NOVEMBER 21, 2014

Sgt. William J. Camp Jr. tests a sample as New Jersey Army and Air National Guard Soldiers and Airmen of the 21st Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Team (WMD CST), New Jersey National Guard, are revalidated by U.S. Army North at the Arm and Hammer Park, Trenton, N.J., Nov. 18, 2014. Every 18 months, the CST is validated on common tasks, which include identifying threats, the decontamination process and working with civilian authorities in a real world environment to ensure that the unit is ready in event of a chemical, biological, radiological and nuclear threat. # WAY THROUGH

Twenty Airmen from the 177th Fighter Wing Maintenance Group participated in reclamation of an aircraft training at Warren Grove Range, N.J., Nov. 8, 2014.

The Crashed, Damaged, or Disabled Aircraft Recovery team trained on a number of techniques that support their mission as a first-response unit in the event an aircraft is damaged, or disabled.

"If there was an aircraft we couldn't bag, lift or crane lift out, we would have to cut the aircraft into pieces, and transport it piece by piece back to the base," said Maj. Brian Cooper, commander, CDDAR team.

The Airmen used K12 rescue saws on scrapped trucks to simulate the reclamation of a downed aircraft. For many team members, this was their first opportunity to get this type of hands-on training.

"We have some seasoned members here, and we also have some that are new," said Cooper. "Using a saw is one thing, but actually walking a drill through metal is different."

Membership on the CDDAR team is a supplemental duty for 177th Airmen.

"We have Airmen from many different Air Force specialties including aerospace ground equipment, crew chiefs, fabrication and the engine shop," Cooper said. "These guys all have their daily jobs to do, and this is an additional duty that the whole team takes very serious."

after a rare event, Cooper said the group may not get the recognition it deserves.

"The team doesn't get a lot of focus," Cooper said. "We're a first-responding unit that nobody knows about until you need them."

Although Cooper acknowledges he hopes the Wing's CDDAR team is never used, he ensures that if it is needed, they will be ready.

INSPECTION TIME

One of the great truisms in the airplane industry is “The bigger the aircraft, the longer the inspection”. That certainly is the case for the KC-135R Stratotankers at the 108th Wing at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, N.J. Airman 1st Class James R. ENERGY CONSERVATION TIP OF THE WEEK
Be thankful, save energy this Thanksgiving

Do your part to help reduce energy use on Thanksgiving. If you're headed out to visit your family, make sure you lower your thermostat and unplug any non-essential electronic devices.

Did You Know?

Did you know that Americans use over 213,000 megawatt hours in electricity just cooking their Thanksgiving turkeys? That's about $25 million spent on electricity just to cook turkeys every year!

For Turkey Day savings, turn your thermostat down a few degrees and the heat from your oven will help keep your home warm. Dim your lights if possible, this will save electricity, extend the life of your bulbs, and set the mood. And don't shy away from using the slow cooker. It will take a little longer, but the slow cooker will use a lot less energy than the oven and stovetop.

If you would like more information about our energy and water conservation efforts, please contact Christopher Moore, Energy Manager at christopher.moore@dmava.nj.gov.
