Story by Donna Clementoni, employer outreach director NJESGR

Ocean County resident, Albert Perdeck was recognized April 14, by the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve (ESGR) with a "Seven Seals Award" for his patriotic campaign to educate young Americans to respect and understand the significance of the American flag.

In addition, Perdeck has maintained a one man quest to ensure August 14, also known as V-J Day, is commemorated and recognized by the United States citizens.

The award, depicting the heraldry seals of the seven military services, is given at the discretion of the NJESGR chairman to recognize the efforts by a citizen, business, or organization, whose supportive actions have benefited all of the Guard/Reserve Components and the U.S. Armed Forces in a significant manner.

NJESGR committee chairman Col. Alan Smith, a retired Marine, presented the award to the WWII Seaman 1st Class at a breakfast hosted by the Ted Katzenstein Memorial Post 657 of the Jewish War Veterans of the United States of America at their Leisure Village West clubhouse location.

Representing the Department of Defense, Smith declared, "We honor Al Perdeck today, for his continued service to his country in the classrooms of America, telling the story of American history, and an appreciation for the flag so many have served under, and especially as a Sailor on the USS Bunker Hill in May of 1945."

him from being counted among the 346 sailors that were killed, 43 listed as missing, and 264 wounded.

He tried to command a panicked young Sailor. "Put on your helmet first," Perdeck said to the young Sailor. "You need your brains to think. Put on your pants second."

Scars are sometimes not visible to the eye. Sixty eight years later, Perdeck admits, "I am living with a horror...I saw too much."

The sailor is proud of the service of the ship that earned eleven battle stars and a Presidential Unit Citation, but he can recall with clarity the sights, sounds and smells of that horrifying morning attack.

The image of the mutilated bodies, the cries of the wounded, the panic of the sailor who couldn't get his oxygen canister to activate, haunts him to this day. Peaceful legions of proud and faithful members of the Armed Forces that are trying to come to terms with the mental and physical injuries of military service.

While he still wrestles with the wounds of war, Perdeck spends his days focused on an important mission - to honor his crewmembers from the USS Bunker Hill that he vows to 'not allow to be forgotten.' The retired postal worker speaks in schools about respecting the flag and understanding the symbolism of the 'Red, White and Blue.'

Coupled with that cause, Perdeck is adamant that August 14, V-J Day, is never forgotten.

"What really bothers me," says Perdeck, is that "there is no public outcry. No one makes a thing about it."

He personally pens letters to legis-

“Al, your meritorious service and dedication to duty, to your shipmates, and Nation, endures as an American legacy to all who cherish freedom.”

Retired Col. Alan Smith, NJESGR committee chairman

As a young seaman, the Newark-born and raised Perdeck was serving aboard the USS Bunker Hill when it was struck by two kamikaze pilots - she was the most heavily damaged carrier to survive the war - during the morning hours of May 11, 1945. In the minutes prior to the A6M Zero fighter plane's 550 lb. bomb penetrating the flight deck, the exhausted sailor had just rested his head on the catwalk after his all night shift loading the vessel with food and ammunition from the supply ship.

Perdeck's survival instincts kicked in. A combination of luck and training saved sleep is still elusive, decades later.

The one constant in his life has been his wife Elaine.

"Never once," Perdeck lovingly says, "has she ever said she was tired of hearing the stories."

Elaine Perdeck was relieved when, after suffering silently with his demons for years, Albert Perdeck finally agreed to seek professional help.

"I can't live with what's in my head," he conceded.

Perdeck, officially diagnosed with post traumatic stress disorder in 1997, joins the latures demanding that they take notice. While the response is underwhelming, Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve, did hear about his patriotism.

It's never too late to honor a hero.

Smith summed it up nicely when he respectfully stated, "Al, your meritorious service and dedication to duty, to your shipmates, and Nation, endures as an American legacy to all who cherish freedom. For all Americans who have worn the military uniform of the United States, and for all Americans, we honor you today."

If You Could Save a Life, Would You?
Saturday, April 27, 2013
10:00 AM – 4:00 PM
Jackson Liberty High School

To Myra, his wife of 34 years, David is the love of her life. To his son, Brian, and daughter-in-law, Maureen, he is a constant inspiration and source of strength and love. To his two grandchildren, Patrick and Sarah, he is the best "Pop-Pop" anyone could wish for; attending (and cheering loudly) at everyone of Patrick's basketball and soccer games and holding Sarah's hand every step of the way in her life-long struggle with Rett Syndrome. To his coworkers in the Department of Military and Veteran Affairs David is an endless advocate for the rights and needs of our veterans.

David's life as a loving parent, adoring grandparent, devoted husband, and dedicated public servant came to a complete standstill this year; he was diagnosed with Acute Myeloid Leukemia (AML) and now needs a bone marrow transplant to survive. Currently there are no matching donors on the national registry, which is why the community of Jackson is holding a donor drive in David's honor. David is the type of man to give help, not ask for it, so his friends, family, and the countless people whose lives he's changed are asking: Would you help to save his life?
