Transcript:

Governor Christie: Send me a budget. They have an obligation. I can't, Michael you want me to wave a magic wand and get a budget? I can't get a budget to my desk, only the Senate and the Assembly can get a budget to my desk. So I can't do anything other than be here and if I were saying to you, I could understand the premise of your question being valid if what you were saying to me was, if I said, unless I get Horizon I'm not signing to budget. Well that's a whole different thing, then that's drawing a line in the sand, saying send me Horizon or I'm going to veto the entire budget, that's drawing a line in the sand. This is saying you have two choices, both of which will result in no government shutdown. Different budgets, but no government shutdown. I'm giving them two options for no government shutdown, they're giving me none. Come on, I know you find this hard to believe, Michael, but you're looking at Mr. Reasonable. You're looking at him right in the eye, you're looking at Mr. Reasonable. I'm giving them two choices, both of which do not close the government, they don't want either one of them. What the hell do you want me to do?
