Re: Patrick Giles v. Motor Vehicle Commission (CSC Docket No. 2017-2756 and OAL Docket No. CSV 11974-17) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Giles and DAG Wagner:

The appeal of Patrick Giles, a Senior Repairer with the Motor Vehicle Commission, of his 10 working day suspension on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Elaine B. Frick (ALJ), who issued her initial decision on January 4, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on January 8, 2018. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expired on February 22, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally have secured an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Based on this information, and given the fact that the matter was settled by the parties and a review of the settlement by staff indicates that it is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, there is not a basis to further delay a final disposition in this matter. Thus, the Commission determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective February 23, 2018.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Re: Matilda Ansah v. Greystone Park Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Human Services (CSC Docket No. 2017-3777; OAL Docket No. CSV 8197-17) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Berger and DAG Davies:

The appeal of Matilda Ansah, a Residential Living Specialist at Greystone Park Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Human Services, of her removal, effective December 23, 2016 on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Margaret M. Monaco (ALJ), who issued her initial decision on January 9, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on January 11, 2018. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on February 25, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently there is not a quorum of Commission members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. Based on this information, the fact that this matter was settled by the parties, the settlement is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, and the parties' agreement to proceed, there does not appear to be a basis to further delay a final disposition in this matters. Thus, the Commission has determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective February 26, 2018.

Re: Timothy Gay v. City of Cape May (CSC Docket No. 2017-312; OAL Docket No. CSR 11910-16) – SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Pescatore and Mr. Corrado:

The appeals of Timothy Gay, a Fire Fighter with the City of Cape May, of his removal effective March 15, 2016, was before Administrative Law Judge Jeffrey Wilson (ALJ), who returned the matter to the Civil Service Commission (Commission) on January 9, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The time frame for the Commission to make its final decision was to initially expire on February 25, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204 and N.J.A.C. 1:4B-1.1(d). Prior to that date, the Commission secured a 15-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than March 12, 2018. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. While this matter is now ready for presentation to the Commission, its next scheduled meeting is March 21, 2018. In this regard, the Commission has determined that, since the settlement complies with Civil Service law and rules, it finds no reason to delay the final disposition of this matter further. Thus, it will not request consent from the parties, as required, for an additional extension of time. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted, effective March 13, 2018, as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204.

Dear Mr. Margeotes and Ms. Gray:

The appeals of Robert Burgess, a Police Officer with the Township of Willingboro Police Department, of his six removals effective December 19, 2016, were before Administrative Law Judge Dorothy Incarvito-Garrabrant (ALJ), who returned two consolidated initial decisions to the Civil Service Commission (Commission) on January 10, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached settlements regarding all matters.

The time frame for the Commission to make its final decisions expires on February 25, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204 and N.J.A.C. 1:4B-1.1(d). Prior to that date, the parties were asked whether they wished the Commission to secure a 45-day extension of time to render its final decisions. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. Both parties indicated they did not have any objection to the Commission not securing an additional extension. Based on this information, and since the clarified settlements comply with Civil Service law and rules, the Commission has determined that there is no reason to delay the final disposition of these matters any further by requesting any additional extensions of time. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decisions will be deemed adopted, effective February 26, 2018, as the final decisions in this matter per N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo
Deputy Director

United States or New Jersey Constitutions, relating to any alleged violation of public policy, wrongful, retaliatory or constructive discharge, non-payment of wages, retaliation, assault, battery, defamation, or any other statutory, common law, or employment-related claim or tort. Burgess's release expressly includes a waiver of all claims existing on or before the date he signs this Agreement and Release as well as those he may not know about, and specifically includes the unconditional waiver of the right to proceed with any discovery concerning any such claim in any future litigation or proceeding between Burgess and the Township or other Released Party. Burgess acknowledges and affirms that he has been fully paid any and all wages, including overtime, owed to him as well as all benefits and deferred compensation owed to him other than retirement/pension eligibility for which is not affected by this agreement. Furthermore, he acknowledges and affirms that the payment herein enumerated shall satisfy all earned vacation, sick and/or other paid time off for what he may be entitled.

2.4 Notwithstanding the release and waivers set forth in Paragraph 2.3 above, Burgess acknowledges that this Agreement and Release in no way waives or limits his right to take part in any investigation conducted by a state, federal, or local government agency. Nonetheless, Burgess understands and acknowledges that by signing this Agreement and Release, he has completely waived his right to receive monetary damages or other individual relief in connection with any charge he may file with any administrative agency that relates to a claim waived under this Agreement and Release and, if he is awarded monetary damages, hereby unconditionally assigns to the Township and Released Parties any right or interest he may have to receive such relief or damage.

3. Confidentiality

3.1 Burgess promises and agrees that he has not and will not disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release, that he received any payments from the Township or any allegations of alleged wrongdoing by the Township or any other Released Party, to any person or entity except (1) his attorney, (2) his professional tax advisors, the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") or other taxing authorities, (3) his spouse and/or immediate family; or (4) in response to a formal order from any judicial, governmental, regulatory, or self-regulatory agency or organization having competent jurisdiction. Burgess further agrees that if he does disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release to his spouse, immediate family, attorney, or to his professional tax advisors, he will insure that they will not further disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release. Burgess understands and agrees that he may, pursuant to subpoena or other legal process, be asked to provide testimony, documents and other information regarding his former employment with the Township. If Burgess receives a subpoena, formal order or other legal process from any judicial, governmental, regulatory, or self-regulatory agency or other organization as set forth in Paragraph

2.4 above, Burgess agrees to provide the Township, c/o Richard Brevogel – Acting Township Manager, and/or his successor, with prompt notice of any such subpoena or process, hereby consents to the Township's intervention in any such proceeding to prevent the requested disclosure, and to cooperate with the Township in seeking to avoid the disclosure or, if ordered by the court, by giving truthful and complete testimony and information in response to such subpoena or legal process.

3.2 Notwithstanding anything else contained in this Agreement and Release, Burgess understands and agrees that the Township and the Released Parties will remain free to internally communicate, to those with a business or governmental need to know, any and all information concerning his employment history with the Township.

4. Reference-Related Communication

Burgess understands and acknowledges that, should he or any prospective employer wish to make any inquiries of the Township or any other Released Party into his employment history with the Township ("Reference Inquiries"), such Reference Inquiries must be directed exclusively to the Department of Human Resources. Burgess further agrees that the Township retains the absolute right, in its sole discretion, not to respond to Reference Inquiries in any other form. Burgess agrees that in the event the Township responds to Reference Inquiries properly directed to the Department of Human Resources, the Department of Human Resources will provide only Burgess' (1) dates of employment with the Township; and (2) his last position title, unless a waiver is provided by Burgess outlining the specific personnel information outside of (1) and (2) above that may be released by the Township. Upon receipt of said waiver, the Department of Human Resources may release the information specified. Burgess voluntarily consents to the Township's response to Reference Inquiries, and fully indemnifies and holds the Township and the Released Parties harmless from any and all claims, causes of action, damages and attorney's fees/costs in any way related to the Township's proper response to Reference Inquiries as described in this Section.

5. No Admission of Liability

Burgess also agrees that he is barred from seeking to introduce this Agreement and Release into evidence in any federal, state, or administrative proceeding or during any arbitration because this Agreement and Release is not in any way an admission by the Township or the Released Parties that they breached any legal duty owed to him, or are liable to him in any way. Burgess acknowledges that, by settling any and all actual or potential disputes and entering into this Agreement and Release, the Township and the Released Parties do not admit that they owe him any money, breached any duty they owed to him, have done anything wrong, or have treated him unlawfully or unfairly in any way. In fact, Burgess acknowledges that the Township and the Released Parties specifically deny that they have violated or abridged any federal, state, or local law, regulation or ordinance, or any right or obligation that they owe or may have owed to him. No findings of fact have been made or issued by any administrative agency or court of law, and Burgess agrees that he is not the prevailing party in this cause of action involving the Township or the Released Parties.

6. Entire Agreement

6.1 Burgess also warrants and agrees that this Agreement and Release constitutes the entire agreement between himself and the Township or any other Released Party. Burgess understands and acknowledges that no other promise or agreements have been made to or with him or with any other person or entity on his behalf other than those set forth herein, and that there is no written or oral understanding or agreement between Burgess and the Township or any other Released Party which is not specifically recited or referenced herein. In deciding to sign this Agreement and Release, Burgess has not relied on any statement by anyone associated with the Township or any other Released Party that is not specifically and expressly set forth in this Agreement and Release. In fact, Burgess specifically acknowledges that he had the opportunity to review this Agreement and Release with his attorney prior to executing same.

7. Severability and Construction of Terms

Burgess agrees that the terms of this Agreement and Release are severable, and that if any provision of this Agreement and Release (other than the General Releases in Paragraph 2.3 above) is held to be illegal, invalid or unenforceable, that provision shall not be a part of this Agreement and Release but all other terms shall remain in full force and effect at the sole option of the Township. The legality, validity and enforceability of the remaining provisions of this Agreement and Release shall not be affected by a determination that any provision of this Agreement and Release (other than the General Releases in Paragraph 2.3 above) is illegal, invalid or unenforceable. The parties also agree that because Burgess was given an opportunity to be represented by counsel of his own choosing at his own cost to negotiate this Agreement and Release, the terms of this Agreement and Release shall not be construed against the Township or the Released Parties in any respect.

8. Assignment

This Assignment and Release shall not be assigned by Burgess but it shall be binding upon his heirs, executors, administrators, agents, and legal representatives. This Agreement shall be freely assignable by the Township without restriction, and shall be deemed automatically assigned by the Township with Burgess's consent. This Agreement and Release shall be binding upon, and shall inure to the benefit of, the Township's successors and assigns.

9. Governing Law

This Agreement is governed by, and shall be construed and enforced, in all respects, in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey, exclusive of any choice of law rules. Any dispute concerning this Agreement and Release shall be brought in, and the parties hereby consent to the personal jurisdiction of, the Superior Court of New Jersey.

10. Acknowledgement

Burgess acknowledges that (1) he has carefully read this Agreement and Release; (2) he has had the opportunity to have his attorney explain the contents of the terms of this Agreement to him; (3) he fully understands what this Agreement and Release means; (4) he is physically and emotionally competent and of sound mind to execute this Agreement and Release; and (5) he is signing this Agreement and Release knowingly and voluntarily, of his own free will, act and deed.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, of sound mind and intending to be forever legally bound hereby, the parties have executed this Confidential Settlement Agreement and General Release, being ~~ten~~ nine 9 (~~10~~) pages in length, and on the date(s) set forth below.

Mr. Angiulo,

With regard to the characterization of the time period referenced below, it is the Township's position that the time should be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay.

I have attempted to confer with Mr. Margeotes concerning this matter, but I have not been able to reach him. Feel free to give me a call with any questions or concerns.

Thank you.

Mr. Margeotes and Mr. Taylor:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlements regarding Robert Burgess from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding them to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, while the settlements indicate that Ms. Burgess agrees, inter alia, to resign in good standing effective December 8, 2017, the record does not specifically reflect how to record the time period from the original date of removal (December 19, 2016) to the date of resignation. In this regard, before a settlement can be acknowledged by the Civil Service Commission, all periods of time must be accounted for in an employee's personnel record. For example, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

2.2 Burgess acknowledges that he has not been provided any legal or other advice by the Township, the Released Parties or anyone on behalf of the Township and/or the Released Parties including but not limited to legal counsel or advice regarding the tax or withholding consequences of this Agreement or Release, or the consideration he may receive hereunder, pursuant to any federal, state or local tax or withholding laws or regulations. Burgess also agrees to make no individual or class claims against the Township or other Released Party for payment of any taxes, including costs, attorney's fees or applicable interest or penalties.

2.3 In exchange for the benefits described in Section 1.1 above, Burgess, for full consideration as recited above, forever waives, releases, discharges and gives up any claim, demand, cause of action or damage that he, his spouse, family members, heirs, executors, administrators, successors and/or assigns may have against the Township, its employees, its managers, its elected officials, and its appointed officials, as well as all of their employee benefits plans and the trustees other than retirement/pension eligibility for which is not affected by this agreement, fiduciaries, administrators and parties-in-interest of those plans, and any of the present or past employees, managers, elected officials, appointed officials, officers, directors, administrators, shareholders, agents, attorneys, insurance carriers and contractors of each of the foregoing person(s) or entity/entities along with the predecessors, successors, and assigns of each of them and including their families, estates, and executors (together "the Released Parties" as used throughout this Agreement and Release), based upon his recruitment, hiring, employment or separation from that employment, including but not limited to: any waivable claims for salary, bonuses, commissions, severance pay, vacation pay or any benefits under the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938, 29 U.S.C. 201, et seq., ("FLSA"), the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended, 29 U.S.C. 1001, et seq. ("ERISA"), the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, 29 U.S.C. §§ 1161 et seq.

United States or New Jersey Constitutions, relating to any alleged violation of public policy, wrongful, retaliatory or constructive discharge, non-payment of wages, retaliation, assault, battery, defamation, or any other statutory, common law, or employment-related claim or tort. Burgess's release expressly includes a waiver of all claims existing on or before the date he signs this Agreement and Release as well as those he may not know about, and specifically includes the unconditional waiver of the right to proceed with any discovery concerning any such claim in any future litigation or proceeding between Burgess and the Township or other Released Party. Burgess acknowledges and affirms that he has been fully paid any and all wages, including overtime, owed to him as well as all benefits and deferred compensation owed to him other than retirement/pension eligibility for which is not affected by this agreement. Furthermore, he acknowledges and affirms that the payment herein enumerated shall satisfy all earned vacation, sick and/or other paid time off for what he may be entitled.

2.4 Notwithstanding the release and waivers set forth in Paragraph 2.3 above, Burgess acknowledges that this Agreement and Release in no way waives or limits his right to take part in any investigation conducted by a state, federal, or local government agency. Nonetheless, Burgess understands and acknowledges that by signing this Agreement and Release, he has completely waived his right to receive monetary damages or other individual relief in connection with any charge he may file with any administrative agency that relates to a claim waived under this Agreement and Release and, if he is awarded monetary damages, hereby unconditionally assigns to the Township and Released Parties any right or interest he may have to receive such relief or damage.

3. Confidentiality

3.1 Burgess promises and agrees that he has not and will not disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release, that he received any payments from the Township or any allegations of alleged wrongdoing by the Township or any other Released Party, to any person or entity except (1) his attorney, (2) his professional tax advisors, the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") or other taxing authorities, (3) his spouse and/or immediate family; or (4) in response to a formal order from any judicial, governmental, regulatory, or self-regulatory agency or organization having competent jurisdiction. Burgess further agrees that if he does disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release to his spouse, immediate family, attorney, or to his professional tax advisors, he will insure that they will not further disclose the terms of this Agreement and Release. Burgess understands and agrees that he may, pursuant to subpoena or other legal process, be asked to provide testimony, documents and other information regarding his former employment with the Township. If Burgess receives a subpoena, formal order or other legal process from any judicial, governmental, regulatory, or self-regulatory agency or other organization as set forth in Paragraph

2.4 above, Burgess agrees to provide the Township, c/o Richard Brevogel – Acting Township Manager, and/or his successor, with prompt notice of any such subpoena or process, hereby consents to the Township's intervention in any such proceeding to prevent the requested disclosure, and to cooperate with the Township in seeking to avoid the disclosure or, if ordered by the court, by giving truthful and complete testimony and information in response to such subpoena or legal process.

3.2 Notwithstanding anything else contained in this Agreement and Release, Burgess understands and agrees that the Township and the Released Parties will remain free to internally communicate, to those with a business or governmental need to know, any and all information concerning his employment history with the Township.

4. Reference-Related Communication

Burgess understands and acknowledges that, should he or any prospective employer wish to make any inquiries of the Township or any other Released Party into his employment history with the Township ("Reference Inquiries"), such Reference Inquiries must be directed exclusively to the Department of Human Resources. Burgess further agrees that the Township retains the absolute right, in its sole discretion, not to respond to Reference Inquiries in any other form. Burgess agrees that in the event the Township responds to Reference Inquiries properly directed to the Department of Human Resources, the Department of Human Resources will provide only Burgess' (1) dates of employment with the Township; and (2) his last position title, unless a waiver is provided by Burgess outlining the specific personnel information outside of (1) and (2) above that may be released by the Township. Upon receipt of said waiver, the Department of Human Resources may release the information specified. Burgess voluntarily consents to the Township's response to Reference Inquiries, and fully indemnifies and holds the Township and the Released Parties harmless from any and all claims, causes of action, damages and attorney's fees/costs in any way related to the Township's proper response to Reference Inquiries as described in this Section.

5. No Admission of Liability

Burgess also agrees that he is barred from seeking to introduce this Agreement and Release into evidence in any federal, state, or administrative proceeding or during any arbitration because this Agreement and Release is not in any way an admission by the Township or the Released Parties that they breached any legal duty owed to him, or are liable to him in any way. Burgess acknowledges that, by settling any and all actual or potential disputes and entering into this Agreement and Release, the Township and the Released Parties do not admit that they owe him any money, breached any duty they owed to him, have done anything wrong, or have treated him unlawfully or unfairly in any way. In fact, Burgess acknowledges that the Township and the Released Parties specifically deny that they have violated or abridged any federal, state, or local law, regulation or ordinance, or any right or obligation that they owe or may have owed to him. No findings of fact have been made or issued by any administrative agency or court of law, and Burgess agrees that he is not the prevailing party in this cause of action involving the Township or the Released Parties.

6. Entire Agreement

6.1 Burgess also warrants and agrees that this Agreement and Release constitutes the entire agreement between himself and the Township or any other Released Party. Burgess understands and acknowledges that no other promise or agreements have been made to or with him or with any other person or entity on his behalf other than those set forth herein, and that there is no written or oral understanding or agreement between Burgess and the Township or any other Released Party which is not specifically recited or referenced herein. In deciding to sign this Agreement and Release, Burgess has not relied on any statement by anyone associated with the Township or any other Released Party that is not specifically and expressly set forth in this Agreement and Release. In fact, Burgess specifically acknowledges that he had the opportunity to review this Agreement and Release with his attorney prior to executing same.

7. Severability and Construction of Terms

Burgess agrees that the terms of this Agreement and Release are severable, and that if any provision of this Agreement and Release (other than the General Releases in Paragraph 2.3 above) is held to be illegal, invalid or unenforceable, that provision shall not be a part of this Agreement and Release but all other terms shall remain in full force and effect at the sole option of the Township. The legality, validity and enforceability of the remaining provisions of this Agreement and Release shall not be affected by a determination that any provision of this Agreement and Release (other than the General Releases in Paragraph 2.3 above) is illegal, invalid or unenforceable. The parties also agree that because Burgess was given an opportunity to be represented by counsel of his own choosing at his own cost to negotiate this Agreement and Release, the terms of this Agreement and Release shall not be construed against the Township or the Released Parties in any respect.

8. Assignment

This Assignment and Release shall not be assigned by Burgess but it shall be binding upon his heirs, executors, administrators, agents, and legal representatives. This Agreement shall be freely assignable by the Township without restriction, and shall be deemed automatically assigned by the Township with Burgess's consent. This Agreement and Release shall be binding upon, and shall inure to the benefit of, the Township's successors and assigns.

9. Governing Law

This Agreement is governed by, and shall be construed and enforced, in all respects, in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey, exclusive of any choice of law rules. Any dispute concerning this Agreement and Release shall be brought in, and the parties hereby consent to the personal jurisdiction of, the Superior Court of New Jersey.

10. Acknowledgement

Burgess acknowledges that (1) he has carefully read this Agreement and Release; (2) he has had the opportunity to have his attorney explain the contents of the terms of this Agreement to him; (3) he fully understands what this Agreement and Release means; (4) he is physically and emotionally competent and of sound mind to execute this Agreement and Release; and (5) he is signing this Agreement and Release knowingly and voluntarily, of his own free will, act and deed.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, of sound mind and intending to be forever legally bound hereby, the parties have executed this Confidential Settlement Agreement and General Release, being ~~ten~~ nine (10) pages in length, and on the date(s) set forth below.

Mr. Angiulo,

With regard to the characterization of the time period referenced below, it is the Township's position that the time should be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay.

I have attempted to confer with Mr. Margeotes concerning this matter, but I have not been able to reach him. Feel free to give me a call with any questions or concerns.

Thank you.

Mr. Margeotes and Mr. Taylor:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlements regarding Robert Burgess from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding them to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, while the settlements indicate that Ms. Burgess agrees, inter alia, to resign in good standing effective December 8, 2017, the record does not specifically reflect how to record the time period from the original date of removal (December 19, 2016) to the date of resignation. In this regard, before a settlement can be acknowledged by the Civil Service Commission, all periods of time must be accounted for in an employee's personnel record. For example, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Re: Melvin Robinson v. Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections (CSC Docket No. 2017-4074; OAL Docket No. CSR 11236-17)

Dear Mr. Quinlan and DAG Jong:

The appeal of Melvin Robinson, a Senior Correction Officer with the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections, of his removal effective July 18, 2017 on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Joseph A. Ascione (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on January 11, 2018, recommending reversing the removal. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

The time frame for the Commission to make its final decision was to initially expire on February 25, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204 and N.J.A.C. 1:4B-1.1(d). Prior to that date the Commission secured a 15-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than March 12, 2018. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, since the next scheduled meeting is March 21, 2018, it requested consent of the parties, as required, for an additional 15-day extension. However, the appellant did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204, effective March 13, 2018.

Since the appellant's removal has been reversed, he is entitled to be reinstated with back pay, benefits and seniority from the first date of his separation until the date of actual reinstatement. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Additionally, the appellant is entitled to reasonable counsel fees pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12. Proof of income earned and mitigation as well as an affidavit in support of reasonable counsel fees should be submitted to the appointing authority within 30 days of said reinstatement. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay or counsel fees. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay or counsel fee dispute.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo
Deputy Director

IN THE MATTER OF MELVIN ROBINSON,
ALBERT C. WAGNER YOUTH
CORRECTIONAL FACILITY.

Timothy J.P. Quinlan, Esq., for appellant Melvin Robinson (Quinlan & Nigro, LLC, attorneys)

Andy Jong, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General, State of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: December 18, 2017 Decided: January 11, 2018

BEFORE JOSEPH A. ASCIONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Senior Correction Officer (SCO) Melvin Robinson (Robinson or appellant), appeals from the July 18, 2017, decision of the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility (Wagner Facility) to remove him from his position as a SCO at the Wagner Facility on charges in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause; of HRB 84-17, as amended, C 11, conduct unbecoming a public employee; of HRB 84-17, as amended, E 1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision; of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 7, violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security; and of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 4, Improper or unauthorized contact with inmate – undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families or friends on or about April 25, 2017, ("incident") with inmates.

On June 16, 2017, Wagner Facility served a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA), dated June 16, 2017, advising of the removal of appellant on a date to be determined; Weingarten rights were read by appellant and executed at the time of the investigation, the Wagner Facility served a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) removing appellant effective July 18, 2017. On August 7, 2017, appellant timely appealed that removal based upon his denial of the allegations charged. Under the expedited procedures of P.L. 2009, c. 16, N.J.S.A. 40A:14-202(d), the matter was filed simultaneously with the Civil Service Commission and the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was received on August 7, 2017, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The hearing commenced on November 15, 2017, and continued December 6, 2017. At the close of the plenary hearing, the record remained open for counsel to present written closing statements and briefs. The record closed on December 18, 2017, after the initial review of the post-hearing submissions.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On May 18, 2017, various inmates provided statements to a Correction Sergeant Calero advising of an event that occurred two to three weeks prior thereto. This removal proceeding against SCO Robinson originates from those inmate statements, identified as R-3, 4, and 5. The Wagner Facility served a PNDA on June 16, 2017; and followed with a final notice of disciplinary action on July 17, 2017. The events allegedly occurred when SCO Robinson, transported by van the inmates to the DeptCor detail.

Sgt. Gerardo Calero (Cor. Sgt. Calero)

Cor. Sgt. Calero testified to receipt of the inmate's statements on May 18, 2017. He testified to his question of Williams' credibility due to being forced to close the van window on a return from the warehouse. He provided the blank statements to the inmates and awaited their completion, and received them.

Inmate Alquan Scott (Scott)

Scott testified to his three months stay at the Wagner Facility due to a conviction for possession of a controlled dangerous substance (CDS). He claimed that the relationship with the appellant to be cordial but not friendly. His testimony revealed that appellant drove a van with approximately seven inmates, three which sat caged directly behind the appellant. Scott requested that the radio be turned to a rap station, appellant refused that request, rather appellant played sports radio. Scott then testified that appellant had shared his personal cell phone with him, passing it back behind the caged area, and appellant compelled him to watch a Lil Wayne video. Scott testified he had the phone but was not allowed to make telephone calls. He described the phone as black. Scott also testified that appellant shared personal information with Scott related to appellant's incarceration. Scott also claimed that appellant claimed he had a girlfriend. He did not explain why he waited the three weeks before filing the inmate statement, R-3. Scott testified to four previous incidents with appellant. The first being the deprivation of coffee at the work location. The coffee was contained in a warehouse office where the inmates picked up their work duties. Scott claimed appellant said he could not have coffee, not that he could not go into the office. A second incident involved the transportation back from the warehouse location. The hot weather led to keeping the windows open when the inmates returned to the Wagner Facility, one or more of the inmates whistled or made remarks at women on the street. Appellant then compelled the remainder of the return to be with closed windows, one of the inmates, an Azmera Williams, claimed he suffered from asthma and needed the window open, this request, appellant did not accede to. On return to the Wagner Facility inmate Williams reported to the infirmary and thereafter requested a reassignment to the kitchen area. A third incident involved a change of strip search procedure instituted by appellant to prevent the inmates from passing things during the search amongst themselves. The procedure took longer than the previous procedure resulting in the inmate's late return and an attendant loss of their recreational period. The final incident involved an off-location assignment to Essex County that the inmates anticipated and knew about a least a day before the assignment. Scott had previously resided in Jersey City, the appellant alerted the Wagner Facility to the fact that the inmates knew they were going to be in the area where they previously resided. The Wagner Facility had a policy against assigning local inmates to the areas where they previously resided. Appellant's actions resulted in Scott's removal from the off-location work detail. Scott only became aware of this removal on the anticipated date of the assignment. Scott filed the inmate statement and provided the names of other inmates and numbers who would corroborate his story.

Inmate Carlos Ortiz (Ortiz)

Ortiz testified to his incarceration to be related to gun and CDS possession charges. Ortiz testified to being in the rear of the van operated by appellant, he testified that he could see through a window that appellant handed his black cell phone and that Williams was holding it. He recalled the time as sometime in May or June, not April as Scott had testified. He also did not recall whether he had taken a medical day that day. He claimed to have no animosity to appellant. He related that on the return they were subjected to a different motivational speaker from the cell phone. He testified to the incident with inmate Williams' asthma, and that the trip was approximately twenty-five minutes. He claimed that appellant shared that he had a girlfriend in the Dominican Republic. He testified that Robinson did not use the GPS function on the cell phone. He claimed that Scott only asked him for his name and number but did not talk about the incident.

Inmate Azmera Williams (Williams)

Williams testified to his incarceration to be related to a robbery, gun and CDS possession. He claimed to have no animosity toward appellant. He described the phone as black and grey. He testified that the motivational speaker occurred in the morning and the Lil Wayne piece occurred in the afternoon. He claimed Scott held the phone in the afternoon and he held the phone in the morning. He said the appellant did use his GPS function the first time they drove to the warehouse. He testified to the coffee, window and strip search issues. He acknowledged that appellant compelled him to the back of the line when the appellant perceived him attempting to cut the line. He described appellant as "lax" but described SCO Palmer as "strict." He denied he had any animosity toward appellant, and admitted that he had requested a transfer two to three days prior to completing the statement.

Theodis Ratliff (I/O Ratliff)

Investigator Ratliff testified to employment with the Department of Corrections (DOC) at the Wagner Facility for four years, and interviewing the inmates as well as appellant. He testified that he did not check to see if the van used had a window from the rear compartment to the cage/driver area. He acknowledged the inconsistency in the number of times the phone allegedly transferred from appellant to the inmates. He acknowledged that the inmates had motive to complain against appellant. He did not believe Inmate's Scott's claim of no animosity toward appellant to be credible. He did not request appellant's passport or phone records. He testified mandatory annual training addressed undue familiarity. He testified he did not question inmates who did not complete the inmate statements.

Major Daniel Gerdes (Maj. Gerdes)

Maj. Gerdes testified to his twenty years employment with the DOC and three years at the Wagner Facility. He knew of Robinson due to a prior disciple and suspension. He testified that undue familiarity between a correction officer and inmates is discouraged. He identified the DOC Handbook bringing attention to General Principals Page 1 A-1 and Page 2 (c). He identified the General Rules and Regulations Page 5 (1) and Page 11 (x) Discipline. He identified Law Enforcement Rules and Regulations for Custodial Staff Article 1 Section 3 at page 3 and page 9 for Section 4 familiarity with inmates. He identified Robinson's acknowledged receipt of the manuals.

He identified DOC Policy ADM.010.004 Staff/Inmate Over Familiarity revised March 1, 2016. He identified Human Resource Bulletin 84-17 (c) 11 at page 9, as conduct unbecoming, including undue familiarity. He testified that since graduation from the Academy approximately seventeen years before, Robinson received one hour of undue familiarity training in 2010. Once a correction officer does a favor for an inmate, the correction officer toss their career away. Undue familiarity is discretionary in nature, he could not go into specifics. There is no prohibition from talking to an inmate. There is nothing in writing explaining the prohibited conduct.

SCO Otis Palmer (SCO Palmer)

SCO Palmer testified to the knowledge of the four events identified by Inmate Scott and the inmates' complaints regarding SCO Robinson's actions.

CO Sgt. Waymouth Wyche (CO Sgt. Wyche)

CO Sgt. Wyche testified to his thirteen-year employment with the DOC and his service as a sergeant since the year 2013. He testified to his supervision of Robinson. He could not say that the rear of the van had a viewing portal to the front of the vehicle, not all the vans did. He testified to concerns at DeptCor regarding the infiltration of contraband to the Wagner Facility. He accepted Robinson's recommended actions regarding the strip searches as an improvement to the previous conduct of strip searches to reduce the risk of contraband returning to the Wagner Facility. He did not hear of the inmates' complaints directly. He recognized that the inmates were not pleased with Robinson's actions. He testified that Robinson performed what was asked of him, and he trusted Robinson's judgment. Discussions held with inmates were a grey line.

SCO Angelo Butler (SCO Butler)

SCO Butler testified to employment with the DOC for more than nine years. He testified to overhearing the inmates in the kitchen conspiring to get back at SCO Robinson. The inmates were upset and said, "that's why we told on him."

CO Sgt. Tequila Thompson (CO Sgt. Thompson)

CO Sgt. Thompson testified to her eight years of employment with the DOC as a CO Sgt., and her knowledge of Robinson. She testified to Maj. Gerdes upset and annoyed with SCO Robinson over the non-appeals filed by the inmates. Maj. Gerdes believed SCO Robinson supported the inmates. CO Sgt. Thompson believed that Maj. Gerdes did not understand the procedure, that SCO Robinson only gave the inmates a form with their name on it, nothing further.

SCO Melvin Robinson

SCO Robinson testified to employment with the DOC for more than seventeen years. He knew the inmates to be of the same gang, the Bloods. He denied ever discussing Black Lives mattered with the inmates, though they may have overheard him discussing that with others. He denied that he ever let the inmates hold his phone or watch Lil Wayne on it. He claimed the inmates had problems with him. He denied that the van had a window peep hole. He claimed he did not share his incarceration with the inmates, the incarceration occurred in 2015, it was only in 2017 that an inmate Sweeney had mentioned his incarceration. He does not know how inmate Sweeney found out, though Inmate Sweeney worked in the administration's offices. He denied having a girlfriend in the Dominican Republic. He claimed his mother, who lives here, was born in the Dominican Republic. He denied discussing his love life with the inmates. He acknowledged that the witnesses that testified on his behalf were co-workers he considered friends.

The critical analysis of this case depends on the credibility of three convicted inmates who all deny any animus to the appellant. Yet, all had problems with the appellant and bias due to their perception that SCO Robinson's involvement in Wagner Facility actions made their stay less than ideal. This tribunal views all of SCO Robinson's actions involving the inmates to be in furtherance of the objectives of the Wagner Facility to maintain proper security and order. This tribunal cannot accept the testimony or statements of the inmates as credible. The complaints were made two to three weeks after the alleged incident, the inmates could not remember the date of the incident, some placing it in April, another in May. The inmates gave disparate descriptions of the color of SCO Robinson's phone. The inmates identified different people holding the phone. The inmates identified a different order in what alleged viewing took place. Their testimony has absolutely no semblance of truth to this tribunal. Even accepting their testimony as true, this tribunal has difficulty in determining whether the incident that occurred is proscribed by the "undue familiarity language." It appears from the policies, regulations and rules that the language is designed to address, familial, or intimate sexual relations, or business relations, between a correction officer and an inmate. Such proscribed conduct is not present here.

In weighing SCO Robinson's testimony, this tribunal accounts he is defending his job. However, the testimony of the complaining inmates is incongruous. To think that a correction order who has just returned from an extensive suspension would risk turning his phone over to inmates is a less likely scenario, and does not satisfy this tribunal that this event happened as the inmates related. It is more likely that rumors and overheard discussions between the appellant and other correction officers, account for the inmates limited knowledge of appellant personal affairs.

The testimony of investigators and the administration of the Wagner Facility cannot separately offer reliable testimony to support the charges made. This tribunal recognizes that the administration of the Wagner Facility has grave concerns over the suitability of continued employment by appellant with the Wagner Facility. The acceptable facts of this presentation are insufficient to support the finding sought.

FACTUAL FINDINGS

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. The testimony of the complaining inmates, Scott, Williams, and Ortiz is rejected as unreliable as it is tainted by bias and inconsistencies. This tribunal does not accept that SCO Robinson committed the complained actions.

2. The testimony of the Wagner Facility administration has provided the pertinent policies, rules and regulations regarding over familiarity between staff and inmates. There are no clear specifics of those policies, rules and regulations that can support a finding that a violation has occurred by the appellant.

3. SCO Robinson committed no violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee.

4. SCO Robinson committed no violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause.

5. SCO Robinson committed no violations of HRB 84-17, as amended, C 11, conduct unbecoming a public employee.

6. SCO Robinson committed no violations of HRB 84-17, as amended, E 1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision.

7. SCO Robinson committed no violations of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 7, violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security.

8. SCO Robinson committed no violations of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 4, Improper or unauthorized contact with inmate – undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families or friends.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6, governs a public employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex Cnty. Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Governmental employers also have delineated rights and obligations. The Act sets forth that it is State policy to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials so they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b).

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In this matter, the Wagner Facility bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Therefore, I must "decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). For reasonable probability to exist, the evidence must be such as to "generate belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959) (citation omitted). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Credibility, or, more specifically, credible testimony, in turn, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself, as well. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554–55 (1954).

It is well recognized that the State correctional facilities operate through a rigidly hierarchical, almost "paramilitary," structure. Lockley v. Dep't of Corr., 177 N.J. 413, 425 (2003). In the instant matter, the Wagner Facility charges appellant with violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee. "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" has been described as any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a department; conduct which has a tendency to destroy respect for public employees and their departments; or conduct which destroys confidence in public service. See In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140–42 (App. Div. 1960); cf. Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966).

The Wagner Facility also charges a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), other sufficient cause, specifically, violation of HRB 84-17, as amended, C 11, conduct unbecoming a public employee; of HRB 84-17, as amended, E 1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision; of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 7, violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security; and of HRB 84-17, as amended, D 4, Improper or unauthorized contact with inmate – undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families or friends on or about April 25, 2017.

As this tribunal has found that the complaining inmates testimony is not credible, I CONCLUDE that the preponderance of the competent and credible evidence has not established that appellant violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11); HRB 84-17, as amended, C 11, conduct unbecoming a public employee; HRB 84-17, as amended, E 1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision; HRB 84-17, as amended, D 7, violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security; and HRB 84-17, as amended, D 4, Improper or unauthorized contact with inmate – undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families or friends on or about April 25, 2017.

For all the reasons set forth above and on the absence of competent proofs, I CONCLUDE that respondent has not met its burden on these major disciplinary charges and that the disciplinary charges against appellant must fail.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the disciplinary action entered in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, MERIT SYSTEM PRACTICES AND LABOR RELATIONS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: In the Matters of Parveen Arastu, et al. (CSC Docket Nos. 2011-2422, et al; OAL Docket Nos. CSV 1327-11, et al.) (Consolidated)

Dear Ms. Stehling and Ms. Scott:

The above-captioned consolidated layoff appeals were before Administrative Law Judge Richard McGill (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on January 19, 2018, recommending, inter alia, reversing the layoffs. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellants.

The time frame for the Civil Service Commission (Commission) to make its final decision was to initially expire on March 12, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. As the Commission did not hold a meeting prior to that date, it secured an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than April 26, 2018. Subsequently, as one of the Commission members is required to be recused on these matters, the Commission was left without a quorum to vote since there were only the two remaining members. Consequently, the Commission requested consent of the parties, as required, for two additional 45-day extensions of time. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. Those requests were consented to by the parties and the time for the Commission to make its final decision was extended to July 25, 2018. Thereafter, as there continued to not be sufficient Commission members to vote on the matters, the Commission requested further consent of the parties, as required, for another 45-day extension of time. However, the appellants did not provide consent for a further extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision is deemed adopted as the final decision in these matters per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective July 26, 2018.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Lynsey A. Stehling, Esq., for appellants (Daniel J. Zirrith, Esq., attorney)

France Casseus, Assistant Corporation Counsel, for respondent (Kenyatta K. Stewart, Acting Corporation Counsel, attorney)

Record Closed: January 19, 2018 Decided: January 19, 2018

BEFORE RICHARD McGILL, ALJ:

This consolidated proceeding involves 111 appeals by former employees (hereinafter "appellants") from layoffs by the City of Newark (hereinafter "respondent") in or about 2010. The issue in this proceeding is whether respondent implemented the layoffs in good faith. Appellants now move for a sanction for respondent's failure to comply with orders compelling discovery.

The appeals were transferred to the Office of Administrative Law in eleven separate transmittals between February 4, 2011, and August 8, 2011. The first ten transmittals were consolidated by Order dated July 7, 2011, and the eleventh was added to the consolidated proceeding by Order dated December 9, 2011.[1] Two individuals, Rafael Padilla and Bethzaida Cruz, withdrew their appeals.

[1] The order of consolidation included one other appeal, I/M/O the Layoff of Khadijahy Y. Adams by the City of Newark, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 03432-11, Agency Dkt. Nos. 2011-3415 et al., which was subsequently withdrawn.

On April 30, 2013, appellants filed a notice of motion to compel discovery. Included with the motion was a list of specific deficiencies. Most significantly, appellants sought the specific reasons for the layoffs of the individuals in question. Appellants' motion was granted by Order dated May 31, 2013, and respondent was specifically ordered to provide fully responsive answers to appellants' discovery requests as detailed in appellants' list of deficiencies within fourteen days of receipt of the order. Appellants' request for attorney's fees and costs was denied.

On February 19, 2015, appellants filed a second notice of motion to compel discovery. Appellants maintained that there were still extensive deficiencies in the responses to interrogatories including specific reasons for the layoffs of the individuals in question. Appellants' motion was granted by Order dated September 16, 2015. Respondent was ordered to provide fully responsive answers to appellants' discovery requests as detailed in appellants' list of deficiencies within twenty days of receipt of the Order and to pay appellants' attorney's fees and costs.

On November 25, 2015, appellants filed another motion to compel discovery. Appellants maintained that respondent's answers to discovery requests still did not provide fully responsive answers and requested a sanction in the form of payment of attorney's fees and costs. Appellants' motion was granted by Order dated January 12, 2016, and respondent was ordered to provide full and complete answers to appellants' interrogatories and document demands within twenty days of receipt of the Order and to pay appellants' attorney's fees and all costs associated with the motion.

On August 24, 2017, appellants filed a motion for sanctions against respondent for failure to comply with three discovery orders previously issued in this matter. Appellants assert that respondent failed to provide fully responsive answers to appellants' discovery requests.

Respondent filed papers dated September 20, 2017, in opposition to the motion. Respondent maintained that it provided fully responsive answers to the discovery requests. In addition, respondent requested a determination as to the responsiveness of its answers to appellants' interrogatories. As a result, an oral argument was conducted on October 2, 2017, in regard to the responsiveness of respondent's answers to interrogatories.

The applicable regulation is N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14, which provides as follows:

> (a) For unreasonable failure to comply with any order of a judge or with any requirements of this chapter, the judge may:
> 1. Dismiss or grant the motion or application;
> 2. Suppress a defense or claim;
> 3. Exclude evidence;
> 4. Order costs or reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, to be paid to the State of New Jersey or an aggrieved representative or party; or > 5. Take other appropriate case-related action.

It is helpful to review the substantive law concerning layoffs in order to understand the significance of the discovery sought by appellants. An appointing authority may institute layoffs for economy, efficiency or other related reasons. N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1.1(a). The action of the appointing must be based in good faith on a desire to achieve economy and efficiency. Schnipper v. Twp. of North Bergen, 13 N.J. Super. 11, 15 (App. Div. 1951). Good faith appeals are based on the contention that the appointing authority implemented the layoff for reasons other than economy, efficiency or related reasons. N.J.A.C. 4A:8-2.6(a)1. "Good faith" is presumed and the burden of proof is on the discharged employee to show otherwise. Pros., Det. Essex Cty. v. Hudson Bd. Freeholders, 130 N.J. Super. 30 (App. Div. 1974), cert. den., 66 N.J. 330 (1974); Schnipper v. Twp. of North Bergen, 13 N.J. Super. at 15; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4; N.J.A.C. 4A:8-2.6(c).

In short, the validity of the layoff is based on the intention, or state of mind, of the appointing authority, and appellants have the burden of proof. As a result, the appellants need a statement from the appointing authority as to the reasons for the layoffs and in particular for choosing the specific individuals in question.

The first question is whether respondent failed to comply with the three discovery orders. Here, appellants asked for specific details as to the reasons that particular individuals were chosen for the layoffs. Respondent stated in response that the layoffs were done for economy and efficiency and that individuals who were identified as having knowledge of the layoff reviewed their budgets, staffing and attached materials. This response does not give an explanation as to the reasons that specific individuals were chosen for layoff. At the oral argument on October 2, 2017, respondent was given the opportunity to demonstrate that it produced fully responsive answers. Nonetheless, respondent failed to do so. Under the circumstances, the conclusion is warranted that respondent failed to comply with the discovery orders dated May 13, 2013, September 16, 2015, and January 12, 2016.

In regard to unresonableness, appellants' discovery questions are central to the case, and respondent did not offer an adequate explanation for its failure to provide appropriate responses. More than five years have gone by since appellants served their discovery requests. Under the circumstances, respondent's failure to provide fully responsive answers to the discovery requests in question was unreasonable. Therefore, a sanction is warranted under the circumstances of this case.

With respect to the type of sanction, appellants first request is to suppress respondent's answer and separate defenses pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14(a)2. In this case, respondent has failed to produce essential information concerning the reasons for the layoffs. The failure to produce this information substantially hinders appellants' efforts to prove that the layoffs were not done in good faith. Since appellants' have the burden of proof, a lesser sanction such as suppression of respondent's evidence would not be adequate. It follows that appellants' request should be granted. The effect is that a determination that the layoffs in question were not done in good faith should be entered in appellants' favor.

Appellants' second request is a sanction in the form of exclusion of respondent's evidence pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14(a)3. This type of sanction is not really adequate in itself or necessary in view of the above. Nonetheless, it is certainly warranted under the circumstances of this case. Therefore, respondent's testimony and other evidence should be excluded pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14(a)3.

Finally, appellant's request attorney's fees and costs associated with the motion. In view of the meritorious nature of the motion, appellants' request should be granted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14(a)4.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that appellants' request for sanctions should be granted. It is noteworthy that the motion for sanction was made on behalf of most but not all of the appellants. In view of the nature of the first and second sanctions, they should apply to all appellants.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that:

1. Respondent's answer and separate defenses be stricken.
2. A determination be entered in favor of all appellants that the layoffs in question were not made in good faith.
3. All of respondents' testimony and other evidence be excluded.
4. Respondent shall reimburse appellants for attorney's fees and other costs associated with the motion.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." Re: Richard Cramer v. Department of Transportation (CSC Docket No. 2016-3462 and OAL Docket No. CSV 5173-16) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Caccese and DAG Wagner:

The appeal of Richard Cramer, a Sign Technician 1 with the Department of Transportation, of his 15 working day suspension on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Elia A. Pelios (ALJ), who issued his initial decision on January 24, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on January 29, 2018. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on March 15, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Re: August Fischer v. Department of Transportation (CSC Docket No. 2017-4037 and OAL Docket No. CSV 9778-17) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Cohen and DAG Wagner:

The appeal of August Fischer, a Highway Operations Technician Trainee with the Department of Transportation, of his removal effective June 5, 2017 on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Dean J. Buono (ALJ), who issued his initial decision on January 24, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on January 26, 2018. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on March 12, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Based on this information, and given the fact that the matter was settled by the parties and a review of the settlement by staff indicates that it is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, there does not appear to be a basis to further delay a final disposition in this matter. Thus, the Commission has determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective March 13, 2018.

Re: Christina Jackson v. Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections (CSC Docket No. 2017-2814; OAL Docket No. CSV 4260-17)

Dear Mr. Cohen and Ms. Rudow:

The appeal of Christina Jackson, a Communications Operator with the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections, of her 90 working day suspension, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Carl V. Buck, III (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on February 22, 2018, recommending upholding the 90 working day suspension. Exceptions to the initial decision were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on February 22, 2018 and received one 45-day extension of time, as required, to make its final decision no later than May 23, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. However, since one of the Commission members must be recused from this matter, leaving no quorum to vote, it requested consent of the parties, as required, for an additional 45-day extension. However, the appointing authority did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective May 24, 2018.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-2814

IMO CHRISTINA JACKSON, ALBERT C. WAGNER YOUTH CORRECTIONAL FACILITY, DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Arnold Shep Cohen, Esq., for Christina Jackson, appellant (Oxfeld Cohen, P.C., attorneys)

Tama Rudow, Esq. and Kathleen Krieger, Esq., Legal Specialists, appearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a) 2, for Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections, respondent

Record Closed: October 10, 2017 Decided: February 22, 2018

BEFORE CARL V. BUCK III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Christina Jackson (Jackson) appeals from a ninety-day suspension from her position as a communications operator (CO) imposed by respondent Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility (facility). The suspension resulted from charges of insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee.

The charges arise from an incident on November 8, 2016, relating to appellant cleaning her work station. Appellant denies the charges and claims that the incident was instigated by an officer at the facility such that appellant thought she was being attacked. Therefore, appellant argues, no disciplinary action should be imposed.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) was presented to appellant on December 20, 2016 and charges her with: 1. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 (a) 6: Conduct unbecoming a public employee and; 2. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 (a) 2 Insubordination.

A disciplinary hearing was held on February 8, 2017, and the charges were sustained.

On February 23, 2017, the facility served the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), dated February 23, 2017, sustaining charges of 1. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 2. Insubordination and; 2. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 6. Conduct unbecoming a public employee. This FNDA imposed a ninety-day working suspension (R-1).

On March 9, 2017, Jackson requested a hearing and on March 27, 2017, the Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on March 28, 2017. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. This matter was heard on October 10, 2017 and the record closed on that date. An extension of time for the filing of the Initial Decision was granted.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

TESTIMONY

Respondent offered five witnesses, three of which testified as to information specific to the November 8, 2016 incident.

Lieutenant Tracey Sparacio[1]

Tracey Sparacio, a Lieutenant with the State of New Jersey, Department of Corrections (DOC), detailed her training, experience and background in approximately twenty-one years working for the DOC. A recording of a SID interview with Sparacio, introduced as R-15, was reviewed subsequent to the hearing. She was assigned to the facility on November 8, 2016, and was working the 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. shift, as an area lieutenant.

She provided some background information regarding the facility and testified that when she came in to work on November 8, 2016, she was returning to work from being sick with an upper respiratory illness and had been to the doctor the prior day. She stated that she knew that Jackson used an undiluted cleaning spray (spray) to clean her work area. Sparacio had been in Lieutenant Patrick Miller's office. She exited his office and told Jackson that as she (Sparacio) had been sick, Jackson should use the Lysol wipes, which are also used for cleaning. This was phrased by Sparacio as "telling" Jackson rather than phrasing this as an "order."

Jackson's position is a communications operator (CO). Her responsibilities include calling out movements, dealing with emergencies, dealing with bed moves and being responsible for data entry into the communications system.

Sparacio testified that she gave Jackson the wipes (physically putting them in Jackson's hand), then went back in to Miller's office. Sparacio saw Jackson leave her work station and when Jackson returned, Jackson started to use the spray. Sparacio then went over to Jackson and took the spray from Jackson. In testifying, Sparacio stated that she" took" the bottle, but her incident report (R-4) states "I...attempted to remove the spray bottle from the area."

[1] This name is listed in documents alternately as "Sparacio" or "Sporacio" but the correct spelling is "Sparacio" and will be referred to as such.

Sparacio then testified to information regarding the incident and reiterated information contained in the "Special Custody Report" as prepared on November 8, 2016 at 2:40 p.m. (R-4) in which Sparacio memorialized her recollection of the incident. Paraphrasing this report, Sparacio stated that she approached Jackson's work area and attempted to remove the spray bottle from the area. Jackson then turned and swung at Sparacio with an open hand, slapping the spray bottle out of Sparacio's hand. Jackson then jumped into Sparacio's face screaming, "What is your fucking problem? I've fucking had enough of this shit! I've been putting up with this shit for months! We're gonna deal with this shit now!"

Sparacio then walked back to the Shift Commander's area. SCO Nicholas Bunnell and Sergeant Joseph Basham[2] witnessed the incident. Lieutenant Miller heard the incident. Sparacio further stated that Jackson was both verbally and physically threatening in their exchange as well as behaving in an insubordinate manner.

Sparacio stated that she did not yell at Jackson or elevate her voice during this incident. Sparacio testified that after the incident, she prepared the report identified as R-4.

Lieutenant Joseph Basham

Joseph Basham[3], a Lieutenant with the facility, detailed his training, experience and background in approximately nine years working for the DOC. He testified that he was assigned to the facility on the date in question and that he was working the 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. shift on November 8, 2016.

Basham testified that, at the time in question, he was in the communications office speaking with Officer Nicholas Bunnell, who was a union representative. Basham was approximately six to eight feet from the incident. He stated that there were no communications officers inside the center control area. He stated that when Jackson entered the area she was in a "huff." She started cleaning her work area with a strong or pungent solution contained in a trigger spray bottle. He described it as "not being a normal smell." At that point Sparacio came into the control room from the commander's office and he heard Sparacio say, "I thought we discussed this already. Don't use that," and at that point an altercation occurred. He stated that Jackson seemed abrupt and annoyed.

[2] Now Lieutenant Basham.
[3] Basham was a Sergeant at the time of the incident.

Basham then testified as to information regarding the incident and reiterated information contained in his "Special Custody Report" he prepared on November 8, 2016, at 16:55 p.m. contemporaneously with the incident (R-6). And it memorialized his recollection of the incident. As set forth in the report, Basham witnessed a verbal exchange between Jackson and Sparacio due to Jackson utilizing a chemical spray. He recalled Sparacio stating, "Can you please not spray that, I thought we talked about this." Basham stated that he heard Jackson respond with statements including, "What is your fucking problem with me?" and "I have been putting up with this for months, we are gonna take care of this shit right now!" He described Jackson shouting and becoming more agitated. Basham testified that Sparacio removed the bottle of cleaning solution from the counter that Jackson was cleaning and Jackson turned around and knocked the bottle out of Sparaco's hands as Jackson reached out towards Sparacio. Sparacio then turned and walked back into the Shift Commander's office.

Basham stated that the slap referenced in the report was violent. He testified that Jackson was the aggressor and referred to her (Jackson) as a petulant child. He also testified that Jackson was insubordinate in this incident.

He further stated that he was a paramedic for eighteen years before becoming a corrections officer and had used wipes or sanitary cloths to wipe up blood and take other actions necessary as a paramedic.

Lieutenant Patrick Miller

Patrick Miller, a Lieutenant with the DOC, detailed his training, experience and background and his approximately eighteen years working for the DOC. He testified that he was assigned to the facility on the date in question and that he was working the 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. shift on November 8, 2016, as the assigned shift commander.

At the beginning of the shift, Sparacio reported to Miller. Miller then heard Sparacio ask Jackson to use the wipes as Sparacio was sick and that the chemical was bothering her (Sparacio's) breathing. Miller described the request as "polite." He then saw Jackson leave. Jackson then asked Miller if she could go to "ops" (the operations area). When Jackson came back from ops he heard an altercation between Jackson and Sparacio, who then reported to him what had occurred.

Miller testified as to the incident as reported in his "Special Custody Report" as prepared on November 8, 2016, at 20:30 a.m. (R-7). As stated in the report, at 14:00, Jackson reported for duty and began to clean her area, which is a routine practice. Sparacio approached her and instructed her to use cleaning wipes instead of using the spray disinfectant which has a strong odor.

Miller then stated that Jackson came to his office and requested to go to operations. He granted her permission, at which point she reported to operations. Thereafter, he called operations and spoke to Communications Operator Michelle Kano and told her that he needed a communications operator in center and that one of the communications operators needed to report to center immediately. Jackson reported back to center and began using the spray disinfectant, at which point Lieutenant Sparacio went out to address her. From my office, I heard "what the fuck is your problem, I've been putting up with this shit for months, we're gonna deal with this shit now." Lieutenant Sparacio came back to my office and reported the incident to me.

Miller stated that he then logged the report in, attempted to contact the on-call administrator and the central office desk. This was done to follow protocol because there was an allegation of possible workplace violence. There was also an allegation of insubordination as Jackson had not followed the direction of Sparacio in using the wipes. On cross-examination, Miller testified that the spray Jackson used was undiluted and was a strong spray and ordinarily wipes are used.

Investigator Theodis Ratliff

Theodis Ratliff, Senior Investigator with the Correctional Intelligence Center within SID, testified that a SID office is in each facility. Each office is under the supervision of the Commissioner of Corrections office and is not in the chain of command of the institution. He testified that he had been a member of internal affairs on the date in question and was under the supervision of Principal Investigator Nancy Zook, who assigned this investigation to him. They are responsible for investigation of any allegations of workplace violence at the facility.

He testified that they gather information, prepare fact patterns and conduct interviews of parties involved regarding incidents including Special Custody Reports or Preliminary Incident Report packets. He prepared a five-page report on December 9, 2016, based on the reports provided to him (R-2) and the interview(s) he conducted of Sparacio (R-15) and Jackson (R-14).

He further testified as to the internal affairs procedures, the analysis of the information provided to him and the final report issued. He testified that his December 9, 2016, report stated that based on the statements provided by Sparacio, Basham and Jackson, the only person in Center Control who displayed aggressive behavior both physically and verbally was Jackson. He stated that Jackson's allegation that Sparacio approached her aggressively and in a threatening manner was not substantiated in his investigation. Ratliff further testified that when Jackson was interviewed, she admitted to physically attempting to swing at Sparacio and contacting the spray cleaner bottle. Jackson also admitted to using profanity during the exchange.

Major Daniel Gerdes

Daniel Gerdes, a Major with the facility, detailed his training, experience and background in approximately twenty years working for the DOC. He testified that he is responsible for the overall security of the facility. The shift commander(s) report to him and if an incident occurs, he is to be notified.

He testified that based on any investigation he would consult with the Department of Personnel to determine appropriate discipline for any major disciplinary change. He testified to the job of an area lieutenant/area supervisor whose responsibility is for the entire institution, that individual reports to the shift commander who reports to administration. The second shift area lieutenant also has post orders as detailed in R-11.

He also testified to the overall chain of command (R-10). He stated that if a lieutenant told a CO to do something, that should be considered to be an order. He further stated that if a subordinate was asked to do something three times (without doing it) that would be insubordination. He also testified that the use of profanity is "forbidden" per the State of New Jersey, Department of Corrections, Handbook of Information and Rules, For Employees of New Jersey Department of Corrections (R-9), of which appellant acknowledged receipt. Penalties include, but are not limited to, "Suspension under the rules and regulations of the Civil Service Commission and the statutes governing State employment" (R-9).

Communications Operator Christina Jackson

Christina Jackson testified on her own behalf. She has been a communications operator since January 1995. Her job duties as a communications operator include calling out codes, answering the telephone, dealing with bed counts, etc. On the date in question she was assigned to central control. For the prior five days before the incident, she had worked at center control. She stated that she cleaned her work station with State issued Pine Sol cleaner. This cleaner came from the storeroom of that the facility. She testified as to the number of shifts currently at the facility and the fact that she cleaned her work station as others used the station and she did not want to catch anything at her work station.

She testified that when she entered, she let her into the central control area. She began to clean her work area with the Pine Sol cleaner and as she was doing so, Sparacio came into the center area from the lieutenant's office. After her initial encounter with Sparacio at the beginning of her shift, Jackson asked Miller if she could work in operations. Miller agreed and Jackson went to operations. However, shortly thereafter, Miller called operations and stated that a CO would have to be in the center operation area.

She returned to central control at Miller's direction. After she did so, she saw that Sparacio was speaking with Miller. Jackson was wiping the second phone when Sparacio launched or charged at her and Jackson stated that she (Jackson) thought that Sparacio was going to hit her.

Jackson said she ducked into a defensive posture. By the time Jackson came up, Sparacio was on the opposite side of her. Jackson stated that she cursed in this instance and Sparacio did not – although Jackson stated that Sparacio has cursed in general conversation previously. Jackson stated that Sparacio was yelling at her "I told you not to use that" but Sparacio did not ever previously instruct her to not use the spray bottle. Jackson acknowledged that Sparacio, as a lieutenant, could give her an order at any time.

Jackson stated that she was in the middle of a conversation and may not have heard what Sparacio asked.

Exhibit R-14, an approximately 26:07 recording of an SID interview with Jackson, was reviewed after the hearing.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against her and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). In this matter, the facility bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

Jackson was charged with insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) and (11).

Prior to conducting a legal analysis and making conclusions, it is necessary to determine the credibility of the testimony. "The interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the . . . trier of fact, whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony." State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952). The choice of accepting or rejecting the witnesses' testimony or credibility rests with the finder of facts. Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J. Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, for testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1974); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718,

The present matter revolves around "who said what" in a conversation between the appellant and Sparacio and subsequent physical activity. Lieutenant Sparacio, Lieutenant Basham, and Lieutenant Miller testified credibly that at the time of the incident a verbal altercation occurred that escalated into a physical occurrence whereby a spray bottle, being held by Sparacio, was hit by CO Jackson.

Testimony from Jackson presented an alternate version of the incident, although that an incident occurred was not challenged. There is no apparent reason for Sparacio to lie about Jackson's actions during this event. In fact, the discussion between Sparacio and Jackson was overheard by two other officers. Sparacio's testimony of how the event occurred was bolstered by two other witnesses. This corroboration, the demeanor of the witnesses and the circumstances of the event documents that Sparacio's version of the incident is the more reliable. Further, the request by Sparacio to use wipes versus Pine Sol cleaner seems to have been uncontroversial.

Lieutenant Sparacio, Lieutenant Basham, and Lieutenant Miller testified credibly that at the time of the incident a verbal altercation occurred that escalated into a physical occurrence whereby a spray bottle, held by Sparacio, was hit by CO Jackson. I FIND that this incident occurred at a point near the beginning of the 2:00 p.m. to 10:00 p.m. shift.

The testimony from various parties made clear that employees were able to modify assignments, i.e. a CO could be assigned to center control or the ops area. I FIND that Jackson was assigned to the center control area. I FIND that when Jackson began to clean her work area in the control center, a verbal altercation ensued and from that a physical altercation occurred. During that altercation Jackson displayed physically aggressive behavior toward Sporacio and used profanity toward Sporacio.

Accordingly, I FIND the testimony of the respondent's witnesses to be more credible than the testimony of Jackson.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

The respondent has sustained charges of violations of insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) HRB [Human Resources Bulletin] 84-17, as amended; insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 C 9; and conduct unbecoming an employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 C 11.

Regarding the charge of insubordination, Black's Law Dictionary 802 (7th Ed. 1999) defines insubordination as a "willful disregard of an employer's instructions" or an "act of disobedience to proper authority." Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995) defines insubordination as "not submissive to authority: disobedient." Such dictionary definitions have been utilized by courts to define the term where it is not specifically defined in contract or regulation:

> 'Insubordination' is not defined in the agreement. Consequently, assuming for purposes of argument that its presence is implicit, we are obliged to accept its ordinary definition since it is not a technical term or word of art and there are no circumstances indicating that a different meaning was intended.
> [Ricci v. Corporate Express of the East, Inc., 344 N.J. Super. 39, 45 (App. Div. 2001) (citation omitted).]

Importantly, this definition incorporates acts of non-compliance and non-cooperation, as well as affirmative acts of disobedience. Thus, insubordination can occur even where no specific order or direction has been given to the allegedly insubordinate person. Insubordination is always a serious matter, especially in a paramilitary context. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971).

In the present matter, evidence of appellant's insubordination was presented. Sparacio directed her to not use Pine Sol cleaner and to use the approved wipes. Appellant did not comply with that order. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden in demonstrating support to sustain a charge of insubordination. Charges of violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) are hereby AFFIRMED.

Respondent also sustained charges against appellant for Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and HRB 84-17, as amended. "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also, In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, 152 N.J. at 555 [quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)]. Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) [quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)]. Suspension or removal may be justified where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off-duty. Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. at 140.

In the present matter, the record reflects a determination that appellant did not comply with the directives of Sparacio. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden in demonstrating support to sustain a charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee. Charges of violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and HRB 84-17, as amended, are hereby AFFIRMED.

Conduct unbecoming a public employee constitutes grounds for major discipline under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). Although the term is undefined under the New Jersey Administrative Code, the charge has been interpreted to include any conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the bureau or that "has a tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted). The employee need not violate the criminal code or a written rule or policy of the employer:

> Nor need a finding of misconduct be predicated upon the violation of any rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct.

When such conduct creates a hostile and potentially dangerous environment, it also constitutes just cause for major discipline. Perry v. Mercer County Dep't of Pub. Safety, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 834, 837.

Insubordination may consist of refusing or failing to follow the instructions of a supervisor. See Eaddy v. Dep't of Transp., 208 N.J. Super. 156, 158-59 (App. Div.), certif. granted, 104 N.J. 392, order vacated, appeal dismissed, 105 N.J. 569 (1986).

The question, therefore, becomes whether the appellant's actions on the date in question amounted to insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee.

For reasonable probability to exist, the evidence must be such as to "generate belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959) (citation omitted). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Credibility, or, more specifically, credible testimony, in turn, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible, as well. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954).

The fact that an incident occurred is not in question. Having concluded that an incident occurred, I must determine the proper penalty or discipline to be assessed. A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. Progressive discipline is considered to be an appropriate analysis for determining the reasonableness of the penalty. See Bock, 38 N.J. at 523-24. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of the concept of progressive discipline is the nature, number and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions should be addressed by progressively increasing penalties. It underscores the philosophy that an appointing authority has a responsibility to encourage the development of an employee's potential.

Based upon the facts set forth above, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's witnesses were more credible and their testimony was entitled to more weight than the denials of appellant with respect to her conduct on November 9, 2016. The witnesses testified as to what they heard, their opinions of the situation, and the outcome. Lieutenant Sparacio was very precise in her description of the incident, which description was corroborated by Lieutenant Basham and Lieutenant Miller.

Appellant's protestations that she was unaware of Sparacio's directions does not relieve her for her responsibilities concerning either the physical aspect or the verbal aspect of the altercation. Appellant was aware that there were required protocols as evidenced by her statement that she knew she should not have "cussed." Further, the appellant signed an acknowledgement stating that she had received copies of the rules governing the facility through the DOC as well as being subject to prior discipline. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that appellant was not credible with her excuses.

I FIND therefore that the facility's charges of charges of insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) HRB [Human Resources Bulletin] 84-17, as amended; insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 C 9; and conduct unbecoming an employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 C 11 are warranted and justified.

PENALTY

In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983). However, where the charged dereliction is an act which, in view of the duties and obligations of the position, substantially disadvantages the public, good cause exists for removal. See Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385 (Law Div. 1976), aff'd, 163 N.J. Super. 453 (App. Div. 1978); In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

In addition to considering an employee's prior disciplinary history when imposing a penalty under the Act, other appropriate factors to consider include the nature of the misconduct, the nature of the employee's job, and the impact of the misconduct on the public interest. Ibid. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522-24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, or a suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a), -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.4.

For her actions arising out of this incident, appellant has been found to have violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" and HRB 84-17. Appellant was charged with a ninety-day suspension. This suspension is consistent with the theory of progressive discipline as appellant previously received several suspensions for numerous infractions. Jackson's work history (P-13) shows seven C-9 violations and two C-11 violations. Using the HRB chart, the appropriate penalty for the third infraction of a C-9 violation is removal and the penalty for the second infraction of a C-11 penalty is removal.

After having considered all of the proofs offered in this matter, and the impact upon the institution regarding the behavior by appellant herein, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that this disciplinary action supports the respondent's argument that appellant was appropriately issued a working suspension of ninety days. While a lesser number of days of suspension is available to an appointing agency, I CONCLUDE that this incident was egregious enough, particularly considering prior discipline, to warrant that period without being excessive or contrary to a sense of fairness. On balance of all the factors, I CONCLUDE that neither a shorter working suspension nor a longer working suspension is warranted.

DECISION AND ORDER

For the reasons stated above, I hereby ORDER that the appellant's appeal is DISMISSED, and respondent's ninety-day suspension of Jackson is AFFIRMED based on appellant's violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), insubordination; conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) HRB [Human Resources Bulletin] 84-17, as amended; insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(c)(9); and conduct unbecoming an employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(c)(11).

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Rasheeda Love v. Ancora Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Health (CSC Docket No. 2018-1883 and OAL Docket No. CSV 1377-18) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Scorzetti and Ms. Brown:

The appeal of Rasheeda Love, a Senior Building Maintenance Worker at Ancora Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Health, of her removal, effective December 22, 2017 on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Lisa James-Beavers (ALJ), who issued her initial decision on March 1, 2018 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on March 1, 2018. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on April 15, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Based on this information, and given the fact that this matter was settled by the parties and a review of the settlement by staff indicates that it is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, there does not appear to be a basis to further delay a final disposition. Thus, the Commission has determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective April 16, 2018.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Re: Marcella Friedman v. Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police (CSC Docket No. 2017-2819; OAL Docket No. CSV 4258-17)

Dear Mr. Cohen and DAG Jong:

The appeal of Marcella Friedman, a Communications Systems Technician 2 with the Division of State Police, Department of Law and Public Safety, of her removal effective February 17, 2017, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Jeffrey N. Rabin (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on March 19, 2018, recommending upholding the removal. Exceptions to the initial decision were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on March 19, 2018 and received one 45-day extension of time, as required, to make its final decision no later than June 17, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. However, since one of the Commission members must be recused from this matter, leaving no quorum to vote, the Commission requested consent of the parties, as required, for an additional 45-day extension. However, the appointing authority did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective June 18, 2018.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 4258-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-2819

IN THE MATTER OF MARCELLA FRIEDMAN, DEPARTMENT OF LAW AND PUBLIC SAFETY, DIVISION OF STATE POLICE.

Arnold Shep Cohen, Esq., appearing for appellant, Marcella Friedman (Oxfeld Cohen, P.C., attorneys)

Andy Jong, Deputy Attorney General, appearing for respondent, Department of Law and Public Safety (Gurbir S. Grewal, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record closed: February 2, 2018 Decided: March 19, 2018

BEFORE JEFFREY N. RABIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Marcella Friedman, a Communications Systems Technician at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police (the "Department"), appeals the disciplinary action seeking her removal for conduct unbecoming a public employee, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), misuse of public property, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8), and violation of SOP[1] F-7 Radio Procedures, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12).

The issues are whether the appellant used her position as an employee of the New Jersey State Police to obtain a free power generator for her personal use; whether such action constituted conduct unbecoming a public official, misuse of public property and violation of SOP F-7 Radio Procedures; and whether the Department acted properly in removing appellant from her position as a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police, for such violations.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

By Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated January 28, 2013, appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property and violation of SOP F-7 Radio Procedures.[2] A departmental hearing was held on September 26, 2016, and on February 17, 2017, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was served, removing her from her position. Appellant filed an appeal, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on March 28, 2017. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Hearings were held on August 30, 2017, and September 6, 2017. Post-hearing letter-briefs were received on February 2, 2018, and the record closed on that date.

[1] Standard Operating Procedures.

[2] A second Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued on January 28, 2013, suspending appellant without pay pending the disposition of criminal charges. Appellant was acquitted of criminal charges for the within incident on January 27, 2016, in Springfield Township (Burlington County) Municipal Court.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Stipulated Facts:

1. Governor Chris Christie declared a statewide emergency at 11:30 a.m. on October 27, 2012. Superstorm Sandy made landfall in New Jersey on October 29, 2012 at approximately 8:00 p.m. as a Category 2 storm. On October 31, 2012, more than two million people in New Jersey were without power.

2. Appellant, Marcella Friedman, was on a Personal Medical Leave of Absence from the State Police from April 23, 2012, until August 1, 2012.

3. Appellant was out on Worker's Compensation from the State Police from August 2, 2012, until January 17, 2013.

4. Appellant, Marcella Friedman, was on another Personal Medical Leave of Absence from the State Police from January 18, 2013, until January 30, 2013.

Undisputed Facts from the Hearing:

1. Appellant, Marcella Friedman, was hired by the State Police in 2003, and worked as a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police (the "Department"). She was responsible for maintaining the State Police radio network system.

2. The Department provided appellant with State-owned automobiles, repair equipment, radios, cell phones, computers and pagers. She received a radio maintenance shirt as part of a work uniform, but had to buy her own khaki pants to wear. She was issued cold weather gear such as boots, winter jackets, gloves and raingear. She received many State Police jackets over the years, and had an Office of Emergency Management (OEM) jacket. Jackets with State Police logos are available for purchase at the State Police gift shop and other shops. There was no State Police policy prohibiting civilian State Police employees from wearing jackets with a State Police logo.

3. Appellant had no responsibilities for monitoring or regulating product sales, generators or roadside sales. She had no authority to review permits, shut down vendor sales, fine vendors, confiscate property, and had no arrest powers. Appellant was on extended Medical Leave in October 2012, and had no official duties at that time on behalf of the State Police.

4. On October 30, 2012, the appellant and Lisa Evanko and Cody Evanko were parked at the parking lot at White Dotte Communications, at the intersection of Route 206 and Route 38 in Southampton, NJ ("White Dotte"). White Dotte is a communications company that sells electronics such as walkie-talkies and CB (citizen band) radios, and is also an ice cream/food stand/restaurant. White Dotte was busy that day with generator vendors and purchasers. Lisa Evanko paid $1,700 for a 9,000-watt generator.

5. On October 31, 2012, appellant returned to the parking lot at the White Dotte, with the intention of procuring a generator. Appellant was wearing khaki pants and a blue windbreaker jacket marked with lettering that indicated that it was a New Jersey State Police/OEM jacket. (Exhibit R-1.) Christopher Green, manager of the White Dotte, was allowing vendors from New Hampshire to sell generators in the White Dotte parking lot in return for the use of one of their generators, until Southampton Township official Jody Mazeall arrived and shut down the generator sales because the vendors lacked proper permits.

6. On October 31, 2012, after leaving the White Dotte, appellant drove approximately three miles north on Route 206, and stopped at a lot near the intersection of Route 206 and County Road 537 in Springfield Township (the "Springfield Lot"), with the intention of procuring a generator. She was still wearing khaki pants and a blue windbreaker jacket marked as New Jersey State Police/OEM jacket. (Exhibit R-2.)

7. State Police Lieutenant Nazzareno Nepi was at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, with the intention of procuring a generator. He was dressed in his Class B Utility Uniform, with a State Police logo, and had driven there in an unmarked State Police vehicle. Nepi paid $1,400 for a generator for himself and received a completed invoice with his name, model and serial numbers for the generator, the price, the method of payment (credit card), and a signature from the vendor. (Exhibit R-4.) Nepi returned later to pick up the generator. Nepi called his then-supervisor, Captain Greaney, to advise him that generators were being sold at the Springfield Lot. Greaney drove to the Springfield Lot and purchased a generator for himself.

8. Thomas Whittle, Anthony Grachus and Bobby Jones, current or former employees of Apex Equipment, were at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, selling 8,500 and 9,000-watt generators.

9. Appellant procured a used 8,500-watt generator from Whittle and Grachus on October 31, 2012, at the Springfield Lot. She began to fill-in an invoice, writing in the date of October 31, 2012, her name, Marcella Friedman, and the word "Donat[e]" or "Donat[ion]," but left with the generator before completing the invoice. The signature of Bobby Jones appears at the bottom of the invoice. The invoice does not contain a model number or any description of the generator, or a price for the generator, or any indication of any payment method (cash, credit card or check). (Exhibit R-3.)

Testimony:

For respondent:

Nazzareno Nepi has worked for the New Jersey State Police for thirty-one years. On October 31, 2012, he was the Assistant Bureau Chief at the Fiscal Control Bureau, charged with handling finances and payroll, monitoring expenditures, and handling grant compliance.

Nepi's superior, Captain Greaney, had called Nepi at home, asking him to find him a generator. On October 31, 2012, Nepi started driving towards a store, but then noticed vendors selling generators at the Springfield Lot. Nepi stopped and spoke with Whittle and Grachus, who indicated they were selling 8,500 and 9,000-watt generators. Nepi phoned Greaney to say he had located generators for sale. Greaney arrived and Nepi left the Springfield Lot. Nepi never inquired as to whether Whittle and Grachus had a permit to sell generators at that location, nor did he report the generator sales to anyone at the State with regulatory authority.

Later, on October 31, 2012, a friend of Nepi's also inquired about generators, and Nepi returned to the Springfield Lot to buy him a generator. He saw appellant Marcella Friedman there, dressed in a blue New Jersey State Police/OEM windbreaker. State Police jackets might be available for purchase in stores, but jackets with "Office of Emergency Management" on them can only be obtained from the Emergency Management section.

One of the patrons shopping for a generator at the Springfield Lot told Nepi that he had just seen appellant at a different location and that she had allegedly shut down generator vendors at that other site, and was now trying to shut down generator vendors at the Springfield Lot. Nepi spoke with Grachus, who said appellant was a State Police representative who was questioning vendors about permits, although appellant did not show any official identification to Grachus.

Nepi approached appellant, and they went into a trailer and had a conversation. She told Nepi her name. Nepi asked what she was doing there, and appellant told Nepi that she was at the Springfield Lot to regulate people selling generators, and that she had just shut down generator vendors at a different location. When Nepi asked if she was concerned for her safety because she was working alone monitoring vendors on the side of a highway, she showed Nepi a State Police-issued Motorola radio to indicate that she was not concerned about being alone. That model of radio was given to State Police employees but could not be purchased by civilians in a regular store.

Nepi then spoke with Whittle and Grachus, who said that appellant had threatened them with $1,000 per day fines and with confiscation of their generators, unless they provided her with a free generator. To avoid problems, they had loaded a generator into her truck. Appellant paid no money for the generator. She started filling-out an invoice before she drove off, but left the invoice incomplete. Whittle and Grachus gave Nepi a copy of the appellant-invoice. (Exhibit R-3.)

Nepi then used a credit card to pay $1,400 for a generator for his friend, received a completed invoice, and left with the generator.

On November 1, 2012, Nepi went into a State Police internet database and saw that appellant was a civilian state employee in the Communications Bureau, working as a radio technician, but who was out on disability leave from her job. Nepi discussed this matter with appellant's supervisor, (then-Lieutenant) David Brady, who turned this matter over to the State Police Official Corruption Bureau. Nepi filed an official report as to appellant's activities on October 31, 2012. (Exhibit R-5.)

Thomas Whittle, currently an unemployed resident of Traveller's Rest, South Carolina, had worked for approximately fifteen years in the generator sales business. He previously worked for Apex Equipment Company.[3]

Whittle drove from his home with a pickup truck and trailer with approximately 40 generators, to sell at a discount in New Jersey due to Superstorm Sandy. On October 31, 2012, Whittle connected with former Apex salesman Anthony Grachus and current Apex salesman Bobby Jones, to sell generators at the Springfield Lot. They had verbal permission from the Springfield Township chief of police, and were also told it was acceptable to sell generators there by State Police Troopers. Whittle did not recall the names of the chief of police or Troopers.

Appellant Friedman approached Whittle and identified herself as a member of the State Police. She was wearing a dark blue State Police jacket, and carried a police-style radio/walkie-talkie. She said she was there to monitor generator sales. Appellant asked Whittle about his prices. Whittle told appellant his prices, but appellant thought they were too high. Appellant then told Whittle he was not allowed to sell his generators at the Springfield Lot, despite his protestations that he had permission to sell there.

Appellant told Whittle that she could shut down their sales and confiscate their generators, just as she had done earlier that day at a different site. Whittle began to pack up his generators, with the assistance of appellant. Then appellant told Whittle she would let them continue their generator sales if they gave her a free generator. Whittle offered to reduce his price, but this was still unacceptable to appellant and she threatened to have Whittle, Grachus and Jones arrested.

Bobby Jones was present for only the beginning of the conversation between appellant and Whittle before he left. Appellant spoke with Grachus, and it was Grachus who decided to comply with appellant's demand that they "donate" a free generator to the "State Troopers Association." Whittle loaded the generator onto appellant's truck, and asked her to complete an invoice for the transaction. She wrote down her name and started to write the word "donate" or "donation" on the invoice, but then dropped the invoice-clipboard and drove off with the generator before completing the invoice.

A typical invoice would have had the purchaser's name, address, purchase information (cash, or credit card and credit card information and approval number), and the amount of the purchase price. Bobby Jones had pre-signed a pile of blank invoices before he left.

Whittle was the "money guy." He did not receive any payment from appellant for the generator she received from them. Whittle was standing with Grachus and appellant, and never saw appellant give any money to Grachus.

Christopher Green was the manager of White Dotte Communications, and was at White Dotte on October 31, 2012. He worked there for twenty years. The store lost power due to Superstorm Sandy and was using generators to save its food inventory. Vendors from New Hampshire were in the White Dotte parking lot selling generators.

Green told them to obtain permits, but he did not check for the permits when the vendors returned. Green allowed them to sell their generators in return for them allowing Green to use one of their generators for the store.

Green saw appellant Friedman at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, wearing a State Police/OEM jacket (Exhibit R-1), and walking around talking into a professional, high-end Motorola walkie-talkie, not the kind of model that can be bought by someone at a typical electronics store like a Best Buy. He believed appellant was at White Dotte in an official governmental capacity, although he never heard appellant refer to herself as a State Trooper. Appellant told Green she was at White Dotte to obtain a generator for a recreation center or a church. Green heard appellant threaten to arrest the New Hampshire generator vendors at the White Dotte if they did not give her a free generator.

Green advised the vendors to ignore appellant's threats, but nothing came from their encounter with appellant because shortly thereafter, Southampton Township official Jody Mazeall arrived and shut down the generator sales because the vendors lacked a proper permit.

The White Dotte logo appeared on some invoices issued there, but not because White Dotte gave the vendors permission to sell or because they were associated with each other; a generator vendor apparently took Green's business card and photocopied it onto a blank form of invoice.

Anthony Grachus was a self-employed power equipment salesman from North Carolina, and had been selling power generators for over fifteen years. He was a former employee of Bobby Jones at Apex. He drove to New Jersey with approximately thirty or forty generators to be sold at reduced prices due to Superstorm Sandy. He received verbal permission to sell generators at the Springfield Lot from various local law enforcement officers, the local chief of police, and from State Troopers. Receiving only verbal permission is not unusual in emergency/storm situations. He met up with Whittle and Bobby Jones at the Springfield Lot.

On October 31, 2012, shortly after Bobby Jones left on a break, appellant Friedman approached Grachus at the Springfield Lot. She was wearing a State Police jacket and talking into a walkie-talkie just like the other officers and Troopers who had been there, although unlike other law enforcement officers there, appellant was not wearing a gun. Appellant threatened to arrest Grachus for not having a permit to sell, unless he gave her a free generator. She said she had just shut down generator vendors at White Dotte. He believed appellant was a State Trooper, with the authority to arrest him or fine him if he did not give her a generator.

After discussing this with Whittle, Grachus decided he would comply with appellant's request and would give her a free generator just to get rid of her, but would have to treat this as if it were a donation. He gave her a generator, and gave her an invoice form to complete. Appellant did not pay any money to Grachus for the generator, and she left before completely filling out the invoice. She wrote "Marcella Friedman" on the invoice and the word "Donate."

David Brady is a Major with the New Jersey State Police. In 2013 he was the OEM Bureau Chief, that being the unit head of the "radio maintenance unit." Appellant worked in Brady's department, but did not report directly to Brady. Brady never performed or reviewed appellant's employee evaluations.

On October 31, 2012, appellant was a "Communications Technician 2" for the R.E.R.P. (communications systems for nuclear power plants), a civilian position. On that date, appellant was out on Medical Leave. A person on extended Medical Leave would still be considered an "active" but "off-duty" employee and would not have to return the clothes that had been issued to them. Employees who are off-duty, however, are not supposed to be dressed in their work uniform (although it is not strictly prohibited), and are not permitted to use their State-issued radios.

The jacket issued to an employee in the Communications Department would state "Communications" on the jacket, but the custom-designed jackets with the State Police/OEM logos on them were also distributed to some communications workers. Some equipment does get retrieved from employees out on Medical Leave; appellant's State-issued vehicle and laptop were both retrieved from her because of her Medical Leave. Appellant had been issued a Motorola STX 5000 radio, the same model of radio issued to State Troopers; this radio had not been retrieved from appellant when she went on Medical Leave.

On November 2, 2012, Brady received a call from Nepi, inquiring about the appellant. Brady confirmed that appellant worked for him. Nepi told Brady about the appellant and the generator on October 31, 2012. Brady confirmed that appellant was on Medical Leave. Brady referred this matter to his superior, Captain Mark Muse, and then had nothing more to do with the investigation.

Appellant had filed numerous complaints against many State Police employees. She had been disciplined for a "lack of candor" during investigations of the complaints she had filed.

Gary Sandes is currently a corporate investigator for TD Bank. Before that, he was with the New Jersey State Police for almost twenty-six years, as a State Trooper and a casino detective. He was also assigned to the narcotics and internal affairs departments, and with the Official Corruption Bureau. He was unit leader of the Official Corruption Bureau in October 2012, and conducted the investigation of appellant. He filed two formal written reports on this matter. (Exhibits R-9 and R-10.) These reports included copies of Nepi's report.

Sandes interviewed both Whittle and Grachus. They said that on October 31, 2012, appellant identified herself to Whittle as an inspector for the State Police, at the Springfield Lot. She wore a State Police/OEM jacket and carried a radio. Whittle and Grachus both told Sandes that appellant was "verbal" and "agitated" as she indicated she wanted a generator but did not want to pay for one. She threatened Whittle and Grachus with arrest or fines for violation of ordinances, and claimed to have shut down generator vendors at a separate location. Whittle and Grachus eventually capitulated and gave appellant a free generator. Sandes received a copy of the incomplete appellant-invoice from Nepi, and acknowledged that a proper invoice should have shown the price, model number and payment method; appellant's invoice had only her name and the word "Donate."

Sandes was unsuccessful in his attempts to schedule a formal interview with appellant. But he reached her on her cellphone. Appellant began to act defensive, and told Sandes that she had purchased a generator for $2,000 and therefore would not have stolen a generator. Sandes asked for a copy of an invoice for the $2,000 generator, but appellant never provided one. She said she never spoke with Nepi.

Hours later, appellant telephoned Sandes at his home. She said on October 31, 2012, she actually purchased a generator for $500 cash that she had taken out of an A.T.M., and would be able to produce a receipt. She said she gave that generator to a church, but would not reveal its name or location. When appellant refused to schedule a formal interview, Sandes ended the conversation.[4]

Sandes had not seen any bank records indicating that appellant had taken $500 out of a bank or A.T.M.

Sandes contacted the Burlington County Department of Consumer Affairs, and was informed by the director, Renee Borstad, that there had been no complaints filed against Whittle and Grachus. She said Southampton Zoning official Jody Mazeall provided her with a photograph of appellant at the White Dotte. Borstad provided the photograph to Sandes; it showed appellant wearing khaki pants and a State Police/OEM windbreaker.

Sandes interviewed White Dotte manager Christopher Green on November 15, 2012. Green saw appellant at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, wearing a State Police jacket, and carrying and speaking into a radio. Green overheard appellant's conversation with the generator vendors at White Dotte in which appellant told the vendors she wanted two free generators, and that the vendors could be arrested by the State Police. Appellant never stated she was a Trooper. Mazeall arrived, dispersed the vendors, and took a photograph of appellant, who was wearing khakis and a State Police jacket.

Sandes interviewed Jody Mazeall on November 15, 2012. Mazeall saw appellant at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, wearing the State Police/OEM jacket. Mazeall spoke with appellant, who told him that she had been ripped off by being sold a bad generator. Mazeall asked appellant why she didn't report this to her fellow State Police, and she told him that this was a personal issue. Mazeall never told Sandes he had seen appellant with a radio.

Sandes learned that appellant had given a generator to David Palmer as payment for staying in his home while she was between residences.

As part of his investigation, Sandes was made aware of a check for $1,600 made payable to appellant, from Lisa Evanko (daughter of David and Eleanor Palmer). Sandes spoke with Evanko on December 7, 2012, who told him that on October 30, 2012, she and her son Cody travelled with appellant to White Dotte. Evanko wanted to purchase a generator and pay by check, but the vendors were not accepting checks. Appellant then gave Evanko $1,600 in cash towards the $1,700 purchase price, and Evanko's son paid the final $100 in cash. Evanko then reimbursed appellant by writing her a check for $1,600.

Sandes had not seen any bank records indicating that appellant had taken $1,600 out of a bank or A.T.M. on or before October 30, 2012.

Evanko stated that the generator which appellant procured on October 31, 2012, was given by appellant to David Palmer, and that David Palmer then sold it to David Marshall. Sandes spoke with Marshall, who confirmed that he had purchased a generator from David Palmer.

Sandes conducted a formal interview with Evanko on January 8, 2013. Evanko provided an invoice for the generator she purchased from the vendors at the White Dotte on October 30, 2012. It was for a 9,000-watt model, not the same model which appellant procured on October 31, 2012; appellant gave David Palmer an 8,500-watt model. Evanko knew that Marshall needed a generator, so she arranged for Marshall to buy a generator from David Palmer. The serial number on the generator Marshall bought from David Palmer is the same as the model number of the generator appellant procured from Whittle and Grachus on October 31, 2012. Sandes later obtained a photocopy of a check from Marshall to David Palmer, dated November 5, 2012, in the amount of $1,000.

Sandes did not know any of these State Police employees before he began this investigation, except for Nepi. There was no conspiracy to get appellant fired.

For appellant:

Eric Trout was a police officer with Springfield Township for twenty-four years. He has been Chief of Police since 2011, and served in that capacity during Superstorm Sandy. He never spoke with any generator salesman at Routes 206 and 537 in Springfield. He never gave permission to anyone to sell generators. He was not aware that anyone was selling generators at that location and had not received any complaints about generator sales.

Marcella Friedman, the appellant, was hired in 2001 as a Radio Technician with the New Jersey Department of Corrections before joining the New Jersey State Police in 2003 as a Technician 2. She received a blue radio maintenance shirt as part of a work uniform, and had to buy her own khaki pants to wear. She owned an Office of Emergency Management jacket but could not remember when she obtained it. People in her position wear State Police jackets all the time. There are no restrictions on when and where they can wear State Police jackets.

She purchased a new home on October 22, 2012, in Hamilton, New Jersey, after previously living in Surf City, New Jersey. On that date she was collecting Worker's Compensation. She paid cash at her real estate closing because she could not get a mortgage.

Because repairs were being done to her new home in Hamilton, New Jersey, appellant temporarily moved in with "Aunt Wanda,"[5] and was living out of boxes.

After Superstorm Sandy hit, Lisa Evanko was going to borrow a generator from a friend in Tabernacle, New Jersey. In the mid-afternoon of October 30, 2012, Lisa Evanko, Cody Evanko and appellant drove in appellant's pickup truck towards Tabernacle. They passed White Dotte and saw vendors selling generators there. After picking up the generator from Lisa Evanko's friend in Tabernacle, they drove back north and stopped at White Dotte.

The White Dotte lot was busy with generator vendors and purchasers. Appellant was there for a couple of hours on October 30, 2012. Two lines were set up, one for cash purchases and one for credit card purchases. They were not accepting checks. Appellant did not trust how the vendors were taking credit card information, so she gave Lisa Evanko $1,600 in cash to purchase herself a 9,000-watt generator.

As appellant was living out of boxes and did not have a lot of clothes available, on October 30, 2012, she put on the blue State Police/OEM jacket that was in her car. Appellant had her personal cellphone with her. She was not carrying a work cellphone or a radio. She wore a small black leather fanny pack, which she had worn every day for seven or eight years, because she kept an epi-pen in there in case of any food allergy emergencies. (Exhibit P-2.)

After Evanko chose the model of generator she wished to purchase at White Dotte, appellant, Lisa Evanko and Cody Evanko drove from White Dotte back to Tabernacle, approximately fifteen to twenty minutes, to return the generator they had picked up earlier from Lisa Evanko's friend. They did this to make room in appellant's pickup truck for Evanko's newly purchased generator.

[5] "Aunt Wanda" was referred to as Eleanor Palmer's daughter. She may have been referring to Eleanor's daughter, Lisa Evanko.

No vendors at White Dotte asked her about her State Police/OEM jacket. She never told anyone that she was a State employee. She never asked anyone at White Dotte on October 30, 2012, to give her a free generator.

After returning the borrowed generator to Tabernacle and driving back to White Dotte to pick up Evanko's new generator, they drove back to Aunt Wanda's house, and someone unloaded the generator. Evanko reimbursed appellant for the $1,600 cash she lent her by writing appellant a check for $1,600.

On October 31, 2012, David Palmer told appellant that he wanted a second generator, so he could help his neighbors out. Palmer was especially in need of power, because Aunt Wanda had a pacemaker. Appellant went out, on her own initiative, and drove alone to White Dotte to procure another generator.

When she arrived at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, one of the vendors recognized her, because she had been there the day before and because she purchased a generator with cash. She handed the vendor $1,700 cash to purchase another generator, but did not get a receipt. Just then, Southampton Township inspector Jody Mazeall began shutting down the generator vendors. Later, people just assumed that appellant had shut them down because she was wearing the State Police/OEM jacket; she never told vendors at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, that she could shut them down.

In the craziness of the vendors being shut down by Mazeall, the vendor refused to return her $1,700 cash, and took away the generator she was about to purchase. She walked inside the White Dotte to speak with the manager, Christopher Green, but he would not help her. There were police and township officials around but she did not want to ask for their help in getting back her $1,700 cash because she was embarrassed and this was a personal matter. She then chased the vendor down; he cursed at her, but then gave appellant her $1,700 cash back. Both Mazeall and appellant took photographs of the vendors' trucks, which contained hundreds of generators.

Appellant had $1,600 cash on October 30 and at least $1,700 cash on October 31, 2012, because she had cash left over from her recent real estate purchase. She was unable to get a mortgage because she was receiving Worker's Compensation, so she used cash to buy her new home.

Someone at White Dotte then told appellant that vendors up the road were selling generators. Since this was on her way home, she drove up Route 206 to a vacant lot by Routes 206 and 537 and the Esquire Diner (the Springfield Lot). Those vendors had U-Hauls and only a small number of generators.

Around 3:00 p.m., appellant got out of her vehicle at the Springfield Lot, still wearing the blue State Police/OEM jacket. She had no radio with her. She saw Lieutenant Nepi; she and Nepi had worked together before. Nepi asked her how her knee was doing. Nepi said he was there to purchase a generator, and appellant saw him take possession of two generators.

Appellant chose the 8,500-watt model generator. Bobby Jones told her the cash price would be $500, a discounted price because this was a used generator. She was not aware of what condition this used generator was in or why it had been returned. Jones took the $500 from appellant, and signed his name to her invoice in front of her. She never spoke with Whittle or Grachus. Jones wasn't feeling well and wanted to leave, so he told Whittle and Grachus to load a used 8,500-watt generator into appellant's truck, and to write "Donate" on appellant's invoice. She wrote her name on the invoice, and Jones said to not worry about writing in her address or anything else, because the rest of the details of the generator were included in the warranty paperwork he had given her.

Appellant returned to David Palmer's house, where she was staying, and gave him the generator she had just purchased. But she did not consider this as payment to a relative for staying with them. By the time she gave the generator to Palmer, the electricity in their house was back on. Appellant had no idea Palmer intended on reselling her generator.

When Sandes called to discuss this matter with her, she thought this was some kind of prank. She called Sandes back a few hours later and denied the accusations. She was too busy to schedule a formal interview with Sandes because she was still moving out of her last home on Long Beach Island, and also had to go to the doctor regarding her leg.

Appellant had filed numerous employment complaints against co-workers over a ten-year period. She had previously met with an Officer Ingram and with Major Brady regarding specific employment issues; Ingram pulled out a gun and threatened her and her family, calling them "a bunch of thugs," until Brady had Ingram "stand down." It was after leaving that meeting that appellant went to her doctor, and she has been out on Medical Leave since then. She filed a complaint, resulting in several officers and civilian employees being suspended. She suggested that the within accusations against her are revenge for her having filed complaints against fellow employees. Appellant is a lesbian; she has been called names because of that, and her co-workers created a hostile work environment and did things to her in an attempt to get her to leave her job.

Credibility:

In evaluating evidence, it is necessary to assess the credibility of the witnesses. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950).

A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson

v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may also reject testimony as "inherently incredible" when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Further, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

After having the opportunity to review the evidence and observe his testimony, the testimony of Nazzareno Nepi is accepted as credible and truthful. He was at the Springfield Lot on the day of the incident in question, and had the opportunity to witness and personally converse with the appellant as well as witnesses Whittle and Grachus, who later corroborated Nepi's testimony. He exhibited no prejudice during his testimony, but rather answered questions clearly and authoritatively.

Accordingly, Nepi's testimony is accepted as truthful and credible, and therefore it is accepted as FACT that: State Police jackets are available for purchase in stores, but jackets with "Office of Emergency Management" on them can only be obtained from the Emergency Management section. Appellant showed Nepi her State Police-issued Motorola radio that she was carrying. That model of radio is given to State Police employees but cannot be purchased by citizens in a regular store. Whittle and Grachus told Nepi that appellant threatened them with fines and with confiscation of their generators, unless they provided her with a free generator, and that appellant did not pay for the generator she took from them.

Thomas Whittle, one of the generator vendors at the Springfield Lot, was permitted to testify by telephone by agreement of both parties. I could not visually observe Whittle's testimony, but was able to observe the tone of his voice and facility of his answers. He directly witnessed appellant at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, and his testimony was corroborated by that of other witnesses. He answered questions quickly and clearly, from the point-of-view expected from a person who was the alleged victim of malfeasance.

Whittle testified that he received verbal permission to sell generators from State troopers and the local chief of police. Springfield Chief of Police Eric Trout testified that he was unaware of generator sales at the Springfield Lot and that he never gave anyone permission to sell generators. Thus, while Whittle may have received permission from other troopers and law enforcement officers, and may have been uncertain as to the ranks of the officers he spoke with, his statement that he received permission from the chief of police does not appear to be correct. The possible illegality of his generator sales did not impact on appellant's actions at the Springfield Lot, however, nor was Whittle's testimony impeached by Trout's testimony.

Accordingly, Whittle's testimony is accepted as truthful and credible, and the following can be accepted as FACT: appellant Friedman approached Whittle and identified herself as State Police. Appellant carried a police-style radio/walkie-talkie. Appellant informed Whittle that she was at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, to monitor generator sales. Appellant told Whittle he was not allowed to sell his generators at the Springfield Lot, that she could shut down his vending, confiscate his generators and/or have Whittle and Grachus arrested. Appellant claimed to have shut down generator sales at a different location earlier that day. Appellant told Whittle she would let their generator sales continue if Whittle and Grachus gave her a free generator. Bobby Jones was not present for the entirety of Whittle's conversation with appellant, and left before appellant obtained a generator. It was Grachus who decided to comply with appellant's demand that they "donate" a free generator. Whittle loaded the generator onto appellant's truck. Whittle asked appellant to complete an invoice for the transaction. A typical invoice would have the purchaser's name, address, purchase information (cash, or credit card and credit card information and approval number), and the amount of the purchase price. Bobby Jones pre-signed a pile of blank invoices before he left to take a break. Whittle did not receive any payment from appellant for the generator she received from them. Whittle was standing with Grachus and appellant, and never saw appellant give any money to Grachus.

The testimony of Christopher Green is accepted as credible and truthful. In testifying as to what transpired at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, Green answered questions clearly, without any apparent bias or prejudice.

Accordingly, it is accepted as FACT that: Green was at White Dotte on October 31, 2012. Green allowed vendors from New Hampshire to sell generators in the White Dotte parking lot, in return for them allowing Green to use one of their generators for the store. Appellant Friedman was at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, wearing a State Police/OEM jacket, and walking around the lot talking into a professional, high-end Motorola walkie-talkie. Appellant was at White Dotte to obtain a generator. Appellant threatened to arrest the New Hampshire generator vendors at White Dotte if they did not give her a free generator. Southampton Township official Jody Mazeall arrived and shut down the generator sales because the vendors lacked a proper permit.

Anthony Grachus, one of the generator vendors at the Springfield Lot, was permitted to testify by telephone by agreement of both parties. I could not visually observe Grachus' testimony, but was able to observe the tone of his voice and facility of his answers. He directly witnessed appellant at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, and his testimony was corroborated by that of other witnesses. He answered questions clearly and thoughtfully, from the point-of-view expected from a person who was the alleged victim of malfeasance.

As with Whittle, Grachus testified that he received verbal permission to sell generators from State troopers, local law enforcement officers, and the local chief of police. Springfield Chief of Police Eric Trout testified that he was unaware of generator sales at the Springfield Lot and that he never gave anyone permission to sell generators. Thus, while Grachus may have received permission from other troopers and law enforcement officers, and may have been uncertain as to the ranks of the officers he spoke with, his statement that he received permission from the chief of police does not appear to be correct. The possible illegality of his generator sales did not impact on appellant's actions at the Springfield Lot, however, nor was Grachus' testimony impeached by Trout's testimony.

Accordingly, Grachus' testimony is accepted as truthful and credible, and the following can be accepted as FACT: Grachus drove to New Jersey with approximately thirty or forty generators to be sold at reduced prices due to Superstorm Sandy. Grachus met Whittle and Bobby Jones at the Springfield Lot, and all three were present there on October 31, 2012. Appellant Friedman approached Grachus at the Springfield Lot, wearing a State Police jacket and talking into a walkie-talkie. Appellant threatened to arrest Grachus for not having a permit to sell, unless he gave her a free generator. Appellant claimed to have just shut down generator vendors at White Dotte. Grachus believed appellant was a State Trooper, with the authority to arrest him or fine him if he did not give her a generator. Grachus made the decision to give appellant a free generator. Grachus gave her a generator, and gave her an invoice form to complete. Appellant did not pay any money to Grachus for the generator.

David Brady provided reasoned testimony, speaking with authority and displaying a great deal of knowledge as to the workings at the State Police. His testimony is accepted as truthful and credible.

Accordingly, it is accepted as FACT that: appellant Friedman's position as a Communications Technician 2 for the State Police is considered a civilian position. A civilian employee on extended Medical Leave would not have to return the clothes that had been issued to them. Jackets with State Police/OEM logos were distributed to some communications workers. Appellant had been issued a Motorola STX 5000 radio, the same model of radio issued to State Troopers. Appellant's Motorola STX 5000 radio had not been retrieved from her when she went on Medical Leave. Off-duty employees are not permitted to use their State-issued radios. Appellant had conflicts with other employees, and had filed numerous complaints. Appellant had been disciplined for a "lack of candor" during investigations of the complaints she had filed.

Gary Sandes was permitted to testify by telephone by agreement of both parties. I could not visually observe Sandes' testimony, but was able to observe the tone of his voice and facility of his answers. Sandes testified based on his investigation of appellant, and much of his information came from interviews of persons who testified at the within Hearing. His answers appeared unbiased and informed, and his testimony is accepted as truthful and credible.

Accordingly, it is accepted as FACT that: Sandes was with the State Police Official Corruption Bureau in October 2012, and conducted the official investigation of appellant Friedman. Sandes was unsuccessful in his attempts to schedule a formal interview with appellant. Sandes spoke with appellant by telephone on November 4, 2012, and she stated that she had purchased a generator for $2,000 and did not steal a generator. Appellant never produced an invoice for the $2,000 generator. Appellant denied speaking with Nepi at the Springfield Lot. Hours after their initial telephone call, appellant telephoned Sandes at his home, and told him that on October 31, 2012, she had actually purchased a generator for $500 cash that she had taken out of an A.T.M., and would be able to produce a receipt. Appellant never produced a receipt for a $500 bank or A.T.M. withdrawal. Appellant told Sandes that she gave the generator to a church, but would not reveal its name or location. When appellant refused to schedule a formal interview, Sandes ended their telephone conversation. Sandes typically recorded investigative conversations but his recorder malfunctioned during this conversation at his home. Sandes received a copy of a photograph of appellant at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, from Renee Borstad at the Burlington County Department of Consumer Affairs, which Borstad had received from Southampton Zoning official Jody Mazeall; that photograph showed appellant wearing khaki pants and a State Police/OEM windbreaker. Appellant gave the 8,500-watt generator she had procured on October 31, 2012, to David Palmer, with whom she had been staying. Sandes spoke with Palmer's daughter, Lisa Evanko, on December 7, 2012, and again on January 8, 2013. Evanko stated that she and her son Cody travelled with appellant to White Dotte on October 30, 2012, so Evanko could purchase a generator. Evanko wanted to pay by check, but the vendors were not accepting checks. Appellant Friedman gave Evanko $1,600 in cash towards the $1,700 purchase price for a 9,000-watt generator, and Cody Evanko gave her the final $100 in cash. Evanko received a completed invoice for her purchase. Evanko later reimbursed appellant by writing her a check for $1,600. There were no bank records indicating that appellant had taken

$1,600 out of a bank or A.T.M. on or before October 30, 2012. David Palmer sold the 8,500-watt generator appellant had given him to David Marshall for $1,000. There was no conspiracy to get appellant fired.

Eric Trout was a credible witness, and therefore it is accepted as FACT that: Trout was unaware of generator sales at the Springfield Lot. Nobody ever asked him for permission to sell generators at the Springfield Lot, and Trout neither met with or gave permission to any generator salesmen at the Springfield Lot.

Appellant Marcella Friedman was not a credible witness. She appeared defensive at times, and was evasive in much of her testimony. There were many inconsistencies in her testimony.

Appellant told Sandes in a telephone interview that she did not recall speaking with Nepi at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, but Nepi and appellant both testified that they spoke with each other at the Springfield Lot.

Appellant claims to have paid $500 for a generator on October 31, 2012, but there is no proof that she paid for the generator, and neither Whittle nor Grachus received any payment for the generator she took. Appellant told Sandes on the telephone that she gave the generator to a church, without revealing its name or location, when in fact she gave the generator to David Palmer.

Appellant said she gave the generator to David Palmer for free. Despite an assertion in appellant's Post-Hearing Brief that she gave the generator to Palmer as "in kind" payment for allowing her to stay temporarily in his home (Exhibit P-3, page 29), in her testimony appellant denied that she gave Palmer the generator as rent payment. (Transcript September 6, 2017, page 143.) Beyond these contradictory statements, appellant never explained why she gave Palmer a free generator.

There were also contradictions regarding Palmer's need for a second generator. Appellant testified that she went generator shopping again on October 31, 2012, because David Palmer wanted a second generator, to help friends out. But David Palmer already had access to two generators: the one his daughter Lisa Evanko purchased at the White Dotte on October 30, and the generator that appellant and Evanko borrowed from Evanko's friend in Tabernacle that same date. If David Palmer told appellant on October 30 that he needed two generators, appellant would not have driven back to Tabernacle to return the borrowed generator. If David Palmer told appellant on October 31 that he needed a second generator, appellant could have driven back to Tabernacle to borrow the generator again from Evanko's friend.

Additionally, appellant justified this need for a second generator by testifying that "Aunt Wanda" had a pacemaker. She did not explain a nexus between Wanda's pacemaker and a generator, but pacemakers are battery-driven, and do not get plugged into a source of electricity. There was also something amiss in Palmer selling the generator that appellant gave him for free, receiving $1,000 from Marshall and yet not reimbursing appellant the $500 she claims she paid for it.

Appellant testified that she did not trust the generator vendors at the White Dotte on October 30, 2012; rather than allow Evanko to give her credit card information to what she considered untrustworthy salesmen, appellant gave Evanko $1,600 in cash to enable her to complete her purchase. But appellant later testified that she did trust the salesmen at the White Dotte, because the White Dotte name was imprinted on their invoice form.

This issue of trust arose again on October 31, 2012. Appellant may not have trusted the vendors on October 30, 2012, but she trusted these same vendors enough on October 31, 2012 to hand them $1,700 cash without getting a receipt or invoice. Appellant testified that they took her $1,700 cash on October 31, but then refused to give her that money back after the township shut down their operation. Although surrounded by law enforcement officials, appellant did not ask any of them for help getting back her $1,700; she testified that this would have been embarrassing to her, because this was a personal matter. But there should have been nothing embarrassing in asking a police officer for help with a personal matter if appellant was there in a personal, and not official, capacity. It was fortunate for appellant that the vendors suddenly changed their minds and returned the $1,700 in cash to her, despite her not having a receipt or invoice for that dollar amount.

Appellant testified that when she arrived at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, one of the vendors recognized her, because she had been there the day before and because she paid with cash. But appellant did not purchase a generator on October 30; Evanko did. Appellant and Evanko's son Cody gave cash to Evanko to make the purchase. None of the vendors at White Dotte on October 31, 2012, should have recognized appellant as a cash purchaser.

There were also inconsistencies regarding the cash appellant had spent on generators. Appellant initially told Sandes she spent $2,000 on a generator. Later she said she really spent only $500 for a generator, and had a receipt to prove it. But appellant produced no receipt or invoice showing she spent either $2,000 or $500 for a generator purchase. Further, appellant testified that she had $1,600 in cash on October 30 (which she gave to Evanko for her generator purchase) and $1,700 cash on October 31, 2012 (which appellant initially gave to the vendors at White Dotte). Yet no bank statements or A.T.M. records were produced to verify that appellant had recently obtained $3,300 in cash.

Appellant explained her source of cash by stating that she had cash left over from a real estate transaction, that being her purchase of property in Hamilton, New Jersey, on October 22, 2012.[6] She had to do a cash closing because she was unable to secure mortgage financing for her purchase because she was on Worker's Compensation.[7] But a "cash closing" does not typically involve actual cash; a "cash closing" is a term of art to describe a transaction other than a mortgage loan-financed purchase. Purchasers bring a check to a closing table, not cash. If a purchaser did in fact show up at a real estate closing with hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash, the title company would be responsible for having the applicable Internal Revenue Service documents completed and submitted. Further, if there was money left over from a real estate settlement which had to be paid back to the purchaser, a title company would not pay that in the form of cash; they would pay the amount in the form of a check. In the unlikely situation where actual cash was paid, this would be reflected on a HUD-1 Settlement Statement; appellant, however, did not submit such documentary evidence, or a copy of any I.R.S. documents reflecting a cash closing, or bank statements showing the withdrawal of hundreds of thousands of dollars in cash in proximity to her settlement date. Additionally, Sandes testified that appellant told him she had taken money out of the bank to purchase her generator, and that she would produce receipts for said withdrawals, which is different than holding on to thousands of dollars in cash from a real estate closing for two weeks.

[7] Appellant provided no evidence that she applied for a mortgage or was rejected by lenders for mortgage financing.

Appellant's statements regarding her clothing lacked credibility. She testified that she purchased a new home on October 22, 2012, and that because of repairs to the new home she had to live temporarily with her relatives, the Palmers. Because she was in-between homes, she was living out of boxes, which was why she was wearing the same outfit on both October 30 and October 31, 2012. It seems unlikely that the Palmers could not have lent appellant some clothes to wear. It also raises the question of why appellant would have packed away all her jackets; she was moving during October, a time of cool and wet autumnal weather, and it seems more likely that she would have needed to keep a couple of coats or jackets nearby to wear on an October day. Further, appellant testified that she wore the State Police/OEM windbreaker jacket on October 30 and 31, 2012, because it was in her truck. That means appellant walked out of the Palmer house, during a hurricane like Superstorm Sandy, to conduct business outdoors, with no jacket, coat or cold weather or wet weather gear, and that she then put on the cold State Police/OEM jacket that she happened to have in her truck. Even if that had happened on October 30, it seems unlikely she would have gone out the next day in the same clothes, with the same light jacket, instead of borrowing a coat or heavier jacket from her relatives, or going into her boxes to find a heavier coat, or to find the cold weather clothes that she had been issued at work, which she still had despite being out on Medical Leave.[8] Additionally, if appellant had been wearing the State

[8] Appellant's boxes of clothes were easily accessible; they were stored at her new house in Hamilton, New Jersey, in the same township where she was staying with the Palmers. (Exhibit P-3, page 32.)

Police/OEM jacket on a regular basis, she could have produced photographs of her in the jacket from some time other than October 30 and 31, 2012.

Appellant-counsel stated in his Post-Hearing Brief (Exhibit P-3, page 32) that appellant purchased her new home (in Hamilton, New Jersey) on October 22, 2012, and that when Superstorm Sandy hit seven days later it forced appellant to move out of the house. Yet appellant testified that she was living with the Palmers because she was having repairs done to the new house before moving in.

There are also inconsistencies with regard to Mr. Jones and his presence at the Springfield Lot. Whittle and Grachus stated that Jones was not feeling well, and did not stay for the end of the conversation with appellant, and that Jones had pre-signed a pile of invoices before he left the Springfield Lot. But appellant stated that it was Jones who completed her purchase transaction, and stayed long enough to see the generator loaded into her truck, and that Jones signed her invoice in front of her. She also testified that Jones told her not to complete filling in her information on the invoice because all pertinent information would be in the warranty he was giving her. It is believable that Jones would pre-sign blank forms before leaving a site, but it seems unlikely that an experienced salesperson like Jones would have signed an invoice knowing that it was lacking in standard information, such as price and payment method. The only vital information that would be in a warranty book would be the model and serial number of the generator being purchased; the warranty would not have had the price or payment method. Further, no warranty should have been forthcoming to appellant because she purchased a used generator, not a new model. Jones could have testified as to appellant having paid for the generator she took home, but appellant did not call Jones as a witness. No warranty with appellant's name was offered into evidence by appellant.

Appellant's statements about wearing her black fanny pack at all times due to needing an epi-pen for potential food allergies went unsubstantiated; no evidence was provided that she wore the fanny pack at all times (such as old photographs showing her wearing the fanny pack), and no evidence was provided to confirm that she had any food allergies.

Accordingly, due to appellant's lack of credibility, I cannot accept her version of the events of October 31, 2012.

LEGAL ARGUMENT AND CONCLUSION

The issues are whether the appellant used her position as an employee of the New Jersey State Police to obtain a free power generator for personal use; whether such action constituted conduct unbecoming a public official, misuse of public property and violation of SOP F-7; and whether the Department acted properly in removing appellant from her position as a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police, for such violations.

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.

In assessing the propriety of a penalty in a civil disciplinary action, the primary concern is the public good; factors to be considered are the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Development Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d 465 (CSV) (1996). Progressive discipline is required in those cases where an employee is guilty of a series of offenses, none of which is sufficient to justify removal. Harris v. North Jersey Developmental Center, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) (1994).

I. Conduct unbecoming a public employee

One of the grounds for discipline of public employees is "conduct unbecoming a public employee." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). Suspension or removal may be justified even where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off duty. Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. at 140.

Appellant Friedman was a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police. While she was employed by the State Police, hers was a civilian position; she did not serve as a State Trooper. She worked in communications, and had no responsibilities for monitoring or regulating product sales, generators or roadside sales. She had no authority to review permits, shut down vendor sales, fine vendors, confiscate property, and had no arrest powers. Appellant was receiving Worker's Compensation and was on extended Medical Leave on the date of October 31, 2012, and had no duties on that date on behalf of the State Police.

Yet on October 31, 2012, appellant dressed as a member of the New Jersey State Police Office of Emergency Management and carried a State-issued radio. She told roadside vendors at two separate locations that she had the authority to shut down their sales unless they gave her a free power generator. Rather than use her time and talents to assist those in need during the crisis that became known as Superstorm Sandy, she used her State-issued jacket and radio to impersonate an employee of the OEM. Not only did she not assist her fellow citizens in need, she used the fact that roadside vendors in an emergency did not have formal sales permits or approvals as the basis for taking a generator without paying for it. Appellant's actions constituted the extortion of property. In addition to this being a criminal act, appellant's behavior undermined the efficiency of a governmental unit, that being the State Police, and was clearly the type of behavior that can undermine and destroy the public's respect in the delivery of governmental services, and its respect for police in general.[9]

The generator vendors were obviously hoping to make a profit from selling their wares, but were selling them at significant discounts in order to provide help during a crisis. Yet while they were offering help during a crisis situation, appellant was doing nothing but looking out for herself. This is the sort of behavior that offends publicly accepted standards of decency. Rather than wear the State Police/OEM jacket as a paragon of virtue, appellant wore it in a manner so as to violate the implicit standard of good behavior expected from someone who has a public position.

Accordingly, appellant's actions on October 31, 2012, constituted conduct unbecoming a public employee. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

II. Misuse of public property

As a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department, appellant had been issued State radios, cell phones and pagers. She received a radio maintenance shirt as part of a work uniform. She was issued cold weather gear such as boots, winter jackets, gloves and raingear. She received many State Police jackets over the years, and had an Office of Emergency Management (OEM) jacket. There was no State Police policy prohibiting civilian State Police employees from wearing jackets with a State Police logo.

But appellant was not simply wearing an OEM jacket to stay warm. She wore that jacket to give the impression that she was on-duty, working for the State Police/OEM. She wore that State-issued jacket while telling roadside vendors that she had the authority to fine them or shut down their business for lack of proper permits. Appellant did not purchase the jacket she wore on October 31, 2012; she wore a jacket that had been given to her as an employee of the State Police. Thus, because the jacket she wore at the Springfield Lot on October 31, 2012, was a State-issued jacket, her improper actions on that date constituted a misuse of public property.

Similarly, appellant was carrying and speaking into a walkie-talkie, just like other law enforcement officers were doing. Appellant carried and talked into her State-issued walkie-talkie to bolster the image of her as an on-duty member of the OEM. Had appellant merely been wearing a walkie-talkie strapped to her waist, her defense--that what witnesses actually saw was the black fanny pack she always wore--might have had some validity. But appellant was carrying the walkie-talkie and speaking into it, hoping to give the impression that she was on-duty and acting in an official capacity when she was attempting to regulate roadside sales. Further, off-duty employees, like appellant, were not permitted to use their State-issued radios. Accordingly, appellant's use of a State-issued walkie-talkie as part of her extortion of a generator constituted a misuse of public property.

III. Violation of SOP F-7 radio procedures

There are guidelines for use of State-issued radios, that being Standard Operating Procedures F-7 ("SOP F-7"). (Exhibit R-7.) The Department cited SOP F-7, Section III, Radio Transmissions, subsection A, which states, "Personnel shall utilize proper radio procedures with brevity and professionalism at all times . . ." Neither party focused on this charge at the Hearing; it is presumed that appellant's denial that she carried a walkie-talkie or radio was a denial that she violated Standard Operating Procedures.

Appellant carried a State-issued radio, that being a Motorola XTS 5000 radio, and was speaking into it. Being on Medical Leave and not having any official work duties, any speaking into a walkie-talkie by appellant had to have been fake. Appellant's fake use of her radio to create the impression that she was on active duty indicated a lack of professionalism on her part. Accordingly, appellant was in violation of SOP F-7.

Therefore, the State met its burden of showing by the preponderance of the evidence that appellant Friedman did commit conduct unbecoming a public official, did misuse public property and did violate SOP F-7.

PENALTY

When considering removal of an employee, his or her entire prior work/disciplinary record must be considered. In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182 (2010). Appellant Friedman had one prior minor disciplinary action against her, a fifteen-day suspension in 2008. The within matter is the first major disciplinary action against her.

Once a determination is made that an employee has violated a statute, regulation or rule concerning his or her employment, the concept of progressive discipline must be considered. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). However, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). Progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished record. Id.

Appellant's use of a public position and public property to extort a generator from vendors during a weather emergency is egregious behavior, and therefore progressive discipline is not required. Although this is appellant's first major disciplinary matter, numerous cases have upheld the removal of an employee for a first violation. In re Hermann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007) (in upholding an employee's removal, the court held that while progressive discipline is a worthy principle, it is not subject to universal application); See also Henry v. Rahway State Prison (progressive discipline bypassed by the court where an employee was engaged in severe misconduct, especially where the employee's position involved public safety and the misconduct caused a risk of harm to persons or property); Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. 469 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied 135 N.J. 469 (1994) (upholding the removal of a corrections officer for a first major discipline, having taken into consideration the important role that corrections officers play in dealing with inmates).

Appellant offered no mitigating factors for consideration, as she has maintained that she paid for the generator she procured at the Springfield Lot and therefore did not extort the generator obtained from Whittle and Grachus. She has alleged improper actions by others (for instance, that Grachus and Whittle were illegally selling generators, and that Nepi improperly bought generators for personal use while on duty.) These allegations will not be addressed here. Appellant is presumed to have raised these issues to show selective enforcement of rules by the State Police and law enforcement, to the detriment of appellant. Such allegations were taken into consideration in deciding what weight would be given to those witnesses' testimony. Similarly, appellant's accusations of bias against her by those co-workers who testified against her have been taken into consideration in determining how much weight to afford their testimony.

Accordingly, the Department acted properly in removing appellant from her position as a Communications Systems Technician 2 at the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police, for conduct unbecoming a public employee, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), misuse of public property, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8), and violation of SOP F-7 Radio Procedures, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12).

ORDER

I ORDER that the disciplinary action of the Department of Law and Public Safety, Division of State Police, in removing appellant Friedman from her position as a Communications Systems Technician 2 is AFFIRMED, and that the appeal is hereby DISMISSED.

ISSUED: MARCH 29, 2018 BW

The appeal of Sakinah Beverett-Llanos, Senior Juvenile Detention Officer, Essex County, Department of Citizen Services, removal effective July 19, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Leslie Z. Celentano, who rendered her initial decision on December 28, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority. A reply to reply was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of March 27, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Sakinah Beverett-Llanos.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

Appellant appeals the substantiated charges and termination by respondent. Respondent alleges that appellant violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause; Essex County Juvenile Detention Standard of Conduct and Code of Ethics Order #08-01; and Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Fraternizing Policy #03-13.

On July 22, 2016, respondent served appellant with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) suspending her without pay effective July 19, 2016, and noting the possible disciplinary action of removal. Appellant requested an internal disciplinary hearing, which commenced on October 18, 2016. On November 7, 2016, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) was issued removing appellant from employment effective July 19, 2016. The FNDA sustained the charges of neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause as set forth in the Preliminary Notice, as well as violation of Essex County Juvenile Detention Standard of Conduct and Code of Ethics Order #08-01 and Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Fraternizing Policy #03-13. Appellant's removal was upheld. Appellant requested an appeal on November 22, 2017, within twenty days of receiving the FNDA.

On December 7, 2016, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative law (OAL) for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The hearing was scheduled for April 21, 2017; however, discovery was not complete, and the hearing was adjourned at the request of respondent. The hearing was then rescheduled for May 22, 2017, and was held on that date. Following receipt of copies of all exhibits, the record was closed.

TESTIMONY

Captain Garfield Isaacs

Captain Isaacs has been employed by the Essex County Juvenile Detention Center since October 2004, and has served as a captain and supervisor for three years. Prior to that he was a sergeant for two or three years, and prior to that served as a juvenile detention officer. As a tour commander, he is responsible for supervising staff and maintaining the security and safety of officers, residents and the facility.

Captain Isaacs worked with appellant when they were both officers, and also when they both served as sergeants. He became aware of her actions within the facility following the graduation ceremony held for juvenile residents on June 20, 2016. The facility provides educational services to residents and holds a graduation ceremony. Captain Isaacs testified that he learned that appellant had attended the ceremony with S.R., the father of one of the juveniles in the facility who participated in the graduation ceremony, and was concerned that she was a family member of the resident. He considered her attendance a breach of security and was extremely concerned, and he contacted Internal Affairs to advise them. He also asked that the policy regarding familiarity be included in a future training session.

Appellant would have received the Fraternization Policy (R-9) on at least two occasions—first, when entering the facility and receiving the training manual, and at least one other time from staff training, when this topic was highlighted after Captain Isaacs learned of her attendance at the ceremony. She also received the Policy and Procedure manual (R-16), as evidenced by her signature during in-service training on May 8, 2002.

The most recent training conducted was attended by appellant, as evidenced by her signature on July 12, 2016 (R-17). After this training, another situation transpired that caused him to write her up, after she was observed getting out of a car driven by S.R., who had been seen visiting his son. After this happened Captain Isaacs reassigned appellant to a different area of the facility, as she had also been observed on multiple occasions on the fourth floor visiting the inmate. Discipline was then initiated because this is an extreme security concern, and he had personally observed appellant going to see the resident on multiple occasions. There are cameras all over the facility and they are monitored by supervisors.

Appellant was a supervisor with unfettered access to the facility, which officers do not have, as they are each assigned to a specific area. His biggest concern was the safety and security of the building, and as a supervisor, appellant was expected to know the rules.

Captain Isaacs testified that appellant also violated the Code of Ethics, in that she gave no prior notice of her relationship with the inmate's father, S.R., who had been coming to the facility for a few years. This was a huge security concern for him, as, among other things, the juvenile was incarcerated for having committed a very serious crime.

The Standards of Conduct within the Code of Ethics, Order 08-01, (R-10) on page 5 notes the prohibited associations and establishments. In particular, paragraph 10A on page 5 of that policy prohibits a social relationship with an immediate family member of people in the custody of the agency, and appellant violated that provision, as well as paragraph B, for her relationship with the juvenile. In law enforcement, personal relationships with those incarcerated or immediate family members can lead to undue pressure or blackmail, and create a serious breach of security.

Captain Isaacs agreed on cross-examination that with prior notification to the facility, relationships are not prohibited with the family of a resident or a resident. He did not know when appellant's relationship with the inmate's father began, but knew that he had been coming there for several years to see his son, and he had been observed on the camera system getting out of appellant's car. While appellant was not restricted from going to the floor that the juvenile was on, she was a supervisor of another floor, yet went up and spoke often to this particular inmate and did not talk to any of the more than forty-four other juveniles on that floor. One of Captain Isaacs's major security concerns was that the inmate in question had been found on multiple occasions with contraband, and it was clear that appellant had a relationship both with the juvenile and with his father. After the disciplinary process was commenced, then appellant provided a report indicating she was in a relationship with the inmate's father, but even if it had not been a romantic relationship it was still an egregious violation of the policy. The appearance of impropriety was a huge concern even before the investigation in terms of the security of the facility, because appellant could have been the one who brought the multiple items of contraband to the inmate that he has been caught with over the years.

Aundrea Williams

Investigator Williams has been employed for twenty-one years at the Essex County Juvenile Detention Center and has previously served as an officer, then a sergeant, a lieutenant, a captain, and an Internal Affairs investigator. He has been in Internal Affairs for nine years conducting investigations. His captain asked him to do an in-service training on the Code of Ethics related to the reporting duty where there are relationships with an inmate or family member. He conducted training on the Code of Ethics policy (R-10) in the Policy and Procedure manual and on the Fraternization Policy (R-9).

Investigator Williams testified that the investigation of appellant began on a Wednesday, a visitation day, after appellant was observed being dropped off by S.R., the father of the inmate. Appellant's vehicle was parked on Dickerson Street and he parked behind her car, a black Mercedes, and waited for S.R. to come out of the facility after visiting his son. Williams knew it was appellant's car because she is in it all of the time. He observed S.R. exit the facility and pull out in appellant's car, and he returned inside to look at the surveillance tape and took still photographs of appellant with S.R. (R-11.)

Within R-11, picture #1 is appellant wanding S.R. on July 13, 2016. Picture #2 is S.R. at 5:00 pm. on the same date. Picture #3 is the appellant checking lockers at 5:07 p.m., and #4 is of appellant swiping at 8:46 p.m. Picture #5 depicts appellant and S.R., who had pulled in to pick up appellant in her car. Picture #6 shows them getting in the car, with S.R. going in the passenger side at 8:51 p.m. Picture #7 shows appellant returning to the facility in her car at 9:39 p.m. and swiping back in, and picture #8, also at 9:39 p.m., shows appellant walking right back out of the building. Picture #9 shows appellant returning to the facility at 10:19 p.m., approximately forty minutes later, after having swiped back in from her break earlier. This is a violation of policy. Investigator Williams also made copies of the visitation log, which revealed that S.R. came to the facility often over three years to see his son, and when Williams compared this information to appellant's work schedule, he learned that S.R.'s visits often coincided with the days she worked. (R-12.)

A year or two earlier, the inmate, S.A., had been released on electronic detention, and when this happens the inmate has to provide his birth certificate; S.A.'s birth certificate shows S.R. as his father. (R-14.)

Investigator Williams testified that he contacted appellant through the union shop steward, Sergeant Lovejoy, and instructed appellant to write a memo regarding the relationship, which appellant did. (R-7.) He indicated that he has received other memos from officers in the past regarding relationships with juveniles at the facility. The purpose of the disclosure is to prevent retaliation, and for safety and security. Other officers have written letters before regarding their own children who were incarcerated, and when an officer has a relationship with someone in a facility they need to make certain they have no contact to prevent collusion.

Superintendent Gina Saunders

Superintendent Saunders has been in her position for almost three years and has been employed at the Essex County Juvenile Detention Center since 1996. She previously served as an assistant superintendent for five or six years, and prior to that as a captain, a lieutenant and a sergeant. Her responsibilities are similar to those of a warden, in that she runs the building, making sure that the facility has the proper amount of officers, medical and health facilities, social-services attention, education, and the like. She is responsible for the care, custody, and control of the residents.

With regard to the work schedule (R-13), it is the captain who determines who attends visitation. Nearly all sergeants have to report, and then the captain may send some back to the various floors. Captain Saunders testified that she is familiar with appellant's disciplinary history, which includes the current charges, which resulted in a removal effective July 9, 2016, and a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated November 7, 2016 (R-1) following the initial suspension (R-2). Her prior history included a settlement agreement entered into on November 19, 2015 (R-8), which included a one-year probationary period for compliance with all work standards and all policies and procedures. The superintendent noted that the current infraction is within that one-year probationary period.

Another prior disciplinary matter also resulted in a settlement in June 2013 (R-21), and in that case the charges were neglect of duty, incompetency/inefficiency, insubordination or serious breach of discipline, and willful violation of policies and procedures. Those charges were sustained and a settlement was entered into which resulted in a one-and-a-half-day suspension.

There was also a disciplinary matter in October 2008 (R-20) regarding violation of attendance policies and chronic or excessive absenteeism, as well as charges of inability to perform duties and neglect of duty, the latter two of which were dismissed in the settlement. That settlement resulted in a probationary period from November 1, 2008, to October 31, 2009, and a six-day suspension.

Superintendent Saunders testified that policies are given to all new employees, and any changes or new policies are circulated and need to be signed for. Employees are also trained on new policies and receive in-service training as required. Other employees have disclosed relationships before with inmates, including herself when her own nephew was there.

Credibility determinations

Appellant was available to testify, but did not do so. Nevertheless, the trier of fact must weigh the witnesses' credibility in order to make factual findings. Credibility is the value that the fact finder gives to testimony of a witness and contemplates an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Credible testimony must proceed from the mouth of a credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge, and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955); Gilson v. Gilson, 116 N.J. Eq. 556, 560 (E. & A. 1934). A fact finder is expected to base credibility decisions on his or her common sense and life experiences. State v. Daniels, 182 N.J. 80, 99 (2004). Credibility is not dependent on the number of witnesses who appeared, State v. Thompson, 59 N.J. 396, 411 (1971), and the finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness, In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521–22 (1950).

I found Captain Isaacs, Investigator Williams, and Superintendent Saunders to be extremely credible witnesses offering truthful testimony. Each testified clearly and concisely as to how each was involved in this matter and the steps taken to investigate this matter, and no competent evidence was presented to dispute any of their testimony. Accordingly, I FIND and adopt the entirety of the testimony of Captain Isaacs, Investigator Williams, and Superintendent Saunders as FACT.

I also FIND the following additional FACTS:

1. Officer Sakinah Beverett-Llanos has been employed as a juvenile detention officer since September 17, 2001. She is a graduate of the Correction Officer Training Academy.

2. On June 20, 2016, a graduation ceremony was held for the juvenile residents of the facility. The facility provides educational services to residents, and holds a graduation ceremony. Appellant attended the ceremony with S.R., the father of S.A., an inmate in the juvenile-detention facility who participated in the graduation ceremony. Her attendance was considered a breach of security by her superiors and Internal Affairs was contacted.

3. An in-service training session conducted on July 12, 2016, included review of the policy regarding familiarity and fraternization, a policy which appellant received on at least two occasions, including first when entering the facility, and on at least one other occasion during in-service training.

4. On July 13, 2016, the day after the in-service training session that appellant attended which included review of the policy regarding fraternization, appellant was observed getting out of her own car being driven by S.R., the father of the juvenile S.A. S.R. parked the vehicle after dropping off appellant and went in to visit his son. S.R. was later observed exiting the facility and driving away in appellant's car. On that date, when S.R. entered the facility to visit his inmate son, it was appellant who wanded him at the security checkpoint.

5. Later that date, at 8:46 p.m. appellant swiped out for her break. She then got into her car, with S.R. in the passenger seat, at 8:51 p.m. and pulled away. At 9:39 p.m. appellant returned to the facility and swiped back in, but then walked back out of the facility, a violation of policies and procedures. Appellant did not return to her post until after reentering the facility at 10:19 p.m., approximately one hour and thirty-three minutes after initially swiping out.

6. A review of the visitation log revealed that S.R. had visited his son often over the previous three years. When the information in the log was compared with the facility assignment schedule, it revealed that S.R.'s visits often coincided with dates that appellant worked.

7. S.A. has been caught on multiple occasions with contraband.

8. After these events, appellant was reassigned to a different area of the facility that she had been posted to, as she had also been observed on multiple occasions visiting the juvenile inmate on the fourth floor of the facility. This was considered to be an extreme security concern; a risk to the safety and security of the building; and a violation of the policies and procedures.

9. Appellant at this juncture had still failed to comply with the requirement of the Code of Ethics that she give prior notice of her relationship with an inmate's father. The report was eventually provided by appellant on July 15, 2016.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The New Jersey Civil Service Law protects classified employees from arbitrary dismissal and other onerous sanctions. Prosecutor's, Detectives & Investigators Ass'n v. Hudson Cnty. Bd. of Freeholders, 130 N.J. Super. 30, 41 (App. Div. 1974); Scancarella v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 24 N.J. Super. 65, 70 (App. Div. 1952). The law provides relief to civil service employees from public employers who may attempt to deprive them of their rights. Prosecutor's, supra, 130 N.J. Super. at 41. To this end, the law is liberally construed. Mastrobattista v. Essex Cnty. Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Consistent with this policy of civil service law, there is a requirement that in order for a public employee to be fined, suspended, or removed, the employer must show just cause for its proposed action. The Civil Service Commission is charged with the duty of ensuring that the reasons supporting disciplinary action are sufficient and not arbitrary, frivolous, or "likely to subvert the basic aims of the civil service program." Prosecutor's, supra, 130 N.J. Super. at 42 (quoting Kennedy v. Newark, 29 N.J. 178 N.J. 189–90 (1959)).

Public employees' rights and duties are governed and protected by the provisions of the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12-6, and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1 to 4A:2-6.3. However, public employees may be disciplined for a variety of offenses involving their employment, including the general causes for discipline as set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). An appointing authority may discipline an employee for sufficient cause, including failure to obey laws, rules, and regulations of the appointing authority. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). If sufficient cause is established, then a determination must be made on what is a reasonable penalty.

In disciplinary cases the appointing authority has the burden of both persuasion and production and must demonstrate by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that it had just cause to discipline the officer and lodge the charges. See Coleman v. E. Jersey State Prison, CSV 1571-03, Initial Decision (February 25, 2004) (citations omitted), adopted, Merit System Board (April 13, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; see also N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 560 (1982); In re Darcy, 114 N.J. Super. 454, 458 (App. Div. 1971); N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(2), -21; N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1, "burden of proof"; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. A preponderance of evidence has been defined as that which "generates belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Martinez v. Jersey City Police Dep't, CSV 7553-02, Initial Decision (October 27, 2003) (quoting Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959), rejected, Merit System Board (March 28, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>).

Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Standards of Conduct and Code of Ethics and Fraternizing Policy

The Essex County Juvenile Detention Standards of Conduct and Code of Ethics Order #08-01 states, in part:

> 10. Prohibited Associations and Establishments:
> b. Officers shall not knowingly commence or maintain a relationship with any person who is under criminal investigation, indictment, arrest or incarceration by this or another police or criminal justice agency, and/or who has an open and notorious criminal reputation in the community (for example, persons whom they know, should know or have reason to believe are involved in felonious activity), except as necessary to the performance of official duties, or where unavoidable because of familial relationships.

The Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Order #03-13, Fraternization, states, in part:

> Employees are [prohibited][1] from fraternizing, or socializing with the current residents and shall not indulge in over familiarity with current residents or socializing with the current residents and shall not indulge in over familiarity with current residents or permit residents to be unduly familiar with them. Fraternizing or socializing shall be identified but not limited to phone contact, U.S. Mail services, etc.

[1] The language in the Order states "permitted" however, as the remainder of the policy uses the word "prohibited" it is clear that this is a typographical error.

> Any employee who believes they may have inadvertently established a pattern of fraternizing with a current resident must immediately notify the facility Administrator in writing so the Administrator can determine the appropriate adjustment to work assignment, if warranted.
> Failure to comply with the above shall result in disciplinary action, up to and including termination.

In the within matter, respondent asserts, and I agree, that appellant violated the Essex County Juvenile Detention Standards of Conduct and Code of Ethics and the Fraternizing Policy. Appellant failed to disclose her relationship with S.R., the father of S.A., who was incarcerated in the facility. Appellant had training that included discussion about the prohibition against fraternization. There is credible witness testimony that appellant received at least two forms of training that informed her of her obligation to disclose the relationship with an inmate's father. Moreover, she had extended and repeated visits with the inmate, even after having been moved to a different unit, thereby affording him special attention for no reason. The County's significant obligations include the need to maintain safety and discourage preferential treatment, as well as prevent contraband from entering the facility. While appellant ultimately did submit an administrative report on July 15, 2016, acknowledging the relationship with S.R., it was untimely at best, and likely done in anticipation of disciplinary charges being brought. Accordingly, there is sufficient evidence in the record to support the charged violation of the Essex County Juvenile Detention Standards of Conduct and Code of Ethics Order #08-01, and Fraternizing Policy #03-13, and I, therefore, CONCLUDE that the charges are sustained.

Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee

"Conduct unbecoming" a public employee is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (Pa. 1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

Police officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576–77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons, and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

Respondent has charged Beverett-Llanos with the willful violation of Essex County Policies and Procedures by continually and consistently fraternizing with the father of an inmate who was incarcerated in the facility, and failing to notify respondent of the nature, extent, and history of their relationship despite the policy requiring her to do so. The testimony also established that on July 13, 2016, one day after an in-service training session which included review of the policy regarding familiarity and fraternization, appellant was seen emerging from her own vehicle, driven by S.R., who then went in to visit his son. As S.R. entered the facility, it was appellant who wanded him. Also later that day, appellant swiped out for her break at 8:46 p.m., got into her car with S.R., swiped back in at 9:39 p.m. and went back out of the facility, returning at 10:19 p.m., one hour and thirty-three minutes after swiping out. I CONCLUDE that this conduct amply supports the charge of conduct unbecoming, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

Neglect of Duty

Neglect of duty has been interpreted to mean that "an employee . . . neglected to perform an act required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge." In re Glenn, CSV 5072-07, Initial Decision (February 5, 2009) (citation omitted), adopted, Civil Service Commission (March 27, 2009), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. The term "neglect" means a deviation from the normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977). "Duty" means conformance to "the legal standard of reasonable conduct in the light of the apparent risk." Wytupeck v. Camden, 25 N.J. 450, 461 (1957) (citation omitted). Neglect of duty can arise from omitting to perform a required duty as well as from misconduct or misdoing. Cf. State v. Dunphy, 19 N.J. 531, 534 (1955). Neglect of duty does not require an intentional or willful act; however, there must be some evidence that the employee somehow breached a duty owed to the performance of the job.

In the within matter, the record reflects that appellant was observed on multiple occasions leaving the floor she was assigned to, and visiting S.A. on another floor. As a supervisor, appellant had access to the entire facility, and was not restricted to her floor; however, her primary responsibility was the safety and security of the floor to which she was assigned. When she visited S.A., she was not performing her duties at her own post. This behavior from a supervisor clearly could adversely affect the morale of the facility and undermine public respect.

Moreover, on July 13, 2016, appellant swiped out for her break at 8:46 p.m., swiped back in at 9:39 p.m., and then left again, returning at 10:19 p.m., one hour and thirty-three minutes after swiping out.

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the charge of neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), should be and hereby is sustained.

Other Sufficient Cause

Having determined that appellant violated the Essex County Juvenile Detention Standards of Conduct and Code of Ethics, as well as the Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Fraternization Policy, I CONCLUDE that appellant has given other sufficient cause for disciplinary action, and that the appointing authority has demonstrated by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the charge of a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause, must be and is hereby sustained.

PENALTY

In attempting to determine if a penalty is reasonable, the employee's past record may be reviewed for guidance in determining the appropriate penalty for the current specific offense. The concept of progressive disciplinary action is described in West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 519 (1962). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his duties may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). Depending upon the incident complained of and the employee's past record, major discipline may include suspension, removal, etc. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522–24.

In the present case, there are several instances of a prior disciplinary action against appellant. On May 10, 2013, appellant was suspended for 1.5 days following charges of neglect of duty, incompetency or inefficiency, insubordination or serious breach of discipline, and willful violation of policies and procedures (R-21). Appellant was also suspended for six days effective October 21, 2008, and placed on a one-year probationary period for November 1, 2008, through October 31, 2009, following charges of chronic or excessive absenteeism or lateness and violation of County attendance policies and procedures and absent without official leave (R-20). Appellant also entered into an agreement with the County on November 19, 2015, which included another one-year probationary period, to resolve time and attendance issues, and included a reiteration of appellant's obligation to abide by and adhere to the County policies and procedures.[2]

There is sufficient credible evidence that appellant should have been fully familiar with the policy regarding fraternization, and a more detailed analysis of the appellant's past disciplinary history is unnecessary since it is clear that removal is the proper penalty. Appellant was in a position where she was entrusted with the supervision of juvenile inmates in a secure facility. If there was any question at all regarding the appropriateness of a relationship, it should have been disclosed, as the safety and security of the facility must be maintained. The complete and utter lack of judgment displayed by appellant in wanding S.R. at the security checkpoint on the way in to see his son, a few minutes after he had dropped appellant off and parked her car, is staggering. Appellant placed her friendship with S.R. ahead of her duties as a juvenile detention officer, when her professional responsibilities should have come before the friendship. It is imperative to prevent correction personnel from being manipulated by individuals in the system and risking compromising the safety and security of all those in the system.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's action in removing the appellant from her position was justified.

DECISION AND ORDER

The appointing authority has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence the charges against appellant with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), as well as Essex County Juvenile Detention Standard of Conduct and Code of Ethics order #08-01 and Essex County Juvenile Detention Center Fraternization Policy #03-13, and it is ORDERED that the charges be and hereby are sustained and the penalty of removal is AFFIRMED.

WHEREAS, the City brought disciplinary charges against Mr. Wiltshire on or about October 27, 2015, as amended on or about November 12, 2015 (the "Disciplinary Charges"),

WHEREAS, Mr. Wiltshire appealed the decision sustaining the Disciplinary Charges those charges to the Office of Administrative Law, under OAL Docket No. CSR 13445-2017S, entitled In the Matter of Donald Brad Wiltshire and the City of Ocean City (Fire Department) ("OAL Appeal");

If effectuated by December 1, 2017, the City is not be required to reimburse Mr. Wiltshire for his COBRA payment for that month. Mr. Wiltshire agrees to cooperate and to complete any necessary forms or paperwork of him in connection with that application. Should the PFRS reject said application, Mr. Wiltshire agrees to immediately file his application for retirement with the PFRS. The City agrees to fully cooperate and support Mr. Wiltshire's pension application and will acknowledge in its employer's certification or other necessary forms to PFRS that Mr. Mr. Wiltshire's last day of employment with the City is November 30, 2017.

Mr. Barbone and Ms. Rau:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlement regarding Donald Brad Wiltshire from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding it to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, while the settlement indicates that Mr. Wiltshire agrees, inter alia, to resign in good standing effective November 30, 2017. However, the settlement does not specifically reflect how to record the time period from the original date of removal (August 15, 2017) to the date of resignation. In this regard, before a settlement can be acknowledged by the Civil Service Commission, all periods of time must be specifically accounted for in an employee's personnel record. For example, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Paul Dzialo, Camden County Police Department

CSC Docket No. 2016-4333
OAL Docket No. CSV 09072-16

ISSUED: April 20, 2018 (WR)

The appeal of Paul Dzialo, a County Police Officer, Camden County Police Department, of his 20 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kathleen M. Calemmo (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on December 21, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant, and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on March 27, 2018, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the 20 working day suspension. Rather, the Commission modified the penalty to a 10 working day suspension.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee; incompetency, inefficiency or failure to preform duties; insubordination; neglect of duty; other sufficient cause; and violation of various departmental rules and regulations. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that on November 12, 2015, the appellant failed to follow its canine policy, which resulted in the appellant firing a shotgun without regard to his residential surroundings. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case.

In the initial decision, the ALJ found that, on November 12, 2015, the appellant was called to aid an officer searching for a loose dog which was reported as aggressive. The officer and the appellant located the dog rummaging through trash, but soon lost sight of it. The officers searched for the dog with their weapons drawn; the appellant was armed with a shotgun. Thereafter, the dog charged at the officers through a partially-opened gate and the officers killed the dog with their firearms. The appellant fired his shotgun at least three times. Curtis May, a Detective with the Internal Affairs Unit of the Camden County Police Department, testified that he investigated the November 12, 2015 incident and obtained a video recording of the incident recorded from private cameras. His investigation revealed that the dog that was killed was known to residents and shot in its own backyard. The investigation also revealed that a shotgun pellet marking on the top of a fence indicated that the appellant "was not staying down on the target when firing," in contradiction to departmental policy, which requires that the shotgun be pointed in a downward direction when fired to prevent the gun from recoiling upward when discharged. He also testified that a pellet fired from the appellant's shotgun had struck the window of a residence, but did not penetrate it. May further testified that the appointing authority's canine policy mandates deadly force as a last resort if a hostile dog is encountered and concluded that the appellant violated the policy because he did not use other options to control the dog other than deadly force.

Lieutenant Kevin Lutz, the commander of the appointing authority's training bureau testified that the appellant required training after the internal affairs' investigation concluded. After completing the training, Lutz testified that the appellant was reluctant to acknowledge any wrongdoing or mistakes on his part and was not receptive to the training. He also testified that the appellant had better options to counter the dog's threat other than deadly force. The appellant testified that the dog was aggressive towards him. The appellant indicated that he believed that he was in danger despite having distance between himself and the dog. When the dog lunged at him, he tried to retreat but the dog approached him so quickly that he had no choice but to shoot it. He felt that the training was more akin to an internal affairs investigation than remedial action. Given the circumstances as they existed at the time of the incident, the appellant testified that he made the correct choice to use deadly force.

As set forth in detail in her determination, the ALJ found all three witnesses credible. The appellant's arming of the shotgun made him less capable of employing non-lethal means of dealing with the dog. The ALJ also found that the appellant searched for the dog with his weapon drawn when there were no alarms or signs of an emergent situation. The dog lunged at the officers, which gave them no choice but to discharge their weapons. One pellet fired from the appellant's shotgun struck the window of an occupied house. The appellant was not receptive to the mandatory training.

Based on her findings, the ALJ upheld the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee; incompetency, inefficiency or failure to preform duties; neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause. However, the ALJ dismissed the insubordination charge, finding that there was no testimony to support the charge. The ALJ similarly dismissed departmental charges relating to code of ethics, standards of conduct, general responsibilities, work expectations, prohibited activity on duty, use of force and all other conduct because there was no testimony that supported the charges. In consideration of the possible consequences of discharging a shotgun in a residential neighborhood and the appellant's disregard for his training, the ALJ concluded that the imposition of a 20 working day suspension was an appropriate penalty.

In his exceptions, the appellant argues that he exercised due care during the incident and his conduct did not violate any rule or regulations. He contends that his use of a shotgun during the incident was justified and he operated the weapon properly. The appellant reiterates that his possession of the shotgun, which must be held with two hands, limited the non-lethal options he could have employed. He also argues that he followed the departmental canine policy as best as the circumstances permitted. Furthermore, the appellant asserts that a 20 working day suspension is unreasonable and not commensurate with the circumstances of the incident. The appellant states that he believed that his actions during the incident were justified and he should not be punished "for standing up for what he believed." Accordingly, the appellant requests that the charges against him be dismissed and the penalty disregarded.[1]

In its reply, the appointing authority argues that the ALJ correctly concluded that the appellant violated its canine policy. Moreover, the appointing authority states that the appellant fired his shotgun, which "hit occupied houses and a fence" and contends that it was the appellant's responsibility to keep the public safe. Thus, the appointing authority argues that the charges against the appellant were appropriate. Finally, the appointing authority contends that the ALJ correctly upheld the 20 working day suspension.

[1] In the initial decision, the ALJ dismissed the appellant's argument that alleged violation of the appointing authority's internal rules and regulations violated the 45 day rule. See N.J.S.A. 40A:14-147. The ALJ found that because the November 12, 2015 incident involved a firearm, it was automatically forwarded to the Camden County Prosecutor's Office for review, which remanded it back to the appointing authority on December 28, 2015. Due to the appellant's unavailability, the appointing authority's internal affairs bureau was not able to interview the appellant until February 10, 2017. The ALJ found that the appointing authority did not have sufficient information to charge the appellant until after his interview. As noted above, the PNDA was issued on March 10, 2017, which was within the 45 day limit. The appellant raises the same objection in his exceptions. However, the Commission finds that the appointing authority did not violate the 45 day rule for the reasons set forth by the ALJ in the initial decision.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's determination of the charges. In this case, there is nothing in the record or in the parties' exceptions which convinces the Commission that the ALJ's factual findings regarding the incident and the appellant's subsequent training were not based on the evidence or were otherwise in error.

With regard to the penalty, the Commission's review is also de novo. In addition to considering the seriousness of the underlying incident, the Commission utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the appellant's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d 463, 465 (CSV) 1996. Although the Commission applies the concept of progressive discipline in determining the level and propriety of penalties, an individual's prior disciplinary history may be outweighed if the infraction at issue is of a serious nature. Henry v. Rahway, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980). It is settled that the principle of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." In the instant matter, the record reflects that the appellant has no prior discipline. However, the appellant is a law enforcement officer, and as such, is held to a higher standard of public duty. This standard includes upholding an image of utmost confidence and trust, since county Police Officers hold highly visible and sensitive positions within the community. The public expects and demands Police Officers to follow orders and exhibit a respect for rules, regulations, procedures, and policies. See Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), cert. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). See also In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567 (1990). Thus, the appellant's conduct in public with a deadly weapon should be beyond reproach. Moreover, it is particularly worrisome that the appellant failed to see any wrongdoing with his conduct. However, based on the dismissal of the charge of insubordination and many of the departmental charges as well as the appellant's lack of a prior disciplinary record, the Commission finds that a 10 working day suspension is appropriate under the circumstances. This major discipline should serve as a sufficient reminder that any future infractions may lead to further disciplinary action, up to and including removal.

Since the penalty has been reduced, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super, 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, while the penalty was modified, the Commission has sustained charges and imposed major discipline. Therefore, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. See In the Matter of Bazyt Bergus (MSB, decided December 19, 2000), aff'd, Bazyt Bergus v. City of Newark, Docekt No. A-3382-00T5 (App. Div. June 3, 2002); In the Matter of Mario Simmons (MSB, decided October 26, 1999). See also, In the Matter of Mario Simmons (MSB, decided October 26, 1999). See also, In the Matter of Kathleen Rhoads (MSB, decided September 10, 2002) (Counsel fees denied where removal on charges of insubordination, inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee and neglect of duty was modified to a 15-day suspension on the charge of neglect of duty).

ORDER

The Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in suspending Paul Dzialo for 20 working days was not justified. Therefore, the Commission modifies the 20 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted 10 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

BEFORE KATHLEEN M. CALEMMO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Paul S. Dzialo, Jr. (Dzialo), a Police Officer with the Camden County Police Department (Department), appeals a twenty-day suspension he received as major discipline for his failure to follow the canine policy that resulted in the use of deadly force; for firing a shotgun without regard to the residential background and the potential for ricochet; and the subsequent Internal Affairs investigation surrounding same. The Department sustained the following charges: Incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1); Insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); Conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); Neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); and Other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The Department also determined that Dzialo violated the following Rules and Regulations: 1:5 code of ethics; 3:1.1 standards of conduct; 3:1.5(f) general responsibilities; 3:1.6 neglect of duty; 3:1.10 obedience to rules and regulations; 3:1.32 work expectation; 3.2.1(k) prohibited activity on duty; 3.2.20 use of force; and 3.2.21 all other conduct. Dzialo maintained that his use of deadly force comported with the Department's regulations; specifically, the use of force policy because an officer may use a firearm to destroy an animal when the animal poses an imminent threat of significant bodily harm to human life. Dzialo believed that lethal force against the pit bull was his only alternative to protect his life, Officer Levy's life, and the lives of those around him.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 9, 2016, the Department issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) setting forth the charges and specifications made against Dzialo. (J-1.) Following the departmental hearing held on May 4, 2016, the Department issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) on June 7, 2016, sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice and suspending Dzialo from employment for twenty working days. (J-2.) Appellant appealed on June 9, 2016. The matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on June 17, 2016 for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52: 14F-1 to 13. The hearing scheduled for December 12, 2016 was adjourned at the request of the appellant with the consent of the Department. The hearings were held on May 2, 2017 and July 19, 2017. The record remained open to allow the parties to submit post-hearing submissions. The record closed on November 6, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSIONS AND FINDINGS

The following facts are not disputed. At approximately 7:00 a.m. on November 12, 2015, Officer Levy was stationed at Yorkship Square in Camden. He was approached by a mother walking with her child who said that a pit bull was loose. Levy radioed for animal control to be dispatched to the location because the dog was reported as aggressive. Levy also contacted the command center, Real Time Tactical Information Operations Center, (RT-TIOC) to determine whether surveillance cameras could be positioned in the courtyard where the dog was seen. He then radioed for assistance from an officer with a shotgun.

Dzialo, who was patrolling in the vicinity and assigned to carry a shotgun, responded to Levy's call for assistance. Dzialo parked his patrol car, retrieved his shotgun, and walked over towards Levy. Levy showed Dzialo where the dog was rummaging through trash next to a sidewalk where pedestrians were walking. The officers kept the dog in their line of vision and maintained a safe distance. While the dog rummaged in the trash, it did not make any aggressive moves. After approximately six minutes, the dog lost interest in the trash, and noticed Dzialo. Dzialo backed up away from the dog, whom he described as snarling and menacing. The dog wandered off and the officers lost sight of him. As they searched for the dog, the officers had their weapons drawn and ready. Dzialo was holding his shotgun with both hands. The dog darted out from behind a fence with a partially opened gate towards the two officers, who immediately discharged their weapons. The dog was killed. The initial investigation showed that Dzialo was carrying a department issued shotgun and Levy was armed with a department issued handgun. Dzialo discharged his shotgun at least three times and Levy discharged his handgun nine times.

TESTIMONY

Detective Curtis A. May (May) is assigned to the Internal Affairs Unit of the Camden County Police Department. As part of standard operating procedures, Internal Affairs was assigned to investigate the November 12, 2015, incident because the officers involved discharged their weapons. May was assigned to investigate. His investigation was summarized in an Investigation Summary dated November 17, 2015. (R-1.) Although the memorandum was dated November 17, 2015, the report was not fully completed until March 17, 2016, as noted by the dates of entry for subsequent events. At 7:45 a.m. on the morning of the incident, May was informed by the RT-TOIC Commander that Dzialo and Levy discharged their weapons while responding to a complaint about a loose canine. May arrived at the scene approximately ten minutes after the canine had been killed; the area had been cordoned off and secured. With his team of investigators, May canvased the area of the shooting, and conducted interviews with nearby residents. From the interviews, May learned that the pit bull was known to the residents and that it was shot in its own backyard. The Department had no cameras in this area, but the detectives found private cameras in the secured area. One video was obtained from the building manager for 1201 and 1185 Yorkship Square apartments, who had installed cameras on the outside of the buildings facing the area where the incident occurred. (R-2.) The other video was retrieved by May from a home owner whose home was equipped with a camera connected to his laptop. He allowed May to copy his video for any relevant footage. (R-3.)

As the video from the Yorkship Square apartments was played at the hearing, May offered testimony. (R-2.) The video opened with the dog rummaging through some trash at approximately 7:00 a.m. Levy is shown to arrive on the scene. The dog remained within the sight of Levy. The video showed Levy as he approached Dzialo, who arrived with his shotgun. The dog remained occupied with the trash until approximately 7:30 a.m. when the dog started to run down the alley. In the next scene both officers appear to be looking down around the corner of the building. On cross-examination, it was established that 1185 Yorkship is an apartment building that has an archway cut through to Yorkship Square.

The second video viewed at the hearing was secured from a private resident who lived close to where the dog resided. (R-3.) The video's angle was directed towards fencing that was later determined to be the dog's backyard. The video depicted the dog walking down the right side of a truck then disappearing behind a fence at 7:27 a.m. May learned by canvassing the neighborhood after the shooting that the dog had entered the back yard of its residence. At 7:28 a.m., Levy and Dzialo appear on the video to be checking under a vehicle and then moving towards the fence. The dog suddenly emerged from a partially open gate and the officers step backward and simultaneously discharged their weapons. Levy appeared to be making a radio transmission as the officers walked toward the fence when the dog charged again and the officers discharged their weapons for a second time. After the shooting, the video showed that the officers stayed on the scene until the investigative unit arrived.

As part of the investigation, the Crime Scene Unit photographed the area where the incident occurred. (R. 6.) The photographs showed green markers that were placed by the investigating officers marking where the shell casings from the handgun and shotgun wadding from the shotgun had fallen. (R -6 at 20-55, 94-100, and 103-108.) The picture of a wooden fence is marked where the shotgun rounds struck the fence. (R-6 at 56, 68, 69, 72-83, 90-93.) May testified that the shotgun marking on the top of the fence indicated that Dzialo was not staying down on the target when firing. To explain his testimony, May demonstrated how to properly hold a shotgun. He explained that a shotgun when fired discharges twelve pellets that spread, protocol requires that the shotgun be pointed in a downward direction. The downward trajectory is also important because it allows the shooter to use his weight to balance the "kick" from the shotgun and prevent the gun from popping upward when discharged. The pictures of the deceased canine were taken in his yard where he died. (R-6 at 57-66.) A picture of a residence located behind the fence showed taping where a shotgun pellet had struck the window but did not go through into the residence. (R-6 at 67, 73-82.)

May testified about his familiarity with the Department's canine policy. (R-7.) If a hostile dog is encountered, the policy is as follows:

1. Remain still and face the animal if it advances;
2. Use voice commands;
3. Spray the department-authorized oleoresin capsicum (OC) spray in the dog's face;
4. Utilize the department-authorized baton;
5. Strike the dog using the baton;
6. Hold the baton straight out as distraction;
7. Use a CED (Taser);
8. Kick at the dog; and
9. Deadly force.

May testified that Dzialo did not properly follow the canine encounters policy (R-7) because no verbal commands were given to the dog; no OC spray was used; and the baton was never engaged. The only option utilized was deadly force.

May further testified that Dzialo violated the specific charges enumerated on the PNDA (J-1) by not following the canine policy and the Rules and Regulations regarding the "use of force." Specifically, he did not use verbal commands, discuss less lethal options, and fired into a backdrop with occupied houses. May testified that according to what he saw on the video, the dog was not aggressive by the trash; there were no civilians in the area; and no one was seeking assistance; therefore, the officers should have waited for animal control.

When asked on cross-examination how Dzialo could have utilized the techniques of the canine policy with both his hands on the shotgun, May responded that he could still use time and distance. However, between the two officers, Levy was in a better position to use OC spray or the baton because a handgun can be operated with one hand. In responding to the questions, May stated that even after they lost sight of the dog, there was no reason for the officers to put themselves in harm's way by looking for the dog because there was no immediate emergency. It was established on cross-examination that use of force is justified when an officer reasonably believes such action is immediately necessary to protect himself against imminent danger or death or serious bodily harm. May testified that when interviewing Levy and Dzialo, both officers stated they believed their lives or the life of their partner was in imminent danger. However, May testified that the officers were responsible for the whole continuum of events, and should not have put themselves in a position where their only option was deadly force. As recorded by May in his Investigation Summary, the officers stated that they did not discuss the use of less lethal options. (R-1.)

Lieutenant Kevin Lutz (Lutz) is the commander of the CCPD's Training Bureau and the Deputy Director of the Camden County College Police Academy. Lutz testified that after Internal Affairs concluded its investigation, he was notified by May that Levy and Dzialo required training. Prior to the first training session, Lutz was given a summary of the incident but had not reviewed the video recordings. He testified that from his informal conversation with both officers at the training, he was given the impression that the dog was a threat to the public. Following the training session, he watched the video and had a completely different impression about the aggressiveness of the canine.

After meeting with his superiors to discuss his concerns, the outcome was to conduct a second training session. Lutz testified that he would have conducted the first training session differently had he viewed the video first. He testified that he wanted to make sure that the officers understood what they did wrong. Lutz testified on cross-examination that he encountered hundreds of loose pit bulls in Camden over the course of his career and the goal is always containment not putting yourself in harm's way. At the second training, Lutz played the video to Levy and Dzialo in the presence of the union president. According to Lutz, Dzialo was reluctant to acknowledge any wrongdoing or mistakes. This was problematic for Lutz because he testified that he was not imposing discipline but trying to prevent an incident like this from happening again. He further testified that the training is not optional. Training is required after a determination is made that an officer violated department policy. Lutz testified that it is his job to make sure the violation is corrected.

Following the training session, Lutz prepared a Performance Notice dated March 16, 2016. (R-10.) Lutz wrote that Dzialo was not receptive to training because he did not accept that he did anything wrong. While Lutz believed that the actions of the officers caused the exigency of the circumstances that resulted in lethal force. Lutz took the greatest exception to the firing of the rounds into the backdrop of the houses. As interpreted by Lutz, the video showed that the last round fired by Dzialo was done while the shotgun was being held in an upward position towards an occupied house. (R-10.) He felt obligated to impress upon Dzialo that there was a better course of action. Namely, slow down, create a perimeter, and have less lethal options ready if they were to encounter the dog. Lutz testified that he equated the officers' action to be akin to hunting the dog so when they encountered the dog in the backyard they had no other choice but to shoot.

According to Lutz, Dzialo violated the Department's Rules and Regulations pertaining to the use of force in dealing with canines. He determined there was no imminent threat because the dog was not menacing the public. On cross-examination, Lutz acknowledged that the videos he watched were from stationary cameras without audio so there could have been interactions between the officers and the canine that were not captured. Dzialo told Lutz during the training that the dog acted aggressive towards him.

Paul S. Dzialo, Jr. (Dzialo) was a police officer, employed for two and one-half years by CCPD. On November 12, 2015, Dzialo responded to Levy's radio call for assistance. When he arrived at the scene with his shotgun, as directed, he saw Levy standing in the archway. Levy directed him to where the dog was rummaging through trash. Levy also told him that he had called animal control. Dzialo understood that for an immediate response from animal control, the policy required that the animal be kept within your line of sight. Initially, Dzialo kept distance from the dog as his barrier. After the dog lost interest in the trash, he noticed Dzialo and showed aggression by snarling and growling and its hair was sticking up in an intimidating manner. Dzialo stood his ground while the dog stared at him. It appeared that the dog lost interest in Dzialo, but he came back, snarling and growling. At this point, Dzialo had enough distance between himself and the dog, but he still felt that he was in danger. He stated that there were no civilians around, but he had kept about three people away from the area. Dzialo stated that when he left his position, people started walking through the archway. The video showed a young man walking with his backpack. Dzialo described the area where the dog went as a "U" shaped courtyard. Most of the buildings are connected but there is a section where the houses are detached. The officers lost sight of the dog as it went behind some parked vehicles in the courtyard. Dzialo bent down and looked underneath a parked vehicle. He stated he was carrying his shotgun at the "low ready" meaning that it was pointed at the ground. When they could not locate the dog, Dzialo believed the dog may have broken the perimeter and gone back out onto the street. They walked passed the fence without realizing that the dog was behind it. He testified that the dog came out from behind the fence and lunged at them. They started to back up and create distance, but the dog was rapidly approaching so they had no choice but to shoot. At the time, Dzialo discharged his shotgun, he believed he did not have the ability to use less lethal means to protect himself or Levy. He was in fear for his life and the life of his partner.

Dzialo testified that the first training consisted of nothing more than reviewing the policies and procedures to make sure that he understood them. The next day, he was told of the need for a second training because Lutz watched the videos and wanted to go over things. The second training was completely different. Dzialo stated that this training felt like an Internal Affairs interrogation and not a training session. Dzialo testified that hindsight is "twenty-twenty," but when on the street, split second decisions are required. He felt that given the circumstances, his decision was the right one. There was no way of knowing that the dog had returned to its home. He testified that he believed the dog had left the area and posed a threat to the community. The video did not accurately portray the entire situation because it only captured a single angle. On cross-examination, Dzialo stated that he did not recall telling Lutz at the first training that it was his intention to walk through the back yard to Octagon Avenue and he did not put that information in his statements. Dzialo prepared a narrative of the event for Detective May and a Firearms Discharge Report. (R-1 and R-11.) However, the February 10, 2016, entry in Detective May's Investigation Summary, taken from a recorded interview with Dzialo, contained language that Dzialo believed the dog had walked along a path out of the court yard on to another street. (R-1.)

FINDINGS OF FACT

Credibility is best described as that quality of testimony or evidence which makes it worthy of belief. The Supreme Court of New Jersey considered the issue of credibility in In Re Estate of Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). The Court pronounced:

> Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances.

See also, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, (1954), State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6 (App. Div.1955).

In order to assess credibility, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Furthermore, a trier-of-fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura- Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

In the present matter, the Department witnesses, May and Levy, gave detailed, concise informative testimony regarding the policies and procedures governing the situation and training of employees. Their testimony was consistent with the documentary evidence of the incident. Appellant Dzialo testified about his observations on the scene and his sense of aggression directed towards him by the canine.

In reviewing the record, and after having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

1. At approximately 7:00 a.m. in the morning on November 12, 2015, Dzialo responded to a radio call for assistance from Levy with instructions to bring a shotgun due to a loose aggressive canine.

2. Levy and Dzialo are of equal rank, but, Levy made the call for assistance, requested the shotgun, notified animal control, and reported the need for cameras.

3. Dzialo carried the shotgun which limited his options to employ less lethal force.

4. Dzialo initially used distance and sight to contain the canine.

5. Dzialo and Levy did not have any discussions about the canine policy or the use of less lethal methods.

6. There was only one complaint about an aggressive loose dog that occurred prior to Dzialo's arrival on the scene.

7. Dzialo never conducted interviews in the neighborhood or questioned any of the people in the area about information relating to the dog while he was observing the dog rummage through the trash.

8. Dzialo and Levy went searching for the canine with weapons drawn when there were no alarms or any other signs of an emergent situation.

9. When Dzialo and Levy approached the fence, the dog startled them and lunged at them, giving them no choice but to discharge their weapons.

10. Dzialo discharged his shotgun at least three times at the charging canine against a backdrop of houses and one of the pellets from his shotgun struck the window of an occupied house.

11. Dzialo was not receptive to the training mandated after the November 12, 2015 incident.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20, and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2.

Appellant raises the issue that the alleged violation of the internal rules and regulations should be dismissed because the Department failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 40A:14-147. The statute provides in pertinent part that a complaint charging a violation of internal rules and regulations "shall be filed no later than the 45th day after the date on which the person filing the complaint obtained sufficient information to file the matter upon which the complaint is based." Id. (emphasis added.) However, the rule contains an exception when there is a concurrent criminal investigation:

> The 45-day time limit shall not apply if an investigation of a law enforcement officer for a violation of the internal rules or regulations of the law enforcement unit is included directly or indirectly within a concurrent investigation of that officer for a violation of the criminal laws of this State. The 45-day limit shall begin on the day after the disposition of the criminal investigation." Id.

The November 12, 2015 incident involved the discharge of a firearm, consequently, it was automatically forwarded to the Camden County Prosecutor's Office for review. On December 28, 2015, Camden County Prosecutor's Office remanded it back to CCPD. However, due to Dzialo's unavailability, CCPD's Internal Affairs was unable to interview him until February 10, 2016. Dzialo was out of work due to a back injury from January 6, 2016 through January 30, 2016. Once he returned to duty, he was interviewed on February 10, 2016. Dzialo was served with a PNDA on March 10, 2016. I FIND that CCPD did not have sufficient information until after the February 10, 2016 interview to file the complaint. Furthermore, since there was no appeal to the Commissioner for interim relief at the time the charges were brought pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(e), procedural irregularities are deemed waived. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that because CCPD did not have "sufficient information" until Dzialo's interview on February 10, 2016, the PNDA filed on March 10, 2016 was within the forty-five-day time limit. In addition, any objections to the timeliness of the internal charges are waived.

Appellant also maintains that the mandatory training constituted a punishment so the suspension for the same violations arising from the same incident is barred by the Double Jeopardy Clause of the United States and New Jersey Constitutions. In support of his argument, appellant relies on State v. Eisenman, 153 N.J. 462, 468 (1997). In Eisenman, the New Jersey Supreme Court held that if an act is remedial and rehabilitative in both its essential purpose and its essential effect, it cannot be viewed as punishment triggering the protections against double jeopardy of the state and federal constitutions. See, State v. Black, 153 N.J. 438, 451 (1998). After the New Jersey Supreme Court heard oral argument in Eisenman and Black, the United States Supreme Court decided Hudson v. United States, 522 U.S. 93, 99 (1997) wherein the majority "reestablished the traditional rule that whether a sanction is subject to double jeopardy restraints depends on whether that sanction essentially constitutes a criminal penalty." The mandatory training required by CCPD was not a criminal penalty. As supported by the testimony of Lutz and May, its purpose was remedial and rehabilitative. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the training herein did not trigger the protections against double jeopardy.

The appointing authority bears the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co, 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

In the present case, Dzialo was charged with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1); insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); and other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The Department also determined that Dzialo violated Camden County Police Department Rules and Regulations as follows: 1:5 code of ethics; 3:1.1 standards of conduct; 3:1.5(f) general responsibilities; 3:1.6 neglect of duty; 3:1.10 obedience to rules and regulations; 3:1.32 work expectation; 3.2.1(k) prohibited activity on duty; 3.2.20 use of force: and 3.2.21 all other conduct. Although the same specifications support each of the charges and they are not compartmentalized, I will discuss each charge in turn.

Dzialo was charged with violating N.J.S.A. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. N.J.S.A.

4A:2-2.3(a)(1) is written in the disjunctive; therefore, a finding that Dzialo failed to perform his duties would be enough to sustain the charge. As specifically prescribed, it was Dzialo's duty to observe and obey all laws and ordinances, all rules and regulations, and orders of the Department. In his Performance Notice, Lutz wrote that Dzialo violated the canine encounters and use of force directives. (R-7.) In this case, there was one civilian complaint about a loose pit bull over a period of approximately forty minutes. In assessing any situation in the field, Dzialo must be able to recognize an appropriate sense of urgency and respond accordingly. In encountering a hostile dog, the Department's witnesses both testified that containment is the favored policy until animal control arrives. Dzialo admitted to Lutz and May that he never had any discussions with Levy on the scene about employing the defensive tactics set forth in the policy. In addition, before utilizing deadly force, consideration must be given to the possibility of critically injuring an officer or bystander by a missed shot. Consideration must also be given to the background and the possibility of ricochet. In his interview with May, Dzialo stated that he considered the backdrop but did not take ricochet from the shotgun into account. (R-1.) From the testimony and the video, Dzialo's focus was fixed on finding the canine, without consideration of the above components of the canine policy. He fired his shotgun into a backdrop of residential buildings and a round struck a window of an occupied home. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Department has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Dzialo violated the Canine Encounters directive dated October 9, 2015 (R-7); and Rule 3.2.20 use of force and its corresponding directive dated January 28, 2013 (R-8), and therefore, proved the charge of failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1).

Dzialo was also charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), insubordination. Insubordination can be defined as intentional disobedience or refusal to accept reasonable orders, assaulting or resisting authority, disrespect or use of insulting or abusive language to a supervisor. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971). There was no testimony to support this charge. I CONCLUDE that the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) does not apply to the facts of the present case. The charge of violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) is hereby DISMISSED.

Dzialo was charged with "conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or tends to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). The New Jersey Supreme Court, in In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1980), recognized that the obligation to act in a responsible manner is especially compelling in a case involving a law enforcement official:

> [A] police officer is a special kind of public employee. His primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law. He carries a service revolver on his person and is constantly called upon to exercise tact, restraint and good judgment in his relationship with the public. He represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public, particularly in a small community (quoting Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966)).

Dzialo testified that there were civilians in the area, but he never questioned anyone about the dog. If Dzialo had asked a few questions, he might have learned that the dog lived in the neighborhood. The primary concern from the testimony of May and Lutz was that Dzialo did not consider a less lethal option during the entire continuum of events. The judgment of both officers to look for the dog with weapons drawn when no emergency existed showed a disregard for policy and poor judgment. Lutz testified that searching for the dog with weapons drawn was akin to hunting. Anytime an officer is carrying a weapon at "low ready" as was Dzialo, he must exercise good judgment and be conscious of his surroundings. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Dzialo's conduct rose to the level of conduct unbecoming a public employee, and that CCPD has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Dzialo was also charged with neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for neglect of duty, but the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee failed to perform an act required by the description of their job title. Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure to perform a duty and includes official misconduct or misdoing, as well as negligence. Generally, the term "negligent" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977). Neglect of duty implies nonperformance of some official duty imposed upon a public employee, not merely commission of an imprudent act. Rushin v. Bd. of Child Welfare, 65 N.J. Super. 504, 515 (App. Div. 1961). The stated purpose of the canine policy was "to present officers with tactical options for dealing with a hostile animal." Dzialo was duty bound to obey the rules and regulations of CCPD. His failure to implement the policies found in the Canine Encounter directive caused a fatal encounter with the canine that could have been avoided by practicing containment, space, and time. Dzialo searched for the dog while holding a shotgun with both hands against a backdrop of occupied housing without due consideration of the consequences. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that CCPD has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Dzialo's conduct constituted neglect of duty.

Dzialo was also charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "other sufficient cause." Specifically, Dzialo is charged with the following violations of the CCPD General Rules and Regulations: 1:5 code of ethics; 3:1.1 standards of conduct; 3:1.5(f) general responsibilities; 3:1.6 neglect of duty; 3:1.10 obedience to rules and regulations; 3:1.32 work expectation; 3.2.1(k) prohibited activity on duty; 3.2.20 use of force: and 3.2.21 all other conduct.

Rule 1:5 is the code of ethics that generally states that a law enforcement officer is duty bound to serve the community and safeguard the lives and property of its people. Dzialo testified that he was motivated to find the dog and protect the lives of the people in the community. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the violation of Rule 1:5 is hereby DISMISSED.

Rule 3:1.1 requires officer to "conduct their private and professional lives in such a manner as avoid bringing the department into disrepute." There was no testimony to support this violation; therefore, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violation of Rule 3:1.1 is hereby DISMISSED.

Rule 3:1.5(f) comprises general responsibilities consistent with the oath of office, responsiveness to lawful orders of supervisors, and responsibility for effective police action. This is a very broad rule and regulation. Based upon my findings of fact, Dzialo violated the canine encounters policy. His conduct does not fall within the parameters of this general rule. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violation of Rule 3:1.5(f) is hereby DISMISSED.

Rule 3:1.6 states that officers shall not commit any act that would constitute neglect of duty as defined under these Rules and Regulations and recognized by New Jersey law. The same analysis set forth above for Dzialo's violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) is relevant here. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Department has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Dzialo's conduct constituted a violation of R. 3:1.6

Rule 3:1.10 requires officers to obey all rules and regulations and orders of the Department. As set forth above, because it was Dzialo's responsibility to utilize the canine encounters policy when dealing with a hostile animal and exercise good judgment in accordance with that policy. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Department has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Dzialo's conduct constituted a violation of R. 3:1.10.

Rule 3:1.32 requires an officer to "perform their duties to the best of their abilities." There was no testimony to support this violation; therefore, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violation of Rule 3:1.32 is hereby DISMISSED.

Rule 3:2.1(k) refers to activity deemed inappropriate to the Chief of Police. There was no testimony to support this violation, therefore, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violation of Rule of Rule 3:2.1(k) is hereby DISMISSED.

Rule 3:2.20 refers to use of force. For the same reasons as set forth above regarding Dzialo's violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), I CONCLUDE that the Department has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Dzialo's conduct constituted a violation of R. 3:2.20.

Rule 3:2.21 refers to all other conduct not specifically addressed herein. This is a very broad rule and regulation. Based upon my findings of fact, Dzialo violated the canine encounters policy. His conduct does not fall within the parameters of the general rule. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violation of Rule 3:2.21 is hereby DISMISSED.

I CONCLUDE that the Department has met its burden in demonstrating a violation of Camden County Police Department General Rules and Regulations: R. 3:1.6; R. 3:1.10; and R. 3:2.20. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, after consideration of the charges constituting a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) (other sufficient cause) as limited to the specific rules and regulations enumerated in the FNDA except for Rules: 1.5; 3:1.1; 3;1.5(f); 3:1.32; 3:2.1(k); and 3.2.21 that are dismissed, the Department has met it burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence the charge of other sufficient cause.

PENALTY

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties or who gives other just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). The Civil Service Commission's review of penalty is de novo. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.9(d) specifically grant the Commission authority to increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority.

General principles of progressive discipline apply. Town of W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962). Typically, the Board considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. "Although we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962), that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990). Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).

In the present case, I was not presented with any other major disciplinary actions involving Dzialo. Progressive discipline is intended to give the employee notice and an opportunity to correct the improper behavior. I note that Dzialo was only a police officer for two and one-half years on November 12, 2015. Lutz reported that Dzialo was less than receptive to the first day of training and reluctant to answer direct questions on the second day of training. (R-10.) Dzialo was not receptive to the training as noted by his testimony that "hindsight is twenty-twenty." He did not appear to recognize the importance of following the procedures established in the canine encounter policy or the expertise of his training officer. After having considered all the proofs offered in this matter and the possible consequences from discharging a shotgun in a residential neighborhood, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that Dzialo's violations are significant to warrant a penalty of a twenty-day suspension. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the imposition of a twenty-day suspension was an appropriate penalty.

ORDER

I CONCLUDE that the Department has sustained its burden of proof as to the charges of violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee, and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause, that includes the Department's Rules and Regulations R. 3:1.6, R. 3:1.10, and R. 3:2.20.

Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of the Department in suspending Appellant for twenty days is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

ISSUED: MARCH 29, 2018 BW

The appeal of Gerald J. Ebner, Senior Correction Officer, Bayside State Prison, Department of Corrections, removal effective June 13, 2017, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kathleen M. Calemmo, who rendered her initial decision on January 31, 2018. No exceptions were filed.

BEFORE KATHLEEN M. CALEMMO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Senior Corrections Officer (SCO) Gerald J. Ebner (appellant) appeals the decision of the Department of Corrections (DOC), Bayside State Prison (respondent) to remove him from employment. Respondent charged Ebner with the following violations: N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause; and DOC Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17, including: C1, reporting to work unfit for duty; C2, reporting to work for duty while under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs; C11, conduct unbecoming an employee; and E1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Bayside issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) dated March 9, 2017, notifying Ebner of the charges against him. (R-20.) After a departmental hearing held on March 25, 2017, Bayside sustained the following charges and incorporated them into a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated June 13, 2017, with a proposed penalty of removal from employment: N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause; and the following violations of DOC Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17: C1, reporting to work unfit for duty; C2, reporting to work for duty while under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs; C11, conduct unbecoming an employee; and E1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision. (R-10.) The appellant requested a hearing and the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on July 5, 2017, to be heard as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. I heard the matter on December 4, 2017 but kept the record open for post-hearing submissions. After receipt of the post-hearing submissions, I closed the record on January 19, 2018.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On March 9, 2017, Ebner reported to duty at Bayside State Prison for his 6:00 a.m. shift where he was assigned to A-Unit. At approximately 9:45 a.m., Lieutenant McCarthy was notified by SCO Meyers[1] that she suspected Ebner of being intoxicated. Myers recorded her observations on an Special Custody Report form dated March 9, 2017 with a time of incident as 9:45 a.m. (R-1.) McCarthy contacted his supervisor, Lieutenant Barnes, and reported to A-Unit to evaluate Barnes for himself. McCarthy's observations of possible signs of intoxication, including slurred speech, glassy eyes, and a strong smell of alcohol, were noted on his incident report. (R-2.) Upon notification from McCarthy, Barnes also reported to A-Unit and prepared a report indicating that he perceived Ebner to smell like alcohol and slur his speech. (R-3.) Ebner was relieved of duty, his union representative was contacted, and he was escorted to the Special Investigations Division (SID). Per departmental policy, Ebner was subjected to a breathalyzer test. Deputy Chief Naughton administered the test to Ebner using a machine known as the Draeger Alcotest 6810, serial number ARDF-0273. As instructed, Ebner provided two breath samples. The result of the first sample was 0.174% and the result of the second sample was 0.167%. (R-7.) Both results were higher than the DOC's threshold limit of 0.04% for a positive alcohol test result. (R-14.) Ebner signed and dated the DOC testing form. (R-7.) Thereafter, respondent issued a PNDA dated March 9, 2015 to Ebner seeking his removal. After a hearing was held, respondent issued a FNDA dated June 13, 2016 upholding the removal. (R-20.)

There is no material dispute concerning the foregoing, which I FIND as FACT.

TESTIMONY

For Respondent:

Lieutenant Timothy McCarthy (McCarthy) was Ebner's supervisor at Bayside. He testified that after receiving the report about a suspicion of intoxication from SCO Meyers, he contacted Lieutenant Barnes and went to Unit A to meet with Ebner. Upon encountering Ebner and detecting the smell of alcohol, slurred speech, and red glassy eyes, McCarthy asked Ebner if he had been drinking. According to McCarthy, Ebner told him that he was drinking the previous night.

On cross-examination, McCarthy stated that he did a visual inspection of Ebner's work area and found no evidence of alcohol in the area.

Investigator Ruben Baca (Baca) is an Investigator for the DOC assigned to the SID at Bayside. Baca was present when Ebner was brought in for his breathalyzer test and remained in the room while Investigator Naughton administered the Alcotest. Baca testified that he had no contact with Ebner but even from a standing distance of approximately five feet, he could smell alcohol. The test process was video recorded. (R-9.) Baca recorded his observations in the incident report that was used at the department hearing. (R-4.)

On cross-examination, Baca could not recall what time Ebner's shift started but he knew that no alcohol had been found in Ebner's work area and that Ebner denied consuming any alcoholic beverages after 9:00 p.m. the previous night. He also stated that a fresh breathing tube is provided for every test but he did not put that information into his report.

Deputy Chief James Naughton (Naughton) administered the Alcotest to Ebner. On March 9, 2017, Naughton was at South Woods State Prison when he was contacted by Baca to come to Bayside to administer the Alcotest to Ebner. Walking into the interview room to meet with Ebner, he stated he could smell alcohol from the doorway, about six feet away. Naughton is trained and certified by Draeger, the manufacturer of the device. He received in-person training from a Draeger representative when the device was purchased and has taken on-line refresher courses. His Certificate dated August 13, 2012 qualified him to train and certify operators in the proper use and operation on the Draeger Alcotest 6810. (R-5.) His Certificate dated July 8, 2016 signified the completion of additional on-line course work to use and operate the devices. (R-6.)

Before administering the Alcotest, an accuracy test using a dry gas cylinder provided by Draeger is performed. The acceptable limit range for the accuracy test is 0.035% to 0.045%. Naughton performed the accuracy test and recorded the result of .036% in the log book. (R-8.) After the accuracy test, Naughton performed a screening test. Naughton testified that the machine must test to zero to proceed. The screening test registered a 0.0% allowing Naughton to proceed with the test. After clearing, Ebner was provided a new mouthpiece and told to breathe into the device. Ebner's first breathing sample result was 0.173%. Because the result was above the limit of 0.04%, a confirmation test is required after a fifteen-minute waiting period between tests. After waiting the allotted time, Naughton instructed Ebner to provide another sample. The confirmation sample result was 0.167%. After the confirmation test, Naughton performed another accuracy test and received a reading of 0.039%, within the acceptable limits. Naughton recorded the test results and attached the printed test results from the machine to his report. (R-7.)

Naughton testified that the clock on the machine was approximately nineteen minutes fast. He documented that information on the testing forms (R-7) and Baca's report (R-4). He testified that the timer did not affect the accuracy of the test because the readings of the first and last accuracy tests were within the acceptable range, and the screening test reading recorded the required 0.0% needed to start the test.

The videotape of the process of administering the Alcotest to Ebner was played during Naughton's testimony at the hearing. It was noted that Ebner followed the directions. He was given a new mouthpiece for each test. He sat and calmly waited during the fifteen-minutes between each test. Naughton completed the testing form and Ebner signed the form certifying that the results were accurately recorded on the form. (R-7.)

Senior Investigator Randy Valentin (Valentin) is a certified Operator and Trainer in the proper use and operation of the Draeger Alcotest 6810. (R-10, R-11.) He trains new investigators on the machine and he is responsible for performing the calibrations. He testified that there is no separate certification for performing calibrations, just training. Over the course of six years, Valentin performed eighty to one-hundred Alcotests and at least forty calibrations on the machines. A Certification of Calibration was given by Draeger for the machine used on Ebner on August 9, 2012. (R-12.) Since then, the yearly calibrations are performed by qualified operators and the results of the calibrations are kept on the log book stored with the machine. (R-8.) In addition, accuracy tests are performed once per month if the machine is not used. If the results are over the guidelines, a Draeger representative must be contacted.

On cross-examination, Valentin testified that only a select few investigators perform the calibrations on the machine. The DOC Internal Management Procedure #012, Titled: Prevention of Employee Alcohol Impairment and Related Testing, Chapter IV, Section C, Subsection B states:

> ATD[2] Calibration – The ATD is required to receive calibration once per calendar year. Designated SID personnel trained and certified in the calibration process will perform the calibration at relevant intervals. (R-13.)

The log shows that Valentin performed the calibration on September 13, 2017. Before that it shows that a calibration was performed on September 9, 2016 by Eugene Johnson. (R-8.) Valentin testified that the canisters used for calibration are supplied by Draeger and the process is similar to the accuracy test. He also testified that the machine must be successfully calibrated each year or it will be locked. Officer Johnson did not testify and no Certifications of his training was presented. Valentin stated that Johnson retired from SID. According to Valentin, a select few members of SID are picked to perform the yearly calibration tests. The training received is the same as the Operator Trainer certificate.

Associate Administrator James Stigliano (Stigliano) testified about the reasons for the DOC policy against employee alcohol impairment. While the primary reason is safety, he also mentioned the emergent nature of the job, and the handling of fire arms. He referred to the DOC policy that states that an employee with a law enforcement title who has an alcohol test reading from 0.04% to 0.079% is deemed unavailable for work. Under the policy, if the officer's test is 0.08% or above, for a first offense, the officer is given the opportunity to enter and successfully complete an alcohol treatment program. A second offense is removal from office. (R-13 and R-16.) Stigliano testified that Ebner was provided with the policy regarding alcohol impairment and he signed the form acknowledging that he was given a copy of the policy, a pamphlet for services, and that the perimeters of his employment were explained to him. (R-15.)

FINDINGS OF FACTS

After carefully reviewing the exhibits and documentary evidence presented and after having had the opportunity to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the additional relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

Ebner was aware of the Level I Policy PSM.001.023 referencing Alcohol Impairment and Related Testing. (R-14 and R-15.) Under the policy, an employee with a law enforcement title is deemed unavailable for work with an alcohol test result of 0.04% to 0.079%. In addition, the policy requires that an individual with an alcohol test result of 0.08% or higher shall be removed unless the employee successfully completes a thirty-day alcohol treatment program for the first offense. For a second offense, the employee is removed. By his signature on the form, I FIND as FACT that Ebner was provided a copy of the alcohol policy that set forth the perimeters of his employment and the consequences for violations.

When assessing credibility, inferences may be drawn concerning the witness' expression, tone of voice and demeanor. MacDonald v. Hudson Bus Transportation Co., 100 N.J. Super. 103 (App. Div. 1968). Additionally, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963).

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Naughton and Valentin testified credibly about their knowledge of the Draeger Alcotest 6810. They are both certified as Operator Trainer which qualifies them to train and certify other Operators in the proper use and operation of the Draeger Alcotest 6810. Naughton described the process and testified that the accuracy readings were within the acceptable range before and after the testing. He also testified that the machine recorded the required zero before the test was administered to Ebner. Valentin testified about the calibration process and the log book (R-8) showed that this machine received the required yearly calibrations by designated SID personnel. Therefore, I FIND that the Draeger Alcotest 6810 was an adequate means of testing Ebner and such results are reliable and worthy of acceptance as testified to by Naughton and Valentin.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Under the Civil Service Act, a public employee may be subject to major discipline for various employment-related offenses, N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6. In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

The first charge against Ebner is conduct unbecoming a public employee. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting, In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

Appellant's status as a senior correction officer subjects him to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1990). A corrections officer represents "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes."

> [Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).]

In the present case, McCarthy testified credibly that after having received a report of suspected intoxication, he observed the smell of alcohol from Ebner, and observed red glassy eyes and slurred speech. Those observations were all noted in the reports generated because of the incident. (R-1 through R-4.) Baca and Naughton both testified that they could smell alcohol within five feet of Ebner's presence. Ebner contends that Bayside failed to meet its burden of proving that he violated a valid alcohol screening because there was no testimony offered or documents presented regarding the certification of Eugene Johnson who performed the calibration test on September 9, 2016. Valentin testified that he performed the calibration for September 13, 2017, after the machine was used on Ebner. Therefore, Ebner argues, Bayside failed to show that the calibration was performed in accordance with DOC's procedures that require a calibration test once per calendar year by a designated SID personnel "trained and certified in the calibration process." (R-13.) Valentin testified that there are no separate certifications for the SID personnel who are designated to calibrate the Draeger Alcotest 6810. He testified that designated investigators received training from Draeger on how to calibrate the machine. This particular machine received a Certification of Calibration from Draeger in 2012 and since that date it receives its yearly calibration from the Draeger trained designated SID personnel. (R-12.) Valentin testified that the calibration test is similar to the accuracy test with the only difference being the type of canister used. As with the accuracy test, the canister is supplied by Draeger. The log book, kept with the device, indicated that the machine was calibrated by Eugene Johnson on September 9, 2016. (R-8.) Valentin testified that Johnson was retired from SID. The actual machine was brought to the hearing and presented. There is also a computer log on the machine that records the calibration. Valentin testified that the machine must be calibrated successfully each year or it will lock.

Ebner seeks to impose a higher standard than what is required in the OAL. Bayside must prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ebner was under the influence of intoxicating liquors while on duty. Bayside presented testimony and business reports that Ebner exhibited signs of intoxication and smelled of alcohol. Naughton testified that the accuracy tests for the Draeger Alcotest 6810 were within the acceptable range. He received the required zero reading before the first sample. The first test reading was .173% and his second test reading was .167%. The log book showed that the machine was calibrated on a yearly basis.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Bayside proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ebner's conduct was unbecoming a public employee by reporting for duty while under the influence of alcohol.

Appellant has further been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Specifically, Ebner is charged with violating DOC Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17, including: C1, reporting to work unfit for duty; C2, reporting to work for duty while under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs; C11, conduct unbecoming an employee; and E1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision. (R-16.) Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Appellant's conduct was such that he violated this standard of good behavior. I deemed that the testimony showed that Ebner reported to duty smelling of alcohol, slurring his speech, and with red glassy eyes giving rise to a reasonable suspicion of alcohol use. Per department policy he was subjected to a breathalyzer test for alcohol. His initial reading and confirmation tests were positive. His initial reading of 0.173% and his confirmation test of 0.167% were significantly higher than the 0.04% allowable reading under the policy. As such, I CONCLUDE that Bayside proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ebner violated Bayside's alcohol policy.

PENALTY

In West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962), which was decided more than fifty years ago, our Supreme Court first recognized the concept of progressive discipline, under which "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007) (citing Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522). The Court therein concluded that "consideration of past record is inherently relevant" in a disciplinary proceeding, and held that an employee's "past record" includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously brought to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, 38 N.J. 523-24.

"Although we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Brock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962), that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990). Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

This is Ebner's second violation of the following sections of HRB 84-17: C1 – reporting to work unfit for duty; C2- reporting for duty under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs; and C11- conduct unbecoming a public employee. On March 24, 2016, Bayside issued a FNDA to Ebner, stemming from a February 2, 2016 incident of suspected intoxication. At that time, Ebner's Alcotest results were 0.118% and 0.105%. (R-18.) Ebner accepted a settlement agreement involving his attendance at an alcohol treatment program and thirty-day suspension. (R-17.) As set forth in HRB 84-17 – Table of Offenses and Penalties, a second violation of C2 and C11 is removal. There is no doubt that Ebner understood the policy regarding alcohol impairment while on duty. (R-15.) The Associate Administer of Bayside, Stigliano, credibly testified about the alcohol policy and its justifications. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Bayside's action in removing Ebner from his position was justified.

DECISION AND ORDER

Respondent Bayside has proven by a preponderance of credible evidence the following charges against Ebner: N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause; and the following violations of DOC Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17: C1, reporting to work unfit for duty; C2, reporting to work for duty while under the influence of intoxicating liquors or drugs; C11, conduct unbecoming an employee; and E1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision. Accordingly, I ORDER that these charges be and are hereby SUSTAINED. Furthermore, I ORDER that the penalty of removal is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

WHEREAS, after good faith negotiations, the Board and Ms. Farley desire to resolve amicably all matters and issues arising out of Ms. Farley's employment relationship with the Board and separation therefrom; and

WHEREAS, the Board and Ms. Farley have concluded that, effective the date this Agreement is signed by both parties, their employer-employee relationship shall terminate via the resignation of Ms. Farley; and

Mr. Angiulo,

This issue came up with Civil Service Commission employee Ollie G. Levant in the processing of this matter. On October 6, 2017, Mr. Levant amended the employee's record to place the employee on a leave with pay from February 27, 2017 until September 11, 2017 as the agreement itself contemplates backpay. Therefore, in terms of consistency, this time period should be recorded as a leave of absence with pay.

Thank you, and please let me know if there is anything else you need.

Best,

Lauren

Importance: High

Ms. Kirvan and Ms. Tedesco:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlement regarding Denise Farley from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding it to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, the settlement indicates that Ms. Farley agrees to a general resignation from her position effective September 11, 2017 (per the superintendent's report), in exchange for, inter alia, back pay from January 30, 2017 through June 30, 2017. However, the settlement does not reflect how to record the time period from July 1, 2017 to her resignation date. Before the matter can be acknowledged by the Commission, we require all periods of time to be accounted for in an employee's personnel record. In this regard, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

Sincerely,

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Matthew Gomm

OAL Docket No. CSV 02360-17

ISSUED: APRIL 20, 2018 (SLK)

The appeal of Matthew Gomm, a Police Officer with the Borough of Carteret (Carteret), of his 45 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Carl V. Buck, III (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on December 22, 2017. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on March 27, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact as detailed in the initial decision. However, the Commission did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to modify the 45 working day suspension to a 30 working day suspension. Rather, the Commission modified the suspension to a 20 working day suspension. Additionally, the Commission ordered that the appellant undergo retraining regarding the appointing authority's rules and regulations concerning the operation of a motor vehicle, emergency calls and the use of lights and siren.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority alleged that the appellant operated an assigned police cruiser in such a negligent and/or careless manner as to cause the same to strike another operating motor vehicle, causing his police vehicle to then leave the roadway and strike other property, including a light pole, lamp and residential shrubbery. Upon the appellant's appeal to the Commission, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing as a contested case.

The ALJ set forth in his initial decision that Deputy Chief of Police Dennis McFadden testified that an Officer asked to check if a suspect had any open warrants and Dispatch responded to the Officer that the suspect had an active warrant. Although the appellant did not notify Dispatch of his actions, the appellant proceeded to aid the Officer traveling, with sirens and lights activated, at 60 miles per hour. He also crossed an intersection at 40 miles per hour, which ultimately led him to drive over the sidewalk adjacent to the oncoming lane of traffic where he struck a decorative pole in front of a residence. He then drove back onto the street where he was struck by the vehicle he was trying to avoid which caused him to drive up on the sidewalk again where his vehicle stopped. McFadden stated that he disagreed with statements that were in the appellant's accident report. Specifically, the appellant stated that the suspect had several warrants while Dispatch only mentioned one. The appellant stated that he knew the suspect tended be with relatives with criminal records and ran from the police. However, Dispatch did not provide this information. The appellant stated he responded to the incident because it was in his assigned zone, but he did not relay this to Dispatch. The appellant stated that he thought the other vehicles had heard his siren and had seen his lights as vehicles moved to the side of the road and, based on his training, experience, the conditions, and his observations, he felt that he could pass vehicles in what he felt was an "emergent" situation. Based on McFadden's viewing of the appellant's report and the video from the vehicle, he testified that it was his opinion that the other driver did not have enough time to observe the appellant and get out of his way. McFadden issued the Investigator's report, which found that the appellant's "excessive speed" caused the accident and stated that the appellant's actions violated department rules and regulations for operating motor vehicles and the use of lights and sirens for emergency calls. McFadden believed that the appellant's actions caused the incident as he did not consider this to be an emergency since the warrant was for a nonviolent suspect, there were three or four other Officers at the site, and the appellant did not advise Dispatch that he was going to the site.

The appellant testified that he heard the Officer's call to Dispatch and knew the suspect from prior experience, including arresting him three times. The appellant stated that he responded to the call with lights and sirens and was familiar with the area and streets where he would be traveling. He indicated that he reduced his speed at intersections and acted with caution and had responded to similar situations with lights and sirens. The appellant disagreed with McFadden's assessment that it was not an emergent matter because he knew the suspect had multiple warrants, was usually with others who also had warrants and was a "runner." He explained that he did not call Dispatch because he was responding to an occurrence in his zone. The appellant presented that when he realized what was happening, he tried to drive evasively to avoid an accident, but ended up driving on the sidewalk as the accident occurred.

The ALJ found both witnesses to be credible as McFadden's and the appellant's views were based on information that was known to them. However, the ALJ indicated that McFadden's experience and circumspect view carried more weight. Specifically, the ALJ found that the appellant traveled at an excessive rate of speed considering the circumstance and that it was his actions that caused the accident. Therefore, the ALJ concluded that Carteret met its burden of proof on all charges. The ALJ presented that the appellant did not have any prior major disciplinary actions in his record and had previously received two minor disciplines that involved the operation of his police vehicle, which resulted in a loss of one holiday day each. Based on the two sustained disciplinary charges, both involving vehicles, and considering the facts of the case, the ALJ found that major disciplinary action was warranted. However, the ALJ modified Carteret's 45 working day suspension to a 30 day working suspension, as he found the reduced penalty met Carteret's goals for imposing a suspension, while still adhering to the concept of progressive discipline.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ regarding the charges. Clearly, the appellant's actions had the potential to be much more serious and tragic and warranted a finding of conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property and violation of Carteret's Police Department's rules and regulations. However, as discussed further below, the Commission does not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to modify the 45 working day suspension to a 30 working day suspension.

In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission also utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In assessing the penalty in relation to the employee's conduct, it is important to emphasize that the nature of the offense must be balanced against mitigating circumstances, including any prior disciplinary history. However, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007).

In the instant matter, the Commission notes that the appellant was a relatively long-term employee with only two minor disciplines, which each resulted in a loss of one holiday day. Therefore, in light of these circumstances, the Commission shall modify the appellant's 45 working day suspension to a 20 working day suspension. However, the Commission emphasizes, that it does not condone the appellant's misconduct since as stated above, the appellant's action could have led to more tragic results. Therefore, even though the penalty is reduced, the appellant's infractions were serious enough to warrant major discipline. Further, given the infractions, the Commission orders that the appellant undergo retraining regarding the appointing authority's rules and regulations concerning the operation of a motor vehicle, emergency calls and the use of lights and siren.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to 25 days of mitigated back pay, benefits and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), an award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. Mar. 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In this case, the Commission agreed with the ALJ's determination sustaining the charges and only modified the penalty. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. In light of the Appellate Division's decision in Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. February 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay are finally resolved.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's action of imposing a 45 working day suspension was not justified under the circumstances and modifies that action to a 20 working day suspension. Additionally, the Commission orders that the appellant undergo retraining regarding the appointing authority's rules and regulations concerning the operation of a motor vehicle, emergency calls and the use of lights and siren. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted 25 days of back pay, benefits and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter should be pursued in the Appellate Division.

IMO MATTHEW A. GOMM, BOROUGH OF CARTERET POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Leonard C. Schiro, Esq., for Matthew A. Gomm, appellant (Mets, Schiro & McGovern, LLC, attorneys)

Robert Bergen, Esq., Law Director, for Borough of Carteret, Police Department, respondent

Record Closed: November 3, 2017 Decided: December 22, 2017

BEFORE CARL V. BUCK III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Matthew A. Gomm (Gomm) appeals from a forty-five day suspension from his position as a Police Officer, imposed by his employer the Borough of Carteret (Carteret). The suspension resulted from charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property, other sufficient cause and Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations. Gomm denies these charges, maintaining that he did nothing wrong and submitted that he acted appropriately due to what he felt to be the emergent nature of a call by another officer.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On August 5, 2015, Carteret issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) setting for the charges and specifications made against Gomm (R-1). This was served on Gomm on August 7, 2015. Following a disciplinary hearing held on October 7, 2015, Carteret, on March 9, 2016[1], issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) sustaining the charges in the PNDA which notice was served on Gomm on March 4, 2016[2].

On March 24, 2016 Gomm requested a hearing, and on February 13, 2017 the Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on February 16, 2017. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on October 4, 2017. The record was held open for simultaneous written summations which were filed on October 27, 2017, and the record closed on November 3, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are not disputed. On July 20, 2015, shortly before 13:50 hours, Officer Justin Terebetski (Terebetski) issued a call for a warrant check on H.C.[3]. Terebetski had just observed H.C. getting into a taxi in the area of Holmes Street and Washington Avenue. Dispatch indicated that there was an active warrant on H.C.

Gomm was on duty and was driving a marked police vehicle. He was located on Marion Street and went to aid Terebetski. While on route, Gomm activated his lights and sirens. He proceeded through a number of intersections at a speed in excess of the posted speed limit. While driving on Washington Avenue, Gomm observed vehicles on Washington Avenue in front of him. As Gomm attempted to pass them, using the oncoming lane, one of the vehicles turned left and moved across the double yellow line dividing the lanes. Gomm attempted to stop and in that attempt, drove over the sidewalk adjacent to the oncoming lane of traffic. He struck a decorative pole in front of a residence on Washington Avenue. Gomm then drove back onto Washington Avenue and was struck by the vehicle he was trying to avoid, causing Gomm to drive up on the sidewalk again where his vehicle stopped.

Information on the accident was detailed in a police report prepared by Sgt. Frank Ciarkowski (Ciarkowski) (R-3) and in an arrest report regarding the other driver (P-1). Information on the accident was also provided through the video recording taken in the police vehicle (R-2).

TESTIMONY

For Respondent

Dennis McFadden, Deputy Chief of Police detailed his training, experience and background in approximately thirty-four years in law enforcement. On the date of the incident he was the Deputy Chief of Police for Carteret Borough in charge of the patrol division.

McFadden provided background information regarding the date of the incident and stated that the initial call was for a warrant check for credit card fraud against H.C. Officer Terebetski had observed H.C. getting into a taxi proceeding on Washington Street. Terebetski asked for a check to see if H.C. had any open warrants. Dispatch responded to Terebetski that H.C. had an active warrant.

Gomm proceeded to aid Terebetski, although Gomm had not notified dispatch of his action. McFadden stated that Gomm traveled 60 mph on Cypress Street and crossed an intersection at Cypress at 40 mph. The estimate of speed was taken from the video recording within the vehicle. Terebetski reported that he had stopped the taxi at Roosevelt and Grant Avenue, approximately a quarter mile from Gomm's location.

As Gomm was proceeding to assist Terebetski, Officer Paul Stentella stated that he (Stentella) would be with him (Terebetski).

While Gomm was travelling on Washington Avenue, with sirens and lights activated, the accident occurred. McFadden testified that he reviewed the accident report and the video from the police vehicle and requested that Gomm provide a statement regarding the incident, which Gomm did provide (R-6).

Gomm's report contained information on his actions, but also contained several statements that McFadden did not agree with. Specifically, Gomm stated that H.C. had several warrants outstanding; however, dispatch only mentioned one. Gomm stated that Terebetski did not state if H.C. was alone or with accomplices, as Gomm has never seen H.C. alone – he was usually with relatives with criminal records. However, this information was not detailed by dispatch. Gomm stated he knew H.C. tended to run from the police; however, this information was not detailed by dispatch. Gomm stated he felt it was his duty to respond as the area where the incident was occurring was in Gomm's assigned zone of the day; however, this information was not relayed to dispatch.

According to McFadden, Gomm's report stated that at the time he (Gomm) decided to respond, he activated his overhead lights and sirens. As he approached each intersection he scanned the area for pedestrians and vehicles. As he turned on to Washington Avenue he heard Stentella stating that he (Stentella) was out with them – which Gomm took to mean that there were possibly several individuals. As he approached the intersection of Washington Avenue at Randolph Avenue he observed three vehicles ahead of him. Gomm thought the vehicles had heard his siren and seen his lights as they moved to the right side of the roadway. He stated that based on his training and experience, the conditions and the observation of the vehicles he could pass the vehicles and continue to what he felt was an "emergent" situation.

Gomm's report detailed the accident, his subsequent notification to his headquarters to dispatch EMS and advised that he was trapped in his vehicle. He was ultimately able to extricate himself and met responding vehicles. He stated that at that point he advised the responders that he had back, neck and shoulder pain but that EMS should attend to others on the scene first.

His statement further detailed statements of on-site witnesses and states that he conducted himself in a professional manner and that the cause of the accident was due to the other driver. He further stated that the other driver did not have a valid driver's license.

After reviewing the accident report, Gomm's statement, and the video from the vehicle, it was McFadden's opinion was that the other driver did not have enough time to observe Gomm and get out of Gomm's way. McFadden issued a report to Police Chief John Pieczyski detailing the investigation and found that Gomm's "excessive speed" caused the accident (P-4).

McFadden stated that he considered this to be a warrant arrest for a nonviolent crime, that there were already 3 or 4 officers at the site, Gomm did not advise dispatch that he was going to the site and as such, Gomm's actions caused the accident.

McFadden also stated that Carteret's Rules and Regulations 11:63 Operation of Motor Vehicles and 11:64 Emergency Calls and Use of Red Light and Siren were violated. These rules detail the appropriate use of vehicles and the use of lights and sirens.

For Appellant

Patrolman Matthew Gomm testified on his own behalf. Gomm stated that he has been a Patrolman since 2008. He detailed driver training he received at Rutgers University and at the Police Academy.

He stated he heard the call from Terebetski and knew H.C. from prior experience. Gomm stated he had arrested H.C. on 3 occasions. He responded to the call with lights and sirens and was familiar with the area and the streets he would be traveling. He reduced his speed at intersections and acted with caution. He stated that he had responded to similar situations with lights and sirens.

He disagreed with McFadden's testimony as Gomm thought this was an emergent matter. Gomm stated that he knew H.C. had multiple warrants, was usually with others (who had warrants also) and was a "runner". He did not call in to dispatch that he was responding because the occurrence was in his zone. He said when he realized what was happening, as the accident unfolded, he tried to drive evasively to avoid an accident, but drove up on the sidewalk and the accident occurred.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Where facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness' testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness' story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F. 2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself" in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521-522. See D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

Although both witnesses were credible, McFadden has had thirty-four years of experience in law enforcement and his testimony shows that he perceived the situation as would a supervisor. His view of the situation dealt with it as it was, from the information that was known. Gomm's perspective took into consideration information that he said was known to him. This information, however, was not necessarily known to others in charge. Gomm did not relay this information to his dispatch or supervisors and thereby created a situation which led to the subject accident. On balance, McFadden's experience and circumspect view carried more weight.

Based on the evidence presented at the hearing as well as on the opportunity to observe the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following:

On July 20, 2015 Officer Terebetski observed H.C. getting into a taxi proceeding on Washington Street. Terebetski asked for a check to see if H.C. had any open warrants. Dispatch responded to Terebetski that H.C. had an active warrant.

Officer Gomm was at another location and decided to proceed to aid Terebetski. Gomm did not notify dispatch of his action. Gomm traveled at approximately 60 mph on Cypress Street and crossed an intersection at Cypress at approximately 40 mph. As Gomm was proceeding to assist Terebetski, Gomm heard Officer Paul Stentella stated that he (Stentella) would be with him (Terebetski).

Gomm had his siren and lights activated during the majority of the time while he was proceeding to aid Terebetski. While Gomm was proceeding on Washington Avenue, the accident as detailed herein occurred.

Deputy Chief McFadden reviewed the accident report, reviewed the video from the police vehicle and reviewed Gomm's statement. McFadden's review led to his position that the accident occurred due to Gomm's speed and the inability of the other driver to get out of Gomm's way.

Terebetski's initial call related to a warrant stop. Gomm traveled at an excessive rate of speed considering the circumstances. Gomm's actions were the proximate cause of the accident occurring at approximately 13:50 on July 20, 2015.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

In this matter, Carteret has sustained charges of: Conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); Misuse of public property, including motor vehicles in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8); Other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11); Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations Sec. 11-63; Operation of Motor Vehicles; and Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations Sec. 11-64; Emergency Calls and Use of Red Light and Siren.

Gomm was charged with "conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't. of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). The New Jersey Supreme Court, in In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1980), recognized that the obligation to act in a responsible manner is especially compelling in a case involving a law enforcement official:

> [A] police officer is a special kind of public employee. His primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law. He carries a service revolver on his person and is constantly called upon to exercise tact, restraint and good judgment in his relationship with the public. He represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public, particularly in a small community (quoting Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966)).

Gomm testified that he wanted to assist Terebetski as he had knowledge of H.C., H.C.'s accomplices, and outstanding warrants on H.C. McFadden stated that, as this was a warrant arrest, and did not constitute an emergency, Gomm's excessive speed unnecessarily caused of the accident. Further, McFadden stated that the speed at which Gomm was traveling would only be justified in a situation where life and property are at risk - and that lights and sirens should be used with utmost caution.

Gomm's response to Terebetski's call had the potential to be much more serious and tragic as he traversed both local and County roads and intersections at a high rate of speed. Gomm's desire to assist Terebetski caused him to disregard appropriate safety rules and proper protocols, considering this was not an emergent situation. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Carteret proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Gomm violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

Regarding the charge of Misuse of Public Property, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8). The misuse is tied to operation of his police vehicle in a manner not within appropriate safety protocols. Flowing through the charge of Conduct Unbecoming, the petitioner utilized his vehicle in a manner which jeopardized the public, public property, government property and himself. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Carteret proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Gomm violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8).

Gomm has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) (12), "Other sufficient cause." Specifically, Gomm is charged with the following violations of the Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations: Sec. 11-63; Operation of Motor Vehicles; and Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations Sec. 11-64; Emergency Calls and Use of Red Light and Siren. Consideration of such violation(s) will be addressed in concert with the current analysis. Gomm was under the presumption that he was assisting to apprehend a known felon, but created a dangerous situation in his ill-fated attempt to assist Terebetski. However, he was taking into consideration information not relayed by dispatch and did not report his actions or progress to dispatch. He made presumptions regarding the observations and actions of other officers which could have been clarified and resolved if he had contacted dispatch. His actions using his police vehicle, his lights and his sirens in an unsafe and inappropriate manner, considering the circumstances, were unjustified and unsafe. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Carteret has met its burden in demonstrating a violation of Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations Sec. 11-63; Operation of Motor Vehicles; and Borough of Carteret Police Department Rules and Regulations Sec. 11-64; Emergency Calls and Use of Red Light and Siren. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, after consideration of the charges constituting a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) (12) (Other Sufficient Cause) as limited to the specific rules and regulations enumerated in the FNDA, that Carteret has met its burden of proof in demonstration of the charge of Other Sufficient Cause.

PENALTY

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties or who gives other just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). Depending upon the incident complained of and/or the employee's past record, major discipline may include removal. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522–24 (1962). Once a determination is made that an employee has violated a statute, rule, regulation, etc., concerning his/her employment, the concept of progressive discipline must be considered. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500.

In the present case, Gomm has not received any major disciplinary actions during his career with Carteret. He received two minor disciplines resulting in a loss of 1 holiday day each. Both disciplinary actions involved operation of his police vehicle. As to the penalty of a forty-five day suspension, the issue is whether it is too harsh under the circumstances. I must consider whether the spirit of progressive discipline is upheld by Gomm's forty-five day suspension. Progressive discipline is intended to give the employee notice and an opportunity to correct the improper behavior. Based upon Gomm's two sustained disciplinary charges, both involving vehicles, and in light of the facts of the incident, a major disciplinary action is warranted. After having considered all the evidence in this matter and the possible impact upon the public caused by unsafe and reckless operation of a motor vehicle in response to a warrant call, and after having given due consideration to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that a thirty-day suspension meets the goals that Carteret set forth in arguing for imposing a forty-five day suspension, while still adhering to the concept of progressive discipline.

DECISION AND ORDER

I hereby ORDER that the charges in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action against Matthew A. Gomm be AFFIRMED. However, I ORDER the penalty modified from forty-five days to thirty days.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Record Closed: August 7, 2017 Decided: September 15, 2017

BEFORE SARAH G. CROWLEY, ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Billie Hayes (appellant), was employed as a Quality Control Reviewer for the respondent, Department of Human Services, until his removal effective April 18, 2016.

Appellant was charged with absence from work without permission; abandonment of job as a result of absence from work; and chronic absenteeism. The Preliminary Notice of Discipline (PNDA) was served on April 18, 2016, and a Final Notice of Discipline (FNDA) served on June 10, 2016. The appellant filed an appeal, and that matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested matter on July 28, 2016. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On March 24, 2017, respondent filed a motion for summary decision on the within charges.[1] Opposition to the motion was filled by the appellant on July 13, 2017. A response to the opposition was filed by the respondent on August 7, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The essential facts in this case are not disputed and are as follows:

1. The appellant was out on approved worker's compensation leave from November 6, 2014, through April 10, 2016, as a result of a workplace injury that he sustained on or about November 5, 2014.

2. The appellant was given several extensions on his leave, and was cleared to return to work on April 10, 2016, by his treating physician, Dr. Vasko Gulevski.

3. Dr. Gulevski submitted a return to work form dated April 6, 2016, in which he certifies that Billie Hayes was seen or treated in his office on that date and may return to work on April 10, 2016.

4. Treatment Notices from Dr. Gulevski dated March 17, 2016, were also provided to the employer.

[1] There are several other disciplinary matters that are pending against the appellant, which have been consolidated with this matter. The within motion only relates to OAL Docket No. 11466-16.

5. Neither the notes or the return to work certification from Dr. Gulevski request an accommodation for the appellant under the ADA. The appellant never requested an accommodation.

6. On April 7, 2016, in response to the return to work notice, the respondent sent a letter to the appellant which advised that "you may have a need for a work accommodation, therefore, I am enclosing the American with Disability Act (ADA) accommodation forms for you review and completion."

7. The appellant did not respond to the correspondence or ask for an accommodation either in writing, or verbally.

8. On April 11, 2016, the date the appellant was to return to work, he sent an email at 8:30 a.m. which stated "I would like to use 7 hours of AL time today 4-11-16. Thanks."

9. The appellant was advised by the respondent on April 12, 2016, that he was not permitted to call out or request time off by email, and must have direct contact with a person at work. The letter further advised appellant that he had no remaining time available, and was therefore, "out on authorized leave as of Monday, April 11, 2016."

10. The appellant did not respond to this letter and had no further contact with the respondent, by phone or email. The appellant did not return to work on April 12, 2016, April 13, 2016, April 14, 2016, or April 15, 2015. The appellant did not request time off or an accommodation.

11. On Monday, April 18, 2016, a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) was issued, charging the appellant with a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:6-1.10, regarding approval for leave of absence.

12. A second PNDA was issued on charging appellant with being absent from work without permission or proper notice, and job abandonment in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(c).

The foregoing facts are not disputed and I FIND them as FACT:

STATEMENT OF ISSUE

The issue presented in this Motion for Summary Decision is whether the respondent is entitled to a decision as a matter of law on the discipline related to unauthorized leave, job abandonment and excessive absenteeism. The respondent has opposed the motion on the grounds that a request for an accommodation was made, and thus, the respondent was required to respond to such a request before terminating the appellant. The appellant has provided no evidence that a request for an accommodation was ever made.

LEGAL ARGUMENT AND CONCLUSION

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), a summary decision "may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This rule is substantially similar to the summary judgment rule embodied in the New Jersey Court Rules, R. 4:46-2. See Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954). In connection, therewith, all inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant and in favor of the party against whom the motion is directed. Id. at 75. In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995), the New Jersey Supreme Court addressed the appropriate test to be employed in determining the motion:

> [A] determination whether there exists a 'genuine issue' of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The 'judge's function is not . . . to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial'.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:12-59(b), "an adverse party in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined by an evidentiary proceeding." The non-moving party must present more than his own self-serving facts to establish the existence of a material issue of fact. Fargas v. Gorham, 276 N.J. Super. 135, 139 (Law. Div. 1994).

The material facts in this case are undisputed. The appellant had been on approved leave for seventeen months as a result of a work-related injury. On April 6, 2016, appellant's treating physician cleared him to return to work on April 10, 2016. The certification contains no request for an accommodation, nor do the treatment notes which were submitted with the certification for return to work. The respondent sent a form letter to the appellant regarding his return to work, which included a statement that he "may" qualify for an accommodation, and if so, he should request it. The April 7, 2016, letter provided documentation to assist in the event a request for an accommodation was made. However, neither appellant or his doctor ever requested an accommodation, either verbally or in writing.

The appellant has argued that Dr. Gulevski stated that appellant would need an accommodation and requested such an accommodation on his behalf. However, no documentation to support this argument has been submitted. The documentation which was provided by the appellant made no such request. Neither the certification or the treatment notes from Dr. Gulevski request an accommodation. The appellant has not presented any material facts in dispute to warrant a hearing. The appellant's reliance on Administrative Order 4:07 is misplaced. These rules, are only applicable when a request for an accommodation is made. There is no evidence that any such request was ever made. The undisputed facts demonstrate that no request was ever made and appellant failed to return to work on April 11, 2016, and every day thereafter.

I therefore CONCLUDE that appellant's failure to return to work on April 11, 2016, constituted an absence without permission. I also CONCLUDE that the appellant's refusal to return to work for five consecutive days without leave or permission constitutes job abandonment as well as excessive absenteeism. Accordingly, the charges are hereby SUSTAINED.

It is therefore hereby ORDERED that the respondent's motion for summary decision be and hereby is GRANTED, and the appeal is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

f. On or about November 9, 2017, the parties appeared for a settlement conference in the OAL Action before the Hon. Barry E. INITIAL DECISION

IN THE MATTER OF FRANKLIN HERNANDEZ, CITY OF PERTH AMBOY.

OAL DKT. NO. CSR 15611-17

Charles J. Uliano, Esq., for appellant Franklin Hernandez (Chamlin, Rosen, Uliano and Witherington, attorneys)

Michael S. Williams, Esq., for respondent City of Perth Amboy (Cruser, Mitchell, Novitz, Sanchez, Gaston and Zimet, LLP, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 8, 2018 Decided: January 18, 2018

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ t/a:

On August 7, 2017, the City of Perth Amboy issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) against Police Officer Franklin Hernandez, seeking to remove him from employment because he had violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) (3), inability to perform duties; (5) Conviction of a crime; (6) Conduct unbecoming a public employee; and (12) Other sufficient cause. After a departmental hearing, Hernandez was removed by the appointing authority, effective January 29, 2016, as detailed in a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) issued on October 6, 2017. On October 17, 2017, Hernandez filed a simultaneous appeal with the Civil Service Commission and the Office of Administrative Law, and the contested case was assigned to this judge. A prehearing conference was held with counsel on November 8, 2017. The parties agreed that the resolution of the contested case necessitated a legal analysis concerning the nature of a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (UCMJ) to which Officer Hernandez pled guilty in 2014. As such, they agreed to file legal argument prior to a hearing scheduled for January 23, 2018. The City then moved for summary decision. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12-5. Hernandez, while not specifically moving for summary decision, contends that a proper understanding of the provision at issue demonstrated that Officer Hernandez's removal was improper and that he should be restored to duty.

The PNDA's Specification of Officer Hernandez's alleged offenses against the Administrative Code identifies that he pled guilty to a "crime consummated by a battery" while a member of the military and that this offense had been against a fellow soldier with whom Hernandez had a "romantic relationship." Additionally, the Middlesex County Prosecutor's Office had advised the City that it considered Hernandez's conviction to constitute a domestic violence offense and that, as such, he was prohibited by statute from possessing firearms, including his service weapon, and was ordered to turn in his personal firearm. The Specification concluded that as a result of this prohibition, Hernandez was incapable of performing his duties as a police officer and that his conduct was unbecoming a public employee. Finally, it charged that he had failed to inform the Police Department of the status of pending charges of serious crime while on military leave under the Uniform Code of Military Justice, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee, and (7), neglect of duty.

Hernandez's Conviction

According to a Stipulation of Fact offered in evidence by Perth Amboy, entered in the military court in the matter of United States of America v. Hernandez, Franklin, Sergeant (SGT), United States Army Headquarters Support Company, on June 29, 2016, and specifically consented to by Sergeant Hernandez, at that time, Hernandez was assigned to Shaw Air Force Base, South Carolina. His primary Military Occupational Specialty was "Military Police." He had enlisted in the New Jersey Army National Guard in January 2008, after having been honorably discharged following seven years of service as a United States Marine. While on active duty in 2014 and assigned to Camp As Sayliyah, Qatar (CAS), he became involved in what the Stipulation of Facts identifies as a "romantic relationship" with a specialist, here identified by her initials as SPC T. The relationship began on or about September 11, 2014. Specialist T.'s roommate provided a sworn statement that she was aware of the "romantic relationship, noting that Hernandez and SPC T. "act(ed) like a real couple, publicly holding hands even though it was against the rules." This refers to the fact that as a non-commissioned officer, Sergeant Hernandez was prohibited from any fraternization with a junior enlisted soldier. The Stipulation noted that on November 14, 2014, First Sergeant Stuart counseled Hernandez for what Stuart described as a "blatant act of fraternization" between these two. Stuart learned of this relationship on or about that date after he and Sergeant Hernandez's company commander observed the two holding hands. Stuart ordered Hernandez to terminate the relationship "immediately" and to undergo corrective training. Hernandez acknowledged the orders. However, according to the Stipulation, despite the order, Hernandez and SPC T. "continued to engage in a romantic relationship until on or after 16 December 2014."

The Stipulation then describes events that occurred on December 24, 2014. Sergeant. Hernandez and SPC T. had by that date ended their romantic relationship. Each arrived separately at the Top-Off Club on base. They greeted each other, but then engaged in > a verbal dispute regarding whether SPC T. was seeing other persons. Sergeant Hernandez turned around and grasped with his hand the area on SPC T.'s body where her neck and shoulder met. Sergeant Hernandez did not have SPC. T.'s permission to touch her in that manner. In a sworn statement to Military Police, SPC T. stated that SGT Hernandez forcefully grabbed her by the back of her neck and tried to take her out of the Top-Off club. She stated that before he grabbed her, she had agreed to talk to SGT Hernandez outside of the club so as not to create a scene. She stated that she asked SGT Hernandez to let her tell her friends where she was going and to let her get her purse . . . SGT told her "no," to get her purse only, and to leave with him now. It was at this moment that she stated SGT Hernandez grabbed her neck and tried to take her out of the club. . . T. . . . told Hernandez he was hurting her and to let go of her. . . . He did not let go of her, and it was not until she asked him > three times to remove his hand and two other Soldiers came to intervene that he finally removed his hand from her neck. . . . Sergeant Hernandez did not have permission to touch SPC. T. in the manner described. . . Hernandez did not believe that she was about to inflict bodily harm upon him. Therefore, he was not acting in self-defense when he touched her. Sergeant Hernandez's touching of SPC T. constituted bodily harm because he offensively touched SPC T. without her consent and without legal justification.

The Specification notes that by definition, Hernandez had committed an assault and battery. In an Offer to Plead Guilty, Hernandez agreed to plead guilty to Specification 5 of Charge III.[1] a violation of Article 128 of the UCMJ, which is also codified at 10 U.S.C. 928.

> Any person subject to this chapter who attempts or offers with unlawful force or violence to do bodily harm to another person, whether the attempt or offer is consummated, is guilty of assault and shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

After being advised of Sergeant Hernandez's conviction, Perth Amboy notified the Middlesex County Prosecutor's Office of the conviction.

N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b. (2) provides

> A person having been convicted in this State or elsewhere of a disorderly persons offense involving domestic violence, whether or not armed with or having in his possession a weapon enumerated in subsection r. of N.J.S. 2C:39-1, who purchases, owns, possesses or controls a firearm is guilty of a crime of the third degree.

On November 30, 2016, the Prosecutor's Office advised the City that it should have Hernandez surrender his firearms because he was a "person not to have weapons." On August 7, 2017, the City filed the PNDA that is the subject of this appeal.

[1] The Offer to Plead Guilty notes that the text of the Specification to which Hernandez pleaded was amended from "grabbing her neck with his hands" to "grasping her neck and shoulder with his hand." He also pled guilty to a charge regarding having alcohol in his quarters and to failing to obey a lawful general order, to wit: engaging in a prohibited relationship with a junior enlisted soldier. Neither of these violations of the UCMJ is relevant to the motion for summary decision.

It should be noted here that the offense to which Sergeant Hernandez pled, 10 U.S.C. 928, does not include any language regarding "domestic violence." Indeed, the parties agree that the UCMJ does not include any crimes that are entitled "domestic violence." Yet, for the prohibitions of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b. (2) to apply there must be evidence that the person who is to be subjected to this criminal sanction for the possession of a firearm has a pre-existing conviction for a disorderly persons offense that "involv[ed] domestic violence."

N.J.S.A. 2C:25-19 a. defines "domestic violence" as > the occurrence of one or more of the following acts inflicted upon a person protected under this act by an adult or an emancipated minor:

>
> . . . .
> (2) Assault N.J.S. 2C:12-1

Thus, the elements of this definition include the occurrence of an act falling within the list of offenses, including assault, and that the act be perpetrated against a "person protected under this act."

The crux of the current dispute is whether Hernandez's plea to the violation of 10 U.S.C. 228 constituted a plea to a "disorderly person's offense involving domestic violence." Perth Amboy agrees with the Prosecutor's Office that it does, and that this fact bars Hernandez from possessing a weapon. As such, he is unable to fulfill the requirements of his job as a police officer and his removal is warranted under that provision of the Administrative Code. Officer Hernandez does not dispute that he pled guilty to an assault. However, he disputes the notion that his plea invokes the prohibition, as he contends that he did not plead guilty to an "offense involving domestic violence." Further, even if the offense might serve in some situations as the predicate for the invocation of the prohibition, the nature of his relationship with the victim of the assault simply does not come within the confines of those relationships defined as "domestic" and thus capable of including "domestic violence." Thus, summary decision must be denied to the City, and he should be restored to his position.

In support of his claim, Officer Hernandez points to the fact that the Army did not "require a guilty plea to an allegation of 'domestic violence.'" As such, there is no predicate offense upon which to base the prohibition, as that only applies where there exists a conviction for "an offense involving domestic violence." Perth Amboy responds that the predicate offense need not include the element of "domestic violence." Further, the facts of the situation acknowledged by Hernandez in the Stipulation of Facts as the grounding for his guilty plea to the assault charge make it clear that what he engaged in was indeed "domestic violence."

Summary Decision

The New Jersey Supreme Court defined the standard for determining motions for summary decision in Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, et al., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). In this case, the Court elaborated upon the standards first established in Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74-75 (1954). Under the Brill standard, a motion for summary decision may only be granted where there are no "genuine disputes" of "material fact." The determination as to whether disputes of material fact exist is made after a "discriminating search" of the record, consisting as it may of affidavits, certifications, documentary exhibits and any other evidence filed by the movant and any such evidence filed in response to the motion, with all reasonable inferences arising from the evidence being accorded to the opponent of the motion. In order to defeat the motion, the opposing party must establish the existence of "genuine" disputes of material fact. The substantive law governing a dispute determines which facts are material. Only disputes regarding "those facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Dungee v. Northeast Foods, Inc., 940 F. Supp. 682, 685 (D.N.J. 1996), quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed.2d 202, 211 (1986) (Anderson).

In Judson, , at 75, the Supreme Court stated that the material facts allegedly in dispute upon which the party opposing the motion relies to defeat the motion must be something more than "facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious, . . . ," (citations omitted). Brill focuses upon the analytical procedure for determining whether a purported dispute of material fact is "genuine" or is simply of an "insubstantial nature." Brill, at 530. Brill concludes that the same analytical process used to decide motions for a directed verdict is used to resolve summary decision motions. "The essence of the inquiry in each is the same: 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that a party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Id. at 536, quoting Anderson, at 477 U.S. 251-52, 106 S.Ct 2505, 2512, 91 L.Ed 2d 214. In searching the proffered evidence to determine the motion, the judge must be guided by the applicable substantive evidentiary standard of proof, that is, the "burden of persuasion" which would apply at trial on the merits, whether that is the preponderance of the evidence or the clear and convincing evidence standard. If a careful review under this standard establishes that no reasonable fact finder could resolve the disputed material facts in favor of the party opposing the motion, then the uncontradicted facts thus established can be examined in the light of the applicable substantive law to determine whether or not the movant is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. However, where the proofs in the record are such that "reasonable minds could differ" as to the material facts, then the motion must be denied and a full evidentiary hearing held.

The Predicate Offense

For the prohibition to apply, Hernandez's plea to the assault charge must serve as the predicate offense. He is correct that the words of the federal provision to which he pled do not include any reference to the assault as occurring in the context of a domestic relationship of any sort. It is necessary only that the "assault" simply be perpetrated on "another person." However, Perth Amboy points to the United States Supreme Court decision in United States v. Hayes, 555 U.S. 415 (2009). There, the Court reviewed a conviction under the federal Gun Control Act of 1968, 18 U.S.C. 921 et seq., which was amended to include a prohibition on possession of a firearm by one "convicted of a misdemeanor crime of domestic violence." Hayes had been convicted in West Virginia of battery in 1994. The statute under which he was convicted did not require as an element of the offense the existence of a domestic relationship involving the perpetrator and the victim. When he was prosecuted for being in possession of a firearm despite having this conviction, the District Court held that this absence did not bar prosecution for a violation of the Gun Control Act. The Court of Appeals reversed, and the Supreme Court then took up the issue. The Court, Ginsburg, J., explained the issue as: "must the statute describing the predicate offense include, as a discrete element, the existence of a domestic relationship between offender and victim?"

The majority held that

> In line with the large majority of the Courts of Appeals, we conclude that § 921(a)(33)(A) does not require a predicate-offense statute of that specificity. Instead, in a § 922(g)(9) prosecution, it suffices for the Government to charge and prove a prior conviction that was, in fact, for 'an offense . . . committed by' the defendant against a spouse or other domestic victim.

Thus, the Supreme Court, considering a federal statute penalizing firearm possession that is very similar to N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b.(2), concluded that it was not essential to the prosecution that the prior statute under which Hayes had been prosecuted specify that the assault involved persons whose "relationship" come within the definition "domestic" such that the assault was an act of "domestic violence." It was the facts regarding the nature of the relationship that governed whether the prosecution could proceed, not the language of the West Virginia statute. Hernandez tries to evade the result of this decision by noting that this case, unlike Hayes, is not a criminal prosecution for possession of a firearm and that the alleged domestic relationship has not been proven beyond a reasonable doubt. But these arguments fail. Here, the predicate federal offense did not refer to domestic relationships or domestic violence, but Hayes makes clear that that is not a bar to the use of the conviction for assault in determining whether the State's own firearms prohibition applies to Hernandez. As for the need to prove the relationship beyond a reasonable doubt, in this civil matter, the issue is whether the preponderance of the evidence supports the ban on Hernandez's possession of a firearm. The facts of the relationship to be examined to determine if the required "domestic violence" was involved in the assault are to be drawn from a Stipulation of Facts agreed to by Hernandez as the basis for his court martial. Whether these then prove the existence of the necessary "domestic" relationship must be determined by reference to relevant definitions. The parties point to differing frames of reference for this task.

Officer Hernandez's frame of reference for understanding this question is drawn from federal statutes. Presumably, this is because his plea was to a federal offense, one defined by the United States Code and the UCMJ.

18 U.S.C. 921(a)(33) provides

> (A) Except as provided in subparagraph (C), the term "misdemeanor crime of domestic violence" means an offense that—
> > (i) is a misdemeanor under Federal, State, or Tribal [tribal] law; and
> > (ii) has, as an element, the use or attempted use of physical force, or the threatened use of a deadly weapon, committed by a current or former spouse, parent, or guardian of the victim, by a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, by a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim as a spouse, parent, or guardian, or by a person similarly situated to a spouse, parent, or guardian of the victim.

He also cites as another definition relevant to this discussion that is found in 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(32), which defines an "intimate partner" as > with respect to a person, the spouse of the person, a former spouse of the person, an individual who is a parent of a child of the person, and an individual who cohabitates or has cohabited with the person.

According to Hernandez, none of these relationships involve the limited relationship that Hernandez had with SPC T. prior to the date of the offense to which he pled guilty, an offense committed, as the Stipulation of Facts notes, after the "romantic relationship" had already terminated. There was no marriage, they were not a divorced couple and the "relationship" did not even reach the level of "cohabitation." Konzelman v. Konzelman, 307 N.J. Super. 150, 157 (App. Div. 1998). Thus, contrary to the position taken by the Prosecutor's Office and the City, he was not convicted of an offense involving "domestic violence" and the prohibition of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b.(2) does not apply. He is not precluded from possessing his duty weapon and can therefore function as a police officer.

In response, Perth Amboy looks to New Jersey law to understand what constitutes a domestic relationship that can result in a victim of violence coming within the definition of a "victim of domestic violence." N.J.S.A. 2C:25-19(d) provides > d. "Victim of domestic violence" means a person protected under this act and shall include any person who is 18 years of age or older or who is an emancipated minor and who has been subjected to domestic violence by a spouse, former spouse, or any other person who is a present household member or was at any time a household member. "Victim of domestic violence" also includes any person, regardless of age, who has been subjected to domestic violence by a person with whom the victim has a child in common, or with whom the victim anticipates having a child in common, if one of the parties is pregnant. "Victim of domestic violence" also includes any person who has been subjected to domestic violence by a person with whom the victim has had a dating relationship.

This definition is more expansive than either the definition at 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(33) of "misdemeanor crime of domestic violence," or that of "intimate partner" at 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(32). On their face, those two definitions do not purport to include within their coverage a person who "has had a dating relationship" with the person who has committed an act that, were the "victim" a spouse, one with whom the perpetrator had a child, or one with whom the perpetrator had cohabitated, would constitute such an act of domestic violence. What definition then guides the understanding of the coverage of the New Jersey prohibition when the conviction that is the alleged source for the bar was a federal, and not a state conviction?

Within the limits of the Second Amendment, the issue of who may or may not possess a weapon is a matter over which the states do have some ability to legislate. District of Columbia v. Heller, 554 U.S. 570 (2008). And it is certainly within the authority of the state to define those relationships for which it finds it necessary to provide some additional measure of protection for the participants. The occurrence of incidents of domestic violence and the tragic consequences that can occur need not be documented here. To the extent that New Jersey has an interest in preventing individuals from possessing firearms where such persons have committed violent offenses against individuals with whom they have had a relationship that the State has determined requires such enhanced protection, it is within the State's authority to define for itself those who should benefit from such protection. Thus, while the United States Code and the UMCJ have defined for federal and military, purposes those who are deemed to be "victims of domestic violence" more narrowly than has New Jersey, the State has seen fit to include within its definition of "victims of domestic violence" "any person who has been subjected to domestic violence by a person with whom the victim has had a dating relationship." And in this context at least, it is the State's definition that is the proper one to apply in determining whether its citizens should be prevented from possession of firearms.

In United States v. LaVictor, 848 F.3d 428, 458 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 137 S.Ct. 2231, 198 L.Ed. 2nd 671 (2017), the Sixth Circuit considered a case involving, among other issues, whether the defendant was a "habitual offender" who had committed a "domestic assault." 18 U.S.C. 117. This provision defined such an assault as > (1) any assault, sexual abuse, or serious violent felony against a spouse or intimate partner, or against a child of or in the care of the person committing the domestic assault; or . . .

> > (b) Domestic assault defined. In this section, the term "domestic assault" means an assault committed by a current or former spouse, parent, child, or guardian of the victim, by a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, by a person who is cohabitating with or has cohabitated with the victim as a spouse, parent, child, or > guardian, or by a person similarly situated to a spouse, parent, child, or guardian of the victim.

The court considered the scope of coverage, where, as in the case before it, the perpetrator and the victim where not married and had never been married.

> Although we have not defined what constitutes an "intimate partner," a similar domestic assault statute states that a "spouse or intimate partner" includes "a person who is or has been in a social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature with the abuser, as determined by the length of the relationship, the type of relationship, and the frequency of interaction between the persons involved in the relationship." 18 U.S.C. § 2266(7)(A)(i)(II); see United States v. St. John, 716 F.3d 491, 493 (8th Cir. 2013) (applying the definition to §117). Reading the plain language of the statute, we see no reason to limit the definition, as LaVictor encourages, to cohabitating partners. Rather, we look to the general nature of their relationship to determine, as the Eighth Circuit has done, whether C.B. and LaVictor constitute intimate partners.

New Jersey has obviously also understood that the nature of domestic relationships can go beyond the more traditional marriage and even cohabitation. As the two Circuit Courts understood, and as has become ever more apparent, domestic relationships may involve other sorts of arrangements and interactions. In the Federal enactments, 18 U.S.C. 117 and 18 U.S.C. 2266(7)(A)(i)(II)(a definitional section, part of 18 U.S.C. 2261, a statute that address "interstate domestic violence), these include relationships in which victim and perpetrator were, or still are, "intimate partner(s)." New Jersey has chosen to include as a covered relationship "a dating relationship." But how are we to understand what constitutes such a "dating relationship?" While it uses this term, N.J.S.A. 2C:25-19 does not define it. While it might be doubted that one date is enough to form such a "relationship", how often must the dating occur, over what period of time, and what degree of "connection" must the "dating" involve before it becomes what the statute speaks of?

It would appear that a reasonable way to determine if such a "dating relationship" exists is to look to the definitions and factors identified in the federal statutes and cases discussed above. Thus, an "intimate partner" includes a "social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature between the perpetrator and the victim. Cohabitation, and sexual connection, are not necessary elements of such a relationship. The length of time, the type of relationship, the indicia of romantic connection, the frequency of interaction, the holding out to the public of a romantic, socially intimate, more than merely "friendly" association, these all are factors that can be utilized to assess if the required "dating relationship" exists. LaVictor, at 458; St. John, at 493.

In this case, the evidence as to the nature of the relationship between then Sergeant Hernandez and SPC T. is drawn from the Stipulation of Facts which the Government and Hernandez, voluntarily and expressly entered into on June 29, 2016. As Hernandez by his "express consent" agreed to these facts, they are accepted herein as the FINDINGS OF FACTS concerning the connections between these two soldiers at Camp As Sayliyah, Qatar.

1. As of that date, both Hernandez and T. were members of the New Jersey Army National Guard.
2.They began a romantic relationship on or about September 11, 2014.
3. Specialist Pimental and SPC Restrepo each confirmed that they were aware that the two were dating.
4. Specialist Pimental described the two as "acting like a real couple, publicly holding hands even though it was against the rules, showing public affection, and going everywhere together."
5. SPC T. told Pimental that she was "happy she was in a relationship with Sergeant Hernandez.
6. First Sergeant (1SG) Stuart and Hernandez's company commander both observed the two holding hands on November 14, 2014, as they entered the MWR building, and saw that Hernandez dropped SPC T.'s hand when Hernandez saw Stuart.
7. Stuart counseled Hernandez about the "blatant act of fraternization" on November 14. He ordered that the romantic relationship be terminated "immediately."
8. Hernandez acknowledged this order.

9. Despite receiving and acknowledging this order to terminate the relationship, Hernandez continued "to engage in a romantic relationship until on or about 16 December 2014."

10. The Stipulation notes that while the two soldiers were in different companies, "they were in the same battalion, and soldiers within the battalion would frequently interact with each other regardless of their company of assignment." The base had a small geographic footprint.

11. Multiple soldiers at CAS knew Sergeant Hernandez and SPC T. were in a relationship, had seen them holding hands and being likewise affectionate to each other, and had seen or heard them arguing.

12. Although the romantic relationship had ended by December 24, 2014, the dispute that occurred at the Top-Off Club that evening was in regard to the issue of whether SPC T. was seeing other persons.

While the nature of the relationship between Hernandez and SPC T. was certainly not of the length or to the degree of combining living arrangements that were present in the relationships examined in LaVictor and St. John, it must be remembered that the New Jersey statute sweeps broadly to include relationships that involve dating, but do not necessarily go so far as to include sexual activity, cohabitation and other such entanglements. It must be understood that the Legislature felt it necessary in view of the events of the day to enlarge the types of interpersonal connections that fall within the definition of "domestic," such that violence perpetrated by one or conceivably both parties to the relationship to the other party would come within the scope of "domestic violence." Given this, by his own admission, Officer Hernandez had a romantic relationship with SPC T. that lasted from on or about September 11, 2014 through December 16, 2014, a period of three months. During that time they were physically affectionate in public settings, held hands, and at least SPC T. openly expressed her happiness at being in a relationship that Hernandez acknowledged was "romantic." It is unknown to what degree the two may have been "intimate" as that term may imply sexual relations. However, it is acknowledged that they were a couple, and this was well known. The nature of the romantic connection was apparently such that despite being counseled by his superior officer and indeed ordered by him to end the romantic relationship, Hernandez, who agreed that he received the order, ignored it and the romantic relationship continued even after that order was issued on November 14, until mid-December. And while the exact details of the discussion/argument that occurred on the evening of December 24, 2014, outside the Top-Off Club are not detailed in the Stipulation, it does relate that the "verbal dispute" was about "whether SPC T. was seeing other persons." This topic surely is understood to be related to the fact that the two were, until shortly before the incident, a romantically attached couple. The nature of this incident implies jealousy on Hernandez's part, certainly a frequent enough element in domestic violence.

Based upon the above findings, I FIND that the Officer Hernandez "had a dating relationship" with SPC T. Given this, I CONCLUDE that the "assault consummated with a battery" that he committed upon her on December 24, 2014, and for which he was guilty of a violation of 10 U.S.C. 928, UCMJ Article 128, was "a disorderly persons offense involving domestic violence" as meant in N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b. (2). As a "person" so convicted, Officer Hernandez is barred from possessing a firearm. Given this, he is unable to perform the essential duties of a police officer.

Conduct Unbecoming

In addition to charging that Hernandez was unable to perform the duties of a police officer due to his inability to possess a weapon, Perth Amboy also charged that his conduct was unbecoming a public employee. The unbecoming conduct was the commission of the "assault consummated by a battery" upon SPC T. As a police officer, Hernandez is held to a higher standard of conduct than even the typical public employee. Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Conduct that is unbecoming for a public employee is that conduct that offends publicly accepted standards of decency, Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998). It is the sort of conduct that can undermine public respect for public employees, and in the case of law enforcement personnel, the public's respect for law and for those that society employs to enforce its most important standards of conduct. Here, Officer Hernandez, while serving in the military as a military police officer, assaulted a woman without any legal justification. Such conduct is reprehensible in any citizen, but given that the perpetrator of this assault was a sworn civilian police officer and was also serving in a similar law enforcement capacity within the military, his misconduct is all the more troubling. That it occurred outside of his police duties for Perth Amboy is of no consequence. Based upon the facts of the case, and with these standards in mind, I CONCLUDE that Hernandez's conduct was unbecoming a public employee.

Conviction of Crime

Perth Amboy also charges that Hernandez was "convicted of a crime" and is thus in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(5), conviction of a crime. Under the UCMJ, a conviction in 2014 for assault consummated by battery, a violation of 10 U.S.C. 928, was subject to a maximum sentence that could include a bad conduct discharge, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and confinement for no more than six months. Manual for Courts-Martial United States (2012 Edition) Part IV Punitive Articles 54. Art. 128 e.(2). Under New Jersey law, this offense would not generally be considered a crime, but instead a disorderly person's offense. N.J.S.A. 2C:1-4. classifies offenses against the criminal laws of New Jersey.

> a. An offense defined by this code or by any other statute of this State, for which a sentence of imprisonment in excess of 6 months is authorized, constitutes a crime within the meaning of the Constitution of this State. Crimes are designated in this code as being of the first, second, third or fourth degree.
> b. An offense is a disorderly persons offense if it is so designated in this code or in a statute other than this code. . .Disorderly persons offenses and petty disorderly persons offenses are petty offenses and are not crimes within the meaning of the Constitution of this State. . . Conviction of such offenses shall not give rise to any disability or legal disadvantage based on conviction of a crime.
> c. . . . Insofar as any provision outside the code declares an offense to be a misdemeanor when such offense specifically provides a maximum penalty of 6 months' imprisonment or less, whether or not in combination with a fine, such provision shall constitute a disorderly persons offense.

Several cases have held that for the purposes of the prohibition enacted by the Lautenberg Amendment a simple misdemeanor assault conviction qualifies as a "misdemeanor crime of domestic violence." United States v. Smith, 171 F.3d 617, 620-21 (8th Cir. 1999). Thus, by definition the offense Hernandez was convicted of under federal law is considered a "misdemeanor crime." In State v. Wahl, 365 N.J.Super. 356, 374 (App. Div. 2004), the case dealt with the authority of a New Jersey court to order the return of weapons seized under the Prevention of Domestic Violence Act, N.J. Stat. Ann. §§ 2C:25-17 to -35. The Appellate Division concluded that the term "misdemeanor crime of domestic violence" as defined in 18 U.S.C. 921(a)(33)(A) and 27 C.F.R. 478.11 "must be construed . . . to include offenses that New Jersey law classifies as disorderly person's offenses." Thus, for the purposes of understanding the reach of gun possession prohibitions, a conviction in New Jersey for a "simple" assault, or an "assault with battery," while traditionally defined as a disorderly person offense, is, when perpetrated upon a person defined in New Jersey law as a "victim of domestic violence," also a "misdemeanor crime."

This connection of "misdemeanor" with "crime" might raise some doubt as to whether the conviction for assault consummated by a battery should be regarded as a "crime", at least in respect to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(5). However, as N.J.S.A. 2C:1-4 states, a "crime" within this State means an offense for which confinement may exceed six months, and the maximum confinement authorized for the federal offense here involved is not so great as to meet this definition of a "crime." A simple assault committed in New Jersey, punishable by no more than six months incarceration, is not a "crime." Given this, I CONCLUDE that while Hernandez is barred from possessing a firearm and cannot serve as a police officer, and while his conduct was unbecoming that expected of a public employee, he was not convicted of "crime" and that charge must fail.

Conclusion and Order

Based upon the facts of this case and the applicable statute, I FIND that there are no disputes of material fact that require a hearing and CONCLUDE that the contested case can be resolved by summary decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12(5). Based upon the evidence and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that Perth Amboy is entitled to summary decision in its favor.

I FIND that Officer Hernandez pled guilty to assault consummated by a battery, in violation of 10 U.S.C. 928, Section 928 of the UCMJ. I FIND that the assault was committed upon a person with whom the appellant had a "dating relationship." I CONCLUDE that under the terms of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-7 b. (2) it would be illegal for Hernandez to possess a firearm. As such, I CONCLUDE that he cannot fulfill the duties of a sworn police officer. Additionally, I CONCLUDE that his conduct was unbecoming a public employee. However I CONCLUDE that he was not convicted of a "crime." Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the City of Perth Amboy has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Hernandez violated N.J.A.C.4A:2-2.3(a)(3), inability to perform duties, and (a)(6) conduct unbecoming a public employee. I CONCLUDE that the charge of a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(5), conviction of a crime, is DISMISSED. As for the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (7), involving Hernandez's alleged failure to inform the Police Department of status of the military charges, no evidence as to this alleged failure has been presented as a part of the proofs associated with the motion for summary decision, which does not seek summary decision as to that charge. Given the dispositive outcome of the motion in favor of Perth Amboy, and the resulting termination of Hernandez, no findings are made as to that charge.

It is HEREBY ORDERED that Franklin Hernandez be removed from his position as a police officer for the City of Perth Amboy.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision

Mr. Angiulo:

Sorry to add to the confusion but I spoke to quickly.

Officer Higgs served 10 days from 1/23/17 through 2/1/17. The 10 day suspension was modified to a three day suspension which was served on 1/23, 1/24 and 1/25/17. The 5 day suspension from the PNDA 1.10.17 (not before you) was to be considered served on 1/26, 1/27, 1/28, 1/29 and 1/30. The remaining two days 1/31 and 2/1 are to be recorded as administrative leave without pay.

Sorry again for the confusion.

Mr. Forsman and Ms. Fay:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlement regarding Devin Higgs from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding it to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, the settlement indicates that Mr. Higgs and the City, agree, inter alia, to modify his 10 day suspension to a three day suspension as well as settling other disciplinary matters not before the Civil Service Commission. However, the settlement does not reflect how to record the remaining seven days he served his suspension. Before the matter can be acknowledged by the Commission, we require all periods of time to be accounted for in an employee's personnel record. In this regard, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or are the other suspension days referred to in the other matters to be used to cover that time period, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

WHEREAS, the County instituted disciplinary action against Hunt in the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated November 28, 2016 and in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated March 29, 2017, wherein the penalty of removal from the position of HSS1 was effective March 27, 2017 (hereinafter referred to as the "Disciplinary Action"); and

ii. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) or the Civil Rights Act of 1991, as amended, which, among other things, prohibit discrimination in employment on account of a person's race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

The aforesaid list shall not be deemed exhaustive but by way of example and the recitation of a release of all claims as set forth in 2.a. shall not be diminished thereby.

b. Releasor has not and shall not hereafter seek money damages against the County or the Releasees in any matter lodged within the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or with any Federal, State or local court or agency which has been settled herein. SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement") is made and entered into by and between Joseph R. Isa (hereinafter referred to as the "Employee"); the Probation Association of New Jersey, Case-Related Professional Unit (hereinafter referred to as "PANJ/CRPU"); and the State of New Jersey Judiciary, Passaic Vicinage (hereinafter referred to as the "Vicinage"), with its principal offices located in Paterson, New Jersey.

W I T N E S S E T H:

WHEREAS, the Employee was employed by the Vicinage in the capacity of a Senior Probation Officer assigned to the Vicinage's Probation Division; and

WHEREAS, during his employment with the Vicinage, the Employee was a member of the collective negotiations unit represented by PANJ/CRPU; and

WHEREAS, the Vicinage issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter referred to as "FNDA"), which terminated the Employee's employment, effective August 25, 2015, based upon charges of incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause consisting of a violation of the Code of Conduct for Judiciary Employees (Canon 3); and

WHEREAS, a copy of the FNDA is appended to this Agreement as Exhibit A, and it is incorporated into this Agreement by reference; and

WHEREAS, the Employee has appealed the termination to the Civil Service Commission (hereinafter referred to as "CSC"), which has transmitted the appeal to the Office of Administrative Law (hereinafter referred to as "OAL") where it has been assigned to the Hon. Leslie Z. Celentano, Administrative Law Judge, for hearing as a contested case; and

WHEREAS, the above-referenced hearing commenced on December 4, 2017, and it is scheduled to resume on March 29, 2018; and

WHEREAS, the parties to this Agreement desire to fully and finally settle all matters in dispute between them regarding the Employee's employment and termination; and

WHEREAS, in consideration for the settlement of all claims that have, or could have, been raised by the Employee and/or PANJ/CRPU relating to the Employee's employment and removal, and for other good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises and terms and conditions contained in this Agreement;

IT IS AGREED AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Vicinage will deem the Employee to have resigned from the above-referenced position, effective August 25, 2015. The Vicinage agrees that the Employee's records will reflect a general resignation, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.3, and it will issue an Amended FNDA reflecting the general resignation. The Employee understands and agrees that he is not entitled to, and shall not receive, any back pay or other form of compensation from the Vicinage.

2. The Employee agrees neither to seek nor accept employment, in any capacity, with the State of New Jersey Judiciary, any Vicinage, the Administrative Office of the Courts, Central Office or any of the municipal courts in this State, nor will the Employee seek an appointment as a Special Civil Part Officer, nor seek to work as a contract employee or as a volunteer, now and in the future, in any of the above-referenced entities.

3. The Employee agrees to withdraw the pending appeal, wherein he challenges his removal. The appeal, which is captioned Joseph Isa v. Judiciary-Passaic Vicinage, Agency Ref. No. 2017-909; OAL Dkt. No. CSV 15250-2016N, is hereby withdrawn with prejudice.

4. The Employee agrees not to appeal the subject matter underlying the discipline charges referenced in the FNDA in any other forum, including, but not limited to, a grievance or arbitration.

5. The parties acknowledge that a copy of this Agreement will be forwarded by the Vicinage's Human Resources Division to the Division of Pensions and Benefits, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 43:1-3 et seq. In addition, it is understood that any information regarding the underlying charges will be provided to the Division of Pensions and Benefits, upon request.

6. In the event the Vicinage is contacted in the future by a prospective employer regarding the Employee, it will provide a neutral job reference consisting of the following information: (a) the Employee's dates of service in the Vicinage; (b) his job title(s); and (c) his salary history. The Vicinage will not comment on the Employee's job performance.

7. In consideration of the promises made herein by the Vicinage, the Employee agrees to release and forever discharge all potential and existing claims arising out of his employment with the Vicinage, including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, Section 1981 et seq. of Title 1974, the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, the Occupational Safety and Health Act, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the Family and Medical Leave Act, the New Jersey Family Leave Act, the New Jersey Employer-Employee Relations Act, each of the foregoing as amended, and any and all other federal, State or local wage and hour laws, civil or human rights laws, or any other alleged violation of any local, State or federal law, regulation, or ordinance, and/or public policy, collective negotiations agreement, contract or tort or common law claim and/or any claim for attorneys' fees having any bearing whatsoever on this matter that the Employee now has or may have as of the date of this Agreement. The Employee acknowledges and agrees that this release extends to anyone who succeeds to his rights and responsibilities, including but not limited to, heirs, assignees or successors in interest, and that this release is given for the benefit of the State of New Jersey Judiciary, the Vicinage and such entities' employees, agents and representatives.

8. In consideration of the promises made herein by the Vicinage, the Union agrees to release and forever discharge all potential and existing claims arising out of, or in any way related to, the Employee's employment with the Vicinage, including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of the New Jersey Employer/Employee Relations Act, or any other alleged violation of any local, State or federal law, regulation or ordinance, and/or public policy, collective negotiations agreement, contract or tort or other common law claim and/or any claim for attorney's fees having any bearing on this matter, which it now has, or may have, as of the date of this Agreement.

9. The Employee acknowledges that he has carefully read and fully understands all of the provisions of this Agreement and was afforded the opportunity to review and discuss each provision with an attorney and/or PANJ/CRPU representative. To the extent that the Employee utilized the services of an attorney and/or PANJ/CRPU representative, he acknowledges that he is satisfied with the advice and services provided by that individual(s).

10. The Employee acknowledges that he is voluntarily executing this Agreement.

11. The parties acknowledge and agree that each party shall be responsible for their own attorney's fees and costs, if any.

12. The construction, interpretation and performance of this Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.

13. This settlement shall not be considered binding or as precedent in any other matter, except as set forth herein.

14. This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the parties and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings pertaining to the subject matter addressed in this Agreement. The parties represent and acknowledge that, in executing this Agreement, no one has relied upon any representation or statement not set forth herein with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement.

15. The parties acknowledge and agree that neither party is to be regarded as the prevailing party in the aforementioned appeal. The parties further acknowledge and agree that nothing contained herein shall be construed by a court or agency of competent jurisdiction or in any other legal matter or proceeding to be an admission of liability or wrongdoing by either party, except as otherwise specifically provided herein.

16. This Agreement may be executed in any number of counterparts, each of which, when executed and delivered, shall be deemed an original, but all of which together shall constitute one and the same instrument. Any signatory hereto may indicate acceptance of this Agreement with a facsimile signature, provided that an original signature is provided to all other parties thereafter.

17. If any term or condition of this Agreement shall be declared invalid or unenforceable, to any extent or in any application, by a court or agency of competent jurisdiction, then such term or condition shall automatically, and without any further action, be reformed so as to retain the fullest extent of any restriction therein permitted by law and the remainder of this Agreement, and such term or condition, except to such extent or in such application, shall not be affected thereby, and each and every term and condition of this Agreement shall be valid and enforced to the fullest extent and in the broadest application permitted by law.

18. The parties understand and agree that this Agreement is subject to, and shall take effect upon, its approval by the OAL and the CSC. Both parties agree to waive the right to file exceptions and cross-exceptions in the above-referenced appeal.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Allan Kenney.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

IN THE MATTER OF ALLAN KENNEY, JUVENILE JUSTICE COMMISSION.

Charles J. Sciarra, Esq., for appellant (Sciarra & Catrambone, LLC, attorneys)

Gregory R. Bueno, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Gurbir S. Grewel, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: September 23, 2015 Decided: January 26, 2018

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Senior Corrections Office Alan Kenney (Kenney) appeals the decision of respondent, the Juvenile Justice Commission (JJC) to remove him from employment. By Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) dated March 20, 2014 (J-1), respondent charged Kenney with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a): 6. Conduct unbecoming a public employee; and 12. Other sufficient cause defined as violation of JJC human resources policies: H19.7 C.6 Inappropriate physical contact; C-9 Falsification; C-12 Conduct unbecoming a public employee and N.J.A.C. Title 13:95-3.2 Use of force policy.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated April 20, 2015, removing him from employment based upon those charges, effective April 20, 2015. Rhodes appealed the FNDA to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 21, 2015. The matter was heard on July 9, 2015. By way of letter dated August 20, 2015, appellant waived the 180-Day Rule between the time of the completion of the hearing and submission of simultaneous closing briefs. The record closed on September 23, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Respondent alleges that on or about January 12, 2014, while on duty at New Jersey Training School in Jamesburg, New Jersey, appellant, a senior correction Officer assigned to that area, initiated inappropriate physical force against a resident when he pushed the resident backward against a wall. It also alleged that Kenney used excessive force when he used hand- and knee-strikes while restraining the resident. The respondent has also alleged that on or about January 12, 2014, appellant provided false information concerning the incident during his initial report. Respondent argues that appellant's actions demonstrate an abuse of his authority and jeopardized the safety of the resident and his fellow officers. It is further argued that appellant's false statement demonstrated a lack of respect for his position as a law enforcement officer and a role model for troubled youth, and that such actions constitute conduct unbecoming a public employee.

Eric McLeod (McLeod), a senior investigator with the JJC, testified on behalf of respondent. He has been employed by JJC for seventeen years. He previously was a corrections officer from 1998 through 2000, and a probation officer from 1992 to 1994, in Bergen County. McLeod has been trained for his current position, which calls on him to investigate sexual assaults, and staff and administrator incidents. He investigated the incident of January 12, 2014.

The incident occurred at the New Jersey training school, and involved the appellant, Officer Collazo (Collazo), and a resident, D.S. The appellant received discipline in the form of removal, and as a result of the investigation, Collazo was given a sixty-day suspension.

McLeod handled both appellant's and Collazo's investigation. He reviewed photographs that had been taken of Kenney and D.S., conducted interviews of Kenney, Collazo, Sergeant Fisher (Fisher), and several residents. McLeod did not interview D.S., as D.S. refused, having declined after being read his Miranda rights. McLeod wrote reports which summarized his findings. This is his regular practice, and it is required by JJC. He acknowledged signing the January 12, 2014 Investigation Report (J-3), and also reviewed the January 12, 2014 Narrative Report of Senior Corrections Office (SCO) A. Kenney (J-11).

McLeod stated that D.S. was in the day room, and intentionally hit his head on the bathroom door, after which he was called into the hallway by officers. McLeod then reviewed Report TS-140112-02 Juvenile Statement Form of D.S., dated January 12, 2014 (J-8). He stated that Collazo called D.S. into the hallway, and Collazo and appellant talked to D.S. about why he was hitting his head. Kenney approached D.S., initiated contact, and the struggle ensued. He reviewed an Investigation Report dated January 31, 2014 (J-12), which is a memo of an interview with Kenney that the appellant signed. Kenney said that while talking to D.S. about hitting his head, he saw that D.S. was belligerent. D.S. then lunged at him, which resulted in the altercation. Kenney changed his statement, calling it more of a flinch than a lunge. D.S. broke free, Kenney applied hand strikes, and both went down to the ground. Kenney did not recall D.S. using force, but said that he may have pushed Kenney. Kenney admitted to striking D.S. in the head, and striking him with knees and with a closed hand. No one other than Collazo saw the incident. Officers did respond to an emergency code called over the radio. Investigation Report of Eric D. Cloud, dated February 3, 2014 (J-3), at page 15, indicated D.S. was taking a step toward Kenney, and raised his hand to waist-level.

At this time the video was set up to be reviewed. McLeod stated that he had previously seen the video. At the start of the video, McLeod identified D.S. sitting in the second row from the front, in the day room. He identified D.S. getting-up and exiting the room, and the video shows what seems more of not banging his head so much as tapping his head against the door, (in a manner that is barely discernable). D.S. then returned from the bathroom, and the first video concluded. McLeod concluded that D.S. did make physical contact with his head to the bathroom door. The video from the hallway (J-5) was then reviewed. McLeod had seen it before, and used this video in his investigation. He identified Officer Collazo at the end of the hall. He identified the appellant standing at the podium.

D.S. entered into the video by the podium, which was obscured somewhat by the time stamp. Appellant was at the podium, and D.S. was standing in front of him. McLeod explained that the appellant asked D.S. why he banged his head, and on the video Collazo can be seen moving closer to D.S. while appellant remained at the podium.

McLeod continued, noting that Collazo's back was to the wall, away from D.S. Kenney then stepped-out from behind the podium. He told McLeod during his interview that at this point D.S. was being belligerent, (which cannot be discerned from the video). Appellant was now leaning on the podium, and D.S. moved away from the wall toward the officers. Kenney leaned off the podium, stood-up and took another step. At this time D.S. is in front of the podium and Kenney is in front of D.S. Kenney then moved toward D.S. Collazo told McLeod that D.S. did not lunge (which is consistent with the video). Both individuals bounced back and forth and then went to the ground. Another officer identified as Sergeant Fisher then arrived. Fisher had been called by appellant, who at this time was on the ground subduing D.S. Appellant got up, D.S. remained on the floor, but was not restrained. Upon arriving, Fisher put his foot on D.S., and kept it there for a while—D.S. was not trying to move. Five to six officers arrived on the scene, and D.S. was taken up off the ground, and placed against the wall. D.S. was taken out of the camera view. Medical Officer North then walked down the hall and was speaking with officers at the podium as the video concluded.

McLeod further testified that Kenney had told Collazo that D.S. had lunged, which Collazo believed is inconsistent with what was on the video. McCleod noted that this was the same video he observed in conducting his investigation. He reiterated that D.S. was moving backward as appellant lunged.

McLeod explained that D.S. was charged with assault on a staff member, and a disciplinary infraction report was filed as a result of this altercation. D.S. was found guilty, and given a five-day room restriction. McLeod reviewed D.S.' Notice of Violation (J-15), as reported by appellant, which stated that D.S. assaulted him by pushing him to the floor, and striking him in the face. McLeod also reviewed Room Restriction/Separation Form, D.S., J201B Assault on Staff, dated January 12, 2014 (J-16), which is the prehearing restriction. He did not believe that the allegations contained in J-15 or J-16 are supported by the video. McLeod identified Disposition Recommendations By Office of Investigation, D.S., Inconclusive and Unfounded, Wimson J. Crespo, Sr., Chief, dated February 19, 2014 (J-17), which deemed allegations by Kenney unfounded and inconclusive, and Disposition Recommendations By Office of Investigations, SCO Allan Kenney, Substantiated, Wimson J. Crespo, Sr., Chief, dated February 19, 2014 (J-18), substantiating charges against appellant. McLeod had investigated prior discipline against Kenney.

On cross-examination, McLeod acknowledged that he did not list or mention the day room video in his report. He stated that the lack of its inclusion does not make his a false report, as it was merely an oversight. He noted that the video was cut-off before D.S. was taken into the hallway. The videos were reviewed again with McLeod. He did not know how many frames per second comprise the frame rate of the video. He stated there is nothing inappropriate about pulling D.S. out. He stated that an officer does not have an obligation to wait to be assaulted, and conceded that no one had the benefit of the video, when Collazo and Kenney made their reports.

The next witness to testify was Captain Edwin Gonzales (Gonzales), who is employed by the JJC. At the time of hearing Gonzales had been a captain for two years and seven months, and described his work duties as overseeing custody, security, and being in charge of training. He teaches use of force classes to JJC officers, as well as firearms certification and recertification. He noted that JJC has policies in which officers are trained regarding the use of force, and they are only tested as recruits. Gonzales is also trained on how to write incident reports. He reviewed Exhibit R-2, New Jersey Juvenile Justice Commission, Office of the Deputy Executive Director of Operations, Subject Use of Force, Effective Date November 4, 2011, which is the policy. The policy defines non-deadly force, states when force is appropriate, and gives examples from the policy. Gonzalez noted that the expectation is that reports will be true and accurate when submitted, and noted that the JJC keeps records of training. He reviewed the training roll call from September 28, 2007 (R-4), noting that Kenney was present. He noted that use of force was the subject of that session. This demonstrated that Kenney was present and was trained in the use of force. He also reviewed the Juvenile Justice Commission, Custody Discipline Table H-19.7 (R-3) regarding inappropriate physical contact, and noted that the recommended penalty range for a first offense would run from an official reprimand to removal. A second's offense would be removal. A charge of falsification recommends for a first offense a range from official reprimand to removal, and a second offense would be official written reprimand to removal. Such a charge would apply to an incident report. Gonzales stated that officers are trained two times a year in areas including use of force and report writing. Retraining is needed. He stated that the use of force training is about one-hundred and twenty slides of a PowerPoint presentation. He stated that the retraining gives examples of improper use of force. When resistance ends force ends. On cross-examination, Gonzales noted that the use of force does occur daily. Gonzales stated that use of force is ideally a last resort, and that it is a violation of policy to use force in response to verbal insults.

Appellant Kenney testified in his own behalf. He stated that he started in September 2007, and went to Sea Girt for training and became a corrections officer. Appellant then became a senior corrections officer. He has had prior discipline, but nothing to do with the use of force. He has had to use physical force previously, and has been assaulted. He was injured and bitten in the face, punched in the face, kicked, pushed, and has had to go to the hospital. Kenney was out of work for six months after a previous incident when he was assaulted. He estimated using force approximately twenty times.

With regard to the January 12, 2014, incident, he noted that he was terminated the following April of that year. He performed the same job during that time from the incident to his removal. He noted that one other officer was on that particular wing of the facility at that time. There are thirty residents between two wings. Residents have committed crimes, but they are young.

The video was reviewed again. D.S. was new, and appellant was looking out for D.S., as new residents can be given difficulty. He is aware where the camera is located. Appellant asked why D.S. banged his head, and D.S. responded that he can do that, and he became belligerent. Appellant made it clear that D.S. was not in trouble. He called Officer Fisher twice, but had not yet called in a code. Everything appellant did to try to calm D.S. down only made him angrier. D.S. balled his fists and cursed at him. Appellant then called the Sergeant, and asked him for back up. D.S. got angrier, so appellant moved out from behind the podium to try and de-escalate the matter. Appellant assumed a defensive position when D.S.'s hand came up and determined that D.S. was an immediate threat. Kenney took the appropriate action. When appellant physically engaged D.S, appellant stated that they were beyond verbal. D.S. was a threat, and Kenney engaged D.S. and pulled him down.

Appellant got out of his grasp, D.S. resisted, and Collazo and Kenney subdued D.S. Once D.S. stopped resisting, appellant stated he stopped using force. Appellant was pulling D.S.'s arms behind his back, when Fisher approached. Fisher told him to let him go.

Appellant wrote-up an assault on staff charge against D.S., and recalls that D.S. was convicted of assaulting him. With regard to the use of the word "lunge," he stated that he sought advice of colleagues, supervisors, and union reps. He described the situation for them, and all agreed that the word lunge was appropriate. Kenney was not trying to be intentionally misleading. He knew that a camera was on at all times, and he believes that his actions were reasonable. Appellant does not know if the JJC reviewed the video, or if they had the ability to.

Kenney reiterated that he was leaning on the podium, and was trying to look relaxed, and that when he told D.S. to back-up, D.S. did not back-up, and so he engaged him. He did not perceive D.S. backing away toward the wall. He observed D.S. pulling his hand toward his chest, and resisting putting his hands behind his back. Noting that D.S. told appellant to "suck my dick," appellant did not take it as an insult, rather he took it as verbal aggression and as a manifestation of his anger.

Appellant does not know on how many instances he has implemented use of force. He believes he has suffered several injuries which have taken a physical toll on him, but does not believe that they have taken a mental toll. He denied that these instances have made him jumpy, but stated they have made him more aware and less complacent.

Considering the foregoing[1], I FIND that on January 12, 2014, resident D.S. was in a day room at the New Jersey Training School in Jamesburg, New Jersey, when he put his head in physical contact with the door to the bathroom. Appellant, a senior correction Officer assigned to that area, called D.S. into the hallway to ask him what he was doing. An animated discussion followed. While D.S. did raise his hand at one point, he did not appear to be behaving in a threatening, menacing or aggressive manner toward appellant, and appeared to be backing away from appellant, consistent with appellant's testimony as to his verbal instructions, when appellant came from behind the podium and pushed D.S. to the wall. In the ensuing scuffle, appellant appeared to use hand and knee strikes while attempting to restrain D.S., and another officer, Collazo, assisted in restraining D.S. before help arrived. In filing an initial report describing the incident, appellant stated that D.S. "lunged" at him, a statement which is not borne out by reviewing the video, as D.S. at no time lunged toward appellant or in any way appeared to move aggressively or threateningly toward him. Appellant also brought administrative charges against D.S. for assaulting an officer, which resulted in discipline against D.S. Appellant was properly trained in the use of force.

[1] At hearing, ruling on an objection by appellant to photographs of D.S. and appellant after the incident (J-7) was reserved upon. In its closing brief, respondent withdrew its request that the document be included in the record, and it was given no weight or consideration.

To the extent that respondent has charged appellant with "falsification," citing inclusion of the word "lunged" in the initial report as the basis for that charge, and to the extent that it has been found as fact that "lunged" did not properly reflect D.S.'s actions during the incident, it must be determined whether or not that inaccurate description was intentional. Additionally, appellant's intent in bringing the charges against D.S. must also be examined. To do that, the credibility of appellant's testimony must be examined.

Credibility is best described as that quality of testimony or evidence which makes it worthy of belief. The Supreme Court of New Jersey considered the issue of credibility in In Re Estate of Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). The Court pronounced:

> Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. [Ibid. at 522.] See also, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, (1954), State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6 (App. Div.1955).

In order to assess credibility, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Furthermore, a trier-of-fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura- Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Respondent alleges that appellant's describing D.S. in his initial report as having "lunged at him" was an intentional misstatement of a material fact, which constituted a provision of false information. Appellant states that he did not intend to mislead, and that he described the situation to colleagues, superiors and union reps, and that they all agreed that "lunged" was the correct word. He further stated that although he knew that cameras were running, he did not know if his employers had the ability to review the video of the incident. While nothing stated is inherently unbelievable, appellant's shopping his language to so many people could cut either way. It is conceivable that he was trying to justify his actions, it was also possible that he was looking for the correct phrasing in consulting colleagues and union reps and superiors so as to give an accurate depiction of the incident. However, given the common usage of the word lunge, coupled with an objective viewing of the video, that so many people who had not seen the event nor reviewed the video all agreed that "lunge" was the correct word tends toward a finding that the event had not been accurately described to them. If it had been, it is likely that at least one would have noted that lunge was not the correct word. Furthermore, even if appellant did believe that use of force was justified, a review of the video makes it hard to believe that he reasonably believed that the incident warranted charges against D.S. for assault of an officer, as nothing depicted fits that description. Accordingly, I FIND that appellant's story does not hang together, and that respondent has demonstrated that it is more likely than not that appellant's consulting colleagues and filing of charges was an intentional attempt to justify the action that he knew was excessive.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Under the Civil Service Act, a public employee may be subject to major discipline for various employment-related offenses, N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6. In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:-2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J.

143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

The respondent has charged appellant with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6, (Conduct unbecoming a public employee); and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)12. (Other sufficient cause), specifically, violations of JJC human resources policies: H19.7 C.6 (Inappropriate physical contact); C-9 (Falsification); C-12 (Conduct unbecoming a public employee) and N.J.A.C. Title 13:95-3.2 (Use of force policy).

Regarding the charges against appellant for conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), to the extent that appellant is charged with violation of JJC human resources policy H19.7 C-12, which addresses unbecoming conduct, consideration of such violation will be addressed in concert with the current analysis. "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that "adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also, In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 555 (1998) [quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)]. Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) [quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)]. Suspension or removal may be justified where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off-duty. In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

In the present matter, the record reflects that appellant utilized physical force in his encounter with a juvenile resident, D.S. on January 12, 2014. He initiated physical contact that did not appear to be commensurate with what D.S.'s actions warranted. He described the incident in his initial report in a manner which was not consistent with what was depicted in the video of the incident and that appeared designed to justify his actions, and he filed charges against D.S. for assaulting him, an allegation which is not apparent from the video. This clearly constitutes behavior which could adversely affect the morale of the facility and undermine public respect in the services provided. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6 (conduct unbecoming a public employee), and JJC human resources policy H19.7 C-12, should be and are hereby SUSTAINED.

Appellant is also charged with a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)12. (Other sufficient cause). Specifically, appellant is charged with violations of JJC human resources policies H19.7 C.6 (Inappropriate physical contact); C-9 (Falsification); C-12 (Conduct unbecoming a public employee) and N.J.A.C. Title 13:95-3.2 (Use of force policy). Violation of policy H19.7 C-12 has already been addressed and SUSTAINED within the discussion of the violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6. The JJC Human Resources policies violations appear to correspond to the Juvenile Justice Commission Custody Discipline Table H-19.7 (R-3), specifically Section C which addresses personal conduct violations.

The record reflects that appellant inappropriately initiated physical contact against resident D.S. by taking him down when D.S. was not acting in a manner so as to threaten D.S. or others or that would otherwise justify such. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that a violation of JJC human resources policies H19.7 C.6, which prohibits "inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident, employee or adult inmate" (R-3), should be and is hereby SUSTAINED.

Section C9 of that document addresses "Falsification" which is defined as an "intentional misstatement of material fact in connection with work, employment application attendance, or in any record, report, investigation or other proceeding." In the present matter, the record reflects that appellant authored a report describing the incident at issue in a manner which is not consistent with what actually occurred, and did so in a manner which appeared designed to justify the actions taken. Specifically he described D.S. as having "lunged" at him, a description which connotes aggressive physical behavior by D.S. directed toward appellant that simply is not a fair description of any action by D.S. depicted in the video of the incident, constituting a misstatement of a material fact necessary for one to determine the appropriateness of the action. This is compounded by appellant's filing charges of assaulting an officer against D.S. that simply are not supported by an objective review of the video. Even if appellant reasonably believed that use of force was justified, it belies credulity that he reasonably believed he had been assaulted. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that that a violation of JJC human resources policies H19.7 C.9, which prohibits "Falsification" (R-3), should be and is hereby SUSTAINED.

N.J.A.C. 13:95-3.2 provides that:

> a. In any case that a custody staff member uses force while on-duty, the custody staff member shall only use that force that is objectively reasonable and necessary under the totality of the circumstances as known by the custody staff member at the time force is used.
> b. A custody staff member may use the amount of force reasonably necessary to accomplish the law enforcement objective. If the individual resists, the custody staff member may increase the degree of force as necessary to accomplish the law enforcement objective, but as soon as the individual submits, the custody staff member shall reduce the degree of force used.

In the present matter, the record reflects that circumstances did not necessitate the degree of force utilized by appellant. Specifically, as D.S. did not act aggressively or threateningly toward appellant, and appeared to be backing away from him, it is not clear that any force was objectively reasonable or necessary under the totality of the circumstances as known by appellant at the time. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the charge of violating N.J.A.C. 13:95-3.2 should be SUSTAINED.

Given the foregoing, I further CONCLUDE that the charge of violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)12. (Other sufficient cause) must be SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

In West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962), which was decided more than fifty years ago, our Supreme Court first recognized the concept of progressive discipline, under which "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007) (citing West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962)). The Court therein concluded that "consideration of past record is inherently relevant" in a disciplinary proceeding, and held that an employee's "past record" includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously brought to the attention of and admitted by the employee." West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523-524 (1962).

As the Supreme Court explained in In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 30 (2007), "[s]nice Bock, the concept of progressive discipline has been utilized in two ways when determining the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." According to the Court:

> . . . First, principles of progressive discipline can support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct . . .
>
> The second use to which the principle of progressive discipline has been put is to mitigate the penalty for a current offense . . . for an employee who has a substantial record of employment that is largely or totally unblemished by significant disciplinary infractions . . .
>
> . . . [T]hat is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when . . . the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.

[In re Hermann, 192 N.J. at 30-33 (citations omitted).]

In the case of In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007), the Court decided that the principle of progressive discipline did not apply to the sanction of a police officer for sleeping on-duty and, notwithstanding his unblemished record, it reversed the lower court and reinstated a removal imposed by the Board. The Court noted the factor of public-safety concerns in matters involving the discipline of correction officers and police officers, who must uphold the law and "present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007)

In the matter of In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182 (2011), a Camden County pump-station operator was charged with falsifying records and abusing work hours, and the ALJ imposed removal. The Civil Service Commission (Commission) modified the penalty to a four-month suspension and the appellate court reversed. The Court re-examined the principle of progressive discipline. Acknowledging that progressive discipline has been bypassed where the conduct is sufficiently egregious, the Court noted that "there must be fairness and generally proportionate discipline imposed for similar offenses." In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182, 208 (2011). Finding that the totality of an employee's work history, with emphasis on the "reasonably recent past," should be considered to assure proper progressive discipline, the court modified and affirmed (as modified) the lower court and remanded the matter to the Commission for reconsideration.

Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes."

[Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).]

In the present matter, respondent has brought and sustained charges of violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6, (Conduct unbecoming a public employee); and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)12. (Other sufficient cause), specifically, violations of JJC human resources policies: H19.7 C.6 (Inappropriate physical contact); C-9 (Falsification); C-12 (Conduct unbecoming a public employee) and NJAC Title 13:95-3.2 (Use of force policy). The record also reflects that on April 15, 2013, just shy of nine months before the incident at issue, appellant entered into a settlement agreement in which he pled guilty to charges of incompetence, inefficiency or failure to perform public duties; conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause, specifically, violations of JJC Disciplinary Policies covering Neglect of duty, Physical or mental abuse of a resident; and Falsification (R-1). The agreement called for, and appellant served, a ninety-day suspension. Sixty days were unpaid and thirty days were recorded as a record-only suspension. A final notice of disciplinary action was issued memorializing and ratifying the agreement.

Taken together with the settlement agreement, which constitutes the appellant's substantive disciplinary history, the charges sustained in the present matter constitute a second offense for Conduct Unbecoming and a second offense for falsification. The remaining charges appear to be a first offense. Juvenile Justice Commission Custody Discipline Table H-19.7 (R-3) recommends appropriate penalty ranges for specific infractions. For a second infraction of Conduct Unbecoming, the table recommends a penalty range of ten days to removal. For a second offense of Falsification, it recommends a penalty range of Written Reprimand to Removal. For a first offense of Inappropriate Physical Contact, the table recommends a penalty range of Written Reprimand to Removal. The table is not binding on this tribunal, and the document itself notes that management reserves the right to deviate from the recommended penalties; however, the recommended penalty ranges appear to be reasonable and consistent with progressive discipline.

Considering the foregoing, the totality of appellant's history and the specifics of the present matter, I CONCLUDE that the behavior exhibited in the present matter is not aberrational, but rather a continuation of a pattern that seems to be increasing in seriousness and frequency rather than decreasing. Appellant does not seem to be learning from his mistakes, but rather appears to be compounding them. When an officer is involved in an incident like the present matter presents, it is to be expected that an officer will deal with the incident, and its aftermath, in an honest, forthright, responsible manner. To expect otherwise is to invite disorder and confusion in responding to such instances, possibly leading to worse, more dangerous situations, and serves to undermine the confidence the public places in the correctional system. Appellant has failed to respond honestly and forthrightly, and has acted in an unbecoming manner, twice in fairly short order. It cannot be tolerated. Furthermore, although the violation of N.J.A.C. 13:95-3.2 (Use of Force) and of inappropriate contact are only first infractions, taken together with the previous guilty plea to physical or mental abuse of a resident it reflects two occasions, again in fairly short order, which reveal a pattern of not acting with the appropriate degree of care toward the juvenile individuals in his charge. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's action in removing the appellant from his position was justified.

DECISION AND ORDER

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Frank Maisano, Aberdeen Township

CSC Docket No. 2016-2614
OAL Docket No. CSV 03222-16

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 20, 2018 (HS)

The appeal of Frank Maisano, a Police Officer with Aberdeen Township, of his 10 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kathleen M. Calemmo (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on October 31, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on March 27, 2018, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the 10 working day suspension. Rather, the Commission modified the penalty to a six working day suspension.

DISCUSSION

The appointing authority suspended the appellant for 10 working days on charges of incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, insubordination, inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty and other sufficient cause. Specifically, it asserted that the appellant operated a motor vehicle unit with reckless disregard for the safety of others resulting in a collision. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing as a contested case.

In her initial decision and based on the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, the ALJ found that the appellant had been employed with the Aberdeen Township Police Department (ATPD) for 21 years, 18 years of which were served as a Police Officer. On November 26, 2014, at a few minutes after midnight, the appellant responded to a call for assistance from Raymond W. Campbell, Police Officer. The appellant was driving an unmarked police vehicle known as a "stealth car" that was not equipped with rooftop lights. The appellant believed Campbell was in trouble so he expedited his response to the emergency call. The appellant stated he had "tunnel vision" caused by recent events in the news against police officers and was motivated by a desire to reach Campbell. The appellant was originally proceeding to the call behind Charles Trucillo, Police Officer. He passed Trucillo on the left by crossing over double yellow lines to become the lead vehicle. The appellant's emergency lights were not activated, and it was unknown whether his sirens were activated. As the appellant approached the intersection at Railroad Plaza and Main Street, his light was red. The appellant applied his brakes but did not stop at the red light at the intersection. When the appellant entered the intersection against the traffic light, he did not immediately notice the other vehicle in the intersection that was travelling eastbound with the green light passing directly in front of him. When the appellant saw the other vehicle, he applied his brakes, but continued to proceed to the emergency call without stopping. The other vehicle continued to proceed eastbound without stopping. The intersection has a pronounced curvature or hump in the road. The appellant activated his emergency lights after he went through the intersection as he continued to proceed to the location of the emergency call. He traveled to the location at speeds that at different points reached 75 miles per hour, 79 miles per hour and 83 miles per hour while travelling on roads that were posted as 35 miles per hour. Upon arriving at the location of the call and after the suspect was in custody, the appellant noticed damage to the front bumper of his vehicle and notified Darryl Oliver, Police Sergeant, by radio that he had a minor accident. The appellant completed an Accident Report stating that he made contact with another vehicle while crossing an intersection. The damage to the vehicle cost ATPD $1,068.05 to repair.

The ALJ upheld all but the charges of insubordination and inability to perform duties. With respect to the penalty, the ALJ noted that the appellant had received a four-day suspension and was reprimanded on five occasions. Based upon this disciplinary history, the ALJ determined that major discipline was warranted. After considering both progressive discipline and the possible impact upon the public caused by the unsafe and reckless operation of a motor vehicle in response to an emergency, the ALJ determined that a 10 working day suspension was an appropriate penalty.

In his exceptions, the appellant contends that the ALJ erred in finding that the appellant's emergency lights were not activated. He argues that the correct wording for this factual finding should have been that the appellant's emergency lights were not fully activated since the ALJ indicated as much elsewhere in her initial decision. As such, the appellant maintains that the ALJ should also have found that the appellant activated the full complement of his emergency lights after he went through the intersection. In addition, the appellant contends that it was inconsistent for the ALJ to find that it was not determinative whether there was a collision but also find an accident and use that fact as determinative in sustaining the charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee. Further, he contends that the ALJ gave no weight to the charges she dismissed in upholding the 10 working day suspension. The appellant argues that even if the ALJ was correct in believing that his conduct warranted major discipline, the proper penalty was a six working day suspension.

In its reply to exceptions, the appointing authority maintains that all of the pertinent legal analysis and conclusions in the initial decision rest on the ALJ's determination that the appellant's emergency lights were "not fully activated" or "not fully engaged" (appointing authority's emphasis). Further, ATPD rules allow no consideration for partial activation. In addition, the appointing authority argues that the facts clearly demonstrated that the appellant collided with something unintentionally – the "literal definition" of an accident. The appointing authority also contends that notwithstanding the dismissal of certain of the charges, a penalty of a 10 working day suspension was appropriate in that those dismissals did not bear on the "central justification" for disciplinary action: the appellant's reckless and dangerous actions.

While the Commission agrees with the ALJ's determination of the charges, it disagrees with the recommendation to uphold the penalty of a 10 working day suspension. In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 463. Moreover, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). In this matter, the appellant was a long term employee whose disciplinary history included only minor discipline, much of which was remote in time. Further, the ALJ dismissed some of the charges. The foregoing circumstances justify a reduction of the original penalty. Nevertheless, the appellant's infraction was serious and still warrants major discipline.

Accordingly, the Commission finds a six working day suspension to be the appropriate penalty.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to four days of back pay, benefits and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), an award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. Mar. 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In this case, the Commission agreed with the ALJ's determination sustaining most of the charges and only modified the penalty. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in imposing a 10 working day suspension was not justified under the circumstances and modifies that action to a six working day suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted four days of back pay, benefits and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned during this period. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

BEFORE KATHLEEN M. CALEMMO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Frank Maisano (Maisano), a Police Officer with the Aberdeen Township Police Department (ATPD), appeals a 10-day suspension he received as major discipline for operating his police vehicle in response to a call for assistance with reckless disregard for the safety of others and the subsequent Internal Affairs investigation surrounding same. ATPD sustained the following charges: incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1); insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); inability to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3); conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); and other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12).[1] ATPD also determined that Maisano violated Aberdeen Township Police Department General Rules and Regulations as follows: 3:1.8 Obedience to Laws and Regulations; 3:4.5 Operation of Motor Vehicle; 3:4.7 Reporting Accidents; 3:4.1 Damaged – Inoperative Property or Equipment; and 3:13 Operation of Police Vehicle. Maisano denied the allegations as baseless, maintained he did nothing wrong, and submitted that he acted appropriately due to the emergent nature of the call for assistance.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 18, 2015, ATPD issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) setting forth the charges and specifications made against Maisano. (R-20.) Following departmental hearings held on August 6, 2015 and November 23, 2015, ATPD issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) on January 21, 2016 sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice and suspending Maisano from employment for ten working days. (R-21.) Appellant appealed on January 28, 2016. The matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on February 29, 2016 for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52: 14F-1 to 13. The hearings were held on May 9 and May 19, 2017. The record remained open to allow the parties to submit post-hearing submissions and a chronology of past discipline. The record closed on September 29, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSIONS AND FINDINGS

The following facts are not disputed. Just past midnight on November 26, 2014, Maisano, while on duty, responded to a call for assistance from Officer Raymond W. Campbell (Campbell). Maisano drove a black Dodge Charger, known as a "stealth car," because it does not have roof lights or markings usually associated with traditional police vehicles. Maisano reacted to the urgency in Campbell's voice heard over the radio and expedited his response to the call. While on route, Maisano made the decision to proceed through a red light at an intersection located at Main Street and Railroad Plaza in Matawan Borough. Maisano was travelling north and as he crossed the intersection, another vehicle, travelling east, passed directly in front of Maisano's car. This particular intersection has a hump or crown in the road. Maisano did not have his emergency lights activated when he crossed through the intersection. Upon arriving at the scene and after the suspect was in custody, Maisano examined his bumper and seeing damage, reported to his Sergeant that he had a minor accident.

[1] The notices of disciplinary action reference N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), other sufficient cause. Effective March 5, 2012, former (a)(11) was recodified as (a)(12).

TESTIMONY

Sergeant Darryl James Oliver (Oliver) has been a police officer with ATPD for eighteen years and a sergeant for the past eleven of those years. He was Maisano's supervisor and the officer in charge on the night in question. Oliver was at headquarters when Campbell's call came over the radio asking for assistance. He responded to the call. After arriving at the scene, Oliver encountered Maisano who told him he was involved in a minor motor vehicle accident while on route. Maisano showed Oliver the damage to his vehicle located on the front bumper grill area on the driver's side. Oliver testified that standard operating procedures required him to write a memo describing Maisano's account of the accident to his superior, Captain Allan Geyer. In the memo, Oliver reported that Maisano while responding to Campbell's call for help was involved in a motor vehicle accident causing minor damage to his vehicle. (R-1.) ATPD maintains a mobile video recorder (MVR) system that was installed and operated in selected police vehicles. Maisano's Charger had an MVR that recorded the incident. (R-23.) Oliver testified that he reviewed the video in the early morning hours of November 26, 2016. The video was played at the hearing. As we watched the video, Oliver identified Maisano's vehicle as it was proceeding behind Officer Trucillo's vehicle. Both vehicles were responding to the call. Maisano then proceeded to pass Trucillo's vehicle on the left by crossing over the double lines in the roadway. From the video, and the rates of speed recorded, Oliver observed that Maisano applied his brakes as he approached the intersection, but did not come to a full stop at the red light. As Maisano entered the intersection going north, a civilian vehicle travelling east passed directly in front of him. Oliver testified that Maisano struck the vehicle based on what he observed on the video and because Maisano told him that he was involved in an accident. Neither vehicle stopped. As depicted in the video, it was not until after Maisano cleared the intersection that the emergency light bar in his vehicle was activated. In response to direct questions, Oliver testified that the vehicle's siren was shown as a capital letter "S" and he explained the blinking "S" on the video as the siren going on and off. By reading the miles per hour shown on the video, Oliver testified that Maisano's vehicle was traveling at rates of speed between 50 and 56 mph as he approached the intersection.

Oliver testified that he told Maisano not to respond to Campbell's call for assistance. He stated that he issued an order over the radio for 6308, Maisano's vehicle number, to stay west-side. According to Oliver, it was his practice to keep one officer available to respond in the event of another emergency. Oliver recalled that Maisano was assigned to section four on the west side of Aberdeen; Campbell's emergency call for assistance was on the east side of Aberdeen. Oliver testified that he told Maisano to "stay west side" because all other additional units, including Oliver, were responding to back up Campbell. The audiotape recording of Campbell's call for assistance was played during the hearing. (R-24.) Oliver was not able to identify on the recording his order to stay west-side. The radio transmission was transcribed in part and other parts were transcribed as "rest unintelligible." (R-6.) Oliver's order to "stay west side" was not transcribed. Oliver acknowledged that he did not get a response from Maisano regarding his order. The only recorded communication between Oliver and Maisano was the report of a "minor 15." Oliver recognized the voice on the audio recording as Maisano's and explained that a "15" is code for a motor vehicle accident. The transcript of the radio transmission shows that Maisano advised Oliver of the minor accident at 12:15:53 a.m. (R-6.)

As depicted on the video, Oliver and Maisano were examining Maisano's vehicle for damage at 12:25 a.m. at the location of the call. Because of the damage, Maisano and Oliver were required to fill out an Accident/Injury Report. Part one of the form was completed by Maisano and part two was completed by Oliver. (R-3.) Maisano wrote on the form that he was "responding to an officer in distress call, and upon crossing an intersection, made contact with another vehicle." Id. Oliver wrote that the accident was not immediately reported, but that Maisano reported it "after handling a police call shortly after accident." Id. He also wrote that he felt that accidents such as this could be avoided by "driving safely" and following "Dept./AG Guidelines." Id.

Oliver prepared a second memorandum at the request of Captain Geyer for a recommendation of whether disciplinary action should be taken against Maisano. (R-2.) In Oliver's opinion, there were too many things that Maisano could have done differently to avoid or prevent the incident. Therefore, he recommended disciplinary action based on the following conduct: Maisano's decision to pass Trucillo's vehicle into an oncoming traffic lane at a high rate of speed; failure to stop before entering the intersection; failure to activate emergency lights; crossing an intersection against the traffic light and striking a vehicle proceeding with the green light; and failure to follow proper protocol after an accident.

Captain Alan Geyer (Geyer) has been a Captain for three years and employed by ATPD for thirty years. He is the operations commander which includes scheduling, equipment, training, and internal investigation work. He also works in a supervisory capacity to the Sergeants, Officers, and Patrol Division. During his thirty-year tenure, he worked as a traffic officer and accident investigator. He described that ATPD operates on a chain of command, consisting of the Chief, Deputy Chief, two Captains, and six Sergeants. The incident with Maisano occurred just after midnight on November 26, 2014 when Geyer was not on duty. Oliver was Maisano's supervisor. The first memo drafted by Oliver was a brief synopsis of the incident to inform Geyer of the accident involving Maisano's vehicle. (R-1.) After reviewing the memo, Geyer asked Oliver for a recommendation regarding disciplinary action. Geyer testified that this is a typical request to make of the Sergeant on duty and in charge. Geyer received and reviewed Oliver's recommendation regarding discipline. (R-2.) He also reviewed the MVR from Maisano's vehicle. (R-23.) After reviewing the video, Geyer drafted a memo and sent it to his superior, Deputy Chief Derechailo, with his recommendation regarding discipline. (R-5.) Geyer provided four reasons justifying disciplinary action: 1) lights and siren not activated until after the crash; 2) failure to have ICOP mic on; 3) failure to immediately advise supervisor of the accident; and 4) failure to stop at red light at the intersection where crash occurred.

The video was played for Geyer's analysis at the hearing. Geyer testified that he was very familiar, as part of his normal duties, with the ICOP i VAULT MMS viewer which is the software used to download the video from the officer's patrol vehicle. Maisano's vehicle is identified as 6308. Geyer explained that the software was designed to show when the lights, siren, or brakes are engaged. The video recording is triggered, or automatically activated, in any one of three instances: when the vehicle's emergency lights are activated; when the vehicle reaches a speed of seventy-five miles per hour; or in the event the vehicle is involved in a crash. (R-15.) Once activated, either manually or automatically, the last sixty seconds of video recording, prior to activation, will be captured. Id. There is no audio recording during this look back minute prior to activation. This recording allows the viewer to see what was happening in the minute before the MVR was engaged. Geyer testified to what he saw on the video as it was played at the hearing. He explained that the blinking "S" on the video is not related to the siren because ATPD disengaged that feature prior to this incident. ATPD did not want the siren to be a triggering event for the MVR because of the frequency and routine uses of sirens by patrol officers during their shifts. Geyer stated that based on his experience in viewing the tapes the blinking "S" on the video would indicate braking not siren. Geyer identified Maisano's vehicle on the video as it passed Trucillo's Durango on the left side into the oncoming traffic lane. As the video recorded Maisano's vehicle traveling through the intersection, Geyer pointed out that Maisano's emergency lights did not come on until he was through the intersection. The MVR in Trucillo's vehicle was not working, so no video of the event was captured from that car. (R-13.)

Geyer was also involved in the Internal Affairs (IA) investigation, giving assistance to the Deputy Chief. He personally inspected the vehicle and viewed the damage to the front of the bumper that he describes as a scrape with an opening. He did not take any photographs of the vehicle. The cost of repairs to vehicle 6308 was $1,068.05. (R-8 and R-22.) When asked on direct whether Maisano's conduct violated ATPD rules and regulations, Geyer stated that Maisano was required to stop at the red light before entering the intersection, and if Maisano believed that he was involved in an accident with another vehicle he was required to stop and immediately notify his supervisor. He also stated that Maisano's speed traveling through the Township was excessive. From the MVR in Maisano's car, Geyer testified that Maisano's top speeds were recorded as 75, 79 and 83 miles per hour as he travelled to the call. On cross-examination, Geyer testified that the vehicle driven by Maisano was called a "stealth vehicle" that is not equipped with lights on the roof. Auxiliary lights do not activate the camera. Geyer testified that after Maisano crossed the intersection, the front windshield lights were activated, which triggered the recording. Geyer concluded that Maisano turned on the lights at that time based upon the activation of the video recording. There was no other triggering event. Geyer felt that any impact between Maisano's vehicle and the civilian vehicle in the intersection would have been too minor to trigger the camera. Geyer was familiar with the intersection of Main and High Street in Matawan Borough and acknowledged that there was a large depression in the road way. However, based on his experience, he did not think that the damage to the front bumper was caused by the roadway.

Deputy Chief Richard Derechailo (Derechailo) has been the Deputy Chief for the past eleven years and employed by ATPD for thirty-two years. It was his job to investigate complaints of officer wrongdoing as part of his overall responsibility for internal affairs investigations. On November 26, 2014, Derechailo reviewed the memo from Geyer (R-5) and initiated an internal affairs file. The next day, after reviewing the MVR from Maisano's vehicle with Geyer, he determined that further investigation, including an interview with Maisano was warranted. Consequently, he sent an Internal Affairs Complaint Notification to Maisano for an interview. (R-7.) Maisano was interviewed with his attorney present. A narrative of the interview was prepared by Derechailo. (R-10.) As set forth in the narrative, Maisano stated that although he slowed down prior to entering the intersection, he did not see the other vehicle. He was not sure at the time if he hit the other vehicle or if it was the unevenness in the road that he felt. He realized that he had hit the car when he saw the damage to his own vehicle after he arrived at the scene of Campbell's call. When questioned about his lights and siren, he stated that he was trying to locate the buttons while he was driving, but was unable to do so until he passed through the intersection. Maisano explained that he had tunnel vision when responding to the call and was concerned about Campbell's safety because of recent protests against police officers, such as the event in Ferguson, Missouri.

Derechailo physically reviewed the intersection at Railroad Plaza and Main Street where the accident allegedly occurred. He testified that the intersection is controlled by a traffic light and there is a crown in the road as you cross over Railroad Plaza onto High Street. This is a busy intersection due to its proximity to the train station and well known to Derechailo because he travels it each day to work. He also noted that the speed limit on the streets where Maisano traveled that night were posted at 35 mph but at different times the MVR showed Maisano's speed as 75 miles an hour, 79 miles an hour, and 83 miles an hour. Derechailo authored a report which was a compilation of his findings after reviewing the following: Geyer memo; MVR; the transcription of the dispatch communication recordings; the Matawan police report; and Maisano's interview narrative. (R-9.) His findings were as follows:

> Ptl. Maisano did not activate his emergency lights or siren until after he struck a car crossing the intersection of Main St. and Railroad Plaza;
> Ptl. Maisano did not use due caution when entering the intersection of Main St. and Railroad Plaza, causing him to crash with another vehicle;
> Ptl. Maisano did not remain at the scene of the accident but instead continued on to the assist call;
> Ptl. Maisano did not immediately report the accident but instead waited until he arrived at the assist call;
> Ptl. Maisano operated his patrol vehicle at excessive speeds en route to the assist call;
> MVA[2] resulted in excess of $1,000 damage to the patrol vehicle;
> In total, Ptl. Maisano's operation of the patrol vehicle created a substantial risk to himself and the public of serious injury.

Despite the recognition by Derechailo that Maisano was responding to a call for assistance from another officer, he believed that the findings of the investigation warranted disciplinary action in the form of a suspension. At the conclusion of the internal affairs investigation, Derechailo submitted a memo to Chief Powers wherein he stated that when an officer is responding to a call for assistance, regardless of its seriousness, he is not relieved of the responsibility to safely operate his vehicle. (R-12.)

[2] MVA refers to motor vehicle accident.

Derechailo testified that it was Maisano's overall operation of his vehicle in an unsafe manner that was the primary concern, not whether the accident occurred.

Chief of Police John T. Powers (Powers) has held the position of Chief for the past eleven years and has been employed by the ATPD for the past thirty-five years. He is responsible for the daily operations of the police department, budget matters, and maintaining good order and discipline within the department. He expressed his familiarity with the Rules and Regulations of the ATPD and identified Regulation 3:4 and its subparts as pertaining to officers' responsibility for the proper care of equipment and controlling the operation of motor vehicles. (R-14.) In summary, he stated that officers are required to set an example by safe operation of their vehicles and observe all motor vehicle laws. Powers discussed the procedures and guidelines for the use of the MVR set forth in General Order Number 2009-002. (R-15.) The Order requires that all emergency responses should be both audibly and visually recorded. Powell signed the Order on June 1, 2009; it was in force and effect on November 26, 2014. Powers signed the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action on March 18, 2015 after receiving the final report on the internal investigation with its findings of violations of rules and regulations pertaining to the safe operation of motor vehicles. (R-20.) Powers also executed the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action on January 21, 2016. (R-21.) Powers testified that the actual costs for the damage to the subject vehicle were $1,068.05. (R-22.) In his capacity as Chief of Police, Powers testified that progressive discipline was warranted in this situation for violations of the township rules and regulations, the general order, and the state statute. On cross-examination, Powers testified that all internal affairs investigations are done in accordance with Internal Affairs Policy & Procedures implemented pursuant to N.J.S.A. 40A:14-181. (P-3.)

Officer Raymond W. Campbell (Campbell), patrolman at ATPD assigned to the Traffic Safety Division, has been employed by ATPD for eleven years. On the night in question, Campbell called for assistance because a suspect was resisting arrest. Campbell testified that he needed assistance from other officers to secure the suspect. He testified that while he was fighting with the suspect, Maisano and another officer arrived simultaneously to help him subdue and handcuff the suspect. Campbell testified that Maisano helped him place the suspect in custody.

Detective Charles Trucillo (Trucillo) is presently employed with the Monmouth County Prosecutor's Office as a Detective; however, in November 2014 he was employed by the ATPD as a patrolman. On November 25, 2014, Trucillo was working the peak shift from 4:30 p.m. until 2:30 a.m. with Maisano. Trucillo stated that he was assigned to patrol the east side of the township. When Campbell's radio call came in, Trucillo was at headquarters with Officer McDowell because they were processing a case. He recalled that Oliver and Maisano were also at headquarters. Trucillo responded to the call. He was assigned to drive a Dodge Durango SUV that had a full display of emergency lights including rooftop. Trucillo activated his emergency lights and sirens. He exited the parking lot before Maisano, who exited right behind him. He expressed his concern about being the lead vehicle because the Durango did not handle as well as Maisano's Charger and he was less familiar with the roads in Aberdeen. Therefore, he pulled over to the right and allowed Maisano to take the lead. Trucillo recalled that Maisano's rear lights were activated. As the two police vehicles approached the intersection at Railroad Plaza and Main Street, Trucillo was approximately a car length behind Maisano. Trucillo testified that Maisano slowed down prior to entering the intersection and he saw sparks from Maisano's car as it made impact with the road at the dip in the roadway. He also recalled a black vehicle swerve as it passed Maisano's vehicle in the intersection. Trucillo stated that he looked to make sure everything was okay, but the black car was already gone. The recording equipment in Trucillo's vehicle was not working. Trucillo was aware of the malfunction prior to the start of his shift.

Frank Maisano (Maisano) has been a police officer for eighteen years but employed by ATPD for twenty-one years. On the night in question, Maisano was driving a black stealth Dodge Charger. He testified that he was familiar with the vehicle because it had been assigned to him since it entered the fleet. He knew how to turn the lights on and off and how to activate the three different siren sounds. He was working the peak shift, 4:30 p.m. to 2:30 a.m., assigned to section 3 where headquarters is located. When Campbell's call came over the radio, Maisano was at headquarters to use the restroom. Initially, Maisano considered it a routine call; Campbell just alerting dispatch of his location and activity. Maisano used his radio to copy Campbell that he was on his way as he exited the building. At the time Campbell's call came through dispatch, Maisano recalled that Sergeant Oliver and Officers Trucillo and McDowell were at headquarters. Trucillo and McDowell were dealing with an evidence issue from another call. Maisano recalled that the section assignments at the time of the call were as follows: McDowell one, Trucillo two, Maisano three, and Walsh four. Even though Trucillo and McDowell were assigned to the sections closest to the call, Maisano explained that he was next in line because McDowell and Trucillo were busy. Maisano heard a second transmission from Campbell requesting assistance and asking for more officers. This time Maisano heard urgency in Campbell's voice. Recognizing that Campbell was in trouble, he expedited his response. He stated that he ran to his vehicle and believed he engaged his light bar which moves from left to right and activated his sirens as he pulled out of the parking lot. Trucillo also responded and exited the parking lot in front of Maisano. Maisano heard more radio communications from Campbell so he radioed Trucillo to let him pass. Trucillo agreed and pulled to the right. Maisano made the decision to pass Trucillo by crossing the double yellow lines of the roadway because the light at the intersection ahead of him was red. He began to slow down as he got closer to the intersection to see if it was clear. As he entered the intersection against the red light, it appeared clear but he caught site of a vehicle coming from his left. He quickly applied his brakes and the vehicle went past him, never stopping. He claimed there was nothing from that near miss encounter that led him to believe that he had hit the other vehicle and damaged his own.

Maisano explained that the intersection had a very pronounced curvature that he described as a roller coaster because of the series of inclines. It was not until he was through the intersection that he realized his front lights were not engaged. He claimed that when he was driving behind Trucillo, he could not tell whether his lights were on because of the lights coming from Trucillo's vehicle. It was not until he became the lead vehicle that he realized his lights were not activated. As soon as he realized the lights were not on, he activated them and continued to the call. Maisano stated that when he arrived at the scene it was chaotic. He assisted Campbell in restraining the suspect. After the situation was diffused, Maisano noticed the damage to his vehicle and immediately notified his sergeant by radio. (R-6.) Maisano waited until Oliver arrived. They viewed the damage together. Maisano's counsel asked him to draw a picture of the damage to his bumper. (P-4.) Maisano drew a picture of the front bumper with a small hole and a line scratch above the driver's side headlight. At some point, Maisano drove back to the intersection to see if he could learn anything about the accident or the other vehicle but there was nothing. He contacted Matawan Police Department and learned that no accidents had been reported. Prior to the end of his shift, Maisano completed a standard accident form. (R-3.) In response to the question asking for information about the accident Maisano wrote that he was responding to an officer in distress call and "upon crossing an intersection made contact with another vehicle." Id. He stated that the form was completed in haste when he was in an excited state due to the seriousness of the recent distress call. He only had a brief conversation with Oliver and had not viewed the video. In retrospect, Maisano believed that he made a premature assumption before considering all the factors. The next day, after viewing the video and examining the intersection from an investigatory perspective, he deduced that the damage was done from his impact with the curvature of the road, not from hitting another vehicle. Maisano maintained that his siren was on when he entered the intersection and the emergency flashing lights from Trucillo's vehicle were clearly visible, yet the other vehicle failed to yield and never stopped. Being familiar with this intersection, he knew he had to apply his brakes as he went over the crown. In the process of braking, he noticed the other car so he quickly applied his brakes and felt only a quick jerk but nothing indicating that he hit another vehicle. He was interviewed by Captain Geyer and Deputy Chief Derechailo about the incident in the presence of counsel.

John Reed (Reed), licensed private detective, testified as appellant's expert witness. He supplied his Curriculum Vitae (P-1) and a report (P-2.) Reed testified that he was providing an analysis of whether Maisano's vehicle had lights and sirens activated when approaching the intersection; whether a collision occurred in the intersection; and the rates of speed of Maisano's vehicle as it went through the intersection. Reed testified that when Maisano's vehicle entered the intersection, there were lights on, but not all the lights on the stealth vehicle were fully activated. He concluded that the siren was on from his observation that the "S" was activated on the MVR from Maisano's vehicle. He was not able to definitively conclude whether an accident occurred in the intersection or if it was a near miss. Reed stated that he watched the video footage from the MVR numerous times using special slow motion special enhancement software, but still could not tell if the cars hit. Reed also used the enhanced software to view the MVR to determine Maisano's rate of speed as he traveled through the intersection. According to Reed, there was a delay in the speed as indicated on the video with the actual speed captured on video that he determined was a 1.18 seconds delay. Using his calculations and watching the MVR with the enhanced slow-motion software, he determined that Maisano was traveling at a speed from 26 to 20 mph through the intersection, but acknowledged that he did not come to a complete stop.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Private Detective Reed was offered as an expert by appellant. Under N.J.R.E. 702, expert testimony is admissible if it will "assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue." Reed based his findings upon his review of the MVR over one hundred times and his use of enhanced slow-motion software. His opinions do little to assist me in determining a fact in issue. Maisano admitted that he was unaware that his lights were not fully activated until after he went through the intersection. Accordingly, Reed's opinion that the lights were not fully activated is not disputed. Reed determined that the siren was engaged based on his review of the DMR with the aid of enhanced software; however, Reed was not aware that the siren function was disengaged from the MVR prior to this incident. In addition, the MVR's depiction of the vehicle while it was at the intersection was within the one minute look-back so there was no audio recording of the siren. Geyer testified that the blinking "S" was indicative of braking not siren. Therefore, Reed's opinion that the siren was activated has no support from the materials that he reviewed. Reed could not decisively determine whether Maisano hit the other vehicle in the intersection or whether it was a very close near miss. The issue to be determined is unsafe operation of a vehicle which puts the officer and the public at risk. Whether Maisano hit the other car or narrowly missed hitting the other car is not determinative. Finally, Reed's opinion about the speed of the vehicle as it went through the intersection does not contradict the fact that the vehicle did not come to a complete stop at the red light, the charged violation. Therefore, I FIND that scientific, technical or other specialized knowledge was not needed for me to understand the evidence or determine a fact issue. Reed's testimony and report is given no weight.

In reviewing the record, and after having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

1. On November 26, 2014, at a few minutes after midnight, Maisano responded to a call for assistance from Campbell.

2. Maisano was driving an unmarked police vehicle known as a "stealth car" that was not equipped with rooftop lights.

3. Maisano believed Campbell was in trouble so he expedited his response to the emergency call. Maisano stated he had tunnel vision caused by recent events in the news against police officers and was motivated by a desire to reach Campbell.

4. Maisano was originally proceeding to the call behind Trucillo. He passed Trucillo on the left by crossing over double yellow lines to become the lead vehicle.

5. Maisano's emergency lights were not activated.

6. It is unknown whether Maisano's sirens were activated.

7. As Maisano approached the intersection at Railroad Plaza and Main Street, his light was red.

8. Maisano applied his brakes but did not stop at the red light at the intersection.

9. When Maisano entered the intersection against the traffic light, he did not immediately notice the other vehicle in the intersection that was travelling eastbound with the green light passing directly in front of him.

10. When Maisano saw the other vehicle, he applied his brakes, but continued to proceed to the emergency call without stopping. The other vehicle continued to proceed eastbound without stopping.

11. The intersection at Railroad Plaza and Main Street has a pronounced curvature or hump in the road.

12. Maisano activated his emergency lights after he went through the intersection as he continued to proceed to the location of the emergency call.

13. Maisano traveled to the location at speeds that at different points reached 75, miles an hour, 79 miles an hour, and 83 miles an hour while travelling on roads that were posted as 35 miles an hour.

14. Upon arriving at the location of the call and after the suspect was in custody, Maisano noticed damage to the front bumper of his vehicle and notified Sergeant Oliver by radio that he had a minor accident.

15. Maisano completed an Accident Report stating that he made contact with another vehicle while crossing an intersection.

16. The damage to the vehicle cost ATPD $1,068.05 to repair.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20, and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2.

The Appointing Authority bears the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co, 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

In the present case, Maisano was charged with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1); insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); inability to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3); conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); and other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). Maisano was also charged with the following violations of Aberdeen Township Police Department General Rules and Regulations: 3:1.8 Obedience to Laws and Regulations; 3:4.5 Operation of Motor Vehicle; 3:4.7 Reporting Accidents; 3:4.1 Damaged – Inoperative Property or Equipment; and 3:13 Operation of Police Vehicle. Although the same specifications support each of the charges and they are not compartmentalized, I will discuss each charge in turn.

Regarding the charge of violating N.J.S.A. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. However, case law has determined incompetence is a "lack of the ability or qualifications necessary to perform the duties required of an individual [and] a consistent failure by an individual to perform his/her prescribed duties in a manner that is minimally acceptable for his/her position." Sotomayer v. Plainfield Police Dep't, CSV 9921-98, Initial Decision (December 6, 1999), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (January 24, 2000), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/ (citing Steinel v. City of Jersey City, 7

N.J.A.R. 91 (1983); Clark v. New Jersey Dep't of Agric., 1 N.J.A.R. 315 (1980)). N.J.S.A. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1) is written in the disjunctive; therefore, a finding that Maisano failed to perform his duties would be enough to sustain the charge. As specifically prescribed, it was Maisano's duty to observe and obey all laws and ordinances, all rules and regulations, and orders of the department. Rule 3:1.8. (R-14.) Rule 3:13.5 states that "[a]n officer shall stop his vehicle before entering an intersection regulated by a red traffic light or a stop sign and may proceed only when the safety of the public is insured." Id. Maisano testified that because the light was red, he applied his brakes as he entered the intersection, slowing, but not stopping the vehicle. The video recording also shows that Maisano did not come to a complete stop at the red light at the intersection. It is also well documented that there was another vehicle in the intersection with the right of way that Maisano did not initially see. In responding to an emergency, Maisano was required to not only have his red lights and siren activated, but to exercise extreme caution. Maisano testified that he had "tunnel vision" in his desire to reach Campbell. Regardless of the exigency of the call, rules of safety still apply. Rule 3:13.1 requires that "officers must exercise extreme caution to protect the safety of all persons and property upon the roadway." Maisano testified that he recognized the urgency of the call before he got to his vehicle; therefore, he was responsible for activating his emergency lights and siren before exiting the parking lot at headquarters. The facts show that the emergency lights were not immediately activated. It remains inconclusive whether the siren was activated because there was no sound for the first minute of the recording and the siren does not activate the MVR. Maisano's argument that he had "tunnel vision" and was motivated by his concern for Campbell's safety does not excuse his failure to exercise "extreme caution" by making sure his emergency lights were fully engaged and by stopping at the red light at the intersection to insure it was clear before proceeding. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that ATPD has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Maisano violated Rules 3.1.8, 3:4.5, and 3:13 in his operation of his motor vehicle, and therefore, proved the charge of failure to perform duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1).

Maisano was also charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), insubordination. Insubordination can be defined as intentional disobedience or refusal to accept reasonable orders, assaulting or resisting authority, disrespect or use of insulting or abusive language to a supervisor. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971). Oliver testified that he told Maisano not to respond to the call for assistance from Campbell because Maisano was assigned to patrol the section of Aberdeen furthest away from the location. Oliver's ability to recall where each officer was assigned was not as detailed as Maisano's testimony. In addition, Oliver stated that he gave the order over the radio, but there is nothing on the audio recording or the transcribed tape to substantiate that claim. Oliver acknowledged that Maisano never responded to his order; therefore, there is nothing in the record to suggest that Maisano heard it. Oliver did not include his order in either of his written summaries of the events drafted immediately after the incident. A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App Div. 1958). I do not question Sergeant Oliver's credibility, but his testimony about ordering Maisano not to respond to the call is inconsistent with other testimony and overborne by the documentary evidence. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the ATPD has not met its burden in demonstrating support to sustain a charge of insubordination. The charge of violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) is hereby DISMISSED.

Maisano was charged with "inability to perform duties," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3). The charge appearing on the PNDA and the FNDA (R-20 and R-21) is operation of a motor vehicle with reckless disregard for the safety of others. "Inability to perform duties" is a non-disciplinary type of charge under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3), where the employer seeks to prove that an employee should be demoted or removed due to his physical, intellectual, or psychological inability to perform his duties. Rivera v. Hudson County Department of Corrections, CSR 06456-16, Initial Decision (October 24, 2016); Newark v. Bellezza, 159 N.J. Super. 123, 128 (App. Div. 1978). I CONCLUDE that the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3) does not apply to the facts of the present case.

Maisano was charged with "conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't. of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). The New Jersey Supreme Court, in In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1980), recognized that the obligation to act in a responsible manner is especially compelling in a case involving a law enforcement official:

> [A] police officer is a special kind of public employee. His primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law. He carries a service revolver on his person and is constantly called upon to exercise tact, restraint and good judgment in his relationship with the public. He represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public, particularly in a small community (quoting Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966)).

Maisano testified that he had "tunnel vision" in his desire to assist Campbell. Deputy Chief Derechailo recognized that Maisano's response to the call for assistance is a mitigating factor; however, Derechailo determined that it did not relieve Maisano from his duty to safely operate his motor vehicle with due regard for his own safety and the safety of others. (R-12.) Maisano testified that when he viewed the damage to his vehicle at the scene, he initially believed he hit the other vehicle in the intersection. He told his Sergeant that he had a minor accident and he completed an accident form stating that he made contact with another vehicle in the intersection. The admissions by Maisano that he had an accident on the way to the call show that he disregarded safety rules and department regulations regarding accidents. Rather than stopping and immediately reporting the accident as required, he was undeterred in his determination to reach Campbell. Even prior to recklessly proceeding into the intersection, Maisano did not take the time to make sure that his emergency lights were fully engaged. He entered a busy intersection without emergency lights against the traffic light with a known curvature and was so preoccupied that he either hit another vehicle or barely missed it. As stated by Derechailo, the primary concern was not the accident itself, but the reckless driving. The incident at the intersection had the potential to be much more serious and tragic. Maisano's "tunnel vision" clouded his judgment and caused him to disregard safety rules and proper procedure for responding to an emergency call. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Maisano's conduct rose to the level of conduct unbecoming a public employee, and that ATPD has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Maisano was also charged with neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for neglect of duty, but the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee failed to perform and act as required by the description of their job title. Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure to perform a duty and includes official misconduct or misdoing, as well as negligence. Generally, the term "negligent" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977), neglect of duty implies nonperformance of some official duty imposed upon a public employee, not merely commission of an imprudent act. Rushin v. Bd. of Child Welfare, 65 N.J. Super. 504, 515 (App. Div. 1961).

Even in an emergency, Maisano was bound to proceed through the intersection with care. He failed to stop at the red light and obviously misjudged that the intersection was clear. His actions damaged his police vehicle and had the potential to have led to tragedy for the occupants of the other vehicle and for himself. Maisano was duty bound to obey the rules and regulations of ATPD. He failed to obey those regulations by failing to stop at the red light, by not activating his emergency lights, and by not operating his vehicle with "extreme caution to protect the safety of all persons and property upon the roadway." Therefore, I CONCLUDE that ATPD has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Maisano's conduct constituted neglect of duty.

Maisano has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Specifically, Maisano is charged with the following violations of the ATPD General Rules and Regulations: Obedience to Laws and Regulations (3:1.8); Operation of Motor Vehicle (3:4.5); Reporting Accidents (3:4.7); Damaged – Inoperative Property or Equipment (3:4.1); and Operation of Police Vehicle (3:13). Maisano responded to an emergency without activating his emergency lights in violation of R. 3:13.1. He failed to stop at a red light at an intersection in violation of R. 3:13.5. He entered the intersection without due care for a vehicle that entered the intersection before him with the right of way in violation of R. 3:13.1 and R. 3:13.4. Maisano examined his vehicle after Campbell's emergency had been subsided. He deduced that he must have hit the other car in the intersection because of the damage to his vehicle. After examining his vehicle, he radioed his Sergeant. Proper procedure required Maisano to report the accident when it occurred. His decision to wait is a violation of R. 3:4.7. Maisano's violation of R. 3:4.1 is not as clear. The rule specifically refers to filling out forms for damage. Maisano completed the form as soon as it was practical. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the violation R. 3:4.1 is DISMISSED. I CONCLUDE that ATPD has met its burden in demonstrating a violation of Aberdeen Township Police Department General Rules and Regulations 3:1.8, 3:4.5, 3:4.7, and 3:13. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that, after consideration of the charges constituting a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) (Other Sufficient Cause) as limited to the specific rules and regulations enumerated in the FNDA with the exception of R. 3:4.1 that is dismissed, the charge of Other Sufficient Cause is hereby SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties or who gives other just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). Depending upon the incident complained of and/or the employee's past record, major discipline may include removal. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522–24 (1962). Once a determination is made that an employee has violated a statute, rule, regulation, etc., concerning his/her employment, the concept of progressive discipline must be considered. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500.

In the present case, Maisano has not received any major disciplinary actions during the course of his career with ATPD. He received a minor discipline resulting in a four-day suspension. There was a preliminary notice submitted as part of the disciplinary history that I did not consider as there was no indication of whether it became final. Maisano's history shows that he was reprimanded on five occasions. As to the penalty of a ten-day suspension, the issue is whether it is too harsh under the circumstances. I must consider whether the spirit of progressive discipline is upheld by Maisano's ten-day suspension. Progressive discipline is intended to give the employee notice and an opportunity to correct the improper behavior. Based upon Maisano's multiple sustained disciplinary charges, a major disciplinary action is warranted. After having considered all the proofs offered in this matter and the possible impact upon the public caused by unsafe and reckless operation of a motor vehicle in response to an emergency, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that Maisano's violations are significant to warrant a penalty of a 10-day suspension. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the imposition of a 10-day suspension was an appropriate penalty.

ORDER

I CONCLUDE that ATPD has sustained its burden of proof as to the charges of violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), Incompetency, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct Unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), Neglect of Duty; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other Sufficient Cause, that includes ATPD Rules and Regulations 3:1.8, Obedience to Laws and Regulations; 3:4.5, Operation of Motor Vehicle; 3:4.7, Reporting Accidents; and 3:13, Operation of Police Vehicle.

Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of ATPD in suspending Maisano for ten days is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

THIS SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE (hereinafter referred to as the "AGREEMENT"), is made this 19 day of December, 2017 by and among the County of Bergen, a governmental entity created under the laws and Constitution of the State of New Jersey, whose principal offices are located at One Bergen County Plaza, Hackensack, New Jersey 07601 (hereinafter referred to as the "COUNTY") and Joseph M. McElwain, a former employee of the COUNTY, with a mailing address of 42 Hiawatha Court, Midland Park, NJ 07432 (hereinafter referred to as "McELWAIN").

1. The COUNTY, as defined and used throughout this Agreement, shall at all times mean the COUNTY OF BERGEN, its divisions, subdivisions, departments, agencies, affiliates, designees, predecessors, successors and assigns of any and all of them, their past, present and future directors, officers, officials (elected and/or appointed), representatives, employees, agents, attorneys and/or representatives, heirs, executors and administrators, whether in their individual or official capacities, in the past, present and future.

2. McELWAIN, as defined and used throughout this Agreement, shall mean JOSEPH M. McELWAIN, his family (by marriage and/or blood relation), relatives, heirs, representatives, designees, privies, executors, administrators, representatives, assigns, successors-in-interest and predecessors-in-interest.

3. The parties agree that this AGREEMENT is contingent upon and subject to execution by McELWAIN and approval and execution by the COUNTY.

4. In consideration of the mutual promises of this AGREEMENT and for other good and valuable consideration, the sufficiency of which the parties hereby acknowledge, the parties agree to resolve all controversies and disputes between them under the terms of this AGREEMENT.

a. McELWAIN was formerly employed by the COUNTY in the title of Senior Environmental Health Specialist.

b. On or about September 27, 2016, the COUNTY served McELWAIN with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter referred to as the "PNDA") in which the COUNTY charged McELWAIN with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1) (Incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties); (a)(3) (Inability to perform duties); (a)(6) (Conduct unbecoming a public employee); (a)(7) (Neglect of duty); and, (a)(12) (Other sufficient cause).

c. On or about October 17, 2016, the COUNTY conducted a departmental hearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(a) in which all parties participated with the assistance of their attorneys/representatives.

d. On or about December 15, 2016, the COUNTY served McELWAIN with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter referred to as "FNDA") in which the COUNTY sustained the charges listed in the PNDA and terminated McELWAIN's employment, effective December 19, 2016.

e. McELWAIN timely appealed his termination in a matter entitled "McElwain, Joseph v. County of Bergen Department of Health," OAL Docket No. CSV 00733-2017-N, Agency Ref. No. CSC Dkt# 2017-2100 (the "OAL Action").

f. On or about June 7, 2017, the COUNTY served McELWAIN with an Amended Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter referred as the "Amended FNDA") pursuant to leave granted by the Order of the Hon. Leland S. McGee, A.L.J., dated May 22, 2017, which added additional facts to the FNDA and a charge of "Resignation Not in Good Standing" in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2.

g. On or about September 26, 2017, the parties appeared for trial on the OAL Action before the Hon. Jude-Anthony Tiscornia, A.L.J. and, in order to avoid the time and expense of proceeding with the OAL Action, reached a settlement which was placed on the record and agreed to by both parties.

5. The COUNTY and McELWAIN, through their respective attorneys and/or representatives, hereby agree to enter into the within AGREEMENT upon the following terms and conditions, which are now to be made effective:

a. The COUNTY shall pay McELWAIN the amount of Thirty Thousand Dollars and Zero Cents ($30,000.00), less all applicable payroll deductions, by check or direct deposit no later than the next payroll date occurring after the full execution of this AGREEMENT by all parties; provided, however, that no payment shall be required or made until after the expiration of the seven (7) day revocation period set forth in Paragraph 18 below. Such amount shall be treated for all purposes as wage income and will be reflected on an IRS form W-2.

b. The COUNTY shall cause McELWAIN's employment/personnel/pension records to reflect that his separation from employment with the COUNTY was due to "Resignation in Good Standing" and not "Termination," effective December 19, 2016. Furthermore, said employment/personnel/pension records, other than the provision that MCELWAIN's separation from employment with the COUNTY was due to 'Resignation in Good Standing' and not 'Termination,' shall remain confidential between the parties and shall not be discussed to any third party absent a subpoena, court order, or other lawful statutory request.

c. McELWAIN shall withdraw the OAL Action with prejudice.

6. McELWAIN agrees not to contest, in any judicial, quasi-judicial and/or administrative forum, any of the terms and conditions of this AGREEMENT.

7. McELWAIN releases, acquits, gives up and forever discharges any and all claims and rights that he may have against the COUNTY and any and all of its officials (elected and/or appointed), officers, employees, representatives, assigns, successors and designees, up to the time of complete execution of this AGREEMENT by all parties. This releases any and all claims, including those that McELWAIN, his family, designees, representatives and assigns are not aware and those not mentioned in this Agreement. SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

THIS SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE ("AGREEMENT"), made this 24th day of January, 2019 by and between the City of Orange Township, a governmental entity created under the laws of the State of New Jersey, with its principal offices located at City of Orange Township City Hall, 29 North Day Street, City of Orange Township, New Jersey 07050 ("CITY") and Vincent J. Piserchio, an individual with a mailing address of 645 Ridgedale Avenue, East Hanover, NJ 07936 ("PISERCHIO"), sets forth the terms and conditions of this AGREEMENT between the CITY and PISERCHIO as follows:

1. The CITY, as defined and used herein, shall at all times mean the CITY OF ORANGE TOWNSHIP, its departments, divisions, affiliates, predecessors, successors, representatives and assigns of any and/or all of them, their present and former directors, officials (elected and/or appointed), officers (elected and/or appointed), representatives, associates, partners, servants, employees, agents, attorneys, designees, successors, heirs, executors and administrators (all of them past, present and future), whether in their individual or official capacities, and any and all other persons, firms, corporations, associations, partnerships or any other entity connected therewith.

2. PISERCHIO, as defined and used herein, shall mean VINCENT J. PISERCHIO, his heirs, family (of any relation by blood and/or marriage), representatives, privies, executors, administrators, designees, assigns, successors-in-interest and predecessors-in-interest.

3. The parties agree that this AGREEMENT is contingent upon and subject to execution by PISERCHIO and approval and execution by the CITY.

4. In consideration of the mutual promises of this AGREEMENT and for other good and valuable consideration, the sufficiency of which the parties hereby acknowledge, the parties agree to resolve all pending disciplinary administrative and other legal actions (actual, pending and/or possible) actions between them under the terms of this AGREEMENT.

a. PISERCHIO was employed by the CITY in the title of Firefighter.

b. PISERCHIO has been involved in incidents involving the abuse of substances in the past while employed by the CITY which have not been the subject of any disciplinary action.

c. On or about September 14, 2016, the CITY served PISERCHIO with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action which charged him with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), including (a)(1) (Incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; (a)(3) (Inability to perform duties); (a)(4) (Chronic or excessive absenteeism or lateness); (a)(6) (Conduct unbecoming a public employee); (a)(7) (Neglect of duty); and, (a)(12) (Other sufficient cause), in addition to violations of the City of Orange Township Personnel Policies.

d. On or about September 14, 2016, PISERCHIO was suspended without pay pending a hearing on said charges.

e. The said charges and specifications arise from an arrest of PISERCHIO by the Parsippany Troy Hills Police Department on September 4, 2016 for alleged violations of N.J.S.A. 39:4-50 (driving while intoxicated); N.J.S.A. 39:4-49.1 (possession of drugs in a motor vehicle); N.J.S.A 39:4-96 (reckless driving); N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10(b)(under the influence of drugs, disorderly persons); N.J.S.A. 2C:35:10(a)(1)(possession of heroin, third degree); and, N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10(a)(4)(possession of marijuana under 50 grams, disorderly persons).

f. The charge of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10(a)(1)(possession of heroin, third degree) was dismissed by the Morris County Prosecutor and the remaining matters remanded to the Parsippany Troy Hills Municipal Court for further proceedings.

g. At a hearing on the matters on August 31, 2017, the remaining criminal charges were dismissed.

h. On or about November 11, 2016, the CITY removed PISERCHIO from his position after PISERCHIO did not request a hearing on such.

i. On or about December 12, 2016, PISERCHIO filed an appeal with the State of New Jersey Civil Service Commission, pursuant to Docket No. CSR 19003-2016N, which is currently pending before the Office of Administrative Law as a contested matter.

5. In order to avoid the time and expense of such proceedings, PISERCHIO and the CITY, through their respective attorneys and/or representatives, agree to enter into the within AGREEMENT upon the following terms and conditions, which are now to be made effective:

a. PISERCHIO hereby resigns in good standing from his position as Firefighter with the City of Orange Township Fire Department, effective December 22, 2017.

b. A Final Notice of Disciplinary Action ("FNDA") stating that PISERCHIO has resigned in good standing shall be generated and served upon Piserchio pursuant to this AGREEMENT, once this AGREEMENT has been executed by all parties. PISERCHIO agrees to accept service of the FNDA and such shall be deemed as good service. A copy shall be simultaneously served upon PISERCHIO's attorney and such shall be deemed as good service.

6. PISERCHIO and the CITY acknowledge that the parties enter into this AGREEMENT solely to avoid expensive and burdensome disciplinary/administrative proceedings. This AGREEMENT is not intended to be used and shall not be used as evidence or for any other purpose in any other action or proceeding, other than evidence of the compromise between PISERCHIO and the CITY as set forth herein or to enforce the terms of this AGREEMENT. No party hereto admits to any wrongdoing and/or any liability as to any and/or all of their actions regarding each other.

7. PISERCHIO releases, acquits, gives up and forever discharges any and all claims and rights which he may have against the CITY and any and all of its officials (elected and/or appointed), officers, employees, representatives, assigns, successors and designees, up to the time of complete execution of this AGREEMENT by all parties. This releases any and all claims, including those of which PISERCHIO, his family, designees, representatives and assigns are not aware and those not mentioned in this Agreement. Importance: High

Mr. Feinberg and Mr. George:

Per my discussion with Mr. George last week, the below clarification does not sufficiently quantify the period of time in my initial email. In that regard, it is clear that the appellant was not working during that time and was not in pay status. Accordingly, as I initially suggested, it would be appropriate to categorize that period of time as a leave of absence without pay if the parties agree.

Please let me know as soon as possible as we would like to have this matter presented to the Commission for acknowledgment at its next meeting.

Subject: RE: Vincent Piserchio V. City of Orange Township - Settlement

Thank you for the followup, Mr. Angiulo. According to the file and the recitation in the settlement agreement, Art. 4(c-d), the criminal charges were filed on September 6, 2016, he was suspended without pay on September 14, 2016 and he was removed on November 11, 2016 by the appointing authority. Therefore, the gap time of September 14-November 11, 2016 was a suspension without pay prior to removal. On appeal to Civil Service and transfer to OAL as contested case, there was no interim relief granted altering that status. Therefore, he remained removed until the first settlement agreement, and following some issues with compliance with the conditions of that first Settlement Agreement, he ultimately resigned in good standing, which is the settlement now before the Commission for its review and approval.

If you need anything else in regard to this matter, please do not hesitate to call or send a note.

Subject: Vincent Piserchio V. City of Orange Township - Settlement
Importance: High

Mr. Feinberg and Mr. George:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlement regarding Vincent Piserchio from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding it to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, the settlement indicates that Mr. Piserchio agrees to resign in good standing from his position effective December 22, 2017 in exchange for withdrawal of the charges. However, the settlement does not reflect how to record the time period from his original September 6, 2016 removal date to his resignation date. Before the matter can be acknowledged by the Commission, we require all periods of time to be accounted for in an employee's personnel record. In this regard, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

Sincerely,

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MARCH 29, 2018 BW

The appeal of Sheila Richardson, Juvenile Detention Officer, Union County, Department of Human Services, removal effective October 23, 2015, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joann LaSala Candido, who rendered her initial decision on November 6, 2017. Exceptions were filed by the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of March 27, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Sheila Richardson.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07573-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-1614

IN THE MATTER OF SHEILA RICHARDSON, UNION COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES,

---

Sheila Richardson, appellant, appearing pro se

Rachel M. Caruso, Esq., for respondent (Union County Department of Human Services)

Record Closed: September 26, 2017 Decided: November 6, 2017

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent, Union County Department of Human Services, removed appellant, Sheila Richardson (Richardson or appellant), a juvenile detention officer at the Union County Juvenile Detention Center (Detention Center), for acting unprofessionally towards a superior officer when failing to follow her commands and facility protocols for the detainees during wake-up and hygiene process.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about October 23, 2015, respondent served appellant with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action charging appellant with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; insubordination; conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause when violating Detention Center/Housing unit policies, procedures, post orders and directives, and took the disciplinary action of removal. Respondent did not issue a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action.[1] Richardson was removed from employment, including the payroll, on October 15, 2016.

Following appellant's appeal to the Civil Service Commission, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13, where it was filed on May 30, 2017, for determination as a contested case. A prehearing conference was held wherein the hearing date was scheduled. The matter was heard on September 26, 2017, at which time the record closed.

ISSUE

At issue is whether respondent proved by a preponderance of the credible evidence that appellant engaged in the alleged conduct, and, if so, whether it constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee, insubordination, neglect of duty, violation of Detention Center/Housing unit policies, procedures, post orders and directives and other sufficient cause to warrant removal.

[1] On appeal from the departmental hearing, the standard of review is de novo. In re Darcy, 114 N.J. Super. 454, 459 (App. Div. 1971) (citing Campbell v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 39 N.J. 556, 561; E. Paterson v. Civil Serv. Dep't of N.J., 47 N.J. Super. 55, 64, (App. Div. 1957)). An employee must be given fair notice of the charges against him so that he may have a fair opportunity to defend himself against the charges. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962). The hearing is limited to the charges made below. Ibid. (citing Kramer v. Civil Serv. Comm'n., 120 N.J.L. 599 (Sup. Ct. 1938); Orange v. DeStefano, 48 N.J. Super. 407, 419 (App. Div. 1958); cf. Marro v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 57 N.J. Super. 335, 344-45 (App. Div. 1959)). This de novo review before the OAL will only address charges listed on the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action.

Michelle Perez

Michelle Perez, assistant superintendent at the Detention Center, testified on behalf of respondent. She confirmed that Richardson worked the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift on October 22, 2015. The residents housed in Unit F were considered the "honor unit" for their good behavior. Perez testified that at approximately 6:27 a.m. on October 23, 2015, Richardson swiped her personal access security card one time at the resident housing door so that the door unlocked, but she did not physically look inside to make sure the resident was safe. Wake up and hygiene call for the residents began around 6:30 a.m. Richardson had the television on, which was very loud. While an officer is permitted to have the television on, it must be kept at a low volume so that detainees still sleeping are not disturbed. Richardson kept the volume up very loud even after the residents came out of their rooms. This is against safety policy since appellant would not have been able to hear if a resident needed help.

At 6:29 a.m., Richardson threw the resident's jumper into their room without entering the room and handing it to their, which is again against safety measures, as the resident could harm himself. As a housing unit officer, Richardson is responsible for ensuring security, safety and sanitation, and is required to adhere to schedules and document Unit occurrences by entering them in the unit log book. A resident is to be out of bed within ten minutes of being awakened and is to be provided with a toothbrush, toothpaste, and washcloths within ten minutes after awaking. (R-11.) She was also supposed to wait outside a bathroom door if a resident is using the facility. (R-15.) Although Richardson did wake the residents, she failed to timely hand out hygiene packs and did not wait outside the bathroom. She also allowed residents to return to their rooms and close their doors, again creating a safety issue.

At 6:37 a.m. Richardson went to residents' doors to swipe her access card, which unlocks the door so that the residents who did not come out can then come out for hygiene. But again, she did not check to see if the residents were okay. She also permitted two residents to go into the same room, which is against safety protocol.

Richardson called for a supervisor at the request of the residents and Chief Allen came to the Unit and observed no threat to Richardson of any kind. Allen turned off the television. Allen questioned Richardson why some of the residents did not get their hygiene packet. Allen directed the residents in a normal tone of voice to come out and take care of their hygiene. Allen then closed the residents' doors. Richardson turned the television back on after her supervisor turned it off.

Richardson called for assistance once Allen left claiming the residents were loud and not listening to her directives and Senior Juvenile Detention Officer Johnson and first-shift officers responded to Unit. Nothing was viewed as threatening. Residents told the officers they do not know why Richardson called for help. The residents appeared loud on the video when speaking to Richardson but nothing threatening. Officers exited after a few minutes. The residents lined up at 7:13 a.m. to go to breakfast. Richardson was not released from duty and was mandated to stay but refused the mandate and left the building.

Perez found that Richardson did not conduct herself in a professional manner and did not keep control of her unit, calling for a supervisor when there was no apparent threat. She disregarded the residents' safety by not checking on them when swiping her card and by not providing residents with hygiene packets. She did not have the residents' jumpers hanging outside of their room. Richardson also failed to make sure all residents were awake and out of their room within ten minutes of swiping her access card. She did not complete the handwritten logbook after each occurrence, such as logging when Allen arrived, when a resident used the rest room, when she asked for a supervisor, or when she gave out the hygiene materials.

In making her findings, Perez relied upon Resident Incident Reports submitted by the residents of Unit F where appellant was assigned. (R-6, R-7, R-8.) A video surveillance tape, which she relied upon during her investigation, was played during her testimony. (R-17.) Perez also investigated a statement made by a resident that Richardson said to the residents' "do not worry about me, I'm going home, you need to worry about getting out of jail," and found this to have occurred. She also noted complaints from residents that the volume of the television was so loud that the residents could not sleep and that Richardson threw the jumpers in their face rather than handing them.

Chief Tekki Allen

Chief Tekki Allen of the Union County Juvenile Detention Center testified on behalf of respondent. Allen has worked with Richardson for approximately ten years. In the early morning hours of October 23, ~~2018~~ 2015, Allen was on duty and received a call from Richardson who was calling for a supervisor. Allen came into the Unit and observed the residents behaving very loudly and the television was extremely loud. She turned the television off. Allen directed Richardson to start hygiene with the residents. Richardson had a belligerent attitude towards her, being insubordinate, since Allen had to request several times for Richardson to start hygiene. Richardson turned the television back on at a very loud volume despite Allen's order to keep the television off. Richardson did not follow the directive to close a resident's door once the resident came out. Richardson told Allen that it would be too much work for her to walk back and forth closing doors.

Allen testified that when she appeared at appellant's unit, there was no safety issue involved and at no time did ~~appellant~~ Allen feel threatened by the residents. There was no indication the residents were inciting a riot as alleged by Richardson. While the residents were loud, Allen felt that appellant could have gotten them under control with little effort. She did not have to raise her voice in the manner that she did. Allen learned that it was the residents who wanted a supervisor since Richardson antagonized them by saying she is going home and they were not. Richardson told Allen it was too much work to get the residents out of their rooms to prepare for the day. After Allen ensured the residents that they would be getting their hygiene materials, she left the Unit. Allen then instructed the residents once lined up in the hallway to go to breakfast and be quiet since they were still very loud.

Sheila Richardson

Sheila Richardson testified on her own behalf. She stated that on October 23, 2015, at approximately 6:27 a.m. she came into her Unit after returning from lunch. She awakened the residents to get them ready for breakfast by 7:30 a.m. She claims she went back to the residents' door as a courtesy call, something that she was not required to do. Richardson stated that she threw the jumpsuits in their rooms rather than hang them by the door because she did not want to get accused of sexual contact with the residents.

Richardson further testified that the residents asked her to call for a supervisor. She had their hygiene bags on the chairs in the common area but the residents were not going to comply. The residents were disrespectful to her and called her names. They did not follow the rules and claimed that a resident touched the television volume control. She called for assistance because she felt threatened by one of the residents with whom she had had problems. Richardson felt that she properly performed her job on the date in question. She candidly admitted that she left the facility despite not being released by her superior.

Richardson stated that in 2014 she entered into a stipulation of settlement on a previous matter, upon the advice of counsel, that she regretted entering. The terms of the settlement were for a demotion in rank from senior officer to a juvenile detention officer because of a physical confrontation with a subordinate.

CREDIBILITY DETERMINATIONS

Where facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness' testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness' story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it hangs together with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself, in that it must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth. Id. at 521-22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). In other words, a trier of fact may reject testimony as inherently incredible, and may also reject testimony when it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience or overborne by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable choice. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

I FIND the testimony offered by respondent's witnesses to be compelling and credible. All witnesses offered consistent versions of the events on October 23, 2015. Their testimony was wholly consistent with the memoranda written by each of the witnesses' right after the incident as well as confirmed by video. Richardson's testimony, on the other hand, was in direct contradiction to the credible testimony offered by respondent's witnesses as well as the video of her conduct and was not deemed credible.

FACTS

Based on the evidence presented, as well as having the opportunity to observe the witnesses and assess their credibility, I make the following FINDINGS OF FACT:

1. Sheila Richardson was employed as a juvenile detention officer at the Union County Juvenile Detention Center until her removal on October 23, 2015. She was assigned to the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift.

2. Richardson, as a housing unit officer, was responsible for the security, safety and sanitation of the Unit to which she was assigned, as well as adhering to schedules and for the entry of every Unit occurrence in the Unit log book.

3. Richardson did not check inside each resident's room when swiping her card.

4. Richardson did not prepare the residents for hygiene within the required ten minutes of waking them. Allen had to request several times for Richardson to initiate hygiene.

5. Richardson did not wait outside of the bathroom when a resident was in there.

6. Richardson did not have the residents' jumpers hanging on the outside of their room and inappropriately threw their jumpers into the cells during wake up.

7. Richardson ignored a direct order from a superior to keep the television off. Instead, she kept the television on very loudly, not at a permissible low volume so as not to not disturb the residents.

8. Richardson did not follow her superior's directive not to leave the resident's door open once the resident came out. Instead, she complained that it was too much work.

9. Richardson was verbally abusive when telling the residents' not to worry about her since she was going home and they need to worry about getting out of jail. This was against policy.

10. Richardson was to document every incident in the logbook during her shift. She failed to enter occurrences such as logging when Allen arrived, when a resident used the rest room, when she asked for an assistant, or when she gave the hygiene materials as she was required to do.

11. Richardson, at the request of the residents, requested a supervisor to come to the Unit. When Chief Allen responded, she found nothing threatening, but that the television was extremely loud.

12. Richardson requested assistance once Allen left and approximately nine officers came to the Unit. Nothing appeared to be a hazard or safety issue. The residents lined up for breakfast.

13. Richardson left her assigned post and the building without being authorized to do so.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

The purpose of the Civil Service Act is to remove public employment from political control, partisanship, and personal favoritism, as well as to maintain stability and continuity. Connors v. Bayonne, 36 N.J. Super. 390 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 19 N.J. 362 (1955). The appointing authority has the burden of proof in major disciplinary actions. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. The standard is by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Major discipline includes removal or fine or suspension for more than five working days. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2. Employees may be disciplined for insubordination, neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, among other things. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. An employee may be removed for egregious conduct without regard to progressive discipline. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Otherwise, progressive discipline would apply. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

Hearings at the OAL are de novo. Ensslin v. Twp. of N. Bergen, 275 N.J. Super. 352 (App. Div. 1994), certif. denied, 142 N.J. 446 (1995).

Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes."
> [Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).]

Respondent charged Richardson with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; insubordination; conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause, violation of detention center/housing unit policies, procedures and post orders and directives. I CONCLUDE that these charges have been proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

As to the charges of incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), the Administrative Code fails to define these grounds for disciplinary action, although they are generally interpreted to mean a failure to perform duties due to malingering, willful refusal, or idleness. See, e.g., Avanti v Dep't of Military and Veterans' Affairs, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 564 (1996): Stevenson v Burlington Cty. Mosquito Control Comm'n, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 702 (1997); Bright v Arthur Brisbane Child Development Ctr., 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 586 (1997). Guidance in interpreting the concepts may be found in Black's Law Dictionary 765 (6th ed. 1990), which defines incompetency as "[l]ack of ability, knowledge, legal qualification or fitness to discharge the required duty or professional obligation." "Inefficiency" has been defined as the "quality of being incapable or indisposed to do things required of an officer in a timely and satisfactory manner." Glenn v. Twp. of Irvington, CSV 5051-03, Initial Decision (February 25, 2005), adopted, MSB (May 23, 2005), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/.

Insubordination likewise constitutes sufficient grounds for major discipline under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2). The charge of insubordination is a serious one. Since the term is not defined in the Civil Service Act, resort may be made to Black's Law Dictionary 801 (6th ed. 1990), which defines insubordination as "[r]efusal to obey some order which a superior officer is entitled to give and have obeyed. The term imports a willful or intentional disregard of the lawful and reasonable instructions of the employer." This definition would appear to limit insubordination to a willful disregard of instructions or some other affirmative act of disobedience. However, a much broader definition of the term is found at Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995). That definition refers not only to affirmative acts of disobedience, but also acts of non-compliance and non-cooperation. It may, therefore, also include any conduct that constitutes a refusal to submit to supervisory authority. Stanziale v. Cty. of Monmouth Bd. of Health, A-5029-00T5 (App. Div. April 11, 2002), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/. As stated in Holly v. Hudson County, CSV 3085-02, Initial Decision (February 28, 2003), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/, insubordination generally involves a violation of a directive or order by an employee.

Richardson was also charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). Suspension or removal may be justified where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off duty. Emmons, supra, 63 N.J. Super. at 140. Likewise, undefined by the code, neglect of duty, N.J.A.C.

4A:2-2.3(a)(7), means that "an employee has neglected to perform an act required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge." Oliveira v. N. State Prison, CSV 7053-01, Initial Decision (September 5, 2002), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/.

Here, Richardson called for a supervisor at the request of the residents. Chief Allen came to the Unit and did not find the residents to be threatening, only loud. She also observed that the residents had not completed hygiene. Allen prepared the residents for hygiene and left the Unit after ordering appellant to turn off the television. Richardson then called for further assistance because the residents were uncooperative and calling her names. Senior Juvenile Detention Officer Johnson and first shift officers responded to her call. Johnson was able to de-escalate the yelling between appellant and the residents and directed the residents to prepare to go to breakfast. Clearly Richardson was unable to control her Unit. Allen had to direct her several times to prepare the residents for hygiene before she did so.

Because Richardson disregarded the directives of a superior by being asked several times to get the residents ready for hygiene and for not keeping the television off when her superior turned it off, is a willful disobedience of her superior officer and the charge of insubordination is affirmed. Insubordination is always a serious matter, especially in a paramilitary context. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971). Not only did Richardson speak in a disrespectful manner to her superior, but she also exhibited a sarcastic disrespect for the residents when telling them she is going home and they are not.

Furthermore, Richardson did not follow policy and procedures on the morning of October 23, 2015. Residents were to be out of bed within ten minutes of being awakened and prepared for hygiene. The residents did not come out of their rooms within the required ten minutes nor where they provided with toothbrushes, toothpaste, and washcloths within ten minutes after waking the residents. Rather than leaving the residents' jumpers hanging by the door, appellant threw them into their room without regard for their safety. Richardson had to be told by a superior more than once to start hygiene. She was also supposed to wait outside a bathroom door if a resident was using the facility, which she failed to do.

Based upon all the foregoing, including the credible evidence in the record and the specific findings above, I CONCLUDE that respondent has met its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, the charges of incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; insubordination; conduct unbecoming; and other sufficient cause, in violation of detention center/housing unit policies, procedures and post orders and directives.

Richardson was also charged with neglect of duty, violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). Neglect of duty can arise from an omission to perform a duty or failure to perform or discharge a duty and includes official misconduct or misdoing, as well as negligence. Steinel v. City of Jersey City, 7 N.J.A.R. 91, 95 (1983), modified on other grounds, Civ. Serv. Comm'n, 7 N.J.A.R. 100 (1983), modified on other grounds, 193 N.J. Super. 629 (App. Div. 1984), aff'd, 99 N.J. 1 (1985). Generally, the term neglect connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977).

Police officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Correction officers, like police, are "held to the highest standards." Peterson v. E. Jersey State Prison, CSV 03927-02 and CSV 5336-02, Initial Decision (December 11, 2003), adopted, Merit System Board (February 11, 2004), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. These higher standards can mean that infractions will lead to major discipline for officers that otherwise may not have warranted severe discipline for some other positions. See Chopek v. Bayside State Prison, CSV 00658-01, Initial Decision (May 10, 2002), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (June 26, 2002), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/.

Here, Richardson left the Detention Center despite being mandated to work until released by a supervisor without regard to coverage, which is an extremely serious offense for a detention officer. The officer's position involves public safety and by leaving the facility without authorization, increased the risk of harm to the to the residents and staff. This is contrary to the public interest, and constitutes a serious neglect of duties.

Principles of progressive discipline should be considered in the removal actions of civil service employees. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500. The determination of whether a specific act supports removal requires an evaluation of the conduct in terms of its relationship to the nature of the position itself and an evaluation of the actual or potential impairment of the public interest that may be expected to result from the conduct in question. Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385, 397 (Law Div. 1976). The frequency, number and continuity of the employer's warnings indicate the progression of the discipline. Ibid. On appeals from disciplinary action, the Merit Board may redetermine guilt or modify a penalty originally imposed. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). The Board is empowered to substitute its own judgment on the appropriate penalty, even if the local appointing authority has not clearly abused its discretion. Id. at 579. The Board must consider an employee's past record, including both mitigating factors and prior discipline when determining the appropriate penalty to be imposed. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 523. The frequency, number and continuity of the employer's warnings, counseling and other measures indicate the progression of the discipline.

Richardson entered into a settlement agreement in April 2014, accepting a demotion for being involved in a verbal and physical confrontation with a subordinate officer. Given the seriousness of the offenses in this matter, and the higher standard applicable to officers, a penalty of removal is appropriate and warranted in this case.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and applicable law, it is ORDERED that the charges against appellant be and is hereby SUSTAINED and that appellant's appeal be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Phyllis Slade, County of Essex, Department of Corrections

CSC Docket No. 2015-2912
OAL Docket No. CSV 07129-15

ISSUED: APRIL 20, 2018 (ABR)

The appeal of Phyllis Slade, a County Correction Sergeant with the County of Essex, Department of Corrections, of her 15 working day suspension, on charges, was considered by Administrative Law Judge Joann LaSala Candido (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on December 19, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on March 27, 2018, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the 15 working day suspension. Rather, the Commission modified the penalty to a 10 working day suspension.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that on July 10, 2014, the appellant set off the walk-through metal detector at a security checkpoint at the Essex County Correctional Facility and failed to submit to a proper search with a handheld metal detector and empty her pockets, as directed by the County Correction Officer assigned to the checkpoint. Additionally, it maintained that she was subsequently ordered to the checkpoint for a proper screening and upon her return to that location, she made a threatening statement towards the same County Correction Officer. The appointing authority asserted that the appellant's actions violated departmental policies concerning security procedures and conduct. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing as a contested case.

In her initial decision, the ALJ found that the all Correction Officers and civilians were required to pass through a walk-through metal detector at a security checkpoint when entering the Essex County Correctional Facility. Per departmental procedures, if a person set off a walk-through metal detector when passing through it, a County Correction Officer manning the security checkpoint was required to scan that individual with a handheld metal detector (wand). When the appellant arrived at the checkpoint at the start of her shift on July 10, 2014, the walk-through metal detector she traversed indicated that a metal object was present near her waist. A County Correction Officer assigned to the checkpoint then directed the appellant to empty her pockets and submit to a scan by the wand. The appellant did not comply with those instructions and instead proceeded into a secured area of the facility without obtaining clearance. The ALJ noted that a video confirmed that that the appellant did not submit herself to a search using the wand. The aforementioned County Correction Officer then contacted the Shift Commander, a County Correction Lieutenant, and apprised him of what had transpired at the checkpoint. Thereafter, the Shift Commander ordered the appellant to return to the checkpoint and go through the metal detector again. The appellant complied, returning to the checkpoint, whereupon she emptied her pockets and permitted the aforementioned County Correction Officer to scan her. The ALJ did not make any findings concerning the allegations that the appellant threatened that County Correction Officer.

Based upon the foregoing, the ALJ found that the appellant's initial refusal to submit to a scan with the wand, as instructed, demonstrated conduct unbecoming a public employee for having a total disregard and disrespect for a fellow officer and of departmental policies. Additionally, the ALJ sustained the charge of other sufficient cause based upon her finding that the appellant disregarded the established security policies for the facility. Therefore, the ALJ affirmed the appellant's 15 working day suspension.

In her exceptions, the appellant argues that her 15 working day suspension should be reduced or eliminated, because the ALJ did not sustain the allegations that she made threatening remarks and failed to consider the lack of prior discipline in her 20 year record of service with the appointing authority. Furthermore, the appellant contends that the ALJ failed to consider other mitigating circumstances, including the fact that both the appellant and the aforementioned County Correction Officer knew that the radio and glasses she carried each day in her pockets routinely triggered the metal detectors in the facility.

In reply, the appointing authority argues that the ALJ's findings concerning the appellant's failure to comply with its security procedures alone justify her 15 working day suspension. It submits that its Departmental Policy PS.CUS.054 (Security and Facility Entry Checkpoints) states that "[t]he person being searched shall make every effort necessary to facilitate the search" and it emphasizes that County Correction Officers, as law enforcement officers, are held to a higher standard of conduct compared to other public employees.

The appointing authority also contends that while the ALJ did not make any findings regarding the appellant's alleged use of foul and threatening language towards the County Correction Officer assigned to the checkpoint, the testimony of three of its officers support its claim that the appellant's behavior violated several of its rules governing conduct.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ regarding the charges but does not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the 15 working day suspension. In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 463. Moreover, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Further, the Commission notes that a law enforcement officer is held to a higher standard than a civilian public employee. See Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), cert. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). See also, In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567 (1990). The Commission is particularly mindful of this standard when disciplinary action is taken against a supervisory law enforcement officer. Upon an independent review of the record and in consideration of the appellant's prior record of service, the Commission concludes that a 15 working day suspension is too severe of a penalty. In the instant matter, the appellant's disciplinary history does not evidence any formal discipline since she began her service with the appointing authority in 1994. However, the Commission emphasizes that the appellant is employed in a paramilitary setting and is charged with maintaining security, discipline and order in a correctional facility. The precise requirements of such a position are not mere technicalities but are established and must be adhered to in order to ensure the utmost security of the facility. This is particularly true where, as here, the appellant is serving in a supervisory position. Here, the appellant's failure to adhere to facility security procedures by refusing to empty her pockets and submit to a search by wand after setting off a walk-through metal detector at a secured checkpoint at the Essex County Correctional Facility is a serious matter. The appellant's conduct warrants major discipline. Notwithstanding that the appellant's employment history reveals a lack of formal discipline in her approximately 20 years of service preceding the underlying incident, the Commission finds that a 10 working day suspension on these charges is appropriate.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to five days of back pay, benefits and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), an award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. Mar. 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In this case, the Commission agreed with the ALJ's determination sustaining most of the charges and only modified the penalty. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in imposing a 15 working day suspension was not justified. Therefore, the Commission modifies the 15 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted five days of back pay, benefits and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned during this period. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07129-15
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2015-2912

IN THE MATTER OF PHYLLIS SLADE, ESSEX COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Gail Oxfeld Kanef, Esq., for appellant (Oxfeld Cohen, P.C.)

Jill Caffrey, Assistant County Counsel, for respondent Essex County

Record Closed: December 14, 2017 Decided: December 19, 2017

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Phyllis Slade, a Correction Officer, appealed the disciplinary action of a fifteen-day suspension by Essex County Department of Corrections (DOC or Appointing Authority.) for non-compliance of policy and procedure while coming through the security check point at the start of her shift on July 10, 2014.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 15, 2015, the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), for a hearing as a contested matter pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing was held by Administrative Law Judge Bedrin-Murray on August 8, 2017. The parties submitted their post-hearing briefs on November 2, 2017. The matter was reassigned to me on December 11, 2017. I held a telephone conference with counsel on December 14, 2017, and it was agreed that I would decide the matter after review of the file with the exhibits entered into evidence. The appointing authority sustained the following:

CHARGES

CHARGE(S): N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) Conduct Unbecoming a public employee and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) other sufficient cause; Violation of Department Policy PS.CUS.054 Security at Facility Entry Points; PS.CUS.006.27 Security Checkpoint Officer) (Violation of Departmental Rules and Regulations 3:1.14 Conduct; 3:2.1 General Conduct on Duty; #:2.12 Search;3:9.5 Courtesy and Civility).

SPECIFICATION(S): The suspension is based upon the following allegations: On July 10, 2014, appellant acted in an unprofessional manner while entering the facility at the security check-point. Officer Albert Aponte attempted to screen Sgt. P. Slade upon entering the facility; at which time, Sgt. P. Slade rushed passed the checkpoint. Officer A Aponte reported the incident to shift Commander Lieutenant Mike Caggiano. Lt. M. Caggiano ordered Sgt. Slade to return to the checkpoint to be properly screened. Sgt. Slade returned to the checkpoint and made a threatening statement towards Officer Aponte. Sgt. Slade stated to Officer Aponte, "this is bullshit; I'll punch you in the face; I'll fing hurt you." This was witnessed by Officer Chris Kraynanski, Officer Brian Hanlon and Sergeant Mike Robertiello; who all wrote statements confirming Sgt. Slade's actions. Investigating Lieutenant Joe Badgley; along with video surveillance footage, confirmed Sgt. Slade's actions and statements given by the witnesses. Sgt. Slade's actions were unwarranted, unnecessary and unprovoked.

FINDINGS OF FACTS

Based on the moving papers, certifications, and other relevant evidence I FIND as FACT:

1. On December 5, 1994, the Appointing Authority hired Appellant, Phyllis Slade in the position of Correction Officer. She was promoted to sergeant in 2012.
2. All Correction Officers and civilians must pass through a security checkpoint before entering the facility. Sergeant Alberto Aponte is assigned to work this checkpoint. Aponte will utilize a wand if the metal detector beeps. He received training on the use of metal detectors and the detection of contraband.
3. On July 10, 2014, Appellant arrived at the facility at 5:46:50 a.m. at the start of her shift and set off the metal detector at waist level while walking through. Appellant would not permit Aponte to use the wand and she refused to empty her pockets. He contacted Shift Commander Lieutenant Cadgiano to advise that Appellant did not clear the metal detector and refused to be scanned.
4. At approximately 6:13 a.m., Appellant was ordered by Cadgiano to return to the checkpoint area to go through the metal detector again. The Appellant complied this time and emptied her pockets and permitted Aponte to scan her.
5. The video clearly confirms that Appellant did not avail herself to the hand held metal detector when she entered the security checkpoint while all other officers did pursuant to policy 3:2.12 whereby all persons are subject to search when entering the institution. Appellant violated this policy when entering the security checkpoint and not permitting the officer to use the hand-held metal detector when the walk through detector beeped.

JOINT STIPULATIONS OF FACT

1. On December 5, 1994, Essex County Department of Public Safety and Corrections hired Phyllis Slade as a Correction Officer. Slade was promoted to Sergeant in 2012.

2. On September 10, 2014, Slade was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action Form dated September 10, 2014.

3. A Disciplinary Hearing was held on December 17, 2014.

4. On April 16, 2015, Slade was served with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated March 18, 2015, suspending Slade for fifteen days.

5. Slade served the suspension on April 22-26, April 29-30, May 1-3 and May 6-10, 2015.

DISCUSSION

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 (a)(6) a public employee can be disciplined for conduct unbecoming a public employee. Whether an employee's behavior "constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee is primarily a question of law." Karins v. Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 553 (1998). Conduct unbecoming is an extremely fact specific issue and describes any conduct that undermines public confidence in municipal employees or services. Id. at 554. The appointing authority must establish the employee engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Washington v. City of Trenton, CSV 4211-03, Initial Decision (November 3, 2005), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (December 13, 2005) <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv4211-03.pdf>.

The Codification Policy Custody .054 entitled "Security at the Facility Center Points" revised on January 10, 2014 reads in part that should an individual entering and not clear the metal detector, then handheld metal detector shall be used to scan for contraband. The person subject to the search shall make every effort necessary to facilitate the search. It is evident from the video presented that Appellant deliberately did not stop for Aponte to utilize the hand-held detector when the metal detector beeped showing an issue at Appellant's waist area. This clearly represents conduct unbecoming for having a total disregard and disrespect of a fellow officer and of policy and procedure when not making herself available for a mandatory hand-held metal detector search after beeping while going through the metal detector. I therefore CONCLUDE that respondent has satisfied its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence conduct unbecoming a public employee.

There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for other sufficient cause. Other sufficient cause is generally defined in the charges against appellant. The charge of other sufficient cause has been dismissed when "respondent has not given any substance to the allegation." Simmons v. City of Newark, CSV 9122-99, Initial Decision (February 22, 2006), adopted, Comm'r (April 26, 2006), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv9122-99.pdf>. The FNDA states that the charge for other sufficient cause is sustained for violating Department Policy PS.CUS.054 Security at Facility Entry Points; PS.CUS.006.27 Security Checkpoint Officer) (Violation of Departmental Rules and Regulations 3:1.14 Conduct; 3:2.1 General Conduct on Duty; #:2.12 Search;3:9.5 Courtesy and Civility). Because I find the respondent to have proven the above-named charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that Appellant disregarded policy set in place for the security of the Institution, I CONCLUDE that respondent has satisfied its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence of other sufficient cause.[1]

Based upon all of the foregoing, including the evidence and certifications submitted, I CONCLUDE that Appellant violated the policy of the Institution when she purposely did not permit the security officer to perform his job by using the hand held

[1] Because the video entered into evidence had no audio, I am unable to determine what was uttered by Appellant at the time she was ordered to come back to the security area and I make no findings as to same.

detector after appellant beeped while walking through the metal detector, and I further CONCLUDE that respondent has met its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, the charges against appellant.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the fifteen-day suspension of appellant is hereby AFFIRMED and her appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

In the Matter of Tequila Thompson, Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 13667-12

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MARCH 29, 2018 BW

The appeal of Tequila Thompson, Correction Sergeant, Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections, 30 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Acting Director and Chief Administrative Law Judge Laura Sanders, who rendered her initial decision on October 23, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on March 27, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision to modify the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to 15 working days of back pay, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although the penalty was modified by the Commission, charges were sustained. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in disciplining the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore modifies the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted 15 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. Per N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned by the appellant during this period. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 13667-12
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2013-627

IN THE MATTER OF TEQUILA THOMPSON,
ALBERT C. WAGNER YOUTH
CORRECTIONAL FACILITY,
DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Patricia B. Quelch, Esq., for appellant Tequila Thompson (Helmer, Conley & Kasselman, attorneys)

Susan Sautner, appearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(2), for respondent Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility, Department of Corrections

Record Closed: October 5, 2017 Decided: October 23, 2017

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, Acting Director & Chief ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

Appellant Tequila Thompson appeals the action by respondent Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility (the Facility) suspending her for thirty days on grounds that on two consecutive days she violated the facility's security and safety rules through serious mistakes by returning an inmate to his housing unit after the inmate had obviously been subject to questioning by correction officers. She also is charged with failing to file a required Use of Force Report. Sergeant Thompson contends that she acted appropriately at all times, such that no discipline is warranted.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 9, 2012, Sergeant Thompson was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. She requested a departmental hearing, which was held on August 6, 2012. On August 24, 2012, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action sustaining the charges and imposing the thirty-day suspension at a date to be determined was issued. The thirty days were served in May, June, and July 2013. She timely appealed the suspension to the Civil Service Commission (CSC), which determined to transmit the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on September 26, 2012. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was assigned to Administrative Law Judge Patricia M. Kerins, who heard the case on September 13, 2013, January 17, 2014, and October 28, 2014. The record was left open for closing statements, and closed on March 25, 2015. Following numerous extensions, an additional extension was granted to allow time to contact the parties pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.13 to determine if the parties could settle or wished to relitigate the matter upon transfer to a new judge. The answer having been in the negative, the undersigned was assigned the case. An additional extension was granted to allow time to procure transcripts, review the record, and write the initial decision. The record was reopened on October 3 for information on appellant's start date with the Department of Corrections, and whether the thirty-day suspension had been served. The information having been received and marked as P-7, the record closed again on October 5, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

With regard to the first incident, the parties agree on limited facts. On March 26, 2012, Sergeant Thompson was responsible for overseeing the B wing, which has approximately 42 to 44 cells housing 42 to 50 inmates on three floors, with an officer assigned to each floor. (Tr. September 13, 2013, at 13.) It housed mostly medium-security inmates, along with some maximum-custody inmates. Among them were some inmates with mental problems creating special needs requiring separate attention, such as ensuring receipt of medication. Senior correction officer (SCO) Lakeya White was the primary officer on duty on tier B-1 on March 26, 2012. At about 5:15 p.m., Officer White notified the sergeant that she was having a problem getting an inmate to move into his cell for lockup. Sergeant Thompson arrived, along with a correction officer recruit (COR), Feliciano. The inmate, who had special needs, was handcuffed and escorted to the day room. (Id. at 27.) Shortly afterward, Correction Officer Gonzalez relieved COR Feliciano, who was assigned to a search detail. Officer Gonzalez brought along a pair of keys to the handcuffs, having retrieved them from central control. The inmate was then released back to his cell. SCO White complained about the return of the inmate to the tier to two lieutenants in charge that evening. Sergeant Thompson also spoke to them.

Sergeant Thompson did not testify in her own behalf. Only one witness with firsthand knowledge of the March 26 incident testified, and that person was SCO White. No one with firsthand knowledge of the March 27 incident testified. Aside from the testimony by SCO White and the two lieutenants, the respondent Department of Corrections relied entirely on testimony from an investigating lieutenant; from a major who helped to determine that discipline should be imposed; on an investigation report, and on written reports to support its factual position.

SCO White testified that on March 26, inmate A.C. returned from dinner mess and then refused multiple orders from her to walk into his cell, so she could then lock the door. (Tr. January 17, 2014, at 9.) Instead, he kept telling her to hold on and wait, which was unacceptable. She contacted Sergeant Thompson, her immediate superior, who initially told her to take the inmate to a space known as the dugout. (Id. at 41.) During this time, the inmate was standing at another inmate's door, continuing to talk. (Id. at 41, 42.) SCO White replied that Sergeant Thompson had to come to the unit to see for herself, and the appellant did, accompanied by COR Feliciano. (Id. at 40.) Sergeant Thompson placed A.C. in handcuffs, escorted him down the unit, and placed him in the day room. (Id. at 12.) SCO White was not sure whether the day room is visible from any cell; she thought perhaps from cell one. (Id. at 14.) Although SCO White expected Sergeant Thompson to take the inmate to detention for the night as a means of enforcing the need for inmates to follow orders from SCO White, the sergeant instead returned inmate A.C. to the tier, saying she had to do so because he was a special-needs inmate. SCO White became very upset because she felt that Sergeant Thompson was not supporting her. (Id. at 19.) She explained that because placement in handcuffs generally leads to detention, the fact that it did not on a particular occasion could be misinterpreted by other inmates to mean that a particular inmate has special privileges. (Id. at 18.) Further, since the inmate will undoubtedly be unhappy with the original officer, returning the inmate to the unit opens the possibility of retaliation against the officer. (Id. at 19.) According to SCO White, she was the one left to return the inmate to the cell, and she was afraid. "I had the [gate] key in my hand just in case he tried to do anything physical to me." (Id. at 32.) Although SCO White could have written a charge against the inmate for failing to follow her orders, she felt that it would have been pointless because the sergeant had not placed the inmate in detention. (Id. at 20.) SCO White later spoke again with Sergeant Thompson, who told her she needed to be clearer in why she wanted to pursue charges against the inmate. However, SCO White felt that she had been clear that the inmate persistently delayed locking-in when she directed him to do so. (Id. at 24.) She also complained to two lieutenants, Bradley and Hull, who took her off the unit for the rest of the night because of her upset. (Id. at 26.) However, they were so focused on her emotional level that she never had the opportunity to explain fully about the inmate being returned to the tier after being put in handcuffs. (Id. at 27.) The next day, she spoke to Lt. Phillip DiPetta, who told her this was a serious enough incident to merit filing a report. (Id. at 29, 30.)

Lt. Bertha Hull, who had been with the Department of Corrections since 1996, testified that she worked on the third shift as lieutenant for the Administrative Segregation Unit, and was called in on overtime on March 26, 2012. She arrived around 7:30 p.m. to find SCO White in the control center, crying. (Id. at 63.) Lieutenant Hull said that SCO White never mentioned to her that the inmate had been handcuffed. Had she done so, Lieutenant Hull would have expected Sergeant Thompson to have filed a Use of Force Report. Also, "the shift commander is . . . responsible for what happens after the handcuffs have been placed on an inmate for a use-of-force incident." (Id. at 70.) Had Lieutenant Hull been aware of the handcuffing, she would have sent a different sergeant to get the inmate and place him in pre-hearing detention status for failure to comply. (Id. at 74.) The lieutenant explained that in general, once a person has been handcuffed for not complying with orders, the person would be removed from the general population to allow investigation into the reasons for the noncompliance. (Id. at 70, 71.) For example, a refusal to lock-in is generally followed by a medical check, which could result in constant watch if depression and potential suicide are concerns, or just placement in detention, based on what the medical evaluation determines. (Id. at 72.) If the inmate is identified as special needs, it is possible that the person did not take his medication. (Id. at 70.) In her view, "If we've gone the step to restrain him and place him in handcuffs, obviously, there's something that needs to be immediately addressed. He can always be cleared and go back to his unit a few days later, after all the process has been completed." (Ibid.) A return to the unit shortly after handcuffing could leave others in the unit to believe that the inmate is getting preferential treatment for some reason. (Id. at 73.)

Lt. Cynthia Bradley had been a lieutenant at Albert C. Wagner since 2005. On March 26 she worked part of the second shift as area lieutenant, which involved supervising all the areas of the jail, and then she filled in as shift commander when another lieutenant had an emergency that necessitated leaving. When Sergeant Thompson approached her that night, the sergeant did not tell her she had handcuffed the inmate. She left Lieutenant Bradley with the impression that SCO White was given to using reasons such as refusal to lock-in as a means of having inmates that she did not like or could not handle well removed from the unit. (Id. at 89.) Had Lieutenant Bradley known that the inmate had been cuffed, it would have changed the scenario because now when the inmate returns, other inmates wonder, "[W]hat did he give up in order to not have to be locked up?" (Id. at 91.) She said the handcuffing requires a Use of Force Report because the failure to lock-in is not a routine reason for placing an inmate in cuffs. (Id. at 92.) Without the report to document what occurred, "it can be construed as saying we're just throwing cuffs on anybody and . . . it could be shown as a form of punishment." (Id. at 93.) In addition, an officer would write up a charge, such as refusing a housing assignment. Later, when SCO White appeared, she did tell Lieutenant Bradley about the cuffing. At that point, the lieutenant felt that she did not know what was occurring, as she now had two different accounts of the same incident. She determined to back the sergeant's decision for the moment, on the theory that the appellant had a reason for putting the inmate back on the tier. (Id. at 96, 97.) She acknowledged that there is "nothing written saying you've got to take him off the unit," but had she been sure that the inmate had been cuffed, she would have removed him immediately. (Id. at 98.)

According to Brian Boyle, shift commander relief and area lieutenant relief, who investigated the incidents, the Facility's "Use of Force—On Duty" policy (R-16) requires the immediate filing of a CUS-1 Special Custody Report "following all instances in which . . . physical, mechanical or deadly force has been used" with the shift supervisor. Handcuffs count as mechanical force. The person responsible for filling out the Use of Force form is "the highest-ranking supervisor on the scene," who in this instance was Sergeant Thompson. (Id. at 47.) If the officer who handcuffed the inmate was not the highest-ranking supervisor, then that person is responsible for filing a special report form. Both reports should be written "as soon as practical," but neither were done in this instance, Boyle said. (Id. at 48.) He did, however, acknowledge that "[t]here are many times where it's realized that the inmate was not involved in something, and then that inmate is immediately released from the restraints." (Id. at 122.) Although the written policy would indicate that a Use of Force form still needed to be filed, Lieutenant Boyle indicated by common practice, officers often do not. Lieutenant Boyle also stated that Officer White should have logged the incident into the B Unit Logbook, which is the custodial officer's official record of what happened on that date. (Id. at 60, 61.)

According to Lieutenant Boyle's report, Sergeant Thompson told him that SCO White did not give her a tangible reason to lock up the inmate, and that she, not SCO White, walked the inmate back to his cell and locked him in. She also stated that she told Lieutenant Bradley everything.

According to Lieutenant Boyle, Sergeant Thompson should have told her superior, Lieutenant DiPetta, on the 27th about the incident with the same inmate on the 26th. Additionally, by returning the inmate to his cell on the 26th and then again on the 27th, she compromised the safety of the inmate. (Id. at 95.) When the inmate was released back twice, "a lot of the inmates . . . could automatically assume that he is a snitch . . . giving information to the custody staff." (Id. at 95, 96.) Sergeant Boyle said he is not aware of a standard protocol as to when or how an inmate can be interviewed. (Id. at 131.) Nor is there a written protocol that mandates that an inmate has to be placed in pre-hearing detention. (Id. at 134, 135.)

Major Gerard Caldarise was assigned to the Garden State Youth Correctional Facility at the time of his testimony, but was the security major at Albert C. Wagner in March 2012. Major Caldarise stated that "Every time—what we do—understand that it's not written anywhere, but standing procedure, if you lock an inmate up [in handcuffs] on your housing unit, even if he's not going to catch charges, you move him off the housing unit." (Id. at 135.) Usually, the inmate is put in lockup for a day, then sent to a different housing unit, to keep other inmates from thinking he is a snitch. (Id. at 136.) Additionally, as regards SCO White, Major Caldarise felt that the failure to remove undermined her authority. "She kind of loses some . . . control of the unit because they see that the sergeant's not supporting her." (Ibid.) In this instance, in Major Caldarise's opinion, the failure to remove the inmate resulted in what he understood to be an assault on the inmate the next day. (Ibid.) Major Caldarise said that pulling the inmate out of the line on the next day was an error because this action was apparent to the rest of the inmates on his tier. Appellant should have allowed inmate A.C. back into the housing unit, then him called, "either by the hospital, the medical officer," or another unit to create an excuse to remove him without raising suspicion. (Id. at 144.) In Major Caldarise's view, the appellant's actions merited discipline because they resulted "in an inmate being assaulted, and one of . . . our main jobs is to make sure that they are safe." (Id. at 149.)

Major Sheree Culvert testified on behalf of Sergeant Thompson. Having personally conducted many investigations, she was aware of the procedures and was certain that an officer had to be given Weingarten Rights by someone above the rank of that person. (Tr. January 17, 2014, at 19.) Before investigations are begun, there is usually a specific focus. Major Culvert stated, "So, in other words, [a] lieutenant as . . . a shift commander would say, 'Something's not right here. I need to have this investigated.'" (Id. at 21.) Major Culvert testified that inmates in close custody must be in handcuffs whenever they are moved, and such movements do not require a Use of Force Report. (Id. at 26.) She did not believe that the handcuffing of an inmate for not locking-in was necessarily a significant enough act to require a Use of Force Report. (Id. at 43.) Rather, it depends on the totality of the circumstances. "I don't believe that we actually have written within our policies routine or non-routine." (Ibid.) She likened the refusal to lock in at the Wagner facility, which houses "a younger population," to "telling your child to go to their room and them sitting in front of the door, saying, 'I'm not going in my room.'" It is not obedient, but it is also "not being totally disobedient." (Id. at 44.) She also said that when an officer observes another correction officer using force, the observing officer is not required to file a Use of Force form. (Id. at 27.) However, if it is the sergeant physically applying handcuffs to an inmate, the sergeant would be the one who should fill out the Use of Force Report. (Id. at 45.) Major Culvert said that the level of the thirty-day suspension brought questions to her mind, given the presence of a commendation and no prior discipline. (Id. at 37.)

Based on SCO White's credible testimony, I FIND that in response to a request from her, Sergeant Thompson came to the unit, removed inmate A.C. to the day room, which is visible to at least one of the inmate cells on the tier, questioned the inmate, and then had him returned to the cell. I FIND that although there was no written protocol requiring this to be done, SCO White was upset that neither Sergeant Thompson nor the other officer returned the inmate to the tier; she was the one who locked him back in his cell. I FIND, based on the credible testimony of the two lieutenants to whom SCO White and Sergeant Thompson spoke on that night, that both lieutenants understood there was a disagreement between Sergeant Thompson and SCO White over the inmate, and that, eventually, Lieutenant Bradley had knowledge that the inmate was still in his cell, but did not order his removal elsewhere.

With regard to the incident on March 27, 2012, appellant filed a motion to dismiss the charges, based on a lack of competent, credible evidence. Appellant accurately points out that none of the Department's witnesses had firsthand knowledge of the second incident. The Department argues that appellant's own statements provided through the exhibits and the testimony of others are sufficient to establish its factual case. Respondent also notes that the appellant was available to testify, but chose not to do so, and has requested a negative inference from the failure to testify.

First, with regard to the descriptions of events recounted by Lieutenant Boyle, and recorded in her own reports to the facility, I CONCLUDE that Sergeant Thompson's statements are admissions pursuant to N.J.R.E. 803(b)(1), a statement by a party-opponent, and are therefore admissible as competent evidence.

Appellant filed a Preliminary Incident Report related to the March 27, 2012, incident. In it, she explained that at 3 p.m. SCO Emmert informed her that he had found contraband in the cell that housed inmate A.C. (R-4.) Per Lieutenant DiPetta's orders, she "pulled the inmate in to B shop" when he was returning with the B wing inmates from the recreation yard, and she questioned him. When she called Lieutenant DiPetta with the information on drug movement from the prison, she informed him that "the inmate was back on his unit, was issued charges, and the items were confiscated." (R-4.) The report goes on to state that at 7 p.m. SCO Emmert notified appellant that the inmate had asked to see her. SCO Emmert said when he opened the door and asked the inmate why, "he noticed the inmate's face was red and swollen." Sergeant Thompson reported to the tier, and the inmate told her he had been assaulted in his room by several inmates and could not identify any of them. She escorted him off the floor, and he told her he was assaulted because he did not go to lockup after a lighter was found in his room. The inmate was then taken to the prison nurse for evaluation. (Ibid.)

Lieutenant Boyle's report, to which he testified, contains a statement by Sergeant Thompson that on March 27, 2012, she removed inmate A.C. (who was involved in the March 26 incident) from the returning recreation movement of inmates from his tier and had him placed in the A shop holding cage. There he was interviewed. The report indicates that both actions were taken in response to an order from Lieutenant DiPetta. (R-2.) According to Lieutenant Boyle's report, appellant told him that Lieutenant DiPetta stated, "as soon as that inmate comes in, find out where he got that lighter from." The report states that Sergeant Thompson told Lieutenant Boyle she could not remember who actually pulled the inmate over to A shop for the interview. The report states that the appellant said the inmate denied having a lighter but started to give information about drugs in the institution. "She stated that she informed Lieutenant DiPetta and that Lieutenant DiPetta then wanted her to try and identify the inmates named and then to bring the information back to him to see it before it was forwarded to SID." (Ibid.) Sergeant Thompson argues that the decision to return the inmate to the tier was made by Lieutenant DiPetta, but there is no competent, credible evidence in the record to support that argument.

Therefore, based on the admissions, I FIND as FACT that on March 27, in response to an order from Lieutenant DiPetta to interview the inmate as soon as he came in from recreation, Sergeant Thompson saw to it that A.C. was pulled out of the line of inmates returning from recreation. I FIND that he was then interviewed and Sergeant Thompson either directed or allowed his return to the tier on which he was housed. I FIND that neither statement indicates that the lieutenant ordered her to pull the inmate in front of all the other inmates, and, similarly, neither statement establishes that she was directed to place him back with the other inmates who saw him taken away. Rather, she was told to get information and get it back to the lieutenant. Therefore, I FIND as FACT that the determination on how to pull the inmate and where to put him after the interview was left to Sergeant Thompson, and that she herself made the decisions or went along with decisions made by those reporting to her.

Whether inmate A.C. actually was subject to an assault is not established, because the comment about how he was injured was hearsay within Sergeant Thompson's report, and there is no other competent evidence as to what exactly occurred. The most that can be said is that, based on the nurse's medical report, which qualifies as a public record under N.J.R.E. 803(c)(8), A.C. presented with three scratches on the left side of face, one about one centimeter long. (R-11.) How he got them is unknown.

With regard to the negative inference, the general rule is that > failure of a party to produce before a trial tribunal proof which, it appears, would serve to elucidate the facts in issue, raises a natural inference that the party so failing fears exposure of those facts would be unfavorable to him. 2 Wigmore, Evidence, § 285 (3d ed. 1940). But such an inference cannot arise except upon certain conditions and the inference is always open to destruction by explanation of > circumstances which make some other hypothesis a more natural one than the party's fear of exposure. This principle applies to criminal as well as civil trials, to the State as well as to the accused. Id. §§ 285, 290 (citations omitted).

> [State of New Jersey v. Clawans, 38 N.J. 162, 170–71 (1962).]

See also Duratron Corp. v. Republic Stuyvesant Corp., 95 N.J. Super. 527, certif. denied, 50 N.J. 404 (1967). Indeed, a negative inference may even be drawn in a civil or administrative proceeding where the person has pleaded the Fifth Amendment. "But the inference may be drawn only if there is other evidence supporting an adverse finding; it must not alone constitute the evidence of guilt. Also, no inference may be drawn if the penalty imposed at the conclusion of the proceeding is so severe as to effectively destroy the privilege, such as disbarment or the loss of professional reputation." State Dep't of Law & Pub. Safety, Div. of Gaming Enforcement, 216 N.J. Super. 579, 587 (1987) (citations omitted).

Here, there already is sufficient competent evidence to demonstrate that the March 26 and March 27 decisions at issue were made by Sergeant Thompson. Thus, I CONCLUDE that, for the little it adds here, the negative inference may be drawn.

I FIND, based on Lieutenant Boyle's credible testimony and the Use of Force—On Duty policy, effective February 1, 2011, and still in force at the time of the two incidents, that "mechanical restraints" are included among the items identified as "Non-deadly force," and handcuffs are a mechanical restraint. The section entitled "Reporting Use of Force" states that "Immediately following all instances in which . . . physical, mechanical or deadly force has been used, each staff member who participated in or witnessed the event shall write a Special Custody Report (CUS-100) to the area supervisor or Shift Commander as applicable. Additionally, it shall be the responsibility of the ranking custody supervisor on the scene to insure that a 'Use of Force Report' (CUS—102) is completed and submitted as appropriate." (R-16.) The following section, entitled "Reports," states:

> Immediately following any incident in which force has been used, each staff member who participated in or witnessed the event shall write a special report to the shift supervisor. The report shall contain: > a. A description of the events leading up to the use of force;
>
> b. A description of the incident;
>
> c. The type of force used;
>
> d. The reason(s) for employing force;
>
> . . . .
>
> g. Other relevant facts or comments about the incident or conduct of employees or inmates.

Lieutenant Bradley was particularly persuasive on the question of why Use of Force Reports are required, explaining that force cannot be used as punishment, and that without documentation of what happened, the facility is open to accusations that force is being used any time a correction officer is unhappy with someone. Based on the comments of lieutenants Boyle, Bradley, and Hull, as well as Major Caldarise, I FIND that Thompson was required to file a Use of Force Report on March 26, 2012, and failed to do so. However, I also FIND, based on Major Culvert's credible testimony, that there is no written policy on routine versus non-routine handcuffing, and inmate A.C.'s conduct, while a violation of the rules that was subject to discipline, could be viewed along the lines of a child refusing to go to his room, and therefore, reasonably could have been viewed as a routine problem, which is in line with Lieutenant Bradley's non-reactive response to what occurred that night. Thus, it was a violation, but one viewed as serious only in hindsight.

Both Lieutenant Bradley and Major Caldarise acknowledged that no written protocol states when an inmate must be removed from a unit. Major Culvert suggested credibly that the March 26 refusal to lock-in was not a major violation by the inmate, which would help to explain why, based on what she knew, Lieutenant Bradley did not act to remove the inmate. Based on those facts, I FIND that Sergeant Thompson violated no written policy or procedure by returning the inmate to his cell on March 26.

All of the lieutenants, as well as Major Caldarise, testified to the dangers of pulling an inmate out in front of his tier, taking him away, and then returning him. That also is not in written policy form, but their testimony, along with SCO White's statements about her own fears, underlined the ongoing importance of the simple fact that a correctional facility can be a dangerous place and officers are expected to be aware of those dangers. The record, including appellant's own admissions, established that Lieutenant DiPetta did not order the sergeant either to pull the inmate out of the line or to put him back on the tier. He left to her the decision on how to carry out his orders. This is consistent with the fact that she was a sergeant and sometimes the primary shift officer. All of the lieutenants credibly explained that questioning someone and then returning them creates the suspicion in other prisoners that the person is a snitch. Their potential for retaliation makes that return dangerous. Major Caldarise's testimony that the decision to return A.C. to the tier constituted poor judgment on appellant's part was persuasive, independent of whether A.C. was actually attacked or not. Therefore, I FIND as FACT that although Sergeant Thompson did not violate a specific protocol, she did exercise poor judgment in a way that comprised the safety of an inmate.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relied by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

Here, the appellant is charged with other sufficient cause, in the form of a serious mistake due to carelessness which may result in danger or injury to persons or property, as well as violation of administrative procedures involving safety and security and violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order, or other administrative decision.

As noted above, Sergeant Thompson may have committed an error in returning A.C. to the tier on March 26, 2012, but she violated no written policy in doing so, and the internal practice varies with circumstance. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not proved the first charge. The second charge of violating an administrative procedure involving safety and security has been proved, in that Sergeant Thompson did not file a Use of Force Report related to the handcuffing on March 26. Presumably the third charge relates to violation of the Internal Management Procedure (R-15), which states that a primary goal of the custody unit is to prevent injury or the loss of life, and ensure a safe environment for staff, visitors, volunteers, and inmates. I CONCLUDE that the error in returning the inmate on March 27, 2012, does violate this procedure, as it potentially comprised his safety.

The remaining issue is penalty. Appellant had ten years of unblemished service at the time the incident occurred. The general rule for civil service cases is progressive discipline. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Typically, the Civil Service Commission considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Nonetheless, progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question. Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). The respondent imposed the thirty-day penalty based on a violation of policy in returning the inmate on March 26, as well as the failure to file the Use of Force Report that day, and the placement of the inmate back in the tier after the questioning of March 27. Here, the Department did not have sufficient evidence to support the existence of a protocol addressing the March 26 decisions to handcuff or to return to the tier. Additionally, the Department did not prove that the inmate actually had been attacked, and although it proved the violation of the Use of Force policy, a fair amount of testimony indicated that the Department does not discipline for every failure to file the form. Thus, a lesser penalty than the thirty days is warranted. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that a fifteen-day, as opposed to a thirty-day, suspension is appropriate.

ORDER

The thirty-day suspension imposed by the Department is hereby REDUCED to a fifteen-day suspension.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Mr. Nash and DAG Saxon:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearing unit. We have received the settlement regarding Natalie Traylor from the Office of Administrative Law. However, prior to forwarding it to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgment, clarification is required.

Specifically, while the settlement indicates that Ms. Traylor is to be reinstated and waives back pay, the record does not specifically reflect how to record the time period from the original date of removal (December 22, 2016) to the date of reinstatement. In this regard, before a settlement can be acknowledged by the Civil Service Commission, all periods of time must be specifically accounted for in an employee's personnel record. For example, is that time period to be recorded as an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else?

Please let me know the intention of the parties as soon as possible. An e-mail reply is sufficient so long as agreed upon by the parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of William Able Newark School District

CSC DKT. NO. 2016-1907
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01850-16

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2018 BW

The appeal of William Able, Senior Custodian, Newark School District, removal effective September 16, 2015, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Leland S. McGee (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on February 12, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 4, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached ALJ's initial decision as well as his recommendation to modify the removal to a six-month suspension.

Since the removal has been modified, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits and seniority following his suspension until the date of his reinstatement. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a) provides for the award of counsel fees only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in the disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121,128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In this matter, while the penalty was modified, charges were sustained and major discipline was imposed. Therefore, the appellant has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, counsel fees must be denied.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, unpublished, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. Feb. 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay are finally resolved. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed based on any dispute regarding back pay.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was not justified. Accordingly, the Commission modifies the removal to a six-month suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant receive back pay, benefits and seniority from the conclusion of the suspension until the actual date of reinstatement. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. An affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the parties are encouraged to make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to back pay. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed based on any dispute regarding back pay.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01850-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-1907

IN THE MATTER OF WILLIAM ABLE,
NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT,

Lauren Bonaguro, Esq., for petitioner (Decotiis, FitzPatrick, Cole & Goblin, attorneys)

Bernard Mercado, Esq., for respondent (Charlotte Hitchcock, General Counsel, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 13, 2017 Decided: February 12, 2018

BEFORE LELAND S. MCGEE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This case arises out of an employment termination proceeding against William Able (Petitioner or Able) by the City of Newark Public School District (Respondent). Able worked for Respondent for approximately twenty years. His last position was as Head Custodian for Barringer High School. His employment was terminated effective September 16, 2015, for conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property, and other sufficient causes, occurring on or about September 7, 2015.

Specifically, Respondent alleged that Petitioner allowed, caused and/or supervised the disposal of "construction debris" into garbage bins at Barringer, and the use of a blower belonging to Barringer to be used to remove dust from the van that delivered the debris. Later that same day, the van returned and Petitioner is alleged to have allowed, caused and/or supervised the removal of twenty to twenty-five student lockers. Among the occupants of the van were Petitioner's children.

On September 18, 2015, Respondent issued a Preliminary Notice Disciplinary Action (PNDA) against Petitioner alleging three (3) charges. On November 19, 2015, Respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) removing Able from public employment. The following charges were sustained:

- N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) – conduct unbecoming a public employee
- N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) – misuse of public property
- N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11) – other sufficient cause

Petitioner then appealed the FNDA, and the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs, transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, where it was filed on January 29, 2016.

This matter was assigned to the Honorable Imre Karaszegi, ALJ. It was scheduled for hearing on September 27, 2016, which was adjourned and rescheduled for November 15, 2016. On October 14, 2016, this matter was reassigned to the undersigned. Hearings were rescheduled for, and held on February 16, and May 5, 2017. Post-hearing submissions were filed on November 13, 2017, and the record closed.

DISCUSSION OF THE FACTS

One substantive fact in this case is not in dispute and I FIND that Petitioner allowed his family to remove student lockers from Barringer High School. The issue in this case is whether Petitioner had the authority to remove the lockers.

Summary of Testimony

Respondent's witness, Keith Scott Barton (Barton), is the Executive Managing Director of Operations for Respondent. Barton was responsible for facilities operations. This includes custodial services, trade services, and fixed assets. He also serves as Respondent's Affirmative Action Officer.

Barton testified that employees must have authorization to dispose of the District property from the fixed assets division and his office to manage inventory. The procedure for disposing of fixed assets includes an inspection by Wilfred Young (Young), who maintains the inventory records. He visits sites to review inventory numbers, tag equipment, and to determine if items are operational. Respondent offered into evidence a Bulletin regarding "Removal of Obsolete Assets" (R-1), dated September 15, 2011. This document indicates that the procedure is that the school principal (or designee) makes recommendations on the "validity of the fixed assets" and causes a Fixed Assets Removal Form to be completed and signed as to the equipment to be removed. The form is submitted to the fixed assets department, specifically to Wilfred Young. If Young "determines that those desks, in this example, can no longer be used, then at that point, a dumpster is ordered, or we figure out the best way to dispose of the – that furniture. In most cases we order a dumpster." (T1-115:9-13.) Barton stated that if fixed assets are removed without following this procedure it is theft. Respondent entered into evidence a copy of a Newark Police Incident Report dated September 15, 2015, naming Tariq Mclamb as the "suspect." (R-2.)

Barton also testified that the District pays for trash removal services. Under the contract the vendor, only trash generated by the District should be disposed of in Barringer's dumpsters.

Barton was doing a building walk-through in preparation for a news conference just before the beginning of the school year. He was also following up on an email from Carrieann Zielinski (Zielinski) who advised the facilities department that the lockers had been removed. Several student lockers were removed from hallways and stored in the boiler room. Barton had a conversation with Petitioner about replacing the lockers in spaces where tiles had fallen from the hallway walls. He stated that the lockers were not replaced and the spaces were covered with poster board. Barton testified that there was no policy about storing the lockers in the boiler room but it would be governed by safety and fire hazard regulations.

The parties entered a copy of pages 1 of 24, 2 of 24, and 18 of 24, of Respondent's Fixed Assets Manual updated by Wilford Young on July 18, 2011. (J-7.) Barton did not know whether Petitioner actually received a copy of the Manual. There is a procedure that requires each employee to sign for receipt of the Manual. He testified that the school administrator is primarily involved in the fixed assets process and custodians, per se were not be a part of the process outlined in the Manual. In the Barringer High School building, there are two separate schools. At the time, the principal in the lower level of the building was Mincy, with Zelinski responsible for operations. At the upper level, the principal was Breidlove, with Owens responsible for operations.

Barton testified that the custodians should know the procedures regarding removal of fixed assets through their administrators. There should have been training for all staff when they returned after the summer break and before the students arrived. He stated that there should have been a sign-in sheet for all staff in attendance at the training but he is not aware of whether Barringer had any such training program. He was also not aware if Petitioner specifically received instructions about the disposal of fixed assets. The District stopped issuing Bulletins in 2014.

Petitioner Stipulated that he stored some lockers in the boiler room and removed others. Although Barton testified that there were "a large number" of lockers missing from the hallways, he did not check the boiler room and did not know whether any lockers were stored there.

Esther Williams (Williams), Senior Head Custodian at night (3:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m.) at Barringer High School, has been employed by Respondent for twenty-seven years; twenty-one years as a custodian. In 2015, she was a custodial worker on the 7 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift. She became Senior Head Custodian in July 2016.

Williams testified that she is not aware of any policies regarding the disposal of items in schools. She testified that she has never seen the September 15, 2011, bulletin regarding removal of obsolete assets. (R-1.) She has never seen the Newark Public Schools Fixed Asset Manual. (J-7.) As far as she knew, it was not necessary to have specific authorization to remove items that are to be thrown away. She stated, "[w]e always threw things out. We put them in the roll-off. We put them against the fence. We put them besides the roll-off. In Barringer we have a driveway." (T1 167:4-7.) Williams further stated,

> But no, we never call anybody. In none of the schools that I worked, did we call anybody. So, I never – and I was always – I was always close to the head man. Because I had, you know, intentions of becoming a head person. So anything that I could learn throughout the years, I would pick up to - - when I became this - - in the position. But never did I see that they ever called anybody.
> [T1:167, 15-23.]

The exceptions are computers and items that have a bar code or District ID number. In that case Young had to be called for direction. If the item was broken it could be discarded in the "roll-off"—dumpster. The dumpsters were not permanently placed at the school so they had to wait for one to be placed in the driveway. "Every school does the same thing." (T1 177:17-18.) None of the lockers had a bar code on them.

Williams testified that as the hearing was conducted, there were student lockers stored in the boiler room. Approximately twenty sets of lockers with six to eight lockers per set. No administrators have advised her that they could not remain in the boiler room.

Williams described problems with the lockers in the hallway. The computer teachers and staff at Babyland (daycare) complained that the locks were broken and stayed open. On the first floor between stairway nos. 3 and 4, the students walked by and slammed the doors, which disturbed the teachers and babies. There was a meeting with Principal Zielinski to discuss moving the broken lockers. As a result of that meeting, Williams assisted in moving the lockers; the "good ones" went into the boiler room for possible use at other schools. Those that were corroded were placed outside by the fence over a two- or three-day period.

Williams stated that there was no training in regard to the removal of items; she stated, "I only know what they told me." Much what they learned was "on-the-job," as you go along. She did not know what occurred on the date of the within incident. She was not aware of Petitioner's children being present when she helped him remove the lockers. During the time that the lockers were removed from the premises, she was "upstairs . . . sealing . . . taking care of the floors at that moment." (T1, 187:18-20.)

Williams has worked at Barringer between four and six years. She has a close relationship with Petitioner in that he's "like a son" to her. They also are colleagues in the same union. They had acknowledged that stealing from school grounds is not acceptable. Williams also testified that she has a Black Seal license and is aware that it is not proper to store the lockers in the boiler room. The original intention was for them to be moved to other locations but when this case started, she was advised by Mr. Barton to leave everything just as Petitioner left things.

Petitioner testified that he started working for Respondent nineteen or twenty years ago as a temporary custodial worker. One year later he became a full-time employee. Ten years later he became Senior Head Custodian.

Able acknowledged that he removed the lockers. He stated that the school had a rodent problem that required shutting the entire building down for a weekend. The infestation was concentrated on the first floor where students left food in open lockers. He moved lockers to clean behind them and many of them were broken. He had a meeting with Ms. Zelinski in the middle of August 2015 and explained that there was trash behind the lockers and that the students regularly slammed the doors as they walked passed them. He suggested that they be removed and Zelinski consented.

Petitioner testified that when Barton inspected the building prior to the press conference, he asked Petitioner about damage to the walls where the lockers had been removed. Petitioner stated that if the walls were not repaired, he would put the lockers back in place. The next day a teacher put up a bulletin board with students' work, which covered the damaged walls. The lockers shown in the video of September 7 had not been used in the fifteen years that he has worked there.

Petitioner testified that his first supervisor was Clement Collins and that is who "trained" him. Collins told him to use his discretion in disposing of old items. If there is a bar code on it, contact Wilford Young. Everything else was discretionary; determine if items could be repaired.

Petitioner has twelve children, eight boys and four girls, and they often went to school with him. The administrators know his children and they have always been welcome in the school and at school events. He stated that the assistant superintendent has invited his children to the staff cookouts. Petitioner acknowledges that he should not have had his children helping him on the day that the lockers were removed. However, he denies stealing or otherwise improperly removing the lockers from the school. It was his understanding that "garbage" could be discarded and he had the discretion to determine what was garbage. He denies receiving or seeing the Fixed Assets Manual (J-7) or the September 15, 2011, Bulletin (R-1).

Petitioner testified that he put the lockers in the school driveway by the fence and that it was his uncle who removed them from the premises. Petitioner does not know what his uncle did with the lockers after they were removed.

Petitioner testified that nobody asked him where the lockers were and he never mentioned to Burton that there were lockers stored in the boiler room. He has a Black Seal license and the training directive was to ensure that there were no combustibles in the boiler room. He described two tiers in the boiler room; the top tier is where he placed the lockers in the area where the incinerators used to be. It was summer time and the boilers were not in operation—they run from October through April. In May, they clean and shut down the boilers.

Carrieann Zielinski is the school operation manager at Barringer High School. She is responsible for the daily operations of the school which includes everything that is not instructional: the cafeteria, the custodians, procurement, helping the principal develop the budget, and scheduling. She is the direct report of the Head Custodian, who is responsible for supervising the individual custodians.

Zielinski testified that the Head Custodian is responsible for preparing work orders for repairs such as door knobs and other equipment that is repairable. She is not aware of any policy for equipment that is damaged beyond repair, "they would probably have to reach out to Facilities." (T2 7:24-25.) Zielinski stated that there is no formal process for how policies are communicated to her.

Zielinski stated that in the past, Petitioner has submitted work orders for items that are in disrepair. In this specific instance, she did not authorize him to take the lockers himself; however, she never talked with him about what he was going to do with the lockers.

On September 1, 2015, Zielinski forwarded an email to Burton and William Polk, her second in command. (J-13.) Attached to the email were pictures of the walls and the floor from which the lockers were removed. In the email she acknowledged that Petitioner moved the lockers to clean garbage underneath it. It further stated,

> Upon further examination, it was discovered there were major holes in the wall, rat nests, and piles of garbage. The pictures attached show the damage done to the wall and the piles of garbage. I spoke with BAAH and we would prefer if the lockers were removed permanently. I saw the masons working on the wall yesterday. If we could just fix the wall and remove the lockers that would be ideal. With the lockers gone on the first floor it opens the hallways for the flow of traffic between the two schools. Since no one uses those lockers > they become filled with trash and whatever else the students hide in there.

Zielinski testified that after requesting that the lockers be removed, she was not concerned about where they went from there. She assumed that there was a protocol for what would be done with the lockers once they were removed. Her purpose in sending the e-mail was to have the wall repaired and not have the lockers put back. As far as she knew, the lockers that were removed were still in the boiler room.

David Rawles (Rawles) is a project manager in Office of Project Control, which is in the Office of Facilities. He testified that he is familiar with the duties and responsibilities of custodial workers. He confirmed that student lockers, among other items, are considered "school property" and there is a process for addressing broken lockers. In his previous position as the special assistant for the High School Network, they provided support to the schools in the district. That support included preparing schools for the upcoming year. At the end of a school year Rawles (and/or staff in his office) emptied out student lockers and through a District contracted; a vendor would come in and repair lockers. For example, if a door is broken, "typically" lockers are cleaned out and either custodial staff or a designee in the school identifies the lockers that are in disrepair and the vender is contacted. "At some time throughout the summer the locker door is repaired or the lock."

Rawles testified that the process for disposing of items in disrepair varies depending upon how the item was acquired. Federally funded (grants) property cannot be disposed of in the "normal" way. Once the grant funding has ended "typically" there's an inventory of what was purchased through a grant, and they cannot be disposed of in the "normal" way. As such, there are different procedures for different items and circumstances. In this case, he is not aware of whether the lockers were purchased through a grant. He stated that there was a "general understanding" that school proper could not be taken for personal use.

Rawles stated that when preparing the building for the first press conference with Commissioner Serf, he personally inspected it. There were tiles in disrepair from where the lockers had been removed. Barton wanted the lockers placed back on the walls after the tiles were repaired. Petitioner was with them for the inspection. Rawles does not know why they were not put back on the walls and would be surprised if they were still in the building. They were not being used and some were in disrepair. Petitioner did not tell Rawles that the lockers were disposed of and Petitioner did not have permission to dispose of them.

Clement Collins (Collins) has been a supervisor of custodians for Respondent for approximately twelve years and was a custodian for fifteen years. His "training" as a supervisor "came from being a custodian." (T2 71:6.) He never received any specific training on the policies, but occasionally there were email circulars to the custodians and they would meet to discuss or sometimes develop the circulars. He never received any training regarding what items should be "tagged" or why; nor any training regarding which items were purchased by way of a grant, or otherwise.

He manages the custodial staff and grounds crews for eighteen high schools and three stadiums. He testified that it is not proper for custodians to take school property. The "normal" practice for addressing "broken" property is to try to repair it or to throw it out. When asked whether a custodian has to get permission prior to throwing property out, Collins stated that "it depends." In clarifying he stated,

> Well, it depends on if the custodian – because, you know, the custodian has the ability to determine, you know, what's trash depending on who assesses it.
> If there is – if there's items that were thrown out in the past then obviously they wouldn't have to get authorization for it, they would just probably – the normal procedure is just to throw it out.
> [T2 63:11-17.]

When asked whether Petitioner told him that there were several lockers that were broken at Barringer that had to be disposed of, Collins stated,

> I know they were going through a project, he never – I don't recall him calling me directly but I know there was lockers that – there was a project there that they were removing lockers, but I never got a call from him directly, no.
>
> Well, as custodian in the building, you know, he would be directly involved with the removal or, you know, the transport and the discarding, you know.

Collins stated that the custodians made the determination about what should be fixed or thrown out. Once the custodian makes that determination an item can just be discarded. When asked whether a custodian can take discarded property without authorization, Collins stated, "[w]ell, it's not in the policy to say that you can't but, I mean, I've never experienced that" (T2 67:18-19) and "it's possible" to take discarded property. Although he never gave Petitioner authority to take property, the proper person to give such authority was the administrator in the building.

Collins stated that he has not seen a policy for how to determine what items should be discarded and what shouldn't. He stated that some property/items are "tagged" with a "BO" number. That process started when the district started getting computers, laptops, new lawnmowers, and equipment that "they wanted to make sure that we had a count on or an inventory . . . ." It was associated with computerization of the inventory. For those items that are not tagged, "[t]here's to my knowledge no process."

CREDIBILITY

When the testimony of witnesses is in disagreement, the trier of fact must weigh the witnesses' credibility in order to make factual findings. Credibility is the value that the fact finder gives to testimony of a witness and contemplates an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Credible testimony must proceed from the mouth of a credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge, and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955); Gilson v. Gilson, 116 N.J. Eq. 556, 560 (E. & A. 1934). A fact finder is expected to base credibility decisions on his or her common sense and life experiences. State v. Daniels, 182 N.J. 80, 99 (2004). Credibility is not dependent on the number of witnesses who appeared, State v. Thompson, 59 N.J. 396, 411 (1971), and the finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521-22 (1950).

I FIND that the testimony of Petitioner, Collins, Zielinski, Rawles, and Williams to be credible and consistent with respect to whether or not there was a clear policy for disposal of school property and whether or not that policy was clearly articulated to Petitioner or any other custodian within the Respondent school district.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6, governs a public employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576, 580-81 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). The Act states that State policy is to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials so they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). To carry out this policy, the Act authorizes the discipline and termination of public employees.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) provides that a public employee may be subject to major discipline for various offenses. The New Jersey Department of Human Services has a Disciplinary Action Program that sets forth the standards that all employees must meet. (R-12.) "Unbecoming conduct" is broadly defined as conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the government unit or has the tendency to destroy public respect and confidence in the delivery of government services. In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) (conduct unbecoming a public employee)

Regarding Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), I FIND that petitioner did not engage in conduct unbecoming a public employee with respect to discarding the lockers. There is no precise definition for conduct unbecoming a public employee, and the question of whether conduct is unbecoming is made on a case-by-case basis. King v. County of Mercer, CSV 2768-02, Initial Decision (February 24, 2003), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (April 9, 2003), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/.

In Jones v. Essex County, CSV 3552-98, Initial Decision (May 16, 2001), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (June 26, 2001), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/, it was observed that conduct unbecoming a public employee is conduct that adversely affects morale or efficiency or has a tendency to destroy public respect for governmental employees and confidence in the operation of public services. Unbecoming conduct is not precisely defined in N.J.S.A. 11A or N.J.A.C. 4A; see, e.g., In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). In Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998), an off-duty firefighter directed a racial epithet at an on-duty police officer during a traffic stop. The Court noted that the phrase "unbecoming conduct" is an "elastic one that includes any conduct that adversely affects morale or efficiency by destroying public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services." Id. at 554.

In Hartmann v. Police Department of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992), that court stated that a finding of misconduct need not "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior, which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that, which is morally and legally correct."

In the present case, I CONCLUDE that there were no clearly established protocols for how to dispose of school property that was in disrepair. Further, there was no formal training for the custodians with respect to disposal of school property, and custodians had a great deal of latitude in determining what items should be disposed of and how. Custodians were left to rely on "past practices" for guidance as to the disposal of property in disrepair. Finally, Petitioner's removal of the lockers was not clandestine and was consistent with what he believed to be the proper process. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this charge should not be upheld with respect to the removal of the lockers.

I further FIND that Petitioner did engage in conduct unbecoming a public employee with respect to allowing his children to enter the school building to assist in the removal of the lockers. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this charge should be upheld with respect to allowing the children on school property.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) (misuse of public property, including motor vehicles)

Regarding Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) and the charge of misuse of public property, while Petitioner reasonably believed that he had the authority to discard school property that was in disrepair, I CONCLUDE that it was not proper for him to allow anyone to remove the lockers from school grounds. There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for misuse of public property, but the charge is understood to mean that an employee has used public property, in a manner that is inconsistent with agency policy or reasonable safety standards. In In re Pressley, Nos. A-0699-13T4, A-0700-13T4 (consolidated) (App. Div. June 21, 2016), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/, recurring incidents of unpermitted and erratic driving were sufficient to sustain a charge under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8).

I CONCLUDE that did misuse public property when he allowed the lockers to be removed from the premises as opposed to being disposed in the dumpster. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this charge should be sustained.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) (other sufficient cause)

Regarding Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), FIND that Respondent did not provide a factual basis for "other sufficient cause." There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for other sufficient cause. Other sufficient cause is generally defined in the charges against petitioner. The charge of other sufficient cause has been dismissed when "respondent has not given any substance to the allegation." Simmons

v. City of Newark, CSV 9122-99, Initial Decision (February 22, 2006), adopted, Comm'r (April 26, 2006), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/.

The FNDA does not specify what conduct should be considered to be "other sufficient cause." Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this charge should not be sustained.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, Respondent has not met its burden of proving all of the charges by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence. There is no allegation and no evidence that Petitioner profited from the removal of the property. Further, although a criminal complaint was filed, no charges were brought against Petitioner for removing the lockers. It is therefore, ORDERED that the action of Respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, in removing Petitioner was not justified and the penalty imposed is hereby MODIFIED.

It is ORDERED that for allowing school property to be removed from school grounds, a penalty of six months suspensions is hereby imposed.

It is further ORDERED that Respondent is paid back pay and benefits from six months following the date of termination. Consistent with Petitioner's duty to mitigate his damages, I ORDER Petitioner to submit to Respondent a certified statement detailing any employment and income for the period following his termination, with copies of relevant tax and other records and names of addresses of employers. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 17582-15
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-1430

IN THE MATTER OF JERMAINE CURRY,
NEW JERSEY STATE PRISON,
DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Peter Valenzano, Esq., for appellant (Mashel Law, LLC, attorneys)

Tamara L. Rudow, Esq., Legal Specialist, Department of Corrections, Office of Employee Relations, appearing for respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(2)

Record Closed: November 9, 2017 Decided: February 9, 2018

BEFORE DOROTHY INCARVITO-GARRABRANT, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Jermaine Curry, a Senior Corrections Officer at New Jersey State Prison, (NJSP), Department of Corrections (respondent, NJSP DOC, or DOC), appeals disciplinary action seeking a suspension for sixty working days for conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), specifically violations of Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17, as amended; C(11), conduct unbecoming an employee; C(24) threatening, intimidating, harassing, coercing or interfering with fellow employees on State property;

D(7) violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security; and E(2) intentional use or misuse of authority or position. (J-1.)

The appellant denies the allegations that he inappropriately restrained a civilian instructor, or that he verbally abused, harassed, intimidated and interfered with the instructor by locking him in a vegetable shop on March 26, 2015. He also contends that his actions were necessary for safety and security reasons.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 3, 2015, respondent issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action setting forth the charges and specifications against appellant. Following a departmental hearing on September 11, 2015, the respondent issued a Final Notices of Disciplinary Action on September 17, 2015, sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice and suspending appellant from employment for sixty working days. (J-1.) Appellant filed a timely notice of appeal.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on October 29, 2015 for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The matter commenced on February 7, 2017, May 1, 2017, and June 27, 2017.[1] The parties filed post-hearing briefs and the record closed on November 9, 2017.[2]

[1] Appellant was represented by Todd McConnell, New Jersey State PBA, Local 105 Representative, on February 7, 2017. He subsequently retained counsel, and Peter Velenzano, Esq. represented him on the remaining dates.

[2] An extension of time was granted for the filing of this initial Decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Testimony

For Respondent

Glen Trahan (Trahan) is the Assistant Regional Food Service Director at Northern State Prison. On March 26, 2015, he was the Institutional Trade Instructor (ITI) and Assistant Food Service Supervisor at NJSP. He is a civilian worker. He and appellant have had conflicts in the past, and appellant has filed special complaints and Equal Employment Division (EED) complaints against him.[3] Trahan denied that those complaints had any bearing on what occurred in this incident. He stated that all of the EED complaints against him "turned out false."

Trahan testified that during lunch mess service on March 26, 2015, he and ITI Calvin Bryant (Bryant) went downstairs into the cookhouse basement to prepare additional foods for mess and for delivery to certain inmates. Trahan was in possession of a commercial can opener. Trahan and Bryant were accompanied by two inmates who were tasked with opening cans in the vegetable shop and dividing the food into portions for each inmate. Trahan approached appellant and twice requested that he unlock the vegetable shop. Appellant was on his phone in the office. He did not respond and remained on his call. Trahan noticed that the vegetable shop was already unlocked, so he and the inmates entered the room. Trahan secured the can opener into the slot on the work counter. He then began instructing the inmates about dividing the contents of the cans. Bryant entered the shop and then left to retrieve more cans from another storeroom down the hall. At this point, no cans had yet been opened as they were being placed and organized on the table.

While Trahan was still giving instructions to the inmates on the division of the contents, appellant entered the vegetable shop, and ordered Trahan and the two inmates to leave the room. At this point, no cans had been opened. The two inmates left. However, before Trahan could exit the room, appellant slammed the door and locked it. Appellant said "[n]ow I got you, I'm going to lock you up like an inmate." Appellant locked the door. Appellant began rapping to Trahan telling him that he was locked up like an inmate. Trahan testified that he asked appellant to open the door. Appellant refused. Trahan yelled to Bryant to get assistance from Officer Joseph Buckley (Buckley). Bryant immediately went upstairs to get assistance.

Trahan testified that he was locked in the vegetable shop for about fifteen to twenty minutes, until Sergeant Michael Keaton (Keaton) released him. During the time he was restrained, Trahan sat at the back of the shed and ate an orange, while appellant taunted him, and attempted to agitate him. Trahan testified that he did not engage appellant because he did not want to get into a verbal altercation with him. When Trahan was released, he went to Administration.

Trahan completed a special report on March 26, 2015, (J-5) and participated in an investigative interview on April 14, 2015. (J-17c.)

Calvin Bryant (Bryant) is an ITI II assigned to the cookhouse at NJSP. He is a civilian worker whose duties include giving food preparation instructions to inmates.

Bryant testified that the vegetable shop door was unsecured when Trahan, the inmates and he went downstairs to open cans. When they entered the vegetable shop, Trahan instructed the inmates about how much food to take from the cans and place into the pans. No cans had been opened.

Bryant left the vegetable shop to go down the short hallway to a storeroom to retrieve additional cans. While he was doing this, he heard appellant say "[y]ou can't be in here. You all got to get out." Bryant observed the inmates and Trahan begin to leave. The inmates exited the vegetable shop and the basement immediately. However, before Trahan even had a chance to exit, appellant kicked the vegetable shop door shut on Trahan, and locked him in the shop.

Bryant testified that appellant then started rapping at Trahan like "Run DMC" and said, "[y]ou're locked up like an inmate now." Bryant went upstairs to get Buckley, but Buckley said that he could not leave his post during mess. Buckley also advised that Keaton had been contacted about the situation by appellant and would be responding.

Bryant was present when Trahan was released. Keaton told appellant to open the door. However, Keaton then had to take appellant's keys from him to release Trahan. Trahan stormed out stating he was going to talk to his lawyer. Trahan had been locked in the vegetable shop for ten to twelve minutes. In his special report dated March 26, 2015, Bryant wrote that Trahan was locked in the shop for six minutes. (J-4.) He participated in an investigative interview on April 10, 2015. (J-17e.)

Bryant described appellant as a "ticking time bomb," who could blow at any minute. He stated that appellant wanted to make his own rules and regulations.

Joseph Buckley (Buckley), Senior Corrections Officer, testified that he has been employed by the DOC for fifteen years and is currently assigned to the Officer's Dining Room at NJSP. On March 26, 2015, he was assigned to the cookhouse.

On that date, Buckley was at his post in the cookhouse during mess. He was approached by Bryant who advised that appellant had locked Trahan in the vegetable shop. Buckley advised Bryant that he was unable to leave his post during mess. He told Bryant to speak with Keaton and that he had heard a radio call from appellant to Keaton.

In the past, Buckley had been assigned to the cookhouse area in the basement. Buckley stated that it was against policy for an ITI to be in the vegetable shop with inmates while they were opening cans. Buckley testified that he never locked a civilian worker in the vegetable shop and that there "was no reason to do so." Buckley added that even if the ITIs were present in the vegetable shop with the inmates while they were opening cans, he would not lock the civilians in the vegetable shop because the policy does not provide for that procedure.

Buckley had reviewed and was aware of Cook House Update #1, dated January 24, 2014, which codified procedures for inmates working in the vegetable shop. (J-10.)

Buckley completed a special report on March 26, 2015, (J-6) and an investigative interview on April 17, 2015. (J-17a.)

Michael Keaton (Keaton) testified that he has been employed by the DOC for twenty-one years and has been a Sergeant for the last ten years. He was appellant's supervisor for one year and gave him a good evaluation. On the date of the alleged incident, he was assigned to run mess.

Keaton received a call from appellant who advised that the inmates were opening cans and that Trahan would not leave the vegetable shop. Keaton could not leave his post and go to the cookhouse basement until mess ended. Once mess ended, Keaton went to the vegetable shop which took approximately fifteen minutes. Appellant advised that he had locked Trahan in the shop because he was opening cans with inmates. Keaton took appellant's keys and unlocked the door releasing Trahan, who stated that he was going to see Administration.

Keaton did not recall seeing any opened cans. Although an ITI could be locked in the vegetable shop for safety reasons, based on his observations, there was no reason for appellant to have locked Trahan in the vegetable shop.

Keaton completed a special report on March 26, 2015, (J-7) and an investigative interview on April 10, 2015. (J-17b.)

Michael Kubik (Kubik), Senior Investigator, testified that he has been assigned to the Special Investigations Division (SID) for nine years, and received special training in conducting investigations.

Kubik conducted an investigation into this alleged incident. As part of his investigation he reviewed all of the special reports and conducted interviews of appellant, Bryant, Trahan, Buckley, and Keaton. (J-2, 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7.) Kubik summarized the witnesses' statements contained in his report. (J-2.)

Kubik reviewed the Handbook of Information and Rules for employees of NJDOC (J-8), the Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations (J-9), Cook House Update #1 (J-10), Major Wayne Sanderson's memo permitting two or three inmates to work in the vegetable shop (J-10), and the March 26, 2015 cookhouse log book. (J-11.)

Kubik noted that there was a discrepancy about the length of time Trahan was locked in the vegetable shop. The witness statements ranged from approximately five to fifteen minutes. Kubik explained that this was a common occurrence in stressful incidents when individuals are emotional. Based on his experience conducting similar investigations, he was not concerned about the discrepancies in the elapsed time because in such situations ten minutes may seem like fifteen and one minute may seem like four minutes to different individuals.

Kubik noted that appellant's statement to SID was inconsistent with the other witnesses' statements. Appellant stated that Trahan was only locked in the vegetable shop for less than one minute. Appellant stated that he, and not Keaton, let Trahan out of the vegetable shop.

Kubik's investigation concluded that appellant locked Trahan in the vegetable shop on March 26, 2015. Keaton had to be pulled away from his duties to attend to appellant's actions. There was a disparity between appellant's version of events and those of all the other witnesses. While there is no standard operating procedure for the vegetable shop, Kubik determined that "a civilian employee should not be involuntarily locked inside any room within NJSP." (J-2.) Kubik forwarded his final report to Administration for appropriate action.

Davin Borg (Borg) has been employed by DOC since 1999, and is the Administrative Major at NJSP. His duties include being responsible for disciplinary matters, policies, and daily operations. Borg testified that he was familiar with the facts of the alleged incident on March 26, 2015, and had reviewed the special reports, investigation report, PDNA, FNDA, and the other NJDOC documents related to the alleged incident and investigation.

The policy required that the vegetable shop be secured other than when instruction was being done. Borg stated that appellant was responsible for securing the vegetable shop at the beginning of his shift when he performed his inspection. If he had discovered that the vegetable shop was unlocked, then he should have reported that it was unsecured. Borg testified that during mess operations, no inmates are permitted in the vegetable shop.

Borg concluded that appellant violated several NJDOC policies. First, Borg testified that it is against NJDOC policy to secure a civilian inside a room. Second, the appellant violated the NJSP Internal Management Policy (IMP) #14 West Compound Mess Hall/Kitchen policy by failing to secure the vegetable shop door at the beginning of his shift. This policy required that "[a]ll doors are to be closed at all times. All doors with locking devices will remain locked except when in use, including the pantry, cells, sally ports, and doors." (J-14.) Third, the appellant violated, IMP #402 Custody Staff policy, relative to staff conduct by failing to conduct himself in a profession manner by locking a civilian in a vegetable shop when it served no custodial interest.

Borg also testified that appellant's conduct violated the Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations as follows:

1. Article I, Section 2, No Officer shall knowingly act in any way that might reasonably be expected to create an impression of suspicion among the public that an officer may be engaged in conduct which violates the public trust as an officer.

2. Article I, Section 3, Officers shall be held responsible for the proper performance of duty and for strict adherence to these rules of conduct.

3. Article I, Section 5, Officers shall not willfully disobey any lawful verbal or written orders of any individual placed by competent authority in a position of supervisor over such officer.

4. Article II, Section 6, Officers must maintain a high degree of self-control at all times.

5. Article II, Section 7, No officer shall make, or cause to be made, any false or misleading statements. No officer shall intentionally omit or misrepresent facts or information known to the officer.

6. Article III, Section 3, No officer shall act or behave, either in an official or private capacity, to the officer's discredit, or the discredit of the Department. Officers are public servants twenty-four hours a day and will be held to the law enforcement higher standard both on and off-duty.

7. Article III, Section 4, An officer shall be civil, orderly, maintain decorum, control temper and be patient and use discretion in the performance of duty.
(J-9.)

During cross-examination, when asked if it was appropriate to release a civilian worker from confinement if they were directing racial slurs at the officer and were slamming a can opener against the door grating, Borg testified that involuntarily securing a civilian who is a DOC employee, who has not exhibited any signs of violence or threat, and who is not incarcerated by the State would be a violation of law and the IMPs. Borg stated that slamming a can opener on a door to get someone's attention or being called a racially derogatory name would not be sufficient to form a belief that that individual would assault the officer. Inmates call officers similar names all the time and such situations do not result in an assault.

Finally, appellant had two prior C(11) charges for conduct unbecoming an employee. Based on the charges in the FDNA, Borg stated the appellant could have been removed. (J-15.)

Michael Ptaszenski (Ptaszenski) testified that he has been employed by the NJDOC for twenty-two years and is the Administrative Lieutenant at NJSP. His duties include being responsible for overseeing the policy, procedures, and discipline at NJSP. For four years during his employment, he was the cookhouse sergeant. Ptaszenski stated that the sergeant cannot leave the cage until mess is completed. Ptaszenski described the walk Keaton had to do from the sergeant's cage to the vegetable shop. He stated it would take three to five minutes to traverse the route.

Relative to the cookhouse officer's duties, there is no policy requiring that inmates be pat-frisked or wanded upon entering the cookhouse because inmates are subjected to those inspections in the rotunda before they head down the steps into the cookhouse.

No civilian should be locked in any room. The log book of events in the cookhouse is a document, which can be updated at any time during a shift by the officer assigned to the cookhouse. The entries are not made simultaneously with the corresponding event.

For Petitioner

Stephen Gass (Gass), Retired Senior Corrections Officer, testified relative to the policies and procedures in place at the time of the incident.[4] Gass retired from the NJDOC with twenty-eight years of service. He had worked in the cookhouse for more than six years. He was a contributor to the project to establish the vegetable shop as the only location in which canned goods were permitted to be opened in the cookhouse. Gass

[4] Appellant offered SCO (Ret.) Stephen Gass as an expert; however, Gass was not qualified or accepted as an expert. He was permitted to testify as a witness.

testified that appellant should not have been in the basement while mess was running because the officer was supposed to be observing the food trays going out of the ports.

Gass stated that entries in the log book are to be made contemporaneously with the events. However, he acknowledged that appellant was in exclusive control of the log book at all times material and relevant to this incident.

Gass stated that if an ITI had asked him to open the vegetable shop his first action would be to search the room for contraband. He would then secure the door and proceed to the utensil room, if required, to retrieve the can opener. Gass could not identify any written policy requiring that inmates be pat-frisked upon entering the vegetable shop. Gass would then reopen the vegetable shop, count the cans that needed to be opened, place the can opener in the worktable and secure the inmate in the vegetable room. The ITI could instruct the inmates from outside the secured shop door.

After the inmates opened the cans, the cans were rinsed, smashed, and counted. Prior to exiting the room, Gass would take the can opener and place it back in the utensil room. The cans and lids would be counted. The inmate would be patted down, taken out of the room and the cans and lids would be placed in a secure location.

When asked what action should be taken if an ITI refused to leave the vegetable shop while cans were being opened, Gass testified that the sergeant should be called pursuant to Section 5 of the NJDOC, Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations, which requires that any incident in progress be reported. If the ITI still did not leave the room, then he should be separated from the inmates so that the inmates could be frisked in a neutral area to make sure they had not concealed any contraband. Then the door could be secured, while the cans are opened.

Finally, Gass testified that it would be appropriate to call the sergeant to de-escalate a situation with an ITI who slammed a can opener on the door's grate.

Jermaine Curry, appellant, testified that on March 26, 2015, he was assigned as the Cookhouse Relief Officer II and was in the basement of the cookhouse during lunch mess service. Trahan and Bryant asked appellant to open the butcher and vegetable shops. Appellant admitted it was a violation of procedure for him to leave his post in the cookhouse and go into the basement. Appellant testified that he did a sweep of the butcher shop and proceeded to the vegetable shop. However, he was unable to sweep it because Trahan and the inmates had entered the vegetable shop with cans. Trahan had the can opener in his hand when they entered the vegetable shop.

According to appellant, this was contrary to procedure. The best practice is for inmates to be physically pat-frisked and wanded with a handheld metal detector to make sure they do not have any contraband before they enter the vegetable shop. The officer then takes a physical count of all the cans before the inmates enter the vegetable shop, to prevent any contraband from entering or leaving the cookhouse. Appellant stated that it is important for the inmates to remain outside the vegetable shop during this process so that the officer does not become distracted.

While appellant was pat-frisking one of the inmates, he heard the slamming of cans on the work station behind him in the vegetable shop. He then observed cans being opened by Trahan.

At this point, appellant radioed Keaton and directed Trahan to stop. Appellant explained that opening cans with the inmates was a violation of the safety and security procedures. Appellant told Trahan to exit the room. Instead, Trahan shouted expletives at him and ignored his directions. Trahan continued to open cans. As a result, appellant ordered the inmates to leave, called for the sergeant, and locked Trahan in the vegetable shop because he was acting in a hostile and insubordinate manner. Appellant further stated that he secured Trahan for safety and security reasons to separate him from the inmates, the canned goods, and any possible weapons. He secured the inmates in a separate maintenance room to pat-frisk them.

Appellant returned to the vegetable shop, and began to unlock the door, when Trahan called him a "fg mooley" and slammed the can opener against the door's metal grate. Believing that Trahan was a safety and security threat to him, appellant did not release him. Appellant contacted Keaton for a second time. This time he did not radio Keaton. Instead, he called Keaton by telephone. Keaton responded that he would be there in two to three minutes.

Keaton and Lieutenant Kennedy arrived at the vegetable shop two to three minutes later. Appellant maintained this was consistent with the log book, which shows an interval of four minutes between contacting Keaton and his arrival at the vegetable shop. (J-12.) Appellant admitted he made the entries in the log book after the incident and not simultaneously with the events. Keaton unlocked the vegetable shop releasing Trahan, who stated he was going to administration.

Appellant stated he returned to the vegetable shop and found several can lids, which he saved in a plastic bag pursuant to appropriate procedures. However, Lieutenant Kennedy told him not to worry about them. Kennedy told him to report to administration to file his special custody report.

Appellant noted that he and Trahan have had other conflicts. Appellant testified about Trahan and Bryant's history of insubordinate conduct toward him and undue familiarity with the inmates, which subverted appellant's authority over the inmates. Appellant stated that Trahan and Bryant told the inmates that the ITIs were their friends and appellant was not because appellant was an officer; that they disregard appellant's directions; and that they gave the inmates extra food to win their support against appellant. Appellant emphatically testified that Trahan had repeatedly "defied and undermined [appellant's] authority in the eyes of the inmates." Appellant believed these behaviors made his work environment unsafe. Appellant had previously filed an EED complaint against Trahan and special custody reports against Trahan and Bryant. Appellant believed Trahan and Bryant exaggerated the instant incident in retaliation for the prior complaints.

Credibility

Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and may also reject testimony when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Similarly, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the . . . [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Cmty. Affairs Dep't, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

After reviewing the evidence, I make the following FINDINGS of FACT:

The testimony presented by Trahan, Bryant, Buckley, and Keaton about their actions on March 26, 2015, their observations of Trahan's demeanor, the absence of opened cans in the shop, appellant's behavior, and their statements in their special reports were consistent. Collectively, their testimony of the events of the incident made sense and hung together to describe what occurred. It was undisputed that appellant involuntarily restrained Trahan in the vegetable shop.

Buckley and Keaton expressed no pre-existing issues with or animosity towards appellant, which made their testimony believable. Keaton even indicated that when he had been appellant's supervisor he had given appellant a good evaluation.

While appellant maintained that Trahan and Buckley exaggerated the incident in retaliation for special and EED complaints he had filed against them, there was no competent evidence presented to substantiate this allegation. The fact that Trahan and Bryant disliked appellant did not prove that they exaggerated appellant's actions during this incident. It also did not support appellant's position that he acted appropriately to protect Trahan's or his own safety and security. It further did not demonstrate that appellant's rendition of the facts was believable. To the contrary, the other witnesses' renditions of the disputed facts have a greater "ring of truth," than the scenario offered by appellant, who plainly had a greater interest in the outcome of this proceeding.

I FIND that there were no opened cans in the vegetable shop.

Additionally, I accept Kubik's testimony about his investigation and conclusions. His experience from past investigations about errors in estimations of time by different individuals involved in a stressful, emotional situation was credible. Ten minutes could appear to be fifteen minutes and one minute could be four minutes during this event. The discrepancies in time between forty-five seconds to four minutes, according to appellant, and fifteen minutes, according to the other witnesses, were not problematic in light of Kubik's and the other witnesses' testimonies about the events. I FIND that appellant involuntarily restrained Trahan in the vegetable shop for a period of time.

Appellant's demeanor during the hearing and rendition of the events lacked a ring of truth that undermined his credibility. During the hearing, appellant was agitated, defensive, and combative.[5] Also, appellant was overly emphatic, when stating that Trahan had repeatedly "defied and undermined [appellant's] authority in the eyes of the inmates." Appellant's perception that his authority over the inmates was subverted by [5] Appellant exhibited the same demeanor during a telephone conference call held on March 10, 2017.

Trahan was misplaced, based on his own version of Trahan's past actions towards him. The significant personal offense taken by appellant to his rendition of Trahan's past conduct was a disproportionate and troubling reaction. In this regard, appellant's behavior and perceptions were more consistent with Bryant's opinion that appellant was a "ticking time bomb."

Similarly, appellant was insistent that it was the best practice and policy to pat-frisk and wand the inmates upon their entry into the vegetable shop. As Ptaszenski testified, inmates were searched in the rotunda when entering the cookhouse. There was no need for an additional search in the basement when entering the vegetable shop and no such policy requiring same existed. Even appellant's witness, Gass, was unable to identify any policy that required inmates be pat-frisked upon entering the vegetable shop. This behavior was consistent with Bryant's testimony that appellant wanted to make his own rules and regulations. It also undermined appellant's credibility because this baseless search was his justification for involuntarily securing Trahan in the shop.

Additionally, appellant's rendition of events did not hang together or support his alleged justification for his actions. Appellant maintained that he had to temporarily lock Trahan in the vegetable shop for safety, and that he secured the inmates in a maintenance room for purposes of searching them for contraband and weapons after releasing Trahan. However, appellant never testified whether he returned to the inmates to frisk them. He never stated whether he released them. In fact, he never included any statement in this regard in his Special Custody Report or his interview with Kubik. This lent credibility to Bryant's testimony that the inmates immediately vacated the vegetable shop and the basement pursuant to appellant's order. Appellant's omissions undermined his testimony and made his safety and security justifications untenable. The inmates were not secured or searched.

Similarly, the log book entries authored by appellant on March 26, 2015, appeared to be an attempt to bolster his version of the facts and to minimize the amount of time that Trahan was involuntarily and inappropriately restrained. The entries were made after the events and after no opened cans were found. This made the entries suspect. Additionally, appellant did not indicate in his Special Custody Report or during his interview with Kubik that he had discovered or placed any opened cans in bags to secure them for disposal or that he gave them to Lieutenant Kennedy.

The discrepancies in appellant's testimony and changing rendition of facts made appellant's testimony unbelievable. On the contrary, the testimony presented by the other witnesses was consistent and credible.

FINDINGS OF FACT

After carefully reviewing the exhibits and documentary evidence presented during the hearing, and after having had the opportunity to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to also be relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

On March 26, 2015, appellant was assigned to NJSP as the Cookhouse Relief Officer II. He was required to do a sweep of the cookhouse areas including the vegetable shop at the beginning of his shift. Appellant did not report that the vegetable shop was unlocked or that he had to secure it. During the lunch mess movement, he was in the basement of the cookhouse contrary to NJSP policy.

Accompanied by two inmates, Trahan and Bryant descended into the basement to work in the vegetable shop where they would open cans and divide the food product into portions for inmates' meals. Trahan asked appellant to open the vegetable shop twice, then realized that the shop door was already unlocked and unsecured. Appellant, who was on his phone, ignored the requests. There had been multiple, past, special complaints and even EED complaints filed by Trahan and Bryant against appellant, and vice versa, which created an adversarial relationship among the parties.

After Trahan and the inmates entered the shop, Bryant went to another storeroom down the hall to retrieve additional cans. Trahan secured the can opener in the work-counter slot and began instructing the inmates about how to divide the product. No cans had been opened at this point.

Then, appellant ordered everyone out of the vegetable shop on the pretense that he had not been able to pat-frisk and wand the inmates before they entered the shop and that he had to secure Trahan's and his safety. Specifically, appellant said "[y]ou can't be in here. You all got to get out." This was heard by Bryant, who was down the hallway. Inmate instruction was occurring, and no cans had yet been opened. Additionally, no policy existed requiring that inmates be frisked and wanded as they entered the vegetable shop. The inmates had already been wanded in the rotunda upon their entry to the cookhouse. To the contrary, such limited searches were only required upon their departure of the shop by NJSP policy.

Pursuant to appellant's order, the inmates immediately exited the vegetable shop and the cookhouse basement. Appellant did not search them or secure them in any other room. Trahan attempted to comply with appellant's instructions to leave the shop. However, as soon as the inmates exited, appellant kicked the door shut and locked Trahan in the shop, which prevented him from complying with appellant's order. Appellant involuntarily restrained Trahan. Appellant began rapping "[y]ou're locked up like an inmate now" and otherwise taunting Trahan. All of this was heard or seen by Bryant.

Trahan asked Bryant to get Buckley to help with the situation and Bryant went upstairs to notify Buckley. Appellant radioed Keaton and advised that Trahan was opening cans in the vegetable shop with the inmates. Buckley advised Bryant that he could not leave his post during mess and that he had heard a radio call by appellant to Keaton. Buckley told Bryant he could contact Keaton, and that he believed Keaton would be down as soon as mess ended.

Throughout this time, Trahan sat in the back of the vegetable shop waiting for the door to be unlocked. After mess ended, Keaton walked across the mess and cookhouse areas to the basement of the cookhouse, a route which took at least four minutes to traverse. He was followed into the basement by Bryant. Keaton told appellant to open the door. Appellant did not follow this direction. Ultimately, Keaton took appellant's keys and opened the door. Trahan left and went to administration. No opened cans were discovered in the vegetable shop.

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A2-2.

The appointing authority shoulders the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

Appellant's status as a correction's officer subjects him to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We > can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes."

Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6)

Appellant was charged with "conduct unbecoming a public employee." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

The basis for the charge of conduct unbecoming was appellant's intentional restraint of Trahan's freedom and the verbally abusive and harassing manner in which appellant mocked and spoke to Trahan after he was locked in the vegetable shop. Appellant's conduct was such that it adversely affected the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit and would have a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services.

As a corrections officer, appellant had a duty to recognize and appreciate that individuals incarcerated in NJSP had lost their freedom, and that he was entrusted to protect the inmates' limited rights and their dignity in that environment. He also had a duty to treat his civilian co-workers with respect. His actions touting that he had the power or authority to take Trahan's freedom and mocking him by comparing him to an inmate was disrespectful and egregious conduct which served no legitimate purpose. It was violative of his obligations in a position of public trust. It offends publicly accepted standards of respect and decency.

Whether appellant misused his authority and took Trahan's freedom for four minutes or fifteen minutes is of no moment. No circumstances existed warranting Trahan's restraint for any length of time. Appellant presented no competent evidence that Trahan was a safety risk to him or that the inmates posed a safety risk to Trahan. Assuming, arguendo, that Trahan had made racial slurs or expletives at appellant as he alleged, such actions still would not have justified appellant locking Trahan in the vegetable shop.

Appellant's justifications are without merit. If appellant's genuine motive and justification for restraining Trahan was safety and security concerns, then appellant could have directed Trahan out of the vegetable shop. He could have secured the inmates temporarily in the shop and then wanded them. This would have ensured Trahan and appellant's safety and security. Under the circumstances presented here, appellant displayed a significant lack of judgment which violated his obligations and duties. I CONCLUDE that appellant's behavior did rise to a level of conduct unbecoming a public employee, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

Appellant has also been charged with violating HRB 84-17, as amended; C(11) conduct unbecoming an employee; C(24) threatening, intimidating, harassing, coercing or interfering with fellow employees on State property; D(7) violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security; and E(2) intentional misuse of authority or position.

Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17

HRB 84-17, as amended, provides in pertinent part as follows:

> In any disciplinary matter, reference must always be made to the collective bargaining agreement covering the disciplined employee, relevant Department of Personnel Rules, appropriate Department bulletins or memoranda, the Handbook of Information and Rules for Employees of New Jersey Department of Corrections, and/or the Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations.

D(7) Violation of administrative procedures and/or regulations involving safety and security, and IMP #14, West Compound Mess Hall/Kitchen policy

First, pursuant to HRB 84-17, as amended, the appellant was required to follow the IMPs established for the NJSP. IMP #14 West Compound Mess Hall/Kitchen policy required that "[a]ll doors are to be closed at all times. All doors with locking devices will remain locked except when in use, including the pantry, cells, sally ports, and doors." Appellant violated this safety policy by failing to secure the vegetable shop door at the beginning of his shift to prevent any contraband items being taken by the inmates and used as a weapon. It is required policy that the vegetable shop be secured other than when instruction was being done.

I CONCLUDE that appellant violated HRB 84-17, as amended by failing to discharge his duties in accordance with D(7) administrative procedures and regulations involving safety and security and IMP #14.

Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations and IMP #402, Custody Staff policy

Second, appellant violated IMP #402 Custody Staff policy by failing to conduct himself in a professional manner by locking a Trahan in the vegetable shop, when it served no custodial or security interest. Appellant also violated IMP #402, by his inappropriate restraint of Trahan and mocking of Trahan's lack of power and freedom.

Third, appellant violated the Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations as follows. The following rules and regulations relate to the officer's conduct. Article I, Section 2, provides that no Officer shall knowingly act in any way that might reasonably be expected to create an impression of suspicion among the public that an officer may be engaged in conduct which violates the public trust as an officer.

Article I, Section 3, provides that an Officer shall be held responsible for the proper performance of duty and for strict adherence to these rules of conduct. Article II, Section 6, provides that Officers must maintain a high degree of self-control at all times.

Additionally, Article III, Section 3, provides that no officer shall act or behave, either in an official or private capacity, to the officer's discredit, or the discredit of the Department. Officers are public servants twenty-four hours a day and will be held to the law enforcement higher standard both on and off-duty. Finally, Article III, Section 4, provides that an officer shall be civil, orderly, maintain decorum, control temper and be patient and use discretion in the performance of duty.

I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct violated HRB 84-17, as amended, IMP #402, Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations, Article I, Sections 2 and 3, Article II, Section 6, and Article III, Sections 3 and 4 as he did not conduct himself in a professional manner while on duty and acted in a way that violated the public trust.

Article II, Section 7, provides that no officer shall make, or cause to be made, any false or misleading statements. No officer shall intentionally omit or misrepresent facts or information known to the officer. Appellant's statements that he secured and packaged all of the opened cans in a plastic bag after the incident, that Lieutenant Kennedy told him not to worry about them, and that Trahan was threatening him by banging the vegetable shop door with the can opener was contrary to the weight of the evidence presented by all of the other fact witnesses. Trahan, Bryant, Keaton, and Kubik testified consistently that no cans had been opened before Trahan was locked in the vegetable shop, that there were no opened cans in the shop when Trahan was released, and that Trahan was calm. Appellant's self-serving statements and log book entries were misleading and only meant to justify his actions after the fact. I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct violated Article II, Section 7.

C(24) Intimidating, Harassing, and Interfering with fellow employees on State Property and E(2) Intentional Misuse of Authority or Position

Appellant's conduct rose to the level of intimidating, harassing, and interfering with fellow employees on State property in violation of C(24), when he involuntarily restrained Trahan in the vegetable shop for no legitimate reason. Therefore, I CONCLUDE respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue. I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct violated C(24) by intimidating, harassing and interfering with a fellow employee on State property and E(2) because he intentionally misused his authority and position.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) Other Sufficient Cause

Finally, appellant has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. As detailed above, appellant's conduct was such that he violated this standard of good behavior. As such, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

PENALTY

In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983).

However, where the charged dereliction is an act which, in view of the duties and obligations of the position, substantially disadvantages the public, good cause exists for removal. See Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385 (Law Div. 1976), aff'd, 163 N.J. Super. 453 (App. Div. 1978); In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

For his actions arising out of this incident, appellant has been found to have violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), other sufficient cause, and NJDOC rules, regulations and policies. Appellant was charged with a sixty-working-day suspension. This suspension is consistent with the disciplinary process outlined in NJDOC's table of offenses. (J-15.)

In this matter, no mitigating factors were present.

To the contrary, the aggravating factors are significant: There was no justification for appellant's behavior; it involved involuntarily restraining and taking the freedom of a fellow employee; it involved a misuse of appellant's position and his authority as an officer; it involved being disrespectful, intimidating, verbally abusing, and harassing a fellow employee; it involved violating the direction of his superior officer to release his fellow employee; and it involved violating the public trust. Additionally, appellant had two prior C(11) charges for conduct unbecoming an employee. Such conduct is egregious and requires the appropriate penalty of major discipline of the appellant.

After having considered all of the proofs offered in this matter, and the impact upon the institution regarding the egregious behavior by appellant herein, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that appellant's violations are significantly sufficient to warrant a penalty, which, in part, is meant to impress upon him, as well as others, the seriousness of any further infractions by him in that regard.

Here, the respondent is not seeking removal, but rather, the imposition of a sixty day suspension. A sixty day penalty serves to impress the importance of the seriousness of these infractions and significance of the duties required of the appellant, and others, in the position of Senior Corrections Officer. Given the conduct exhibited here, I CONCLUDE that the imposition of the sixty working day suspension was appropriate and consistent with the penalties specified in NJDOC's table of offenses.

ORDER

I ORDER that the respondent has sustained its burden of proof as to the charges of violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), other sufficient cause; and HRB 84-17, as amended by failing to discharge his duties in accordance with D(7) administrative procedures and regulations involving safety and security, IMP #14, west compound mess hall/kitchen policy, IMP #402, custody staff policy, Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations, Article I, Sections 2 and 3, Article II, Sections 6 and 7, and Article III, Sections 3 and 4, and by C(24) intimidating, harassing, and interfering with fellow employees on state property and E(2) intentional misuse of authority or position.

I ORDER that the action of the appointing authority in imposing a sixty working day suspension on appellant is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matter of Yamalis Diaz,
Camden County, Department of Corrections

CSC DKT. NO. 2017-2409
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 2000-17

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 4, 2018 BW

The appeal of Yamalis Diaz, County Correction Officer, Camden County, Department of Corrections, 30 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Mary Ann Bogan, who rendered her initial decision on January 16, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority. A reply to reply was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 4, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision to modify the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to 15 working days of back pay, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although the penalty was modified by the Commission, charges were sustained. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in disciplining the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore modifies the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted 15 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. Per N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned by the appellant during this period. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 2000-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-2409

IN THE MATTER OF YAMALIS DIAZ, CAMDEN COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

William B. Hildebrand, Esq., for appellant (Law Offices of William B. Hildebrand, LLC)

Antonieta Paiva Rinaldi, Esq., Assistant County Counsel, for respondent (Christopher A. Orlando, County Counsel)

Record Closed: November 30, 2017 Decided: January 16, 2018

BEFORE MARY ANN BOGAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent, the Camden County Department of Corrections, (CCDC) suspended appellant Yamalis Diaz for thirty-working days pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause; C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct: 1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct unbecoming; 4.1 Courtesy: General Orders #73, #74. CCDC alleges that appellant, a County correction officer, was involved in a domestic dispute with Anthony Bowen (Bowen) at her residence, she was criminally charged by the Pennsauken Police Department, and a suspension for a period of thirty working days was appropriate. Appellant maintains that she was victimized by Bowen during an incident at her home, and because the Pennsauken Municipal Court dismissed all of the criminal charges against her, she should not be guilty of all the charges.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On February 4, 2016, the CCDC issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action charging the appellant. (R-5. R-10 amended.) After a departmental hearing on November 21, 2016, CCDC issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action on January 20, 2017, (amended January 26, 2017) sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice, and the appellant was suspended from employment for thirty working days. (R-11.) Appellant appealed, and on February 8, 2017, the matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and N.J.S.A. 14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on November 30, 2017, and the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Testimony

John Jones (Jones) is a Sergeant at CCDC and works in the Internal Affairs Unit. Jones investigated and prepared an internal affairs report involving a domestic dispute at the home of appellant. (R-1.) Jones reviewed the Pennsauken Police Department Supplementary Incident Report wherein Bowen, the appellant's boyfriend, reported to the responding police officer that appellant assaulted him with a bowl, and a broom stick, then she exited the home, and struck his vehicle twenty times with a metal pole. Appellant reported to the Officer that Bowen held her against the wall, chocked her, and then showed the officer a scratch on her chest, several inches below her neck. The report also indicated that appellant "deflected police questioning into complaints about her back."

Jones found Bowen's report of the incident consistent and credible and he found the appellant was not forthcoming when she deflected police questioning during the investigation. Appellant also admitted following Bowen to his vehicle, in an attempt to retrieve her cell phone, and hitting Bowen's vehicle with a bar. The bar that she used was later found in a recycling bin. Jones reviewed the general incident report prepared by the appellant, and her statements to the police, and found inconsistency. The incident report contained information that she was hit by Bowen several times while he was choking her, she fell backwards and broke the bowl. (R-4.)

Appellant is a sworn officer and must be accountable for her conduct while on and off duty. The appellant was arrested and held on $26,000 bail. (R-2.) On February 1, 2016, the Office of the Camden County Prosecutor directed that appellant be prohibited from carrying a duty weapon and any personal weapons pending the investigation. (R-3.)

On September 16, 2016, the criminal charges were dismissed for lack of prosecution when Bowen failed to appear for the municipal court hearing. (R-6.) The Office of the Camden County Prosecutor remanded the action to the agency for administrative action. (R-7.)

Jones continued his investigation after the dismissal of the criminal charges. He reviewed the photographs of Bowen's damaged vehicle, the broken bowl, the two red grips and bar in the trash can, and the cleaned-up house, and determined that the photographs were consistent with Bowen's statement. (R-8.)

Jones did not interview appellant because her attorney did not permit her to be interviewed, and Bowen did not respond to his request for an interview.

Karen Taylor (Taylor) is a Captain at CCDC. She ensures compliance with departmental polices and issues employee discipline. Appellant was charged with violating policies and procedures pertaining to the rules of conduct. As a public employee, appellant is held to a higher standard of conduct both on and off the job. While off-duty, appellant conducted herself in a manner that was unbecoming when she failed to adhere to the code of conduct while on and off duty. Instead of removing herself from the incident, she escalated the incident. She caused disrepute to the department by engaging in unbecoming conduct. Moreover, she violated the policies when she failed to control herself, left the safety of her home, and continued engaging in unbecoming conduct when she went outside and damaged the vehicle. Taylor drafted the charges and recommended suspension days on the information in the report prepared by the Office of Internal Affairs, and the Pennsauken Police Report.

The departmental policies set forth:

Department of Corrections, General Rules of Conduct sets forth that an employee, whether on or off duty, is expected to conduct themselves in a respectful manner and use good judgment. Appellant violated the policy and procedures when she failed to conduct herself in a respectful manner and use good judgment while off duty. (R-12.)

Department of Corrections, Personal Conduct of Employees sets forth that an employee, whether on or off duty, is expected to treat the public with respect and courtesy at all times. Appellant violated the policy and procedures when she failed to treat a member of the public with respect while off duty. (R-13.)

Department of Corrections, Professional Code of Conduct, sets forth that employees are expected to conduct themselves in a manner that is professional and ethical. The appellant failed to do so when she failed to treat Bowen with respect and courtesy at all times. (R-14.)

Taylor found a thirty-day suspension appropriate, because appellant, discredited the department, acknowledged that she damaged the vehicle, and was found not to be credible in her statements to the police. Taylor also took this action because appellant has been issued two reprimands, one involving a domestic dispute resulting in a report to the Pennsauken Police Department. Taylor acknowledged that she did not interview Bowen or the appellant.

Appellant administratively entered letters of commendation saying that Appellant was chosen as officer of the month in February 2009 and May 2014. (P-1 and P-2.)

Discussion

Appellant primarily contends that respondent relied entirely on hearsay and failed to produce a residuum of legally competent evidence, particularly as to Bowen's version of the incident. However, respondent's witnesses gave detailed, concise and informative testimony regarding the internal affairs investigation, and the policies and procedures applicable to corrections officers. The testimony as to the facts surrounding the incident came from statements set forth in documentary evidence. Moreover, appellant was the only witness with firsthand knowledge of the incident who attended the hearing, and although she was available, she did not testify. None of the other witnesses were present. Such out-of-court statements, if offered to prove the truth of the matters stated, are hearsay.

The Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules governing administrative agency proceedings codify this doctrine by requiring that "some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness." N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(c). In assessing hearsay evidence, it should be accorded "whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a).

This does not mean that each factual detail must be supported by legally competent evidence. Ruroede v. Borough of Hasbrouck Heights, 214 N.J. 338, 359 (1013). Legally competent means that the evidence would be admissible under the New Jersey Rules of Evidence. Evidence that falls within an exception to the hearsay rule, N.J.R.E. 802-803, is legally competent.

The evidence submitted on behalf of the respondent was mostly in the form of written documents. Jones prepared an incident report after reviewing the police report, the warrant, and the appellant's general incident report. He testified to written statements made by the appellant, Bowen, and the responding police officer without any oral testimony from these witnesses, which constitutes hearsay. (See, also, State v. Lungsford, 167 N.J. Super. 296, 310, 400 A.2d 843 (App. Div. 1979), states that witness' statements embedded in police reports are not admissible under business record exception to the hearsay rule even though the report itself may be admissible). While Jones' testimony was credible and appeared accurate there was no proof that the version of the incident he relied upon was accurate.

A further review of the evidence indicates that the record includes competent evidence. Appellant admitted, in the general incident report that she prepared two days after the incident, "I hit him in the face and arms with an open hand, several times so he would stop choking me, but he did not. I grabbed a brush that was next to me at the time and used it to push him away from me. In an attempt to retrieve my cell phone and other items, I followed him to his vehicle. As I exited, my residence I grabbed a [ ] exercise bar that was near my front door just in case he attempted to assault me again. I knocked on the driver side window and door with the bar a few times . . ." Appellant also admits that she was placed under arrest and taken to the Pennsauken Police Department where she was charged with 2C:17-3A(1) criminal mischief, 2C:39-4D possession of weapons for unlawful purposes and 2C12-1B(7) aggravated assault. "I was cleared for incarceration then transported to the Camden County Correctional facility where I was booked and later bailed out on $26,000 (10%) bail."

In a general incident report prepared by the appellant on September 15, 2016, she acknowledges that she appeared at Pennsauken Municipal Court for trial, and was found not guilty of the charges.

N.J.R.E. 803(b)(1) establishes an exception to the hearsay rule for admissions. Hearsay exception by party-opponent is a statement offered a party which is:

> (1) the party's own statement, made either in an individual or in a representative capacity . . .

Appellant's unchallenged admissions, memorialized in a general incident report she prepared, falls within an exception to the rule against hearsay, and I FIND this admission provides a residuum of legal and competent evidence. Accordingly, I FIND the following FACTS appellant engaged in an altercation with Bowen inside her home on January 31, 2016, requiring a response by the Pennsauken Police Department. Appellant also left the home with a bar in her hand, followed Bowen to his vehicle, and hit the vehicle with the bar. Appellant was placed under arrest, incarcerated and held on $26,000 bail.

Furthermore, viewing the record as a whole, this finding is supported by multiple reports and statements contained in official written reports, including records submitted by the police department, the internal affairs division, and an official incident report, prepared by a public employee. Therefore, given the nature of these documents, while some are hearsay, they are reliable, credible and competent, and the appellant did not contradict the statement by live testimony.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relied by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). The preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in a case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Testimony, to be believed, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554–55 (1954). Both guilt and penalty are redetermined on appeal from a determination by the appointing authority. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

An appeal to the Civil Service Commission requires the Office of Administrative Law to conduct a de novo hearing and to determine the appellant's guilt or innocence, as well as the appropriate penalty. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987); Cliff v. Morris Cnty. Bd. of Soc. Servs., 197 N.J. Super. 307 (App. Div. 1984).

As a corrections officer, appellant is held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966).

The respondent has sustained the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and other sufficient cause, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), and appellant was charged with violation of C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct: V1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct unbecoming; 4.1 Courtesy: General Orders #73, #74.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee is often described as an elastic phrase that includes any conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect for governmental employees and confidence in public entities. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). A finding or conclusion that a public employee engaged in unbecoming conduct need not be based upon the violation of a particular rule or regulation, and may be based upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior governing public employees consistent with public policy. City of Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419,429 (1955); Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992).

I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct did rise to a level of conduct unbecoming a public employee. The basis for the charge of conduct unbecoming was because she engaged in an altercation with Bowen at her home which required a response by the local police department. She hit his car with an object, she was arrested and taken into custody until bail was posted. Appellant's conduct was such that it could adversely affect the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Such behavior does not reflect the implicit standard of good behavior governing public employees consistent with public policy. Therefore, as to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that appellant did commit an act of unbecoming conduct.

Appellant was charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. As to the charge of other sufficient cause, appellant conducted herself in a manner that violated standards of good behavior. As such, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Department of Corrections, General Rules of Conduct sets forth that an employee, whether on or off duty, is expected to conduct themselves in a respectful manner and use good judgment. As to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that appellant violated this policy when she failed to conduct herself in a respectful manner, and she failed to use good judgment when she escalated the incident. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Department of Corrections, Personal Conduct of Employees, sets forth that employees are expected to treat members of the public with respect and courtesy at all times. As to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that appellant violated this policy when she failed to treat Bowen with respect and courtesy at all times. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Department of Corrections, Professional Code of Conduct, sets forth that employees are expected to conduct themselves in manner that is professional and ethical. As to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that appellant violated this policy when she failed to conduct herself in a professional manner. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

PENALTY

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his duties may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). As previously set forth, this is a de novo review of appellant's disciplinary action. In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

Appellant has been previously issued two written reprimands, one for domestic violence that required a police response. She has no minor or major suspensions.

For her actions arising out of this incident, appellant has been found to have violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), "Other sufficient cause." In addition, appellant has been found guilty of violations of the policies and procedures of the department specifically as to rules of conduct, personal conduct of employees, and the professional code of conduct. Appellant was given a thirty-day suspension.

This suspension is not consistent with the disciplinary process. After having considered all of the proofs offered in this matter, and the impact upon the institution regarding the behavior by appellant herein, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that a reasonable calculation of progressive discipline in the presence of the prior disciplinary actions, the conduct of the appellant, and the current violation is a fifteen-day suspension.

I CONCLUDE that a fifteen-day suspension is appropriate and consistent with progressive discipline.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the charges against the appellant for violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause; C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct: 1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct unbecoming; 4.1 Courtesy; General Order #73, #74 are AFFIRMED. Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of the Appointing Authority is MODIFIED. Appellant will receive a fifteen-day suspension.

Since the penalty has been modified, I ORDER that appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated for that period of time when back pay was waived. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super, 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, while the penalty was modified, the Commission has sustained all of the charges and imposed major discipline. Therefore, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. See In the Matter of Bazyt Bergus (MSB, decided December 19, 2000), aff'd, Bazyt Bergus v. City of Newark, Docket No. A-3382-00T5 (App. Div. June 3, 2002); In the Matter of Mario Simmons (MSB, decided October 26, 1999). See also, In the Matter of Mario Simmons (MSB, October 26, 1999). See also, In the Matter of Kathleen Rhoads (MSB, decided September 10, 2002) (Counsel fees denied where removal on charges of insubordination, inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee and neglect of duty was modified to a 15-day suspension on the charge of neglect of duty).

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The appeal of Carol Fox, Public Safety Telecommunicator, Borough of Keyport, Police Department, removal effective September 20, 2017, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Sarah G. Crowley, who rendered her initial decision on February 27, 2018. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of April 4, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Carol Fox.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

IN THE MATTER OF CAROL FOX, BOROUGH OF KEYPORT, POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Leslie G. London, Esq., for respondent (McManimon, Scotland and Baumann, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 5, 2018 Decided: February 27, 2018

BEFORE SARAH G. CROWLEY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Carol Fox is a Communications Officer / Dispatcher (Dispatcher) for the Borough of Keyport, Police Department (Keyport). She had been employed there for thirteen years, prior to her removal. A Preliminary Notice of Discipline was served after an incident which occurred on July 26, 2017. After a full hearing before town council, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issue on September 20, 2017. The appellant filed a notice of appeal which was transmitted the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on October 24, 2017. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and 14F-1 to -13. The matter was heard on February 5, 2018, and the record closed at that time.

SUMMARY

Appellant has been charged with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; as well as neglect of duties and other sufficient cause. Appellant was employed as a dispatcher for Keyport for thirteen years. On July 26, 2016, she left her dispatcher post at Keyport prior to her relief arriving, in violation of specific rules and department policies and practices. The appellant was working the 7:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift. The rules require the dispatcher to wait for their relief and to update them on any developments during their twelve hours shift prior to leaving. The appellant does not dispute that she left her post and that there was a prisoner in the cell.

TESTIMONY

For respondent:

Chief Mark Hafner, has been with the Keyport Police Department for thirty years. He was promoted to Captain last year. There are twenty employees in the police department at Keyport. They have two full-time dispatchers and several part-time dispatchers. A junior officer will be assigned to the dispatch desk if one of the dispatchers is not available. The duties of the dispatcher are to answer the telephone and dispatch police and fire departments to emergencies. They are to log every fifteen minutes what a prisoner is doing if there is a prisoner in the cell. It is a very important position and there are specific rules and regulations governing their responsibilities, and they are never to leave their post unattended.

He identified the Keyport Police Department Manual of Rules and Regulations which govern the Department and the positions. You are required to fill your relief in on what happened on your shift and never leave before your relief arrives. If someone does not come to relieve you, you need to call your supervisor and find out who is replacing you. The chief decides who will work the shift if your relief did not come in.

On July 26, 2017, he heard about what happened with Dispatcher Fox leaving before her relief arrived. He was put in charge of the investigation because there had been some issues between Chief Casaletto and Fox. He asked Ms. Fox for her statement and at first, she did not give it to him and said she was talking to an attorney. She eventually sent him an email about a week later. In her email she acknowledges that she left her post before her replacement arrived. She claimed that she told the Sargent she was leaving to go home. However, she acknowledged there was no discussion about who her relief was or that they had not arrived. She characterized the incident of leaving her post as a "one-time oversight."

Chief Hafner testified that he obtained statements from everyone involved. It was standard procedure to request written statements from everyone involved. He requested statements from DeGroat, Salvatore, Dixon and several others. Casaletto provided a statement as well since he was there when it happened. He concluded that Fox had left before her relief arrived. When she said good-bye to everyone, they all assumed that she was properly relieved before she left. After she was gone, someone looked in the desk area, and saw that there was no one there and that she left prior to being relieved. The Chief pointed out the sections of the SOP's which require monitoring of the prisoners if you are the dispatcher on duty, and the rule which requires individuals to stay in their post until properly relieved. He concluded that Fox violated both of these provisions.

Christopher DeGroat is a patrolman with the Keyport Police Department and has been employed there for approximately four years. As a junior officer, he is assigned to the dispatch desk several times a month. This occurs when someone is out and due to budget cuts they don't always call in the part-timers. On the day in question, he saw Carol Fox leaving when he was in the parking lot. He did not know yet that I was going to have to handle the desk. Dixon advised him when he came in that he had to cover the dispatch desk. It is up to the Sargent to decide who will cover when someone is out. Sometimes he would get a text message about it before he arrived, and other times he would just find out after he arrived. When you are working dispatch, you cannot leave the desk unless you have someone to cover for you. You must watch any prisoners in the jail and answer the phones. You may not leave until your relief arrives and you need to tell your relief about anything that happened during your shift before your leave.

Robert Hassmiller has been a patrolman in Keyport for four years. He has had to cover the dispatch desk dozens of times. As a junior officer, you often have to fill in on the dispatch desk. You don't know until you are coming in if you are going to have to work dispatch. There are rules and regulations governing the job of dispatch. You must answer the phone and watch the security camera on the prisoners. You also have to respond to anyone coming in the door. The desk must be manned around the clock and you cannot leave until you get someone to relieve you. The supervisor will usually find someone to cover the desk for you or you can call someone to cover for you if you need a break. When your shift is over, you cannot leave until your relief arrives, and you need to fill your relief in on what happened in the past twelve hours. He has never arrived at the dispatch desk and not had someone there. Likewise, he has never left the desk prior to his relief arriving. He testified that when he saw Carol Fox leaving that day, he assumed that her relief had arrived. However, he did not know who was scheduled to cover the dispatch desk. When someone calls out or there is a vacation, it is up to the Sargent on duty to figure out who is going to cover the desk.

Robert McCartin is detective for the Borough of Keyport. He was a patrolman for twenty years prior to that and occasionally worked dispatch. He was familiar with the rules and testified that you must remain in your post until you are relieved. He never left his post at dispatch before he was physically relieved by someone. You must request relief if you want to leave the post for any period of time. If someone is not there at the end of your shift, you call your supervisor and ask him to relieve you or find someone to relieve you. He was working the day that Fox left her post before her relief arrived. Chief Hafner asked him to give a statement about the event of the morning of July 26, 2017.

He was with Salvatore and Casaletto in the office, when he observed Fox leave the building. He later noticed that that no one was in dispatch and asked Dixon who the dispatcher was because Fox left and no one was there. That is when they realized that Fox had left before her relief had arrived.

Steven Gallow is the township administrator for the Borough of Keyport. He is responsible for personnel matters such as discipline. He was familiar with this matter and was advised that Fox had left her post before relief arrived on the morning of July 26, 2017. He asked Mark Hafner do the investigation because there were issues between Chief Casaletto and Fox. During an investigation it is normal to request that all the employees give a written statement when an investigation is conducted. He is familiar with the policies which govern disciplinary actions. He is also familiar with the rules regarding remaining at your post until relief arrives and the need to monitor a prisoner in the cell at all times from the camera at dispatch.

After the investigation was completed, he determined that Carol Fox had left her post prior to her relief arriving. He determined that the offense was egregious enough to merit removal. It was a violation which jeopardized the public safety of the prisoner as well as the public. It was also a clear violation of the rules and regulations governing the department and the post of dispatch. He noted that she had several prior disciplinary actions for incompetency and neglect of duty, and had no excuse for just leaving her post. Accordingly, he felt that removal was the appropriate level of discipline.

For appellant

Matthew Salvatore was an officer at the Keyport Police Department until September 2017, when he retired. He testified that Ms. Fox was a good worker and she was helpful when you asked her to do anything. He never had any issues with her. He was on duty on July 26, 2017. He recalled that Gallagher was not coming in but he did not recall who the replacement was. When he saw Fox leaving he said goodbye and did not think anything of it. In his opinion, it was just a misunderstanding. He does not think that she would just abandoned her post. However, he did not dismiss her and would not have dismissed her until her replacement arrived. He did not ask her to stay because he didn't think he needed to because you can leave your post until replacement arrives. He testified that the rules are clear that you are not allowed to leave your post until your replacement arrives.

Carol Fox has been a dispatcher for Keyport Borough Police Department for thirteen years. She is familiar with the rules and regulations governing the department with respect to the job duties. Her duties include answering emergency calls for police and fire and watching any prisoners in the cell. You are required to fill in the log sheet with anything that happens. She was working from 6:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. on July 26, 2017. Her shift ended at 6:30 a.m. and Dixon, Salvatore, McCartin, and Hassmiller were in the office. She stopped and said goodbye to them and left. She never asked who was relieving her, and did not seek permission to leave her post before her replacement arrived. She knew that the usual relief, Gallagher was on vacation, but she did not know who was supposed to reliever her and she did not ask. She testified that she just assumed they knew someone needed to relieve the dispatch.

The next day, Salvatore came to her and told her there was a problem because she left her post before her relief arrived. Salvatore said an email came from the Chief. She had problems with Chief Casaletto and filed several complaints against him. She testified that she believes that this discipline is retaliatory because of her complaints against the Chief. She testified that they should have known no one was at dispatch because she had said goodbye and Gallagher was off. She also said it was a onetime oversight.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The resolution of the charges against appellant requires that I make a credibility determination regarding the critical facts. The choice of accepting or rejecting the witnesses' testimony or credibility rests with the finder of fact. Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J.

Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, for testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experiences and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witnesses' story considering its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718,749 (1963). A fact finder is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness, even though not directly contradicted, when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone, or in connection with other circumstances in evidence, excite suspicion as to its truth. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514. 521-22 (1950). See D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

Having had an opportunity to carefully observe the demeanor of the witnesses, it is my view that all of the witnesses were honest and sincere in their testimony. The facts surrounding the charges are undisputed. The appellant does not dispute that she left her post at dispatch prior to being relieved on July 26, 2017. She has been in this position for thirteen years and is familiar with the rules and regulations governing job duties and the requirement for relief prior to leaving your post. Even assuming there was some confusion about who the relief was to be that day, it did not relieve appellant of the responsibility of waiting for relief or contacting a supervisor if relief did not arrive. The fact that she stopped and said good bye to everyone, including her supervisor does not reliever her of the obligation of waiting for relief before leaving her post.

Accordingly, I FIND the following as FACT

1. On July 26, 2018, the appellant was working the 6:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. dispatch shift at the Keyport Borough Police Department.

2. At the end of her shift, the appellant left at approximately 6:35 a.m. before her relief arrived.

3. The appellant left the dispatch desk and a prisoner unattended.

4. The appellant never requested any relief or provided any reason why she had to leave before her relief arrived.

5. The rules and regulations prohibits leaving the desk unattended

6. The rules and regulations require you to wait for your relief before you leave at the end of your shift.

7. The rules and regulations require log notes every fifteen minutes of your observation of any prisoners.

8. On the morning in questions, there was a prisoner in the cell.

9. The appellant had not been relieved by anyone.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The Civil Service employee's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12.6. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is to be liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointment and broad tenure protection. See Essex Council Number 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1971); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Commission, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). The Act also recognizes that the public policy of this State is to provide public officials with appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority in order that they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). A public employee who is thus protected by the provision of the Civil Service Act may nonetheless be subject to major discipline for a wide variety of offenses connected to his or her employment. The general causes for such discipline are enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4a:2-2.3.

This matter involves a major disciplinary action brought by the respondent appointing authority against appellant seeking her removal. Specifically, appellant was charged with violation of N.J.S.A. 4A:2-2.3 (a) General Causes: 1. Incompetence, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; Neglect of Duty and Other Sufficient cause. Appellant is also charged with violating Keyport Borough Police Department Rules and Regulations as well as the Borough of Keyport Code section pertaining to the duties of the Communications Operator. It is undisputed that appellant left her post on July 26, 2017, prior to being relieved, leaving a prisoner and the emergency phone desk unattended.

Based upon the testimony and findings, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has satisfied its burden of proving that appellant left her post at dispatch without being relieved in violation of rules and regulations and engaged in incompetency, inefficiency, neglect of duty and other sufficient cause.

The issue then becomes, not whether the charges have been sustained, but rather, the level of discipline to be imposed. Keyport urges removal and the appellant urges that some level of discipline less than removal is appropriate.

PENALTY

Once a determination is made that an employee has violated a statute, regulation or rule concerning his employment, the concept of progressive discipline must be considered. When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against a civil service employee, the Merit System Board (i.e. now the Civil Service Commission) is required to evaluate the proofs and penalty on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). With respect to the discipline, under the precedent established by Town of West New York v.

Bock, supra, courts have stated, "[a]lthough we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Bock, Id. at 523, that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990). Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).

"[W]here the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature," an individual may be removed regardless of disciplinary history. In re Glenn, CSV 5051-03, Initial Decision (February 25, 2005), adopted as modified, Merit Sys. Bd. (May 23, 2005), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; see Henry, supra, 81 N.J. 571. Counseling, warnings, meetings, etc., do not constitute discipline under Civil Service rules. See N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-3.1. The appellant has seven prior charges of incompetency, inefficiency and neglect of duty. Although none of them resulted in a significant suspension, the respondent urges removal due to egregious nature of the current charges. The appellant seeks something less than removal.

I CONCLUDE that the penalty of removal is appropriate given the egregious nature of the offense of just leaving an important post without securing relief, which could have resulted in life threatening consequence for the public trying to call in an emergency and the prisoner who was left without supervision. I further CONCLUDE that there are some aggravating factors as well. One factor is that appellant continued to try to justify leaving her post by claiming she said good bye first and that it was a "one time" oversight." The prior offenses of neglect of duty and/or incompetency are further aggravator factors.

ORDER

The charges of incompetency, inefficiency, insubordination, neglect of duty and violations of the Keyport rules and regulations has been sustained. I therefore, ORDER the action taken by the Keyport in removing appellant from her position as a Communications Operator is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Tonya Howard,
City of Newark

CSC Docket No. 2017-2286
OAL Docket No. CSV 01510-17

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 19, 2018 (DASV)

The appeal of Tonya Howard, a Police Communications Clerk with the City of Newark, of her removal, effective September 22, 2016, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Jude-Anthony Tiscornia (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on January 17, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant, and a reply to the exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 4, 2018, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the removal. Rather, the Commission modified the removal to a 45 working day suspension and ordered that the appellant undergo a pre-reinstatement drug test.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with violations of the Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations concerning disobedience of orders and intoxication or illegal use of drugs. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that on August 30, 2016, the appellant tested positive for marijuana (cannabis). Upon the appellant's appeal to the Commission, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing as a contested case.

In his initial decision, the ALJ set forth that the appellant tested positive for marijuana, a controlled dangerous substance. Additionally, the ALJ indicated that the appellant did not dispute the test result, but she argued that her removal was unjust. The appointing authority moved for summary decision, asserting that no material facts were in dispute and a decision could be rendered without further hearing. The appellant also agreed that there were no material facts in dispute. Upon a review of the parties' submissions, the ALJ found that on June 6, 2016, the appointing authority received an anonymous tip that the appellant had been engaged in the illegal use of marijuana. An investigation commenced, and on August 30, 2016, the appellant submitted a urine sample, which tested positive for marijuana. Subsequent to the drug test, the appellant voluntarily entered into a drug rehabilitation facility. Considering the positive drug test and the appellant's admission of using an illegal substance, the ALJ granted the appointing authority's motion for summary decision and upheld the charges against the appellant. Regarding the penalty, the ALJ indicated that the appellant is employed in a public safety department and is in charge of receiving emergency communications from the public. As such, the ALJ determined that the appellant's position "directly and explicitly involve[s] public safety." Thus, the ALJ found that the appellant's misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that progressive discipline principles need not be followed in this instance, and removal of the appellant was warranted. The ALJ noted that the appointing authority was under no obligation to consider the appellant's subsequent rehabilitation efforts.

In her exceptions, the appellant argues that the ALJ failed to analyze whether the appointing authority had a sufficient basis to subject her to a "reasonable suspicion" drug test. She contends that the appointing authority "acted off' an anonymous tip and did not visit her home during the investigation. Further, the appellant indicates that the appointing authority was suspicious of her weight, but she attributes her thin frame to a documented medical treatment that she underwent. Moreover, the appellant maintains that the ALJ incorrectly concluded that the appointing authority was not obligated to apply progressive discipline principles. She states that "[j]umping immediately to termination should be reserved for only the most severe misconduct." In addition, the appellant takes exception with the ALJ's disregard of her rehabilitation efforts when determining the appropriate penalty. She maintains that treatment and rehabilitation are mitigating factors and the Commission has afforded employees who seek such drug rehabilitation treatment a "second chance." The appellant indicates that the ALJ could have recommended that she undergo a drug test as a condition of her return to work.

In its reply, the appointing authority maintains that it has a "legal and contractual right" to remove the appellant. It indicates that despite the appellant's arguments regarding a "reasonable suspicion" drug test, the parties agreed that the arguments did not raise factual issues. In other words, the appellant did not dispute any of the underlying facts. Nonetheless, in response to these arguments, the appointing authority sets forth that its Drug Screening Policy lists objective factors in making a determination as to what constitutes "reasonable suspicion" to test an employee for drugs. For instance, the appellant was under investigation, had "exorbitant absenteeism," and "bizarre behavior patterns." With regard to the latter, the appointing authority indicates that the appellant had "lied about reasons for being booked off" and had been absent from work with no reason. Additionally, the Police Lieutenant who conducted the appellant's investigation observed the appellant in an interview of an unrelated investigation and she "had an extremely thin frame and her mannerisms suggested potential drug use." Thus, the appointing authority maintains that there was a reasonable basis to subject the appellant to a drug test. Furthermore, it contends that, as determined by the ALJ, it had no obligation to consider the appellant's alleged rehabilitation. Therefore, the appointing authority submits that her removal was warranted for the safety and well-being of its citizens.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's assessment of the charges but does not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the removal. Rather, the Commission modifies the removal to a 45 working day suspension. Initially, it is clear from the record that the matter was ripe for summary decision. It was undisputed that the appellant tested positive for marijuana and admitted to having used an illegal substance. In reviewing these facts, the ALJ properly determined that the charges against the appellant were sustained. Moreover, regardless of the ALJ's lack of analysis on the propriety of subjecting the appellant to a drug test, as noted, the appellant admits to illegal drug use. She voluntarily admitted herself to a drug rehabilitation facility. Thus, there is no question that the charges against her have been sustained.

However, in determining the proper penalty, in addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident, the Commission also utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the appellant's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 463. Upon an independent review of the record and in consideration of the appellant's prior record of service, the Commission concludes that removal is too harsh a penalty. The Commission is guided by the principles of progressive discipline in this case. The appellant's disciplinary history does not evidence any discipline related to drug use in her approximately eight years of employment prior to her removal.[1] Further, while the Commission is mindful of the seriousness of the appellant's conduct, the Commission notes that for non-law enforcement employees, who are not held to the stricter standard of conduct expected of law enforcement officers, a "second chance" is generally provided by appointing authorities for drug-related infractions. See e.g., In the Matter of Brian Huntley (CSC, decided February 12, 2014) (Removal modified to a six-month suspension and the appellant, a Heavy Equipment Operator, was ordered to undergo a return to work drug and alcohol test prior to reinstatement and random monthly testing for a period of 24 months upon reinstatement); In the Matter of John Daraklis (MSB, decided June 11, 2008) and In the Matter of John Simpson (MSB, decided March 26, 2008) (Removals modified to four-month suspensions and the appellants, a Laborer Heavy and Truck Driver, respectively, were ordered to undergo a return to work drug test prior to reinstatement, referral to the Township's Employee Assistance Program, and monthly random drug testing for a period of one year upon reinstatement); In the Matter of Glenn Steiger (MSB, decided July 11, 2007) (Removal modified to a four-month suspension and required testing before reinstatement and random drug testing thereafter, where Truck Driver failed random alcohol test); In the Matter of Richard Wilkins, Jr. (MSB, decided September 21, 2005) (Removal modified to a six-month suspension and required referral to Township's Employee Assistance Program and random testing after reinstatement, where Police Aide tested positive for marijuana and PCP). While the appellant is employed as a Police Communications Clerk in the City of Newark's Department of Public Safety, she is not in a law enforcement position. Further, the appellant sought treatment and voluntarily entered into a drug rehabilitation facility. Such efforts are certainly considerations to afford her a "second chance."

Accordingly, contrary to the arguments of the appointing authority, the Commission does not find the appellant's conduct so egregious as to warrant removal without following the tenets of progressive discipline. Therefore, the Commission determines that the appropriate penalty is a 45 working day suspension. This significant major discipline should serve as a warning to the appellant that any future infraction may result in her removal. The Commission further notes that its decision reducing the penalty in this case is not meant to minimize the seriousness of the appellant's infraction. In addition to the 45 working day suspension, the Commission orders that the appellant undergo a pre-reinstatement drug test to be administered by the appointing authority. Should the appellant pass this drug test, the appellant is to be immediately reinstated to her position. If the appellant fails this drug test, the Commission orders that the appointing authority issue a new Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) removing the appellant with a current date of removal. Upon receipt of the FNDA, the appellant may appeal that matter to the Commission in accordance with

[1] Agency records indicate that the appellant was appointed as a Police Communications Clerk effective June 17, 2008.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.8. Upon timely submission of any such appeal, the appellant would be entitled to a hearing regarding the current drug test only. In either case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the appellant would be entitled to mitigated back pay, benefits, and seniority from the end of the 45 working day suspension until the time she is either reinstated or removed.

However, regarding counsel fees, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a) provides for the award of counsel fees only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super, 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although the penalty was modified by the Commission, the charges were sustained. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the decision of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. February 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay are finally resolved. In the interim, as the court states in Phillips, supra, should the appellant pass the pre-reinstatement drug test ordered herein, the appointing authority shall immediately reinstate the appellant to her permanent position.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in imposing a removal was not justified. Therefore, the Commission modifies the removal to a 45 working day suspension. The Commission also orders, prior to reinstatement, that the appellant undergo a drug test to be administered by the appointing authority. The outcome of that examination shall determine whether the appellant is entitled to be reinstated or removed, as outlined previously. In either case, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits and seniority for the period after the imposition of the 45 working day suspension through the date of her actual reinstatement or removal. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement, if applicable, be delayed pending the resolution of any potential back pay dispute.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay within 60 days of the appellant's reinstatement or removal. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). Any further review of this matter should be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01510-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-2286

TONYA HOWARD,
Petitioner,
v.
CITY OF NEWARK, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY,
Respondent.

John Branigan IV, Esq., (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys) for petitioner

France Casseus, Assistant Corporation Counsel, for respondent

Record Closed: December 11, 2017 Decided: January 17, 2018

BEFORE JUDE-ANTHONY TISCORNIA, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Tonya Howard (petitioner) appeals removal from her position as a communications clerk for the City of Newark, Division of Public Safety, because she tested positive for marijuana, a Controlled Dangerous Substance (CDS). Petitioner does not dispute the test results or her past use of CDS but asserts that removal is unjust and unwarranted under the circumstances.

ISSUE

May respondent City of Newark remove petitioner based on her testing positive for CDS?

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 9, 2017, petitioner was served with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), removal effective September 22, 2016. (R-1.) Petitioner was charged with violating the following Department Rules and Regulations, in addition to the New Jersey Administrative Code:

1. Obedience to Orders – Civilian
   (Newark Police Dept. Rules and Regulations, Ch. 5:4-1)

2. Drug Screening Policy
   (Newark Police Dept. Rules and Regulations, General Order 89-2)

3. Intoxication or Illegal Use of Drugs
   (Newark Police Dept. Rules and Regulations, Ch. 18:9.6)

4. Drug and Alcohol Use/Testing
   (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(10))

Petitioner filed the instant appeal at the Office of Administrative Law on February 1, 2017 (N.J.S.A. 40A:14-202d).

A hearing was scheduled for October 25, 2017, at which time it was determined by counsel that there were no material facts in dispute and a motion was made on the record by respondent for summary decision. Respondent filed a supporting brief with attachments which were received on November 20, 2017. Opposition to the motion was filed and received on December 11, 2017, at which time the record was closed.

The parties had not requested oral argument and I determine that the written submissions are sufficient to dispose of the matter.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The following facts are undisputed and I therefore FIND them to be the FACTS of the case.

Tonya Howard had been employed as a police communications clerk by respondent City of Newark, Department of Public Safety. Her job duties included receiving and responding to emergency 911 calls from the general public.

On June 6, 2016, respondent received an anonymous tip aleging that petitioner had been engaged in the illigal use of CDS marijuana. An internal investigation ensued as a result of the tip and on August 30, 2016, petitioner submitted a urin sample which ultimatly tested positive for CDS marajuana.

As a result of the positive drug test, petitioner was issued a Priliminary Notice of Diciplinary Action on December 1, 2016, and a Final Notice of Diciplinary Action on December 27, 2016, with termination effective September 22, 2016. (See R-1.)

Subsequent to the positive drug test, petitioner entered a drug rehabiitation facility of her own volition.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

1. Summary Decision Standard

A "motion for summary decision shall be served with briefs and with or without supporting affidavits." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). A summary decision may be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Ibid. A court should grant summary judgment when the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, show that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment as a matter of law. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 528-29 (1995).

Here, both parties agree that there is no material fact in dispute. Petitioner merely argues that 1) the tenants of progressive discipline would preclude removal of petitioner and 2) respondent should consider other mitigating circumstances, such as her voluntary rehabilitation, in making a final determination.

2. The law does not require strict application of progressive discipline.

Petitioner argues that since she has never been disciplined for illicit drug use in the past, her removal is precluded by the principle of progressive discipline, which allows for an employee's past disciplinary record to be used as "guidance in determining the appropriate penalty for the current specific offense. See W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

The concept of progressive discipline is often used as a guiding principle when determining the degree of severity and overall fairness of an agency's disciplinary action against its own employee. However, a state agency is not bound by progressive discipline, especially in instances regarding a risk to public safety: "progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property." In re Hermann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007)

In the case at bar the petitioner tested positive for CDS marijuana and admitted to using the illegal narcotic. I FIND an employee's use of illegal narcotics constitutes severe misconduct. Petitioner is employed by the public safety department for the City of Newark and she is charged with receiving emergency communications from the general public. I FIND that the petitioner's position does directly and explicitly involve public safety and I therefore FIND that petitioner's misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. Under the standard set forth in Hermann as sited above I FIND respondent rightfully bypassed progressive discipline in this instance and I CONCLUDE petitioner's removal was warranted under Hermann.

3. Respondent is not obliged to consider petitioner's subsequent rehabilitation.

Petitioner voluntarily entered into a drug rehabilitation facility subsequent to her positive drug test. Petitioner argues that her openness to rehabilitation coupled with her assertion that marijuana is not "the most serious of narcotics" should afford her the "opportunity to rehabilitate and return to work." (See Pet'r's Response Br. at p. 5.) While her pursuit of rehabilitation is commendable, petitioner fails to demonstrate how this attempt at self-amelioration precludes respondent from removing petitioner due to her admitted drug use while employed as a communications clerk for the department of public safety.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED as there are no issues of material fact in dispute and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2018 BW

The appeal of Andrea Kinion, Affirmative Action Officer, City of Paterson, Division of Business Administration, resignation not in good standing, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Michael Antoniewicz, who rendered his initial decision on January 9, 2018. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of April 4, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in resigning the appellant not in good standing was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Andrea Kinion.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 03717-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-1280

IN THE MATTER OF ANDREA KINION, CITY OF PATERSON, DIVISION OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

Seth Gollin, Organizer/Field Representative, AFSCME Local 3724, for appellant Andrea Kinion pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(6)

Steven S. Glickman, Esq., for respondent City of Paterson

Record Closed: November 29, 2017 Decided: January 9, 2018

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Andrea Kinion (Kinion) appeals the determination of the respondent City of Paterson (City), Division of Business Administration, that found appellant was absent from duty for five or more consecutive days without the approval of a supervisor. Based on this action, respondent charged appellant with resignation not in good standing, and other sufficient cause. Respondent contends that the appellant's violations warrant a penalty of resignation not in good standing, effective May 12, 2016.

Appellant contends that the facts of the case will prove that the charges are unfounded and a resignation not in good standing is not warranted. Appellant seeks reinstatement to her prior position as Affirmative Action Director for the City of Paterson.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 8, 2016, respondent served appellant with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) that notes resignation not in good standing effective May 12, 2016, from her position as Affirmative Action Director. Appellant requested an internal disciplinary hearing, which commenced on July 12, 2016. On September 9, 2016, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), dated August 22, 2016, was served on appellant. The FNDA sustained all charges set forth on the PNDA. The disciplinary action against appellant based on the sustained charges is a resignation not in good standing effective on May 12, 2016.

On March 17, 2017, the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs, transmitted the within matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to B-15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to F-13. This matter was assigned to the undersigned and a hearing date was held on September 14, 2017. After the hearing was held, the appellant submitted post-hearing submissions on November 8, 2017. Respondent filed its post-hearing submission on November 29, 2017, and then the record closed.

ISSUES

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2 identifies major discipline types to include removal, disciplinary demotion, and suspension or fine for more-than five working days at any one time. The issues in this proceeding are whether a preponderance of the credible evidence establishes that the charges set forth in the FNDA because of appellant's absence from work for medical reasons and her failure to provide a complete Leave of Absence Packet warrant a disciplinary action and the penalty of resignation not in good standing? If so, is resignation not in good standing the appropriate disciplinary action warranted under the circumstances? Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

Disciplinary Charges

The charges in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B), dated April 10, 2013, are as follows:

> Violation of Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b) – Any employee who is absent from duty for five or more consecutive business days without the approval of his or her superior shall be considered to have abandoned his or her position and shall be recorded as a resignation not in good standing;
>
> Violation of Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) – An employee may be subject to discipline for other sufficient cause.

Specification of the Charges

The specification for charges sustained in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B), dated August 22, 2013, reads as follows:

> You have been absent from duty for five or more consecutive days without the approval of your supervisor N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6(c)—February 12, 2013 to the present. You were given leave of absence paperwork that needed to be filled out and returned to your supervisor by March 6, 2013 to cover you for this time since you had no more sick days remaining and you failed to do so. You have used all your sick time in the 2013 calendar year as of February 11, 2013.

(Appellant's Witnesses)

Eugenia Byfield (Byfield) was a Personnel Department employee. She was responsible for accepting and date-stamping the documents submitted on behalf of employees concerning extended leaves of absence. Byfield usually stamped all pages submitted, retained the originals for the Personnel Department, and returned copies of the stamped documents to the person who submitted them. Byfield stated that she did not know as to whether other employees stamped all pages or just the top page but that she normally time-stamped every page of a document that was submitted. Byfield also testified that the note from the Hackensack University Medical Group was submitted to her but was not attached to the Application for an Extended Leave of Absence. (P-2; P-3.) It was Byfield's recollection that she received P-2 as a part of the documentation for the appellant's request for disability-related benefits.

During the timeframe at issue herein, all requests for extended leaves of absence that Byfield received on behalf of Kinion were submitted by Niecha McPherson (McPherson). Byfield did not directly inform Kinion that any of her requests for extended leaves of absence were approved or denied because she understood that Kinion was responsible for ensuring that her requests for extended leaves of absence were approved.

Migdalia Salcedo (Salcedo) was also an employee in the Personnel Department and was also responsible for accepting and date-stamping the documents. Salcedo was unsure as to whether on April 13, 2016, she stamped both pages submitted or just the top page. Salcedo stated that she retained the originals for the Personnel Department and returned copies of the documents to the person who submitted them. During the period at issue, any requests for extended leaves of absence that Salcedo received on behalf of Kinion were submitted by Niecha McPherson. Salcedo received an Extended Leave of Absence form, dated April 12, 2016, along with a Hackensack

University Medical Group letter, dated April 12, 2016, about Kinion, when McPherson submitted them together on behalf of Kinion. (P-2.)

Salcedo's testimony was inconsistent, as for example, she stated that she would time-stamp every document and then testified that when McPherson submitted an application for Kinion, the application was on the front and doctor's notes were attached. Salcedo also testified that not only was P-2 submitted with P-3, it was attached in front of P-3. As such I find that Salcedo lacked credibility and as such should be given little weight.

Niecha McPherson (McPherson) was a City of Paterson employee and was a friend of Kinion. McPherson submitted to the Personnel Department several Extended Leave of Absence forms and other related documents on behalf of Kinion.

This witness testified on March 14, 2016, that she submitted to Byfield an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note at the Personnel Department on behalf of Kinion. Byfield then returned copies to McPherson. McPherson did not recall exactly which pages were stamped and which pages were not stamped. McPherson stated that she was unable to return to Kinion the copies of the Extended Leave of Absence form and the doctor's note she had received back from Byfield on March 14, 2016.

On April 13, 2016, McPherson submitted to Salcedo at the Personnel Department a doctor's note and another form on behalf of Kinion. Salcedo returned copies (P-2 and P-3) to McPherson. McPherson gave the copies (P-2 and P-3) that she received from the Personnel Department to Kinion within a few days of April 13, 2016.

On May 25, 2016, McPherson submitted to the Personnel Department an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note on behalf of Kinion. McPherson gave the copies that she had received from the Personnel Department to Kinion within a few days of May 25, 2016. McPherson's testimony was also inconsistent and contrary to the more credible testimony of Abby Levenson and Byfield.

Andrea Kinion (Kinion) is the appellant in this case and has filed this appeal. Kinion returned from workers' compensation on October 5, 2015, and was directed to work three days per week and have therapy two days per week during each work week. On October 25, 2015, Kinion went back out of work on workers' compensation.

On December 15, 2015, Personnel Director Levenson directed Kinion to complete Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) paperwork. Kinion questioned why because she was already out on workers' compensation, but completed the form anyway in January 2016. Kinion applied for disability because Levenson told her that workers' compensation was ending at the end of February 2016 and that she was running out of time. Kinion believed that FMLA leave commenced when workers' compensation ended around the end of February 2016.

In March 2016, McPherson submitted an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note to the Personnel Department on behalf of Kinion. Kinion was unable to testify that McPherson gave the application to respondent as she did not submit same herself. Kinion did not receive back from McPherson copies of what was submitted to the Personnel Department because McPherson was unable to get it to Kinion. Kinion received the stamped and signed versions of the Extended Leave of Absence form, dated March 11, 2016, and the Hackensack University Medical Group letter concerning Kinion dated March 11, 2016, (P-1) from Byfield because McPherson was unable to give Kinion the copies she received back from the Personnel Department when she submitted them.

On April 13, 2016, McPherson submitted an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note to the Personnel Department on behalf of appellant. Within a few days, McPherson returned to Kinion the documents the Personnel Department returned to McPherson on April 13, 2016, (P-3); the Extended Leave of Absence form, dated

April 12, 2016, and the Hackensack University Medical Group letter in regarding Kinion, dated April 12, 2016. (P-2.)

Kinon did not ask for signed copies of the documents submitted on April 13, 2016, because she received the copies back from McPherson with the date-stamp on P-2. Kinion believed that she had been granted an extended leave of absence through May 23, 2016, as was indicated on P-3. The Personnel Department did not inform Kinion that she was not granted an extended leave of absence through May 23, 2016.

On May 25, 2016, McPherson submitted an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note to the Personnel Department on behalf of Kinion. Within a few days, McPherson returned to Kinion the documents the Personnel Department retuned to McPherson on May 25, 2016. (P-4.)

Kinion had not received the PNDA, dated May 12, 2016, when she had McPherson submit an Extended Leave of Absence form and a doctor's note to the Personnel Department on her behalf on May 25, 2016. Kinion did not learn of the City's disciplinary action against her concerning her absence until she received the PNDA, dated June 8, 2016. (P-5.)

Absent from Kinion's testimony is the fact that her application for leave was approved by the respondent. It was Kinion's position that she had no duty to verify that her application for leave was approved.

(Respondent's Witness)

Abby Levenson (Levenson) has been employed with the City of Paterson as a unit chief for the Personnel Director since July 2015. As the Personnel Director, Levenson's duties included overseeing payments, providing health benefits, handling disciplinary matters, handling State benefits including unemployment, and applications for leaves of absence.

Levenson testified that Kinion was an employee hired by Paterson since 1995. Kinion went out on medical leave in 2009, which led to a separation from employment. Thereafter, Kinion was rehired on a part-time basis in August 2012. Kinion then resumed full-time employment in April 2013. In August 2013, Kinion went out on workers' compensation. Kinion then returned from workers' compensation in October 2015 working only three of the five work days per week, working on a part-time basis. From the time of October 5, 2015, and November 2, 2015, Kinion was at work for five and one-half days.

Kinion was then out pursuant to the FMLA beginning on November 2, 2015. Kinion was not eligible for this leave because she had not worked the necessary number of hours in the previous twelve months. Kinion then submitted a doctor's note (P-1) when she submitted the Extended Leave of Absence form, dated March 11, 2016. (R-5.) Kinion's FMLA was then extended to March 14, 2016, and approved by the respondent on March 28, 2016. The documents contained in P-1 (Leave of Absence and the doctor's note) were date-stamped by the City's Personnel Department. Levenson wrote to Kinion on March 7, 2016, advising her that Kinion's leave was about to expire and thus Kinion could be brought up on charges of job abandonment. (R-4.)

During time frame at issue herein, Eugenia Byfield and Migdalia Salcedo were employees in the Personnel Department and were responsible for accepting and date-stamping the documents submitted on behalf of employees concerning extended leaves of absence. The Personnel Department did not notify employees that requests for extended leave of absence were granted because it was the employee's responsibility, in accordance with the City's Personnel Policy Manual, to check to ensure that the employee's request had been granted. Kinion's leave was approved until April 15, 2016. (R-5 and/or P-1.)

The letter from the Hackensack University Medical Group concerning Kinion, dated April 12, 2016, was received by the Personnel Department, but was unrelated to a request for extended sick leave. The Extended Leave of Absence form, dated April 12, 2016, was not received by the Personnel Department. (P-3.)

The April 15, 2016, date passed without Kinion communicating with the respondent. The Personnel Department received the Extended Leave of Absence form dated May 20, 2016, on May 25, 2016, but took no action on this form because the Personnel Department was already in the process of serving Kinion with a PNDA (R-2) taking the action of a resignation not in good standing.

No denials of Kinion's requests for extended leave of absence were sent because it was the employee's responsibility, pursuant to the City's Personnel Policy Manual, to check to ensure that the employee's request had been granted. The timeframe had passed without such approval. The Unemployment Benefit Form B187Q for the quarter ending September 30, 2016, reflects the weeks to which Kinion's benefit payments were applicable, but does not necessarily reflect the date(s) on which Kinion actually received the benefit payments. (R-10.)

Levenson never saw Kinion's application for an extended leave of absence, which sought an extension of her leave of absence from April 15, 2016, through May 23, 2016. (P-3.) I FIND Levenson's testimony in general—and specifically on this topic—to be credible.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the documentary and testimonial evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and to assess credibility, I make the following FINDINGS of FACT:

1. Appellant was employed by respondent as an Affirmative Action/EEO Director in 1996.

2. Kinion went out on medical leave in 2009, which resulted in a separation from employment.

3. Kinion was then rehired on a part-time basis in August 2012.

4. Kinion then resumed full-time employment in April 2013 but then went out on workers' compensation in August 2013.

5. Kinion returned from workers' compensation in October 2015 and was working only three of five days per work week.

6. Kinion began a medical leave on November 2, 2015, which was due to expire on March 15, 2016.

7. On March 11, 2016, Kinion submitted a request for an extension of her leave of absence, which the respondent approved through April 15, 2016.

8. During the above process Byfield and Salcedo were working for the City in the Personnel Department and were responsible for accepting and processing documents submitted on behalf of employees concerning requests for extended leaves of absence.

9. Respondent's Personnel Department does not notify employees of action taken on applications for leaves of absence and the employees check to ensure the action taken on their application.

10. Kinion was advised by Levenson on March 7, 2016, that Kinion's failure to return to work after the expiration of her leave of absence could result in job abandonment charges.

11. Kinion's approved extension of her leave of absence was granted by the respondent until April 15, 2016.

12. Kinion did not obtain an extension of her leave of absence after April 15, 2016, from the Personnel Department.

13. Byfield and Levenson understood that it was Kinion's responsibility to ensure that her requests for an extension of her leaves of absence were approved by the City.

14. The submission of paperwork from Hackensack University Medical Group was filed with the City on April 12, 2016, but no application for an extension was filed with it.

15. Kinion failed to return to work after April 15, 2016, without obtaining a further extension of her leave.

16. Respondent's Personnel Department received an Extended Leave of Absence form dated May 20, 2016, on May 25, 2016, but the respondent did not take any action on this application because it was already in the process of serving Kinion with a PNDA for being absence from duty without the approval of her supervisor for more than five days, thus a resignation not in good standing.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The New Jersey Civil Service Law protects classified employees from arbitrary dismissal and other onerous sanctions. Prosecutor's Detectives and Investigators Ass'n v. Hudson County Bd. of Freeholders, 130 N.J. Super. 30, 41 (App. Div. 1974); Scancarella v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 24 N.J. Super. 65, 70 (App. Div. 1952). The law provides relief to civil service employees from public employers who may attempt to deprive them of their rights. Prosecutor's, supra, 130 N.J. Super. at 41. To this end, the law is liberally construed. Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Consistent with this policy of civil service law, there is a requirement that in order for a public employee to be fined, suspended or removed, the employer must show just cause for its proposed action. The Merit System Board is charged with the duty of ensuring that the reasons supporting disciplinary action are sufficient and not arbitrary, frivolous, or "likely to subvert the basic aim of the civil service program."

Prosecutor's, supra, 130 N.J. Super. at 42 (quoting Kennedy v. Newark, 178 N.J. 190 (1959)).

Public employees' rights and duties are governed and protected by the provisions of the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12-6, and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto, N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1 to 4A:2-6.2. However, public employees may be disciplined for a variety of offenses involving their employment, including the general causes for discipline as set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). An appointing authority may discipline an employee for sufficient cause, including failure to obey laws, rules and regulations of the appointing authority. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11). If sufficient cause is established, then a determination must be made on what is a reasonable penalty. In attempting to determine if a penalty is reasonable, the employee's past record may be reviewed for guidance in determining the appropriate penalty for the current specific offense. The concept of progressive disciplinary action is described in Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 519. In Bock, the officer had received a thirty-day suspension and seventeen minor-disciplinary actions during eight years of service. The prior disciplinary actions and the suspension of thirty days were strongly considered in determining if the thirty-day suspension was warranted. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his duties may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). Depending upon the incident complained of and the employee's past record, major discipline may include suspension, removal, etc. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522-24.

In disciplinary cases, the appointing authority has both the burden of persuasion and production and must demonstrate by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that it had just cause to discipline the officer and lodge the charges. See Coleman v. E. Jersey State Prison, CSV 1571-03, Initial Decision (February 25, 2004), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/ (citations omitted); see also N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 560 (1982); In re Darcy, 114 N.J. Super. 454, 458 (App. Div. 1971); N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a) (2), -21; N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1, "burden of proof"; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. A preponderance of evidence has been defined as that which "generates belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Martinez v. Jersey City Police Dep't., CSV 7553-02, Initial Decision (October 27, 2003), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/ (quoting Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959)).

Resignation Not In Good Standing

The rule governing resignation not in good standing is found at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b). It provides:

> Any employee who is absent from duty for five or more consecutive business days without the approval of his or her superior shall be considered to have abandoned his or her position and shall be recorded as a resignation not in good standing. Approval of the absence shall not be unreasonably denied.

The Civil Service Code also provides "the appointing authority or the Board may modify the resignation not in good standing to an appropriate penalty or to a resignation in good standing," Cumberland County Welfare Board v. Jordan, 81 N.J. Super. 406 (1963). Although the record may clearly establish that an appellant was absent without authorization in excess of five consecutive business days, if the appellant was unable to work due to medical reasons (no evidence was presented on this issue), a resignation not in good standing should be modified to a resignation in good standing. Sykes v. New Jersey Judiciary, Middlesex Vicinage, CSV 4461-04, Initial Decision (July 12, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (September 23, 2005), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv4461-04.pdf>; Taylor v. New Lisbon Medical Center, CSV 2842-05, Initial Decision (December 9, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (January 18, 2006), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv2842-05.pdf>; Salley v. Hudson County Dep't of Roads and Public Property, CSV 11813-09, Initial Decision (January 4, 2011), adopted, Comm'r (February 18, 2011), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv11813-09.pdf>. The validity of modifying a resignation be in good standing has been settled law in this New Jersey for some time. See Weil v. Atl. County Dep't of Public Safety, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 413, 418; McLaughlin v. N.J. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 137 N.J. Law 338 (Sup. Ct. 1948), aff'd, 1 N.J. 284 (1949); Griffin v. City of Jersey City, 4 N.J. Super. 81 (App. Div. 1949).

Kinion argues and the respondent does not dispute, and I agree, that it is the duty of the respondent to approve or not approve an employee's application for a leave of absence. I find it credible, as set forth in Levenson's testimony, that Kinion's first application for FMLA application was approved and had Levenson's signature on it. Thereafter, Kinion's request for an Extended Leave of Absence application for the first time was also approved and had the signatures of Levenson and the Business Administrator, Nellie Pou. There is no doubt that the alleged next request for an extended leave of absence has neither the signature of Levenson nor Pou and thus was never approved.

Respondent's Personnel Policy Manual (R-3), which Kinion testified she drafted, states:

> I understand that if my family or medical leave (total of paid and unpaid time) does not exceed 12 weeks I will be returned to my same or equivalent position. I understand that if my family or medical leave exceeds 12 weeks, the City may terminate my employment in accordance with applicable law. If my request for a leave is approved, it is my understanding that unless the City has authorized an extension of my leave in writing, I must report to duty on the first workday following the date my leave is scheduled to end. I understand that failure to do so will constitute unequivocal notice of my intent not to return to work and the City may terminate my employment.
> [Emphasis added.]

The application for an Extended Leave of Absence states: "We are requesting signatures for approval of the above request." There is no doubt that the respondent has the duty to approve or not approve such an application. In the case when the employee does not receive a written approval, as required above, it is incumbent upon the employee to determine if the application was approved, and if this is not obtained, the employee must report for duty, or risk being terminated by being found to have resigned not in good standing. In this case, it is clear that the employee received no written or verbal approval of an extension of her request for leave.

Kinion is charged with resigning from her position, not in good standing, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b). Based upon the above findings, I CONCLUDE that Kinion has resigned from her position not in good standing as of May 12, 2016.

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b), five or more consecutive days absence without approval of an employee's supervisor is regarded as abandonment of the position and deemed a resignation not in good standing. In the current instance, Kinion did not return to work after submitting an application for an Extended Leave of Absence and was not on an authorized leave of absence. Kinion was on a leave of absence that began on November 2, 2015, and was due to expire on March 15, 2016. Kinion extended the leave until April 15, 2016. Thereafter, there was no approved extension and Kinion did not return to work. Kinion made an application for another extension of her leave on a form dated May 20, 2016, and received May 25, 2016. (See R-6.)

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Perth Amboy v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at this de novo hearing are whether Kinion is guilty of the charge brought against her and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry, supra, 81 N.J. 571; Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500. In this matter, the City bears the burden of proving the charges against Kinion by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Suero, CSV 5039-04, Final Decision (June 22, 2005), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

There is no debate that Kinion failed to report to work following the expiration of her leave of absence on April 15, 2016, or that she failed to contact her supervisors to determine if her request for extension was granted. McPherson was acting on behalf of Kinion, and did so by requesting an extension of the leave of absence. However, McPherson, as well as Kinion herself, failed to contact the City to determine if the extension had been granted. There is no dispute that no approval of an extension of the leave was granted by the respondent based on the fact that the respondent was taking disciplinary action against Kinion for resignation not in good standing.

Kinion attempts to cloud the issue by arguing that the City had the burden to notify the appellant of the action taken on her application, i.e., approval or denial. The argument is not persuasive. In the first instance, the City has demonstrated adequately that there was no action taken on the appellant's application for an extension and that Kinion filed an application for an extension beyond five days after the expiration of her leave.

Kinion contends that the withholding of approval for the leave extension was unreasonable. The record establishes that Kinion had the duty to appear for work in the event that she did not receive an approval from the respondent. I CONCLUDE that the City has been reasonable in authorizing leaves of absence in the past and in this case. Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the City has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that Kinion was absent from duty for five or more consecutive business days without approval of her supervisor. It is within the discretion of an appointing authority as to whether a request for a leave of absence should or should not be granted. See Smith v. College of New Jersey, CSV 977-98, Final Decision (October 14, 1998), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. I, therefore, CONCLUDE that the City did not unreasonably fail to grant Kinion a further leave of absence. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Kinion's unapproved absence effectuated a resignation not in good standing.

CREDIBILITY

This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, in accordance with a reasonable probability of truth.

Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). The burden of proof falls on the appointing authority in enforcement proceedings to prove a violation of administrative regulations. Cumberland Farms v. Moffett, 218 N.J. Super. 331, 341 (App. Div. 1987). The respondent must prove its case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, which is the standard in administrative proceedings. Atkinson, supra, 37 N.J. 143. The evidence needed to satisfy the standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis.

When witnesses present conflicting testimonies, it is the duty of the trier of fact to weigh each witness's credibility and make a factual finding. In other words, credibility is the value a fact finder assigns to the testimony of a witness, and it incorporates the overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, consistency, and how it comports with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963); see Polk, supra, 90 N.J. 550. Credibility findings "are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463 (1999). A fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973).

The finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness, and credibility does not automatically rest astride the party with more witnesses. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). Testimony may be disbelieved, but may not be disregarded at an administrative proceeding. Middletown Twp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962). Credible testimony must not only proceed from the mouth of credible witnesses but must be credible. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954). The evidence presented and the credibility of the witnesses will assist in resolving whether the charges and discipline imposed should be sustained; or whether there are mitigating circumstances, which should impact the charges and the penalty. Mitigating circumstances must be taken into consideration when determining whether there is just cause for the penalty imposed.

In the instant case, there is sufficient evidence that appellant has been disciplined for similar conduct or actions in the past. In regard to testimony on ancillary facts offered to support or negate a charge, the weight of the evidence indicates the City did not provide Kinion with an extension of her leave of absence and that Kinion's application, dated May 20, 2016, was well beyond the expiration of her leave of absence which ended on April 15, 2016.

CONCLUSION

In an appeal, from a major disciplinary action, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to show that the action taken was justified. N.J.A.C. 11A:2-21, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). This burden requires the appointing authority to establish by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that the employee is guilty of the stated offenses. Atkinson, supra, 37 N.J. 143; Polk, supra, 90 N.J. 550. Here, the respondent charges the appellant with resignation not in good standing.

Based on testimonial and documentary evidence presented, in regard to charges creating violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), I CONCLUDE that the Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b), resignation not in good standing, if an employee is absent from duty for five or more consecutive business days, or has not returned to work for five or more business days following an approved leave of absence, without the approval of her superior, she shall be considered to have abandoned her position and shall be recorded as a resignation not in good standing. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b)(c). In the instant matter, appellant was absent for more than five consecutive days without a supervisor's approval. Respondent has proven that Kinion abandoned her employment by failing to obtain an extension of her leave signed by her supervisor prior to failing to return to duty less than five days later. I, therefore, CONCLUDE that the penalty of a resignation not in good standing on the charges as set forth herein, is reasonable and warranted and the charge should be upheld.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that Andrea Kinion is hereby deemed to have RESIGNED from her position not in good standing, effective May 12, 2016.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2018 BW

The appeals of Eugene Royster and Kate Blaszkowski, County Correction Officers, Burlington County, removals effective September 4, 2017 and August 30, 2017, respectively, on charges, were heard by Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin, who rendered his consolidated initial decision on February 6, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, as well as having carefully considered the exceptions and reply to exceptions filed by the parties and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of April 4, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellants was justified. The Commission therefore affirms those actions and dismisses the appeals of Eugene Royster and Kate Blaszkowski.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

Mark W. Catanzaro, Esq., for appellants Eugene R. Royster and Kate E. Blaszkowski (Law Offices of Mark W. Catanzaro, attorney)

Andrew C. Rimol, Esq., for respondent Burlington County (Capehart and Scatchard, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 22, 2018 Decided: February 6, 2018

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ t/a:

Burlington County employed two corrections officers, Eugene R. Royster and Kate E. Blaszkowski. On two dates in 2017, June 3 and July 1, each of these officers admittedly did not perform required periodic tours of I Wing, the section of the Burlington County Detention Center ("jail") to which they were each assigned. Despite their not having performed these inspections, each officer documented that they had performed the inspections in the jail log. As a result of an examination of video recordings made of I Wing, which resulted from a request made by the attorney for another officer facing disciplinary action in an unrelated matter, the fact that Officers Royster and Blaszkowski had failed to perform these inspections came to light. Each officer was then charged in two separate Preliminary Notices of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) with violations of the New Jersey Administrative Code, as well as violation of various internal policies, one notice apiece for each officer for June 3 and July 1. Following departmental hearings each officer was dismissed from service, as documented in Final Notices of Disciplinary Action (FNDA). Each filed a separate appeal with both the Civil Service Commission and the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law (OAL). These separate appeals were each assigned to this judge. Following a conference with counsel it was determined the cases would be tried sequentially. Although at first it was not clear that they should be consolidated, following completion of the hearings on both cases, which were held on January 17, 2018, it became clear that the facts and legal issues were essentially the same. As a result, an order consolidating the matters is issued in conjunction with this initial decision.

The specific violations each officer was charged with were the same. The County asserts that each officer violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; (3), inability to perform duties; (6) conduct unbecoming a public employee; (7) neglect of duty; and (12) other sufficient cause. This latter charge alleges violations of Policy and Procedures Manual sections 1007, 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1172, 1190, 1192 and 1250. The specific provisions in each of these sections will be examined later in this opinion. It should be noted here that during this hearing, the County advised that it was not pursuing the charge of any violation of Policy 1192 against either officer.

As noted, neither officer denies the charge that they did not perform the specific inspections set forth in the specifications contained in each of their PNDAs. Each received two such documents, one for the violations on June 3, 2017, the other for the violations on July 1, 2017. More specifically, the review of recordings conducted by Captain McDonnell showed that Officer Royster failed to conduct required security tours on the 0600-1800 shift on June 3, 2017, at 0730, 1000 and 1030. He entered "false or misleading entries into the official logbook by documenting these security tours" when in fact he had not performed them. Additionally, on July 1, 2017, Royster failed to perform the required security tours at 0700, 0730, 0830, 1100 and 1130. However, in each instance he again entered "false or misleading entries into the official logbook by documenting" the security tours, even though he had not physically conducted them. Officer Blaszkowski was charged with exactly the same violations. In her case, on June 3, 2017, on the same 0600-1800 shift, she failed to conduct required security tours and falsified entries into the official logbook by documenting such tours as if they had occurred at 1233 and 1305, when she did not actually conduct physical inspections. On July 1, 2017, on the same tour, she again did not conduct required security tours, but she documented that she had done so at 1233 and 1305. According to Blaszkowski's testimony at the hearing, on each of these days she relieved an officer who was taking a meal break and it was during the time that she performed such relief duty that she failed to conduct the tours and yet documented that she had done so. In his testimony, Officer Royster explained that his failure to conduct the required inspections on each of the two dates arose from his becoming "comfortable" and he offered that he had "no excuse" for his failure to perform his duties. Officer Blaszkowski testified that, although she was aware of her obligation to physically walk her post on each of the days, she failed to do so because she had become "too relaxed."

Neither of these officers denies that they are guilty of failing to perform their required duties on the two days in question. However, they have appealed the appointing authority's decision to remove them from their positions, claiming that they have been subject to disparate treatment and have not been treated fairly with respect to the penalty imposed, or perhaps even in being charged with these violations. There are two bases for this claim. The first is that when Burlington County began its review of video recordings of the various wings of the institution, it first focused upon I Wing, where they were assigned, and where the unrelated incident from which the demand for the video review arose. However, shortly after Captain McDonnell reviewed the I Wing recordings and made note of the two officers' failure to perform their tours, the attorney for the officer in the unrelated matter withdrew his demand for the recordings and the County stopped reviewing the video recordings. As a result, other officers assigned to other wings of the jail, who may have similarly failed to perform the required tours such as these two failed to perform, were not identified, as the video recordings of the other wings of the institution were not reviewed. Additionally, the recordings showed that Sergeant Hernandez, also assigned to I Wing, and a lieutenant, also assigned to that wing, failed to perform their required inspection tours, and yet they were not disciplined. Further, the appellants point to a decision of the Civil Service Commission involving a Mercer County corrections officer found guilty of the same offenses, who was only given a forty-five-day suspension by the appointing authority, a suspension which was upheld by the Civil Service Commission and then affirmed by the Appellate Division, In the Matter of Nolan Cox, Mercer County Department of Public Safety. Thus, these long-term officers, whose prior disciplinary records include no sanctions for performance but only attendance issues, see their removal as constituting excessive punishment for these violations.

Matthew S. Leith, a Corrections Administrative Captain at the Burlington County Jail, testified as to the importance of the periodic tours that officers such as Royster and Blaszkowski are required to undertake during their time assigned to a wing, such as I Wing in the case of the two dates on which they failed to do so. I Wing consisted of five cells containing a total of fourteen bunks. The Wing is used for persons newly admitted to the Detention Center. An officer assigned to the Wing sits at a desk, but is unable to see into each of the cells and observe all of the bunks unless the officer physically moves along the Wing to make such observations. The control booth officer who opens the doors to the Wing from that officer's booth cannot see inside all of the cells either. The walking inspection of the cells and the inmates in them allows the officers to assure that the inmates are safe and secure, that they are not overdosing, that no suicide attempts are being made, and that the facility, and its inmates and corrections officers, are safe and secure. Captain Leith identified several policies and procedures of the Burlington County Detention Center that are applicable and which spell out the responsibilities of corrections officers, policies and procedures that the County charges these officers violated.

Policy and Procedure Section 1007 provides that officers are to listen for unusual sounds in cell blocks, observe for changes in noise levels, calls for help, detect unusual odors, prevent escapes and suicides, patrol cell block areas to check for safety and security hazards such as fires, smoke, broken pipes, windows, etc. This is all done in order to "protect the security and safety of the inmates and the institution."

Policy and Procedure Section 1012-1074 provides that officers are subject to discipline, including dismissal, for any violation of the policies and procedures. Policy 1023 specifically requires such compliance with the policies. Policy 1030 holds officers responsible for "the efficient performance of duties assigned and for the proper supervision of any inmate in his/her custody." Policy 1031 requires that officers "promptly obey any lawful order." Policy 1038 prohibits officers from acting in any manner that is to the officer's, or the Department's, discredit. Policy 1065 prohibits any officer from making "any false or misleading statements or written reports by intentional omission or misrepresentation of facts or information known to the officer." And Policy 1066 provides that "no officer shall . . . enter, in any official book or record, any false or misleading statements."

Policy 1172 specifically provides for the maintenance of logbooks, recording inmate movements, events and situations of special circumstances. Officers are trained in the use and maintenance of these logs. Section C. of this Policy provides that the logbook contain "Officer security/touring wing (30 min general security check)." In addition, officers providing relief, such as Blaszkowski did on June 3 and July 1, are "responsible for that post during such time as she is relieving and is responsible to make the appropriate entries into the logbooks . . . in her own handwriting." Section A.4. of this Policy provides: ". . . falsification of these documents will not be tolerated; offender(s) are subject to disciplinary action and/or criminal charges (Official Misconduct)."

Captain Leith noted that the jail's logbooks are legal documents. They are used for official purposes and can become evidence in legal proceedings (such as is the case in this matter).

Policy 1190 C. provides that "Security tours will be made approximately every thirty (30) minutes at irregular intervals. An accounting of inmates is also done during security tours, which enables the shift to accomplish the dual requirements of security and count procedures." Policy 1250, at page 4, paragraph 15, requires "routine tours of the entire tier or post" to be made "approximately every thirty (30) minutes. This duty requires the officer to physically walk around to make an inspection. The officer will document in the logbook when such duty was performed and note findings of each tour."

Receipts signed by each officer were entered as evidence confirming that they had received copies of the policies and procedures.

Discussion

In a Civil Service disciplinary action, the appointing authority bears the burden of establishing alleged violations of administrative code provisions that subject the employee to disciplinary sanction. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). The proof must be by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

In the current matter, each of the charged civil servants has readily acknowledged that on June 3 and July 1, each did not conduct required walking tour inspections of their assigned post on I Wing. Each did not do so and each admitted that he or she had falsified the logbook to make it appear that he or she had in fact performed the required tours. As such, neither Royster nor Blaszkowski denies their guilt. Each admits to neglecting their required assignment, on more than one occasion, each admits to failing to perform their duties, and each admits to falsifying the logbooks with entries that made it appear that they had accomplished their mandated tours when they full well knew that they had not. It short, they lied when they entered these false representations in the logbooks for June 3 and July 1, 2017. By their own admission, both officers violated the several policies and procedures discussed above.

I FIND that Officer Eugene Royster did not perform the required walking inspection of I Wing on June 3, 2017. He made false entries in the log book to indicate that he had performed these inspections. On July 1, 2017, he failed to perform these required walking inspections at 0700, 0730, 0830, 1100 and 1130. Again, he made false entries in the logbook to show that he had performed the tours. I CONCLUDE that he violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), failure to perform duties; (3), inability to perform duties, in that he had an attitude of complacency that rendered him unable to motivate himself to perform as his duty required; (6) conduct unbecoming a public employee, in that he entered false information and neglected his vital duties in a correctional setting, acts that have the ability to undermine the public's trust in government and its employees and bring discredit to the institution, Karins v. Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 557 (1998); (7) neglect of duty; and (12) other sufficient cause, in that he violated Policy and Procedures Manual Sections 1007, 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1190 and 1250.

I FIND that on June 3, 2017, Officer Blaszkowski did not perform the required walking inspection of I Wing at 0931. She made a false entry to show that she had performed the tour. On July 1, 2017, she failed to perform the required walking tours at 1233 and 1305. Again, she made false entries in the logbook. I CONCLUDE that she violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), failure to perform duties; (3), inability to perform duties, in that she had an attitude of complacency that rendered her unable to motivate herself to perform as her duty as required; (6) conduct unbecoming a public employee, in that she entered false information and neglected her vital duties in a correctional setting, acts that have the ability to undermine the public's trust in government and its employees and bring discredit to the institution, Karins v. Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 557 (1998); (7) neglect of duty; and (12) other sufficient cause, in that she violated Policy and Procedures Manual Sections 1007, 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1190 and 1250.

Sanction

The appointing authority determined that the appellants should be terminated. Appellants argue that such a penalty is inappropriate. Each notes that they have no prior disciplinary history for performance-related issues. Additionally, each has served for a considerable time, Royster since March 2004, and Blaszkowski since March 2006.

As noted earlier, each officer points to In the Matter of Nolan Cox. Cox was a Mercer County corrections officer who was charged with misconduct for failing to perform the majority of the routine security checks in his assigned location during an overnight shift. Cox had been an officer for about twenty years. On February 27, 2012, he was assigned to a Pod during the overnight shift. Like the appellants, his responsibility was to patrol his unit at least once every thirty minutes and make a visual check to assure the safety and security of the inmates in this maximum security area. The required checks involved walking the unit. A review of the security footage showed that Cox had only performed three of his required security checks during his shift. Additionally, the logbook contained an entry next to each half-hour entry which read "all secure." This indicated that Cox had made the security checks, but the recordings showed that he had not. He was charged with violating procedures and falsifying the entries in the logbook. Cox had one prior major discipline, resulting in a ten-day suspension, and two subsequent reprimands. Cox explained that since it was a quiet night on the tier, he wrote "all secure" in the log book. He acknowledged that he had not made his rounds that night.

The appointing authority imposed a forty-five-day suspension for misconduct. On appeal, the ALJ dismissed the falsification charge as unproven and reduced the suspension to a five-day suspension, but the Civil Service Commission reinstated the falsification charge and imposed the forty-five-day suspension. The Appellate Division affirmed the Board's final decision, noting the "substantial deference" it grants to agencies unless their decision is "arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable."

The appellants point to the Commission's decision in Cox to impose only a forty-five-day suspension as proof that Burlington County's decision to remove them cannot be justified. Indeed, counsel for the appellants note that the Commission could have imposed up to a six-month suspension on Cox had it deemed Mercer County to have been too lenient.

The proper penalty to be imposed when a corrections officer fails to perform required security checks, thereby neglecting his/her duty, has been the subject of consideration by the appellate courts on a number of occasions. The situation becomes more complicated when the neglectful officer also falsifies records. In Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980), the Commission reduced a penalty imposed on Henry from removal to a ninety-day suspension. He had falsified a report. On appeal, the Supreme Court reinstated the removal, determining that the Board had acted arbitrarily when it "failed to consider a relevant factor, namely, the seriousness of a single instance of a State corrections officer's falsification of a report," particularly in the context of a prison setting, "where order and discipline are necessary for safety and security." As the Court said, "The falsification of a report can disrupt and destroy order and discipline in a prison." Henry, at 580. In Matter of Warren and Sowa, 117 N.J. 295 (1989) ("Warren"), the Court considered an appeal of Warren's thirty-day suspension. The appointing authority had removed him, but the ALJ imposed only a thirty-day suspension. On appeal, the Appellate Division split over whether the Merit System Board (then the name of the current Civil Service Commission) had properly chosen to suspend, and not remove, him from his position as a corrections officer. As that court explained, there was some uncertainty as to the exact charges against Warren, for the Board had expressed concern as to whether the case was limited to neglect of duty or also involved falsification. In upholding the Appellate Division's majority opinion affirming the suspension, as opposed to the dissent which argued that removal should have been imposed, the Supreme Court stated that in the context of the case, the penalty imposed by the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. However,

> In the clearer context of a corrections officer's trial for intentional falsification of a report, there can be no doubt that the Board must consider this as an offense striking at the heart of discipline within the corrections system. Failure to accord due consideration to that factor in the prison setting would violate implied legislative policies regarding prison security.

In 2007, the Commission ruled in In the Matter of Jose Castillo, 2007 N.J. Agen Lexis 1027. Castillo had been charged with neglect of duty and falsification. The appointing authority removed him from service. On de novo review, the ALJ determined that he had performed the required security tours, although not at the times that he had entered in the logbook. While the ALJ dismissed the neglect charge, the Board concluded that he had neglected his duty when he failed to perform these tours at the required times, and also concurred that he had falsified the records. The ALJ had reduced the removal to a thirty-day suspension. However, the Board imposed a six-month suspension, the maximum suspension allowable. As the Board noted,

> In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the appellant's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d 463, 465 (CSV) 1996. Although the Board applies the concept of progressive discipline in determining the level and propriety of penalties, an individual's prior disciplinary history may be outweighed if the infraction at issue is of a serious nature. Henry v. Rahway, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Even when a law enforcement officer does not possess a prior disciplinary record after many unblemished years of employment, the seriousness of an offense may nevertheless warrant the penalty of removal where it is likely to > undermine the public trust. In this regard, the Board emphasizes that a law enforcement officer is held to a higher standard than a civilian public employee. See Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), cert. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). See also In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567 (1990). In the instant matter, the Board emphasizes that the appellant is employed in a paramilitary setting and is charged with maintaining security, discipline and order in a correctional facility. The precise requirements of such a position are not mere technicalities but are established and must be adhered to in order to ensure the utmost security of the facility. The appellant's admitted failure to perform his duties in a timely manner and his falsification of official records are, indeed, egregious infractions, whether or not it has been established that grave consequences resulted.

Each disciplinary action must be assessed on its own facts, both as to issues of guilt and of penalty. As the cases surveyed show, and as no doubt others would also indicate, there is no fixed penalty that is always imposed when the charges involve corrections officers who neglect their assigned duty and falsify records in order to make it appear that they have performed the duty. In the present matter, two long-term employees with unblemished performance records (disregarding here attendance violations) both neglected their respective duties and compounded their wrongdoing when they falsified the logbooks. Thus each chose to ignore the need to walk the inspections, and faced with the fact that they not only had to physically do so, but also had to document the experience, they chose to lie in the written record. In the face of recordings that demonstrated their failures, each acknowledged their guilt. Unlike Mercer County, here Burlington County imposed the maximum penalty of removal. Unlike Officer Castillo, who performed at least some of his mandated tours but did not do so when he was required to and then falsified the record, on two separate dates each of these officers did not even conduct the tours. They were "comfortable," "relaxed." As the decisions have noted time and again, in a correctional setting, such attitudes fly in the face of the need to insure to the utmost the safety and security of inmates, officers and the public in general. And the falsification of records is especially "egregious," Castillo, and "strik[es] at the heart of discipline within the corrections system. Warren, at 299. While Cox may suggest some doubt as to how the Commission may view the seriousness of these charges, that decision provides no reliable guide for the current case. In Cox, the appointing authority chose, for reasons that the record does not reveal, to suspend a neglectful and untruthful corrections officer for forty-five days. While acknowledging the seriousness of Cox's violations, the Board seems to have felt that given the appointing authority's stance on penalty, they would not upgrade the penalty, and it must be noted, given that the original penalty was a suspension, they could not have removed Cox on the de novo appeal. Had Mercer County removed Cox, or imposed a stiffer suspension, it seems clear enough the Commission would have affirmed that sanction.

The teachings of cases that understand the egregious nature of falsification, as well as the serious potential involved when corrections officer fail to perform their required inspections, are far more persuasive than the Cox decision. Here, the appellants each failed to perform several tours on two different dates, chalking their dereliction up to a "comfortable" and a "relaxed" attitude that in a prison setting is simply asking for trouble, and compounded their mischief by falsifying records that are important legal documents the need for reliability of which is obvious enough. Under these circumstances, despite the officers' good records, removal is fully warranted. Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007).

As for the contention that these officers have been the victims of disparate treatment, there is no allegation that they were charged as a result of some invidious discrimination due to their race, sex, age, or other such classification. "Disparate treatment," which involves enforcement of the law "applied and administered by public authority with an evil eye and an unequal hand," State of New Jersey, Township of Pennsauken v. James Schad, 160 N.J. 156, 183 (1999), raises concerns of a "Constitutional" nature. However, both the United States Supreme Court and the New Jersey Supreme Court have limited claims of "disparate treatment" to situations involving differing treatment arising due to such distinctions. Oyler v. Boles, 368 U.S. 448 (1962); State of New Jersey, Township of Pennsauken v. James Schad, 160 N.J. 156, 183 (1999)("The conscious exercise of some selectivity in enforcement is not a constitutional violation unless the decision to prosecute is based upon an unjustifiable standard such as race, religion, or other arbitrary classification." Schad, at 183.) As for the fact that other officers stationed on other wings may have escaped detection because the original reason for the video review that caught these appellants disappeared when the attorney who requested the review in respect to an unrelated case withdrew his request, these officers cannot expect to avoid the consequences of their misconduct on such a flimsy basis, characterized as "unfairness." They are no different than the speeder caught by a radar device while others speed in the vicinity. Had the device been turned in a different direction, some other speeder might have been caught. That does not justify ignoring the inappropriate conduct of those detected in violation of the law. Finally, it is unclear exactly what the appointing authority understood about Sergeant Hernandez's or a lieutenant-on-duty's conduct vis-a-vis their own inspection requirements at the time in question. The appointing authority must assure that it treats the conduct of these personnel with the same concern as it has shown here for that of these appellants. The Commission may wish to inquire as to the matter. However, the guilt of Royster and Blaszkowski is clear and admitted, and they cannot use the uncertainty about others as an excuse to avoid their removal for the multiple violations of which they are surely guilty.[1]

[1] As this decision was about to be issued, counsel for the appellants sent me a letter and documents concerning a 2014 disciplinary action by Burlington County against an Officer Cesaretti, who was charged with similar offenses as these appellants. The County entered into a Settlement Agreement in that case, under which the officer received a thirty-day suspension, fifteen days of which were to be held in abeyance. No information as to the factual circumstances involved in that case, or the reasons for the settlement, were provided. According to counsel's letter, this 2014 proceeding was disclosed as a part of discovery in a pending civil service appeal now before Administrative Law Judge Ascione, In the Matter of Eric Warren, Burlington County, OAL Dkt. No. CSR 16796-17. The County terminated Warren for offenses which counsel for these appellants states involved "identical conduct" as that alleged against his clients. Counsel contends that the resolution of the Cesaretti matter highlights the "disparate treatment and fundamental[ly] unfair[ness]" involved in the County's attempt to remove Royster and Blaszkowski. The Stipulation of Settlement entered into in Cesaretti states that it is not precedential for any other matter or any other employee matter that may proceed to the disciplinary process. There is no way to determine from what is before me what the reasons were for the County to settle as it did, such as whether there were evidence problems or other considerations that may have be in play. Be that as it may, that episode occurred at least four years ago. In responding to the late submission, counsel for Burlington County notes that a different administration was in place in 2014. He also notes that there are now pending additional such cases before other administrative law judges, involving the same type of violations.

By itself the information regarding the Cesaretti case says nothing about what should happen to miscreants doing the same things today. As noted, there is no legal basis alleged here for "disparate treatment" as that term is defined. As for the fairness argument, the comments set out above apply.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the appeals filed by Officers Eugene R. Royster and Kate E. Blaszkowski be DENIED and they BE REMOVED from their positions as corrections officers. Officer Royster's removal is effective as of September 4, 2017. Officer Blaszkowski's removal is effective as of August 30, 2017.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204.

Finally, in deciding a case before a judge or the Commission, the facts of the instant matter and the appropriate response to the violations proven must, in the first instance, govern the penalty to be imposed. If certain counties, at certain times, under differing administrations, have perhaps taken possibly lax account of the seriousness of the failure of corrections officers to perform their responsibilities, and perhaps more importantly to then lie about having done so, neither the ALJs hearing the appeals nor the Commission need approve such attitudes. The Supreme Court noted the very serious impact of these sort of violations, especially of the fabrications involved, in Henry. Nothing contained in the recent submission suggests a lesser penalty than that imposed in this decision. That said, it may be that the Commission, which has a broader view of the scope of disciplinary cases that come before it on appeal and presumably also an interest in how counties deal with disciplinary charges that do not reach the Commission, may see a need to consider whether there is a need for some additional guidance or directive regarding how matters involving these sort of charges need to be treated in order to assure a reasonable degree of certainty as to the way in which such discipline is imposed.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

INITIAL DECISION SETTLEMENT
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 17734-17
AGENCY REF. NO. 2018-1403

IN THE MATTER OF DARIO SALAS, CITY OF NEWARK, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

William P. Hannan, Esq., appearing for appellant Dario Salas (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

France H. Casseus, Esq., appearing for respondent City of Newark (Kenyatta K. Stewart, Acting Corporation Counsel, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 16, 2018 Decided: March 19, 2018

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

By Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated October 30, 2017, and made effective July 28, 2017, the City of Newark, Department of Public Works (City), removed appellant Dario Salas (appellant) from his civil service position as a Truck Driver (CDL) for conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property, and other sufficient cause, namely that he allegedly engaged in a private debris collection while on his assigned garbage route. Appellant filed a request for a hearing appealing his removal, which appeal was filed with the Office of Administrative Law by the Civil Service Commission for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13 on December 1, 2017.

The matter was assigned to me on December 6, 2017. On December 18, 2017, I convened a telephonic case management conference. Among other issues discussed, a hearing date for February 21, 2018, was scheduled.

Prior to the scheduled plenary hearing, the parties communicated that they were in the process of negotiating a resolution of the matter and, accordingly, the hearing was adjourned. The parties were given the opportunity to reduce the settlement to writing. Under cover of March 16, 2018, the parties submitted to the undersigned a fully executed Settlement Agreement. On the basis of the written agreement submitted, I FIND that all parties in this matter are satisfied with the terms and conditions of that agreement. I have reviewed the record and terms of the Settlement Agreement, made a part hereof, and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the signatures of the parties and/or their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the applicable law.

I CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and therefore, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be and are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Dario Salas, Appellant, v. CITY OF NEWARK, Respondent.	:	STATE OF NEW JERSEY OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW OAL DOCKET NO.: CSV 17734-2017 N SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between the City of Newark ("City"), Service Employees International Union, Local 617 ("Union"), and Employee, Dario Salas ("Salas"), to resolve the disciplinary matter as it relates to the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action ("FNDA") dated October 30, 2017. Rather than continuing further with Salas' termination on the charges of conduct unbecoming of a public employee; misuse of public property including motor vehicle; and other sufficient causes, as codified at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), the City, the Union and Salas (collectively referred to hereinafter as the "Parties") have determined to resolve this matter by this Agreement, and agree as follows:

1. The Parties hereby agree that all charges associated with the FNDA issued on October 30, 2017 will be upheld.
2. The City will amend the disciplinary action in the FNDA dated October 30, 2017 from removal/termination to suspension based on the charges.
3. The Parties agree Salas will serve a suspension period of Five (5) months commencing July 28, 2017, based on the charges reflected in the FNDA.
4. The Parties agree the period following the Five (5) months suspension until the date Salas returns to work will be deemed an unpaid leave of absence.

5. Salas shall waive and will not be entitled to any back pay from the date of his initial removal until the date of his return to work.
6. The Parties acknowledge under N.J.A.C. 17:1-2.18(b) and (c), no pension or seniority time may be credited for periods for which the employee is not paid by the employer.
7. Salas further waives any and all rights or claims which he has or may have to a hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under this Agreement and/or to challenge the suspension penalty imposed as a result of same, including, but not limited to, any right to a departmental hearing concerning the charges in the FNDA.
8. Salas and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.
9. Salas and the Union each further agree that there is no consideration due Salas, his counsel and/or Union, including, but not limited to, any claim for back pay and/or counsel fees, arising from his employment and/or the execution of this Agreement, except as otherwise provided herein.
10. Except for the assessment of Salas' disciplinary record in any subsequent personnel disciplinary hearing, nothing in this agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party.
11. Salas and the Union further acknowledge that this Agreement further precludes either of them from bringing any type of legal or contractual action in any forum including, but not limited to, filing a Complaint in New Jersey Superior Court or United States Federal Court, filing any type of complaint with the City, Essex County, the State of New Jersey or the United States of America, and filing a grievance and/or requesting arbitration, that is in any manner grounded, based upon, or related to the FNDA.

12. Salas is bound by this Agreement. Anyone who succeeds to Salas' rights and responsibilities, such as heirs or the executor of his estate, shall also be bound.
13. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent or practice in any matter involving the City or other City employees.
14. Salas and the Union each agree this Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding of any type against or involving the City, except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, or as required by law.
15. This Agreement contains the sole and entire agreement between Salas, the Union and the City, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. Salas specifically represents and acknowledges in executing this Agreement that he has not relied upon any representation or statement by the City, or City's counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth herein. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by all the Parties, and expressly stated to be a modification of the Agreement.
16. Salas agrees and acknowledges that he has been fully and fairly represented by his Union in this matter, and he is satisfied with that representation and with the terms and conditions of this Agreement.
17. Salas agrees and acknowledges that he has had full opportunity to review this Agreement with his counsel and/or union representation and he enters into same knowingly and voluntarily.
18. The Parties agree that if any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of the Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.
19. This agreement will become effective only if approved by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION. Any disapproval by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

20. By signing this Settlement Agreement, Salas states that:
    a. He has read it;
    b. He understands it and knows that he is giving up important rights, and any and all other federal and state employment related causes of any kind, including, but not limited to The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Equal Pay Law, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended, The Conscientious Employee Protection Act, The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and any other constitutional, statutory or common law suit, attorney's fees and costs of this proceeding, and any public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other State;
    c. He agrees with everything in it;
    d. His representative negotiated this Agreement with his knowledge and consent;
    e. He has been advised to consult with his attorney prior to executing this Agreement, and has in fact done so; and
    f. He has signed this Settlement Agreement knowingly and voluntarily.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have caused this Settlement Agreement to be executed.

In the Matter of April Scott, Police Officer (S9999R), City of East Orange and Police Officer (S9999R), Township of Bloomfield	:	FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION
CSC Docket Nos. 2017-1134 and 2017-3109	:	List Removal Appeals

ISSUED: APRIL 10, 2018 (ABR)

April Scott appeals her removal from the eligible list for Police Officer (S9999R), City of East Orange (East Orange), on the basis of an unsatisfactory criminal background. The appellant also appeals her removal from the eligible list for Police Officer (S9999R), Bloomfield Township (Bloomfield), on the basis of an unsatisfactory criminal background. These appeals have been consolidated herein, as they address common issues.

The appellant, a non-veteran, applied for and passed the open competitive examination for Police Officer (S9999R), which had a closing date of September 4, 2013. The subject eligible list promulgated on May 2, 2014 and expired on March 22, 2017.

The appellant's name was certified to East Orange on February 2, 2016 (OL160095) and to Bloomfield on April 27, 2016 (OL160513). In disposing of the February 2, 2016 certification (OL160095), East Orange requested the removal of the appellant's name due to an unsatisfactory criminal background, unsatisfactory driving record, and a negative credit history. In support, East Orange submitted a background report detailing November 19, 2003 and May 8, 2006 arrests; three Temporary Restraining Orders (TROs) filed against the appellant in 2011; responses to calls at the appellant's residence by the Bloomfield Police Department; her financial history; and her involvement in seven motor vehicle accidents. In disposing of the April 27, 2016 certification (OL160513), Bloomfield requested the appellant's removal on the basis of an unsatisfactory criminal record. In support, Bloomfield submitted a New Jersey State Police (State Police) Fingerprint Identification System Automated Applicant Record dated August 19, 2015, which only detailed the appellant's November 19, 2003 arrest.

With regard to the appellant's criminal background, both East Orange and Bloomfield asserted that the appellant was arrested at age 22 on November 19, 2003 and charged with two offenses under the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, which were diverted through the Pre-Trial Intervention (PTI) Program in July 2004. The charges from that incident were ultimately dismissed on August 12, 2005 and the records from that arrest were expunged in March 2009.[1] East Orange also indicated that in May 2006, the appellant, then aged 25, was charged with simple assault, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1A and endangering the welfare of children, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4A. East Orange submitted that on July 9, 2007, the appellant pled guilty to the simple assault charge and was sentenced to time served and assessed a $45.00 fine.

On appeal to the Civil Service Commission (Commission), the appellant acknowledges that she was criminally charged following a November 2003 incident, but she contends that she should be restored to the subject eligible list, as the only conviction in her record is the January 2006 simple assault charge, a disorderly persons offense, and because she has significantly rehabilitated herself since the time of her 2007 conviction for that offense. The appellant argues that a proper review of the circumstances surrounding the underlying May 2006 offense "could have changed the outcome." In the instant matter, the appellant does not describe the nature of the November 2003 or May 2006 incidents because of a stated desire to avoid making details about her children's involvement in those incidents public. However, she maintains that she pled guilty to simple assault in 2007 in order to get her children back from the Department of Children and Families (DCF) after it informed her that in March 2007 there had been an incident in the resource home where one of her children was residing. The appellant submits a letter from DCF, dated April 25, 2007, regarding the investigation of that incident. Moreover, the appellant argues that there is significant evidence of her rehabilitation since the May 2006 incident. Specifically, she cites her attainment of a Bachelor's degree from New Jersey City University in 2009 and completion of a number of programs, including anger management, individual therapy, and parenting courses, as evidence of her rehabilitation. Furthermore, she contends that her employment as a Juvenile Detention Officer at the Essex County Juvenile Detention Center from June 2010 to May 2011[2] demonstrates her suitability for the subject title, given that the "facility employed [her] knowing [her] full background history." Moreover, she

[1] On appeal, the appellant submits a copy of an Order of Expungement issued by the Monmouth County Superior Court dated March 20, 2009, which ordered the expungement of the records connected to her November 19, 2003 arrest.

[2] In In the Matter of April Scott (CSC, decided April 18, 2012), the Commission approved a settlement wherein the appellant resigned in good standing from her position of Juvenile Detention Officer, effective May 12, 2011, in lieu of removal.

submits that she has served as a Family Service Worker with the Essex County Department of Citizen Services since November 2012 without any disciplinary issues.

In response, East Orange, represented by Michael D'Aquanni, Esq., and Bloomfield contend that the appellant's criminal background supports the removal of the appellant's name from the subject eligible list. Specifically, East Orange notes that the appellant acknowledged in her preemployment application that she had been arrested, convicted of a crime, placed on probation, fined, had to post bail, had been the subject of a criminal complaint, and was investigated for child abuse or neglect. It stresses that municipal Police Officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary employees and it maintains that the appellant does not meet those standards. East Orange and Bloomfield argue that the appellant's criminal history includes a 2003 arrest which culminated in "convictions" for two criminal offenses and a 2006 arrest that resulted in "convictions" for endangering the welfare of a child and simple assault. Bloomfield maintains that it considered the expungement of her 2003 arrest when considering her for appointment, but nevertheless determined that she was not a good candidate for the Police Officer position she sought. In support, East Orange submits copies of a State Police Fingerprint Identification System Automated Applicant Record detailing the appellant's arrest history; a Computerized Criminal History (CCH) record from the State Police dated August 11, 2008 which details the appellant's arrest history; a July 9, 2007 Judgment of Conviction from the Monmouth County Superior Court for the May 2006 simple assault charge; and a July 9, 2007 Order of Dismissal for the May 2006 charge of endangering the welfare of children.

In reply, the appellant argues that East Orange and Bloomfield mischaracterize her criminal record. In this regard, she maintains that her only conviction was for simple assault based upon the above-noted May 2006 incident. She asserts that the November 2003 charges were dismissed following her completion of PTI and were subsequently expunged. She also argues that East Orange and Bloomfield failed to adequately consider the circumstances of the underlying arrest behind the 2003 charges. Moreover, she contends that East Orange's and Bloomfield's factual errors regarding her criminal history supports her restoration to the subject eligible list. She contends that an appropriate consideration of her criminal history pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7 would not support her removal on that basis, as the nature of the underlying incidents were isolated events that were not serious, her age of 22 at the time of the 2003 incident and 25 at the time of the 2003 incident, the 11 years that have elapsed since the most recent charges and the evidence of her rehabilitation since the last incident all support her restoration to the subject eligible list. The appellant submits that the significant evidence of her rehabilitation includes her completion of a Bachelor's degree, trade school program, parenting programs, domestic violence victim counseling, and anger management program, as well as her employment in the titles of Juvenile Detention Officer and Family Service Worker with Essex County. As to her removal by Bloomfield, the appellant argues that Bloomfield's submissions in this matter demonstrate the flaws in its background report, particularly its statement that she was "convicted" of the charges stemming from the November 2003 incident. In that regard, she notes that she was not convicted following that incident. Rather, her participation in PTI led to the dismissal of the underlying charges in July 2004.

In response to the instant appeal, both East Orange and Bloomfield argue that the appellant's removal from the subject eligible list is also warranted based upon her driving record. In that regard, both East Orange and Bloomfield cite her Driver's Abstract, which shows that she was involved in seven motor vehicle accidents between 2004 and 2014. They contend that such a history falls short of the conduct expected of a municipal Police Officer. Bloomfield also argues that the appellant's pattern of summonses for driving violations supports her removal from the subject eligible lists. Specifically, it notes that the appellant was issued summonses for unsafe operation of a motor vehicle in 2000, 2002 and 2007; careless driving in 2006 and 2007; speeding in 2004; driving while on her cell phone in 2009; and failing to obey traffic control devices in 2009 and 2014.

East Orange also argues that the appellant has an unsatisfactory background which supports her removal from the subject eligible list. In that regard, East Orange presents that the appellant was the defendant in requests for TROs issued against her by the Superior Court, Chancery Division, Family Part, Essex County in February 2011, March 2011 and April 2011. Additionally, it notes that the Bloomfield Police Department responded to multiple landlord-tenant disputes involving the appellant, as well as disputes with her children's babysitter. It submits copies of various incident reports from nine police calls to the appellant's residence between April 2011 and March 2016. Finally, East Orange argues that the appellant's 2006 bankruptcy and her outstanding debt as of June 2016 support its request to remove her from the subject eligible list. It submits an October 13, 2006 Order from the United States Bankruptcy Court, District of New Jersey, which discharged a portion of the appellant's debts pursuant to Chapter 7 of the United States Bankruptcy Code.

Concerning her driving record, the appellant emphasizes that she was not cited following any of the accidents noted in her Driver's Abstract. In support, she submits copies of accident reports dated March 21, 2005, July 27, 2010 and February 14, 2014. The March 2005 accident report states that she was in the process of making a right turn when she was involved in a collision with another vehicle. The July 2010 accident report indicates that she hit a bicyclist who failed to stop at a stop sign at an intersection. The accident report states that the bicyclist fled the scene after being hit. The February 2014 accident report indicates that the appellant was sideswiped by another vehicle and the other driver fled the accident scene. She argues that Bloomfield has not provided adequate documentation to support her removal from the subject eligible list based upon her driving record, particularly since it did not remove her on that basis when disposing of the July 12, 2015 certification (OL150912).[3]

The appellant contends that East Orange's observation that she was a defendant on three TROs is misleading, as all three TROs were dismissed and had come from the same accuser, a woman that she had previously employed to babysit her children. Moreover, she maintains that East Orange failed to acknowledge that she was a victim of domestic violence and had secured a Final Restraining Order against the father of her children on January 19, 2006. She also contends that there is documented evidence of individuals systematically using the courts to file false restraining orders. In support, she submits an article from that describes a former Newark police officer's alleged use of restraining orders against former girlfriends as a means of retaliating against them. The appellant argues that East Orange cannot rely on the police calls to her residence as evidence of her unsatisfactory background, as the Investigation Reports of these incidents demonstrate that she was only involved as a complainant or a witness, and not as a suspect accused of wrongdoing.

The appellant counters that her credit history does not support her removal from the subject eligible list. She argues that her 2006 bankruptcy is too remote in time to be considered relevant, as 10 years elapsed between that event and the subject certification to East Orange and that bankruptcy no longer appears in her credit report. Moreover, the appellant submits that the majority of her debt amount is attributable to her student loans. As such, it should not preclude her employment. The appellant submits a copy of TransUnion credit report dated September 5, 2017 in support of her contentions regarding her financial history.

CONCLUSION

N.J.S.A. 11A:4-11 and N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(a)4 provide that an eligible's name may be removed from an eligible list when an eligible has a criminal record which includes a conviction for a crime which adversely relates to the employment sought. The following factors may be considered in such determination:

a. Nature and seriousness of the crime;
b. Circumstances under which the crime occurred;
c. Date of the crime and age of the eligible when the crime was committed;
d. Whether the crime was an isolated event; and
e. Evidence of rehabilitation.

[3] In disposing of the July 12, 2015 certification, Bloomfield bypassed the appellant, who was listed in the 33rd position. The appellant did not appeal her bypass on that certification.

The presentation to an appointing authority of a pardon or expungement prohibits an appointing authority from rejecting an eligible based on such criminal conviction, except for law enforcement, correction officer, juvenile detention officer, firefighter or judiciary titles and other titles as the Chairperson of the Commission or designee may determine. It is noted that the Appellate Division of the Superior Court remanded the matter of a candidate's removal from a Police Officer eligible list to consider whether the candidate's arrest adversely related to the employment sought based on the criteria enumerated in N.J.S.A. 11A:4-11. See Tharpe v. City of Newark Police Department, 261 N.J. Super. 401 (App. Div. 1992). The Appellate Division has held that when candidates for law enforcement titles, including the title of Police Officer, present an expungement, the foundation for that expungement is treated as "[t]he equivalent of 'evidence of rehabilitation' in these circumstances." See In re J.B., 386 N.J. Super. 512 (App Div. 2006). N.J.A.C. 4A:4-6.3(b), in conjunction with N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(d), provides that the appellant has the burden of proof to show by a preponderance of the evidence that an appointing authority's decision to remove his or her name from an eligible list was in error.

N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(a)1, in conjunction with N.J.A.C. 4A:4-6.1(a)9, allows the Commission to remove an eligible's name from an eligible list for other sufficient reasons. Removal for other sufficient reasons includes, but is not limited to, a consideration that based on a candidate's background and recognizing the nature of the position at issue, a person should not be eligible for appointment. N.J.A.C. 4A:4-6.3(b), in conjunction with N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(d), provides that the appellant has the burden of proof to show by a preponderance of the evidence that an appointing authority's decision to remove his or her name from an eligible list was in error.

Finally, although an eligible's arrest and/or conviction for a disorderly persons offense cannot give rise to the disability arising under N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(a)4, the fact that an eligible was involved in such activity may reflect upon the eligible's character and ability to perform the duties of the position at issue. See In the Matter of Joseph McCalla, Docket No. A-4643-00T2 (App. Div. November 7, 2002) (Appellate Division affirmed the consideration of a conviction of a disorderly persons offense in removing an eligible from a Police Officer eligible list). Here, as the appellant was convicted of simple assault, a disorderly persons offense, that offense did not rise to the level of a crime. Nevertheless, the appellant's arrests could still be considered in light of the factors noted in N.J.S.A. 11A:4-11 and N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(a)4 to determine whether they adversely related to the employment sought.

In the instant matter, the totality of the circumstances supports East Orange's and Bloomfield's removal of the appellant from the subject eligible list. The appellant's background includes a 2003 arrest, the record of which was expunged in 2009, and a 2006 conviction for simple assault. However, as noted above, an expungement will not serve to automatically prevent an appointing authority from requesting the removal of an individual seeking a municipal Police Officer position. In applying the factors set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:4-4.7(a)4, the fact the appellant attained a Bachelor's degree; completed a trade school and assorted programs; and has been employed in the title of Family Service Worker since 2012 are factors that mitigate in her favor. On the other hand, the Commission notes that the appellant has a 2006 conviction for simple assault in her record, which cannot be considered an isolated incident, as the underlying charges were similar to the charges which followed her 2003 arrest. Additionally, it is recognized that the appellant was an adult when both incidents occurred, being 22 years old at the time of her 2003 arrest and 25 years old at the time of her 2006 arrest. Moreover, the appellant's employment record also includes a May 2011 resignation in good standing, in lieu of removal, from the title of Juvenile Detention Officer. Furthermore, her record includes three TROs filed against her by her children's former babysitter in 2011, which were eventually dismissed. Finally, the 2006 arrest occurred within seven years of the closing date and the expungement of the 2003 arrest occurred less than four years prior to the closing date for the subject examination.

The appellant's driving record, particularly when viewed in concert with her other background issues, adds further support for the removal of the appellant's name from the subject eligible list by both East Orange and Bloomfield. Specifically, the nine violations shown in her driver's abstract, including a post-closing date summons for failing to obey a traffic control device in December 2014, raise further questions about her suitability for a law enforcement position. In that regard, it is recognized that a municipal Police Officer is a law enforcement employee who must enforce and promote adherence to the law. Municipal Police Officers hold highly visible and sensitive positions within the community and the standard for an applicant includes good character and an image of the utmost confidence and trust. It must be recognized that a municipal Police Officer is a special kind of employee. Her primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law. She carries a service revolver on her person and is constantly called upon to exercise tact, restraint and good judgment in her relationship with the public. She represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public. See Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), cert. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). See also In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567 (1990). Clearly, the appellant's background, including two arrests, a simple assault conviction, a mixed public employment record, multiple TROs and a significant pattern of driving infractions, reflects poorly upon her ability to enforce and promote adherence to the law. Accordingly, given the totality of the circumstances, both East Orange and Bloomfield have presented sufficient cause to remove the appellant's name from the Police Officer (S9999R) eligible list. It is therefore unnecessary to address the appellant's negative credit history.

ORDER

Therefore, it is ordered that these appeals be denied.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01509-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-2002

IN THE MATTER OF RHONDA WEST, JERSEY CITY SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Seth Gollin, Esq., AFSCME, for appellant Rhonda West pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(6)

Teresa L. Moore, Esq., for respondent Jersey City School District (Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland & Perretti, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 30, 2017 Decided: January 16, 2018

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Jersey City School District suspended security guard Rhonda West for seven working days for insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, including violation of Security Department policies.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about October 14, 2016, the Jersey City School District served Rhonda West with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA). (J-1.) A departmental hearing was held on October 20, 2016, and the charges of insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, including violation of Security Department policies, were sustained. (J-2.) On or about December 16, 2016, the Jersey City School District served West with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), suspending her for seven working days, beginning January 1, 2017, and ending January 11, 2017. (J-2.)

West appealed, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on February 1, 2017. The hearing was held on October 30, 2017, and the record remained open for post-hearing submissions. The record closed on November 30, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Lakeisha McGoy and Celeste Williams testified on behalf of the Jersey City School District. Rhonda West testified on her own behalf.

Background

I FIND the following FACTS in this case:

On January 7, 2002, West was appointed by Jersey City Public Schools as a security guard. In the 2016–2017 school year, West was assigned as a security guard at Snyder High School. The chain of command for security is director of security, chief of security, field supervisor, senior security guard, and security guard.

On Saturday, October 1, 2016, the Snyder High School football team had a game at Cochrane Field at Caven Point in Jersey City, beginning at approximately 1:00 p.m. West was assigned as a security guard at the football game, beginning at 12:00 p.m. The assignment was voluntary, for overtime pay. West's position at the football game was in front of the spectator stands. The stands are located on one side of the football field only, behind the visiting team's bench.

Security guard supervisor Lakeisha McGoy has been employed as a security guard by Jersey City Public Schools for approximately twelve years, and has been the chief of security since August 25, 2017. Prior thereto she was a security guard supervisor for three years. McGoy travels to the various schools and makes sure the other security guards are performing their jobs as required. McGoy was working as the field supervisor at the October 1, 2016, football game, and supervising six security guards, including West. West had previously worked other football games. The assignment begins at noon and ends when the game is over. McGoy assigned the guards to their posts and made sure they had their equipment, which consisted of vests and radios. West went to her assigned location in the spectator stands. West was positioned in the stands by the visiting-team fans (#5 on the drawing), another security guard was positioned in the stands by the home-team fans (#4 on the drawing), and McGoy was positioned near the Board of Education security (#6 on the drawing). (R-2.)

West's duties at the football game were to ensure: no spectators were leaning on the fence in front of the stands, for safety reasons; the walkways were clear; spectators were sitting and not throwing anything; and that there were no fights or other prohibited contact. McGoy advised West of her duties when she handed her the equipment.

McGoy relieved West of her duties prior to the end of the football game. West turned in her work vest and radio to McGoy before she left the football game. West wrote an Incident Report. (R-7.) McGoy wrote an incident report, dated October 1, 2016, to Arthur Youmans, director of security for the Jersey City School District. (R-6.)

McGoy's Incident Report (R-6) states:

> While working the Snyder High School football game at Caven Point, I addressed West to inform her that a spectator was leaning over the fence. The spectator was right in view of her. She told me that I didn't have to tell her the same thing over > and over. She was waiting for her to finish talking to the coach before she interrupted them. I kept trying to explain to her that it was a safety risk with the spectator leaning over the fence regardless of who she was speaking to. She kept insisting that she should not interrupt them from their conversation. Her voice began to elevate in an aggressive manner and the fans appeared to be listening to her aggressiveness so I asked for her to step away so we could handle the situation without people listening but in an area where her post could still be monitored. She refused. At that time, I informed West that she was being removed from her duties. She told me that she was not going anywhere. At 2:30 pm, I radioed in to central office to inform the desk to log in that West is being removed from her work duties as of 2:30 pm. As Rhonda was handing in her radio and work vest she said to me "Now who's going to tell them not to lean over the fence now." I told her that it was not her concern at this point. She also stated that my actions were harassment. I informed West that my job is to make sure the guards are performing their duties correctly.

West's Incident Report (R-7) states:

> On October 1, 2016 I Rhonda West arrived at my overtime location at 1:00 p.m. At that time I was met by Supervisor Lakeisha McGoy. She then gave me my smock and radio. I then went to the post I was assigned. Twenty minutes later Supervisor McGoy walked to my post and asked me to make sure my radio was turned up and on, I did as she asked while she stood in front of me to make sure. After she was satisfied Supervisor McGoy walked away. About forty minutes later the cheerleader coach from Belleville High School asked a mother from one of the cheerleaders about a concern of her daughter. Supervisor McGoy walked over to my post once again. I stated to Supervisor McGoy the cheerleader coach from the visiting team needed to speak to one of her parents about a concern for her daughter. Supervisor McGoy then said to me "I don't care. I told you YOU NOT TO LET ANYONE LEAN OVER THE GATE." I tried to explain, but Supervisor McGoy didn't want to hear what I had to say. She then asked to speak to me but at that time everyone was looking and listening. I believed I was harassed and humiliated, because she reprimanded me in front of everyone. Supervisor McGoy informed me that I was relieved of my duties at 2:38 p.m., at which time the area I was assigned to became unsafe. Due to this forsaken situation, I will not receive the wages I am entitled to in its entirety. The parent then apologized to me for any trouble she may have caused.

West was charged with insubordination, "unbecoming conduct," and "other just cause, including violation of Security Department policies." (J-1; J-2.)

Petitioner's disciplinary history includes a three-day unpaid suspension in September 2015 for neglect of duty, failure to perform duties, insubordination, and other just cause; a four-day unpaid suspension in September 2013 for conduct unbecoming a public employee; and a two-day unpaid suspension in April 2010 for conduct unbecoming a public employee.

Testimony

Lakeisha McGoy

From her position, McGoy saw a spectator lean over the fence near West. McGoy tried to reach West over the radio. West did not respond, so McGoy had to walk over to West. As McGoy walked up to the West, the spectator moved back. McGoy saw the radio inside West's right pocket, clipped to the pocket, with the speaker facing West's body. McGoy asked West if her radio was on, and West said that it was. McGoy asked where it was and West said that it was in her pocket. McGoy asked to see it to verify it was turned up. When West turned the knob on the radio it beeped, which is what it does when the radio is first turned on, so McGoy knew the radio had not been on.

Later, from her position McGoy saw a female spectator, approximately 5'7" or 5'8" tall, lean all the way over the fence to talk to the football coach, who was on the field. McGoy was certain that the female spectator was talking to a football coach, because it was a male, wearing headphones and holding a clipboard. The cheerleading coach is female and was next to the cheerleaders. The spectator was located a few feet from West. McGoy tried to reach West over the radio, but West did not respond. McGoy walked over to West, and as she addressed West the spectator moved back and walked up into the stands. McGoy told West that she needed to remove the spectator from the fence, and that she had been calling her over the radio and received no response. West said that she did not hear McGoy. McGoy told West that she needed to turn her radio up and that she never has her radio up. West also told McGoy that she was not going to move the spectator until the spectator was finished with her conversation, because she was not going to interrupt her while she was talking. McGoy told West that the spectator was almost over the fence and that if anyone had tapped her, she would have fallen over the fence. West was getting loud and McGoy noticed that spectators were looking at them, so she told West to move to the side to avoid having the conversation in public. West refused to move to the side to discuss the situation. As a result, McGoy instructed West to turn in her vest and radio and sign out for the day. West initially refused to turn over the vest and radio, so McGoy, to document it, radioed in to the central station that as of 2:35 p.m. West was being relieved of her duties. Only then did West walk to the security truck and turn in her vest and radio. West was replaced by another security guard for the remainder of the game.

For safety reasons, spectators cannot lean on the fence or over the fence, as they could fall or the fence could give out. McGoy took several photographs of the stands to show why it was important that spectators not lean on or over the fence. (R-3; R-4; R-5.) The silver fence is approximately 3.5 feet high, and there is also a black fence on the field. If a spectator were to fall, the spectator could land between the two fences, or on the field.

After the game, McGoy wrote up an incident report for Director Youmans to explain why West was relieved of her duties, and to request a disciplinary hearing. (R-6.) Her incident report did not document everything that happened. She did not mention that West's radio was off, or that it was in her pocket. She only mentioned the reasons related to why West was relieved of her duties. West was disrespectful and going back and forth with her superior.

Security guards are provided with the Security Department Manual and are expected to review it. According to McGoy, various portions of the Security Department Manual were violated, including: ability to understand, remember, and carry out oral and written directions; ability to learn quickly from oral and written explanations and from demonstrations; ability to note significant conditions by observation and to take proper action; ability to work harmoniously with associates, visitors, and other groups of people; ability to follow prescribed procedures; ability to react promptly to situations requiring action; ability to remain alert; ability to maintain order among individuals; ability to be courteous but firm with individuals; ability to make judgments; ability to take proper action in preventing potential accidents; ability to deal with people politely and helpfully beyond giving and receiving of instruction; and ability to learn to use various types of equipment. The Code of Conduct applies because it requires that the security guards provide a safe environment in their assigned school/building for staff members, students, and the general public, and protect life and property.

West knew the spectator should not have been leaning over the fence, so upon seeing her do so, West should have immediately gone over to the spectator and moved her from the fence. West did not follow procedure because she did not move the spectator away from the fence and did not have her radio on and up.

McGoy could see straight down the walkway from her location. West and the spectator were not standing where West marked the photograph (R-5). The spectator was not sitting at the front of the stands. When McGoy first walked up to West the spectator was where McGoy circled the photograph (R-5).

Celeste Williams

Williams has been the chief of talent for Jersey City Public Schools for almost three years. She oversees all human-resources functions, including the disciplinary process for non-instructional personnel, like security guards. Once the director of security requests a disciplinary hearing, Williams reviews the information from the director of security and requests any additional documentation detailing the incident and employee history. She determines whether to forward the information to counsel for a discipline case. Sometimes she discusses type or level of discipline with the director. Williams recommended a seven-day suspension based on Civil Service Commission rules on major discipline and West's prior disciplinary history.

Rhonda West

West did not hear McGoy the first time McGoy was trying to contact her. West's radio was attached to her uniform pants, but the speaker part was turned to the inside instead of the outside. She had the radio on, and thought it was not turned all the way up, but it was not. West did not hear McGoy because the music from the press box was playing. When McGoy walked over she told West to turn the radio outward when she turned it up. The radio was not off. The radio was not in her pocket. At prior football games, West always wore her radio on the inside. It was usually all the way up.

West's radio was physically on her uniform pants, "attached to my belt." The radio was clipped to her the way McGoy's radio was clipped to McGoy at the hearing, but facing the inside. The clip is on the back of the radio. The speaker is on the front. She put it against her belt. West did not know the radio was that low. It would have been her responsibility to have her radio turned up to hear a call. She was a little confused about the location of her radio. She had it clipped inside the pocket of her uniform. Her uniform pants are not loose, so it was not all the way in that pocket. The clip was clipped to her pocket, not to her belt.

Later, a female parent went up to the fence.[1] She did not lean over the fence or touch the fence. She stood in front of the fence. She was speaking to the female cheerleading coach for the other team. West asked her to sit down, which she did, and that was the end of it. The spectator continued speaking to the cheerleading coach while she was sitting down. West had no other interaction with that spectator. Maybe McGoy saw it from a distance because McGoy came over and asked West why she did not tell the female spectator to stop leaning over the fence. West explained to McGoy that she did tell the spectator, and that was why the spectator stopped leaning over the fence. West told McGoy that she asked the spectator to sit down and told the spectator that for her safety she could not lean over the fence. But she was not leaning over the fence. She was standing at the fence. McGoy again told West that she had told her not to allow anyone to lean over the fence. West tried to explain to McGoy that the spectator was not leaning over the fence, and it escalated from there. McGoy said she was not going to argue with West and that West was given an order and did not listen. West was trying to explain, but McGoy did not want to hear what West had to say and kept interrupting West. The spectator was just sitting there. McGoy asked to speak with West. They moved over to the side, but the band was playing. When the band stopped playing, West was still trying to explain about the fence situation. McGoy said she did not care, and she told West not to let anyone lean on the fence. McGoy did not want to hear West's explanation, and relieved her of her duties. After McGoy left, the spectator came up to West and said she was sorry if she caused West any trouble. West told her that she did not, and then walked over and handed in her radio and smock. McGoy was on the other side of the field and could not see, or it could have looked like the spectator was standing up. The spectator was a little close to the fence, but West asked her to move for her safety, because she could not be that close to the fence or in the walkway.

[1] West referred to the fence as a "gate," but fence is used to avoid confusion, as McGoy testified it was a fence and the photos depict a fence.

West read the Security Department Manual. West understood that if a supervisor gives a direction, she is to follow the direction.

Additional Findings of Fact

A credibility determination requires an overall evaluation of the testimony in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 555 (1954). It must be such as the common experience and observation can approve as probable in the circumstances. Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1, 5 (App. Div. 1961). "The interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted).

Appellant's testimony was inconsistent with and overborne by the record, including the documentary evidence and the concise, consistent, and credible testimony of McGoy. By way of example, West was specifically asked, "Was the radio in your pocket?," and her response was "No." West also testified that the radio was on, but it was turned down. However, West later changed her testimony regarding the location of her radio. After initially testifying that the radio was not in her pocket and was clipped to her belt, she later testified that she had become confused, and the radio was clipped to and inside her pocket. West's testimony was overborne by the credible testimony of McGoy that West's radio had been off because McGoy heard it turn on, and that McGoy saw the radio inside West's pocket, clipped to the pocket with the speaker facing West's body. Further, given the demonstration by West as to how the radio was located in her uniform pants pocket, the clip was at the top and the speaker would not have been exposed because it would either have been turned in toward West's body.

West and McGoy each indicated on photograph R-5 where the spectator and the coach had been standing. West indicated that the spectator was standing just in front of the bottom of the stands on the opposite side of the walkway from the fence and that the coach was at the fence on the field, while McGoy indicated that the spectator was standing at the silver fence, and the coach was standing back from the black fence on the field. It is unlikely that the spectator would have been standing where West indicated, if she was trying to speak to a coach on the field, and she would have been standing in front of and blocking the view of others watching the game. Further, had the spectator not been leaning on the fence or obstructing the walkway, there would have been no reason for McGoy to have walked from her location all the way to the other side of the field to speak with West.

In view of the foregoing, I credit the testimony of McGoy and not the testimony of West, and FIND the following additional FACTS in this case:

When McGoy first walked over to speak with West, a spectator had been leaning over the fence and continued to do so until McGoy approached. West failed to instruct the spectator to move from the fence. West also failed to respond to the radio call from McGoy. West's radio was inside West's pocket, clipped to the pocket, with the speaker facing West's body, and it was turned off.

When McGoy next walked over to speak with West, a spectator had been leaning on the fence talking to a coach and continued to do so until McGoy approached. West again failed to instruct the spectator to move from the fence. West again failed to respond to the radio call from McGoy. West's voice in speaking to McGoy became elevated and spectators were watching. When McGoy advised West that she was being removed from her duties, West refused to comply until McGoy radioed it in to the central office.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 through 12-6, the "Civil Service Act," established the Civil Service Commission in the Department of Labor and Workforce Development in the executive branch of the New Jersey State government. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-1. The Commission establishes the general causes that constitute grounds for disciplinary action, and the kinds of disciplinary action that may be taken by appointing authorities against permanent career-service employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6 vests the Commission with the power, after a hearing, to render the final administrative decision on appeals concerning removal, suspension or fine, disciplinary demotion, and termination at the end of the working test period, of permanent career-service employees.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2(a) provides that major discipline includes removal, disciplinary demotion, and suspension or fine for more than five working days at any one time. An employee may be subject to discipline for reasons enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), including insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), (6), and (12). In appeals concerning such major disciplinary actions, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to establish the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the believable evidence. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

West is charged with insubordination, conduct unbecoming, and other sufficient cause, including violation of the Security Department Manual. The burden of proof is on the Jersey City School District to prove the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) does not define insubordination. Black's Law Dictionary (10th ed. 2014) defines insubordination as a "willful disregard of an employer's instructions" or an "act of disobedience to proper authority." Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995) defines insubordination as "not submissive to authority: disobedient." Likewise, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) does not define conduct unbecoming. However, the Appellate Division has held that conduct unbecoming a public employee is "any conduct . . . which has a tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). In Emmons, which involved a police officer charged with conduct unbecoming, the Appellate Division also held that conduct unbecoming is "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the bureau." Ibid. What constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee is primarily a question of law. Karins v. Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 553 (1998).

West acknowledged reading the Security Department Manual, which requires, inter alia, that she remember and carry out oral directions, work harmoniously with associates, follow prescribed procedures, remain alert, and react promptly to situations requiring action. In both instances, the spectators remained leaning over the fence until McGoy approached. West twice failed to respond to radio calls and twice failed to instruct the spectators to move from the fence. West became combative with McGoy in view of spectators when McGoy approached her the second time, and then when West was removed from her duties, she refused to comply until McGoy radioed it in. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the charges of insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, including violation of the Security Department Manual, are sustained.

The penalty imposed by the Jersey City School District was a seven-working-day suspension. The Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, though removal cannot be substituted for a lesser penalty. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. When determining the appropriate penalty, the Commission must utilize the evaluation process set forth in West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), and consider the employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations, and the like, as well as formally adjudicated disciplinary actions and instances of misconduct informally adjudicated.

In view of West's conduct on October 1, 2016, as well as her disciplinary history of three prior suspensions, ranging from two to four days, I CONCLUDE that a seven-working-day suspension is an appropriate penalty in this matter.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charges of insubordination, unbecoming conduct, and other just cause, including violation of Security Department policies, are SUSTAINED, and that the penalty of a seven-working-day suspension is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: In the Matters of Satrice Thomas, City of Newark, Department of Law (CSC Docket No. 2017-419; OAL Docket No. CSV 15862-16)

Dear Ms. Stehling and Mr. Zidziunas:

The appeal of Satrice Thomas, a Telephone Operator, City of Newark, Department of Law, of her removal, effective December 28, 2015, was before Administrative Law Judge Barry E. Moscowitz (ALJ), who issued his initial decision on April 6, 2018 recommending upholding the removal. Exceptions to the initial decision was filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on April 18, 2018 and received one 45-day extension of time, as required, to make its final decision no later than July 17, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Since one of the Commission members must be recused from this matter, leaving no quorum to vote, the Commission requested and received the consent of the parties, as required, for two additional 45-day extensions. However, the appointing authority did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective October 16, 2018.

Sincerely,

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Satrice Thomas is a telephone operator in the City of Newark, Department of Law, but she has created an atmosphere of hostility and uneasiness within the Municipal Prosecutor's Office, and its personnel is unable or unwilling to work with her. Should Thomas be terminated even though she has no prior discipline? Yes. Progressive discipline may be bypassed when its application would be contrary to the public interest. See In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007).

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated December 28, 2015, the City of Newark notified Thomas that she had been charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), and other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). In the notice, Newark specified that it was seeking her immediate suspension because her actions in the Municipal Prosecutor's Office had created an atmosphere of hostility and uneasiness within the office and its employees are unwilling to work with her. The notice further specified that the latest incident, which triggered the immediate suspension, was when Thomas intentionally and violently bumped into an assistant municipal prosecutor without apology or explanation. As a result, Newark specified that it is a hazard and a disruption for Thomas to remain in its employ, and suspended her.

Thomas did not request a departmental hearing, and a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued.

In the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 22, 2016, Newark notified Thomas that it had sustained the charges in the preliminary notice and that it had added additional charges: incompetency, inefficiency, or failure to perform duties, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), and insubordination, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2).

Newark also added additional specifications. In its narrative, Newark specified that Thomas was insubordinate to an assistant municipal prosecutor when she twice returned work to him that he had previously assigned. In addition, Newark specified that Thomas engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee when she continually talked over the chief prosecutor when he attempted to address her, and that she also engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee when she talked over others during a staff meeting. Newark also specified that Thomas frequently initiated unpleasant conversations with other employees, including attorneys, in front of the public, causing a hostile and uncomfortable work atmosphere for its employees. Similarly, Newark specified that some members of the public complained that Thomas was "rude" and "nasty" to them on the telephone. Finally, Newark specified that Thomas would absent herself from the office and then notify her supervisor after the fact, when she knew that she was supposed to notify her supervisor before the fact to ensure that her station would be sufficiently staffed.

On August 1, 2016, Thomas appealed the determination.

On October 18, 2016, the Civil Service Commission transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15, and the act establishing the Office of Administrative Law, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23, for a hearing under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6.

On December 13, 2017, I held the hearing; on February 1, 2018, the parties submitted their post-hearing briefs, and on that date, I closed the record.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Warrick

Wynesha Warrick is an assistant corporation counsel for the City of Newark. She currently serves as an assistant municipal prosecutor for Newark and has worked in that capacity for more than two years. Warrick described her hire in September 2015 and the staffing in the Municipal Prosecutor's Office that followed. Significantly, Warrick detailed the work that prosecutors in the office need to do and the work that staff in the office need to do to support them.

"Follow-Up"

Warrick testified that when she was first hired, the office was not fully staffed. There were more desks than lawyers, more courtrooms than lawyers, and more work than lawyers, so the support staff, which consisted of Thomas and a paralegal, sat in the back of the office with the assistant prosecutors who were already on staff. Warrick explained that when additional prosecutors were hired about a month later, they displaced Thomas and the paralegal from their desks in the back of the office, and Warrick was given her choice of desks. Warrick stated that when she was given her choice of desks, she chose the one where Thomas sat, and that is when her troubles with Thomas began. "If bitches wanted my desk, they should have said something," Warrick recounted Thomas muttered when Warrick chose her desk.

Warrick testified that the office was eventually staffed with five assistant prosecutors, and that the chief prosecutor and his first assistant were working prosecutors, so the number of prosecutors who needed support was seven. Including Thomas, the number of support staff, however, was only three. Warrick explained that support staff was needed for "follow-up," that is, they were needed after court to file documents, issue subpoenas, and contact witnesses, including police officers and victims of crime, and that all support staff, including Thomas, had been directed to perform this follow-up work by the chief municipal prosecutor. Specific prosecutors were assigned to specific courtrooms, and specific staff were assigned to those courtrooms to support the prosecutors assigned to the courtrooms.

Warrick testified that Thomas refused to perform any follow-up work for her when she asked her to do any. Warrick explained that when she handed Thomas work, Thomas just handed it back to her, so Thomas filed no documents, issued no subpoenas, and contacted no witnesses. As a result, Warrick had to do it all by herself—causing her to stay late most workdays.

Warrick testified that she complained about it at least three times a week to the first assistant municipal prosecutor and to the chief municipal prosecutor, but they complained in response that they already knew about it because Thomas had refused to perform any follow-up work for too.

Warrick testified that Thomas would spend time on Facebook and on Facetime instead of performing the follow-up.

Significantly, Warrick did not complain that she had to do all the follow-up work herself or that she had to stay late to complete it. What Warrick complained about was the fact that the office was not functioning as it should. Indeed, Warrick prides herself on the work that she does for the victims of crime and for the people of Newark. That is why Warrick cannot accept Thomas spending time on Facebook or on Facetime instead of performing the follow-up. Stated otherwise, Warrick was not complaining about some internecine conflict between her and Thomas; she was pleading for the restoration of the proper functioning of a public office.

Warrick testified that she witnessed the incident alleged in the first enumerated specification attached to the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action. Warrick explained that she saw Thomas hand work back to the first assistant municipal prosecutor twice in one day (once before lunch and once after lunch) but that she did not know which day. Similarly, Warrick stated that she had also seen Thomas return work to other prosecutors on other days.

Warrick acknowledged on cross-examination that she did not know the dates that Thomas returned work, and that follow-up is not specified in the job description for Thomas. In addition, no supervisor testified that follow-up was required of Thomas. Nevertheless, the record contains no evidence that Thomas filed a complaint or grievance that she was being asked to perform work out of title.

"Hostility and Uneasiness"

Warrick testified that everyone was uncomfortable around Thomas and that no one wanted to interact with her. Warrick explained that Thomas would curse and tantrum. For example, Warrick stated that Thomas would bang on the supply cabinets if they were locked and yell for someone to open them when she needed supplies. More significantly, Warrick said that Thomas was rude to the victims who came to the office and acted frustrated with the fact that she even had to deal with them in the first place.

The most egregious incident about which Warrick testified, however, was when Thomas bumped into her as described in the specifications attached to the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. Warrick subscribed to the specifications as written and repeated that Thomas intentionally and violently bumped into her without apology. Warrick asserted that Thomas, who had been in a cubicle in the back of the office, had heard her walking back to her desk and timed it so that Thomas would bump into her when Thomas stepped out of the cubicle. Warrick added that she had been carrying a stack of files and that Thomas bumped into her with such force that she slammed against and fell into the cubicle behind her nearly dropping all the files. Moreover, Warrick noted that Thomas walked away without apology or explanation even after Warrick asked Thomas why she had bumped into her.

Warrick testified that she "couldn't take it anymore" and considered filing charges against Thomas, but explained that she did not do so because she knew she had "something to lose" and did not want to jeopardize her career.

Enumerated Specifications

Warrick also addressed the other enumerated specifications attached to the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action. Regarding the first enumerated specification, Warrick repeated that she witnessed Thomas return work to the first assistant municipal prosecutor. Thus, Warrick agreed with the specification as written.

Regarding the second enumerated specification, Warrick testified that she attended the staff meeting and witnessed Thomas continually talk over the chief municipal prosecutor when he tried to talk to her. Warrick explained that the only reason why the staff meeting was called in the first place was to confront Thomas and address her behavior, but Warrick stated that Thomas would not stand for the constructive criticism and was loud and belligerent in response. Thus, Warrick agreed with the specification as written.

Regarding the third specification, Warrick repeated that she witnessed Thomas being rude with the public in person, but added that she had also overheard Thomas being rude with the public over the phone. Warrick explained that these unpleasant confrontations with the public and with attorneys created a hostile and uncomfortable work atmosphere. Thus, Warrick agreed with the specification as written.

Regarding the fourth specification, Warrick repeated that that she witnessed Thomas being "rude" and "nasty" with the public over the phone and in person. In fact, Warrick explained that she witnessed Thomas doing this all the time. Thus, Warrick agreed with the specification as written.

Regarding the fifth specification, Warrick testified that she noticed when Thomas was not in the office, and explained that it left the staff short-handed. Warrick stated that no one knew where Thomas was, and that she only informed her supervisors when she returned. Thus, Warrick agreed with the specification as written.

Warrick acknowledged on cross-examination that she was not Thomas's supervisor and that she did not know if Thomas had permission to leave her station.

Benjamin

Avion Benjamin was working as the first assistant corporation counsel in the Department of Law and served as a supervisor of the Municipal Prosecutor's Office when Thomas was working there. Before then, Benjamin served as the assistant section chief and then the section chief for the Municipal Prosecutor's Office. As a supervisor of the Municipal Prosecutor's Office, Benjamin had received the complaints about Thomas that the notices specify.

Benjamin testified that the chief municipal prosecutor had complained to her about Thomas's ethic and attitude. Specifically, Benjamin explained that the chief municipal prosecutor had complained to her that Thomas did not get along with the assistant municipal prosecutors in his office, and that she did not get along with members of the public either. Indeed, Benjamin stated that the chief municipal prosecutor had complained to her that Thomas was often absent from her station, so she did not answer the phones as was her duty, and that she refused to do the follow-up work for the assistant municipal prosecutors as she was directed. Moreover, Benjamin said that the chief municipal prosecutor had complained to her that he considered answering the phones and performing the follow-up integral to the job of telephone operator, so he filed these charges against Thomas to underscore the seriousness of the complaints about her.

In addition, Benjamin testified that the paralegal in the Municipal Prosecutor's Office complained to her about Thomas. Benjamin explained that the paralegal complained to her that Thomas had been confrontational with her and had created a hostile work environment. Benjamin stated that she was not surprised by these complaints based upon her own experience with Thomas when Thomas had worked with her in the Department of Law before Thomas's transfer to the Municipal Prosecutor's Office.

Moreover, Benjamin testified that these complaints about Thomas were made so often, and that the work environment had become so untenable, that the chief municipal prosecutor ultimately decided that Thomas was unsuitable for continuation in her position and should be terminated.

Thus, Benjamin testified that Thomas had created an atmosphere of hostility and uneasiness within the office and that all stakeholders (municipal prosecutors, defense attorneys, support staff, police officers, and even volunteers) were unable or unwilling to work with her.

Benjamin acknowledged on cross-examination that she was not a witness to any of the alleged events or incidents, but explained that she did speak to Thomas after the staff meeting Thomas attended where she is alleged to have continually talked over the chief municipal prosecutor and others, and that she told Thomas that such conduct was unbecoming and that she had to stop it.

"It was unacceptable," Benjamin said.

Thomas

Thomas denied all the allegations and refuted all the specifications. She testified that her job duties were limited to those in the job specification and that she performed all of them without complaint and without criticism. Thomas stated that she answered and transferred calls, documented and distributed mail, checked attorneys in and out, and scheduled conference rooms as needed. Thomas said that she never refused to do any work assigned to her and that she was never disciplined for not doing work assigned to her. In short, Thomas held herself out as a model employee.

Thomas addressed every specification in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action. She testified that she did not create an atmosphere of hostility and uneasiness within the office and that it was never brought to her attention that anyone expressed an inability or unwillingness to work with her because of her behavior. She explained that she never returned work to a prosecutor, that she was never brought to a meeting to discuss her behavior, and that she never engaged in unbecoming conduct by continually talking over the chief prosecutor when he talked to her. Thomas stated that she never initiated unpleasant conversations with anyone, that she was never "rude" or "nasty," and that she was never away from her desk without permission. Moreover, Thomas said that all the witnesses who testified against her at the hearing were liars and that all the specifications contained in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action were fabrications.

Regarding the specification contained in the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action that she bumped into Warrick intentionally, purposefully, and violently, Thomas was emphatic that she never bumped into Warrick, let alone intentionally, purposefully, and violently. Thomas did not even allow for the possibility that she could have bumped into Warrick accidentally at some unknown time. As such, Thomas repeated that Warrick is a liar.

Discipline

Thomas has no prior discipline, save for a verbal reprimand for an unspecified incident that occurred in the reception area of the Department of Law on May 19, 2015. This was before her transfer to the Municipal Prosecutor's Office. According to its documentation, her conduct was deemed unprofessional and she was advised that any further conduct deemed unprofessional would result in a written warning.

Credibility

What Thomas said and what Warrick said at the hearing cannot both be true. Given the two options, the choice is clear: Warrick is the more credible witness and I accept her testimony as fact.

More pointedly, Warrick's testimony was straightforward, candid, and descriptive. It also rang true. What Thomas said, on the other hand, did not. Moreover, it was stunning in its denial.

For Thomas to refute every allegation, to call each witness a liar, and to deny every specification is incredible. She also did it with a cold and calm that smacked of insincerity and perfidy. The way she testified aside, I simply cannot accept Thomas's testimony that she never bumped into Warrick. Nor can I accept Thomas's testimony that she was never brought into a staff meeting to discuss her behavior.

Part of this assessment turns on whether either witness had a self-interest to lie. On this score, Thomas had a self-interest to lie to keep her job, whereas Warrick put her professional reputation on the line by complaining about Thomas and then having to testify about it. If anyone is a liar, it is Thomas.

Finally, in denying all allegations and specifications, and in denouncing Walker and Benjamin, Thomas provided a residuum of competent evidence for everything Walker and Benjamin said.

Given this discussion of the facts, I FIND that a preponderance of legally competent evidence exists to support all the specifications contained in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action—including the allegation that Thomas intentionally and violently bumped into Warrick without apology or explanation.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In appeals concerning major disciplinary action, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The burden of proof is by a preponderance of the evidence, Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962), and the hearing is de novo, Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 579 (1980). On such appeals, the Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty, N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19, and the concept of progressive discipline guides that determination, In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 483–86 (2007). Thus, an employee's prior disciplinary record is inherently relevant to determining an appropriate penalty for a subsequent offense, Id. at 483, and the question upon appellate review is whether such punishment is "so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness," Id. at 484 (quoting In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982) (internal quotes omitted)).

Progressive discipline may only be bypassed when the misconduct is severe, when it renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when the application of progressive discipline would be contrary to the public interest. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. at 33.

In this case, I found that a preponderance of legally competent evidence exists to support all the specifications contained in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action. Thomas created an atmosphere of hostility and uneasiness within the office, returned work to prosecutors, continually talked over the chief prosecutor when he talked to her, initiated unpleasant conversations with staff, was rude and nasty with the public, and was away from her desk without permission. Moreover, Thomas intentionally and violently bumped into Warrick without apology or explanation. Given this discussion of the law, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that Thomas violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency, or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), insubordination; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause.

Since some of the misconduct was severe—such as intentionally and violently bumping into Warrick without apology or explanation—I further CONCLUDE that Thomas is unsuitable for continuation in her position.

As a result, I CONCLUDE that progressive discipline should be bypassed, and that Thomas should be terminated from her position.

Indeed, application of progressive discipline would be contrary to the public interest.

ORDER

Given my findings of fact and conclusions of law, I ORDER that Thomas be terminated from her position as a telephone operator with the City of Newark.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-3628

IN THE MATTER OF PETER DELCOLLO,
SOUTH WOODS STATE PRISON
DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

John P. Morris, Esq., appearing for appellant, Peter Delcollo

Kathleen L. Krieger, Esq., appearing for respondent, South Woods State Prison, Department of Corrections pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(2)

Record Closed: January 22, 2018 Decided: March 8, 2018

BEFORE TAMA B. HUGHES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Peter Delcollo (Delcollo) an Institutional Trade Instructor 1, Cooking, with the respondent, South Woods State Prison (South Woods), Department of Corrections (DOC) appeals a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action and the forty-five-day suspension for: 1) Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); 2) Other Sufficient Cause (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12)); Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17 (as amended): C-4 - Verbal Abuse of an Inmate, Patients, Client, Resident or Employee; C-5 - Inappropriate Physical Contact or Mistreatment of an Inmate Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; C-11 - Conduct Unbecoming an Employee; C-24 - Threatening, intimidating, Harassing, Coercing or Interfering with a Fellow Employee on State Property. Respondent's basis for the suspension originates from appellant allegedly yelling, grabbing and hitting Senior Corrections Officer, Bethzaida Malpica (Malpica) while in the workplace in violation of the New Jersey Department of Corrections prevention of violence in the workplace policy.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 21, 2016, Delcollo was issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action ("PNDA") suspending him for forty-five days on a date to be determined. A departmental hearing was held on March 1, 2017, the result of which was the issuance of a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action ("FNDA") on March 29, 2017, suspending Delcollo for forty-five days. Delcollo requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, on May 31, 2017, to be heard as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. A prehearing conference was held on August 10, 2017 and thereafter, a Prehearing Order was entered on September 1, 2017. The matter was heard on December 6, 2017 and December 11, 2017. Upon receipt of written summations, the record closed on January 22, 2018.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Bethzaida Malpica (Malpica), testified that she has been in the corrections system since 1996 when she started working at the Cumberland County Jail. In 1998, she was hired at South Woods and has been employed there ever since. Throughout her employment at South Woods, she has held various positions and has worked in both the male and female populations. In 2015, she successfully bid into Facility 1 Kitchen (kitchen) as a kitchen officer. As part of her responsibilities, she oversees the inmates and civilians that work in the kitchen to ensure that the area is safe and secured.

According to Malpica, one of the civilians that worked in the kitchen in January 2016 was Delcollo who was an institutional trade instructor (ITI) for South Woods. As an ITI, Delcollo oversaw inmates assigned to him for the shift. Malpica, in turn, was responsible to oversee both Delcollo's position and the inmates assigned to the kitchen.

On January 3, 2016, inmates arrived for their shift in the kitchen. As part of their responsibilities/tasks, inmates cleaned dishes and assisted in preparing the meals. Starting around 2:10 p.m., when the inmates were done their tasks, she started releasing them to go back to their units through the inmate dining hall. As she was getting ready to go back into the kitchen area from the dining hall area, Delcollo approached her and grabbed her arm. According to Malpica, she demanded that he release her several times, but he insisted that he needed to talk to her, still holding her arm and pulling back into the dining hall. Delcollo was so close to her that the front of his body was up against the side of her body and his face was six inches from her face. Given how close he was, she could not get to her radio to call for assistance.

Malpica testified that she repeatedly told Delcollo to let her go as he was yelling at her questioning why she was disrupting his kitchen and commanding her to stop. As he was yelling at her, Delcollo was hitting her left forearm. After about ten minutes, Delcollo let her go, turned around and went back into the kitchen stating that he was going to call the Sergeant. Throughout the incident, because there were inmates in the area, she tried to stay focused and controlled. Malpica explained that Delcollo's conduct undermined her authority in the room which is very dangerous in a prison setting. In this case, she was concerned that inmates would attack either Delcollo or herself which could potentially lead to a riot. After Delcollo walked away, Malpica composed herself and finished her shift which ended around 3:15 p.m. – 3:30 p.m. During this time, inmates came up and asked her if she was okay. This added to her concern for Delcollo's safety as the inmate population does not take assaulting a female lightly.

At the end of her shift, when she was walking towards the officer's desk, Malpica saw Delcollo on the phone at the ITI desk which is located across the room. She assumed he was calling the sergeant. Seeing this, she went into the restroom and broke down. When she came out there were no supervisors in the area and due to her state of mind, she went home. At the time she mentally questioned whether Delcollo had actually called anyone.

Upon arrival at work the next day, she immediately went to speak to her Lieutenant, Sergeant and the Assistant Superintendent about the incident after which she was referred to the Special Investigation Division (SID) where she spoke to Senior Investigator Donna Alexander (Alexander). After speaking to Alexander, she wrote a "special" documenting the incident in which she noted that this was the second incident involving Delcollo. (R-3).

According to Malpica, in 2015, there was a prior incident with Delcollo wherein he started yelling and screaming at her in front of inmates over trays that had been delivered to the officer's desk by an inmate. Delcollo attempted to grab the trays back, causing him to invade her personal space by leaning across her to get to the trays. As Delcollo was attempting to grab the trays, she kept trying to push him away - telling him to get off.

On January 6, 2016, three days after the second incident, Malpica went to the Bridgeton Police Department (PD) and filed a report. (R-5). Accompanying her was a friend and fellow officer - Annie Palmer (Palmer). When she received a copy of the police report, she didn't read it right away however, when she did review it days later, she noticed a couple of discrepancies. On January 20, 2016, she contacted the police officer who took her initial statement and asked that the report be amended to clarify a couple of points. Specifically, that the prior incident with Delcollo was handled internally and second, that she had developed bruising on her arm because of the incident, which she herself photographed. Malpica informed the officer that the photos had been provided to the SID. According to Malpica, when she was at the PD to file the report, she rolled her sleeve up to show the officer her arm however, he stated that he did not see any bruising.

In describing how the incident affected her, Malpica stated that between the incident and having to go to court multiple times, she left her "bid" in the kitchen because of her stress and duress on the job.

On cross-examination, Malpica was questioned about the 2015 incident with Delcollo and her same day reporting of the matter to her supervisor. In response, Malpica stated that given the severity of that incident, she immediately reported the incident and the matter was resolved without a referral to SID. Two months later, the second incident occurred.

When questioned regarding the number of inmates that were present during the second incident, Malpica estimated that while there may have been twenty to twenty-two inmates in the area, there were none in the back dining room where she had been releasing them. No supervisor was present nor did she attempt to immediately contact one after the incident occurred. She did not report the incident to anyone on that date including the other officer who was at the officer's podium, given her frame of mind. Malpica reiterated the incident, adding that when he grabbed her left arm, he continued to hit her forearm until he finished saying what he had to say. When she kept telling him to let go, he would state, "Oh, come on now, it doesn't hurt."

Malpica was also questioned about the "special" which she filed and why information such as Delcollo's body touching hers was left out and the fact that she couldn't reach her radio. In response Malpica stated that it happened the way she testified however she did not put it in the "special." Regarding her delay in filing a criminal complaint against Delcollo, she stated that initially she was too distraught to go to the police and wanted to keep the matter internal, however ultimately decided to file a complaint. She continued to work in the kitchen until she could put in a "bid" to another location which was several months later. Delcollo was not working in the kitchen during this time as he had been transferred to another location the day after the incident.

In going through the IAD report and her statement that she (Malpica) would be filing a complaint against Delcollo after work that day, Malpica stated that she delayed in filing a complaint because she wanted the matter to be handled internally. Regarding her statement that she did not recall seeing any witnesses to the incident, she was referencing "custody" witnesses or fellow officers, not inmate witnesses. According to Malpica, there were a number of inmates present when the second incident occurred. She could not recall if she provided the names of the inmates to Alexander during their meeting nor did she mention inmate witnesses when she went to the PD.

When questioned about the changes to the police report, Malpica admitted that she did not immediately review the report after she picked it up. When she finally read the report, she noticed that a couple of items were not as she described them to the officer. Specifically, the first incident with Delcollo needed to be clarified and the fact that she did have bruising. According to Malpica, the officer did not want to see her arm when she attempted to pull her sleeve up - he only wanted to know if she had any pain. While she took pictures on January 7, 2016 – four days after the incident and the day after she went to the PD, she did not send the photos to the police. Malpica could not recall if she showed Alexander the bruises on her arm.

Throughout her testimony, Malpica appeared extremely anxious, physically shaking at times and tearful. She would not make eye contact, looking straight ahead when responding to questions.

Annie Marie Palmer (Palmer), testified that she has been employed by South Woods for over twenty years and is currently a Senior Corrections Officer in Facility 1. Palmer has known and been friends with Malpica for approximately eight years. Palmer became aware of the incident after she received a call on January 6, 2016, from a distraught Malpica who told her what had occurred on January 3, 2016. Specifically, how Delcollo got in her space; grabbed her; and told her how to do her job – all in front of inmates. After speaking to Malpica on the phone, Palmer met her at which time Malpica again described the incident and showed Palmer her arm. After seeing her arm, Palmer told Malpica that her authority had been undermined in front of the inmates and that she could not let the matter ride and needed to go to the police.

Palmer stated that after work that day, she accompanied Malpica to the PD. When they got to the station and prior to going in, Palmer took a picture of Malpica's arm and sent it to her. When they were called to go in for an interview, it appeared that the officer was in training given the fact that he was being walked through the process by a senior police officer. At one point, the younger officer asked Malpica if she was in pain. When Malpica tried to pull her sleeve up and show him the bruising on her arm, the officer told her that that was not necessary.

On cross-examination, Palmer stated that Malpica did not tell her that she had spoken to SID until after she met her on January 6, 2016. Additionally, while Malpica told Palmer that the incident occurred in front of inmates, she did not mention their names.

Donna Alexander (Alexander), testified that she has been employed by DOC for twenty years and has been in the SID as a Senior Investigator since 1998. Prior to taking her current position and throughout the years since she has been in SID, Alexander has attended multiple training seminars relevant to her position. As part of her current responsibilities, she conducts administrative as well as criminal investigations.

Alexander became aware that an incident had occurred on January 3, 2016, when Malpica came to see her on January 4, 2016 and reported an incident of workplace harassment between her and Delcollo. After speaking briefly to Malpica, she had Malpica speak to Cline to see if it was an Equal Employment Division (EED) matter. Cline determined it was not an EED matter and referred Malpica back to SID. Malpica returned to SID on January 5, 2016, at which time Alexander requested that she write a statement. The statement was handwritten due to Malpica being too emotional to talk about the incident.

In speaking to Malpica, Alexander learned that on January 3, 2016, around 2:10 p.m., Malpica was approached by Delcollo who starting yelling at her, questioning why she was sending back his inmates. After informing Delcollo that the inmates were just sitting around, Delcollo told her that it wasn't her job to send his inmates back – her job was to ensure safety and security in the kitchen. According to Malpica, Delcollo, who was directly in her space, grabbed her arm and started hitting it with his fingers. Malpica told Delcollo several times to back off but he did not. While Malpica stated that there were inmates in the area, she could not recall their names. Malpica did not report any injuries at the time of the interview.

After speaking to Malpica, Alexander testified that she obtained a copy of the inmate kitchen detail list for January 3, 2016, interviewed several of the inmates, and synopsized their statements in her report. (R-2). On January 3, 2016, there were two officers on shift and approximately twenty to thirty inmates in the kitchen area. Alexander went on to state that one of the concerns when there is a conflict between custody and non-custody civilians is that it creates a problem for the inmates – particularly if one of the participants in the conflict is a female. If a female is involved, the inmates going forward will view her differently - approach her in a more hostile manner because they sense a weakness. That is why there is a zero-tolerance policy. Alexander further commented that it is important for an officer and the ITI to work together and be cordial, as it can go bad very quickly if inmates get involved.

Also interviewed was Delcollo who informed her that after Officer Bauman (Bauman) informed him that Malpica was releasing inmates, he went to her and asked why she was releasing the inmates back to their units. In response, she stated that they were not doing anything, so she released them. According to Delcollo, he did not touch Malpica or raise his voice. As the interview was ending, Delcollo commented that he may have raised his voice a little.

In describing the kitchen area as part of her testimony, Alexander provided a physical descriptor of the kitchen area, commenting on the row of refrigerators, ovens and tables. Equipment in the kitchen included heavy pots, pans and utensils. Alexander stated that if an altercation broke out, the equipment in the kitchen could be used as a weapon.

On cross-examination, Alexander testified that there were no photographs of Malpica's arm in or attached to her report. While Malpica showed her photographs of her arm on her phone which showed marks and bruising, by the time copies were provided, her report had been finalized. Alexander could not say for certain that the pictures provided were of Malpica's arm. Additionally, the only PD report that she received from Malpica was the initial report, dated January 6, 2016, not the supplemental report, dated January 20, 2016.

Christopher Cline (Cline), testified that he started with the DOC in 1997 and worked his way up the ranks to his current position in 2014 of Assistant Superintendent. Among his responsibilities, he oversees: social services; mental health; is the EED Ethics Liaison; and reviews the policies and procedures when incident happen to make sure that protocol was properly followed.

Cline became aware of the January 3, 2016, incident between Malpica and Delcollo when Malpica was referred from IAD to his office to determine if there was an EED component to the complaint. Specifically, if there was a violation of any of the protected categories (age, gender, sex, religion, military status, pregnancy). Malpica was provided an EED packet which she filled out and forwarded to the Director's office for handling. Thereafter, the matter was investigated by SID who handled the investigation and submitted a report to the Administrator who in turn sends it to the Office of Employee Relations (OER). The OER determines what if any charges should be brought and appropriate sanctions.

Cline testified that he reviewed the SID report and in so doing, noted a couple of things. First, there was an allegation that Delcollo grabbed and hit Malpica. Delcollo by his own admission stepped into her personal space. According to Cline, officers are trained to have at least an arms-length protection when they are around any aggressors be it inmates or civilians. This is to enable the officer to protect themselves. This is particularly important in a kitchen area where there are lots of potential weapons and multiple inmates doing multiple things. As such, an officer must stay focused always on the inmates and surroundings.

Second, there was an allegation of yelling which is not professional and is not tolerated – the DOC has a zero tolerance of such conduct. The DOC's zero tolerance policy includes any type of harassment, violence (threat or actual), intimidation (verbal and non-verbal). The DOC has a Prevention of Violence in the Workplace Policy (Policy) which all employees receive. (R-6; R-7).

In looking at the allegations and the Policy, Cline stated that assuming the alleged conduct was true, Delcollo's conduct by stepping into Malpica's personal space and yelling at her would constitute "intimidation." Hitting Malpica on her arm would also violate the policy. The policy is particularly applicable to all individuals who work in areas where there is contact with potentially violent inmates. (R-6). Cline went on to state that it is not unusual for a victim of workplace violence to wait a day or so to report the incident.

Cline testified that the DOC, under Human Resource Bulletin (HRB) 84-17 has a disciplinary action policy. (J-3). Under Section (C)(4) there is an offense titled "Personal Conduct – Verbal Abuse" which carries a potential penalty of five days up to removal for the first infraction. Under Section (C)(5) there is an offense titled "Personal Conduct – Inappropriate Physical Contact or Mistreatment of an . . . Employee" which carries a potential penalty of official written reprimand (OWR) up to removal. Under Section (C)(11) there is an offense titled "Personal Conduct – Conduct Unbecoming An Employee" which carries a penalty of three days suspension up to removal for the first infraction. Under Section (C)(24) there is an offense titled "Personal Conduct – Threatening, Intimidating, Harassing, Coercing, or Interfering With Fellow Employees on State Property" which carries a penalty of official written reprimand up to removal.

On cross-examination, Cline admitted that other than in his capacity as the Assistant Administrator, he is not involved in the SID report or determining sanctions. His only role in this matter was to provide Malpica with a EED packet. In review of the SID report which was sent to him, he found that what Malpica wrote in her "special" was consistent with what she told him when they met. Cline could not say whether Delcollo was asked to submit a "special" as he did not control the investigation - that was SID's purview.

Mark Yoshioka (Yoshikoa), testified that he was hired by the Bridgeton Police Department in June 2015, as a Patrolman however, has since been promoted to Detective. In January 2016, he was in his second month on the job having just returned after attending the Police Academy. As a new officer, he was assigned to a field training officer who worked with him on the departmental policies and procedures.

On January 6, 2016, he was dispatched to take a walk-in report by a complainant who was a corrections officer at South Woods. He and his training officer, Patrolman Broomall (Broomall) met with Malpica and her friend Palmer. According to Yoshioka, it was his investigation however, he was being supervised by Broomall who was present throughout the interview.

During the interview, Malpica stated that while at her post in the kitchen area, Delcollo approached her and grabbed her left forearm. When she told him to get off, he started striking her left forearm telling her that he was the boss. This went on for approximately ten minutes. When questioned why she delayed in reporting, Malpica stated that she was dealing with personal issues but had already reported the matter to the SID. In asking if she had pain, Malpica stated "yes." When asked if she had marks on her arm, Malpica who was wearing a long sleeve shirt, looked at her arm and told him that she did not have any visible injuries at that time. He did not request to see or look at her arm himself. Malpica also described an earlier incident in 2015, after an inmate brought food trays to her desk and Delcollo running up behind her - yelling and grabbing at the trays. According to Yoshioka, Malpica was very upset throughout the interview. At the end of the interview, Malpica signed a complaint against Delcollo for harassment and aggravated assault. Yoshioka generated an Investigation Report (IR) outlining the interview with Malpica and closed the case. (R-5).

On January 20, 2016, Yoshioka received a call from Malpica who wanted to clarify information in the IR – regarding the first incident with Delcollo in 2015; the reason she waited to report the incident to the PD was due to personal issues; and that she did later develop bruising on her arm, photos of which she provided to SID. A supplemental IR was generated based upon the call. (R-5).

Peter Delcollo (Delcollo), testified that he has been with the DOC since 2004 as an ITI. In January 2016, he was assigned to the Facility 1 kitchen area where he was responsible for working with and training inmates in different aspects of cooking, kitchen sanitation and trash removal. He also handles the evening meal for all of the officers as well as the inmates of which there are nine hundred and ninety-two.

Delcollo explained that the kitchen area has three sections - the Officer's Dining Room (ODR); the kitchen area itself; and the old dining room which is used for food staging. The kitchen itself contains industrial size refrigeration units and hot boxes, ovens, sinks and fans for heat. He described the kitchen area as noisy.

On Sunday, January 3, 2016, he was the only ITI working in the kitchen area however, two officers were working, Malpica and Bauman. While on break around 2:15 p.m. or 2:20 p.m., he was approached by Bauman who informed him that Malpica had sent two of his inmates back to their unit. According to Delcollo, he has a regular roster of inmates that work a specific shift every day. On this particular day, given the menu, there were two workers/inmates that he would typically keep back to assist in clean up. These were among the inmates that Malpica had sent back to their units.

After hearing this, he approached Malpica who was near the officer's desk, located in the kitchen and asked to speak to her. In response, Malpica went towards the old dining room, located off the kitchen and stood in the doorway with her back facing the old dining room. He was on the other side of the doorway with his back facing the kitchen. No one else was present in the area at that time.

Delcollo stated that he questioned Malpica why she was sending the workers/inmates back as she knew he needed them specifically stating: "Why are you constantly interfering with my job? Let me do my job and you do yours." According to Delcollo, Malpica's job was safety and security and her responsibilities were to take care of the trash that goes out and things in the back. Malpica responded by telling him that he could not tell her how to run the kitchen and "went off" at which point Delcollo called her "crazy" and told her that he was going to call the sergeant. He walked away and went to the ITI desk, located across from the officer's desk in the kitchen, and called for a sergeant. At no time did he yell at Malpica; grab her arm; pull her; strike her; or get in her face. Delcollo admitted however, that he had to speak louder than normal to Malpica due to the fans and other kitchen noise. The whole conversation took three or four minutes.

After receiving a call from Delcollo, Sergeant Conti (Conti) came to the Kitchen area where they met in the ODR. Delcollo explained what had happened and informed Conti that he was "...tired of the way Malpica tries to control everything and run everything." After assuring Conti that he could finish out his shift which ended at 6:30 p.m., and that he would address the issue with the regular weekday Sergeant (Sheppard), he went back to work.

Upon his arrival to work the next day, he was informed he had been transferred to another kitchen facility ultimately ending up in Kitchen Facility 2 in March 2016. He later learned that his transfer was due to the complaint filed by Malpica. Delcollo noted that he was not contacted by SID until mid-March 2016 and never asked to write up a "special". He additionally commented that Malpica bid into the same kitchen as the one he is currently working in, last December 2016.

In describing the 2015 incident, Delcollo stated that one of the things that ITI's request is that no food comes out of the ODR without first checking with the ITI. This is to ensure that there is enough food for officers and staff. On that particular occasion, he saw an inmate place two trays of food on the officer's desk. When questioned, the inmate stated that Malpica had requested them. He got up and took the trays off the desk. When Malpica found out, she called Sheppard who came down and spoke to them and requested that they just try to get along. The first he heard Malpica state that he reached over her and grabbed the tray was when she testified at the hearing.

On cross-examination, Delcollo admitted that "custody" was in charge of the inmates and safety and security in the kitchen. Custody was also in charge of letting inmates in and out of the kitchen area. On January 3, 2016, he wanted to talk to Malpica about what had occurred. The only reason he asked her to step away was because Malpica had previously asked him to take her aside if there was ever an issue. When he spoke to her, he was a foot away. When challenged on this, Delcollo's statement changed and he stated the distance between them was between six to eight inches however, he was not in "her face". While his voice was louder than normal conversation, it was because of the noise of the kitchen. He went on to state that he was not angry at Malpica for releasing his inmates, he was "frustrated" because it was an ongoing issue. Delcollo again reiterated that no inmates were in the area where he and Malpica were speaking.

FINDINGS

Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and may also reject testimony when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Similarly, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the . . . [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Cmty. Affairs Dep't, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

After hearing the testimony presented and review of the documentary evidence submitted, and having had an opportunity to observe the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND as FACT that the testimony presented by Malpica, while melodramatic at times, to be credible in that an incident occurred between herself and Delcollo on January 3, 2016. I FIND Alexander's testimony to be credible in that she performed an extensive investigation, which included interviews of officers and inmates. Two inmates, whose interviews were taped, substantiated Malpica's version of events. One officer, Bauman, provided a written statement. None of these individuals were present to testify.

Their interviews, as well as the totality of Alexander's investigation, were outlined in her SID report.

Hearsay is admissible in an administrative proceeding, per N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5, which provides as follows:

Subject to the Judge's discretion to exclude evidence under N.J.A.C. 1:1-15(c) or a valid claim of privilege, hearsay evidence shall be admissible in the trial of contested cases. Hearsay evidence which is admitted shall be accorded whatever weight the Judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and generally, its reliability.

Notwithstanding the admissibility of hearsay evidence, some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b) recites what is commonly referred to as the residuum rule, which is best described in Justice Francis' foundational opinion for the New Jersey Supreme Court in Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 50-51 (1972):

> It is common practice for administrative agencies to receive hearsay evidence at their hearings . . . As Judge Learned Hand said for the Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit in NLRB v. Remington Rand, Inc., 94 F.2d 862, 873 (1938), mere rumor would not support a board finding, "but hearsay may do so, at least if more is not conveniently available, and if in the end the finding is supported by the kind of evidence on which responsible persons are accustomed to rely in serious affairs." And see, Goldsmith v. Kingsford, 92 N.H. 442, 32 A.2d 810 (1943) ... However, in our State as well as in many other jurisdictions, the rule is that the fact finding or a legal determination cannot be based upon hearsay alone. Hearsay may not be employed to corroborate competent proof, or competent proof may be supported or given added probative force by hearsay testimony. But, in the final analysis for a court to sustain an administrative decision, which effects the substantial rights of a party, there must a residuum of legal and competent evidence in the record to support it.

Here, competent evidence was presented to support Malpica's claims and Alexander's findings in her report by Delcollo himself. Delcollo testified that he was informed by Bauman that inmates had been released by Malpica. This was consistent with Bauman's report. Delcollo testified that he immediately got up from where he was sitting and went to find Malpica as he was "frustrated" with her. This too was consistent with Bauman's report. Upon finding her, he questioned why she was interfering with his job and told her to do her own job. This was consistent with Delcollo's testimony, the inmates taped statements and Malpica's testimony. Delcollo initially testified that he was an arm's length away from Malpica but subsequently changed the distance to six or eight inches. This was consistent with both Alexander's report wherein Delcollo's admitted to her that he may have been "too close" to Malpica and Malpica's testimony that he was in "her space." Delcollo further testified that he had to speak "loudly" due to the kitchen equipment and that Malpica "went off." This statement was inconsistent with his statement to Alexander, wherein he at first stated that he never raised his voice but then later stated that there may have been a point in time that he raised his voice. Malpica testified that the incident lasted approximately ten minutes. This is consistent with Bauman's written statement.

I FIND that on January 3, 2016, Malpica, in accordance with her job responsibilities, commenced sending inmates back to their units upon completion of their duties in the kitchen area. I FIND that Delcollo, upon learning of this fact, became angry and immediately went to confront Malpica. I further FIND that in confronting Malpica, Delcollo was at least six to eight inches from Malpica if not closer, which caused physical contact between the two. I FIND that Delcollo grabbed Malpica's left forearm however, no credible evidence was presented that such action caused bruising.

I FIND that when Delcollo confronted Malpica, he did so in the presence of inmates and/or in utter disregard of whether any were present. I FIND that Malpica was distraught as a result of the incident. I FIND that in a prison setting, a unified workforce is absolutely required to ensure the safety of inmates and personnel working in the area. Any demonstration of weakness or lack of respect, will undermine a correction officer's authority. I FIND that the DOC has a zero-tolerance policy for harassment, intimidation, violence or threats of violence by or against employees in the workplace.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

A civil service employee's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12.6. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is to be liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointment and broad tenure protection. See Essex Council Number 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex Cnty. Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). The Act also recognizes that the public policy of this state is to provide public officials with appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority in order that they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). A public employee who is thus protected by the provisions of the Civil Service Act may nonetheless be subject to major discipline for a wide variety of offenses connected to his or her employment. The general causes for such discipline are enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3.

In an appeal concerning major disciplinary action, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to show that the action taken was justified. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). This applies to both permanent career service employees and those in their working test period relative to such issues as removal, suspension, or fine and disciplinary demotion. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-14, 2-6. The State has the burden to establish by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

This matter involves a major disciplinary action brought by South Woods against Delcollo seeking a forty-five-day suspension. Specifically, Delcollo has been charged with the following offenses: 1) Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); 2) Other Sufficient Cause (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12)); HRB 84-17 (as amended): (C)(4) - Verbal Abuse of an Inmate, Patients, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(5) - Inappropriate Physical Contact or Mistreatment of an Inmate Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(11) - Conduct Unbecoming an Employee; (C)(24) -Threatening, Intimidating, Harassing, Coercing or Interfering with a Fellow Employee on State Property.

Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee is found under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); See also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, Supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

The "incident" giving rise to the FNDA identifies the following basis for the sustained charges:

> On January 3, 2016, you confronted SCO Malpica in Facility 1 Kitchen. You were reported to have argued with/yelled at SCO Malpica, grabbed the SCO's arm and hit it and stood very close to the SCO invading her personal space. The incident was reported to SID and an investigation was done due to allegations of work place violence. The investigation revealed witnesses to the incident of yelling, grabbing and hitting. You admitted to standing too close to the SCO and raising your voice.

Delcollo's argument centers on credibility or lack thereof on the part of Malpica. For the reasons cited above - I disagree.

In a prison setting, it is imperative that rules are followed and discipline is maintained at all times given the inherent danger should either be disrupted. Here, it is undisputed that Delcollo, angry over the fact that Malpica was releasing "his" inmates, confronted Malpica in the kitchen area where inmates were still present; started yelling at her, stood inches from her face and grabbed her arm to emphasize his point. Such conduct caused emotional distress to Malpica, but also undermined her authority in front of the inmate population.

Under the circumstances presented here, Delcollo displayed a significant lack of judgment in confronting, yelling and inappropriately touching Malpica, thereby violating his obligations and duties. I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's behavior did rise to a level of Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

The second charge against Delcollo was Other Sufficient Cause (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)12).

There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for Other Sufficient Cause. Other Sufficient Cause is generally defined in the charges against appellant. The charge of Other Sufficient Cause has been dismissed when "respondent has not given any substance to the allegation" Simmons v. City of Newark, CSV 9122-99, Initial Decision (February 22, 2006), adopted, Comm'r (April 26, 2006), <hjttp://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv9122-99.pdf>.

In this case, as set forth more fully above, respondent has given substance to the allegations set forth in the FNDA. As such, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this charge.

Delcollo has also been charged with violating HRB 84-17, as amended; (C)(4) Verbal Abuse of an Inmate, Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(5) Inappropriate Physical Contact or Mistreatment of an Inmate Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(11) Conduct Unbecoming an Employee; (C)(24) Threatening, Intimidating, Harassing, Coercing or Interfering with Fellow Employees on State Property;

HRB 84-17, as amended, provides in pertinent part as follows:

> In any disciplinary matter, reference must always be made to the collective bargaining agreement covering the disciplined employee, relevant Department of Personnel Rules, appropriate Department bulletins or memoranda, the Handbook of Information and Rules for Employees of New Jersey Department of Corrections, and/or the Law Enforcement Personnel Rules and Regulations.

First, pursuant to HRB 84-17, as amended, Delcollo was required to follow all policies established by the DOC and as it relates to this case - The Prevention of Violence in the Workplace Policy. (R-6).

Under the policy, harassment or intimidation means "behavior or communication designed or intended to intimidate, menace or frighten another person." Behavior or communication can take the form of both verbal and non-verbal action.

In this instance, Delcollo's actions of stepping into Malpica's personal space - so close that his body came into physical contact with her; yelling at her; and grabbing her arm, were intended to intimidate, menace or frighten Malpica.

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's conduct was in violation of (C)(4).

The Policy defines physical assault to mean "unwanted or hostile physical contact including, but not limited to, hitting, fighting, pushing, shoving or throwing objects."

For the reasons cited above, I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's conduct was in violation of (C)(5).

Workplace violence under the Policy includes but is not limited to "the utterance of threats and/or the display of threatening behavior, harassment, intimidation, physical assault or intentional property damage".

Delcollo's conduct fell within the purview of this definition and constitutes Conduct Unbecoming an Employee.

For the reasons cited above, I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's conduct was in violation of (C)(11).

With regard to violation of (C)(24), for the reasons cited above, it is undisputed that Delcollo's conduct rose to the level of Intimidation, Harassment and Interference of a Fellow Employee on State Property.

I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's conduct was in violation of (C)(24) by Intimidating, Harassing and Interfering with a Fellow Employee on State Property

PENALTY

In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

Delcollo has been found guilty of Unbecoming Conduct, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); Other Sufficient Cause, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12); violations of HRB 84-17 (as amended): (C)(4) – Verbal Abuse of an Inmate, Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(5) – Inappropriate Physical Contact or Mistreatment of an Inmate Patient, Client, Resident or Employee; (C)(11) – Conduct Unbecoming an Employee; (C)(24) – Threatening, Intimidating, Harassing, Coercing or Interfering with a Fellow Employee on State Property.

A forty-five-day suspension was imposed against Delcollo for his actions. While Delcollo has no prior disciplinary history, given the egregiousness of his conduct - imposition of major discipline is warranted.[1] (R-8).

[1] In 2011, Delcollo received a Letter of Counselling which does not rise to the level of formal disciplinary action.

The DOC's Policy is a zero-tolerance policy which was put in place to prevent employees from being harassed, threatened, intimidated or assaulted in the workplace setting. Delcollo's actions against Malpica were not only in direct violation of the Policy but were in utter disregard of the order, discipline, safety and security that must be stringently maintained in a correctional facility.

Having considered the proofs offered in this matter and having given due deference to the concept of progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that Delcollo's misbehavior on January 3, 2016, was so significant as to warrant the forty-five-working-day suspension imposed by the appointing authority, which, in part, is meant to impress upon him, as well as others, the seriousness of his infractions.

ORDER

I ORDER that the action of the respondent in imposing a forty-five-day working-day suspension on Delcollo is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matter of Joseph Ehiosa
Hunterdon Developmental Center,
Department of Human Services

CSC DKT. NO. 2017-3550
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07315-17

DECISION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 20, 2018 BW

The appeal of Joseph Ehiosa, Cottage Training Technician, Hunterdon Developmental Center, Department of Human Services, removal effective January 6, 2017, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Catherine A. Tuohy, who rendered her initial decision on March 14, 2018 reversing the removal. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 18, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

Since the removal has been reversed, the appellant is entitled to mitigated back pay, benefits and seniority for the period of separation to the actual date of reinstatement. See N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Additionally, the appellant is entitled to reasonable counsel fees pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Public Safety, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. Feb. 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay or counsel fees are finally resolved. In the interim, as the court states in Phillips, supra, if it has not already done so, upon receipt of this decision, the appointing authority shall immediately reinstate the appellant to his permanent position.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was not justified. The Commission therefore reverses that action and grants the appeal of Joseph Ehiosa. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted back pay, benefits, and seniority for the period of separation to the actual date of reinstatement. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

The Commission further orders that counsel fees be awarded to the attorney for appellant pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12. An affidavit of services in support of reasonable counsel fees shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2.12, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay and counsel fees. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay or counsel fee dispute.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay and counsel fees within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter shall be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07315-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-3550

IN THE MATTER OF JOSEPH EHIOSA,
DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES,
HUNTERDON DEVELOPEMENT CENTER.

John F. McDonnell, Esq., for appellant (McDonnell, Artigliere, P.C., attorneys)

Rimma Razhba, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Gurbir S. Grewal, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: January 29, 2017 Decided: March 14, 2018

BEFORE CATHERINE A. TUOHY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Joseph Ehiosa, a Cottage Training Technician (CTT) at the Hunterdon Developmental Center (HDC), Department of Human Services (DHS), respondent appeals his removal, effective January 6, 2017 for alleged violations of various internal rules and policies including physical abuse of a client (C3.1); inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a client (C5.1); any improper conduct which violates common decency (C11.1); and violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure or administrative decision (E1.1). Appellant was also charged with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), Failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 6, 2017, and revised and amended on February 22, 2017, respondent issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (R-8) setting forth the charges and specifications made against the appellant. After a departmental hearing on March 22, 2017, the respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (R-9) on April 18, 2017 sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice and removing appellant from employment, effective January 6, 2017. Appellant appealed on April 25, 2017 and the matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on May 22, 2017 for a hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on September 26 and September 28, 2017. The record remained open to allow the parties to submit post-hearing submissions and the record closed on November 28, 2017. The record was reopened to allow for submission of the internal policies referred to in the notices of discipline. The record closed on January 29, 2018 after receipt of the New Jersey Department of Human Services Disciplinary Action Program (R-23).

FACTUAL DISCUSSIONS AND FINDINGS

Irene Carozza testified on behalf of the respondent. She is employed by the HDC as a Supervisor of Professional and Residential Services (SPR) and has held this position for the past two and a half years. She has worked for the state for twenty-three years. HDC provides twenty-four hour total care for developmentally disabled adults that reside in the facility. Cottage Training Technicians are direct care staff and take care of the residents that thy are assigned. HDC Administrative Procedure # 30 is their procedure for abuse, neglect and mistreatment and how to report same (R-1). HDC has a zero tolerance for abuse. If an allegation of abuse is substantiated, the person is removed from employment because their main goal is to protect their residents. Physical abuse is defined as "a physical act directed at a service recipient by a DHS employee, volunteer, intern, or consultant/contractor of a type that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish and/or suffering. Such acts include but are not limited to the service recipient being kicked, pinched, bitten, punched, slapped, hit, pushed, dragged, and/ or struck with a thrown or held object." (R-1, page 1). The staff are trained on physical abuse and on reporting abuse. The supervisor, the DHS, and the Office of Program Integrity and Accountability (OPIA) are all notified. An investigator is assigned to the case to conduct an investigation to determine whether the allegations of abuse are substantiated or unsubstantiated. If allegations of abuse are substantiated, removal proceedings are initiated. There is no progressive discipline for instances of abuse of a client. The HDC October 3, 2016 Memorandum dealing with the Mistreatment of Clients summarizes the policy regarding abuse and neglect which is provided to all employees. Mr. Ehiosa signed and acknowledged that he read the policy and understands the content of the Memorandum (R-2). Direct care employees receive an overview of "handle with care" techniques (R-17) which is a state approved physical restraint policy that allows employees to control a violent client. Physical control techniques shall be used in an emergency to control an individual to protect them or others from harm.

A 'code green' is called when a client is in a crisis situation or having a behavioral episode and assistance is needed. This request is made by telephone and announced over the loudspeaker. Employees are also made aware of each client's "Behavior Support Plan" (BHP). The employees receive in-service training by the psychology department as to the target behaviors of each client that they care for. Mr. Ehiosa was a CTT at cottage 20 where client J.C. resided. He received in-service training as to resident J.C.'s BHP which indicated that J.C. engages in aggressive and self-injurious behavior (R-3). He also received numerous classes from staff development at HDC, including handle with care training on May 31, 2016 and preventing abuse and neglect on July 8, 2016 (R-4).

On cross-examination, Ms. Carozza admitted that there are certain times when a direct care worker can touch a client in order to prevent injury to themselves or others. Grabbing or pulling a client to prevent the client from hurting themselves is not a permissible handle with care technique. Blocking a kick would be appropriate if a client is kicking you, but you cannot grab their legs.

Enock Berluche, testified on behalf of the respondent. He has been employed by HDC since 2003 and currently holds the title of Habitation Program Coordinator (HPC). He coordinates services for all of their clients, including doctor visits, psychological services and oversees all of the resident's treatment plans. He has provided training for direct care staff and is a certified trainer of the "Handle with Care" program developed by Bruce Chapman. The initial training is two days, eight hours each day. There is a recertification class that is four hours long. Handle with care is a program that uses self - defense techniques to get out of grabs and holds. It is intended to not be punitive, but to keep staff and clients safe. All CTTs are instructed in handle with care techniques and take a refresher course each year. The grabbing and pulling of a client is not an approved technique. If a client is in a state of crisis, blocks or a physical control technique can be used. If a client is just yelling, they can just be let be or attempts made to verbally redirect them. Intervention is not required until a client becomes a danger to themselves or staff. If a client is posing a threat to themselves or someone else, a physical control technique (PCT) could be employed. One of these techniques involves coming from behind a client and giving them a chest bump, then placing hands over their shoulders and under their arms, with the palm of the hands on the side of the client's back. The client would be held tight until they calm down for up to fifty minutes. The client can also be brought down to their knees in this hold. If a client is in a serious crisis, the supine position is employed which requires two staff members to implement. The client would be lying flat on their back and the staff member would be lying on their stomach with their shoulder in the crease of the client's shoulder. An ariel view of this position would resemble a "T". Physical control techniques are used as a last resort. If a client is attempting suicide by trying to wrap a cord around his neck, Mr. Berluche would remove the cord off his neck or apply a restraint if he could not remove it. There is a code green procedure to call for assistance. If an attempt to redirect a client is unsuccessful, a code green can be called which involves dialing extension 1400 on the phone. The operator will announce the code overhead on the radio and people will respond to assist. A code green can also be called in anticipation of a problem to prevent one from occurring.

Mr. Berluche is familiar with client J.C. He has never seen J.C. hiding under his bed or on top of his bed. He has heard reports of this fact but never witnessed it. If J.C. was hurting himself Mr. Berluche would call for help or move the bed. If J.C. was not hurting himself, Mr. Berluche would attempt to talk him out from under the bed. Mr. Berluche recalls the incident involving appellant and J.C. It was close to the end of his shift and he received a call from the cottage training supervisor (CTS) Jacinta Goodwin to go to cottage 20. He was on his way there with another staff member, Kathy Kyne when he saw Joseph Ehiosa leaving to head to the unit office. Ms. Kyne proceeded to cottage 20 and Mr. Berluche walked with appellant and asked him what had happened. Mr. Ehiosa stated that he grabbed J.C. by the ankles. He demonstrated that he put his hands forward with his hands open and he stated he grabbed him by the ankles. He said J.C. was under the bed and he had to get him out. The incident was documented by an HDC-15 form which is a confidential incident report (R-5). According to the incident report, on January 3, 2017 at 7:55 a.m. Jacinta Goodwin, CTS reported to Mr. Berluche that J.C. accused Mr. Ehiosa of choking him and dragging him out of his room by his neck. J.C. had redness around his neck. The supervisor Kathy Kyne reviewed the incident report and completed the form (R-5). Mr. Berluche prepared a confidential incident statement the same day (R-6). Mr. Berluche stated that Mr. Ehiosa admitted to him that he had grabbed J.C. by the ankles in an attempt to prevent him from crawling underneath the bed (R-6). Mr. Berluche recalls being interviewed by an investigator from the Office of Integrity, an outside organization that investigates allegations of abuse. Mr. Berluche provided a written statement to the investigator, dated February 2, 2017 (R-7) which indicated that Mr. Ehiosa told Mr. Berluche that he grabbed J.C. by the ankles.

On cross-examination, Mr. Berluche stated that Mr. Ehiosa told him that he grabbed J.C. by the ankles but never said that he pulled J.C. Mr. Berluche made a point of telling the investigator, Kyle Smith that Mr. Ehiosa never said that he pulled J.C. by the ankles. Mr. Berluche received a call from Mr. Ehiosa's supervisor, Jacinta Goodwin who was the cottage training supervisor of cottage 20, that J.C. made an abuse allegation against Mr. Ehiosa. This occurred at approximately 7:50 and the shift ended at 8:00 a.m. Mr. Berluche did not recall Ms. Goodwin advising him that J.C. claimed that Mr. Ehiosa choked him and dragged him out of his room and down the hallway. Mr. Berluche admitted that one of the responsibilities of a direct care worker is to keep a client safe and to prevent a client from harming themselves. Mr. Berluche was asked what the difference was between a hold and a grab and Mr. Berluche indicated that a 'grab' implies an aggressive act. He explained that he 'holds' his wife but would 'grab' his child to prevent them from running into the street. Nothing in the handle with care policy is aggressive. It is self-defensive and the purpose is to keep the individual safe. There are training materials for the "Handle with Care" procedures that describes the various moves and how to do each of the moves. He had not seen that document at the hearing.

Kathy D. Kyne testified on behalf of the respondent. She has been employed by the HDC for thirty-four years and has been an Assistant Supervisor of Professional and Residential Services (ASPR) for three years. She is in charge of two buildings and makes sure the clients are being taken care of and procedures are being followed. Ms. Kyne identified R-5 as their "Unusual Incident Report" or HDC-15 form. She filled out section two of the report and prepared the narrative. Ms. Kyne indicated that Jacinta Goodwin had reported that client J.C. indicated that Mr. Ehiosa grabbed client J.C. by the neck and dragged him out of the room into the hallway. She noted that there was a red line on J.C.'s neck. Ms. Kyne indicated that Mr. Ehiosa stated that J.C. had just received his medications and when Mr. Ehiosa noticed J.C. was not with the group he went looking for J.C. and found him under his bed. He lifted the bed to help J.C. out from under the bed, but J.C. would not come out. Mr. Ehiosa grabbed his feet to get him out from under the bed. Ms. Kyne explained that Mr. Ehiosa has a heavy accent and is sometimes difficult to understand.

On cross-examination, Ms. Kyne admitted that she did not write in her report that Mr. Ehiosa stated he pulled J.C.

Mark Piccolo testified on behalf of the respondent. He has been employed by the HDC for ten years, the last five years as a staff clinical psychologist. He writes behavioral support plans for the clients which basically instructs how staff should deal with a clients' behavior. He also conducts in-service training with staff as to how to deal with client's behaviors, crisis intervention and positive behavior supports to allow the clients to be as independent as possible. A 'code green' is called whenever there is a behavior crisis or one is imminent. A person would call in a code green on the telephone and the operator would announce the code green over the loudspeaker. Qualified Intellectual Disability Professionals (QIDP's) would respond to the code and render assistance in managing the behavioral crisis. However, sometimes there is not enough time to call a code green, if for instance, a client was banging his head into a wall, then it would be necessary to intervene to protect the client. Sometimes, just a call for help is required but if there is no one else around to assist, a physical restraint would have to be applied. The "restraint" policy utilized at HDC is called "Handle with Care". The positions used are the "settle" and "supine" positions for restraining a client as well as a two person escort technique as well as blocking techniques. If a client is trying to harm themselves, they would probably have to be physically restrained. The settle technique can be done with one person and involves hooking somebody's arms from behind and going down on the knees with the person cradled in between the crotch. The supine restraint requires two people and involves laying the client down on their back and laying on top of the client with a shoulder placed in the clients' armpit and forming a "T".

Mr. Piccolo works with the clients in cottage 20 and is familiar with client J.C. He has a moderate intellectual disability and is very manipulative with the staff. J.C. also is very anxious and gets aggressive. He is a very difficult client to manage. Mr. Piccolo developed J.C.'s Behavioral Support Plan (BSP). The plan tries to focus on minimizing's J.C.'s anxiety and gives instructions on how to deal with J.C. when he is agitated and also deals with suicide precautions. All of the employees who work with the clients in cottage 20 receive in-service training on J.C.'s BSP (R-10). J.C. gets very anxious over going on trips or going to activities so they try and encourage him to communicate and provide other options. J.C. sometimes runs to his room in an attempt to escape demands and will not come out. Mr. Piccolo has seen J.C. run to his room and go under his bed because he is anxious or to avoid an activity. Usually, Mr. Piccolo can get J.C. to come out by talking to him because he is familiar with him and frequently works with J.C. He has never had to physically attempt to get J.C. from out from under his bed because there was no need to. J.C. was not in imminent danger to himself or others.

When asked if grabbing a client to try and get them out from under a bed was ever a method Mr. Piccolo would use he indicated that he could not answer that because he has never had an episode where someone has been in danger underneath their bed. J.C.'s BSP indicates that he has verbalized thoughts of committing suicide and made gestures such as putting cords, ropes, shirts and belts around his neck (R-10, page 7).

When asked what would he do if he had seen J.C. under his bed with something around his neck, Mr. Piccolo testified that was a difficult question to answer and that probably trying to get someone to help or calling for a code green is the correct answer but questioned whether you would be putting the client at risk by leaving him to get somebody to assist.

On cross-examination, Mr. Piccolo stated that he did see J.C. on the date of this incident after the incident and he observed that J.C. had red marks around the front of his neck. These marks would be consistent with J.C. having had something wrapped around his neck and trying to harm himself. Cottage 20 is one of the most difficult cottages at HDC housing the most violent males on the grounds who engage in aggressive and self-injurious behaviors. In Mr. Piccolo's opinion, J.C. is the most difficult client at HDC. J.C. is forty-three years old approximately 5' 8" and 200 lbs. In J.C.'s BSP, the target behaviors are the most pathological behaviors J.C. engages in and they are listed as aggressive and self-injurious behaviors (R-10, page 1). J.C. has a long history of engaging in these behaviors, including intentionally slamming his head on hard objects. Certain factors that cause J.C. to engage in aggressive or self -injurious behaviors are listed as "Antecedent Factors" in his BSP (R-10, page 2). One of those factors is telling J.C., he has to do something he does not want to do. Mr. Piccolo is aware that on the day of this incident January 3, 2017, J.C. was told he had to go on a trip. If he does not want to go on a trip he will engage in aggressive or self-injurious behavior to avoid going on the trip, including gestures such as putting cords, ropes or shirts around his neck. Anything that heightens his anxiety level would trigger these behaviors. J.C. also has a lengthy history of making false allegations against the staff. J.C. accused Mr. Ehiosa of choking him, which is consistent with J.C.'s past behavior of making false allegations of abuse against the staff.

Kyle Smith testified on behalf of the respondent. He is employed by the Office of Investigations, Department of Human Services which is an investigatory body that investigates allegations of abuse, neglect and exploitation. Mr. Smith has been employed as a Quality Assurance Specialist for twelve years and his job is to collect and review evidence and prepare an investigation report. Mr. Smith conducted an investigation and prepared a report concerning this incident involving the allegations of abuse against Mr. Ehiosa (R-14). Mr. Smith interviewed and obtained written statements from Mr. Ehiosa on two occasions, January 5, 2017 (R-15) and February 3, 2017(R-16). The purpose of the second interview was to follow-up and clarify some of the answers from the first interview. Mr. Smith believed Mr. Ehiosa's answers were contradictory. Mr. Ehiosa was aware that J.C.'s behavioral support plan called for checking on J.C. every fifteen minutes if he was under his bed. Mr. Ehiosa explained that he found J.C. under his bed wrapped in blankets and believed J.C. was trying to commit suicide and that was the reason he did not just leave him under his bed. Mr. Ehiosa stated that he held J.C.'s legs to prevent him from injuring himself on the bed frame. The second interview focused on how Mr. Ehiosa was able to physically gain control of J.C.'s legs if he was kicking. Mr. Ehiosa indicated that he did not grab or pull J.C. but made a swiping gesture as if to bring J.C.'s legs into a hold against Mr. Ehiosa's body. Also, if Mr. Ehiosa thought J.C. was engaged in a suicide attempt, he should have called for a code green. Mr. Ehiosa told Mr. Smith that he could handle the situation.

Mr. Smith explained that there was a lack of evidence to substantiate a claim of abuse regarding J.C.'s allegation that Mr. Ehiosa grabbed J.C. by the neck and dragged him out of the room into the hall. However, Mr. Smith stated that the substantiation of abuse against Mr. Ehiosa was based upon Mr. Ehiosa's self-reported statement to his immediate supervisor and then to Mr. Berluche, that he grabbed J.C. and pulled him from underneath the bed.

On cross-examination, Mr. Smith admitted that he did not conduct the demonstration utilizing the bed or any props when he was questioning Mr. Ehiosa as to how he was able to control J.C. on the date of the incident. Mr. Smith also admitted that Mr. Ehiosa appeared for both interviews and was cooperative throughout the process. Mr. Smith was requested to read the written statement of Mr. Berluche contained in Mr. Smith's investigation report (R-14, page 3) and then admitted that Mr. Berluche submitted a statement saying Mr. Ehiosa admitted grabbing J.C. by the ankles, but there is no mention that Mr. Ehiosa pulled J.C. As part of the investigation, photographs were taken of client J.C.'s neck, although they were not attached to Mr. Smith's investigation report that was produced. Mr. Smith indicated that the photographs were taken by another investigator and depicted red marks around J.C.'s neck. Mr. Ehiosa had stated that the red marks were caused by J.C. wrapping something tightly around his neck. Mr. Smith found that the allegations against Mr. Ehiosa by J.C. that Mr. Ehiosa grabbed J.C. by the neck and dragged him across the floor were not substantiated.

Joseph Ehiosa testified on his own behalf. Mr. Ehiosa has worked for the State of New Jersey since 2007, first at a northern New Jersey developmental center until it closed and he was reassigned to HDC in June 2014. He was employed as a Cottage Training Technician at cottage 20 where J.C. resides. Mr. Ehiosa is familiar with J.C. and has dealt with him daily. He is also familiar with J.C.'s behavioral support plan (R-10). J.C. is an aggressive, self-injurious client who will threaten the staff about losing their jobs and lie about the staff if he does not get what he wants. He also frequently threatens suicide and is then placed on a suicide watch.

On January 3, 2017, Mr. Ehiosa reported to work at 7:00 a.m. He was assigned to group 2 that day which consisted of seven clients including J.C. J.C. was the most difficult client to work with. Mr. Ehiosa described J.C. as approximately forty-two years old and weighing 200 pounds. Mr. Ehiosa is 5'8" and said J.C. is the same size as him except that Mr. Ehiosa is slightly taller. At approximately 7:20 a.m. medications were being dispensed to the clients and J.C. went to get his medication and failed to return to group 2. Mr. Ehiosa went looking for J.C. and found him under his bed with a bed sheet around his neck and a sweatshirt and blanket covering his body. Mr. Ehiosa believed that J.C. was going to harm himself. Mr. Ehiosa asked him why he left the group and J.C. responded that someone told him that he had to go on a trip. Mr. Ehiosa could not hear him clearly so he lifted up the bed and removed the blanket from him but the bedsheet was still around his neck. He attempted to calm J.C. down and told him that he did not have to go on the trip. J.C. was kicking his legs so Mr. Ehiosa tried to hold his legs down because he could not grab them as J.C. was kicking. He wanted to make sure J.C. did not hurt himself. Mr. Ehiosa was familiar with the Handle with Care policy and received training on the policy. He also was familiar with the abuse policy and was aware of the HDC zero tolerance for abuse policy. He was familiar with J.C.'s behavioral support plan which indicated if J.C. goes under his bed, check on him every fifteen minutes. However, that was only to be done if J.C. was not presenting any harm to himself which was not the case in this instance. If something happened to J.C. it would be Mr. Ehiosa's responsibility if he did not prevent injury to J.C. Mr. Ehiosa understood the HDC policy to allow physical contact with a client to prevent them from injuring themselves. Mr. Ehiosa said that it is permissible to hold a client's feet down in order to prevent him from getting injured and that was included in the handle with care training taught at HDC.

On cross-examination, Mr. Ehiosa admitted that his first written statement dated January 3, 2017 did not indicate that J.C. had anything around his neck or that J.C. was kicking his feet. He explained that he wrote the first statement quickly for Mr. Berluche, as Mr. Berluche was in a rush to go home the morning of the incident. Mr. Ehiosa also indicated that J.C. may have gotten the marks on his neck when he was squeezing himself under the bed when he was being directed to come out (R-20). The psychology log collection report also makes no mention of J.C. attempting suicide or being wrapped in blankets (R-13). The January 5, 2017 statement given by Mr. Ehiosa to Mr. Smith included these facts. Mr. Ehiosa also indicated in that statement that J.C. went under the bed a second time and Mr. Ehiosa lifted up the bed with one hand and used the other hand to hold his feet down so when he lowered the bed back down it would not hurt J.C. When he found J.C. under the bed with clothes wrapped around his neck Mr. Ehiosa did not call for help because there was no one else there and it was an emergency situation so he could not leave J.C. Mr. Ehiosa believed the marks on J.C.'s neck may have been caused by the bedsheet, blanket and pullover in which he was wrapped (R-15). Mr. Ehiosa stated that Mr. Smith's interviews were longer and more detailed because he spent hours with him going over the facts. At times during the interview, Mr. Ehiosa felt that Mr. Smith was trying to twist his words. Mr. Ehiosa indicated that he did not tell anyone that he grabbed J.C. He held his legs down to prevent him from injuring himself on the bed. Mr. Ehiosa believed there was a conspiracy against him because he and Jacinta Goodwin do not get along.

On January 3, 2017 shortly following this incident, Mr. Ehiosa was directed to leave the cottage and was suspended. He has never returned. Mr. Ehiosa did not observe any marks on J.C.'s neck and only learned of same during his interview with Mr. Smith.

In order to resolve the inconsistencies in the witness testimony, the credibility of the witnesses must be determined. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963). A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Mr. Berluche testified that it was not permissible to grab a client and that "grabbing" implies an aggressive action. I do not find that testimony to be credible. The definition of 'grab' as set forth in the Merriam-Webster's Deluxe Dictionary, Tenth Collegiate Edition is: "to take or seize by or as if by a sudden motion or grasp." Mr. Berluche used an example of 'holding' his wife and 'grabbing' his child to prevent them from running into the street. That very example Mr. Berluche gave in describing the difference between a hold and a grab supports the position that a grab is not necessarily an aggressive action but a quick and sudden action that may be required to prevent harm from coming to someone. Certainly, grabbing a child's hand to prevent them from running into the street does not constitute child abuse. Likewise, grabbing a client to prevent them from sustaining harm is not abuse. Furthermore, the personal control techniques Mr. Berluche described as permissible according to the "Handle with Care" protocol would not only appear to be more personally offensive and intrusive than a simple grab to gain control, but also, those techniques cannot be utilized when someone is underneath a bed.

Although Mr. Ehiosa's written statements regarding the incident appear to get more detailed following his repeated interviews, I FIND that his testimony is credible based upon the overall assessment of the facts in this case, and especially in conjunction with the testimony of respondents' witness, Mr. Piccolo, the staff psychologist at HDC whose testimony was highly credible.

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following as FACTS:

On January 3, 2017, appellant, Mr. Ehiosa was employed by HDC as a CTT and assigned to cottage 20 and responsible for the direct care of client J.C. Mr. Ehiosa was familiar with the Handle with Care policy and received training on the policy. He also was familiar with the abuse policy and was aware of the HDC abuse policy of zero tolerance for abuse. Mr. Ehiosa was very familiar with J.C. and J.C.'s behavioral support plan (BSP) which indicated if J.C. goes under his bed, he should be allowed to remain there and be checked on every fifteen minutes. However, that was only to be done if J.C. was not presenting any harm to himself, which was not the case in this instance. J.C. was the most aggressive and difficult client at HDC and was well known to engage in certain behaviors when he is anxious including: aggression; making accusations of abuse against staff; and self-injurious behaviors such as intentionally slamming his head on hard objects and making suicidal gestures such as putting cords, ropes, shirts and belts around his neck. Certain factors trigger this behavior such as when J.C.'s anxiety level increases, including when J.C. is told to do something he does not want to do such as going on a trip. J.C. is also known to avoid something he does not want to do by leaving the group and going to his room and hiding underneath his bed. On January 3, 2017 J.C. was told that he was going on a trip, became anxious and left the group while they were receiving their medications. Mr. Ehiosa searched for J.C. and found him hiding underneath his bed stating he did not want to go on the trip. Appellant believed J.C. was going to harm himself because he had a bedsheet around his neck and a sweatshirt and a blanket over his body. There was no one else around. Appellant did not call for a code green because he could not leave J.C. alone and he thought he would be able to handle the situation. Mr. Ehiosa picked up the bed and removed the blanket off J.C. and was trying to calm J.C. down by telling him that he did not have to go on the trip. J.C. was kicking his feet and Mr. Ehiosa was able to get a hold of J.C.'s legs and held J.C.'s legs down so J.C. would not injure himself on the bed. Mr. Ehiosa was able to verbally direct J.C. out from under the bed. Appellant did not grab J.C. by the ankles and pull him out from under his bed. Appellant took no action against J.C. that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish and/or suffering. Following the incident, J.C.'s neck was observed to have red marks around the front of his neck, consistent with something being wrapped around his neck.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A2-2.

The Appointing Authority shoulders the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

Respondent has alleged that on January 3, 2017, at approximately 7:55 a.m. while in cottage 20, Mr. Ehiosa grabbed and pulled client J.C. by his feet and ankles to get him out from underneath his bed. Respondent alleged that this was considered physical abuse of a client, mistreatment of a client and conduct that violates common decency. It was further alleged that appellants actions were contrary to the redirection techniques specified in client J.C.'s Level 1 BSP. Respondent has charged appellant with the following violations of the Department of Human Services Disciplinary Rules set forth in Administrative Order 4:08: (C3.1) Physical or mental abuse of a client; (C5.1) Inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a client; (C11.1) Any improper conduct which violates common decency; (E1.1) Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure order or administrative decision; as well as violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), Failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause (R-9).

Physical abuse of a client is defined as "a physical act directed at a service recipient by a DHS employee, volunteer, intern, or consultant/contractor of a type that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish, and/or suffering. Such acts include but are not limited to the service recipient being kicked, pinched, bitten, punched, slapped, hit, pushed, dragged, and/or struck with a thrown or held object." (R-1, page 1). It is noted that "grabbing" is conspicuously absent from this definition. The facts indicate that the actions of appellant in this case did not constitute physical abuse of J.C. in that appellant did not grab appellant by the feet and ankles and pull him out from underneath his bed as respondent has alleged. There was testimony from both supervisors, Mr. Berluche and Ms. Kyne that Appellant never told them that he pulled J.C. out from under his bed. Appellant did admit that he held J.C.'s legs to prevent him from injuring himself on the bed and that this was permissible to prevent injury to the client. Even if appellant had 'grabbed' J.C.'s legs in order to prevent him from harm as opposed to 'holding' his legs to prevent him from harm it would not be considered abuse. J.C. was not kicked, pinched, bitten, punched, slapped, hit, pushed, dragged and/or struck with a thrown or held object. There was no physical act by appellant directed at J.C. that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish or suffering. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not met its burden of proof that appellant physically abused J.C.

Mistreatment of a client is defined as "inappropriate treatment and can include vexing, verbal teasing, exposing a client to unnecessary danger, hardship, fatigue or strain. This also includes any indecent, immoral or unlawful act that may tend to endanger the morals of a client and withdrawing of personal items or foods that are not required by a medical order or approved Level III behavior support program" (R-2, page 1). Mr. Ehiosa was responsible for the safety of his client, J.C. and admitted that he held J.C.'s legs while he was kicking them to prevent J.C. from injuring himself. There was no testimony that Appellant pulled J.C. out from underneath his bed by the ankles. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that respondent has not met its burden of proof that appellant mistreated J.C.

Although respondent has charged appellant with improper conduct which violates common decency, this offense is not defined in the Disciplinary Action Program (R-23). This charge is based on the allegation that appellant grabbed and pulled J.C. by his feet and ankles to get him out from underneath his bed. Dragging a client out from underneath their bed by their feet or ankles would offend notions of common decency, however, there has been no testimony that appellant grabbed and pulled J.C. by his ankles and feet to get him out from underneath his bed. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that respondent has not met its burden of proof that appellant engaged in conduct that violates common decency.

Appellant's actions were also alleged to be contrary to the redirection techniques specified in J.C.'s BSP. The BSP indicates that J.C. may at times run to his room in order to avoid something he does not want to do. Staff are directed to follow J.C. to his room and let him know that he can have time to calm down and that he will be checked on in a few minutes. If J.C. stays in his room he should be allowed ten minutes and then staff should approach him and ask him to talk about what is bothering him. If J.C. talks about his problems, he will usually comply with requests. (R-10, page 5, paragraph 11). The BSP also indicates that J.C. may verbalize thoughts of committing suicide and make gestures such as putting cords, ropes, shirts and belts around his neck. If J.C. makes suicidal ideations or gestures, the staff is not to discuss it with him, only keep him safe without conversing about the incident (R-10, page 7, paragraph H). On the day of this incident, January 3, 2017 J.C. did run to his room and hide underneath his bed when he became anxious when he learned he was to go on a trip that day. Appellant testified that J.C. had a sheet, a sweatshirt and a blanket around his neck and appellant believed J.C. would harm himself. Therefore, he could not leave him and go back and check on him. Mr. Ehiosa stayed with J.C. and talked to him and calmed him down and eventually was able to verbally redirect him out from under the bed. Mr. Ehiosa's primary obligation was to keep the client safe. One of the most compelling facts in this case supporting appellants testimony is that J.C. was found to have red marks around his neck following this incident that was consistent with his target behaviors of suicidal gestures when he becomes anxious. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that appellants actions were not contrary to the redirection techniques specified in J.C.'s BSP and that respondent has not sustained its burden of proof that appellant violated a rule, regulation, policy, procedure order or administrative decision as set forth in (E1.1).

Appellant was also charged with violating N.J.S.A. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties. However, case law has determined incompetence is a "lack of the ability or qualifications necessary to perform the duties required of an individual [and] a consistent failure by an individual to perform his/her prescribed duties in a manner that is minimally acceptable for his/her position." Sotomayer v. Plainfield Police Dep't, CSV 9921-98, Initial Decision (December 6, 1999), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (January 24, 2000), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/ (citing Steinel v. City of Jersey City, 7 N.J.A.R. 91 (1983); Clark v. New Jersey Dep't of Agric., 1 N.J.A.R. 315 (1980)). Mr. Ehiosa has worked at the HDC since June 2014 and has had daily contact with J.C., the most difficult client at the facility. He is trained on client abuse prevention and is familiar with J.C.'s BSP. One of the main duties of the appellant is to provide for the safety of the client's entrusted to his care. The facts in this case indicate that J.C. was in danger of harming himself and that appellant acted appropriately in protecting J.C. from injury by not allowing him to remain under the bed with a bedsheet and sweatshirt around his neck and by holding his legs while J.C. was kicking to prevent J.C. from hitting the bedframe while appellant was lowering the bed back down. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has not met its burden of proof on this issue.

Appellant was also charged with "Conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

The basis for the charge of conduct unbecoming was the alleged physical abuse of a client by appellant grabbing and pulling client J.C. by his feet and ankles from underneath his bed. Appellant did not pull J.C. from under the bed by his ankles him but he did admit he held his legs to avoid the client from becoming injured while J.C. was kicking and could have injured himself on the bed. Furthermore, appellant acted appropriately by not allowing J.C. to remain under the bed with a bedsheet and sweatshirt wrapped around his neck. Following this incident, J.C. was found to have an injury to his neck which is consistent with appellant's testimony that when he found J.C. underneath his bed he had a sheet and a sweatshirt wrapped tightly around his neck and appellant believed J.C. was going to harm himself. Appellant's conduct was not such that it could adversely affect the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. To the contrary, appellants behavior was necessary and appropriate under the circumstances. Appellant was responsible for the safety of J.C. and his actions were reasonable. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the appellant did not engage in conduct unbecoming a public employee and that the appointing authority has not met the burden on this issue.

Appellant has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Specifically, appellant has been charged with violating HDC Procedure #30/ Administrative Order 4:08 Physical abuse of a patient (R-1) for allegedly grabbing and pulling client J.C. by his feet and ankles to get him out from underneath his bed. There was testimony from two of appellants supervisors that appellant never stated to them that he pulled J.C. out from under his bed. Appellant testified that he believed J.C. would harm himself as he was under the bed with a sheet and sweatshirt wrapped around his neck. J.C. was upset that he was going to have to go on a trip which he did not want to go on. Appellant was able to talk to J.C., calm him down and eventually able to get him out from underneath the bed with verbal directions. However, appellant did admit that when he lifted the bed up to get J.C. to come out, J.C. was kicking his feet and appellant had to hold his feet to prevent J.C. from hurting himself on the bed while he placed the bed down again. Following this incident, J.C. was found to have red marks around his neck consistent with appellants testimony that J.C. was underneath the bed with a sheet and sweatshirt wrapped around his neck. Appellant believed J.C. was attempting to harm himself which behavior is documented in J.C.'s BSP. "Physical Abuse", as defined in Administrative Order 4:08, Supplement 1, refers to a physical act directed at a service recipient by a DHS employee of a type that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish, and/or suffering. (See R-1). Appellant's actions did not constitute physical abuse. Appellant was attempting to keep J.C. safe and prevent him from harming himself. Individuals who are developmentally disabled are entitled to humane treatment and care. Appellants actions were reasonable and necessary under the circumstances and did not violate this standard of good behavior. As such, I CONCLUDE that this charge should be DISMISSED.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I ORDER that the action of the respondent is REVERSED and the appellant's appeal is GRANTED. I further ORDER that all charges filed against appellant in this matter are hereby DISMISSED.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The appeal of Luis Fermin, Police Officer, City of Paterson, Police Department, 180 calendar day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Gail M. Gookson, who rendered her initial decision on March 15, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 4028-16
AGENCY REF. NO. 2016-3075

IN THE MATTER OF LUIS FERMIN, CITY OF PATERSON,
POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Sebastian B. Ionno, Esq., for appellant Luis Fermin (Ionno & Higbee, attorneys)

Steven S. Glickman, Esq., for respondent City of Paterson (Steven S. Glickman, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 29, 2018 Decided: March 15, 2018

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Luis Fermin (appellant) appeals from the decision of the Police Department of the City of Paterson (City) to suspend him from his position as a Police Officer for 180 days on charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); misuse of public property in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8); and other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11). These charges arise as a result of a high-speed pursuit undertaken by appellant and his partner on June 17, 2014. Appellant denies the charges and claims that he reported the pursuit appropriately and completed accurate reports thereafter.

On January 22, 2015, a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action was filed seeking to suspend appellant from his position. The departmental hearing was conducted on January 13, 2016. Thereafter, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued on February 24, 2016, sustaining the disciplinary charges and suspending appellant for 180 days beginning March 1, 2016 and ending September 6, 2016. Appellant appealed that disciplinary action on or about February 26, 2016. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on March 14, 2016, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The matter was assigned to the undersigned on March 16, 2016. I convened a telephonic case management conference on April 13, 2016, and at that time hearing dates and discovery were discussed. The case was originally scheduled to be heard on September 29, 2016, but then adjourned at my request. After several other adjourned hearing dates, the plenary hearing was held on December 8, 2017. Post-hearing briefs were permitted and, after an extension, the last one was submitted on January 29, 2018, on which date the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

By way of background, appellant Luis Fermin has been a Police Officer with the City since 2005. On June 17, 2014, he and his partner – Police Officer Daniel Findlay – were assigned to patrol together. Officer Findlay was the driver. A motorcyclist who had violated multiple motor vehicle regulations was observed by the two officers at approximately 11:12 p.m. to be driving westbound on Governor Street but on the sidewalk with pedestrians present. Once they began their pursuit of him, speeds in excess of eighty miles per hour were reached. After the motorcyclist crashed, Officer Findlay called 9-1-1. Two Sergeants also came to the scene.

The issue herein is whether appellant called into headquarters on their radio to report the high-speed chase in accordance with proper procedures. There is also an issue as to the truthfulness of appellant's written report and statement on the incident.

Detective Sergeant Richard Botbyl testified on behalf of the City. At the time of this hot pursuit or high-speed chase incident, Sergeant Botbyl was an investigator with Internal Affairs. He has been in the Paterson Police Department for over twenty-two years, and was promoted to Sergeant and assigned to Internal Affairs for over six years. His current duties are now in Traffic.

Sergeant Botbyl reviewed the reports submitted by both officers following the conclusion of the incident. Each officer submitted one joint and one individual statement to Internal Affairs. Because there had been no communications from the officers during the incident, they were both asked why they had not called it into headquarters. Appellant stated at the time that he had called into the department, he was unaware that his partner had turned the vehicle radio off because the mic clip was broken and it kept falling to the floor of the car.

As part of his investigation, Sergeant Botbyl canvassed the area and interviewed available witnesses. He also reviewed a GPS report from the vehicle. In addition, Sergeant Botbyl reviewed any work orders that concerned the car radio in appellant's vehicle. On July 1, 2014, PageCom, a communications vendor the City used, checked the vehicle's radio for all functions, and adjusted the narrow bands on all channels and all levels. Later in December 2014, PageCom serviced that car radio again, checked all alignments, but this time "secured hang up button on mic." [R-9.]

Sergeant Botbyl testified that there were no communications into the Department from either appellant or his partner for the duration of the pursuit. Only after the chase was over did Officer Findlay call for an ambulance and notify headquarters. He went on to state that he did not find appellant's statements about the lack of communications to be credible. Appellant tried to excuse his failure to comply with pursuit policy by stating that the car radio was on the floor because of a broken mic clip and that Officer Findlay must have turned it off unbeknownst to appellant. Sergeant Botbyl explained that the car radio would have been emitting chatter throughout the course of their shift, as would their individual portable radios. Silence during their shift would have been so odd as to have served as notice to appellant that the radio was off. When being used, a red light would so indicate on the base radio.

Sergeant Botbyl reviewed the pursuit and forcible stopping policies of the Paterson Police Department and the Attorney General. [R-22, -23.] Both guidelines set forth the mandatory requirement to notify communications and list the information that must be conveyed. He also detailed appellant's prior discipline history of a suspension for 180 days, later resolved by agreement down to 120-day suspension, for failing to maintain a New Jersey driver's license and for filing a false affidavit of residency to the State of Pennsylvania in order to obtain license, registration and insurance in that state.

On cross-examination, Sergeant Botbyl acknowledged that he only took the officers' written statements and did not interview them, but that would be normal for this type of internal investigation. He did not personally look at the police vehicle and its base radio, nor was he familiar with whether just a broken clip would have needed a work order before it could be repaired. Sergeant Botbyl also reiterated that the lack of response from headquarters to appellant's alleged attempt to communicate would have been additional notice to him that communications had failed.

The City also presented Manuel Hernandez as a witness. Sergeant Hernandez has been with the City Police Department for thirty-two years, and was assigned to Internal Affairs between June 2004 and December 2016. His testimony centered on the prior disciplinary action against appellant. That settlement, which occurred at the OAL, reduced the 180-day suspension to 120-day suspension and a 60-day leave of absence without pay.

Appellant testified on his own behalf.[1] He has been employed as a Police Officer in the City since 2005, assigned to patrol. On June 17, 2014, Officer Findlay and he had begun their shift at 1:30 p.m. The incident with the motorcyclist began at approximately 11:12 p.m. He stated that he transmitted to headquarters at the beginning of the pursuit, as Officer Findlay was driving, using the vehicle radio. He could not recall whether the mic was on the floor of the vehicle or on the base, even though he said the clip was broken. Appellant also had his portable radio clipped to his duty belt. He agreed that there were no communications received back from headquarters but at the time, he did not consider that to be abnormal. He was told by Officer Findlay only after the incident was over that he had turned the radio off and he never said why. Appellant had been involved in probably only one other pursuit much earlier in his career.

On cross-examination, appellant attributed his failure to realize that headquarters had not responded to his pursuit call to the tunnel vision and adrenaline that kicks in during a chase when safety and the pursuit itself are paramount. Appellant believed that the mic was on the floor on his side of the center console. He was the one who kept hitting it with his foot. He could not recall when his partner turned the radio off during that shift. Appellant stated that he was talking to headquarters throughout the pursuit and might not have even been leaving gaps for a person on the other end to comment. Appellant also clarified that they were assigned on the subject evening to just patrol and be a presence in this particular area due to high gang and drug activity. Accordingly, they would not have been dispatched to other areas but that did not mean they would not be privy to dispatch chatter as usual.

In the reports prepared by both officers contemporaneously with the incident and the Internal Affairs investigation, Officer Findlay, who was not presented as a witness, set forth that he had not noticed that appellant was transmitting with the vehicle radio. He stated that he had turned it off because it was laying on floorboards on passenger side and appellant was inadvertently keying or transmitting it with his body. Officer Findlay then wrote that "we were utilizing our portable radios." [R-6.] Both officers reported that they could not hear the pursuit transmission from headquarters out to other units on their portable radios because the volume on those were turned down out of habit to avoid feedback with the base car radio. Engine noise and their own sirens contributed to their inability to hear whether the Department had made a return transmission. [R-5, -6.] Officer Findlay's statement goes on to report that after they had made a U-turn and were about to call off the pursuit, he prepared to "utilize [his] portable radio to notify headquarters of the motorcycle pursuit." In fact, he states twice that he was about to utilize his portable radio. The second time he states that in the report, he adds that he saw that the motorcyclist had crashed to the ground. Accordingly, Officer Findlay used his portable radio to call for an ambulance.

I FIND that appellant was not a credible witness. Credibility, or, more specifically, credible testimony, in turn, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself, as well. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954). Appellant's testimony and his earlier statements do not hang together and are incredible because they do not make sense. Appellant is an experienced officer who certainly knows when a radio is on or not through its red light, chatter and crackling. Even recognizing the fact that pursuits do not happen often and adrenaline may be pumping, that is what officers train for. Neither officer mentioned in any report that the vehicle's windows were down. I FIND that appellant testifying to that only at the hearing is embellishment. I FIND it more likely than not that appellant forgot to call into headquarters in the heat of the moment insofar as this was an unusual incident both in that it was a hot pursuit and that it was a motorcycle traveling on a sidewalk at a high rate of speed.

I FIND that it was Officer Findlay who made the first call to headquarters on this pursuit and only after it was essentially over. He did so using his portable radio which was the one he earlier stated was what both were utilizing. This clearly contradicts appellant's testimony and his reports that he used the base radio to transmit the pursuit to headquarters at the start of the chase but then could not hear any response on either his own portable or the vehicle radio. My finding is supported by Sergeant Botbyl's review of radio transmissions into headquarters at the time of the incident.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6, governs a public employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Governmental employers also have delineated rights and obligations. The Act sets forth that it is State policy to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials so they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b).

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against her and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In this matter, the City bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

For evidence to be credible it must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Therefore, the tribunal must "decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). For reasonable probability to exist, the evidence must be such as to "generate belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959) (citation omitted). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975).

As set forth above, I found that appellant's testimony and earlier statements to Internal Affairs are not credible. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that appellant provided false statements and failed to comply with the relevant policy requirements.

Having concluded that an incident occurred, I must determine the proper penalty or discipline to be assessed. A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. Progressive discipline is considered to be an appropriate analysis for determining the reasonableness of the penalty. See Bock, 38 N.J. at 523-24. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of the concept of progressive discipline is the nature, number and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions should be addressed by progressively increasing penalties. It underscores the philosophy that an appointing authority has a responsibility to encourage the development of employee potential. In addition to considering an employee's prior disciplinary history when imposing a penalty under the Act, other appropriate factors to consider include the nature of the misconduct, the nature of the employee's job, and the impact of the misconduct on the public interest. Ibid. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522-24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, a suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a), -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.4.

Nevertheless, law enforcement officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576–77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Twp. of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47

N.J. 80 (1966). Citizens must be able to depend on the veracity and honesty of the law enforcement officers in their community.

In this case, I CONCLUDE that the substantiation of this breach of the vehicular pursuit policy by appellant, and subsequent false claims asserted in appellant's reports, warrant the penalty imposed of 180 days. Appellant had a prior major disciplinary incident in 2013 that resulted in a penalty of 180 days. That disciplinary action was also premised upon false statements made to authorities and appellant's failure to abide by the City's policies on maintaining a valid New Jersey driver's license. [R-25.] Subsequent to an appeal on that incident to the OAL, appellant and the City settled those charges with a Memorandum of Agreement which reduced the 180-day suspension to 120 days. [R-26.] Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the penalty of 180 days here is not excessive.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the appeal of Luis Fermin from the disciplinary action entered in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action of the City of Paterson Police Department is hereby DISMISSED. It is further ORDERED that major disciplinary action is AFFIRMED and that the penalty imposed for this disciplinary action shall remain one hundred and eighty (180) days.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, MERIT SYSTEM PRACTICES AND LABOR RELATIONS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

WHEREAS, in consideration for the settlement of all claims that have been, or could have been, raised by the Employee and/or Union in this matter, in connection with the Employee's employment, and for other good and valuable consideration, including the mutual promises and terms and conditions contained in this Agreement;

The Employee acknowledges and agrees that this release extends to anyone who succeeds to her rights and responsibilities, including, but not limited to, her heirs and assignees, and that this release is given for the benefit of the State of New Jersey Judiciary, the Atlantic & Cape May Vicinage and such entities' employees, agents and representatives.

6. The Employee acknowledges that she has carefully read and fully understands all of the provisions of this Agreement and that she was afforded the opportunity to review and discuss each provision of this Agreement with an attorney and/or union representative. Any signatory hereto may indicate acceptance of this Agreement with a facsimile signature, provided that an original signature is provided to all other parties thereafter.

10. If any term or condition of this Agreement shall be invalid or unenforceable to any extent or in any application, then such term or condition shall automatically, and without any further action, be reformed so as to retain the fullest extent of any restriction therein

ISSUED: APRIL 20, 2018 BW

The appeal of Keisha Lewis, Police Officer, City of Orange Township, Police Department, removal effective March 29, 2017, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joann LaSala Candido, who rendered her initial decision on March 14, 2018. No exceptions were filed.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Keisha Lewis.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 05933-17
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-3367

IN THE MATTER OF KEISHA LEWIS, CITY OF ORANGE TOWNSHIP POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Keisha Lewis, petitioner, appearing pro se

Dan Smith, Esq., appearing on behalf of respondent, City of Orange Township

Record Closed: March 2, 2018 Decided: March 14, 2018

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Keisha Lewis, appeals her removal as a recruit with the City of Orange Township (respondent or City). The City contends that petitioner lacks respect of authority, defying the way the agency performs.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 29, 2017, petitioner was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action charging her with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3.

On March 29, 2017, petitioner was served a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action sustaining the charges based upon the following incidents:

2/28/17	Ordered to write a report due to appearance
2/28/17	Could not name the President of the United States
3/01/17	Ordered to write a report showing a lack of interest in the job as a police officer
3/01/17	Addressed a sergeant as "bro"
3/02/17	Wore earrings in Recruit uniform knowing she was not permitted to do so
3/22/17	Made threatening gestures to a detective behind the detective's back

Petitioner filed a request for a hearing and the matter was then forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on May 1, 2017, as a contested case. The matter was assigned to ALJ Richard McGill before being assigned to me on January 18, 2018, due to an illness. Hearings took place on January 18, 2018, and March 2, 2018, on which date the record closed.

ISSUES

Did the respondent carry its burden of proving the charges referenced above by a preponderance of the credible evidence? If so, what disciplinary action, if any, is appropriate?

TESTIMONY

Keisha Lewis

On January 13, 2017, Keisha Lewis started the Essex County Police Academy. She suffered an injury at the Academy February 2, 2017, an ACL sprain and a locked knee. She was dismissed from the Academy on February 23, 2017. She was sent back to Orange Police Academy on February 28, 2017. There was an issue with her hair and she was instructed to go into the bathroom and wet down her hair. She did so and was told to write a report why her hair was the way it was. She completed the report. On February 28, 2017, petitioner was unable to name the President of the United States and referred to him as the 'orange guy.' She was asked to write a seven-page report on Donald Trump and a five-page report on respect.

On March 1, 2017, she was ordered by the Director to write a report on her interest as an officer. She did not finish to the last line and it was ripped up. She was ordered to re-write it. Petitioner contends that all recruits were required to write about their interest as a police officer. She was also ordered to write a two-page essay on how to properly write a report.

On March 1, 2017, she referred to a sergeant as "bro" and was ordered to write a report that she completed.

On March 2, 2017, she was ordered to write a report and two-page essay after inappropriately wearing earrings to a promotional ceremony.

On March 8, 2017,[1] she was accused of making a threatening gesture behind a detective's back during a class, which she denies.

Petitioner testified that she would never disrespect a superior and she had passed up many towns to be an officer in Orange.

Sergeant Michael Tingolie

Sergeant Tingolie testified on behalf of respondent. Sergeant Tingolie supervised petitioner at the Orange Police Department. On March 1, 2017, there was a pursuit from Newark towards Orange being broadcast on the police radio and petitioner stated to him "that's my call bro." Recruits must address officers by their rank. Petitioner wrote a satisfactory essay. This conduct is not fitting for a police officer. On March 2, 2017, petitioner was wearing earrings while in the police academy uniform, which is impermissible. Until a recruit completes the academy they must wear that uniform and comply with academy policy and rules. He instructed her to remove the earrings and write a report, which she did. He was also present when petitioner referred to the President as the orange guy when the Director asked her to name him. That is a lack of respect.

Sergeant Tingolie submitted a report outlining a summary of all information pertaining to Lewis while she was at the Essex County Police Academy. (R-1.)

Sergeant Jean-Paul Barbosa

Sergeant Barbosa testified on behalf of respondent. He is employed by the Orange Police Department in Internal Affairs. Barbosa investigated the reports dated March 23 and 24, 2017, as well as the PNDA and the report authored by Detective Kovach dated March 9, 2017. (R-2 thru R-5.) He confirmed that a poem was to be recited by all recruits and she was not able to recite from memory. Because petitioner was considered an at-will employee during a working test period she can be terminated for any reason.

Detective April Kovach

Detective Kovach testified on behalf or respondent. She has been employed by respondent for the past seventeen years. Kovach testified that every day there was an issue with petitioner. On petitioner's first day back from the academy she had to be spoken to about her hair. Kovach confirmed the incident when petitioner referred to the President as the orange guy. Kovach was embarrassed because she oversaw petitioner. This was petitioner's second chance to get it together since she failed the police academy.

Kovach also confirmed through eye-witnesses that petitioner made a threatening gesture behind her back when she walked behind her. Petitioner was given three chances to recite the poem "See it Through" from memory but she was unable to do so. She filed a report dated March 9, 2017. Petitioner wore earrings to a promotional ceremony while in recruit uniform. This is impermissible. Petitioner was asked to write a two-page essay on why it was inappropriate to wear earrings but she did not complete the assignment. Petitioner did refer to the President as the orange guy but there were further questions that were not addressed at this hearing. (R-5.)

Police Officer Lamar Payne

Officer Payne is employed by the Orange Police Department. Payne was in the group of recycled recruits with petitioner. He witnessed petitioner make a gesture behind Kovach's back when petitioner walked behind her. Payne described the table in the room and how petitioner would walk behind Kovach after her leaving the podium and on the way back to her seat. (R-8.)

Recruits who are still considered trainees when not completing the academy were made aware of how to wear their hair and that no jewelry or make-up is permissible. He was present when petitioner was seen wearing earrings and he heard petitioner refer to the President as orange.

Where facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness' testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness' story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it hangs together with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself, in that it must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth. Id. at 521-22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). In other words, a trier of fact may reject testimony as inherently incredible, and may also reject testimony when it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience or overborne by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable choice. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

I FIND the testimony offered by respondent's witnesses to be compelling and credible. All witnesses offered consistent versions leading up to the termination of petitioner. Each of the witnesses' testimony was wholly consistent with their written reports and nearly contemporaneous with the incidents. Petitioner's testimony, on the other hand, was in direct contradiction to the credible testimony offered by respondent's witnesses and was not deemed credible.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Petitioner failed out of the Essex County Police Academy on February 23, 2017, for obtaining more than the allowable nineteen physical training zeros.
2. Petitioner, as well as three other recruits, were permitted to return to the Township of Orange Police Department after failing the Police Academy. Two of the recruits were recommended to be recycled back into the Academy. All recruits were still considered trainees and must comply with rules and policies of the Academy.
3. The first day petitioner returned to the Police Department on February 28, 2017, Lieutenant Brown ordered her to write a report why her hair was in disarray and her appearance inappropriate.
4. Petitioner was unable to name the President of the United States when asked on February 28, 2017, and she referred to him as the "orange guy."
5. On February 28, 2017, Director T. Warren ordered petitioner to write a report on the President of the United States. She, as well as the other recruits, were asked to write a five-page report on respect.

6. On March 1, 2017, petitioner was unable to recite a poem from memory assigned in January 2017. Sergeant Cassidy ordered petitioner to write a report on interest or lack thereof of becoming a police officer.
7. On March 1, 2017, petitioner referred to a ranked officer as "bro."
8. On March 2, 2017, petitioner wore earrings to a promotional ceremony while in uniform in violation of policy and procedure.
9. On or about March 7, 2017, while attending a lecture by Detective Kovach, petitioner made a threatening gesture when passing behind her.
10. Petitioner was removed from the police department effective March 29, 2017.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Civil service employees' rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act and regulations promulgated pursuant thereto. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified people to public service and is to be liberally applied toward merit appointment and tenure protection. Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). However, consistent with public policy and civil service law, a public entity should not be burdened with an employee who fails to perform his or her duties satisfactorily or who engages in misconduct related to his duties. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(a). Such a civil service employee may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a).

In appeals concerning major disciplinary actions brought against classified employees, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The standard of proof in administrative proceedings is a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 275 (1958). The preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in a case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Testimony, to be believed, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself.

Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954). An appeal to the Merit System Board requires the Office of Administrative Law to conduct a de novo hearing and to determine the appellant's guilt or innocence, as well as the appropriate penalty. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987); Cliff v. Morris County Bd. of Soc. Servs., 197 N.J. Super. 307 (App. Div. 1984).

The other obligation of an appointing authority is to discipline an employee for misconduct to discourage a recurrence of such misconduct or, where appropriate, to remove an employee from public service because of the individual severity of the misconduct or because of the cumulative effect of multiple acts of misconduct. Disciplinary action may take the form of removal, suspension, fine, or disciplinary demotion. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6a (1), (2), and (3); N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2 and -3. Probationary review and discipline are not mutually exclusive of one another. Certainly, a probationary employee may be disciplined during the working test period. N.J.S.A. 11A:4-15(c); N.J.A.C. 4A:4-5.4(b). Indeed, petitioner was disciplined during her working test period. Infractions occurring during a working test period logically can be factors to consider in making an ultimate determination of whether a probationer's overall performance is unsatisfactory at the conclusion of the working test period. However, the probationary review process cannot permissibly substitute for the disciplinary process. The agency recognizes the difference between the disciplinary and probationary review processes by placing them in separate subsections of N.J.A.C. 4A:4-5.4.

Regarding Civil Service Rule N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3), petitioner did exhibit an inability to perform her duties. There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for inability to perform duties. However, case law has determined a charge of inability to perform duties is appropriate where is the employee is incapable of carrying his or her own weight. Klusaritz v. Cape May County, CSV2690-98, Initial Decision (May 13, 2002), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (October 25, 2002), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv2690-98.pdf (where appellant failed to complete assignments accurately, failed to follow prescribed formats and submitted inaccurate work); Richard Stockton College v. Parks, CSV 4279-03, Initial Decision (January 31, 2005), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (April 3, 2005), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/final/csv4279-03.pdf (where respondent failed prioritize and complete tasks in a timely manner).

The standard for proving a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetence, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, is set forth in Glenn v. Twp. of Irvington, CSV 5051-03, Initial Decision (February 25, 2005), adopted, MSB (May 23, 2005), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/search.shtml>, that is, considering the nature and frequency of the conduct. Charges of incompetence, inefficiency or failure to perform duties are sustained predominantly in instances where there is either continual poor performance by an employee or the employee is responsible for an incident resulting in serious repercussions to the employer. When describing the officer's misconduct, the ALJ in Glenn noted:

> [T]he persistence, pervasiveness and repetition of the misconduct of ignoring orders of his superiors, of neglecting to complete assignments, keep appointments or follow protocols and of failing to successfully perform the duties of the job . . . and the repeated disregard of training, directives, orders, admonishments, requests and warnings . . . can only draw one to a conclusion that the behavior was calculated and intentional . . . . A manifest rejection of the expectations of an appointing authority as occurred here is the epitome of a combination of . . . neglect of duty and inefficiency.
> [Glenn, CSV 5051-03, Initial Decision.]

In the instant matter, applying the standard of Glenn and looking at the nature and frequency of the conduct of the petitioner, it is apparent that there has been a consistent failure in performing her assigned duties beginning on the first day of petitioner's return from the Academy. She has had to write and re-write reports specific to her for being insubordinate, unable to name the President, and being in violation of the recruit uniform—clearly defying the rules and regulations of both the Academy and Police Department. I therefore CONCLUDE that petitioner is unable to perform her duties and that the charge of inability to perform duties, incompetency and inefficiency should be sustained.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's removal be AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

CORRECTED DECISION

ISSUED: MAY 7, 2018 BW

The appeal of Sean McGovern, Sheriff's Officer Sergeant, Hudson County Sheriff's Office, 30 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Margaret M. Monaco, who rendered her initial decision on January 21, 2018. Exceptions were filed by the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 18, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision to modify the 30 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension.

Since the appellant did not serve the imposed suspension prior to his retirement, he is not entitled to back pay or other benefits as set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in suspending the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore modifies the 30 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 11113-12
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2013-286

IN THE MATTER OF SEAN MCGOVERN, HUDSON COUNTY SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT.

Sean P. McGovern, appellant, pro se

John J. Collins, Assistant County Counsel, for respondent Hudson County (Donato J. Battista, County Counsel)

Record Closed: January 16, 2018 Decided: January 31, 2018

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter involves disciplinary charges against appellant Sean McGovern, who, prior to his retirement, was employed as a sergeant with respondent, the Hudson County Sheriff's Department (HCSD). Appellant appeals from a thirty-day suspension predicated on his alleged insubordination.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The HCSD issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) dated June 28, 2010, informing appellant of the charges of insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee issued against him. Specifically, the PNDA states:

> On Monday, June 28, 2010, at 11:08 a.m., I, Captain Patrick J. Schifano, contacted Sergeant Sean McGovern, via telephone, and instructed him to leave me a detailed activity regarding a matter under investigation. Sergeant McGovern stated that he would not write the report and indicated that he was leaving work sick because he was stressed and hung up the telephone on me.

After a departmental hearing, the HCSD issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 10, 2012, sustaining the charge of insubordination and providing for appellant's suspension for thirty days. Appellant filed an appeal and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed for a hearing as a contested case. Following the adjournment of hearing dates at the parties' request, the hearing was held on March 26, 2014. After the conclusion of the hearing, the record remained open for the receipt of a transcript of the hearing and post-hearing submissions. Briefs dated June 30 and July 31, 2017, were filed on behalf of the HCSD and appellant, respectively, and the HCSD submitted a reply brief dated September 5, 2017. On November 13, 2017, I issued an order granting a motion on behalf of appellant's former attorney to be relieved as counsel and affording appellant the opportunity to submit a reply brief. Appellant submitted a reply brief dated January 15, 2018, on which date the record closed.[1]

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

At the hearing, the HCSD presented testimony by Captain Patrick Schifano, and appellant testified on his own behalf. Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following preliminary FACTS.

Appellant was employed by the HCSD from 1997 until his retirement effective September 1, 2010, at which time he held the rank of sergeant. Patrick Schifano (Schifano) is employed as a captain in control of the HCSD's patrol bureau. He has served as a captain for over five years and has been employed by the HCSD for approximately twenty-four years.

During the relevant period, appellant was in charge of supervising certain civilian security guards. Part of appellant's duties included completing attendance sheets or time cards for the security guards under his charge and submitting this documentation to Payroll. Appellant worked under the command of Schifano, who served as appellant's superior officer.

On June 27, 2010, Schifano received a written order from the then undersheriff, Frank Schillari, directing Schifano to obtain a report from appellant regarding his actions for the past eight weeks during which, according to Schillari's memorandum, appellant had not reported to Payroll the work hours of several security guards. (R-2.)

Schifano contacted appellant by telephone at 11:08 a.m. on June 28, 2010. Divergent testimony was offered as to what transpired during that telephone call. On the same day, Schifano authored a report to Schillari regarding his conversation with appellant and drafted the PNDA charging appellant with insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee. (R-1; R-3.) Ultimately, the charge of insubordination was sustained and a thirty-day suspension imposed. (R-4.)

The Testimony

Apart from the evidence that forms the basis of the aforesaid findings of fact, a summary of pertinent testimony follows.

Patrick Schifano

Schifano testified that he was directed to contact appellant and obtain a report from him in reference to the eight-week period about which the undersheriff had questions concerning payroll and time cards for the security guards under appellant's command. Schifano contacted appellant by telephone on June 28, 2010, and he ordered appellant to make a report regarding this eight-week period and the time cards that appellant was responsible for. Although Schifano candidly acknowledged that he could not state the exact words that he said, he testified that he informed appellant that he needed a report covering the last eight weeks and recalled saying "time cards." Schifano stated that he had been ordered to get a report from appellant regarding the attendance sheets for the security guards under appellant's purview, and that is what he asked for. He explained that the order was for appellant to explain in a report what happened during the eight-week period regarding missing time sheets for the security guards under appellant's supervision, and he made that clear to appellant. The report did not deal with just one security guard.

Schifano testified that in response to his request, appellant stated that he was stressed, he was going home sick, and he was not doing the report. Schifano described that appellant responded in a "very loud" voice and then hung up the telephone on him. Schifano's conversation with appellant lasted approximately a minute or a minute and a half. Although Schifano acknowledged that he did not recall specifying a time when the report had to be submitted, he articulated his understanding that when a supervisor asks for a report it is to be completed by the end of the day.

Schifano authored a report to the undersheriff on the same day as his conversation with appellant. In the report, Schifano informed the undersheriff that he had contacted appellant and "ordered him to submit a report to [him] detailing the situation with Payroll, in particular his actions over the last 8 weeks and the missing time cards," and appellant "refused to write the report as ordered and said he was going home sick, that he was stressed and hung up on [him] while [he] was still talking to him." (R-3.) Schifano further advised that appellant's actions toward him were "inappropriate and unacceptable" and that he would "be contacting the Internal Affairs unit and filing charges for the refusal to write the reports as directed and for [appellant's] conduct on that date."

Schifano testified that he made clear to appellant that he needed a report from him and that appellant said that he was not going to do it. Schifano recommended discipline for insubordination because Schifano gave appellant an order and appellant refused to do it. He believed that appellant acted insubordinate because he "blatantly refused to do something" that Schifano had given him an order to do.

Schifano testified that appellant never submitted the requested report to him and, as of his testimony, he still did not have the report. According to Schifano, he offered similar testimony regarding not receiving the report at appellant's disciplinary hearing. He further characterized as "inaccurate" appellant's testimony regarding a conversation with him and Chief Bartucci.

Sean McGovern

Appellant testified that on June 28, 2010, Schifano called him on the telephone and asked for a report regarding an eight-week period and attendance sheets. Appellant described that he had just returned to work after being out sick for seven days. Appellant stated his understanding that the requested report concerned the attendance sheets for one female security guard at the Meadowview Psychiatric Hospital. Appellant did not recall if Schifano mentioned the one security guard, but stated that he knew it involved her attendance sheets because they previously spoke about it. According to appellant, approximately two to three weeks earlier, he had a conversation with Schifano and Captain Bartucci, during which Schifano conveyed that Schillari wanted appellant to write a report about the attendance sheets of the one guard, but it was "all nonsense" and "bullst." According to appellant, he was also told that Schillari "wanted to get even" with appellant and wanted him investigated.

Appellant testified that, during his telephone conversation with Schifano, he told Schifano that he was sick and was going home. Appellant described that he had previously told Schifano that he had hives for about three or four weeks due to stress.

According to appellant, he left work on June 28, 2010, because he could not stop scratching; he had only come in to do something and intended on going home; and he went to the doctor the next day. Appellant denied that he spoke in a loud voice and did not believe that he was impolite to Schifano. He denied telling Schifano that he was not doing the report and denied hanging up on him. Appellant testified that Schifano did not convey the immediacy of submitting the report and did not inform him that he wanted the report that day. Appellant acknowledged that he did not tell Schifano when he would write the report.

Appellant testified that he was out of work from June 28 until September 17, 2010. He described conversations with Internal Affairs in July 2010 during which he told the lieutenant that he was going to write the report that day, and that he was later told, when he asked whether he should fax or mail the report, not to worry about it and to bring the report in when he felt better. Appellant testified that he wrote the report at home when he was sick and he submitted the report regarding the one security guard directly to Schifano when he returned to work on September 17, 2010. According to appellant, Schifano admitted that he had received the report during appellant's disciplinary hearing.

Analysis and Additional Findings of Fact

In view of the divergent testimony, it is necessary for me to assess the credibility of the witnesses for the purpose of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22. A trier of fact may reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and may also reject testimony when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Similarly, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted).

In judging the strength of the evidence and evaluating the demeanor and credibility of the witnesses, I found Schifano to be a forthright and credible witness. He presented candid and persuasive testimony as to the pertinent facts, which was consistent with the report that he authored on the day of the incident. The record is bereft of credible evidence suggesting that he harbored a motive or bias to fabricate his version of the relevant facts. Indeed, appellant described that he had a good relationship with Schifano. Plainly, on balance, appellant has the greatest stake in the outcome of this matter since it involves his discipline. Succinctly stated, a canvas of the totality of the evidence casts doubt on the accuracy, reliability and believability of appellant's version of events. The undersigned found appellant's rendition to be improbable and not "hanging together" with, and discredited and overborne by, the credible testimony of Schifano.

Based upon a review of the testimony and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following additional pertinent FACTS:

During Schifano's telephone conversation with appellant on June 28, 2010, he ordered appellant to submit a report regarding an eight-week period and the attendance sheets of security guards under appellant's supervision. Appellant refused to write the report as ordered and advised that he was stressed and was going home sick. Appellant spoke in a loud voice to Schifano and hung up on him. Schifano did not receive the requested report from appellant.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1, et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. See N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the employee is guilty of the charges brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

In this matter, the HCSD bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis.

An appointing authority may discipline an employee for, among other causes, insubordination. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2). Insubordination encompasses an employee's failure or refusal to follow a directive, order or instruction of a supervisor. See Eaddy v. Dep't of Transp., 208 N.J. Super. 156 (App. Div.), certif. granted, 104 N.J. 392, order vacated, appeal dismissed, 105 N.J. 569 (1986); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317, 322 (App. Div. 1967). "It is a fundamental principle of the workplace, especially in a paramilitary organization, that when an employee is given an order by a superior . . . the order will be followed." Osle v. Mid-State Corr. Facility, CSV 6289-01, Merit System Board (April 1, 2003), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. An order need not be in written form to be valid. See Hale v. Dep't of Transp., CSV 6778-02 and CSV 510-03, Initial Decision (October 9, 2003), adopted, Merit System Board (November 24, 2003), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> (employee's refusal to comply with supervisor's verbal direction to turn music down amounted to insubordination). Further, whether a supervisor identified his/her direction as an "order" is irrelevant, and a subordinate's failure to comply with a supervisor's direction constitutes insubordination. See Osle, CSV 6289-01, Merit System Board (April 1, 2003), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. And, "[i]t is not for a public employee to second guess a superior's order and refuse to obey that order because it would result in . . . a result which the subordinate does not concur in." Headen v. E. Jersey State Prison, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 623, 627. Rather, "[a] public employee who intentionally disobeys a proper order does so at his or her own risk." Ibid.

Based upon the aforesaid Findings of Fact, I CONCLUDE that the HCSD has shouldered its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that appellant's actions amount to insubordination. In short, appellant was given a direct order by a superior officer and appellant refused to, and failed to, comply with that order. He further spoke in a disrespectful and insubordinate tone and hung up on his superior. Our courts have recognized that a law-enforcement officer is held to a high standard of conduct. See In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576 (1990); Moorestown Township v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Equally recognized is the importance of maintaining strict discipline in paramilitary settings such as police departments and correctional facilities. See Henry, 81 N.J. at 579; Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317. In this type of setting, the "[r]efusal to obey orders . . . cannot be tolerated." Rivell, 115 N.J. Super. at 72. Given his lengthy career with the HCSD, appellant should be cognizant of the high standard of conduct expected and the strict rules that must be followed.

The only remaining issue concerns the penalty that should be imposed. It is beyond debate that appellant's past disciplinary record may be considered for guidance in determining the appropriate penalty, and the principle of progressive discipline is applied in this state. See Bock, 38 N.J. at 522. Although an employee's past record may not be considered for purposes of proving the present charge, past misconduct can be a factor in determining the appropriate penalty for the current misconduct. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007); In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007); Bock, 38 N.J. at 522–23. The seriousness of appellant's infraction must also be balanced in the equation of whether a thirty-day suspension or something less is appropriate under the circumstances. See Henry, 81 N.J. at 580.

The parties have stipulated that appellant has no prior disciplinary record to be considered. (J-1.) In other words, appellant's current infraction is an aberration in an otherwise unblemished career. Based upon the totality of the circumstances, I am not persuaded that a thirty-day suspension, as previously imposed, is warranted. I CONCLUDE that a ten-day suspension is reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances presented, and that such discipline is consistent with progressive discipline.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charge of insubordination be and hereby is SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that a ten-day suspension is imposed. I further ORDER that, inasmuch as appellant had not served the previously imposed suspension prior to his retirement, no back pay or other benefits as may be dictated by N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 are warranted.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matter of Tahron Miles City of Newark, Police Department	:	FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION
CSC DKT. NOs. 2015-244 & 2015-816 OAL DKT. NO. CSV 09487-14 & OAL DKT. NO. CSR 13040-14 (CONSOLIDATED)	:

The appeals of Tahron Miles, Police Officer, City of Newark, Police Department, indefinite suspension effective June 6, 2014 and removal effective September 15, 2014, on charges, were heard by Administrative Law Judge Evelyn J. Morose, who rendered her initial decision on February 28, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting of April 18, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision. Additionally, the Commission notes that the Administrative Law Judge did not rendered a determination regarding the indefinite suspension. However, since the record reflects that the standard to impose such a suspension under N.J.A.C. 4:2-2.7 were met, the Commission also upholds that action.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in indefinitely suspending and removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms those actions and dismisses the appeals of Tahron Miles.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 5, 2014, the City of Newark, Police Department (Newark Police) served Tahron Miles (Miles) with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) indefinitely suspending Miles effective June 6, 2014. (R-3.) Miles requested a Departmental Hearing, which was held on July 2, 2014, and resulted in a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), wherein Miles was disciplined by means of a suspension from June 6, 2014, to July 8, 2014. The following charges were sustained:

OAL Docket No. CSV 09487-14

Charge 1: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 6:29.1, OFFICIAL INEFFICIENCY OR INCOMPETENCY. Department members whose performance is demonstrably inadequate or fails to meet, obtain or produce the effects or results mandated by the Department orders and procedures, shall be deemed in violation of Department Rules and Regulations and shall be charged accordingly.

Charge IB: Violation of Civil Service Rule 4A:2-2.3(a)(1). INCOMPETENCY, INEFFICIENCY, FAILURE TO PERFORM DUTIES.

Charge IC: Violation of Civil Service Rules 4A:2-2.3(a)(3). INABILITY TO PERFORM DUTIES.

Specification: On April 30, 2014, Miles did violate the above Rules when information was received from Camden County Superior Court-Domestic Violence Unit that he was the subject of provisions from possessing any and all firearms. Miles was the subject of provisions of the Domestic Violence Order stemming from an incident which occurred on June 3, 2012. Since June 3, 2012, Miles has been prohibited from possessing any firearms. In fact, his personal firearms were also seized by the Camden County Superior Court. Miles also failed to disclose his inability to possess a firearm and/or the fact that the Camden County Superior Court seized his personal weapons as a result of Domestic Violence.

Charge II: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 18:22-1. FALSE STATEMENTS. Police Officers who deliberately depart from the truth by omitting, misrepresenting, or distorting any fact on any form, questionnaire, or report shall be charged with having made a false statement. (2 Counts.)

Charge III: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 18:22-2. PRE-EMPLOYMENT STATEMENTS. Police officers shall be held to have violated this Rule, retroactively, who had false statements during their investigation from candidacy to the Police Department. (2 Counts.)

Specification I: On October 28, 2013, Miles did submit a Pre-Employment Background Investigation Questionnaire to the Newark Police with intent to deceive, in that he deliberately omitted pertinent information relative to Camden County Prosecutor's Office-Domestic Violence Unit prohibiting him from possessing any firearms.

Specification II: On October 28, 2013, Miles did submit a Pre-Employment Background Investigation Questionnaire to the Newark Police with intent to deceive, in that he deliberately omitted pertinent information relative to the Camden County Prosecutor's Office-Domestic Violence Unit seizing his personal firearms and his Camden Police issued firearms, as a result of a Domestic Violence where he was the subject. The action of prohibiting Miles from possessing or carrying any firearms would have disqualified him from employment as a Newark Police Officer.

Charge IV: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 4:4.6. SUBPOENAING OR SUMMONING. Whenever Department members are summoned or subpoenaed to appear before:

(a) A legally constituted investigative body with subpoena power,

(b) A judicial tribunal with subpoena powers, or comparable agencies,

(c) A legally constituted hearing board for the purpose of inquiring into the activities or operations of Individual Department police officers or of the Department itself.

They shall appear before, cooperate with and render every aid and assistance to such body, tribunal or agency and prior to such appearance notify their commanding officer by submitting a duplicate report, the original of which shall be forwarded through channels to the Office of the Police Director. (3 Counts.)

Charge V: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 3:2.3. RESPONSIBILITY FOR OWN ACTIONS. A police officer is responsible for his own actions or omissions. He may not submit as an excuse or justification for an action or for an omission to a Rule and Regulation, to an Order, or to a Directive, that his action or inaction resulted from the advice or suggestion of another person. This Rule hold whether this person is connected with the Department or not. On the other hand, this Rule does not apply when he acts to carry out the Order of an Officer of higher rank in which case the responsibility for issuing Orders or Directives shall be assessed against the officer of higher rank. (3 Counts.)

Specification I: On January 28, 2014, Miles did violate the above rule when he responded to Camden County Superior Court-Family Part relative to Case No. FO 04 000134 13 C and failed to notify his commanding officer and the Police Director in writing prior to appearance.

Specification II: On February 20, 2014, Miles did violate the above rule when he responded to Camden County Superior Court-Family Part relative to Case FO 04 000134 13 C and failed to notify his commanding officer and the Police Director in writing prior to appearance.

Specification III: On June 3, 2014, Miles did violate the above rule when he responded to Camden County Superior Court-Family relative to Case FO 04 000134 13 C and failed to notify his commanding officer and the Police Director prior to appearance.

Charge VI: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations, Chapter 3:2.7. KNOWLEDGE OF LAWS AND REGULATIONS. Police Officers shall equip themselves with knowledge found in the (2 Counts):

(a) New Jersey Laws,

(b) Newark City Ordinances,

(c) New Jersey Court Rules, and

(d) The Newark Police Department Manual of Rules and Regulations.

Specification I: Prior to April 30, 2014, Miles did violate the above rule when he accepted and possess a Newark Police Department issued firearm, knowing he was prohibited from possessing any firearm by the Camden County Prosecutor's Office-Domestic Violence Unit.

Specification II: On June 3, 2014, Police Officer Miles did violate the above rules when booked off sick with a cold and failed to notify his command that he was no longer at his place of confinement.

Charge VII: Violation of Newark Police Department Rules and Regulations Chapter 18:6. NEGLECT OF DUTY. Department members shall not commit any act nor shall they be guilty of any omission that constitutes neglect of duty. (3 Counts.)

Charges VIIB: Violation of Civil Service Rule: 4A2:2-3(a)(7). An employee may be subject to discipline for NEGLECT OF DUTY.

Specification I: Miles, assigned to Fifth District-Patrol, did neglect his duty when he failed to inform the Newark Police Department that he was prohibited from possessing any firearm by the Camden County Prosecutor's Office-Domestic Violence Unit.

Specification II: On June 3, 2014, Police Officer Miles did violate the above rules when he booked off sick with a cold and failed to notify his command that he was no longer at his place of confinement.

Specification III: On June 3, 2014, Police Officer Miles did violate the above rule when he responded to Camden County Superior Court-Family Part relative to Case

FO 04 000134 13 C and failed to notify his commanding officer and the Police Director in writing prior to appearance. (R-4.)

On July 14, 2014, Miles appealed the sustained charges. Tahron Miles v. City of Newark, Police Department, Docket No. CSV 09487-14 was transmitted, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 25, 2014, where it was filed.

On July 3, 2014, Newark served Miles with a PNDA seeking termination. (R-2.) Miles requested a Departmental Hearing, which was held on September 2, 2014. At the hearing, Miles entered a non-guilty plea. However, a finding of guilt was entered by the Board and in accordance with a FNDA, Miles was terminated from his position, effective September 15, 2014. The following charges were sustained:

Miles appealed the charges. In the Matter of Tahron Miles, City of Newark (Police Department), Docket No. CSR 13040-14 was transmitted, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), on September 22, 2014, where it was filed.

On November 14, 2014, a Consent Order Consolidating the two Cases was entered by the Honorable James A. Geraghty, Jr., ALJ. Orders of Inactivity were entered, at the request of the parties, on November 19, 2014, May 20, 2015, September 23, 2015, March 8, 2016, June 17, 2016, September 12, 2016, and March 28, 2017, pending a decision in a related New Jersey Appellate Division case, which the parties advised might resolve the two matters. Several documents were executed related to Miles's waiver of back pay.

At the conclusion of the Appellate case, hearings were held on October 16, 2017, and January 12, 2018. The record closed on February 16, 2018, upon the submission of post hearing briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Six witnesses testified in this matter. Miles testified on his own behalf and called as a witness Sergeant Andy Rivera of the Newark Police. Director Sheilah A. Coley, Lieutenant Christine Locke, Sergeant Eric Wren, and Assistant Prosecutor Matthew Spence testified on behalf of the Newark Police. Based upon a review of the totality of the pertinent evidence, and having had the opportunity to assess the demeanor and credibility of the witnesses and review the documents admitted into evidence, I FIND the following pertinent facts:

1.) Miles was employed as a police officer for the Camden City Police Department (Camden Police) from January 2010 to April 2013.

2.) Milles was involved in a domestic incident on June 3, 2012. A Temporary Restraining Order (TRO) was entered on June 4, 2012. The TRO was dismissed on June 14, 2012. (R-8.)

3.) Pursuant to the Office of the Attorney General Guidelines, the Camden County Prosecutor's Office (Camden Prosecutor's) seized the weapons (personal and duty weapons) and Fire Arms Purchaser Identification Card (FPIC) of Miles, on June 4, 2012.

4.) Miles was set to be re-armed by the Camden Prosecutor's once he completed counseling and was re-evaluated by a Department physician. Miles completed those terms and a decision was made by the Camden Prosecutor's on November 9, 2012, to re-arm Miles.

5.) Before Miles was re-armed and returned his FPIC, he was involved in an incident at a "local club" on November 11, 2012, where the Cherry Hill Police Department was summoned. (R-9.)

6.) Based upon the second incident, the Camden Prosecutor's reversed its Initial Decision to re-arm Miles. Miles was prohibited from carrying any weapon based on the domestic violence of June 3, 2012, and the "local club" incident on November 11, 2012. (R-19 to R-21.)

7.) Miles received a ninety-day suspension from the Camden Police for failing to inform his superior officers of the November 11, 2012, incident. Miles only served thirteen days of his ninety-day suspension because the Camden Police ceased to exist on March 31, 2013.

8.) On October 16, 2017, when Miles applied to be a police officer in Newark, he did not inform the Newark Police that his weapons and FPIC were seized as of June 4, 2012. (R-17.)

9.) Miles completed a background investigation for his Newark Police job application. The first page of the applicant's questionnaire contained a warning provision that "any misstatement of fact, omission or attempt to mislead this agency, its investigators or the appointing authority, deliberate or in error, may lead to your disqualification." Applicants were instructed to initial the bottom of every page as they completed each page, a direction with which Miles complied. (R-6, R-22.)

10.) On October 24, 2013, Miles acknowledged on the questionnaire, that a TRO was issued against him in Camden County and later dismissed. (R-22.)

11.) Miles testified that, at the time that he applied for employment as a Newark Police Officer, he did not advise Newark that his weapons were seized by the Camden Prosecutor's, as was his FPIC.

12.) Sergeant Rivera of the Newark Police Department had difficulty obtaining information regarding Miles's employment as a police officer in Camden. In recommending that Newark continue the hiring process for Miles, he relied upon the truthfulness of the information provided by Miles in his pre-employment interview and questionnaire.

13.) On November 25, 2013, Miles was employed as police officer in the City of Newark.

14.) Lieutenant Locke testified that Miles failed to disclose on his Newark questionnaire that he was prohibited from carrying a weapon. She testified that Miles would not have been accepted had he revealed on his questionnaire that he was prohibited from carrying a weapon.

15.) Miles testified that he did not advise the Newark Police, either before his employment or while he working as a Newark Police Officer and carrying a weapon in Newark, that his weapons were seized by the Camden Prosecutor's, as was his FPIC.

16.) Miles appeared in Camden County Superior Court on January 28, 2014, February 20, 2014, and June 3, 2014. Miles testified that he did not notify his supervisor in the Newark Police Department that he was summoned and did appear in Court in Camden County Superior Court, Family Part on those three days. He acknowledged that he told his supervisor that he was sick on at least one of the days that he was in Court. (R-12, R-15.)

17.) On April 30, 2014, Sergeant Wren was directed by Assistant Prosecutor Spence of the Camden County Prosecutor's Office to contact the Newark Police Department since Miles had stated in Court that he was a police officer for Newark even though he did not have a legal right to possess a weapon nor FPIC since 2012. Sergeant Wren advised staff of the Newark Police Department that the department weapon issued by the Camden Police Department, the personal weapons of Miles, and Miles's FPIC were all seized on June 4, 2012. (R-5.)

18.) Miles did not receive the return of his personal weapons and his FPIC until an Order was entered by the Honorable Richard F. Wells, J.S.C. of the Superior Court, Camden County, Chancery Division-Family Part, on June 7, 2017.

I FIND no merit in Miles's argument that he did nothing that should be found to rise to the level of intentional dishonesty or untruthfulness, sufficient to support removal, since the TRO and charges related to the "local club" incident concluded in dismissal, and his personal firearms and FPIC were eventually returned. The sustained charges at issue relate not to the eventual dismissal of the entered TRO and "local club" charges nor to the eventual return of his weapons and FPIC, but rather to Miles's failure to truthfully and completely inform Newark of the "local club" incident and that he did not have a legal right to possess and carry a weapon.

A careful analysis of credibility is necessary in order to make critical findings of fact. For testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Also, "'[t]he interests, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 522, 521-22 (1950). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with trier of and finder of fact and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Community Affairs Dep't, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 41 (App Div. 1981). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth. Perrone, 5 N.J. at 521-22 (1950). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with trier of and finder of fact and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty, 182 N.J. Super. at 41.

I FIND Miles's argument that he was reasonably confused about the status of his right to carry a firearm to be incredible. In testimony, Miles acknowledged his obligation as a police officer (as detailed in the sustained charges) to know New Jersey Laws, Newark City Ordinances, New Jersey Court Rules, and The Newark Police Department Manual of Rules and Regulations, which include laws relating to seizure of weapons after a domestic violence incident. Further, he was fully aware that his personal firearms and FPIC, seized in June 2012, were not returned to him after the TRO and "local club" incident charges were dismissed, nor by the time he applied to the Newark Police Department, nor during the time he was working as a Police Officer in Newark and carrying a firearm issued by Newark. Since Miles never informed Newark that the weapon issued to him by the Camden Police Department, his personal firearms and FPIC were seized and returned, he certainly cannot reasonably argue Newark's hiring him without this knowledge supports his argument that he was confused about his "right to carry a weapon."

I FIND Miles's argument that the City of Newark "closed its eyes" to details of Miles' application to have no merit. If anything, Newark did not "close its eyes," rather Miles "held his hands over Newark's eyes'" when, during his interview and on his employment questionnaire, he failed to reveal the seizure of his weapons and FPIC card.

I FIND Miles is not justified to claim he is being unjustly disciplined by termination when he was advised on the pre-employment questionnaire that he failed to accurately fill out that "any misstatement of fact, omission or attempt to mislead this agency, its investigators or the appointing authority, deliberate or in error, may lead to your disqualification." (Emphasis added.)

I FIND Miles's argument that he might have been hired by Newark on an interim basis until the return of his weapons and FPIC to be inappropriate speculation since Miles admitted in his testimony that he never informed Newark of the seizure prior to his employment nor was there any testimony that interim positions for police officers "unable to carry" exist.

Based upon the foregoing facts, I FIND that the Newark Police Department has proven by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that Miles is guilty of the sustained charges detailed above and in the FNDAs at issue in Docket No. CSV 09487-14 and Docket No. CSR 13040-14.

LEGAL ANALYSIS, CONCLUSIONS AND PENALTY

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The burden of persuasion is on the agency in enforcement proceedings to prove violation(s) of administrative regulations. Cumberland Farms v. Moffett, 218 N.J. Super. 331, 341 (App. Div. 1987). The appointing agency must prove its case by the preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Preponderance may be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958).

A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of this concept is the nature, number, and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions, evaluated by progressively increasing penalties. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962). However, the principle of incremental, or progressive, discipline does not need to be applied in every disciplinary setting, particularly when the misconduct "is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007). New Jersey courts have repeatedly concluded that, even in the absence of a prior disciplinary record, removal may be imposed if the charges are serious enough in nature. Ibid.; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980).

Moreover, the test for reviewing an administrative sanction is "whether such punishment is so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, so as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982). Further, courts should take care not to substitute their own views of whether a particular penalty is correct for those of the body charged with making that decision. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474,486 (2007).

Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a), -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.4. A law enforcement officer is held to a higher standard of conduct than other employees and, more than other employees, is expected to act in a responsible manner, honestly, with integrity, fidelity and good faith. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576 (1990); Reinhardt v. E. Jersey State Prison, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 166. Where the "desired goal of upholding the morale and discipline of the force, as well as maintaining public respect for its officers would be undermined, removal is justified" as it is when there is a "violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419 (1955).

As detailed more above, Miles's weapons and FPIC were seized as a result of two separate incidents—a domestic violence incident and a "local club" incident. Miles failed to inform his then employee, the Camden County Police Department, of the "local club incident." As a result, he was suspended for ninety days.[1] Since the Camden County Police dissolved, Miles sought employment from the City of Newark. During his pre-employment interview and in his pre-employment questionnaire, Miles failed to inform Newark of the seizure of his service weapon, his personal weapons and his FPIC. During his employment, he failed to inform his supervisor, as required, when he was summoned and did appear in the Superior Court, Camden County Chancery Division-Family Part on three separate occasions. In fact, on at least one occasion, he expressly lied to his supervisor by advising him that he was home sick rather than in Court on a domestic matter. During his employment he accepted and carried a weapon issued to him by Newark with knowledge that his seized personal weapons and FPIC were never returned to him. Miles could not have reasonably been confused as of "right to carry." With consideration of the factual basis for the charges at issue and the standard to which a police officer is held, I CONCLUDE that the sustained charges should be affirmed and that removal is merited.

[1] Miles did not actually serve all the days of his suspension from the Camden County Police Department solely because this police force dissolved. However, the discipline remains on his record.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 4056-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-3057

IN THE MATTER OF
AMY J. ROBITAILLE,
GLOUCESTER COUNTY, DEPARTMENT OF EMERGENCY RESPONSE

Jason L. Jones, Esq., and Charlette Matts-Brown, Esq., for appellant (Weissman and Mintz, LLC, attorneys)

Eric D. Milavsky, Esq., for respondent (Brown and Connery, LLP, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 21, 2017 Decided: March 19, 2018

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, Acting Director and Chief ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Amy Robitaille (Ms. Robitaille), an Emergency Medical Technician, appeals her removal on charges of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty. Appellant denies that she violated any of the provisions of the administrative code when she, along with her partner, failed to respond to a call.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 25, 2016, the respondent Gloucester County Department of Emergency Response (Department) issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action to appellant for the above charges and suspended her without pay pending a disciplinary hearing. (A-1.) After the hearing on February 8, 2016, the Department served appellant with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) sustaining the charges and removing her effective February 22, 2016. (R-1.) Appellant appealed the FNDA to the Civil Service Commission (CSC). The CSC transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on March 15, 2016. I scheduled the hearing for August 16 and 17, 2016. Appellant requested an adjournment due to her retaining counsel. Since the case was a removal, respondent would not consent unless appellant waived back pay until the next hearing date. Appellant waived back pay until the next scheduled hearing date, October 19 and 20, 2016. Those dates were adjourned and the hearing was rescheduled for October 31, and November 17, 2016. The parties adjourned those dates due to the unavailability of witnesses on those scheduled dates. The hearing was then rescheduled for January 23 and 25, 2017. On those dates, I heard the case and kept the record open for written submissions. The record closed upon receipt of those submissions on March 21, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are not in dispute and therefore I FIND them as FACT.

Amy Robitaille was an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) with the Department. She began as a part-time EMT in October 2007 and then became a full-time EMT in November 2007. She has certification with the State of New Jersey as an EMT and a firefighter. Her job is to answer 9-1-1 calls, provide basic treatment and intervention services for medical trauma and transport patients to the hospital and other appropriate facilities.

Ms. Robitaille was working the 6:00 p.m. to 6:00 a.m. shift that went from December 30, 2016 to December 31, 2016. EMTs work in teams as required by the State of New Jersey. The Department is a twenty-four hour per day operation. EMTs work twelve-hour shifts and must be ready to respond. At the time of the incident in question, Ms. Robitaille was working with her partner, Dan Hauss, who was a part-time or per diem employee. They were assigned to Gloucester County Emergency Medical Services (GCEMS) crew 82-75. At about 1:36 a.m., their unit was dispatched for a cardiac arrest in Glassboro, New Jersey. The dispatch was later updated to a gunshot wound. Due to the severity of the call, another crew BLS 82-85 was also dispatched and responded to assist. Ms. Robitaille's unit never responded nor arrived at the location. Ms. Robitaille's partner, Mr. Hauss, received a written warning for missing the call. Ms. Robitaille was suspended without pay, and then removed after her hearing.

The parties stipulated that there is a pager charger and radio charger that are secured in place in the computer room. The telephone charger was not secured in the computer room.

TESTIMONY

Andrew Lovell

Andrew Lovell testified that he is Chief of Emergency Medical Services (EMS) for GCDER. He previously served as Chief for the Township of Logan. When Gloucester County established its first county life support system in 2007, he was chosen to lead it. The function of the GCDER is to respond rapidly to all 9-1-1 calls from the public for traumatic or medical emergencies.

Chief Lovell explained that, during a typical night shift, a team may receive between three to seven calls. A member of the public dials 9-1-1 and the public safety telecommunicator determines the nature of the emergency and dispatches an EMS crew. Typically crews of two are in stations awaiting the calls. Policy 2012-26 sets forth that the GCEMS expects that "all emergency staff will arrive at work with sufficient rest to be able to remain awake and perform all functions fully alert and safely." (R-1.) The policy also sets forth that the on-duty crew must be available for immediate response to any emergency dispatch. It prohibits sleeping while on duty and sets forth that "Failure to be ready to respond to an emergency dispatch or call will result in disciplinary action up to and including termination." (R-1.)

Chief Lovell testified to the six methods of dispatch. There are three voice or audible and three digital methods that are used concurrently. They are: 1) audio message over VHF paging system; 2) audio message over UHF paging system; 3) two-way radio system; 4) digital text message to crew cell phone; 5) digital email message to computer; and 6) Active 9-1-1 Phone App. The redundancy is used so that the crews cannot miss a call. Sometimes one method may fail, although that is very infrequently, but all six will not fail at the same time. The failure of all has never happened because each method is independent of the other. Chief Lovell explained a video of the station showing the crew area, the kitchen area and the small computer room, all of which are in close proximity.

On December 31, 2015, a call went out at 1:36 a.m. that a person was lying in the driveway in front of a residence. Another crew arrived on the scene, treated and transported the patient to the hospital where the patient was pronounced dead in the Emergency Room. Chief Lovell testified that he knows that the call went out over all six methods because he heard the audio notice. The County keeps recorded messages as they are subject to Open Public Records Act (OPRA) requests. He played the recording of the dispatch, which lasted approximately three minutes and forty-one seconds. (R-5.) He noted that the synthesized voice saying what time it is while the recording plays is only on the recording and not heard in real time. The paramedics and the fire department were concurrently dispatched. Two minutes after the call, Ms. Robitaille's crew still had not responded.

Chief Lovell testified that the call went to the radio, the crew's digital phone by text and by pager. An audit of the Roam Alert Secure Network (RSAN) indicated that the text page was sent electronically. The cell phone carrier confirms that it transmitted the page. (R-6.) He also retrieved the confirmation of the email that was sent. (R-7.) When he interviewed Ms. Robitaille, she said that she had the 9-1-1 Phone App and the call was transmitted. Chief Lovell also showed that the crew responded to three calls before the 1:36 a.m. call and responded to one call after that call. (R-8.) The last call they responded to before the 1:36 call was at 9:59 p.m. Ms. Robitaille's crew reported no issue with the pagers or radio prior to the 1:36 a.m. call. He testified to Police Policy 2012-13 that requires crews to respond and be in route to a call within two minutes of the initial dispatch. (R-9.) He noted that Ms. Robitaille did not fill out a special report, which can be used if something goes wrong, for example, if a pager does not trip. (R-11.) Ms. Robitaille received the Uniform and Appearance policy (R-17) and the Rested and Fit for Duty Policy (R-1.)

Chief Lovell requested that Human Resources discipline Ms. Robitaille for the failure to respond to the call. He recommended termination because she had a pattern of failure to carry out the duties of an EMT and that failure put the public at risk. (R-10.) No other employees missed the call in question. It is the crew's responsibility to make sure that all methods of communication are on and working. The GCEMS will have answered 200,000 calls this year.

On cross-examination, Chief Lovell noted that electronic devices can fail; however, there has been no reported failure of the radio system, Active 9-1-1, text pages or email that is used by all agencies. He has no knowledge of whether Ms. Robitaille had the email open on the computer. The alert tones are only sent once, so if they are sent more than once, it means that the crew did not respond to the call. He agreed that employees have to pay for the Active 9-1-1 App themselves, so the GCEMS does not require it. The County issued new pagers, but it was due to the new radio system and had nothing to do with this incident. The time between the dispatch and the time the paramedic unit responded was three minutes and thirty-four seconds. Ms. Robitaille reported that her pager did not trip.

Christopher Mellish

Christopher Mellish testified that he is the supervising EMT who works from 7:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. Part of his job is to make sure that crews respond to calls. He found out about Ms. Robitaille's missed call because another unit went to the call, loaded the patient into the ambulance and went to the hospital. On the way to the hospital, the crew called him and asked the status of the other ambulance because that crew, 82-75, never arrived on the scene. After he learned 82-75 did not respond to the call, he called the alarm room supervisor in charge of dispatching, William Ross, and confirmed that Ms. Robitaille's crew, 82-75 did not respond to the call. He then dialed Ms. Robitaille's cell phone. When she answered, she sounded groggy. He asked her if she knew that she had missed an assignment and she said she did not. He asked if it had come up on her Active 911 phone app and she said that it was there. She then called her partner's name three times in an escalating voice, "Dan, Dan, Dan," as if trying to wake him. He did not call Mr. Hauss directly because he generally communicates with the full-time employees and Mr. Hauss is a part-time employee who works twelve to twenty-four hours per week.

Later, at approximately 3:20 a.m., Ms. Robitaille's unit was dispatched to the same address to console the family members who were distraught about what had happened. Mr. Mellish asked her later if the pagers had gone off that time. She said that they had. He filed a report to Chief Lovell and sent it to him by email later that morning.

The call in question was dispatched as a cardiac arrest, which is an involved call that requires multiple people so the second ambulance is sent to assist knowing that Ms. Robitaille and Mr. Hauss would probably need a hand. Mr. Mellish heard the second ambulance sign on to the radio approximately two minutes after the dispatch. When he was first advised of the incident, he was at the Mullica Hill station. Ms. Robitaille said that the pagers did not trip for that 1:36 a.m. call. There were no other EMTs to ask about the status of the pagers. The other unit, 82-85, received the dispatch because they answered the call, if not by pager, by cell phones, if not by cell phones, then the radio, if not the radio, the Active 911 app., if not the app, the dinging of the emails on their computer. There was no previously reported problem with pagers that night. When he asked why she did not answer the cell phone call, Ms. Robitaille said that her cell phone was on silent.

Mr. Mellish denied ever giving EMTs under his supervision a directive that they are not permitted to take duty cell phone chargers in to the crew room. If he issues a verbal directive, he follows it up with a department-wide email. If he issued any directive about chargers, it was not to charge your personal cell phones using department chargers.

Christopher Rosser

Christopher Rosser testified that he is a lieutenant with the Gloucester County EMS. He was on vacation when the incident occurred but was advised of it when he returned, approximately January 4, 2016, according to the documentation. Chief Lovell asked him to investigate the incident. To do so, he spoke with the crew, checked the notification equipment and spoke with the crews in the area to see if they had an issue with any of the equipment.

When Lt. Rosser interviewed Dan Hauss, he was very apologetic and contrite about missing the call. He said, "he may or may not have been sleeping." He described Ms. Robitaille as the opposite in her interview. She answered almost every question with one word and she was not apologetic. She said that the notification equipment was not working. Ms. Robitaille said the radio was in the computer room, but it should have been on her person as it is supposed to be all the time. The duty phone should also be on an EMTs person at all times. He looked specifically at the pagers that were in use at Ms. Robitaille's station. There are three pagers at the Station 82-7. Each pager has a repeat function so he was able to go back many calls to prove that the pager was not having any issues receiving any messages. He was not able to go all the way back to the night in question, but he was able to confirm that the pager was in good working order. Last, he interviewed some other crews and they did not report any issues with any of the notification equipment. He summarized his investigation and gave it to Chief Lovell. Lt. Rosser received one report that one of the three pagers did not activate on January 10, 2016. He does not recall the EMT who made that report.

Although discipline was one of his responsibilities, he was not responsible for recommending any discipline for Ms. Robitaille. He does not know who made that recommendation. He did not recall issuing a memorandum to Mr. Hauss about the incident, but after being shown it, he identified it as the disciplinary memorandum he wrote. (A-1.) Mr. Hauss received a written warning.

Caroline Pope

Caroline Pope testified that she is an EMT with Gloucester County EMS. She will be beginning her third year in March 2017 she worked the hours of 6:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. on December 31, 2015 at station 82–7 in Pitman. Ms. Robitaille and Mr. Hauss preceded her shift. She had worked at station 82–7 approximately eight times before December 31, 2015. She never had any problems with any of the dispatch notification equipment prior to that date. She keeps all the notification equipment in the room where she is located either on her person, sitting next to her or on the coffee table in front of her. It is her responsibility to see that the equipment is charged and the volume is turned up.

Ms. Pope typically has an exchange with the outgoing shift that tells whether there are any problems with the ambulance or the paging system or if hospitals were on divert. The outgoing crew did not mention any problems with any of the notification equipment that she recalls. She recalls a conversation of a shooting that had taken place and that another crew had taken the call.

She identified a pager, and EMS radio, and the duty cell phone as being the type of those items that were present in the station on December 31, 2015, but not necessarily the actual ones that were there that night. During her shift on December 31, 2015, she received approximately three dispatches and did not have any problems with the notification equipment at the station. To this day, she has not had any problems with any of the notification equipment at station 82-7 and the testimony was taken January 25, 2017. Compared to the other places that she has worked as an EMT, the other organizations do not have as many alerting devices as Gloucester County has.

On December 31, 2015, Ms. Pope was a per diem EMT for the county permitted to work up to twenty-four hours per week. She recalled the conversation about the shooting because it is not something that happens every day so it sticks out in her mind. She agrees that she does not have personal knowledge of any problems that Ms. Robitaille could have encountered with equipment prior to her shift. When she demonstrated how the reset button works on the pager, the reset button did not work on the device that had been brought to court. She uses the reset button to make sure that the volume is high enough for her to hear the dispatch.

Amy Robitaille

Amy Robitaille testified that she started working for the Department in October 2007 as a part time EMT. She is certified professionally as an emergency medical technician and a firefighter for the state of New Jersey. Sh e currently works full-time at Lourdes EMS and Gloucester Township EMS part-time or per diem. She began working for Lourdes part-time or per diem in 2014.

Ms. Robitaille's main responsibility for the Department was to answer 9-1-1 trauma calls and then transport patients to the hospital. On occasion, she would answer public assist type calls. She was hired by the Department initially as a part-time EMT, but shortly after being hired she applied for full-time position and was made full time before the end of 2007.

On December 30, 2015, she was assigned to Pitman 82–7 working the 6:00 p.m. to 6:00 a.m. shift. She was assigned with Danny Hauss. Upon arriving for work, she and Mr. Hauss did the rig check to make sure all the equipment was on the ambulance and that they were adequately stocked for the night. The rig check also entails checking for oxygen, oxygen equipment, gas, fuel, radios, lights and everything to ensure they are in working order. They then proceeded to do the station chores.

At some point she received a call from Mr. Mellish. When she received the call from Mr. Mellish, she was watching television sitting on the couch in the crew room. She received a call on her personal cell phone that was set on vibrate at the time. He asked her if she realized that they had missed a call. She responded that of course she did not. He asked if her pager went off and she told him that neither her pager nor Mr. Hauss's had gone off. Ms. Robitaille testified that her voice probably did sound groggy as he said because she hadn't talked for almost 3 hours by the time she had that conversation with him on the telephone. The nature of the call that she had missed was a gunshot. Her pager had not tripped for the call. She recalled that at the Pitman station there were two pagers at the Station. It was not the first time that her pager did not trip or activate. It happens on a regular basis approximately once every couple of months. She reported that to her direct supervisor Mr. Mellish verbally. Mr. Mellish called her on the phone to say the county was getting ready to re-tone them.

Ms. Robitaille testified that her duty phone was in the office charging where the power strips are. She wanted to make sure it was charged to go on a call. There are no chargers for the duty phone in the crew room. There was only one duty phone present in that station during her shift. She was never advised that she was prohibited from charging the duty phone during her shift. She did not see an email prompt because the computer was in the office, not the crew room. Generally, the email does not even stay open. She does not recall hearing a ding from the email. She was never advised that email had to be kept open during the shift. She denied falling asleep at any point during her shift. When Mr. Mellish called again, he told her to be ready to be dispatched to the location of the gun shot. When she and Mr. Hauss went to the location, they were then told that the patient had already been transported by personal vehicle to the hospital so their services were not needed. There was a radio present at the station during the shift, but Mr. Hauss had it. She recalled the conversation between her and Mr. Hauss and the incoming team. She told them about the shooting and the fact that the pagers had not tripped for that call. She is absolutely certain she told Ms. Pope that the pagers did not trip. She had the active 9-1-1 app on her phone at the time of the call at issue. Her phone was set on vibrate at the time. It would have made one short buzzing sound, which she does not recall hearing during her shift.

Two weeks prior to testifying, she had just bought a new iPhone 7 to replace her iPhone 6. The active 9-1-1 app did not change though. She received notification through the app anytime from two to seven times per shift. The vibration did not change from one phone to another.

Ms. Robitaille found out she was being removed from her position by a letter that said she was being suspended pending a hearing. After her departmental hearing she received a notice indicating she's been removed from her position. She has nine and a half years in her pension, most of which was in Gloucester County. She needs ten years to vest. In addition, she wants to return to her job because she loves the familiarity and the job.

Ms. Robitaille and Mr. Hauss had responded to three calls prior to the call at issue. She did not report any problems regarding the notification systems to her supervisors about the notification systems after the gunshot. She received no notice through any means of the call at 1:36 a.m. on December 31, 2015. She heard the audio recording of the call and understands that the other ambulance crew heard the call as did another local fire department. She did not know about the call because the pagers did not trip, the phone was in her front pocket of her sweatshirt on vibrate for her active 9-1-1 so she did not feel it, the duty cell phone was charging in the office and her email was not opened. The computer was in the office and not in the crew room in any event. Mr. Mellish told her not to move the chargers for the duty cell phones. There was an electrical outlet in the crew room where the duty phone could have been charged. Also, if it were charging in the other room, the volume could have been turned up loud enough and the volume low enough for her to hear it. He was on another couch approximately four feet from her. She testified that there is nothing saying that the radios have to be turned on. She thinks the radio was in Mr. Hauss's radio strap. She checks the pagers at the beginning of her shift by pushing the reset button to make sure that it is operating. According to her, email was not to be used as a notification system. She did not put in an incident report the fact that the pagers did not function. She had no recollection of having reviewed policy R-17.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In order to make findings of fact in the present case where the evidence is disputed, the court must make credibility determinations. Testimony, to be believed, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954). Based on the evidence presented at the hearing as well as on the opportunity to observe the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following:

Robitaille's testimony is essentially that she did not answer the 9-1-1 call because, although there were two pagers, neither pager was working; the duty cell phone was in the computer room charging; the email application on the computer was not left open and it was also in the computer room in any event; there was only one radio and it was with Mr. Hauss; and she had the Active 9-1-1 application on her personal cell phone, but it was set to vibrate. Thus, according to her testimony, only the pagers not working were out of her control. All of the other notification systems worked fine, but she did not follow procedures designed to ensure that she would not miss a call.

Regarding the pager, Ms. Robitaille is correct that no one who testified for the Department was present with her at the time at issue to say for sure that the pager was working. There is only the circumstantial evidence that Ms. Pope, who was very credible, does not recall Ms. Robitaille telling her the pager not working at the start of Ms. Pope's shift. The pager information is not as significant as the fact that there was a shooting during the shift before, but it is significant enough that she probably would have remembered. The other evidence the Department presented is that Ms. Robitaille received three pages without incident before the 1:36 a.m. call and another page after the 1:36 a.m. call. Ms. Robitaille asks that the court draw an adverse inference from the fact that the Department did not call Mr. Hauss who was the only person with Ms. Robitaille at the time at issue. I decline to do so. If Mr. Hauss could support Ms. Robitaille's testimony that neither of their pagers were working, she also could have called him as a witness. As it stands, her testimony that Mr. Hauss said his pager was not working is only hearsay and is rebutted by his apology to Mr. Mellish. The mutual failure of both parties to call him as a witness cancel each other out. Apparently neither party felt that they needed Mr. Hauss in order to support their case. Because her testimony that her pager failed was undisputed, I FIND that her pager failed. I DO NOT FIND that Mr. Hauss's pager also failed, however.

I FIND that the redundancy of the notification system should have ensured that Ms. Robitaille did not miss the call. I FIND that it was Ms. Robitaille's responsibility to ensure that the duty cell phone was in a place where she could hear it. If it was in the computer room charging then she could have been in the computer room for the length of time it would have taken to charge it. Similarly, although no policy says the email application on the computer has to be left open and the email was in the computer room, she could have been in the computer room to ensure that she did not miss a call or an email. I FIND also that if there was only one radio and it was with Mr. Hauss, she had the responsibility to make sure that his radio was loud enough for her to hear it. The testimony of Ms. Pope that there were two radios is more believable than that of Ms. Robitaille in any event. Ms. Robitaille's testimony that she was under no obligation to have the radio turned on was reprehensible in light of it being one of the many notification systems to keep her from missing a call. Last, although Ms. Robitaille was not mandated to have the active 9-1-1 application on her personal cell phone, she did have it. Therefore, I FIND it was her responsibility to ensure that she could feel or hear it. Apparently she could not do that with the phone set on vibrate. She cannot blame anyone else for her failure to feel the vibration of her phone.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2. In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 560 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). The Department has charged Ms. Robitaille with N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty in connection with missing the call in question.

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), an employee may be subjected to major discipline for "incompetency, inefficiency, or failure to perform duties." Absence of judgment alone can be sufficient to warrant termination if the employee is in a sensitive position that requires public trust in the agency's judgment. See In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 32 (2007). In general, incompetence, inefficiency, or failure to perform duties exists where the employee's conduct demonstrates an unwillingness or inability to meet, obtain or produce effects or results necessary for adequate performance. Clark v. New Jersey Dep't of Agric., 1 N.J.A.R. 315 (1980). The Department produced policies showing that Ms. Robitaille was required to be fully alert and call-ready. Although the Department could not prove that she was asleep, it certainly proved that she failed to perform the most essential duty of her job, which is to answer emergency calls from dispatch. The Department also produced evidence that it is essential to the EMT position that they not miss a call. Ms. Robitaille put herself in a position that allowed her to miss a call by not having the duty cell phone on or near her as required by the policy R-17. I therefore CONCLUDE that the Department met its burden to prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ms. Robitaille exhibited inefficiency and failure to perform her duties in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1).

The next charge, "Conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Ms. Robitaille argues that the Department failed to prove that its notification devices sufficiently notified her team of the call at issue and therefore, the Department failed to establish conduct unbecoming a public employee. The Department proved by a preponderance of the evidence that Ms. Robitaille's team had a radio that she did not bother to see if it was set loud enough to hear a call because nothing said that she was required to have it on. The Department proved that, even though it did not provide Ms. Robitaille with the Active 9-1-1 application on her cell phone, she had it and the call went through to it and she did not respond to it. The Department also proved that Ms. Robitaille had a functioning duty cell phone in addition to her personal cell phone, but instead of the phone being on her or Mr. Hauss's person as required by number ten of the Uniforms and Appearance policy, she had it charging in the computer room. Taken in its totality, the Department proved its devices were sufficient to notify her of the call and her failure to answer the call certainly has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Ms. Robitaille exhibited conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6).

The last charge against Ms. Robitaille is N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty. Ms. Robitaille emphasizes that there was no witness had personal knowledge that she was sleeping and this is true. It is also true that Mr. Mellish could have asked her whether she was sleeping either when he called or when he conducted his investigation. In the alternative, he could have asked Mr. Hauss whether Ms. Robitaille had been sleeping. The fact that the investigation could have been more thorough does not obfuscate the fact that Ms. Robitaille was the cause of her not answering the radio, duty phone or Active 9-1-1 application. What Mr. Mellish knew was that when Ms. Robitaille answered the phone after missing the call, she sounded groggy. He also knew that she had trouble getting the attention of Mr. Hauss and had to call his name three times. In addition, Mr. Mellish knew the most important fact, that in a position in which the most important duty is to answer calls within two minutes, Ms. Robitaille missed a call.

PENALTY

When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W.N.Y. v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Ms. Robitaille requests that a negative inference be drawn from the fact that the Department did not present a witness from Human Resources to testify as to why the penalty of removal was chosen. I decline to do so in this instance. This is a hearing de novo so it is the obligation of the factfinder to determine penalty, which the Civil Service Commission can then accept, reject or modify. It is not necessary to have the witness who recommended the penalty testify when the nature of the offense and the prior record of the appellant are the main factors in the penalty determination.

Where appropriate, concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used in imposing a penalty and in determining the reasonableness of a penalty. W.N.Y. v. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 523–24. Factors determining the degree of discipline include the employee's prior disciplinary record and the gravity of the instant misconduct.

Ms. Robitaille has had two prior charges of neglect of duty and failure to perform duties for which she has received major discipline. She received a suspension of fourteen twelve-hour shifts for her neglect of duty in September 2012 and a suspension of thirty shifts for neglect of duty in November 2013. In addition, she was also charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee in connection with the fourteen shift suspension. These prior disciplinary actions are not ancient history, but fairly close in time to the conduct at issue in the present case, which took place in December 2015. In addition, she had two minor suspensions and a reprimand.

Ms. Robitaille has charged the Department with imposing disparate treatment because Mr. Hauss received only a written warning. This argument would have merit if she did not have two major suspensions in her disciplinary history. Ms. Robitaille's first offense was a verbal warning or reprimand for failing to follow job procedures; Mr. Hauss received similar discipline. There is certainly an argument to be made that Mr. Hauss received too light a penalty, but based on the record before me, I cannot conclude that Ms. Robitaille's penalty was too harsh. Based on the severity of the offense and Ms. Robitaille's prior disciplinary history, I CONCLUDE that the penalty of removal was appropriate.

ORDER

I ORDER that the action of the respondent Gloucester County Department of Emergency Response removing Ms. Robitaille from her position as EMT for N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Eric Warren,
Burlington County

CSC Docket No. 2018-1234
OAL Docket No. CSR 16796-17

ISSUED: May 4, 2018 (SLD)

The appeal of Eric Warren, a County Correction Officer with Burlington County, of his removal effective October 16, 2017, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Joseph A. Ascione (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on February 28, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to the exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 18, 2018 ordered that this matter be remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL).

DISCUSSION

The appointing authority presented the appellant with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), dated October 19, 2017 which charged him with incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; inability to perform duties; neglect of duty; conduct unbecoming a public employee; and other sufficient cause and removed him from employment, effective October 16, 2017. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that on July 2 and 3, 2017, the appellant neglected to conduct required security tours. It also asserted that the appellant had entered false and misleading entries into the official logbook by documenting 10 security tours that he did not actually conduct. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the OAL for a hearing as contested case.

In his initial decision, the ALJ found that the appellant did not dispute that he violated departmental policies. The ALJ noted that although the appellant did not testify, one witness confirmed that a County Correction Sergeant "may have acted similarly" in misreporting security checks, but had not been disciplined. Specifically, the appointing authority indicated that it was too late to discipline that County Correction Sergeant, but that six individuals, including the appellant, had been identified as having committed similar violations. The appointing authority further noted that none of the six identified employees were currently employed by the appointing authority. As the appellant essentially admitted to the infractions, the ALJ upheld the charges.

With regard to the issue of the penalty, the ALJ noted that the appellant's disciplinary history was not made part of the record, as "such history reflected attendance or lateness issues, which would be of slight values to either positively or negatively affect the determination of the issue of penalty" in the instant matter. The ALJ found that the appellant had failed to establish that the charges against him were the result of disparate treatment, as the exercise of some selectivity in enforcement is not an issue unless it was based on an improper reason. The ALJ found that the appellant's failure to perform security checks and his falsification of records was egregious misconduct and warranted removal.

In his exceptions, the appellant argues that the Supreme Court and Appellate Court's decisions in In the Matter of John E. Warren and Gerald Sowa, 117 N.J. 295 (1989), In the Matter of Nolan Cox, Docket No. A-2471-14T4 (App. Div. Dec. 7, 2016) and In the Matter of Ramona Carter, Docket No. A-3105-14T4 (App. Div. March 7, 2017) establish that the removal is an excessive penalty for the charges alleged. In this regard, he maintains that although his conduct was negligent, it did not warrant removal.

In its reply to the exceptions, the appointing authority argues that the appellant's actions were particularly egregious as he knew he was required to perform a security check every 30 minutes, he failed to perform 10 of those required checks and that 10 of his 15 logbook entries corresponding to the security checks were knowingly false. Moreover, it argues that the decisions cited by the appellant do not support his assertion that removal is not an appropriate penalty. Furthermore, it notes that the appellant was a sworn law enforcement officer that knowingly and willfully made false entries into an official logbook to cover up his misconduct in not completing the required security tours.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's findings to uphold the charges. However, with regard to the issue of the penalty, the Commission finds it necessary to remand this matter to the OAL. In this regard, the Commission notes that although the ALJ references a disciplinary history, he decided not to admit that history into the record. However, the Commission notes that even when there is no dispute as to the charges, and an ALJ has determined that the claimed behavior was egregious, the disciplinary history must be admitted into the record to allow the Commission to have a complete record so that it may make its decision. In this regard, it cannot be assumed that the Commission, which has de novo review of both the underlying charges and the penalty imposed, will automatically agree with an ALJ's conclusions as to the severity of the misconduct or the penalty determination. Thus, an appellant's prior disciplinary history may provide the Commission with a more complete record for it to determine the appropriate penalty. Further, while the ALJ noted that the appellant's prior disciplinary history was apparently for dissimilar conduct, that, in and of itself, does not mean that such a history cannot be considered in determining the proper penalty.[1] The Commission notes that the inclusion of an appellant's disciplinary history is essential, even in matters where the Commission ultimately agrees with an ALJ's assessment of the severity of the misconduct or determines that the alleged misconduct is so egregious that the penalty imposed is appropriate even without regard for that history. This is the case, since, if the Commission does not agree, it is left without a critical piece of information in the record which will hamper its ability to impose a proper penalty. Moreover, notwithstanding the appellant's admission of the conduct, one witness did give testimony. However, the ALJ failed to summarize that witness' testimony. Therefore, the Commission remands the matter to the OAL so that the appellant's disciplinary record may be entered into the record, the witness' testimony may be summarized and a new initial decision may be issued.

ORDER

The Commission orders that this matter be remanded to the Office of Administrative Law for further proceedings as set forth above.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION ON

[1] Of course, the Commission agrees with the ALJ that any disciplinary history may be ignored when the misconduct is of such an egregious nature that removal may be imposed regardless of an employee's history. However, it does not agree that the history should, therefore, not be included as part of the underlying record.

OAL DKT. NO. CSR 16796-17
AGENCY REF. NO.
2018-1234

IN THE MATTER OF ERIC WARREN, BURLINGTON COUNTY JAIL.

Daniel M. Rosenberg, Esq., for appellant Eric Warren (Daniel M. Rosenberg & Associates, LLC, attorneys)

Andrew C. Rimol, Esq., for respondent Burlington County Jail (Capehart Scatchard, P.A., attorneys)

Record Closed: January 31, 2018 Decided: February 28, 2018

BEFORE JOSEPH A. ASCIONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Eric Warren (appellant) appeals from the decision of the Burlington County Jail (BCJ) to remove him from his position as a correction officer at the BCJ on charges of violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), (3), (6), (7), and (12), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause, relating to the failure to conduct ten required general security checks during his shift commencing at 18:00 hours on July 2, 2017, and terminating at 06:00 hours on July 3, 2017, and the improper entry in the logbook of ten security tours during that shift. Additional charges include violation of Policy & Procedure Manual Sections 1007, 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1172, 1190, and 1250. Appellant does not deny the charges. Appellant asserts that removal is not the appropriate sanction.

On September 7, 2017, a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action was filed seeking appellant's removal. The appellant requested a departmental hearing, which was held on September 21, 2017. On October 19, 2017, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued, sustaining the disciplinary charges and removing appellant from his position with the BCJ effective October 16, 2017. Appellant appealed that removal action under cover letter dated October 31, 2017. The matter was filed simultaneously with the Civil Service Commission and the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), under the expedited procedures of P.L. 2009, c. 16, N.J.S.A. 40A:14-202(d), where it was stamped received on November 2, 2017, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

On November 30, 2017, the matter was assigned to me. On December 6, 2017, I convened a telephonic case-management conference to discuss discovery requirements and schedule the evidentiary hearing. The hearing was scheduled for January 26 and January 31, 2018. Appellant requested an adjournment of the January 26, 2018, hearing date. On January 31, 2018, the hearing was held. At the hearing, appellant waived his right to reinstitute pay under N.J.S.A. 40A:14-201 et seq., until April 2, 2018. A separate Order regarding salary is being issued simultaneously with this Initial Decision. At the close of the plenary hearing, counsel for both sides presented written closing statements and briefs. The record closed on January 31, 2018.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

Up until his removal on these disciplinary charges, appellant had been a correction officer with the BCJ for seven to eight years. At the time of the incident he worked I-Wing, shift Squad B. Inmates of I-Wing could be pre-detention inmates with unknown emotional or health issues.

Due to an outside prosecutorial investigation, the BCJ became aware of improprieties in the conduct of security checks.

The BCJ charged and proved violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), (3), (6), (7), and (12).

The BCJ charged and proved violations of Policies and Procedures Sections 1007, 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1172, 1190, and 1250.

The more serious violations appear at 1172, 1190, 1250(A)(15), 1065, and 1066. These regulations address the general security checks; the timing of the checks, that is, at some time during every thirty-minute period; and the purposes of the checks as both security and head count. Policies and Procedures Section 1172(A)(4) advises the employee that violations are subject to disciplinary action and/or criminal charges.

"Security" means not only the physical security of the facility, but the safety and welfare of the inmates. (See J-6 1007(3).)

Appellant knew of the policies. (See J-12.)

Appellant does not dispute that the policies were violated.

Appellant did not testify at the hearing. Rather, by cross-examination of the administrative personnel of the BCJ, appellant confirmed that one sergeant may have acted similarly in misreporting security checks, but had not been disciplined.

The BCJ responded that the forty-five-day period for taking action against the sergeant referred to by appellant had expired.[1] Six individuals had been identified, including appellant herein, as having committed similar violations; none of them are presently employed with the BCJ. Some of those individuals took a resignation in good standing, and two were removed pursuant to the disciplinary process.

The BCJ did not conduct an extensive review of every wing's security footage against log entries. The BCJ explained the process and time involved to conduct such an extensive review. Conducting such an extensive review is not reasonable.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6, governs a public employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex DOC Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Governmental employers also have delineated rights and obligations. The Act sets forth that it is State policy to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory, and other personnel authority to public officials so they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b).

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry v. Rahway State

[1] While the forty-five-day rule may prevent a civil service proceeding against this sergeant, if there is proof of the violation either the BCJ or appellant can inform the county prosecutor of the factual circumstances discovered. This tribunal does not have sufficient information regarding the sergeant's activities to determine whether he committed a violation.

Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

It is well recognized that correctional facilities operate through a rigidly hierarchical, almost "paramilitary," structure. Lockley v. Dep't of Corr., 177 N.J. 413, 425 (2003). At the BCJ, the appellant's duties included maintaining discipline and order while providing supervision of inmates for their safety and welfare in a County correctional facility. The precise requirements of such a position are not mere technicalities, but are established and must be adhered to in order to ensure the utmost security of the facility.

The appellant is charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3), inability to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause, as well as violations of Policy and Procedure Manual Sections 1007 1023, 1030, 1031, 1038, 1065, 1066, 1172, 1190 and 1250. The appellant does not contest the charges. I CONCLUDE that the preponderance of the competent and credible evidence supports the charges against appellant. The only issue to be decided is the appropriate penalty.

A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. Progressive discipline is considered to be an appropriate analysis for determining the reasonableness of the penalty. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's "past record," which has been held to encompass "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously called to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, 38 N.J. at 523–24. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522–24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, or suspension or fine for more than five working days, but not to exceed six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a), -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.4.

Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994). Some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007); see also In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007):

> . . . judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property.

Appellant's disciplinary history was not made part of the record, as such history reflected attendance or lateness issues, which would be of slight value to either positively or negatively affect the determination of the issue of penalty in a failure-to-perform and falsification-of-performance penalty consideration.

Appellant relies on three cases for the reduction of his penalty from removal, In re Cox, No. A-2471-14T4 (App. Div. Dec. 7, 2016), https://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/; In re Warren, 117 N.J. 295 (1989); and In re Carter, Dkt. No. A-3105-14T4 (App. Div. March 7, 2017), https://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/, arguing that, in each case, a correction officer falsified records and was not terminated.

All three cases are distinguished from the present case.

In Cox, a Mercer County correction officer failed to perform the majority of his routine security checks during his overnight shift. Like appellant, Officer Cox was assigned a pod and was mandated to conduct a security check every thirty minutes. During the security check, Cox was required to walk the unit, make visual checks to assure the safety and security of the inmates, and note the completion of these tours in his logbook. Similar to appellant, video footage revealed that Cox had only performed three of the required fifteen security checks, but wrote "all secure" for all fifteen entries in the logbook. Notably, in the Initial Decision, the administrative law judge (ALJ), in reducing the proposed penalty, noted that the correction officer believed he did not make a false record. Unlike the current matter, the appointing authority there sought a forty-five-day suspension, which the Commission and Appellate Division upheld.

Appellant argues that in Cox, not only was the correction officer not removed for infractions similar to those of appellant, but the Commission had the ability and authority to increase a penalty to 180 days, and elected not to exceed the forty-five-day suspension imposed by the Mercer County Jail. However, while the Commission did not impose the maximum penalty, the Commission's decision to defer to the appointing authority in no way proves that falsifying official government records is not egregious misconduct warranting removal. In fact, the Commission expressly stated, a "County Correction Officer is a law enforcement officer who, by the very nature of his or her job duties, is held to a higher standard of conduct than other public employees." In re Cox, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 9963-12, Final Decision (Dec. 17, 2004) (citing Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965)). Further, "the potential public safety implications that could result from the failure to adequately conduct security checks is significant." Ibid.

Further, I note that even if the Commission believed that Cox's misconduct warranted removal, it was prohibited from upgrading the penalty to removal pursuant to N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 ("[t]he Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, but removal shall not be substituted for a lesser penalty."). Therefore, in relation to the current case, Cox only reveals that the appointing authority has the discretion to impose a penalty to which the Commission may defer.

In In re Warren, 117 N.J. 295 (1989), the Court held that a suspension, and not removal, was the appropriate penalty for a prison guard whose neglect of duty in conducting prisoner counts resulted in the escape of four prisoners under his supervision. As the Court explained, > the allegations embraced the fact that Warren had at first misrepresented what he observed in the hours before the break and that he had called in to report falsely that he had made a required 10:00 p.m. prisoner count. As to the first count, Warren said that he must have been mistaken about what he had seen, and, as concerning the second count, that he intended immediately to complete the 10:00 p.m. check. But, as noted, Warren's unit had never been informed that at 9:18 p.m. a "Code 99" report of an escape had been sounded in other units of the prison complex.

> [Warren, 117 N.J. at 298.]

The facts in Warren do not support a finding that the guard intentionally falsified a report, but the Court noted that "[i]n the clearer context of a corrections officer's trial for intentional falsification of a report, there can be no doubt that [such] an offense strik[es] at the heart of discipline within the corrections system," and indicated that, under such circumstances, removal would be appropriate. Id. at 299. Thus, the Court emphasized the seriousness of falsifying a report or failing to conduct proper security checks in the prison context.

In In re Carter, No. A-3105-14T4 (App. Div. March 7, 2017), https://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/, a Mercer County correction officer failed to relieve another officer and reported to her post late. The officer was ordered to write a report explaining her failure to relieve her fellow officer, and the report contained factually incorrect statements. The factually correct statement did not involve the conducting of security checks, but rather the excuse for the failure to relieve. The appointing authority employed a progressive-discipline method and sought a twenty-five-day suspension. Ibid. The Commission also utilized a progressive-discipline model. It considered the facts of the matter and the officer's prior disciplinary history, which included three written reprimands, two fines, and two suspensions, and reduced the twenty-five-day suspension to fifteen days. Ibid. The Appellate Division upheld the decision.

Appellant also argues that he was charged due to disparate treatment. He gave no testimony, but pointed to other officers at the BCJ who may not have been penalized as severely for similar violations.

"Discriminatory enforcement of an otherwise impartial law by state and local officials is unconstitutional. Cox v. Louisiana, 379 U.S. 536, 538–541, 85 S.Ct. 453, 13 L.Ed.2d 471 (1965); Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 373–4, 6 S.Ct. 1064, 1073, 30 L.Ed. 220 (1986) (holding that law is unconstitutionally enforced 'if it is applied and administered by public authority with an evil eye and an unequal hand')." Twp. of Pennsauken v. Schad, 160 N.J. 156, 183 (1999). In order to establish unconstitutional enforcement of a regulation, "both a discriminatory effect and a motivating discriminatory purpose" must be shown. Id. at 183 (citing Wayte v. United States, 470 U.S. 598, 607 (1985)). The mere assertion that others were not sanctioned is not sufficient to withstand a claim for disparate treatment. "The conscious exercise of some selectivity in enforcement is not a constitutional violation unless the decision to prosecute is based upon an unjustifiable standard such as race, religion, or other arbitrary classification." Ibid. (citing Oyler v. Boles, 368 U.S. 448, 456 (1962)).

Appellant has failed to present sufficient evidence that his charges were the result of an unjustifiable standard such as race, religion, or other arbitrary classification. Therefore, appellant has not established a claim for disparate treatment.

The cases surveyed establish that failure to perform security checks and intentionally falsifying records affirming that security checks were performed is egregious misconduct. Although the officers were not terminated in every case, the case law consistently held, whether in holding or dicta, that intentionally falsifying an official government document is a serious offense and is unbecoming of a law-enforcement officer. The misconduct in this case—the repeated failure to conduct security checks and the repeated lies about those failures—is egregious behavior that calls for removal.

The absence of termination in every case does not lead to the conclusion that termination is not the appropriate discipline for this conduct in general, and, specifically, here. Each case is reviewed on the facts presented, not just by this tribunal, but by the appointing authority, and the Civil Service Commission. Notably, in the three cases cited and distinguished, either the County did not seek termination, the Civil Service Commission did not increase the penalty to the maximum it could have under N.J.S.A. 11:2-19, or the facts were not the serious failure to perform security checks.

Public policy must also be considered here. The appellant knew or should have known of the seriousness of properly performing the multi-purpose security checks, especially in pre-detention pods. The inmate's welfare is an important purpose of the security checks. The execution of those security checks may save a life. The failure to perform those checks may expose the County to liability for failure to perform those checks. The failure of a correction officer to properly check each cell is a serious dereliction of duty, which, compounded by the falsification of the log book, warrants appellant's removal. The falsification is a self-serving progression of the failure to perform the security check, and constitutes intentional misfeasance.

Although there may be circumstances that lead to an excusable failure to perform the required number of security checks, the amount of checks not performed should not rise to five or six out of the required fifteen or sixteen. When the security check is not performed, the failure to perform duties should not be compounded by falsely representing that the duty was performed as required.

On balance, and based upon this record, I CONCLUDE that removal is the appropriate discipline for the charges of failure to conduct the security checks and the falsification on the log records that those checks were performed.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the disciplinary action entered in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action against appellant Eric Warren is hereby AFFIRMED.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Shandor Wine,
Jersey City Public Library

CSC Docket No. 2016-4015
OAL Docket No. CSV 07699-16

ISSUED: MAY 4, 2018 (EG)

The appeal of Shandor Wine, a Building Maintenance Worker with the Jersey City Public Library, of his removal effective April 28, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Margaret M. Monaco (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on February 1, 2018. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having reviewed the testimony and evidence presented before the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 18, 2018, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the removal. Rather, the Commission modified the removal to a 45 working day suspension.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that the appellant pushed and elbowed a co-worker causing her to seek medical attention. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the OAL for a hearing as a contested case.

The ALJ set forth in her initial decision that on April 11, 2016, the appellant was working as a Building Maintenance Worker at the West Bergen Branch of the Jersey City Public Library. On that date, a co-worker of the appellant, Beata Rogowska, a Building Maintenance Worker, alleged that the appellant had assaulted her. She testified that as she was exiting the outside door of the library to purchase a cup of coffee, the appellant, who had been outside, forcibly walked in the door that she had opened and struck her right lower breast area with his elbow. Rogowska stated that the appellant struck her chest with his elbow in a jab-like fashion and with such force that she was almost out of breath. Rogowska testified that she immediately informed Library Assistant Mary Bonner that the appellant had assaulted her. Bonner's testimony corroborated Rogowska's assertions. Rogowska also indicated that she called Building Maintenance Supervisor Teresa Fairley and informed her of the incident. Rogowski testified that the next morning a large bruise appeared where the appellant had struck her. She then went to her personal physician for an examination. She also returned to the library to show Fairley the bruise.

The appellant testified that he had no contact with Rogowski before or during the alleged incident. He denied encountering Rogowski at the library door and that anything occurred. Additionally, the appellant testified that in the past, Rogowski harassed him about his work and took pictures of his work.

The ALJ found the testimony of Rogowska, Fairley and Bonner to be forthright and found them to be credible witnesses. She found that Rogowska's testimony was consistent with the report of the incident she had authored. In addition, the visible bruise also supported Rogowska's testimony about the incident. Further, the ALJ found the appellant's testimony to be inherently improbable and not "hanging together" with, and discredited by, other credible evidence in the record. Based on the foregoing, the ALJ concluded that the appointing authority had sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the appellant's conduct was unbecoming a public employee. With regard to the penalty, the ALJ found that although the appellant's only prior discipline consisted of a verbal warning, the appellant's action was egregious enough to warrant removal.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's determination regarding the charges. However, the Commission does not agree with the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the removal. Rather, the Commission modifies the removal to a 45 working day suspension.

In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to considering the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Although the Commission applies the concept of progressive discipline in determining the level and propriety of penalties, an individual's prior disciplinary history may be outweighed if the infraction at issue is of a serious nature. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v.

Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). In the instant matter, the appellant had no prior disciplinary actions since his employment began in August 2015.[1] Moreover, given the actual incident in question, the Commission does not find removal to be appropriate under these circumstances. In this regard, while it is clear the appellant's actions were improper, other than the victim's belief, there is nothing in the record to support any sort of malicious or nefarious intent on the appellant's part. Accordingly, the Commission imposes a 45 working day suspension, which will serve as an indication that any further infractions committed by the appellant will potentially subject him to removal from employment.

Accordingly, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits and seniority after the imposition of the 45 working day suspension up to his date of reinstatement. With regard to counsel fees, since the appellant has not prevailed on the primary issues on appeal he is not entitled to an award of counsel fees. See N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, while the penalty was modified, charges were upheld and major discipline imposed. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, counsel fees must be denied.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. Feb. 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay are finally resolved. In the interim, as the court states in Phillips, supra, the appointing authority shall immediately reinstate the appellant to his permanent position.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in removing the appellant was not justified. Therefore, the Commission modifies the removal to a 45 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted back pay, benefits and seniority for the period after the imposition of the 45 working day suspension through the date of his actual reinstatement. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay dispute.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter should be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07699-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-4015

IN THE MATTER OF SHANDOR WINE,
JERSEY CITY PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Shandor Wine, appellant, pro se

Ronald C. Hunt, Esq., for respondent Jersey City Public Library (Hunt, Hamlin & Ridley, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 29, 2018 Decided: February 1, 2018

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Shandor Wine appeals his removal from employment as a building maintenance worker with respondent, the Jersey City Public Library (the Library). The Library took this action based upon the charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee stemming from an alleged incident that occurred on April 11, 2016, involving appellant and a coworker.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Library issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) dated April 13, 2016, informing appellant of the charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee issued against him. The PNDA alleged that on April 11, 2016, appellant physically elbowed Beata Rogowska at the Library's West Bergen Branch, which caused a visible bruise on her upper body. Following a departmental hearing, the Library issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated April 28, 2016, memorializing the determination that the charge was sustained and providing for appellant's removal from employment effective April 28, 2016. Appellant filed an appeal, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed for determination as a contested case. The hearing was held on September 29, 2016, October 27, 2016, and May 11, 2017. After the conclusion of the testimony, the record remained open for the receipt of transcripts of the hearing and post-hearing submissions. The Library filed a brief dated December 28, 2017, in support of its position. No brief was submitted by appellant by the required deadline, on which date the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

At the hearing, the Library presented four witnesses: Larry Ross, Teresa Fairley, Mary Bronner, and Beata Rogowska. Appellant testified on his own behalf. Certain facts surrounding this matter are largely undisputed. Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following FACTS.

Teresa Fairley is employed as the building maintenance superintendent, a position that she has held for eighteen years. In this capacity, she is responsible for supervising all maintenance workers at the Library's nine branches.

Appellant was a maintenance worker under Fairley's supervision. He was employed by the Library from August 31, 2015, until his termination on April 28, 2016.

(R-11.) Appellant initially worked at the Main Library Branch until that the branch was closed to the public for renovations. He later worked at various branches, including the West Bergen Branch.

Betea Rogowska was also a maintenance worker under Fairley's supervision. She has been employed by the Library for approximately nine years and worked at the West Bergen Branch at the time of the alleged incident.

Mary Bronner is a library assistant and has worked for the Library for fifteen years. She was working at the West Bergen Branch at the time of the alleged incident.

Larry Ross has been employed by the Library for five years as its personnel technician. He is in charge of the Personnel Office and oversees the day-to-day operations of personnel including, among other duties, disciplinary actions and management of health benefits.

The alleged incident occurred on April 11, 2016, at the West Bergen Branch. On that date, Fairley received a telephone call from Rogowska, who was crying and informed Fairley that she had been assaulted by appellant. Rogowska relayed that as she was going out of the library door to go to the store, appellant was coming in the door, and appellant elbowed her. After receiving the call, Fairley immediately went to the West Bergen Branch, where she spoke to both appellant and Rogowska regarding what happened. After this discussion, Fairley informed appellant that she was sending him to another branch for the remainder of his shift. Appellant elected instead to take the rest of the day off. Rogowska completed her shift. Fairley also spoke to Bronner, who relayed that she did not witness the incident but that Rogowska had told her that appellant elbowed her.

On April 12, 2016, Rogowska did not report to work and went to her personal physician, Dr. Majchrzak, who issued a Health Certificate requesting that Rogowska be excused from work from April 12 to April 19, 2016. (R-13.) The Health Certificate memorialized Rogowska's advice that she was "assaulted at work by coworker."

Rogowska brought this documentation to her employer and completed an Employer's First Report of Injury form on April 12, 2016. (R-6.) In the form, Rogowska described her injuries as a "bruised, sore breast" and "pain in the chest." With regard to how the injury occurred, Rogowska reported that, "[a]s [she] was walking out thru [the] doorway, [appellant] walked in directly at [her], pushing his way thru and struck [her] with [his] elbow in [her] breast."

On April 12, 2016, Rogowska was also examined by the Library's workers' compensation physician with CarePoint Health Medical Group (CarePoint). CarePoint generated a report of her examination dated April 12, 2016, which is signed by a physician and was faxed to Ross's office. (R-8.) That form states that Rogowska recounted that she was "assaulted by coworker" and refers to "his elbow into her [right] breast." The doctor recorded on the form that Rogowska had a right "breast bruise" and the doctor's diagnoses included a right breast "contusion."

On April 12, 2016, Rogowska called Fairley and relayed that she was at the doctor's office and had a bruise. Rogowska sent Fairley pictures of the bruise on her telephone, and Fairley requested that Rogowska come to the library so that she could physically see the bruise. Rogowska went to the library and showed the Library director and Fairley a bruise on her right breast. The bruise Fairley observed that day, which is where Rogowska said appellant had elbowed her, appeared like the bruise depicted in the photographs introduced as R-9 and R-10. Those photographs show a large black-and-blue bruise on Rogowska's breast.

Rogowska authored and submitted an Incident Report, dated April 12, 2016, in which she reported that on April 11, 2016, she was "assaulted" by appellant "as [she] was walking out from [the] library." (R-5.) In this regard, Rogowska stated that appellant "in [the] last moment walked directly at [her] in the doorway, pushing [her] out of his way and struck [her] in [her] breast with his elbow." She further reported that the incident "[l]eft [her] in shock, as [she] simply wasn't expecting it to happen"; appellant "then kept on walking, didn't apologize"; and "[f]ollowing that day [a] bruise appeared on [her] right breast" and the "[w]hole area is sore and painful."

On April 12, 2016, Fairley completed an Employer's First Report of Injury form in which she reported that, according to what was told to her, the "injury happened because a male employee pushed" Rogowska. (R-7.)

On April 18, 2016, Rogowska had a second appointment with Dr. Majchrzak, who issued a Health Certificate requesting that Rogowska be excused from work from April 18 to April 30, 2016. (R-12.) The Health Certificate memorialized Rogowska's advice regarding an "assault at work." Rogowska was on sick leave for two to three weeks, commencing from the day after the incident.

After Ross received Rogowska's Incident Report, he drafted the PNDA dated April 13, 2016, charging appellant with conduct unbecoming a public employee. (R-1.) Following a departmental hearing on April 20 and 25, 2016, an FNDA was issued memorializing the determination that the charge was sustained and providing for appellant's removal effective April 28, 2016. (R-2; see R-3; R-4.)

In addition to the evidence that forms the foundation of the above findings of fact, a summary of other pertinent testimony follows.

The Testimony

Teresa Fairley

Fairley testified that when she spoke to Rogowska at the library on April 11, 2016, Rogowska relayed that as she was going out the door of the library, appellant was coming in the door, and appellant elbowed her. She described that Rogowska was upset, nervous, and shaking. When Fairley spoke to appellant, he denied that he elbowed Rogowska. Fairley testified that she first saw Rogowska's injury the next day, April 12, 2016.

Fairley described that, prior to the April 11, 2016, incident, Rogowska and appellant complained about each other off and on, and there was "a little bickering between them." Rogowska would complain that appellant was not performing his work.

Fairley articulated her instruction to maintenance workers regarding such complaints; namely, the worker should take a picture with a cell phone so that Fairley could see and have proof that the worker did not do what they were supposed to do. Fairley had seen picture(s) of appellant's work taken by Rogowska. Appellant never showed Fairley any photographs of a lack of work by Rogowska. Prior to the incident, Fairley was not aware of anything physical between appellant and Rogowska, and Fairley had never received a complaint of them arguing.

Fairley testified that she never had any problems with Rogowska as an employee and never received any complaints about Rogowska from other employees. Fairley described that she started having a problem with appellant after the closure of the Main Library Branch and his assignment to the smaller branches. Prior to the incident involving Rogowska, Fairley had received complaints of appellant and a female employee arguing at the Lafayette Branch, and she physically had to go to that branch on two occasions. She described that appellant and that employee both complained about the other; the female employee complained about appellant not doing his work; and Fairley believed that they got into shouting matches. Fairley went to the Lafayette Branch on one occasion, which she believed concerned the employee's complaint of appellant not doing his work. On the second occasion, the library's branch head contacted Fairley concerning a problem between appellant and the same employee, and Fairley and the Library director went to the branch. Both appellant and the other employee were given verbal warnings. Fairley did not remember appellant ever calling her to come to the Lafayette Branch or appellant calling to complain about the employee at the Lafayette Branch, but noted that they both complained once she arrived.

Mary Bronner

Bronner testified that on April 11, 2016, Rogowska informed her that she was going to the store to get coffee. Appellant was then outside in front of the library cleaning. Bronner described that within minutes of Rogowska's advice, Rogowska ran back in the library and said, "Mary, he hit me, he hit me." Bronner ask "Who?" and Rogowska replied "Shawn." Rogowska relayed that she was coming in the door and appellant elbowed her in the chest. Rogowska demonstrated that appellant extended his right elbow in a jerking fashion similar to a jab. Bronner described that Rogowska appeared upset. Rogowska then ran into the kitchen and made a telephone call. When appellant came in the library, Bonner asked appellant whether he did it and appellant replied "no." Bonner testified that, prior to the incident, Rogowska and appellant both complained to her about the other's work patterns. Rogowska would complain about appellant not doing his work, and appellant would complain about Rogowska complaining about him not doing his work properly.

Betea Rogowska

Rogowska testified with the assistance of an interpreter and described the incident that occurred on April 11, 2016. Rogowska testified that she arrived at work at 7 a.m. and appellant arrived late at approximately 7:20 a.m. At approximately 9 a.m., Rogowska was going out of the library to purchase a cup of coffee. Appellant was then outside the library holding a broom and a pan in his hands. Rogowska described that the main entrance of the library has two sets of doors and a small hallway between them. The door closer to the inside of the library is kept open and the door leading out to the street is closed. Rogowska testified that she entered the area between the two sets of doors and opened the door to exit the library. Appellant, who could see Rogowska through the glass portion of the door, quickly approached the door. As Rogowska was exiting, appellant forcibly walked in the door that Rogowska had opened, and appellant pushed Rogowska and struck Rogowska's right lower breast area with his elbow. Rogowska described that appellant struck her chest with his elbow in a jab-like fashion and with such force that she was almost out of breath. Rogowska testified that she said to appellant, "What are you doing, are you crazy?" and appellant laughed and kept on walking. Rogowska described that, after the incident, she told Bronner that appellant had attacked her in the doorway, and she also called Fairley, during which she relayed similar advice and was crying. Fairley arrived at the branch and Rogowska spoke to her about what happened. Rogowska testified that physically she was feeling "horrific" and was "in shock" and, although Rogowska was not feeling well, "she tried to hang on" and continued to work until the end of her shift at 3:00 p.m.

Rogowska testified that a bruise on her right breast started coming out toward the morning of the next day, April 12, 2016, and R-9 is a photograph of the bruise that she took that day. She went to her family doctor on April 12, 2016, who examined her and prescribed medication. She also saw the Library's physician that day and came to the library, where she showed the bruise to Fairley and the Library director. Rogowska stated that the bruise became larger and darker with time, and R-10 is a photograph of the bruise that she took approximately two days after the incident. She testified that the bruise is where appellant struck her with his elbow; nothing else occurred that could have caused the bruise; and the visible injury to her chest lasted for almost three weeks.

Rogowska testified that she has not had any discipline problems during the nine years that she worked at the Library. She described having disputes or problems with appellant about work prior to the incident, such as appellant coming in late and failing to complete his work. She also described Fairley's instruction to take a photograph to demonstrate that appellant was not doing his work and to send the photograph to Fairley, which Rogowska did. She did not know if appellant knew that she was taking pictures of him.

Shandor Wine

Appellant testified that he arrived at work at 7 a.m. on April 11, 2016, and undertook his usual duties. He saw Rogowska that morning at about 7 a.m. and did not speak to her. Appellant described that he was outside sweeping the front of the library at approximately 8:30 a.m. and, after he finished sweeping, appellant went back inside the library and cleaned the bathroom and dusted. Rogowska was then inside the library. According to appellant, he had no contact with Rogowska and he did not say anything to her. Appellant testified that it was "a usual day" and he did not learn of the incident until Fairley and the union vice president (Theresa Smith) arrived on April 11, 2016. He described that he was "surprised and shocked" and thought, "what are they trying to pull now?" Appellant testified that when Ms. Smith asked appellant what happened involving Rogowska, he replied "nothing," and said, "I never came in contact with her. Not that I recall." According to appellant, Ms. Smith went to see if Rogowska had any type of markings or bruising, and she told appellant that there were none when she returned. Appellant also spoke with Fairley on April 11, 2016, about the incident. Appellant testified that Fairley asked, "did I bump her or was I going out the door," and he responded, "No. Not that I recall. I didn't. I didn't go through the door at the same time at all. It never happened." At the hearing, appellant denied encountering Rogowska at the library door and stated that there was never an occasion when they were both at the library door as described by Rogowska. Appellant testified that he had no physical contact with Rogowska that day; her testimony about him hitting her in the chest with his elbow was false; and the information in the documentation indicating that Rogowska was assaulted by a coworker and describing the incident (e.g., R-5; R-6; R-8) is also untrue. According to appellant, Fairley also looked at Rogowska's chest area on April 11, 2016, and her testimony that she did not see the area until April 12, 2016, was not true. Appellant testified that after leaving work on April 11, 2016, he attempted to obtain a restraining order against Rogowska, but he could not obtain it because the court was out on April 11 and 12, 2016. (See A-1.) He described speaking to an officer at the "municipal courthouse" and, according to appellant's handwritten note on A-1, appellant was told that he "could not put in TRO," and the officer "sent [him] to West District station." Appellant did not later return to obtain a restraining order.

Appellant testified that he had prior incidents with Rogowska. According to appellant, during his first week at work in August 2015 Rogowska confronted him about using her trash bags, and she physically took the bags out of his hands; appellant reported the incident to the director, who "dismissed it" and "laughed it off." He also described Rogowska taking pictures of his work on April 4, 2016, and appellant making a report to the branch manager on April 6, 2016, that Rogowska was "harassing" him and had thrown his work gloves in the toilet. He disputed that Fairley had come to the Lafayette Branch on two occasions regarding appellant and the employee at that branch. Appellant further testified that the reason Fairley and the Library director had to come to that branch on March 1, 2016, was because he had called to complain about a labor dispute that he was having with the other worker. According to appellant, he informed them of the dispute when they arrived at the branch; he complained about the worker standing and drinking coffee; and the worker did not complain about him. Appellant testified that he also advised them that it was a hostile work environment; they "dismissed" it and told him to just stay away from the employee; and the Library management subsequently started retaliating against him for complaining about the labor dispute.

Analysis and Additional Findings of Fact

In this matter, the Library bears the burden of proving the disciplinary charge against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); see In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna & W. R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis.

In undertaking this evaluation, it is necessary for me to assess the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may also reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Further, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

In judging the strength of the evidence and evaluating the demeanor and credibility of the witnesses, I found Rogowska, Fairley, and Bronner to be forthright and credible witnesses. They presented persuasive and substantially consistent testimony as to the pertinent facts. Rogowska's testimony was also consistent with the report that she authored, and the advice that she relayed, shortly after the incident. The record is bereft of credible evidence suggesting that Fairley or Bronner harbored a motive or bias to fabricate their version of the relevant facts. Plainly, on balance, appellant has the greater stake in the outcome of this proceeding since it involves the propriety of his removal from employment. Although it was apparent that appellant and Rogowska had prior disagreements about work, I found Rogowska's testimony concerning the events that occurred to be credible and probable. The credible evidence reveals that Rogowska reported the incident to Bronner and Fairley shortly after Rogowska alleged it occurred. And, Fairley and Bronner credibly described that Rogowska was visibly upset, crying and shaking. The accuracy of Rogowska's report is further corroborated by the visible bruise in the area where she claimed that appellant had struck her, which is depicted in the photographs, referred to in the doctor's report, and supported by Fairley's testimony recounting her personal observation of the bruise.

Succinctly stated, I found appellant's testimony regarding the events that transpired on April 11, 2016, to be inherently improbable and not "hanging together" with, and discredited by, other evidence in the record. A canvas of the totality of the evidence casts substantial doubt on the accuracy, reliability, and believability of appellant's version that he had no contact with Rogowska at the doorway, which is irreconcilable with the injury sustained by Rogowska. Simply put, I afford more weight to Rogowska's testimony recounting what occurred, and Fairley's testimony describing problems she experienced with appellant at the Lafayette Branch, than to the account offered by appellant.

Based upon a review of the testimony and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following additional pertinent FACTS:

When Rogowska was exiting the door of the library, appellant walked in the door and physically pushed Rogowska and jabbed her chest with his elbow. Appellant took this action with such force that it resulted in a large bruise or contusion on Rogowska's breast, which required medical attention and resulted in Rogowska being out of work for two to three weeks.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

The Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1, et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether appellant is guilty of the charge brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

An appointing authority may discipline an employee for conduct unbecoming a public employee. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). Although the term "conduct unbecoming a public employee" is not defined in the New Jersey Administrative Code, it has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "'conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency'" of the public entity or "'which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services.'" In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted); see Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). Unbecoming conduct need not be predicated upon a violation of the employer's rules or policies and may be based merely upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior. See City of Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); In re Tuch, 159 N.J. Super. 219, 224 (App. Div. 1978).

I CONCLUDE that the Library has shouldered its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible, competent evidence, that appellant's conduct was unprofessional and unbecoming a public employee. Appellant's actions fall significantly short of the type of conduct that the public has the right to expect from a public employee. Clearly, appellant knew that it is unacceptable and unbecoming conduct to engage in aggressive physical contact with a coworker, and his conduct was unwarranted, unjustified, and unreasonable. By engaging in the conduct he did, appellant failed to exercise good judgment and to act in a responsible manner with due regard to the safety of others. He failed to exercise tact and restraint during his encounter with Rogowska. Appellant engaged in conduct that has the likelihood of eroding the public's perception, respect, confidence, and trust in a public employee, and adversely impacts the environment and the proper operation of the Library. Significantly, appellant's actions placed Rogowska at risk of harm and resulted in injurious consequences.

The only remaining issue concerns the penalty that should be imposed. It is beyond debate that appellant's past disciplinary record may be considered for guidance in determining the appropriate penalty, and the principle of progressive discipline is applied in this state. See Bock, 38 N.J. at 522. The seriousness of appellant's infraction must also be balanced in the equation of whether removal or something less is appropriate under the circumstances. See Henry, 81 N.J. at 580. The New Jersey Supreme Court has recognized that the principle of progressive or incremental discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule" that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007); In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). Rather, "some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record." Carter, 191 N.J. at 484. Progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration "when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest." Herrmann, 192 N.J. at 33. In this regard, "progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when . . . the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property." Ibid.; see, e.g., Henry, 81 N.J. at 580; Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 306 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994). The courts have also upheld the dismissal of employees for engaging in conduct unbecoming to their position without regard to whether or not the employee had a substantial past disciplinary record. Herrmann, 192 N.J. at 34; see Div. of State Police v. Jiras, 305 N.J. Super. 476 (App. Div. 1997). Public-safety concerns may also bear upon the propriety of an employee's removal from employment. See Carter, 191 N.J. at 485.

The evidence demonstrates that during his approximate eight months of employment, appellant had received at least one verbal warning stemming from his interactions with the employee at the Lafayette Branch. Although appellant's disciplinary record in and of itself would not warrant a severe penalty, the seriousness of appellant's infraction is a critical consideration in this case. While the incident involved a short duration of time, this does not mitigate the gravity of appellant's dereliction. Appellant's actions were highly inappropriate and inexcusable, and violated the standards of proper conduct expected of a public employee. Appellant's irresponsible conduct resulted in injurious consequences to Rogowska and cannot be countenanced. His unauthorized actions were antithetical to the proper functioning of the Library, violated his basic obligations as a public employee, and demonstrate appellant's unfitness to perform his duties. Appellant's failure to acknowledge or appreciate the inappropriateness and severity of his misconduct serves as further support for the conclusion that appellant is unsuitable for continuation in his position. Based upon the totality of the circumstances, I CONCLUDE that appellant's unbecoming conduct is of a sufficiently egregious nature to warrant his termination.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee be and hereby is SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that, based upon the aforesaid sustained charge, appellant be and hereby is removed from his employment with the Jersey City Public Library effective April 28, 2016.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Richard Dentroux v. Department of Environmental Protection (CSC Docket No. 2018-430; OAL Docket No. CSV 11975-17)

Dear Mr. Barbone and DAG Creuz:

The appeal of Richard Dentroux, a Forest Fire Equipment Maintenance Specialist 1 with the Department of Environmental Protection, of his resignation not in good standing, effective February 27, 2017, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Judith Lieberman (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on April 20, 2018, recommending modifying the resignation not in good standing to a resignation in good standing. Exceptions to the initial decision were filed on behalf of the appellant and exceptions and a reply to exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on April 23, 2018 and prior to the expiration of the initial 45 days permitted to make a final decision, it received one 45-day extension of time, as well as an additional 45-day extension with the consent of the parties, as required, to make its final decision no later than September 5, 2018. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Since one of the Commission members must continue to be recused from this matter, leaving no quorum to vote, it requested consent of the parties for an additional extension. However, the appointing authority did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective September 6, 2018.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 11975-2017
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2018-430

IN THE MATTER OF RICHARD DENTROUX, DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENTAL PROTECTION.

Louis M. Barbone, Esq., for appellant, Richard Dentroux (Jacobs & Barbone, P.A.)

Aaron J. Creuz, Esq., Deputy Attorney General, for respondent, Department of Environmental Protection (Gurbir S. Grewal, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 6, 2018 Decided: April 20, 2018

BEFORE JUDITH LIEBERMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The appellant, Richard Dentroux, appeals the determination by the respondent, Department of Environmental Protection (Appointing Authority or Department), that he abandoned his position and, thus, resigned not in good standing. The appellant also appeals the respondent's determination that he violated departmental rules, regulations, policies and procedures.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 15, 2017, the respondent issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) setting forth the charges and specifications made against appellant. After a departmental hearing, which was held on May 25, 2017, the respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) on June 19, 2017, sustaining the charges in the PDNA and finding the appellant resigned not in good standing, effective February 24, 2017, and violated departmental rules, regulations, policies and procedures. The appellant filed a timely appeal and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on August 18, 2017, for hearing as a contested case. The case was heard on February 7, 2018. The record remained open for the receipt of written summations by the parties. On March 6, 2018, all summations were received, and the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Joint stipulations were agreed to by the parties, and as such, I FIND the following joint stipulations as FACT:

1. Richard A. Dentroux commenced employment with the Department, specifically Division of Parks and Forestry as a Maintenance Specialist 1 on September 7, 2013.

2. On February 22, 2017, Richard Dentroux emailed Lori Worth at the Department requesting a six-month leave of absence to begin that Saturday, February 25, 2017. He stated that Freehold Township was ordering him to resume his employment there on February 27, 2017, by direction of the Police and Fireman's Retirement System. His email included a letter from Freehold Township, dated February 15, 2017.

3. On February 24, 2017, Dentroux was advised, via email from Carla Hunt, that his request was denied as it constituted a request to engage in other employment.

Hunt asked Dentroux to submit his letter of resignation no later than February 27, 2017.

4. On February 28, 2017, Dentroux emailed Hunt stating that he was not pursuing other employment, that he was retired from injury, he was receiving a pension, and he was ordered back to duty the [sic] Police Department. He again requested a six-month leave of absence, and stated that his supervisor had approved it.

5. On February 28, 2017, Hunt again replied that the leave request was denied. She advised that his failure to submit a letter of resignation by February 27, 2017, would result in job abandonment and that the department would seek his removal as a resignation not in good standing.

6. On March 15, 2017, the Department filed a PNDA alleging absence from duty for five or more consecutive days without approval of his supervisor.

7. A hearing was conducted on May 25, 2017.

8. On June 15, 2017, a FNDA was entered against Dentroux sustaining the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b), Absence from Duty for five or more consecutive business days without the approval of his superior which is considered as job abandonment and resignation not in good standing. Also sustained was Other Sufficient Cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), a violation of the Department's leave policy.

Testimony

For respondent:

Human Resources Manager, Carla Hunt testified about the respondent's policy governing special leaves of absence. The policy applies to all employees, who must refer to it when requesting leave. It enumerates the permissible reasons for leaves of absence and does not permit leaves of absence intended to enable an employee to pursue other employment or collect a payment from another employer. The respondent and Civil Service Commission[1] must approve all leave requests. (R-3.) The appellant's immediate supervisors were not authorized to approve his leave request.

The policy requires an employee who seeks approval for a leave of absence to submit a Request for Leave or Voluntary Furlough (Form ADM-137A) and appropriate documents as required in Section V[2] to his immediate supervisor. (R-3 at sec. VI.) The supervisor must review the submitted documents, complete Part F of Form ADM-137A, and forward the materials to the Leave Management Unit through program Director/Administrator. Ibid. The policy further provides that the Leave Management Unit, within the Division of Human Resources, must "[r]eview employee request and supporting documents, supporting documentation and recommendation from the employee's program management for allowability within state and federal regulations as well as consistency with this policy. Provide recommendation to the Manager, Human Resources Services." Ibid.

Leaves of absence could be permitted for "exceptional circumstances." Part V.A.2. of the policy governing special leaves of absence, provides that a leave, with or without pay for a maximum period of one year, may be granted for a career employee when "exceptional situations" are present. Such leave may be granted "[w]here it is in the public interest[.]" (R-3 DEP31.) For provisional employees or employees who have not completed their probationary ("working test") period, leaves of absence without pay "shall be restricted to exceptional situations, and shall not exceed six (6) biweekly pay periods or the equivalent, nor continue beyond the termination of appointment." Ibid.

On February 22, 2017, the appellant sent an email to Lori Worth, in which he requested a leave of absence[3]. (R-5 DEP1.) He wrote:

[1] The policy references "Department of Personnel"; however, approval authority rests with the Civil Service Commission.

[2] Section V provides, "All leaves of absence must be approved by the Department of Environmental Protection and the Department of Personnel. Employees must submit written applications for a leave of absence with or without pay setting forth the reasons for the requested leave. Employees requesting leaves of absence should follow the procedure outlined in Section VII, below." Ibid. at sec. 5.

[3] The appellant copied Karen Funari, a representative of the assistant commissioner, and Steve Holmes on the email.

> Please find the letter from Freehold Township. I sent the letter from PFRS in the previous email. I am requesting a 6 month leave of absence until I am able to figure out what is going on. I am requesting the leave to start this Saturday 2/25/2017. I am sorry for the short notice but PFRS pension board has tied my hands. Freehold Township has taken me back on the 27th because they were advised by PFRS that my benefits will terminate on that day if I do not return. I am also taking Thursday and Friday off because I need to get copies of college transcripts and motor vehicle abstracts and other paperwork that is due on Monday. Please let me know if you have any questions I will do my best to answer them. My cell number is ____.
> (R-5. DEP1.)

The letter from the Township of Freehold, dated February 15, 2017, directed the petitioner to report for limited duty on February 27, 2017. (R-5, DEP2.) It referenced a February 10, 2017, letter from the Police and Firemen's Retirement System (PFRS) to the appellant and the Township. Ibid.

Worth forwarded the petitioner's email to Hunt, on February 24, 2017. Hunt responded to the petitioner on February 24, 2017, at 3:05 p.m.:

> Your email (see below) whereby you requested a 6 month leave of absence from the DEP, was forwarded to me for response. Please be advised that it is not the department's practice to grant a leave of absence to employees to engage in other employment. As such, your request is denied. Therefore, please forward a letter of resignation to my attention no later than Monday, February 27, 2017 COB, to separate you from the department. If in the future you wish to return to the DEP, you may contact our office regarding regular re-employment options.
> (R-5 DEP1.)

The appellant sent another email to Hunt and other DEP employees on February 24, 2017. Hunt did not receive the email, as her email address was incorrect. The appellant wrote:

> I was contacted this afternoon by Mike Ackey [sic] in reguards [sic] to my request for a leave of absence. I was told yesterday by Mike Ackey that my leave was approved for 6 months and

> I would receive a [sic] email stating that. Today I was told that the leave was not approved.
>
> I don't understand what is happening from yesterday to today. I was also told I have to resign or be terminated. I have a lot going on in my life right now I really don't need this added stress.
>
> According to Article 27 of the contract I can apply for up to 1 year leave of absence. I have been put in a very stressful situation and I don't want to be left unemployed to further add to my stress. I again am requesting clarification on my request, I don't think my request is unreasonable. As a father of 4 I don't want to be without a job.
> (R-5 DEP 5.)

The appellant's email was forwarded to Hunt, who replied on February 27, 2017:

> Your latest email (see below) was forwarded to me for response as I did not receive it. ("nj" was omitted in the email address to me).
>
> Be advised that the departments' [sic] decision in my email to you dated Friday, February 24, 2017 remains unchanged. Please note that all leaves of absence are subject to final approval by the Division of Human Resources.
>
> As such please follow the directions of my previous email with regards to your letter of resignation and possible future re-employment opportunities.
> (R-5 DEP 4,5.)

The appellant's leave request was denied because employees are not permitted to work elsewhere while remaining on staff, and the respondent would not be able to fill the appellant's position while he was away. It was, therefore, not in the Department's best interest to grant his leave request.

Hunt acknowledged that she understood that the appellant sought a leave of absence without pay and that request was associated with his prior employment as a police officer. She did not believe the appellant had an "ulterior motive" for his leave request. She had not previously encountered a leave request involving facts like those presented by the appellant. Given the unusual nature of his request, she consulted with her assistant director, who agreed that the leave request should be denied.

On February 28, 2017, the appellant sent another email to Hunt:

> My leave of absence was not requested to pursue other means of employment as you stated. I was retired due to an injury and was receiving a pension and health benefits from my last employment. I am trying to get answers as to what happened and why I was not given the opportunity to appeal the decision. I was told if I did not report for work all benefits would be terminated. The pension board will not give me answers so I had to hire an attorney. I am trying to sort this out.
>
> My request was made so I don't wind up being unemployed, not to persue [sic] other means of employment. I again am making the request for a 6 months leave of absents, [sic] which my supervisor Mike Achey said had been granted. If the leave is not granted I will be grieving this. This is an extraordinary situation which the PFRS pension board has created and such leave has been granted in the past.
> (R-5 DEP4.)

Hunt replied to the petitioner on February 28, 2017, by way of email:

> Please consider this email as final correspondence to you regarding your request for a 6 month leave of absence. As indicated in my previous emails, your leave is not approved. You were offered the opportunity to use benefit time for the remainder of this week in order to complete your working test period ending March 1, 2017 with the understanding that you would submit your resignation letter to HR by February 27, 2017, COB. Please be advised that if we do not receive your letter of resignation by COB today, we will seek a resignation not in good standing for job abandonment.
> (R-5 DEP 4.)

Hunt acknowledged that she did not call the appellant to discuss his request. She also did not discuss the request with the appellant's immediate supervisors or the personnel whose approval was required. In reviewing the appellant's leave request, she did not evaluate the impact his absence would have had on his work unit; rather, she applied the department's general policy against holding positions open for employee while they pursue employment elsewhere. Lower level supervisors' views are not controlling when the Division of Human Resources has determined that a leave request should be denied.

Hunt noted that one week is typically the amount of time required to review and approve a leave request. She received the appellant's request the day before his leave of absence was to begin. She could not have expedited the processing of the request, if she had believed it was meritorious, because the appellant and his supervisors were required to complete and sign the form. They had not done so.

The appellant did not contact Hunt at any time to speak about the matter. He did not report to work for five consecutive days. (R-4, DEP 7-10.) If the appellant had submitted a letter of resignation by February 27, 2017, he would not have been deemed to have abandoned his job. He would have been able to apply and be considered for future employment with the Department. However, he did not resign and respondent determined he abandoned his position.

Michael Achey, Jr. was the Division B Forest Fire Warden, for the New Jersey Forest Fire Service. On April 24, 2017, the appellant returned to work at the Appointing Authority's New Lisbon work site. Edwin Jones, who since passed away, wrote a report concerning the appellant's return to work that day. Jones had been previously advised that the appellant was no longer employed by the State of New Jersey. When the appellant reported to work that morning, Jones instructed him to report to Division B Headquarters to speak with Division Fire Warden Michael Achey to determine the status of his employment. The appellant did not report to Achey. Instead, he left the work site in a vehicle with Fire Observer Ralph Whalen. Jones reported this to Achey. (R-6 DEP15.)

Upon learning the appellant left the worksite in a vehicle with Whelan, Achey contacted Assistant Fire Warden Reith, asked him to locate the appellant and return him to the New Lisbon worksite. Achey attempted to locate authority for the appellant to be at the worksite, and asked Holmes for this information, but was unable to find such information.

For appellant:

Richard Dentroux was a police officer for the Township of Freehold for approximately seven years, until he became disabled in the course of duty. He retired from the police department, with an accidental disability pension, effective May 1, 2011. He was hired by the respondent in September 2013, where he worked at its New Lisbon facility as an equipment specialist. He was promoted to a permanent position, with a four-month working test period, in November 2016.

On February 10, 2017, the appellant received a phone call from the Freehold Township Police Department Chief and a township administrator, who advised him that the PFRS determined he could be reinstated to the police department. The department had received a letter from PFRS concerning this.[4] The chief and administrator asked if the appellant had initiated this; he replied he had not. The appellant was surprised by their call, as he had been fully retired from the police department since 2011.

On February 21 or 22, 2017, the appellant received a February 15, 2017, letter from the Freehold Township Police Chief who wrote, "As per the letter from the Police and Firemen's Retirement System (PFRS), dated February 10, 2017, that we both received you will report for Limited Duty on Monday, February 27, 2017 at 08:30 hours. (emphasis in original)(R-5 DEP2.)

On February 21, 2017, the appellant was at work, in a meeting with Edwin Jones, his direct supervisor, Mike Achey, Steve Holmes, Assistant State Forest Fire Warden, and the State Fire Warden,[5] when he received a phone call from a lieutenant with the Freehold Township Police Department. The lieutenant told him that he was required to return to the police department on February 27, 2017. The appellant told Jones about the substance of the call. Jones said he would need to speak with Achey. Achey had not heard of an issue like this before and wanted to discuss it with Holmes.

[4] The appellant testified he received the letter from PFRS a "couple of days" after he spoke with the chief. The letter from PFRS was not produced during the hearing.

[5] The appellant could not recall the name of the State Fire Warden, who is now retired.

The appellant was told to request a leave of absence and Holmes told him to email the police chief's letter to Karen Furnari. The appellant did not know who Furnari was; Homes provided her email address. The appellant recalled that he emailed the letter to Furnari that same day. Holmes said he would contact, "Trenton," although he did not know who Holmes intended to contact.

Appellant's supervisors knew about the injury he sustained while a police officer and that he was retired from the police department with a disability pension. His supervisors did not tell him that he should complete a leave of absence request form and they did not discuss the respondent's leave policy with him. The appellant assumed the form would be provided to him or he would be told where he could locate it. Although he knew the respondent's human resources department had a website, he did not know that a leave request form could be found there and he did not consult the site.

The appellant believed that, once he reported to the police department, he would be evaluated and not approved for duty. Although he did not know how long the process would take, he expected it would require a few weeks. He requested a six-month leave of absence "to be safe."

On February 22, 2017, the appellant sent an email to Jones and Achey in which he explained his need for a leave of absence:

> As you [sic] aware of my situation with Freehold Township as my previous employer I have been ordered to return to work for them on Monday 2/27/2017. I have attached the letter I received yesterday 2/21/2017. Due to the decision of the NJ PFRS I am forced to notify you on such short notice.
>
> I am requesting a 6 month leave of absence until I can resolve this situation.
>
> I am requesting the leave to start 2/25/2017 and continue for 6 months.
>
> I am also requesting to use 2 benefit days for Thursday and Friday 2/23 and 2/24 due to requirements I have to complete before Friday.

> Again I apologize for the short notice but it is beyond my control.
> (A-14.)

Appellant sent this email because Jones and Achey were his "first level chain of command." He did not receive a response to this email.

On February 22, 2017, Jones and Achey told the appellant that his leave request had been approved, effective February 23, 2017, and he would receive an email concerning this. They told him to turn in his phone, tools, key and work vehicle. The appellant did so and Jones and Achey drove him home. He did not receive an email concerning this approval.

The appellant first learned that his request had not been approved when he received Hunt's February 24, 2017, 3:05 p.m., email. (R-5 DEP1.) He did not call Hunt to discuss her email. That same day, at 3:53 p.m., Holmes sent the appellant an email in which he wrote that he wanted the appellant to become a permanent employee before he was to "separate." To do so, the appellant could "use benefit time (vacation or XP) through Friday March 3rd to finish out the pay period." (A-2 DEP3.) The appellant did not call Holmes, Achey or Jones after he received the emails from Hunt and Holmes.

The appellant believed his immediate supervisors were authorized to approve his leave of absence and he reported to the Freehold Township Police Department as required. He received a salary while there.

On March 15, 2017, the appellant received a PDNA for a resignation not in good standing, because he was Absent from Duty for five or more consecutive business days without the approval of his supervisor, and for Other Sufficient Cause, violation of the rules, regulations, policies or procedures of the respondent. (A-4.) The appellant requested a departmental hearing on the charges.

On April 21, 2017, the Township of Freehold Police Department determined the appellant was unfit to serve as a police officer, and terminated him from its employ, based on the 2011 injury that caused him to retire.

The appellant reported back to work the following Monday, April 24, 2017. The PDNA did not indicate he was suspended and he had not received materials indicating he had been terminated, so he considered his return to be appropriate. John Reith told the appellant that he could not return to work, as he had been terminated, and directed him to leave the worksite. He called John Strapp, (Strapp) of the Office of Labor Relations, to ask why he was prohibited from working, as a final disciplinary action had not been issued. Strapp replied that the appellant, "just can't" work.

On May 9, 2017, the appellant wrote to Strapp. He wrote that, upon reporting to work on April 24, 2017, his supervisor, Jones, directed him to accompany Forest Fire Observer Ralph Whalen to the Lakehurst Naval Base. Once there, Whalen received "several calls" directing him to return the appellant to the New Lisbon Office of the Appointing Authority. After Whalen advised that he was unable to do so, Reith reported to the Naval Base, told the appellant he, "could not be there" and was required to bring him back to New Lisbon. He was ultimately told to leave the office. (A-8.)

ADDITIONAL FINDINGS

The appellant testified that his immediate supervisors approved his leave of absence. However, he offered nothing more than hearsay to support this. He acknowledged that none of his supervisors replied to his February 22, 2017, email request for a leave of absence. He also did not question supervisor Achey about the alleged approval during Achey's testimony.

Hearsay evidence is admissible in the trial of contested cases, and shall be accorded whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a). However, while hearsay evidence is admissible, some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b). Hearsay may be employed to corroborate competent proof, or competent proof may be supported or given added probative force by hearsay testimony, when there is a residuum of legal and competent evidence in the record. Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 51 (1971).

Here, the appellant provided no additional evidence to support his assertion that his supervisors approved his request. Further, although the appellant testified that his supervisors verbally approved his request on February 22, 2017, he sent an email to Carla Hunt and other Department personnel on February 24, 2017, in which he wrote that Achey approved his leave "yesterday," February 23, 2017. (R-5 DEP5.) These statements are inconsistent. As such, given the absence of competent evidence supporting the appellant's claim, I FIND his supervisors did not approve his request for a leave of absence.

Moreover, the appellant testified that, when he returned to work April 24, 2017, Jones directed him to perform a work assignment. Jones' report, written that same day, indicated that he did not issue a work assignment to the appellant. Rather, Jones instructed the appellant to report to Division B headquarters to speak with Achey about the status of his employment. (R-6 DEP15.) It is the obligation of the fact finder to weigh the credibility of the witnesses before making a decision. Credibility is best described as that quality of testimony or evidence that makes it worthy of belief. To assess credibility, the fact finder should consider the witness' interest in the outcome, motive, or bias. A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp, 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). The contemporaneously created record of the events on April 24, 2017, an admissible business record[6], contradicts the appellant's testimony. I, therefore, FIND that

[6] Jones' report is admissible pursuant to N.J.R.E. 803(c)(6):

A statement contained in a writing or other record of acts, events, conditions, and, subject to Rule 808, opinions or diagnoses, made at or near the time of observation by a person with actual knowledge or from information supplied by such a person, if the writing or other record was made in the regular course of business and it was the regular practice of that business to make it, unless the sources of information or the method, purpose or circumstances of preparation indicate that it is not trustworthy.

Jones did not direct the appellant to perform a work assignment on April 24, 2017. I also FIND the appellant disregarded Jones' directive to speak with Achey about the status of his employment.

Therefore, after having the opportunity to review the evidence and consider the testimony, I FIND the following additional FACTS:

1. The Appointing Authority's policy concerning special leaves of absence ("leave policy") permits personal leaves of absence without pay under certain circumstances.

2. The leave policy does not explicitly authorize a leave of absence to enable an employee to pursue employment or perform work for another employer.

3. The leave policy permits leaves of absence for "exceptional situations" when such a leave "is in the public interest."

4. A leave of absence form must be submitted by the requesting employee to his immediate supervisor, who must complete the form and forward it through a program director or administrator to the Leave Management Unit. The Division of Human Resources must issue the final approval.

5. On February 10, 2017, the appellant was advised verbally that he was required to return to the Freehold Township Police Department for an evaluation concerning whether he could be reinstated as a police officer with that department. This was mandated by the Police and Firemen's Retirement System (PFRS). The appellant received written correspondence from PFRS concerning this approximately two days later.

6. On February 21, 2017, the appellant received a phone call from a Freehold Township Police Department lieutenant who advised that he was required to report to the police department on February2017. On February 21 or 22, 2017, the appellant received written correspondence from the police chief, dated February 15, 2017, confirming this and indicating that he was to report for limited duty.

7. The appellant advised his supervisor, Edwin Jones, of the phone call from the lieutenant the same day he received the call. Jones spoke with Michael Achey, who in turn spoke with Steve Holmes.

8. The appellant was told to request a leave of absence and to email the letter from the police chief to Karen Furnari.

9. The appellant knew the appointing authority's Human Resources' division had a website and did not consult the site.

10. The appellant believed he would not be approved to return to the police department, given his prior injury. He expected the police department's review of his eligibility to serve as a police officer would last a few weeks. He requested a six-month leave of absence without pay to permit sufficient time for this review.

11. On February 22, 2017, the appellant sent an email to Jones and Achey, in which he explained his need for a leave of absence. The appellant did not receive a response to the email.

12. The respondent did not approve the appellant's request for a leave of absence.

13. The appellant was advised he should submit his resignation to avoid disciplinary action.

14. The appellant did not submit a letter of resignation.

15. The appellant did not report to work for the respondent for more than five consecutive days and did not further communicate with the respondent concerning his absences.

16. The appellant reported to the Freehold Township Police Department on February 27, 2017, and was discharged by the Police Department on April 21, 2017. He was paid a salary during that time.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A :1-1 et seq. ; N.J.A.C. 4A :1-1.1 et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3.

The respondent contends that the appellant was absent from duty for five or more consecutive business days without approval. This is considered abandonment of his position and is recorded as a resignation not in good standing, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b). The respondent also contends it had Other Sufficient Cause, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), to discipline the appellant. This is based on an allegation of violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision.

The respondent has the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

Here, the appellant knew that his request for a leave of absence had not been granted. He also knew that he was required to submit his resignation or report to work to prevent disciplinary action. The appellant did neither. Instead, he did not report to work and did not communicate further with his employer about his absences or employment status. This persisted for more than five consecutive days. According, I CONCLUDE the respondent has demonstrated, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that appellant's conduct constitutes abandonment of his position in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b) and that such charge must be SUSTAINED.

With respect to the imposition of discipline for Other Sufficient Cause, the respondent's policy required compliance with the procedures for requesting leaves of absence. Here, the record reflects that the appellant failed to satisfy his clearly stated obligation. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE respondent has demonstrated, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that appellant's conduct constitutes a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) and that such charge must be SUSTAINED.

In his post-hearing brief, the appellant contended, for the first time, that the respondent violated the procedural requirements of the governing regulation. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(d) provides, with respect to an employee who is resigned not in good standing, that "[s]hould an employee seek to return to employment pending the departmental decision, a review under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b) shall be conducted prior to continuation of the unpaid status." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b) provides:

> Where suspension is immediate under (a)1 and 2 above, and is without pay, the employee must first be apprised either orally or in writing, of why an immediate suspension is sought, the charges and general evidence in support of the charges and provided with sufficient opportunity to review the charges and the evidence in order to respond to the charges before a representative of the appointing authority. The response may be oral or in writing, at the discretion of the appointing authority.

The appellant did not raise this issue during the hearing and did not present evidence suggesting that he addressed it when he reported to work April 24, 2017, or at any time after then. Regardless, "[g]enerally, an appellant in a Civil Service case who has filed an appeal from a determination of guilt and who is seeking dismissal of charges based on procedural irregularities occurring prior to or at the department-level hearing must fail." In re Bayard, OAL Dkt. No. CSR 3546-12, 2013 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 11, 19, Initial Decision (January 17, 2013). That is, because "procedural irregularities at the departmental level are considered 'cured' by a subsequent plenary hearing at the agency level." Ensslin v. Township of North Bergen, 275 N.J. Super. 352, 361 (App. Div. 1994), cert. denied, 142 N.J. 446 (1995) (citing In re Darcy, 114 N.J. Super. 454 (App. Div. 1971)). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that appellant's contention concerning violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b) should be DENIED.

PENALTY

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his duties may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). This requires a de novo review of appellant's disciplinary action. In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, where appropriate, and the employee's prior record. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. The determination of whether a specific act supports removal requires an evaluation of the conduct in terms of its relationship to the nature of the position itself and an evaluation of the actual or potential impairment of the public interest that may be expected to result from the conduct in question. Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385, 397 (Law Div. 1976).

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(f) provides that a resignation not in good standing may be modified to a resignation in good standing. In IMO Karla Jackson, 2009 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 790, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 10620-08, Final Decision (August 5, 2009), the Civil Service Commission addressed the penalty to be imposed upon a finding that an employee abandoned his position. It wrote:

> [T]he Commission has, under certain circumstances, modified a removal or resignation not in good standing to a resignation in good standing. The common factor in those decisions is that the employee, through no misconduct or fault of his or her own, could not perform his or her duties. These cases most often present fact patterns indicating that an employee is > unable, due to a physical or psychological condition, to continue performing his or her job. Another commonality in these matters is the substantiation of the employee's disability. In such cases, the Commission has found good cause to modify a removal or resignation not in good standing to a resignation in good standing. See e.g., Eugene Verdell v. New Jersey State Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs, Docket No. A-0497-04T5 (App. Div. February 16, 2006). Conversely, where the above factors are not present, the Commission will not modify a resignation not in good standing to a resignation in good standing. See e.g., In the Matter of Jerome Holland (MSB, decided April 9, 2008).

> Ibid.

In IMO Denise Cannuli, 2008 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 1059, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 4533-07 Final Decision (September 10, 2008), the Commission agreed with the ALJ's finding that the appellant violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(c) when she failed to return to work for five or more consecutive days after an approved leave of absence. However, the Commission modified the penalty from resignation not in good standing to a fifteen-day suspension. The Commission noted that there was a "complete breakdown of communication between the appellant and the appointing authority" as both the appointing authority and the appellant failed to communicate about the appellant's employment status. Also, although the appellant failed to communicate with the respondent, the "record clearly demonstrates that the appellant did not intend to abandon her position." Consequently, the Commission found that "certain mitigating circumstances exist which warrant a lesser penalty than a resignation not in good standing. These include the appointing authority's lack of effort contacting the appellant, including failing to return her telephone calls or advising her that she could be subject to discipline or a resignation not in good standing for her failure to report to work." Ibid.

Here, while the appellant failed to comply with the respondent's policy governing applications for leaves of absence, he was forthcoming about the reasons why he needed a temporary leave of absence. He explained, and the respondent has not contested, that he was obligated to tend to a matter associated with his PFRS pension. Although he was paid for his time with the Freehold Township Police Department, the appellant did not seek to be reemployed there. Rather, he complied with a requirement imposed upon him by the police department and PFRS.

This is akin to IMO Karla Jackson, supra, in which the Commission acknowledged that resignation in good standing could be an appropriate remedy when "the employee, through no misconduct or fault of his or her own, could not perform his or her duties." Here, the appellant did not create the circumstances that required him to take a temporary leave of absence. Further, it is uncontested that the appellant intended to return to the employ of the respondent and believed that he would be able to do so. This is analogous to IMO Denise Cannuli, supra, in which, although the appellant failed to thoroughly communicate with her employer, the record was clear that she did not intend to abandon her position.

However, the other mitigating factors that militated in favor of the Commission imposing only a fifteen-day suspension for Cannuli are not present here. These included the appointing authority's failure to communicate with the appellant concerning his status and the consequences for failing to report to work. Here, the respondent communicated clearly with the appellant concerning his obligations and the consequences for his failure to report to work. Nonetheless, the respondent was on notice of the unusual circumstances that compelled the appellant's actions and the appellant's desire and expectation that he would be able to return to work. The uncontested evidence demonstrated this. I, therefore, CONCLUDE that the appellant's violation warrants a penalty of resignation in good standing.

ORDER

I hereby order that the charges are SUSTAINED. I order that the penalty imposed by the Appointing Authority shall be MODIFIED, and the appellant shall be deemed to have resigned in good standing.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matter of Bernacine Barnes and 2017-1812

OAL Docket Nos. CSV 18070-16 and CSV 00015-17
(consolidated)

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MAY 24, 2018 (JET)

The appeals of Bernacine Barnes, a Senior Receptionist with Monmouth County, Department of Human Services, of her 20 working day and three working day suspensions, on charges, were heard by Administrative Law Judge Kathleen M Calemmo (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on March 22, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on May 2, 2018, accepted and adopted the Findings of Facts and Conclusions as contained in the ALJ's initial decision. The Commission also adopted the ALJ's recommendation to reverse the three working day suspension. However, the Commission did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the 20 working day suspension. Rather, the Commission modified the 20 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, misuse of public property, and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority alleged in a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) issued on September 14, 2016 that the appellant removed confidential information from her work site without authorization, delivered a packet of confidential information to an unidentified person at the Office of Professional Standards (OPS), and misused County property. A Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) was issued on November 9, 2016 which upheld the 20 working day suspension. Thereafter, a Notice of Minor Disciplinary Action seeking a three working day suspension was issued alleging that the appellant left a meeting and wore sneakers to work without approval, which was upheld on November 24, 2016. Upon the appellant's appeals, both matters were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as contested cases.

In her consolidated initial decision, the ALJ found that on August 24, 2016, the appellant delivered a complaint containing personal and confidential client information without authorization in a packet regarding her alleged unfair treatment in the workplace. The ALJ found that the appellant complained that her supervisors subjected her to disparate treatment, and in support of her complaint, she submitted documentation from a client's file to show that she was unfairly accused of disparate treatment in the workplace. The ALJ found that the appellant utilized County property, a work computer, to write her complaint, and she removed County property, a client's file, that contained privileged and confidential information from the workplace without authorization. The ALJ found that confidential documentation including the case name, financial information, and social security number in the client's file was not redacted. Further, the ALJ found that the appellant hand delivered the complaint and placed it on the secretary's desk at OPS, which was received on August 25, 2016 by Gwendolyn Thomas. The ALJ found that the appellant's complaint was addressed to individuals including the Monmouth County Freeholders, Steven Kleinman, Special County Counsel, Teri O'Connor, a County Administrator, and Gwendolyn Thomas, an Assistant Nursing Home Administrator and the OPS investigator. The ALJ indicated that the appellant did not dispute that she did not have authorization to include the confidential information in support of her complaint.

Additionally, the ALJ found that, on September 21, 2016, the appellant was questioned in a series of three meetings by her supervisors with respect to her wearing sneakers at work. At the first meeting, the appellant's supervisor, Diane Prochnow, a Human Services Specialist 4, questioned the appellant about her authorization to wear sneakers in the workplace. The ALJ found that, during the second meeting, Amy Klinghoffer, a Personnel Assistant, stated that she could not locate the appellant's medical records that should have been maintained by the appointing authority's Human Resources Office supporting the appellant's accommodation to wear sneakers, and the appellant stated she would not provide new medical documentation in support of the accommodation.[1] Additionally, the ALJ found that the appellant was summoned to a third meeting on September 21, 2016 with Prochnow, Klinghoffer, and Robert Jaichner, an Assistant Administrative Supervisor, Income Maintenance. The appellant stated to the supervisors that she wanted to tape record the third meeting which was not permitted by Klinghoffer.

[1] Prochnow was also at the second meeting.

The ALJ found that, upon receiving such information, the appellant stated the meeting was not going to happen and she abruptly left the meeting. The ALJ found that Prochnow, Klinghoffer, and Jaichner viewed the appellant's conduct as inappropriate, as she disregarded their instructions by leaving the meeting and slamming the door shut. Moreover, the ALJ found that the appellant continued to wear sneakers at work after the September 21, 2016 incident and she had been doing so since November 2014 as a result of an accommodation. The ALJ found that the appellant submitted a doctor's note dated November 1, 2014 that Human Resources date stamped November 5, 2014, a request for an accommodation form under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) dated November 24, 2014, and a disability certificate dated November 24, 2014 indicating that the appellant needed to wear sneakers at all times.[2] As a result, the appointing authority issued a specialized chair to the appellant and authorized her to wear sneakers at work.

Regarding the 20 working day suspension, the ALJ concluded that the appellant's action of delivering the complaint did not constitute insubordination, and there was no issue pertaining to the appellant's right as an aggrieved employee to file a disparate treatment complaint. The ALJ also concluded that the appellant did not disseminate confidential information, violate the appointing authority's computer and e-mail usage policy, or act disrespectfully toward her supervisors. As such, the ALJ did not uphold the charges of insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee. Nevertheless, the ALJ concluded that the appellant's removing of a client's confidential record from the workplace without authorization and her computer use after hours was not permitted. As such, the ALJ upheld the charges of neglect of duty, misuse of public property, and other sufficient cause. The ALJ also concluded that the appellant violated several of the appointing authority's policies.

With respect to the appellant's disciplinary history, the ALJ concluded that other than a notice of counseling[3] for an incident that occurred in September 2016, the appellant's personnel record did not contain any major disciplinary history in her over 27 years of service. As to the penalty, the ALJ recommended that, based on the sustained disciplinary charges, and considering the facts of the case, the 20 working day suspension was warranted.

Regarding the three working day suspension, the ALJ concluded that the appellant had been authorized and continued to wear sneakers for two years without incident pursuant to a 2014 ADA accommodation. Additionally, the ALJ concluded that the appellant's testimony with respect to the September 21, 2016 incident was credible, as the three meetings were excessive and the appellant appeared to be intimidated at the time, and there was no substantive evidence to show that the appellant was disrespectful toward her supervisors. As such, the ALJ recommended reversing the three working day suspension.

In its exceptions, the appointing authority asserts that the ALJ's recommendation to dismiss the three day suspension pertaining to the September 21, 2016 incident is contrary to the testimony presented at the hearing and applicable case law. The appointing authority contends that the ALJ's findings do not correctly set forth the facts pertaining to the actions it took with respect to the events that took place on September 9, 2016. The appointing authority states that its witnesses presented unrebutted testimony to establish that the dress code policy is enforced with respect to the appellant and every other employee at the agency. It adds that the purpose of the September 21, 2016 meeting was to discuss concerns that the appellant was ignoring the dress code policy as a result of her continued practice of wearing sneakers to work, and to determine if the appellant had been approved for an ADA accommodation to wear sneakers. Further, the witnesses testified that they made a good faith effort at the time of the incident to discuss the matter with the appellant, as the appellant's medical documentation with respect to her sneakers could not be located. The appointing authority explains that, although the appellant submitted medical documentation at the hearing indicating that she requested to wear sneakers, she did not present any evidence to show that such an accommodation was granted. The appointing authority states that it has the discretion to determine the proper accommodation under the ADA. As such, the witnesses were not precluded from making such inquiries of the appellant at the time of the meetings. The appointing authority adds that its witnesses did not act in such a manner that would have warranted the appellant's inappropriate behavior at the time, i.e., stating that she wanted to record the meeting and, upon learning that she was not permitted to do so, abruptly leaving and slamming the door. The appointing authority states that it was unnecessary to conduct further investigation into the appellant's actions at it would have been a waste of taxpayer money and three witnesses confirmed her inappropriate behavior. The appointing authority adds that there was no evidence that the appellant was intimidated by anyone at the meetings.

Additionally, the appointing authority argues that the appellant's behavior is nearly identical to the facts that occurred in In the Matter of Yvonne Ellis (CSC, deemed adopted February 26, 2018). In that case, the ALJ found that there was no dispute that the appellant's actions in that matter constituted insubordination as clear directive was disregarded by not attending a meeting and leaving the school. Therefore, the appointing authority argues that, with respect to the September 21, 2016 incident, the appellant's actions clearly constitute insubordination. The appointing authority adds that the appellant's behavior also constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee, as the appointing authority's request to discuss the appellant's ongoing practice of wearing sneakers was reasonable. Moreover, the appointing authority maintains that dismissing the three working day suspension will set precedent allowing employees to disregard their supervisors in the future. Finally, the appointing authority maintains that none of the charges from the August 2016 incident should be dismissed, as the appointing authority provides sufficient evidence at the hearing to sustain the charges.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ regarding the charges. In its exceptions, the appointing authority challenges the credibility determinations of the ALJ. The Commission acknowledges that the ALJ, who has the benefit of hearing and seeing the witnesses, is generally in a better position to determine the credibility and veracity of the witnesses. See Matter of J.W.D., 149 N.J. 108 (1997). "[T]rial courts' credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of the witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." See In re Taylor, 158 N.J. 644 (1999) (quoting State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1999)). Additionally, such credibility findings need not be explicitly enunciated if the record as a whole makes the findings clear. Id. at 659 (citing Locurto, supra). The Commission appropriately gives due deference to such determinations. However, in its de novo review of the record, the Commission has the authority to reverse or modify an ALJ's decision if it is not supported by sufficient credible evidence or was otherwise arbitrary. See N.J.A.C. 52:14B-10(c); Cavalieri v. Public Employees Retirement System, 368 N.J. Super. 527 (App. Div. 2004). Nevertheless, upon review, the Commission finds that the ALJ's determinations in this respect are proper and that this strict standard has not been met.

With respect to the appointing authority's other arguments, it has presented no substantive information that would somehow convince the Commission that the ALJ's findings were arbitrary, unreasonable or not based on the credible evidence in the record. In this matter, the Commission agrees that the ALJ correctly determined that the appellant was not insubordinate or disrespectful at the time of the three meetings on September 21, 2016. Rather, the credible evidence shows that the appellant appeared to have been intimidated at the time. The appellant testified and the witnesses acknowledged that the appellant specifically asked to tape record the third meeting, which is an indication of her unease in that situation. In this regard, the Commission cannot fathom why it would have been necessary to waste time questioning the appellant over the course of three meetings to ascertain if she was authorized to wear sneakers if such medical documentation could have been obtained from the Human Resources Office. As noted by the ALJ, the appointing authority could have allotted more time to find the appellant's medical documentation beyond the September 21, 2016 date, especially since the witnesses acknowledged that the medical documentation had been moved to a new location. The appellant continuously wore sneakers to work since August 2014 and there is no substantive evidence to show that the appointing authority was concerned about the appellant wearing sneakers at any time prior to the September 21, 2016 meetings.

Additionally, the facts in Ellis are distinguishable from this case and, as such, the appointing authority's arguments in that regard are misplaced. In that matter, the appellant, who was later charged with chronic and excessive lateness and absenteeism, did not appear at a meeting with the student attendance supervisor for Jersey City School District regarding her attendance for the coming school year, left the building, and was later observed on that same day in the union office by the student attendance supervisor. As such, the ALJ concluded the appellant's behavior in that matter was insubordinate. In contrast, the appellant in this matter actually appeared at all three meetings on September 21, 2016, and when she asked to tape record the third meeting, she was told that she could not do so. As noted above, the appellant appeared to have been intimidated as she asked to tape record the meeting, and since she could not tape record it, she left the meeting. Given the particular circumstances of this matter, the Commission cannot reasonably find that the appellant's behavior constituted insubordination or that the facts of her case are similar to those presented in Ellis, supra. Moreover, the ALJ found that the appellant was credible as no one else in the workplace heard her slam the door or reported that she was disrespectful toward anyone. Additionally, the dismissal of the three working day suspension will not set precedent allowing other employees to disregard their supervisors. Rather, the Commission reviews disciplinary matters on a case by case basis, and it has the final authority to uphold, modify or dismiss an employee's disciplinary sanction in such matters. In this case, the Commission has determined for the aforementioned reasons that the three working day suspension should be reversed.

With respect to the charges of insubordination and conduct unbecoming a public employee pertaining to the 20 working day suspension, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's findings that those charges should be dismissed. Although the appellant's actions of disclosing confidential information was inappropriate, given the context of her disclosure, her actions did not constitute conduct unbecoming a public an employee or insubordination at the time of the incident. Nonetheless, the appellant's actions clearly had the potential to result in much more serious consequences and warranted a finding of neglect of duty, misuse of public property, other sufficient cause and violation of the appointing authority's rules and regulations.

In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In determining the propriety of the penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. North Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (CSV) 463. Moreover, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007).

In the instant matter, the Commission notes that the appellant is a long term employee as she has been employed at the appointing authority for over 27 years, and her disciplinary record does not reflect any disciplinary history until the incidents that are the subject of this matter. Therefore, in light of these circumstances, the Commission finds the imposition of a 20 working day suspension unduly harsh. Accordingly, it modifies the 20 working day suspension to a 10 working day suspension. However, the Commission emphasizes that it does not condone the appellant's misconduct since, as stated above, the appellant's actions could have resulted in extremely serious consequences.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's action of imposing a 20 working day suspension was not justified under the circumstances and modifies that action to a 10 working day suspension. Further, the Commission dismisses the three working day suspension. The Commission further orders that the appellant be granted 13 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

IN THE MATTER OF BERNACINE M. BARNES, MONMOUTH COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES.

Bernacine M. Barnes, petitioner, pro se

Steven W. Kleinman, Special County Counsel, Monmouth County, for respondent

Record Closed: February 5, 2018 Decided: March 22, 2018

BEFORE KATHLEEN M. CALEMMO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Bernacine M. Barnes (Barnes), a Senior Receptionist employed by Monmouth County (County) at its Division of Social Services (DSS), appeals a twenty-day suspension she received as major discipline for delivering a packet of information to the Office of Professional Standards (OPS) that contained personal, privileged, protected, and confidential client information of a DSS client. Additionally, Barnes was charged with utilizing county property to generate these documents, with removing confidential client information from her work site without authorization, and with leaving said packet with an unidentified person in the OPS office. The County sustained the following charges: Insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); Conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); Neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); Misuse of public property, including motor vehicles, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8); and Other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The County also determined that Barnes violated the following polices: County Policy 104, Business ethics and conduct; County Policy 181, Confidentiality; County Policy 516, Computer and email usage; and County Policy 701, Employee conduct and work rules. Barnes admitted distributing confidential client information but maintained that the packet of information was intended to show disparate treatment by her supervisor against her in support of her longstanding grievance of unfair treatment. She claimed that her state of mind caused by the stress of working in a hostile work environment attributed to her failure to redact the confidential identifying information before disseminating it.

Barnes also appeals a three-day suspension she received as minor discipline pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.9(b) that allows for hearings when an employee received a prior suspension of fifteen days or more in the same calendar year. After receiving a twenty-day suspension, Barnes received a three-day suspension for displaying unacceptable workplace conduct and etiquette toward her superiors due to an incident that occurred after Barnes was questioned about wearing sneakers in contravention of proper workplace attire. The County sustained the following charges: Insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); Conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and Other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The County also determined that Barnes violated the following polices: County Policy 722, Workplace etiquette; and County Policy 701, Employee conduct and work rules. Barnes maintained that she had an Americans with Disability Act (ADA) accommodation to wear sneakers. Moreover, she had been wearing sneakers to work every day since November 2014 without incident.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 14, 2016, the County issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) setting forth the charges and specifications made against Barnes. (R-2.) Following the departmental hearing held on October 4, 2016, the County issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) on November 9, 2016, sustaining the charges in the PNDA and suspending Barnes from employment for twenty working days. (R-1.) Appellant filed a timely appeal and the matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on December 1, 2016 for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13.

On October 11, 2016, the County issued a Minor Disciplinary Action Notice setting forth the charges and specifications made against Barnes. (R-4.) Following the departmental hearing held on November 3, 2016, the County issued a Minor Disciplinary Action on November 23, 2016, resulting in a three-day suspension from employment. (R-3.) Appellant filed a timely appeal and the matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on December 30, 2016 for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52: 14F-1 to 13.

I entered an Order of Consolidation on October 11, 2017, consolidating both matters for hearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.3(a), because the two matters involved identical parties and witnesses, and contained common questions of fact and law resulting in a savings in time, expense, duplication and inconsistency.

I heard the matters on October 16, 2017. The record remained open to allow the parties to submit post-hearing submissions. On December 1, 2017, the County filed a motion to strike the post-hearing submission submitted by Barnes. I conducted a telephone conference on January 24, 2018 that resolved the issues in the County's motion to strike and allowed the County to submit additional documentation. The record closed on February 5, 2018.

FACTUAL DISCUSSIONS AND FINDINGS

The following facts are not disputed. Barnes has worked for the County for over twenty-seven years. She worked in the customer care center of DSS assisting county residents with their requests for cash assistance, food stamps, emergency shelter, housing, and medical benefits from various county programs. As part of her regular duties, Barnes is privy to confidential information, including social security numbers, addresses, telephone numbers, and financial information of county residents seeking assistance.

On August 23, 2016, Barnes prepared a typewritten complaint addressed to Freeholders, S. Kleinman, T. O'Connors, and Gwendolyn Thompson.[1] (R-10.) In the body of the letter, Barnes complained of disparate treatment from her supervisors. She submitted papers from a client's file to show how she was allegedly being singled out and unfairly accused of doing something wrong. The papers contained confidential information that Barnes did not redact; including case name; social security number; customer's address; customer's date of birth; and financial information. (R-11.[2]) On August 24, 2016, Barnes hand-delivered the packet to OPS. Because the OPS office had recently moved, a building security guard escorted Barnes to the new office. The office was locked and believed to be unattended; however, the door was opened by an unidentified male and Barnes instructed him to place the packet on the secretary's desk. It was later learned that the man who opened the door was in the office to repair the copier. The following day, Ms. Thomas opened the packet left in her office at OPS and started an investigation as to how the packet came to be in her office and whether there were any authorizations for the release of the confidential information contained therein. Barnes does not dispute that she unintentionally included confidential records in the packets. Barnes did not have authorization to take this information from her work space or release this information to third parties. On September 14, 2016, the Director of OPS, on behalf of the County, sent the PNDA to Barnes and advised her of her right to a hearing to defend the charges. (R-2.) On November 9, 2016, the County upheld the charges and issued a FNDA. (R-1.)

On the morning of September 21, 2016, Barnes had a meeting with her supervisor, Diane Prochnow (Prochnow), about wearing sneakers in the workplace. Barnes had a second meeting that day with Prochnow and Amy Klinghoffer (Klinghoffer), Personnel Assistant in the Human Resources Department of DSS, about whether Barnes had an ADA accommodation to wear sneakers. Klinghoffer offered to look for the required paperwork in Barnes' personnel and medical files. Barnes was called into a third meeting that day in Prochnow's office with Prochnow, Klinghoffer, and Robert Jaichner (Jaichner), Assistant Administrative Supervisor in attendance. Barnes entered the office and advised the supervisors that she intended to tape record the meeting on her phone. Klinghoffer informed her that taping conversations was not permitted. Upon receiving that information, Barnes left the meeting. Barnes continued to wear sneakers. She had been wearing sneakers every day to work since November of 2014. On October 11, 2016, the County informed Barnes that a disciplinary hearing was scheduled to answer the charges relating to the meeting involving her wearing sneakers in the workplace. (R-4.) On November 23, 2016, the County notified Barnes that the charges in the minor disciplinary action were upheld. (R-3.)

These essential facts are undisputed and found as FACT.

TESTIMONY

Lorraine Scheibener (Scheibener) is the current Director of DSS. At the time that the two disciplinary actions were administered she was an Executive Consultant to DSS. She testified as to the importance of safeguarding confidential information expected of all DSS employees and noted that confidentiality and compliance with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA) were prominently displayed on the County's website. (R-5.) Scheibener stated that she was personally familiar with Barnes. She also reported that Barnes, as a customer service agent, had access to confidential information as part of her duties and received training in the proper handling of confidential information. (R-13, 14, and 15.)

As part of Scheibener's duties as an Executive Consultant, she was made aware of certain complaints made by Barnes about incidents within her department. She was copied on a letter dated May 11, 2016 from the Director of the Department of Human Resources that described concerns about Barnes' use of county property and concerns about the tone of Barnes' emails. (R-7.) According to Scheibener, the County did not take any disciplinary action at that time.

Enforcing the dress code was also part of Scheibener's duties. She asked Klinghoffer, Personnel Assistant for Human Resources, to question any employee who was not adhering to the dress code. Scheibener stated that she was aware of a discussion that Barnes was wearing sneakers in the workplace. She also knew that Klinghoffer was looking for paperwork that Barnes stated she gave to Mr. LeMeune, the former director of Human Resources, who had retired.

On cross-examination, Scheibener stated that Klinghoffer reported to her that when Barnes was called into a meeting to discuss the missing paperwork, Barnes wanted to record the conversation. Klinghoffer told her that recording was not permitted, causing Barnes to abruptly leave the meeting and slam the door behind her. Scheibener stated that she spoke to the three supervisors about that meeting but never spoke to Barnes about her side of the story. Scheibener also acknowledged that she personally never found Barnes to be disrespectful.

Qwendolyn Thomas (Thomas) is the Investigator for OPS. She was the intended recipient of the packet delivered by Barnes to her office but left with the copier repair man. She noted that the packet contained a letter of complaint by Barnes for being singled out and disrespected by her supervisors, purportedly supported by pages of information from a customer's file with identifying confidential information. Thomas immediately called Scheibener to see if the release of this information had been authorized. She was also concerned about how the packet got to her office which is secured. She obtained a written statement from the security guard and the copier repair person and put her findings in a written memorandum. (R-8 and R-9.) Thomas expressed her grave concern about the breach of confidentiality caused by the inclusion of the unredacted statements in the packet. She was tasked with investigating the breach of confidentiality charge against Barnes.

On cross-examination, Thomas stated that she had two or three unrelated meetings with Barnes regarding Barnes' concerns about her treatment in the workplace. She stated that Barnes had never been disrespectful during those meetings.

Diane Prochnow (Prochnow) is a Human Services Specialist IV with DSS and Barnes' direct supervisor. She testified that on August 23, 2016, the records indicated that Barnes logged off her assigned computer at 5:26 p.m. Barnes' work hours are from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. County policy only allows access after those hours with supervisor's authorization, which had not been granted.

Prochnow testified that she has a challenging working relationship with Barnes. On the morning of September 21, 2016, Prochnow had a meeting with Barnes wherein she questioned whether Barnes had proper documentation that allowed her to wear sneakers in the workplace. She stated that based on her conversation with Barnes she understood that Barnes had given a doctor's note to Ann Sayer about six months ago. Ann Sayer was not identified. After that initial meeting, there was another meeting and Klinghoffer also attended. At that meeting, Barnes stated that she was not going to get another note because her doctor would charge her for it and questioned why it was necessary when she had previously given all her information to Bucky LeMeune, the former head of human resources. Klinghoffer stated that she would look for the paperwork in Barnes' medical records. Later that afternoon, Prochnow stated that Klinghoffer came to her office while she was meeting with Robert Jaichner, Assistant Administrative Supervisor. Klinghoffer informed them that she could not find any supporting documents for Barnes. According to Prochnow, Klinghoffer asked her to call Barnes into the office and she asked Jaichner to stay. Prochnow stated that Barnes entered the office and immediately informed them of her intention to record the meeting on her phone. She heard Klinghoffer tell Barnes that recording a meeting was not permitted to which Barnes replied that the meeting was over. Barnes then left the meeting, pulled the door behind her causing it to slam shut. Prochnow stated she was dumbfounded by Barnes' actions.

On cross-examination, Prochnow stated that she never asked any of the employees in the customer care center if they had been disturbed by Barnes' actions during or after the third meeting.

Amy Klinghoffer (Klinghoffer) is the Personnel Assistant in Human Resources under DSS. She stated that in September 2016, Scheibener asked her to investigate whether employees who were deviating from the dress code had ADA accommodations. Because Barnes was wearing sneakers, she asked Prochnow whether Barnes had a doctor's note. She recalled receiving an email from Jaichner that morning stating that Barnes would not get a new note because it was too expensive and unnecessary because she had already submitted a doctor's note. Klinghoffer recalled meeting with Barnes and Barnes' supervisor, Prochnow, later that morning, wherein she told Barnes that she did not have any paperwork but that she would look for it and get back to her. Klinghoffer stated that she looked in boxes that were available and called the downtown office, where records were moved after the DSS reorganization, to ask if someone could locate Barnes' medical folder. According to Klinghoffer, no records were found. At approximately 3:00 p.m. that day, Klinghoffer went to Prochnow's office and because Jaichner was already there and familiar with the situation, she asked him to stay. Klinghoffer asked Prochnow to call Barnes to her office. Barnes complied, but when she entered the office she stated that she wanted to tape the meeting. Klinghoffer told her that taping was not permitted. Barnes responded by stating that the meeting was over, walked out, and slammed the door. Because of Barnes' abrupt departure, Klinghoffer never told her that she could not find her paperwork. Klinghoffer stated that Barnes' behavior was inappropriate and she reported it to Scheibener. Klinghoffer also stated that she was only trying to help Barnes get the proper documentation for an ADA accommodation.

On cross-examination, Klinghoffer stated that she thought that Barnes may have been confusing her paperwork for Family Medical Leave Act (FMLA) with ADA. She also testified that she never found any of Barnes' medical records. When questioned about whether Barnes' behavior disrupted her co-workers, Klinghoffer responded that she never asked any of Barnes' co-workers if they had been disrupted.

On recall, Klinghoffer testified that Barnes never mentioned having the paperwork for an ADA accommodation allowing her to wear sneakers. Klinghoffer testified about the process stating that the employee would first have to submit a doctor's note which would trigger the interactive process for a determination if an accommodation was warranted. She stated that she never got the chance to talk to Barnes because Barnes walked out of the meeting before she had the chance. Klinghoffer maintained that she could not find Barnes' medical records despite her best efforts to locate them.

Robert Jaichner (Jaichner) is the Assistant Administrative Supervisor with DSS. On September 21, 2016, he was in Prochnow's office when Klinghoffer came in to talk about Barnes' accommodation for wearing sneakers. She asked him to stay because he was familiar with the topic. He recited the same story that when Barnes was told by Klinghoffer that she could not record the meeting, Barnes abruptly left and slammed the door. Jaichner stated that he was taken aback by Barnes' behavior. On cross-examination, Jaichner was asked about his prior knowledge of the incident and he responded that he had been informed of the situation by Prochnow.

Bernacine Barnes testified on her own behalf. Regarding the twenty-day suspension, she admitted including confidential information within the packet that she delivered to the five Freeholders, the County Clerk, the County Administrator, County Solicitor, and the Investigator for OPS. Due to her level of distress, she forgot to redact the confidential information from the customer's files before including them in the packet. She maintained that her actions were not intentional. She was using the logs to show how she was being singled out by her supervisor, when in her opinion she did not do anything wrong. She attributed the mistake to her state of mind and anxiety caused by her unfair treatment at work. Pertaining to the issue of leaving the packet with a copier man, Barnes stated that when she knocked on the door for the OPS office accompanied by a security guard, she did not know that the man in the office was the copier repair man. She placed the packet face down on the secretary's desk in a secure room. She believed that the man who opened the door worked there. She had previously filed grievances with the OPS but was unfamiliar with the new office.

Regarding the three-day suspension, Barnes testified that she was concerned that her medical records were missing. She stated that she is disabled and has had numerous surgeries during her employment with the County. She questioned how the County could lose her confidential medical files which she assumed had to be extensive given her medical history over twenty-seven years.

In support of her defense to wearing sneakers in the workplace, Barnes provided the following documentation (P-2):

> 1. Prescription dated November 1, 2014 from Magdy L. Shendouda, M.D. describing her condition and specifying an accommodating chair, stamped as being received by Human Resources on November 5, 2014;
>
> 2. Human Resources ADA Medical Questionnaire – Request for Accommodation Form dated November 24, 2014. The doctor's answer to question number 6 states that "using sneakers help to reduce her back pain" and the impairment was listed as permanent. In answer to number 10, the doctor responded that she could continue to perform her duties "as long as she can use sneakers." The doctor's recommendation at question number 20 was to provide an accommodating chair and allow her to wear sneakers; and
> 3. Disability certificate dated November 24, 2014 that stated that the "Patient needs to wear sneakers at all times during work hours."

Barnes testified that she was not willing to hand over her copies of her accommodation form to her supervisors without a receipt. According to Barnes, she wanted a letter signed by either Klinghoffer or Prochnow acknowledging that the County had lost her records before Barnes would provide her copies. She claimed that they refused to sign a receipt. Instead, Klinghoffer stated that she would look for her records. Barnes disputed Klinghoffer's and Prochnow' s testimony about her statement that she gave a note within the last six months to Ann Sayer. She had given the note and ADA Accommodation Form to Mr. LeMeune as stamped on her documents in November 2014. Barnes stated that she had been wearing sneakers every day since her accommodation was granted in November 2014, but for some reason on September 21, 2016, she was summoned to three meetings to discuss whether she had paperwork allowing her to deviate from the dress code. Barnes stated that she felt bombarded, so after being called into the third meeting on the same day with three supervisors behind closed doors, she told them she was going to record the meeting. When Klinghoffer said she could not record the meeting, Barnes stated that the meeting was over and left. According to Barnes, she opened and closed the door behind her. She stated that she did not slam the door and none of her co-workers commented when she walked out of Prochnow's office. She did not notice any disruption in the workplace.

On cross-examination, Barnes stated that she keeps all her documents, emails, and paperwork relating to her job. She did not offer the ADA accommodation documents because Klinghoffer told her she was going to try and locate them and she wanted a receipt before handing them over. She stated that she wore sneakers in the workplace every day since her accommodation in November 2014 and was never questioned until September 21, 2016. She also noted that she was given a different chair as part of the same accommodation and that was not questioned but the sneakers were questioned.

Barnes testified that she never saw the May 11, 2016 letter from the Director of Human Resources regarding her misuse of county property by sending inappropriate emails. (R-7.) She stated that it is her practice to respond to any email sent to her. She takes exception to the statements contained in the letter; therefore, she would have sent the Director a responding email had she received it. In addition, she maintained that she saves every email and document from the County because of her on-going unanswered complaints about her disparate treatment. If she had opened this email, she is confident that she would have saved it, and responded to it. She vehemently denied ever receiving it.

Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). " A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and may also reject testimony when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Cmty. Affairs Dep't, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

The credibility issues to be determined concern Barnes' receipt of the May 11, 2016 letter from Director Tragno (R-7) and certain discrepancies in the testimony about the events of September 21, 2016.

I FIND that the testimony of Barnes regarding her receipt and review of the May 11, 2016 letter authored by Human Resources Director Frank Tragno (R-7) to be sincere and credible. Barnes testified that she never saw the letter before it was sent to her by respondent in discovery. She further stated that it is her practice to respond to every email sent to her. Given the inflammatory content of the letter, Barnes' testimony that she would have responded to it is consistent with her conduct as testified to by the County's witnesses and as shown by the documents submitted. The overall sense from the testimony is that Barnes filed numerous complaints and challenged any action that she perceived as unfair. The post-hearing submissions submitted by respondent show that the letter was transmitted from Mr. Tragno's computer to Barnes' county computer at her county email address on Wednesday, May 11, 2016 at 17:03. Converting the military time to civilian time, the email was sent at 5:03 p.m., after Barnes' 4:30 p.m. departing time. I have no doubt from the documents submitted that Director Tragno sent this email to Barnes. However, without a county "read receipt," I only have Barnes' testimony that she did not open the emailed letter which I found to be credible. While I note that email is a widely accepted form of communication, the fact that this email was sent on May 11, 2016 in response to emails sent by Barnes on February 25, 2016 makes it less reliable, because the communication chain was clearly interrupted by the passage of three months' time. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the email of May 11, 2016 does not show that Barnes had prior notice from the County about the use of her work-related computer and emails when she drafted her August 23, 2016 complaint and copied confidential client files.

Barnes disputes certain testimony regarding the events of September 21, 2016. In judging the strength of the evidence, I FIND that the testimony presented by Klinghoffer that she was trying to assist Barnes on September 21, 2016 because she believed Barnes may have confused FMLA paperwork with ADA accommodation paperwork lacked credibility. Barnes had been wearing sneakers every day for almost two years and had been given an accommodating work chair. The alleged infraction of deviation from the dress code did not warrant the urgency of a frantic search for medical records and the need for involving Barnes in three meetings in one day. From the testimony, it was clear that both Klinghoffer and Prochnow were aware that Barnes referenced the existence of a doctor's note that had been given to the former head of Human Resources. After twenty-seven years and numerous surgeries, Barnes clearly had a medical file with DSS. While Klinghoffer did not know whether that file contained appropriate accommodation paperwork, she was more concerned with repeatedly questioning Barnes rather than finding Barnes' missing medical records. I further FIND that Barnes' disbelief that her supervisors were only trying to help her has a greater "ring of truth" than the scenario offered by respondent. Klinghoffer's testimony was geared to the ADA accommodation process. It was never clear if she intended to find the missing medical records before subjecting Barnes to a repeat of the ADA accommodation process. Barnes also disputed the testimony by all three supervisors, Klinghoffer, Jaichner, and Prochnow, that she slammed the door when she left the office. In support of her position, Barnes' claimed that none of her co-workers noticed anything amiss. There was no testimony offered by any of the co-workers about the incident, and the supervisors acknowledged that no one was questioned. Barnes left the meeting, abruptly. She needed to open and close the door to leave the office. Barnes' actions took the supervisors by surprise and their shocked reactions to Barnes' departure was genuine. However, I cannot FIND based on the evidence presented whether Barnes intentionally slammed the door or shut it forcefully as she left.

FINDINGS OF FACT

After carefully reviewing the exhibits and documentary evidence presented numerous times during the hearing, and after having had the opportunity to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

1. On August 24, 2016, Barnes included personal and confidential client information in a packet that contained a complaint about unfair treatment in the workplace and disseminated this information to third parties without authorization.

2. Barnes utilized county property to write her complaint and removed county property in the form of privileged and confidential information from her workplace without authorization.

3. On August 23, 2016, Barnes logged off her county computer at 5:26 p.m., one hour past her 4:30 p.m. assigned end of day.

4. In November 2014, Barnes submitted a doctor's note to Human Resources and received an ADA accommodation form that was completed by Barnes' doctor. (P-2.) Thereafter, the County provided Barnes with an accommodating chair and allowed Barnes to wear sneakers to work.

5. On September 21, 2016, Barnes was questioned by two supervisors, Prochnow and Klinghoffer, about her authorization to wear sneakers in the workplace.

6. On September 21, 2016, Klinghoffer could not locate Barnes' medical records that should have been maintained by the County within its Human Resources department.

7. On September 21, 2016, Barnes was summoned to a third meeting regarding her wearing sneakers. When Barnes entered the office, there were three supervisors, Klinghoffer, Prochnow, and Jaichner, already present. Before anyone spoke, Barnes stated that she intended to record the meeting on her phone. Klinghoffer told Barnes that recording the meeting was not permitted. Barnes replied that the meeting was not going to happen and she abruptly left the office.

8. After September 21, 2016, Barnes continued to wear sneakers to work.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Civil Service employee's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12.6. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is to be liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointment and broad tenure protection. See Essex Council Number 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1971); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Commission, 46 N.J. Super. 138, 147 (1965). The Act also recognizes that the public policy of this State is to provide public officials with appropriate appointment, supervisory, and other personnel authority in order that they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). A public employee who is thus protected by the provision of the Civil Service Act may nonetheless be subject to major discipline for a wide variety of offenses connected to his or her employments. The general causes for such discipline are enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3.

In an appeal concerning major disciplinary action, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to show that the action taken was justified. N.J.S.A. 11:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-14(a). The County bears the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co, 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

FNDA- November 9, 2016

Barnes received a twenty-day suspension after being charged with insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); Neglect of duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); Misuse of public property, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8); and Other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The County also determined that Barnes violated the following polices: County Policy 104, Business ethics and conduct; County Policy 181, Confidentiality; County Policy 516, Computer and email usage; and County Policy 701, Employee conduct and work rules. Although the same specifications support each of the charges and they are not compartmentalized, I will discuss each charge in turn.

Barnes was charged with insubordination. Black's Law Dictionary 802 (7th ed. 1999) defines insubordination as a "willful disregard of an employer's instructions" or an "act of disobedience to proper authority." Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995) defines insubordination as "not submissive to authority: disobedient." Such dictionary definitions have been utilized by courts to define the term where it is not specifically defined in contract or regulation.

Importantly, this definition incorporates acts of non-compliance and non-cooperation, as well as affirmative acts of disobedience. Barnes was charged with delivering a packet that contained confidential client information and utilizing county property to generate the documents contained in the packet. In support of the insubordination charge, the County relied on the letter from Director Tragno dated May 11, 2016. The contents of that letter contained a directive informing Barnes to immediately desist from using her work computer systems to present her grievances and to stop misusing county property. The County provided sufficient information to show that Director Tragno sent this email. However, I accepted as credible Barnes' testimony that she never saw the email; therefore, the emailed letter, in this instance, did not provide adequate notice of a specific order or directive to Barnes that was disobeyed. In addition, there can be no issue with Barnes' right as an aggrieved employee to file a complaint of disparate treatment. While the County expressed concern with the tone of Barnes' emails and the nature of her complaints, these actions do not meet the definition of insubordination. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the County did not produce sufficient evidence to support the charge of insubordination under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The charge of insubordination is DISMISSED.

The next charge was conduct unbecoming a public employee. This charge is an elastic phrase which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or tends to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Scheibener testified that she was aware, in her capacity as Executive Consultant, that the County had concerns about Barnes' use of county property, specifically, her use of emails to lodge complaints. She also testified that she had knowledge of certain complaints made by Barnes that were investigated by DSS. However, when asked on cross-examination, Scheibener stated that Barnes had never been disrespectful. Thomas, who was charged with investigating this incident, also testified that Barnes had never been disrespectful to her during any of their meetings. Barnes' misuse of confidential client information, which is the gravamen of the complaint, was addressed to the Freeholders and County Officials. It was not disseminated to the public or made public by Barnes. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the County did not produce sufficient evidence to support the charge of conduct unbecoming a public employee under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The charge is DISMISSED.

Barnes was also charged with neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). "Neglect of duty" has been interpreted to mean that an "an employee . . . neglected to perform an act required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge." In re Glenn, CSV 5072-07, Initial Decision (February 5, 2009) (citation omitted), adopted, Civil Service Commission (March 27, 2009), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure to perform a duty and includes official misconduct or misdoing, as well as negligence. Generally, the term "negligent" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977). There is no doubt that preserving client confidential information was an essential element of Barnes' duties. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the County has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Barnes' conduct constituted neglect of duty.

Barnes was also charged with misuse of public property under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8). This phrase can be understood to mean the unauthorized use of property owned, leased or otherwise acquired by a governmental or official entity, which is provided to employees to assist them in the performance of their official duties in carrying out the mission of the entity, other than such incidental or minimal use not unexpected by the employer. Such property can include vehicles, computers, copiers, telephones, uniforms, etc. Barnes copied and disseminated call center records in violation of County Policy 104, 181, and 701. Barnes prepared her Complaint that included call center records on August 23, 2016. The County records indicated that Barnes logged off her computer at 5:26 p.m. that evening; therefore, the evidence shows that Barnes stayed after hours to use county property to prepare her complaint about disparate treatment. I am mindful of the fact that Barnes did not use public property for personal reasons; however, her taking and copying a client's confidential information and computer use after work hours were not authorized. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the County has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Barnes' misused public property.

Barnes was also charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Specifically, Barnes was charged with the following employee policy violations: County Policy 104, Business ethics and conduct; County Policy 181, Confidentiality; County Policy 516, Computer and email usage; and County Policy 701, Employee conduct and work rules.

Policy 104 prohibits the taking of materials from the worksite for any purpose. As discussed above, I FIND that Barnes took materials from her worksite. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Barnes violated this policy.

Policy 181 states that all client information is classified as confidential and may not be copied or removed from the premises. As discussed above, I FIND that Barnes copied and removed client information from her worksite. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Barnes violated this policy.

Policy 516 regulates computer and email usage. Barnes is charged with using her county computer to write her letter of complaint. The testimony from Scheibener indicated that Barnes used her work email to present complaints or grievances and that the County was concerned by the tone of those emails. The only letter written by Barnes, for my consideration, is her complaint dated August 23, 2016. I note that Policy 104 invites employees to discuss concerns with their supervisors, contact the County Administrator's Office, or the Personnel Department. Barnes used her county computer to lodge a complaint relating to an event that transpired during working hours on August 23, 2016. In the letter, Barnes wrote that she was using her lunch; therefore, she was not on county time. Although it was established by the County that Barnes stayed after hours to complete her packet on August 23, 2016, that conduct is not specifically addressed in Policy 516. Significantly, Thomas, the investigator for OPS who received the letter, described it as a letter of complaint wherein Barnes stated that she was being singled out and disrespected by her supervisors. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Barnes did not violate the County's computer and email usage policy by using her county computer to type a complaint against her supervisors on August 23, 2016.

Policy 701 regulates employee conduct and specifies certain work rules. Among the listed examples are: unauthorized use of county-owned equipment and unauthorized disclosure of confidential information. As discussed above, I CONCLUDE that Barnes violated both those policies.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that, after consideration of the charges constituting a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) (other sufficient cause) limited to Policy 104, 181, and 701, the County has met its burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence the charge of other sufficient cause and violations of Policy 104, 181, and 701.

Minor Disciplinary Action

Barnes received a three-day suspension for the following sustained charges: Insubordination, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); Conduct unbecoming a public employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and Other sufficient cause, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). The County also determined that Barnes violated the following polices: County Policy 722, Workplace etiquette; and County Policy 701, Employee conduct and work rules.

Regarding the events that transpired on September 21, 2016, I accepted Barnes' testimony as having the greater "ring of truth." Prior to September 21, 2016, Barnes had been wearing sneakers for two years without incident pursuant to a 2014 ADA accommodation. The County charged Barnes with being insubordinate for wearing sneakers in the workplace without approval. (R-3 and 4.) To support this charge, the County presented testimony that Barnes' paperwork and medical files could not be found on the day in question. The concern about whether Barnes had the appropriate doctor's note could have been rectified by allotting more time to locate the missing records or by asking Barnes to produce her documentation in a fair and appropriate manner. The County also charged Barnes with conduct unbecoming a public employee for what the County deemed as "gross misconduct" (R-3) and behavior that damages the workplace morale and created an unprofessional working environment. To support this charge, the County presented undisputed testimony that when Barnes was told she could not tape the third meeting of the day, she left the meeting and closed the door with enough force that it slammed. Barnes' behavior shocked the three supervisors. However, the supervisors never considered how intimidating it is for an employee to be summoned into a closed office with three supervisors for a third meeting in one day. This occurred just seven days after Barnes had been notified of her twenty-day suspension for an incident involving treatment by these same supervisors. A third meeting with three supervisors in one day to discuss paperwork for sneakers that she had been wearing for two years could easily be perceived as hostile. There was no evidence presented by the County that other employees in the call center were even aware of what had transpired. In addition, Scheibener testified that she only discussed the incident with the supervisors; she never interviewed Barnes about what happened that day. I reviewed County Policy 701, intended to promote a respectful workplace environment, and County Policy 722, intended to promote courtesy and respect among all employees. From the testimony presented and the description of Barnes' conduct on September 21, 2016, I do not find that Barnes violated either policy by walking out of a meeting that appeared hostile. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the County did not prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and violations of Policy 701 and 722. These charges are DISMISSED.

PENALTY

When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. Factors determining the degree of discipline include the employee's work history, his prior disciplinary record and the gravity of the misconduct.

In addition to the two matters on appeal herein, Barnes only received a Notice of Counseling dated October 18, 2016 for an incident that occurred in the call center on September 14, 2016 for inappropriate behavior after accusing Supervisor Prochnow of discriminating behavior. She had no other prior disciplinary history.

In mitigation, Barnes had worked for the County for over twenty-seven years with no prior disciplinary history until the events herein. Barnes was very distressed about her feelings of disparate treatment by her supervisors. From the contents of her letter of complaint dated August 23, 2016, she felt that she was being singled out and treated unfairly. A further mitigating factor is that I did not sustain all the charges.

However, an aggravating factor is the seriousness of any breach of confidential information in the workplace. Having found that Barnes committed the violations set forth above, and having considered the aggravating and mitigating factors, I CONCLUDE that the proper penalty must remain the twenty-day suspension for the breach of confidential information.

Based on my finding that the County did not support the charges for the minor disciplinary action, I CONCLUDE that no penalty is warranted.

ORDER

Regarding the twenty-day suspension, I CONCLUDE that the County has sustained its burden of proof as to the following charges: N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), Neglect of duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8), Misuse of public property; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause, including violations of Policy 104, 181, and 701. Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of the County in suspending Barnes for twenty-days is AFFIRMED.

Regarding the three-day suspension, I CONCLUDE that the County has not sustained its burden of proof on any of the charges. Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of the County in suspending Barnes for three days in REVERSED. Barnes is entitled to back pay if the penalty has already been served, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 for the three-day suspension.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ t/a:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant appeals her removal from the position of human services technician (HST) at the New Jersey Veterans Memorial Home at Paramus, Department of Military and Veterans Affairs on a charge of neglect of duty, loafing, idleness or willful failure to devote attention to tasks, which could result in danger to persons or property in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). And, the negligent contribution to an elopement or escape of a resident. The incident that brought about these charges took place on September 8, 2014.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on May 28, 2015, for a hearing as a contested case. The matter was heard on January 11, 2016, February 19, 2016, May 9, 2016, June 14, 2016, November 15, 2016, January 5, 2017, and September 19, 2017. The petitioner changed her counsel three times during this time and one of her attorneys had to withdraw due to an illness.

ISSUES

Was appellant neglectful of her duties? Did such neglect of duty result in danger to persons and property? Was appellant's removal appropriate?

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Pamela Kovacs

The first witness to testify for respondent was Pamela Kovacs. She is employed by the respondent as assistant chief executive officer for clinical services of the facility since June 2015. Prior to that position she was director of nursing services, in total she has worked for respondent 4.5 years. At the time of the incident, September 2014, she was the director of nursing.

The Veterans Memorial Home in Paramus is a long-term-care facility for veterans and/or spouses or for dependent children of a veteran.

Kovacs testified that she was notified on September 8, 2014, that a patient had eloped from his room. According to Kovacs an elopement is a serious event that requires reporting to the N.J. Department of Health. The elopement took place at K-L unit. Kovacs said she interviewed the staff members in the unit at the time, she also went to the area of the elopement. The incident was documented in respondent's exhibit R-13. After the investigation was completed a final report was completed and that is exhibit R-12, this report was rendered by this witness.

Kovacs said that K-L unit has an ongoing video camera of the nurses' station and that she looked at the video. Kovacs noted appellant spent at least six hours of her shift in the Break Room. The video records all activities that take place in the nursing stations. She especially noted that Appellant was in the Break Room during the time the elopement took place. The elopement took place during the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift. Kovacs furthered that she viewed the video from 10:45 p.m., until 7:30 a.m. Five people generally work the 11 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift. There is one charge nurse, a registered nurse, and four nurse assistants.

The video recording was played over the course of four hearing days that Kovacs testified. In the course of Kovacs's testimony, she identified appellant as well as other employees. Kovacs also identified the area of the nurses' station identifying the various room doors.

The resident that eloped from K-L unit was spotted between 3:10-3:15 a.m. by other staff in the other unit. The resident was spotted at the R-S unit and found outside the building. The R-S unit is on the first floor and the K-L unit is on the second floor. (See R-5, a diagram of both floors.)

Kovacs testified that as she viewed the video during the 11 p.m. to 7:00 a.m., shift she noted that appellant came into the nurses' station at 11:21 p.m. and that at 11:22 p.m., appellant went into the Break Room. Kovacs noted that appellant reported to work twenty-one minutes late. Kovacs furthered that appellant exited the Break Room at 11:34 p.m. Kovacs said that she saw appellant enter the Nourishment Room, which is a room that has a refrigerator for staff use and she returns to the Break Room. At 11:36 p.m. appellant exits Break Room and returns to the Nourishment Room. At 11:38 p.m., appellant exits Nourishment Room and returns to the Break Room. Appellant exits Break Room and stands in the north side of the nurses' station by the door of the Nourishment Room and she is there until 11:49 p.m., when she returns to the Break Room until 11:54 p.m. The Break Room is for staff to take their breaks.

Kovacs stated that appellant was in and out of the Break Room and the Nourishment Room for approximately 2.5 hours after having clocked in to work at 11:21 p.m. Kovacs stated that at 2:31 a.m., appellant leaves the nurses station and she cannot be seen on the video. Appellant is next seen entering the Linen Room at 3:19 a.m. Kovacs furthered that between 3:19 a.m. and 3:38 a.m. appellant enters and leaves the Break Room and the Nourishment Room numerous times.

Kovacs reported that the video shows that at 3:38 a.m. appellant exits the Break Room with a book in her hand, she puts the book down, and goes outside the nurses' station returns and goes back into the Break Room. In the Break Room she turns off the light leaves the door open and does not emerge from that room until fifty-six minutes later at 4:34 a.m. At 4:55 a.m., appellant exits the Break Room and goes to the K wing hallway and at 4:56 a.m., she returns to the Break Room. Appellant exits the Break Room at around 5:13 a.m., and enters the Nourishment Room, she exits that room at 5:14 a.m., and goes to the bathroom.

Kovacs furthered that at about 3:15 a.m., a patient escaped from his room. The patient was eighty-eight years old, had Alzheimer's disease, and numerous other serious diseases. Cognitively the patient was confused and his ability to make decisions were moderately impaired. Kovacs stated that this particular patient was not assigned to appellant; however, an alarm was sounded and all personnel was to assist in looking for the patient but appellant was nowhere to be found during this emergent moment. According to Kovacs the video indicates that appellant was in the Break Room for six hours out of her assigned eight-hour shift, this includes the fact that appellant was twenty-one minutes late in starting her shift.

Under cross-examination Kovacs stated the reason why appellant was being disciplined was because of the amount of time appellant spent in the Break Room. And, because appellant was twenty-one minutes late she missed getting the reports from the prior shift workers. Reports are done at 11:00 p.m. Kovacs also said that procedure called for nurse assistants to do checks on patients every two hours. Kovacs noted that appellant did not do any patient checks during her shift. Kovacs said appellant was not around to assist with finding the patient that had escaped. According to Kovacs everyone in the unit is responsible for all patients.

Almalyn Robinson

Almalyn Robinson at the time of her testimony worked as a nurse assistant/nurse's aide, also known as a Human Services Technician (HST). She was assigned fifteen patients. She has worked in this unit for twenty-eight years and works the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift.

Robinson explained that part of her job is to do rounds every two hours. Rounds is the checking of patients making sure they are safe and clean. When an HST does rounds you are to check everybody not just the patients that have been assigned to you. Robinson furthered that between rounds you are to refill supplies, check the stock, and complete patient's charts.

Under cross-examination she acknowledged that she was suspended for forty days because it was her patient that eloped; she said she was on break when the patient escaped. She said when she left for her break all three HST's were in the nurses' station and they were responsible for her patient.

Peasama Joseph

Peasama Joseph was employed by the respondent for seventeen years, she worked the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m., shift. She is an HST. Her co-worker HST on that shift were the appellant, Olga Delgado, and Almalyn Robinson. She said that her nurse supervisor/charge nurse was Jane Semifranco. It is the charge nurse that provides the medications as ordered by the doctor and she too makes rounds.

Olga Delgado

Olga Delgado is employed at respondent's facility as an HST. She works the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift. She recalls the night that the resident eloped and recalls that appellant was in the unit. She stated that whoever is not on a break is responsible for looking after the patients. She was suspended for sixty days as a result of the patient escaping.

Neila Clitus

Appellant Neila Clitus testified on her own behalf. She started working for respondent in January 2000, as a Human Services Technician (HST). She admitted that she received training on how to do her job and how to review records and chart a resident's file.

Appellant said that every day when she got to work she would receive her assignments for her shift, she was assigned K wing. She said she was also considered a "floater" so her assignments were even more fluid. Appellant stated that on the night of September 8, 2014, she came in at 11:00 p.m., and went directly to K wing to look into her residents. She explained that she checked thirty residents as she came in that night before entering the nurses' station.

She furthered that the time she spent in the Break Room was because she was reading the resident's care plans. She said that is where she sat and reviewed all of her care plans. She furthered that her director of nursing (DON) encouraged her to review care plans. Specifically, she stated she read fifteen care plans. She said no one ever told her to leave the Break Room. She said the Break Room has one table with chairs that have no arm rests. The room also has wall-to-wall lockers.

According to appellant the eloper was an Alzheimer's resident and did not belong there. She said an Alzheimer's resident belongs in the T-V unit not in the K-L unit.

Under cross-examination she reiterated that she had been assigned fifteen residents that shift. She denied that there was a mandatory two-hour check. According to her the care plan books are not kept in the Break Room that she had to bring them into the Break Room to read them.

FINDINGS AND LEGAL DISCUSSION

In an appeal such as this from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to show that the action taken was justified. N.J.S.A. 11A:2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). That burden is to establish by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

Based upon the testimony of the witnesses and the documentary evidence submitted at the hearing I FIND, that:

1. Appellant worked as a Human Services Technician (HST) at the N.J. Veterans Memorial Home in Paramus, New Jersey.
2. Appellant on September 8, 2014, was assigned to work the 11:00 p.m. to 7:00 a.m. shift on K-L unit. She reported to work at 11:21 p.m., arriving after the shift reporting time.
3. Appellant spent six hours in the Break Room out of the eight hours she was to be actively working completing her job duties.
4. Appellant failed to make the required resident check every two hours.
5. Appellant failed to make any rounds on all residents in K-L unit.
6. Appellant was not available to her peers and did not work for six hours out of her eight-hour shift.
7. Appellant failed to assist and ensure the safety and security of the residents on K-L unit.

I FIND nothing in the testimony or the documents that substantiated or supported appellant's arguments that she did not have to make rounds every two hours because the residents told her not to disturb them. Appellant's self-serving testimony contradicts the testimony of Kovacs and Robinson who explained in very clear terms the responsibilities of an HST. I FIND appellant's testimony incredible.

I FIND that appellant neglected her duty by being idle when she should have been doing her assigned tasks. I FIND appellant violated the work rules, she neglected her residents, and showed a bold disregard for the health and welfare of the elderly veterans who were placed in her care.

A civil service employee's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12-6. The Act also recognizes that the public policy of this State is to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials in order that they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). In order to carry out this policy, the Act also includes provisions authorizing the discipline and termination of public employees.

A public employee who is protected by the provisions of the Civil Service Act may be subject to major discipline for a wide variety of offenses connected to his or her employment. The general causes for such discipline are set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). The charges in this matter may be considered violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), such as incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties, and neglect of duty. The Final Notice of Disciplinary Action found appellant guilty of the charges brought against her. (See R-1.)

PENALTY

Where appropriate, concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used in imposing a penalty in disciplining a civil servant. The penalty should be reasonable and relative to the charge. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523-24 (1962).

In this matter, appellant was employed at New Jersey Veterans Memorial Home-Paramus for a period of approximately fourteen years. She was a seasoned HST. Appellant had been trained numerous times on various aspects of caring for a resident at such a facility, a nursing facility that provides direct long-term care for veterans and their spouses.

Appellant's disciplinary record was entered in evidence at the hearing. (R-21, R-22, and R-23.) The disciplinary record shows a series of incidents that required respondent to discipline appellant for her failure to observe the rules and policy of her job. For example, leaving the work area without permission and refusing to accept a regular assignment.

I believe that appellant's conduct in this matter was so irresponsible and flagrant as to justify her removal. Where the charged dereliction is an act which, in view of the duties and obligations of the position, substantially disadvantages the public to be served, good cause exists for removal. Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385, aff'd, 163 N.J. Super. 453 (App. Div. 1978). In this case appellant was obligated to provide the utmost of diligence in providing care to the residents of the nursing home who essentially are helpless. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that appellant's removal from her position as a Human Services Technician at the N.J. Veterans Memorial Home-Paramus effective September 29, 2014, should be affirmed.

ORDER

Based on the above findings It is hereby ORDERED that appellant's removal as a Human Services Technician at N.J. Veterans Memorial Home-Paramus effective September 29, 2014, is hereby AFFIRMED and appellant's appeal is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Juan Cortes, Jersey City School District

CSC Docket No. 2017-3112
OAL Docket No. CSV 05253-17

Remand to the Office of Administrative Law

ISSUED: MAY 25, 2018 (ABR)

The appeal of Juan Cortes, a Boiler Operator with the Jersey City School District, of his 90 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kimberly A. Moss (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on March 19, 2018. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on May 2, 2018, ordered that the matter be remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL).

DISCUSSION

The appellant, a male, was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that the appellant had sexually harassed S.W., a female Custodial Worker, on multiple occasions. Upon the appellant's appeal to the Commission, the matter was transmitted to the OAL as a contested case.

At the OAL, only four witnesses testified: the appellant; Henry Padua, a Maintenance Supervisor; Jody Walker, Esq., an attorney retained by the appointing authority to investigate S.W.'s complaint; and Celeste Williams, Chief of Talent, who supervised the Affirmative Action Office and the discipline of instructional and non-instructional employees. Padua had received S.W.'s complaint and initially investigated the matter. Padua interviewed four witnesses[1] before the matter was referred to the appointing authority's Human Resources Department. Padua recorded S.W.'s statement with her consent. Walker was subsequently retained by the appointing authority to investigate the matter. During her investigation, she interviewed the appellant, S.W., Serrano, Santiago and Smith. She also interviewed Michael Charles, a Boiler Operator, along with Glenda Jennings and Robert O'Connor, the Principal and the Assistant Principal, respectively, at P.S. #41, where the incidents were alleged to have occurred. Padua and Walker testified that Serrano and Santiago claimed that the appellant had asked Serrano if he was having sex with S.W. and he told Serrano that if he was having sex with S.W., then the rest of them should also get to have sex with her. During her interview with Padua, Smith denied hearing those comments. However, during her interview with Walker, Smith indicated that she heard the appellant ask Serrano if he was having sex with S.W. Walker testified that Serrano and Santiago also stated that they witnessed another incident where the appellant leered at S.W.'s genital area in a sexually suggestive manner. The ALJ noted that although S.W., Serrano, Smith and Santiago were witnesses to alleged incidents of harassment, none of them testified. The ALJ also observed that Smith had given conflicting statements about what she did and did not observe to Walker and Padua. Accordingly, the ALJ found that the only evidence against Cortes that was presented was hearsay and that no legally competent evidence existed in the matter to support the finding that the appellant sexually harassed S.W. Therefore, the ALJ concluded that the appointing authority failed to prove by a preponderance of evidence that the appellant was guilty of the charges. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended that the appellant's 90 working day suspension be reversed.

In its exceptions, the appointing authority argues, in relevant part, that the ALJ failed to recognize that Padua's testimony supported a finding of fact that Santiago was present when the appellant asked Serrano if he had sexual relations with S.W. and it maintains that such a finding could have changed the outcome of the ALJ's initial decision. Additionally, the appointing authority maintains that the credible testimony of Walker and Padua provided a residuum of legally competent evidence that was sufficient to support a finding of fact that the appellant asked Serrano if he was having sex with S.W. It maintains that because the ALJ did not find that the admission of that hearsay evidence would have consumed an undue amount of time, created substantial undue prejudice or caused confusion, the ALJ should have weighed its probative value. Finally, it contends that the ALJ failed to accord sufficient probative value to Padua's recording of S.W.'s complaint. Accordingly, it argues that the evidence it presented at the OAL supports the charges and the major suspension it imposed.

[1] Padua interviewed Peter Serrano, a Head Custodian; Robert Santiago, a Custodial Worker; Maranda Smith, a Custodial Worker; and Leroy Minatee, a Custodial Worker.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission finds it necessary to remand this matter so that S.W., Santiago, Serrano and Smith can be called as witnesses. In this regard, it is well established that hearsay evidence is admissible before the OAL as long as some legally competent evidence exists to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b) (Also known as the Residuum Rule); See also e.g., Matter of Tenure Hearing of Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988). Based on the current record of this case, the Commission agrees that there was no legally competent evidence to support a finding that the appellant sexually harassed S.W. However, the seriousness of the accusation of significant and repeated instances of sexual harassment cannot be ignored. To reverse the appellant's 90 working day suspension is especially troubling given the fact that the record shows that S.W., Serrano, Santiago and Smith claimed to have witnessed the appellant's conduct and yet were not called to testify at the OAL. The appellant was the only witness to the incidents who testified at the OAL and although he denied staring at S.W.'s genitals, he confirmed that Serrano, Santiago, Minatee and Smith were present when he asked if a relationship existed between Serrano and S.W. because she was not assigned as much work as other staff members.

Thus, the Commission is compelled to invoke its subpoena powers pursuant to N.J.S.A. 11A:2-7 which states in pertinent part that:

> The commission may subpoena and require the attendance of witnesses in this State and the production of evidence or documents relevant to any proceeding under this title. Those persons may also administer oaths and take testimony.

Therefore, in the interest of the public and so that justice may be served, the Commission orders that the case be remanded back to the OAL for the appointing authority to call S.W., Serrano, Santiago and Smith as witnesses. The appellant will have the opportunity to cross examine these witnesses. If the appointing authority does not call these witnesses, the Commission authorizes the ALJ, pursuant to her powers under N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(n), to act in its stead to take the testimony of these witnesses. Without such testimony, the Commission cannot determine whether or not the recommendation of the ALJ to dismiss the charges is appropriate.

ORDER

The Commission orders that this matter be remanded to the OAL for further proceedings as set forth above.

TESTIMONY

Jody Walker

Jody Walker (Walker) is an attorney with the Law Firm of Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein Celso. She has been employed there for three years. Ninety-five percent of her work is in employment law. She has conducted investigations of workplace harassment.

Walker investigated a complaint of sexual harassment made by S.W. against Cortez. She had previously investigated a sexual harassment complaint against Cortez for JCSD. She met with Cortez in regard to the prior allegation. Regarding the prior allegation she did not find enough information to prove the he sexually assaulted the woman in that incident. Hope Blackburn, general counsel for JCSD, requested Walker conduct this investigation. Walker had an initial meeting with Gary Murphy, the Affirmative Action Officer for JCSD.

S.W. filed a complaint of harassment on September 15, 2016. Walker received a copy of the complaint. S.W. was a custodian at M.S. 41 and Cortez was a boiler operator at M.S. 41 during the summer of 2016. Peter Serrano (Serrano) was the head custodian at M.S. 41. Henry Padua (Padua) was the supervisor of custodial staff for M.S. 41.

On August 19, 2016, S.W. emailed Serrano that she was uncomfortable with Cortez. He would override assignments given to her by the head custodian. He singled her out. She told him to only say hello or good-bye to her and he said that was not good with him. Cortez was placed on administrative leave with pay on August 29, 2016, pending the investigation.

Walker testified that S.W.'s complaint was based on sexual harassment. In the complaint, she also listed affectional sexual orientation as the basis for her complaint, but she stated that was a mistake. S.W. wrote a statement regarding her complaint. She stated that Cortez told the head custodian of S.W. "she gets a lot of privileges—you must be fucking her and if you are fucking her we all need to fuck her." Serrano and Santiago confirmed this comment. Serrano looks at her in an intimidating manner. She knows that she does not take orders from Cortez. On August 16, 2016, S.W. was talking to Mike Charles, the night boiler operator, and Cortez interrupted their conversation to ask why was she always late. Cortez appeared to be attempting to record S.W.

Walker met with Art Youmans, the head of security for JCSD. They interviewed several witnesses together. S.W. was interviewed at MS 41. During the interview S.W. stated that originally, she did not have a problem with Cortez. He told her she was pretty and she was okay with that. He later became aggressive. He would stand in her space and become angry when she spoke to other men. He tried to give orders and became preoccupied with her when she came to work. He leered at her in sexually suggestive ways. S.W. recalled once when she was sitting with her legs open and Cortez leered at her vaginal area. She did not feel safe with Cortez. There were multiple times that Cortez made S.W. feel uncomfortable. S.W. went to the Affirmative Action Officer to complain of Cortez sexual harassment.

Walker interviewed Henry Padua. Gary Murphy, the Affirmative Action Officer, was present for the interview, which took place at the Board's main office. Padua knew Cortez and that Cortez had a history of conflict with employees. Cortez was assigned to the Board's main office because of a physical confrontation with a student's uncle. In addition, a female custodian stated that Cortez had been aggressive with her. A female custodian complained that Cortez was recording her. Padua spoke to Cortez about recording employees. Padua spoke to Serrano, Santiago, and S.W. Santiago and Serrano confirmed that Cortez asked Serrano if he was having sex with S.W.

Walker interviewed Serrano at MS 41. Serrano stated that Cortez was preoccupied with S.W. and had asked if she had a boyfriend. He talked about how she looked and where she was. Cortez asked Serrano if he was having sex with S.W. and stated that they all needed to have sex with her. Serrano was offended and denied sleeping with S.W. Serrano was present when Cortez was leering at S.W. vaginal area.

Walker interviewed Michael Charles with Youmans present. He knew Cortez. Cortez asked him did S.W. have a boyfriend. Cortez interrupted a conversation between Charles and S.W. S.W. told Cortez to keep it professional and Cortez refused. Cortez then motioned to record S.W.

Walker and Youmans interviewed Santiago at M.S. 41. He had previously known Cortez. Cortez asked about S.W.'s skin and ethnicity. Cortez asked him if S.W. and Serrano were having sex. Youmans stated that he was present when Cortez asked Serrano if Serrano and S.W. were having sex. Santiago saw Cortez leer at S.W.'s vaginal area. It was obvious and made him uncomfortable.

Walker also interviewed Miranda Smith, a female custodian at MS 41. Smith did not hear Cortez comment on S.W.'s appearance or give her orders. She was present when Cortez asked Serrano if he was having sex with S.W. She thought the comment was highly inappropriate. Walker also interviewed Glenda Jennings, the principal of MS. 41. Jennings said that Cortez was a great custodian and she did not know of S.W.'s allegations against Cortez. Cortez told Jennings that Serrano and S.W. were in a relationship. Jennings thought this was strange since Serrano had written up S.W.

Robert O'Connor received a complaint from S.W. regarding Cortez's treatment of her. O'Connor interviewed Cortez at the Board offices. Cortez's union representative was present. Cortez initially denied everything. He later admitted that he called S.W. pretty and asking Serrano if he and S.W. were in a relationship. O'Connor did not ask Cortez to supervise the staff. Cortez said that S.W. could come in when she wanted and took two weeks off. He was not interested in the other custodians. Cortez spoke to Serrano regarding S.W.'s punctuality, which was odd because Cortez had issues with punctuality.

Cortez called Walker and stated that Serrano and S.W. bullied him. He complained about the bullying to O'Connor. O'Connor denied this. Cortez stated that he was depressed on medication and had anxiety.

There was an incident where Cortez told S.W. to wet-vac the floor that had been stripped. S.W. refused because she did not have to take orders from Cortez. Serrano then asked her to change her footwear. Serrano did not generally give women custodians heavy work.

Walker is familiar with the JCSD's sexual harassment policy. She did not discuss the policy with the people she interviewed. She reviewed Cortez's personnel file. There was a previous complaint by a female custodian against Cortez at P.S. 33. She investigated that complaint. Walker reviewed the notes in the prior complaint as part of this investigation. She also reviewed S.W.'s personal file. S.W. had not filed any other harassment complaints. She did have disciplines for falsifying a timesheet. Cortez received a written reprimand for an incident that occurred at Ferris High School with a female custodian in 2011. Cortez had exhibited aggressive and violent behavior at work. He had a history of intimidation of coworkers.

Walker concluded that Cortez's behavior violated the policy and created a hostile work environment based on sexual harassment because he leered at S.W., asked if she and Serrano were having sex, and tried to record her. Walker sent a report regarding her findings. She did not participate in Cortez departmental hearing.

Henry Padua

Henry Padua (Padua) is the maintenance supervisor for the Jersey City Board of Education. His office is in the Board's central office. MS 41 is one of the schools that he supervises. In September 2016 S.W. approached him stating she felt uncomfortable and listed complaints. She came to his office to make a statement, which he recorded with her consent. Padua told S.W. to file a complaint. The Board has web training on affirmative action. S.W. was in fear from Cortez and felt threatened by him.

Padua investigated S.W.'s complaint. He spoke to Serrano, Leroy Minatee, Miranda Smith, and Robert Santiago. Serrano stated that Cortez asked about the treatment S.W. received, if Serrano and S.W. were having sex, and if they were he should "share the wealth." Serrano stated that S.W. was not getting special privileges or treated special. When he is at MS 43 Serrano is in charge and gives directions. Minatee and Smith stated they did not hear anything at MS 41 during the summer of 2016. Padua spoke to Cortez within one week of S.W. allegations. He then turned the matter over to his supervisor, Kevin Reilly, who forwarded it to Human Resources. He did not record his interview of Serrano or anyone other than S.W.

S.W.'s allegations regarding when Cortez gave her an order regarding stripping floors and Cortez sticking his chest out were not sexual harassment allegations. Prior to the allegations Padua knew S.W. She had been disciplined for attendance and work not being up to par. He was involved in S.W. disciplinary hearing and did not believe her.

Celeste Williams

Celeste Williams (Williams) is the chief of talent at JCPS. The title chief of talent was previously chief of Human Resources. She supervised the Affirmative Action Office and discipline of instructional and non-instructional employees. She receives documents of discipline investigations, then works with the legal department to follow-up on disciplinary proceedings. There is zero tolerance for sexual harassment. There is an annual sexual harassment training for all employees by computer with follow up. Gary Murphy is the Affirmative Action Officer for JCPS. Murphy disseminated the sexual harassment policy.

In late August 2016, S.W. submitted a written sexual harassment complaint to Murphy. The complaint included inappropriate things that Cortez did to her and that she felt threatened by Cortez. The complaint was forwarded to Williams and the legal department, who decided to move forward immediately. A letter was issued to Cortez putting him on administrative leave with pay.

Williams received the investigation report then discussed it with the legal department and the superintendent to determine what type of action to take. It was decided to take the action of removal of Cortez. Williams had input into what charges would be brought against Cortez.

The March 17, 2017, Final Decision of Disciplinary Action (FDNA) lists the incorrect incident. It was revised on July 25, 2017. Cortez served a ninety-day suspension. On February 17, 2011, Cortez was given a written and verbal reprimand.

Juan Cortez

Cortez has worked for JCPS for nineteen years. He was a custodian for the first seventeen years and he has been a boiler operator for the past two years. Beginning in July of 2016 he was a boiler operator at MS 41. Serrano was the head custodian. Cortez was not the supervisor of the custodians, Serrano was their supervisor. At one point Serrano left Cortez in charge of stripping the floor in the building on the second floor. Cortez told the custodians to move the boxes around the elevator. There was an electrician present who was talking to S. W. while the others were working. On that day S.W. arrived late wearing sandals, which are not appropriate footwear for stripping floors. While the others were working stripping the floor, S.W. was playing with her phone. S.W. eventually changed into sneakers and began working. She was upset.

The hours of work were 6:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. Cortez stated that he worked with Robert, Leroy, Miranda, and S.W. Leroy and S.W. always came in late. Serrano and S.W. usually came in between at 9:30 and 10:00 a.m. S.W. did not always come to work. Cortez recalled a time when S.W. was out of work for two weeks. Cortez told Serrano. Serrano told the Board that S.W. was sick. Serrano and S.W. were upset by this.

S.W. would bring Serrano lunch and mainly worked with him. Cortez told Serrano it was not appropriate to let one custodian do whatever they wanted while the others had to work. Serrano stated that he was the boss.

When Vice Principal O'Connor returned from vacation, Cortez told him about the attendance issues of Serrano, Robert, and S.W. O'Connor said that he would let it go.

Cortez was never trained in the JCPS sexual harassment policy. He had not seen the sexual harassment policy before the summer of 2016.

Cortez did not record S.W. He did not walk any differently around her than he did around anyone else. Cortez later asked S.W. a question while she was talking to Charles. She answered the question which ended the conversation. He never stared or leered at S.W.'s vaginal area.

Cortez previously worked in PS 22, PS 23, PS 33, PS 41, and Ferris High School. He requested a transfer from all of the above schools except PS 33. At PS 33, Cortez had a problem with co-workers not coming in on time and not following directions. At PS 23 the Principal Ayala did not want him to leave. He never saw the letter from Ayala regarding his transfer. The boiler operator hit him at PS 23, which Cortez reported to the police. He was promoted to boiler operator at PS 33. He was not written up by the principal at Ferris High School. He did receive a letter regarding taking a key.

Serrano, Leroy, Robert, and Miranda were in the office when Cortez asked Serrano if anything was going on between Serrano and S.W. because she was not doing as much work as the others.

Cortez believed that S.W.'s problem with him was with the floor-stripping incident and her falsifying of her sign-in sheets. S.W. never mentioned sexual harassment to him. She made fun of the way he spoke.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon a consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

In September 2016, S.W. made complaints to Padua regarding Cortez. Her complaints were:

1. She was on a fifteen-minute break speaking to the electrician when Cortez inserted himself between her and the electrician and told her to clean a certain area. There were other workers present but he only told her to clean.

2. Cortez told her to strip the floor. They argued and Serrano diffused the argument and told her to change her footwear.

3. She was speaking to Charles when Cortez asked her was she working at school fifteen. She said "no" and continued talking to Charles when Cortez asked her why was she always late.

4. Cortez told Serrano that S.W. gets special privileges so she must be sleeping with him.

5. S.W. did not feel comfortable around Cortez.

S.W. was subpoenaed to testify. On two occasions she failed to appear. Serrano and Santiago, who it is alleged heard Cortez say that Serrano and S.W. were having sex and he should share, and allegedly saw Cortez leer at S.W.'s vaginal area did not testify in this matter. Smith appears to have told Walker that she heard Cortez ask Serrano if he and S.W. were having sex. Smith told Padua that she did not hear anything. Smith did not testify in this matter.

The hours for custodians in the summer at MS 41 are 6:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. The head custodian at MS 41 is Peter Serrano. Cortez is the boiler operator. The head custodian oversees the building. If the head custodian is not in the boiler operator is in charge. When the head custodian gives an order to a custodian, the boiler operator cannot override the order.

Serrano told Cortez to begin stripping the floors. On that day S.W. was late and had on sandals which are not appropriate for stripping floors. Cortez told her to start stripping the floor. S.W. argued with Cortez and Serrano intervened. S.W. changed into sneakers and began stripping the floors but was upset. Cortez asked Serrano if he and S.W. were in a relationship because S.W. was given preferential treatment by Serrano.

Cortez received a written reprimand for conduct unbecoming and other sufficient cause on June 20, 2016. On February 18, 2011, and February 25, 2011, Cortez received a warning to follow all directives from his immediate supervisors.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause are not sustained.
