NOTES TO THE READER.

NOTE I. The calculations of this Almanack are made to solar or apparent time; to which, for the mean or clock time, apply the equation given in the sixth column, adding when the Sun is slow, and subtracting when fast.

II. The time of high-water at Philadelphia is so computed as to serve for either morning or afternoon, nearly enough for common use; the morning flood being about 12m. earlier than the time in the tide column, and that of the afternoon as much later; but when there happens one flood only in the day, the true time is given and distinguished by this mark (*).

III. The Sun's declination is fitted to the Meridian of Philadelphia for every noon of the present year.

IV. The rising, setting, or southing of a star may be carried several days backward by adding, or forward by subtracting, 4m. per day: for instance, on the 11th of the first month (January) Sirius is south at 3m. past 11; adding 12m. for 3 days sooner, we have 11h. 15m. for the Southing on the 8th. and deducting 8m. for 2 later, leaves 10h. 55m. for that of the 13th of the same month, &c.

V. The time of Alioth's passage over the meridian, or when a plumb-line apparently cuts both the pole-star and Alioth, is given, for the first six months above, and the last six below the pole, to five days in every month, and may be readily known for any day by the preceding note. These two stars will be visibly coincident with a level east and west line at 5h. 59m. before or after Alioth passes the meridian, by which we may regulate time-pieces to a minute, or tell the time without them. The pole-star is on the meridian five minutes later than Alioth, when a true meridian line may be drawn by it, and the magnetic variation thereby determined.

Alioth is the first star in the tail of the Great Bear, viz. that next the square; or, it is the third star of the seven, commonly called the Waggon or Plough, counting towards those two of them denominated the Pointers.

T R U T H.

TRUTH is always consistent with itself, and needs nothing to help it out. It is always near at hand, and fits upon our lips, and is ready to drop out before we are aware: whereas a lie is troublesome, and sets a man's invention upon the rack; and one trick needs a great many more to make it good.

JANUARY. First Month.

Written at the approach of Winter.

THE sun far southward bends his annual way,
 The bleak northeast wind lays the forest bare,
 The fruit ungather'd quits the naked spray,
 And dreary Winter reigns o'er earth and air.
 O Winter! round me spread thy joyless reign,
 Thy threat'ning skies in dusky horror drest;

The study of Astronomy peculiarly delightful.

IN fair weather, when my heart is cheered, and I feel that exaltation of spirits which results from light and warmth, joined with a beautiful prospect of nature, I regard myself as one placed by the hand of God in the midst of an ample theatre, in which the sun, moon, and stars, the fruits also and vegetables of the earth, perpetually changing their positions or their aspects, exhibit an elegant entertainment to the understanding as well as to the eye.

Thunder and lightning, rain and hail, the painted bow and the glaring comet, are decorations of this mighty theatre; and the sable hemisphere studded with spangles, the blue vault at noon, the glorious gildings and the rich colours in the horizon, I look on as so many successive scenes.

When I consider things in this light, methinks it is a sort of impiety to have no attention to the course of nature, and the revolutions of the hea-

FEBRUARY. Second Month.

Of thy dread rage, no longer I'll complain,
 Nor ask an Eden for a transient guest.
 Enough has Heav'n indulg'd of joy below,
 To tempt our tarriance in this lov'd retreat ;
 Enough has Heav'n ordain'd of useful wo,
 To make us languish for a happier seat.
 There is, who deems all climes, all seasons fair ;
 There is, who knows no restless passion's strife,

A P R I L. Fourth Month.

When moist Aquarius pours the fleecy snow,
That makes th' impregnate globe a richer harvest bear.
She bids for all, our grateful praise arise,
To him whose mandate spake the world to form ;
Gave Spring's gay bloom, and Summer's ardent skies,
And Autumn's corn-clad fields, and Winter's founding storm.

The Acquisition of virtuous Dispositions and Habits a necessary Part of Education.

WHEN you look forward to those plans of life, which either your circumstances have suggested, or your friends have proposed, you will not hesitate to acknowledge, that in order to pursue them with advantage, some previous discipline is requisite. Be assured, that whatever is to be your profession, no education is more necessary to your success, than the acquirement of virtuous dispositions and habits. This is the universal preparation for every character, and every station in life. Bad as the world is, respect is always paid to virtue. In the usual course of human affairs it will be found, that a plain understanding, joined with acknowledged worth, contributes more to prosperity, than the brightest parts

These are the qualities whose influence will last, when the lustre of all that once sparkled and dazzled has passed away.

THE TWO BEES.

ON a fine morning in May, two bees set forward in quest of honey; the one wise and temperate, the other careless and extravagant. They soon arrived at a garden enriched with aromatic herbs, the most fragrant flowers, and the most delicious fruits. They regaled themselves for a time on the various dainties that were spread before them: the one loading his thigh at intervals with provisions for the hive against the distant winter; the other revelling in sweets without regard to any thing but his present gratification. At length they

ON SOCIAL VIRTUE.

MY tender parent oft would cry,
From these, my son, O ne'er depart,

D	r. f.	☽	so.	H.	W.	found a wide mouthed phial that hung

Thy grace serene and pure ;
 Defend my frail, my erring youth,
 And teach me this important truth,
 The humble are secure.
 Teach me to bless my lowly lot,
 Confin'd to this paternal cot
 Remote from regal state ;
 Content to court the cooling glade,

FRATERNAL LOVE.

Behold how comely a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!

THE ancients conveyed much of their instruction in fables; and there is one which well deserves to be repeated; as it is not only applicable to our present subject, but very instructive in itself. A tender father, on his death-bed, called his children around him, and presenting them with a small bundle of twigs, ordered them to try, one after another, with all their force, if they could break it. They tried but could not. "Unbind it now (said he) and take every twig of it separately, and see what you can do by that means." They did so, and with great ease, one by one, they broke it all to pieces. "Behold (said he) my dear children, the true emblem of your condition: Keep together, and you will be safe, unhurt, and prosperous: Divide, and you are certainly undone."

What inexpressible delight, when brothers and sisters of one family live

SEPTEMBER. Ninth Month.

Inhale the breeze, enjoy the shade,
 And love my humble fate.
 No anxious vigils here I keep,
 No dreams of gold distract my sleep,
 Nor lead my heart astray;
 Nor blasting envy's tainted gale,
 Pollutes the pleasures of the vale,
 To vex my harmless day.

Peace dwells in their bosom, and transport beats at their heart. They know how to al- leviate each other's troubles and dif- ficulties; they know how to impart and double each other's felicity and pleasure. And if perchance their aged parents live, who have formed them thus to love, whose early care provided for them this high feast of the most delicate sensations, what in- creasing raptures do they feel from blessing those parents with this fruit of their care! O ye happy parents! if I could envy any-beings upon earth it were you, who see your youth re- newed in good and worthy children flourishing around you; who see those children amply crowning your days and nights of past soliciude, not only with the most reverential respect to yourselves, but with what you wish still more if possible, with the firmest and most respectful love to each other;

OCTOBER. Tenth Month.

Yon tow'r, which rears its head so high,
 And bids defiance to the sky,
 Invites the hostile winds:
 Yon branching oak, extending wide,
 Provokes destruction by its pride,
 And courts the fall it finds.
 Then let me shun the ambitious deed,
 And all the dangerous paths which lead

who see those children, with all the kindness of that love you sought to inspire, like olive-branches, verdant around you, blessed in you, blessed in each other, blessed in themselves; the providence of God smiling upon them; success and honour attending their steps.

The Stings of Poverty, Disease, and Violence, less pungent than those of guilty Passions.

ASSEMBLE all the evils which poverty, disease, or violence can inflict, and their stings will be found, by far, less pungent than those which guilty passions dart into the heart. Amidst the ordinary calamities of the world, the mind can exert its powers, and suggest relief: and the mind is properly the man; the sufferer, and his sufferings can be distinguished. But those disorders of passion, by seizing directly on the mind, attack human nature in its strong hold, and cut off its last re-

MAN. A FRAGMENT.

THUS transitory is man, like the flower that blows in the morning,
 and in the evening is withered and trodden under foot. One generation passes away after another, like the waves of a rapid river; and time, rushing on with silent, but irresistible speed, carries with him all that can best pretend to permanence and stability. Even thou, O my son! alas! even thou,
 who art now happy in the vigour, the vivacity and the bloom of youth, shalt find this lovely season, so fruitful of delight, a transient flower, that fades as soon as it is blown: without having been conscious that thou wert changing, thou wilt perceive thyself changed: the train of graces and pleasures
 that now sport around thee, health, vigour and joy, shall vanish like the phantoms of a dream, and leave thee
 nothing but a mournful remembrance, that they once were thine. Old age

Anemones that spangled every grove,
 The primrose pale, the hairbell mildly blue.
 No more shall violets linger in the dell,
 Or purple orchis variegate the plain,
 'Till spring again shall call forth every bell,
 And dress with humid hands her wreath again.
 Ah poor Humanity! so frail so fair
 Are the fond visions of thy early day,
