National Hispanic Heritage Month, Sept. 15-Oct. 15

As we celebrate the third week of Hispanic Heritage Month we continue to recognize major accomplishments and Hispanic contributions to military service. This week we are recognizing profiles in history.

Throughout the nation's history Hispanic-American Soldiers have established themselves as role models for generations to follow. From the first Hispanic-American Presidential Medal of Freedom recipient to momentous contributions to military tactics, Hispanic Americans have made their mark within the history of this nation with their courage, leadership and honor.

Richard E. Cavazos

In 1982, Hispanic-American Richard E. Cavazos made military history by being appointed the Army's first Hispanic-American four-star general

Hector P. Garcia

Hector P. Garcia was the first Hispanic American to receive the Presidential Medal of Freedom. President Ronald Regan presented the highest award a civilian can receive to Garcia for his service to his people and the United States for the formation of the American G.I. Forum.

Elwood R. Quesada

Elwood R. Quesada helped with the pioneering of military aviation techniques that changed the face of combat. His work contributed to techniques used today such as air-to-air refueling and air-to-ground machine gunnery.

Alfred Rascon

Born in Chihuahua, Mexico, Alfred Rascon has lived a life that succeeded above and beyond what anyone would have thought, and he contributes that success to the Army.

By age 21, then Specialist Rascon was serving in Vietnam when his unit was attacked by North Vietnamese troops. Despite being wounded, Rascon repeatedly ran into the line of fire to tend to the wounded Soldiers. Rascon's heroism that day inspired his battalion to recommend him for the Medal of Honor, a recommendation that was lost in Pentagon paperwork for more than 30 years. Following Vietnam, Rascon returned to school earning a college degree. In 1969, he applied for Officer Candidate School and earned a commission as an Infantry Officer. He later graduated from the Special Forces Qualification course and the Defense Language Institute. Rascon later received orders transferring him to the Military Intelligence Branch. After leaving the Army in 1984, Rascon continued serving his country for several years, by holding various positions within the Justice Department, the Drug Enforcement Agency, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service. He later served as the Director of the Selective Service Administration. Recently, Rascon gave up his high-level government position to return to the Army on Active Duty. He visited both Afghanistan and Iraq, motivating and supporting soldiers in the field.

prestigious Legion of Honor; the highest award given by France. The medals were presented by the French Ambassador to the United States, Jean-David Levitte, along with the French Consul General, Francois Delattre. The Ambassador called each veteran to the podium, read that veteran's unit of assignment, the day they landed in France, and gave a brief description of their action before reading the official induction in French. Each veteran was then pinned with the Legion of Honor medal. The award itself is a five-pointed enameled star on a wreath of leaves suspended from a scarlet ribbon. It was created in 1802 by Napoleon Bonaparte, and since then has been awarded to less than 500 Americans. Each veteran also received a letter from Governor Corzine. Concluding the ceremony, the Ambassador told the veterans and guests, "You are our heroes; we cherish you and we thank you." Brig. Gen. Frank R. Carlini represented DMAVA at the ceremony.

Stand Down South Jersey is a success

This year, Stand Down of South Jersey Inc., assisted 151 homeless veterans on Sept. 22 at the Cherry Hill Armory. While the homeless veteran is in combat every day, this special committee provides the veteran a time to "stand down" and enter a safe area where someone else is responsible for security.

This committee furnished a range of services including medical, social services, food, clothing distribution and shelter. Other local, county and state agencies including the Salvation Army, Vet Center, Project Hope, South Jersey Vietnam Vets, Elks, South Jersey Aids Coalition, Department of Labor, Veterans of Foreign Wars, county department of health, county legislative services, welfare services, county employment/unemployment offices, and the VA – state, county and Philadelphia, participated in this year's Stand Down.

The New Jersey Army and Air Guard also provided assistance to Stand Down. The 250th Signal Battalion (Army) provided a Mobile Kitchen Trailer (MKT), food preparation services as well as escort services. From the Air Guard, the 177th Medical Group, Atlantic City, provided medical support in conjunction with the Philadelphia and Coatesville Veterans Administration Medical Centers. The 108th Air Refueling Wing provided food preparation, escort services, chaplain assistance and more. All of the units additionally provided support with site preparation, clean-up and security for the veterans.

Members of the veteran's organizations volunteered in every area to include food service, in-processing and the clothing area. The organizations also donated funds.

Administrative personnel from the regional office of the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs Philadelphia were there to review and credential each participant. At the end of the intake operation, after veteran status was verified, each veteran/participant was issued a photo identification card. The VA also provided medical personnel and supplies, along with emergency support.

The New Jersey Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs provided personnel to coordinate the operation of the project—the establishment and operation of the aid station, including logistical support personnel and security personnel. The department provided Veteran Service Officers to assist in counseling of participants, escorts and psychological/clinical personnel.

Charity Golf Tourney benefits injured N.J. Soldier

On Tuesday, Oct. 17, (rain date is Oct. 19) HMHTTC will hold their Annual Charity Golf Outing at the Harker's Hollow Golf Course, Phillipsburg, N.J. This year the proceeds will go to Spc. Jim Benoit of Wharton, N.J.

Spc. Benoit was critically injured during his tour in Iraq and not expected to live. After 78 operations, his goal of being able to walk again only using one walking aid seems a possibility. He will need daily physical therapy and a therapeutic resistance pool will be very effective in his road to recovery. The goal of the fund raisers is to raise the $25,000 needed to build the pool for this Soldier.

If you are interested in participating in the tournament, which includes a shotgun start at 1 p.m. after lunch in the club's lounge and is capped off with dinner and door prizes, please call Chris Harrington at 973-770-6900, ext. 210.
