GOV SPONSORS TRAINING WORKSHOP DESIGNED TO HELP VETERANS RECOVER FROM GAMBLING ADDICTION

TRENTON — Counselors from throughout the state attended a training workshop March 21, to learn techniques to treat military veterans and others who are addicted to gambling.

About 20 clinicians, many of whom specialize in treating addictions in the military community, attended a training session sponsored by the Division of Mental Health and Addiction Services (DMHAS) and administered by the Council on Compulsive Gambling of New Jersey, Inc. (CCGNJ).

“We want people to know that compulsive gambling is treatable and people can recover,” DMHAS assistant commissioner Lynn Kovich told the attendees, noting that gambling problems are often hidden and underreported, especially in the military community.

The workshop is one of a series to provide special training to healthcare professionals and one of several recent efforts promoting March as Problem Gambling Awareness Month, as proclaimed by Gov. Chris Christie.

The training is part of a broader initiative to educate the public about compulsive gambling and its warning signs, as well as to raise awareness about the treatment available to help people recover.

With representatives and counselors from New Jersey Department of Military and Veterans Affairs (DMAVA), Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, and Veterans Haven North participating in the workshop, today’s session included a focus on veterans with problematic gambling habits.

“We look forward to using what we learn here today and bringing it to our military and veteran community,” DMAVA deputy commissioner Raymond Zawacki said as the workshop began. “Today’s training is another step in the right direction to assist veterans back on the path to a productive life.”

Although this month — known by many for March Madness — is the focus of nationwide attention to problem gambling; treatment is available all year through programs funded by DMHAS.

“More than 350,000 New Jerseyans are problem gamblers or at high risk of becoming problem gamblers”, said Kovich. She noted that the American Psychiatric Association next month is scheduled to officially declare compulsive gambling as an addiction.

The vast majority of gamblers are not compulsive, but people should be aware of the warning signs that a loved one might need help.

Some of these include: Gambling until you have no more cash left in your pockets; chasing your losses to win back money you lost; growing debts and unpaid bills; Needing financial help from others because of gambling; selling personal or family items to finance gambling; gambling alone and longer than you intend; spending increasing amounts of time gambling; lying to cover up the extent of your gambling; jeopardizing relationships, work, or school because of gambling; less productive at work; increasing marital problems; neglecting family and personal needs to gamble instead; abusing alcohol or other drugs; suicide attempts; trouble sleeping because you are thinking about gambling; and gambling after arguments, disappointments, or frustrations.

With an annual allocation from DMHAS of $850,000, CCGNJ works with 35 agencies statewide to provide education and treatment to problem gamblers and maintains a 24-hour confidential hotline, 1-800-GAMBLER and the website <http://www.800gambler.org> that lists additional resources.

More than 110 veterans looking for jobs got the opportunity to meet with employers at the Hiring Our Heroes job fair held at Rider University March 21, 2013. The Rider student recreation center floor in Lawrenceville was filled with more than 70 employers and 19 veteran service organizations. Veterans can use the Hero To Hire website <https://h2h.jobs/> to start a job search. (Photo by Kryn P. Westhoven, NJESGR)
