pay for their child's education commencing October 17, 1991. The respondents claim that they have been domiciled within Middle Township, New Jersey since 1985 and thus are entitled to a free education for their child. This matter involves an interpretation of the meaning of "domicile" within the Attendance at School Free of Charge, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq.

The respondents and their two minor children, S.K. and A.K. have lived at Hideaway Beach Campground in the Township of Middle, County of Cape May since March of 1985. Seven year old S.K. was registered in the Middle Township Public School System in April of 1990, has attended school and travels on the school bus.

In 1981 the owner of the Hideaway Beach Campground filed a Master Deed converting the campground into a condominium of campsites. Thereafter, the owner sold off the individual campsites, one of which was purchased by the respondents.

The campground is operated by the Hideaway Beach Campground Association and is comprised of 344 individually owned campsites. Each owner has an undivided 1/344 interest in certain common areas set forth in the Master Deed.

Relevant to this instant matter, the condominium Master Deed sets forth at Article IX, Sec. W, language which closely tracts N.J.A.C. 8:22-1.15, that "a campsite owner shall not occupy a campsite for more than 21 days within any given 30 day period from November 1 to April 1." The Master Deed further provides that water to the individual sites of the campground was to be discontinued between November 1 and April 1 to facilitate the enforcement of the closing of the campground.

> W. The Declarant, the Association and the Administrator shall comply with all provisions of N.J.A.C. 8:22-1.1 et seq. relating to campgrounds. From November 1 to April 1, the occupancy of any one campsite shall be restricted to a period not to exceed 21 days during any 30-day period. Recreational vehicles when not in use may remain on the campsite. As a further means of ensuring seasonal use and minimizing condominium costs, the Association shall discontinue all water service to the campsites in the condominium during the period between November 1 and April 1, inclusive, each year. The Association shall, however, allow use of individual campsites consistent with the above-cited provisions of the New Jersey Administrative Code and may furnish limited bath house facilities during this period. This provision is a restrictive covenant binding upon all campsite owners. Provided, however, that if the laws of the State of New Jersey which are applicable to this provision shall be altered, changed, modified or amended or new laws or regulations be enacted then this provision shall be deemed to and shall be automatically amended to conform to such enactments. (Emphasis supplied.)

In 1988, the Middle Township Committee adopted ordinance 653-88 entitled "An Ordinance Requiring the Payment of All Delinquent Local Real Property Taxes Before the Issuance of Any permit Affecting Said Real Property." Section V of that Ordinance provides:

> Any license issued by the Township of Middle may be revoked or suspended by the township Committee upon submission of proof by its applicable enforcement officers that the taxes on the premises have remained unpaid for a period of three consecutive quarters.

This device ostensibly was a method embraced by Middle Township to seek the enforcement of the collection of taxes of the individual campsites and to transfer the enforcement responsibility and burden to the campground itself and the condominium association that runs the campground.

Consistent with that approach, Ordinance 694-89, enacted on September 21, 1989, dealt with the issue of year-round residency and occupancy of the campground and also attempted to place policing responsibilities on the condominium association. Paragraphs A and C of the ordinance are instructive. Paragraph A states:

> No licensee shall permit any permanent structure to be affixed to any campsite in the licensed campground.

Paragraph B states:

> Only motor vehicles or motor-drawn vehicles in compliance with the State Campground Code or Law may be located on any campsite in any licensed campground. Said vehicles shall not be altered in any manner that would prevent ready removal thereof.

Paragraph C states:

> No licensee shall permit the occupancy of any motor vehicle or motor-drawn vehicle in the licensed campground in such a manner so as to facilitate the establishment of domicile or residency for the occupant thereof. No licensee shall permit any person or entity to occupy any vehicle or other structure situate on the licensed campground who does any of the following:
>
> (1) Registers to vote from the campground;
> (2) Registers a child in the Middle Township School System or any other school system from the campground;
> (3) Registers a motor vehicle from the campground.

Section 17 of Ordinance 694-89 states that any campground license found in violation of Section 14 shall be subject to the immediate revocation of the campground license.

A court challenge to the validity of the above cited regulations was instituted with the result that the restrictions upon year-round residency at the campground was held to be valid. See decision of the Superior Court, Docket No. L-238-91PW. As of the date of this hearing, the respondents are continuing to reside at the Hideaway Beach Campground and will presumably continue to do so until November 1. 1992. This opinion, however, will only address the issue of whether the respondents were domiciled within Middle Township up until the date of the hearing and will not address those rights to a free education which respondents may, on behalf of their child, assert after November 1, 1992.

The issue to be resolved at this proceeding is whether S.K. will be denied free public education based on an alleged lack of domicile within Middle Township, and whether her parents will be responsible for the cost of her education during the 1991-92 school year.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 provides (in pertinent part) that:

> Public Schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:
>
> (a) Any person who is domiciled within the school district;
>
> (b) Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all-year-round dwelling place within the district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for the purposes of this section. [N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) & (d)].

Thus, Subchapter 38-1, supra, conditions access to a free public education on, inter alia, domicile within the school district, id. at (a) and (d), or, at least, temporary residence therein with a parent or guardian, id. at (d).

In general, domicile is the place of a person's abode where he has the present intention of remaining and to which, if absent, he intends to return. Mercadente v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). A person may have multiple residences, but may have only one true domicile at one time. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238, 251 (1955). Thus, residence may coincide with domicile, but does not, alone, determine it. Id. Where there are several residences, domicile is that place which the subject regards as his true and permanent home. In re Jaffee, 74 N.J. 86, 90-91 (1977); See also, Citizens Bank & Trust Co. v. Glaser, 70 N.J. 72, 81 (1976). A domicile once established continues until it is superseded by a new one. In re Estate of Gillmore, 101 N.J. Super. 77, 87 (App. Div. 1968), cert. denied 52 N.J. 175 (1968).

In a recent case concerning free public education, Fort Lee Bd. of Ed. v. Kintos, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 96, 103, Comm'r decision (Dec. 24, 1991), the Commissioner of Education stressed that the determination of a family's domicile is a matter of intent. Where the family appeared to have lived between and among multiple dwellings, all having some indicia of residency attached, the Commissioner found it necessary to remand the matter to obtain further evidence on the issue of intent. Significantly, the Commissioner stated: "that [the family] may not have actually resided at [the location] for much of the time in question may enure against a claim of domicile therein, but does not necessarily preclude one." Id. at 103.

In the present matter, the question under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) involves the domicile of a minor child. Here, the child lives with both her parents. Consequently, the domicile of the child will follow that of her parents since there are no complicating factors of divorce or separation or any assertions of separate domicile by the mother. See, e.g., V.R. on Behalf of A.R. v. Bd. of Ed. Boro. of Hamburg, 2 N.J.A.R. 283 (1980); C.J. on Behalf of her Minor Children, R.J. and D.J., Jr., v. Bd. of Ed. Boro. of Palmyra, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 1202-86, modified by the Comm'r of Ed. (May 14, 1986). Thus, it simply remains to determine the domicile of the parents.

Both parents and the child live in a campground condominium within Middle Township. They have lived there since March of 1985. The family's year-round occupancy of this site was and is in violation of the condominium association's by-laws which requires that the campground occupants vacate the campsites between the months of November and April of each year. A New Jersey Superior Court has held that the time restrictions set forth in the association's by-laws are valid and may be enforced by the campground association. Thus, it can be assumed for the purposes of this argument that respondent's family will only be permitted to reside in the campground full time between the months of April 1 and November 1.

In actuality, the parents have had only one residence for the past six years and that has been within the petitioning township. Physical presence is undisputed. Thus, if one finds that the parents had the requisite intent--i.e., they intended to make that place their permanent home, to which they would always return following any absence--their domicile (and, thus, the student's domicile) is in Middle Township.

I FIND that the requisite intent is easily established given the duration of the residency and the lack of any indication of an intent to retain a former domicile or to move to an interim one. The family's year-round residency carried out in defiance of the association's by-laws shows a resoluteness foreign of intention.

That the year-round occupancy violated the condominium association's by-laws will not upset the family's claim of domicile. In Orange Bd. of Ed. v. N.J. State Dept. of Ed., OAL Dkt. No. EDU 016-87, Comm'r decision (Nov. 13, 1987), the Commissioner's decision (which reversed the ALJ's determination for other reasons) noted that the fact that the father's residence may have been contrary to senior citizen housing regulations was "of no moment in making a determination of residence for school funding purposes under N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12 and N.J.A.C. 6:20-5.3." This decision also cites I.C. and M.C. on behalf of J.C. v. Bd. of Ed. of Paterson, 1983 S.L.D. 218, for the proposition that, "the possibility of one being an illegal resident in a municipality does not interfere with a child's right to free public schooling." A pivotal issue in the I.C. and M.C. case was whether N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 might be so construed as to import into the phrase "domiciled" a necessary and sufficient exclusion therefrom for illegal resident aliens within the school district. The ALJ concluded (and the Commissioner concurred) that the 14 year old child of the illegal resident alien should be admitted to the public school. The illegality had not defeated the assertion of domicile.

The petitioner argues that the very nature of a campground is indicative of a temporary residence, one which does not establish a domicile.

It must be remembered that the concept of a "domicile" is to be given a much more liberal interpretation when considering whether a child is entitled to receive a free public school education. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) provides another avenue to a free public education.

It provides that a free public education shall be available to persons whose parent, even though not domiciled within the district, resides temporarily therein. It also provides that any person who has had or shall have had his "all-year-round dwelling place" in the district shall be deemed domiciled therein for purposes of a free public education.

Even given credence to petitioner's argument that the student's parents are residing temporarily in the campground, the student should be deemed domiciled in the district for the purposes of school registration.

CONCLUSION

I FIND that respondents have resided within the district continuously since March of 1985 and as a result, the child for the purposes of school registration, is to be deemed domiciled within that district. The by-laws and applicable state regulation and local ordinance have no effect on this determination. Accordingly, I herein DISMISS the petition filed by the petitioner.

I hereby file this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that respondents were domiciled in Middle Township for school attendance purposes during the period at issue notwithstanding that their year-round occupation of a seasonal campsite was in violation of campground bylaws and local ordinances.

SYNOPSIS

Board certified two sets of tenure charges of unbecoming conduct, incapacity, and chronic and excessive lateness and absenteeism against respondent, high school Spanish teacher.

Having considered testimony of witnesses and written reprimands and observation reports, ALJ found even after repeated warnings, withholding of her increment and the certification of first set of tenure charges, respondent showed little interest in improving her performance. ALJ concluded students' academic progress was affected. (Pellechio) Respondent was ordered dismissed from her tenured position.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision as his own. Respondent was ordered dismissed as of date of this decision. Commissioner directed matter be forwarded to State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6 for appropriate action.

Philip Feintuch, Esq., for respondent, Monica Meade-Stephens (Feintuch, Feintuch & Porwich, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 15, 1992 Decided: July 23, 1992

BEFORE EDITH KLINGER, ALJ:

On August 7, 1990, the State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City (District) certified tenure charges against Monica Meade-Stephens to the Commissioner of the Department of Education, alleging chronic and excessive lateness and absenteeism, incapacity, and conduct unbecoming a teacher. An answer was filed on behalf of Meade-Stephens on November 19, 1990, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 4, 1990 for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq

On June 20, 1991, the District certified a second set of tenure charges against Meade-Stephens to the Commissioner, again alleging chronic and excessive absenteeism, incapacity, and conduct unbecoming a teacher. Meade-Stephens filed her answer with the Commissioner on July 30, 1991, and on August 13, 1991, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

An Order consolidating the two cases was issued by the undersigned on September 24, 1991.

At a prehearing conference held on February 25, 1991, it was determined that the following were the issues to be resolved at hearing:

1. Is respondent guilty of chronic and excessive absenteeism?
2. Is respondent guilty of unbecoming conduct?
3. Is respondent incapable of carrying out the duties of her position?
4. What sanctions, if any, are appropriate?

Although the prehearing was held prior to the transmittal of the second set of tenured charges, the issues were identical; hence, the consolidation of the two cases. The hearing took place on May 13, 1992, and the record was held open to permit the parties to submit briefs. When the last submission was received on June 15, the record was closed.

REVIEW OF EVIDENCE

Anne Butler has been an employee of the District for 22 years. She served as vice principal at Lincoln High School during the 1985-86 school year. She also served as principal of Dickinson High School and is presently principal of the Nicholas Copernicus School, P.S. 25, in the District.

Butler first met Meade-Stephens when she was vice principal of Lincoln High School, where Meade-Stephens was a teacher of Spanish. Her attendance was a problem, and Butler had numerous talks with her concerning her lateness and attendance.

Butler also supervised Meade-Stephens between 1987 and 1991 at Dickinson High School, where Meade-Stephens was transferred in 1987. Butler stated that she had regular discussions with Meade-Stephens during this time regarding her latenesses and absenteeism. Butler told Meade-Stephens that she could not continue to perform her job in this manner because her students were suffering.

At the time, Meade-Stephens was teaching five Spanish classes a day to freshman, all of whom were American-born. By its very nature, the teaching of language is a cumulative learning experience, and Meade-Stephens knew that she had to be in class consistently to allow the students to build their knowledge of the language. Her classes were made up of the lowest-performing students who needed more, rather than less, instruction than other language students.

After her conversations with Butler, Meade-Stephens was generally agreeable and said that she would try to improve. However, she continued to be late or absent, and she would sometimes leave the building during the day. When she did this, there was no chance for the school to obtain a substitute teacher except by sending notes to other teachers requesting that they cover her classes during their preparation time or announcing over the loudspeaker that a teacher was needed to cover her classes. Rarely could these substitute teachers teach Spanish.

When Meade-Stephens was absent, the District, for the most part, was unable to find a substitute teacher in the subject-matter area. If she called in sick, the District tried to get a pool substitute who could teach Spanish. If not, they tried to get a substitute just to keep order in the class. If no substitute was available, another teacher had to be taken from his or her own preparation period and paid one-fifth more money for the day because of the addition of another class to his or her schedule.

Meade-Stephens was told by Butler and other administrators that her absences and latenesses were a problem. She told Butler that they were caused by her medical problems. Butler counseled her that she was involved in too many difficult tasks which were taxing her physical condition and causing her work to suffer. In addition to her teaching duties, Meade-Stephens was involved in running her own travel business and was taking courses toward her doctorate. Whenever Butler spoke to her about the problem, Meade-Stephens was pleasant and agreed to change but never did. When Meade-Stephens explained that she was late in the morning because her medication made her groggy and it was difficult for her to get ready for school on time, Butler suggested that she ask her doctor to change her medication schedule; she never did.

During the 1985-86 school year, Meade-Stephens was absent because of illness for a total of 37 days: Six days in October; two days in November; two days in December; five days in January; 10 days in February; two days in March; four days in April; one day in May; and five days in June. A full school year consists of 180 days.

By contract, a teacher loses one-half of a day's pay for each five days of lateness. Meade-Stephens lost two days pay, or $92.87, because she was late 16 times during the 1985-86 school year.

During the 1986-87 school year, Meade-Stephens was absent 12 days through the end of 1986 and then was not in school for the entire second half of the year because she stayed out on an unofficial sick leave following an injury.

During the 1987-88 school year, respondent was out sick 55 days and took an additional number of hours of sick time, adding up to two and one-half days. Butler wanted to recommend that Meade-Stephens's increment be withheld for the following year but did not do so, based upon Meade-Stephens's promises to improve her performance. Butler now considers that her leniency at the time was a mistake.

During the 1988-89 school year Meade-Stephens was absent 43 days and a number of sick hours, adding up to two and one half additional sick days. Because of her absences, her increment was withheld by the Board of Education (Board) for the 1989-90 school year. Her administrative appeal is still pending.

During the 1989-90 school year, Meade-Stephens was absent 14 days and a number of hours, totaling two and one-half days of sick time. She was also late in arriving at school in the morning 44 times that year. The first set of tenure charges against Meade-Stephens was certified to the Commissioner on August 7, 1990, because her attendance did not improve even after her increment was withheld.

There is no Board policy relating to absences and, therefore, there are no guidelines for withholding a teacher's increment for this reason. It is left to the discretion of the principal. This allows the principal to consider the circumstances surrounding the number of absences, such as major illness or death, in determining whether absenteeism was excessive. Butler explained that the Board does not authorize absences, but it may accept the teacher's excuses and approve an absence in the sense that the teacher got paid for the days missed.

Butler believes that the Board must have accepted Meade-Stephens's excuses for her absences in the past, or her pay would have been docked at some point. The record shows that Meade-Stephens was formally granted leaves of absence for illness from January 11 through January 19, 1988, from April 11 through May 3, 1988, from September 26 to September 30, 1988, and from December 20, 1988 to January 10, 1989. There are no other approved leaves of absence in her record.

Butler explained that there is a Board policy related to lateness; that is, a teacher loses a half-day's pay for each five days of late arrival. This is an automatic deduction, and provision for it is included in the teacher's contract. Butler excused lateness in cases of bad weather or if it appeared the teacher was not at fault. The excessive latenesses with which Meade-Stephens is charged do not include this type. Butler chose not to implement another Board policy, which did not allow a teacher who arrived after 9:00 a m into the building. However, teachers were due in at 8:30 a.m., and any teacher arriving after that time had to sign an attendance notebook (late sheets).

Meade-Stephens's latenesses are documented in the late sheets for the 1990-91 school year. She was required to be at school at 8:30 in the morning because she had a homeroom period scheduled. The book shows that she was too often not there at the expected time.

Her latenesses were not restricted to her appearance in the morning. She was often late returning to school after lunch. Butler said that when she spoke to her, Meade-Stephens told her that she had to take care of her travel business at lunchtime. Butler explained to her she could not do that because her students were being left unattended after lunch. Meade-Stephens denied that she took care of her business at lunchtime. She stated that she went home for lunch, and her home happened to be in the same building where her business was located.

Barbato Russomagno, supervisor of the foreign language department in the District, was Meade-Stephens's immediate supervisor. On March 12, 1990, he wrote a letter to her reprimanding her for leaving her seventh-period class unattended for 15 minutes. She told him that she had gone to the main office on the first floor to duplicate a test for her class.

He found her reason unacceptable and her behavior "unprofessional, at the very least, and [that it] displays disregard for both student safety and school rules and regulations."

Russomagno explained at the hearing that respondent would have had the opportunity to duplicate the examinations at some other more appropriate time. Meade-Stephens testified that she would have been able to return to her classroom in time if she had been given the key to the copy room as she had requested. Instead, she had to go to the main office to make copies, which took longer.

On November 16, 1990, Meade-Stephens received a written reprimand from Margaret Oliver, a vice principal of Dickinson High School. Oliver wrote, "You were not on your hall patrol (period 9) on Friday, Nov. 16, toward the end of the period. Please arrive on time and remain on patrol until 3:00 p.m." Oliver again had occasion to reprimand Meade-Stephens for being late to her hall patrol assignment during period nine on December 3, 1990.

On April 9, 10, and 11, 1991, Meade-Stephens was assigned as an examiner for the High School Proficiency Test (HSPT) at Dickinson High School. Because of her lateness to school, she was not able to perform her duties on April 10 and 11. She was reprimanded for this failure on April 12, 1991, by Frances M. Brill, a vice principal of Dickinson High School. Brill reminded her that she had been late 35 mornings up until that time and that her latenesses impacted on her students and on other staff members.

On April 10, 1990, Meade-Stephens was observed by Russomagno teaching a Spanish 1B class. She was rated by him as unsatisfactory in all areas except her proficiency in the subject matter, which was good, and her ability to establish rapport with the pupils, staff, and/or parents and community, which he described as fair. Russomagno reported that respondent's assessments of the needs and evaluation of the progress of her pupils was unsatisfactory.

The class began with Meade-Stephens announcing a test covering Chapter 18 scheduled for the next day, and she began to review for it. Her lesson plan made no reference to the test either on an earlier or subsequent day. One-third of the students were absent and, of those present, only the same one or two students were able to respond. It was clear that the subject matter had been given insufficient coverage; according to Russomagno, the students' lack of understanding was obvious and should have been addressed during a lesson. He suggested that given the level of understanding of the students, respondent should have withdrawn the announcement of the test.

Russomagno also criticized respondent's quizzes and tests as being hastily prepared, "primarily discreet--point (at recall level) rather than application-oriented, as required through departmental goals of communicative competence." He added, "Attention to deficiencies noted in uniform exam results is minimal."

Russomagno assessed Meade-Stephens's employment of effective organization and planning as unsatisfactory. He found her lessons plans "unnecessarily difficult to read/interpret." In his opinion, her planning revealed "unrealistically fast pacing of instruction and presents no evidence of long-range objectives" and believed that her treatment of the course content was superficial. She also showed no differential in her lesson plans based on the level of achievement among her four Spanish 1B classes or on the individual needs of students. He was also concerned about the lack of relationship between her lessons plans and her actual instruction, as evidenced by the class which he observed on April 10.

Russomagno rated Meade-Stephens's utilization of effective instructional techniques as unsatisfactory. As stated before, he found the class unprepared and uninvolved with the lesson.

> Yet there was no check for understanding by teacher nor did any re-teaching take place. Teacher must assess students' needs on an ongoing basis and adjust instruction accordingly. Teaching techniques must be varied in order to accommodate students' varied learning styles. Teaching is too hurried. Teaching tone is too loud and strident.

In preparing his evaluation of April 10, 1990, Russomagno checked Meade-Stephens's record of latenesses, which he obtained through the school records and which he discussed with the principal. There were 57 latenesses as of April 10, and respondent was six minutes late for class on the date of the observation. This happened in spite of his written reprimand to her of March 12, 1990 for arriving at her class late and leaving it unattended.

In her written comments in response to Russomagno's unsatisfactory ratings, Meade-Stephens explained that she was late on April 10 because the parking lot at Dickinson was newly paved, there were no marked parking spaces, and the head security guard told her to go back and move her car as she was entering the building for her sixth-period class.

Meade-Stephens also stated that Russomagno was unfair in rating her unsatisfactory based upon her lesson plan. The lesson plan provided to him in her plan book was incorrect, and she had written a corrected one on the board and was following it at the time. She claimed to have pointed this out to him at the time, and she explained to him that she had revised her lesson plans because she was involved with the HSPT that week and had to make changes in her plans Respondent explained her absences and latenesses generally by the fact that, "[I was] recovering from diverticulitis, I have a recurring ulcer, high blood pressure and this year endometriosis. I am supposed to be in the hospital for minor surgery this month (May)." She explained her latenesses by the fact that she was a certified doctoral student at Columbia University Teachers College and worked many late nights completing her doctoral dissertation. This, she said, happened because the school had denied her a sabbatical leave.

Meade-Stephens attributed the unsatisfactory evaluation, to a large extent, to Russomagno's personal animus towards her and prejudice against her, stating that his style was to "lead by fear!"

According to Russomagno, the last time Meade-Stephens was evaluated by someone in the foreign language department prior to April 1990 was in 1982, not including occasional observations, monitoring, or visiting. His attempts to evaluate her were always put off by her with claims of illness or other excuses.

Meade-Stephens was observed on February 24, 1991 by Frances Brill, who also rated her unsatisfactory in all areas except proficiency in subject matter and establishing rapport with pupils, staff, and/or parents and community. She was rated good in both of these areas.

Brill commented on Meade-Stephens's failure to present material on the blackboard clearly because the previous lesson was inadequately erased. Her record-keeping was sloppy and difficult to read, and there were obscenities in her record book. Her plan book lacked "student-centered objectives." There was no plan written for each day. Some days had "teacher absent" written in instead of plans that should have been written in the week before. Teaching time was not used effectively. Students appeared "confused and did not know what was expected of them." Students were not encouraged to participate in the lesson. Transitions from one area of teaching to another were not smooth, and insufficient time was allowed for effective closure of the lesson. Brill reprimanded Meade-Stephens for being late 31 mornings as of the date of the observation.

> Your signed PIP indicates you plan to correct this problem. Your lateness is unfair to your homeroom students and places a burden on the clerk, teachers, and the administrative staff. Learn to manage time efficiently so that you arrive at school by 8:30 a.m.

Meade-Stephens responded to this evaluation in essentially the same manner as she responded to the evaluation by Russomagno the year before; she presented justification of her methods and an attack on her evaluator as "just trying to 'get me.'" Meade-Stephens apparently initiated a grievance procedure against Brill and demanded that she apologize both to her and her class "for the misunderstanding, to disregard this evaluation, and to evaluate another class."

Meade-Stephens claimed that all of her absences were approved by the Board, at least retroactively. She further claimed that no one ever suggested to her that she take an extended leave of absence without pay for illness. She believed that the only penalty that should have been imposed for lateness was the contractual agreement to dock her pay; once that was done, no further action could be taken by the District against her for this reason. She also testified that no one ever warned her that her absences and latenesses were a problem which might subject her to disciplinary action. She specifically denied that Butler ever discussed these subjects with her.

Meade-Stephens's absences had a significant effect on the ability of her students to master the subject. Her high rate of absences often left her students in the care of a teacher with no knowledge of the subject matter But even if the school were able to obtain a substitute with knowledge of Spanish, Meade-Stephens's lesson books contained no plan for the days on which she was absent, so that a substitute was unable to provide continuity to the class.

When she was present, respondent's lesson plans suffered because she attempted to rush through the subject matter to cover the course material in the available time This failure rate of students in her class was higher than for Spanish teachers who were present in school on a more regular basis.

The uniform examinations given by the foreign language department required uniformity in preparation, administration, and evaluation of the results. This made it possible for Russomagno to make an across-the-board comparison of results for each teacher to see that the established objectives for each language were being reached. There were 11 different objectives. Russomagno could use the test results to compare the district average, school average, and teacher average for each objective for each language taught. He could then show the teachers how their students progressed from the year before.

By performing this analysis, Russomagno found that Meade-Stephens's absences definitely affected her students. She had more students fail the course in the years that she had the highest rates of absences than other teachers who taught the same subject in the same school in the same year. A 30-percent failure rate is the norm. In the 1987-88 school year, when Meade-Stephens was out sick 55 days, 70 percent of her class failed for the year.

From the evidence, I FIND that Meade-Stephens was absent an excessive number of times based upon the effect which it had upon her students' academic progress. I FIND that in spite of her testimony, she was warned repeatedly that her absences and latenesses were excessive. It is not clear why she did not consider repeated verbal and written warnings and reprimands, increment withholdings, or the first set of tenure charges adequate notice that her record was unacceptable to the District. I further FIND that even with repeated warnings, Meade-Stephens showed little interest in improving her performance; she even argued that she was improving because she had substituted latenesses for sick days.

DISCUSSION OF LAW AND CONCLUSIONS

There are no absolute standards as to when absence or lateness becomes chronic or excessive. However, the case law is clear that this boundary is crossed when the performance of students begins to suffer. State-Operated School District of N.J. v. Pellecchio, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 267. This is true even where the absences are for legitimate medical or health reasons. Id. at 270.

I CONCLUDE that Meade-Stephens's absences were chronic and excessive based upon the appalling consequences to the students with whose instruction she was charged. I further CONCLUDE that in spite of repeated warnings, her poor performance continued; she herself testified that her latenesses were in lieu of former absences and that, in effect, she made a conscious choice to continue her prior course of conduct in a different form. Although her lateness was not the subject matter of the first set of tenure charges, in light of Meade-Stephens's testimony and the number of oral and written warnings and reprimands in the record, I CONCLUDE that there is no merit to her argument that she had no notice that her record of lateness, as well as her record of absence, was a problem. Consequently, I CONCLUDE that Meade-Stephens should be subject to disciplinary action for chronic and excessive lateness and absenteeism.

The record further reveals that Meade-Stephens did not prepare her classes in advance, with the result that if she were absent, a substitute Spanish teacher, if available, could not provide her students with the cumulative learning experience necessary for the teaching of the language. She herself had to rush through the curriculum in order to cover all of the required ground before the uniform tests were administered each year. It appears from the observations of her teaching that this made her coverage of the material superficial, with no regard for the level of achievement of her classes or the individual needs of her students. (It is hard to see how she would have knowledge of the level of achievement of her classes and of the individual needs of her students given her lack of attendance.) When this is added to her inability or unwillingness to be at her assigned place at the appropriate time, I CONCLUDE that her behavior constitutes a course of conduct unbecoming a teacher as alleged. Her students were clearly the least important of her priorities, and their needs were relegated to whatever time she had left over from her other activities.

I CONCLUDE that the District has not proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Meade-Stephens was incapable of performing her duties, only that she did not try to or could not fit them into the rest of her schedule.

Because of the ongoing nature of Meade-Stephens's conduct and her unwillingness to take any reasonable steps to alter it in spite of repeated warnings and disciplinary actions which she denies receiving, it is clear that the only adequate sanction that can be applied is to remove her from her position. Her students cannot continue to bear the brunt of her unsatisfactory performance.

I CONCLUDE that there is no merit in Meade-Stephens's argument that she should not be subject to discipline because her poor performance was condoned by the Board in the past. For her to advance this argument, in the face of her negative impact upon her classes, shows a lack of professionalism which should not be allowed to affect succeeding generations of students placed in her care. The Board cannot be compelled, based upon its alleged prior inaction, to continue to tolerate her misconduct.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that Monica Meade-Stephens be REMOVED from her position as a teacher of Spanish in the State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF MONICA MEADE-STEPHENS, STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were untimely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Because respondent's submission was untimely, the Board's reply exceptions as well as the exceptions are not considered in the adjudication of this matter.

Upon a careful and independent review of the record of this matter, which, it is noted, includes a transcript of the proceeding below, the Commissioner adopts those findings and conclusions of the ALJ finding that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member as a result of chronic tardiness and excessive absenteeism during the subject years, which behaviors resulted in pronounced and inexcusable deficit in the education of the students with whom she was charged as a teacher of Spanish. The Commissioner's review of the record comports with the ALJ's conclusion that the ongoing nature of respondent's conduct and her unwillingness to take steps to alter it in spite of repeated warnings and disciplinary action warrant dismissal from her tenured employment with the State-operated school district of Jersey City. The Commissioner so finds.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision, respondent is directed to be removed from her tenured employment with the State-operated school district of Jersey City as of the date of this decision. It is further directed that the matter be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.6 for further action as it deems appropriate.

NEW JERSEY STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,	:	DECISION ON REMAND
RESPONDENT.	:

For the Petitioner, Talaya Yvette Stoddard, pro se

For the Respondent, Marlene Zuberman, Deputy Attorney General (Robert J. Del Tufo, Attorney General)

This matter is before the Commissioner of Education by directive of the State Board of Education, which, in a decision of September 2, 1992, rejected the Commissioner's holding, as expressed in a letter decision to petitioner dated May 15, 1992, that, as argued by the Attorney General representing respondent, the Commissioner did not have jurisdiction over denial of teaching certificate by the State Board of Examiners and that petitioner's appeal should be filed with the State Board of Education. The Board held instead that jurisdiction in this matter lay with the Commissioner of Education and directed him to consider the matter on its merits. Accordingly, as the Board of Examiners had not previously filed an answer on the merits, it was directed to do so; upon receipt of said answer, the record of this matter was deemed closed and the Commissioner determined to proceed to summary judgment.

Petitioner argues that the Board should not have denied her teaching certificate on the basis of a single incident of theft by deception (welfare fraud), as 1) her offense was a minor misdemeanor, she was not convicted of any crime and she was found qualified for school employment under the criminal history background check laws; 2) the underlying incident (failure to report a savings account when applying for benefits) was an isolated one arising out of a desperate personal situation, the fear that the savings earmarked for her college expenses would prevent her from receiving the public assistance she needed as a single parent to support herself and her newborn child while attending college in order to better herself and prepare for a worthwhile career; 3) while in college she worked diligently and distinguished herself in several areas including her chosen field of early childhood education as indicated by numerous honors and awards; 4) she has reported faithfully to her probation officer, who specifically recommended that she be granted her certificate, and is fully complying with the court's requirements for monetary restitution; and 5) she has grown through her education and experiences over the past five years to realize that she should not have done what she did, and she sincerely regrets her actions even apart from the consequences they have had for obtaining her certificate. In sum, petitioner asks that one mistake, committed at age 19, not be permitted to destroy everything she has worked for and deny her entry into a profession for which she has been fully trained and in which she has shown the capacity to excel.

In reply, the Board of Examiners argues that 1) petitioner's offense is a real one notwithstanding that it did not rise to the level required for disqualification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 or forfeiture of public employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:51-2; 2) that these statutes speak only to who may not serve in the public schools, and do not in any way limit the discretion of the Board of Examiners to determine who is entitled to a teaching certificate; 3) that N.J.A.C. 6:11-2.2 clearly provides for the Board to refuse to issue a certificate "where the applicant has been found by a court or administrative agency of competent jurisdiction, to have engaged in conduct which would have provided adequate grounds for the revocation of the certificate, if then held;" and 4) that petitioner's admitted act of theft by deception, which clearly constitutes conduct unbecoming a teacher, would be sufficient to sustain a revocation proceeding under "other just cause" pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:11-3.4, so that the Board acted within the scope of its lawful discretion in denying petitioner her certificate.

Upon careful review of this matter, the Commissioner determines to reverse the decision of the Board of Examiners and direct that petitioner be awarded her teaching certificate.

In so determining, the Commissioner is persuaded that the Board, while properly recognizing the gravity of petitioner's conduct, particularly in view of the high standard required for public school teachers, gave insufficient consideration to the fact that 1) petitioner's offense is the sole blemish on an otherwise outstanding record and was committed five years ago (August 1987) at the age of 19 and prior to her becoming a teacher under circumstances which, while they do not exonerate petitioner, have a mitigating effect on the consequences she should be made to suffer beyond those imposed by the court; 2) petitioner's probation officer (to whom she has reported, by judgment of December 1990, from January 1991 to the present) has found her to be of sufficiently responsible and mature character to warrant reporting once a month by telephone, and specifically urges that petitioner not be denied her teaching certificate; 3) petitioner has submitted ample evidence of both extraordinary effort and a very high degree of success in her educational endeavors, as well as of the regard in which she is held by people in a good position to judge her character and sincerity. In view of all this, the Commissioner finds that the Board's denial of petitioner's application for certificate was an unreasonable exercise of its discretionary authority.

Accordingly, the Commissioner rejects the determination of the State Board of Examiners to deny petitioner's certificate based on her offense of theft by deception and directs that, presuming she has otherwise met applicable requirements, petitioner be awarded her certificate forthwith.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

_____	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, ten legally registered voters, sought inquiry into alleged acts of negligence and omission at annual school election (not checking signatures, improprieties in campaign literature and improper electioneering).

ALJ found petitioners did not prove that will of people was not expressed in election results so as to necessitate a new election. (In re Wene) Moreover, proper remedy for violations by individuals is pursuit in a court of appropriate jurisdiction. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner concurred with ALJ that irregularities did not rise to level necessary for remedy of setting aside election results. Commissioner did, however, refer matter to County Prosecutor for action against individual candidates and/or officials as deemed appropriate.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3001-92
AGENCY DKT. NO. 129-4/92

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY.

James P. Granello, Esq., for petitioners

Record Closed: June 10, 1992 Decided: July 27, 1992

BEFORE M. KATHLEEN DUNCAN, ALJ;

Pursuant to a letter complaint filed by ten legally registered voters, Lloyd R. Davis, Ann Palmer, Sylvia Riddick, Ronald Snowden, Claire M. S. Grimes, Richard M. Tucker, Russel T. Brankley, Lillian W. Parykaza, Edward M. Ayer, and Robert L. Thorpe, Sr., the Commissioner of Education determined to conduct an inquiry into the annual school election held on April 7, 1992, in the school district of the Township of Willingboro, Burlington County.

On April 29, 1992, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A hearing was conducted on June 1, 1992, at the Westhampton Township Municipal Building, Mt. Holly, New Jersey. Following the close of the hearing, the record remained open for the receipt of written argument. A letter memorandum on behalf of petitioners was received on June 10, 1992, whereupon the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Most of the facts relevant to a determination of the within matter are not in dispute and I, therefore, FIND the following as uncontested facts.

An election was held on April 7, 1992, to fill three seats on the Board of Education of the Willingboro School District. The announced results were as follows:

CANDIDATE	AT POLLS	ABSENTEEISM	TOTAL
Linda Taylor	1,676	18	1,694
Victor Smith	1,498	15	1,513
Frank Phillips	1,405	15	1,420
Lloyd Davis	1,338	11	1,349
Ann Palmer	1,321	13	1,334
Sylvia Riddick	1,258	10	1,268
Alice C. McIntosh	1,036	2	1,038
Marcellus D. Smith	960	1	961
Martin Nock	849	2	851
Hosey Best	217	1	218
James Lewis	208	0	208

(P-24 in evidence)

Petitioners challenge the election of Linda Taylor, Victor Smith and Frank Phillips and assert that a new election is required as the result of the following alleged violations of the school election law.

> Failure to conform to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-97 which requires printed matter used in elections to show the source of payment and printer.

A number of pieces of campaign literature were identified by witnesses at the hearing as having been distributed during the election and on the day of the election failed to comply with the statutory requirement that they must show the source of payment and printer. Some items contained no reference to source (P-1 in evidence). Others such as P-5 in evidence, simply stated "ordered and paid for by the candidates." P-28 in evidence appears to have been sent by a group or committee of supporters for the winning three candidates, Taylor, Smith and Phillips and it contains no name or address of association or group or the name of one person who was acting for such group. I FIND that petitioners have offered sufficient evidence to establish this violation.

> Use of Student Records for Campaign purposes contrary to N.J.S.A.18A:36-19 (the statute providing for confidentiality of pupil records and their accessibility to parents and adult students); N.J.A.C. 6:3-2.4 et seq. (limiting access to pupil records to only authorized organizations, agencies or persons as defined in the regulations and allowing access by school district personnel but only for specifically assigned school related tasks) and N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101 (the statute which prohibits impeding or interfering with a voter.)

Several witnesses testified that they had received written material addressed to "The parents of" followed by the student's name. In some instances the student had already graduated and was no longer enrolled in the Willingboro School System. Marcellus Smith testified that the envelope he received addressed "To the parent or guardian of" could only have come from within the school system since nobody knew he was the child's guardian except the school. By telephone, several callers used a parent's or guardian's unlisted telephone number, addressed the person by name and in some instances identified themselves as teachers or librarians and had a knowledge of the student's school related activities, i.e., wrestling team membership. Petitioners assert that these instances leave a clear inference that pupil records were unlawfully utilized by the winning candidates. They also assert that improper and illegal use of pupil records violates the provisions of N.J.S.A.18A:14-101 which states:

> No person shall by abduction, duress or any forcible or fraudulent device or contrivance whatever, impede, prevent or otherwise interfere with the free exercise of the elective franchise by any voter at any election; or compel, induce or prevail upon any voter either to vote or refrain from voting at any election, or to vote or refrain from voting for any particular person or persons at any election.

While it certainly appears that someone obtained access to and improperly used pupil records for the purposes of making mass mailings to "the parents of" Willingboro students and former students and placing telephone calls to unlisted numbers, and the facts do support an inference that at least some of those people were school district employees, and such actions violate the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act and regulations, they certainly do not rise to the level of duress or fraud or contrivance or force such as to impede a voter in the exercise of his franchise. I FIND no violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101.

> Violation of prohibition against electioneering at or near the polling places contrary to N.J.S.A 18A:14-72 and N.J.S.A. 18A:14-81

Testimony presented by petitioners at the hearing clearly established violations of the following statutory provisions:

> N.J.S.A. 18A:14-72 Obstructing elections; electioneering near polling place prohibited
>
> If a person shall on any day fixed for any election tamper, deface or interfere with any polling booth or obstruct the entrance to any polling place, or obstruct or interfere with any voter, or loiter, or do any electioneering within any polling place or within 100 feet thereof, he shall be a disorderly person and shall be punished by a fine not exceeding $500.00 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both
>
> N.J.S.A. 18A:14-81 Prohibits certain electioneering; penalty
> If a person shall distribute or display any circular or printed matter or offer any suggestion or solicit any support for any candidate, party or public question, to be voted upon at any election, within the polling place or room or within a distance of 100 feet of the outside entrance to such polling place or room, he shall be a disorderly person.

Mary Rodriguez testified that she had voted at the Garfield Park East location at around 3 p.m. and observed children running around handing out campaign literature for the Smith, Taylor and Phillips' slate within 25 feet of the entrance of the school. She acknowledged that she had not filed any complaint about the conduct. Robert Rodriguez also testified concerning the same activity at Garfield East Elementary School at 4 or 5 p.m. Lynn Sanford testified that she voted at Hawthorne School at approximately 2:30 and had observed people with signs and children handing out literature within 50 feet of the entrance of the building. She did not know what the signs said and she did not look at the literature the children were handing out. Pauline Snowden also testified concerning the electioneering which was taking place at Garfield East at around 5:30 p.m., although she too indicated that she did not look at the literature. Ann Palmer testified that when she voted at Garfield East Elementary School a little after 3 p.m. she observed children with signs inside the polling place and Linda Taylor, one of the ultimately successful candidates, was standing at the door passing out literature. When she complained to Ms. Allen, one of the poll workers, Ms. Allen said she had told them to leave. She testified that the children were actually passing out business cards indicating the positions of the Smith, Taylor and Phillips slate on the voting machines to voters as they were standing on line waiting to vote. "She put them out on several occasions," she testified concerning Ms. Allen. Martin Nock testified that he voted at the Levitt Administration Building between 3 and 3:30 at which time he observed teachers within the 100-foot limit handing out literature for the Linda Taylor slate. He also observed children running up to the door and handing out flyers. Marcellus D. Smith, Jr., an unsuccessful candidate, testified that when he had voted at Twin Hills Elementary School between 7:30 and 8 he did not see any electioneering taking place. He testified that he had seen Victor Smith supervising children handing out campaign literature at Hawthorne School well within the 100-foot limit. He also testified that Victor Smith had been verbally and physically abusive to him and had actually pushed him. Robert Reynolds testified that he had voted at McGinley School at approximately 3 p.m. and that while he was waiting to vote he observed small children handing out political information for the Taylor, Phillips, Smith group to people waiting in line. He personally observed the children hand literature to 10 or 12 people. He testified that his wife had complained to the inspector who was standing next to the voting machine and who would also have been in a position to see the children. He testified that later on when he had taken his daughter to vote, a woman was supervising children who were passing out campaign literature near the front entrance. The woman kept calling the children back to outside the 100 feet, but they kept running back toward the building. He testified that he did not register a complaint the second time and also that he did not see any complaint forms available. Raymond Findley, Jr., also testified that he observed campaigning within the 100-foot mark at Levitt Administration Building at approximately 6 p.m. The literature and the signs supported the Taylor, Smith, Phillips slate. Margaret A. Reynolds testified that when she had spoken to the poll worker about the children passing out literature to the voters on line, the poll worker said that there was nothing she could do about it, that she was too busy and that she had been on her feet all day. She testified that the children were still there when she left 15 or 20 minutes later. I FIND petitioners have offered sufficient evidence to establish these violations.

> Violations of N.J.S.A 18A:14-101 by distributing literature containing intentionally false allegations within a few days of Election day.

Petitioners presented testimony concerning various statements and campaign literature distributed by the Smith, Taylor, Phillips slate the weekend before the election. Specifically, the witnesses charged that statements which claim that both the "Reformers" and "Three M" groups were going to "close two more elementary schools" and implement "pay to play" requiring payment for participation in extracurricular activities were intentionally false. This they alleged to be a violation of the N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101 previously quoted hereinabove which prohibits impeding or interfering with a voter.

The nature of an inquiry such as this one conducted by the Office of Administrative Law for the Commissioner of Education is not conducive to fully and fairly determining issues such as alleged fraud or libel. At an inquiry witnesses frequently present only one side of the controversy and are not subject to cross-examination. Accordingly, no determination can be made concerning the truth or accuracy of the allegations in the campaign literature. This is an issue properly resolved in other forums, where those accused are represented and have an opportunity to be heard.

Failure of polling officials to perform their duties in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-67, 18A:14-50 and 18A:14-51.

The materials handed out prior to the election by the Board Secretary to election officials directs that illegal electioneering should be reported to the police; petitioners' assert that despite the pervasive illegal electioneering in and around the various election polls on election day the police were not contacted, although there was no direct evidence that this was the case, other than the testimony from Margaret Reynolds that an unnamed inspector had stated that she was "too busy" to do anything about it. Robert Rodriguez, who was a challenger stationed at Twin Hills throughout the day, testified that he never saw a poll worker check the poll list signatures with the signature copy register as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:14-50 and 18A:14-51. He also testified that he had to go outside and chase the kids away. "We were woefully understaffed," he said , "very busy." Nevertheless, he did not register any formal complaints. Joseph Capelli, who voted at Twin Hills at about 5:25 p.m., witnessed at least 4 people on line ahead of him vote without having the poll worker check the registration book. He testified that one person claimed she was not registered and was still permitted to vote. Robert Reynolds, who checked the registered voter list for Willingboro against the signatures and addresses in the poll list, found 22 names on the poll list of persons who appeared not to be properly registered voters. Mr. Reynolds also noted that there was a three-vote difference between the announced total (not including absentee ballots) and the signature count. He also detected ten duplicate ballot number entries indicating that at least two people voted with the same number on ten separate occasions. Eight signature lines had no number of the official ballot used and 114 ballots were not in the proper number sequence. At Hawthorne 83 ballot numbers were missing altogether. Mr. Reynolds also testified concerning cross outs in name or address which were not initialed or explained and markovers or strikeouts on 113 ballot numbers. Twenty-eight entries were missing address designations. Finally, Lee Muller, the Board Secretary, acknowledged that she had appointed two district employees to serve as poll workers, contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:14-6, which requires appointments from qualified voters "who are not members or employees of the Board of Education." Based upon the testimony and the documentary evidence, I FIND there is sufficient evidence to conclude these violations occurred.

APPLICABLE LAW AND DISCUSSION

The legal standard to be used in analyzing the facts in an inquiry such as this one is articulated at N.J.S.A. 18A:14-63.12 as follows:

> Upon written request within 5 days of the announcement of the result of an election by any defeated candidate, or, in the case of a question, proposition or referendum, upon petition of 10 qualified voters at any school election, the Commissioner of Education or his authorized representative shall inquire into alleged violations of statutorily prescribed procedures for school elections, to determine if such violations occurred and if they affected the outcome of the election.

Case law has made it abundantly clear that any irregularities or violations established must be the producing cause of a result which otherwise would not have occurred.

> The rule in our State is firmly established that if any irregularity or any other deviation from the election law by the election officials is to be adjudged to have the effect of invalidating a vote or an election, where the statute does not so expressly provide, there must be a connection between such irregularity and the result of the election; that is, the irregularity must be the producing cause of illegal votes which would not have been cast or of defeating legal votes which would have been counted, had the irregularity not taken place, and to an extent to challenge or change the result of the election; or it must be show that the irregularity in some other way influenced the election so as to have repressed a full and free expression of the popular will... In re Wene, 26 N.J. Super 363, 383 (Law Div. 1953), aff'd sub nom. Wene v. Meyner, 13 N. J. 185 (1953)

The burden of establishing, with a reasonable degree of certainty, that violations have altered the election outcome which otherwise would have resulted is upon petitioners. In re Application of Moffat, 142 N.J. Super. 217, 224 (App. Div. 1976), certif. den. sub nom. Princeton Twp. v. Bleiman, 71 N.J. 527 (1976).

In the within matter, petitioners have established a number of irregularities; clearly election officials were derelict in performing their duties by failing to check the signatures from the poll list with the signature copy register, and by failing to fully enforce the prohibition on electioneering near the polling places. There is an important distinction between the binding effect of election laws upon officials entrusted with their administration in connection with their being subject to a punishment for a violation thereof, or the effect of such provisions if enforced as a challenge at the time of voting, on the one hand, and as to whether, on the other hand, an irregularity as to a particular provision due to no fault of the voter and not involving fraud or repression of the full and free expression of the popular will, should after the election have the effect of invalidating such votes. In re Wene, Supra, 26 N.J. Super. at 385, In re Smock, 5 N.J. Super. 495 (Law Div. 1949).

Not one of the witnesses who testified at the hearing herein in any way indicated that his or her vote was prevented or changed by the various illegal activities observed. The only evidence offered by petitioners which tended to establish that illegal votes may have been cast related to a 3-vote difference between at-the-polls total and poll list signatures and 22 voters who may not have been properly registered. The names and/or addresses of those voters are set forth in P-25 in evidence. Even if we assumed that all twenty-five voters were illegally permitted to vote and that all twenty-five voted for the winning candidates, the illegalities would be insufficient to change the election results since 71 votes separate the winning third-place candidate and the losing fourth-place candidate. Furthermore, no such assumption may be made concerning how anyone voted. Matter of Mallon, 232 N.J. Super. 249 (App. Div. 1989), the one case directly cited by petitioners in their post-hearing written submission, makes it clear that petitioners are required to prove whether illegal votes cast in the election were cast for the opposing candidates. Id., 268, 273. Faced with the total absence of proof directly related to illegal votes or any individuals who were illegally deprived of the right to vote, petitioners argue that the totality of irregularities present in this election constituted "malconduct" on the part of the election workers. The case cited by petitioner, Matter of Mallon, supra, does not support their proposition, however. Therein the court explained:

> ..."Malconduct" is the first of three words in section a used to characterize prohibited actions of election officials. It is juxtaposed with "fraud" and "corruption." Hence, "malconduct" should be read in pari materia with those words even though the disjunctive is used. Red Bank Reg. Ed., Ass'n v. Red Bank Bd. of Edu., 151 N.J. Super. 435, 438 (App. Div. 1977), aff'd 78 N.J. 122 (1978); State v. DeMarco, 174 N.J. Super. 411-415 (Law Div. 1980); Allstate v. Howard Savings Inst., 127 N.J. Super. 479-494 (Ch. Div. 1974); 1A Sutherland, Statutory Construction (4th ed. 1985), § 21.14. The term "malconduct" is defined as "bad conduct; especially dishonesty in managing public affairs." Wesbter's Third New International Dictionary (1971). Black's Law Dictionary, (5th ed. 1979), contains the definition:
> > Malconduct. Ill conduct, especially dishonest conduct, maladministration, or, as applied to officers, official misconduct.
> "Mal" is defined as "A prefix meaning bad, wrong, fraudulent; as maladministration, malpractice, malversation, etc." Ibid. Maladministration is defined in this same law dictionary as being used "interchangeably with misadministration, and both words mean 'wrong administration.'" The Latin derivation of mal is "evil" or "bad." The malconduct referred to in N.J.S.A. 19:29-1a must result from a degree of gross negligence or inattention to duty tantamount to purposeful conduct such as fraud or corruption. Isolated acts of negligence or omission do not rise to the level of official malconduct. Id. at 271-272.

The evidence in the within matter establishes isolated acts of negligence and omission by very busy election workers, not dishonesty or fraud. Undoubtedly signatures should have been checked against the signature copy register and local law enforcement authorities should have been called to cease the improper electioneering which was taking place at some of the polling places. The negligent conduct of poll workers who failed to comply with their obligations in this regard is reprehensible; there is not one iota of evidence, however, to establish that such conduct changed what otherwise would have been the election results. Furthermore, petitioners do not describe how any of the other irregularities cited affected the election outcome, and it is not apparent how any of them could have done so. Petitioners took no action to correct or arrest or redress the violations or violators at the time of occurrence. Their litany of complaints to the Commissioner after the fact may not be utilized to overturn the election simply because they do not like the results.

Petitioners are not without their remedies to address the alleged wrongful conduct of the winning candidates; forums exist in both the civil and criminal courts to hear their grievances. The purpose of ordering a new election is not to punish successful wrongdoers; only where it is reasonably certain that election results do not express the will of the people will a new election be ordered. Petitioners herein have not established the necessary prerequisites.*

> The right of suffrage in a government of and by a free people must always be regarded with jealous solicitude. To overthrow the expressed will of a large number of voters for no fault of their own and solely because of some harmless irregularity would in many cases defeat the paramount object of the election laws. Sharrock v. Keansburg, 15 N.J. Super. 11, 19 (App. Div. 1951)

Accordingly, for all the foregoing reasons, the relief which petitioners seek is DENIED, and the within matter is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

* In re Annual School Election, Borough of Chesilhurst, Camden County, EDU 4952-91, 102-5/19, January 28, 1992, also mentioned by petitioners, presented a vastly different set of facts. One vote each separated the second, third and fourth place candidates and three votes separated the first and second place winning candidates. Based upon evidence that numerous residents of R & M Guest Home, a supervised healthcare facility for individuals with mental deficiencies, had been instructed for whom to vote and had been improperly assisted inside the voting booths, the Commissioner declared the election void.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE ANNUAL SCHOOL ELECTION HELD IN THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioners pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In their exceptions, petitioners argue that 1) the ALJ erred in refusing to address violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101 (coercion or impeding of voting), as petitioners' charges clearly arose under the education laws and were amenable to full adversarial proceedings before OAL, and it was abundantly clear that the winning candidates' "dirty tricks" had a deleterious effect on how voters perceived other candidates; 2) the ALJ erred in finding Mallon, supra, inapposite, as petitioners were not trying to change the numbers of votes in the election tally, which would have required them to show how people voted, but rather to demonstrate that the entire election process was so pervaded by irregularity that a full and free expression of the popular will cannot reasonably be found to have occurred regardless of tally; and 3) the violations shown in this case should be referred to the County Prosecutor for review as to possible criminal charges.

Upon careful review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that while irregularities and violations of school election law were shown to have occurred in this matter, they did not rise to the level necessary for the extreme remedy of setting aside the results of the election.

As the ALJ properly observed in applying In re Wene, supra, at page 8 above.

> There is an important distinction between the binding effect of election laws upon officials entrusted with their administration in connection with their being subject to a punishment for a violation thereof, or the effect of such provisions if enforced as a challenge at the time of voting, on the one hand, and as to whether, on the other hand, an irregularity as to a particular provision due to no fault of the voter and not involving fraud or repression of the full and free expression of the popular will should after the election have the effect of invalidating such votes.

Here, there was no evidence that any of the proven irregularities resulted in coercion or impeding of voting, and even granting every possible inference to petitioners' claims of illegal votes being cast, the number of such votes would not have been nearly sufficient to alter the outcome of the election. Therefore, whatever other remedy may be appropriately pursued in this matter, there is no basis to warrant the calling of a new election and the Commissioner accordingly declines to so order.

Neither is the Commissioner persuaded by petitioners' claim that the ALJ erred in declining to consider allegations of fraud and libel in the successful candidates' campaign literature. The Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ that matters of fraud and libel are to be pursued in a court of competent jurisdiction, notwithstanding that they are rooted in school election campaign materials, and that dissemination of the materials referenced herein, even if they were found fraudulent or libelous in court, did not constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:14-101 in that they neither coerced nor impeded individual voters in the casting of their ballots. In school elections as in any other, individual candidates are answerable for their campaign claims to their opponents, to civil and criminal courts, and to the voters they seek to persuade; the role of the Commissioner cannot be to referee the truth or appropriateness of such claims, or to judge the effect of such materials on voters' thinking.

Notwithstanding the above, however, the Commissioner notes the improper use of pupil records and the inappropriate use of pupils themselves evidenced in this matter and strongly cautions the instant Board and all other boards of education and their agents against committing or permitting violations of the letter and spirit of statute regarding the use of public school pupils for partisan election activities. N.J.S.A. 18A:42-4

Further, the Commissioner concurs with petitioners that the violations demonstrated herein fully merit consideration by the County Prosecutor for action against individual candidates and/or officials as deemed appropriate.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the request for a new election is affirmed for the reasons well expressed therein, and the instant matter referred to the Burlington County Prosecutor consistent with the discussion above.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, three tenured carpentry teachers, brought seniority claims due to reduction of their positions from full to part time. These seniority claims involved a second round of litigation.

In ALJ's partial summary decision, Petitioner Boles' petition was dismissed as untimely. Petitioner Rossi's petition was dismissed by the Entire Controversy Doctrine (cannot litigate claim which was known to him at time of first hearing and was related to "the same transactional circumstances"). ALJ did relax 90-day rule for Petitioner Polo since relief requested was prospective starting with school year 1991-92. Petitioner Polo was granted day in court.

Commissioner adopted findings and conclusions of ALJ with clarification. Commissioner dismissed petitions of Boles and Rossi. Commissioner affirmed findings of ALJ regarding Polo's petition II citing Paul Gordon. Allegations of mere continuation of status quo from previous years will not establish a new cause of action. Petitioner Polo timely filed his petition within 90 days of learning of Board's intent to newly assign individuals to positions that they had not filled in the 1990-91 school year in the 1991-92 school year. Commissioner directed Petitioner Polo's petition II to proceed to a hearing on the merits.

BEFORE KEN R. SPRINGER, ALJ:

Statement of the Case

This is the second round of litigation involving competing seniority claims of three long-time carpentry teachers, each of whom has been a district employee for nearly two decades. Last year, in the matter entitled Polo v. Bergen Cty. Vo-Tech Schs. (Polo I), 92 N.J. A.L.R 2d (EDU) 230. (Comm'r Jan 30, 1992), the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") decided that both Anthony Polo ("Polo") and another teacher, Ralph Rossi ("Rossi"), have equal credit for seniority purposes and, therefore, that the district was entitled to reduce Polo from a full to a part-time position for the 1990-91 school year while retaining Rossi in a full-time position. Thomas Boles ("Boles"), the third contender, was served with adequate notice of the prior proceeding, but did not intervene to protect his interests.

Each of the four present cases were filed with the Commissioner after the date of filing of Polo I, which occurred on June 27, 1990. By common consent, the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") has consolidated all of them for a single hearing, which began on June 24, 1992.[1] Respondent Board of Education of the Vocational Schools of the County of Bergen ("Bergen Vo-Tech") seeks to dismiss three of the four cases, Boles I, Rossi and Polo II, on the theory that the later filings are untimely and raise issues which ought to have been resolved in the first proceeding. Because each of the three cases implicate slightly different considerations of fairness, efficiency, and finality, they will be addressed on their individual merits.

[1]Boles' first petition, designated OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3717-91, will be abbreviated as Boles I and his second petition, designated OAL Dkt. No. EDU 5392-91, will be abbreviated as Boles II. Polo's second petition, designated OAL Dkt. No. EDU 8947-91, will abbreviated as Polo II to distinguish it from last year's case, abbreviated as Polo I.

(1) Motion to Dismiss the Boles I Petition

All of the relevant facts are undisputed. As noted in Polo I, at 231, Polo's counsel sent written notice of the earlier litigation to Boles "[b]y certified mail, dated November 7, 1990." However, Boles did not apply to be heard and failed to attend the hearing held on April 23 and 29, 1991. In or about April 1990, Bergen Vo-Tech had decided to abolish one carpentry position by reducing two of its three positions from full to 3/7th time. Initially, it had awarded the full-time position to Boles and offered part-time positions to Polo and Rossi. After Polo had filed his first appeal, Bergen Vo-Tech belatedly acknowledged that both Polo and Rossi have greater seniority than Boles. Therefore, it reduced Boles from full-time to 3/7th time for the remainder of the 1990-91 school year. Polo I, at 232.

By letter dated August 20, 1990, Bergen Vo-Tech sent Boles a copy of its resolution, which reduced his employment from full to 3/7th time and lowered his salary by $32,600, effective November 1, 1990. Significantly, Boles acknowledges receipt of this letter and a copy of the board resolution. In the letter, the board secretary also informed Boles that, "If you have any questions regarding the above, do not hesitate to contact this office." Coincidentally, the effective date of Bole's reduction occurred at approximately the same time that Polo's attorney invited Boles to intervene in Polo's challenge to his own reduction for the 1990-91 school year.

Admittedly, Boles did not contact Bergen Vo-Tech's office for additional information and took no immediate steps to appeal its adverse action. According to his certification filed in opposition to the requested relief, Boles has no legal training or experience and erroneously believed that Bergen Vo-Tech's seniority determination "was the result of an adjudication to which [he] was bound." He waited some six months before consulting with his local bargaining unit representative "[i]n the middle of February 1991." Even then, he did not move to intervene in the pending Polo I proceeding about to go to hearing. Instead, he filed a separate appeal with the Commissioner on February 28, 1991, more than 190 days after he had notice of the reduction.

N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) prescribes that "[t]he petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education which is the subject of the requested contested hearing." Recently, the Appellate Division reaffirmed the validity of the 90-day rule and clarified that it applies to employee rights upon a reduction in a school's work force. Kaprow v. Berkeley Twp. Bd. of Ed., 255 N.J. Super. 76 (App. Div. 1992). Prompt filing of actions before the Commissioner serves to preserve the immediacy of the record and to stabilize existing relations, thereby avoiding disruption of the educational process. Newman v. Bd. of Ed. , 1984 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r Jan. 19, 1984).

It is improbable that Boles, a professional educator, had difficulty understanding the clear and simple language of the board resolution which reduced his hours of employment and salary. And, in the unlikely event that he was genuinely confused about his right of appeal, that confusion should have been dispelled when he received the attorney letter that Polo was challenging his own seniority status. Assuming, however, that Boles did not fully appreciate his legal rights, that circumstance would be of no legal significance. Ignorance of the law does not toll the running of a limitations period, except where there has been concealment. Reilly v. Brice, 109 N.J. 555, 559 (1988).

Although Polo concedes that his appeal was filed beyond the required 90 days, he asks the Commissioner to exercise his authority under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15 to relax application of any rule "where strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice " Exceptions to the 90-day rule should be granted sparingly, and only where there exist compelling circumstances to justify enlargement or relaxation of the time limit. See Riely v. Bd. of Ed. of Hunterdon Cent. H.S., 173 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1980); Le Mee v. Ridgewood Bd. of Ed., 1990 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r May 3, 1990); Weir v. Bd of Ed of N. Valley Reg. H. S. Dist., 1984 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r July 20, 1984), aff'd No A-3520-84T6 (N.J. App. Div. April 9, 1986); Bogart v. East Orange Bd. of Ed., 1983 S.L.D __ (Comm'r March 14, 1983). Equitable considerations which might allow relaxation of the rule include good faith discussions between parties to resolve the dispute, Polaha v. Buena Reg. Sch. Dist., 212 N.J. Super 628 (App. Div. 1986), delay attributable solely to the board of education, Perrotti v. Newark Bd. of Ed., 1981 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r May 11, 1981), or cases presenting a substantial constitutional issue or matter of significant public interest, Miller v. Morris Sch. Dist., 1980 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r Feb. 27, 1980).

No mitigating circumstances are present here. Boles should have appealed within 90 days of receipt of the board resolution in August 1990. At the very least, he should have moved to intervene in Polo I in order to assert his seniority claims. Certainly Boles, who slept on his rights, should not now be in a better position than Polo and Rossi, who took timely action. Nor would it be just and equitable to require Bergen Vo-Tech to relitigate essentially the same issue it has successfully defended in the past, exposing it to extra expense and the potential of inconsistent outcomes.

It is tempting to add that Boles is legally bound by the prior judgment in Polo I. On first glance, such a result would seem to comport with traditional notions of due process, inasmuch as Boles had adequate notice and an opportunity to be heard, if he had wished. See, Mullane v. Cent. Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306 (1949). Nevertheless, the theoretical soundness of that approach is open to doubt. In an analogous situation, the United States Supreme Court recently held that a group of firefighters who had not been parties in prior civil rights litigation were not precluded from subsequently challenging the validity of a consent degree entered in the original litigation. Martin v. Wilks, 490 U.S. 755 (1989).

Rejecting the argument that their suit should be barred because the firefighters were aware that the underlying suit might affect them and chose to pass up an opportunity to intervene, the Martin Court declared that "[t]he law does not impose upon any person absolutely entitled to a hearing the burden of voluntary intervention in a suit to which he is a stranger." 490 U.S. at 763 "Joinder as a party, rather than knowledge of a lawsuit and an opportunity to intervene, is the method by which potential parties are subject to the jurisdiction of the court and bound by a judgment or decree." 490 U.S. at 765. That legal doctrine is said to flow from our "deep-rooted historic tradition that everyone should have his own day in court." 490 U.S. at 761.

At this juncture, however, it is unnecessary to distinguish Martin in order to justify dismissal of Boles' late petition.[2] It is enough that Boles' petition was filed beyond the 90-day limit without good cause.

(2) Motion to Dismiss the Rossi Petition

Unlike Boles who remained on the sidelines, Rossi did move to intervene in Polo I and was granted the full status of a party in that case, including the right to offer evidence, to cross-examine adverse witnesses, and to make oral and written legal arguments. N.J.A.C. 1:1-16.1. Counsel represented Rossi at the evidentiary hearings which took place on April 29 and 30, 1991. Rossi himself took part and gave testimony. Meanwhile, the Board notified Rossi on January 9, 1991 that he too was being reduced from a full to a part-time teaching position, effective as of March 15, 1991. The upshot of all the maneuvering was that Bergen Vo-Tech ended 1990-91 having equally reduced all three carpentry teachers from full to part-time positions

Inexplicably, Rossi did not amend the pleadings in the pending Polo I matter to add a cross-claim against the Board Nor did he promptly file his own petition and move to consolidate the related issues pertaining to his teaching assignment for 1990-91. Rather, he waited until the hearing in Polo I was over before filing an additional appeal to the Commissioner on May 6, 1991. More than four months elapsed between Rossi's receipt of notice of the board action and his bringing of an appeal. Consequently, the Board has moved for summary decision dismissing Rossi's suit as untimely under the 90-day rule.

[2]A close reading of Martin reveals that its rationale depends heavily on the mandatory joinder philosophy incorporated into the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. By contrast, "[t]he requirement that civil suit litigants must join certain indispensable parties, present in the court rules, is not a common part of administrative practice." S. Lefelt, Administrative Law & Practice, 37 N.J. Practice Series, §309 (Supp. 1992). Morever, the majority in Martin recognizes special exceptions to the general rule where a remedial scheme expressly forecloses successive litigation, such as bankruptcy or probate proceedings. 490 U.S. at 762. Arguably, a statutory scheme designed to resolve rival seniority claims in accordance with uniform state regulatory standards fits within this category. Also, it is unclear whether the Martin firefighters received the same individualized notice which Boles received in this particular instance.

Rossi concedes the accuracy of this sequence of events. Nevertheless, he contends that the 90 days did not start to run until some unspecified date when he allegedly first learned that the Board had retained less senior teachers in full-time positions. In his papers, Rossi does not supply any specific facts which might substantiate this mere assertion. Moreover, the parties had completed extensive discovery in connection with Polo I and seniority charts were readily available to Rossi and his attorney.

As a matter of law, it is true that a teaching staff member's cause of action arises on the date when he becomes aware of a subsequent preference given to a less senior employee, as distinguished from the date of his actual reduction. See Kaplow, 255 N.J. Super. at 89, holding that a school administrator's rights accrued when the local board notified him of the later appointment of others to disputed positions, not eight years earlier at that time of his termination. Accord, Data-Samtak v. Scotch Plains - Fanwood Bd. of Ed., 1988 S.L.D. __ (Comm'r Jan. 27, 1988), aff'd (St. Bd. June 3, 1988), holding that a teacher did not acquire the requisite knowledge that she might have a claim until she learned that a nontenured teacher had been appointed to a position for which she herself might be qualified. Here, however, Rossi's rights were fixed as of January 9, 1991 when he received notice of the change in his hours of employment. Nothing on the record suggests that the Board made any subsequent appointments or personnel changes which might violate Rossi's priority rights. Rossi has not filed any opposing affidavits which raise genuine issues of fact. See Robbins v. Jersey City, 23 N.J. 229, 241 (1957); Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954). Thus, Rossi's petition is barred by the 90-day rule

An alternate basis for dismissing Rossi's petition is the court-made principle known as the "entire controversy doctrine." Evolving case-by-case and ultimately incorporated into a formal court rule, the doctrine "embodies the principle that adjudication of a legal controversy should occur in one litigation in only one court." Cogdell v. Hospital Center at Orange, 116 N.J. 7, 15 (1989). Pressler, Current N.J. Court Rules, Comments to R. 4:30 (1992). At the very least, the doctrine mandates that all parties involved in a particular litigation must present "all of their claims and defenses that are related to the underlying controversy." Behind this stricture lies a philosophy of eliminating wasted time and effort, of avoiding "piecemeal decisions" and of "preventing [a] multiplicity of suits." Originally, the doctrine encompassed "a mandatory rule for the joinder of virtually all causes, claims, and defenses relating to a controversy between the parties engaged in litigation." Cogdell, at 15-16. It has been gradually broadened to include not only defenses, but also affirmative claims that could, and should, be brought as counterclaims. Ajamian v. Schlanger, 14 N.J. 483, 488 (1954). Generally, the doctrine requires joinder of constitutent causes which arise during the course of pending litigation. See Brown v. Brown, 208 N.J. Super. 374 (1986). Recently, the doctrine has been extended to apply not only to related claims, but to parties with a material interest as well. Cogdell, at 26. See also, Crispin v. Volkswagenwerk, A.G., 96 N.J. 336 (1984).

While techniques and procedures developed to handle the business of the judicial branch will not necessarily be "imported wholesale into administrative agencies," court-fashioned solutions to managing common problems of litigation "have some genuine utility and relevance in administrative proceedings." City of Hackensack v. Winner, 82 N.J. 1, 29 (1980). Judicial doctrines designed to promote general policy goals of any adjudicatory system, such as finality and repose, prevention of needless litigation, and the avoidance of duplication, "have an important place in the administrative field." Winner, at 32-33. In particular, the New Jersey Supreme Court recognizes that there is much to be gained "from the prudent and selective application in administrative proceedings of such doctrines as res judicata, collateral estoppel and the single controversy rule." Winner, at 31.

Considerations of administrative economy and efficiency make it highly desirable that seniority disputes among teachers be resolved as quickly and fairly as possible in a single proceeding. Everyone benefits from such an approach. Students deserve stability and continuity of instruction. Teachers are better off knowing exactly where they stand, rather than operating under a lingering cloud of uncertainty. Staff morale is bound to improve when professional colleagues are no longer battling each other for remaining job slots. Boards of education will avoid the unnecessary expense of defending against successive lawsuits and are spared the very real potential of inconsistent judgments. Thus, the entire controversy doctrine precludes Rossi from litigating a claim which was known to him at the time of the first hearing and was related to "the same transactional circumstances." Brown, at 377.

(3) Motion to Dismiss the Polo II Petition

Of course, it was Polo who initiated the prior litigation, and he had the advantage of framing the issues to be litigated. On the first day of hearing in Polo I, the OAL sustained Bergen Vo-Tech's objection to admission of evidence in support of a generalized claim that Polo was entitled to teach trades in which he does not hold any specific endorsements, such as plumbing or building mechanics, and his claim as an industrial arts teacher. The OAL ruled that such issues, raised for the first time at the hearing itself, went beyond the scope of the pleadings, which were "limited to the areas of carpentry, brick and stone masonry, and vocational skills/ science." Polo I, at 234, fn. 2. Otherwise, Bergen Vo-Tech would have suffered substantial prejudice and unfair surprise, since Polo wanted to present a different case than that against which the board was prepared to defend.

Thereafter, Polo filed a second petition with the Commissioner on July 30, 1991, raising the same theories which were excluded at the first hearing. Nothing had changed in the meantime, except that on June 15, 1991 Bergen Vo-Tech had continued Polo in a 3/7th position for the 1991-92 school year, the same position he had held the year before. Polo candidly acknowledges the instant litigation was filed "because of the [OAL's] refusal to permit petitioner to litigate those issues" in Polo I. Again, Bergen Vo-Tech moves to dismiss the second suit, as untimely under the 90-day rule and as violative of the entire controversy doctrine.

At first blush, it would appear that Polo II is merely a collateral attack on a prior evidentiary ruling. Polo's contention that continuation of his assignment to the same teaching position for 1991-92 gives rise to a new and different cause of action is legally unsupportable. Rather, the situation is analogous to the increment withholding in North Plainfield Ed. Ass'n v. Bd. of Ed., 96 N.J. 587, 595 (1984), where the loss in future years was "not attributable to a new violation each year, but to the effect of an earlier employment decision."

Nonetheless, there are compelling circumstances why Polo should not be denied his day in court. First, Polo did not sleep on his rights. To the contrary, he vigorously attempted to assert these claims at the first hearing and was prevented from doing so only on procedural grounds. Hence, this is not a case where a party has neglected to apprise the court and his adversary of the existence of potential claims for inclusion in the first proceeding. Brown, at 382. Second, there has been no final disposition of these particular claims "on the merits." A dismissal based on a court's procedural inability to consider a case will not preclude a subsequent action on the same claim. Watkins v. Resorts Intern. Hotel & Casino, 124 N.J. 398, 416 (1991). Third, Polo should not be punished because his counsel drafted such careful and precise pleadings in the first case, rather than making vague shotgun allegations. Usually such specificity advances the cause of justice and is to be encouraged. It would be truly ironic if Polo were to forfeit his right to assert a claim because his attorney was not sloppy. Fourth, Bergen Vo-Tech has not demonstrated any genuine prejudice at this stage of the proceedings. Surely it is too late in the game to cry surprise. Many of the same issues will be litigated anyway in the Boles II litigation, so there would be no substantial savings of money or energy even if Polo were prevented from adding his own claims. Finally, the relief requested in Polo II is prospective, starting with the 1991-92 year. Regardless of the outcome, the decision will not alter the prior ruling that pertains to 1990-91.

Taken in their totality, these considerations are sufficient to relax strict adherence to the 90-day rule, in the interest of justice and fairness. Likewise, the entire controversy doctrine will not be invoked to defeat the rights of a party who has sought diligently to preserve these claims.

Order

It is ORDERED that the motions by Bergen Vo-Tech to dismiss the petitions in Boles I and Rossi are granted.

And it is further ORDERED that the motion by Bergen Vo-Tech to dismiss the petition in Polo II is denied.

CAL DKT. NO. EDU 3717; EDU 5392;

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

ANTHONY POLO, :

PETITIONER, :

V. :

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE VOCATIONAL SCHOOLS OF THE COUNTY OF BERGEN, BERGEN COUNTY, :

RESPONDENT. :

The record and partial summary initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law in this matter have been reviewed. The Board filed timely exceptions and Petitioner Polo filed a brief and appendix in opposition to respondent's exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. The Board also filed replies to Petitioner Polo's reply exceptions, which are not considered insofar as there is no provision providing for the submission of replies to replies.

The Board's exceptions address the ALJ's conclusions regarding the Polo II petition. It claims first that said petition filed on July 30, 1991 is untimely, as found by the ALJ, because the same theories were raised in the second petition as were excluded in the first hearing. The Board charges that no facts have changed since the first filing on July 30, 1991, except that respondent continued Mr. Polo in a 3/7th position for the 1991-92 school year, the same position he held in the preceding year.

The Board contends further, that the ALJ erred in relaxing the standards of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) for Petitioner Polo while not having done so in the instance of Petitioner Boles' petition, because it is admitted in the record that "'nothing had changed in the meantime' between Polo's first petition of 1990 and his second petition filed on July 30, 1991." (Exceptions, at p. 3, quoting Initial Decision at p. 10)

Second, the Board submits Polo failed to raise the issues of his entitlement to teach plumbing, building mechanics and industrial arts in his first petition, and thus should not be permitted to raise those issues in his second petition, noting the Board's accord with the ALJ's conclusion that "Polo's contention that continuation of his assignment to the same teaching position for 1991-92 gives rise to a new and different cause of action is legally unsupportable." (Exceptions, at pp. 3-4, quoting Initial Decision, at p. 10) Relying on North Plainfield Ed. Ass'n v. Bd. of Ed., 96 N.J. 587 (1984), the Board avers the Polo II petition should have been dismissed, noting that both the Commissioner and State Board have held that the issue of Polo's entitlement to teach such courses was properly denied on procedural grounds. The Board avers that the ALJ erred in allowing Polo to assert claims that should have been set forth in the first petition.

Third, the Board submits that the issue of claim preclusion under res judicata and collateral estoppel should have been considered in conjunction with the applicability of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2. Because Polo's first petition was silent on claims to teach positions in plumbing, building mechanics and industrial arts, the Board avers Polo slept on his right to assert or amend the petition to include additional areas of entitlement, and thus Polo is not entitled to a "second bite of the apple." The Board would distinguish Watkins v. Resorts International Hotel & Casino, 124 N.J. 398 (1991) from the one at bar, arguing that the ALJ's reliance on Watkins for the proposition that "procedural inability to consider a case will not preclude a subsequent action on the same claim" (Exceptions, at p. 5 quoting Initial Decision, at p. 11), because Watkins dealt with the issue of whether claims which were dismissed for procedural reasons in federal court should be precluded from being brought subsequently in state court under valid state statutes. In the case at bar, the Board alleges, petitioner is precluded from bringing claims for entitlement to positions in plumbing, building mechanics and industrial arts in Polo II because the same were not alleged in the original Polo I. Thus, the Board submits, Polo failed to timely file such claims under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c), and urges further that in Watkins there was no question that the state claims were brought within the appropriate statute of limitations.

The Board submits the ALJ erred in relaxing the application of N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.15 also because rather than exhibiting "careful and precise pleadings" (Exceptions, at p. 6, quoting Initial Decision, at p. 11) as the ALJ found, petitioner failed to raise all claims available to him within the timeframe prescribed in regulation. Thus, the Board argues against permitting petitioner to file a second petition solely on the basis of the denial of his right to bring the claims for the above teaching positions, as was found by the Commissioner and State Board in the earlier Polo matter.

Petitioner Polo's reply exceptions first contend that the ALJ's decision is an interlocutory order and should not be reviewed at this time. However, said reply exceptions filed by Polo on August 20, 1992 may only rebut arguments tendered by opponents, not raise procedural arguments anew. Such arguments should have been submitted as primary exceptions pursuant to the dictates of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 insofar as the Board's exceptions are silent on the issue of whether the matter represents an interlocutory determination or an initial decision. Hence, the Commissioner does not consider such argument at Point I of Polo's reply exceptions in deciding this matter.

In Point II, Polo submits that the Board does not deny that he filed his second petition within 90 days of his contested assignment for the 1991-92 school year. The current petition (Polo II), involves, he claims, the 1991-92 assignments of individuals appointed to, or holding, positions which he asserts are within his certification and more properly should be held by him. Admitting that many of those assignments are the same as those sought in Polo I, Polo notes several distinctions which he claims justify the ALJ's decision to allow the matters to proceed.

First, he notes his current claims are not retroactive to assignments from previous years, but rather seek to invalidate prospectively the 1991-92 assignments of nontenured or less senior persons in positions to which he claims entitlement by virtue of his skilled trades and industrial arts endorsements. Despite his claim of superior seniority, Polo contends in June 1991 the Board made appointments of other teachers to positions which he argues fall within the scope of his qualification. Polo also mentions that a completely new teacher, Mark Levy, was assigned to teach plumbing for 1991-92, which Polo asserts is within his skilled trades endorsement.

Regarding timeliness of his second petition, Polo avers he did not sleep on his rights, but rather promptly filed his most recent petition when such assignments, allegedly made in violation of his tenure and seniority rights, were made for 1991-92. Polo claims the Board's actions of June 1991 constitute separate conduct from those events contested in his first petition which arose once the Board renewed its action for 1991-92 assigning him to a 3/5th position. Thus, Petitioner Polo submits his rights were again violated and a new cause of action accrued. He cites Paul Gordon v. Board of Education of the Township of Passaic, Morris County, decided by the Commissioner, March 27, 1986 in support of such claim.

In the event that the Commissioner deems that the instant petition filed by Polo should have been raised earlier, Polo supports the ALJ's conclusion that relaxation of the 90-day rule is appropriate under the circumstances of this matter, for the reasons cited by the ALJ and made in reliance on Watkins, supra. Polo notes, however, that the issue of ultimate success on the merits is certainly analytically distinct from the question of whether the claims should be adjudicated on the merits, which he strongly urges should go forward for hearing.

Upon a careful and independent review of this matter, the Commissioner affirms the findings and conclusions of the ALJ below with the following clarification.

First, the Commissioner adopts as his own findings and conclusions of the ALJ below concerning Petitioners Boles' and Rossi's claims. Those petitions are, therefore, dismissed with prejudice.

Similarly, the Commissioner affirms the findings of the ALJ regarding the Polo II petition, but notes that the only time when a new cause of action arises, as was the case in Paul Gordon, supra, is when it can be established that the petition alleges the board has newly assigned to a position a staff member who did not hold that position in the preceding year for which position the petitioner believes himself or herself to be entitled. Allegations of the mere continuation of the status quo from previous years will not establish a new cause of action.

Petitioner Polo timely filed his petition within 90 days of learning that the Board allegedly intended to assign individuals to positions that they had not filled in the 1990-91 school year in the 1991-92 school year. Petitioner claims these individuals, including a new plumbing teacher named Mark Levy, enjoy less seniority or no tenure entitlement over him. Thus, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the matter should proceed as a new cause of action to the Office of Administrative Law for adjudication on the merits of Petitioner Polo's claims. The Commissioner stresses that the review of Polo's claims for 1991-92 is limited solely to newly assigned individuals for the 1991-92 school year. See Paul Gordon, supra.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed by the Office of Administrative Law as clarified herein, the initial decision is adopted. Petitioners Boles' and Rossi's petitions are accordingly dismissed and Petitioner Polo's Petition II will proceed to a hearing on the merits.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Decision on motion by the Commissioner of Education, September 10, 1992

Decision on motion by the State Board of Education, January 6, 1993

Decided by the Commissioner of Education, May 3, 1993

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Zazzali, Zazzali, Fagella & Nowak (Robert A. Fagella, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Respondent, Sokol, Behot & Fiorenzo (Philip Scalo, Esq., of Counsel)

In April 1990, Anthony Polo (hereinafter "petitioner"), a tenured teaching staff member, was notified by the Board of Education of the Vocational Schools of the County of Bergen (hereinafter "Board") that, as the result of a reduction in force, his full-time employment as a teacher of carpentry was being reduced to part-time.[1] Petitioner had been issued an emergency certificate in September 1971 as a teacher of skilled trades. He received a permanent instructional certificate with an endorsement

1 We note that the Board abolished one carpentry position by reducing two of its three carpentry positions from full-time to part-time.

Nov. 3 1993

in "skilled trades" in August 1972. He also held an endorsement as a "teacher of industrial arts," which was issued in 1978, and endorsements as a "teacher of carpentry," "teacher of vocational technical related subjects" and "teacher of brick and stone masonry," which were issued in 1982.

Petitioner filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the Board's action as violative of his tenure and seniority rights. The Commissioner dismissed that petition. We affirmed the Commissioner's ultimate determination to dismiss the petition, but rejected his analysis of petitioner's claim to seniority credit for services rendered to the district in August 1971. Polo v. Board of Education of the Vocational Schools of the County of Bergen, decided by the Commissioner, January 30, 1992, aff'd with modification by the State Board, August 5, 1992, appeal pending, (App. Div.). ("Polo I").

In June 1991, the Board notified petitioner that he would continue in a part-time position for the 1991-92 school year. Petitioner thereupon filed the instant petition, challenging his assignment for 1991-92. ("Polo II"). The Board filed a motion to dismiss petitioner's claim in Polo II as violative of the single controversy doctrine. On September 10, 1992, the Commissioner denied the motion, stressing that review of petitioner's claims in the instant action was limited solely to newly assigned individuals for the 1991-92 school year. We affirmed.

As found by the Commissioner and not disputed by the petitioner, only two teaching positions to which petitioner claimed entitlement by virtue of tenure and seniority had been newly assigned to nontenured individuals in 1991-92: plumbing and custodial training. Those two positions form the basis of the instant appeal.

On March 19, 1993, an Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") denied the relief sought, finding that petitioner lacked the appropriate certification to teach either of the controverted positions. The ALJ stressed that, under current regulations, the skilled trades endorsement is expressly restricted to the particular occupations in which the applicant demonstrates sufficient work experience, and is not a "blanket certificate" usable in all of the skilled trade areas. Observing that petitioner's skilled trades endorsement was issued by the Department of Education with approved occupational experience in "building construction," the ALJ concluded that "the 'building construction' category recognized in 1972 but now defunct," authorized petitioner "to expose students to a few of the basic principles of plumbing and electrical wiring as an adjunct to a survey course focused on the carpentry and masonry techniques of home-building," but did not signify that petitioner "has the necessary background to teach a course devoted entirely to plumbing, for which he must obtain the more specific skilled trades endorsement in 'plumbing and pipefitting.'" Initial Decision, slip op. at 9.

The ALJ also concluded that petitioner was not authorized to teach custodial training, finding that he possessed neither the "old skilled trades endorsement in custodial training nor the new PPSO [production, personal or service occupations] endorsement in building maintenance." Id. at 10. The ALJ also rejected petitioner's attempt to rely on his industrial arts endorsement, finding that custodial training did not fit within the general subject areas covered under such certification.

On May 3, 1993, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's findings and conclusions and denied the relief sought by petitioner.

Petitioner has filed the instant appeal, contending that the skilled trades endorsement he received in 1972 authorized him to teach plumbing and that his industrial arts endorsement should extend to the custodial training courses.

After a thorough review of the record, we affirm the ultimate determination of the Commissioner to dismiss the petition, but we modify her analysis in that there is no indication that her review of petitioner's authorization to teach plumbing included specific consideration of the language of the regulations in effect at the time petitioner received his skilled trades certification.

Petitioner's authorization to teach plumbing is necessarily dependent in this case upon the scope of the skilled trades endorsement he was issued in 1972. Petitioner contends that the endorsement he received, which was designated simply "Skilled Trades," exhibit P-1, in evidence, "must be deemed to extend to subject categories and trades which he actually taught pursuant to the 1972 endorsement, and in which he had actual work experience." Appeal brief, at 14.

In order to determine this matter, it is necessary to review the language of the certification regulations in effect at the time the endorsement was issued. In so doing, however, we note that the "regulations" relied upon by the parties in the record is reproduced from a certification handbook issued by the Department of Education and does not precisely reflect the substance of the applicable regulations. Unlike the handbook, the certification regulations in effect in August 1972 did not expressly enumerate any trades under the skilled trades endorsement. They simply provided for an endorsement in "Skilled Trades (Experience background)." N.J.A.C. 6:11-5.5, now codified as amended in N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.2. The regulations, however, further provided:

> 18. Skilled trades. (Experience background). Applicants who present six years of approved full-time experience (which may include apprenticeship) in a skilled trade requiring a minimum learning period of two years on-the-job training before reaching the classification of skilled worker or journeyman, of any trade listed by the Federal Committee on Apprentice Training, may receive this endorsement without the requirements of a bachelor's degree...

N.J.A.C. 6:11-8.3(e)(18), now codified in N.J.A.C. 6:11-8.1. See also N.J.A.C. 6:11-8.2.[2]

Although the regulations in effect in August 1972 did not explicitly specify the scope of the authorization to teach under the skilled trades endorsement or delineate various trades thereunder, it is evident from the language of those regulations that they were not intended to authorize the holder of such certification to teach trades beyond those in which he or she had demonstrated the requisite experience. Issuance of the endorsement was based upon demonstration by the applicant of "six years of approved full-time experience...in "a skilled trade." Id.

[2] We note that the certification regulations were amended in 1984 so as to expressly list 35 different trades under the skilled trades endorsement. See R.1984 d.369, effective October 15, 1984 (operative September 1, 1985). The regulations were subsequently amended again in 1990, eliminating the list of specific skilled trades, but providing that the holder of a skilled trades endorsement is authorized "to teach skilled trades courses in the area of his or her State-approved occupational experience..." See R.1990 d.510, effective October 15, 1990.

(Emphasis added.) The patent effect of such provision was to limit the scope of the authorization. In the face of such requirement, it is manifest that the endorsement was intended to authorize the teaching of a skilled trade or trades in which the individual had demonstrated the mandated six years of experience.

Thus, in determining whether the petitioner herein was authorized to teach plumbing under his skilled trades endorsement, the issue, based upon the regulations in effect in August 1972, is whether petitioner had six years of full-time experience in plumbing so as to have qualified for a skilled trades endorsement which included the authorization to teach that trade. Based upon the record before us, we agree with the finding of the ALJ as adopted by the Commissioner that petitioner has not established such a degree of experience in plumbing. Nor has petitioner demonstrated that his approved experience in "building construction," as reflected in the Department of Education's records, evinced the requisite experience in plumbing under the regulations or was intended to encompass that particular trade. Consequently, we conclude that petitioner has not established that he met the threshold qualification for service as a teacher of plumbing so as to have entitlement by virtue of tenure to such employment.

In addition, for the reasons expressed by the Commissioner, we also reject petitioner's claim to the position teaching custodial training. The mere fact, as argued by the petitioner, that the Board had previously employed two individuals to teach custodial training under industrial arts endorsements did not give petitioner entitlement to an assignment which, under the certification regulations, was within the purview of an endorsement he did not possess, "teacher of production, personal or service occupations."

Nor has petitioner demonstrated that the duties attending the particular assignment at issue herein were of such character as to require instructional certification in industrial arts.

Therefore, for the reasons expressed herein, we affirm the Commissioner's ultimate determination to deny the relief sought.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF SOUTH BRUNSWICK, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Peittioner, high school science teacher, challenged Board's withholding of her salary increment for the 1991-92 school year due to alleged poor performance. Petitioner contended she had severe medical problem (diabetes) which affected her performance and she also alleged procedural deficiencies in the Board's withholding action.

Following consideration of testimony of coordinator who conducted nine formal evaluations of petitioner demonstrating her inability to exercise proper supervision, control and instruction of her students, ALJ determined Board's withholding was proper exercise of its discretionary authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. Moreover, withholding had been approved by superintendent following discussion with personnel director and included by superintendent on Board's agenda for action. Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

Record Closed: June 12, 1992 Decided: July 27, 1992

BEFORE AUGUST E. THOMAS, ALJ t/a:

Petitioner is a tenured teacher employed by the Board of Education of the Township of South Brunswick (Board). On June 24, 1991, the Board voted to withhold her "increment in salary" for the coming school year. She filed an appeal of this determination with the Commissioner of Education on September 19, 1991. On October 25, 1991, the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq.

Hearings were conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), Trenton, on March 16, 1992, and May 5. 1992. Subsequently, the litigants filed post hearing briefs which set forth their proposed findings of fact and conclusions of law. Those relevant facts are incorporated below.

ISSUE

The sole issue in this matter is whether or not the Board had good cause to withhold petitioner's increment.

RELEVANT FACTS AND TESTIMONY

Petitioner is a tenured high school science teacher. Her immediate supervisors during the 1990-91 school year were the science coordinator, and the principal of South Brunswick High School. The testimony and documentary evidence presented at the hearing shows the following.

At the commencement of the 1990-91 school year, as part of the evaluation process, the coordinator met individually with each of the ten science teachers whom he supervised. In his meeting with petitioner, the coordinator shared several concerns about her classroom instruction and discussed professional improvement options. The coordinator had prior knowledge of petitioner's classroom style and management from having observed and visited her class during the previous school year, when he had served as science department chairperson. In addition, concerns had been raised by the guidance office (Student Personnel Services) because of the large number of calls received from parents whose children who wanted their children removed from petitioner's class. Petitioner acknowledged the many requests, however she told the coordinator that she felt there was some kind of conspiracy among the parents and that she was being viewed unfairly by them. The coordinator assured her that he would be observing her classroom during the year and would base his "assessment of her teaching on what he saw, not on what anyone in the community was speaking about."

The coordinator conducted nine formal, evaluative observations of petitioner over the course of the school year.* In some cases these observations were with advance notice to petitioner. On at least one occasion, petitioner herself selected the day for a formal observation (R-3). In other cases the visits were unannounced. In each case, the coordinator held a conference with petitioner after the observation and went over the objective of the lesson, the strengths and weaknesses shown, and his suggestions for improvement. He then prepared a draft written report on the observation. In accordance with standard procedure in the district, the draft report was given to petitioner to review and comment upon prior to its finalization. With respect to each written observation report, petitioner was also given an opportunity to submit a rebuttal or other written statements in response.

The coordinator testified that in addition to his formal observations, he also observed petitioner's classroom on at least a dozen other occasions during the course of the school year.

Petitioner was also formally evaluated on two occasions by the principal. His observations identify many of the same types of deficiencies independently noted by the coordinator.

*The dates of those observations and the exhibit numbers of the written evaluations which resulted are as follows:

Exhibit	Observation Date(s)
R-2	November 29, 1990
R-3	March 13, 1991
R-4	April 17, 1991
R-5	April 19, 1991
R-7	April 24, 1991
R-8	April 10-24, 1991
R-9	May 1, 1991
R-10	May 8, 1991
R-11	May 14-15, 1991

The dates of the principal's observations and the exhibit numbers of his written reports are set forth below:

Exhibit	Observation Date(s)
R-1	October 12, 1990
R-6a & b	April 23, 1991

The observation reports describe what petitioner's classes were like. She had difficulty throughout the year in getting the attention of her students at the beginning of the period. Students repeatedly came in late, and the teacher took no action against them. There were also many complaints from the attendance office because petitioner either did not complete, or improperly completed, notices of absences and tardiness for her first-period classes. This caused problems for other teachers, since the first-period attendance report was the official record used by the other teachers for the entire school day.

Petitioner also had a problem with control at the end of the class. Students would just leave when the bell rang, rather than wait to be dismissed by the teacher.

The record shows that petitioner often failed to hold the students' attention during the instructional period. An excerpt from the following observation of November 29, 1992, gives one example which respondent asserts is typical of petitioner's performance.

> Many of the students were not in class until minutes after the late bell. Catherine attempted to get the attention of the class, but was ignored by the majority of the students. Directions were given for the distribution of materials but all but two of the students had picked up their materials, already. During the first 10 minutes of class students were "playing" with the computers - typing on the keyboard, turning the adjustment knobs, and switching the connection cables. Many expressed frustration that they could not get the computers to work. Catherine worked with a group in an attempt to start their computer and then realized and explained to the class that the power switches had not been turned on. When the power was switched on, about half of the students began working on their labs.
> During the rest of the period, a number of inappropriate behaviors were observed. There was constant use of foul language by a number of students. This language was directed at each other, Catherine, the computers and the assignment. The computers continued to be misused. Keyboards were banged on, peripherals were connected and disconnected, settings were changed, and power plugs were kicked out as a prank. Water was brought [from] the sink to a computer table and spilled on the floor. Water was also dripped onto a key board by a student drinking from a plastic bag full of ice. Students also rummaged through the software cabinet and took disks to use instead of carrying out the assignment. This resulted in the use of software not related to the lesson. Several obscenities produced with a painting program that were shared with other students.

> Catherine worked with individual students during the period and seemed unaware of what was going on. There was an incident in which a student used inappropriate language near to her and she reprimanded the student. Catherine shared in our conference that she "misses much of what is happening" in the computer room and that she is not comfortable with the physical arrangement of the room [R-2, November 29, 1990, observation.]

The coordinator made many constructive suggestions for improvement. He also provided resources for petitioner to review on discipline strategies, and arranged technical assistance on the computer equipment to be provided to petitioner at her convenience. Petitioner did not avail herself of the latter opportunity. Observation reports from the end of the school year show recurrent problems in managing her class.

In the area of instruction, petitioner often used ineffective techniques, examples of which are shown below:

> The use of wait time is practically non-existent. Catherine consistently asks questions on top of question with no time in-between. When students do respond, the first response is accepted and repeated. There has been no improvement noted in the area of questioning. In addition to the problem with wait-time, almost all questions are simple recall of facts. A small percentage of students are involved in answering questions. There has been no indication of Catherine attempting to involve more students. [R-8]

> Effective questioning involves well-constructed, clear questions, adequate wait time, and addressing individual students as well as the class as a whole. Comments such as "Whose voices do I hear?", "Do you want to work alone?", and "What's happening here?" are not effective in addressing student behavior. [R-3]

> Although questions were asked often during the class, a total of eight students were asked questions or responded on their own. There were no steps taken to check the understanding of the entire class. [R-7]

> No effective uses of wait time were noted. There were 16 instances noted in which the instructor asked a question and immediately asked another question or answered the question herself. [R-7]

The coordinator testified that despite his suggestions there was no improvement shown in the following area:

> Catherine continues to do most of the talking in class - more than 95%. Her comments on every occurrence and question > are so extensive and difficult to follow that students consistently "tune her out." There is a tremendous need for consistent improvement in this area. Catherine must limit her comments so that the important information is clearly and effectively communicated. She must discontinue verbalizing her train of thought - unless it specifically addresses the objective. She needs to make decisions about what she says and how she says it. By decreasing the amount of time she spends talking, she can increase the active participation of the students. Without this change, students will not pay attention. . . . [R-8]

The coordinator also prepared an annual evaluation, in which he recommended that petitioner's increment be withheld (R-12). The District's personnel director, received the evaluation and recommendation, discussed it with the evaluators and then sent it to the superintendent as a recommendation for withholding petitioner's salary increment. The personnel director testified that he also discussed the matter orally with the superintendent. The superintendent agreed with the recommendation and he in turn recommended it to the Board by including it as an action item in the consent agenda.

The Board, without discussion, approved the superintendent's recommendation by adopting the salary increment withholding resolution at its meeting of June 24, 1991 (R-15, Item 2.8). Petitioner was notified on June 25, 1992. The record shows that petitioner asserted a medical condition as the source of her problems, and that petitioner's supervisors were generally aware that she had been newly diagnosed as a diabetic. This awareness came informally from ordinary work environment conversations. Both the coordinator and the principal testified that they could not recall the particular way in which they learned of her illness.

At the hearing petitioner testified on her own behalf. She stated that she was first diagnosed as having a severe case of diabetes in the summer of 1990, and that her condition was not brought under control until October 1990. By the end of March 1991, the diabetes was running rampant. Her blood sugar levels were again very high and were not being controlled by medication. Petitioner testified that she developed leg ulcerations that did not heal in a timely fashion; a very painful urinary tract infection persisted; she had high ANA (antinuclear antibodies); titers were elevated causing painful joint swelling in her ankles, knees and fingers; and she experienced intermittent blurred vision, extreme fatigue and concentration difficulties. She further testified that although she worked, she was so physically and emotionally drained from the diabetes that she does not know how she functioned. She testified that it was during this medical crisis that her teaching performance dropped and she received poor observations. Petitioner testified also that she apprised her supervisor and principal at various times about her poor health but both ignored her concerns. Neither made any suggestions to accommodate her physical handicap.

The local association grievance chairperson corroborated petitioner's testimony about her physical complaints and the supervisor being apprised of same and avoiding or ignoring petitioner's medical problems.

Petitioner's medical doctor testified in detail about her condition. The doctor testified that petitioner's uncontrolled diabetes was a very serious medical problem that clearly could cause her to be weak and tired, to have blurred vision, to suffer from non-responding infections and, in essence, to be ineffective as a teacher. Petitioner's medical records were introduced into evidence. (P-1)

Based on the above, petitioner seeks restoration of the withheld increment and expungement of her file of all references to the withholding.

DISCUSSION

Regarding petitioner's medical condition, her physician testified on her behalf and stated that most diabetics are capable of continuing to function well in their jobs and personal lives. She described petitioner's diabetes as "adequately controlled" for most of the year. She did not recommend that petitioner stop working nor did she suggest that petitioner take sick leave. Rather she prescribed weight loss, diet and exercise as appropriate activities. Accordingly, the record does not support a finding that petitioner was physically incapable of teaching.

For the most part, the petitioner did not refute her supervisors' factual observations contained in their many evaluations of her classroom performance. There were instances, however, when she disagreed with some of the specific comments incorporated in the evaluations. A review of these evaluations, together with the testimony of petitioner's supervisors, shows that petitioner was unable to have the control over her classes that is necessary if one is to be an effective teacher. The record shows that petitioner did not refute the written evaluations that led to the withholding of her increment; rather, she asserted that her medical condition was the cause of her classroom problems. However, the petitioner's own physician did not find that petitioner was incapacitated or unable to perform her required duties.

The statutes provide sick leave for teachers who are unable to work because of illness. Teachers who are ill should not report to work. It must be emphasized that the only purpose for school is the instruction of pupils. If that goal cannot be met adequately, for any reason, the purpose of schooling fails.

In the present matter I FIND that the instructional goal for petitioner's pupils was not met, based on the reports of her supervisors; therefore, petitioner failed to provide the supervision and instruction required to be effective as a classroom teacher. The record shows that petitioner could not control and properly supervise her pupils. A teacher's knowledge of the subject matter and extensive preparation for the lesson cannot overcome an inability to exercise proper supervision, control and instruction.

Nothing in the record, except petitioner's allegations, demonstrates that her supervisors were out to get her. Rather, the record shows a lack of classroom supervision and numerous complaints from parents who wanted their children transferred out of petitioner's classes. There is no evidence of a conspiracy by parents, as petitioner contends. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that there is adequate evidence in the record to support a recommendation by the supervisor that petitioner's increment be withheld for the 1991-92 school year.

Petitioner asserts that the Board's action in withholding her increment is flawed and must be set aside because the withholding was not made pursuant to a recommendation to the Board from the superintendent. The record does not support this assertion. The record shows that the supervisor recommended in writing that the increment be withheld, and that the director of personnel made this recommendation to the superintendent orally and in writing (P-5).

The superintendent included this recommendation in his consent agenda to the Board, and the Board on June 24, 1991, voted, without question, to withhold petitioner's increment. Neither the statutes nor the regulations (N.J.A.C. 6:8-4.2(a)6) require that a recommendation be made by the superintendent before a teacher's increment is withheld.

Nothing in this record shows any bias or untoward reason for the increment withholding. Rather, the supervisors' evaluations were made mindful of petitioner's classroom problems in the prior school year and the continuing calls from parents seeking transfers for their children. Regarding teacher evaluations, the court held in Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Education, 60 N.J Super. 288, 296 (App. Div. 1960), that ". . . in the scope of the Commissioner's review is not to substitute his judgment for that of those who made the evaluation but to determine whether they had a reasonable basis for their conclusions." Based on this record, I am convinced that the supervisors' evaluations and their conclusions were reasonable and required for the purpose of improving the instruction offered to pupils in petitioner's classes. "[T]he burden of proving unreasonableness is upon appellant [(petitioner)]." Kopera at 297. Petitioner has not met that burden. Although petitioner disagreed with some of the comments made by her evaluators, most of their criticisms were uncontradicted.

DISCRIMINATION

In his brief, counsel for the petitioner raised the defense of discrimination for the first time. There is no mention of discrimination in the pleadings nor was it mentioned or suggested on either of the two days of hearing. Nevertheless, counsel alleges that petitioner's illness is a handicap within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 10:5-4.1 and N.J.S.A. 10:5-5q, and that her "employer must make reasonable accommodation to the limitations of a handicapped employee." This argument is inappropriate at this time. Nevertheless, there is no showing that petitioner was treated differently from any of her colleagues. Nor is there any showing that any special accommodation was required. Petitioner was a regular, tenured classroom teacher who was treated the same as all teachers in the South Brunswick school district, absent any showing to the contrary. Accordingly, no consideration will be given to the allegation of discrimination.

CONCLUSION

Case law supports the discretionary power of a local board to withhold a teacher's increment. In this case the Board withheld petitioner's salary and adjustment increments. Although not stated specifically, the recommendation to the superintendent on which the Board voted expressed the intention of "freezing" petitioner's salary at the 1990-91 level (R-15).

Based on all of the above, I CONCLUDE that the Board's withholding of petitioner's increment for the 1991-92 school year was an appropriate exercise of its discretionary authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14.

The petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner, as were replies thereto by the Board, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In her exceptions, petitioner primarily takes issue with the ALJ's refusal to consider her discrimination claim, averring that the entire thrust and focus of her case was that she had a handicap (diabetes) which the Board made no attempt to accommodate. She further reiterates her argument on the alleged procedural defect in the Board's action due to the purported absence of a recommendation to withhold from the superintendent. In reply, the Board references the arguments of its post-hearing submission, which were essentially adopted by the ALJ and are fully reflected in his discussion.

Upon careful review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board's action in withholding petitioner's increment was a proper and reasonable exercise of its discretionary authority.

The Commissioner finds no merit in petitioner's contentions regarding the ALJ's handling of her discrimination claim, as the record of this matter (including a transcript of the March 16, 1992 hearing) clearly indicates that such claim was raised in neither the pleadings nor the prehearing order, and testimony on petitioner's illness, while voluminous, was presented and pursued at hearing solely by way of explaining away petitioner's essentially undisputed poor performance; indeed, there is not even a hint of reference to any clear request for specific accommodation (such as reduced or altered scheduling, or change in physical surroundings) made by petitioner, let alone of denial by the Board. To the extent that petitioner intends her claim to mean that poor evaluations or withholding an increment for poor teaching performance which may have been due to or exacerbated by illness constitutes lack of accommodation of handicap, the Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ that the only purpose of schooling is the instruction of pupils and that this purpose fails if instruction takes place ineffectively, so that the proper remedy for teachers who cannot perform their duties due to illness is to avail themselves of the sick leave provided by statute for this purpose.

With regard to petitioner's claims that her withholding was procedurally defective because the Board's action was not taken on the superintendent's specific written or verbal recommendation, the Commissioner views petitioner's position as placing form over substance and finds that the superintendent's action of accepting the personnel director's written recommendation to withhold petitioner's increment and including it on his consent agenda for the June 24, 1992 Board meeting fully constituted a recommendation for Board action within the intent of the Commissioner's directive, as expressed in Brescia v. Pemberton Twp. Bd. of Ed., decided April 1, 1991 and Rotondo v. Carlstadt-East Rutherford Regional High School District, decided May 8, 1992, that proposed personnel actions come before the Board through recommendation of the superintendent.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein and the instant Petition of Appeal dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

DECISION ON MOTION

Decision on motion by the Commissioner of Education, July 10, 1989

For the Petitioner-Respondent, Kalac, Newman & Lavendar (Peter P. Kalac, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Appellant, Maloney & McCafferty (Joseph J. Finley, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Cross/Respondent-Respondent, Kenney, Kenney, Gross & McDonough (Malachi J. Kenney, Esq., of Counsel)

The Board of Education of the Township of Pennsauken has applied for leave to appeal an interlocutory order of the Commissioner. In his determination, the Commissioner rejected that portion of a discovery order issued by the Administrative Law Judge that would have accorded Pennsauken the right to interview resident students of Haddonfield High School with respect to the racial and educational implications of termination of the sending-receiving relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken and proposed relationship with Haddonfield. Termination of the relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken and the establishment of a new relationship with Haddonfield is the subject of litigation now pending before the Office of Administrative Law.

Pennsauken's application for leave to appeal was not made within the time limit prescribed by N.J.A.C. 6:2-2.3. However, on the basis of the circumstances presented as certified by counsel and with the consent of all parties, we have relaxed the rule so as to permit the State Board of Education to consider the application, N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.19, and have granted Pennsauken's application so as to review the Commissioner's determination. After considering the arguments of counsel and carefully reviewing the express terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, we affirm the Commissioner's determination substantially for the reasons expressed therein.

John T. Klagholz, dissenting.

I recognize that this matter is before us as an interlocutory appeal challenging only that portion of an order issued by an Administrative Law Judge which prohibited the interviewing of resident students of the Haddonfield school district by Dr. Fine, a social psychologist engaged by the school district of Pennsauken. However, and having read the entire order, I cannot escape notice that the Commissioner's decision permits Dr. Fine to interview students who attend Haddonfield High School but are residents of the Borough of Merchantville.

My concern rests on the potential harm which may accrue to the children who will be interviewed as part of the discovery process and for the purposes of seeking information as to their beliefs and feelings on matters of race relations. Although Pennsauken argues that such interviews are necessary, presumably for the purpose of presenting a complete record, I cannot see the relevance of such data, even if discovered. Nor can I see any benefit to Pennsauken's cause sufficient to outweigh the risk of treading on the privacy rights of these children, i.e., the risk necessarily attending intrusion into the lives of these students by a social psychologist.

Indeed, it is not clear to me as to whether Pennsauken seeks to offer Dr. Fine as a fact witness or as an expert witness. In either case, the issues to be settled in this case do not, in my opinion, require such interviews. That is, if Pennsauken seeks to establish "symbolic loss," I believe that it may do so as a matter of law, see Brown V Board of Education, without intrusion. If they seek to establish a factual negative impact on the racial composition of the student body of Pennsauken, the children's beliefs and social attitudes are irrelevant.

I also recognize that the order below conditions these interviews on Dr. Fine's securing parental consent. Notwithstanding such consent, we have consistently protected students from unnecessary or unwarranted intrusions with respect to all other potential interviews or testing. As my colleague Mr. Brandt noted, but for this litigation, such interviews as proposed by Pennsauken would not be permitted under existing statutory or regulatory provisions that insure the privacy of students and the confidentiality of student records.

Therefore, I would amend the order and prohibit any interviews of students for the purposes offered.

Board of Education of the Borough of Merchantville v. Board of Education of the Township of Pennsauken v. Board of Education of the Borough of Haddonfield

SYNOPSIS

Merchantville Board of Education attempted to sever relationship with Pennsauken Board of Education. This was the district's second attempt to sever the sending-receiving relationship that began in the 1972-73 school year. The first attempt centered on question of the expiration of its contract - the Commissioner disagreed that contract expired and State Board affirmed. Present petition designates Haddonfield as new receiving district.

Following consideration of testimony of lay and expert witnesses, ALJ found if severance of sending-receiving relationship were granted, there would be no significant negative impact--educational, financial or racial. ALJ found that Merchantville had shown by preponderance of credible evidence in the record that, in accordance with the standards required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, it should be permitted to end its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. As to the cross petition that Haddonfield's private tuition policy was improper as it allegedly undermined attempts at racial integration, ALJ found effect of nonresident enrollments at Haddonfield High School was so remotely related to enrollment composition of Pennsauken High School that "an insufficient nexus" existed to permit the action Pennsauken sought. ALJ granted Haddonfield's Motion to Dismiss the Cross Petition. (Englewood/ Englewood Cliffs; Booker; Jenkins)

Commissioner affirmed in part/reversed in part the initial decision. Commissioner concurred with ALJ's findings and conclusions regarding absence of significant negative financial impact on either of the districts concerned if severance were granted. Similarly, Commissioner was persuaded that no significant educational impact would flow from severance. The Commissioner, however, rejected the ALJ's conclusion that no significant negative racial impact would exist. Such negative impact would befall Pennsauken High School. Citing Englewood/Englewood Cliffs and the statistics relative to racial balance developed by Merchantville's demographer, Commissioner found severance would result in advancing the deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented in Pennsauken High School's community. Commissioner denied Merchantville's request for severance from Pennsauken relationship. Moreover, Commissioner denied Pennsauken's motion to enjoin Haddonfield's private tuition program.

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Petition for an order of the Commissioner of Education to dissolve a sending-receiving relationship for secondary pupils between boards of education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This is the Merchantville Board of Education's (Merchantville's) second attempt to sever its sending-receiving relationship for high school pupils with the Pennsauken Board of Education (Pennsauken). The sending-receiving relationship began in the 1972-73 school year. The parties entered a sending-receiving contract on December 14, 1971, the contract term being September 1, 1972-June 30, 1982. When the contract term had run, Merchantville asked the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) to declare that the contract had expired by its own terms and that Merchantville was no longer obligated to send its secondary pupils to Pennsauken High School. The Commissioner disagreed and the State Board of Education affirmed. 1982 S.L.D. 753, 756. The matter was argued in the Appellate Division of Superior Court. On September 30, 1985 the court affirmed the decision of the State Board of Education. Merchantville Bd. of Ed. v. Pennsauken Bd. of Ed. (N.J. App. Div., Sept. 30, 1985, A-1655-82 T3) (unreported).

On July 6, 1988, Merchantville filed the present petition with the Commissioner. Pennsauken filed its answer on July 25, 1988. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. on August 1, 1988. A prehearing conference was held on October 7, 1988 before the judge then assigned. Subsequently, the matter was assigned to me.

Pennsauken moved to cross-petition against the Haddonfield Board of Education (Haddonfield). Merchantville had designated Haddonfield as the district to which it would send its secondary pupils should its petition be granted. Haddonfield became a party respondent without objection on February 3, 1989 and filed its answer on May 17, 1989. An order of consolidation issued on July 26, 1989 and the cases proceeded simultaneously

The parties engaged in extensive discovery including depositions of lay and expert witnesses. Several prehearing rulings issued. Rulings concerned acceptance by Haddonfield of Merchantville tuition students, Pennsauken's right to have its experts interview Haddonfield students and Merchantville's request for a ruling on the issue of burden of proof.

On the latter issue, after arguments by counsel, the judge ruled on October 25, 1989 that

> The petitioner must first consider the educational, financial and racial implications for itself and the receiving districts. The petitioner must show the Commissioner that no substantial negative impact will result from its proposed withdrawal. This is significantly more than "some" evidence that withdrawal will not significantly affect the receiving district. What this means in terms of how the hearing proceeds is that the petitioner must make its best case in its case in chief. Upon close of the petitioner's case in chief, the respondent may make any appropriate motions. Assuming the petitioner's case survives the motions, the respondent must make a case that rebuts or mitigates the petitioner's case. The parties may then rest or, as is more likely, take the opportunity to present parol and documentary rebuttal evidence. [at p. 3]

Merchantville attempted an interlocutory appeal to the Commissioner. On November 13, 1989, the Commissioner denied review. Merchantville moved to appeal the Commissioner's constructive affirmance of the administrative law judge to the State Board of Education (State Board) and on January 3, 1990, the State Board granted Merchantville's leave to appeal. The State Board issued a stay of proceedings while it considered the appeal.

On September 5, 1990, the State Board ruled on the burden of proof issue, stating, among other things,

> The allocation of the burden of production delineated above does not shift the ultimate burden of persuading the Commissioner that termination is mandated or warranted. That burden remains on the petitioning party. However, where a petitioner has met its initial burden of production in proceedings, under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, . . . the claim by the respondent that termination will have a substantial impact is in the nature of an affirmative defense. Thus, it is appropriate that the party asserting the claim bear the burden of showing that a negative impact outweighing any positive benefits of termination will result.

Upon the State Board's ruling, hearing commenced on November 8, 1990. Thirty witnesses were heard and 67 exhibits entered in evidence. See appendices following the initial decision. After 22 days of taking testimony, hearing concluded on October 8, 1991. The matter was completely briefed and a further ruling on motion was made. In response to a Merchantville motion to exclude proffered documents, the judge heard oral argument by telephone on March 3, 1992. In the course of submitting its briefs, Pennsauken attached four documents that had not been offered at hearing. Merchantville filed the above-mentioned motion and Haddonfield concurred with Merchantville's arguments. Pennsauken argued that it believed it was permitted to submit documents it said came to light after the hearing concluded. Inasmuch as there is no rule permitting such submissions and the judge had received no motion or application for leave to submit, the judge ordered the documents excluded. The record closed on March 16, 1992.

THE PLEADINGS

In its petition, Merchantville alleged it had completed the comprehensive feasibility study required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13; it had filed same with the Commissioner; Haddonfield cooperated in providing data for the study and was both willing and wanted to accept Merchantville High School pupils, subject to Commissioner approval; that Merchantville by resolution adopted March 29, 1988 determined to ask the Commissioner's approval for termination of the sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken and for the establishment of a new relationship with Haddonfield, and that several equitable considerations supported the requested termination:

(a) Pennsauken High School is overcrowded based on functional capacity studies completed by the Division of Facility Planning, State Department of Education;

(b) Haddonfield HIgh School is functioning at approximately 60% of capacity based on functional capacity studies completed by the Division of Facility Planning;

(c) Projected enrollments over the next five years reflect an increase of students at Pennsauken High School and a decrease of students at Haddonfield High School;

(d) Infusion of Merchantville pupils at Haddonfield High School would permit Haddonfield to continue its broad curriculum offerings;

(e) Haddonfield High School represents a more compatible secondary school experience than does Pennsauken High School for children coming from the type of educational program provided by Merchantville;

(f) Merchantville seeks a more academically oriented program for its pupils. Haddonfield provides 70% of its course offerings in basic academic areas. Pennsauken offers only 52% of its courses in basic academic areas;

(g) Class sizes generally are larger at Pennsauken than at Haddonfield, and

(h) The pupil-teacher ratio at Pennsauken is higher than at Haddonfield.

Merchantville also asserted the change in high school designation would have no substantial negative impact on the educational program, on the racial balance or the finances of the affected districts.

Pennsauken denied each allegation or stated it lacked sufficient information or knowledge to form a belief as to the truth of the allegation.

In its cross petition, Pennsauken alleged that Haddonfield's practice of soliciting and accepting pupils from Merchantville on a tuition basis has and will have an adverse educational, social, racial and financial impact on Pennsauken.

Haddonfield answered, admitting that it accepts pupils from other districts but denying that it solicits their enrollment and denying that its practice creates any adverse educational, social, racial or financial effect in the Pennsauken district.

PAROL AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

Merchantville's Case

Merchantville presented a six-year Board member who testified the district operates one school, grades kindergarten-eight (K-8). In October 1990, approximately 400 pupils were enrolled. Merchantville was a kindergarten-twelve (K-12) district through 1972. It received pupils from Cherry Hill Township and Pennsauken Township throughout most of this century.

In 1972, Merchantville and Pennsauken entered a ten-year sending-receiving contract. Some 12-18 months before the contract expired in 1982, Merchantville began looking at alternatives. See, first petition of appeal (P-1). Merchantville considered Haddonfield and Haddon Township. As the contract expired, Merchantville approached Pennsauken. It was determined that the Boards could not amicably end the relationship. Merchantville filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education that ultimately was decided by the Appellate Division in 1985.

The Board then waited "a couple of years." The legislature was looking at the question. Committees of the Merchantville and Pennsauken Boards met in September 1987. Pennsauken refused voluntary severance. Merchantville then considered additional alternatives. Among other things, it listed potential receiving high schools. It narrowed the list and approached several. Committees of the Board visited two high schools that seemed hospitable and compatible. Haddonfield was one of these.

The Board Committee recommended that the Board continue to seek a sending-receiving relationship with Haddonfield. It hired Guidelines, Inc., a consulting firm, and directed it to perform a feasibility study as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13. The study was directed by Dr. Robert F. Savitt. [See, Savitt's testimony, below.]

The Merchantville Board received a draft report in March 1988. It held a community meeting for the twin purposes of presenting Savitt's findings to the community and getting community input. On March 29, 1988, the Board resolved to pursue the present appeal (P-4). Thereafter, Merchantville filed the present petition (P-2).

The Board collected materials including State Department of Education Report Cards on Merchantville, Pennsauken and Haddonfield. Savitt's educational reasons squared with the statements on the report cards prepared for each district.

The Board did not do a formal parent-community survey concerning the change in 1988. It had done so in 1982. The Board got comments from community at board meetings.

Each year, Merchantville holds sessions for eighth grade pupils and parents. The parents are invited to Pennsauken High School. A few days later, pupils visit the school. Those interested may further explore the Pennsauken program. Pennsauken personnel make a presentation to eighth grade pupils. Haddonfield makes no such presentation.

There have been mathematics articulation meetings between Merchantville and Haddonfield teachers. The districts are using the same mathematics curriculum.

The Haddonfield Superintendent of Schools testified. He has been in the district for over 12 years, serving since 1981 as superintendent. In October 1990, the district enrolled 1,740 pupils. Secondary pupils are housed in a "multibuilding" complex and number approximately 550. The building is rated at a 1,250-pupil capacity, although the district would prefer fewer pupils to actually occupy the building.

In late 1987 and early 1988 the Board directed a study of the feasibility of a sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville (P-8). There was no agreement at the time to accept Merchantville pupils. Haddonfield was and is interested in grades 9-12 only. The study considers whether the high school program and building could accommodate Merchantville pupils. The focus is on the impact on Haddonfield.

The high school is evaluated by the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools and is monitored by the State Department of Education. The most recent Middle States report is from October 1986 and is admitted in evidence as Exhibit P-10. The January 12, 1987 "T and E" monitoring report of January 12, 1987 is in evidence as Exhibit P-11.

If the sending-receiving relationship is approved, Haddonfield assumes a phase in over four years. After all Merchantville pupils, perhaps 60-100, are in Haddonfield, the effect should be positive. Haddonfield's enrollments at the secondary level are declining. The infusion of new pupils would help keep the curriculum broad and rich. The tuition moneys received would add resources to program development and staff development. There would be little or no need for additional staff.

After his study, the Haddonfield Board considered the question and on February 11, 1988 approved the concept (P-12).

Dr. Robert F. Savitt, a principal of Guidelines, Inc., testified. He has extensive experience in school consulting and has done superintendent searches, school reorganization studies, administrative reorganization studies, regulation studies and sending-receiving studies. More than half of Guidelines, Inc.'s business is done in New Jersey. He twice before qualified to testify as an expert in Office of Administrative Law proceedings.

Savitt did a 57-page report and a supplemental report. On the day he testified, he was shown September 1990 enrollment figures. He reviewed them prior to testimony and stated his basic findings and conclusion were unchanged (P-13a, P-13b).

The witness developed the racial component of Exhibit P-13a. He has done similar work in four or five other New Jersey districts. The witness stated racial impact is measured on a purely quantitative basis.

The witness assessed programs at Pennsauken and Haddonfield high schools. He collected data from the districts, and the county superintendent. He made visits to each school. He had the opportunity to discuss collected data and to request additional data. He spoke to administrators and others in each school and he visited and observed certain classes and activities. He believes the data he collected allowed him to state the conclusion in P-13a and P-13b.

One aspect of his study was how pupils would fare K-12 in terms of the educational program offered. The focus was on Merchantville pupils in terms of a curriculum continuum. He met with the Merchantville Board while conducting his study. He provided periodic progress reports, the first approximately 6-8 weeks after retention. He sent some data ahead and met with the full board. Approximately a month later he sent more data and again met with the full board. The next meeting was a presentation of his preliminary report. Savitt submitted it in writing and again met with the full board. At the preliminary report meeting the goal was to find any errors. Some corrections, indeed, were made. There was a general discussion and a public meeting was planned for several weeks later.

The final report was submitted in February or March 1988. The public meeting was held at about the same time. Several experts contributed to the report, but Savitt wrote the report.

Savitt stated he visited Pennsauken high school on two days. He conferred with the building administration and the superintendent. He had questions concerning many areas and generally was provided the data he needed as well as the observations he requested.

The witness testified at some length concerning his observations. He had good cooperation from the high school principal and saw a range of classes and activities. Teachers knew that Savitt and an associate would be in the building. The associate made his own observations. The observers spoke to some teachers between classes or during activities that occupied pupils. Savitt stated he always has a sign in conference and sign out conference. At the departure conference he met with an assistant principal-disciplinarian. The principal had collected some requested data and gave it to him at that time.

The witness observed that special education classes and science classes were cramped. The high school principal volunteered that the building was overcrowded. A period-by-period room review showed almost no space available. Savitt was shown architect-prepared plans he believes were never implemented. The plans he saw would have resolved one building need; it would have upgraded certain special facilities. However, it could create no significant increase in the building's functional capacity. The plans he saw may have had preliminary department of education approval. Savitt was not aware of any financing approval or any plans submitted to the state for final approval.

Savitt's associate observed and spoke approximately the same way to approximately the same number of pupils and teachers. The associate contributed several sections to the report (P-13a). He also contributed to the summary. Savitt observed Pennsauken High School before visiting Haddonfield High School. His associate also visited both schools. In addition, Savitt visited and made observations at the Merchantville elementary school.

Savitt and his associate did not visit Haddonfield High School at the same time. Savitt met with the superintendent to request additional information, to get the superintendent's sense of the district and program and to explore his interest in and reasons for a Merchantville sending-receiving relationship. Savitt also spoke to the business administrator/board secretary. He then went to the high school and met with the principal, other administrators, guidance personnel and the athletic director. He requested materials and asked questions concerning curriculum and space availability. He visited and observed seven or eight classes and toured the school. He and his associate both took some notes and conferred before producing the report. Both approached their observations based on elements developed in a meeting before the observations were made. They looked for individualization of instruction, tone of the school, impressions of leadership and also how the facilities affected the instructional program. They did not use a facilities checklist. He developed and provided to his associate the criteria shown on page 15 of his report.

Haddonfield personnel believed Haddonfield would benefit if Merchantville pupils attended their high school. Almost all pointed to better staff utilization and the nonelimination of staff and programs. Some Haddonfield personnel feared low enrollment classes would be eliminated.

The consultants met no members of the Haddonfield Board. They spoke to pupils at Pennsauken, Haddonfield, and Merchantville, but spoke to no parents at any school. The consultants spoke to more pupils at Pennsauken than at Haddonfield. There were no preplanned questions of pupils, but both consultants agreed they needed to focus on facilities and how facilities affect programs. They inquired about this of teachers, pupils and administrators.

Savitt expressed opinions about a comprehensive high school and its ability to present a variety of courses, experiences and services to meet the needs of its whole student body. Haddonfield High School is comprehensive to meet the needs of its pupils who, overwhelmingly, are in college preparatory curriculums. The school would not meet all pupils' needs. In this regard, the witness stated comprehensive relates to the given student body.

The selection of classes observed was restricted only by what was available at the time the consultants were at a given school. Concerning class size, Savitt stated that very small classes can reduce the opportunity for social interaction and are often eliminated as resources become scarce. This typically reduces a school's ability to present advanced courses.

Savitt uses the term "compatibility" in his report (P-13a). As used, the term refers to an arrangement in which the program in one school district flows into and relates to the program in another. Articulation is how curriculum meets. Compatibility is a much broader term and includes elements such as the tone of the school. The witness made findings concerning articulation of curriculum and program between Merchantville and Pennsauken and made projections concerning articulation of curriculum and program concerning Merchantville and Haddonfield.

If Pennsauken could make the same commitments as Haddonfield, the witness might change his recommendations.

Community ties and relationships are considered within his report (p.36), but are not a separate study. His findings address educational compatibility, not social compatibility. In this study and in other studies he has done, the witness did not include socioeconomic ties. All reports speak to articulation, however.

Savitt used no standardized forms in his studies. However his observation included classroom atmosphere, teacher evaluation procedures and instruments, pupil interaction and pupil-teacher interaction. The consultants observed honors classes at Pennsauken and at Haddonfield. Both consultants observed classified classes at the two high schools. The consultants observed that special education facilities were vastly different. The Pennsauken facilities were inadequate and the Haddonfield facilities were "perfect." In both cases, however, teachers and program were judged good.

The Pennsauken curriculum serves its student population. Curriculum is driven by pupil needs. There is a relationship between standardized test results and pupils' goals after high school. There is no agreed upon reason for this relationship, but it is a universally observed relationship. College-bound pupils usually score better. In any event, Scholastic Aptitude Tests and standardized tests form one of many parts of an educational program.

The witness was questioned concerning his work in the Upper Freehold Regional-Washington Township case. He pointed out certain similarities between his work in that case and the present matter. He also pointed out that both case law and the statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, have changed since Upper Freehold was decided.

The witness also testified concerning the Middle States evaluation of Haddonfield, observations concerning school facilities in general and some negative comments in his report concerning atmosphere and program at Pennsauken. The feasibility study addresses the three areas required by statute.

The witness did not examine Merchantville's private tuition policy, if any; did not go into what districts Haddonfield might be negotiating with; did not break out which colleges Haddonfield pupils are attending; did not differentiate between two-and four-year colleges and looked at diversity of facility and staff. In this regard, Savitt stated that diversity of faculty and staff is a good idea, but a more important criterion is the quality of faculty and staff.

Savitt concluded with testimony concerning extracurricular activities, college preparatory programs, guidance programs, pupil-teacher ratios, administrative staff concerns, libraries, special education and cocurricular activities. Generally, both Pennsauken and Haddonfield measure well in these areas. The witness believes Pennsauken administrative staff are overworked. Nevertheless, Pennsauken adequately prepares pupils for college with what they have. So far as the witness knows, no Merchantville pupil has been denied a particular class at Pennsauken High School. The cafeteria at Pennsauken is overcrowded. The two high schools have common elements, but unique atmospheres. There are differences in administrative style, teaching techniques, resources and philosophy. The witness and his associate both have experience as superintendents of schools. Savitt regards his associate as completely reliable. They "speak the same language" and work together well.

Merchantville also called a financial expert. Carole Deddy holds degrees in business administration and education. She also holds a Masters in Business Administration. She has taught high school business education and is a certified school business official. She served eight years in business official capacities and was a vice president of Swarthmore College in Pennsylvania. As a school business administrator, she performed all of the functions associated with that capacity including budget administration, preparation and administration and interpreting the budget to the public. She knows the relationship of property tax levies to school taxes. She is familiar with tuition calculations having worked in a receiving district. She holds principal, business official and assistant superintendent for finance certificates. She has previously testified in two sending-receiving cases and has done at least five feasibility studies in finance, budget preparation and budget influence on municipal tax levies. She was hired in late 1987 or early 1988 to study the financial implications of this sending-receiving case. Her report is part of P-13a and her update is in evidence as Exhibit P-13c In both her original and updated reports she collected financial data. Her assumptions are listed and carefully set forth in her portions of the report. She was shown Exhibit P-13d, a State Department of Education printout of financial statistics for Camden County school districts. Based on her review of that document, she would reaffirm her findings. She carefully considered all available data and concluded that there would be no negative financial impact on Pennsauken if Merchantville pupils were withdrawn. The Pennsauken principal indicated enrollments were rising and would generate approximately one million dollars in additional aid. This would more than offset any loss of Merchantville pupils. It is noted that the principal made this statement before the Quality Education Act was enacted.

In sum, the Merchantville consultants conclude there would be no substantial educational, financial or racial impact on Pennsauken or Merchantville if severance were allowed.

Motion to Dismiss

On the fourth day of hearing, Merchantville rested. Pennsauken moved to dismiss; Merchantville and Haddonfield opposed. The judge ruled from the bench as follows:

> Gentlemen, I have reread my bench notes very carefully including the notes of the argument.
>
> In dealing with a motion to dismiss it is required that all favorable inferences be construed in favor of the party not the maker of the motion.
>
> Having heard your respective arguments of fact and law, and having considered them, I perceive that a prima facie case has been made by the parol and documentary evidence of record. And I would reach that conclusion whether under the standards set by the State Board decision of September 5th or whether by the former standard.
>
> A defense is required of the Pennsauken Board of Education and the motion to dismiss is denied, subject of course, to renewal at an appropriate time.
>
> This order may be reviewed by the Commissioner of the Department of Education either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

On the next day, November 21, 1990, Pennsauken began presentation of its case.

Pennsauken's Case

Pennsauken called the Merchantville guidance counselor. She has held that position since December 1, 1980. She stated that during course selection for eighth graders entering Pennsauken High School, Pennsauken representitives come to Merchantville. They present to pupils the course selection procedure. The witness works with Merchantville pupils, does paperwork and forwards papers to Pennsauken. She has received good cooperation from Pennsauken guidance personnel throughout her experience. There appear to be no problems for pupils in transition. There are no parent complaints she is aware of concerning transition.

Last year, Merchantville received curriculum information from the Pennsauken High School language and mathematics departments in response to a Merchantville request. The witness had no specific recall of complaints from Merchantville pupils attending Pennsauken High School. Merchantville pupils usually do not consult her on high school course selection and most pupils do not express an opinion on what secondary school is best for them.

Articulation between Pennsauken and Merchantville consists, in the main, of one meeting per year and perhaps some telephone followup. At one time, when Merchantville operated a 9th grade, all pupils who would attend Pennsauken High School toured the school in the May before the September in which they would enter. This has not happened for several years. The witness' primary contact at Pennsauken is most cooperative.

The Merchantville supervisor of special services testified. He has a range of experience in education, particularly special education, and is a certified Learning Disabilities Teacher Consultant.

The witness stated articulation within the special education areas between Merchantville and Pennsauken has been accomplished cooperatively. The witness believes special education programs at Pennsauken meet the needs of Merchantville pupils at this time. The Pennsauken vocational coordinator has a special education background and this is particularly helpful for handicapped pupils who may be interested in vocational training. Proposals for expansion at Pennsauken High School include space for vocational education programs for special education pupils.

Pennsauken's primary expert witness testified. Dr. Lawrence Kaplan described how his report was compiled (RP-5, RP-6). The witness stated that his firm, University Consultants on Education, was first contacted in late 1988 by a Pennsauken assistant superintendent. The witness then met with a Pennsauken group and discussed generally what Pennsauken would require in a report. Demographics and related questions were discussed as was Pennsauken's attorney's need for a report and testimony on the criteria established by statute.

The witness also looked at some of the work done by Dr. Michelle Fine (see, below) concerning symbolic loss and secondary loss. At deposition, the witness had stated these concepts were introduced to him and explained to him by Pennsauken's counsel.

No one associated with Pennsauken dictated to the consultants or suggested to them what the outcome should be. The consultants began with no preconceived notions.

The witness filed at least three reports with Pennsauken's counsel. Exhibit RP-5, a 36-page report, is the latest revision.

Exhibit P-14, a 43-page report, was the consultants' initial draft. The witness wrote pages 1, 4 and 21-43. This document was probably completed in late October 1989. He also wrote RP-6, "Neighborhoods and Communities, the Pennsauken-Merchantville Connection."

The witness consulted with Dr. Fine three times: when hired, in late spring 1989 and at the University of Pennsylvania some time later.

The initial draft was reviewed with counsel and another associated consultant. The latter did the comparative analysis of Pennsauken and Haddonfield. In the first draft, the consultant refers to counselor to pupil ratios at the two high schools. The ratio is one to 250 at Pennsauken and one to 200 at Haddonfield. The consultant reports guidance counselor contacts at least twice a year at Pennsauken although seniors may be seen as many as 12 times. Guidance services at Pennsauken appear to be organized to meet the needs of minorities, vocational pupils, Hispanic pupils and those for whom English is a second language.

The witness spent six or seven days, or parts thereof, in Pennsauken. He believes the school is not overcrowded. In his draft report he mentions a conference with eight Merchantville pupils and makes reference to uncomfortable size and atmosphere. These observations, however, do not lead to a conclusion that the school is overcrowded. In any event, these references do not appear in the final report.

The witness had read some of Fine's work before he did his draft. Two sections of his report are devoted to symbolic and secondary loss. His study was done entirely at his discretion, but he was told that attention and treatment had to be given to demographics.

When deposed, Dr. Kaplan stated that the financial considerations were not substantial in this case. A small number of Merchantville pupils withdrawn from Pennsauken would not have a serious financial effect.

In his report, Kaplan states, "We are not dealing here with the best and worst of high schools but with two distinctly different sets of community educational needs" (RP-5, p. 2). Kaplan still believes that symbolic loss is an important issue in this matter notwithstanding the State Board decision language "Therefore, . . . we have neither relied upon nor considered the proofs developed from interviews with students attending DMHS and THS concerning their beliefs and social values, which were submitted into evidence to show that 'symbolic loss' would occur in this case." Englewood Cliffs Bd. of Ed. v. Englewood Bd. of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 566 (Apr. 18, 1988); mod. Comm'r of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 632 (July 11, 1988); mod. St. Bd. of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 663, 688-689 (Apr. 4, 1989).

After a meeting with counsel and an associate consultant, Kaplan edited the report. The whole team did not meet to compile and coordinate the final report. Kaplan gathered data and relied on certain source materials. He cites associate consultants and others. He also relied on his own experience.

On page 14, the witness sets out six areas to be discussed:

1. The historic and geographic relationship of Merchantville and Pennsauken;

2. The effect on Merchantville pupils of loss of contact with Pennsauken;

3. The symbolic loss to Pennsauken High School and community if Merchantville departs;

4. Secondary loss resulting from departure and the impact of symbolic loss;

5. The comparison between the Pennsauken school system and community and the New Brunswick system and using historic and current data from New Brunswick and its parallel to Pennsauken; and

6. A summary.

After completing the exhibit, Kaplan wrote the supplement (RP-6). He was asked to expand on historic and geographic aspects. He did additional research in order to produce Exhibit RP-6. Among other things, he read publications of the Bicentennial Commission of Pennsauken and a 1964 Merchantville publication. He did not read Commissioner of Education decisions on the topic and has no recall of reading Commissioner of Education decisions in the New Brunswick-North Brunswick sending-receiving matter.

Kaplan noted that Merchantville and Pennsauken share a water supply, trash collection and Little League field use. He did not establish separate and local tax collection, separate and local inspectors, separate and local municipal courts, separate and local zoning and planning functions and the like. He reported no municipal library in Merchantville, but learned later that there is one. In his opinion, however, items he did not address as separate and distinct do not negate the "oneness" of the two municipalities.

The witness maintains that Merchantville is physically surrounded by Pennsauken as Morris Township surrounds Morristown. See, Jenkins v. T.P. of Morris School Dist. and Bd. of Ed., 58 N.J. 483 (1971). The witness also stated he knows Merchantville has some borders not contiguous with Pennsauken but considers Merchantville physically surrounded by Pennsauken. In Exhibit RP-5 he refers to Merchantville as surrounded; in RP-6 he refers to Merchantville as surrounded almost exclusively by Pennsauken.

The witness also stated that he made reference to Pennsauken's "urban classification," but was challenged at his deposition. In Exhibit RP-6, in a change from earlier reports, he refers to Pennsauken as "urban/suburban." All references are to New Jersey Department of Labor classifications.

The University Consultants' report concludes that Pennsauken High School delivers quality education. Removing the press of constant litigation, the district will focus more on enhancing delivery of services. The consultants also believe that continued attendance by Merchantville pupils at Pennsauken High School can benefit both groups of pupils and prepare Merchantville pupils "for a productive and satisfying life encompassing more schooling or a successful work experience, and with a set of skills and experiences to live in a complex world populated by many different peoples" (RP-5 at 35).

Kaplan further stated that he compared curriculums, facilities, programs and community factors. He applied his own opinion as to which of the three statutory elements (educational program, financial impact and racial impact) was most important. He did not do the financial analysis. That was done by an associate consultant. His references to money express his opinion, but are not a part of his study. He was able to do the demographic work and decide what best supported Pennsauken. The educational effect of a Merchantville withdrawal was not a part of his study. His work was done completely independently; he was given broad guidelines at an initial meeting, some board employees helped him gather data, and he set the direction of his paper. He did not use certain information others gathered.

The witness expressed the opinion that although Merchantville and Pennsauken each have a municipal governmental structure, that is not particularly important. Merchantville is a "neighborhood in the community of Pennsauken."

On his visits to Pennsauken High School, Kaplan did not observe the school to be overcrowded. Because 1990 U.S. Census figures were not available, Kaplan relied on the 1987 updated figures (RP-5 at 22). The witness conceded a smaller number of white residents leaving Pennsauken if severance were granted than the number that left New Brunswick. However, the difference in numbers does not affect his loss concepts. Although some years are not reported in some charts in his report, this does not affect trends and patterns.

Kaplan started from the position that Pennsauken is better served if the sending-receiving relationship is continued. He then made his report. The witness also testified that the specifications of his report and services to Pennsauken were changed almost as soon as drawn.

Pennsauken presented its director of school facilities. He has served in the post for eight years. He was involved in the proposed expansion of Pennsauken High School. He developed educational specifications with input from school administrators and worked with the architect.

Approximately $18 million has been alloted to the project in five phases. The program was authorized in October 1988 by the Board. The Board also is committed to lease-purchase arrangements.

The functional capacity of Pennsauken High School is 1,426. After expansion, the functional capacity will be 1,786 based on program with a maximum rated capacity of 1,862 if the New Jersey Department of Education permits.

In the witness' opinion, Savitt's finding of overcrowding or overuse is not accurate. He believes the building is not overused.

The improvement plan will create additional classroom space to aid scheduling existing programs and to accommodate expanded programs. In the 1970's, when there were only three grades in the school, the capacity was similar to today's. There have been times when utilization was even higher than today. More space definitely provides more program flexibility. The witness concedes there is minimal flexibility at this time. Scheduling four separate pupil lunch periods gives some spatial relief but the witness was not in his present position when this began and he cannot be positive of the reason it was implemented. High school space as currently available gives administrators what they need for current program requirements. There are few unused classrooms at any time in the day. There is not enough space for an in-school suspension program covering every period of the school day.

The witness did a capacity study of the building with the Board's architect in late 1988 and derived the same number as did the New Jersey Department of Education.

The witness believes Savitt's language concerning Haddonfield High School is also applicable to Pennsauken High School. Pennsauken has ample space for current scheduling. It now has a diversified program. Underutilization and having pupils below the number of functional capacity are not the same thing. The witness, however, has minimal involvement with scheduling. He has no familiarity with Haddonfield High School.

Pennsauken's director of special services testified. He is responsible for special education, guidance, counseling, nursing, the child study team, attendance and other functions. He stated that Exhibit RP-6 covers offerings at Pennsauken.

Merchantville has 14 classified pupils in Pennsauken, eight of them at the high school. His office produced RP-15, a Pennsauken High School Special Education Report dated April 12, 1991. The witness stated there is much mainstreaming at Pennsauken High School and noted that computer literacy courses are available to perceptually impaired classified pupils.

The witness conceded there are three special education teachers in one room. However, not more than two use the room at one time. This does not violate any state guidelines. There is a total of 137 classified pupils at the high school. Of these, 31.3 percent are minority pupils. All Merchantville classified pupils are white.

Every special education parent is offered involvement in his/her child's program. Articulation with Merchantville special education personnel is excellent. At the high school, there are four self-contained classes for perceptually impaired pupils, one class for socially maladjusted pupils, these two accounting for approximately 40 pupils and the balance, some 95-100 pupils, are in resource room situations.

Time out rooms, a widely accepted concept for special education pupils, are used at the high school but, because of space limitations are within the classroom, not in separate rooms.

Pennsauken's supervisor of counseling testified. She coordinates guidance activities between Pennsauken and Merchantville. The witness disagrees with Pennsauken's expert's report (P-13 at 12) stating, "It was very disappointing to note that little if any articulation of curriculum is carried out with Pennsauken High School." The witness maintains articulation is addressed carefully. Incoming Merchantville pupils spend a day at Pennsauken High School with 9th grade pupils. Meetings are held at the Merchantville school with counselors in order to develop pupils' schedules. There is an 8th grade parents' meeting. In addition, there is a general awareness of Pennsauken's programs by way of older siblings who attend Pennsauken, sports programs, and other informal means.

The witness also disagreed with Merchantville's expert's statement (P-13 at 14), "Although community and parent involvement is extensive in relationship to Merchantville Elementary school, opportunities are very limited in relationship to Pennsauken High School. A limited orientation program for students and parents is provided." The witness' disagreement is based on the same reasons she expressed concerning articulation and curriculum. Merchantville is advised of every activity concerning the Counseling Department such as college night and scheduling night. The witness also stated that she has no complaints regarding any facet of counseling activities from Merchantville parents.

Pennsauken has three general curriculums: college preparatory, business and technical. College preparatory pupils comprise about one-half of enrollment. Guidance is divided between college preparatory and noncollege preparatory. Much time is spent on college applications and, in their senior years, college-bound pupils are seen as many times as needed.

The witness recalls speaking to a consultant about guidance services once or perhaps twice. She does not recall speaking of the areas the consultant mentions, but concedes the consultant must have spoken to the principal (P-14 at 12). The witness also believes Merchantville's consultant's conclusions apply to Pennsauken as well as Haddonfield. She firmly believes the school has low class sizes allowing for individual differences and that transfers can be accommodated within present class sizes. A few classes are overenrolled (P-20, P-21, P-22). The courses rather than room sizes dictate the number of pupils that should be assigned. If the educational recommendation for a given class is 17 pupils but the room can accommodate 30, the school tries to keep enrollments at or near 17.

The Pennsauken supervisor of language arts and foreign languages testified. She has worked with Merchantville and, in March 1990, was invited to Merchantville Elementary School to meet for approximately two hours with professional staff. She, in turn, invited Merchantville teachers to an inservice program at Pennsauken.

Pennsauken requires 9th grade pupils to read two books over the summer prior to beginning of the 9th grade. For at least two years, the witness has taken this information to Merchantville. She has also been involved in the advanced placement of two Merchantville pupils in Spanish. The witness can recall no complaints from Merchantville regarding articulation.

The Pennsauken supervisor of mathematics and science also testified. He has met with Merchantville staff concerning mathematics curriculum, has spoken to Merchantville staff concerning algebra text books, has spoken at Merchantville in-service meetings about curriculum, has been involved in a joint meeting of Merchantville and Pennsauken personnel concerning scope and sequence of mathematics curriculums and has been invited to meetings at Merchantville and has invited Merchantville staff to meetings at Pennsauken. He can recall no complaints concerning curriculum or articulation from Merchantville staff. Three of the four contacts with Merchantville staff that he recorded occurred after the present litigation began.

A Pennsauken assistant principal testified. He does master scheduling, supervises instruction and teaching, is responsible for programs of studies and is responsible for report card procedures. His most current master schedule at the time of hearing (RP-21) was admitted in evidence. The capacities mention number of pupils taking each course. All department chairs and supervisors are given data. The number of sections that each class should run are determined. The number does not equal the functional capacity of the space per the New Jersey Department of Education. For example, if 100 pupils select a course, five sections are established and a maximum enrollment of 20 is derived. The enrollment cap is for school purposes--to keep balance--and is not "official."

Pupils move in and out, especially in autumn. Pupils add and drop courses after the first marking period. The actual physical capacity of a teaching station or the school has never been exceeded. Rooms are available because of 8-period days.

The witness also testified to racial composition of the Pennsauken High School pupil population (RP-20). The witness added that no Merchantville pupil, parent, teacher or administrator ever complained to him about the lack of a course at Pennsauken. He has heard no articulation complaints. Space at Pennsauken High School is not impinged by schedule. Additions to the school will make a good situation better. The school has not had a space problem it could not resolve since July 1987. The 1988 functional capacity study showed the building at 108% utilization. The witness maintained, however, that there was no problem offering needed classes. The witness supervises people who talk to Merchantville personnel, but he does not communicate directly with Merchantville personnel. He believes articulation is adequate although he would have liked to see even more communication between the two schools. He had not been aware that Merchantville had initiated the mathematics curriculum meeting between the two schools.

The witness testified concerning staff utilization and, despite some situations that could be better, believes that all teaching stations are appropriate for the uses to which they are put. Self-imposed capacity limits and some state-imposed capacity limits have been exceeded (RP-21). The auditorium and cafeteria are not used for instructional purposes, but are used as study halls. More space, of course, would be a benefit. The planned addition would make good instruction better. Mere relocation, however, will not change instruction. Related classes will be held in the same general areas. The proposed expansion may allow a reduction in class size. The witness was unable to say at the time he testified that class size would certainly be reduced. He did state that no class has been not offered because of space limitation.

The Pennsauken High School principal testified. He discussed the Satellite Education Resources Consortium. It involves small, highly interactive groups. More than 30 other districts have sent personnel to observe the program, including Haddonfield.

The principal does not believe the building is presently overcrowded. Articulation with Merchantville seems not to be a problem. However, there is no input from Merchantville concerning curriculum and extracurricular activities. As to faculty recruitment, the witness stated the faculty should reflect pupil makeup. He can only act when there is a vacancy. However, when a vacancy occurs, broad searches are conducted for qualified minority candidates. At the time he testified, the witness recognized 13 black, 2 Asian and one native American teachers.

The witness denied telling Merchantville's consultant that the building was overcrowded. On one of the days Savitt visited the school, pupils were being held in the cafeteria because there was a suspicion of drug activity immediately outside the school.

The witness also described, as did witnesses before him, the proposed expansion. He noted renovation of some existing rooms plus new physical education, art and music facilities. Each subject area will be housed in a zone within the school.

The witness also generally disagreed with the Savitt study (P-13a, 13b, 13c, 13d). He stated four lunch periods, beginning at 10:09 a.m., are not a scheduling ploy to keep pupils out of classrooms. However, he has never analyzed whether three lunch periods could be housed. When deposed in 1989, he stated that a 3-lunch period schedule would be difficult. There could be no in-school suspension program.

Although some room is available each period, the same room is not available all day. Many suspensions are of one day's duration. They last only until a parent conference is held, usually the next day. Some suspensions are out-of-school if the nature of the infraction dictates. When the witness was at the Middle School, he had a successful in-school suspension program because he had space in which to house it. The witness also testified to several space problems in the present building.

The witness becomes involved in articulation directly with Merchantville if Merchantville makes a specific response or if his superiors direct him to do so. Articulation requests usually are made through central offices. Department heads have implied articulation responsibilities. Persons are designated to serve articulation purposes as needs arise. The school has an ongoing curriculum review. Courses are added, dropped and changed each year. Much remains the same, but all courses are examined. The witness also stated that Merchantville parents and Board members have as much input as they want. He is unaware of any administration-to-administration communication, however. The witness did recall a letter from a Merchantville Board member. It was probably directed to the Pennsauken superintendent or Board. It was forwarded to him for disposition. The letter requested certain topics be discussed. The witness was unaware there had been a letter written concerning examination schedules.

A Pennsauken High School Spanish teacher testified briefly. The relevance of the testimony and the probative value were so slight that the judge merely mentions that the testimony was received.

The Pennsauken assistant superintendent of schools testified that he has been in the position since 1974. He has read Savitt's report (P-13) concerning articulation and curriculum and disagrees. He believes there is a long history of cooperation and articulation between Pennsauken and Merchantville. A weekly Pennsauken staff news letter is sent to Merchantville staff. Merchantville eighth grade pupils spend a full day at Pennsauken High School each spring. A school board member from Merchantville is often invited to attend board meetings in Pennsauken. In addition, there is an orientation night and a college night which includes much information on financial aid. Pennsauken Board agendas and minutes are sent to Merchantville regularly. He has invited Merchantville staff and faculty to attend Pennsauken staff development meetings. Language arts, fine arts, and science-mathematics have been the subject of in-service training with Merchantville faculty particularly as to the High School Proficiency Test and the eighth grade "early warning" test.

Merchantville parents are active in the Pennsauken High School Parent-Teacher Association and in various booster clubs. There is a learn to swim program to which Merchantville residents are invited. A newsletter, Your Schools, is sent to Merchantville homes. Tickets for all Pennsauken activities are sent to Merchantville Board members and administrators. Merchantville senior citizens can get a Pennsauken "gold card" that entitles them to reduced fees for Pennsauken athletic events and other activities. Merchantville parents have membership in the Pennsauken library. No Merchantville administrator has ever expressed dissatisfaction with articulation to the witness. A few years ago, Merchantville had concern about algebra readiness. The districts worked out a response. At one point, parents and staff at Merchantville did not like the fact that Merchantville pupils moved from Merchantville Elementary School to Pennsauken Junior High School and, one year later, to Pennsauken High School. This, too, was addressed and changed.

Pennsauken High School has supervisors in special education, basic skills, science-mathematics, language arts-foreign languages and social studies. All supervisors have articulation responsibilities. However, the witness did not know if articulation responsibilities were part of the supervisors' job descriptions. His job embraces some articulation, but the principal is the ultimate articulator. The director of guidance and all other administrators also have some responsibilities. Articulation is not a thing that happens at whim. It goes on regularly. The same activities occur each year at specified times. The present system is more than adequate. To this witness, the fact that the science-mathematics supervisor had had no contact with Merchantville for approximately six years meant that there were no problems. This does not mean articulation occurs only when there are problems. Information exchanges and invitations to Merchantville are an ongoing process. If there are no complaints, the witness assumes everything is all right.

A year or two ago, the witness had some responsibility for gathering materials and information to answer interrogatories. He provided enrollment and attendance data from state reports. Over the last few years some Pennsauken eighth grade pupils have chosen not to attend Pennsauken High School. The witness stated at hearing, as he had at deposition, that Pennsauken has never surveyed families whose eighth grade pupils did not go on to the high school. He knows of no efforts made to encourage those pupils to attend Pennsauken High School. The witness also testified about the process of curriculum review and change in the Pennsauken schools.

Pennsauken's financial expert testified. He is a Certified Public Accountant and a Registered Municipal Accountant. He has 20 years' experience with school districts. He also acts as a financial advisor. He cannot, by law, advise on investments, but can advise of tax rate effects and can advise when to sell bonds.

He did not help prepare the 1990-91 budget. His responsibility, after the budget was prepared, was to determine the tax rate impact. The 1990-91 budget called for a local tax levy of $18,333,692. It was defeated. The 1991-92 school budget was approved. It calls for a local tax levy of $18,767,142. The increase in local tax levy was 2.63%. The Quality Education Act set a cap on the amount raised by levy. For Pennsauken, the calculated cap was 8.2%. A cap worksheet was submitted to the county superintendent of schools. Capital outlay in the amount of $172,000 was proposed. The 1991-92 budget was within $66,000 of its cap.

In response to a series of questions, the witness assumed a loss in anticipated revenues. For the 1992-93 budget he saw several options. The local district might add certain revenues and offset by reduced expenditures, or state and federal categorical aid might be added. In addition, the 1991-92 budget had a projected surplus of over $1.5 million. As a rule of thumb, surplus should not exceed 5%. Pennsauken was well below that figure at the time the witness testified.

Concerning tuition anticipated, the witness used state figures and derived a cost per pupil of $8,803. Merchantville reported an anticipated 60 high school pupils in total, not by grade. Extrapolating from the April 1991 tuition billing, this represents only five new 9th grade pupils.

Using preliminary assessed evaluation from the Camden County Board of Taxation and estimated assessed evaluation using Merchantville's expert's numbers, the witness built from that a scale of lost revenues. Because the Pennsauken Board budgets on a calendar year as opposed to a school year, the first year impact would be 50% and thereafter 100%. In short, if there is a phasing out of pupils, tuition income from Merchantville declines to zero over a four year period. If all Merchantville pupils were removed at once, the loss would be $528,180. Over an objection from Haddonfield's counsel, the witness' figures were admitted for comparative purposes, but not as accurate per se. Recognizing that several facts are estimated, the judge admitted the testimony on a limited basis.

The witness also expressed the opinion that the revenue loss in 1991-92 if there were a phase out would be less than $50,000. The 1991-92 budget exceeds $41,000,000. The loss represents less than one-tenth of one percent of revenue. The witness expressed the opinion that this is not a substantial negative impact on the total budget, particularly total revenues.

The loss in the second year, assuming 19 additional pupils withdrawn, would be approximately $167,257. Assuming the budget cap stays at or near 8.8%, the witness estimated the 1992-93 school budget to be somewhere in the area of $43,500,000, not counting Merchantville tuition loss because of pupil withdrawal.

For the hypothetical situation in 1992-93, the loss is less than one-half of one percent. This, in the witness' opinion, is not a substantial negative impact on the overall estimated 1992-93 budget in terms of percentage.

The accountant also stated that for the ensuing two years, percentage-wise, the tuition loss was not likely to exceed one percent of revenues. This is not a substantial impact on the overall budget. The amount of increase that loss of tuition would cause in the tax rate, using the current rate as a basis for calculation would mean, in the worse case, an increase from $7,522 to $7,622 assessment on a house valued at $100,000. As a percentage, this is not a significant increase.

When the witness did his calculations, he did not factor in any savings from withdrawal of Merchantville pupils. He could not derive a reasonable figure to represent the offsets and, therefore, they are not included in his calculations. Quality Education Act figures were of no assistance because, under the act's first year provision, moneys were paid directly to the municipality. The witness used an estimated tuition of $8,803. The prior year's actual figure had not been released by the New Jersey Department of Education when the witness testified. The 1988-89 actual, the last know actual figure, was $5,575. The history of tuition increases over the last seven years indicated an annual increase of between seven and one-half percent and eight percent. Using this factor, the witness built his estimated tuition figure.

The witness identified a letter he wrote on May 15, 1991. In a paragraph mentioning budget caps, the witness indicated that caps included basic state aid but not categorical aid and certain other revenues. Formula aid reductions can be made up by local tax levy. If tuition money is reduced or nonexistent, local tax levy cannot be substituted if that would cause the district to exceed its budget cap unless the voters grant an approval. The identified letter also mentions a tax rate impact of 9.17¢. If, however, the revenue were lost and budget reductions in the same amount were effected, there would be no tax rate impact. If the Board got a tax waiver approval from voters, then and only then could they increase revenues.

The accountant stated he has been Pennsauken's accountant and auditor for 15 years and has done its annual audits and certified its actual surpluses for that period. The actual surplus for each of the seven years he has referred to has exceeded projected surpluses. His loss of revenue calculations in relationship to surplus would actually be lower on a percentage basis. However, the Board has been appropriating forward more of its surplus each year. The formula aid Pennsauken receives from the state is based on net operating budget which factors in numbers of pupils enrolled. The witness is aware of some Pennsauken enrollment decline. He is not aware, however, of any financial problems caused by the enrollment reductions.

He would never advise exhaustion or even serious diminution of surplus. The 1990-91 budget was the basis for his calculation of allowable surplus of approximately five percent. If all tuition moneys were removed, he could not recommend making up the entire amount from surplus. The witness stated he was not asked to and was not qualified to calculate savings realized by Merchantville's withdrawal.

The assistant superintendent was recalled and testified about the budget building process. It is not significantly different from that used in most New Jersey school districts. Approximately 81% of the budget is spent on personnel and fringe benefits. In the case of revenue losses, absent a cap waiver, his recommendations to the Board would include program reductions that would affect the least number of pupils. For 1991-92, the district delayed purchase of three school buses, did not offer minigrants to teachers, cut summer curriculum work for teachers by one-half, permitted no field trips and eliminated summer driver training courses. In addition, the district took $700,000 from maintenance, new equipment, computer replacement and painting. Nearly every account but textbooks was reduced.

In the witness' opinion tuition losses would be about $44,000 in the first year and $167,000 in the second year with the third year exceeding that figure. The witness also stated a management team considered tuition loss and attempted to translate that into program reductions. The team has existed for many years and monitors all school operations including budgets, curriculum and personnel. The committee did meet for the express purpose of looking at program effects if Merchantville tuition were lost. Discussions began soon after Merchantville filed the present appeal. An options list was developed late in the 1989-90 school year; that is, early in calendar 1990. The group used an estimated loss of $500,000. The figure came from historic tuition line items. The matter was discussed four or five times before the team made recommendations to the Board. The team did not have the benefit of the auditor's May 15 letter. The witness did not know the exact projected loss for each year until the day he testified. He stated that if the first year loss were $44,015, he believes he could recommend no cuts in program. If the second year loss were $167,257 and there were a budget surplus of $1.5 million, he believes he might recommend no cuts but would have to take direction from the Board. He would have opinions and would make recommendations if tuition moneys were actually lost. To make recommendations and relate them to loss and tuition, he would have to put a dollar value on each recommendation.

There are now approximately 70 Merchantville pupils at Pennsauken High School. The witness believes that five years ago there were more, probably over 100. He believes 134 was the highest number of Merchantville pupils ever enrolled. Today's number is approximately one-half of what it was at its peak. As pupil numbers dropped so did tuition received. The witness recalls no program cuts resulting from the tuition loss. If Pennsauken lost five Merchantville pupils next year, it could and would offer a thorough and efficient education to its pupils. If Pennsauken lost all 70 Merchantville pupils next year, it could and would offer a thorough and efficient education to its pupils.

High school enrollments are now level after a period of decline. Elementary enrollments are up slightly. Some electives at the high school are losing "drawing power." Many pupils are in basic skills programs. The management team did not look at eliminating some of these courses and decided not to recommend reductions and attached no dollar amounts to them.

The Pennsauken teacher salary guide is among the top three or four in Camden County which contains 30 or more school districts. A three-year contract ends on June 30, 1992. The present contract calls for a 9% increase each year. The management team assumed that things would be much the same in the future, but there are a number of teachers nearing retirement. The team did discuss lesser raises in the future and does believe the rate of increase will slow down significantly because of general economic conditions in the state and nation.

Projected reductions have not been and could not have been tempered by early retirements of teachers at the high end of the salary scale and resulting lower salary costs. The Board can close any tuition gap in many ways and the Board has the ultimate decision making power. The reductions he listed in his testimony would be only recommendations.

Three Merchantville parents testified concerning their satisfaction with the Pennsauken High School and its program. The first stated she believes the pupil mix at Pennsauken High School is good. It would be imprudent to shelter children from children of other backgrounds. The witness could recall no opportunity for the public to speak at Merchantville Board meetings on the sending-receiving question. Later in her testimony, she stated there is a portion of each board meeting at which the public may speak. She did not speak, however, at the meeting she attended. Her children have friends who do not attend Pennsauken High School. Her children do not interact differently with the children who do not attend Pennsauken. Present attendance patters have stood for a long time. She sees an insult to Pennsauken if Merchantville pupils are removed.

A second testified that she has one child in Pennsauken High School. She is a realtor in the Pennsauken-Cherry Hill-Merchantville area. She knows of the request to sever the sending-receiving relationship. She thought it was a "personal slur." The witness testified to many community activities. She knows no Merchantville people who are "strong" to send their children to Haddonfield. She knows of no survey or referendum on the subject. However, the witness also stated she did not know the Merchantville Board's reasons for seeking severance. She did state that there could be educational reasons for the move. The witness also stated she was selected to testify. The Pennsauken High School principal had asked her daugnter to testify. The daughter was involved in activity at Rutgers University on the particular hearing day and the principal asked the mother to testify. Early in the year she had expressed a desire to testify and contacted the principal. The witness repeated that she does not understand why Merchantville wants to withdraw from Pennsauken. The witness also stated she did not ask what the Merchantville's reasons were. She did ask Pennsauken Board members why severance was sought and what precipitated it. They replied that they were not sure.

The witness did not know Merchantville had had public hearings on the question. She has asked people she knows about the severance matter but has not asked any Merchantville staff or Board members.

The witness compared high schools when her child was in junior high school. She knows Haddonfield as a realtor and the schools are a strong selling point in that community. She knows a high percentage of Haddonfield pupils go on to higher education. She knows of state report cards on school districts but has not seen comparisons. She has read newspaper articles on the subject. The witness had a vague recall of comparisons of schools approximately two years ago. She could not recall attendance figures or any other statistics.

Another parent testified that she has been involved in parent-teacher activities and in a Pennsauken athletic association for some years. She is aware of the proposed severance and believes it a slap in the face to Pennsauken. The mere request to sever implies that the education in Pennsauken is somehow inferior. She believes her parent-teacher activities give her certain insights. She is satisfied with the Pennsauken education program and is satisfied with the diversity of pupils in Pennsauken.

The Pennsauken High School principal called her and asked her to testify in this matter. He did not mention who else he had contacted. The witness met with other witnesses on the hearing day. They met in the principal's office for a few minutes. The witnesses' opinions were solicited. The witness expressed her opinion; the principal expressed none.

The witness feels Pennsauken will be offended if Merchantville leaves on the basis that Pennsauken High School is "not good enough for them." Most of her information was gained by word of mouth and through parent-teacher organizations. Severance has come up only occasionally at parent-teacher organization meetings, however.

The Spanish teacher who previously testified was recalled. He believes Pennsauken High School is an outstanding comprehensive high school. He has served at Pennsauken High School since 1972. In the five years before that, he taught at Merchantville High School. When Maple Shade ceased sending pupils to Merchantville, Merchantville closed its high school and sent its pupils to Pennsauken High School. Inasmuch as the witness believes Pennsauken "took us with open arms," Pennsauken would feel hurt and betrayed if Merchantville pupils left. Severance would represent no gain for Merchantville pupils.

The witness did no survey of Merchantville pupils at Pennsauken High School. He does not know how many Merchantville pupils do not attend Pennsauken High School. He is offended that the Merchantville Board would choose to remove its pupils. He is not offended, however, when the parents of one child decide the child will attend a secondary school other Pennsauken High School. Two Merchantville pupils took a placement test prepared by the witness. As ninth grade pupils, they will be eligible to take Spanish II.

A day long visit by Merchantville pupils to Pennsauken was instituted after the present litigation began. The witness has not studied severances. The probable effects he sees are based on experience, conversations with others and his knowledge of the three communities. A pluralistic high school offers much to young people. However, parents have a right to choose the schools their children will attend. They may choose a school they perceive as academically superior as opposed to a culturally diverse school.

A 20-year Pennsauken High School teacher testified. He teaches pupils from Merchantville as well as from Pennsauken. He believes severance would label the Pennsauken faculty as not credible educators. The school has adjusted to changing populations. The witness is a co-sponsor of the After School Club. The Club has discussed what one pupil called "Merchantville flight." The witness reported pupils upset with movement away from them. Black pupils, who made up a majority of those attending the meeting, said the proposed severance is another reason not to be part of the "situation in America." The witness believes the United States is diverse and acceptance is needed. The schools are a good place to start.

The principal told the witness he would be testifying in this matter, but did not say what would be asked. The witness is not offended that some Merchantville pupils now choose not to attend Pennsauken High School. The witness believes Pennsauken is an urban-suburban community. He believes the high school, which operated at 104% of capacity in 1989, is not crowded.

When pupils brought up the question of severance he offered that Pennsauken High School is diverse and that some segments do not want this. One could assume that by "segment" he meant Merchantville. He said to the pupil group, "Let's examine why Merchantville would ask the Commissioner to sever." The witness stated he knew documentation was not the issue. He dismissed out-of-hand whatever Merchantville offered. He did not know what Merchantville's stated reasons were and he didn't believe the pupils needed to know. He doesn't know if the Merchantville Board has ever expressed any reasons other than those in its petition. Better education in Haddonfield is a "disguise" the Merchantville Board chooses to use. All its papers are false. The petition is a charade. He has personal knowledge that the Merchantville Board's allegations are other than those expressed in its petition.

The witness considers himself a "human resource person for the Pennsauken community." His own children attended public schools, but not in Pennsauken. The Club probably discussed the severance question at two sessions. Both were probably held in November 1990. Approximately 20-25 pupils attended each time. The pupils would be from grades 9-12.

Three Pennsauken High School pupils testified. Each had been told approximately one month ago that he/she would be a witness. The principal saw approximately 20 pupils, roughly five at a time. The principal stated that Merchantville wanted to send it s pupils to Haddonfield. There was no discussion of the issue and the principal's mention was the first that the first witness knew of the situation. The principal advised each pupil that he/she would be notified if called upon to testify.

The first witness does not know the racial mix at Pennsauken High School. She believes even a small change in white registration would hurt. She does not know why Merchantville would seek to remove its pupils. She is proud of her school and believes it offers much opportunity. Each family, however, has a right to choose how its children will be educated. A "whole group" shouldn't be removed, however.

A second pupil testified that she is involved in several activities including field hockey and the Minority Club. She knows of the requested severance. In her opinion, Pennsauken High School is good enough for anyone. "We should be as one." It is disheartening to the witness for "them" to take white pupils out of Pennsauken High School. She does not believe the school is overcrowded. She does not believe Haddonfield offers better education. She does believe that the basis is racial.

The witness spoke to the high school principal alone sometime before she testified. She spoke only to the principal and the Board's counsel and her parents. She came to her opinions by herself. She did, however, discuss the matter some months ago with another pupil. Nothing could convince her this is not a racial issue.

The third pupil testified that she has friends of all colors and backgrounds in the school. Her opinion is that the withdrawal is embarrassing. It says something is wrong with her school. The witness believes "they" don't like minorities. She would continue to associate with the same persons even if severance were granted. Students and parents of Merchantville did not like the numbers of minorities at Pennsauken High School. The witness knows many Merchantville families. She knows Merchantville gave educational reasons to the Commissioner. The principal asked a few pupils to be witnesses. They went to his office. She believes she spoke with the principal alone. She did not discuss her testimony with any other witness.

This witness knows young people who live in Pennsauken but do not attend Pennsauken High School. Some left at the end of grammar school to attend Catholic high schools. That did not bother her. She enjoys Pennsauken High School and currently is fourth in academic rank in her class. Severance would not hurt her performance.

Dr. Michelle Fine testified on behalf of Pennsauken. She is a social psychologist. She teaches, supervises doctoral research, consults and publishes. She is involved in a three-year project to restructure the comprehensive high schools in Philadelphia. She seeks to understand how people in a context "make meaning" of their circumstances. She has done significant amounts of work in race relations.

Dr. Fine was hired by and produced a report for the Pennsauken Board of Education. The report deals with perceived motives of Merchantville and the anticipated effects on Pennsauken High School if Merchantville pupils were withdrawn. Her task was to interview pupils, staff and community members to try to determine their views of the litigation and its impact. She used two sampling techniques. She interviewed one group of educationally active pupils and she interviewed a randomly selected group of pupils including some from Merchantville. Her idea was to "get a reading of the climate." She spoke to teachers and administrators in small groups and she spoke to parents and community members in small groups. All her work was intended to find out what these persons saw as the motivation for and the impact of severance. Dr. Fine conducted her interviews in the fall and spring of the 1988-89 school year. The group of pupils she interviewed first were identified by the school administration. Twenty pupils 18 years of age or over were interviewed throughout the year, all after the large group interviews had been conducted. The same was applied to Merchantville pupils: they were interviewed in fall and spring after large group interviews had taken place. Interviews of Merchantville pupils ran longer into the year. The witness had intended to interview a "substantial number" of Merchantville parents, but couldn't reach the numbers she wanted. She expanded the number of pupils, then, from ten to 20.

Three of 11 pupils in the group of identified pupils were from Merchantville. She believes some of the 20 pupils 18 or older were from Merchantville, but cannot say how many. This number is not stated in her report. In total, 51 pupils were interviewed, at least 23 from Merchantville.

Pennsauken resident enrollment at Pennsauken High School is much greater than one-half of the school's enrollment. More than one-half of the pupils interviewed, however, were from Merchantville. The emphasis on these pupils came from three perspectives. First, these pupils were active in school. It is a standard procedure to talk to these pupils to get a feeling for the climate of a school. Second, many Merchantville pupils simply fell into the random sample. Third, the witness wanted data from pupils "most at question in the litigation." These were the pupils who would be moved.

The witness was aware that Merchantville had asked for a phase out and that no pupils presently at the high school would be affected by separation. The witness stated, however, that all pupils would be affected because there is a "symbolic loss" attached to a state-granted severance. When the state takes a position on educational issues, it has consequences on how communities look at themselves. Whether pupils attend Haddonfield High School is irrelevant; the witness sees an effect on all pupils.

At least two levels are involved. First is the extent to which pupils look at state decisions as reflective of social policies. Second, everything she heard suggested an effect on how people look at themselves and their communities.

Twenty interviewed pupils were affected as citizens, family members, community members and how they looked at their participation in the multicultural community of Pennsauken. The witness could not say if any or all of those pupils were still in Pennsauken. She presumed that at least some were. Merchantville pupils who were seniors in 1988-89 would, as citizens of the community, be affected--not as to where they go to school, but about race relations.

Dr. Fine could not separate educational consequences for those who were seniors in 1988-89. As a social psychologist, Dr. Fine is concerned with the relationship of an individuals to their environments. She trained her team of interviewers in preparation for the interviews. The same four questions were asked in individual interviews. The questions are (1) what do you know of the case, (2) what do you perceive the motive to be, (3) what do you think the impact will be, and (4) how do you know what you know. If any subject gave an unclear answer, the interviewers used nonleading probes. A standard reporting format was developed. If the identified pupils did not know much about the case, it was reasonable to assume that the general population did not. Only two pupils of the sample knew nothing; most knew little. The matter had not been discussed in classes. Dr. Fine had asked the principal and vice principal to select a multiracial, geographically mixed group and said she wanted the administrators to say nothing to the pupils beforehand. She relied on the administrators' perceptions of educationally active pupils. Interviews were scheduled for 30 minutes. Some ran less because the pupil offered little and knew little. About 20% of the interviews ran for more than 30 minutes.

The witness identified transcriptions of her notes. These concern group interviews of pupils, administrators and teachers, and parents. She attended and participated in large student group interviews. She also attended and participated in three teacher interviews and three or four parent-community interviews. Follow up interviews of teachers were based on their apparent reluctance to talk in group situations. The witness knew the composition of Pennsauken High School faculty at the time. There were 10-12 black teachers and perhaps one Asian teacher. The witness could not recall the total number of faculty and could not recall the percentage of minority faculty. Interviewed teachers were selected by the administration, not Dr. Fine. The group of teachers selected was not demographically reflective of the whole faculty. It did reflect diversity of faculty. The witness wanted a cross-section of organization and diversity of perspectives. She believes she got this.

Of pupils, Dr. Fine wanted "leaders" in the pupil culture, a random cross-section of pupils and the Merchantville perspective from Merchantville pupils. On these bases, Dr. Fine believes she got samples that reflect universal faculty perception and accurate readings of pupil perception.

Dr. Fine's report reflects formal interviews with the principal and vice principal. She selected them because she had to know how the principal and his first assistant perceived the situation. These persons can and often do set the tone for a school. Their views were critical to her understanding of the impact of litigation on the school. In addition, they were likely to know more about the case than other faculty members. They could make more informed judgments than others.

Concerning the randomly selected seniors, randomness is desirable because one objective was to get a reading from a random selection of pupils who had gone through the school. She did limit those selected to seniors 18 years of age or older because she wanted seniors with experience in the school and wanted those 18 or over to avoid parental consent problems. She believed she needed parental consent to interview pupils less than 18 years of age. Therefore, her sample of seniors was not truly random. For Merchantville pupils, the witness did try to get parental consents.

Social science now prefers multiple methods of gathering data. The theory is that this helps extract as much information as possible. Her group interviews were designed to find out how individuals feel, whether individuals can identify issues between and among pupils and to get an overview of the dynamics. Individual interviews were designed to solicit individual perspectives. There was followup on two black teachers because the witness wanted to be sure their statements in a group situation were truly held beliefs. In the followup interviews, the teachers could talk without peer pressure and could respond in a different way if they chose.

The parent-citizen group numbered 15 persons. Seven were black and eight were white. Twelve were from Pennsauken and three from Merchantville. School administrators selected the group on the basis of being involved with school activities and also because of racial diversity. The sample was gathered in the same way as educationally active pupils; that is, the administration selected the group. There is no mention of race or gender proportions of the group in Fine's report. In interviews with various groups and persons, the researchers referred to the Merchantville Board as a whole, not merely those who voted to address a petition to the Commissioner. No interviewee was ever asked if she/he had knowledge of or involvement with Merchantville Board members who voted to petition the Commissioner. Pupils, particularly, ranged from very informed to uninformed.

The witness does not know and did not try to ascertain actual Merchantville motives. The witness cannot assess the relation between the perception and reality. Her opinions do not in any way depend on actual Merchantville motivations. Her examination of perceived motivations is aimed at discovering how the culture of the school is affected by litigation. Some pupils were aware of race and class tensions, some were not. Fine did not read or find any work on attitudes and perceptions in the school before litigation. There was no benchmark. She believes the onset of litigation helped to shape pupils' perspectives of race and class considerations.

Fine had no benchmark concerning Pennsauken parents placing pupils in nonpublic schools. She cannot state cause and effect in that context. Some parents stated that "people were talking" about where to place their children, but this is not the same as cause and effect.

In three or four parent interviews all investigators were involved. Most parents had pupils in Pennsauken schools. No one was asked the degree of her/his activity in the Pennsauken schools. During a self-introduction, some parents revealed the nature of their relationships with the schools. Fine's notes do not contain actual recordation of the parents' levels of activism in the schools. She cannot assess from this the nature and level of their involvement. She asked administrators for persons who were actively involved in the schools and who would represent a diversity of opinion. She was satisfied on the basis of answered questions and how parents introduced themselves that they had many kinds of contacts with the school.

The investigators asked parents about effects if future Merchantville classes attended Haddonfield High School instead of Pennsauken High School. There were several comments concerning Haddonfield, but no assessment of what parents and pupils actually knew of the school. Fine collected no data on Haddonfield High School and considered only the racial composition of Haddonfield High School. She cannot say to what degree Pennsauken pupils' perceptions of Haddonfield were accurate.

Nothing in Fine's report address actual impact of change for Merchantville pupils to Haddonfield. Therefore, the report cannot demonstrate or support that change to Haddonfield would be detrimental educationally to Merchantville pupils. Her report deals mainly in perceptions. No specific statement says that a shift to Haddonfield High School would be detrimental to or would disadvantage Merchantville pupils. The report does identify "rich opportunity" at Pennsauken High School.

The witness believes there would be no actual impact on racial composition if Merchantville pupils were withdrawn. Her conclusion of the effect of severance is stated in her report at page 19:

> Put simply, adverse tensions have begun to fester across communities and schools. These tensions will only be exacerbated should severance be granted.
>
> . . . Given the evidence of a solid, integrated social education at Pennsauken High School, we conclude this report with a recommendation to retain the Merchantville students at Pennsauken High School (RP-27).

This, of course, does not mean that adverse tensions did not exist before litigation. There were, for example, some tensions reported to the investigator concerning high school principal selection.

The witness has not written about the effects of actual terminations nor can she identify any work on the subject. If Merchantville pupils attend Haddonfield High School, the community of Pennsauken will be unchanged. When she referred to exacerbation of tensions, this was suggested by literature of organizational psychology. She stated that when authority validates segregation where there are local, surrounding tensions, the tensions are exacerbated. Severance does not here equal segregation of Pennsauken High School. At the time of her study, Fine found Pennsauken High School integrated. The small number of Merchantville pupils involved in severance would not make the school significantly less integrated.

Few children in New Jersey have exposure to "rich culture diversity." Her report does not contrast social education with academic education. There are probably many New Jersey schools with little or no minority population. The witness believes that the heterogeneity at Pennsauken High School is more important than test scores. Pennsauken High School appears to be a community in which pupils get along across group lines.

Fine was aware of no official pronouncements by Pennsauken concerning the withdrawal. If Pennsauken had said it welcomes the withdrawal because it will ease strain on facilities, pupils' perceptions of Pennsauken High School would likely be different. So would the perceptions of parents and citizens.

The investigators did not break out pupils' sources of knowledge about the severance because of poor response. There was no correlation between source of knowledge and positive or negative reaction to the severance.

Although the witness mentions newspaper articles in deposition, she could not recall them when she testified. She did not review "official" communications concerning the case before her work started. She could form no opinion of impact of those communications, if any existed.

The witness' methodology was designed to assure that opinions did reflect the opinions of a larger body. She adheres to stratified, random sampling combined with an ethnographic approach. She intended a sample that would represent a breadth of views, not necessarily in proportion to the universal group. Her interview study was designed to capture the culture of the community, which is not the same as polling. One cannot say that "active students" equal opinion leaders. The pupils interviewed were not representative of the student body as a whole. They were selected not because they represented all pupils but because they were expected to know the school climate. The investigators intended not to convey the idea they were looking for consensus. Team training was aimed at cutting off a phenomenon known as the stampede to consensus. Individual interviews were randomized. More of these pupils, as opposed to the selected interviewees, knew little of the case. Fine did not check against school records to see if the samples were representative of the racial mix of student populations. The same is true concerning grade level and ages.

Fine believes she would find the same perspectives today although proportions might vary. Behavior and attitude are not the same thing. Some people will try to give answers they think the interviewer wants. In one group of 20, five pupils indicated the case involved racism (RP-27 at 7). Three or four of the 20 were nonwhite pupils. The investigators have no racial breakdown of the five who gave the answer. Interviewers did not probe for race. They did not probe for pupils who tended to give what they believed the interviewer wanted. A study is, after all, a gathering of opinions. Opinions are subject to change. Providing additional information may change opinions.

The investigators did no follow-up study at Pennsauken High School. Fine, however, believes pupils today would have roughly the same opinions because of confidence in her methods. If looking for predicability, she would consciously oversample some strata and would be confident of proportionality only with respect to the random sample. Adversity of an effect is not necessarily related to the degree to which a perspective is held. Hypothetically, even if 97% of all pupils believed "Let them go. Who needs them?", there would still be two adverse effects. The first would be on Merchantville pupils who lost the advantage of a multicultural setting and the second would be a perception of Pennsauken pupils that the state was legitimizing a segregative action. In testimony, Fine said the "let them go" attitude was linked to the notion of insult. This, however, does not appear in her report.

The witness undertook the study assuring the Board that she was not guaranteeing a particular outcome. She had no preconceived opinion in the Englewood matter, either. Fine made the same recommendation in each case, but based on different analyses. Hypothetically, if she showed the students who were interviewed the pleadings in the case, discussed the history of the matter and generally gave more information, their perceptions would likely change. The investigators' intent was to find out what pupils believed. Merchantville's motives were not significant to that study. Merchantville's motives were of interest to the investigators only as viewed by persons involved in the situation.

Fine believes that little or no chance of social education exists at Haddonfield High School. The quantitative loss is insignificant to Pennsauken if all Merchantville pupils are phased out. In her opinion, the symbolic issue was more important than actual numbers. Her sampling was designed to capture the breadth of positions in the school community. She oversampled African-American pupils. Proportionality could not be projected, however.

Several questions to the witness were objected to and the objections sustained. The record preserves Pennsauken's exceptions in each instance.

Pennsauken's statistical expert, Dr. Craig Richards, testified. His report is more than an enrollment projection. It deals with socioeconomic factors as well. Although not a statistician, he uses statistical analysis. He has reported on various aspects of other sending-receiving cases. In a matter involving Madison, he did a report on program, finances and enrollment. He did not testify in that matter, however.

Dr. Richards prepared a report for the West Morris Regional High School District. That dealt with regionalization, but involved issues similar to those in a sending-receiving case. The matter did not go to hearing and the witness did not testify.

The witness did testify in a matter involving Boonton. The report in that matter covered programmatic, financial and racial effects that would have been associated with a severance. At hearing in that matter, he testified that some calculations concerning racial distribution were incorrect. The witness conceded certain conclusions in the report were based on computations he had done.

In the present case, he did a first draft that required certain computations concerning cohort survival and other computations. Pennsauken's counsel discovered a mistake in the calculations and in the cohort survival tables. The witness then redid most of the figures.

The report prepared for this litigation is broader in scope than statistical analysis in enrollment projections. It deals, as well, with socioeconomic profiles. There are some references to demographic study. The report addresses two main points. First, whether the withdrawal of Merchantville pupils will have a significant and negative impact on enrollment at Pennsauken High School and whether the withdrawal of Merchantville pupils will have a significant and negative impact on the racial-ethnic integration in the school

Richards concluded that the severance would not cause a negative effect on enrollments. His testimony was confined to significant and negative effect relating to what he describes as racial-ethnic integration at the school.

The witness did not personally collect data. He concluded that the withdrawal would have a significant and negative effect on the racial composition of the school because about 15% of all white pupils forecast to be in attendance in 1995 would be withdrawn. At deposition, there had been extensive exploration of the witness' definition of integration. Among other things, he stated that he could not establish integration [or not] purely on the number of white and minority attendants in a school district. The witness' definition is one that looks at a variety of indicators within a high school including apparent discrimination in the representation of children in special education classes, on sport teams, in music, science and mathematics and participation in the social and cultural affairs of the school. Counsel then asked, "Now Dr., you didn't study whether or not there was that type of integration between the races at Pennsauken." The witness answered no and counsel then asked, "So you can't address any question dealing with whether or not this high school is integrated or not according to your definition." The witness again answered no.

After reviewing the deposition testimony at hearing, Merchantville's counsel moved the tribunal to determine, pursuant to rule, that Dr. Richards did not qualify as an expert in this matter. Before ruling, the judge permitted Haddonfield's counsel to vior dire the witness. The witness testified to his experience using cohort survival methods. After extensive vior dire, the judge ruled that the witness might testify about numbers he examined, how he treated them and what he thinks they tell. No comment was made as to the weight that might ultimately attach to the testimony.

Richards stated he relied on several sources of information. He used the 1991 New Jersey Legislative District Data Book and the 1990 U.S. Census General Characteristics of the population. The witness then described how he treated the data in deriving certain tables. The witness also used the fall enrollment reports required by the State Department of Education. These carry racial breakdowns of pupils by grade level. The same data do not reveal the sending pupils separated by race. Based on the information the witness had, he tried to estimate racial effects of a severance. Unfortunately, Pennsauken could not supply certain supplemental information the witness desired. This information comprised certain historical tabulations. Absent those data, "it was impossible to do a formal cohort survival analysis for the high school in terms of those sending students." T XX 75-76.

Pennsauken did tell the witness, however, that the number of minority students that actually came to Pennsauken from Merchantville was never more than three percent over the previous years that any one could recall. The witness, however, estimated at five percent. He stated he was attempting to be conservative in estimates because he wanted to allow for error in the verbal reports given him. He did not ever check directly with Merchantville personnel, however.

Richards' report also contains appendices giving information on resident births for Haddonfield, Merchantville and Pennsauken broken down as to white, black and other. These tables cover a ten-year period through 1988, the last year for which information was available.

The witness also reports change in birth rates by race ethnicity, resident births and kindergarten enrollments for each district and a series of tables on enrollment history, five-year enrollment forecasts, enrollment history and survival ratios, and enrollment projections by race. Another appendix is the cohort survival methodology the witness used. The witness once again reported a computational error because of difficulty reading data transmitted by telephone facsimile. The witness stated he overestimated Pennsauken High School pupil numbers by 100 in a year that he could not recall. The mistake was thereafter propagated throughout his draft. The data were never submitted as part of the report, however. The report was then moved into evidence (RP-28).

The witness recounted briefly how he was hired by and instructed by the Pennsauken Board of Education. He was aware there was a possibility he would be called as an expert witness. No member of the Board communicated directly with him. He was contacted by and dealt through Pennsauken's counsel at the outset of the relationship. Later, he met with the assistant superintendent and briefly with the superintendent. He was also provided a tour of the Pennsauken, Haddonfield and Merchantville communities. He used other reports the districts, particularly Pennsauken, were required to file. All materials he produced were based on enrollment reports for the 1990-91 school year as the latest year . The witness did not use any associate consultants in connection with this report. The product is his.

In reply to several questions concerning major conclusions on page 7, the witness stated they are essentially summaries as opposed to the conclusion at the end of the report, which is a substantive conclusion. There were several inquiries about methodology which, with few exceptions, shed little light on the record. The judge notes, however, that the witness had no birth information after 1988. The witness stated this injects a note of caution into the results. Because the witness did not have birth information for the latest three-year period, it might have, but not necessarily would have, a significant result on his conclusions. There is no reason to believe, however, that the trends of the missing three-year period would be greatly different from the trends in the two-five year periods immediately proceeding.

The witness answered a series of questions on specific calculations and sources of data for the calculations. Among other things, the witness stated he projected the number of Merchantville pupils enrolled in Pennsauken in September 1991 rather than calling one of the schools and finding out what the number was. That was a professional decision the witness made. His projected figure of 78, if different from the actual number enrolled, would make a difference in the number he projects for 1995. The witness candidly stated that he used projected enrollments for previous years to project the final years covered by his report. A ratio will be applied to the number (78) to determine how many of those pupils would survive into the following grade for 1992-93.

On table A-3, resident births and kindergarten enrollments in the three communities, there are no figures in the far right-hand column for Pennsauken. The witness stated it was simply an error that he did not catch. Some birth data are given in table A-2, but A-3 was intended to carry the data further. Figures on page 14 for Merchantville pupils were derived by cohort survival. If the information had been available, the witness would have begun with 1991-92 enrollment figures at Pennsauken rather than projecting the number.

Table 8 at page 18 projects 115 Merchantville pupils in Pennsauken in 1995. This is derived by beginning a projection for 1991-92 and carrying forward. If the actual number were 69 as opposed to the projected number of 78, the 1995 figure would have been less. Of the 115 pupils projected, the witness believed 109 would be white and six would be minority. This is based on Pennsauken administrators' opinion that not more than three-percent of Merchantville pupils are minority and it seems to be consistent with earlier birth data the witness examined. Although the witness used a five-percent minority figure, he believes it is not arbitrary but, rather, an educated guess. The witness' explanation of how he came to use this increase, however, appeared inconsistent with common experience and logic. The witness had earlier commented that the numbers of minorities in Merchantville were so small that percentage variances could not be relied upon because one or two children either way could make a significant difference. Although he increased his estimate by two-thirds, that is, from three percent to five percent, he stated he would not have to find significant growth in the population figures to justify the increase. He also represented this as being conservative. In the text, the witness states, "However, based on the conversations with Administrators and Guidance Staff at Pennsauken and a review of elementary school racial patterns, the number has not exceeded three percent. Five percent was selected as an upper bound of the size of minority representation through 1995." T XX 120.

He did not review Merchantville's elementary school's racial patterns. He checked census data and birth data. He did not check consolidated enrollment reports. He did not have that information in his possession and deemed it insignificant in view of the numbers from Merchantville appearing at Pennsauken High School. The majority-minority makeup of the high school projected for 1995 is the essential finding of his study. He did not have breakdowns for Merchantville. One way to determine those numbers would be to build a projection of elementary minority percentages. He used the 1990 Merchantville report (P-25) that showed of approximately 400 pupils, 35, including special education, were minorities. Exhibit P-25 shows his opinion based on incorrect numbers. Thirty-five pupils equals 8.75% of pupils now in Merchantville. His cohort survival formula does not adjust the numbers accordingly.

In response to a series of hypothetical questions, the witness stated that if a new parochial high school were established, he could determine the effect on Pennsauken High School. If a new housing development were completed and occupied, he would take that fact into account. If he detected a significant trend of in migration of minorities, that should be reflected in cohort survival. If a trend is recent, for example the last three years of a five year period, the first two years' data would dilute the trend. Any in migration of whites or minorities he detected is reflected in year-to-year enrollments. Pupils in 9th-12th grade in 1995 are now in grades 5-7 at Merchantville. Richards' cohort analysis recognizes the "ebb and flow" of eighth grade figures to ninth grade figures. Although the witness could not break out Merchantville pupils at Pennsauken High School by numbers, he did analyze the whole high school by race. His projections is based on anecdotal data. At the time he testified, Exhibit P-25 referred to pupils in grades 4-7.

Pennsauken data could be projected reliably. He used Merchantville Application for State School Aid (ASSA) aggregate figures to approximate minorities in Merchantville's population for the same period. There were 17 minority Merchantville pupils in grades 4-7 in 1990. When asked if there were any evidence of minority in migration to Merchantville in the last three years, the witness stated he looked at the question, but it does not appear in his report. His source information came from census figures. The witness concedes it is important to pick up recent trends. If doing the report again, he would get those data because they would aid his understanding. A review of figures in the witness' work and from other sources shows minority pupils in Merchantville increasing in the 1988-91 period from 16 to 21 to 35 to 45. The minority increases are statistically significant. Four years is a sufficient period to show a trend. Evidence of increases of minority pupils is there, but the witness could not attribute the increases to in migration exclusively. There could be other reasons. The witness could not estimate the number of Merchantville minority pupils going to Pennsauken High School in 1995 if his five percent figure were incorrect even with the identified trend and new data. He could do a new cohort survival projection for the elementary school by race, but could not do the same for the high school. Cohort survival based on the number of minorities who actually appear at Pennsauken High School would be the essential ingredient. Without that number, it would be impossible to do a meaningful cohort analysis for the high school.

The phase out of Merchantville pupils might be accomplished in 1996, rather than 1995. The witness' projections did not go to 1995-96.

Richards set out to analyze the racial breakdown of Pennsauken High School (1) if Merchantville continues to send pupils, or (2) if Merchantville withdraws. His Table 8 on page 18 shows his estimates for 1991 and 1995. The years 1992-94 are calculable from, but not shown on Table 7. His figures are subject to some adjustment. The witness' opinions are based on numbers. A change in the minority percentage at Pennsauken High School of .5% (one-half of one percent), is not a significant impact in terms of policy. If, after four years, the change were in the range of a little less than two percent, the witness would begin to look at the context. Referring to his Table 6 and Table B-8, he used two trends at different rates and got differing results. The witness emphasized he worked with numbers of Merchantville pupils who actually appeared at Pennsauken High School, not necessarily numbers of pupils who completed elementary schooling in Merchantville.

The witness answered several other questions concerning methodology. He noted that birth data are not especially valid for projecting kindergarten enrollments. At one point he stated, "Birth data may be ignored."

Although the witness can break out several important figures, he cannot break out white-minority numbers by grade or by district of residence.

Merchantville's Rebuttal

The petitioner called Dr. Adam F. Scrupski. He is a professor at the Graduate School of Education at Rutgers University. He teaches theory and policy of administration. He was director of teacher education programs. He has done work on social and cultural foundations of education, schools as social systems and social class influence in schools. He also has experience as a middle school principal, has written on social forces in schooling, is a member of the New Jersey Civil Rights Advisory Committee and has testified as an expert for the New Jersey Legislature in the "moment of silence" case.

Scrupski was employed by the Merchantville Board to gather data for a report concerning students of both districts. His methodology is laid out at page 86 of his report (P-29). He did interviews of Pennsauken resident pupils and of Merchantville resident pupils attending Pennsauken High School. He interviewed parents of Merchantville pupils attending Pennsauken High School and parents of Merchantville pupils attending Camden Catholic High School and Haddonfield High School.

His conclusions state that severance will have no substantial negative impact of a racial nature on Pennsauken High School.

The witness has done two other studies of this magnitude and scope. In this study, he did observations at football games, spent parts of three or four days in Pennsauken High School and reviewed Pennsauken High School year books. His interviews were conducted in October and November 1989. He has not updated those data.

School officials provided him a list of Merchantville 8th grade pupils as well as pupils attending Camden Catholic and Haddonfield High Schools. He was also given a Haddonfield High School handbook.

Parent interviews were conducted in the school library. He got library book borrowing data from Haddonfield and Merchantville, but not from Pennsauken. However, these data were not used in his report.

The witness saw Merchantville's petition early in his relationship with the Board, but not prior to beginning his work and signing a contract. The witness is familiar with Dr. Savitt and reviewed his report at approximately the time the witness began his study. Scrupski also knows Dr. Fine and reviewed what he thought was not her final report. He did not interview any Board members, faculty members or administrators.

Since doing his report, if Merchantville minority pupil numbers grew, it would not change his ultimate recommendations. His report does not look at community effects but focuses on pupils only. Among the authorities he relied on are Parsons and Allport, particularly in the area of the nature of prejudice.

All of Scrupski's interviewees were selected at random. In interviews of minority pupils at Pennsauken High School, he told the pupils of the petition because some of them were unaware of its existence. He did not tell them of Pennsauken's answer to the petition. Interviewers had to be as neutral as possible to avoid bias; that is, the tendency of respondents to give answers they think interviewers want.

Significantly, no minority pupil "responded in terms of symbolic or physcosocial loss" (P-29 at 9).

Scrupski used an adolescent self-esteem scale (P-15) and this is discussed in the main section of his report. He tape recorded responses. He made no observations of and is aware of no studies saying that the presence of a tape recorder intimidates interviewees. To the contrary, he finds notetaking sometimes intimidates interviewers.

The witness addressed the "real world" issue to parents, not pupils, because he considered it a matter of parental responsibility. No pupil interviewees revealed so-called "real world" concerns.

Gender seemed to be a factor in Merchantville pupils' responses. There are five Merchantville 11th grade girls attending Pennsauken High School. Four were interviewed. All expressed relative satisfaction with the school and would not transfer to Haddonfield in mid-high school career. Three said they would not have elected Haddonfield if they had had the choice at the time they were entering 9th grade. Scrupski believes these respondents were avoiding cognitive dissonance. To conceive of the school one has attended and will most likely be constrained to attend as inadequate is psychologically uncomfortable and, thus, cognitively dissonant. The dissonance is removed by adjusting to the situation and justifying it as at least acceptable, if not preferable. This may also explain responses of the few Merchantville boys who said they were satisfied with Pennsauken High School. Another view of this is that there are only five girls in the 11th grade. It appears they are the ones who, in effect, have survived. A Merchantville parent couple, when asked about the ponderance of Merchantville girls attending private, Catholic or other schools said they believed parents are more likely to transfer girls out of Pennsauken then they are to transfer boys. In part, this is based on the perception that boys are "tougher" and better able to hold their own in a large, perhaps feral high school such as Pennsauken High School. Girls appear to be the primary candidates for transfer if they are easily intimidated, but are allowed to remain in the school if they are effectively coping.

In some cases, an already established familiarity with the school and some of its occupants, through older siblings and friends, considerably eases adjustment to a high school. Several pupils mentioned this. One female pupil saw the absence of a familiar social context at Haddonfield as a reason for not going there, but allowed that once "you started up" it would become comfortable in a couple of years.

The witness testified concerning several other interviews. A Merchantville male pupil, not college-bound, planned to enter the Marine Corps on graduation. He had two occupations planned for himself. Some spoke of cross-age grade interaction where younger youth are inducted into the more mature activities of high school youth. Merchantville pupils, however, appear to develop less quickly. This may be the result of a more prolonged childhood pattern experience in the smaller elementary school. Another cited the giddiness of Merchantville girls as a sign of immaturity and a lack of the "coolness" valued at Pennsauken High School. Some pupils mentioned fights that frequently are the consequence of teasing. Other pupils do not step in to break up fights, but instead cheer the participants on. A black male Merchantville pupil who had attended Philadelphia elementary schools and, upon moving to Merchantville after 8th grade, had attended Camden Catholic High School for two years said he thought Pennsauken High School had a reputation for being "bad," that is, disorganized and rowdy. However, he said that when he got to Pennsauken High School he liked the teachers' approach to pupils. In contrast to lay teachers at Camden Catholic High School, Pennsauken teachers were more personal with pupils. "They treat you like grownups," he reported. Still another Merchantville boy reported all high schools were alike to him. More than one interviewee reported pupils who were always ready to fight at the slightest provocation. A few Merchantville pupils were genuinely negative about Pennsauken High School. Bullying, larger classes and stratification of pupils by curriculum were mentioned. Although pupils did not use the word, several made reference to what they considered egalitarianism at Merchantville.

Most pupils had secondhand knowledge of Haddonfield High School. None had direct experience. Scrupski did not ask any pupils for reasons underlying their opinions because he did not need to. The fact that they held a given perception was important; how they came to the perception was immaterial.

Scrupski interviewed Merchantville parents sending children to Camden Catholic High School. One parent mentioned religious reasons for sending her child there. All others mentioned that it was a small and more orderly school.

Merchantville parents of pupils in Haddonfield High School view preparation for life in the real world as a more profound and complex experience than do academic sociologists and government officials who believe that merely putting adolescents in a school with age peers of varying social class and ethnicity will prepare them effectively to deal with all kinds of people. The Merchantville parents see the roots of adaptation to the real world springing from what children learn in their families about dealing with others. As with pupil perceptions, the parents' beliefs are what they are. How they came to them is immaterial. The witness did note that extensive literature in sociology relates higher social status with acceptance of different others.

The witness made observations of a football game and made observations of cocurricular activities. At the football game, he saw three instances of interracial seating. Attendance at football and similar activities is on the wane.

Scrupski also looked at 7th and 8th grade suspension rates. He compared suspensions at this grade level because it represents a parity of sanction for all three districts; none has in-school suspension programs for these grades. Using New Jersey Department of Education suspension figures for 1987-88 (the last available), he derived suspension rates of two percent for Merchantville, three percent for Haddonfield and 20 percent for Pennsauken. For 1985-86 when the 11th grade interviewees were in 7th grade, the percentages were three percent, one percent and 19 percent, respectively. Based on 7th and 8th grade infractions, behavior among Merchantville youth is dramatically less deviant than behavior of Pennsauken youth and much more congruent with behavior patterns of Haddonfield youth. A comparison of suspension rates at Pennsauken and Haddonfield high schools reveals a similar differential.

The witness could not positively identify the source of the relatively high amount of deviance, indicated by suspensions, at Pennsauken. Pupils reported a good deal of fighting, even among girls. The sanction for fighting is almost always suspension from school. Estimates of the number of fights at the high school among those who offered estimates range from four-seven fights a month. One respondent reported that last spring there seemed to be a fight every other week. Whatever the source of the social conflicts at Pennsauken High School, the size of the school and a youthful population less familially and more youth culture oriented seem to be facts of social life.

The witness stated his conclusions. Pennsauken High School seems not to integrate effectively its multiethnic clientele. This is probably not the fault of the school's administration which works hard to facilitate integration, to control pupils and to insure order. It is paradoxical that when high schools are called upon to do more than they have been expected to do, they have suffered a declining significance as integrating institutions and as objects of loyalty. Merchantville youth are not a positive reference group for Pennsauken pupils, certainly not for black students, but not for white students either Almost all Pennsauken pupils interviewed were indifferent to the presence or absence of future cohorts of Merchantville pupils. Some Pennsauken pupils regarded Merchantville pupils as somewhat immature. Some Merchantville youth reported feelings of alienation.

Half of the Merchantville pupil respondents complained about the feral nature of the ungoverned informal social context at Pennsauken High School. Many experienced anxiety as a result of baiting and repeated challenges to fight by easily provoked Pennsauken youth.

Dr. Emanuel Averbach testified. He has been the managing principal of a consulting firm since 1972. He has concentrated in school work since approximately 1975. He advises on comprehensive planning, facilities planning and organizational planning. In Jenkins, et al. v. Tp. of Morris School Dist. and Bd. of Ed., 58 N.J.. 483 (1971), he supervised preparation of enrollment projections and worked on the community of the two municipalities involved. He testified as an expert in Office of Administrative Law cases concerning Boonton and Asbury Park. He testified as an expert in Superior Court in a matter involving Colts Neck and Freehold Regional High School District.

Averbach was retained by Merchantville and developed three reports dated January 2, 1990, May 2, 1991 and September 14, 1991. In the last report he relied on Pennsauken enrollment figures obtained from Dr. Richards' report. For Merchantville figures he used numbers from the consolidated enrollment reports for four years prior and used the enrollment number as of September 12, 1991 as reported by Merchantville. He developed a chart (P-32) that projected the white-minority mix at Pennsauken High School for the years 1992-95, with and without Merchantville pupils in attendance. Based on his reports, his expert opinion is that no significant racial difference or impact would accrue if severance occurs. At the end of four years, the withdrawal of Merchantville pupils produces a difference of 1.7% of white pupils. This is a change of less than one-half of one percent per year. This is a nonrecurring loss.

Looking at Pennsauken's enrollment history from 1984-90, in 1984, white pupils constituted 80% of enrollment. In 1990, they constituted 63.5% of enrollment. This is a decline of 16.5% in six years. It is an average decline of 2.75% per year. Richards' projection with Merchantville pupils included predicts a white enrollment for 1995 of 49.7%. This, of course, represents an additional decline from 1990 of approximately 2.75% per year. Over an 11-year period, five historic and six projected, the 2.75% white loss per year is assumed constant. Over that time, a nonrecurring loss of less than one-half of one percent per year would be de minimis.

With or without Merchantville pupils, by 1995, minority pupils will represent a slight majority of the enrollment at Pennsauken High School. Richards' projections were based on current enrollment patterns and on cohort survival ratios. Averbach's figures are similarly derived but incorporate the racial mix of Merchantville pupils. To assume no withdrawal one must also assume present and historical 8th to 9th grade survival patterns will continue.

The witness stated he had knowledge of the New Jersey sending-receiving statutes before doing the studies in which he was involved. He would reach basically the same conclusions today that he reached in his January 1990 report although numbers understandably would have changed somewhat in the interim. When he refers to out migration, he refers to school enrollments only. He did not measure the larger community and makes no statement on the larger community. Table A-2 shows in migration, out migration and net numbers. Merchantville cannot check the changes in pupil enrollment composition in the Pennsauken schools. There is no known comprehensive plan or strategy to address community racial-ethnic balance. The witness' historical reports and projections are entirely quantitative. He makes no qualitative claim for the data. Averbach was asked to look into the question of whether the two municipalities are one community. He examined master plans and observed certain key services shared and not shared. There were a great number of things that could have been shared that are not. There are, indeed, some indicia of community. For example, a local newspaper states it circulates in Pennsauken, Merchantville and Delair.* The witness observed that Pennsauken and Merchantville share Little League facilities. However, Merchantville and Cherry Hill share certain activities and facilities. Geographic barriers around neighborhoods tend to impede interaction in Pennsauken.

When Pennsauken High School agreed in 1972 to accept Merchantville pupils, it did so with reference to its own interests, not necessarily Merchantville's. There are undeniably some socioeconomic differences between the towns. However, if all Merchantville pupils were withdrawn from Pennsauken High School today, the enrollment would remain 65.1% white. The Camden County average is 63.5%. If the composition of Pennsauken Township is changing, there is virtually nothing the schools can do about it.

*Delair is not an incorporated municipality. Rather, it is a section of Pennsauken Township.

In his supplementary study dated May 2, 1991 (P-34) Dr. Averbach states:

> It was concluded that the withdrawal of Merchantville's high school students from Pennsauken High School would not significantly impact on the school's racial-ethnic integration since the present minority enrollment in the Pennsauken schools feeding the high school is growing at a rate so rapid that the racial-ethnic mix would be little affected in the long run by the presence or absence of Merchantville's declining relatively small, predominately white high school enrollment.

He reaches this conclusion because births are not necessarily as significant as in migration. He looked at births in Merchantville and saw very slow change. Births have changed in correlation with enrollment in Pennsauken, however and have done so rather quickly. On a percentage basis, the change appears large. The data strongly suggest a change taking place but are not sufficient to support conclusions as to the magnitude and rate of change.

Averbach's Table E shows that, in the absence of contravening evidence, it is reasonable to assume that Merchantville's elementary population will henceforth reflect the general increase in minority representation in the schools. If severance is granted, Pennsauken is not loosing an all white contingent. The witness also stated that some desirable data were not available, either to him or to Dr. Richards. However, only a slight advantage would have been realized even if these additional data were available.

In conclusion, Dr. Averbach stated that the Merchantville birth rate is not significant, but the growth of minority pupils within the Merchantville schools is. In the period 1988-1991, minority membership grew significantly. Based on that information, he projected the number of Merchantville minority pupils in 1995 and demonstrated a significant increase.

The Cross Petition

The Pennsauken cross-petition was argued on the papers and is addressed below.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Merchantville is a borough in the northern portion of Camden County. It is surrounded on three sides by Pennsauken Township. The westernmost reach of Merchantville nearly cuts Pennsauken in two. Part of Merchantville's southerly boundary touches Cherry Hill Township. Merchantville and Haddonfield are not contiguous. Pennsauken and Merchantville have had various sending-receiving relationships for many years.

Pennsauken is geographically the largest. It is also the most racially diverse. Pennsauken is described by the New Jersey Department of Labor as urban/suburban; Merchantville and Haddonfield are classified suburban.

Pennsauken High School operates at or near its functional capacity as measured by the New Jersey Department of Education. Haddonfield High School operates at approximately 60% of its functional capacity.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, as amended effective November 24, 1986, requires the district seeking severance to submit a feasibility study considering the educational and financial implications for the sending and receiving districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils in each of the districts, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of each of the districts. It was found during the hearing, when Pennsauken moved to dismiss when Merchantville rested, that Merchantville made out a prima facie case. Under the September 5, 1990 State Board ruling, above, Pennsauken was required to demonstrate an affirmative defense to severance. The financial, educational and racial aspects of the case will be discussed seriatim.

The Financial Aspect

While this matter was pending, the Legislature enacted the Quality Education Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7D-1 et seq., and its subsequent amendment, L. 1991, c. 62. Fortunately, the witnesses testifying about the financial aspects of the case were able to state that the act and subsequent amendment did not substantially affect their opinions.

Merchantville's financial expert was eminently well qualified. She considered enrollment projections in the event of a phase out, state aid entitlements, advertised annual budgets, Department of Education per pupil cost, Pennsauken pupil enrollment projections, election results, state school aid applications, reports of school taxes, Board secretary cash reports, report of rateables, report of tax levy, report of tax rate, and report of average ratio. The witness carefully examined Pennsauken's property tax structure, school budgets and tax status. In addition, she addressed the school budget phase out of Merchantville pupils, forecast of tuition revenues, forecast of impact on taxpayers, future forecasts and other considerations.

As a result of her detailed examination, Merchantville's expert concluded the following:

1. A phased withdrawal beginning in school year 1989-90 of Merchantville pupils from Pennsauken High School will not have a substantial financial impact on the receiving district.

2. Tuition revenue has been declining as a percentage of the Current Expense portion of the Pennsauken school budget for the past seven years.

3. Property taxes have made a declining contribution to the Current Expense portion of the Pennsauken school budget for the past seven years.

4. Free balance makes up a rather large portion of the Pennsauken budget. Additional appropriations from free balance could be used to offset property tax increases.

5. Pennsauken will not absorb completely the loss of tuition revenue if Merchantville pupils withdraw, but increased student enrollments from within Pennsauken will expand state equalization aid and offset the loss of tuition revenue.

6. Both Haddonfield and Merchantville have indicated a willingness to negotiate tuition rates and it is anticipated that this will reduce any significant financial impact on Merchantville.

Merchantville's expert prepared an update of the financial data in preparation for her testimony. Although the figures changed somewhat, she reached the same conclusions.

After Merchantville's expert prepared her update, Pennsauken and Merchantville received preliminary figures from the New Jersey Department of Education on the amount of State aid they anticipate receiving for fiscal year 1992. Deddy set forth that information in Exhibit P-13D. In pertinent part, the exhibit indicates:

MERCHANTVILLE

Foundation Aid FY 92	Categ/Trans Aid FY 92	Transition Aid FY 92	Total New Aid FY 92	Change In Aid
$1,397	$ 333	$ 0	$1,730	$ 537

PENNSAUKEN

Foundation Aid FY 92	Categ/Trans Aid FY 92	Transition Aid FY 92	Total New Aid FY 92	Change In Aid
$19,700	$4,940	$ 0	$24,640	$5,854

(All figures in thousands)

All financial information in the feasibility study and the update, P-13a and P-13c, were accepted as Deddy's direct testimony. To this she added that she had had an opportunity to review Exhibit P-13d, the State estimates of financial aid to Pennsauken and Merchantville for 1992, and concluded:

> I would like to reaffirm the findings of my original study and my amended study to say that I see no financial impact--substantial financial impact--on any of the three districts involved in this matter based on the fact that this document, the Quality Education Act [figures] [show] that each of the three districts will receive substantial new unanticipated aid in 1990-92. T IV 11.

Pennsauken argues that Deddy failed to look specifically at the financial implications for the prospective sending district. Nor did she inquire into the status of the 1990 Pennsauken school budget. Most importantly, Deddy failed to take into account the effect of the Quality Education Act on the financial implications of the case. It is true that Deddy said she could not be certain of anything related to the Quality Education Act because "It's unclear and things seem to be changing by the week in Trenton." T IV 16. This was an accurate statement in the general sense and applied to any witness trying to deal with the shifting sands of State aid. Nevertheless, both financial experts were able to give reasoned and reasonable reflections based on the advent of the Quality Education Act and its first amendment.

Deddy's work carries the indicia of trustworthyness. Projections are based on known numbers wherever possible. Assumptions, where used, are clearly stated and, more importantly, seem reasonable. Her analyses lead the reader in a logical sequence and her results comport with common experience and common sense. There is no extraneous information offered.

Pennsauken's financial expert is a Certified Public Accountant who is registered as a municipal and public school accountant with the State of New Jersey. The tribunal qualified him as an expert in school finance. T XVI 74. Mr. Hoffmann had nearly 20 years' experience as a school accountant when he testified.

Pennsauken's expert stated he was employed and given the charge to criticize the report of Merchantville's financial expert. He prepared a two-page letter dated May 15, 1991 (RP-24) that was sent to Pennsauken's counsel. The following exchange appears in the record:

> Q. And, sir, would it be fair to say that your financial analysis consisted of dividing the 1991-92 Merchantville anticipated tuition of $528,180 by the estimated assessed valuation in Pennsauken for 1992 and coming up with a quotient which you identified as the amount of increase, $100, of assessed valuation in Pennsauken?
>
> A. That is correct dividing -- once we established by counter area, that's correct.
>
> Q. That's the sum total of your analysis, is that correct?
>
> A. That's correct. [T XVI 101.]

Hoffmann acknowledged he did no analysis of impact on Haddonfield or Merchantville in the event severance was granted. He conceded that if the phase out were to commence during the present school year (1991-92), in his opinion there would be a total loss of tuition to Pennsauken of approximately $44,000. This was the product of the tuition rate per student of $8,800 multiplied by the number of Merchantville pupils he estimated would be lost to Pennsauken, five. He stated the figure represented one-tenth of one percent loss in revenue to Pennsauken. In his opinion, that would not produce a substantial negative affect on the total budget.

Working through the net loss for each year of a phased withdrawal, the witness conceded that each loss of tuition, expressed in dollars and compared to the budget total, did not constitute a significant impact.

Hoffman did all that was asked of him. In reviewing pages 46-53 of Guidelines' report (P-13a) dealing with economic impact, he saw reference to a worst case scenario (Item 8) and pointed out that a recently authorized lease-purchase agreement could affect the scenario. He also suggested that Item 7 extracted the current expense portion of the Pennsauken budget from the advertised budget and that figure would include fully funded special projects.

The witness detected several minor errors in Guidelines' report. He then, as requested, supplied the following:

As you requested, I have reviewed the Pennsauken Township School District's 1990-91 budget, as adopted. My purpose was to determine the financial impact of losing the Merchantville Borough School District tuition as an item of revenue. My review indicated the following:

1990-91	Merchantville Tuition Anticipated	$497,000.00
1990	Assessed Valuations/Camden County Abstract of Rateables	$568,415,872.00
1991	Estimated Assessed Valuation based upon the past seven years average growth of .82%	$573,076,882.00

Tax rate impact in 1990--based upon 50% of Merchantville tuition since taxes in Pennsauken Township are raised on a calendar year	4.37 cents/ $100 of Assessed Value
Tax rate impact in 1991	8.67 cents/ $100 of Assessed Value

The above effect on the tax rate is based upon the assumption that all Merchantville students would leave the Pennsauken District prior to the 1990-91 school year. Since the withdrawal is proposed on a gradual basis, the impact would be less in the first three years; however, the ultimate impact would remain at a loss of $497,00,00. The impact if withdrawal were gradual is estimated to be as follows:

No. of Students	Year	Estimated Revenue Lost	Approximate Fiscal Year Tax Rate Impact*
16	1990-91	$112,024.00	$1.97 cents
10	1991-92	132,997.00	2.32
22	1992-93	154,020.00	2.66
14	1993-94	97,959.00	1.68

*Per $100 of Assessed Valuation.

(RP-24)

The work is internally impeccable. It does not consider any offsets.

There is no challenge to the quality or reliability of Hoffmann's work. The problem this judge sees is that the witness was not asked to do more.

In review of the record, including transcripts, there is considerable testimony and documentary evidence on the financial aspect. All of it, however, indicates there would be no significant financial effect on the Pennsauken public schools if Merchantville pupils were withdrawn whether by phase out or all at once. Obviously, a phased withdrawal would cushion and spread out whatever the effect would be. Although there is great difficulty dealing with figures that change almost daily, both experts were able to express opinions both as to dollars and impact.

I FIND that Merchantville has demonstrated there would be no significant adverse economic impact on Pennsauken or Merchantville if the present sending-receiving relationship is ended.

The Educational Aspect

Negative educational effects can flow from a severance in more than one way. The receiving district's loss of tuition dollars might be enough to affect curriculum and overall program whether by restriction, reduction or elimination. A loss of students might result in abandonment of certain low enrollment courses in the receiving school. Courses usually affected are advanced placement or honors programs with low enrollments.

In a phased withdrawal, the last year would show the greatest effects. Pennsauken's accountant, however, concedes that the maximum impact on Pennsauken's overall budget would be about one percent. This figure does not include offsets that might be realized from rising enrollments from within the district or fiscal aid from the state.

The projected 1992-93 Pennsauken High School enrollment, by Pennsauken's expert's reckoning, is 1,363 pupils (RP-28). According to the same projections, 23 of those pupils would be from Merchantville. The loss of 23 pupils from a student body of over 1,360, without more, does not show educational impact. It is possible, but it has not been shown, that the 23 Merchantville pupils would all be snatched from courses operating at the minimum enrollment. Of course, there is nothing in the record to support that hypothesis.

During examination about enrollment the Pennsauken High School principal stated

> Q. That being the case, if you had a diminution of students as a result of Merchantville withdrawing, that would ease the problem as well; would it not?
>
> A. I don't accept that because less than 100 students sprinkled throughout the curriculum does not make a difference that's going to manifest itself in a scheduling change. And--and the reason I say that is that Merchantville young people -- and I did testify to this yesterday -- are spread about the entire curriculum.
>
> Q. Being spread about the entire curriculum then, sir, would mean that in the event these children are withdrawn, you wouldn't have to necessarily reduce the size of your staff.
>
> A. Are you asking me, Mr. Kalac, if I would reduce the staff if they left? Is that what you're asking me?
>
> Q. Yes.
> A. I would not, sir, no. [T XII 54-55.]

Both high schools offer accessible guidance programs. Haddonfield enjoys a somewhat better pupil-counselor ratio. Viewed as a whole, the record demonstrates at least adequate guidance services to pupils in both high schools. Understandably, Pennsauken's efforts are organized somewhat differently. Pennsauken's guidance services are organized to meet the needs of minority pupils, vocational pupils, Spanish speaking pupils and English as a Second Language (ESL) pupils. At least half of Pennsauken's efforts are directed at these four groups. Approximately half of Pennsauken's guidance services are directed toward college bound pupils. Guidance services at Haddonfield are directed predominately at the college-bound pupil.

Pennsauken's expert, Kaplan, testified that the purpose of his report was to support the educational philosophy of Pennsauken. The two main issues he saw were the symbolic loss of Merchantville pupils leaving Pennsauken High School as well as the secondary loss of pupils from Pennsauken High School if Merchantville pupils were permitted to leave. The secondary loss would flow from the symbolic loss. The initial symbolic loss occurs as a result of perceptions in the community brought about by the severance through media coverage, how real estate agents operate and how businesses react. Kaplan also testified that attendant publicity is only one of the elements of symbolic loss.

Kaplan drew a parallel between the present situation and that which occurred in New Brunswick and North Brunswick in the early 1970's. He urged that the situations are similar. Among the similarities the expert saw were sending districts repeatedly attempting to sever the relationship with the receiving district, suburban versus urban high schools and the demographic history of the two areas. This line of testimony appeared much more appropriate to questions of minority enrollments and will be addressed in that section, below.

Guidelines' educational program analyses (P-13a, pp. 16-45) are comprehensive. The report fairly points out strengths noted at Pennsauken High School. It also tends to show that with or without Merchantville pupils, Pennsauken High School will have a large and diversified pupil enrollment. The report suggests withdrawal of Merchantville pupils might alleviate overcrowding at Pennsauken. This must be leavened with the knowledge that Pennsauken enrollments are virtually sure to increase during the examined period. The report also states, "It is apparent that there is no concentration of courses selected [by Merchantville pupils] which would necessitate the elimination of any class if Merchantville students withdrew." Id. at 44. The other side of that coin is that the addition of even a few Merchantville pupils could aid low enrollment classes at Haddonfield High School. Any increase in enrollment at Haddonfield would yield better use of the facility in a period of declining enrollment. Ibid.

The University Consultants' report prepared for Pennsauken (RP-5) contains the following concerning educational impact on Merchantville pupils if severance is granted:

> One might wonder about the symbolic and experiential loss suffered by Merchantville students should the sending/receiving relationship be severed. Not only might they lose the proximity benefits cited directly above, but there are major societal education experiences also lost.
>
> While never questioning the quality of educational services offered at the Haddonfield High School there would be real losses to be accounted for. Johnson and Fine both refer to the benefits of a heterogeneous setting for education. The diversity of the student body, its representativeness to the world outside of the home, the world of work, social intercourse, and communication as a basic need and right of all students, might well be severely limited should the two communities [sic] historic relationship be concluded.
>
> A most clear quote from a student is offered by Fine, "School is not just academics, its social development too. How we interact with other cultures can help each other."

That is the entire section. Unfortunately, the Johnson material referred to appeared in a draft, but not in the final document. The Fine material concentrates on loss concepts and is addressed in the section on racial aspects of the case.

Looking at all the evidence adduced on the educational impact aspect of the case, I FIND that even if all Merchantville pupils were removed at once, the effect on educational offerings at Pennsauken High School would be minimal.

The State Board of Education addressed the issue of educational impact in Cranbury Tp. Bd. of Ed. v. Lawrence Tp. Bd. of Ed., OAL DKT. EDU 8626-82 (Aug. 1, 1985); aff'd Comm'r of Ed. (Sept. 30, 1985); aff'd St. Bd. (Apr. 1, 1987). The State Board declared

> Specifically, we will not find negative impact based on speculation regarding the future of the receiving district's programs where the future direction of such program will be > determined by decisions, both financial and educational, made by that district, and the continued ability to achieve its educational goals is within the control of the receiving district. [Slip opinion at 14.]

The proofs offered by Merchantville, buttressed by the Pennsauken High School principal's testimony, show no substantial negative impact on any affected district. Pennsauken's proofs, on the other hand, do not rebut or even significantly mitigate those offered by Merchantville. Accordingly, I FIND there would be no significant educational impact on any affected district should severance in this matter be granted.

The Racial Aspect

The Kaplan-Richards report (RP-5, RP-6) states withdrawal of Merchantville pupils from Pennsauken High School will have a substantial negative effect on racial balance of the school's enrollment. Kaplan's testimony centered on symbolic loss and secondary loss and on a parallel with the situation in New Brunswick in the early 1970's. In the State Board of Education decision in Englewood, above, the Board cites a statement of educational policy it issued on November 5, 1969:

> Educational considerations are primary in eliminating school segregation. The elimination of racial imbalance is not to be sought as an end in itself but because such imbalance stands as a deterent and handicap to the improvement of education for all.

The Board goes on to state

> Such educational considerations do not include the beliefs and social values of the individuals attending a particular school. Rather, as set forth above, resolution of the legal and policy questions with which we have been presented rests on fundamental educational principles applicable in all educational settings as those principles have been expressed in the decisions of the United States and New Jersey Supreme Courts. Therefore, in resolving these questions, we have neither relied upon nor considered the proofs developed from interviews with students attending DMHS and THS concerning their beliefs and social values, which were submitted into evidence to show that "symbolic loss" would occur in this case. Cf. In the Matter of the Board of Education of the Township of Hillside, supra, Commissioner's decision, at 22, State Board's decision, at 28a-29a, Appellate Division's decision, at 2-3. In this respect, we specifically find that whatever evidentiary value Dr. Fine's "report" might have does not justify intruding > upon the privacy of students by interviewing them for purposes of this litigation concerning their beliefs and feelings on matters of race relations. See Board of Education of the Borough of Merchantville v. Board of Education of the Borough of Pennsauken v. Board of Education of the Board of Haddonfield, Decision on Motion by the State Board of Education, October 6, 1989 (John T. Klagholz, dissenting).

Englewood Cliffs Bd. of Ed. v. Englewood Bd. of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 566 (Apr. 18, 1988); mod. Comm'r of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 632 (July 11, 1988); mod. St. Bd. of Ed., 12 N.J.A.R. 663, 688-689 (Apr. 4, 1989).

Accordingly, the judge has not weighed the loss arguments. The better evidence is found in the figures, actual and projected, developed by persons trained in their use.

The treatments, assumptions and testimony associated with enrollments is discussed above. I FIND the more reliable treatment to be that of Averbach (P-32). Using the 1992-95 projected mix with Richards' Table B-8 and the 1992-95 projected Merchantville mix he developed (P-35 at 3), Averbach produced the following chart:

	NUMBERS		%
Year	White	Minority	White	Minority
1992 total	757	547	58.0	41.9
Minus Merchantville	64	9
Without Merchantville	693	538	56.3	43.7
1993 total	777	597	56.6	43.4
Minus Merchantville	71	14
Without Merchantville	706	583	54.8	45.2
1994 total	770	686	52.9	47.1
Minus Merchantville	60	15
Without Merchantville	710	671	51.4	48.6
1995 total	758	767	49.7	50.3
Minus Merchantville	70	23
Without Merchantville	688	744	48.0	52.0

Averbach's figures show the picture clearly and succinctly. He concluded there would be no substantial negative impact on the racial composition at Pennsauken High School should severance be granted. Through his chart, Averbach demonstrated that the racial impact in the event of severance would be so slight that, in Richards' words, it would represent a "fluctuation that would occur in normal demographic variance from year to year." T XX 163. In his projection, Richards simply erred when he assumed all Merchantville's projected secondary pupils in 1995 would be white. To the contrary, the evidence suggests a growing nonwhite pupil population in Merchantville. In addition to the shortcomings discussed above, this, too, makes Averbach's calculations the more reliable and worthy of belief. Averbach used the latest Merchantville enrollment figures available. He made his projections based on actual numbers of minority pupils enrolled. He did not assume that all of Merchantville's secondary pupils in 1995 would be white.

Averbach's work demonstrates an average net change in the racial composition at Pennsauken High School, if severance were granted, of .425% per year for each of the phase out years. Averbach stated, "That's a smaller figure than we can normally measure in this field . . .." T XXII 21. This judge grants that small numbers, such as those dealt with here, may have significance in a policy sense. In a statistical sense, however, they do not. There is a trend in enrollments at Pennsauken High School that shows rising minority enrollments in proportion to the whole. Whether Merchantville pupils attend Pennsauken High School or not, that trend is little affected.

In supporting his conclusion, Averbach stated

> [I]f you look at the impact at the end of four years as you compare the impact at the end of four years of keeping Merchantville in and not keeping Merchantville in, you find that Merchantville produces a difference--1995 between with and without--by being there or not being there, a total of 1.7 percentage points of white enrollment, which really means we're talking about a change of .425% per year, less than a half of a percentage per year.
>
> And this non-recurring loss. It's a non-recurring loss.
>
> Now, to put this in context, . . . I think I have to--I've looked at the enrollment history from 1984-1990 and the percent white in 1984 was 80% white. The percent white in 1990 at Pennsauken High was 63.5% white. . . .

> So that's a decline of 16.5 percentage points in a period of six years. It comes to 2.75% per year.
>
> If you look at Dr. Richards' projection, you find that the projections with Merchantville in are projected to--let's see--the projected white enrollment at Pennsauken High is for 1995, is 49.7% white which is the figure which I have up there . . .
>
> So there's really little debate that over this 11-year period, six years of history and five years projected, that we're talking about a 30%--a drop of 30 percentage points and a pretty continuous rate of a loss of 2.75 % white per year.
> Now, in that context, the loss of 4.25% per year for four years in non-recurring loss is almost--it seems almost de minimis. T XXII 19-21.

The attempted Pennsauken-New Brunswick analogy is rejected. Insufficient foundation was laid. There are some similarities in the two situations. There are also significant differences in, among other things, the character of contiguous municipalities. Nothing was adduced concerning, for example, unemployment rates or the number of households receiving welfare benefits. Without more, this judge is unwilling to accept generalizations and projections as probative.

In consideration of the foregoing, and giving particular attention to the significant increases in minority enrollments in Merchantville, I FIND there would be no substantial negative racial impact if severance were granted. Pennsauken's expert, when using Averbach's more reliable figures, conceded on cross-examination that there would be no negative racial impact.

CONCLUSION

Whether viewed from an educational, financial, or racial viewpoint, Merchantville has adduced proofs showing that there would be no significant negative impact in any of those areas if it were allowed to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. Pennsauken's case, in the nature of an affirmative defense, did little to rebut or mitigate the proofs Merchantville established. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 requires the board submitting an application to sever a sending-receiving relationship to prepare and submit a feasibility study considering the educational and financial implications for the sending and receiving districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils in each of the districts, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of each of the districts. Merchantville has carried this burden. The statute next requires consideration of all the circumstances, including the educational and financial implications for the affected districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils and the effect on the racial composition of pupil population of the districts. A careful review of the whole record in this matter reveals no negative educational or financial implications for any of the affected districts. The effect on the racial composition of the pupil populations of the various districts is insignificant. With or without Merchantville pupils, Pennsauken eventually will become a "majority minority" school. The addition of approximately two dozen minority pupils from Merchantville to Haddonfield will make a greater difference in the proportion of minorities at Haddonfield than will the removal of the same number from Pennsauken.

Merchantville did its homework. It marshalled facts and produced credible interpretations of those facts.

I CONCLUDE that Merchantville has shown by a preponderance of the credible evidence in the record that, in accordance with the standards required by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, it should be permitted to end the sending-receiving relationship now in effect with Pennsauken.

It is so ORDERED.

THE CROSS PETITION

Pennsauken charges that Haddonfield is operating its high school as a private school in a public setting and that the Haddonfield private tuition policy runs afoul of controlling case law and undermines attempts at racial integration in the public schools of the state.

Pennsauken argues that the Haddonfield superintendent, who testified on November 30, 1990, confirmed what he stated in his deposition on October 23, 1989. Specifically, that Haddonfield first discussed accepting Merchantville pupils in 1981. Haddonfield was accepting less than 15 tuition students at all grade levels at that time, the majority being at Haddonfield High School. When the superintendent testified at hearing, Haddonfield was receiving 83 tuition students with 45 at the high school. Eleven of these were Merchantville residents attending the high school on a tuition basis and this represented the greatest number of pupils from another district. There are also two Pennsauken pupils attending Haddonfield, one at the high school level.

The superintendent stated that Haddonfield has advertised for tuition pupils since 1982. Advertisements are in newspapers and a magazine. Haddonfield caused announcements of its visitation day to be made over television and radio stations in Philadelphia. The superintendent testified that Haddonfield's tuition policy is for pupils and parents seeking an alternative to private school. (RP-9). Pennsauken urges that the advertisements merely invite the reader to consider Haddonfield as an alternative to whatever school a particular child is attending, not simply an alternative to private schools.

The superintendent conceded that the Haddonfield Board of Education policy relative to its tuition program, adopted February 12, 1987, makes no mention of an alternative to private education (RP-11). The admission and tuition procedures (RP-12) make no reference to an alternative to private schools. Information packets sent to prospective candidates include much information on the school district, the community, programs of study and the like, but make no reference to being an alternative to private school education. Pennsauken maintains Haddonfield's tuition policy is intended for anyone able to pay the tuition. It is conducting its business as would a proprietary school.

The feasibility study prepared by Haddonfield concerning acceptance of Merchantville did not address racial impact on either district. Haddonfield High School has no black faculty members. It has, perhaps, one Hispanic faculty member.

The superintendent confirmed that Merchantville pupils are relatively close to Haddonfield pupils in Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) scores. Pennsauken urges there is actually a 45-point spread between the verbal scores of Merchantville and Haddonfield pupils and a 17-point spread in the mathematics area. In 1989, Haddonfield High School had 814 pupils in a district-wide enrollment of over 2,000. Today, there are approximately 540 pupils at the high school and roughly 1,700 pupils in the district. The superintendent stated plainly that its tuition policy was a way of buttressing enrollment and revenues in a period of declining enrollment. Exhibit RP-19 represents Haddonfield enrollment trends and a projection chart from 1980-81 to 1995-96. Haddonfield has suffered a serious decline in enrollment.

Although Haddonfield argues that its tuition policy is lawful pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3, the practice of operating a tuition program must be consistent with overriding public policy in New Jersey concerning integration in the public schools. The policy must not serve as a conduit for parents from other school districts to circumvent an existing sending-receiving relationship with an integrated school to resegregate their children in an all white atmosphere. A State Board of Education resolution dated November 5, 1969 states, "RESOLVED, that the Commissioner of Education under the policy of the State Board undertake such steps as he shall deem necessary to correct such conditions of racial imbalance as may be found." N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 imposes no mandatory course of action on any local board. It grants discretion to boards in certain situations if a board is inclined to act. Pennsauken sees no conflict between the principles of Jenkins (the Morristown-Morris Township case) and the statute. Even if there were a conflict, the educational goals and objectives underlying Jenkins would have to be paramount.

In its opinion in Englewood, above, the State Board emphasized that N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 was enacted to ensure that children of migrant laborers and other children temporarily residing in New Jersey would be entitled to an education while in the state. Of course, the statute does not preclude the district board of education from adopting admission policies aimed at alleviating declining enrollment. This is what Tenafly did in the Englewood case. But the State Board went on to say that the discretion given by the statute does not create an absolute right for district boards to admit nonresident students on a tuition basis or otherwise. Nor was there any other source in law that would confer such a right where the admittance of pupils by a given district has contributed significantly to deterioration in the balance among racial and national origin groupings represented in the pupil population of another district. 12 N.J.A.R. at 691.

At this point, Pennsauken urges that the testimony provided by Merchantville and Haddonfield show, at best, that both have been less than attentive to this mandate. While Haddonfield's tuition policy may be acceptable on its face pursuant to the statute, in the context of a sending-receiving controversy it must be abolished. The policy has the effect of robbing Peter to pay Paul when it accepts 11 Merchantville pupils who are otherwise subject to a sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken High School. Similarly, the two Pennsauken residents attending Haddonfield High School are subject to attending public high school at Pennsauken. Moreover, Exhibit R-4 demonstrates that all 11 Merchantville residents attending Haddonfield High School are white. The State cannot sanction a private tuition policy where the effect of the policy is to allow white parents to channel their children from a fully integrated school to one that is overwhelmingly white. Allowing such a practice would be counter to every tenet of constitutional policy. Haddonfield should be foreclosed from accepting into its all white atmosphere the disproportionately large percentage of Merchantville pupils who would and should remain at Pennsauken High School.

Haddonfield asserts that its nonresident tuition program operates in full compliance with all applicable statutes, regulations and policies. Public school tuition programs for nonresident pupils are authorized by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 and are entitled, therefore, to a general presumption of validity. Haddonfield did not and does not contend that the presumption is irrebuttable. Haddonfield did and does acknowledge that the rights provided under the statute are limited by strong public policy against segregation and discrimination. Where an nonresident tuition program adversely affects that policy, it may be enjoined. Haddonfield believes the party seeking to enjoin a tuition program bears the burden of showing that the program undermines fundamental policy. Pennsauken disagrees and contends that there are no limits on the Commissioner's or the State Board's discretionary authority to prohibit a local school district from enrolling nonresident pupils. Pennsauken also suggests that Haddonfield's argument is based on selective quotation of relevant cases.

First, the concept of unfettered discretion is alien to the entire American legal system, a system of laws, not men, that has as its basic purpose protection of citizens from the caprice of the powerful. Second, Pennsauken's argument constitutes a novel view of the separation of powers that would permit a duly enacted statute to be suspended at the whim of an administrative agency. The Commissioner and the State Board are empowered to administer the education laws, but not to revise those laws. Third, neither the Commissioner nor the State Board have ever presumed to take upon themselves the unfettered powers Pennsauken claims they possess. In both of the leading cases involving challenges to nonresident tuition programs, Asbury Park Bd. of Ed. v. Bd. of Ed. of Shore Regional High School Dist., 1971 S.L.D. 221 (Aug. 20, 1971) and Englewood, above, great pains were taken to delineate the specific reasons justifying injunctions against the tuition programs. In Shore Regional, the Commissioner held

> The law in the instant matter is clear. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 permits the enrollment of nonresident pupils by any board of education. The Commissioner would find repugnant, however, any deliberate act by a parent or an accommodating board of education through spurious means to circumvent the positive attempts by the Commissioner and the courts to bring about meaningful racial integration in the public schools of this State in accordance with the law. 1971 S.L.D. 225, 226.

In Englewood the State Board characterized the law thus:

Although enacted to insure that the children of migrant laborers and other children temporarily residing in New Jersey would be entitled to an education while in our state, Statement accompanying S. 216, L. 1947, c. 138, the statute does not preclude a district board from adopting admission policies aimed at alleviating declining enrollment, as did Tenafly, or from admitting nonresident students under such policies.

However, the discretion afforded by N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 does not create an absolute right for districts boards to admit nonresident students on a tuition basis or otherwise. Nor can we identify any other source in law which would confer such right where admittance of students by a given district pursuant to the statute has contributed significantly to deterioration in the balance among racial and national origin groupings represented in the pupil population of another district.

As the State Board of Education has long recognized:

> N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3 imposes no mandatory course of action on any local board. It allows discretionary action by such a board in certain situations if a board is so inclined to act. We see no conflict between the principles of Booker and Jenkins as here involved and the provisions of the cited statute and even if there were, the educational goal and objectives underlying Booker and Jenkins would have to be given pramacy.

Shore Regional, supra, at 229.

We repeat that, as established by Booker and Jenkins, our State's policy against discrimination and segregation in the public schools is of such vigor and import as to match its policy in favor of a thorough and efficient education. Accordingly, where a question involving the exercise of discretion by a district board is brought before this agency, the Commissioner and the State Board of Education have both the power and the responsibility to limit the exercise of that discretion, and, where reasonable and feasible, to direct such remedy as necessary to effectuate our State's policy. Jenkins, supra, at 505; Booker, supra, at 178.

Furthermore, there is no question that the Commissioner and the State Board have the responsibility to counter trends towards withdrawal from the school community by members of the white majority. Booker, supra, at 180. Consequently, we must have the accompanying power to limit the exercise of discretion by district boards to the extent necessary to counter such withdrawal. 12 N.J.A.R. at 691-692.

The Commissioner and the State Board have only acted to restrict a district's operation of a nonresident student tuition program in those cases where the operation of that program adversely affected racial balance in another school district. It remains Pennsauken's burden to prove the existence of such adverse impact in this case

In its original and reply briefs, Pennsauken criticizes the Haddonfield nonresident tuition program for being promoted as a private school, for not being a private school, for advertising, and for being successful in attracting students. First, although each of these criticisms has some basis in the record, the criticisms are based on an extraordinarily willful reading of the record. Second, whatever the merit of the individual criticisms, they are irrelevant to this litigation. Pennsauken criticizes Haddonfield for holding itself out as offering an alternative to private school education. This simply criticizes Haddonfield for having earned a reputation for educational excellence. The validity of that reputation is self-evident. Pennsauken's own witness, Kaplan, testified that Haddonfield High School "should be given the highest possible academic grades" and that he would have liked his own children to have attended the school. T IX 3. It must be noted Kaplan testified that, although he performed a careful evaluation of the Haddonfield High School curriculum and educational program and that although one of his associate consultants evaluated the Pennsauken curriculum and academic program, he ultimately determined not to make such academic comparisons between the two schools. Id. at 3-6. Kaplan conceded that he was aware that the reported sending-receiving decisions gave significant weight to educational and academic factors, but he was less than forthcoming about his reasons for not addressing those issues in his report Id. at 6-12. Haddonfield urges that this otherwise inexplicable omission compels the inference that Kaplan did not make the academic comparison because it would be disadvantageous to Pennsauken.

Few public schools are so fortunately situated that they can compare themselves with private preparatory schools. Haddonfield is one of the fortunate few. It has achieved this status through the efforts of staff, students and, perhaps most importantly, the support of tax payers. Pennsauken's complaint that Haddonfield is not operating as a private school is far-fetched. It has never been suggested that Haddonfield is anything other than a public school operating under the Educational Law of New Jersey. Haddonfield concedes that, for marketing purposes, it has advertised its tuition program as an alternative to private schools. It has never sought to restrict nonresident applicants to those previously enrolled in private schools. The distinction is without meaning. The available pool of candidates for nonresident tuition payers are those students of the proper grade levels within reasonable travel distance of Haddonfield. Haddonfield is correct in believing that the families of the students enrolled in other public schools are not likely to consider Haddonfield in isolation, but only as one of a number of alternatives to their existing educational situations. The Haddonfield option is only one of a number available to interested parents. Most of the others are private institutions. In this sense, the Haddonfield program does act as an alternative to private schools.

Haddonfield is also criticized for advertising its nonresident tuition program and for having been successful in doing so. It is neither reasonable nor relevant to criticize Haddonfield for having developed a creative response to an extremely difficult situation. Haddonfield has pursued tuition students because declining enrollment among local residents has made it more difficult to maintain a full roster of educational offerings. It has required additional students to have the critical mass necessary to function as a comprehensive school system. Nonresident tuition students provide the additional benefit of bringing additional financial resources to the community which had paid and continues to pay a high price for educational excellence. Haddonfield could not successfully market its product unless it had something extraordinary to offer.

The Commissioner and the State Board have articulated only one reason for enjoining the operation of a nonresident tuition program: The adverse impact of that program on State goals of racial integration and balance. Therefore, only evidence relating to the impact of the tuition program on racial balance in another district should be considered relevant here.

Pennsauken has failed to sustain its burden of proof that the Haddonfield program adversely affected integration and racial balance at Pennsauken High School. Haddonfield's enrollment figures are of record. Pennsauken advances only one substantial criticism of the figures. Pennsauken has correctly pointed out that the table on page four of Haddonfield's brief contains a typographical error in indicating that only seven Merchantville pupils attended Pennsauken High School in 1990-91. The correct number, as evidenced by a variety of exhibits offered by the parties, is 70.

It is not necessary to belabor the numbers again, but it must be pointed out that Pennsauken has at no point disputed the fact that the Haddonfield tuition program has had no significant impact on Pennsauken's racial balance, whether that balance is measured in terms of absolute numbers or relative levels of black, Hispanic and white enrollment. Nor has Pennsauken established that the negligible effect of the Haddonfield program on Pennsauken's racial balance should be considered as having some special significance in the overall context of the situation. Pennsauken concedes as much in its reply brief. At page 57 of the reply brief, Pennsauken contends:

> The problem with the position taken by Haddonfield, and Merchantville for that matter, is that their arguments have relied strictly on a quantitative and statistical analysis.

One may reasonably ask, however, what method other than statistical analysis can shed useful light on the question of impact of the program on a statistical construct such as racial balance.

Haddonfield contends that Pennsauken offers a somewhat unusual answer. Pennsauken states that the statistical impact is irrelevant given the context of the sending-receiving litigation. The argument is without merit. There is nothing in any of the reported cases which suggest the possibility that a nonresident tuition program must automatically be terminated if a district sponsoring such a program is involved in sending-receiving litigation.

Finally, Pennsauken relies on assertion rather than evidence. It contends > the Haddonfield tuition program is acting as a conduit for Merchantville parents to pass over the legally designated high school which their children should attend and allows those children to attend a white academy while remaining in the public school system.

The phrase "white academy" raises the specter of a segregated system of private academies set up in much of the south in response to Supreme Court integration orders in the 1960's. Rhetoric is no substitute for evidence. The record simply contains nothing that shows the Haddonfield Board is, in either policy or practice, operating in a discriminatory manner. Indeed, an analysis of the racial mix of nonresident students enrolled in Haddonfield shows the interesting fact that the tuition program increases the proportion of minorities enrolled in the district. The program attracts a substantial number of black pupils from Lawnside, a primarily black community. One of the two Pennsauken pupils enrolled in the program, a high school senior, is black.

There is simply no evidence in the record to support the assertion that parents from Merchantville or anywhere else are attracted to Haddonfield because it offers a "white" environment. Finally, the statistical evidence does not indicate that the Haddonfield program serves as a mechanism for white flight. On the contrary, exhibit R-4 clearly shows that the great bulk of nonresident students come from communities which either have negligible minority populations or are racially stable. Pennsauken's own evidence does not support the conclusion that Pennsauken is or has been the victim of white flight. Exhibit RP-20 provides a racial-ethnic analysis of Pennsauken High School enrollment from 1981-1990. That exhibit, based upon annual September 30 enrollment reports, shows that there has been a significant decline in enrollment at Pennsauken High School from a total enrollment of 1,624 in 1981 to 1,279 in 1990, a decline of 21 percent. It is also true that the enrollment of white students has declined in the same period from 1,243 to 816, a decline of 34 percent. But, it should be noted that Haddonfield, which Pennsauken has characterized as "all white" and "segregated" as also experienced dramatic enrollment declines. There is simply no evidence of record to support the conclusion that the proportionately greater decline of white enrollment, relative to minority enrollment, in Pennsauken reflects anything more than national demographic trends. Indeed, RP-20 demonstrates that, although black enrollment has increased from 19 percent to 25 percent of the overall Pennsauken High School population, the actual numerical increase from 1981-90 was 11 pupils, or 3.5 percent. That is, it appears that the black birth rate in Pennsauken is consistent with the national trends, with significant declines occurring a few years later than similar declines in the white birth rate. In fact, significant growth in Pennsauken High School enrollment is found neither among whites nor blacks. The Hispanic enrollment has increased from 44 in 1981 to 105 in 1990, an increase of 61 students or 139 percent. A similarly dramatic increase has occurred among the Asian or Pacific Islander category.

Pennsauken insists that this is a racial impact case. But, it has offered no evidence to support that claim. The evidence in the record as offered by Pennsauken and the other parties establishes that statistically, race is irrelevant. Pennsauken's expert, Kaplan, however, made it clear why he and his client have emphasized the racial issue. As Kaplan conceded, although he was hired with a mandate to review all of the issues relevant to a sending-receiving dispute, he concluded in the course of his research that the only real issue in the case was racial impact. Yet, as argued at the outset of the case, Pennsauken has not focused on the racial issue because there exists evidence to support the position. Rather, it has focused on the racial issue because there is no evidence of adverse impact in any of the other areas made relevant by the applicable statutes and reported cases.

Haddonfield submits that its motion to dismiss Pennsauken's petition of appeal against the Haddonfield nonresident tuition program should be DISMISSED.

DECISION ON MOTION

Although the two cases decided today were heard together, the outcomes are independent. Should the decision to sever the Merchantville-Pennsauken sending-receiving relationship be adopted, the motion is mooted. If the decision is modified or reversed, the motion still must be addressed.

Initially, and following a thorough examination of the record, I FIND that Pennsauken has not adduced proofs sufficient to support its motion. As Haddonfield suggests, argument is not proof. However, given the nature of the question and the fact that it is policy sensitive, further examination is necessary.

As in Englewood, above, Haddonfield here used a tuition policy to alleviate the effects of its own declining enrollment. On its face, this is no abuse of N.J.A.C. 18A:38-3. Nevertheless, the State's policy with respect to segregation and imbalance in New Jersey's public schools is necessarily implicated. In Booker v. Bd. of Ed. of Plainfield, 45 N.J. 161 (1965) and Jenkins v. Tp. of Morris School Dist. and Bd. of Ed., 58 N.J. 483 (1971), the New Jersey Supreme Court found constitutionally-driven state policy against discrimination and segregation in the public schools. As did the ALJ in Englewood, I FIND that Haddonfield's intentions do not contravene the State's involvement.

Preliminarily, the numbers at work in Englewood, are not present in this case. Very few Merchantville pupils, in real numbers, and a minute percentage of Merchantville pupils attend Haddonfield High School on a tuition basis. Nor is the shift in enrollment composition at the designated receiving high school of comparable magnitude. It is conceded that there were discussions between Haddonfield and Merchantville. Unlike the Englewood situation, however, there is no evidence of Merchantville pupils flocking to Haddonfield.

The State Board, sensitive to the numbers of pupils of various backgrounds involved, found in Englewood that by precluding high school pupils from Englewood Cliffs from withdrawing from their assigned high school while remaining within the public school system, it would forestall further deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented in the public school population at Dwight Morrow High School, Englewood's High School. In the present case, although dealing with raw numbers of sending pupils greater than those in the Englewood case, the matrix in which those numbers are embedded is vastly different. Averbach's work , above, indicates a trend at Pennsauken High School that, in three to five years, will produce a "majority minority" high school. This trend appears irresistible with or without Merchantville pupils in Pennsauken High School. The removal of Merchantville pupils will not measurably accelerate change nor will the retention of Merchantville pupils measurably retard it.

Where an action cannot effectuate the State's policy, it makes no sense to take it. A court will not do, or require the doing of, a vain or useless thing; it will not use its powers to accomplish a useless purpose, nor will it grant a decree which does not confer a benefit, which is impractical as concerns enforcement, which is not enforceable, or which is ineffectual because compliance is impossible. The same maxim applies to administrative agencies.

I FIND that the effect of nonresident enrollments at Haddonfield High School is so remotely related to the enrollment composition of Pennsauken High School that an insufficient nexus exists to permit the action Pennsauken seeks. Accordingly, I GRANT Haddonfield's Motion to Dismiss the Cross Petition. It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF MERCHANTVILLE, PETITIONER, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PENNSAUKEN, RESPONDENT-CROSS PETITIONER, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF HADDONFIELD, CROSS-RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record and initial decision filed by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. By extension, Respondent Pennsauken (Pennsauken) filed timely exceptions pursuant to the applicable provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Respondent Haddonfield (Haddonfield) and Petitioner Merchantville (Merchantville) filed timely reply exceptions.

Pennsauken's lengthy exceptions are grouped into six categories. Each will be addressed seriatim.

Exception #1 claims the procedural history set forth by the ALJ at pages 2-4 of the initial decision omits several crucial facts critical to understanding the present litigation. Harkening back to the earlier failed attempt made by Merchantville to sever its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken, Pennsauken argues that the reconstructed initial decision from that matter established among other stipulations of fact, adopted by the Commissioner, that "[N]o inadequacy of building or program has been shown or even alleged." (emphasis in text) (Exceptions, at pp. 2-4, quoting Commissioner's decision 1982 S.L.D. 751, 755) Pennsauken queries whether everything has changed in just three years time, in that Merchantville alleged several inadequacies in the areas of facilities, curriculum and alleged overcrowded conditions.

In reply to Pennsauken's first exception, Merchantville charges that what Pennsauken demonstrates is not that the ALJ omitted crucial facts critical to understanding the present litigation, but that Pennsauken has no grasp of the legal theory advanced by Merchantville in the initial sending-receiving relationship controversy, and thus, cannot comprehend that which was written in those earlier decisions by the ALJ, Commissioner of Education and Appellate Division during the 1982 matter. Merchantville agrees with the ALJ that the earlier case, therefore, has no relevance here and was rightfully omitted by the ALJ. It claims that in the 1982 litigation, Merchantville alleged that the ten-year term of the sending-receiving contract with Pennsauken had expired, and thus, contractually, it had no further obligation to continue sending its students to Pennsauken. Merchantville concedes that the ALJ, Commissioner of Education and Appellate Division in that matter believed otherwise, however. It claims that in that case, the issue was one solely of contract and did not present arguments dealing with the negative impacts that might be visited upon Pennsauken if Merchantville were permitted to sever. Thus, Merchantville finds Pennsauken's exception in this regard to be without merit.

Exception #2 claims the ALJ erred in placing any reliance on the Merchantville feasibility study, because it and its primary author, Dr. Robert Savitt, lack any credibility and reliability and thus should be disregarded. Citing Dr. Savitt's deposition of October 5, 1989, Pennsauken avers Dr. Savitt admitted that he is not an expert in the component areas of the feasibility study, specifically in the areas of student evaluation, teacher evaluation and general educational facilities. Further, Pennsauken claims Dr. Savitt's feasibility study is strictly a numerical and quantitative analysis of the three schools at issue herein. Pennsauken argues there were no qualitative considerations in the report in any area he studied, and further that the report does not begin to approach the mandates of the sending-receiving statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, but instead merely counts courses, bodies, textbooks, etc.

Merchantville replies to Exception #2 by reciting Dr. Savitt's educational and professional experience, as well as the ALJ's conclusion finding him to be qualified as an expert, and claims that its expert is qualified pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.9(b). Further, Merchantville rebuts Pennsauken's attack on Dr. Savitt's feasibility study. It claims the feasibility study met the Commissioner's scrutiny in that he transmitted the matter for hearing and addressed each of the statutory elements, educational, financial and racial impacts, and that it contained documentary data on each such element, as well as an opinion regarding same. Thus, Merchantville avers, the feasibility study and Dr. Savitt's findings therein are admissible and should receive the Commissioner's consideration.

Exception #3 avers the ALJ erred in placing any reliance on Dr. Savitt's testimony and the Merchantville study. Pennsauken avers it has established through its witnesses and evidence that the Merchantville withdrawal from Pennsauken High School would have a substantial negative impact educationally and racially. The thrust of this exception considers, inter alia, the evidence adduced from Pennsauken's witnesses regarding educational quality at Pennsauken High School and whether there is racial harmony at Pennsauken High School, which the Commissioner will not recite herein. Pennsauken notes that the Director of Guidance, Ms. Carol Vita, testified the articulation between Pennsauken and Merchantville consists of one meeting per year and perhaps some telephone follow-up. Pennsauken indicates that such testimony speaks only to her experience with articulation, and does not represent a description of the entire articulation between Pennsauken and Merchantville, which in Exception #2, Pennsauken suggests, is nearly nonexistent.

Objecting to the ALJ's reliance on a draft of the feasibility study of Pennsauken's primary expert, Dr. Lawrence Kaplan, instead of relying on his final report, both of which dealt with racial impact, for such matters as whether Pennsauken High School is overcrowded, Pennsauken stresses that specific language from the draft which the ALJ summarized, is absent from the final report and thus should not have been referred to by the ALJ.

In further rebuttal to the alleged space problem at Pennsauken, Pennsauken indicates in exceptions that its head of guidance testified that contrary to the ALJ's comment that there are no separate time-out rooms for disruptive special education students at Pennsauken High School, the concept of time-out space is used at Pennsauken, but that such space is provided in the classroom itself instead of in a separate room.

Thereafter, Pennsauken's third exception addresses the ALJ's disregarding of the "qualitative" testimony (Exceptions, at p. 95) offered by its expert on symbolic and secondary loss, Dr. Michelle Fine, which evidence, Pennsauken claims, must exist if the State were to grant severance. Pennsauken objects to the ALJ's stating that Dr. Fine's report did not deal with actual impact, but rather deals "mainly in perceptions." (Initial Decision, at p. 39) Pennsauken notes its objection to the ALJ's conclusion in response to Pennsauken's argument that the position of Haddonfield and Merchantville was strictly a quantitative and statistical analysis (Initial Decision, at p. 76) Rather, Pennsauken would have the Commissioner consider and accept Dr. Fine's report on symbolic loss.

Pennsauken also excepts to the ALJ's criticisms of Dr. Craig Richards' reports. Dr. Richards was Pennsauken's statistics expert. Reiterating that the ALJ qualified Dr. Richards as an expert, Pennsauken suggests that the central conclusions reached by Dr. Richards were indisputable, which are recited in the exceptions taken from p. 16 of his study, (RP-28):

> 1. Haddonfield and Merchantville high school students are more than ninety five percent white.
>
> 2. From 1991-1995 minority representation at Pennsauken High School will increase approximately fifty four percent based on a five year enrollment forecast.
>
> 3. In 1991, minority students will represent about thirty nine percent of Pennsauken High School students; by 1995 about fifty percent. (This conclusion is also supported by Dr. [Emanuel] Averbach.)

4. The withdrawal of Merchantville students from Pennsauken High School will result in a withdrawal of about fourteen percent of the white students forecasted to attend in 1995.
(Exceptions, at p. 97)

Pennsauken claims in exceptions that both demographers, Drs. Richards and Averbach, have opined that in the near future, Pennsauken High School will become a minority school, and the loss of the predominately white Merchantville students will only serve to exacerbate this phenomenon. It further argues that Dr. Richards concluded at pp. 16 and 17 of RP-28 that the withdrawal of the Merchantville students would have a slightly negative impact on racial integration in Pennsauken High School since about 15% of all the white students forecasted to be attending Pennsauken High School in 1995 would be withdrawn. It relies on RP-20, the demographic analysis of Pennsauken High School enrollment from 1981-90 as reflecting the trend discussed in Dr. Richards' report. Pennsauken suggests that while the total enrollment at the high school has decreased during the time from 1981-90, the percentage of minorities has dramatically increased to the point of representing 36% of the student body for the 1990 school year.

In reply, Merchantville suggests that in light of the flaws the ALJ noted throughout the initial decision in Dr. Richards' studies, Richards' central conclusions cannot be disputed when the premises upon which those conclusions are based are invalid or faulty. As to Richards' four conclusions, Merchantville argues that

> The first three, which deal with minority enrollments, present and projected, cannot have a cause-effect relationship with the proposed severance inasmuch as the withdrawal, as has been established by Averbach, will result in a decline in Pennsauken High School minority population of "less than one-half of one percent per year," and "that's a smaller figure than we can normally measure in this field." [ID 53]
> (Reply Exceptions, at p. 28)

Regarding Richards' fourth conclusion, Merchantville contends it is premised on a flawed projection using as a starting point 78 Merchantville students attending Pennsauken in 1991-92. That starting point was incorrect, it claims, noting that the correct number is 69 Merchantville students, citing TR. XXII 10, P-35, Table D. (Reply Exceptions, at p. 29) Thus, Merchantville avers, there is a 12% error built into Richards' projections. Consequently, Merchantville submits > when Pennsauken argues the withdrawal "would have a significant negative impact on racial integration of Pennsauken High School since about fifteen percent of all the white students forecasted to be attending Pennsauken High School in 1995 would be withdrawn" [PE* 100], it is wrong on two counts. The percentage of white students was erroneously calculated, having a built-in 12% error from the outset, and the total withdrawal in 1995 is not now realistic. (Reply Exceptions, at p. 29)

Exception #4 charges that the ALJ erred in placing any reliance on Merchantville's rebuttal, first by excepting to the ALJ's declaring Dr. Adam Scrupski, a social scientist from Rutgers University and a Merchantville witness, as an educational expert on sociology of education. Merchantville's reply exceptions capture the main objections Pennsauken cites on Dr. Scrupski's serving as an expert witness:

> Pennsauken claims Scrupski is without expertise, his testimony was superficial and he was not credible [PE 106]. He also, according to Pennsauken, made elitist statements [PE 109], was guilty of editorializing [PE 110], and was disingenuous [PE 113]. It is also claimed he is an outlandish speculator [PE 115], and perhaps worst of all, Scrupski was "guilty of injecting his own words while concurrently attributing

*PE - Pennsauken Exceptions

phrases to Merchantville student respondents" [PE 116]. (Reply exceptions, at pp. 29-30)

Pennsauken asks that the Commissioner disregard Dr. Scrupski's testimony and report (Exhibit P-29).

Merchantville rebuts that Pennsauken's "unsubstantiated ramblings" warrant nothing by way of response. (Reply Exceptions, at p. 30)

Pennsauken also excepts to the testimony of Merchantville's demographer, Dr. Emanuel Averbach, as an expert because he made no qualitative estimate of the impact of Merchantville's withdrawal in terms of the educational climate at Pennsauken High School. Pennsauken finds his testimony not credible and superficial, that his report lacked depth and that his conclusions were "groundless and without foundation." (Exceptions, at p. 123)

Pennsauken claims Averbach made no qualitative estimate of the impact of Merchantville's withdrawal in terms of the educational climate at Pennsauken and also that he testified that the loss of Merchantville students from Pennsauken High School would be a non-recurring loss by Pennsauken. Yet, Pennsauken claims, Dr. Averbach admitted that the pool of students graduating from the Merchantville elementary school year after year would be lost by Pennsauken, which Pennsauken claims is a recurring loss, citing TR. XXII 24.

Pennsauken further argues that Dr. Averbach made no findings in his January 2, 1990 report or in his May 2, 1991 report relative to birth rates and minority trends in the Merchantville elementary schools, nor did he make any calculations relative to the net in-migration or out-migration relative to Merchantville's population. Further, Pennsauken states Dr. Averbach's only calculations in such two reports relative to Merchantville was Table E of, P-34, setting forth the school population from 1985-90. (Exceptions, at p. 124) Pennsauken criticizes Averbach's conclusion of his May 2, 1991 report, therefore, that the withdrawal of Merchantville High School students from Pennsauken High School would not significantly impact on the school's racial/ethnic in-migration. Further, Pennsauken finds Averbach's September 14, 1991 report (P-35) shallow (Exceptions, at p. 126) because despite drawing the conclusion that substantial numbers of Merchantville pupils who could have been expected to attend Pennsauken High School in the past, are opting not to (id., quoting TR. XXII 61), Averbach could not provide any explanation for why or how this phenomenon has developed.

In reply, Merchantville cites Dr. Averbach's credentials and then cites the ALJ's conclusion regarding Dr. Averbach's Exhibit P-32, the chart found on page 66 of the initial decision, as dispositive of this exception. Merchantville claims the conclusion of the ALJ that there would be no substantial negative racial impact made in reliance on Averbach's chart is fully supported by the record.

Exception #5 avers the ALJ erred in reaching his findings of fact, in particular regarding his conclusions that Merchantville established a prima facie case in not applying the correct burden of proof standard and in not comprehending the New Jersey and U.S. Supreme Court precedents dealing with integration of public schools. Pennsauken cites its earlier exceptions for its contention that Merchantville has failed to establish a prima facie case.

Noting the State Board decision in this case dealing with the burden of proof, Pennsauken argues that Merchantville has failed to meet its burden of proof because it has failed to establish any of the following allegations:

1. Pennsauken High School is presently overcrowded;

2. Haddonfield High School represents a more compatible secondary school experience than does Pennsauken High School for children coming from the type of educational program provided by Merchantville Elementary School;

3. The Merchantville Board of Education seeks a more academic oriented program for its students.

4. Class sizes generally are larger at Pennsauken High School than they are at Haddonfield High School.

5. The pupil-teacher ratio at Pennsauken High School is higher than it is at Haddonfield High School.

   (See paragraph 9(a), (e), (f), (g) & (h) of Merchantville petition dated June 30, 1988 designated as trial exhibit P-2)

6. The change in high school designation will have no substantial negative impact on the educational program of the districts affected. (Paragraph 10 of P-2)

7. The change in high school designation will have no substantial negative impact on the racial balance of the affected districts. (Paragraph 11 of P-2) (Exceptions, at p. 128)

Rather, Pennsauken avers it has refuted each alleged reason for Merchantville's seeking to sever its sending-receiving relationship. Thus, Pennsauken says Merchantville's petition must be denied.

Assuming arguendo that Merchantville has met its initial burden of production pursuant to the State Board's interlocutory ruling of September 5, 1990, Pennsauken contends it established, at a minimum, that there would exist "some" negative impact, which it claims the State Board has decided compels the Commissioner to determine whether the "positives" of termination are outweighed by the negatives based on an equitable determination of all the circumstances. (Exceptions, at p. 130, quoting State Board, at p. 5) It is Pennsauken's position that no credible relevant testimony in the entirety of the record can be found to establish any positives, and it claims the ALJ is silent on the issue. It cites those arguments already mentioned in its exceptions in support of this contention. It further claims it has established the substantial negative impact both educationally and racially that would result in the termination of its sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville, noting that it believes such negative impact will not be limited to Pennsauken High School and community but also will impact on the Merchantville students and community by preventing them from attending a richly diverse and comprehensive high school such as Pennsauken's.

In its fifth exception, Pennsauken also reasserts an argument raised in its earlier brief, that the ALJ has conducted a purely numerical and quantitative examination relative to impact, which alleges that the ALJ did not comprehend the holding of the Supreme Court of the United States and of New Jersey in Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, 347 U.S. 483 (1954) and Booker v. Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, 45 N.J. 161 (1965). Pennsauken restates its belief that such cases have defined education and educational impact in far more expansive and qualitative terms than the simplistic course-counting approach undertaken by Dr. Savitt and accepted by the ALJ. (Exceptions, at

p. 133) It claims that if the Commissioner were to accept Dr. Savitt's position, which the ALJ adopted, i.e., that severance would aid all concerned because Pennsauken's alleged overcrowding would be alleviated and would help Haddonfield's declining enrollment, such acceptance would undermine 40 years of progress in constitutional and public school integration law. Pennsauken adds that the ALJ's reliance on Cranbury Township Board of Education v. Lawrence Township Board of Education, decided by the Commissioner September 30, 1985, aff'd State Board April 1, 1987 is misplaced in this matter because that case did not have a racial component because both school districts were predominantly white. Pennsauken states the the ALJ's reliance on Cranbury runs afoul of the decisions of the Commissioner, State Board and Appellate Courts commanding that qualitative impact be addressed.

Relying on the State Board decision in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, supra, Pennsauken posits that the State of New Jersey cannot sanction the disruption of the current sending-receiving relationship between it and Merchantville given the following:

A. The subject students have been educated together for over 75 years; and

B. The social fabric of the communities involved are, and have been throughout their history, substantially intertwined; and

C. The Pennsauken High School is now an institution undergoing a rapid transition wherein there is a significant minority population which will increase shortly to majority status; and

D. The number of white students sought to be withdrawn represents a substantial percentage of the white student population now attending Pennsauken High School; and

E. As the students and faculty who have testified, by stipulation, as representative of the entire student body and faculty population, there would be a substantial impact on the quality of the educational experience at Pennsauken High School should this withdrawal be permitted; and

F. As testified to by the credible expert witnesses involved, the resulting stigma attached to the high school, should the state sanction withdrawal, would have a substantial negative impact for the same reasons expressed at all levels of consideration in the matter of the Board of Education of Englewood Cliffs v. Board of Education of Englewood v. Board of Education of Tenafly wherein the State Board of Education in its decision dated April 4, 1990 upheld the decision of the administrative law judge and the Commissioner. It is important to note that the State Board of Education reached its decision based on its application of much of the case law recited here; however, both the administrative law judge and the Commissioner studiously considered the expert testimony and reports relative to the negative and symbolic impact on the students affected.

G. The Borough of Merchantville has advanced no educational benefit to be derived from the proposed withdrawal.

H. Though it is not necessary to resolve this matter in favor of the Respondent, we are left with the inescapeable (sic) conclusion that Merchantville's motivation is to resegregate its student population in an all white high school atmosphere.

(Exceptions, at pp. 147-8)

Merchantville's reply to Exception #5 claims its two post-hearing briefs exhaustively document that it has established a prima facie case. It incorporates such brief in its reply exceptions. As to the burden of proof argument raised by Pennsauken, Merchantville too relies on the State Board interlocutory decision in Merchantville, supra, for the proposition that a balancing test has been struck by the State Board in sending-receiving cases. However, Merchantville suggests that Pennsauken has not met the State Board requirement of demonstrating "some" negative impact as it claimed in its exceptions, but rather has made only a de minimis showing of negative impact, and thus fails to meet the condition precedent required by the State Board's interlocutory decision before the balancing test is triggered. (State Board Decision, at p. 5)

Finally, in regard to this exception, Merchantville replies that Pennsauken loses sight of the issue before the ALJ, and contends Pennsauken was litigating the wrong issue. Merchantville suggests this is not a public school segregation case and thus does not address the racial issues of Brown, supra, Jenkins, supra, and Booker, supra, and cites the initial decision with accord as found at pages 77-78 as being dispositive of Pennsauken's Exception #5 in this regard.

Moreover, Merchantville suggests that because Pennsauken's exceptions make no reference to the ALJ's findings regarding financial impact, Pennsauken has conceded there will be no substantial financial negative impact should severance be granted. As to educational impact, the de minimis loss in tuition revenues will not, in Merchantville's opinion, be the cause for abolishing any educational programs at Pennsauken. Neither it contends, can the loss of the few Merchantville students, substantially or negatively, impact on the scheduling of students at Pennsauken High School or on the curriculum. Neither, it avers, will the loss result in reduction in staff or elimination of any program. Finally, Merchantville submits that despite arguing that this is a racial impact case, Pennsauken offered no evidence to support its claim. In so stating, Merchantville notes Dr. Averbach's figure that the loss of white enrollment at Pennsauken High School will be .425% per year and the total reduction in the white enrollment over the entire phase-out will be 1.7%, which is not normally measurable and thus is de minimis. (See Reply Exceptions, at p. 36.) Accordingly, Merchantville seeks affirmance of the initial decision.

Pennsauken's sixth exception addresses the cross-petition it filed against Haddonfield and avers the ALJ erred in his decision to deny such cross-petition, alleging such determination is directly contrary to the State Board's ruling in Englewood and other controlling precedents for this matter. It relies on its post-hearing reply brief in support of this contention. Pennsauken also notes its disagreement with the ALJ's summation of the Pennsauken position regarding the discretionary authority afforded the Commissioner or State Board to prohibit a local school from enrolling non-resident pupils. Pennsauken contends it simply argued that it was unaware of any case law limiting the Commissioner's authority to enjoin private tuition programs to the specific and limited instances described by Haddonfield in its January 16, 1992 brief.

Further, Pennsauken notes that the State Board decision in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs suggests that when addressing impact, both racial and educational, statistics may not be relied upon solely. Pennsauken finds the ALJ's simplistic approach, whereby he merely counted textbooks, courses, dollars and cents, and white and black faces is "fallacious and farcical." (Exceptions, at p. 154) Pennsauken urges that the Commissioner cannot permit a predominantly white sending district to leave a fully integrated high school and have its students attend an all white high school. Such a scenario, Pennsauken avers, would lead to the specter of resegregation by allowing more whites to be added to the all white Haddonfield High School at the expense of the fully integrated and diverse Pennsauken High School. The Commissioner is urged by Pennsauken in exceptions to reverse the initial decision and to disallow severance of its sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville.

Merchantville submitted no reply exceptions to Pennsauken's sixth exception, but urges the Commissioner to affirm the initial decision and permit the severance of the sending-receiving relationship between Pennsauken and Merchantville.

Haddonfield did submit reply exceptions to Pennsauken's Exception #6, noting its accord with the ALJ's determination that the Haddonfield private tuition policy does not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3, and stating that such decision does not contravene the State's interest in preventing segregation and racial imbalance in New Jersey's public schools. Haddonfield contends the actual tuition enrollment figures at Haddonfield High School demonstrate that the tuition program does not adversely affect racial balance at Pennsauken High School. It finds that contrary to Pennsauken's position, the Englewood/Englewood Cliffs decision makes it clear that neither that decision nor any other holds that there is an absolute bar as a matter of law to the operation of a tuition program. Rather, Haddonfield claims the reported cases permit the enjoining of tuition programs only in those instances in which the facts demonstrate that the tuition program causes an adverse impact on racial balance in another district. It further claims that injunctive relief, such as that sought by Pennsauken, must be justified on the facts, and that this case does not warrant such relief.

More specifically, Haddonfield charges that Pennsauken fails to grasp the distinction that this matter lacks the shift in enrollment composition of high-school-aged students which was the focus of the analysis in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs. It notes that in that case, the number of Englewood Cliffs students attending the private tuition program at Tenafly grew from 11 in 1982 to 76 in 1987-88. Haddonfield observes that the ALJ correctly noted that no such shift has occurred in this case.

Haddonfield claims the operation of the Haddonfield private tuition program has not experienced a growing number of Merchantville students electing to participate in it to the point where anywhere near a majority of Merchantville high-school-aged students attend Haddonfield rather than their designated high school, Pennsauken. Haddonfield thus claims that its tuition program does not in any but the most de minimis way impact upon the student population at Pennsauken High School.

Haddonfield claims too that Pennsauken has failed to uncover any cases in which the Commissioner has enjoined a private tuition program in the absence of adverse racial impact on another district because there are none. It also claims that Pennsauken has failed to show that the Haddonfield private tuition program operates "to the detriment of its neighboring public school districts." (Haddonfield Reply Exceptions, at p. 4, quoting Exceptions, at p. 152) To this, Haddonfield refers to the initial decision and agrees with the ALJ at p. 78 wherein he stated, "Pennsauken 'has focused on the racial issue because there is no evidence of adverse impact in any of the other areas made relevant by the applicable statutes and reported cases.'"

Finally, Haddonfield submits there exists no legal basis for enjoining a private tuition program because of unarticulated "detriment" (Reply Exceptions, at p. 4, quoting Exceptions, at p. 152) to neighboring school districts. Nor does there exist a statutory scheme by which one public school district is entitled to all of the high-school-aged students within its geographic bounds, Haddonfield avers. It argues that inasmuch as parents have the final option to determine where their children attend high school on a tuition basis should they choose not to attend the public high school designated for their district, Pennsauken's claim that Haddonfield has "robbed" its neighboring school district of their pupils is misplaced and irrelevant to this instant litigation. (Reply Exceptions, at p. 4)

Accordingly, Haddonfield seeks affirmance of the ALJ's conclusion regarding the cross-petition on the tuition policy in Haddonfield.

COMMISSIONER'S DETERMINATION

Upon a careful and independent review of this matter and mindful of the allocation of proofs for a sending-receiving severance application as set forth in the State Board's Interlocutory Decision rendered on September 5, 1990, the Commissioner affirms in part and rejects in part the initial decision in this matter rendered by the Office of Administrative Law on May 1, 1992.

Toward the orderly disposition of the voluminous exceptions filed in this matter, procedural claims will be addressed first.

Regarding the feasibility study submitted by Dr. Savitt for Merchantville and his having been qualified as an expert, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's conclusion that the feasibility study meets and exceeds the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 and that Dr. Savitt is fully qualified to testify in this proceeding as an expert. There exists no obligation that he be qualified to respond in areas such as student or teacher evaluation. See, N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.9(b). Thus, for the reasons expressed by the ALJ at Tr. II 13-14 in his ruling regarding the qualifications of Dr. Savitt to testify as an expert for Merchantville, the Commissioner concurs that Pennsauken's motion be denied. As noted by the ALJ, however, the testimony rendered by Dr. Savitt is subject to weighing by the trier of fact, including Dr. Savitt's testimony of those observations made by and recorded in Merchantville's feasibility study made by his colleague Dr. McGuigan.

In conducting a review of Dr. Savitt's testimony, the Commissioner notes Pennsauken's strong objection to the conclusion of the ALJ, drawn from Dr. Savitt's feasibility study (P-13) and testimony that the racial impact component of this matter represents solely a quantitative, not qualitative, investigation. The Commissioner's review of the record comports with the ALJ's conclusion that in many aspects, particularly relating to racial and financial impact, "a statistical analysis can shed useful light on the question of impact of the program on a statistical construct such as racial balance." (Initial Decision, at p. 76) However, the Appellate Court in Englewood/ Englewood Cliffs, decided June 15, 1992, A-4912-89T5, A-6384-90T5, A-6385-90T5 (consolidated) grants credence to such quantitative elements of severance as symbolic loss (students' beliefs and feelings on matters of race relations) only to the extent that the State Board allowed that "educational considerations" take into account "fundamental educational principles applicable in all educational settings as those principles have been expressed in the decisions of the United States and New Jersey Supreme Courts." (State Board Decision, April 4, 1990, at p. 37) The State Board cited its own Statement of Educational Policy, November 5, 1969 in support of this proposition, emphasizing the policy's content, stressing that racial imbalance not symbolic loss stands as a "deterrent and handicap to the improvement of education for all." The policy statement suggested that racial imbalance serves as the basis for determining at what point racial impact becomes substantial and negative. The Commissioner in this matter thus looks to such guidance as provided by the Appellate Division and State Board as set forth in the 1969 Statement of Educational Policy in assessing the racial and educational impact in this matter, and thus only broadly incorporates the testimony and reports educed at hearing regarding such "qualitative" arguments as those suggested by Dr. Michelle Fine, Pennsauken's expert on symbolic loss, and Dr. Adam F. Scrupski, Merchantville's expert in sociology of education regarding symbolic loss. Instead, he relies on that language of the State Board policy statement of November 5, 1969 wherein it is stated:

> Educational considerations are primary in eliminating school segregation. The elimination of racial imbalance is not to be sought as an end in itself but because such imbalance stands as a > deterrent and handicap to the improvement of education for all.

> (Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, supra, State Board, at pp. 36-37 quoting New Jersey State Board of Education, A Statement of Educational Policy, November 5, 1969)

Further, regarding Merchantville's citing the earlier Merchantville case, which sought severance from the Pennsauken-Merchantville relationship in 1982, the Commissioner finds and determines that the current case will be adjudged on the merits of the proofs submitted under the standard of review extant now in sending-receiving relationship severance cases, as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13. The earlier matter, to which Pennsauken alludes by questioning whether circumstances at Pennsauken High School could have changed radically in the three years since that matter was decided by the Appellate Division, was not reviewed under the criteria of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13. Rather, the Commissioner, State Board and Appellate Division in that case disallowed severance based on a contract claim made by Merchantville that once the term of its previous sending-receiving contact expired, the relationship ended. The review of that matter in no way touched upon the standards of review presently before the Commissioner in this matter, and thus finds those contentions raised by Pennsauken in its exceptions regarding the earlier case to be without merit.

Last, in regard to the procedural predicates to this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the finding and conclusion of the ALJ as stated at page 56 of the initial decision, at Tr. IV 42-43 and for the reasons proffered by Merchantville at Tr. IV 25-31 that Merchantville has established a prima facie case of why severance should be allowed in this matter.

With such procedural matters resolved, the Commissioner now advances to the merits of the matter at hand and the burden of proofs established in such cases as stated by the State Board, in its Interlocutory Decision of September 1990.

First, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's findings and conclusions regarding the absence of significant negative financial impact on either of the districts concerned in this matter for the reasons stated in the initial decision at pp. 56-61. See also Tr. IV 2-16. Pennsauken so much as concurs in this conclusion by addressing no exceptions on the question of significant negative financial impact. The Commissioner so finds.

Similarly, the Commissioner is persuaded that no significant negative educational impact would flow from severance of this sending-receiving relationship substantially for those reasons set forth in the initial decision. The Commissioner agrees that contrary to the position of Merchantville, overcrowding will not be a problem, if it did exist at all, at Pennsauken after September 1992 due to the two additions constructed in the high school. See Tr. IX 7-9, 11-14, Tr. XII 2-5, 14 and 80-81. From such testimony the Commissioner concludes that the two additions, including 13 standard classrooms, with associated laboratory facilities and storage areas, six small group instruction spaces, a multi-purpose room, four office areas in the first wing and in the second two large classrooms for automotive and construction technology programs, with associated lab facilities and an associated classroom for instruction will increase functional space capacity to 1,862 students (Tr. XI 8-12) thus negating Merchantville's arguments regarding overcrowding.

Further, the Commissioner is persuaded by the testimony of the principal, Mr. John Ritchie, that articulation of curriculum between the two districts has not manifested itself as a problem, with one exception voiced by a Board member of Merchantville, which was promptly addressed by the principal. (See Tr. XII 81-82.) Neither is it seriously argued that curriculum offerings would be adversely affected by the withdrawal of the Merchantville students. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed in the initial decision, as amplified here, the Commissioner finds and determines that no substantial negative impact will flow from severance of the Pennsauken-Merchantville sending-receiving relationship.

Thus, this matter reduces to a question of whether there would exist substantial negative racial impact, considering all of the circumstances of this case, were the Commissioner to grant severance. In this regard, the Commissioner rejects the ALJ's conclusion that no such negative impact will result, and finds, instead, that he cannot permit severance of the relationship under the circumstances of this case due to the substantial negative racial impact that would befall Pennsauken High School were such severance permitted.

As noted above, and in keeping with the Appellate Division's decision in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, supra, the Commissioner's consideration of the racial aspects of this case is not strictly limited to a quantitative review, but looks also to such considerations as 1) what effect the reduction in white population at Pennsauken will have; 2) whether the concentration of minorities at Pennsauken would remain in the wake of severance; 3) the demographics of the communities' minorities populations, both current and projected; and 4) whether the prospective new receiver, Haddonfield, attempts through its tuition policy to lure a disproportionate number of white students from Merchantville away from Pennsauken High School.

In conducting such an exhaustive review of the record developed in this aspect of the case, the Commissioner, like the ALJ, is persuaded that the statistics relative to racial balance developed by Dr. Averbach are altogether more reliable and indicative of the conditions extant in these communities and at Pennsauken High School now and through 1995, the timeline established for the phase out, than those presented by Pennsauken's demographer, Dr. Richards. P-32 is accepted as an accurate assessment of enrollment through 1995 at Pennsauken High School, both with Merchantville students attending, that is, if severance is denied, and without them, that is, if severance is granted. For clarity of discussion, said chart is duplicated herein:

	NUMBERS		%
Year	White	Minority	White	Minority
1992 total	757	547	58.0	41.9
Minus Merchantville	64	9
Without Merchantville	693	538	56.3	43.7
1993 total	777	597	56.6	43.4
Minus Merchantville	71	14
Without Merchantville	706	583	54.8	45.2
1994 total	770	686	52.9	47.1
Minus Merchantville	60	15
Without Merchantville	710	671	51.4	48.6
1995 total	758	767	49.7	50.3
Minus Merchantville	70	23
Without Merchantville	688	744	48.0	52.0

As noted by the ALJ, Averbach's chart demonstrates that by 1995 Merchantville's 70 non-minority students will represent a 1.7% loss of white enrollment at Pennsauken High School, in a total population of 1,525 students with Merchantville students included, 1,432 without them.

Initially, the Commissioner recognizes that while 1.7% may not be statistically significant, it is significant from an educational standpoint. The Court in Booker, supra, at 170-174 has vested the Commissioner with the power to confront and eradicate racial segregation and discrimination in the public schools of New Jersey. It is the Commissioner's august duty to ensure that no school district in New Jersey's public domain permit the acceleration of racial imbalance thorough elimination of non-minority populations under any circumstances and certainly not in the guise of bettering another district's balance. Neither will he tolerate de facto segregation in any form for want of a "statistically significant" number ratio. Such action would represent an abdication of our "long standing" and "vigorous" state policy condemning segregation. (Booker, 45 N.J. at 173)

It is apparent from a careful review of the Averbach chart that Merchantville's non-minority population at Pennsauken High School in 1995, were severance denied, equals 9.23% of the total population. The Commissioner is compelled to find that in light of the State's repugnance of school segregation, to remove such 9.23% non-minority students in fact does represent a significant negative impact that would result in advancing the deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented in this high school community, in direct contravention to the admonition expressed in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, supra, Brown, supra, Booker, supra, and Morean, supra. In this regard, the 1.7% loss of non-minority population from Pennsauken represents a greater percentage loss than the 1.6% non-minority loss at issue in the Englewood/Englewood Cliffs matter. It is the Commissioner's heartfelt conviction that he is obligated to forestall the erosion of cultural and educational mingling that such severance would discourage and to encourage "the angle of repose," that is, the racial stability, that exists in the relationship now. See Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, supra, Appellate Division, at p. 53, 61 and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13. See also, Booker, supra, and Brown, supra, as quoted at page 40 of Englewood/Englewood Cliffs Appellate Division decision and Morean v. Montclair Bd. of Ed., 42 N.J. 237 (1964) as cited at page 62 of Englewood/Englewood Cliffs.

In so finding, the Commissioner rejects that argument posed by petitioner in this matter that permitting the severance would help balance Haddonfield's racial composition better and provide Haddonfield financial relief in the face of declining enrollment for the same reasons that the Englewood court rejected Cliffs' argument that the positive impacts it suggested to granting severance outweighed the negative impacts on Englewood and its Dwight Morrow High School. As noted by the court, the standards articulated in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 do not represent a balancing test. Where a single substantial negative impact is found among the three articulated, that is, racial, financial and educational, for any district involved, severance must be disallowed. Having now found that substantial negative impact would visit Pennsauken were the severance allowed, no argument may be raised to ameliorate such finding by contrasting alleged positive impacts to Haddonfield or Merchantville. See Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, Appellate Divison, at pp. 57, 59, 62.

As noted above, neither will the Commissioner countenance withdrawal of a non-minority population couched as an attempt to ameliorate conditions in another district. By such contention is de facto segregation perpetuated.

COUNTER CLAIM

Pennsauken's Cross-Petition alleges Haddonfield's private tuition policy runs afoul of the law and undermines attempts at racial integration, which policy should be disallowed.

The statistics available from the record are these. In 1981 Haddonfield accepted fewer than 15 tuition students at all grade levels. In the 1991-92 school year, Haddonfield received 83 tuition students throughout its district, 45 of whom were at the high school. Of the 45, 11 hailed from Merchantville, which represented the largest single outside community population. Two were Pennsauken pupils, one of whom was at Haddonfield High School. Haddonfield currently has 550 students at its high school. The 11 students from Merchantville are all non-minority. The record does not include data on the pool of students residing in Merchantville who attend schools other than Pennsauken High School in the commuting area, including private, parochial and public. A similar pool of data was part of the record in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs. Neither did the feasibility study prepared by Haddonfield concerning acceptance of Merchantville students address racial impact on either district. Like the ALJ below, the Commissioner finds that Pennsauken has not adduced proofs sufficient to support its motion to enjoin the Haddonfield Board of Education's private non-resident tuition program.

Once again, the Englewood/Englewood Cliffs matter addresses tuition programs at public schools in New Jersey made in reliance upon N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3, which provides:

> Any person not resident in a school district, if eligible except for residence, may be admitted to the schools of the district with the consent of the board of education upon such terms, and with or without payment of tuition, as the board may prescribe.

The State Board in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs stated at page 40 of its decision:

> the statute does not preclude a district board from adopting admission policies aimed at alleviating declining enrollment  or from admitting nonresident students under such policies.

The Appellate Court in Englewood/Englewood Cliffs, in reviewing the injunction in place precluding all boards of education from accepting any Cliffs' students, regardless of race, noted that "the standard to be applied is a rational basis standard which requires only that there be some reasonable connection between a legitimate state interest and the action taken." (citations omitted) (Englewood/ Englewood Cliffs, at p. 68)

However, under the facts available in this matter, the Commissioner finds no basis at this juncture to prescribe Haddonfield's accepting tuition students, be they from Pennsauken, Merchantville or other communities. While the Haddonfield Board actively seeks tuition-paying students as an alternative to private schooling, the evidence in the record does not demonstrate the same trends in advancing white flight or limiting the broadest diversity possible as was evident in the Englewood/Englewood Cliffs matter. Neither is there present herein the suggestion or any proofs whatsoever that Haddonfield enticed Merchantville's top student achievers from Pennsauken. Nor is it claimed that Merchantville encouraged and facilitated enrollment in Haddonfield as occurred in the Englewood/Englewood Cliffs matter. (See Englewood/Englewood Cliffs Appellate Division decision, at p. 74) Accordingly, the Commissioner finds no grounds for limiting Haddonfield's tuition policies at this juncture. It bears stating that should another district, including Pennsauken or Merchantville, believe in the future that it can demonstrate that white flight, racial imbalance, or de facto segregation exists as a result of Haddonfield's tuition program, under the standards articulated herein and in the Englewood/ Englewood Cliffs case, the Commissioner would certainly consider the motion anew.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed herein, the Commissioner affirms in part and reverses in part the initial decision. He finds no substantial negative financial or educational impact but does find substantial negative racial impact and thus denies Merchantville's request for severance of its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. In so concluding, however, he denies Pennsauken's motion to enjoin Haddonfield's private tuition program.

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Kalac, Newman, Lavendar & Campbell (Peter B. Kalac, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Respondent-Cross/Petitioner-Cross/Appellant, Hill Wallack (Joseph J. Finley, Esq., of Counsel)

For the Cross/Respondent-Respondent, Kenney, Kenney, Gross & McDonough (Malachi J. Kenney, Esq., of Counsel)

This case was initiated on July 6, 1988, when the Merchantville Board of Education petitioned the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, seeking to terminate its sending receiving relationship with the Pennsauken Board of Education and to establish a new relationship with Haddonfield.

On July 25, 1988, Pennsauken filed its answer to this petition and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law. Subsequent to the prehearing conference in October, Pennsauken filed a cross-petition against Haddonfield, seeking to enjoin it from accepting tuition students from Merchantville. On February 3, 1989, Haddonfield became a party respondent and filed its answer to Pennsauken's cross-petition on May 17, 1989. On July 26, 1989, the matters were consolidated.

The hearing in the matter commenced in November 1990, after extensive discovery, the issuance of several prehearing rulings, and an interlocutory appeal to the State Board of Education which was decided on September 5, 1990.[1] The hearing concluded in October 1991 after twenty two days of testimony. However, because of additional motions filed by the parties, the record before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) was not closed until March 16, 1992.

[1] In that decision, the State Board delineated the burden of production under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-13.

On May 1, 1992, the Administrative Law Judge issued his initial decision, finding that there would not be any significant negative impact on the quality of education or the racial composition of the pupil populations of the districts involved and that there were no financial or educational implications precluding severance of Merchantville's relationship with Pennsauken. The ALJ also found that the effect of Haddonfield's tuition policy was only remotely related to the enrollment at Pennsauken High School, and therefore granted Haddonfield's motion to dismiss Pennsauken's cross-petition against it.

On September 16, 1992, Acting Commissioner John Woodbury rendered his decision, rejecting that portion of the ALJ's decision which found that there would not be a significant negative impact on the racial composition of the pupil population at Pennsauken High if Merchantville were permitted to terminate its relationship with Pennsauken. Rather, the Acting Commissioner concluded that severance of the relationship would result in advancing the deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented at Pennsauken High. He therefore denied Merchantville's request to terminate the relationship. However, the Acting Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination to deny Pennsauken's cross-motion to enjoin Haddonfield's tuition program.

Both Merchantville and Pennsauken appealed to the State Board from the Acting Commissioner's decision.

By letter of November 22, 1996, the Legal Committee of the State Board of Education notified the parties that, in the process of developing its report in the matter, it had concluded that it was necessary to update the record.

Although Haddonfield has not yet responded, both Pennsauken and Merchantville have responded positively to this notice, indicating that they are willing to provide the State Board with the necessary information.

Therefore, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:2-1.9, the State Board of Education directs that the record in this case be updated by supplementation with the following:

1. Current numerical data showing the composition by race and national origin of the student populations of Pennsauken, Merchantville and Haddonfield.

2. Current numerical data showing the composition by race and national origin of the total number of high school age students from Merchantville and of those who attend Pennsauken High.

3. Data from the 1990 census showing by race and national origin the composition of both the general populations and school age populations of Pennsauken, Merchantville and Haddonfield.

We direct that the parties, including Haddonfield, submit this information to our Legal Committee as expeditiously as possible without compromising the accuracy of the information.

This matter involves an appeal and a cross-appeal from a decision rendered by the Acting Commissioner of Education, which denied both the application made by the Board of Education of the Borough of Merchantville (hereinafter "Merchantville") pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with the Board of Education of the Township of Pennsauken (hereinafter "Pennsauken") so as to establish a new relationship with the Board of Education of the Borough of Haddonfield (hereinafter "Haddonfield") and Pennsauken's cross-petition to enjoin Haddonfield from accepting students from Merchantville or Pennsauken on a tuition basis. The case calls upon us to determine whether this agency may approve such a change in designation pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 where the statistical change in the racial composition of the current receiver may not be statistically significant, but under circumstances in which the current receiver is integrated, the proposed receiver is almost exclusively white and the sending district is predominantly white. Such determination requires that we further explore the relationship between racial balance and educational quality and our obligations in this context to effectuate our State's policies.

I

The case was initiated on July 6, 1988, when the Merchantville Board of Education petitioned the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, seeking to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with the Pennsauken Board of Education and to establish a new relationship with Haddonfield. This represented Merchantville's second attempt to terminate the relationship it had entered in 1972-73 when it closed its own high school.

On July 25, 1988, Pennsauken filed its answer to this petition and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law. Subsequent to the prehearing conference in October, Pennsauken filed a cross-petition against Haddonfield, seeking to enjoin it from accepting tuition students from Merchantville. On February 3, 1989, Haddonfield became a party respondent and filed its answer to Pennsauken's cross-petition on May 17, 1989. On July 26, 1989, the matters were consolidated.

The hearing in the matter commenced in November 1990 after extensive discovery, the issuance of several prehearing rulings, and an interlocutory appeal to the State Board of Education which was decided on September 5, 1990.[1] The hearing concluded in October 1991 after twenty-two days of testimony. However, because of additional motions filed by the parties, the record before the Administrative Law Judge was not closed until March 16, 1992.

On May 1, 1992, the Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") issued his initial decision, finding that there would not be any significant negative impact on the quality of education or the racial composition of the pupil populations of the districts involved and that there were no financial or educational implications precluding severance of Merchantville's relationship with Pennsauken. He therefore concluded that, under the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, the Commissioner should approve severance of the relationship. The ALJ also found that the effect of Haddonfield's tuition policy was only remotely related to the enrollment at Pennsauken High School, and therefore granted Haddonfield's motion to dismiss Pennsauken's cross-petition against it.

On September 16, 1992, Acting Commissioner John Woodbury rendered his decision, rejecting that portion of the ALJ's decision which found that there would not be a significant negative impact on the racial composition of the pupil population at Pennsauken High if Merchantville were permitted to terminate its relationship with Pennsauken. Rather, the Acting Commissioner concluded that severance of the relationship would result in advancing the deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented at Pennsauken High. He therefore denied Merchantville's request to terminate the relationship. However, the Acting Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination to deny Pennsauken's cross-motion to enjoin Haddonfield's tuition program.

Both Merchantville and Pennsauken appealed to the State Board from the Acting Commissioner's decision.

II

When Merchantville initiated this litigation, questions relating to racial balance did not appear to be central. In its petition, Merchantville asserted that it was seeking a change in designation because Pennsauken was overcrowded and Haddonfield's more academically-oriented program represented a more compatible secondary school experience for its students than did Pennsauken's educational program. In conformance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, Merchantville asserted that the change it sought would not have any substantial negative impact on the educational program, racial balance or finances of the affected districts.

At hearing, Pennsauken contested each of Merchantville's claims, including the assertion that Pennsauken was overcrowded. Moreover, as reflected by the record, the focus narrowed during the course of the proceedings before the ALJ and review of the matter by the Acting Commissioner.[2] As a result, the determinations challenged by the appeals before the State Board are those relating to racial balance.

The ALJ focused solely on the statistical impact of Merchantville's withdrawal on the racial composition of Pennsauken High School's student population when he assessed whether severance would have a substantial negative impact. From this perspective, he determined that there would not be any substantial negative impact on the racial composition because severance would result in only a 1.7% decrease in Pennsauken High School's white population.

Based on the same facts, and relying heavily on the State Board and Appellate Division decisions in Board of Educ. of Englewood Cliffs v. Board of Educ. of [2] The only mention of racial balance in the original feasibility study prepared by Guidelines, Inc. was its report of the number of minority students at Pennsauken High School and the statistical change if Merchantville's students had been withdrawn in 1987-88. The study then stated without any discussion that a phased withdrawal in 1989-90 would not have a substantial impact on "the racial enrollment of the Pennsauken District." Exhibit P-13a, in evidence, at 54-55. Merchantville subsequently submitted a study dated January 2, 1990, prepared by Emanuel Averbach, Ph.D., on the "Dynamics of Current Racial/Ethnic Enrollment Changes in Pennsauken Schools that Bear on Deciding a Petition for the Withdrawal of Merchantville Students from Pennsauken High School." Exhibit P-33, in evidence. Together with two supplemental reports of similar title dated May 2, 1991 and September 14, 1991, exhibits P-34 and P-35, in evidence, these documents posit that major changes reducing the number of whites at Pennsauken High and increasing the number of minorities had been in progress since 1985 and that "the growing racial/ethnic imbalance is of significance now." Averbach report of January 2, 1990, at 7.

Englewood, decided by the State Board of Education, April 4, 1990, aff'd, 257 N.J. Super. 413 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd, 132 N.J. 327 (1993), cert. denied, 510 U.S. 991, 114 S.Ct. 547, 126 L.Ed.2d 449 (1993), the Acting Commissioner concluded that although the decrease in the white population at Pennsauken might not be statistically significant, withdrawal of the Merchantville students would "result in advancing the deterioration in the balance of racial and national origin groupings represented in Pennsauken High School's community." Commissioner's Decision, slip op. at 111. He therefore rejected the ALJ's determination and denied severance.

On appeal to the State Board, Merchantville stresses that it is in full agreement with New Jersey's policy against racial segregation in our public schools. However, it is Merchantville's current position that because Pennsauken High School was not already racially segregated during the period relevant to this litigation and would not be segregated if all of Merchantville's students were withdrawn from Pennsauken, race is not relevant to this case. See supra note 2.

In response to Merchantville's appeal, Pennsauken argues that the Acting Commissioner properly determined that withdrawal of the Merchantville students would result in a substantial negative racial impact on Pennsauken High, and that legal precedents such as Englewood mandate that Merchantville's petition be denied. Pennsauken, however, contends that the Acting Commissioner erred in adopting the ALJ's determination that there would not be any substantial negative educational impact from severance, arguing in this respect that educational impact is interwoven with racial impact.

In addition, by its cross-appeal, Pennsauken seeks reversal of the Acting Commissioner's determination to deny its cross-petition to enjoin Haddonfield's tuition policy. Pennsauken claims that Haddonfield's policy undermines racial integration in the public schools by siphoning off Merchantville students from Pennsauken, and that Haddonfield should therefore be enjoined from accepting any Merchantville or Pennsauken students on a tuition basis.

III

After exhaustive review, we reject Merchantville's view that questions relating to racial balance are not relevant to this matter. To the contrary, resolution of those questions are pivotal in assessing the educational implications of approving the change of designation which Merchantville is seeking.[3]

Initially, we, like the Acting Commissioner, reject the view that a statistical change in the racial composition of the current receiver is alone dispositive of whether a significant negative impact will result from severance. Englewood, supra. Rather, as mandated by the statute, it is imperative that the significance of the statistical change in a particular case be evaluated under "all of the circumstances." Id.

The statistical change in the proportion of white students attending Pennsauken High School in 1988 would have been almost identical to that which would have resulted in Englewood had severance been granted in that case. Further, Merchantville, like Englewood Cliffs, had a largely white student population, and, like

Tenafly, Haddonfield was more focused on college preparation and was almost exclusively white.

Hence, it was appropriate for the Acting Commissioner to use the decisions in Englewood as his point of departure. However, closer examination of the factual circumstances in this case reveals that they are markedly different from those presented to the State Board in the Englewood matter. Most apparent is that, in contrast to Englewood's Dwight Morrow High School, Pennsauken High was only 25% minority at the time of hearing.[4] Accordingly, in contrast to Englewood, this case does not present us with a situation where there is already a concentration of minority students that is unacceptable from either a legal or policy perspective. Nor is there any indication of conduct by any of the districts involved in this case that is inconsistent with the legal relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken. Finally, in stark contrast to Englewood, nothing indicates that there has already been a loss of Merchantville students to Haddonfield because of its tuition policy which has affected the racial balance at Pennsauken.

However, the differences between the circumstances in Englewood and those in this situation do not mandate the conclusion that severance of the sending-receiving relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken is appropriate in this case. To the contrary, for the reasons that follow, it is our conclusion that severance should not be granted.

[4] In this decision, "minority" includes Hispanic and Asian, as well as African-American.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-11 mandates that all school districts which, like Merchantville, lack high school facilities must designate a high school for the attendance of its pupils. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 then provides in pertinent part that:

> No such designation of a high school...shall be changed or withdrawn...except upon application made to and approved by the commissioner. Prior to submitting an application the district seeking to sever the relationship shall prepare and submit a feasibility study, considering the educational and financial implications for the sending and receiving districts, the impact on the quality of education received by the pupils in each of the districts, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of each of the districts. The commissioner shall make equitable determinations based upon consideration of all the circumstances, including the educational and financial implications for the affected districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of the districts. The commissioner shall grant the requested change in designation...if no substantial negative impact will result therefrom.

The central question in this appeal is whether the change sought by Merchantville will result in a substantial negative impact on the districts involved. This inquiry requires that the Commissioner consider a series of factors which must be included in a feasibility study submitted by the district seeking the change, and, as embodied in the terms of the statute, further requires that the Commissioner evaluate the effect of a requested change in receiving districts on the children of each district concerned. Hence, while N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 is not a traditional balancing statute, Englewood, supra, at 461-62, the determination in this case cannot be made solely by evaluating the impact of severance on Pennsauken without regard to the other districts involved.

When Merchantville initiated the present litigation, it specified that it was seeking to terminate its relationship with Pennsauken so as to enter a new relationship with Haddonfield. Accordingly, the feasibility study which it submitted in support of its petition centered on comparison of Haddonfield to Pennsauken. Exhibits P-13a and P-13b, in evidence. In point of fact, as the documentary evidence Merchantville submitted at hearing amply illustrates, its application for severance was predicated on establishing a new relationship with Haddonfield, exhibits P-1 through P-12, in evidence, and there is nothing in the record to suggest that it considered any other alternative during the course of the litigation.

Haddonfield, however, has indicated that it is no longer willing to commit itself to entering into a sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville without obtaining a new feasibility study.[5] Hence, at this point, Merchantville's application does not meet the statutory prerequisites for consideration and on these grounds alone we would dismiss the matter.

In this respect, we stress that a failure by the petitioning district to designate an alternative to its present receiving district makes it impossible to apply the statutory standard. Furthermore, as expressed by the State Board in our decision in Board of [5] In correspondence dated April 11, 1997, Haddonfield advised us that it was reserving the right to conduct a new feasibility study before making a final decision on entering into a sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville and informed us that we should not assume that severance of Merchantville's relationship with Pennsauken would automatically result in the establishment of a relationship between Merchantville and Haddonfield. In reaction, Pennsauken filed a motion with the State Board seeking dismissal of Merchantville's petition or, in the alternative, adjournment of the matter until Haddonfield completed a new feasibility study and declared whether it would accept Merchantville's students. Merchantville then moved for bifurcation of the matter for the purpose of obtaining a decision from the State Board as to the impact that Merchantville's withdrawal from Pennsauken would have on the Merchantville and Pennsauken school districts.

Education of the City of Absecon v. Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville, decided by the State Board of Education, October 5, 1988:

> ....at minimum, it is the obligation of the State Board of Education to insure that the students of the sending district will have an educational alternative, and to permit withdrawal in the absence of a demonstrated alternative would contravene that responsibility. Accordingly, the State Board of Education will not direct termination without knowing where the senders' children are to be educated.

Absecon, supra, slip op. at 2.

Nonetheless, because the record in this matter is such as to permit us to decide the appeal and cross-appeal now before us on their merits, and in view of the significance of the questions involved, as well as the resources which all three parties have expended in litigating the matter, we have reviewed and decided the merits of the matter as well.

The starting point for any substantive discussion of issues such as those raised by Merchantville's appeal is our State's fundamental policy in favor of equal educational opportunity. Englewood, supra, at 452. Integrated schools are an essential part of such opportunity, and, for this reason, the New Jersey Supreme Court has repeatedly stressed the importance of eliminating segregation in our public schools. See, e.g., Jenkins v. Tp. of Morris School District and Bd. of Educ., 58 N.J. 483 (1971); Booker v. Bd. of Educ. of Plainfield, 45 N.J. 161 (1965).

As has been long recognized by the New Jersey Supreme Court, segregation, whether de jure or de facto in origin, has an undesirable effect upon attitudes related to successful learning. E.g., Booker, supra, at 178. As expressed by the New Jersey State Board of Education:

> Educational considerations are primary in eliminating school segregation. The elimination of racial imbalance is not to be sought as an end in itself but because such imbalance stands as a deterrent and handicap to the improvement of education for all.

New Jersey State Board of Education, A Statement of Educational Policy, November 5, 1969.

Therefore, given the interrelationship between racial balance and educational quality, the Commissioner has been vested with broad power to deal with the subject. As expressed by the New Jersey Supreme Court:

> In a society such as ours, it is not enough that the 3 R's are being taught properly for there are other vital considerations. The children must learn to respect and live with one another in multi-racial and multi-cultural communities and the earlier they do so the better. It is during their formative school years that firm foundations may be laid for good citizenship and broad participation in the mainstream of affairs. Recognizing this, leading educators stress the democratic and educational advantages of heterogeneous student populations and point to the disadvantages of homogeneous student populations, particularly when they are composed of a racial minority whose separation generates feelings of inferiority....

Booker, supra, at 170-171.

It is axiomatic that our responsibility to insure equal educational opportunity is not limited to those situations where a significant racial imbalance has already developed.[6] To the contrary, given the substantial negative educational implications of [6] We note that Merchantville continues to argue in its exceptions to our Legal Committee's report that this case does not involve any issues of "segregation." We also note that such position does not appear to be consistent with that embodied in the Averbach reports submitted by Merchantville during the litigation. See supra note 2. Those reports argue that "radical" changes in the racial/ethnic composition of Pennsauken's pupil population have been "in process" since 1985 leading to an "evolving, massive racial/ethnic imbalance." Averbach report, January 2, 1990. Hence, these reports argue for severance, not because racial balance is irrelevant to this case, but because Merchantville's predominantly white students would not be sufficient in number to "dilute a continuing influx" of minority pupils to Pennsauken. Id.

permitting our State's student populations to be separated by race and because of the difficulties involved in correcting such a situation once it has developed, it would be counterproductive to allow an existing sending-receiving relationship to be disturbed where the change may contribute to the development of racial imbalance.

Furthermore, as we stressed in our decision in Englewood, supra, the educational benefits of a heterogeneous student population accrue not only to minority students, but to all children who attend school in an integrated educational environment. See Deepening Segregation in American Public Schools, Harvard Project on School Desegregation (April 5, 1997).[7]

The record shows that Pennsauken High School offers an integrated educational environment. At hearing, it was projected that Pennsauken would remain integrated with or without severance, but that the white/minority ratio would decline from 58% white and 41.9% minority in 1992 without severance to 56.3% white and 43.4% minority if severance was approved. Exhibit P-32, in evidence.

By decision of January 8, 1996, the State Board directed supplementation of the record with: 1) Current numerical data showing the composition by race and national origin of the student populations of Pennsauken, Merchantville and Haddonfield, 2) Current numerical data showing the composition by race and national origin of the total number of high school age students from Merchantville and of those who attend Pennsauken High, 3) Data from the 1990 census showing by race and national origin

[7] We note that if existing trends continue, whites will become one of several minorities in the schools, as well as in society. Deepening Segregation in American Public Schools, ibid. As the American population changes, the skills that develop through exposure and interaction with other minorities will become even more critical.

the composition of both the general populations and school age populations of Pennsauken, Merchantville and Haddonfield.

The parties submitted the updated information requested by the State Board. The updated information shows that as of October 1996, Pennsauken High School enrolled a total of 1,548 students in grades 9-12, excluding classified special education students. Of these, 53.9% (835) were white, 30.36% (470) were African-American, 11.8% (183) were Hispanic, and 3.875% (60) were from other groups, including Asian. From the 1990 census data, Pennsauken's total school age population (6,397) was 66.5% white, 18.8% African-American, 7.97% Hispanic, and 6.7% other, including Asian. In contrast, Haddonfield's total school age population (1,907) was comprised of 96.3% white, 1.3% African-American, 0.9% Hispanic, and 1.45% other, including Asian. Merchantville's school age population (696) was 92.8% white, 2.2% African-American, 2.7% Hispanic, and 2.3% other, including Asian.

Although there is no one statistical balance which is ideal from an educational perspective, a truly integrated setting offers the best opportunity for meaningful exposure of different races in the educational context.[8] Again, Pennsauken High School offers such a setting.[9]

[8] We note that there is a primary distinction between formal desegregation and actual integration. Desegregation refers to the removal of legal and social practices that separate whites and minorities and to the physical presence of both in the same schools, while integration occurs only if there develops joint participation and mutual acceptance in all activities normally associated with school attendance. See A Common Destiny: Blacks and American Society, National Research Council (National Academy Press, 1989).

[9] In this respect, we reject the characterization made in the Averbach reports that Pennsauken is a district which is significantly racially/ethnically imbalanced.

all the more important for us to sustain our efforts to effectuate our State's policy by taking such measures as are necessary to maintain diversity among our student populations in order to avoid segregation.

Again, this case does not require us to remedy racial imbalance, but asks that we maintain the existing level of diversity. While denying severance of Merchantville's sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken cannot guarantee that racial imbalance will not develop in the future, it eliminates the possibility that racial imbalance in these school districts will be encouraged by any action we have taken.

In this respect, we recognize that it is difficult to establish the exact point at which the percentage of minority students at a given school is so sharply out of balance with the composition of the society in which those students must function so as to allow that school to be characterized as a minority school and to carry the stigma attached thereto. Englewood, supra, State Board's decision, slip op. at 36. See Brown v. Board of Education of Topeka, 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686, 98 L.Ed. 873 (1954). We also recognize that such point may not be reached until the student body is more than 50% minority. Booker, supra, at 180. We stress, however, that it is generally reached well before the student body is 100% minority. Id.

As the record in this case shows, while the proportion of minority students at Pennsauken High has increased in recent years, its student population continues to be diverse. While severance would not change the diverse character of Pennsauken High School, it would result in a slight increase in the proportion of the minority population at Pennsauken High, which currently constitutes approximately 50% of the student population. In addition to the educational benefits which will accrue to Merchantville's students, their continued presence will help maintain the stability of the sensitive racial balance of the pupil population at Pennsauken High, and thereby avoid the future necessity for undertaking the much more difficult task of correcting an imbalance after it has developed.

Therefore, for the reasons stated in this opinion, the State Board of Education denies Merchantville's petition to sever its sending-receiving relationship with Haddonfield. However, in that Pennsauken has not established that Haddonfield's tuition policy has in fact had a negative impact on the composition of its student population, we deny the relief sought by Pennsauken's cross-appeal.

Attorney exceptions are noted.

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative on September 2, 1992, on an emergent basis and heard on September 3, 1992. The attached tape recording contains the arguments of the parties as well as the basis for my ruling. It is ORDERED that petitioner's children be permitted to attend school within the respondent district commencing on Tuesday, September 8, 1992, consistent with the dual judgment of divorce entered before the Superior Court on July 24, 1992, in Rotonda v. Rotonda, Superior Court, Chancery Division Ocean County-Family Part, Dkt. No. FM-15-443-91. To the extent that issues remain, these are remanded to the Department of Education for settlement purposes.

This order may be reviewed by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SEASIDE PARK, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON MOTION

The record of this matter, including the tape recording of proceedings before the ALJ, and the initial order of the Office of Administrative Law granting emergent relief to petitioner on the grounds that his judgment of divorce specifically directs that his children, of whom he shares joint custody, will attend school in Seaside Park during 1992-93 notwithstanding that his ex-wife has primary custody of said children and is domiciled in Lavalette, have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by respondent pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In its exceptions, the Board argues that under the terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, persons must be domiciled in the school district to be entitled to a free education there, and the Commissioner has previously held that a child of divorced parents is deemed to be domiciled with the custodial parent, C.K.F. and B.F. v. Board of Education of Upper Township, Cape May County, 1975 S.L.D. 723; and that the judgment of divorce on which the ALJ relied is not enforceable against the Board because 1) the court specifically eschewed any position on the merits of the agreement; 2) the judgment represents a property settlement to which the Board was not a party; and 3) the judgment contravenes statute and case law as cited above. Therefore, the Board contends, the ALJ erred in concluding that he had no authority to overrule the judgment of divorce. The Board also notes that it has filed, concurrently with its exceptions, a motion before Superior Court to strike the pertinent clause in the divorce judgment for the reasons set forth above.

Upon review of this matter, the Commissioner finds that there is a legitimate question as to the Commissioner's authority to overrule a court judgment that is both clear and specific with regard to the children at issue herein yet appears to be contrary to, or at least inconsistent with, law providing that children shall be entitled to free education in the school district within which they are domiciled. (N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1) Therefore, while the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner's children are to remain in the Seaside Park school district while the present dispute is pending, he cannot entirely abrogate his responsibility to hear this matter unless it is definitively determined, through fuller argument than is possible or appropriate in the context of an emergent relief proceeding, that he does in fact have no jurisdiction arising from his specialized educational expertise to decide the enforceability of the divorce decree provision (No. 4) dealing with the education of petitioner's children. Asbury Park Board of Education v. Murnick, 224 N.J. Super. 504, 513 (App. Div. 1988)

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed insofar as it grants petitioner's request for emergent relief, but modified in its implication that the central issue in this matter has been resolved on the merits so that no further proceedings are necessary.* The matter, therefore, is to proceed to hearing in accordance with the parameters set forth above.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

* The Commissioner notes that p. 2 of the initial order erroneously references procedures for interlocutory review rather than for review of emergent relief pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The ALJ's intentions in this matter are expressed in his directive that "[t]o the extent that issues remain, these are remanded to the Department of Education for settlement purposes" (Initial Decision, at p. 1) and in the tape recording of hearing on emergent relief wherein it is clear that he anticipates no further proceedings in this matter.

Record Closed: October 2, 1992 Decided: October 20, 1992

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on September 2, 1992, upon petitioner's request for emergency relief. A hearing was conducted on September 3, 1992, and an Order Granting Emergency Relief was issued that same day. The Commissioner of Education affirmed that decision by order of September 16, 1992, but also returned the matter to the OAL so that the legal arguments underpinning the decision could be more fully developed. On October 2, 1992, the OAL received correspondence from respondent's attorney indicating that respondent would no longer pursue this litigation and that the Rotonda children could attend Seaside Park Elementary School for the 1992-93 school year (attached).

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the OAL and it is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Rotonda v. Board of Education of Seaside Park

Dear Ms. Keller:

In response to a Notice of Filing dated September 14, 1992 from the Office of Administrative Law with respect to a continuation of certain issues involved in the above captioned matter, I have spoken with the Board of Education and they have decided not to pursue the litigation and will abide by Judge Metzger's decision authorizing the two Rotonda children to attend Seaside Park Elementary School for the 1992-93 school year. It is expressly understood, of course, that the Judgment for Divorce which incorporated the Property Settlement Agreement limits the children's attendance in the Seaside Park Elementary School District to the 1992-93 school year. If the Board concludes that the children and the custodial parent are not domiciliaries of the Borough of Seaside Park for the school year commencing 1993-94 that in accordance with the appropriate Statute the Board of Education may not permit said children to attend the Seaside Park Elementary School.

Based on the aforementioned, I do not believe it is necessary to continue further submissions.

Thank you for your cooperation in this matter.

Sincerely yours,

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

The Commissioner agrees with and adopts as his own the recommendation of the ALJ to dismiss the instant matter. Such determination is reached in light of Mr. Seymour J. Kagan's letter of September 30, 1992 which indicates the desire of the Seaside Park Board of Education not to pursue the litigation and the fact that the Judgment of Divorce limits petitioner's children's attendance in the Seaside Park School District to the 1992-93 school year.

Accordingly, the Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF OLD BRIDGE, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former Department Chairperson of Driver Education Department whose position was abolished due to 1982 RIF resulting in his reassignment to position of Health Teacher, alleged his tenure and seniority rights were violated when four less senior individuals were appointed to positions of department chairpersons.

ALJ determined petitioner's tenure and seniority rights were not impaired by Board. ALJ found since petitioner never served in any of the supervisory positions he claimed entitlement to, he had no seniority in those positions which were filled by other tenured supervisors. ALJ found Capodilupo and Bednar did not apply. ALJ did cite Weinstein, N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b) and 1.10(1)(12). Petition was dismissed.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision with clarification that petitioner is entitled to be interviewed for positions such as those claimed herein if other applicants have no seniority in the positions at issue. (Schienholz)

v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF OLD BRIDGE,
Respondent.

Scott T. Smith, Esq., for respondent (Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 18, 1992 Decided: July 31, 1992

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Frank R. Notaro, Jr., petitioner, claims the Old Bridge Board of Education, respondent, violated his tenure and seniority rights when it appointed, from a reduced in force list, four persons less senior than he to department chairmanships.

The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for disposition as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. The petitioner's counsel withdrew because of a potential conflict of interest. The petitioner's present counsel was timely substituted and, after notice, a prehearing conference was held by telephone on October 31, 1991. It was settled at the conference that the issue to be resolved is whether the petitioner is entitled by reason of tenure and seniority to one of the chairperson positions the Board filled in October 1990. The matter was heard on June 2, 1992 at the Highland Park Municipal Court. Counsel timely filed posthearing submissions and the record closed on June 18, 1991.

PAROL AND DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE

The assistant superintendent of the district was called by the respondent. He stated the petitioner began employment in April 1968 and held the position Physical Education or Driver Education teacher or both, until June 1974. The Board then employed the petitioner as chair of the Driver Education Department, a position for which Notaro held the appropriate certificate. In June 1982, the Board effected a reduction in force (RIF). This resulted in the abolition of the petitioner's position and his reassignment to the position of Health teacher.

The Board interviewed applicants for certain department chair positions in September 1990 and offered employment in those positions to the best qualified applicants.

The petitioner claims entitlement to one of those positions by reason of his seniority accumulated as chair of the Driver Education Department. In the course of discovery, the petitioner indicated he believes himself entitled to any of the following chairperson positions: Foreign Language chair at Cedar Ridge High School, Business chair at Cedar Ridge High School, Science chair at Madison Central High School and English as a Second Language chair at an unidentified school.

It is uncontroverted that the petitioner has no experience in any of the positions to which he claims entitlement.

Upon conclusion of this testimony, the Board moved for summary judgment. Following the direction of the Appellate Division in Castro v. Helmsley Spear, Inc., 150 N.J. Super. 160 (App. Div. 1977) this judge stopped the hearing to dispose of the application. Counsel were directed to file and timely filed papers on the motion.

ON THE MOTION

The Board argues that because the petitioner has no seniority in any of the particular chair positions he claims, he has no legitimate claim to those positions. Seniority is "determined according to the number of academic or calendar years of employment, or fraction thereof, as the case may be, in the school district in specific categories as herein after provided." N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b).

The petitioner seeks supervisor positions and "each approved supervisory title shall be a separate category." N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(l)12. Because the petitioner has not been employed by the Board in any of the positions to which he claims entitlement, he has no seniority in any of those positions and his petition is without merit. Weinstein v. Bd. of Ed. of Tp. of Old Bridge, 91 N.J.A.R. 2d 102; aff'd St. Bd. of Ed. 92 N.J.A.R. 2d 328. Weinstein obtained tenure in the supervisor position of Coordinator of the Board's Gifted and Talented Program. In 1990, the Board effected a RIF. As part of that RIF, the Board created the positions of Basic Skills supervisor and assistant director of Special Services. Weinstein was qualified for both. However, the Board hired another tenured teaching staff member as the Basic Skills supervisor and hired an untenured teaching staff member as the assistant director of Special Services. Weinstein claimed entitlement to both positions, asserting she possessed greater seniority than the tenured teaching staff member and that her tenure entitled her to displace the untenured teaching staff member.

The administrative law judge rejected Weinstein's claim as to the tenured teaching staff member because Weinstein had never served as a Basic Skills supervisor. The judge stated

> When considering two tenured supervisors, seniority is determined "in specific categories," N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b), and each approved supervisory title is a separate category. N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(l)12. Therefore, contrary to Ms. Weinstein's argument, she cannot assert a seniority claim against Dr. Bettencourt for the Supervisor of Basic Skills position since she has no seniority as to that position. As between Dr. Bettencourt and Ms. Weinstein, two tenured supervisors, the board was free to select the candidate it believed most qualified.

Slip op. at 6.

Turning to the assistant director of Special Services position, the judge held that neither Weinstein nor the untenured teaching staff member hired for the position held tenure in the position. The judge stated

> Since the dispute is between two nontenured individuals for a principal's position, Ms. Weinstein's claim is not superior to Dr. Andrews'. DeCarlo v. South Plainfield Bd. of Ed., OAL DKT. EDU 6111-87 (June 20, 1988), adopted Comm'r of Ed. (Aug. 4, 1988). As between Dr. Andrews and Ms. Weinstein, the Board can select the candidate it determines to be most qualified for the position.

Slip op. at 6-7.

The Commissioner adopted the findings and conclusions rendered by the administrative law judge. The Commissioner agreed that the petitioner's tenure rights were not impaired by the Board's actions. Each supervisory title is a separate category under the seniority regulations. Both Bettencourt and Weinstein were tenured supervisors, but neither had seniority in the Supervisor of Basic Skills position because neither had served in that specific category pursuant to the regulations. Therefore, Weinstein had no superior seniority claim to the position. Inasmuch as the Board had tenured supervisors on a preferred seniority list because of the June 1990 RIF, it could not fill a supervisory position with a nontenured employee. Rather, it was compelled to fill the position with one of the RIFfed tenured supervisors, although which one it chose from among those on the preferred eligibility list was a Board prerogative. The Commissioner also agreed with the judge's conclusion that because the petitioner had not served in a position requiring a principal's certificate, she had not acquired tenure or seniority in that category. Therefore, the petitioner had no tenure claim to the position of assistant director of Special Services.

The State Board affirmed the Commissioner for the reasons set forth in his decision.

In the present case, petitioner Notaro has not served in any of the supervisor positions he claims. Therefore, he has no seniority with respect to any of those positions. He cannot possibly have a senior right to those positions over those hired by the Board. Therefore, summary judgment should be granted in the Board's favor and the petition should be dismissed.

The petitioner argues that he is duly certified as a supervisor, his position was abolished by RIF and he has five years of seniority as a supervisor.

The assistant superintendent testified at hearing that the petitioner was not offered either supervisory position and he was not even notified by the Board that the positions were open. The Board took the position that subject area certification was necessary and, therefore, no notice was required. When the petitioner discovered this, he requested one of the positions and when an appointment was not forthcoming, he filed the present appeal.

The Appellate Division has consistently held that a tenured employee can claim any position for which he is certified over a nontenured employee. See, e.g., Bednar v. Westwood Bd. of Ed., 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987) certif. den., 110 N.J. 512 (1988); Capodilupo v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., 218 N.J. Super. 510 (App. Div. 1987), certif. den. 109 N.J. 514 (1987).

Because courts do not legislate but merely interpret and apply the law, the petitioner argues that these decisions reflect the law as it has always been and he therefore is entitled to one of the positions together with back pay from September 1990.

In addition and alternatively, the petitioner seeks an order compelling the Board to place him on a preferred eligibility list and to offer him any new supervisory position that may in the future become available.

DETERMINATION

Notaro relies, as did Weinstein, on Capodilupo, above. However, this judge can find no impairment of the petitioner's tenure and seniority rights because each supervisory title is a separate category under the seniority regulations. N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10 et seq. He has no record of service in Foreign Languages, Business, Science or English as a Second Language. The petitioner may assert his tenure rights as against anyone appointed to the Director of Driver Education position if the Board should recreate that position.

Both Bednar and Capodilupo emphasize the importance and strength of tenure protections. The Appellate Division in Bednar gives clear instruction. In a footnote at p. 241, the court states

> In several recent unpublished opinions we have held that the more restrictive current seniority regulations, N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10, > lawfully apply to determine job rights in a current reduction in force (RIF), even though some of the seniority arose before September 1983. See, e.g. Hill v. Bd. of Ed., West Orange, 1985 S.L.D. _____ (January 16, 1985). aff'd by St. Bd. of Ed., 1985 S.L.D. _____ (May 1, 1985), aff'd App. Div. 1986 (A-4355-84T1), certif. den. 104 N.J. 443 (1986); Principe v. Bd. of Ed., Tp. of Woodbridge, October 31, 1986 (A-384-85T1). The essential difference between the old and new regulations is that seniority was formerly attained in every instructional field endorsed on the teacher's certificate. Now, it is obtained only by the accrual of actual experience in usually narrower specific instructional categories.

Tenure is created by statute. The statute should be liberally construed to further its beneficial purpose of affording security to teaching staff members who meet its terms. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 90 N.J. 63, 74 (1982). The tenure law does not limit the right of a school district to reduce staff. RIF is permitted and, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10, shall be made on the basis of seniority according to standards adopted by the state. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 gives preference in reemployment to staff who are dismissed in a RIF.

The court also states

> The tenure stature authorizes the creation of seniority regulations to rank the job rights of tenured teaching staff in a RIF. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-13. (citations omitted). The statute does not create or authorize the Commissioner to create competing rights for non-tenured teachers. Under current regulations, seniority is measured by years of employment in specific job categories which are normally narrower than the subject fields which are endorsed on teachers' certificates. (citations omitted).
>
> Seniority is a statutory concept . . . . It does not purport to create employment rights for non-tenured employees. This court has held that non-tenured teachers whose contracts are not renewed by reason of a RIF are not entitled to reemployment rights . . . .

221 N.J. Super. at 242.

Examination of the pertinent administrative code shows no revision since early 1989. N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(f) states

> Whenever a person shall hold employment simultaneously under two or more subject area endorsements or in two or more categories, seniority shall be counted in all subject area endorsements and categories in which he or she is or has been employed. For purposes of calculating seniority entitlement, there shall be no distinction between academic years and calendar years. [Emphasis added.]

N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(h) provides

Whenever a person shall move from or revert to a category, all periods of employment shall be credited toward his or her seniority in any or all categories in which he/she previously held employment. [Emphasis added.]

N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(i), (j) and (k) provide

(i) Whenever any person's particular employment shall be abolished in a category, he or she shall be given that employment in the same category to which he or she is entitled by seniority. If he or she shall have insufficient seniority for employment in the same category, he or she shall revert to the category in which he or she held employment prior to his or her employment in the same category and shall be placed and remain upon the preferred eligible list of the category from which he or she reverted until a vacancy shall occur in such category to which his or her seniority entitles him or her.

(j) If he or she shall have insufficient seniority in the category to which he or she shall revert, he or she shall, in like manner, revert to the next category in which he or she held employment immediately prior to his or her employment in the category to which he or she shall have reverted, and shall be placed and remain upon the preferred eligible list of the next preceding category, and so forth, until he or she shall have been employed or placed upon all the preferred eligible lists of the categories in which he or she formerly held employment in the school district.

(k) In the event of his or her employment in some category to which he or she shall revert, he or she shall remain upon all the preferred eligible lists of the categories from which he or she shall have reverted, and shall be entitled to employment in any one or more such categories whenever a vacancy occurs to which his or her seniority entitles him or her.

N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(l) provides, in part

The following shall be deemed to be specific categories, not necessarily numbered in order of precedence.

12. Supervisors (each approved supervisory title shall be a separate category. District boards of education shall adopt job descriptions for each supervisory position which set forth the qualifications and specific endorsements required for such position);

. . . .

This is not a seniority case. When a position is abolished pursuant to RIF, the occupier of the abolished position has tenure rights to any newly created, substantially similar position. Christie v. East Orange Bd. of Ed., OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6535-84 (Jan. 18, 1985), aff'd Comm'r of Ed. (Mar. 11, 1985). The actual duties performed and not the job title alone will determine whether two positions are substantially similar. Boeshore v. North Bergen Bd. of Ed., 1974 S.L.D. 805. What the petitioner remains entitled to is not remotely related to the positions the Board filled. Consequently, the petitioner cannot assert any tenure rights to these positions.

Capodilupo and Bednar do not support the petitioner's argument. There are no nontenured persons involved here. When considering supervisors, entitlement is determined in specific categories, N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b), and each approved supervisory title is a separate category, N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(l)(12). The petitioner cannot assert a claim against any person in a position in which he has no seniority. Weinstein, above.

For these reasons, I FIND and CONCLUDE that Mr. Notaro has never served in any of the positions to which he claims entitlement. He, therefore, has no seniority in respect of any of those positions or in any reasonably related position. If he has no seniority, he cannot exercise a senior right over those hired by the Board, who concededly are tenured.

I further CONCLUDE that the petitioner's tenure rights have not been impaired by the Old Bridge Board of Education and I ORDER his petition DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF OLD BRIDGE, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, which substantially rely on arguments made before the ALJ and need not be reiterated herein. No reply was filed by the Board.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner can make no seniority claim to positions in which he has never served and therefore has no seniority. This is true notwithstanding that he might have been entitled to one of the positions in question by tenure right upon his RIF in 1982, as the time for claiming such an entitlement based on subsequent court rulings in Capodilupo, supra, and Bednar, supra, is long since past by any reasonable reckoning.

The Commissioner observes, however, while petitioner had no seniority entitlement to the positions at issue, if the successful candidates for any of those positions likewise had no seniority entitlement thereto, as a riffed tenured supervisor, petitioner was at least entitled to be interviewed for the position(s) notwithstanding the Board's contention that it also required subject area certification which petitioner did not possess. Nathan Schienholz et al. v. Board of Education of the Township of Ewing, Mercer County, decided by the State Board of Education February 7, 1990, affirmed Superior Court November 19, 1990, App. Div. #A-2905-89T3. Consequently, should any such situations arise in the future, the Board is directed to provide petitioner with an opportunity for interview in keeping with his tenured status. Of course, should there be no other tenured candidates for an available supervisory position, petitioner's rights are paramount as against nontenured applicants.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law is affirmed for the reasons expressed therein as amplified above.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, private school for the handicapped, challenged variety of expenditures that Department deemed to be non-allowable in calculating tuition reimbursement rate for public school handicapped students who are educated under N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g).

ALJ found maximum amount of $750 representing contributions, donations, awards and scholarships as allowable costs in calculation of certified actual cost per pupil. (N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)14) ALJ also allowed cost of conference in St. Thomas. Otherwise, petition was dismissed as ALJ concluded that gardening costs, window shading film, landscaping costs and certain salary allocations of executive director and assistant director were non-allowable for tuition rate purposes.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 5, 1990, Y.A.L.E. School, Inc. (Y.A.L.E.) filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education challenging the results of an audit conducted by the respondent. The audit, which covered the period July 1, 1987 through June 30, 1988, determined that certain expenses incurred by Y.A.L.E. were deemed non-allowable costs under N.J.A.C 6:20-4.1 et seq. and, thus, not included in computing the tuition rate of its students. Following a two-step interagency appeals process, Y.A.L.E. challenges in this forum some, but not all of the determinations that were arrived at by the respondent (the Department). Those findings which are challenged by Y.A.L.E. which it alleges should not be deemed non-allowable costs, are set forth in the petition and are incorporated by reference into this decision.

In addition, Y.A.L.E. also challenges the authority of the respondent to order reimbursement of various tuitions paid for the year preceding the audit, July 1, 1986 through June 30, 1987. The Commissioner of Education deemed Mr. Forgash's petition to be in the nature of a request for a contested case and he thereafter transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on or about May 17, 1990, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq.

Following a preliminary determination after the conference conducted in December 1990, in which Deputy Attorney General Lutz was going to challenge by motion the scope of the hearing, she advised by letter that because of a decision arrived at by the Commissioner of Education, she would no longer challenge that issue: the matter before the Office of Administrative Law would proceed de novo. Thereafter the prehearing conference, which was initiated on December 3, 1990, concluded on June 4, 1991, and a prehearing order was issued on June 12, 1991.

Following the issuance of the order and pursuant to a motion schedule which was agreed to but which was not entirely complied with, Deputy Attorney General Lutz submitted a motion for partial summary decision. The motion challenged some but not all of the 12 expenditures which Y.A.L.E. had contested. That motion sought summary decision in respect to 7 of the 12 contested expenditures. On October 22, 1991, I issued an 8-page ruling and order addressed to Ms. Lutz's motion granting portions of it and denying others. That ruling is incorporated into this decision by reference. To the best of my knowledge, interlocutory review of that ruling and order was taken by neither party. This opinion will address only those issues which were still viable following the ruling on Ms. Lutz's motion; as to those issues which were initially the subject of this appeal but which were mooted as a consequence of my granting Ms. Lutz's motion, no further discussion in respect to those shall ensue.

Hearings were conducted in this matter at the Office of Administrative Law, Mercerville, New Jersey, on November 18, November 25, November 26 and December 2, 1991. At the conclusion of the testimonial phase of the proceeding, it was agreed that Mr. Forgash would request a transcript of the hearing and that briefs would be submitted following a reasonable period after transcripts were received and reviewed. By letter of March 10, 1992, Deputy Attorney General Lutz confirmed her request to my office, which was granted, that the briefing schedule could be extended and that her submission would be due by April 10, 1992. In addition, by letter of April 16, 1992, Mr. Forgash confirmed that his request (both requests at issue here were not opposed by counsel) to extend his briefing schedule through to May 11, 1992 was also granted. On April 10, 1992, my office received

Ms. Lutz's letter brief, dated the previous day, and on May 8, 1992, my office received Mr. Forgash's written summation. Thereafter, on May 18, 1992, Ms. Lutz submitted a letter to me confirming a conversation which she had with my secretary in which she was granted an 11-day extension to submit a reply. On May 28, 1992, my office received Ms. Lutz's reply brief, dated May 27, 1992. On June 4, 1992, Mr. Forgash submitted an additional letter in the form of a sur-reply to Ms. Lutz's letter brief of May 27, 1992. Mr. Forgash's submission was received by my office on June 9, 1992. On June 8, 1992, I received a "facsimile" letter from Ms. Lutz objecting to the submission and receipt of Mr. Forgash's letter of June 4, 1992. On June 16, 1992, my office received a final submission by Ms. Lutz, dated June 15, 1992, addressing itself primarily to Mr. Forgash's final submission (dated June 4, 1992) and on June 18, 1992, my office received Mr. Forgash's final submission in this matter, a letter submitted in an effort to "set the record straight" in respect to the timing and number of post-hearing submissions made.

Accordingly, the record in these proceedings closed on the date upon which Mr. Forgash submitted his final word in these proceedings, June 18, 1992. There is no impropriety arising from counsels' submitting additional legal argument. Since there is no jury in this matter and since I am the fact-finder, no prejudice enures to either party by considering all post-hearing arguments as they relate to the evidential record.

ISSUES AND THE BURDEN OF PROOF

The petitioner in this matter, Y.A.L.E., is a private school for the handicapped that is authorized under N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g) to educate public school handicapped students. Y.A.L.E. is permitted to charge the public school district in which the handicapped child resides a tuition equal to costs which are deemed allowable pursuant to a certified audit. N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1 et seq. In addition, there are certain specific items which pursuant to the foregoing regulatory scheme may not be included in computing the tuition rate of each student, and are deemed non-allowable costs. See, N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4. As previously noted, Y.A.L.E. is challenging a variety of expenditures that the respondent deemed to be non-allowable in calculating the petitioner's tuition reimbursement rate. The following enumerates the particular expenditures at issue which were denied and which Y.A.L.E. argues should be allowable costs and thus included in computing its tuition rate:

1. Was respondent's decision, which determined that $295,195.75 in "merit pay" awarded to various teaching and non-teaching staff personnel of Y.A.L.E. during the 1986-87 and 1987-88 school years non-allowable, proper? The respondent's action was administratively posited on the application of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)17 [as amended, currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(21)]. At the hearing, the decision was also posited upon the assertion that the payment was a "bonus" in contravention of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(29) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)35].

2. Was respondent's decision to deny as an allowable cost restaurant expenses totaling $1,709.03 because they were not incurred as part of a school related activity, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(13) [superseded by N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(17)] ,proper?

3. Was the decision by the respondent which determined that $4,425.00 was not reimbursable but should have been capitalized and depreciated as an improvement to school facilities, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(a)(3) ,proper?

4. Was the decision by the respondent to deny as a reimbursable expense $4,825.00 for the installation of window shading film and concluding that the expenditure should have been capitalized and depreciated as an improvement of school facilities, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(a)(3), proper?

5. Was respondent's decision to disallow expenses incurred by Y.A.L.E. in the amount of $2,015.70 as an incident to a conference attended by Y.A.L.E. personnel in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, because pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)28 [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)32] costs incurred for conferences and meetings in "countries not contiguous to the United States are disallowable," proper?

6. Was respondent's determination, which denied gardening expenses incurred by Y.A.L.E. in the amount of $725.27 because they were deemed non-school related, proper?

7. Was respondent's determination, which allocated the salaries paid by Y.A.L.E. to its executive director and assistant director, pursuant to the method prescribed at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(c), rather than the allocation advanced by petitioner between its two campuses, proper?

8. Were various contributions made by Y.A.L.E. and deemed by respondent to be donations, awards and scholarships as defined at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)14 such that a maximum of $750.00 is allowable in the calculation of the certified actual cost per pupil for each of Y.A.L.E.'s two campuses or is the $750.00 maximum attributable to only one campus?

In respect to each of the foregoing, the burden rests exclusively with the petitioner: Y.A.L.E. must establish by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that the determinations arrived at by respondent from which this appeal has been taken were improper.

THE FACTS AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

The petitioner, Y.A.L.E., is a private school for the handicapped which is authorized to educate public school handicapped students, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g). Y.A.L.E.'s history dates back to 1977 when it served the needs of only three students and occupied space in a church in Woodbury, New Jersey. Mr. Louis Sarandoulias, is the individual primarily responsible for taking the institution from its tiny existence in the late 1970's and enlarging its base and operations. Mr. Sarandoulias is an educator with a long history of experience in teaching, vocational education, administration and an expertise in the area of special education. He has served as Y.A.L.E.'s director since 1979.

Following a period of growth and relocation, Y.A.L.E. today occupies two separate campuses. Its "Cherry Hill" campus is an elementary school which Y.A.L.E. has occupied since approximately 1985. The school in addition to its classrooms has a gym, an athletic field and a variety of facilities generally associated with typical public schools. The "Cherry Hill" campus serves primarily emotionally disturbed and neurologically impaired pupils whose ages range from 5 through 21. In 1981, Y.A.L.E. opened its second campus in Williamstown, Gloucester County, New Jersey, which caters primarily to emotionally disturbed high school pupils between the ages of 13 and 21. Also in 1981, Y.A.L.E. formed its vocational/career center and incorporated vocational programs into its campuses. These programs, as were described, include the teaching of various building trades, plumbing, and printing.

Today Y.A.L.E. serves between 56 and 60 "sending" school districts which encompass an area as far north as Mercer County and as far south as Salem County.

The "sending" districts refer students, most of whom are accepted, who are neurologically impaired and/or emotionally disturbed. Some of the pupils are rejected because their disabilities are too severe for ~~the limits of~~ Y.A.L.E. The "sending" school district generally provides transportation for the pupil who attends the various programs provided by Y.A.L.E. all of which are day programs. Mr. Sarandoulias estimated that at least for the period from 1985 through 1988 some 80% of the total of Y.A.L.E.'s student population was found at the "Cherry Hill" campus. It is clear that this percentage is not remote from the percentage existing today. It is also not unrelated to the distribution of Y.A.L.E.'s faculty between its two campuses.

Mr. Sarandoulias provided his understanding of the manner in which Y.A.L.E., as well as other private schools for the handicapped, are funded. Essentially, Y.A.L.E. receives tuition for the students it accepts from the "sending" school district. Based upon the prior school year's budget, the Department of Education calculates what Y.A.L.E.'s tuition rate for the following school year would be and notifies Y.A.L.E. of this determination in May or June. Essentially the tuition rate is arrived at by examining the previous year's average daily enrollment. Once that figure is arrived at (and presumably agreed to between the Department of Education and the private school) the "sending" school district is billed and pays that rate on a pro rata basis, usually submitting payments monthly, beginning in October of the following school year.

It is Y.A.L.E.'s assertion, and presumably there is no dispute, that tuition is the sole source of revenue for purposes of paying expenses and income to Y.A.L.E.'s teaching and non-teaching staff personnel. Mr. Sarandoulias emphasized the dilemma which presumably this process places on Y.A.L.E. as well as all other private schools for the handicapped. Since teacher contracts are signed and entered into in June of the year preceding the school year for which the contract applies, the private school enters into those contracts well before it can know with certainty that there will be sufficient students enrolled for the following year to generate tuitions necessary to meet its operating budget. As a consequence of this procedure, Y.A.L.E. has been compelled to obtain a line of credit on occasion (exceeding $400,000.00) to meet school expenditures from the beginning of the school year in September until sufficient tuition receipts are generated to meet the expenses already incurred.

The disputes engendered by this appeal center upon a variety of expenditures which the Department of Education has deemed to be non-allowable costs for purposes of computing the tuition rate of each student which then may be utilized by Y.A.L.E. to seek reimbursement from the various "sending" school districts.

It is within the context of this educational and financial background of Y.A.L.E. that the particulars of the appeal shall now be addressed.

Disallowance of Merit Pay

In what is the largest claim which is the subject of dispute in this hearing, the Department of Education determined that $295,195.75 in what was described as "merit pay" was a non-allowable cost for purposes of computing Y.A.L.E.'s tuition rate of its students, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)17 [as amended, currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(21)]. The Department found that the "merit pay" was distributed in a manner that was arbitrary, unreasonable, and capricious. Of the total sum, $31,287.40 was disallowed from funds distributed for the 1986-87 school year and the remaining $263,842.35 was disallowed from funds distributed for the 1987-88 school year.

The respondent during the proceedings at OAL also asserted that the basis for the disallowance of these funds was that they were deemed to be a bonus, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(29) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(35)]. The regulation prohibits as a non-allowable cost in the calculation of the certified actual cost per pupil "a payment or benefit to an employee in lieu of salary (bonus)."

The individual who was primarily responsible for the hands-on determination to craft a "merit pay" scheme is Mr. Edward Vonderschmidt, Y.A.L.E.'s current director of education and an employee of the institution since 1978. Mr. Vonderschmidt is an educator -- not a business administrator or an accountant. His background is in special education but his experience at Y.A.L.E. has also apparently made him "point man" in respect to the administrative and managerial relationship of Y.A.L.E. with its teachers and staff.

The motivation behind the "merit pay" idea, at least from the perspective of Y.A.L.E.'s witnesses, was simple: Y.A.L.E. experiences difficulties in attracting and keeping quality teachers because of the increased stress level at a private school for the handicapped and because private school teachers are traditionally paid less than public school teachers. Consequently, in an effort to provide teachers with a compensation and benefit package which would attract them and induce them into remaining, Mr. Vonderschmidt, with Mr. Sarandoulias' acquiescence, created and implemented the merit pay program.

The program was first implemented in the 1986-87 school year. The faculty handbook/policy manual for that school year indicates:

> In keeping with this institution's policy of elevating the standards of our program, a pension/merit pay system has been established for our professional staff. Qualified personnel who have demonstrated outstanding performance may be entitled to this award, pending the availability of funds. Staff members who will be returning for the third (3rd) School year at Y.A.L.E. are eligible. These eligible candidates may receive from zero (0) to ten (10) percent of their current salary. Decisions regarding pension/merit pay will be made by the Executive Director and/or the Director of Education.

The corporate minutes for the 1986-87 year also authorized the merit pay program as well as an expenditure of funds not to exceed $30,000.00, but the implementation of the merit pay scheme for the 1986-87 school year was not undertaken until the spring of 1987 when Mr. Vonderschmidt alone (Mr. Sarandoulias had apparently suffered a heart attack and was not available to participate in this administrative decision) determined to implement the program. At that time, Mr. Vonderschmidt changed the criteria for making the merit payment available by increasing the class of persons who could receive it to staff members who had been at Y.A.L.E. for less than three years. Thirty-three persons were awarded merit pay for the 1986-87 school year, 25 of whom had 3 or more years of service and 8 of whom had less than 3 or more years of service. Twenty-eight people of these 33 received merit pay in the amount of $550.00 and the other 5 persons received payments ranging from $1,700.00 to $2,500.00. Mr. Vonderschmidt awarded himself merit pay in the amount of $6,000.00. Total for the merit pay for the 1986-87 school year was $29,600.00 plus a related employer payroll tax contribution of $1,687.40, making the actual total for the 1986-87 school year $31,287.40. The testimony indicated that it was not until December 1987 that merit payments were made to the recipients for the 1986-87 school year.

The merit pay program was continued for the 1987-88 school year but the standards for distribution were modified. The salary adjustment guidelines provided that the educators'/employees' base salary was calculated and based upon an average daily enrollment at Y.A.L.E. of 200 students. If at the conclusion of the 1987-

88 school year, the average daily enrollment exceeded 200 students, "Y.A.L.E. may, in its discretion, pay the educators'/employees' salary in excess of the base salary of original contract."

In addition the "salary" paid by Y.A.L.E., pursuant to the forgoing, was "in the discretion of the administration of Y.A.L.E. ..." As part of its exercise of discretion, Y.A.L.E. was to take into consideration the employees' years of service and the employees' individual staff responsibilities. Following various studies and formulae which Mr. Vonderschmidt employed, he devised five classes of employees who would qualify for merit pay based upon years of service: teachers with three years of service; teachers with one year of service; teachers with two years of service; teachers with four or more years of service; and clerical staff. He concluded, as well, that merit pay in the amount of $1,775.00 would be available for teachers with three years of service for each of those three years. A first-year teacher was to be awarded $1,492.00. A second-year teacher was to be given pay in the amount of $1,329.00 multiplied by the number of years of service and those teachers who were employed for four or more years were to be given $1,197.00 multiplied by four. Clerical staff were to be given an adjustment of $1,275.00 per-year of employment. Based upon the foregoing determinations for the 1987-88 school year, merit pay was made by Y.A.L.E. in the amount of $201,351.00. The total number of individuals receiving merit pay for the 1987-88 school year was 46, all of whom received payment under the "years-of-service" criterion.

In addition to the years of service criterion, Mr. Vonderschmidt determined that there was also to be the potential for merit pay based upon "responsibility". Of the 46 persons awarded merit pay increases based on their years of service, 11 received an additional amount based upon the degree of responsibility that they were perceived to have exercised. The amount paid under this criteria was $40,417.00.

In addition, Mr. Vonderschmidt established a "performance" criterion under which $2,990.00 was paid to 12 of the 46 people who also received merit pay based upon the years-of-service criteria. The aggregate awarded to staff for merit pay for the 1987-88 school year was $244,758.00 which, when aggregated with the related employer payroll tax contributions of $19, 084.35, resulted in a total merit pay award for 1987-88 which was disallowed by respondent of $263,842.35. The payment of the merit awards for the school year 1987-88 was made approximately in October of 1988, some four months after the 1987-88 school year was completed.

A further aspect of the 1987-88 merit pay program was set forth in the Policy Manual Faculty Handbook for Y.A.L.E., (R-1), as follows:

> .... Qualified personnel who have demonstrated outstanding performance may be entitled to this award, pending the availability of funds. Staff members who will be returning for the third (3rd) school year at Y.A.L.E. are eligible. These eligible candidates may receive from zero (0) to ten (10) percent of their current salary. Decisions regarding pension merit pay, will be made by the Executive Director and the Director of Education.
>
> Salary adjustment guidelines are as follows:
>
> 1. .... Y.A.L.E. may, in its discretion, pay the educator/employee salary in excess of the base salary of [the] original contract.
> 2. The additional salary outlined in paragraph 1 may be paid by Y.A.L.E. School to the educator/employee in the discretion of the administration of Y.A.L.E. School ....

Y.A.L.E. asserts that the first paragraph set forth above is in error in that it should not have been included. It would seem in view of the totality of the evidence and testimony provided by Y.A.L.E. concerning how the merit pay system operated for 1987-88 that the execution of the policy would have been inconsistent with that paragraph and thus for purposes of this proceeding I will not engage in an explicit finding that paragraph 1 is the policy for the merit pay plan for the school year 1987-88. The school, however, does not deny that the paragraph was in effect for the 1986-87 school year. In my view, however, the question of how if at all the overall merit pay scheme would be altered by the applicable paragraph in the policy manual would not be dispositive of the issue.

As noted, it is the Department's position that the merit pay plan as outlined above is a cost which is not allowable, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(29) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(35)], because the plan represents a bonus in the form of the receipt by an employee of a payment or a benefit in lieu of salary. Mr. Forgash, in his submissions, makes much of the fact that the only witness called on behalf of respondent in this matter, who addressed himself not only to the merit pay issue but to all others, was an auditor who was not offered as an expert. In my view while expertise may be implicated in certain aspects of this proceeding, there are questions to be addressed which do not require eliciting expert testimony for their resolution. Indeed in the current matter the question raised is a legal one more so than an accounting one. But even if the merit pay question implicates accounting practices, a determination of whether under the foregoing regulation the merit pay scheme constitutes a bonus does not require such expertise.

In addition as will be recalled, the burden in this matter does not rest upon respondent to establish and uphold its disallowance; rather, the burden is on the petitioner to determine the impropriety of the determinations from which this appeal was taken.

In her brief, Ms. Lutz cites to various authorities construing the nature of a bonus. In Taylor v. Errion, 137 N.J. Eq. 221 (Chan. Div. 1945), a bonus was defined as something given "in addition to what is ordinarily earned by or strictly due to the recipient." "A bonus is something given or paid in addition to the usual or expected. It usually applies to money in excess of what is normally received or strictly due, given in consideration of superior achievement or as a share of the profits." In re Estate of Gregoriou, 142 N.J. Super. 457 (Cty. Ct. 1976).

In my judgment regardless of the appellation given to the payments made by Y.A.L.E. to its staff members in 1986-87 and 1987-88, those payments indeed constituted a bonus. The monies which were paid were not obligatory; that is, notwithstanding that a Y.A.L.E. official may have announced an intention to pay monies in the future, it was entirely discretionary. It need not have been given and even if it were, its distribution was dependent upon the exercise of the discretion of the school. Clearly, in addition, no employee had an entitlement to the receipt of the merit pay or was in possession of a legal contractual right to those monies should it have been withheld. That payment of the monies was actually made some six months after the school year in 1986-87 and some four months after the expiration of the school year in 1987-88 is wholly consistent with the conclusion that payment was contingent upon a variety of factors and was totally separate and wholly distinct from the contractual rights of staff and teaching personnel that defined their salaries during the applicable school years.

Much of Y.A.L.E.'s argument addressing itself to its efforts to overturning the disallowance of the merit pay sum as an allowable cost is, in my view, not material to the legal issue before me. Much testimony and evidence was elicited by Messrs. Vonderschmidt and Sarandoulias which go to the motivation behind Y.A.L.E.'s decision. They testified, and Mr. Forgash reinforced their testimony in his post-hearing submission, concerning the difficulties which Y.A.L.E. had (as presumably other private schools for the handicapped have as well) in maintaining and attracting quality teachers. This difficulty was based in large part on the inability of private schools to meet the salaries of the public school sector. In addition, it resulted from what is acknowledged to be a highly stressful classroom environment. So it was clear that given the real factors underlying the problems that Y.A.L.E. began to experience -- particularly that it was losing quality teachers -- its administration in a perhaps good faith effort to be more competitive sought ways to keep those people on staff who were quality people and to attract others as well. The obvious way to encourage and maintain staff is, among others, giving them money. Mr. Vonderschmidt, admittedly a non-fiscally educated or oriented individual, did some private research and following a year or two of encouragement convinced Mr. Sarandoulias that the way to go was to employ a merit pay plan. Indeed there was some reference that the plan had even been discussed with an attorney and/or an accountant. So it is clear that the motivation behind the plan was ostensibly a salutary and reasonable one: maintain as fine a staff as possible.

In addition, the other prong of Y.A.L.E.'s apparent motivation concerns the school's inability, at least as set forth by Mr. Vonderschmidt, to raise the salary schedule for the staff. Mr. Vonderschmidt explained that in his view by the very nature of enrollment of pupils at Y.A.L.E. and by the very nature of funding which to a significant extent is based upon projections, Y.A.L.E. could not raise salaries in a manner which would be consistent with sound fiscal management. As Mr. Forgash notes at page 12 of his initial brief:

> So that when September comes and Y.A.L.E. starts its school year, it is obliged to pay substantial expenditures without knowing, without any guarantee, that there will sufficient students in order to generate cash flow to meet the operating budget. Tuition, and tuition alone, is the source of revenue to pay Y.A.L.E. staff and its other expenses. [Written Summation, Robert J. Forgash, Esq., May 8, 1992, at 12.]

Thus, Y.A.L.E. has reasonably and satisfactorily explained why it could not raise salaries, why it felt compelled to provide additional revenues to its staff, and why, therefore, it chose to utilize what has come to be described as a merit pay plan. The fundamental point that must be emphasized is that notwithstanding what might be described as the good faith intentions of Y.A.L.E. to reward its employees, Y.A.L.E.'s motivation cannot validate what is otherwise a patently invalid payment scheme under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4. I must infer that Y.A.L.E.'s predicament is not unlike the predicament in which many other private schools for the handicapped find themselves. The regulations, however, that have been promulgated by the Department of Education and which detail those costs which are and are not allowable for purposes of calculating the certified actual cost-per-pupil were promulgated for and addressed to these very facilities. The arguments which I have outlined above cannot circumvent those regulations. Those are arguments that should be addressed to those persons charged with the responsibility of promulgating and amending applicable regulations. While I may personally sympathize with the fiscal plight of Y.A.L.E. and other schools for the handicapped, I have no more authority than do the representatives of Y.A.L.E. to disregard the regulations and to pass on to the various sending school districts those costs for reimbursement which the regulations explicitly proscribe. It is very easy to be generous with other people's money. It is also, on occasion, impermissible. This is one such occasion.

Mr. Forgash notes that the 1986-87 "merit pay program was a smash hit. It was a huge success. The teachers and staff were ecstatic." Id. at 18. He notes as well that the "merit pay/salary adjustment program for the school year 1987-1988 was again a smash hit. The recipients were thrilled." Id .at 22. While the consequence of the implementation of the merit plan was ostensibly successful -- morale was up, turnover was low -- the consequence of the program has no more significance on its validity than its motivation.

Similarly, any argument that Mr. Forgash raises concerning the fashion and manner in which the audit may have been conducted below cannot and should not obfuscate the facts as they were elicited at hearing. Those facts manifested in a de novo proceeding are the operative facts in these proceedings and serve as the exclusive basis under which an assessment of Y.A.L.E.'s arguments must be measured. By this determination I do not suggest or imply that the Department of Education was derelict in the fashion in which it conducted its audit. I make no finding in this regard since the disposition of this matter is determined exclusively by the proofs offered at hearing. As Ms. Lutz properly summarizes at page 17 of her April 9, 1992 letter brief:

> Thus, even if the school met its threshold requirement of 200 average daily enrollment, there was no commitment on the part of the school to distribute the excess funds. Moreover, if the school did in its discretion choose to distribute the funds, there was no guarantee that any individual would receive money, since the determination regarding how the funds would be distributed was also within the discretion of the administrators. Clearly then, this pay was not regular or expected compensation. Rather, it was something in addition to what was > ordinarily earned... It was given or paid in addition to the usual or expected... It was a bonus and properly disallowed pursuant to regulation. Id. at 17-18. [Citations omitted.]

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that Y.A.L.E. has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that $295,195.75 in "merit pay" distributed to Y.A.L.E. employees paid for the 1986-87 school year and 1987-88 school year was not a non-allowable cost because it is deemed a bonus, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(29) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(35)].

Having concluded that the merit pay system was disallowable as a bonus under the foregoing regulation, it is superfluous to address any of the other arguments offered by the parties which seek to invalidate or validate the merit pay plan on other grounds. For purposes of a complete decision, however, and for purposes of providing the final decision maker with a comprehensive analysis of this issue in the event that the conclusion is reversed, I shall address the other argument raised by Ms. Lutz in support of the decision by respondent to disallow the merit pay plan.

The Department of Education concluded, separate and apart from the question of whether the merit pay plan was a bonus, that the funds earmarked as "merit pay" was non-allowable because it was distributed in a manner that was both arbitrary and capricious in contravention of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(17) [as amended, currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(21)]. The regulation provides that the following is a cost which is non-allowable in the calculation of the certified actual cost-per-pupil:

> Fringe benefits -- when the benefits are determined in an arbitrary or capricious manner rather than on an existing uniform established policy based on an equitable standard of distribution, such as years of service or education.

In her April 9, 1992 post-hearing submission at page 20, Ms. Lutz sets forth the basis under which the Department of Education concluded that the merit pay plan contravened the foregoing regulation:

> The regulation clearly envisions that everyone eligible for the benefit as similarly situated people will receive it, as for example all who are employed for the fifth year or all employees with Master's degrees. It does not permit the school to determine who among the staff would be eligible for the fringe benefit. In a true fringe benefit equally distributed there is no discretion on the part of > the school to determine who of the eligible people will receive it. Thus, the regulation precludes standards of distribution as "performance" or "degree of responsibility," because such standards permit the school to manipulate the distribution and predetermine who will receive the benefit. Plainly, an acceptable fringe benefit does not allow a school the discretion petitioner had in distributing its benefit. Petitioner's distribution of the unexpended funds was not a proper fringe benefit equitably distributed.

In his response to this argument, Mr. Forgash again addresses the manner in which the audit was conducted in the administrative context and strongly argues that because the auditor in Mr. Forgash's view was not fully apprised of the facts and circumstances giving rise to the merit pay plan that he was, thus, not in a position to assess the reasonableness or the lack of reasonableness in its implementation.

As was my view in respect to other arguments raised by Mr. Forgash in a different context, his focus on what may have occurred below is not significant in respect to the issue before me. Whether the auditor did or did not have before him all of the facts and all of the work-product that went into the creation and implementation of the merit pay program does not go to a determination here as to whether that plan does or does not comport with the requirements of then N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(17). It is the factual and evidential record created in this de novo proceeding as measured against the law that will determine the propriety or impropriety of the merit pay issue and whether indeed it does or does not comprise an allowable cost under regulation.

There appears, however, to be no argument that the merit pay program can reasonably be designated as a "fringe benefit." Thus the only real issue for purposes of this aspect of the analysis is whether the merit pay plan was determined and implemented in an arbitrary or capricious manner.

Mr. Forgash spends much time in his post-hearing arguments in advancing the notion that indeed the merit pay plan was a reasoned, rational plan, created by Mr. Vonderschmidt's good faith attempts to meet the needs of his staff. Mr. Forgash, for example, underscores at page 25 of his initial submission that Mr. Vonderschmidt, admittedly having little to "go on," in respect to creating a merit pay plan "was using his best judgment and furtherance of a valid business goal. He was making a reasonable business decision." (Emphasis in original.)

Mr. Forgash then proceeds to cite authority construing what is meant by "arbitrary and capricious," essentially characterizing it as being "willful and unreasoned action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances."

In my view, the difficulty with Mr. Forgash's argument is that while he is advancing a general notion of what is meant by reasonableness and its antithetical idea of arbitrary and capriciousness, N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(17) advances a specific notion of what constitutes arbitrary and capricious as a matter of regulatory language. The regulation explicitly sets forth that benefits are deemed to be determined in an arbitrary or capricious manner if they are not based upon "an existing written uniform policy based on an equitable standard of distribution, such as years of service or education..." Thus regardless of Mr. Vonderschmidt's good faith intention and regardless of whether he was doing the best he could under trying circumstances, in order for the fringe benefits (in this case merit pay) to be deemed an allowable cost it must be based upon an existing written uniform policy which is premised on an equitable standard of distribution, such as years of service or education.

Earlier in this opinion I detailed with great particularity the criteria which Mr. Vonderschmidt created as well as the manner in which he applied those criteria to both teaching and non-teaching staff personnel for the school years 1986-87 and 1987-88. It is beyond peradventure that the master plan under which merit pay was distributed and the manner of selection of individuals qualifying for merit pay as well as the amount to which each of those individuals would be entitled is clearly not based upon an existing uniform policy based on an equitable standard of distribution. Rather it is based upon Mr. Vonderschmidt's albeit perceived reasonable efforts to exercise his discretion in the distribution of different sums of money to different individuals employed by Y.A.L.E. for different reasons. While one could reasonably conclude in a generalized context that Mr. Vonderschmidt's judgment in the creation of this plan and its execution was not inherently arbitrary in that there are obvious ostensible correlations between years of service, performance, responsibilities and when and if an employee is deserving of a merit pay award, that is not the standard envisioned by the applicable "fringe benefit" regulation. Thus, whether Mr. Vonderschmidt was using his best judgments in furtherance of a business goal or not is simply in and of itself insufficient if not entirely immaterial to a determination of whether the plan meets the regulatory standard at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(17). In the foreground of this conclusion also lurks the rather sloppy effort on behalf of Y.A.L.E. to articulate in writing its own established policies. While Ms. Lutz attempts to demonstrate that once something was set down either in a policy manual or elsewhere it was etched in stone and thus any deviation from that policy resulted in an inherent arbitrary execution of the policy, I am more satisfied with the explanation by Y.A.L.E. that there were mistakes and on occasion inconsistencies between policies and board minutes. But these inconsistencies really do not establish anything but that the plan was not one that was clearly defined and articulated in a written policy which was uniform and it may very well have demonstrated as well that the school did, in fact, deviate from its policy. But even if it did not deviate from its policy, the policy itself in my view did not comport with the regulatory standard.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence that the determination arrived at by the Department of Education that the sums designated as merit pay and distributed to various personnel for the school years 1986-87 and 1987-88 was a disallowable cost because it was a fringe benefit determined in an arbitrary and capricious manner in contravention of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(17) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(21)]* was in error.

Restaurant Expenses

Y.A.L.E. is appealing a decision by the Department of Education which held as a non-allowable cost $1,709.03 in restaurant charges. The basis of the respondent's determination was the application of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(13) [superseded by N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(17)], which provided that costs incurred for the entertainment of school offices or employees "for a non-school-related activity or any related activity item such as meals, lodging, rentals, transportation and gratuities" are non-allowable.

* Although the numbers are insignificant in the context of the extent of the merit pay plan, since the plan is reasonably deemed an award, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(10) [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(14)], such award is allowable up to but not exceeding $750.00 for each of the school's campuses. Since that amount has already been exceeded because each of the campuses has already used its allotted $750.00 for contributions, no aspect of the merit pay plan can be passed on to the sending districts pursuant to the formula utilized by the Department of Education in calculating the certified actual cost-per-pupil.

The basis under which the Department administratively denied the costs was that in its view there was no verification or documentation by way of receipts which would go to establishing that the various restaurant charges were incurred as an incident to school-related activities. Ms. Lutz argues at page 4 of her April 9, 1992 letter brief that while Y.A.L.E. did bring to the hearing a variety of receipts, they were never placed into the record and consequently they should not be reviewed by the administrative law judge in an effort to determine if the costs reflected in those receipts were allowable as school-related activities.

Mr. Forgash does not dispute that the various receipts were not evidential in the matter. He argues that during a break in the hearing, copies of the various receipts were shown to a representative of the respondent who chose not to assess them for purposes of reconsidering the latter's position in respect to restaurant charges. Mr. Forgash argues that the original determination of the respondent was based on findings supported only by monthly billing which presumably does not reflect the persons participating at the restaurant and/or the purpose of the dinner or meeting.

Based upon these arguments, it is clear the Ms. Lutz is correct: the testimonial and evidential record in these proceedings does not include within it, nor based on my recollection did Mr. Forgash move or attempt to move those documents into the record, the various receipts which reflected the restaurant costs incurred which are the subject of the appeal of this disallowance. The only other effort made by Y.A.L.E. to overturn the decision is a reference to the report which was prepared by James F. Leone, Y.A.L.E.'s accountant and financial advisor since 1976. Ms. Lutz argues that Mr. Leone's credibility is in issue (see footnote to page 5 of her April 9, 1992 submission). She notes that the most "troubling" aspect of his credibility is that he acknowledged performing the annual audits for Y.A.L.E. and that under then N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.8 such audit was required to be conducted by an independent certified public accountant. "Given that, by Leone's own testimony, he had been associated with the school as its financial advisor since 1976, one must call into question his judgment in certifying the annual audits he did as an 'independent' CPA."

As with any witness any interest or involvement that he or she has in a proceeding must be measured and assessed in determining credibility. This is not to suggest that because of Mr. Leone's involvement with Y.A.L.E. his credibility has been impeached. His relationship with the school and with the audit does, however, speak for itself.

Mr. Forgash refers to page 3 of Mr. Leone's letter (P-2). In respect to restaurant charges, Mr. Leone indicates:

> Most impossibly all of the invoices and explanations were provided to the auditors. It appears that the auditors may have failed to look at the blue collar tickets and the reversed side of certain invoices. The restaurant charges were related to school employees, independent auditors, insurance agents, lawyers, contractors, school photographer and others providing services to the school. These expenses are clearly documented and should be allowable costs. [P-2 at 3-4.]

The statements offered by Mr. Leone in his letter of July 26, 1991, are entirely hearsay and conclusory in nature. Absent any direct documentary proof or more specific sworn testimony concerning the disallowance it is my view that Y.A.L.E. has not been able to meet its burden in overturning the decision by the Department concerning restaurant charges. I, therefore, CONCLUDE that Y.A.L.E. has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that the respondent's determination to disallow $1,709.03 in restaurant charges because in its view those charges did not satisfactorily establish that under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)(13) they were incurred for school-related activities, was improper.

Landscaping Expenses

The Department of Education denied as a non-allowable cost $4,425.00 which Y.A.L.E. paid to a landscaping company for landscaping at its Cherry Hill campus. Y.A.L.E. had charged this amount as an allowable cost, deeming it to be a teaching supply. While not concluding that the landscaping was done for non-school related matters, the respondent did determine that rather than construing the $4,425.00 to be a budgetary item which can be deemed an allowable cost, the amount should have been capitalized and depreciated as an improvement to school facilities.

In his post-hearing submission, Mr. Forgash makes reference exclusively to Mr. Leone's report (P-2) in support of Y.A.L.E.'s position that the determination by the respondent was improper.

The Department of Education arrived at its conclusion concerning the landscaping expenses by an application of N.J.A.C. 6:2-4.3. The regulation provides that a fixed asset expenditure of $1,000.00 or more shall be capitalized and depreciated using the straight-line method.* In addition, as Ms. Lutz properly notes in respect to this and other expenditures, landscaping costs were not entirely disallowed by the Department of Education; rather, its determination that it must be capitalized results in an inclusion in the tuition it passes on to sending districts over a period of years.

The nature of the actual landscaping, from the evidence, consists essentially and/or exclusively of the purchase and placing into the ground of a variety of plants which, pursuant to Mr. Leone's report, totaled 48. The invoice for those plants indicates that payment was for "redesigning and replanting" and that the plants were guaranteed for a period not to exceed one year. In his letter (P-2) Mr. Leone asserts that the $4,425.00 in expenditures "did not increase the value of property." He then refers to what appears to be a text of accounting principles which indicates that expenditures which "increase the capacity or operating efficiency of an asset, if they are substantial, should be capitalized. Minor expenditures are usually treated as period costs even though they have the characteristics of capital expenditures." (P-2 at 7-8).

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(a)(1), generally accepted accounting principles apply to the accounting and bookkeeping systems for private schools for the handicapped. The same regulation provides as well that fixed asset expenditures of $1,000.00 or more shall be capitalized and depreciated using the straight-line method and a useful life consistent with current federal tax law. Pursuant to subdivision one of N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3, where the regulations themselves modify accounting principles which might otherwise be defined by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, the rules and regulations take precedence. Thus, as Ms. Lutz properly argues, generally accepted accounting principles as they apply to the treatment of fixed asset expenditures of $1,000.00 or more are superseded by N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(3). Citing from a fundamental text on accounting Ms. Lutz, to my satisfaction, establishes that landscaping and planting clearly constitutes a fixed asset; indeed, it does not seem to be in dispute that Y.A.L.E.'s own accountant acknowledges that a fixed asset is one having a life of more than one year.

* Subsequent to the applicable facts in these proceedings, the regulation was amended to create an exception in respect to realty.

Further, the argument that might be made that the landscaping, although aggregating $4,425.00, in reality constitutes 48 separate purchases of less than $100.00 is unacceptable. The reasonable perspective of landscaping is the one which the testimony of the representative of respondent set forth: In order to determine the cost of a fixed asset one must reasonably look to the cost of the entire project not to the cost of each separate unit within the project. Y.A.L.E. paid one invoice totaling $4,825.00 for a landscaping project which was comprised of 48 plants but which also included design and installation.

In addition, Mr. Leone's assertion at page 8 of his letter (P-2) that because there was the possibility that the plants as a consequence of heat, cold, rain or disease might not survive a period of one year does not change their characteristics as fixed assets. Rather the question is whether from a reasonable prospective view of an asset it is to be expected that the item will be useful for more than a current year. Certainly the planting of shrubs and plants is done with the reasonable expectation that they will survive a one-year period. One would not wait until after the one-year period expired to retrospectively examine the landscaping to determine whether it constitutes a fixed asset or not.

Finally, as Ms. Lutz also notes, the landscaper guaranteed the plants for a period of up to one year. Clearly the landscaping constitutes a fixed asset whose value exceeds the value of each individual plant. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of relevant credible evidence that the determination of the Department of Education which held that $4,425.00 expended for landscaping was a non-allowable cost and concluded that the cost should have been capitalized and depreciated as an improvement to school facilities was improper.

Window Shading Film Expenses

The Department of Education, utilizing the same approach that it took in respect to the landscaping issue, denied as a non-allowable cost $4,825.00 which Y.A.L.E. expended for the installation of shading film on the windows of the school. Asserting that the window shading film is a fixed asset and adopting the same reasoning as was the case for landscaping, the Deputy Attorney General asks that the cost for installation be deemed a fixed asset and controlled by N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(a)(3).

Mr. Forgash relies on Mr. Leone's letter (P-2) in support of his assertion that the Department's decision should be overturned. Mr. Leone indicates that in respect to the $4,825.00 total it is representative of ten different invoices ranging from between $400.00 and $500.00 each. Each invoice, Mr. Leone 's letter indicates, covered between 40 and 50 windowpanes, the costs also including caulking, repairing, scraping, coding and cleaning the panes. He concludes: "It is very doubtful that an expenditure of this type would increase the value of such a large property." Id. at 8. Mr. Leone again refers to a text of generally accepted accounting practices in support of his conclusion that the window shade filming is a cost and should be considered as a current expense.

I adopt for purposes of the window shade expense analysis the same reasoning that was applied and the same regulatory criteria that was applicable to the discussion of the landscaping costs. It is clear that the aggregate cost for the window shading film exceeds the $1,000.00 limitation under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.3(a)(3) and that the shading film itself is and should reasonably be deemed a fixed asset, the expense of which should be capitalized. Because the regulation explicitly addresses itself to this fixed asset, any discussion in respect to how generally accepted accounting principles would deal with the issue is superseded by the regulatory standard; Y.A.L.E.'s effort to divide the expense at issue by arguing that there were separate invoices for a variety of window shades is untenable. The window shading film arose from a single contract and the price was for the installation of the window shading film which included as well the variety of repairs, scraping and caulking that was referred to. As Ms. Lutz notes, these other steps were preparatory for the installation of the window shading film and the expense should be perceived as being paid for one contractual project which is clearly a fixed asset. The intention and reasonable expectation is that window shading film is expected to benefit more than one accounting cycle and to last for more than a period of one year. It should also be noted that the contract was performed at a single installation.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence that the determination of respondent, that the $4,825.00 expended by Y.A.L.E. for window shading film must be capitalized because it represented an expenditure for a fixed asset, was improper.

Expenses Related to the Conference Held in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands

Apparently some $2,015.70 (the amount is referred to at page 9 of exhibit P-2) was submitted by the petitioner as an expense which was related to the attendance by one of the school's owners and a teacher at a conference in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands. The respondent denied this expenditure as a non-allowable cost under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)28 [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)32], which deems costs non-allowable when associated with a professional conference and/or meeting "held in countries not contiguous to the United States."

There seems no dispute between the litigants in this matter that the conference at issue was indeed one which was associated with the professional and educational responsibilities of Y.A.L.E.; rather, the denial is based exclusively upon the geographical issue of whether indeed St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, is a country not contiguous to the United States.

The matter was initially dealt with on the motion for partial summary decision brought by Ms. Lutz. In my ruling and order I concluded that there were genuine fact issues presented which could not be resolved on the papers in respect to whether the St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, is or is not a country and if it is whether it is contiguous or not to the United States. In that ruling I explicitly indicated that the view expressed by Y.A.L.E., which was the sole basis for its opposition of the motion, which is based exclusively upon its accountant's statement in his letter of July 26, 1991 (P-2) does not establish, to my satisfaction, the resolution of the issue. See, Ruling and Order, October 22, 1991, on Motion for Partial Summary Decision at 7-8.

In his post-hearing submission at page 35, Mr. Forgash does not expand upon his opposition to the Department's determination but rather refers precisely to the same assertion by his accountant which duplicates the argument which was raised on the motion. Mr. Leone in his letter brief cites to the Encyclopedia Americana (1987 Edition) noting that the western Virgin Islands are "an unincorporated territory of the United States." Volume 28, page 148. Since in the determination of Mr. Leone based upon the encyclopedic definition, the Virgin Islands is not a country, then it is clear that whether it is or is not contiguous to the United States is irrelevant. Ms. Lutz, relying on Black's Law Dictionary's definition of "country," adopts an overly broad view of that definition which includes within it a primary meaning which implicates the population, the nation, the state or the government having possession and dominion over a territory.

Neither party has in my view provided the kind of geographic evidential proofs which would establish for this proceeding a resolution to the issue. Therefore, I, as a layman, am left to make a reasoned judgment based upon the ordinary interpretation given to the relevant terms. Having said that, it is my judgment that as the word "country" as commonly used does not apply to the Virgin Islands, which is deemed by one generally accepted encyclopedic definition to be an unincorporated territory of the United States. While there admittedly may be various nuances distinguishing the term "country" from the foregoing description and which might on other occasions, as for example in a diplomatic setting, make the two synonymous, a reading of the regulation strongly suggests that the intention was to exclude as allowable those expenses incurred in what one would traditionally describe as a country separate and distinct from the United States. That notion is disparate from disallowing costs incurred in an incorporated territory of the United States.

Accordingly and based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that the expenditures of $2,015.70 associated with a professional conference conducted by several of its personnel in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, is not a cost associated with a conference held in countries not contiguous to the United States. It is, therefore, ORDERED that the decision of the Department which disallowed this expenditure under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)28 [currently N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)32] is REVERSED.

Gardening Costs

The respondent denied as a non-allowable cost $725.27 which Y.A.L.E. asserted was expended for the purchase of plants and supplies for the school "garden" club. The denial was based on the determination by the Department that the purchase was for non-school related expenses and that Y.A.L.E. was unable to establish satisfactory proof sufficient to contradict that conclusion.

The representative of respondent in his testimony indicated and confirmed that he was provided with a garden club proposal from the school (R-6) indicating that the proposed costs for the gardening activities and supplies was to be a one time $50.00 to$60.00 expense going to the planting of bulbs during a four or five week period in the fall of the year. The various invoices submitted by Y.A.L.E. to Green Lea, Inc. totaling the $725.27 not only far exceeds the garden club's proposal but also reflects purchases for the spring of the year as well as a variety of gardening items which not only are inconsistent with R-6 but which reasonably raise questions which would compel Y.A.L.E. to come forward and explain why these items would not have been purchased for home use.

I do not find as fact that the purchases at issue were made for the private use of any of Y.A.L.E.'s representatives; rather, the only evidential record Y.A.L.E. has provided in support of its claim, R-6, is inapposite to the proofs provided by the Department. Consequently, the petitioner has been unable to meet its burden and establish that the Department's determination was improper. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence that the determination of respondent that the expenditure for gardening of $725.27 was a non-school related expense was improper.

Allocation of Expense of Salary of the Executive Director and the Assistant Director

In its accounting, Y.A.L.E. sought to allocate exclusively to its Cherry Hill campus the salaries which it paid to its executive director and its assistant director for the 1987-88 school years. Presumably, this allocation would be one which is more fiscally advantageous to Y.A.L.E.'s balance sheets than if some of the salary expenses were allocated to its Williamstown campus.

Respondent disallowed this accounting, concluding that the allocation did not adequately and properly represent and reflect the work performed by these officials for the Williamstown campus. Thereafter, following this administrative determination, Y.A.L.E. sought to allocate 98 percent of the salaries at issue to its Cherry Hill campus, the remaining 2 percent to be allocated to its Williamstown campus. Respondent's position at hearing is that this allocation must also be rejected because it too fails to properly and accurately reflect the services performed by these officials for the Williamstown campus. As a consequence, the Department concluded that since in its view Y.A.L.E. was unable to reasonably establish a justification for any allocation of the salaries for its executive director and assistant director, resort had to be made to the then applicable regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(c), which provided:

> Whenever it is not possible to charge the actual amount expended for a particular allowable cost item for each private school site.... The individual share of such expenditure for each site or program shall be determined > on a pro rata basis in accordance with the following ratios or other acceptable method as approved by the Commissioner....

> 1. Administration: Ratio of number of teachers, aides and assistants at each site or in each program to the total number of teachers, aides and assistants.

Petitioner again relies on the report of Mr. Leone (P-2) as a primary basis for its position that it indeed is able to reasonably allocate the costs associated with the salaries such that the invocation of N.J.A.C. 6:21-4.1(c) and its formula may be dispensed with. Mr. Leone and Y.A.L.E. rely almost exclusively on their assertion that allocation of salaries for these officials of Y.A.L.E. should be based on where the executive director and assistant director spend their time. "If their time was expended performing work relating to the Cherry Hill campus, then it follows that their cost should be allocated to the Cherry Hill school. On the other hand, if their time was expended performing work relating to the Williamstown school, then the cost should be allocated to the Williamstown school." P-2 at 4.

Thereafter, Mr. Leone seeks to make various distinctions between the Williamstown and Cherry Hill campuses and to correlate what is obviously a significantly more diminished Williamstown campus to a diminished allocation of the officials' time and salaries as they may be devoted to the educational process at the latter institution. The emphasis is then placed upon where both officials, Mr. Sarandoulias and Mr. Vonderschmidt, spent most of their time. The testimony suggested that all but one hour per-week was spent at the Cherry Hill campus. Mr. Leone also asserts that the daily time sheets which he notes are mandated to be maintained by the respondent indicated that both the executive director and the assistant director reported to the Cherry Hill facility each and every day of the school year.

In my view, the mere fact that both the executive director and the assistant director may have spent most of their time at the Cherry Hill location does not provide cogent evidence to support the view that the time that was spent there was devoted almost exclusively to Cherry Hill campus activities. In addition as Ms. Lutz points out, the fact that the time sheets were presented that indicate that these individuals were working at the Cherry Hill facility and the duration of their work at that facility merely demonstrates their physical presence there but "does not prove that they were not doing work for Williamstown." Respondent's brief, April 9, 1992, at 13.

Even if the Williamstown campus was, by respondent's admission, significantly smaller, it is axiomatic that responsibilities concerning that campus -- educational, managerial, fiscal, and a variety of other obligations -- had to be done on its behalf and could reasonably have been done at the Cherry Hill campus. The further effort by Y.A.L.E. to prove that its 98 percent/2 percent allocation is proper which relied upon mileage records to determine the number of trips Mr. Sarandoulias and Mr. Vonderschmidt may have made to Williamstown is equally unconvincing. Apparently the records indicated that there were some 42 trips in one vehicle during the applicable time frame made to the Williamstown campus. I am not convinced that given the distance of that campus and the time necessary to make the trip that this record of travel establishes any aspect of Y.A.L.E.'s assertion.

The record is unclear as to how much time and energy was spent by the executive director and the assistant director in respect to effectuating their responsibilities for the Williamstown campus. I am satisfied, however, that the record provided by Y.A.L.E. is insufficient to sustain its assertion that Mr. Sarandoulias and Mr. Vonderschmidt spent no more than 2 percent of their time, energy and involvement in matters concerning the Williamstown campus. Since Y.A.L.E. has been unable to support this 98 percent/2percent allocation and since neither I nor presumably the Department of Education is in a position to assess any other acceptable method to determine the appropriate allocation, resort has to be made to the regulation then in existence, N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(c), which was promulgated to address this very condition.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish by a preponderance of the relevant credible evidence that the determination by respondent that Y.A.L.E. has not satisfactorily established the appropriate allocation for the salaries of the executive director and assistant director in respect to each of its two campuses and, thus, allocation must be established pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1(c) was improper.

Allowance for Contributions, Donations and Awards

In the ruling and order issued on October 22, 1991, Ms. Lutz's motion was granted in respect to determining that a variety of expenditures made by Y.A.L.E. were donations, awards and scholarships as defined under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)14. See, Ruling and Order on Motion for Partial Summary Decision, October 2, 1991, at 3-4. As a consequence of that determination once such expenditures were designated as contributions, donations or awards, there was a maximum allowable in the calculation of the certified actual cost per pupil of $750.00. The only issue that was left to be addressed, following the issuance of the ruling and order, was whether the $750.00 maximum applies to both the Cherry Hill and Williamstown campus or whether each campus is entitled to a separate $750.00 maximum.

Mr. Forgash in his post-hearing submission argues that since the testimony demonstrated that regardless of whose figures were utilized the amounts expended in the form of contributions, donations and awards by each campus exceeded $750.00, each should be entitled to a separate $750.00 maximum allowance. Ms. Lutz does not address this issue in either her initial or post-hearing submission. Presumably, therefore, she does not oppose Mr. Forgash's argument. Absent any dispute in respect to the total sum expended by Y.A.L.E. under this category,* it is reasonable to conclude that given the separate nature of both the Cherry Hill and Williamstown campuses each is deserving of a separate $750.00 maximum allowable cost.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has established by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(14) each of its campuses is entitled to a maximum $750.00 representing contributions, donations, awards and scholarships which can be computed as an allowable cost in the calculation of the certified actual cost per pupil.

Based upon the foregoing, but for the determination arrived at granting Y.A.L.E.'s appeal rights in respect to the costs incurred at the conference attended in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, and but for the declaration that each campus is entitled to a separate maximum of $750.00 allowable costs under N.J.A.C. 7:20-4.4(14), it is ORDERED that all of the other determinations arrived at by respondent be and are hereby SUSTAINED.

At page 6 of my October 22, 1991 ruling, after granting Ms. Lutz's motion in part and ruling that the purchase of expensive custom pen and pencil sets and leather desk sets were limited by the $750.00 maximum at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(a)14, I explicitly noted I would not deny the respondent the right at hearing "to seek to argue that even in this respect any 'expression of thanks' to the owners of the school can also be attacked as an invalid expenditure...." To the best of my knowledge, neither at hearing nor in a post-hearing argument has respondent sought to make this argument.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Y.A.L.E. SCHOOL, INC.	:
PETITIONER,	:

NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, including transcripts of hearings, and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner, as were replies thereto by the Department, pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4. Both essentially rely on the arguments of post-hearing submissions which are well summarized by the ALJ and need not be repeated at length herein.

In its exceptions, petitioner makes general contentions that the ALJ made inaccurate factual determinations, that he failed to recognize petitioner's thorough impeachment of the credibility of the Department's sole witness, and that he erred in failing to consider petitioner's allegations of deficiencies in the conduct of the audit that gave rise to this matter. With regard to specific disallowances, except for the ALJ's determination on the allowability of expenses related to a conference in the Virgin Islands, petitioner contests all of the ALJ's recommendations for the reasons argued in its post-hearing summation as briefly reiterated in its exception letter, particularly the issues of bonuses and fringe benefits.

In turn, the Department argues that, with the exception of the issue of the Virgin Islands conference expenses, the ALJ's findings and conclusions are well supported by the record and should be affirmed. The Department further notes that the hearing in this matter was expressly conducted de novo, so that the ALJ was correct in regarding alleged errors in the conduct of the underlying audit as irrelevant, and that the petitioner bore the burden of proving that its expenditures were allowable.

Upon careful review, the Commissioner concurs with the decision of the ALJ for the reasons well expressed by him in his initial decision. The Commissioner finds the ALJ's findings and conclusions to be fully supported by the record and sees no basis on which to question the ALJ's credibility judgments, which in any event are not central to a matter which hinges on questions of law and interpretation of regulation rather than on true disputes of fact. Further, the Commissioner finds that the hearing was indeed conducted de novo, so that petitioner had every opportunity to demonstrate the allowability of its expenditures entirely independent of the manner in which the audit may have been carried out (an issue on which no judgment is expressed herein). Finally, the Commissioner fully endorses the ALJ's interpretation of the controlling regulations in this matter and reiterates the ALJ's observation that allegations of unreasonableness in these regulations are challenges to facial validity which must be pursued in a court of appropriate jurisdiction.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law, dismissing the instant Petition of Appeal in all regards except as to conference expenses incurred in the Virgin Islands and the separate maximum allowable cost of $750 under N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.4(14), is affirmed for the reasons well expressed therein.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN,
Respondent.

Lloyd D. Henderson, Esq., for petitioner

Karen A. Murray, Esq., for respondent (Murray, Murray and Corrigan, attorneys)

BEFORE BRUCE R. CAMPBELL, ALJ:

Action for an order of emergent relief.

Rodney Bond (petitioner) alleges changes in the assignment of certain classes in the Camden Public Schools to certain school buildings by the Camden Board of Education (Board or respondent) violates the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C.A. §1401 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 18A 46-1 et seq., parents' rights and was done in violation of the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.S.A. 10:4-6 et seq. The petitioner seeks an order barring the assignments "without adequate counselling and preparation," voiding the assignments because the Board failed to solicit public input and voiding the assignments because the Board violated the Open Public Meetings Act.

The matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on August 28, 1992. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. Because of the application for emergent relief, the Department and this Office agreed that the matter would be heard promptly. The moving papers were received at the Office of Administrative Law on Monday, August 31, 1992. Oral argument on the motion for emergent relief was heard at 3:00 p.m. on Tuesday, September 1, 1992. The Board presented a copy of its answer to the petition at hearing.

The petition of appeal is stated in three counts. In Count One, the petitioner asserts he made inquiries about a rumored change of assignment of fifth grade classes from the McGraw Elementary School to East Camden Middle School and of eighth grades from East Camden Middle School to Woodrow Wilson High School. At a board meeting on June 29, 1992, the petitioner asked if this were the board's intent. He received no definitive reply. The petitioner states the Board avoided making any decisions at this meeting. In or about August 1992, the Board sent certain parents letters concerning placement changes for the school year. This, in the petitioner's view, violated the Open Public Meetings Act. For himself "and other similarly situated parents" the petitioner argues this would seriously affect them. The petitioner further charges he can find no public notice of the Board's actions creating the reassignments. He asks that the actions be voided and that the Board be enjoined from carrying out the reassignments.

In Count Two, the petitioner alleges that in making its reassignment decision, the Board violated the Education of Handicapped Children Act [now, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act] as to handicapped pupils. He cites N.J.A.C. 6:28-2.2. This count also alleges that the civil rights of affected persons were violated. He asks relief against the Board for refusing to entertain public input concerning this decision and voiding of such actions as were taken. He would also have the reassignments enjoined.

In Count Three, the petitioner alleges the Board violated the Individual Educational Plans of affected handicapped children. By way of relief, he would have the reassignments enjoined until and unless adequate counselling and preparation of affected parents and their children can be accomplished. He also seeks relief against the Board for refusing to entertain public input concerning a critical decision.

At hearing, the petitioner's argument generally followed the petition. The petitioner says he received "abbreviated" minutes of the June 29, 1992 Camden

Board of Education Meeting. He concedes the minutes are designated "approved." He contends, however, that the minutes do not record any decision made on reassignment of classes. He also states the superintendent of schools misrepresented facts to him. He believes a decision was made, yet the Board denied it publicly.

The Board argues that the matter was first raised in the Superior Court, Law Division, but Judge Davies decided to take no action. The petitioner then filed before the Commissioner of Education. He did not provide the Board's counsel with moving papers until August 31.

The petitioner has no children affected by the reassignments of grades 5 and 8. Irrespective of the changes, his children's status is unchanged. Therefore, he has no standing. Nor can he argue for unnamed "similarly situated parents" that they would be seriously affected by the move.

None of the petitioner's children are classified. Even if the petitioner had one or more classified children, no special education pupils are affected by the move to which he objects. Thus, he has no standing to bring this Count.

The Board has been discussing space utilization since the end of the 1991-92 school year. There is a planning committee. The Board knew its lower grades enrollments were rising while secondary enrollments were stable or declining. The Board had to realign attendance boundaries to satisfy State requirements.

Letters to parents starting going out in May 1992. The Board received no complaints from parents, teachers, employee unions or anyone else until this petition was filed. There has been full discussion of the matter at board meetings since May. The petitioner's claim that action was taken only at the June 29 meeting is false. The Board took actions as far back as May. All that occurred on June 29 was that Mr. and Mrs. Bond asked several questions during the portion of the meeting devoted to questions from the public. These questions are reflected in the minutes as are the Board president's answers.

No statutory violation is alleged. The Open Public Meetings Act is raised, but without specification. There is no allegation that the Board can answer; the allegations are all general.

The petitioner urges that the complaint is of a decision that was not made in public. He acknowledges letters to parents in July and August concerning the changes. He concedes a board of education can reorganize [its attendance areas]. He merely wants compliance with the law and community involvement. The Board counters that an individual must be directly affected in order to raise the counts in the present petition. Official minutes show that the changes were discussed over a period and that virtually all parents already knew of the changes to come.

By consent, a letter dated July 14, 1992 from the East Camden Middle School principal to parents was admitted in evidence. The petitioner states he believes the letter was received by parents on July 15 or 16.

DETERMINATION AND ORDER

Having heard and weighed the arguments of counsel, I DENIED the request for emergency relief. The petitioner could make no showing of immediate harm, no showing of irreparable harm and his likelihood of prevailing on the merits was arguable at best. These being the long established criteria for temporary restraints in New Jersey, the request was denied. Further, balancing the relative hardships to the parties in granting or denying the relief, the decision must go to the respondent. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

All special education questions were DISMISSED as being without basis in fact or law. The Individuals with Disabilities Education Act is remedial legislation and congressional intent that it be liberally construed is clear. However, one still must have standing and there still must be a justiciable issue. The petitioner has no standing and classified pupils are not affected by the reassignment he objects to.

The Open Public Meetings Act, popularly known as the Sunshine Law, established the right of the public to witness in full detail all phases of the deliberating, policy formation and decision making of public bodies. The statute generally requires that the public be given advance notice of and the right to attend meetings of public bodies and that all discussions and official actions, unless specifically exempted in the act, take place in public. Personnel matters, matters in litigation and the acquisition of real estate are generally accepted exemptions. There are nine statutory exceptions in all. The act covers virtually all political subdivisions of the State.

In 1979, the Appellate Division of Superior Court decided that the Commissioner of Education has jurisdiction to determine issues arising under the Open Public Meetings Act as they relate to controversies under the school laws. Stated another way, when an administrative agency has primary jurisdiction to determine the underlying controversy, it may also consider issues raised under the Open Public Meetings Act. Sukin v. Northfield Bd. of Ed. 171 N.J. Super 184 (App. Div. 1979). Thus, if the petition of appeal was timely under the Open Public Meetings Act, the Commissioner has jurisdiction to consider the question. Counsel have been directed to brief the issue. Their papers are due on September 15.

In sum, this order DENIES the request for emergent relief whether argued on a standing theory or on the traditional criteria for temporary restraints. This order DISMISSES all special education questions raised as without basis in fact or law. In addition, the petitioner has no standing. Finally, the viability of any Open Public Meetings Act issue is being argued, on the papers, by counsel. Their papers are due on September 15, 1992.

So ORDERED this second day of September 1992.

This order may be reviewed by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON MOTION

This matter has come before the Commissioner of Education by way of petition and motion for emergent relief filed with the Commissioner on August 28, 1992. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, without answer, on Monday, August 31, 1992, and the oral argument on the motion was conducted on September 1, 1992. No exceptions were filed by the parties to the recommended initial decision denying emergent relief and dismissing certain charges rendered by the Office of Administrative Law on September 1, 1992.

The initial decision notes that the petition states three counts, charging first that the Board violated the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA) by failing to apprise the public of a change of assignment of fifth grade classes from the McGraw Elementary School to East Camden Middle School and of the eighth grade classes from East Camden Middle School to Woodrow Wilson High School. Petitioner, a member of the public and parent of two children in the school system, asks that the actions of the Board regarding placement changes for the school year be voided and that the Board be enjoined from carrying out the reassignments, contending adverse affect upon him and other parents "similarly situated." (See Initial Decision, at p. 2.)

Count Two of the petition alleges that in making its reassignment decision, the Board violated the Education for All Handicapped Children Act (now, the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act) as to handicapped pupils, citing N.J.A.C. 6:28-2.2, [6:28-1.1 et seq.] and claiming the civil rights of affected persons were violated. He seeks, in this count, relief against the Board for refusing to entertain public input concerning such decision regarding reassignment of pupils and the voiding and enjoining of such actions as are taken.

Petitioner's third count alleges the Board violated the Individualized Education Programs (IEP's) of affected handicapped children, seeking relief in the form of enjoining the reassignments until and unless adequate counseling and preparation of affected parents and their children can be accomplished. He also seeks relief against the Board for refusing to entertain public input concerning a critical decision.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this matter, which includes a tape recording of the oral hearing below, the Commissioner adopts as his own the findings and conclusions of the ALJ that petitioner has failed to meet the standards articulated by the court for pendente lite restraints as articulated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), for the reasons expressed in the initial decision and on the tape recording of the hearing. The Commissioner further concurs with the dismissal of those issues raised concerning special education as being without basis in fact or law and because such matters are not appropriately filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.1 et seq. He concurs also with the ALJ's finding that petitioner lacks standing to raise such special education issues insofar as he is not directly affected by the Board's actions in this regard because he has no classified children and because his children are not affected by the reassignments in question.

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with those conclusions of the ALJ that petitioner does enjoy standing to raise an OPMA challenge, and that the question of viability of any OPMA violation alleged should move forward for argument before the ALJ.

Accordingly, the request for emergent relief is denied, the special education questions are dismissed, and the timelines of the OPMA issue shall move forward to argument.

Accordingly, the initial decision is adopted for the reasons expressed by the Office of Administrative Law.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners, residents and taxpayers of Ocean Township school district, challenged Board's handling of pupil transportation. Petitioners wanted buses available for evacuation of pupils in times of disaster. Board had determined to sell its fleet of buses and contract for transportation services.

ALJ dismissed petition for failure to state cause of action upon which relief could be granted. Board can decide for itself how to provide mandated or discretionary pupil transportation.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision.

Paul Carr, Esq. for respondent

Record Closed: July 17, 1992 Decided: August 6, 1992

BEFORE DANIEL B. McKEOWN, ALJ:

This matter was originally opened before the Commissioner of Education by petitioners, residents and taxpayers of the Ocean Township School District, who filed a Petition of Appeal, together with an application for emergency relief, regarding a then pending board action regarding school bus transportation to be provided pupils in the Ocean Township District. After the matter was transferred June 16, 1992 to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq., oral argument on petitioner's motion for emergency relief was heard June 19, 1992. The application for emergency relief was denied on the record, and in writing by letter dated June 19, 1992. Moreover, the Board was granted leave to move to dismiss the entire petition of appeal, which it did, and which petitioner opposes by letter memorandum dated July 16, 1992.

For the reasons which follow, the conclusion is reached in this initial decision that the Petition of Appeal should be dismissed for failure to state a cause of action.

MOTION TO DISMISS

The Board seeks dismissal of the Petition of Appeal for failure to state a cause of action. The Petition, as is understood by this judge, alleges the following:

1. The Board determined on or about April 23, 1992 to provide school bus transportation for its district pupils through public bidding from outside school bus contractors rather than continue to provide transportation through district-owned school buses.

2. The Board, or some member or members of the Board, publicly stated a 10 year "comparison feasibility study, (costs only)" was performed, only to have Board member K. Dunster state that the asserted study was informal, rather than formal, and that no record or copies of the informal study exist. Petitioner assert that these comments are in "direct conflict" with the substance of a letter sent petitioner Ewing by the Commissioner of Education. It is noted that the Commissioner advised petitioner Ewing that the district superintendent >  informed us that a study which compared contacted transportation services to the district owned operation was conducted for the board of education. The results of the study indicated that approximately $125,000 could be saved by the board if they were to use contracted buses.

3. After having placed into issue the asserted feasibility study, petitioners next say that the Board abused its discretion by conducting its feasibility study without professional help "except for meeting and discussions with Mr. Murphy. Mr. Murphy is otherwise unidentified in this Petition, though later reference is made to a Murphy Bus Company. In the same paragraph, petitioners complain that the Board violated a "Public Information Act" by failing to produce a copy of the feasibility study.

4. Petitioner say that the estimated cost savings of $125,000 referenced in the Commissioner's letter as the result of the change in method of providing school bus transportation is false and inflated.

5. Petitioners, in a conclusory manner, state that the Board abused its discretion "by attempting to [expedite] the sale of public and, or state property (namely buses) at a loss that could $100,000. " Without pleading any facts upon which that conclusion is reached, petitioners then allege that the Board is disposing of district owned buses, at the asserted loss, "at the insistence of Murphy Bus Company."

6. In this paragraph, petitioners complain that without district-owned school buses on district property during the school day, the Board cannot meet emergency evacuation plans, or early dismissal due to inclement weather, or as stated during the oral argument for emergency relief in the event of a nuclear disaster or forest fire. Petitioners contend that the Board is simply wrong when it states that 'emergency evacuation plans weren't the school boards responsibility'.

7. Petitioners claim in this paragraph that the Board acted unreasonably because it failed to provide adequate consideration to the future safety and lives of pupils because it failed to conduct any study or review any future evacuation procedures prior to the award of a school bus contract. Though not specifically pleaded, it may be inferred that a Murphy Bus Company was awarded a school bus transportation contract.

8. Here, petitioners complain that the Board acted improperly in failing to demand of the successful bidder that its school buses be maintained on a daily basis at the Board's Waretown elementary school for the entire school year.

Petitioners, on the basis of the preceding eight paragraphs contained within the Petitioner of Appeal, seek relief in the form of a temporary restraining order against the Board from entering into any contract until a decision on the merits is issued; that the Board be restrained from selling any of its district owned buses until a decision on the merits is reached; that if they prove the Board will not save $125,000 by contracting out its school bus transportation, that the Board be directed to continue its own school bus transportation with its own district-owned buses; that any school bus contract awarded to an outside contractor include a clause that the successful bidder must leave at least 10 or more school buses at a designated elementary school throughout the entire course of a school day throughout the entire school years; and, petitioners ask for "relief regarding the State and, or County Emergency Evacuation Plan as it now stands ***".

ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 grants jurisdiction to the Commissioner to hear and determine all controversies and disputes under the school laws or under the rules of the State Board or of the Commissioner. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-1 imposes upon boards of education the obligation to provide transportation of its elementary pupils who live more than two miles and secondary pupils who live more than two and one-half miles from the public school of attendance. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-1.1 provides local boards of education with the authority to provide transportation to and from the school house to its pupils who live lesser distances from the school house. Finally, N.J.S.A. 18A:39-2 provides discretionary authority to boards of education to provide such pupil transportation by a bus or buses owned by it or may enter into contract for such transportation, approved by the county superintendent for a term not exceeding four years.

It is obvious, therefore, that a board of education providing school bus transportation to its school pupils may properly be the subject matter of a dispute which is brought to the Commissioner for resolution under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The format of such petition is governed by administrative rule at N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.3 which states, in part, that the petition must include

> A statement of the specific allegation(s) and essential facts supporting them which have given rise to a dispute under the school laws, and must be verified by oath.

While the petition is verified by oath, it is absent 'a statement of the specific allegation(s) and essential facts supporting them which have given rise to a dispute under the school laws'. Paragraph one alleges simply that in petitioner's view the Board failed to meet the needs of the public by taking its controverted action on April 23, 1992. No facts are pleaded in this paragraph or any paragraph of the petition upon which petitioners conclude the Board failed to meet the needs of the public. Paragraph two says that the Board, or a member thereof, was to have conducted a ten year comparison feasibility study while one member was to have said the study was not a formal study which, in petitioners view, is to be in direct conflict to a letter from the Commissioner to petitioner Ewing. Paragraph three merely recites that the Board was unreasonable for conducting a feasibility study, formal or informal, without professional help except for 'meeting and discussions with Mr. Murphy'. Even if Mr. Murphy is the same Murphy from Murphy Bus Company, no facts are pleaded in this paragraph which gives rise to any cognizable dispute before the Commissioner.

Next, regardless whether the Board would realize a first year saving of $125,000 from contracting out its pupil transportation service rather than maintain in-house pupil transportation service is not a fact which gives rise to a dispute. The figure is an estimated figure only; it is not cast in concrete, nor should it be. That the Board elected to sell its school buses, without an allegation of unlawful impropriety, 'at a loss that could exceed $100,000', is not a basis whch gives rise to a cognizable dispute. There are no facts pleaded upon which petitioners conclude a loss was imminent, certain, unjustified, or, alternatively, that the Board was doing something unlawfully improper resulting in such a loss. The legal fact remains boards of education have authority to dispose of property no longer necessary for the operation of a thorough and efficient program of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:20-2.

Finally, petitioners complaint that a total evacuation plan of Ocean Township, not merely the school district, had contemplated the use of on-site school buses at the Waretown Elementary School and that the sale of district owned school buses in contravention of that township wide evacuation plan is insufficient, even if true, to prevent the Board from exercising its discretionary authority to change the method of school bus transportation it provides its pupils or to sell district-owned school buses.

In short, petitioners plead no facts which give rise to a cognizable dispute before the Commissioner of Education. While it is understood petitioners essential complaint is that school buses had traditionally remained on site at the Waretown Elementary School and, as such, had been targeted for use for the evacuation of either the Waretown public school pupils themselves or conjunction with the entire community in the event of a natural or unnatural disaster, the decision regarding how the Board is to provide mandated or discretionary pupil transportation remains exclusively in its hands. Absent facts upon which a cognizable dispute is presented for the Commissioner's determination, a difference of opinion regarding the most effective use of resources available to the Board in order for it to provide thorough and efficient program of education, including transportation, the intervention of the Commissioner, even to a limited degree of conducting a hearing on that difference of opinion, is highly inappropriate. Boards of education should not be exposed to the liability of defending its actions, otherwise considered proper and pursuant to law, of having to defend itself in a difference of opinion regarding how best to use limited resources.

For the foregoing reasons, I conclude petitioner have failed to state of cause of action in the petition of appeal upon which relief could or should be granted. Therefore, the Board's motion to dismiss is GRANTED. The Petition of Appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

THOMAS EWING AND VINCENT ANEPETE, PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF OCEAN ET AL., OCEAN COUNTY, RESPONDENTS.	:	DECISION

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Petitioners filed a timely submission pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 indicating that they > do not wish to cost the Ocean Township Board of Education several thousand dollars in legal fees to continue to defend their position; nor do [they] wish to cause any possible, further embarrassment which could be caused by court proceedings. Therefore, [they] will not appeal the recent decision made in this matter to deny [their] Petition.

> (Letter from Thomas Ewing, filed August 25, 1992)

However, said submission then goes on to ask for the Commissioner's "intervention" (Id.) regarding two areas of appeal, including keeping a minimum of ten buses on location at any time school is in session and to study, plan, rewrite and propose a new, updated emergency evacuation plan immediately, claiming that the lives of their children are knowingly being placed in jeopardy by failing to provide ten on-site buses while school is in session.

Upon careful and independent review of the record of this case, the Commissioner adopts as his own the findings and conclusions of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the instant petition for failure to state a cause of action for which relief can be granted. As noted by the ALJ

> Absent facts upon which a cognizable dispute is presented for the Commissioner's determination, a difference of opinion regarding the most effective use of resources available to the Board in order for it to provide [a] thorough and efficient program of education, including transportation, the intervention of the Commissioner, even to a limited degree of conducting a hearing on that difference of opinion, is highly inappropriate.
> (Initial Decision, at p. 6)

Having uncovered no basis in the instant record to establish a cognizable dispute pursuant to the Commissioner's authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, the Commissioner adopts that conclusion of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the instant Petition of Appeal by granting the Board's motion to dismiss.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF CHERRY HILL, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, former departmentalized 7th and 8th grade reading teacher, challenged her involuntary transfer to position as 3rd grade elementary teacher. Petitioner claimed she had more seniority then teachers retained.

ALJ concluded Board's transfer of petitioner was reasonable as petitioner was transferred within the scope of her K-8 elementary certification and petitioner was not singled out for transfer for improper reasons. ALJ found transfer was Board's managerial prerogative. Petitioner's employment was not terminated, she was merely transferred; thus, use of seniority list was not triggered.

Commissioner adopted findings and determination in initial decision. However, because petitioner raised possibility that teachers certified only in English were improperly teaching reading, Commissioner directed that County Superintendent ensure that all reading teachers in Cherry Hill school district are properly certificated for their positions.

JANET MOORE,
Petitioner,
v.
CHERRY HILL TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION,
Respondent.

Record Closed: June 26, 1992 Decided: August 10, 1992

BEFORE AUGUST E. THOMAS, ALJ, t/a:

Petitioner is a tenured teacher employed by the Board of Education of the township of Cherry Hill (Board) who contests her involuntary transfer from a departmentalized 7th-and-8th-grade school where she taught reading to her new position as a 3rd grade elementary teacher. Petitioner asserts that the Board violated her tenure and seniority rights by its failure to transfer teachers with lesser seniority rather than her. The Board denies all of petitioner's allegations and states that she has been reassigned within the scope of her teaching certificate and that it owes petitioner no further duty. After filing her appeal, the Commissioner of Education, on September 20, 1991, transferred this matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. A hearing was conducted on May 11, 1992, in the Office of Administrative Law, Trenton. The parties filed letter briefs, the record was closed on June 26, 1992, with the filing of petitioner's letter memorandum.

ISSUE

Where there is a reduction in force (RIF) with a resultant reassignment (transfer), is petitioner entitled to be returned to her position as a reading specialist because of her alleged seniority?

RELEVANT FACTS

Based on the testimony of the witnesses and the documentary evidence, I FIND the following facts.

1. The Cherry Hill Township Board of Education ("Respondent", or "Board"), maintains its grades 7 and 8 as "elementary schools" with departmentally-organized instruction.

2. At all relevant times, two Cherry Hill school buildings housed grades 7 and 8, the Beck School and the Carusi School, known prior to 1985 or 1986 as the Brainerd School. Events and staffing at Carusi (Brainerd) are at issue in this case.

3. In the early 1980s, the respondent allowed and encouraged teachers with K-to-8 elementary certification/endorsement to teach in departmentally organized grades 7 and 8 grade in the subject of "Developmental Reading."

4. Respondent has generally referred to the reading department and reading curriculum at the 7th-8th-grade level as "Developmental Reading" (P-22, curriculum guide).

5. Petitioner became a "reading" teacher at the 7th-grade level at the Brainerd/Carusi School in September 1982.

6. Petitioner is an elementary certified, K-8 teacher in respondent's employ. Petitioner holds no other certifications. As of June 1, 1991, petitioner accrued twenty-two years' total district seniority and had spent nine consecutive years teaching developmental reading at the junior school at the grade 7th-8th-grade level.

7. From September 1982 through September 1984, petitioner and other similarly certified teachers taught in the reading department at Brainerd/Carusi Junior School under contracts describing the position as a "Reading" teacher (P-20).

8. In the fall of 1984, the Board changed the name of the position on petitioner's contract from "Reading" teacher to "Reading/English" teacher; and from in or about June of 1985 to June 1991, these contracts described the position as "English Teacher."

9. Until the end of the school year 1990-91, Board documents referred to a "Reading" department at the Carusi School separate and apart from other departments such as the language arts, math or science departments. During the 1991-92 school year, documents maintained by the superintendent eliminated mention of the "Reading" department in favor of an "English" department (P-9 and P-10).

10. Prior to the 1991-92 school year, respondent recognized a "Reading" department at the 7th-8th-grade level.

11. In May 1991, the Board decided that it was necessary to create five "English" positions at the Junior School level, to create positions for high school English teachers who would otherwise be "riffed." The five positions that were made open as of May 1991 were positions held at that time by teachers McFarland, Carter, Moore, LoVuolo and Bates. Each of these teachers held the K-8 certification and no secondary certification (P-11). McFarland, Carter, Moore and LoVuolo were teaching developmental reading, whereas Bates was assigned to teach "English."

12. In the summer of 1991, the Board determined that it was necessary to transfer one of the reading teachers at the Carusi School; petitioner was selected.

13. To identify the class of persons from whom involuntary transfers from Carusi's reading department would be drawn in May 1991, the Board determined that involuntary transfers would come solely from the ranks of teachers who held only the K-to-8 elementary certificate, exempting teachers who held subject matter endorsements in addition to the K-to-8 elementary certificate (P-5).

14. Within these parameters, the Board set forth three criteria for selecting those who would be involuntarily transferred first:

a. Seniority in the subject area since the Old Bridge* decision.

b. Number of years' experience at the 7th-8th-grade schools.

c. Total district seniority if there is a tie after a and b. [P-5]

15. As of May 1991, no teacher with a K-to-8 certification working in a departmentally organized subject grades 7 or 8 could legally have earned more than eight years' secondary seniority pursuant to the Old Bridge decision, supra.

16. As of the date of petitioner's involuntary transfer, in or about May 1991, the following teachers were teaching developmental reading at the 7th-8th grade level and with the following endorsements, experience, and related characteristics:

NAME	CERTIFICATION ENDORSEMENT	TOTAL DISTRICT SENIORITY (AS OF MAY 1991)	# YEARS ACTUALLY IN "READING" (gr. 7-8) SINCE SEPTEMBER 1, 1983	# OF YEARS TEACHING ENGLISH SINCE OLD BRIDGE	# OF YEARS TEACHING IN SOME CAPACITY IN JR. SCHOOL
McFarland	K-8	25	8	0	10
Carter	K-8	23	8	0	10
Moore	K-8	22	8	0	9
Wells	Fr., Eng., Sp.	25	3 teaching Reading, but under English certification	0	18
Chanowicz	Remedial Reading Spec., Russian, Library	21.2	3	0	?
LoVuolo	K-8	15	8	0	15

See P-6, 7, 8, 11, and 12.

---

* In re Seniority Rights of Certain Teaching Staff Members Employed by the Old Bridge Township Board of Education, et al., 1984 S.L.D. 144 (August 6, 1984).

For the school year, 1991-92, these "reading teachers" remained the same except for petitioner, who was transferred to a 3rd grade teaching position. The Carusi Junior School lost one reading teacher position between 1990-91 and 1991-92.

Certain other teachers were assigned to teach "English" at Carusi in 1990-91 (as of May 1991):

NAME	CERTIFICATION/ ENDORSEMENT	TOTAL DISTRICT SENIORITY	# YEARS ACTUALLY IN "READING" SINCE SEPTEMBER 1, 1983	# OF YEARS TEACHING ENGLISH SINCE OLD BRIDGE	# OF YEARS TEACHING IN SOME CAPACITY IN JR. SCHOOL
Ellis	K-8	16.8	0	8	16.8
Bates	K-8	14.5	0	No more than 8
Cutler	K-8 English	20	0	8	9

17. As indicated in the first chart above, Anne Wells taught developmental reading in 1990-91 and continued to teach developmental reading in 1991-92 under the "English" secondary certification (P-9).

18. As of May 1991, Anne Wells had three years' experience teaching developmental reading, taught under an English endorsement on her certificate. Petitioner had nine years teaching developmental reading under the K-8 elementary certificate. Wells remained at Carusi teaching developmental reading. Petitioner was transferred to an elementary position in the lower grades.

19. The superintendent and/or the Board created the above-described involuntary transfer system to save jobs; that is, they confined the involuntary transfers to K-through-8 certified teachers because such teachers may revert to available elementary contained classroom jobs within the district when transferred from their junior school positions.

20. Anne Wells did not have a K-to-8 certification; therefore, she could not take a primary grade (K-6) job.

21. Helen Chanowicz, also was not included in the class of persons from whom involuntary transfers were drawn. She had an endorsement on her certificate as a remedial reading specialist, an endorsement which allows her to teach small groups of persons in need of remedial reading as opposed to the regular developmental reading curriculum at the 7th-or-8th grade level. That reading specialist endorsement would empower her to teach at any level in the school system (P-7).

22. Helen Chanowicz taught developmental reading for three years as of May 1991, whereas petitioner had nine years experience in the subject (P-11See also P-17). Despite Chanowicz's lesser experience in grade 7-8 reading, she was not included in the group exposed to the possibility of involuntary transfer in May 1991.

23. As of May 1991, teacher Linda LoVuolo had one less year teaching developmental reading since the Old Bridge decision (September 1, 1983) than petitioner. Since September 1, 1983, LoVuolo had taught "English" one year and "Reading" for seven years (P-15). Under the articulated criteria of (P-5), petitioner would have had one more year teaching "reading" than LoVuolo since September 1, 1983. Linda LoVuolo's experience was thus "tied" with petitioner's when her "reading" and her "English" years were equated, and then added to each other. However, LoVuolo had 15 years teaching in the junior school as opposed to petitioner's eight (See item 14b above.)

24. As of May 1991, Gayle Cutler had eight years teaching "English", at the 7th-9th-grade level, nine years at the junior school level, and twenty years' district seniority. Similarly, petitioner had eight years in the subject (whether it is called reading or English), nine years at the junior school, and twenty-two years district seniority. However, Gayle Cutler was exempted from the involuntary transfer, because she holds a secondary "English" endorsement on her certificate. She also holds a K-8 certification.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Petitioner relies on her seniority in the district as a "reading" teacher to assert her right to reinstatement in the junior school as a teacher of reading. However, in my judgment, the seniority regulations are not triggered based on the above facts, which with some modification, are reproduced entirely from petitioner's "Findings of Facts and Conclusions of Law."

The relevant statute is N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 which reads as follows:

> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article. [Emphasis added].

Petitioner's employment was not terminated. She was merely transferred from one position (reading) to another (teacher of 3rd grade). She holds an appropriate K-8 certificate for both positions.

If there was a reduction in force in the district, it did not affect petitioner's employment. Perhaps the reduction was made from normal attrition, retirements, and non-reemployment of nontenured teachers. In any event there is no showing that the reduction triggered the utilization of a seniority list that would guarantee petitioner her former position.

The record shows that K-8 teachers are authorized to teach reading and that secondary certified English teachers may teach developmental reading. Teachers holding the reading specialist endorsement are also authorized to teach reading. However, English teachers are not authorized to teach pupils how to read.

In this context the Board, with the cooperation of the local education association personnel, established the criteria by which reassignment would be made. These are set forth by fact 14a, 14b and 14c above. An examination of the facts and the charts as set forth by petitioner discloses that petitioner was the least experienced "reading" teacher in the junior schools with the exception of those teachers holding secondary English or remedial reading endorsements. Teacher Bates does not have her junior school experience designated in the second chart above; nor is there any discussion of her junior school experience in petitioner's memorandum; nevertheless, P-11 indicates her district seniority at 14.5 years, therefore, absent any showing to the contrary, an inference may be drawn that her junior school experience is 14.5 years. Further, Bates is listed under language arts (p-110.

Based on the above analysis, each of the teachers compared by petitioner met the Board's criteria to remain in "reading" positions.

Petitioner developed several scenarios involving those persons teaching developmental reading with subject matter endorsements such as English and remedial reading, suggesting various transfers and reassignments the Board could have made rather than her transfer to third grade. Undoubtedly, the Board might have considered a different approach in this situation; however, the record shows that after considerable evaluation it decided that the most equitable approach was to transfer petitioner. There is no showing whatever that petitioner's transfer is arbitrary or without a reasonable or rational basis.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In Guy Ciarcia v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7639-90 (July 15, 1991), (September 3, 1991), the petitioner alleged that the board of education violated his seniority rights when it reassigned him from secondary to elementary school, while retaining less senior teachers in secondary positions. Relevant quotes from the administrative law judge's (ALJ's) decision are reproduced below.

> The Board points out that whatever seniority claim petitioner may have the claim has not been triggered by his reassignment and cites Howley v. Ewing Township Board of Ed., 1982 S.L.D. 1328, 1340, aff'd State Board, June 1, 1983. Because neither petitioner nor any other art teacher lost their employment as the result of its reorganization which resulted in the movement of 9th grade students from junior high school to the high school, its reorganization did not result in the abolishment of any teaching positions as authorized under N.J.S.A. 18A:29-9. Simply put, the Board says that it transferred petitioner from one assignment for which he is properly certificated to another assignment for which he is properly certificated under the same instructional certificate, with the same endorsement . . . [Ciarcia, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7539-90, at 4; emphasis added]

> The facts in this case show that petitioner neither lost his employment with the Board as a teacher of art, nor has he suffered a salary reduction, nor was he transferred to a position for which he is not properly certificated, and the facts show that the Board properly transferred him pursuant to law. Petitioner's claim to an enforceable > senior right in those circumstances to a position solely at the secondary level is wholly without merit and no one of the cases petitioner cites in his letter memorandum lends any support to his argument. Each of the cases cited by petitioner addresses a situation where the complaining party lost their employment or were reassigned from a full time to a part time position. Such is not the case here. Nothing at all happened to petitioner other than he was reassigned from the secondary level to the elementary level. [Ibid.]

>
> Petitioner's attempt to liken his situation regarding his transfer from the secondary to the elementary level, under the very same instructional certificate and under the very same endorsement by which he has been employed consistently throughout his career with the Board, to an enforceable seniority claim in these circumstances is rejected. It is acknowledged that a teacher with tenure may not be transferred from one category of employment which requires a specific endorsement on a particular certificate to another position, or category, which requires either a separate certificate and endorsement or a new endorsement on the same certificate, is improper without the teacher's consent. However, that is not the case here. Quite simply, petitioner was simply transferred by the Board from one assignment to another assignment but in the same position of teacher of art. His attempt to distinguish "categories" in these circumstances is misplaced for categories apply only in the contest of seniority and whatever seniority claim he may have is not applicable here because his employment as a teacher has not been affected. [Id. at 5]

Affirming the decision, the Commissioner commented as follows:

> As the ALJ properly notes, petitioner suffered no loss of employment, no reduction in salary or any other action that could be deemed to violate his tenure or seniority rights; he was merely transferred within the scope of his certificate as it is well established that boards of education have the prerogative to do. Greenway v. Board of Education of the City of Camden, 129 N.J.L. 46, 28 A. 2d 99, affirmed 129 N.J.L. 461, 29 A. 2d 890 (1943); Ridgefield Park Education Association v. Ridgefield Park Board of Education, 78 N.J. 144 (1978); Shirley Vanderhoff v. Board of Education of the Scotch Plains-Fanwood Regional School District, Union County, Commissioner Decision April 15, 1987, affirmed State Board June 1, 1988, affirmed N.J. Superior Court Appellate Division May 8, 1989.

In Ridgefield Park, the Court discussed whether or not teacher transfers were negotiable under terms and conditions of employment. Although this matter is not a negotiations problem, the court's language is significant and pertinent to the matter herein.

> The selection of the school in which a teacher works or the grade and subjects which he teaches undoubtedly have an appreciable effect on his welfare. However, even assuming that this effect could be considered direct and intimate, we find that this aspect of the transfer decision is insignificant in comparison to its relationship to the Board's managerial duty to deploy personnel in the manner which it considers most likely to promote the overall goal of providing all students with a thorough and efficient education. Thus, we find that the issue of teacher transfers is one on which negotiated agreement would significantly interfere with a public employer's discharge of inherent managerial responsibilities. [Ridgefield Park, 78 N.J. at 156]

In the present matter, petitioner was transferred from a departmentalized 7th-and-8th-grade junior school to a K-6 elementary school, both within the scope of her K-8 elementary certification. This is clearly a managerial responsibility.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the criteria established by the Board for the transfer of petitioner was reasonable, not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Board did utilize years of service at the 7th-and-8th-grade level to determine which teachers would be transferred and this criteria was applied fairly and consistently to all of its affected teachers.

Accordingly, the petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. Timely exceptions were filed by petitioner pursuant to the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

In her exceptions, petitioner renews her arguments that the Board's method for determining which teachers were transferred erroneously blurred "reading" and "English" with the result that an improperly certified teacher is now teaching reading; that the Board inappropriately placed higher value on subject certification as opposed to K-8; and that the Board's transfer system otherwise violated sound educational policy.

Upon careful review of this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's fundamental analysis, as petitioner was transferred within the scope of her certificate, suffered no loss of salary or other reduction in employment, and was not singled out for transfer on constitutionally or statutorily prohibited bases. She therefore cannot claim under any circumstances that she has an entitlement to be returned to her former position; at most she can point to specific violations of law in the system used by the Board to effectuate its staffing changes and seek a directive that such violations be remedied, which may or may not have an impact on her present assignment.

Petitioner has in fact alleged such a violation in her claim that improperly certified teachers may be teaching developmental reading. Contrary to the holding of the ALJ at p. 7 above, State Board regulation is clear that holders of English endorsements may teach reading only if they were doing so prior to February 1976 (N.J.A.C. 6:11-6.1(c)). While disposition of this issue is neither possible on the present record, nor necessary for resolution of petitioner's specific claim to her former position, to which she has no vested entitlement even if her allegation is true, the Commissioner cannot ignore the possibility that district staff are being placed in assignments for which they may be improperly certificated.

Accordingly, the initial decision of the Office of Administrative Law dismissing the Petition of Appeal is affirmed substantially for the reasons expressed therein. However, in view of petitioner's unresolved allegations of improper certification, the Commissioner directs the Camden County Superintendent of Schools to ensure that all teachers of reading in the Cherry Hill school district are properly certificated for the positions they hold.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: August 3, 1992 Decided: August 11, 1992

BEFORE STEPHEN G. WEISS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 et seq. on April 29, 1992, as the result of a filing by the petitioners, both of whom were defeated candidates at the April 7, 1992 Board election, alleging a variety of deficiencies in the electoral process. Since the two cases contained essentially the same set of circumstances, the matters were consolidated by me for purposes of hearing and decision

A plenary hearing commenced on May 7, 1992 and some testimony was taken. However, rather than continue with the proceeding, the parties met to discuss settlement and an amicable resolution of the consolidated matters then was reached.

Thereafter, a stipulation of settlement, signed by both petitioners, the Board president and the Board secretary was submitted to me for review. That stipulation is attached to this initial decision.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of the settlement, and FIND:

1. The parties voluntarily have agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the signatures appearing on the stipulation of settlement; and

2. The settlement is fair and reasonable and in accordance with law

I therefore CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and, accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the terms and that these proceedings be CONCLUDED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 225 West State Street, CN 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED AND AGREED by and between the parties, GEORGE P. DIAMOND and RUBY A. SIEGEL, Petitioners, and the GLEN RIDGE BOARD OF EDUCATION, Respondent, that the above entitled action be and the same is hereby settled upon the following terms and conditions:

1. The GLEN RIDGE BOARD OF EDUCATION acknowledges that certain statutorily required procedures under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes Annotated concerning the counting and announcing of the vote, and concerning the rights of challengers, were not followed by the designated election officers at the Forest Avenue School in the April 7, 1992 Board of Education election;
2. GEORGE P. DIAMOND and RUBY A. SIEGEL acknowledge that the violation of procedures on April 7, 1992 was not a willful failure to perform or enforce the provisions of Title 18A and did not alter the results of the election;
3. In order to maintain public confidence in the integrity of the electoral process the GLEN RIDGE BOARD OF EDUCATION commits itself to conduct the training required under N.J.S.A. section 18A:14-6.1 prior to the next Board of Education election, and for each election thereafter, so that all election officers and employees are made aware of their statutory obligations and duties in the conduct of elections;

RESPONDENT.	:

The record and initial decision rendered by the Office of Administrative Law in the form of a joint stipulation of settlement have been reviewed. Upon examination of settlement terms, the Commissioner is unable to accept the settlement in its current form due to the fact that term No. 2 accords to petitioner four years of seniority credit without any information being provided to the record which allows the Commissioner to ascertain if the individual actually has a legal entitlement to said four years. Seniority is an employment protection which is controlled by statute and code and can be obtained only upon meeting the conditions of law. Moreover, seniority impacts not only on an individual teaching staff member's employment rights but also the employment rights of others.

Accordingly, the matter is remanded for modification of the settlement terms so as to address the infirmity cited above or for a plenary hearing on the merits.

BEFORE STEVEN C. REBACK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on remand on October 7, 1992 pursuant to a decision issued by the Commissioner of Education on September 24, 1992. The Commissioner found that the settlement which had been entered into and incorporated into an "initial decision settlement" on August 11, 1992 was unacceptable because the Commissioner was not provided with sufficient information to ascertain if the particulars engendered by term number two of the settlement was appropriate.

As a result the matter was remanded and on December 9, 1992 I convened a telephone conference call with counsel to discuss remediating the settlement. An amended stipulation of settlement was devised by counsel in an effort to satisfy the concerns expressed by the Commissioner and entered into on December 16, 1992. The settlement was received by my office on December 30, 1992.

I have reviewed the settlement and I FIND:

1. The amended settlement has been sufficiently modified so as to address the infirmities cited by the Commissioner in his decision of September 24, 1992.

2. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures.

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

1. Mr. Knowles' placement on the Board's salary guide will be adjusted, retroactive to September 1, 1991, by advancing him four steps on the salary guide.

2. The question of Mr. Knowles' seniority status was referred to Robert F. Strauss, a Board consultant, to determine what seniority Mr. Knowles was legally entitled to. Mr. Strauss has prepared an updated seniority list for Seniority Industrial Arts Teachers dated 6/30/93 which indicates that Mr. Knowles is

Re: Seniority of Industrial Arts Teachers for 1992-93

Dear Dr. Delaney:

You have requested that I provide the current seniority entitlements of all Industrial Arts Teachers in the secondary grades of your district in conjunction with the Matter of Thomas Knowles v. Old Bridge Board of Education now pending before the Commissioner of Education.

The seniority list for the foregoing group of teachers as of 30 June 1993 is attached. I have based this list on full time employment for Mr. Knowles starting 9/1/92 and on information obtained this date regarding the status of Robert McClure who was hired as a 3/5 teacher on 9/1/92 and whose status, I understand, is to be changed to full time as of 11/11/92. I have not provided not updated list for the Elementary Industrial Arts Teachers as Mr. Knowles does not have entitlement in that category. I have also assumed that the status of Mr. Knowles as Teacher of the Handicapped is not affected by this matter.

If there is any further information you may require regarding this matter, please give me a call.

Best regards,
