STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Betty Gene Johnson-Taylor	FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION
CSC Docket No. 2015-2424 OAL Docket No. CSV 03143-15

ISSUED: FEB 08 2017 (SLK)

The appeal of Betty Gene Johnson-Taylor, an Assistant Personnel Director with the City of Paterson, of her removal, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joann LaSala Candido (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on December 14, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on January 18, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact as detailed in the initial decision. However, the Commission did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to modify the removal to a six-month suspension. Rather, the Commission upheld the removal.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was removed, effective January 16, 2015, on charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that the appellant misrepresented her income on an application for the Home Paterson Pride Program (Home Program). Upon the appellant's appeal to the Commission, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing as a contested case.

The ALJ set forth in her initial decision that Barbara Blake-McLennon, Director of Community Development (Community Development), testified that the appellant applied for grant money under the Home Program to help low-income residents in Paterson repair their homes. At the time of the appellant's application, her annual income was below the maximum allowable amount of $53,750. However, just after her income was re-verified, the appellant's salary was increased to $80,340. Blake-McLennon indicated that her loan was approved based on her initial income and the appointing authority did not re-verify her income at closing. She confirmed that the appointing authority prepared all of the loan documents.

Nellie Pou, Business Administrator, testified that the Passaic County Prosecutor's Office (Prosecutor's Office) and the Office of the Inspector General, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) found no criminal intent on the part of the appellant. Pou stated that the appointing authority sought to terminate the appellant because of her position's high profile, her misrepresentation on her grant application, and the need to maintain the public trust. She reiterated that since the appellant's income exceeded the maximum allowable amount at the time of closing, the grant should not have been approved and the funds should not have been dispersed.

Domenick Stampone, Esq. testified that the Paterson Municipal Council and he (Committee) investigated certain monetary payments made to compensate elected and appointed officials for hours worked during Hurricane Irene and Tropical Storm Lee, which occurred in September 2011. The Committee found that the appellant lacked a fundamental knowledge of the department she managed, allowed overtime payments without proper documentation, allowed employees to receive overtime compensation when called into service even with the appointing authority being closed, and received inappropriate overtime payments herself. Although the appointing authority required these overtime payments to be returned, no formal or even informal disciplinary charges were ever brought against appellant.

Yvonne Scott, Senior Clerk, testified on behalf of the appellant. She indicated that she suggested to the appellant that she apply for the Home Program since she thought the appellant was eligible. Scott stated that Cheryl Brown at Community Development, who was in charge of eligibility, advised her that the appellant would still be eligible once her salary increased as she indicated that eligibility goes back to the original date of application.

Lanisha Danielle Mackle Ridley testified on behalf of the appellant. In September 2010, she was the Acting Director of Community Development. She stated that the Home Program needed re-certification at six-months intervals and she would not have signed the re-certification if appellant's income was not accurate.

The ALJ found that when the appellant submitted her application for the Home Program on December 22, 2009, she reported her income as $52,811 which was under the maximum allowable annual income of $53,750. In June 2010, Community Development verified that the appellant's income was below the maximum allowable amount. Thereafter, on July 13, 2010, the appellant was appointed Acting Director of Personnel and her annual salary increased to $80,340. On December 1, 2010, the appellant signed a loan document indicating her annual salary as $53,868.12. On December 10, 2010, a loan in the amount of $43,141 was disbursed to the appellant based on her salary being $53,868.12 annually. In October 2011, the appointing authority found that the appellant allowed overtime payments to be made without proper documentation and that she received improper overtime payments. The appellant was not threatened with any disciplinary action or termination, nor were charges ever field against her. On June 14, 2012, the Paterson City Council passed a resolution to terminate her from her position as Acting Director of Personnel. However, she was returned to her permanent title, Assistant Personnel Director and was reinstated on July 23, 2012 with back pay.

The ALJ noted that the appellant signed her name to the final loan application and affidavit of income certifying that the estimated income of $53,868.10 on her application was truthful and complete to the best of her knowledge. She did this even though she knew she was given a considerable pay raise in July 2010 and that the income stated on the closing documents, which she certified as correct, was in fact untrue. Based on the foregoing, the ALJ sustained the charge that the appellant engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee. The ALJ indicated that since the appellant was never formally charged in regard to the allegations that she mismanaged funds in 2011, that she lacked any history of disciplinary action. The ALJ found that the appellant's offense was not so severe to warrant removal given that the appointing authority's own witnesses admitted that the appellant did not draft the loan documents herself. Additionally, the ALJ commented that the Prosecutor's Office and HUD found that the appellant did not have criminal intent and declined to bring charges. The ALJ stated that her signing a misleading loan application was action she took as a private citizen and that the appointing authority did not present sufficient evidence indicating that the appellant was unsuitable for her position. The ALJ emphasized that the appellant did not prepare the loan document and did not produce any false documents when her income was verified. Therefore, this being her first offense, under the principle of progressive discipline, the ALJ concluded that removal was not warranted. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended that the removal be modified to a six-month suspension.

In its exceptions, the appointing authority asserts that the ALJ ignored the appellant's misrepresentation on an affidavit and received $43,141 to which she was not entitled. The appointing authority disagrees with the ALJ's findings that the appellant had an unblemished disciplinary record as she had to defend herself against the charges of misappropriation of funds in 2011 to the Committee. Further, while represented by counsel, she testified under oath to the Committee, admitting that she approved overtime payments for exempt employees, including herself. Although the Paterson City Council resolved to terminate the appellant, the Commission directed that the appellant be restored to her permanent title of Assistant Personnel Director as she was not apprised of the charges against her in compliance with Civil Service law and rule. However, it emphasizes that she was removed from Acting Personnel Director, which is tantamount to a demotion.

Additionally, the appointing authority argues that the appellant's misconduct was so severe that it warrants termination. It represents that the appellant's duties included being in charge of payroll, processing all changes for all of the appointing authority's employees, and being responsible for income verification of loan applications, including verification of loan applications for the same grant loan received by the appellant. Consequently, by the appellant executing documents falsely representing her income and receiving $43,141 to which she was not entitled, she brought into question her trustworthiness, honesty and truthfulness. It states that an Assistant Personnel Director who commits fraud and submits false documents cannot present an image of personal integrity and dependability to the public. Further, it indicates that the appointing authority will need to commence legal action against the appellant since she has not repaid the improper loan.

In reply, the appellant asserts that the appointing authority did not submit any evidence concerning its compliance with or adherence to her due process rights in regard to its Committee proceedings concerning misappropriation of overtime payments. The appellant emphasizes that the Committee's disciplinary hearing did not conform to Civil Services regulations and an employee cannot be found guilty of charges without proper notice by the appointing authority. She highlights that the ALJ correctly noted that the appointing authority prepared the mortgage packet and she did not submit any false or inappropriate documentation. The appellant presents that she submitted evidence that the affidavit in question was not required for the closing and although she signed an affidavit that incorrectly stated her income, the appointing authority knowingly prepared this affidavit and backdated her income to the date of her application. The appellant contends that her loan advisor knew or should have known that the appellant's income increased because of a promotion. Further, it can be inferred that the loan advisor prepared the affidavit so that her loan could withstand a HUD audit as this is the only reasonable explanation for including and requiring unnecessary documents in the file. Consequently, as the appointing authority admitted that the appellant did not prepare the loan documents, the ALJ was correct in determining that removal was not appropriate.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ regarding the charges. Clearly, the appellant's misrepresentation of or her failure to correct the income on the final loan application and affidavit of income dated December 1, 2010 was conduct unbecoming a public employee. However, as discussed further below, the Commission does not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to modify the appellant's removal to a six-month suspension.

Although the appellant argues in her exceptions that the affidavit she signed was not even required for the loan and that it was prepared by the appointing authority, she clearly attested to the fact that her projected income in 2010 was $53,868.12, but her salary was increased to $80,340 in July 2010. It is irrelevant that she did not prepare the affidavit or even if it was necessary to perfect the loan as she attested to the veracity of the information. Indeed, if the information was not correct, it was incumbent upon the appellant to correct this information or not sign, swearing to its truthfulness.

In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. In addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident in determining the proper penalty, the Commission also utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In assessing the penalty in relationship to the employee's conduct, it is important to emphasize that the nature of the offense must be balanced against mitigating circumstances, including any prior disciplinary history. However, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007).

In the instant matter, the Commission finds that the appellant's actions were sufficiently egregious to support removal. While the ALJ relied on the fact that the appointing authority appeared to bear some responsibility since it prepared the loan documents, it is clear that the appellant knew her income exceeded the threshold for the grant. Moreover, the fact that her improper actions occurred outside of her employment and did not result in criminal charges are of no moment. In this regard, it is clear that Civil Service employees are subject to disciplinary action for improper actions both in conjunction with and outside of their employment. Moreover, criminal charges are not required to sustain administrative disciplinary charges as the standards to prove guilt are significantly different. While said factors can be used to mitigate the penalty imposed, the Commission does not find these factors persuasive in this matter. Further, a review of the Examples of Work under the Job Specification for an Assistant Personnel Director indicate that incumbents in this title assist in the handling of personnel and employee relations problems and act as a liaison between the appointing authority and the Commission in personnel matters, including appointments, promotions, transfers, demotions, dismissals, and disciplinary matters. As such, her falsification makes it very difficult for the appointing authority to continue to trust her ability to do her job, which involves sensitive and confidential personnel matters. The Commission notes that it need not decide whether the appointing authority's Committee's findings that she had engaged in inappropriate conduct stemming from a 2011 incident constitutes discipline for the purposes of progressive discipline since her actions in this matter were clearly sufficiently egregious to support removal. Accordingly, based on the seriousness of the appellant's offense as it relates to her position, the Commission concludes that removal is the appropriate penalty.

ORDER

The Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in removing the appellant was justified. Therefore, the Commission affirms that action and dismisses the appellant's appeal.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 03143-15

IN THE MATTER OF BETTY GENE JOHNSON-TAYLOR, CITY OF PATERSON, DIVISION OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

Neal Brunson, Esq., for appellant

Steven S. Glickman, Assistant Corporation Counsel, for City of Paterson (Domenick Stampone, Corporation Counsel, attorney)

Record Closed: November 18, 2016 Decided: December 14, 2016

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter involves disciplinary charges filed against Betty Gene Johnson-Taylor (appellant), who was formerly employed by respondent, the City of Paterson ("City"), as an assistant personnel director. The appeal as transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) arises from the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, dated January 16, 2015. On November 3, 2014, appellant was issued a 31-A Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action charging her with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (12), conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause, for misrepresenting her income on an application for the Home Paterson Pride Rehabilitation Program ('HOME"), which resulted in the appellant's removal from employment effective January 16, 2015.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In February 2015, Johnson-Taylor appealed her removal to the New Jersey Civil Service Commission (CSC). The case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on March 3, 2015, and hearing dates were held on December 7, 2015, and February 2, and July 6, 2016. After months of waiting for transcripts, the parties were finally able to submit their respective post-submission briefs on November 18, 2016, on which date the record closed.

Issues Presented

1. Did appellant violate N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (a)(12) by misrepresenting her income on an application for the Home Paterson Pride Rehabilitation Program ("HOME")?

2. If so, is removal the appropriate penalty?

TESTIMONY

The following is intended to summarize the testimony of the witnesses relevant to the issues in this matter:

Barbara Blake McLennon

Barbara Blake-McLennon, director of Community Development, testified on behalf of the City. She oversees federal grant programs. Blake-McLennon testified that on December 22, 2009, appellant applied for the Paterson Pride Rehab Program that provides low-income residents of Paterson grant monies to help repair their homes. The amount of the grant depends upon the applicant's income and household size. At the time of the application, appellant's annual income was below the maximum allowable of $53,750 under the HOME program. She resided with her nephew in the same household.

Blake-McLennon described, in general terms, the application process. Once an application is submitted, it remains in review status, which is done every six months and until the funds are dispersed. The application and a booklet of instruction are given to the applicant. The applicant then meets with a loan officer to ensure that taxes, utilities, and any mortgages are paid to date. If satisfactory, then an inspector schedules a visit to the home. The City is then obligated to verify the applicant's income at six-month intervals until closing, using an income-verification form filled out by the Office of Personnel when the applicant is an employee of the City. Here, the appellant met with loan officer Sheryl Brown, and provided her with the requisite proofs. The application was then submitted to the program on December 22, 2009, for consideration.

Blake-McLennon stated that appellant's salary was increased from $52,811 to $80,340, effective July 13, 2010. This occurred just after the June 2010 re-verification of income. On December 1, 2010, Pearl Halestock, the chief loan officer of HOME, and Lanisha Makle, its community development director, approved appellant's application according to the June income verification, which showed a monthly income of $4,489 and annual income of $53,868. Because the loan closed in the beginning of December 2010 rather than at the end of the month when re-verification would have been necessary, the City did not verify appellant's income at the closing. On the approval documentation, there was an incorrect entry that stated that appellant was not an employee of the City, when in fact she was. This was not corrected. On December 9, 2010, the documents were again reviewed before the loan was dispersed. Blake-McLennon confirmed on cross-examination that the City prepared and typed all of the closing documents and that it did not verify appellant's annual income, since a review would not have been needed until December 22, 2010. She also stated that it was unclear if and when the City began applying the income limit set by the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Nellie Pou

The City's business administrator, Nellie Pou, testified on its behalf. She has held that position since July 1, 2014. Pou explained that a memorandum was written by Blake-McLennon on August 6, 2014, as requested by the Paterson mayor Jose Torres concerning a review of appellant's HOME application file. (P-3.) The matter was referred to the Passaic County Prosecutor's Office for its review since appellant's annual income, at closing, exceeded the allowable maximum amount. The Prosecutor's Office determined that there was no criminal intent; no charges were brought. The Office of Inspector General, U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, also found no criminal intent on the part of appellant. (P-4.)

Pou testified that she felt that appellant misrepresented information on her application, although she did not request an investigation. Corporation counsel reviewed Blake-McLennon's memorandum. Pou testified that appellant's income in 2009, at the time of the application, was in excess of the $51,200 annual maximum income allowed under the program and appellant's application should have been rejected. Her annual income in 2009 was $53,846.

Pou further stated that the affidavit of income verification for the closing of the grant is filled out by the Department of Community Development before going to the personnel director. Blake-McLennon was asked by the mayor to prepare a memorandum to address the issue concerning appellant's application, which may have had a discrepancy. The memorandum was forwarded by Blake-McLennon to City corporation counsel Domenick Stampone. Stampone forwarded the findings to the Passaic County Prosecutor's Office, who found no criminal intent on behalf of appellant. HUD simultaneously also found no criminal intent.

Pou stated that the City sought to terminate appellant from her position as acting director of personnel because of the position's high profile, her misrepresentation of income on the HOME application, and the need to maintain the public trust.

Because Taylor earned $53,846 at the time of the application and $80,000 at the time of closing, which was above the program's allowable limit, appellant never should have been approved for the grant, nor should funds have been dispersed. Pou asked Stampone to prepare charges for appellant's removal. Accordingly, in November 2014 a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action was prepared and signed by him.

Yvonne Scott

Yvonne Scott, a senior clerk in the Registry division of the City, testified on behalf of appellant. Scott worked for appellant in the Personnel division until sometime in 2013. Scott suggested to appellant that she should apply for the HOME program because she thought appellant would be eligible. Scott asked Cheryl Brown at Community Development, who was in charge of eligibility, if appellant was approved. Scott also asked Brown in July 2010 if appellant would still be eligible once her salary increased, since appellant was promoted to personnel director. Brown said it was fine, since eligibility goes back to the original date of application.

Domenick Stampone, Esq.

Domenick Stampone, corporation counsel for the City, testified on its behalf. He stated that he was contacted by Blake-McLennon sometime during the summer of 2014 to review documentation pertaining to appellant's application for a construction loan under the HOME program.

Prior to this, during October 2011, Stampone and the Paterson Municipal Council convened a Committee of the Whole ("Committee") to investigate certain monetary payments made to compensate elected and appointed officials for hours worked during Hurricane Irene and Tropical Storm Lee, which occurred in September 2011. (R-12.) Upon its review, the Committee found that appellant lacked a fundamental knowledge of the department she managed, allowed overtime payments to be made without proper documentation, allowed employees to receive overtime compensation when called into service even when the City was closed, and received inappropriate overtime payments herself. As a result of the Committee's findings, in December 2011 appellant was accused of receiving inappropriate overtime payments of $11,549.12 from July 1, 2010, to June 30, 2011, and $3,326.29 from July 1, 2011, to December 15, 2011. (R-11 at 3-4.) Although the City required that these overtime payments be returned through immediate repayment or pursuant to a reasonable payment schedule, no formal or even informal disciplinary charges were ever brought against appellant and filed with the CSC.

Lanisha Danielle Mackle Ridley

Lanisha Danielle Mackle Ridley also testified on behalf of appellant. In September 2010, Ridley was employed as acting director of the City's Department of Community Development. Ridley testified that the HOME program needed re-certification at six-month intervals, and that she never would have signed the re-certification if appellant's income was not stated correctly.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following pertinent FACTS:

1. Appellant, Johnson-Taylor, was hired by the City of Paterson, Division of Personnel, on February 9, 2004.

2. On December 22, 2009, Johnson-Taylor submitted an application for acceptance to the HOME program to secure grant funding for home rehabilitation, after her meeting with loan officer Sheryl Brown. Johnson-Taylor reported her current wages as $52,811. If any of the information supplied was false, she agreed, as part of the application, to repay any and all of the grant funds expended.

3. Under the HOME program, determination of the amount of the grant was based upon income and household size. According to the HOME brochure issued by the Paterson Department of Community Development, at the time Johnson-Taylor filed her initial application, the income limit for a household of two to qualify for grant assistance for home repairs and maintenance was $53,750 per year. (R-3.) However, for the same period of time, the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, which provided grant money for the program, listed the income limit for a household of two as $51,200. (P-3 at 2.) In 2010, the applicable HUD income limit rose to $51,500.

4. Pursuant to federal guidelines, income level remains important from the time of the application until the disbursement of the loan and must be verified every six months.

5. In June 2010, the Department of Community Development verified at the six-month recertification Johnson-Taylor's income at $52,811, and, applying the income limit listed in the HOME brochure, found her qualified for the HOME loan program. On July 13, 2010, Johnson-Taylor was appointed acting director of Personnel. As a result of the appointment, her annual salary increased to $80,340. (R-5.)

6. On December 1, 2010, Johnson-Taylor signed a loan document, prepared by a secretary, which listed her monthly income as $4,489.01, for an annual salary of $53,868.12. (R-8.)

7. On December 1, 2010, Johnson-Taylor signed an affidavit of income prepared by the City stating that her projected income for 2010 was $53,868.12. (R-10.) Johnson-Taylor's bi-weekly salary was listed as $2,071.85 as a full-time employee of the City of Paterson.

8. The annual income listed on the loan document and the projected income listed in the affidavit is above the income limit for eligibility set by both the HOME program brochure and by HUD. The income estimate also fails to reflect Johnson-Taylor's salary increase from her appointment as acting director of Personnel in July 2010.

9. A loan in the amount of $43,141 was disbursed to Johnson-Taylor on or about December 10, 2010. (P-1; R-9.) According to the final application signed by Johnson-Taylor on December 1, 2010, and by the chief loan officer and director of Community Development also on December 10, 2010, the application was approved based on Johnson-Taylor's monthly income of $4,489.01 ($53,868.12 annually). (R-8.)

10. Johnson-Taylor would have qualified for the program with $52,811 in annual income on her initial application under the income limit provided by the HOME brochure, although under the HUD limit she would have been ineligible for the program from the very beginning.

11. The matter was referred by the City to the Passaic County Prosecutor's Office, which declined to take criminal action against Johnson-Taylor. The HUD Office of Inspector General also found no criminal intent as a result of its investigation.

12. In October 2011, the Paterson Municipal Council convened a Committee of the Whole to investigate monetary payments made to compensate elected and appointed officials as a result of hours worked during Hurricane Irene and Tropical Storm Lee, which occurred in September 2011. (R-12.) The Committee found that Johnson-Taylor allowed overtime payments to be made without proper documentation and that she received inappropriate overtime payments of $11,549.12 from July 1, 2010, to June 30, 2011, and $3,326.29 from July 1, 2011, to December 15, 2011. (R-11 at 3–4.) During the Committee's investigation, Johnson-Taylor was not threatened with disciplinary action or termination, nor were any charges ever filed against her.

13. On June 14, 2012, the Paterson City Council passed a resolution to terminate Johnson-Taylor from her position as acting director of Personnel. (R-13.) On July 12, 2012, business administrator Charles Thomas sent a memo to the municipal council president regarding Johnson-Taylor's employment status. (R-14.) Because she was returned to her permanent civil-service title of assistant personnel director, based upon the direction of the NJ CSC, Johnson-Taylor was reinstated on July 23, 2012, with back pay. (R-15.)

14. On November 3, 2014, Johnson-Taylor was issued a 31-A Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action alleging conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (a)(12). (R-1.) The possible penalties cited were suspension, removal, or demotion. A 31-B Final Notice of Disciplinary Action removing Johnson-Taylor was dated January 16, 2015, and served on January 23, 2015. Johnson-Taylor was removed from employment as an assistant personnel director for the City effective January 16, 2015.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) a public employee can be disciplined for conduct unbecoming a public employee. Whether an employee's behavior "constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee is primarily a question of law." Karins v. Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 553 (1998). Conduct unbecoming is an extremely fact-specific issue and describes any conduct that undermines public confidence in municipal employees or services. Id. at 554. The appointing authority must establish that the employee engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Washington v. City of Trenton, CSV 4211-03, Initial Decision (November 3, 2005), adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (December 13, 2005), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

Here, although appellant did not prepare the loan documents herself, she knew that her income had increased since her initial application in December 2009. (Tr. 1 at 74:2–8). The final loan application contained a certification regarding truth and completeness under penalty of perjury, which appellant signed and dated on December 1, 2010. (R-8.) No evidence in the OAL hearing record indicates that she was instructed by the loan brochure itself or by any individual that her income needed to be updated throughout the application process. However, appellant signed her name to the final loan application and affidavit of income certifying that the estimated income of $53,868.10 noted on the application was truthful and complete to the best of her knowledge. She did this even though she knew she was given a considerable pay raise in July 2010 and that the income stated on the closing documents, which she certified as correct, was in fact untrue. (R-10.)

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the City has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence that appellant engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee based on the misrepresentation of or her failure to correct the income reported on the final HOME loan application and affidavit of income dated December 1, 2010.

We next turn to the disciplinary action of removal sought by the City. Since appellant was never formally charged in regard to the allegations that came to light in 2011 of her alleged mismanagement of funds, she lacks any history of disciplinary action. The theory of progressive discipline provides that "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007) (citing West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962)). An employee's past record includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously called to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 523–24. Although disciplinary issues may be informally adjudicated, "[i]t is elementary that an employee cannot legally be tried or found guilty on charges of which he has not been given plain notice by the appointing authority," and "[t]he de novo hearing on the administrative appeal is limited to the charges made below." Id. at 522. As the court said in Orange v. DeStefano, 48 N.J. Super. 407, 419 (App. Div. 1958), "where . . . an employee entitled to notice and hearing before discharge is tried on specified charges, but is found guilty solely of other charges never specified nor actually tried before the original hearer or on appeal to the Civil Service Commission, the matter must be reversed." Dep't of Law & Pub. Safety, Div. of Motor Vehicles v. Miller, 115 N.J. Super. 122, 126 (App. Div. 1971).

"[P]rinciples of progressive discipline can support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct." Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30. In In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007), the Court held that "some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record." See Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197–98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense). Thus, the question for the courts is "whether such punishment is 'so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness.'" In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982) (considering punishment in license-revocation proceeding) (quoting Pell v. Bd. of Educ., 313 N.E.2d 321, 327 (1974)).

Unlike in Carter and Rawlings, the offense appellant committed was not so severe as to warrant removal. Given that the City's own witnesses admitted that appellant did not draft the loan documents herself, removal was disproportionate to the offense. Additionally, the Passaic County Prosecutor's Office and the HUD Office of Inspector General found that appellant did not have criminal intent and declined to bring charges. (P-4.)

As for past misconduct, the only example provided was appellant's receipt of alleged improper overtime compensation in 2011 as found by the Committee. (R-11.) However, appellant was not charged with any official misconduct, nor were any formal disciplinary charges ever filed. No testimony or exhibits in the record indicate that she was ever charged. The Committee should have explicitly notified appellant that it was seeking to discipline her, citing the specific reasons for imposing such disciplinary action. Nothing in the record reflected such a disciplinary hearing, nor a hearing held by the Paterson City Council to address the Committee's findings. In such instance, appellant would have had an opportunity to contest those charges, present witnesses in her behalf, or cross-examine the City's witnesses. However, because no hearing ever occurred, the CSC set aside the penalty of removal and reinstated appellant to her position as assistant personnel director.

Accordingly, under the standards articulated in Bock, it must be considered that appellant has an unblemished disciplinary record. Her removal from her position for signing a misleading loan application, which by the way indicated that she was a private citizen, had nothing to do with her job performance or official duties. Since there had not been a formal instance of official misconduct prior to the issue of the loan application, no habitual misconduct existed. Therefore, the concept of progressive discipline, as noted above, became applicable. This being her first offense, removal was not warranted, and I so CONCLUDE.

That said, a disciplinary penalty should be imposed under the facts presented here. In In re Olivo, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 223, a construction official was ultimately given a reprimand after appealing his removal for forging the signatures of a secretary and zoning official on a zoning permit given to an applicant. Similarly, in In re Haggerty, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 240, a probation officer was reinstated with a six-month suspension on appeal from his removal for regularly placing sports bets with an illegal bookmaking operation. The Merit System Board reduced the penalty from removal to a six-month suspension given Haggerty's exemplary record of public service for twenty-two years. "[J]udicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest." Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 33. The City has not proven that appellant's conduct was so severe as to ignore the principle of progressive discipline. In the cases cited above, forgery and illegal betting were more severe offenses than appellant signing documents, prepared by someone other than herself, that misstated an income estimate. Yet in both cases cited above, a reprimand and suspension were deemed appropriate penalties rather than removal despite the severity of those offenses.

Since appellant lacked a disciplinary history, the City offered no credible evidence that appellant's improper signature of loan documents makes her unsuitable to continue as assistant director of personnel or that her continued employment will be contrary to the public interest. In fact, competency was not mentioned at all in the preliminary or final notices of disciplinary action. The only evidence proffered was testimony from Pou stating that the position is high profile and involves public trust and a letter from the State claiming that payroll function was "extraordinarily poor." (Tr. 1 at 99:1–7; R-11 at 3.) However, Pou's statement was not sufficient to establish by a preponderance of the credible evidence that appellant was unsuitable for the position. Additionally, the county prosecutor and HUD both determined that there was no criminal intent to defraud. Appellant did not prepare the loan documents, did not fill in the income figures, and did not produce any false documents when her income was verified in December 2009 or again in June 2010. Appellant's failure to provide additional documents prior to the closing of the loan did not provide sufficient grounds for removal since the City was unable to provide any evidence that she was asked to provide such documents. Furthermore, there was no evidence offered either in the loan brochure or by way of testimony establishing that appellant should have, on her own, produced updated income documents when they had never been requested.

For the reasons stated above, the City has established by a preponderance of the credible evidence that appellant violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (a)(12) when she failed to correct her estimated income on the HOME loan application. As a result, I CONCLUDE that appellant is subject to discipline. Removal is not appropriate under the principle of progressive discipline or under the particular circumstances of this case. Appellant should not have signed a document that did not reflect the correct pay information, nor should the City have prepared the incorrect salary amount, or accepted the application in the first place, since her income at the onset was above the maximum allowable under the program.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that a six-month suspension without pay is the appropriate penalty in this particular case. The City justifiably charged appellant with conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause; however, for the reasons stated above, the penalty should be modified.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I hereby ORDER that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause are AFFIRMED, but that the penalty of removal is MODIFIED to a six-month suspension without pay.

I further ORDER that appellant be restored to her position at the completion of the six-month suspension, with back pay due, if any.

I further ORDER that appellant has a duty to mitigate damages to receive any back pay due after completion of the six-month suspension without pay. Appellant shall file a certification with the appointing authority detailing her employment, if applicable.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

In the Matters of Michael Mulcahy, et al., City of Bayonne	FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: FEB 10 2017 (HS)

The appeals of Michael Mulcahy, Housing Inspector, Gary Parlatti, Field Representative Citizen Complaints,[1] and Michael Smith, Field Representative Citizen Complaints, of their layoffs from the City of Bayonne, effective July 17, 2015, were heard by Administrative Law Judge Thomas R. Betancourt (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on November 2, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellants.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision and having reviewed the testimony and evidence presented before the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on January 18, 2017, did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to reverse the layoffs. Rather, the Commission upheld the layoffs.

DISCUSSION

Bayonne presented a layoff plan to the Division of Agency Services (Agency Services) via letter, indicating that due to reasons of economy and severe budget shortfalls, a layoff of its employees was necessary. The plan was approved in June 2015 and the General and Individual Notices of Layoff were subsequently distributed. As a result, Mulcahy and Smith were separated from employment and Parlatti was demoted in lieu of layoff to the title of Keyboarding Clerk 1. Upon the appellants' appeals to the Commission, the matters were transmitted to the OAL for hearings as contested cases and were then consolidated.

In the initial decision, the ALJ noted that the appellants performed property code enforcement and handled citizen complaints. The appellants would respond to complaints and, when appropriate, issue warnings and summonses for code violations, and would appear in municipal court where the summonses were returnable. The ALJ also noted that the appellants' jobs were currently being performed by their co-worker Thomas Keyes, a Field Representative Citizen Complaints.

The ALJ found that although Bayonne had a budget deficit and needed to cut costs, it did not effectuate the layoffs due to reasons of economy and severe budget shortfalls. Bayonne offered, as the reason for the layoffs, a change in philosophy in the enforcement of the property maintenance code to a less aggressive approach. However, the ALJ determined that there was no credible evidence that this change in philosophy was put into place. Specifically, the ALJ found that neither the appellants, Robert Wondolowski, former Director of Municipal Services and the appellants' supervisor, nor Keyes were informed of the change in philosophy. Moreover, he found that no one from Bayonne ever issued a written memorandum regarding this change in philosophy. In addition, the ALJ determined that Bayonne did not do what it stated it would in its submission of the proposed layoff to Agency Services. Specifically, it did not reduce or eliminate stipends, it did not reduce overtime, all intern positions were not eliminated and the one intern that was eliminated was then hired by the Bayonne Municipal Utilities Authority, and it did not offer any seasonal positions to the appellants. The ALJ also noted that since the layoffs, Bayonne hired more than 100 new employees, promoted and granted raises to several employees and continued to hire seasonal employees, some of whom had been hired as full-time employees.

The ALJ deemed the testimony of all witnesses credible, with the exceptions of Wondolowski and Joseph DeMarco, City Administrator. With respect to Wondolowski, the ALJ determined that he contradicted his direct testimony on cross-examination. On direct examination, he stated that he did not speak with DeMarco regarding layoffs, that he did not discuss enforcement of property maintenance violations with DeMarco and that he did not tell the appellants to stop writing property maintenance violations. However, on cross-examination, he stated that he did discuss the budget and possibility of layoffs, that he did know of a change in philosophy regarding property maintenance code enforcement, that he recalled speaking with DeMarco about the number of violations issued and the need to be more passive in enforcement and that he told the appellants to stop writing property maintenance violations on several occasions. With respect to DeMarco, the ALJ found his testimony regarding the change in philosophy not credible. Specifically, while DeMarco stated that he discussed this change in philosophy with others, there was no memorandum regarding any such meeting or meetings and there was no memorandum circulated to employees regarding this change in philosophy. The ALJ determined that DeMarco was the only witness who testified that there was a change in philosophy. All other witnesses, including Wondolowski, were unaware of the change in philosophy. Further, the ALJ found it inconceivable that there was no cost-benefit or savings projection analysis done or that a layoff plan could be conceived and implemented without any writing of any kind other than the letter to Agency Services. Based on the foregoing, the ALJ found that the appellants had demonstrated bad faith and found that the only reasonable conclusion for the layoffs was to remove the appellants from employment. The ALJ noted that although it was not established why Bayonne wished to remove the appellants, it was clear that the purpose of the layoff plan was their removal rather than for purposes of economy or budget shortfalls. Accordingly, as Bayonne did not effectuate the layoffs for reasons of economy, efficiency or other related reasons, the ALJ recommended reversing the layoffs.

In its exceptions, Bayonne maintains that the ALJ erroneously found Wondolowski not credible. In this regard, it notes that Wondolowski never testified on direct examination that he did not speak to DeMarco about the layoffs. Rather, he testified that he spoke to DeMarco about the budgets and inefficiencies in his department. It also notes that Wondolowski could not have testified on direct that he did not discuss enforcement of property maintenance violations with DeMarco and that he did not tell the appellants to stop writing property maintenance violations since he was not asked about these issues on direct examination. As such, Bayonne contends that there was no factual basis to find that Wondolowski's cross-examination contradicted his direct testimony.

Bayonne additionally maintains that the ALJ erroneously found DeMarco not credible. The ALJ stated that DeMarco was the only witness who testified that there was a change in philosophy. However, as Bayonne also states in greater detail below, multiple Bayonne employees testified that there was a change in philosophy after the Davis Administration took over in 2014. Bayonne also contends that the ALJ incorrectly relied on the fact that there was no memorandum or analysis regarding the layoff or change in philosophy. In this regard, it maintains that there is no statute, regulation or policy that requires Bayonne to produce an actual physical memorandum or analysis when instituting a layoff for reasons of economy, efficiency or other related reasons.

Bayonne also disputes the ALJ's finding of a lack of evidence that there was a change in the philosophy of aggressive property maintenance code enforcement. In this regard, Wondolowski testified that Bayonne was going to take a more passive approach to dealing with code violations and that the change in philosophy was to issue fewer tickets. In addition, Keyes testified that Bayonne underwent a change in philosophy between administrations. Keyes testified that prior to the Smith Administration, he did not actively and punitively enforce the code. After the Smith Administration took over in 2008, he was told to start actively looking for code violations. Keyes testified that it was standard practice under the Smith Administration to write multiple summonses on a property owner even if the summonses were repetitive. After the Davis Administration took office in 2014, the program became less punitive and "went back to the way the job was supposed to be, which was to be rehabilitative to the neighborhood." Further, Laura Kline, a Personnel Technician, who worked directly with the appellants, testified that it was her understanding that when Mayor Davis took office, there was a determination not to actively look for property maintenance violations. Kline testified that there was a change in philosophy from the old administration and that she was in at least one or two meetings where Wondolowski told Keyes and the appellants to stop actively looking for property maintenance violations.

Bayonne argues that for reasons of efficiency, the change in philosophy necessitated a reduction in the number of employees handling code violations back to the same number of such employees prior to the Smith Administration when Bayonne was taking a more rehabilitative approach in enforcing and issuing code violations. It argues that the appellants did not offer evidence necessary to overcome Bayonne's presumption of good faith.

In their reply to exceptions, the appellants maintain that the ALJ's initial decision should be upheld. In a subsequent submission, the appellants also contend that the ALJ's initial decision became the final agency decision because the Commission's extension of time to consider the initial decision was not obtained prior to the expiration of 45 days following receipt of the initial decision.

Initially, the Commission will address the appellants' claim that the extension of time to consider the initial decision was untimely. Per N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6(a), the agency head has 45 days to consider the initial decision. A request for an extension of this time period must be submitted no later than the day on which that time period is to expire. N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8(b). In computing any period of time fixed by rule, the day of the act or event from which the designated period begins to run is not to be included. N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.4. The last day of the period so computed is to be included, unless it is a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday, in which event the period runs until the end of the next day which is neither a Saturday, Sunday or legal holiday. Id. An agency head may request a single extension of the time limit for filing a final decision for good cause. N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8(e). He or she shall sign and forward a proposed order to the Director of the OAL. Id. If the Director of the OAL approves the request, he or she shall within 10 days of receipt of the proposed order sign the proposed order and return it to the transmitting agency head, who shall issue the order and cause it to be served on all parties. Id. In this case, the Commission received the initial decision on November 2, 2016. Because 45 days from this date fell on Saturday, December 17, 2016, the time period to consider the initial decision ran until Monday, December 19, 2016 per N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.4. As such, December 19, 2016 also became the last day to request an extension, per N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8(b). Here, the record reflects that the Commission requested the extension on December 19, 2016, and the request was approved on December 20, 2016. Per the approval, the time limit was extended to January 31, 2017. Therefore, the Commission secured a timely extension of time to consider the initial decision, which, therefore, did not become the final agency decision.

N.J.S.A. 11A:8-4 and N.J.A.C. 4A:8-2.6(a)1 provide that good faith appeals may be filed based on a claim that the appointing authority laid off or demoted the employee in lieu of layoff for reasons other than economy, efficiency or other related reasons. When a local government has abolished a position, there is a presumption of good faith and the burden is on the employee to show bad faith and that the action taken was not for purposes of economy. Greco v. Smith, 40 N.J. Super. 182 (App. Div. 1956); Schnipper v. North Bergen Township, 13 N.J. Super. 11 (App. Div. 1951). As the Appellate Division further observed, "That there are considerations other than economy in the abolition of an office or position is of no consequence, if, in fact, the office or position is unnecessary, and can be abolished without impairing departmental efficiency." Schnipper, supra at 15. (emphasis added). The question is not whether the plan or action actually achieved its purpose of saving money, but whether the motive in adopting a plan or action was to accomplish economies or instead to remove a public employee without following N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1 et seq. Thus, a good faith layoff exists if there is a logical or reasonable connection between the layoff decision and the personnel action challenged by an employee. Additionally, it is within an appointing authority's discretion to decide how to achieve its economies. See Greco, supra.

Upon its de novo review of the record, including the testimony provided at the hearing, the Commission does not agree with the ALJ's recommendation to reverse the layoffs, and thus, upholds those actions. The Commission acknowledges that the ALJ, who has the benefit of hearing and seeing the witnesses, is generally in a better position to determine the credibility and veracity of the witnesses. See Matter of J.W.D., 149 N.J. 108 (1997). "[T]rial courts' credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of the witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." See In re Taylor, 158 N.J. 644 (1999) (quoting State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1999)). Additionally, such credibility findings need not be explicitly enunciated if the record as a whole makes the findings clear. Id. at 659 (citing Locurto, supra). The Commission appropriately gives due deference to such determinations. However, in its de novo review of the record, the Commission has the authority to reverse or modify an ALJ's decision if it is not supported by the credible evidence. With regard to the standard for overturning an ALJ's credibility determination, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) provides, in part, that:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record.

See also N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6(c); Cavalieri v. Public Employees Retirement System, 368 N.J. Super. 527 (App. Div. 2004). The Commission finds that in this case, this strict standard has been met.

Therefore, based on its review of the testimony and the entire record, the Commission makes the following findings:

1) Wondolowski and DeMarco discussed citizen complaints regarding the number of tickets being issued. Those conversations resulted in a determination that the Municipal Services Department would take a more passive approach to dealing with code violations. This meant that employees would not go out looking for violations any longer.

2) Wondolowski was of the view that passive code enforcement did not require the same number of inspectors as was required under active code enforcement.

3) Wondolowski told the appellants to stop writing tickets. Appellant Smith indicated that there was a meeting at which DeMarco said that he wanted them to stop writing so many tickets and this was a change in philosophy. Appellant Mulcahy indicated that he was at a meeting with DeMarco where he was told to slow down.

4) Terrence Malloy, Chief Financial Officer, observed that the Davis Administration had a different philosophy compared to the previous administration. Malloy indicated that the property maintenance codes were being enforced by being reactive. If a citizen complaint came in, it would be looked at and an attempt would be made to rectify it. However, there were no longer roving patrols out looking to write tickets.

5) Kline observed that when Mayor Davis took office, there was a determination not to actively look for property maintenance violations, representing a change in philosophy compared to the previous administration.

6) Keyes observed that when Mayor Davis took office, the program returned to being rehabilitative.

7) Ganet Michane, Court Administrator, observed a diminishment in the number of tickets being written from the Municipal Services Department because there was only one person writing them.

In this case, upon review of the entire record, including the testimony provided at the hearing, the Commission finds that there is sufficient evidence in the record to overturn some of the ALJ's credibility determinations. In this regard, a review of the testimony reveals that Wondolowski's testimony was consistent. Specifically, he testified on direct examination that he spoke with DeMarco about budgets and inefficiencies and testified on cross-examination that he discussed the budget and the possibility of layoffs. As to the issues of whether Wondolowski discussed enforcement of property maintenance violations with DeMarco and whether he told the appellants to stop writing property maintenance violations, Wondolowski was not asked about these issues on direct examination. Accordingly, the Commission finds that it was unreasonable for the ALJ to have found Wondolowski not credible for that reason under these circumstances.

The Commission also disagrees with the ALJ's assessment of DeMarco's credibility. Contrary to the ALJ's finding, multiple witnesses, as indicated above, testified that there was a change in philosophy from active to passive code enforcement and that this change went into effect. In other words, these witnesses provided corroboration for DeMarco's testimony regarding the change in philosophy. As such, whether DeMarco prepared an additional memorandum noting the change in philosophy or a cost-benefit or savings projection analysis was performed, are not, in this particular case, relevant to his credibility. Thus, the Commission finds that it was unreasonable for the ALJ to have found DeMarco not credible under these circumstances.

Based on the foregoing, the Commission does not find that the layoffs were enacted in bad faith. Credible testimony indicated that Bayonne underwent a shift in its philosophy as to how it would enforce its property maintenance code, and this change was effected notwithstanding that it was not written. The change entailed a move from active code enforcement to passive code enforcement. Under the passive approach, Bayonne did not send employees into the field to look for violations and write tickets. Once Bayonne moved to the passive approach, it was reasonable for it to conclude that it no longer needed to maintain the same staff level. In addition, the actions taken by Bayonne such as other hirings, promotions and similar actions are not evidence of bad faith as it is clearly more efficient not to have three employees whose primary function is no longer required. Moreover, an appointing authority has discretion as to how it runs its operation. Furthermore, the appellants have not presented credible or convincing evidence to demonstrate that their positions were targeted for discriminatory or other invidious reasons. Therefore, they have not met their burden of proof. See e.g., In the Matter of Bergen County Layoff, Docket No. A-5281-03T5 (App. Div. July 15, 2005) (The Appellate Division upheld the elimination of the position of Assistant Tax Administrator for Bergen County and found that it was based on legitimate budgetary reasons, finding that the appellant did not present any evidence that he was targeted for layoff based on his political affiliation). Accordingly, the ALJ's recommendation in this matter cannot be sustained, and the layoffs are upheld.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's actions in imposing layoffs were justified. Therefore, the Commission upholds those actions and dismisses the appellants' appeals for the reasons noted above.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

Record Closed: September 26, 2016 Decided: November 2, 2016

BEFORE: THOMAS R. BETANCOURT, ALJ

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellants appeal their layoff from employment by respondent alleging said layoffs were not done in good faith.

A prehearing conference was held on October 15, 2015, and a Prehearing Order was entered on October 19, 2015.

Respondent, through counsel, filed a motion to disqualify appellants' counsel, Peter J. Cresci, Esq., due to an alleged conflict with respondent, City of Bayonne. Said issue of conflict was raised via letter received by the OAL on January 26, 2016, from respondent's counsel. Appellants, via letter from appellants' counsel, also dated January 26, 2016, responded to the same. A formal motion to disqualify was filed by respondent on January 29, 2016. A formal response thereto was filed on February 3, 2016, which requested monetary sanctions pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.14(b).

Attached to appellants' response to the motion to disqualify was a motion by appellant Gary Parlatti to his layoff/demotion. No response was filed regarding this motion. No order was entered regarding this motion. Appellant Parlatti again raises this motion in the written summation filed by appellants. Respondent was afforded the opportunity to respond to said motion. The motion will be addressed within the context of this Initial Decision.

Oral argument on the motion was held on February 4, 2016.

An Order denying the motion was entered on February 4, 2016. An Amended Order denying the motion was entered on February 17, 2016.

Respondent filed a request for interlocutory review of the Order denying the motion to disqualify counsel with the Director of OAL on February 11, 2016. The Director granted the request for interlocutory review by Order dated February 19, 2016. By Order dated March 7, 2016, the Director affirmed the Order denying respondent's motion to disqualify appellants' counsel

The hearing was held on April 1, 2016, April 11, 2016, and June 1, 2016. The record was kept open to permit the filing of written summations. Respondent filed its summation on September 1, 2016.

In appellants' summation, filed September 7, 2016, appellant Parlatti revisited his motion to repeal the layoff/demotion. Respondent was permitted to respond to the motion and filed a responsive brief on September 26, 2016. The record was closed on September 26, 2016.

ISSUES

Were the layoffs of appellants conducted by respondent done in good faith; and, was notice of the layoff of appellant Parlatti served in accordance with N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1.6(a) and N.J.S.A. 11A:8-1(a).

SUMMARY OF RELEVANT TESTIMONY

Robert T. Wondolowski testified as follows:

He is the former director of municipal services for the City of Bayonne. He was in that position from July 1, 2014, to January 8, 2016. Municipal services covers the building department, parks, recreation, health department, office on aging, public library, planning and zoning, land use and permits. He supervised approximately fifty to sixty employees.

He knows the appellants. He knows they were laid off. Appellants were responsible for quality of life issues. They helped people with different needs. They were an arm of constituent services. They were responsible for heat complaints at some point. Appellants also worked on a task force regarding illegal apartments. He never had occasion to discipline appellants.

Mr. Wondolowski does not recall a layoff plan. He did speak with Business Administrator DeMarco, but not about layoffs. He and Mr. DeMarco spoke of inefficiencies. He never did a report on what layoffs would save the city of Bayonne. He did calculate savings if appellants were laid off. Mr. Wondolowski estimated the savings at $180,000 to $200,000, not including the costs of benefits.

Fine from violations issued by the appellants in the course of performing their jobs did not equal their salaries, but the total fines were close to the total salaries of appellants. There was no mandate to write summons to bring in money from fines.

He had regular meetings with appellants, and other employees. He spoke with appellants every day. Meetings were held with the entire health department about once per quarter. Appellants worked for municipal services. Mr. Mulcahy was the point person for Mr. Wondolowski.

Simon Sturgeon is an employee in municipal services. Mr. Sturgeon works more with the health department. He looks into complaints regarding bedbugs and hoarders. Mr. Sturgeon was not laid off and is currently employed by the City of Bayonne. Mr. Wondolowski did not think appellants' jobs were in jeopardy.

In May 2015 appellants took continuing education courses, were given a clothing allowance, and a stipend for cell phone use. He was not aware appellants would be laid off.

No one ever discussed with Mr. Wondolowski a philosophy of not enforcing property maintenance codes.

He discussed with appellant Smith wherein Smith asked about attending school for construction code enforcement. He thought it would be a good idea.

Mr. Wondolowski did not serve appellants with their respective layoff notices. The layoff notices were dated June 2, 2015. He spoke with appellant Mulcahy after the layoff notice regarding his cell phone stipend.

During his tenure with Bayonne Mr. Wondolowski gave a differential raise to Rich Belinsky when he became the acting construction official. His salary was raised from $85,000 to $102,000. He was not sure if other employees received differential raises or stipends during his tenure with Bayonne.

He hired Jennifer Seabach with the permit group in municipal services at approximately $32,000. He also hired another in the permit group at the same salary.

Mr. Wondolowski thought Tom Keys "would pick up the slack" when appellants were laid off. He does not know why Mr. Keys was not laid off.

He was never told the Fire Department would inspect one and two family homes.

Several employees under his supervison were granted overtime. Overtime for the clerk to the zoning board and planning board could have been avoided by changing the times of meetings. This was not done.

Ramon Veloz was hired during Mr. Wondolowski's tenure to handle heat complaints on weekends. Mr. Wondolowski was unsure of the pay rate, but it was "maybe" $16 per hour. Mr. Veloz would check the heat complaint hot line to see if there were any complaints.

Appellants also took photographs of properties for use on tax appeals. He was not sure who did this task after appellants were laid off.

Appellants were union members. The collective bargaining agreement (CBA) governed wages, stipends, clothing allowances, cell phone stipends, and other matters.

There were no memorandum or other writing regarding a change in philosophy regarding property maintenance code enforcement.

Deborah Falciani testified as follows:

She is employed by the City of Bayonne as a confidential assistant and works in the personnel department. She works with the mayor and business administrator.

She was unaware of a budget deficit for the City of Bayonne. She was not told there was a need to save money.

Since appellants were laid off more than one hundred employees have been hired by the City of Bayonne. All receive health insurance and pension benefits. All employees, whether union or non-union, receive a yearly one-and-one-half percent raise. This raise is in the CBA.

She served appellant Smith with the layoff notice personally. She sent appellant Parlatti his layoff notice as an attachment in a text message sent to Mr. Parlatti's cellular telephone. Mr. Parlatti was on vacation at the time. Mr. Parlatti did acknowledge he received the text message and attachment. She personally handed Mr. Parlatti the layoff notice when he returned from vacation. Mr. Parlatti signed the layoff notice the following week, but dated it June 2, 2015. She knew that the statute required a forty-five-day notice prior to a layoff. Mr. DeMarco served Mr. Mulcahy with his layoff notice. She was present at the time.

Ms. Falciani was not aware of any memos or other writings regarding layoffs. She had no discussions regarding layoffs. She is also unaware of a passive enforcement policy regarding property maintenance code enforcement. She was never told of budget shortfalls. She was never told of implementing a hiring freeze, furloughs, or reducing working hours.

Vincent Rivelli was hired as the Health Officer at a salary of $150,000 after appellants were laid off. There were other new hires after appellants were laid off. She prepared the letter from Mr. DeMarco to the Civil Service Commission (CSC) regarding the proposed layoffs. (R-1.) She prepared the lists of new hires and terminations. (R-20, R-21, and R-24.)

She was never told of a hiring freeze, or about furloughs or about less work hours. She was never told about a budget shortfall. There was one intern position eliminated and that person was then hired in the Bayonne Economic Development Authority. New seasonal employees were hired. Appellants were not offered seasonal positions.

Ramon Veloz testified as follows:

He was hired as a part time housing inspector in October 2014. His employment with the City of Bayonne ended in April 2015. He worked weekends checking on heat complaints and was trained by appellant Mulcahy. He requested a part-time job from a city councilman after working on the current mayor's election campaign. He was never told not to write summonses. He never saw a job announcement. He was not interviewed for his position. He was hired by Mr. Wondolowski and then shown what to do.

Charles Freyer testified as follows:

He has been employed by the City of Bayonne for twenty years. He is presently a mechanic in the Department of Public Works (DPW). He is the president of the union local. Other than appellants and Rose Lillo he is unaware of any other layoffs. He had a meeting with Mr. DeMarco regarding the layoffs. He was informed of a meeting, but not told why. He was not provided with any writing regarding the proposed layoffs of what the cost savings would be. He never spoke with Mr. Wondolowski about the layoffs. He was not aware overtime would be curtailed. The DPW gets overtime. Employees still receive $1,500 stipend for cellular telephone. Tom Keys still uses a city vehicle. The use of the vehicle stopped for a short time, but was reinstated after the layoffs. Seasonal employees were not eliminated. Seasonal employees are hired around Memorial Day. Some stay on as seasonal employees after six months with being hired full time.

Joseph Nichols testified as follows:

He is the tax assessor for the City of Bayonne and has been since 2000. He is also an attorney and works for the Bayonne Municipal Utilities Authority (MUA) as general counsel. He knows appellants and has interacted with them on tax appeals. Appellants took photographs of properties for tax appeals. Appellants were helpful and performed well.

He receives a $750 stipend for possessing his license. He was never asked to relinquish the stipend. He was never told the city property maintenance code would not be enforced. This was never discussed at a council meeting.

Laying off three employees would not solve Bayonne's budget problem. Hiring more than 100 employees without generating income would have a negative effect on the budget.

Gina Persia testified as follows:

She is employed by the City of Bayonne as a senior accountant. She reviewed the new employee process. New hire information is received from Debbie Falciani. Salaries are established by the director of the department. Since July 1, 2014, she believes around 100 new employees were hired. She is aware that some employees lost stipends. She is aware that some employees were promoted and that some raises were given. There were no permanent hires in the Municipal Services Department except for one: Teresa Troglio in the Office on Aging.

Brian Kotter testified as follows:

He is a firefighter in the Bayonne Fire Department and has been for nine years. He also works as a State housing inspector on his days off. In that position he inspects multiple dwelling units. He does not inspect one- and two-family homes. He has worked with appellants on an illegal apartment task force on a couple of occasions.

Gary Chmielewski testified as follows:

He is the director of DPW and has been since 2007. He has been a city employee since 1997. He sees appellant Parlatti at work but does not know what his present job is. Appellant Parlatti has worked for him in the past. DPW continues to use seasonal employees. Three seasonal DPW hires are now permanent employees. They were hired to replace retiring employees. These positions were not offered to appellants.

Tom Keys is a property maintenance inspector. He signs in at DPW but does not work at DPW. He works in the Health Department. He is not sure why. He does not know if Mr. Keys has a city vehicle.

When Mr. DeMarco became business administrator he told Mr. Chmielewski to reduce overtime and cut costs where he could.

Laura Kline testified as follows:

She is employed by the City of Bayonne in the Health Department. She has worked with appellants. She explained Spatial Data Logic (SDL), a computer program used by Bayonne for tracking property code enforcement. Mr. Wondolowski told her that the city was not going to enforce property maintenance violations. This was before appellants were laid off. She is not aware of a policy where inspectors were to write sufficient violations to generate fines to cover their salaries. She was at a meeting a month or two before the layoffs, where Mr. Wondolowski told appellants their jobs were safe.

Tom Keys still does inspections and uses a city vehicle. He does not write summonses anymore and does not go to court. This has been the case since appellants were laid off.

Thomas Keys testified as follows:

He is employed by the City of Bayonne and has been for thirteen years. His title is Citizens Complaints. He was not affected by the layoffs. He works under DPW. Appellants are his peers. He works out of the Health Department. He still does property maintenance inspections. No one told him to discontinue this. At one point there were six inspectors, then four. Now he is the only one. He drives a city vehicle and takes it home after work. SDL is the computer program used to enter code violations. Mr. Wondolowski never asked to see an SDL report.

Ganet Michane testified as follows:

She is employed by the City of Bayonne as the Certified Court Administrator. She is an employee for forty-one years. She prepared R-24, R-26, and R-27. These are breakdowns of the number of tickets each appellant wrote, the amount of fines assessed, and the amount of fines collected. She described the appellants' role in a court proceeding regarding any code enforcement tickets they wrote.

Terrence Malloy testified as follows:

He is the Chief Financial Officer (CFO) for the City of Bayonne. He became aware of the layoffs the day it happened: July 2, 2015. He attended meetings where layoffs were discussed in general, but not specific to the appellants. He recalls discussing savings of $70,000 to $100,000 per employee laid off. There were no reports prepared regarding cost savings for the layoff of appellants. The number of employees have increased during the present administration. He is aware the employees have been promoted. He is aware that seasonal employees have been hired. Overtime has not been eliminated. Stipends have not been eliminated. He had no specific communication with Mr. DeMarco regarding the layoff of appellants. There were no discussions regarding the non-enforcement of the property maintenance code. Non-union employees receive the same raises that union employees receive pursuant to the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA). Appellant Parlatti was not terminated.

He was demoted. He does not know why. Vincent Rivelli was hired as the Health Officer at a salary of $150,000. Mr. Rivelli is the health officer for several municipalities but paid by Bayonne. Bayonne is to receive reimbursement from the other municipalities pursuant to a shared services agreement. To date there has been no reimbursement. There has been a $1.2 million increase in personnel costs from 2015 to 2016.

Vanessa Lynn Bryant-Dale testified as follows:

She is employed by the City of Bayonne as a Municipal Services Clerk. She knows appellants. They worked in the Health Department and handled complaints. She reported to Mr. Wondolowski. There was no meeting to discuss layoffs. She is in charge of cell phone stipends. All three appellants received cell phone stipends. All three appellants had the use of a city vehicle. There were no meetings to discuss enforcement of the property maintenance code.

Joseph DeMarco testified as follows:

He is the City Administrator for Bayonne. He was appointed in July 2014 when the newly elected mayor took office. He had several meetings with the city attorney, the CFO, the personnel department, Mr. Wondolowski, and the mayor to discuss layoffs. There are no memoranda or writings regarding these meetings. He wrote the letter to CSC regarding the proposed layoffs. He hired seasonal employees in the Department of Public Works. Overall over 100 new employees have been hired since July 2014. Seasonal employees were hired full time in DPW after appellants were laid off. These positions were not offered to the appellants. He reviewed several new hires and promotions. There was no memorandum regarding passive enforcement of the property maintenance code. He did discuss passive enforcement with others. Appellant Parlatti had "bumping rights" to a lower civil service position when the layoffs occurred. He bumped Rose Lillo, who was laid off. He met with the union president to advise him of layoffs. There is no written memorandum of the meeting. He was never served with a grievance regarding the layoffs by the union.

Gary Parlatti, testified as follows:

He is employed by the City of Bayonne and has been since 2007. He has been a full-time employee since December 2009. He had been working as a field representative for citizen complaints since February 2012. He did enforcement of all non-police-related ordinances. Prior to that he was a Key Boarding Clerk II. This included heating complaints, housing violations. He also did community service by speaking with constituents. He was also part of an illegal apartment task force. He worked in the third ward of the city. The summonses he wrote were returnable in Bayonne Municipal Court. He worked with Tom Keys and the two other appellants. Simon Sturgeon also worked with him in the Health Department regarding animal-related issues.

On June 2, 2015, he received a telephone call from Donna Russo from the law department. He was on vacation at that time. He was advised at this time he was being laid off. He believes he signed the notice of lay off on June 8, 2015, when he returned from vacation. Debbie Felciani handed him the notice. He received the notice as an attachment to a text message on his phone on June 2, 2015. He had bumping rights to the position held by Rose Lillo. She was laid off. He receives $12,000 less in salary from his previous position. He never received anything in writing regarding enforcement of property maintenance violations.

Rose Lillo worked in the building department. He has never reported to the building department. He has never performed Rose Lillo's job. Rose Lillo was not working when she was bumped.

Michael Smith testified as follows:

He became an employee for Bayonne in February 2012. Prior to that he worked at the MUA. He was laid off as a field representative where he had handled citizen complaints. He covered the second ward of the city. Tom Keys covered the second ward. He never received a memorandum regarding a change in philosophy regarding the enforcement of the property maintenance code.

Michael Mulcahy testified as follows:

He was hired in January 2011 as a housing inspector. Initially he only answered complaints. Three more individuals then came on board: Appellant Parlatti; Appellant Smith; and Tom Keys. They were already Bayonne employees and transferred. He trained them. He was the supervisor of appellants Parlatti and Smith. In May 2015 Mr. Wondolowski told him he was doing a good job. He told the same to appellant Smith. He never heard of a change in philosophy regarding the enforcement of the property maintenance code. He also took photographs of properties for property tax appeals. He received a cell phone stipend and a clothing allowance prior to the layoff. He received his layoff notice on June 1, 2015.

CREDIBILITY

When witnesses present conflicting testimonies, it is the duty of the trier of fact to weigh each witness's credibility and make a factual finding. In other words, credibility is the value a fact finder assigns to the testimony of a witness, and it incorporates the overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, consistency, and how it comports with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). Credibility findings "are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463 (1999). A fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973).

The finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness, and credibility does not automatically rest astride the party with more witnesses. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). Testimony may be disbelieved, but may not be disregarded at an administrative proceeding. Middletown Twp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962). Credible testimony must not only proceed from the mouth of credible witnesses but must be in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954).

Robert Wondolowski was not credible. On direct examination he stated he did not speak with Business Administrator DeMarco regarding layoffs. He also stated he did not discuss enforcement of property maintenance violations with Mr. DeMarco. On cross-examination his testimony directly contradicted his direct testimony. On cross he stated he did discuss the budget and possibility of layoffs. He also stated on cross that he did know of a change in philosophy regarding property maintenance code enforcement. He now recalled speaking with Mr. DeMarco about the number of violations issued and the need to be more passive in enforcement. On direct he stated he did not tell appellants to stop writing property maintenance violations. On cross he stated he told appellants to stop on several occasions. He clearly contradicted his own direct testimony on cross-examination. I deem him not credible.

Joseph DeMarco was not credible. His testimony was straightforward and direct. However, his testimony regarding the change in philosophy is simply not believable. While he stated he discussed this change in philosophy with others, there is no memorandum regarding any such meeting, or meetings. There is no memorandum circulated to employees regarding this change in philosophy. Most pointedly, he is the only witness that testified that there was a change in philosophy. All other witnesses, including Mr. Wondolowski, were unaware of the change in philosophy. Further, there are no memorandum regarding the layoffs. It is not conceivable, at least to me, that a layoff plan could be conceived and implemented without any writing of any kind, other than the letter to CSC. There was no cost benefit analysis. There was no savings projection analysis. I deem Mr. DeMarco not credible.

All other witnesses were credible.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Appellants Smith, Parlatti and Mulcahy were employees of the City of Bayonne.
2. Appellants Smith and Parlatti were employed as field representatives for citizens complaints. Appellant Mulcahy was employed as a housing inspector.
3. Appellants Smith, Parlatti, and Mulcahy were laid off from their positions, effective July 17, 2015. (R-4, R-6 and R-8.)
4. Bayonne requested approval of a layoff plan to layoff appellants from the CSC. (R-1.)
5. Bayonne's layoff plan was approved by CSC on June 1, 2015. (R-2.)
6. Bayonne issued a general layoff notice on June 1, 2015. (R-3.)
7. Bayonne issued individual layoff notices to the appellants on June 1, 2015. (R-4, R-6 and R-8.)
8. Appellant Parlatti had bumping rights to the position held by Rose Lillo. (R-9.)
9. Appellant Parlatti exercised his bumping rights to this position and is currently employed by Bayonne.
10. In its letter to CSC dated May 28, 2015, Bayonne, via Mr. DeMarco, informed CSC it took the following pre-layoff actions: reviewed and is reducing all over time appropriations; review of all provisional titles; reviewed all other expense accounts and made several reductions; eliminated all intern positions; and, review of all upcoming seasonal positions and would offer the opportunity to accept a seasonal position to anyone affected by the layoff.
11. Appellants Smith and Mulcahy were personally served with their respective individual layoff notices on or before June 2, 2015. Appellant Parlatti was not personally served with his individual layoff notice until June 8, 2015. Appellant Parlatti was advised of his pending layoff on June 2, 2015, via a telephone call from Donna Russo from Bayonne's law department. He received an electronic copy of the individual layoff notice via a test message with the notice attached.

12. Since layoff Bayonne has hired in excess of 100 new employees.

13. Since the layoff Bayonne has promoted and granted raises to several employees.

14. Since the layoff Bayonne has continued to hire seasonal employees, some of whom have been hired as full-time employees.

15. Bayonne has never offered any seasonal employee position to any of the appellants.

16. Bayonne, while asserting a change in philosophy in the enforcement of the property maintenance code to a less aggressive approach, never articulated a change in philosophy to any of the appellants. There was no memorandum regarding the same. There was never a meeting regarding the same.

17. Bayonne did not appreciably reduct overtime payments.

18. Bayonne did not reduce stipends paid to employees.

19. Appellants performed property code enforcement for Bayonne and handled citizen complaints. They would respond to complaints and issue warnings, and summonses when appropriate, for code violations. They would appear in municipal code where the summonses were returnable.

20. The jobs performed by appellants Mulcahy, Smith, and Parlatti are now being performed by Tom Keys.

21. Robert Wondolowski was the direct supervisor of the appellants. He was never apprised of a change in philosophy regarding the enforcement of the property maintenance code. He was never told not to enforce the code. He was never told of any cost savings that would result from the layoff of the appellants.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

An appointing authority may institute layoff actions for reasons of economy, efficiency, or other related reasons. N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1.1(a). On appeal from a layoff, the issue to be determined is limited to whether the appointing authority's action in effectuating the layoff was motivated by good-faith considerations of economy or efficiency. The burden of proof is on the appellant to demonstrate a contrary or bad-faith motivation. N.J.S.A. 11A:8-4; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(c). Where it is shown that a layoff action was motivated by a bona fide desire or necessity to effect economy, the action taken is presumed to be in good faith. Greco v. Smith, 40 N.J. Super. 182, 189 (App. Div. 1956); Sieper v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 21 N.J. Super. 583, 586 (App. Div. 1952). Further, > [t]he mere fact that the removal of an individual from the municipal payroll results in an economy is not the exclusive test, since such removal will always be manifested by a saving. The question is, not narrowly whether a plan conceived and adopted for the purposes of saving money actually, in operation, attained that purpose, but whether the design in adopting the plan was to accomplish economy or, on the contrary, was to effect the removal of a public employee, protected by civil service, without following the statutory procedure for removal. City of Newark v. Civil Service Commission, 112 N.J.L. 571, 574 (Sup. Ct. 1934), affirmed, 114 N.J.L. 185 (E. & A. 1935).

> [Greco, supra, 40 N.J. Super. at 190.]

Therefore, in proving that an appointing authority has acted in bad faith, the employee must show that the layoffs were not motivated by true considerations of economy and/or efficiency. It is not sufficient to meet the burden of proof for an employee to show that a layoff is uneconomical. Such evidence may assist the establishment of bad faith, but the employee must go further. He or she must show by sufficient proof that the layoffs resulted for reasons other than economy and efficiency. Amodio v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 81 N.J. Super. 22 (App. Div. 1963); Chirichella v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 31 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1954); Prosecutors, Detectives and Investigators Ass'n of Essex County v. Hudson County Bd. of Chosen Freeholders, 130 N.J. Super. 30 (App. Div. 1974). Evidence may indicate that a mixture of motives existed in connection with a layoff decision. If other motives besides economy and efficiency were involved, it makes no difference so long as the position involved was useless and its abolition was in the public interest. Pellet v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 10 N.J. Super. 52, 57 (App. Div. 1950).

Other cases further define bad faith as "[g]enerally implying . . . design to mislead or deceive another . . . not prompted by an honest mistake as to one's rights or duties, but by some interested or sinister motive." In re Afolo, Dep't of Children and Family Services, CSV 4145-07, Initial Decision (Mar. 31, 2008) , adopted, Merit Sys. Bd. (May 22, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> (quoting Brown v. State Dept. of Educ., 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 537, 541 (1997)). In trying to prove bad faith, the appellant has a very heavy burden to meet because bad faith is "not simply bad judgment or negligence," but the conscious doing of a wrong because of some dishonest purpose. Ibid.

The record established in the instant matter overwhelmingly demonstrates that Bayonne did not effectuate the layoffs due to reasons of economy and severe budget shortfalls. It is not disputed that Bayonne had a budget deficit and needed to cut costs. Bayonne offers as the reason for the layoffs of the appellants due to a change in philosophy in the enforcement of the property maintenance code. This simply does not hold water. There is no credible evidence that this change in philosophy was put into place. The appellants, who enforced the property maintenance code, were not informed of it. Their supervisor, Mr. Wondolowski, was not informed of it. Their co-worker, Tom Keys, was not informed of it. No one from Bayonne ever issued a writing, or other memorandum, regarding this change in philosophy. It is the appellants' burden to show bad faith. Greco, supra, 40 N.J. Super. at 190. In this matter they have done so.

Further, Bayonne did not do what they stated they would, or had done, in their submission of the proposed layoff plan to CSC. They have not reduced or eliminated stipends. They did not reduce overtime. Interns were not eliminated. One intern position was eliminated and that person was then hired by the Bayonne MUA. Bayonne did not offer any seasonal position to the appellants.

The only reasonable conclusion for the layoffs is to remove the appellants from employment. It is not established why Bayonne wished to remove the appellants, but it is clear that the purpose of the layoff plan was their removal, and not for purposes of economy or budget shortfalls.

I CONCLUDE respondent did not effectuate the layoff of appellants for reasons of economy, efficiency or other related reasons. It effectuated the layoff to remove appellants from their employment.

I further CONCLUDE that appellants should be restored to their previous positions of employment with Bayonne immediately, and be awarded their salaries from the time of their termination, or in the case of appellant Mulcahy, from the time of his demotions, subject to mitigation for income earned during this period.

Motion to Repeal the Layoff/Demotion

Appellant Parlatti seeks the repeal of his layoff/demotion for failure of respondent to personally serve him his individual notice of layoff or demotion in accordance with N.J.S.A. 11A:8-1(a).

N.J.S.A.11A:8-1(a) states in pertinent part:

> A permanent employee may be laid off for economy, efficiency or other related reason. A permanent employee shall receive 45 days' written notice, unless in State government a greater time period is ordered by the commission, which shall be served personally or by certified mail, of impending layoff or demotion and the reasons therefor.

N.J.A.C. 4A:8-1.6(a) states in pertinent part:

> (a) No permanent employee or employee serving in a working test period shall be separated or demoted as a result of a layoff action without having been served by the appointing authority, at least 45 days prior to the action, with a written notice personally, unless the employee is on a leave of absence or otherwise unavailable, in which case by certified mail. If service is by certified mail, the 45 days shall be counted from the first date of notice by the United States Postal Service to addressee.

It is undisputed that appellant Parlatti was on vacation at the time the layoff notice was prepared. He was not served personally until June 8, 2015. The layoff took effect July 17, 2015, less than forty-five days from the time he was personally served. While appellant Parlatti acknowledges he knew of the layoff/demotion via a telephone call and text message, it is clear personal service was not effected until June 8, 2015, upon his return from vacation.

However, it is also clear that appellant Parlatti also received the notice via certified mail return receipt requested. The date of the return receipt stamp from the United States Postal Service is unclear. I CONCLUDE that service was effected in accordance with statute and rule by the use of certified mail.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the motion to repeal the layoff/demotion should be denied.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the appeal of the appellants be granted and that appellants be immediately returned to their positions of employment prior to the layoff, awarded appropriate back pay from the time of the layoff to their reinstatement (subject to mitigation for income earned during this period), benefits, seniority and counsel fees subject to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

It is further ORDERED that appellant Parlatti's motion to repeal the layoff/demotion for improper service be DENIED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Michael Mylod

CSC Docket No. 2014-2772
OAL Docket No. CSV 6353-14

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: FEB 10 2017 (EG)

The appeal of Michael Mylod, a Senior Recreation Therapy Aide with Monmouth County, of his removal effective May 4, 2014, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge John S. Kennedy (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on December 8, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on January 18, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusions as contained in the initial decision and the ALJ's recommendation to uphold the appellant's removal.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was removed on charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that the appellant created a disruptive work environment when he used an improper, loud, boisterous, threatening, and demeaning tone toward a volunteer. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing as a contested case.

The ALJ found that on November 19, 2013, the appellant got into a verbal dispute with a volunteer regarding the maintenance of a plant and that the appellant believed that the room the volunteer was in was off limits. The appellant was not the volunteer's supervisor and did not hold any position of authority over the volunteer. Additionally, the dispute took place in the presence of at least three residents and was loud enough to be heard by at least two employees. Further, the appellant had received warnings and discipline about his loud tone, use of foul language, and for arguing with co-workers.

Mary Bogan, a Recreation Therapist, testified that it was her belief that the appellant's removal was motivated by a personal dislike of him by former administrator Allison Marshall. Specifically, she claimed that Marshall had a collage in her office that included a picture of the appellant with a hand-drawn penis near his face and that she would comment about the appellant's weight and the fact that she hated him. However, as no other witness could verify the existence of the collage or the doctored photo, the ALJ did not find her testimony credible. Rather, the ALJ found that the decision to discipline the appellant in this matter was made by the Department of Human Resources, not Marshall. In addition, the ALJ concluded that the appellant's conduct was such that it could adversely affect the morale or efficiency of a government unit or destroy public respect in the delivery of public services. Further, the ALJ found that the appellant also violated a number of department policies, including policies to treat co-workers with courtesy and respect at all times, and that boisterous and disruptive activity in the workplace is to be avoided. With regard to the penalty, the ALJ determined that the appellant's work history revealed that he suffered from severe behavioral problems which presented a risk to the well-being of the vulnerable residents. In this regard, the ALJ stated that the appellant had several prior disciplinary actions for using foul, inappropriate and threatening language towards co-workers, sometimes in the presence of other staff or residents. The ALJ determined that in light of the seriousness of the present matter, and the appellant's disciplinary history, that removal was the proper penalty.

In its exceptions, the appellant argues that there were two administrative hearings that exonerated him that were ignored by the ALJ. The first was a hearing by the New Jersey Board of Nursing, which found that his actions were not abusive towards residents. The second was a hearing by the Unemployment Appeal Tribunal, which found that the appellant was not discharged for misconduct connected with work. Additionally, the appellant argues that the testimony of Theresa Aziz, an Account Clerk, was not credible as it was heavily influenced by Marshall. The appellant also claims that the ALJ erred in disregarding the credible testimony of Lisa Skellinger, a Recreational Aide, Art McGillis, a Building Maintenance Worker, and Bogan. Further, the appellant contends that Marshall's dislike and hatred of him was the reason he received prior discipline.

In response, the appointing authority argues that the ALJ properly determined that Aziz was the most credible witness. Aziz was a new employee who reported the incident and had no bias against the appellant. It adds that the witnesses presented by the appellant all admitted to being his friends and close workplace colleagues. In regard to the New Jersey Board of Nursing's decision, the appointing authority asserts that the appellant had not introduced such evidence prior to the closing of the record and the ALJ excluded this portion of his post-hearing submission. The ALJ also indicated that the Unemployment Appeal Tribunal decision was not entitled to any preclusive effect as it did not address whether the appellant had engaged in conduct worthy of discipline. Further, the appointing authority asserts that Oliveri v. Y.M.F. Carpet, Inc., 186 N.J. 511 (2006) states that unemployment proceedings do not have any preclusive effects in future litigation. Moreover, the appointing authority indicates that the ALJ made a factual finding that no animus between the appellant and Marshall was demonstrated. Thus, it contends that the ALJ properly relied upon the appellant's poor disciplinary record in determining that removal was the proper penalty.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ regarding the charges and his decision to uphold the appellant's removal. In his exceptions, the appellant questions the ALJ's credibility determinations. Specifically, the appellant claims that the ALJ erred in disregarding the testimony of Skellinger, McGillis, and Bogan. In addition, he contends that Aziz's testimony should not have been found credible. In this regard, the Commission acknowledges that the ALJ, who has the benefit of hearing and seeing the witnesses, is generally in a better position to determine the credibility and veracity of the witnesses. See Matter of J.W.D., 149 N.J. 108 (1997). "[T]rial courts' credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of the witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." See In re Taylor, 158 N.J. 644 (1999) (quoting State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1999)). Additionally, such credibility findings need not be explicitly enunciated if the record as a whole makes the findings clear. Id. at 659 (citing Locurto, supra). The Commission appropriately gives due deference to such determinations. However, in its de novo review of the record, the Commission has the authority to reverse or modify an ALJ's decision if it is not supported by the credible evidence or was otherwise arbitrary. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); Cavalieri v. Public Employees Retirement System, 368 N.J. Super. 527 (App. Div. 2004). Nevertheless, upon its review of the entire record, the Commission finds that there is sufficient evidence in the record to support the ALJ's credibility determinations. The ALJ explicitly indicated that he found Bogan's testimony as to Marshall's personal dislike of the appellant not credible because her allegation regarding the collage could not be corroborated by other witnesses and the determination to discipline the appellant was not made by Marshall. Further, while the ALJ did not address Aziz's credibility directly, it was clear from his findings of facts that the ALJ found her credible. With regard to the rest of Bogan's testimony and the testimony of Skellinger, McGillis, and the appellant, the ALJ's initial decision does not discount their testimony. Bogan's and Skellinger's testimony both indicated that the appellant was loud and McGillis testified that he was not present for the entire incident and did not know what happened prior to his arrival. Furthermore, while the appellant claimed he was not yelling, he acknowledged that he was speaking loud enough that Bogan could hear him from the hall and asked him to keep his voice down. Therefore, the Commission has no reason to credit the appellant's contentions that the testimony of these witnesses was discounted. Further, the appellant's contention that his prior discipline was due to animus by Marshall is unpersuasive. In this regard, the Commission notes that the time to argue animus by Marshall for the prior disciplinary actions was when those actions were actively being determined. Moreover, the appellant has not provided any credible or persuasive evidence that Marshall disciplined him in this matter because she disliked him.

Further, while the appellant asserts that the ALJ did not give due deference to the decisions by the New Jersey Board of Nursing and by the Unemployment Appeal Tribunal, the New Jersey Board of Nursing's decision was introduced after the record closed and as such was stricken from his post-hearing submissions. Regardless, the New Jersey Board of Nursing determination appears to dismiss an abuse charge against the appellant but the appointing authority's disciplinary action was based on his creating a loud and disruptive work environment while interacting with a volunteer. Moreover, unemployment proceedings do not have any preclusive effects in future litigation and, in this matter, does not evidence that the appellant was not properly disciplined.

In determining the proper penalty, the Commission's review is de novo, and the Commission, in addition to its consideration of the seriousness of the underlying incident, utilizes, when appropriate, the concept of progressive discipline. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Further, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is settled that the principle of progressive discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). In the instant matter, the appellant's disciplinary history shows four minor disciplinary actions from 2001 to 2010, and one major disciplinary action, a 40-day suspension, in 2012. Additionally, several of these prior disciplinary actions were for misconduct similar to the appellant's behavior in the current matter. Accordingly, given the appellant's improper conduct in this matter, in conjunction with his disciplinary history, removal is clearly the appropriate penalty.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was appropriate. Therefore, the Commission affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Michael Mylod.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 6353-14
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2014-2772

IN THE MATTER OF MICHAEL MYLOD, MONMOUTH COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH CARE FACILITIES.

Philip G. Mylod, Esq., for appellant Michael Mylod

Steven Kleinman, Special County Counsel, for respondent Monmouth County Department of Health Care Facilities (Andrea I. Bazer, County Counsel, attorney)

Record Closed: October 28, 2016 Decided: December 8, 2016

BEFORE JOHN S. KENNEDY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Certified Nurse's Aide (CNA), Michael Mylod (appellant) appeals the action by the Monmouth County Department of Health Care Facilities, Geraldine L. Thompson Care Center (GLTCC) terminating his employment on grounds of conduct unbecoming and other sufficient cause.

Appellant was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) on February 5, 2014. A departmental hearing was held on March 10, 2014, after which appellant was advised by a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, (FNDA) dated May 7, 2014, that he had been terminated effective May 7, 2014. Appellant appealed the termination to the Civil Service Commission (CSC) and the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), as required under N.J.S.A. 40A:14-202(d). The matter was heard over the course of three days, April 23, 2015, July 28, 2015, and April 21, 2016. The parties filed written summations on July 13, 2016. Respondent objected to appellant's post-hearing submission asserting that it attempted to introduce materials not in the record. Appellant objected to the motion on July 27, 2016, and respondent replied on August 26, 2016. Oral argument was heard on September 15, 2016. On October 28, 2016, this tribunal issued an Order striking from the record certain references found in appellant's post-hearing submission and the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Gwendolyn Thomas was the Assistant Nursing Home administrator for Monmouth County. There were two county run nursing homes in Monmouth County at the time of appellant's removal. Subsequent to appellant's removal, both county-run facilities were sold to private entities, which continue to be operated under different names. She has known the appellant since she started working for the county ten years ago. He worked at GTLCC as a Senior Recreation Therapy Aide. GLTCC served a vulnerable population of the elderly and infirm, many of whom were confined to wheelchairs, and/or suffered from chronic psychiatric diagnoses, as well as dementia and Alzheimer's disease. Appellant's job as a Senior Recreation Therapy Aide required him to conduct recreational programs and activities with GLTCC residents, and also to accompany them on trips. He also was certified as a nurse's aide but he held no supervisory or management authority. Appellant would report to a chief recreation therapist, first Allison Marshall (before her promotion to Administrator) and then Dorothea ("Dory") Lewis. The chief recreation therapist also serves as the volunteer coordinator for the facility, and in that capacity would resolve any concerns or disputes that a volunteer had with an employee, or vice versa.

The nursing home industry "is the second most regulated industry behind nuclear energy." GLTCC is regulated on both the federal and state levels, and receives oversight from the New Jersey Department of Health and the Office of the Ombudsman for the Institutionalized Elderly. If any violations are found, it can result in monetary and other penalties to the County, as well as the finding of a "deficiency."

On November 19, 2013, there was an incident between one of GLTCC's regular volunteers, L.S., a widowed senior citizen who had been married to a GLTCC resident, and appellant. Earlier in the day, L.S. had informed her supervisor, Ms. Lewis that a fern in the recreation area was shedding leaves and making a mess. Ms. Lewis went to look for herself, and agreed that the plant needed to be removed. Because Ms. Lewis thought that a staff member might be interested in taking the plant home, instead of throwing it out, she directed L.S. to put the plant in a small room the staff used in the back of the recreation area. This room is a "locker room," and is not used for storing medical records, although there are two dry erase boards for recreation staff to communicate amongst themselves regarding the needs of particular residents. In order to keep that information private, the door to this room is normally kept closed so that guests and family members cannot see what is written on the dry erase boards from the recreation area. Volunteers are able to access the room if needed because they have been trained in patient confidentiality.

Apparently, appellant saw L.S. in the small room in the back of the recreation area, and confronted her because he felt she was somewhere where she should not have been. He also was upset because L.S. was not listening to his wishes about the plant and he felt that she was responsible for its poor condition.

Ms. Thomas was advised about the incident after the fact. She met with Ms. Marshall and appellant and asked him to write a statement. (R-7.) Appellant recognized that his voice got loud and later apologized to L.S. after he discovered she had permission to move the plant. This confrontation occurred in the recreation area in the presence of at least three residents. As a result respondent filed a resident abuse report with the Department of Health and the Ombudsman. The Office of the Ombudsman conducted an investigation and determined that there was sufficient information to verify staff to resident verbal/mental abuse to two residents. (R-9 and R-10.) The county disciplined appellant based in part upon this incident and in part because of his prior disciplinary history. The decision to discipline appellant came from the County Human Resources Department after the investigation had been completed.

Dorothea Lewis was the Chief Recreation Therapist at the time of the November 19, 2013, incident. She testified that she was appellant's supervisor and also supervised the volunteers. Issues between employees and volunteers are supposed to be reported to her for handling. She was first advised of the altercation between appellant and L.S. on the date of the incident by Theresa Aziz, an employee in the business office that had witnessed the incident and advised Lewis that she heard appellant yelling from her office across the hall. Ms. Aziz was upset because residents were in the recreation area at the time on the incident. Earlier in the day, L.S. had informed Ms. Lewis that a fern in the recreation area was shedding leaves and making a mess. Ms. Lewis went to look for herself, and agreed that the plant needed to be removed. Because Ms. Lewis thought that a staff member might be interested in taking the plant home, instead of throwing it out, she directed L.S. to put the plant in a small room the staff used in the back of the recreation area. She advised appellant after the incident that there was a zero tolerance for yelling in the facility. Ms. Lewis would have expected appellant to complain to her about a volunteers actions and not get into an altercation in the presence of residents.

L.S. gave her own statement on November 21, 2013, which was written down by Ms. Marshall. (R-6.) L.S. explained that a fern she had donated for the recreation area was shedding badly, and at Ms. Lewis's instructions, she put it in the closet. She then stated, "[n]ext thing I know, Michael comes charging out of the room, all 300 pounds of him," and told her that she had no respect for the residents and did not care for them. Id.

Theresa Aziz worked as an account clerk, handling the personal needs accounts of residents. At the time of the incident, Ms. Aziz had only been working at GLTCC for a few weeks, and testified at that point she had not had any substantial prior interaction, either positive or negative, with appellant. Ms. Aziz was assigned an office near the recreation area, close enough that she could hear it if the television was too loud. Just before the incident occurred, she left her office to go to the front desk, and along the way stopped by the recreation area to speak with resident, N.W., with whom she was friendly. While she was talking with N.W., "all hell broke loose, for lack of a better term." Appellant was storming back and forth in the recreation area, red in the face, while screaming at L.S. Ms. Aziz could not recall exactly what appellant was saying, but confirmed that his voice was "extremely loud" and that "it was "scary." She further observed that during the incident, N.W.'s eyes were bulging and her mouth had dropped open, and that L.S. was visibly upset and shaking. The incident took long enough that she "just wanted to get the residents out of there." Eventually, someone else told appellant to calm down, to which he responded by yelling "get out; it's none of your business." Ms. Aziz assisted N.W. out of the recreation area, who by that time was in tears.

After appellant quieted down, Ms. Aziz spoke with L.S., who was "crying and very upset," and then gave her a hug. Ms. Aziz believed she was obligated to report the incident, and because her immediate supervisor and Ms. Marshall were not there, she spoke with Ms. Lewis and social worker Pat Revlak. Ms. Lewis and Ms. Revlak contemporaneously documented their conversations with Ms. Aziz. (R-3 and R-4.) In her testimony, Ms. Aziz reaffirmed the accuracy of everything contained in her statement and affirmed that she was not pressured by anyone when she prepared it. She further reiterated on cross-examination that appellant's behavior reminded her of "a child having a temper tantrum, like a really, really bad temper tantrum."

Lisa Skellinger is a fellow recreational aide and works closely with appellant. Earlier on the day in question, Ms. Skellinger and appellant where instructed by their supervisor, Ms. Lewis, to keep the locker room door closed, because there is a bulletin board in there were important information is written. She and appellant agreed and went to lunch duty. Upon their return, they found that L.S. was in the locker room and the door was wide open in violation of Ms. Lewis's policy. One of the plants that appellant had been taking care of all the time was dumped in the garbage. Appellant said, "who dumped my plant in the garbage? Why is there dirt all over? You shouldn't be in here." Ms. Skellinger then saw Art McGillis, the janitor, and asked him to clean up the dirt. Ms. Skellinger had worked at GLTCC for over thirty years and has known appellant since he began his employ in 1997 as a CNA. She was appellant's supervisor until 2001 when Ms. Marshall took over. At the time of the incident, she and appellant were partners and she is lost without him. When asked if appellant was "yelling" at L.S., Ms. Skellinger replied "No". She stated appellant's voice could have been loud but she "didn't think it was loud."

Even though Ms. Skellinger was present during the incident, neither Ms. Marshall nor anyone else asked for her statement. Nonetheless, she wrote a statement of events because she believes appellant was being treated unfairly. (A-2.) In her statement, she indicated voices got loud and that L.S. was yelling at appellant. Ms. Skellinger also testified, as did all witnesses, that appellant is friendly and caring towards all residents. She acknowledged on cross-examination that she has known Michael for thirty-one years and he sometimes can be loud. This is a physical characteristic and has nothing to do with behavior.

Art McGillis is a building maintenance employee and witnessed the Incident on November 19, 2013. Mr. McGillis testified that appellant "told the lady 'we told you several times to stay out that room.'" He was not nasty, just telling her using his normal voice. His testimony was consistent with his statement, dated November 25, 2015. (A-1.) On cross-examination, Mr. McGillis stated that he was not present for the entire incident and does not know what happened prior to his arrival into the room.

Mary Bogan had been employed at GLTCC as a Recreation Therapist until her transfer in March 2016. She previously held the position of Senior Recreation Therapist but was demoted by Allison Marshall after a disciplinary action. Ms. Bogan testified that on November 19, 2013, the television was loud and that as she walked by the recreation area, she heard some raised voices, those voices being both appellant and L.S. Ms. Bogan's testimony as to the events of November 19, 2013, is consistent with her statement to Ms. Marshall. (A-4.) She was not present in the room but stuck her head in the room and asked them to keep their voices down.

Ms. Bogan feels that appellant was removed from his position because Ms. Marshall did not like him. Ms. Marshall made a collage of appellant, which she kept in her office. One of the pictures in the collage was appellant in a pink bunny outfit during Easter. (A-3.) While A-3 is the original photo, the one in the collage included a hand drawn penis near appellant's face. No other employees could verify the existence of the collage or the doctored photo of appellant. Ms. Bogan contends that Ms. Marshall would comment about appellant's weight and would comment that she hates him.

On cross-examination, Ms. Bogan admitted to having been demoted for disciplinary reasons in 2014. (R-38.) She also admitted sending appellant a text message around the time of the incident telling him not to fall into their trap. "Divide and Concur." (R-39.)

Michael Mylod, appellant, began his employment at GLTCC in May 1997. He gave a statement on the incident on November 22, 2013, (R-7) in which he admits having a disagreement with L.S. on how to take care of a plant. He later apologized to L.S. for the misunderstanding when he learned that she had permission to move the plant into the locker room. He was upset that L.S. did not listen to him regarding the plants. Ms. Lewis told him to keep his voice down and no other discipline occurred until Ms. Marshall got involved. She disciplined him for everything and once told him he was lucky to have a job. Ms. Marshall never told him that she hated him and he was unaware of the collage that Ms. Bogan described.

Appellant maintains that he was not yelling at L.S., however, he later admitted regretting not speaking with her privately about the incident, instead of confronting her directly. He also agrees that he was speaking loud enough that Ms. Bogan could hear them from the hall and came in to ask them to keep their voices down.

Allison Marshall, the former administrator at GLTCC testified on behalf of the respondent as a rebuttal witness. She has been living in South Carolina for the past two years and agreed to testify in this hearing via video conferencing. She never told anyone that she hated appellant as she did not hate him or want him fired. She remembers the photo of appellant in the bunny costume and recalls that appellant loved making the residents smile. She did not have a collage of appellant and did not draw a penis on any picture of him. She treated appellant the same way she treated all of the employees at GLTCC. She made a recommendation as to appellant's discipline but she did not have the final say as to what that discipline would be. That determination is made by the County Human Resources Department. Progressive discipline played a role in the decision to remove appellant. He had been given a fair and final warning letter in 2011 regarding his loud "booming" tones, use of foul language and arguing with a co-worker. (R-11.)

In order to resolve the inconsistencies in the witness testimony, the credibility of the witnesses must be determined. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963).

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Having considered the testimonial and documentary evidence offered by the parties, I FIND that the testimony offered by the Ms. Bogan regarding the motivation behind appellant's discipline is not credible. She insists that Ms. Marshall had a personal dislike of appellant and he was disciplined as a result. Her testimony regarding the collage and Ms. Marshall hating appellant is not corroborated by any other witness, including appellant. Further, the testimony of Ms. Thomas and Ms. Marshall confirms that the County's Department of Human Resources reviewed the allegations and made the final determination to seek removal. This is supported by the FNDA (R-1) and the PNDA (R-2) which was issued by the County Hearing Coordinator, Scott Climer. Therefore, I FIND as FACT that the appellant's discipline resulting from the November 19, 2013, incident was not motivated by a personal dislike of appellant by Ms. Marshall or anyone at GLTCC.

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following additional FACTS:

On November 19, 2013, appellant got into a verbal dispute with a volunteer at the GLTCC regarding the proper maintenance of a plant and the volunteer's presence in a room that appellant believed was to be off limits to the volunteer. GLTCC served a vulnerable population of the elderly and infirm, many of whom were confined to wheelchairs, and/or suffered from chronic psychiatric diagnoses, as well as dementia and Alzheimer's disease. Appellant was not the volunteer's supervisor and did not hold a position of authority over the volunteer such that he permitted to discipline or correct the volunteer's actions. The dispute, which took place in front of at least three residents, was loud enough to be heard by at least two employees, Ms. Aziz and Ms. Bogan, in other parts of the building. Appellant had been previously warned and disciplined about his behavior, and specifically about his loud "booming" tones, use of foul language and arguing with a co-worker. After completing an investigation, and considering the potential disciplinary options available, GLTCC management recommended removal as the appropriate penalty. In large part, this decision was based upon appellant's prior disciplinary history. The County's Human Resources Department concurred with GLTCC management, and following a departmental disciplinary hearing, his removal was upheld on May 7, 2014. As a result of the incident, respondent filed a resident abuse report with the Department of Health and the Ombudsman. The Office of the Ombudsman conducted an investigation and determined that there was sufficient information to verify staff to resident verbal/mental abuse to two residents. (R-9 and R-10.)

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A2-2.

The Appointing Authority shoulders the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959).

Appellant was charged with "Conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

I CONCLUDE that appellant's behavior did rise to a level of conduct unbecoming a public employee. The basis for the charge of conduct unbecoming was appellant's conduct during the November 19, 2013, incident with a GLTCC volunteer. As a result of appellant's conduct, the Office of the Ombudsman conducted an investigation and determined that there was sufficient information to verify staff to resident verbal/mental abuse to two residents. His conduct was such that it could adversely affect the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services.

Appellant has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Specifically, appellant has been charged with violating Monmouth County Policies 522 regarding workplace violence, 701 regarding employee conduct, 703 regarding sexual and other unlawful harassment, 722 regarding workplace etiquette, County policy prohibiting workplace discrimination and harassment, N.J.A.C. 8:39-4.1 and Medicare/Medicaid requirements regarding resident rights. I CONCLUDE that appellant violated a number of these policies, specifically, appellant violated Policy 522 which requires employees to treat coworkers with courtesy and respect at all times. Policy 701 was violated in that it prohibits boisterous or disruptive activity in the workplace. Policy 722 directs employees to avoid public accusations and criticisms of other employees and directs employees to address such issues privately. N.J.A.C. 8:39-4.1 and Medicare/Medicaid requirements regarding resident rights state that residents shall be entitled to be free from physical and mental abuse. I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden of proof that appellant committed an act in violation the aforementioned policies.

PENALTY

In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983). However, where the charged dereliction is an act which, in view of the duties and obligations of the position, substantially disadvantages the public, good cause exists for removal. See Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385 (Law Div. 1976), aff'd, 163 N.J.

Super. 453 (App. Div. 1978); In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

Some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007), citing Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197–98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense); see also In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007) (DYFS worker who snapped lighter in front of five-year-old):

> . . . judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980).

A review of appellant's work history reveals that he suffers from severe behavioral problems, presenting an obvious and inherent risk to the well-being of the vulnerable residents of the GLTCC. The November 19, 2013, incident, standing alone, was a serious matter – to the point it triggered a mandatory report to the New Jersey Department of Health for an investigation. Appellant's disciplinary history confirms that this incident is reflective of a pattern of behavior. Appellant received numerous warnings, counselings, reprimands and other disciplinary actions for time and attendance violations but there were several prior instances where he was disciplined for using foul, inappropriate and threatening language towards co-workers, sometimes in the presence of other staff members or residents. Such prior conduct, in and of itself, could have resulted in removal. See, e.g., Benitez v. Passaic Cnty, 2000 WL 286782, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 7157-98 (February 29, 2000) (Care center worker removed from employment in substantial part because he used foul language towards another employee in a setting where it could be overheard by other employees, patients and members of the public). Appellant was aware his job was on the line if lost control of his behavior again. In July 2011, appellant was called into a meeting, which was intended to "serve as [Appellant's] fair and final warning." See R-11. As then-GLTCC Administrator Diana Czerepuszko reminded him in a written memorandum, "[i]t is expected that you show an immediate, sharp, marked improvement in your conduct otherwise, there will be further, serious discipline." Id. Even after receiving his "fair and final warning," appellant's behavior did not improve, and the County was forced to issue disciplinary charges against him only a few months later, in March 2012. The county did not seek appellant's removal at that time, and decided to give him another chance, and only sought a forty-five day suspension. The suspension was later reduced to forty days via a settlement agreement, which he willingly executed after receiving guidance of legal counsel. As part of that agreement, appellant admitted to numerous instances of inappropriate conduct. (R-17.) This panoply of misconduct also included sick leave abuse (notably, despite nearly fifteen years of service with the County, at the end of 2011 he had only one-half hour left in his sick leave bank), repeated failure to report to work as scheduled, repeated failure to follow County call-in procedures, improperly entering the GLTCC kitchen area on numerous occasions, repeatedly bringing his dog into the facility without authorization, and initiating a confrontation with a speech therapist who was evaluating a resident, repeatedly insulting her. After having considered all of the proofs offered in this matter, and the impact upon the institution regarding the behavior by appellant herein and in light of the seriousness of the offense and in light of the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record, I CONCLUDE that the removal of the appellant is appropriate.

ORDER

Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of the appointing authority is AFFIRMED, as set forth above.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. In the Matter of Sabura Alexander, Hudson County, Department of Family Services

CSC DKT. NO. 2015-3327
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 13816-15

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE

ISSUED: FEB 10 2017 BW

The appeal of Sabura Alexander, Human Services Specialist 4, Hudson County, Department of Family Services, 30 working day suspension, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Leland S. McGee, who rendered his initial decision on December 29, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on February 8, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision to modify the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to 15 working days of back pay, benefits, and seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although the penalty was modified by the Commission, charges were sustained. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in disciplining the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore modifies the 30 working day suspension to a 15 working day suspension. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted 15 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. Per N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated to the extent of any income earned by the appellant during this period. Proof of income earned shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

SABURA ALEXANDER,
Petitioner,
v.
HUDSON COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF FAMILY SERVICES,

BEFORE LELAND S. MCGEE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The respondent, Hudson County Department of Family Services (Respondent or County), brings a major disciplinary action against the petitioner, Sabura Alexander (Petitioner or Alexander), HSS IV Supervisor, effective May 8, 2015. Respondent alleges that Petitioner's conduct was unbecoming a public employee; that she was insubordinate; that she neglected her duty; and other sufficient cause exists. Respondent alleges that on May 8, 2015, Petitioner violated a "cease and desist" directive from her director. Specifically, she "took the opportunity . . . to confront, harass, annoy and vex employee Jackie Angione" by chanting, and then chanting and dancing, slogans/statements directed towards Ms. Angione.

On May 8, 2015, Respondent issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action against Petitioner. On May 19 an administrative hearing was held and on June 10, 2015, Respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action upholding the charges. On September 3, 2015, the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), for a hearing as a contested matter pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing was held on March 31, and April 7, 2016. On May 17, 2016, the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The pertinent facts of this case are not in dispute and as such, I FIND the following to be the FACTS of this case:

1. On or about March 11, 2015 Petitioner and co-worker, Jackie Angione (Angione) had a dispute regarding certain procedures to be implemented within their office. Both parties testified that they "had no problems" with each other prior to this time and that they "always got along."

2. On or about March 11, 2015, Petitioner sent an email to Angelica M. Harrison, Director of Respondent's Division of Welfare (Harrison). In the email correspondence, among other things, Petitioner complained about co-worker Jackie Angione, alluding to her "unprofessionalism" conduct. (R-1.)

3. On or about April 24, 2015, Harrison responded to the complaint by way of a memorandum to Petitioner. This memorandum also served as a "Cease and Desist Order" for Petitioner to cease "having contact with Ms. Angione and she with [Petitioner]." (R-2.)

4. The memorandum also made reference to Harrison's "understanding" that Petitioner has shouted at some of her co-workers, and suggested that she "look into controlling [her] anger so that we do not continue these issues in the workplace." (Ibid.)

5. The attendance time sheets for Petitioner and other employees was located in or adjacent to Angione's office and Petitioner was required to walk passed her to sign in. During the period from April 24, 2015, to May 8, 2015, Petitioner waited for Angione to be away from her desk in order to sign in.

6. Sometime during the end of 2014 and early 2015, Angione informed some employees of her intent to retire during 2015.

7. On May 8, 2015, while enter her place of employment, Petitioner walked passed Angione's office and was singing or chanting, "countdown." On her return trip passed Angione's office, Petitioner gleefully continued.

8. On May 8, 2015, Angione wrote a memorandum to R. Knapp, Deputy Director, wherein she complained that Petitioner's conduct was harassing and violated the Cease and Desist Order. (R-3.)

9. On May 8, 2015, co-worker Kathy Cunningham was present when Petitioner passed Angione's office. She hand-wrote a note to "To Whom it May Concern" wherein she memorialized her observation that Petitioner was "singing and dancing countdown" as she passed Angione's office. (R-4.) The implication was that Petitioner was referring to the fact that Angione would be retiring soon.

10. Petitioner acknowledges that she was singing "countdown"; however May 8, 2015, was the Friday of Mother's Day weekend and her reference was to her anticipation of the weekend. There were other co-workers present at the time of the incident. There is no evidence that Petitioner specifically stated or referenced the fact that Angione was retiring or that Petitioner looked at, or in the direction of Angione as she passed the office.

Credibility Determinations

In assessing a witness's credibility, an Administrative Law Judge must consider his/her testimony in "light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it hangs together with other evidence." Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). A fact finder may reject a witness's testimony "when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521-22 (1950); see Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958) (rejecting testimony "inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne by other testimony."); D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). An ALJ may consider the "interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness" but "where such choice is reasonably made, it is conclusive on appeal." State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div. 1952); Renan Realty Corp. v. State, Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958.) Greater weight of credible evidence in the case – preponderance – depends not only on the number of witnesses, but "greater convincing power to our minds." State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47, 49 (1975). Similarly, credible testimony "must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself." Perrone, supra, 5 N.J. at 522.

Here, the only conflicting testimony was as to whether Petitioner directing her gleeful exhibition at Angione. Conflicting and irreconcilable testimony requires credibility determinations, based on the totality of the evidence, prior to making findings as to the disputed facts. In re Final Agency Decision of Bd. of Exam'rs of Elec. Contractors, 356 N.J. Super. 42 (App. Div. 2002). Although there were several employees present during the incident, Petitioner was unable to offer any witnesses. She state that she did not believe that any of the other people present "tell the truth" about what happened. It is clear that, although both Angione and Petitioner stated that they had no problems with each other, there was a rift between the two of them. I do not find Petitioner's was credible when she stated that the "celebration" was not directed at Angione. I FIND the testimony of Respondent's witnesses to be more credible than that of Petitioner. Respondent's evidence is more consistent in the manner in which it collectively "hangs together." Petitioner's testimony "contains inherent contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion" as to its veracity. Perrone, supra, 5 N.J. at 521-22. For the foregoing reasons, I FIND that Petitioner did engaged in the conduct set forth in the Specifications of the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action and the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, with the intent to at least annoy Angione if not harass her.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Applicable Standard

The Civil Service Act and the implementing regulations govern the rights and duties of public employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1 to 4A:10-3.2. An employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties or who gives other just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). In a civil service disciplinary case, the employer bears the burden of sufficient, competent and credible evidence of facts essential to the charge. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(2), -21; N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1, "burden of proof"; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. That burden is to establish by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

An appointing authority may discipline an employee on various grounds, including inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). Such action is subject to review by the Merit System Board, which after a de novo hearing makes an independent determination as to both guilt and the "propriety of the penalty imposed below." W. New York v. Bock, 38

N.J. 500, 519 (1962). In an administrative proceeding concerning a major disciplinary action, the appointing authority must prove its case by a "fair preponderance of the believable evidence." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Polk, supra, 90 N.J. at 560; Atkinson, supra, 37 N.J. at 149.

Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), an employee may be subject to major discipline for conduct unbecoming a public employee. Although not strictly defined by the Administrative Code, "unbecoming conduct" is broadly defined as "'any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the [governmental unit] [or] which has a tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services.'" Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998) (citations omitted); In re Nicosia, A-5285-04T5 (App. Div. May 17, 2007), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>. The conduct need not be "predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

Petitioner admits to engaging in the described "celebration"; however, denies that it was directed at Angione. The undersigned is not persuaded that her conduct was not directed at Angione. Further, she (and Angione) were governed by a Cease and Desist Order and I CONCLUDE that Petitioner violated that Order which was a "violation of the implicit standard of good behavior." Therefore I CONCLUDE that Petitioner engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee.

Insubordination and Neglect of Duty

Black's Law Dictionary 802 (7th Ed. 1999) defines insubordination as a "willful disregard of an employer's instructions" or an "act of disobedience to proper authority." Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995) defines insubordination as "not submissive to authority: disobedient." Such dictionary definitions have been utilized by courts to define the term where it is not specifically defined in contract or regulation.

> "Insubordination" is not defined in the agreement. Consequently, assuming for purposes of argument that its presence is implicit, we are obliged to accept its ordinary definition since it is not a technical term or word of art and there are no circumstances indicating that a different meaning was intended.
> [Ricci v. Corp. Express of the E., 344 N.J. Super. 39, 45 (App. Div. 2001) (citation omitted).]

Importantly, this definition incorporates acts of non-compliance and non-cooperation, as well as affirmative acts of disobedience. Thus, insubordination can occur even where no specific order or direction has been given to the allegedly insubordinate person. Insubordination is always a serious matter, especially in a paramilitary context. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971).

I CONCLUDE that Petitioner engaged in conduct unbecoming a public employee because she engaged in conduct that violated a directive from her supervisor. I CONCLUDE that her conduct constituted insubordination.

Neglect of duty is one of the grounds for disciplinary action in a civil service matter under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(7). Although not defined by the regulation, it generally means that a person is not performing his or her job. The person may have failed to perform an act that the job requires or may have been negligent in the discharge of a duty. The duty may arise by specific statute or from the very nature of the job itself.

I CONCLUDE that there is no evidence that Petitioner failed to perform her job duties. I therefore CONCLUDE the charge of neglect of duty should not be sustained.

Appropriateness of Penalty

It is well-established that the employee's past record and any mitigating circumstances may be reviewed in assessing a penalty. See Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500.

The severity of the infractions must also be balanced against "whether removal or something less is appropriate under the circumstances." In re Figueroa, CSV 3819-01, Initial Decision (October 10, 2003), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/; see Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980). Progressive discipline may be "bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct," especially where the offense involves "public safety" and risks "harm to persons or property." In re Herman, 192 N.J. 19, 33-34 (2007). In assessing penalties, "[t]he overriding concern" is the "public good." George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 49 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463, 465.

"[W]here the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature," an individual may be removed regardless of disciplinary history. In re Glenn, CSV 5051-03, Initial Decision (May 23, 2005), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/; see Henry, supra, 81 N.J. at 571. Counseling, warnings, meetings, etc., do not constitute discipline under merit system rules. See N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-3.1. Here, as the charges resulted from offenses occurring from August to September of 2010, "it was incumbent upon [respondent] to follow the concept of progressive discipline" and advise petitioner that "failure to change [her] behavior could result in termination from employment." Glenn, supra, CSV 5051-03.

Petitioner's underlying conduct was not egregious. The undersigned is persuaded that there was some mutual distain between Angione and Petitioner. Further, Angione was scheduled to retire and may have already done so. As such, the circumstance giving rise to the conflict would be eliminated. Further, Respondent's witness Director Harrison, Division of Welfare, indicated that she believed that the documentary evidence submitted was incorrect. Those documents indicate no prior disciplinary action against Petitioner. (R-5.) For the foregoing reasons I CONCLUDE that the penalty of thirty-days' suspension was not appropriate. I CONCLUDE that a penalty of five days for the charge of conduct unbecoming and ten days for the charge of insubordination is appropriate.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that petitioner, Sabura Alexander, be given a fifteen-day suspension.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, MERIT SYSTEM PRACTICES AND LABOR RELATIONS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE

ISSUED: FEB 10 2017 BW

The appeal of Frank Harkcom, Senior Correction Officer, Bayside State Prison, Department of Corrections, removal effective February 3, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge John S. Kennedy, who rendered his initial decision on December 22, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on February 8, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Frank Harkcom.

Re: Frank Harkcom

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSR 02881-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. N/A 2016- 2769

IN THE MATTER OF FRANK HARKCOM, BAYSIDE STATE PRISON.

William G. Blaney, Esq., for appellant, Frank Harkcom (Blaney & Karavan, attorneys)

Adam K. Phelps, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: November 10, 2016 Decided: December 22, 2016

BEFORE JOHN S. KENNEDY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Senior Corrections Officer, Frank Harkcom, (appellant) appeals the decision of the Department of Corrections (DOC), Bayside State Prison (respondent, Bayside) to remove him from employment. A Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action, (PNDA), dated November 17, 2015, seeks the removal of appellant based on the following charges: N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)6, Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)12, Other Sufficient Cause; HRB 84-17 (as amended): C8 Flasification: Intentional misstatement of material fact in conection with work, employment application, attendance, or in any record, report, investigation; C-11 Conduct unbecoming an employee; D-23, Prohibited by law from possessing or using a fire arm; and E-1, Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision.

After a departmental hearing held on January 12, 2016, charges of N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)6, Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)12, Other Sufficient Cause; Human Resources Bulletin (HRB) 84-17 (as amended): C8 Flasification: Intentional misstatement of material fact in conection with work, employment application, attendance, or in any record, report, investigation, were sustained and incorporated into a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) 31-C, dated February 1, 2016, with a proposed penalty of removal from employment. Appellant appealed his removal to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was received on February 24, 2016. The hearing in this matter was originally scheduled to be held on May 2, 2016, and May 3, 2016, but was adjourned at the request of the respondent due to unavailability of witnesses. The matter was then scheduled to be heard on June 16, 2016, but was again adjourned as a result of the departure of the Deputy Attorney General form the Division of Law originally assigned to represent the respondent. Appellant was suspended without pay on November 19, 2015, as a result of the PNDA and remained suspended until his removal. Based upon the appellant's assertion that he was entitled to receive his base pay pursuant to N.J.S.A. 40A:14-201(a) effective May 18, 2016, respondent unilaterally placed him back on pay status on that date. The hearing in this matter was held on July 25, 2016, and August 18, 2016. The parties electronically filed briefs with the court on November 4, 2016 and the record closed on November 10, 2016, after hard copies of the briefs were received.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

In January 2015 appellant was arrested for suspicion of Driving Under the Influence (DUI) and reckless driving. As a result, respondent issued a PNDA removing him as an officer on February 9, 2015. (R-10.) Appellant was found guilty of reckless driving and his driver's license was suspended for six months. The respondent changed the removal to a ten-day suspension and required appellant to reapply for employment as a officer. On October 29, 2015, appellant submitted and signed an application for employment with the DOC. (R-1.) Through the application appellant was directed to disclose all court dispositions relative to any charges, including criminal, civil, and family law actions and was required to disclose his arrests, summonses and all negative contact with police, including incidences of domestic violence including temporary restraining orders (TRO) and final restraining orders (FRO) whether active or dismissed. Appellant signed an acknowledgment certifying that the information on the application was complete and accurate to the best of his knowledge and acknowledgeged that any misleading, withheld or incorrect information may be cause for his immediate termination of employment.

On October 29, 2015, respondnet performed a routine investigation of appellant's application and determined that he failed to disclose an active domestice violence complaint, TRO and FRO entered against him in 1990 and well as two harassment charges filed against him in 2012 and 2013. Appellant also failed to disclose prior arrests and convictions he had previously disclosed on his original employment application which he submitted in 1997. Respondent asserted that appellant's failure to disclose the above stated incidents constituted falsification of records and determined not to rehire him. Thereafter, appellant was issued a PNDA on November 17, 2015, seeking his removal and was suspended without pay on November 19, 2015. After a hearing was held, a FNDA was issued on February 1, 2016, terminating appellant. The aforementioned is not in dispute and I therefore FIND them as FACT.

Sergeant James Russo

Sergeant Russo (Russo) testified that at the time of his testimony he was assigned to the DOC's Sergeant Custody Recruitment Unit and handled the backgrounds for custody applicants and other recruiting functions. Russo also conducted his own investigations into reinstatements of employees which included a review of an employee's criminal background, motor vehicle records, and urinalysis prior to returning to work. After reviewing the above material, Russo would make a determination whether or not to move forward with the rehire. Russo was responsible for reviewing appellant's application for rehire. Upon receipt, he compared the applications against various printouts from the computer background check programs. To assist Russo in his investigation, he produced a Background Investigation Report, which bullet points what was reported on the application versus what was found. (R-2.)

Russo pointed out that appellant did report on his reapplication being charged with disorderly person offenses in 1981 and 1983, as well as a drinking and driving summons for which he was found not guilty. However, Russo testified that a check of appellant's records through the New Jersey Automated Complaint System revealed he was charged with harassment on October 16, 2012, and June 27, 2013. A review of the Family Automated Tracking System indicated that appellant was subject to a FRO from 1990 at the time of his reapplication. Russo relied upon these printouts to determine that appellant had knowledge of the two harassment charges and the FRO and therefore falsified his reapplication by omitting the same. As a result of these findings, Russo came to the decision that appellant should not move forward in the rehire process because he did not disclose his charges of 2012 and 2013 and falsified his reapplication related to the FRO. Russo believed the FRO was significant in the rehiring process because being subjected to an FRO precludes somebody from possession of a firearm due to the Lautenberg Rule, claiming if you have an order of protection against you, you are barred from the possession of firearms by federal law.

Russo indicated he was aware of a draft policy that required rehires to fill out an application prior to reinstatement but he is not aware of an approved policy and only completed appellant's background examination because he was instructed to do so. He did not know the status of appellant prior to the examination. Russo had no personal knowledge of whether appellant was aware of the harassment complaints but did indicate that they appeared to be signed by a citizen, not law enforcement. Upon review of the 2012 complaint, Russo determined the alleged perpetrator was a Mr. W, who resided at M. Avenue, Bridgeton, New Jersey, a location appellant did not reside at during that time frame. Russo had no personal knowledge of whether or not appellant reported these alleged complaints to his supervisors.

Russo reviewed a Certified Copy of the Restraining Order provided by petitioner's counsel and maintained the position that even though it lacked any indication that it was served on appellant that he believed appellant was served. He had no reason to doubt the accuracy of the Family Automated Case Tracking System. Russo did not personally search the system but instead relied upon the printouts made by another DOC employee. Russo was made aware that appellant's FRO was dismissed and that he had no restrictions on carrying a firearm.

Guy Cirillo

Guy Cirillo (Cirillo) is the Director of the Office of Training for the Department of Corrections and is in charge of the State Basic Academy, Recruitment Unit, and the hiring process for the DOC for custody staff. Cirillo outlined the four phases of the investigation process used to evaluate a recruit, once Human Resources (HR) process them. He noted the DOC Rules and Regulations prohibit anybody with a FRO to carry a gun and subsequently be unable to be a corrections officer because it is a condition of employment to be able to carry a weapon. Employees are required to have a valid driver's license in the instance they may have to operate a State vehicle. Upon review of appellant's application, Cirillo determined that appellant failed to identify information about being arrested and having a TRO or FRO however, he had no involvement in the decision to discipline appellant. The range of discipline associated with intentionally falsifying an application is written reprimand to removal. The recommendation for discipline is subject to review and if an applicant neglected to fill something out erroneously, they may receive an official written reprimand.

On cross-examination, Cirillo stated HRB 84-17 (as amended), C-8, states that in order to be charged with a falsification violation, the falsification of an application needs to be intentional. Cirillo is unaware if the policy regarding the rehiring process was ever officially adopted; however it is a policy that is followed. Cirillo admitted that there are corrections officers who are currently employed by DOC who do not have the ability to carry a firearm. Mr. Cirillo does not know if the information gained from the automated reports is accurate, however they have no choice but to go by the information that they report.

William Saraceni

William Saraceni (Saraceni) is currently a Manager II of the Office of Human Resources, region three, Bayside State Prison. His prime responsibility is records custodian. Appellant's rehire application was necessary because appellant was removed from employment and reinstated. The basis for appellant's removal was a PNDA, dated February 10, 2015. This ultimately led to appellant being suspended from employment for a period of eight months, which Saraceni considered "removed" for HR purposes.

Saraceni was not involved in recommending or implementing disciplinary charges against employees. The first time he saw the TRO and the FRO in appellant's personnel file was a week before the hearing and could not testify as to whether they were part of his file since the beginning of his employment in 1997.

Frank Harkcom

Appellant is a Senior Correction Officer at Bayside State Prison. He has been employed there for nineteen (19) years. In or around 1990, appellant divorced his wife, M.C. Together they had one son. In 1990, he and M.C. had an arrangement for visitation with their son. On his scheduled day to have his son, M.C. gave appellant a problem picking up his son at her family home. Appellant knocked on the door and no one answered. He continued to knock on the door, presumably harder, and knocked an ornament off the door. He was angry and upset but left when nobody answered the door. The next day, M.C. spoke with appellant and indicated her father made her put a restraining order against him and she was working to calm her father down. M.C. advised appellant that her father would let her drop the restraining order if he paid restitution for the broken ornament; which he did. He was under the impression that the issue was resolved after he made restitution. Appellant recalled receiving something from the Sheriff's office at or around the time of the 1990 incident at his parents' house; however, he does not recall whether or not he opened it. Appellant never took any steps with the court to determine if the TRO was dropped and did not appear in court as required on the TRO. (R-3a.) Sometime prior to him beginning employment with DOC in 1998, appellant had completed a background check. At no point after his background check did anyone ever tell him he had a FRO or a TRO against him. Additionally, appellant stated he has had three additional background checks while employed at DOC and no one had advised him of the restraining orders. Appellant recently took steps to have the FRO lifted and M.C. assisted as she wanted to do anything she could to get it taken care of

With regard to the alleged 2012 harassment incident, appellant testified that he went to his rental property and saw the neighbor yelling at him. The neighbor called the police, who left without issuing any tickets. The compliant filed against him was sent to the address of his rental property where he did not reside. (P-2.) He later received the court notice, but there was no indication of what it was for, so he went to court several times and the judge eventually dismissed the matter. The policy appellant was aware of at the time of the incident, required him only to report arrests and/or incarcerations. HRB 84-19 was amended in 2000 and required employees to report the receipt of summonses filed against them. (R-17.) Appellant asserts that he was unaware of the policy change.

The second alleged harassment incident in 2013, involved the same rental property and the same neighbor who made the first set of allegations in 2012. Appellant recalled that he was blowing leaves off of his property towards a park and some of them drifted onto his neighbor's yard. The neighbor confronted appellant and eventually called the police. The police did not press charges against appellant and advised him that if he wanted the neighbor to stop calling the police he needed to go down and sign a complaint against him. Appellant signed a complaint against his neighbor, which lead to him receiving a notice for neighborhood dispute resolution. The neighbor also signed a complaint against him but appellant alleges to have never received this complaint. (P-11.) He and his neighbor resolved the dispute through mediation. He never really had an issue with the neighbor, the neighbor had a problem with appellant's renters. Appellant indicated that he did not report the 2012 and 2013 alleged incidents because he did not know he was charged, and he never intentionally misled the DOC.

FINDINGS OF FACT

After carefully reviewing the exhibits and documentary evidence presented and after having had the opportunity to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the additional relevant and credible FACTS in this matter: Appellant was aware of his obligation to disclose his arrests and prior incidents and understood he was obligated to disclose all offenses and charges against him including domestic violence charges and restraining orders. Appellant also understood he had to disclose all misdemeanors, including disorderly persons offenses and harassment complaints and understood that his failure to disclose any offenses could result in his termination.

In his reapplication, appellant disclosed two disorderly persons offenses from 1981 and 1983, and his suspicion of DUI arrest from January 10, 2015. He also disclosed that he did not have a valid driver's license but disclosed no other offenses. He did not disclose his criminal mischief charge and conviction from 1981 on his reapplication or his 1989 disorderly conduct even though they were disclosed on his original application in 1997. Appellant signed the Acknowledgement and Affidavit attesting to the accuracy of the information contained in his reapplication.

When assessing credibility, inferences may be drawn concerning the witness' expression, tone of voice and demeanor. MacDonald v. Hudson Bus Transportation Co., 100 N.J. Super. 103 (App. Div. 1968). Additionally, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963).

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

I do not FIND appellant to be a credible witness and his testimony regarding his knowledge of the 1990 TRO and FRO,as well as the 2012 and 2013 harrassment complaints filed against him, is not believable. Appellant testified that he did not know about the 1990 TRO and FRO, or the 2012 and 2013 harassment complaints when he reapplied for employment in 2015. However, appellant was aware of the 1990 restraining orders even though he denies he was served with the TRO or FRO. Even if taken as true that he was not served the documents, appellant admitted his ex wife told him about the TRO, and that he knew the Salem Sheriff had delivered something to his parents' house. That appellant was not aware of or simply forgot about an incident serious enough to raise to the level of a TRO and FRO being entered against him is not credible.

Similarly, appellant testified that he did not purposely fail to disclose the 2012 and 2013 harassment complaints because he was never aware of them. By his own admission, however, appellant went to Court, and mediation, to have the harassment complaints dismissed. As a result, I FIND as FACT that appellant was aware of the 1990 TRO and the FRO and also the 2012 and 2013 harrassment charges filed against him and failied to disclose them on his 2015 reapplication.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Under the Civil Service Act, a public employee may be subject to major discipline for various employment-related offenses, N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6. In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:-2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962);

In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

Respondent has sustained charges of violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)6, Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2.3(a)12, Other Sufficient Cause; Human Resources Bulletin (HRB) 84-17 (as amended): C8 Flasification: Intentional misstatement of material fact in conection with work, employment application, attendance, or in any record, report, investigation. Appellant argues that the charges against him can not be proven by credible, competent evidence and that his omissions on his 2015 reapplication were inadvertent and not done so knowingly. He asserts that respondent did not produce a witness to authenticate any of the alleged Court documents it submitted in support of its case and that the documents fail to indicate that they were ever served appellant. The automated reports generated related to appellant alleged 2012 and 2013 summonses were not presented by a custodian of record or supported by a certification. Had appellant's testimony been that none of the events had occurred and respondent were otherwise unable to cooberate any of the incidents, his argument would have some merit. The documents presented, however, were obtained during the course of Russo's background investigation. There has been no evidence that Russo or anyone else manufactured these documents or that Russo harbored any ill will toward appellant. Furthermore, appellant testified as to the events surrounding the documents in question which gives this tribunal the ability to more fully rely upon those documents.

As to the charge of violation of section C-8, "Falsification," the HRB at Page 8 defines Falsification as:

> . . . Intentional misstatement of material fact in connection with work, employment application, attendance, or in any record, report, investigation or other proceeding.

The actions of appellant fit directly within the definition of falsification as set forth in the HRB. It is clear based on the evidence presented that appellant intentionally misstated facts on his 2015 reapplication. He clearly had knowledge of the 1990 TRO and the FRO and also the 2012 and 2013 arrassment charges. He did not disclose his criminal mischief charge and conviction from 1981 on his reapplication or his 1989 disorderly conduct even though they were disclosed on his original application in 1997. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden of proof that appellant committed an act of Falsification pursuant to HRB section C-8. He clearly demonstrated an absence of judgment in a sensitive position requiring public trust in the agency's judgment.

Appellant was also charged with "Conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase that encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

Appellant's status as a senior correction officer subjects him to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1990). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v.

Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304 N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes."
> [Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).]

I CONCLUDE that appellant's behavior did rise to a level of conduct unbecoming a public employee when the aforementioned higher standard is applied. Appellant's conduct was such that it could adversely affect the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services.

Appellant has further been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Appellant's conduct was such that he violated this standard of good behavior. As such, I CONCLUDE that appellant's actions fit this charge.

PENALTY

In West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962), which was decided more than fifty years ago, our Supreme Court first recognized the concept of progressive discipline, under which "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007) (citing Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522). The Court therein concluded that "consideration of past record is inherently relevant" in a disciplinary proceeding, and held that an employee's "past record" includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously brought to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 523-24.

As the Supreme Court explained in In re Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30, "[s]ince Bock, the concept of progressive discipline has been utilized in two ways when determining the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." According to the Court:

> . . . First, principles of progressive discipline can support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct . . .
> The second use to which the principle of progressive discipline has been put is to mitigate the penalty for a current offense . . . for an employee who has a substantial record of employment that is largely or totally unblemished by significant disciplinary infractions . . .
> . . . [T]hat is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when . . . the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> [In re Hermann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30-33 (citations omitted).]

In the case of In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007), the Court decided that the principle of progressive discipline did not apply to the sanction of a police officer for sleeping on duty and, notwithstanding his unblemished record, it reversed the lower court and reinstated a removal imposed by the Board. The Court noted the factor of public-safety concerns in matters involving the discipline of correction officers and police officers, who must uphold the law and "present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." In re Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 486 (citation omitted).

In the matter of In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182 (2011), a Camden County pump-station operator was charged with falsifying records and abusing work hours, and the ALJ imposed removal. The Civil Service Commission (Commission) modified the penalty to a four-month suspension and the appellate court reversed. The Court re-examined the principle of progressive discipline. Acknowledging that progressive discipline has been bypassed where the conduct is sufficiently egregious, the Court noted that "there must be fairness and generally proportionate discipline imposed for similar offenses." In re Stallworth, supra, 208 N.J. at 193. Finding that the totality of an employee's work history, with emphasis on the "reasonably recent past," should be considered to assure proper progressive discipline, the Court modified and affirmed (as modified) the lower court and remanded the matter to the Commission for reconsideration.

Although appellant's past employment disciplinary record is relatively short for an employee of nineteen years, he has been disciplined five times since 2010 and has received one commendation in that same time period.

The OAL, Merit System Board, and Appellate Division have consistently maintained that removal is the appropriate penalty for a corrections employee who falsifies a document related to employment. See Warfield v. New Jersey State Prison, OAL Dkt. No. CSV2706-04, at 1-12 (decided September 21, 2005), available a thttp://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal. (Where the OAL determined that removal was the appropriate discipline for a corrections officer who misrepresented the existence of a wife and child on a benefit application).

For example, in Carter v. South Woods State Prison, OAL Dkt. No. CSV6415-00, (Decided September 11, 2003), the OAL assessed a six-month suspension against Officer Carter, who falsified his application by omitting a prior offense that would have disqualified him from employment. The DOC filed exceptions, and the Merit System Board (MSB) determined that, given the blatant nature of Carter's falsification, removal was the appropriate discipline. Carter appealed, and the appellate division affirmed the board's determination, concluding that Carter's arguments were meritless and did not warrant discussion in a written opinion. See In re Carter, No. A-2599-03T2 (App. Div.

March 2, 2005) (slip op. at 4). The Supreme Court denied certification. In re Carter, 184 N.J. 211, 876 A.2d 284 (2005).

Here, appellant falsified his 2015 reapplication for employment by failing to disclose five separate incidents in which he had been charged or convicted of a violation of the law. He signed an acknowledgment certifying that the information on the application was complete and accurate to the best of his knowledge and acknowledgeged that any misleading, withheld or incorrect information may be cause for his immediate termination of employment. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's action in removing the appellant from his position was justified.

DECISION AND ORDER

The appointing authority has proven by a preponderance of credible evidence the charges against appellant with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) Conduct Unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) Other Sufficient Cause, and Human Resources Bulletin (HRB) 84-17 (as amended): C8 Flasification: Intentional misstatement of material fact in conection with work, employment application, attendance, or in any record, report, investigation and I ORDER that these charges be and are hereby SUSTAINED. Furthermore, I ORDER that the penalty of removal is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

Officer Kelly has never actually served the suspension days. We knew he intended to appeal the suspension.

I hope this clears up the concern about a Gap. Again, Officer Kelly has not served no days of suspension.

In short, the leave time he is forfeiting is a reimbursement.

Mr. Rosenberg and Mr. Greitz:

I am the Assistant Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Christopher Kelly indicating that the 17 working day suspension is being rescinded and the appellant will forfeit 170 work hours of future vacation and/or personal time.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, the 17 suspension days served by the appellant must be accounted for in his personnel record. For example, will those 17 days be considered an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else. Without clarification, the settlement cannot be acknowledged by the Commission.

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Matthew Kurland, Judiciary	:	FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION
CSC Docket No. 2016-3099 OAL Docket No. CSV 4006-16	:

ISSUED: FEB 24 2017 (WR)

The appeal of Matthew Kurland, a Judiciary Clerk 3 with the Judiciary, Somerset/Hunterdon/Warren Vicinage, of his removal, effective February 22, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kimberly Moss (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on December 12, 2016, modifying the removal to a four-month suspension. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the attached ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on February 8, 2017, accepted and adopted the findings of fact but did not adopt the ALJ's recommendation to modify the removal to a four-month suspension. Rather, the Commission upheld the removal.

DISCUSSION

The appointing authority issued the appellant a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) removing him, effective February 22, 2016, on charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty and violation of Judiciary policies and directives regarding jury service. Specifically, the appointing authority alleged that on August 3, 2015, the appellant reported for jury duty from 11:00 a.m. until 11:30 a.m. and failed to follow its procedures regarding jury duty by not contacting his supervisor after he was released with instructions on what to do. It further asserted that he was untruthful about his whereabouts after he was released and did not report back to work. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing as a contested case.

In the initial decision, the ALJ set forth the testimony of the witnesses, including, in part, Christine Murzdeck, the Jury Manager for Hunterdon County; Bonnie Russo, an Administrative Supervisor for the Judiciary in Somerset County; and Carolyn Shefsky, the Finance Division Manager of the Vicinage. Murzdeck testified that when a Judiciary employee is summoned for jury duty, he must inform the supervisor that he was excused and ask for instructions on whether he should return to work. Russo, the appellant's immediate supervisor, testified that the appellant was entrusted with public monies received from payments such as child support fees and that integrity was important to the appellant's job because if mistakes are made and not acknowledged, a person's civil rights could be violated. She stated that the appellant acknowledged receipt of the Judiciary's jury duty policy annually in 2012, 2013 and 2014 and it requires an employee to notify his supervisor of the time he was required to be present and when he was released from jury duty. She stated that employees ordinarily return to work after being excused from jury duty before 3:30 p.m. Russo testified that she received a voicemail from the appellant at 8:06 a.m. on August 3, 2015, informing her that he had reported for jury duty and would call later. However, he did not contact her the rest of the day. The following day she asked the appellant about his jury service. He initially told her that he was there all day, but later said that his jury service lasted from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., failing to tell her that he was actually released at 11:30 a.m. Russo further testified that the appellant told her that he did not return because he did not have a tie and by the time he got one, it was 1:30 p.m. However, the dress code does not mandate that the appellant wear a tie. Further, the appellant told her that he tried to call her, but there was no answer and no voicemail. She stated that when she is unable to answer a call, the call is forwarded to another person, and if that call is unanswered, it goes to her voicemail. Russo testified that the only voicemail she received from the appellant that day was the message that he left in the morning. Shefsky testified that Judiciary employees, such as the appellant, must possess honesty and integrity as they are responsible for processing money. She also testified that at a meeting with the appellant on September 15, 2015, he stated that he was released from jury duty at 12:30 p.m., but then had car trouble so he went home but he did not contact his supervisor.

The appellant testified that he reported for jury duty on August 3, 2015 from 11:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and tried to contact his supervisor after he was released, but the call bounced and nobody answered and the voicemail did not pick up. He stated that after he was released, he had car trouble and went home and did not inform his supervisor that he did not have to report until 11:00 a.m. The appellant did not remember meeting with Shefsky on September 15, 2015 and telling her he went home after he was released because he had car trouble. Finally, he testified that he did not review the jury service policy prior to reporting for jury duty, but did acknowledge he received it. The ALJ found the testimony of Murzdeck, Russo and Shefsky credible and the appellant's testimony not credible. Based on the foregoing, the ALJ determined that the appointing authority's jury policy requires an employee to contact his supervisor after being released from jury duty. The ALJ found that the appellant was aware of the jury duty policy, but failed to contact his supervisor after being released and instead went home. Finally, the ALJ found that the appellant's duties included collecting payment for child support, fines, filing fees, bail and restitution and that Somerset collected five million dollars in such payments in 2015. As a result, the ALJ upheld all of the charges against the appellant. Observing that the appellant's prior discipline consisted of a written reprimand in 2014, and a four and six working day suspensions in 2015, the ALJ recommended modifying the removal to a four-month suspension.

In its exceptions, the appointing authority argues that the concept of progressive discipline is not appropriate in this matter as the appellant's conduct was sufficiently egregious to justify his removal. In this regard, the appointing authority asserts that the appellant's breach of trust warrants his removal and the four-month suspension imposed by the ALJ fails to account for the grave effect that the appellant's dishonesty has on the Judiciary. It contends that the appellant's position requires absolute honesty and integrity. In reply, the appellant argues that the ALJ correctly imposed a four-month suspension because, while his conduct was improper, his removal was not warranted given his lack of a significant disciplinary record.

Upon its de novo review of the record, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's finding of facts as contained in the initial decision and her upholding of the charges against the appellant. In this regard, there is no dispute that the appellant was required to contact his supervisor after he was released from jury duty, failed to do so and was untruthful about the reasons why he did not return to work.

With regard to the penalty, the Commission's review is de novo. Although the Commission applies the concept of progressive discipline in determining the level and propriety of penalties, an individual's prior disciplinary history may be outweighed if the infraction at issue is of a serious nature. Henry v. Rahway, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980). It is settled that the principle of progressive discipline is not "a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question." See Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). In the instant matter, the appellant's removal from employment is appropriate regardless of his prior disciplinary history. Nevertheless, the Commission notes its concern with the appellant's prior disciplinary history due to its relative proximity in time to the events underlying the present matter. The record reflects that the appellant was issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) on October 10, 2015 for the events underlying this matter and received the FNDA on February 22, 2016. Regarding his six working day suspension for an incident that occurred on February 26, 2015, he received a PNDA on June 6, 2015, and a FNDA on July 10, 2015.[1] The fact that the appellant's conduct on August 3, 2015 occurred only a few weeks after receiving his six working day suspension demonstrates his inability to control his behavior and a blatant disregard for the appointing authority's procedures.

Moreover, the record is clear that the appellant lied to his employer multiple times. He lied to his supervisor that he was at jury duty all day, but later told her that he served only from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. However, the record demonstrates that he was released from jury duty at 11:30 a.m. The appellant further lied when he told Russo that he did not return to work because he was not wearing a tie, but told Shefsky at the September 15, 2015 meeting that he did not return to work because he was having car trouble. Finally, the appellant did not call his supervisor after he was released from jury duty and lied when he told his employer that he had called in after being released. The appellant's dishonesty, coupled with the fact that he did not report for work when it appears that he otherwise should have, is by itself troubling. More importantly, the appellant's position is one of trust, as it includes receiving payment monies where even an honest mistake could result in serious consequences. The appellant's dishonesty breached this trust and renders him unfit for his position. Accordingly, the foregoing circumstances provide a sufficient basis to uphold the removal.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission, therefore, affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Matthew Kurland.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

IN THE MATTER OF MATTHEW KURLAND, SUPERIOR COURT OF NEW JERSEY SOMERSET/ HUNTERDON/ WARREN VICINAGE,

Francine Ehert, Union Representative appearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(b)(2) on behalf of appellant

Susanna J. Morris, Esq., for Respondent, (New Jersey Courts)

BEFORE KIMBERLY A. MOSS, ALJ:

Record Closed: November 21, 2016 Decided: December 12, 2016

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant, Matthew Kurland (Kurland or appellant), appeals his removal by respondent, Superior Court of New Jersey Somerset/Hunterdon/Warren Vicinage (Somerset or respondent), on charges of conduct unbecoming an employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause, violation of judiciary policies and directives of jury service by the New Jersey Judiciary. At issue is whether Kurland engaged in the alleged conduct, and, if so, whether it constitutes conduct unbecoming an employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause violation of judiciary policies and directives of jury service by the New Jersey Judiciary that warrants removal.

On October 20, 2016, Somerset served Kurland with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. A departmental hearing was held on January 7, 2016. A Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated February 22, 2016, sustaining charges of conduct unbecoming an employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause violation of judiciary policies and directives of jury service by the New Jersey Judiciary.

Following Kurland's appeal to the Civil Service Commission the matter was transmitted to Office of Administrative Law (OAL). The appeal was filed with the OAL on March 14, 2016. A hearing was held on October 25, 2016. Respondent's closing brief was received on November 18, 2016. Appellant's closing brief was received on November 21, 2016, at which time the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

I FIND the following stipulated FACTS:

1. Matthew Kurland was hired on July 16, 2012, by the State of New Jersey Judiciary, Somerset, Hunterdon, Warren Vicinage, as a Judiciary Clerk 3, and was assigned to the Finance Division.
2. As of August 3, 2015, Bonnie Russo, an Administrative Supervisor 1 was Mr. Kurland's direct Supervisor.
3. The Hunterdon Vicinage issued a Juror Summons to Mr. Kurland for August 3, 2015.
4. At 8:06 a.m., on August 3, 2015, Mr. Kurland telephoned Mr. Russo, and left a voice message advising that he had been selected for jury duty.

TESTIMONY

Christine Murzdeck

Christine Murzdeck is employed by the New Jersey State Judiciary as the Jury manager for Hunterdon County. Her job includes creating jury pools, summoned jurors qualifying jurors among other duties. A jury summons was sent to Kurland notifying him to report for jury duty on August 3, 2015. The notice states to call prior to the date of appearance. Kurland was instructed to report for jury duty on August 3, 2015 at 11:00 a.m. Kurland reported for jury duty at 10:44 a.m. The jurors were dismissed at 11:30 a.m. on August 3, 2015. When the jurors are released the time system automatically list the time released as 4:00 p.m.

When a judiciary employee is excused from jury duty, they must contact their supervisor to inform the supervisor that they were excused and ask for instructions whether they should come back to work.

Bonnie Russo

Bonnie Russo (Russo) works for the New Jersey State Judiciary in Somerset in the finance central fee office as the Administrative Supervisor. She supervised six employees. They are entrusted with public monies received from payments such as child support and fees. The payments are reconciled and processed and the money is deposited. Her supervisor is Cathy Tauriello (Tauriello). The vicinage division manager is Caroline Shefsky (Shefsky). Somerset County is in vicinage thirteen along with Hunterdon and Warren Counties. Judiciary Clerk 3's are the majority of the employees she supervises. The work hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Kurland was one of the people Russo supervised. She began supervising Kurland in August 2014 at that time she was the Acting Administrative Supervisor. She prepared Kurland's annual performance advisory in 2015. The expectations for his performance were: responsibility, time management, customer service, communication, initiative, job knowledge, integrity and organization. Integrity was important because if mistakes are made and not acknowledged a person's civil right could be violated. For example, a bail payment not being acknowledged could lead to someone staying in jail. If a mistake is made it must be brought to Russo's attention as soon as possible. Russo went over the performance advisory with Kurland and he was given a copy. Kurland did not ask any questions regarding the performance advisory.

The Judiciary has a jury duty policy (R-8). The jury policy is acknowledged by employees annually. Kurland acknowledged receipt of the jury policy in 2012, 2013 and 2014. The jury policy is not discussed at orientation. The policy requires the employee to bring the summons to his supervisor upon receipt and notify the supervisor if they have to report to jury duty. The employee has to notify the supervisor of the time they are required to be present and when they are released. Ordinarily employees return to work after being excused from jury duty before 3:30 p.m.

In June 2015 Kurland informed Russo that he had jury duty in August 2015. Russo made the time keeper, Barbara Bolick (Bolick) aware of Kurland's jury duty. She did not discuss the jury duty policy with Kurland at that time. On July 30, 2015, Kurland stated that he would hang out at the Hunterdon County central office until he was selected for a trial. Russo told Kurland that employees were not allowed to work while on jury duty. She did not review the other jury duty requirements with Kurland at that time because she believed that he knew the jury duty requirements and he stated that he would call her the morning of August 3, 2015.

On August 3, 2015, Russo received a voicemail from Kurland stating that he had to go in for jury duty and he would call later. The message was left at 8:06 a.m. Russo contacted Bolick to inform her that Kurland was called in for jury duty. Kurland did not contact Russo for the rest of that day. On August 4, 2015, Kurland provided her with a jury service letter. Russo forwarded the letter to Bolick, who requested the exact time of Kurland's jury service. Russo asked Kurland about his jury service. Initially he said he was there all day. Then he said his jury service began at 11:00 a.m. He later stated that his jury service was from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. He stated that he did not return to work because he was not dressed appropriately because he did not have a tie, although the dress code is business casual. There would not have been any problem with Kurland coming into work without a tie after his jury duty concluded. He stated that by the time he went to get the tie it was 1:30 p.m. Kurland did not tell Russo that he was released from jury duty at 11:30 a.m. Kurland stated that he tried to call Russo but there was no answer or voicemail. When Russo is away from her desk her calls go to another person in her department. If that person does not answer, the calls go to Russo's voicemail. Russo did not receive any messages that Kurland called her on August 3, 2015 other than the message that was left at 8:06 a.m. stating that he had to go in for jury duty and he would call later. After this conversation Russo became concerned that Kurland's was not being honest and forthright. She contacted Cathy Toriello regarding her concerns with Kurland's honesty.

Rachel Morejon

Rachel Morejon is employed by the New Jersey State Judiciary as the Human Resources (HR) division manager for vicinage thirteen. When a Judiciary employee has jury duty, a person in the HR division does the timekeeping in the ECATS system for the employee.

After an employee serves jury duty, he notifies HR. HR then asks how many hours of jury duty did the employee serve. HR would have to unlock ECATS to allow an employee to put in his jury service hours as opposed to HR putting in his jury service hours.

Carolyn Shefsky

Shefsky is the Finance Division Manager of the thirteenth Vicinage of New Jersey Superior Court. The financial division is responsible for all of the finances in the vicinage. In the Somerset office there were 31,000 transactions in 2015 covering payments for child support, bail, fines, filing fees and restitution. Somerset collected five million dollars in 2015. The Judiciary Clerk 3's (JC3) collect the monies at the payment window. The JC3's must have honesty integrity and accuracy. If the JC3 makes a mistake, he must advise the supervisor.

Shefsky was advised on August 4, 2015 that Kurland had called in on August 3, 2015 to advise Russo that he had to serve jury duty that day. He called in the morning. He did not call again on August 3, 2015. He came to work on August 4, 2015. She learned that Kurland initially tried to give the impression that he had jury duty all day. Kurland did not follow the jury duty policy. Shefsky was concerned that Kurland tried to deceive Russo and he did not follow the Judiciary jury duty policy. Kurland was told that the matter was being investigated on September 15, 2015 in a meeting with Taurillo, Shefsky, Kurland and Kurland's union representative. At that meeting Kurland stated that he called his supervisor to tell her that he had jury duty. He reported for jury duty at 11:00 a.m. and was released at 12:30 p.m. He stated that he had car trouble and went home. He stated that he was not aware of the jury duty policy. He did not call his supervisor after he was released from jury duty.

After the meeting Shefsky believed that Kurland was not truthful. She recommended immediate discipline. A notice of immediate suspension was personally given to Kurland on October 16, 2015. Kurland's immediate suspension was upheld by the trial court administrator.

Matthew Kurland

Kurland is a JC3 in vicinage thirteen. He has collected funds for Somerset County vicinage for the past three years. He received a notice to report for jury duty which he gave to Russo, who had been his supervisor for fourteen months. Russo did not review the Judiciary jury duty policy with him at that time. He called Hunterdon County jury control to find out if he had to report for jury duty on August 3, 2015. He was informed that he had to report for jury duty. Kurland left a voice mail for Russo stating that he had to report for Judiciary jury duty. However, he did not tell her that he had to report at 11:00 a.m. At no point did he tell Russo that he might visit a colleague in Hunterdon County. He did not review the jury policy prior to reporting for jury duty, although he had acknowledged receiving the Judiciary jury duty policy.

Kurland reported for jury duty in Hunterdon County on August 3, 2015 at 11:00 a.m. He was released at 11:30 a.m. He tried to call Russo but the phone call bounced, no one answered and voice mail did not pick up the call. He had car trouble and went home.

On August 4, 2015, Kurland reported for work. He gave Russo the jury service paperwork. Two hours later Russo asked him about the actual hours her served of jury duty. He stated that he was there from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., this included travel time. He told Russo that he did not have a tie with him and that is why he did not go back to work. On his previous jobs he did not have to report back to work after being released from jury duty. Kurland does not remember the September 15, 2015 meeting with Shesky, Taurilleo, himself and his union representative. He does not remember telling Shefsky that he had car trouble and that is why he did not return to work.

Kurland had received the Judiciary jury duty policy in 2012, 2013 and 2014. He received the Notice for jury duty in June 2015. He never reviewed the Judiciary jury duty policy prior to serving jury duty on August 3, 2015 although it was available on his computer.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In light of the contradictory testimony presented by respondent's witnesses and appellant, the resolution of the charges against Kurland requires that I make credibility determinations with regard to the critical facts. The choice of accepting or rejecting the witness's testimony or credibility rests with the finder of facts. Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J. Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, for testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 60 N.J. 546 (1974); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness even though not contradicted when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521-522 (1950); see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

Having had an opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND Murzdeck, Russo, Morejon and Shefsky to be credible. Murzdeck and Morejon concisely testified as to jury duty procedure for Judicial employees. Russo credibility testified that Kurland gave her different accounts of his jury service and did not call her after he was released from jury service. Shefsky was clear regarding the meeting that took place between her Taurillo, Kurland and his representative on September 15, 2015.

I do not find Kurland to be credible. His testimony regarding calling Russo after he was released from jury duty is contradicted by Russo's testimony. In addition he stated that he had car trouble but he does not remember telling this to Shefsky. He does not remember meeting with Shefsky, Taurillo and his union representative. He never reviewed the Judiciary jury duty policy although he acknowledged receiving it on three occasions and it was available on his computer.

Having reviewed the testimony and evidence and credibility of the witnesses, I make the following additional FINDINGS of FACTS.

Kurland received the Judiciary jury duty policy in 2012, 2013 and 2014. Kurland did not inform Somerset that he was scheduled to appear for jury duty at 11:00 a.m. on August 3, 2015. He left a message stating that he had to report for jury duty. Once he was released from jury duty at 11:30 a.m. on August 3, 2015, he did not contact Russo or anyone at Somerset. Instead, he went home. The Judiciary jury duty policy for Judiciary employees states that when an employee is excused from jury duty they must contact their supervisor and ask for instructions as to whether they should come back to work.

On August 4, 2015, Kurland provided Russo with a jury service letter which Russo forwarded to Bolick. Bolick requested that Russo determine the exact time of Russo's jury service. Russo asked Kurland later that day what was the exact time of his jury service . He initially told her all day. He then told her he reported at 11:00 a.m. He finally told her that he had jury service from 11:00 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. He told her that he did not return to work because he was not wearing a tie. Kurland would have been allowed to work without having a tie. Russo became concerned that Kurland was not being truthful and contacted Taurillo.

On September 15, 2015, a meeting was held with Taurillo, Shefsky, Kurland and Kurland's union representative. At that meeting Kurland stated that he called his supervisor to tell her that he had jury duty. He reported for jury duty at 11:00 a.m. and was released at 12:30 p.m. He stated that he had car trouble and went home. He stated that he was not aware of the Judiciary jury duty policy. Kurland did not call his supervisor after he was released from jury duty.

The job duties of a JC3 in Somerset included collecting money at the payment window. The payments are for child support, bail, fines filing fees and restitution. Somerset collected five million dollars in 2015.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause violation of judiciary policies and directives of jury service by the New Jersey Judiciary are SUSTAINED.

The purpose of the Civil Service Act is to remove public employment from political control, partisanship, and personal favoritism, as well as to maintain stability and continuity. Connors v. Bayonne, 36 N.J. Super. 390 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 19 N.J. 362 (1955). The appointing authority has the burden of proof in major disciplinary actions. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. The standard is by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Major discipline includes removal or fine or suspension for more than five working days. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2. Employees may be disciplined for insubordination, neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, among other things. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. An employee may be removed for egregious conduct without regard to progressive discipline. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Otherwise, progressive discipline would apply. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

Hearings at the OAL are de novo. Ensslin v. Twp. of N. Bergen, 275 N.J. Super. 352 (App. Div. 1994), certif. denied, 142 N.J. 446 (1995).

"Unbecoming conduct" is broadly defined as any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the governmental unit or which has a tendency to destroy public respect and confidences in the delivery of governmental services. The conduct need not be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior, which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye. In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure to perform a duty as well as negligence. Generally, the term "neglect" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div 1977). "Duty" signifies conformance to "the legal standard of reasonable conduct in the light of the apparent risk." Wytupeck v. Camden, 25 N.J. 450, 461 (1957). Neglect of duty can arise from omission to perform a required duty as well as from misconduct or misdoing. Cf. State v. Dunphy, 19 N.J. 531, 534 (1955). Although the term "neglect of duty" is not defined in the New Jersey Administrative Code, the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee has neglected to perform and act as required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge. Avanti v. Dep't of Military and Veterans Affairs, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 564; Ruggiero v. Jackson Twp. Dep't of Law and Safety, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 214.

In this matter the charges against Kurland are merged. He acknowledged receipt of the Judiciary jury duty policy on three different occasions in 2012, 2013 and 2014. He failed to inform Russo that he was required to report to jury duty at 11:00 a.m. He initially told Russo on August 4, 2014 that his jury duty service was all day. When pressed he stated that he reported at 11:00 a.m. When further pressed he stated that his jury duty service ended at 12:30 p.m. when it actually ended at 11:30 a.m. He did not contact Russo when his jury service ended, and did not return to work that day. The Judiciary jury duty service policy states that once an employee is released from jury duty service, they are to contact their supervisor to determine whether they should report back to work. Kurland did not follow the policy.

When determining the appropriate penalty to be imposed, the appointing authority must consider an employee's past record, including reasonably recent commendations and prior disciplinary actions. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522–24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a); N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.4. A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of this concept is the nature, number and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions evaluated by progressively increasing penalties. It underscores the philosophy that an appointing authority has a responsibility to encourage the development of employee potential.

Some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007), citing Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197–98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense); see also In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007) (DYFS worker who snapped lighter in front of five-year-old):

> . . . judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980).

In this case Kurland's conduct was conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause violation of the jury duty policy and he initially attempted to cover up the violation. During his conversation with Russo on August 4, 2015, he eventually told her close to the accurate hours of his jury service.

Kurland's prior disciplines include a written reprimand, in December 2014, for inefficiency and failure to perform and neglect of duty. A four-day suspension in May 2015, for inefficiency, failure to perform, neglect of duty; and other sufficient cause – violation of the Code of Conduct for Judiciary Employees, Canon 1B – Performance of Duties. A six-day suspension in July 2015, for conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause – violation of the Code of Conduct for Judiciary Employees, Canon 1B, and Violation of the Judiciary's Workplace Violence Policy.

Removal is not an appropriate discipline in this matter. Although Kurland's prior disciplines show a pattern of actions requiring discipline from December 2014 to July 2015 the longest suspension he received is a six day suspension. In this instance, the appropriate discipline for Kurland is a four month suspension.

Under the circumstances, major discipline is appropriate; I CONCLUDE that the penalty of removal is not appropriate and modify the penalty to a four month suspension.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and applicable law, it is hereby ORDERED that the determination of respondent to remove appellant, Matthew Kurland from employment is REVERSED. It is further ORDERED that Kurland be suspended for four months and be reinstated to his position as a JC3 and awarded back pay. The amount of back pay shall be mitigated in accordance with guidelines set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10(d)(3).

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, MERIT SYSTEM PRACTICES AND LABOR RELATIONS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. In the Matter of Melissa Walker
City of Hoboken,
Department of Transportation and

CSC DKT. NO. 2016-4074
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 08262-16

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: FEB 10 2017 BW

The appeal of Melissa Walker, Parking Enforcement Officer, City of Hoboken, Department of Transportation and Parking, of her removal effective February 16, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Gail M. Cookson (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on December 16, 2016. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on February 8, 2017, accepted the recommendation of the ALJ to uphold the removal but did not uphold the recommendation to reverse the immediate suspension and award back pay.

DISCUSSION

In the initial decision, the ALJ stated that based on the appointing authority's due process violations in implementing the appellant's immediate suspension, the appellant should receive back pay for the period of that suspension, namely from February 16, 2016 through May 9, 2016. The Commission does not agree. Initially, the Commission notes that challenges to procedural deficiencies at the departmental level are most appropriately dealt with via a petition for interim relief at the time of the alleged violations pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.2. The Commission has no record of any such petition by the appellant in this matter.

Moreover, it is well settled that procedural deficiencies at the departmental level which are not significantly prejudicial to an appellant are deemed cured through the de novo hearing received at the Office of Administrative Law. See Ensslin v. Township of North Bergen, 275 N.J. Super. 352, 361 (App. Div. 1994), cert. denied, 142 N.J. 446 (1995); In re Darcy, 114 N.J. Super. 454 (App. Div. 1971). In this case, the procedural deficiencies cannot be considered significantly prejudicial as the appellant has had a full opportunity to appeal the discipline taken and challenge her inappropriate actions at her de novo hearing. Accordingly, the Commission does not adopt that portion of the ALJ's decision awarding back pay to the appellant for the period of the immediate suspension. However, the appointing authority is cautioned to meticulously follow the disciplinary procedures outlined in N.J.A.C. 4A:2, et seq. in the future.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission, therefore, affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Melissa Walker. Additionally, the Commission does not award the appellant any back pay for the period of her immediate suspension.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO.CSV 08262-16
AGENCY REF. NO. 2016-4074

IN THE MATTER OF MELISSA WALKER, CITY OF HOBOKEN, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION & PARKING.

Merick H. Limsky, Esq., for appellant Melissa Walker (Limsky Mitolo, attorneys)

Patricia C. Melia, Esq., for respondent City of Hoboken (Weiner Lesniak, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 18, 2016 Decided: December 16, 2016

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Melissa Walker (appellant) appeals from the disciplinary action taken by her employer the City of Hoboken Department of Transportation and Parking (City) to remove her from her position as a Parking Enforcement Officer (PEO) on charges of failure to perform her duties in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1); insubordination in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2); neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); and other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11). The charges relate directly or indirectly to the responsibility of a PEO to notify a supervisor if, while on the job, twenty minutes passes without the PEO being able to issue a parking ticket (Twenty Minute Policy). Appellant denies the charges and claims that she did her job, that she was given a neighborhood in which it was difficult to find parking violators, and that when she called in consistent with policy, supervisors were not available.

Petitioner appealed her termination under cover of May 13, 2016. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), on June 1, 2016, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On June 16, 2016, I held a case management conference telephonically with the parties in which discovery and hearing dates were discussed.

The plenary hearings were held on October 6 and 18, 2016. Post-hearing briefs were permitted and the record closed on November 18, 2016, with receipt of the written closing statements as the final submissions.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon due consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

Robert Orsini has been employed by the City for fourteen years, including his current position as a PEO Supervisor which he assumed after being a PEO. The City employs eighteen PEOs over whom he shares responsibility with Hector Mojito. Together, they assign the routes and check on the productivity of the PEOs. Orsini stated that he drives around the City approximately once per month in order to observe the PEOs and garner more information on productivity issues. He also observes construction and other impacts to the City's parking situation, which he generally described as over-crowded. In addition to meter violations, it is common in the City for cars to be parked in cross-walks, loading zones and in front of fire hydrants, as well as double-parked.

Orsini remarked that in the City, it was practically unheard of for a PEO to go twenty (20) minutes without finding a parking violation, with the possible exception of areas where construction was being undertaken. There was no quota system in place mandating the writing of parking tickets for PEOs but there was a policy that a PEO who goes more than twenty minutes without finding a parking violation is to contact their supervisor. From there, it is up to the supervisor to decide whether to relocate the PEO or provide other suggestions. This Twenty Minute Policy was acknowledged as only a verbal policy until May 23, 2014, after which it was reduced to writing and acknowledged by appellant and all other PEOs. Orsini also explained that PEOs each received a meal break as part of the bargaining agreement and the City Handbook but that otherwise PEOs were expected to call in a "10-7" or "taking a 15" for permission to take a short break.

On February 2, 2016, Orsini was riding in his truck on Washington Street in a section that had been assigned to appellant. He stated that he could not find her on either side of her assigned route. He said that he then entered the McDonald's on Washington and Third Streets where he found appellant sitting in the back. Walker advised him that she had texted Mojito about the lack of violations she found so far that morning, consistent with the Twenty Minute Policy, which Orsini acknowledged would be consistent with that policy. Nevertheless, she had not called in to request a break and there were sure to be plenty of those other types of parking violations on her route if she looked for them.

One of the responsibilities of the PEO supervisors is to review the parking ticket reports for each PEO. Any time a PEO writes up a violation, it is recorded from their ticket instrument electronically to the City. In reviewing the reports from the prior day, Orsini or Mojito would look for any large gaps between tickets. He explained how to read the automated Parking Authority Ticketing System that produces daily Detailed Statistics by Officer Reports. These itemized the large gaps of time when appellant wrote no tickets on her route. For example, on February 2, 2016, Orsini noted that the report indicated that appellant wrote zero (0) tickets between the start of her shift at 9:00 a.m. and 11:03 a.m. Yet, she wrote seven (7) tickets between 11:03 a.m. and 11:44 a.m. that day. Moreover, appellant issued ten (10) and fourteen (14) tickets on February 5 and 6 between 9 and 11 respectively, consistent with Orsini's comment that the City has insufficient parking capacity and that it is hard not to find a parking violation and contrary to appellant's testimony that meters are unexpired first thing in the morning.

Additional large gaps between tickets issued by appellant were revealed on those Detailed Statistics reports. I am omitting any of the gaps that were minor violations of the Twenty Minute Policy or accepted as her lunch break. Included, but not limited to, the violations were –

February 2[1]	1:00 – 2:53	1 hour, 53 minutes
	3:20 – 4:55	1 hour, 25 minutes
February 3	10:13 – 12:09	1 hours, 56 minutes
	1:26 – 4:50	3 hour, 24 minutes
February 5	10:04 – 11:05	1 hour, 1 minute
	11:11 – 1:07	0 hour, 56 minutes (net lunch)
	1:16 – 2:40	1 hour, 24 minutes
	3:16 – 4:56	1 hour, 40 minutes
February 6	9:49 – 11:54	2 hours, 5 minutes
	1:25 – 4:34	3 hours, 9 minutes

Orsini confirmed even on cross-examination that a PEO can always reach a dispatcher or the customer service desk if s/he cannot reach a supervisor to report a lack of violations in the area. The Supervisors and PEOs can communicate through City-issued hand-held, two-way radios, by calling dispatch or the office, or by calling or texting the supervisor's cell phones, which numbers the PEOs are given. He clarified that the review of the electronic violation reports was one of his regular duties as the morning supervisor.

[1] There is a gap of 76 minutes noted between 11:44 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. but I am assuming that was appellant's lunch time. Similarly, on February 6, appellant had an 82 minute gap that included her lunch hour. It was also ambiguous as to how respondent allowed for a PEO walking back to office to punch in and out for lunch. Therefore I will not find that these two gaps were not violations of the Twenty Minute Policy.

On cross-examination, however, Orsini also seemed confused about whether PEOs were entitled to a fifteen-minute break or whether they had to ask permission for such. He agreed that there was no requirement for a PEO to ask a supervisor for permission to stop in a store for a bottle of water or other quick break. Orsini also admitted that he had been told by appellant that she was subject to anxiety attacks but she had never asked for any accommodation as a result of that or any other condition. With respect to McDonald's, he stated that there had been a prior occasion when he was eating there and appellant later came in and sat down with him but that was not what happened on February 2.

Because the allegations herein all concern just one week, Orsini was asked on cross-examination as to appellant's job performance for the prior eight months after she returned from a suspension. He stated that her performance was fine. He acknowledged that he did not sit down with her or ask her why this particular week turned out to be problematic.

Hector Mojica also testified for the City. He is also a PEO Supervisor, having served in that capacity for the last five years after being a PEO for approximately twelve years. He also described the supervisory responsibilities as including roll call, uniforms, route assignments and productivity reports. In dividing those responsibilities, Mojica stated that Orsini currently is more on the outside overseeing the routes and also handles the productivity reports. Mojica addresses larger issues and projects such as temporary street closings and parking limitations for construction, paving, parades and other similar obstructions.

Mojica also explained the call-in process for a PEO who needs to report under the Twenty Minute Policy and the break protocols. To his knowledge, appellant had not been experiencing productivity issues and violations of the Twenty Minute Policy prior to this week in February.[2] On cross-examination, Mojica agreed that appellant's text to him on the morning of February 2 was a proper means of complying with the Policy. He did not follow up with appellant beyond his reply text of "OK," nor did he pass along the communication to Orsini. Mojica was of the opinion that appellant should have known to look for violations beyond expired meters without any reminders from one of the supervisors. Mojica reiterated that a "10-7" text or call was required before a PEO could take a short break pursuant to written and verbal protocols.

[2] On the record, I sustained an objection to the introduction through Mojica by the City of additional Detailed Ticket Statistics on appellant's work performance between May 2015 and February 2016 on several grounds. It had not been produced prior to the first hearing date; it was not relevant to the specification of charges; it had not been provided to appellant's counsel; and it was intended to try to rehabilitate the City's own witness.

Appellant testified on her own behalf at this hearing. She has been a PEO with the City for five years. As established on the record, appellant was on a suspension previously for violations of the Twenty Minute Policy and returned to work in May 2015. Appellant did not contest the applicability of the Twenty Minute Policy but stated that she would always contact one of the supervisors when she could not locate violations but that she either did not get an answer or she would be advised to just "stay on your route." The supervisors would never come out to the route to suggest modifications.

With respect to the allegation that Orsini found her in the back of the McDonald's on February 2, appellant explained that she went in there to get a cup of water because she was feeling light-headed. She had completed her route initially after the start of her shift at 9:00 a.m. and had trouble finding any meters that were not paid up. Appellant described her route that day as the east side only of Washington Street between Observer and 8th streets. And yet, appellant said that she stopped when she got to 2nd Street.[3] She recalled that Orsini came in, ordered food and sat himself down. She then joined him. She denied being in the back of the McDonald's when he arrived.

Appellant testified that for the other gaps in productivity specified in these charges that she always contacted or attempted to contact a supervisor but that they are either unavailable or unhelpful. She also disagreed that the break practice is to always call in a "10-7." Appellant asserted that all PEOs will just jump off their routes for a bathroom or to buy water without calling it in each time.

[3] I will take judicial notice of the fact that, as I placed on the oral record at the hearing, the McDonald's is on the corner of Washington and 3rd Street.

On February 16, 2016, appellant reported for and completed her normal shift. As she was punching out, Orsini told her that she was not to return to work and that Director Morgan wanted her suspended. She thinks she got a paper copy of the original Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) that day. She could not recall how she received the Amended PNDA.

On cross examination, appellant explained that the police officers often ticketed double-parked cars before the PEOs could get to them. She took photos of their tickets but no longer has the same cell phone with which she took them. Sometimes, she would also be competing with another PEO on the same routes. Appellant said that it was possible that she had been assigned both sides of Washington Street that day. It was hard to recall as it was many months ago and her route often changed. Once again, she denied sitting in McDonald's eating any food. She was not feeling well and the agency has proof on file that she is on some anti-anxiety medications.

I gave appellant every opportunity through my own questioning to explain whether she had personal circumstances that particular week in February 2016 that would mitigate her lack of job productivity. Appellant insisted that she did not take time out of her shift to go home or to her mother's house in order to check in on her children or to take a nap. I FIND that appellant was not a credible witness. She did not produce any corroborating witnesses or documentary records such as cell phone messages or call history to buttress her statements that she constantly reported gaps in her productivity along her route or that all the meters were paid up. Clearly, her own productivity statistics indicates that she finds plenty of violations when she is attending to her route.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6, governs a public employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div.

1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). Governmental employers also have delineated rights and obligations. The Act sets forth that it is State policy to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials so they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b).

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against her and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. See Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). In this matter, the City bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

For evidence to be credible it must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Therefore, the tribunal must "decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). For reasonable probability to exist, the evidence must be such as to "generate belief that the tendered hypothesis is in all human likelihood the fact." Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959) (citation omitted). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Credibility, or, more specifically, credible testimony, in turn, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself, as well. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554-55 (1954).

Based upon the facts set forth above, I FIND that the respondent's witnesses were more credible and their testimony was entitled to more weight than the denials of appellant, at least with respect to her job duties, her understanding of those duties, and the productivity of her assignment. Appellant's protestations that her assignment route and blocks made it difficult for her to find parking violations were not credible. Setting aside the very generic statement of respondent's witnesses that one could easily find parking violations in Hoboken, what is more objectively telling is that appellant had no difficulty finding lots of parking violations on most days, or even during the portions of the days that are at issue herein. Appellant was writing up violations just minutes apart when she was in fact writing up violations. If her route was the problem because of handicapped exceptions or police officers beating her to cars double-parked, it would have been expected that her days would more consistently fall short. Instead, it was just particular, discrete periods of days that were charged based upon the objective time logs. Moreover, as demonstrated above, the gaps were very large indeed.

I CONCLUDE that appellant was not credible with her excuses for the large gaps of time when she claimed she tried to call her supervisor but would otherwise just keep walking around. The preponderance of the credible evidence demonstrates that it was more likely than not that appellant went off her route during the various large gaps. I cannot determine on the basis of the present record where she went but I also need not so determine.

Having concluded that substantial violations of the Twenty Minute Policy occurred, I must determine the proper penalty or discipline to be assessed. A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. Progressive discipline is considered to be an appropriate analysis for determining the reasonableness of the penalty. See Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 523-24. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of the concept of progressive discipline is the nature, number and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions should be addressed by progressively increasing penalties. It underscores the philosophy that an appointing authority has a responsibility to encourage the development of an employee's potential.

In addition to considering an employee's prior disciplinary history when imposing a penalty under the Act, other appropriate factors to consider include the nature of the misconduct, the nature of the employee's job, and the impact of the misconduct on the public interest. Ibid. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522-24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, or a suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a), -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.4.

In this case, I CONCLUDE that the City has supported its case for removal because of appellant's prior violation of the Twenty Minute Policy. In my own prior Initial Decision, appellant was advised:

> Subject to final agency action and any appeals, appellant should be entitled to return to and be retrained for her employment as a PEO for the City of Hoboken. Thereafter, appellant is fully forewarned that she must comply with all work policies on meals, breaks, leave time, and the Twenty Minute Policy if she wants to keep her public employment.

Nevertheless, I advised counsel to brief the issue of her suspension without pay prior to her departmental hearing and formal removal because it appeared to violate generally accepted regulatory and constitutional provisions. The United States Supreme Court in Gilbert v. Homar, 520 U.S. 924, 117 S. Ct. 1807, 138 L. Ed. 2d 120 (1997), clarified that the process due an employee faced with termination is distinguishable from the process due an employee faced with suspension without pay. Gilbert clarified that when an employee is suspended without pay, due process requirements differ because there are times when a "State must act quickly, or where it would be impractical to provide predeprivation process." 520 U.S. at 930. 117 S. Ct. at 1812, 138 L. Ed. 2d at 127. The Court in Gilbert directed that the Mathews-Eldridge balancing test be applied when determining if a pre-suspension hearing is or was necessary by looking first to "the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the Government's interest.'" 520 U.S. at 931-32, 117 S. Ct. at 1812, 138 L. Ed. 2d at 128 (quoting Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 335, 47 L. Ed. 2d 18, 96 S. Ct. 893 (1976)). Considered in that balancing test are facts such as how long the employee will go without pay before being heard; if the position the employee holds coupled with the reason for suspension requires immediate action; or whether reasonable grounds exist to support the suspension, such as, as in Gilbert, supra, a felony indictment of a police officer. Gilbert, supra, 520 U.S. at 932-36, 117 S. Ct. at 1813-15, 138 L. Ed. 2d at 128-31.

In Cleveland Bd. of Ed. v. Loudermill, 470 U.S. 532, 84 L. Ed. 2d 494, 105 S. Ct. 1487 (1985), the U.S. Supreme Court concluded that a public employee dismissible only for cause was entitled to a very limited hearing prior to his termination, to be followed by a more comprehensive post-termination hearing. Stressing that the pre-termination hearing "should be an initial check against mistaken decisions -- essentially, a determination of whether there are reasonable grounds to believe that the charges against the employee are true and support the proposed action," id., at 545-546, the Court held that pre-termination process need only include oral or written notice of the charges, an explanation of the employer's evidence, and an opportunity for the employee to tell his side of the story, id., at 546. In the course of its assessment of the governmental interest in immediate termination of a tenured employee, the Court stated that "in those situations where the employer perceives a significant hazard in keeping the employee on the job, it can avoid the problem by suspending with pay." Id., at 544-545 (emphasis added; footnote omitted). Thus, Loudermill spoke specifically to the necessity of providing the employee with some opportunity for a hearing prior to the employee's suspension without pay.

These principles are reflected in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b) where an employer is expected to determine that the employee is unfit for duty or is a hazard to any person if permitted to remain on the job, or that the immediate suspension is necessary to maintain safety, health, order or effective direction of public services, prior to suspending the employee without pay. Furthermore, the regulations and the case law stand for the proposition that the requirements of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b), such as informal notice and an opportunity to respond, must be met before an employee is suspended without pay.

Here, respondent did not even try to comply with these due process provisions. It merely issued an Amended Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action and stuck in there the words it thought would be talismanic for taking away of petitioner's rights and pay until the departmental hearing could be undertaken. The balancing test set forth above does not support this after-thought. Petitioner is a Parking Enforcement Officer; she had no quota of parking tickets she must issue; she had many weeks and months of compliance with her job duties; she has no impact on the safety or health of the City's residents; and she is not employed in a highly skilled or law enforcement position, or one with access to sensitive information. Petitioner issues tickets for parking and other non-moving street violations that provided revenues to the respondent.

ORDER

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the disciplinary action entered in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action of the City of Hoboken, Department of Transportation and Parking against appellant Melissa Walker for her termination is hereby AFFIRMED. It is further ORDERED that the immediate suspension imposed by the City of Hoboken, Department of Transportation and Parking against appellant Melissa Walker on February 18, 2016, retroactive to February 16, 2016, is hereby REVERSED and she shall be paid back pay for the period February 16, 2016, through May 9, 2016.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, MERIT SYSTEM PRACTICES AND LABOR RELATIONS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE

ISSUED: FEB 27 2017 BW

The appeal of Raymond Acevedo, Security Guard, Newark School District, removal effective October 15, 2015, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Margaret M. Monaco, who rendered her initial decision on January 26, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on February 22, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision. However, given the serious ramifications of the types of misconduct demonstrated in this matter, the Commission recommends that the appointing authority provide clear guidance and/or in-service training on proper techniques to handle such situations.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Raymond Acevedo.

Re: Raymond Acevedo

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01877-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-2349

IN THE MATTER OF RAYMOND ACEVEDO,
NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT.

Arnold Shep Cohen, Esq., for appellant Raymond Acevedo (Law Offices of Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Bernard Mercado, Associate Counsel, for respondent Newark Public School District (Charlotte Hitchcock, General Counsel, attorney)

Record Closed: October 27, 2016 Decided: January 26, 2017

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant Raymond Acevedo appeals his removal from employment as a security guard with respondent, the Newark Public School District (the District). The District took this action based upon charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause stemming from an incident that occurred on October 2, 2015, involving appellant and a seventh-grade student.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The District issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated October 14, 2015, informing appellant of the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause issued against him. Following a departmental hearing on October 21, 2015, the District issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated December 14, 2015, sustaining the charges and providing for appellant's removal from employment effective October 15, 2015. Appellant filed an appeal, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed for determination as a contested case. The hearing was held on August 8, 2016. After the conclusion of the testimony, the record remained open for the receipt of post-hearing submissions. The parties filed briefs in support of their respective positions, and the record closed upon receipt of the last submission.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

At the hearing, the District presented three witnesses: Eric Ingold, B.T., and Ginamarie Mignone. Appellant testified on his own behalf and offered testimony by Aquilla Williams. Certain facts surrounding this matter are largely undisputed. Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, I FIND the following preliminary FACTS.

Appellant has been employed by the District as a ten-month security guard since March 1997. Appellant is approximately 5' 8" tall and weighs over 200 pounds.

At the time of the incident the student involved, B.T., was twelve years of age and in the seventh grade. B.T. is approximately five feet tall and weighs approximately 100 pounds.

Eric Ingold is employed by the District as the executive director of the Office of Safety. He has been employed by the District for two and one-half years and previously worked for the Newark Police Department for approximately twenty years. His duties as executive director include overseeing the day-to-day operations of the Office of Safety, including security guards.

Ginamarie Mignone is the principal at the school in issue. Part of her duties entails supervising security staff at the school.

This matter involves an incident that occurred on October 2, 2015, between appellant and B.T. shortly before the end of the school day. Appellant and another security guard, Sean Jacobs, were working at the school on that date.

A video from a surveillance camera at the school was introduced at the hearing. (R-1.) The video, which has no audio, shows the second-floor hallway of the school on October 2, 2015. Lockers and doorways are situated on the left side of the hallway, and closer to the view of the camera is a water fountain. On the right side of hallway, from the view closest to the camera, are two doors that lead to a stairwell. The next doorway area leads into the boys' bathroom, but the bathroom door cannot be seen in the video. Other doorways are situated farther down on the left side of the hallway. Under the surveillance camera, a portion of two steps can be seen. Throughout the video students can be seen at lockers, moving about the hallway and in and out of the doors that presumably lead to classrooms.

Appellant can first be seen at approximately 2:46:36 p.m. He enters the hallway from the area under the surveillance camera. Appellant is seen interacting with a student at a locker and then walking down the hallway away from the camera. Another security guard can also be seen walking down the hallway toward the camera, interacting with students and then walking down the hallway in the other direction. The other security guard enters a doorway on the left (at approximately 2:49:24 p.m.) and appellant enters the same doorway less than five seconds later (at approximately 2:49:28 p.m.). Appellant exits the room a few minutes later (at approximately 2:51:20 p.m.) and walks down the hallway away from the camera. The other security guard exits the room less than a minute after appellant (at approximately 2:51:51 p.m.) and can be seen holding the door open. B.T. exits the room and runs down the hallway toward the camera for approximately three seconds (from approximately 2:52:02 p.m. to approximately 2:52:05 p.m.). The other security guard runs down the hallway after B.T. and approaches B.T. by the wall near the bathroom entrance. B.T.'s back is against the wall and the security guard stands in front of B.T. and blocks his path without touching B.T. with his hands. The guard appears to be talking to B.T. Appellant can be seen walking in the direction of the security guard and B.T. The security guard calmly walks with B.T. down the hallway to the area where appellant is situated. At approximately 2:52:18 p.m., appellant can be seen with his right arm around the front of B.T.'s neck and throat area. Appellant's right hand is holding onto B.T.'s shoulder. Because other students are in the area, appellant cannot be clearly seen putting B.T. in this position. Appellant walks B.T. down the hallway in this position until they reach the entrance to the bathroom. During this period, B.T. is not touching appellant's arm or body. B.T. can be seen flailing his right arm in the air while his left arm is holding a white piece of paper. At the area just outside the bathroom entrance, appellant can be seen turning around and pushing B.T. face first into the bathroom entrance while continuing to hold B.T. around the neck. Another student enters the bathroom before appellant and B.T. (at approximately 2:52:27 p.m.). B.T. and appellant enter the bathroom entrance approximately two seconds after that student (at approximately 2:52:29 p.m.), and the student exits out of the bathroom less than five seconds later (at approximately 2:52:32 p.m.). When appellant and B.T. are in the bathroom, the other security guard, who is holding a backpack and clothing, enters the entrance to the bathroom (at approximately 2:52:47 p.m.); the guard exits the bathroom less than a minute later (at approximately 2:53:07 p.m.); and the guard then stands in the doorway area of the bathroom, essentially blocking any entrance, for less than one minute (to approximately 2:53:48 p.m.). The guard then reenters the bathroom, and appellant exits the bathroom approximately one minute later (at approximately 2:54:33 p.m.), followed by the other security guard and then B.T. B.T. is no longer being held, and they all leave the area together through the doors to the stairwell.

Incidents that occur at the school between a security guard and a student must be documented by security staff in an Incident Report. Appellant authored an Incident Report (R-3) in which he described the events that occurred as follows:

> On Friday time 2:50 p.m. I . . . and Security Jacobs was call[ed] to go to Room 311 & 310. When I arrived I saw [B.T.] pushing against Jacobs and yelling out loud and was out of control so I tried to calm him down so he ran out of the class. Jacobs ran after him and caught up with him in the hallway near the boys['] bathroom. [B.T.] started to run again. I grab[bed] [B.T.] and walk[ed] him to the nearest room which was the bathroom for his own safety. Also Jacob[s] walk[ed] in the bathroom. We tried to calm him down again. [B.T.] told Jacob[s] to go get his book bag so Jacobs went to get his book bag. [B.T.] pushed me and tried[ ] to run out. I push[ed] him back and told him to calm down. At that time Security Jacobs return[ed] to the bathroom with his book bag and his sweater[;] [he] return[ed] back in one minute. We got a radio call so Jacobs step[ped] out to receive the radio call and return[ed] in the bathroom in a minute. At that time [B.T.] had calm[ed] down and we all left out of the bathroom to the main office.

After being apprised of the incident, Mignone spoke to B.T., appellant, Jacobs, and another student on Monday, October 5, 2015, and documented her interviews in a Report of Incident. (R-5.) Mignone also reviewed the videotape and contacted the Office of Institutional Abuse. The record is bereft of evidence that B.T. sustained injury as a result of the incident. Ingold testified that he saw no documentation that B.T. had been injured and Mignone observed no visible injury to B.T. when she interviewed him on October 5, 2015.

Apart from the evidence that forms the foundation of the above findings of fact, a summary of other pertinent testimony follows.

The Testimony

B.T.

B.T. testified that appellant came to his classroom when it was time to leave school; appellant indicated that B.T. had been called through the main office; and appellant "dragged" B.T. out of the classroom. He described that, while in the hallway, appellant placed him in a headlock and pulled him down the hallway to the bathroom. B.T. stated that he did not like being held in that position, which was uncomfortable, and

B.T. could not breathe. He denied that he made any threats to appellant when appellant was taking him to the bathroom. According to B.T., after appellant took him into the boys' bathroom, appellant placed B.T. against the bathroom wall and punched B.T. three times in the chest. He described appellant's action as a "medium" hit that "hurt." B.T. admitted that, after appellant hit him, B.T. hit or punched appellant back to defend himself. B.T. described that he ran after appellant when appellant was leaving the bathroom and hit appellant in the back for approximately five seconds. The other security guard entered the bathroom and told B.T. to calm down and stop hitting appellant. B.T. informed the other security guard that appellant had hit him.

Eric Ingold

Ingold testified that the use of physical force against a student is only permitted in limited circumstances and, in such cases, only the minimum amount of force needed may be used. He described the importance of security guards acting appropriately for the school environment. Ingold explained that a security guard's actions reflect the actions of all security guards and, if the image or perception of security guards is compromised, this makes the job of security personnel more difficult when having to handle situations in the future. He added that, when a security guard acts inappropriately, it has a negative effect on the school environment and the perception of security personnel.

Ingold's knowledge of the incident is based on his review of the video and reports submitted. He characterized the contact that appellant made with B.T. as an inappropriate "choke-hold." Ingold testified that a security guard is not permitted to grab a student around his/her neck or throat area, which is not safe. He further described that the video did not depict B.T. making any threats, brandishing a weapon, causing a disturbance or taking physical action that would necessitate the use of force. Ingold testified that it was also inappropriate for appellant to walk with B.T. down the hallway while keeping B.T. in the choke-hold around his neck and to take this action in the view of other students who were in the hallway at that time. He stated that under the circumstances it was inappropriate for appellant to take B.T. into the bathroom, which was out of the camera's view. Ingold testified that a security guard is not allowed to take a student into a bathroom alone, and it is not standard procedure for security to bring a student into the bathroom. He noted that there were other open areas in the hallway, such as the area under the surveillance camera, which would have been a suitable location for dialogue with the student and where the student could have been controlled. Ingold further described that it was not appropriate for appellant to push the bathroom door open with B.T. in front of the door since it exposed the student to injury if someone were walking out of the bathroom at the same time as B.T. was entering with appellant's arm around his neck. With regard to the entire series of events (e.g., the choke-hold, traveling in the hallway, bringing the student in the bathroom), Ingold testified that appellant failed to act appropriately in processing the student, and his actions violated safety procedures and protocols.

Ingold testified that appellant's Incident Report also did not match what Ingold observed on the video. The video did not depict that the student ran again as stated in appellant's report. Appellant's report further did not mention that any physical force had been used. Ingold did not consider the bathroom to be a safe place to put B.T. as stated in appellant's report. He explained that placing a student in a bathroom could be warranted in certain limited circumstances, such as an active-shooter situation.

In his opinion as the executive director of the Office of Safety, the District was justified in taking disciplinary action against appellant. He recommended discipline up to and including termination.

Ginamarie Mignone

Mignone testified that security guards are not permitted to hold a student around the neck or to strike a student. She described the importance for security guards to act in an appropriate manner for the school environment. Mignone explained that staff must model behavior that the school wants the children to portray. Staff must model respect in order to gain the students' respect and, as the school does not want students to use physical force when trying to resolve problems, it expects staff to do the same. Mignone described that when a security guard acts inappropriately, it affects the culture of the school and the way the school is perceived.

Mignone testified that it was inappropriate for appellant to hold B.T. with his arm around B.T.'s neck. She articulated the policy in the building that staff should not put a hand on a student unless the child is endangering himself/herself or others. Based on her review of the videotape, B.T. did not appear to be endangering himself or others. She testified that it also was not appropriate for appellant to walk down the hallway holding B.T. in that manner and to take B.T. into the bathroom alone. Mignone noted that there were available areas other than the bathroom that could have been used, such as the area in the hallway under the surveillance camera. Mignone testified that she wrote in her Report of Incident exactly what appellant told her, during his interview, had occurred. Appellant's version of the incident as recorded in Mignone's report was as follows:

> At approximately 2:45 Acevedo was called to go upstairs to room 310 to get [B.T.] . . . . When Acevedo arrived at the room Mr. Jacobs (security guard) was there trying to talk [B.T.] into leaving the classroom. [B.T.] is yelling and pushing Jacobs. [B.T.] ran into the hallway. Jacobs catches up with him and tries to calm him down. [B.T.] started pushing Acevedo and [B.T.] went into the bathroom. Jacobs and Acevedo follow him. In the bathroom [B.T.] is yelling and Acevedo is trying to calm him down. [B.T.] leaves the bathroom.

Mignone noted that appellant's version to her differed from what can be seen on the video. Appellant did not mention in his account the need to restrain B.T. or put B.T. in a headlock or put his arm around B.T.'s neck. Appellant also did not mention that he put B.T. in the bathroom and, instead, reported that B.T. ran into the bathroom. During her interview with B.T., he relayed that appellant punched him three times when they were in the bathroom.

Mignone testified that the manner in which appellant processed B.T. violated school policy. She further described that appellant's actions caused disruption to the operations of the school, and his actions affect the culture and environment of the building, such as the trust that students and/or the community has in school staff.

Raymond Acevedo

Appellant testified that on October 2, 2015, he was initially assigned to the front desk and later assigned to walk the upstairs hallways. He described that a call came over the radio from the office indicating that security was needed to bring B.T. downstairs. Appellant responded to the call, and Jacobs was in the classroom when appellant arrived. According to appellant, B.T. was disruptive, B.T. was yelling and punching Jacobs, and B.T. then ran out of the classroom. Appellant and Jacobs ran after B.T.; Jacobs ran faster than appellant and approached B.T. next to the bathroom; and B.T. and Jacobs then walked down the hallway toward appellant.

Appellant testified that, as B.T. and Jacobs were approaching, appellant noticed that B.T. was getting ready to run again. At that point appellant extended his right arm straight out to stop B.T. He described that B.T. grabbed appellant's arm "real tight" and held it. B.T. was walking backwards, and B.T. turned appellant around, wrapped appellant's arm around B.T.'s upper chest and held appellant's arm around his body. According to appellant, he tried to take his arm away from B.T.'s chest, but B.T. had him off balance, B.T. forcibly held and had control of appellant's arm, and B.T. overpowered him. Appellant did not deny that, at that time, B.T. was not destroying school property, he did not have a weapon, and he was not a physical threat to other students or staff members. As to whether there was any reason to physically restrain a student under these circumstances, appellant responded that if a child is trying to run and could be injured by falling, he is going to stop him, and he stopped B.T. before he had taken off. Appellant denied that he put or had B.T. in a choke-hold, denied that he grasped B.T.'s upper left shoulder while walking down the hallway, and denied that his arm was around B.T.'s neck, stating that it was around B.T.'s chest.

Appellant testified that he went into the bathroom with B.T., believing that it was the safest and nearest area to calm B.T. down and try to talk to him. He reasoned that someone could get hurt if they went down the stairs, so he walked into the bathroom with B.T. when the bathroom door opened as another student was coming out. Appellant denied that he pushed B.T. against the door to open it. When asked whether other students could have been in the bathroom, so it was not a safe area, appellant responded that it was time to go home. He described that soon afterwards, Jacobs came into the bathroom; B.T. asked Jacobs to get his belongings; and Jacobs left to get them. According to appellant, when he was alone with B.T., B.T. was pushing and punching appellant. Appellant denied that he struck B.T. but admitted that he pushed B.T. back. Subsequently, Jacobs returned with B.T.'s belongings, B.T. calmed down, and they all walked out of the bathroom.

Appellant testified that he had received no physical training from the District since he was hired in 1997, and he was never taught tactics regarding how to handle or respond to unruly children. Appellant admitted his awareness that it was inappropriate to hold a student around the neck, to place a choke-hold on a student, and to punch a student. Appellant testified that he would never place a choke-hold on a student or hurt a child, and denied that he placed or held B.T. in a headlock or punched B.T. Appellant admitted that his job duties include reporting any incidents, and his report did not contain the fact that appellant made physical contact with B.T. As to the statement in his report that B.T. ran again, appellant testified that B.T. was walking fast and getting ready to run. Appellant denied that he told the principal that he and Jacobs followed B.T. into the bathroom. Appellant agreed that, as a security guard, he is responsible for the health, safety and welfare of students under his care, and a security guard must follow the District's rules and regulations and make common-sense and reasonable decisions. Appellant articulated his belief that the actions he took regarding the entire incident were appropriate. He further described that he would have no problem acting in the same manner if the circumstances happened again, for the safety of the student.

Aquilla Williams

Aquilla Williams is employed by the District as a part-time per-diem security guard and was assigned to the school after the incident. According to Williams, she had an incident with B.T.; B.T. said to Williams that he would have her job the same way that he had appellant's job; and Williams was told by other staff not to "mess" with B.T.

because he can do whatever he wants. Williams testified that around November 2015 she also overheard B.T. bragging and laughing with another student that he got appellant fired. She articulated her view that appellant was a good security guard. Williams admitted that she was not working at the school at the time of the October 2, 2015, incident and had no direct knowledge regarding the interaction between appellant and B.T. on that date. She agreed that a security guard is not permitted to punch a student and expressed her view that it would be inappropriate for a security guard to take a student into a bathroom, due to the lack of cameras in the bathrooms. Although Williams expressed that a security guard can grab a child around the neck if necessary to restrain the student, she agreed that there is no need to restrain a student who is not displaying threatening behavior, possessing a weapon, or destroying property.

Analysis of the Testimony

In this matter, the District bears the burden of proving the disciplinary charge against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); see In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis.

In undertaking this evaluation, it is necessary for me to assess the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself," in that "[i]t must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." Id. at 521–22; see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). A trier of fact may also reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Further, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981).

In judging the strength of the evidence and evaluating the credibility of the witnesses, I found Ingold and Mignone to be forthright and credible witnesses. They presented persuasive testimony vis-à-vis the actions they took and the school's procedures and protocols, coupled with the adverse impact to the school when a security guard acts inappropriately. No evidence suggests that either witness harbored a motive or bias to fabricate their version of the relevant facts. Plainly, on balance, appellant has the greater stake in the outcome of this proceeding since it involves the propriety of his removal from employment.

For her part, Williams had no direct knowledge regarding appellant's encounter with B.T. I further afford limited weight to her testimony recounting what B.T. allegedly said on later occasions, which is plainly hearsay. Indeed, even if B.T. made the alleged statement about getting appellant fired, this does not undermine B.T.'s credibility or appellant's termination if appellant had taken inappropriate action in connection with dealings with B.T.

Succinctly stated, I found appellant's testimony regarding the events that transpired on October 2, 2015, to be riddled with inconsistencies, lacking internal consistency, inherently improbable, and not "hanging together" with, and discredited and overborne in significant respects by, other evidence in the record. A canvas of the totality of the evidence casts substantial doubt on the accuracy, reliability and believability of appellant's version of the events. I found appellant to be non-responsive to various questions during cross-examination and his rendition could not be reconciled with earlier statements appellant made. For example, at the hearing appellant offered a vastly different account than that portrayed in his Incident Report. In contrast to appellant's testimony and what can be seen on the surveillance video, the report that he authored shortly after the incident stated that B.T. "started to run again" after Jacobs caught up with him near the boys' bathroom. Appellant's Incident Report further omitted any reference to appellant making physical contact with B.T. in the manner captured on the video. And, appellant did not claim in that report that B.T. had punched him in the bathroom or that B.T. had wrapped appellant's arm around B.T. Rather, appellant then reported that he "grab[bed] [B.T.] and walk[ed] him to the nearest room which was the bathroom for his own safety." Appellant's account at the hearing is also irreconcilable with the scenario provided to the principal a few days after the incident. I reject appellant's testimony attempting to sidestep the statements he made during his interview, which was overborne by the testimony of Mignone, whom I found to be forthright and credible. In contrast to appellant's testimony and the surveillance video, during that interview appellant claimed that B.T. "started pushing [him] and [B.T.] went into the bathroom [and] Jacobs and [appellant] follow[ed] him." Further, appellant did not at that time disclose that he used any physical force against B.T. and appellant did not claim that B.T. had pushed or punched him when they were in the bathroom. Although the charges against appellant do not concern the appropriateness of his Incident Report, the inaccuracies and omissions in that report, which mischaracterized the incident as captured on the surveillance video, significantly impair appellant's credibility and raise substantial doubt as to the accuracy, reliability, and believability of appellant's testimony, including the actions he took when he was not in view of the surveillance camera and alone in the bathroom with B.T.

I further found improbable appellant's assertion that, despite appellant being approximately twice the size of B.T., B.T. overpowered him and forced appellant to wrap his arm around B.T.'s chest, and B.T. continued to overpower appellant and forcibly held appellant's arm around B.T.'s body when they travelled down the hallway and into the bathroom. Apart from this, appellant's version is discredited by the surveillance video. Although appellant claims that B.T. forcibly held appellant's arm around B.T.'s upper chest area, the video shows appellant's arm around B.T.'s neck area and that B.T. is not holding or touching appellant's arm while being held in this position. Appellant is also seen with his hand clamped down on B.T.'s left shoulder while B.T. is flailing his right arm in the air, with his left arm extended outward holding a white piece of paper.

Additionally, appellant's explanation as to why he took B.T. into the bathroom did not make sense. He could not answer how he knew that the boys' bathroom was clear of students and, thus, would be a safe area to process B.T. He did not address why another student exited the bathroom immediately after appellant entered the bathroom with B.T. Further, even if appellant believed the bathroom was empty at the end of the day, his action in taking B.T. into the bathroom, where he reasonably knew that he would be out of the surveillance camera's view, is highly suspect given the other available options that appellant could have used in the hallway, such as the open area near the surveillance camera. Simply put, on balance, I afford more weight to B.T.'s testimony addressing what occurred in the bathroom than the account offered by appellant.

Finally, I afford no weight to appellant's asserted claim regarding the lack of training that he received. In short, it is common sense that it is inappropriate and dangerous to grab and hold a student around the neck or throat area and to punch a student, and appellant acknowledged knowing the inappropriateness of taking these actions.

Based upon a review of the testimony and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following additional pertinent FACTS:

When B.T. and Jacobs walked toward the area where appellant was situated, appellant grabbed B.T. from behind his body and had his right arm around B.T.'s neck and under his throat and appellant clamped down and secured his right hand on B.T.'s left shoulder in what Ingold characterized as a choke-hold. At the time appellant took this action, B.T. was not posing a danger to others, did not have a weapon, and was not otherwise destroying property. While holding B.T. in that position, appellant walked with B.T. down the hallway in the view of other students. While continuing to hold B.T. in that position, appellant forced B.T. to enter the boys' bathroom face first through the bathroom door. Appellant intentionally brought B.T. alone into the bathroom, which was not subject to view by the surveillance camera. There were other available areas in the hallway that appellant could have utilized in order to control or calm down B.T., to the extent that such action was necessary. When they were alone in the bathroom, appellant punched B.T. three times.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1, et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether appellant is guilty of the charge brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

An appointing authority may discipline an employee for conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (12). Although the term "conduct unbecoming a public employee" is not defined in the New Jersey Administrative Code, it has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "'conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency'" of the public entity or "'which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services.'" In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted); see Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). Unbecoming conduct need not be predicated upon a violation of the employer's rules or policies and may be based merely upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior. See City of Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); In re Tuch, 159 N.J. Super. 219, 224 (App. Div. 1978). It has been recognized that a school security guard "holds an important position in the school community" and, "[s]imilar to law enforcement officers, security guards inherit a pedestal posture and are held to a higher standard of conduct than others who do not in their profession have a direct responsibility to uphold the law." Alton v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 92 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 478, 480. "The obligation to act in a responsible manner is especially compelling in a case involving a law enforcement official," In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576 (1990), who "must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Moorestown Twp. v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966).

Against this backdrop, and in addition to appellant's claim that B.T. "put himself in a position that looked like a choke hold," which I reject, appellant contends in his brief that he "did not act inappropriately on October 2, 2015, but took appropriate action to quell a disturbance caused by B.T." The crux of appellant's argument is that B.T. was causing a disturbance in the classroom before he is observed on the video; appellant "was trying to quell the disturbance, which began in the classroom"; and appellant "used reasonable force in dealing with a disruptive, unruly student." Simply put, I do not embrace appellant's contentions.

Appellant's reliance on the alleged events in the classroom is misplaced. Apart from the fact that whatever occurred in the classroom hinges solely on appellant's testimony and was not corroborated by any witness or other competent evidence, the basis for appellant's discipline is not predicated on his actions in the classroom but his later alleged misconduct in the hallway. More importantly, any disruption that B.T. may have been causing in the classroom does not serve to justify appellant's actions in the hallway. At the point appellant employed the tactics he did, no extraordinary circumstances existed, and there was no imminent threat that warranted physical intervention, especially the restraining maneuver around B.T.'s neck. The video shows that immediately before appellant took the actions he did, B.T. was not creating any disturbance in the hallway that would have required appellant to restrain or use any physical force against B.T. He was not posing a danger or threat to any person, destroying any school property, or brandishing a weapon. The only disruptive action that can be seen on the video is when B.T. ran down the hallway for approximately three seconds. However, at the time appellant physically restrained B.T. around his neck, the other security guard had already brought B.T. under control. Further, even if B.T. had been causing a disturbance by trying to run down the hall again as claimed by appellant, any intervention should have been accomplished without the use of physical force. Plainly, appellant could have brought B.T. under control in a manner similar to that previously used by the other security guard, who merely stopped in front of B.T. and blocked his path without touching B.T. with his hands. Instead of employing a similar approach, appellant made unwarranted, unreasonable, and aggressive physical contact with B.T.

In sum, there was no need or justification for appellant to restrain and use physical force against B.T., and it was particularly inappropriate for appellant to grab and hold B.T. around the neck and throat area. Appellant's contact and conduct was an improper, unnecessary, and unreasonable use of force and contravened District policy and protocols. The inappropriateness of appellant's conduct is compounded by the fact that he took the action he did in the presence of several young students. And, no emergency or disturbance existed that required appellant to remove B.T. from the area and place him alone in the bathroom with appellant. Indeed, the video shows that after appellant places his arm around B.T.'s neck, appellant then calmly walks B.T. down the hall without any degree of urgency, and other areas existed in the hallway that could have been used.

I CONCLUDE that the District has shouldered its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible, competent evidence, that appellant's conduct in connection with his dealings with B.T. was unprofessional and unbecoming a public employee. Appellant's actions fall significantly short of the type of conduct that the public has the right to expect from a public employee charged with protecting the health and safety of elementary-school students. Appellant should be cognizant of the standard of conduct expected of his position given his lengthy career with the District. Clearly, appellant knew, or reasonably should have known, that it is unacceptable and unbecoming conduct to engage in aggressive physical contact with a student. Appellant's conduct was unwarranted, unjustified, and unreasonable. By engaging in the conduct he did, appellant failed to exercise good judgment and to act in a responsible manner with due regard to the safety of others. He failed to exercise tact and restraint during his encounter with B.T., and appellant conducted himself in a manner that failed to maintain the dignity and integrity of his position. Appellant engaged in conduct in violation of his responsibilities as a school security guard, and such conduct has a tendency to destroy the public's respect for public employees and confidence in the operation of the school. Appellant's behavior also has the likelihood of eroding the students' perception, respect, confidence, and trust in security guards who are there to protect and safeguard their well-being, and adversely impacting the educational environment and the proper operation of the school. Significantly, appellant's actions placed B.T. at risk of harm and could have resulted in injurious consequences.

The only remaining issue concerns the penalty that should be imposed. It is beyond debate that appellant's past disciplinary record may be considered for guidance in determining the appropriate penalty, and the principle of progressive discipline is applied in this state. See Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522. The seriousness of appellant's infraction must also be balanced in the equation of whether removal or something less is appropriate under the circumstances. See Henry, supra, 81 N.J. at 580. The New Jersey Supreme Court has recognized that the principle of progressive or incremental discipline is not a "fixed and immutable rule" that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007); In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). Rather, "some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record." Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 484. Progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration "when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest." Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 33. In this regard, "progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property." Ibid.; see, e.g., Henry, supra, 81 N.J. at 580; Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 306 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994). The courts have also upheld the dismissal of employees for engaging in conduct unbecoming to their position without regard to whether or not the employee had a substantial past disciplinary record. Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 34; see Div. of State Police v. Jiras, 305 N.J. Super. 476 (App. Div. 1997) (upholding dismissal of police officer where the infraction, an assault on a prisoner, was "so serious as to go to the heart of his capacity to function appropriately"). Public-safety concerns may also bear upon the propriety of an employee's removal from employment. See Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 485.

The evidence reveals that appellant has no prior disciplinary record. However, the seriousness of appellant's infractions is a critical consideration in this case. While the incident involved a short duration of time, this does not mitigate the gravity of appellant's derelictions. Appellant's actions, regardless of how brief, were highly inappropriate and inexcusable, and violated the standards of the proper conduct expected of an elementary-school security guard. Appellant's irresponsible conduct could have resulted in injurious consequences to B.T. and cannot be countenanced. His unauthorized actions were antithetical to the proper functioning of the school, and his failure to safeguard those individuals whom he was charged to protect violated his basic obligations as a school security guard and demonstrates his unfitness to perform those duties. Appellant's failure to recognize or appreciate the inappropriateness and severity of his misconduct serves as further support for the conclusion that appellant is unsuitable for continuation in his position.

Based upon the totality of the circumstances, I CONCLUDE that appellant's unbecoming conduct is of a sufficiently egregious nature to warrant his termination notwithstanding the absence of any disciplinary history. I CONCLUDE that the District acted appropriately by removing appellant from his position.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause be and hereby are SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that, based upon the aforesaid sustained charges, appellant be and hereby is removed from his employment as a security guard with the District effective October 15, 2015.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement") is entered into this 27th day of January, 2017 between the Town of West New York (hereinafter referred to as the "Town") and Richard Alvarez (hereinafter referred to as "Alvarez" or the "Employee").

WHEREAS, the Employee is employed with the Department of Public Works; and

WHEREAS, the Town instituted a disciplinary action against Alvarez in the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated June 17, 2016 (hereinafter referred to as the "Disciplinary Action"); and

WHEREAS, the Employee requested a departmental hearing on the Disciplinary Action which took place on June 29, 2016; and

WHEREAS, the charges were sustained by the Hearing Officer at the conclusion of the departmental hearing; and

WHEREAS, the Hearing Officer set forth a penalty of one hundred and twenty (120) day suspension on Alvarez; and

WHEREAS, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 21, 2016 was issued to the Employee following the outcome of the departmental hearing; and

WHEREAS, Alvarez filed an appeal of the Hearing Officer's determination to the Office of Administrative Law, Docket No.: CSV11615-16; and

WHEREAS, Alvarez and the Town desire to resolve all outstanding issues with respect to the Disciplinary Action.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration for the promises and conditions set forth herein, the Town and Alvarez agree as follows:

1. TERMS

a. Alvarez and the Town agree that only the charge of Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee set forth in the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated June 17, 2016 and the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action is hereby sustained. As a result, Alvarez and the Town agree that his civil service record will reflect a disciplinary penalty of a ninety (90) working day suspension without pay.

b. Alvarez and the Town will treat the one hundred and twenty (120) day disciplinary suspension to have been served and treated as follows:

i. sixty (60) days shall be treated as time served as a suspension without pay;

ii. twenty-nine (29) days shall be treated as an unpaid leave of absence; and

iii. thirty-one (31) days shall be considered as days for which Alvarez shall be eligible to receive back pay, and said back pay shall be paid within thirty (30) days of the date of the Civil Service Commission's final decision.

c. Except as set forth above in Paragraph 1.b., Alvarez agrees to waive any and all claims to back pay, benefits, and any and all other monetary claims including, but not limited to, attorney's fees with respect to the Disciplinary Action.

2. COMPLETE RELEASE

In further consideration of the settlement hereinabove, the Employee, his heirs, assigns and agents (hereinafter referred to collectively as "Releasor") voluntarily enter into this Agreement, and certify that Releasor has not been threatened or coerced into signing this Agreement, on the terms which follow:

a. Releasor hereby releases, waives and discharges the Town, its affiliated departments, and its officers, trustees, agents, employees, successors and assigns (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Releasees") from each and every claim, demand, cause of action, obligation, damage, complaint, expense, compensation or action or writ of any kind, nature, character of description that Releasor had, now has, or may in the future have against the Releasees on account of or arising out of the Disciplinary Action. This Complete Release includes, but is not limited to, any claim, demand, cause of action, obligation, damage, complaint, expense, compensation, or action or writ of any kind, nature, character or description arising out of or under Federal, State or municipal statute or ordinance and any other law (whether such be common law, decisional law or statutory law), rule, regulation, executive order or guideline, and any and all claims for attorneys' fees and costs arising from the above acts including, but not limited to:

i. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (NJLAD) which, among other things, prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of an individual's race, creed, color, religion, sex, national origin, ancestry, age, marital status, affectional or sexual orientation, familial status, handicap, atypical hereditary cellular or blood trait or liability for service in the Armed Forces of the United States.

ii. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) or the Civil Rights Act of 1991, as amended, which, among other things, prohibit discrimination in employment on account of a person's race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

iii. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended (ADEA), which, among other things, prohibits discrimination in employment on account of a person's age.

iv. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) which, among other things, prohibits discrimination in employment on account of a person's disability or handicap.

v. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) which, among other things, entitles an employee to take reasonable leave for medical reasons for the birth or adoption of a child, and for the care of a child, spouse or parent who has a serious health condition, and any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising under the New Jersey Family Leave Act.

vi. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Rehabilitation Act of 1973, as amended, which, among other things, prohibits discrimination in employment by Federal contractors against individuals with disabilities.

vii. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended (ERISA), which, among other things, regulates pension and welfare plans and prohibits interference with individual rights protected under that statute.

viii. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Older Workers Benefit Protection Act (OWBPA) which, among other things, amends provisions of ADEA and prohibits discrimination in employment and employment benefits on account of a person's age.

ix. Any claim, cause of action, demand or complaint arising out of or under the Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA) which, among other things, prohibits retaliatory action by an employer against an employee who objects to practices that he/she reasonably believes are incompatible with a clear mandate of law or public policy concerning the public health, safety or welfare.

The aforesaid list shall not be deemed exhaustive but by way of example and the recitation of a release of all claims as set forth in 2.a. shall not be diminished thereby.

b. Releasor has not and shall not hereafter seek money damages against the Town or the Releasees in any matter lodged within the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights, the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) or with any Federal, State or local court or agency which has been settled herein. Nothing herein shall be construed as limiting any individual's right to file a charge of discrimination should s/he feel that s/he was a victim of unlawful discrimination.

c. If Releasor violates this Complete Release by filing any claim, charge or complaint as prohibited above, Releasor agrees to pay all costs and expenses of defending against the suit incurred by Town and/or the Releasees, including reasonable attorney's fees.

3. NON ADMISSION

This Agreement is executed and all consideration is given in final settlement of disputed claims, and shall not be construed as an admission of any allegation or of liability by the Town, by whom any such obligation or liability is expressly denied.

4. NO DISPARAGING STATEMENTS

The Employee agrees that he will not make any statement that has, have or can be expected to have the effect of disparaging the Town.

5. CONSULTATION WITH ATTORNEY

The Employee has consulted with his Union Representative and the Union's attorney with respect to this Agreement and reviewed with the Union Representative and the Union's attorney all the terms and conditions of this Agreement prior to executing this Agreement.

6. COMPLETE AGREEMENT

This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the Employee and the Town, and each of them, with respect to the subject matter and supercedes all prior agreements or understandings dealing with the same subject matter. There is no agreement on the part of the Town to do anything other than as is expressly stated in this Agreement. This Agreement shall in all respects be interpreted, enforced and governed by the Laws of the State of New Jersey.

7. MODIFICATION

No modification or amendment of this Agreement will be enforceable unless it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

8. SEVERABILITY

Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court of competent jurisdiction to be illegal, invalid or unenforceable, the legality, validity, and enforceability of the remaining parts, terms, or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal, unenforceable or invalid part, term, or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement.

9. ALVAREZ ATTESTS

The Employee represents and warrants that he has carefully read each and every provision of this Agreement and that he fully understands all of the terms and conditions contained in each provision of this Agreement. Alvarez represents and warrants that he enters into this Agreement voluntarily, of his own free will, without any pressure or coercion from any person or entity including, but not limited to, the Town and the Releasees.

10. REASONABLE PERIOD OF TIME

The Employee agrees that he has been advised of an opportunity to take a reasonable period of time of at least 21 days to review and consider this Agreement prior to executing this Agreement, but Alvarez may waive this 21 day period by signing the space provided at the end of this Agreement.

11. REVOCATION

The Employee may revoke this Agreement within seven (7) days after the date this Agreement is signed by Alvarez. This revocation must take the form of written notice by Alvarez that Alvarez intends to revoke this Agreement. This revocation must be provided directly to the Town Business Administrator, James Cryan. This seven (7) day revocation period may not be waived by Alvarez.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, and intending to be legally bound hereby I, Richard Alvarez, executed the foregoing Agreement this 27th day of January, 2017.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 04238-15 & 04235-15 (Consolidated)
	ISSUED: FEB 27 2017 BW

The appeals of Vincenzo Billero, Senior Correction Officer, Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center, Department of Corrections, 10 working day suspension and 30 working day suspension, on charges, were heard by Administrative Law Judge Michael Antoniewicz, who rendered his initial decision on January 17, 2017. ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in suspending the appellant was justified in both matters. The Commission therefore affirms these actions and dismisses the appeals of Vincenzo Billero.

IN THE MATTER OF VINCENZO BILLERO, ADULT DIAGNOSTIC AND TREATMENT CENTER, DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Raymond Heck, Union Representative, PBA Local 105, for appellant Vincenzo Billero pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)6

Karen Campbell, Legal Specialist, for respondent Department of Corrections pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)2

Record Closed: December 2, 2016 Decided: January 17, 2017

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center (ADTC), Department of Correction (DOC) suspended appellant for a period of thirty days for conduct unbecoming a public employee and ten days for insubordination for violating the DOC's Rules and Regulations. Appellant requested a hearing and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matters to the Office of Administrative Law, where they were filed on March 26, 2015, as a contested cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and 14F-1 to -13. On May 28, 2015, the undersigned issued an Order of Consolidation. The matter was heard on October 11, 2016, and the record closed after submission of post-hearing briefs and any responses on or before December 2, 2016.

Senior Correction Officer Angel Santiago

Angel Santiago (Santiago) worked for the DOC for sixteen years. Santiago worked for ADTC since 2001. Santiago was working on November 28, 2014, and worked the shower detail with Peeples. Santiago received a call from the gate and saw Billero at the gate. Billero wanted to be let out. Billero left the area and had a log book with him and it was inside Billero's coat. Santiago found out that Choe's log book was missing.

Correction Officer Daniel Choe

Daniel Choe (Choe) worked for DOC and the ADTC for twelve years. Choe was in charge of the log book. There are eight log books in total. Billero asked Choe for the log book and Choe provided same to him. Choe did not ask Billero why he needed the log book. Choe was aware that he was not permitted to hand out the log book. A corrections officer needed permission from a supervisor in order to obtain log books. Choe was later charged for giving Billero the log book without proper authorization and received a five-day suspension. I FIND that Choe was a credible witness. His testimony withstood cross examination, and was basically unchallenged.

Senior Correction Officer Anthony Peeples

Anthony Peeples (Peeples) worked for the DOC for over thirteen years. Peeples worked for ADTC since 2009. Peeples testified that Billero placed the log book in his jacket, which he considered to be an unusual event. In response to seeing this event, Peeples advised Supervisor Schonyers and was told to prepare a report.

Accordingly, Peeples wrote and signed the report. (R-4.) Peeples was also interviewed by Lieutenant Sullivan regarding the incident. I FIND that Peeples's testimony was believable.

Sergeant Toren Schonyers

Toren Schonyers (Schonyers) worked as a guard for the DOC for over twenty-five years. Schonyers worked for ADTC as a sergeant. On November 28, 2014, Schonyers was working in the Closed Custody Unit (CCU). Schonyers was contacted by Peeples and was told by Peeples that Billero took a log book in a "suspicious manner." Schonyers then wrote a report regarding the incident. (R-3.)

On cross-examination, Schonyers recalled that November 28, 2014, was the day after Thanksgiving. Schonyers was then off on the November 29, 2014, of that month and he returned to work on the November 30, 2014. Schonyers stated that a log book is located at all units and the supervisor's areas. He stated that the supervisor's office is located on the first floor. The rank and file has access to the supervisor's office.

Retired Lieutenant Edward Sullivan

Edward Sullivan (Sullivan) worked thirty-two years for the DOC. In April 2001, Sullivan worked for ADTC. Sullivan retired May 2016 from service. Sullivan recalled that there was an investigation regarding the removal of the log book. The log book was taken from the CCU and Sullivan interviewed the following individuals as part of the investigation: Peeples, Choe, Santiago, and Billero. It was Sullivan's conclusion that Billero obtained the log book without proper authorization. Sullivan was aware that he was named by Billero in an Equal Employment Division (EED) dispute.

Sullivan stated that each housing unit had a log book. The daily activities must follow the Internal Managerial Procedures (IMP). Sullivan interviewed Billero, with a union representative present, regarding the removal of the log book. Billero refused to participate in this investigation. As a result, Sullivan contacted Major White and advised White that Billero would not cooperate in the investigation. Thereafter, Billero was ordered by White to cooperate in the investigation, as non-cooperation could result in discipline. Afterward, Sullivan reviewed surveillance DVDs and then again interviewed Billero. Once again, Billero refused to cooperate.

Subsequently, Sullivan wrote a report. The report concluded that Billero removed the log book from its location and Billero was not cooperative in the investigation at the first interview. Billero was only cooperative on December 18, 2014.

On cross-examination, Sullivan said that IMP #143 applies to the log book. The policy states that the log book must be at each housing unit.

Major William Gamba

William Gamba (Gamba) is a Major (as of 2014) in the DOC and worked one year at the ADTC. Gamba was working on November 28, 2014. Gamba was aware that there was a current IMP #143, which dealt with log book management and handling. Gamba wrote a report regarding the missing log book. (R-9.) Sullivan conducted an interview with Billero and other relevant individuals. It was Gamba's understanding that Billero was uncomfortable with Sullivan conducting the interview. However, Major White ordered Billero to cooperate with the investigation. It was Gamba's opinion that there was no good reason for Billero to not comply with the order given by Major White. It was Gamba's position that Billero was told two or three times to cooperate with the interview and that by failing to cooperate with the reasonable order, Billero was insubordinate.

On cross-examination, Gamba stated that Billero was uncomfortable with Sullivan conducting the interview because he had filed an EED complaint against Sullivan. Gamba believed that Sullivan was fully qualified to do the investigation. There was no reason to remove Sullivan from this position. Gamba spoke with Administrator Yates about this issue and this was his position as well. If the EED stated not to use Sullivan, he would have complied, but they did not.

Major Michael White

Major Michael White (White) worked for DOC for nineteen years. In 2013, White was assigned to ADTC. On December 4, 2014, White instructed Sullivan to do an investigation regarding the removed log book. White confirmed Billero's position that he was uncomfortable with Sullivan conducting the investigation regarding the log book because of the EED complaint. It was White's position that the EED complaint did not support Sullivan being barred from the investigation. White spoke with Administrator Yates, who stated that it was fine for Sullivan to do the investigation.

White recalled that Billero requested and received a new union representative. White then ordered Billero to participate in the investigation. Billero continued to not cooperate because he said he felt uncomfortable. White gave Billero a "direct order" to cooperate. White confirmed that Yates found that there was nothing to prevent Sullivan from doing the interview. They had forty-five days to complete the investigation. R-10 was the report prepared by White. It was White's position that Sullivan was the right person to conduct the investigation because he was in charge of the CCU and had knowledge of the events.

Major Colin Foley

Major Colin Foley (Foley) began working in the ADTC in 2000 and was transferred to other venues and came back to ADTC in 2014. Foley was a major at that time. R-14 was the IMP for CCU. Foley stated that the rules and procedures stated that a log book must be present at each unit and is a legal document. The IMP #143 speaks about the log book. Taking the log book without proper permission is a violation of policy. Full log books must be in a secured location because it is evidence.

On cross-examination, Foley stated that an officer can write in a log book and would write his name next to the entry. It was clear to Foley, however, that someone cannot take a log book without permission. Permission must be obtained from the major to take a log book. Foley further stated that he could not state for sure as to whether the log book IMP was in the unit because he did not work in that unit at the time in question.

Senior Correction Officer Vincenzo Billero

Appellant Vincenzo Billero (Billero) worked with the ADTC for just over sixteen years. Billero testified that he took the log book after seeing same in the CCU on November 28, 2014. Billero stated that he took the log book about 100 feet away and then looked at the book in order to determine when he was working on a certain day. Thereafter, Billero returned the book to its assigned area. Billero did place the book inside his jacket. Billero also stated that he did not believe that his taking the log book was a breach of safety and/or security.

Billero was advised that the individual who was conducting the interview was Sullivan. Billero advised the supervisors that he had concerns about Sullivan conducting the investigation because he had filed an EED complaint in 2011 against Sullivan. Billero testified that he did not refuse to comply with the investigation. Billero advised White and Gamba about his concerns. Billero stated that he did answer the questions on December 18, 2014.

On cross-examination, Billero stated that he took the log books for Lieutenant Gonzalez and Lieutenant Philips. Although Billero stated that he took the log book, he further stated that he never gave the log book to any other officer. Billero also testified that he never had any problems with any other employees. Billero admitted that he received an order from Major White to cooperate with the investigation. Billero further admitted that he never obtained any permission from any supervisor to review the log book.

I had an opportunity to observe appellant as he testified. He appeared unbelievable in many ways on both direct and cross-examination. Billero refused to accept responsibility and maintained his position that he was unaware that taking the log book was a violation of IMP. As a result of the foregoing, I FIND that Billero's testimony was unreliable.

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. Billero is a Senior Correction Officer at the ADTC.

2. On November 28, 2014, Billero appeared at the CCU and removed a log book by placing it inside his jacket and taking it away from the CCU. Billero then reviewed the contents of the log book and returned it to the CCU after reviewing same.

3. Billero made alteration of addition to the log book.

4. At no time prior to taking the log book did Billero ask for or obtain any authorization to take the log book.

5. Billero gave the log book to SCO Santiago, who then gave the log book to SCO Choe, who was in charge of the log book for that unit.

6. SCO Peeples also witnessed Billero take the log book, who found Billero's actions to be very strange.

7. SCO Peeples reported Billero's actions to Schonyers, who was told by Assistant Superintendent Davis to write a report of these events.

8. Based on the events, Major White instructed Lieutenant Sullivan to conduct an investigation into the removal of the log book from the CCU.

9. Sullivan interviewed Choe, Santiago, and Peeples and reviewed the reports of Schonyers and Peeples.

10. Both Choe and Santiago were disciplined for their actions regarding the removal of the log book.

11. Sullivan ordered Billero to report to the office for an interview as part of the investigation on December 5, 2014.

12. Billero appeared as directed, with his union representative, and was administered his Weingarten Rights.

13. Sullivan began to question Billero regarding the removal of the log book.

14. Billero stated that he was not comfortable with answering any questions asked by Sullivan because Sullivan was named in an EED complaint by Billero.

15. Sullivan informed Billero that the investigation was ordered by Major White and had nothing to do with the EED complaint.

16. Billero continued to refuse to answer any questions.

17. In response to Billero's refusal to answer questions, Sullivan contacted Major White and advised White that Billero was refusing to participate in the investigation.

18. Thereafter, Majors White and Gamba appeared at the office of the investigation and White gave a direct order to Billero to cooperate in the investigation.

19. After receiving White's direct order and being advised that his continued refusal could subject him to disciplinary action, Billero further refused to cooperate in the investigation.

20. On December 18, 2014, Billero was ordered to report to the major's office with his union representative.

21. In the second interview, Billero admitted to removing the log book from the CCU without prior authorization.

22. Billero looked at the log book because he wanted to check as to whether he worked on a certain date.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Respondent, as the appointing authority, bears the burden of proof of facts upon which its disciplinary charges are based and must prove facts essential to its charges by a reasonable probability, i.e., by the preponderance (greater weight) of the competent and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(2), -21; N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1, "burden of proof"; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. See Cumberland Farms v. Moffett, 218 N.J. Super. 331, 341 (App. Div. 1987).

The appointing authority must prove its case by a preponderance of credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). An appeal requires the Office of Administrative Law to conduct a de novo hearing and to determine the appellant's guilt or innocence, as well as the appropriate penalty. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987); Cliff v. Morris County Bd. of Social Serv., 197 N.J. Super. 307 (App. Div. 1984).

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), an employee may be subjected to major discipline for "incompetency, inefficiency, or failure to perform duties." Appellant's testimony about his not knowing that taking a log book as being a violation of the IMP, is of no consequence. Billero testified that he took the log book and placed it inside his jacket. Such testimony makes his position that he was unaware that by taking the log book was a violation of the appointing authority's rules and regulations, as not believable.

A Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) was issued on January 7, 2015. Appellant was also provided with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) which indicated that he violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3 as follows:

1.) Violation of Administrative Procedures involving Safety and Security;
2.) Insubordination;
6.) Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee; and 12.) Other Sufficient Cause.

Billero is a law enforcement officer and, as such, is held to a high standard of fidelity, honesty, integrity and good faith. Reinhard v. East Jersey State Prison, CSV 1605-96, aff'd, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CST) 166 (1993). It is well settled that law enforcement officers are held to a higher standard of conduct. Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965).

Even if the undersigned accept some of Billero's explanations, i.e., that he was unaware of the regulation regarding the log book and that he was only looking at the log book for purposes of seeing when he worked on certain days, that does not excuse the clear violation of the rules and regulations regarding log books being removed from the assigned unit without prior authorization. The applicable IMP #143 clearly establishes the guidelines for the use, control and inventory of log books. (R-13.)

Based upon the testimony provided by the respondent's witnesses, I find that the respondent has satisfied its burden that it is more likely than not that appellant Billero, without dispute, removed a log book from the CCU without prior authorization.

I further FIND AS FACT that Billero was given a direct order to cooperate in the investigation and that he failed to comply with that direct order. The testimony and documentary evidence presented in this case, confirms that Billero refused a direct order (which I find was reasonable) to participate in the investigation regarding his actions surrounding the log book removal. Billero was given several chances to comply with those orders and Major White provided Billero with a direct and clear order to participate in the interview/investigation. Billero continued to refuse to cooperate, despite this direct order. Billero's explanation, regarding the EED complaint (and the fact that he felt uncomfortable) is not an acceptable basis for disobeying the order.

I find that the appellant offered no competent evidence or testimony which would tend to refute or diminish the testimony provided by the respondent's witnesses, particularly since I find that appellant's own testimony was simply unreliable.

PENALTY

Ordinary progressive discipline applies to civil service disciplinary actions. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962). However, the seriousness of Billero's actions, warrant a thirty-day suspension for removing the log book and a ten-day suspension for insubordination. When an employee's actions are of such an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty, up to and including removal is appropriate, without regard to the employee's previous disciplinary history. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980).

I CONCLUDE that a forty-day (thirty days plus ten days) suspension in this matter comports with the principles of Bock, supra, and is, therefore, appropriate. As a result, the determination of the respondent must be affirmed.

ORDER

I ORDER that the decision of the respondent Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center, Department of Corrections suspending the appellant for ten days (as to CSV 04235-15) and thirty days (as to CSV 04238-15), be AFFIRMED and the appellant's action be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. The Parties herein have voluntarily agreed to resolve all disputed matters arising from the disciplinary action taken against Bosque and Pereira by the City's Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated April 7, 2015 (PNDA) and Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated June 2, 2015 (FNDA).

In consideration of the promises contained herein, it is agreed as follows:

c. They agree with everything contained in this Agreement;
d. Their Attorney and Union representative negotiated this Agreement in their presence and with their knowledge and consent;

MICHAEL CIRASELLA, Appellant, -v- CITY OF NEWARK Respondent,	STATE OF NEW JERSEY OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW OAL DOCKET NO.: CSV 03347-2015 SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement",) is made and entered into between Police Michael Cirasella ("Cirasella" or "Appellant"), The Fraternal Order of Police ("FOP" or "Union") and the City of Newark ("City" or "Respondent") (Cirasella, the Union and the City are collectively referred to hereinafter as the "Parties"). The Parties herein have voluntarily agreed to resolve all disputed matters arising from the disciplinary action taken against Cirasella by the City's Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated January 2, 2015 (PNDA) and Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated February 17, 2015 (FNDA).

In consideration of the promises contained herein, it is agreed as follows:

1. On or about November 19, 2014, at 470 Orange Street, Special Operations Division, at approximately 11:30 a.m., Police Officer Michael Cirasella, did commit an act of insubordination to Lieutenant Camilo Mos, a superior officer, to wit: after being issued a one (1) day suspension, at a Command Conference, which Lieutenant Mos was the charging investigator. Police Officer Michael Cirasella made the following remarks directed at Lieutenant Mos in a loud and condescending manner in an attempt to humiliate and disrespect Lieutenant Mos when he stated, "what you charge me for today, is the same thing I gave your brother a break before?" "What goes around comes back around" and repeated "what goes around comes back around."

2. On November 19, 2014, at 470 Orange Street, Special Operations Division, at approximately 11:30 a.m., Police Officer Michael Cirasella, did receive a lawful verbal order from Captain Mario Martin, a superior officer, directing Police Officer Cirasella to desist with his condescending remarks to Lieutenant Camilo Mos, he did disobey this order when he failed to comply as directed. Instead Officer Cirasella stated again "what goes around comes back around."

3. As a result of the conduct outlined in paragraphs one (1) and two (2) herein, the PNDA was issued and Cirasella was brought up on disciplinary charges for violating the following Newark Police Department ("NPD") Rules and Regulations: (1) Acts of Insubordination, (2) Misconduct Generally, and (3) Obedience to Orders.

4. At the departmental hearing, Cirasella plead not guilty and waived the hearing to the Office of Administrative Law. He was suspended for fifteen (15) days beginning March 9, 2015 and ending March 27, 2015 and the FNDA was issued.

5. Cirasella appealed the decision on the FNDA to the Office of Administrative Law.

6. The parties have agreed to resolve all issues herein and herein referenced as follows:

    1. The City agrees to reduce Cirasella's suspension from fifteen (15) days to five (5) days. Cirasella will receive ten (10) days back.

2. Cirasella further waives any and all rights and/or claims which he has and/or may have to: 1) A hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under the PNDA, FDNA and/or this Agreement; 2) To challenge the PNDA, FNDA and/or this Agreement; 3) Initiate and/or partake in Grievance procedures; and/or 4) Initiate, pursue and/or partake in any and all litigation against the City in State, Federal and/or Administrative Courts.

3. Cirasella and the Union each further agree that there is no consideration due Cirasella, his counsel (if applicable) and/or the Union, including, but not limited to, any claim for back pay and/or counsel fees, arising from his employment and/or the execution of this Agreement, except as otherwise provided herein.

4. Cirasella and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Public Employee Relations Commission, the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.

5. Cirasella and the Union further acknowledge that this Agreement further precludes either of them from bringing any type of legal or contractual action in any forum including, but not limited to, filing a Complaint in New Jersey Superior Court or United States Federal Court, filing any type of complaint with the City, Essex County, the State of New Jersey or the United States of America, and filing a grievance and/or requesting arbitration, that is in any manner grounded, based upon, or related to the FNDA.

6. The Parties are bound by this Agreement. Anyone and/or entity who succeeds to the Parties' rights and/or responsibilities, such as heirs, the executor/administrator of Cirasella's estate, and purchasers and/or assignees of Cirasella's, the City's and/or the Union's interests shall also be bound.

7. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent or practice in any matter involving the City or other City employees.

8. Cirasella and the Union further acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is based upon a unique set, combination and weighing of factors and shall not be used and/or construed as precedent and/or to in any way dictate, bind, limit and/or even guide the decisions that the City may make in future and/or currently pending disciplinary matters and/or labor negotiations.

9. Cirasella and the Union each agree this Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding of any type against or involving the City, except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, or as required by law.

10. This Agreement contains the sole and entire agreement between Cirasella, the Union and the City, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. Cirasella specifically represents and acknowledges in executing this Agreement that he has not relied upon any representation or statement by the City, or City's counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth herein. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by all the Parties, and expressly stated to be a modification of the Agreement.

11. Cirasella agrees and acknowledges that he has been fully and fairly represented by his Attorney and the Union in this matter, and he is satisfied with that representation and with the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

12. Cirasella agrees and acknowledges that he has had a full opportunity to review this Agreement with his Attorney and/or Union representative and he enters into same knowingly and voluntarily.

13. The Parties agree that if any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of the Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

14. By signing this Settlement Agreement, Cirasella states that:
    a. He has read it;
    b. He understands it and knows that he is giving up important rights, and any and all other federal and state employment related causes of any kind, not including potential Worker's Compensation claims, but including but not limited to The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Equal Pay Law, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended, The Conscientious Employee Protection Act, The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and any other constitutional, statutory or common law suit, attorney fees and costs of this proceeding, and any public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other State;

c. He agrees with everything contained in this Agreement;

d. His Attorney and Union representative negotiated this Agreement in his presence and with his knowledge and consent;

D. The Department of Corrections (Respondent) shall amend Appellant's personnel records to conform to the terms of the settlement. E. Appellant waives all other claims against Respondent Appointing Authority with regard to this matter, including any award of back pay, counsel fees or other monetary relief, except as may otherwise be provided herein.

F. Except for the assessment of Ivonne Collazo's disciplinary record in any subsequent personnel disciplinary hearing, nothing in this agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party. This waiver includes all claims involving any continuing effects of actions or practices which arose prior to the date of this Settlement Agreement and bars the use in any way of any past action or practice in any subsequent claims, except pending workers compensation claims.

I. The parties agree that if any portion of this Settlement Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of this Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

J. The parties waive the right to file exceptions and cross exceptions.

K. This agreement will become effective only if approved by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION. Any disapproval by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

OAL DKT NO. CSR 10485-14

IN THE MATTER OF JESSICA GARCIA, UNION CITY POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Wolodmryr Tyshchenko, Esq., for Appellant Jessica Garcia (Caruso, Smith, Edell, Picini, attorneys)

Kenneth B. Goodman, Esq., for Respondent Union City Police Department (O'Toole, Fernandez, Weiner, Van Lieu, attorneys)

Record closed: June 20, 2016 Decided: January 19, 2017

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner, Jessica Garcia (Garcia) appeals from a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action issued by the respondent, Union City Police Department (City), providing for appellant's removal from her position as a police officer. The charges against appellant arise out of events occurring on or about June 11, 2014. They are:

Administrative:

1. Failure to perform duties
2. Insubordination
3. Conduct unbecoming a public employee

4. Neglect of duty
5. Other Sufficient Cause

Departmental:

1. General responsibilities
2. Neglect of duty
3. Performance of duty
4. Insubordination
5. Care of firearm offduty, outside home
6. Repeated violations of department rules and regulations
7. Refusal to obey proper orders from a superior
8. Consequences to refusal to submit to drug test

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner is charged with failure to perform duty, insubordination, care of firearms off duty outside home, refusal to obey proper orders from a superior.

Garcia was removed from her position effective July 1, 2014, via a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated August 4, 2014. The primary basis for her removal was her failure to report for an ordered drug test and violation of the Attorney General's Law Enforcement Drug Testing Policy, as well as leaving a loaded weapon unsecured in a public location and failure to report unlawful activity by a fellow Union City police officer in violation of the Union City Police Department and Civil Service rules and regulations.

This matter was transferred as a contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to 13.

I heard this matter on May 13, 2016, and May 20, 2016. The record was kept open pending submissions of post-hearing transcripts and closing arguments. Closing arguments were received on June 20, 2016.

An extension was requested and received for the issuing of an Initial Decision because of a voluminous caseload of the undersigned.

Issue

Whether respondent has met its burden of proof by proving the charges against petitioner by a preponderance of the credible evidence?

Summary of Testimony for respondent

Jamey DiGrazio

Jamey DiGrazio (DiGrazio) is a police officer in Monroe Township. On the evening of June 11, 2014, he was dispatched to a home within the boundaries of the township to responded to a first aid call of an unconscious, unresponsive male with CPR in progress. Upon his arrival, first aid responders were already administering assistance to the male, Corey Corbo (Corbo), in the bedroom. At some point, he located Garcia in the household. During a conversation in which DiGrazio was attempting to ascertain relevant information, Garcia stated that Corbo had "done a bump of cocaine about five days ago." Garcia also informed DiGrazio that both she and Corbo were police officers. Garcia also stated "[d]on't tell anyone." DeGrazio informed the paramedics of Corbo's alleged ingestion of cocaine, and noted it in his incident report.

Under cross-examination, DeGrazio admitted that he did not inquire about how Garcia gained the information regarding Corbo's alleged drug use, nor did he find any illegal drugs or drug paraphernalia in the residence.

Keith Saloom

Detective Sergeant Keith Saloom (Saloom) is employed by the Monroe Township Police Department. He requested that "complete reports" of the incident that were completed by DeGrazio be forwarded to the Internal Affairs Bureau of the Union City Police Department in response to requests from officers investigating the incident.

Richard Molinari

Richard Molinari (Molinari) is Union City's Chief of Police. Molinari testified that in June 2014, he was informed that Corbo had been involved in an emergency call at his residence, and Garcia was the reporting party; he further testified that Garcia made a statement to the Township Police during their investigation of the first aid call that Corbo had done a "bump" of cocaine. He also was presented with a copy of the police report on or around June 13. Molinari further testified that he was informed on or around June 12th that Corbo had been hospitalized in a seriously ill condition.

After reviewing the report, Molinari stated that he felt "as though [he] had a situation where [he] needed to determine or not whether Garcia was using illicit drugs," and contacted an Assistant Prosecutor (AP) in the Hudson County Prosecutor's Office in order to determine whether reasonable suspicion existed to order a drug test. He provided the AP with the report, and told him that he believed that reasonable suspicion existed, a determination with which the AP concurred. Molinari ordered Lieutenant Ramon Vazquez to contact Garcia and order her to report to the Union City Police Department. The Chief testified he ordered Vasquez to give Garcia the order at approximately 3 p.m. The order was given, but Garcia never responded. "She was ordered to come into the police department. It's a lawful order. I gave it. The lieutenant issued it. She understood. She stated she understood." Despite assurances that she was on her way in, she never did; therefore, the department undertook actions to locate her.

Molinari further testified that Captain Nichelle Luster "reached out to Garcia, and it was conveyed . . . that she ordered Garcia to report for a drug test." Later, Luster informed Molinari that Garcia had voluntarily entered a substance abuse rehabilitation center.

Under the Attorney General's testing guidelines, an officer who is ordered to report in for a drug test is required to appear for the drug test or face termination, and the City Police Department has promulgated rules and regulations that "completely mirror" the Attorney General's guidelines. Notably, under the Guidelines, "there is no other recourse . . . other than removal" of an officer who refuses to respond to a reasonable suspicion drug test. Also, a police officer has an ongoing obligation to report a criminal offense, if such officer has first-hand knowledge.

Molinari further testified that Captain Luster informed him that Corbo's ex-wife reported to her that she found an unsecured firearm in a bag in Corbo's hospital room that she believed belonged to Garcia. Molinari ordered Luster to investigate, and if a firearm were located, that she take possession of it. Captain Luster later reported that she found the weapon. The weapon was made safe and secure. The weapon was later determined to belong to Garcia. Police department policy generally imposes a responsibility upon its officers to always keep their weapons secure.

Under cross-examination, Molinari testified that he never examined the firearm, but Captain Luster reported that she had determined that it was Garcia's by completing a check of the serial number. He further testified that his decision to call Garcia in for a drug test was based on DiGrazio's report. However, Molinari admitted that he did not know whether Garcia had first-hand knowledge of Corbo's alleged drug use. Molinari also testified that Lieutenant Vasquez did not tell her when he called that she was to report in for a drug test, but she was later informed by Captain Luster. However, under examination by the Court, Molinari stated that under normal circumstances, there would be a verbal communication via phone call to report to the station, and then once the officer reported, there would be a second communication to undergo a drug test. Also, it is undisputed that an officer "must know that they are being ordered for a drug test and refuse in order to be guilty of refusing to submit to a drug test.

Nichelle Luster

Nichelle Luster (Luster) is a Captain in the Union City Police Department. Luster testified that Garcia informed her on June 12 that Corbo had a medical emergency and was being treated at Raritan Bay Medical Center, in serious condition. She texted Molinari the information and proceeded to the hospital. At the hospital, Garcia informed her that at around 6 p.m. on June 11th, Corbo appeared to be in breathing distress, so Garcia started to perform CPR.

Subsequently, on June 13th, Luster reported to Molinari's office. She testified that she was informed about the Monroe Township police report, and she learned that Molinari, after discussions with the Assistant Prosecutor, ordered Lieutenant Vasquez to order Garcia in to the department. When Garcia arrived at the police station at that time, she would be ordered to undergo a drug test.

After waiting until 7 p.m., Luster left the Chief's office and ran into another officer who informed her that Garcia had checked into rehab. She instructed the officer to contact Garcia to inform her to contact the department. Subsequently, Luster received a phone call from Garcia; Garcia was crying. Luster testified that she informed Garcia "three different ways three different times" to report in for a drug test; this was done "with the chief's approval to specifically direct her and order her in for a drug test." Luster testified that the crying intensified, and Garcia hung up. The department undertook steps to locate Garcia to no avail.

Subsequently, on June 14th, Luster received a call from Corbo's ex-wife, stating that while she was searching for Corbo's wallet or paperwork in a duffel bag, she found a loaded gun. Luster informed Molinari, who ordered her to retrieve the weapon. Luster found the handgun in a duffel bag on the floor in Carbo's hospital room, she secured the gun. The serial number on the weapon was registered to Garcia.

Under cross-examination, Luster stated that Garcia did not acknowledge what she was saying "other than the intensifying of crying," which may have been because of other factors. Luster also testified that she did not know whether Garcia brought the duffel bag to the hospital or whether Garcia put the contents in the bag. However, she testified that Officer Porres stated during an interview by Internal Affairs that he had a conversation with Garcia about "checking in the bag for something or securing the bag or something." Under examination by the Court, Luster stated that Corbo's ex-wife informed her that she saw Garcia and Officer Porres texting on June 13, and she saw Porres remove an item from Garcia's purse, which was in the duffel bag. Luster further testified that Porres informed Internal Affairs that he never removed an item from the duffel bag.

Francesco DePinto, Jr.

Francesco DePinto, Jr. (DePinto) is a police officer with the City. DePinto testified that he visited Corbo in the hospital, and later that day he received a phone call from a "crying" Garcia. They exchanged phone calls after that. Notably, during one of the phone calls, Garcia asked DePinto "do you know how long cocaine stay[s] in the system?" He forwarded her information via text.

Subsequently, on Friday evening, Garcia telephoned him and asked that he retrieve certain items for her since she checked herself into rehab. After that, he informed Captain Luster. The following morning, he retrieved the items and asked Officer Porres to transport the bag to the facility.

Under cross-examination, he stated that he knew Corbo to be a "very sarcastic individual." He also stated that he knew that Garcia had been in a very serious accident in June 2014 that required her to take prescription medication and undergo therapy.

Ramon Vasquez

Lieutenant Ramon Vasquez (Vasquez) is a member of the City's Police Department in its Internal Affairs Bureau. Vasquez testified that on June 13, Internal Affairs received a call from Saloom regarding an emergency call involving Corbo and Garcia. After that, Saloom faxed a copy of DiGrazio's police report. Vasquez immediately notified Molinari, who convened a conference call with the Assistant Prosecutor's office. Thereafter, Vasquez contacted Garcia and ordered her to report to Molinari's office by 5 p.m., an order which Garcia acknowledged. Garcia never reported, and at approximately 6:45 p.m., Vasquez and Detective Maitlin began searching for her, with no results.

Under cross-examination, Vasquez stated that he had no direct knowledge of the events of June 11 and that he did not speak to DiGrazio. Vasquez further testified that the phone call placed to Garcia was recorded via a handheld recorder operated by Detective Maitlin.

Anthony Facchini

Lieutenant Anthony Facchini (Facchini) is a member of the City's Police Department. On June 16, Facchini was briefed on the matter and became involved in the investigation. Facchini stated that there was no report that Garcia's weapon found in the duffel bag was lost or stolen. The investigation included an interview of Officer Porres, under grant of immunity, to determine whether he had removed anything from the duffel bag, as reported by Corbo's ex-wife. Facchini stated that Porres provided no useful information. Facchini interviewed DiGrazio, whose information was consistent with that contained in his report. He also interviewed DePinto, who informed him about Garcia's question about the time cocaine stays in the system. Facchini testified that he was able to contact Garcia at the rehabilitation facility, where he served her papers related to the charges against her.

Under cross-examination, Facchini testified that he interviewed several other officers who stated that they had no reason to believe that Garcia used illicit substances. Facchini also testified that it was his understanding that based on Vasquez's phone call and prior to contact with Luster, Garcia had no reason to believe she was being ordered to report for a drug test. Facchini further testified that no other officers were granted immunity except Porres because there was an allegation that he tampered with evidence.

Jessica Garcia

Garcia was a patrol officer in the City for approximately four years until her termination. She was in a relationship with Corbo at the time of the incident. She testified that when she awakened on June 11th, she noticed that Corbo was blue in the face and was not breathing, so she began performing CPR and called 911.

She stated that she told DiGrazio that Corbo "may have" done a "bump" of cocaine five days before. According to Garcia, Corbo was in the habit of making "distasteful jokes" and stating that he may have to use cocaine to ease the pain associated with a recent motorcycle accident. She stated that she did not know if Corbo actually ingested cocaine, nor was she aware that a toxicology test performed at the hospital was positive for cocaine.

Garcia testified that DiGrazio's testimony was not completely accurate because her statement to "not tell anyone" was based on her lack of knowledge, not an attempt to hide illicit activity, and that the information should be relayed to the EMS personnel only. She further testified that when she went to the hospital with the duffel bag, she did not place the handgun into the duffel bag, nor did she have a weapon on her person. The weapon was stored in a nightstand at Corbo's residence.

Garcia further testified that she spoke with Luster on June 12th regarding Corbo's condition. Garcia further testified that she did not recall any calls from Luster on June 13, but she did recall speaking to another officer to state that she was checking herself into rehab. Garcia received a call from Vasquez on June 13th, ordering her to report in, on the direct order of the Chief of Police, at a certain time. After receiving the order, Garcia left the hospital and drove "in a state of panic and anguish." Garcia stated that she did not expect to be subjected to a drug test, but she admitted that she did not intend to report to Union City. She further admitted that she called DePinto to ask how long cocaine would stay in a person's system. Subsequently, she told DePinto not to call her anymore because she did not wish to speak to anyone. However, she contacted him to ask that he bring her certain items at the rehabilitation facility.

At the time, Garcia believed she was abusing prescription medications, though she stated that she did not take any of the medications while on duty.

Under examination by the Court, Garcia stated that she placed the duffel bag on the floor of Corbo's room on or around June 12 but did not come into contact with it after that. Under direct examination, she stated that she had no knowledge of how her handgun came to be found in the hospital room, and she believed that her weapon was in the nightstand in Corbo's residence. She stated that she has no knowledge as to how her weapon came to be in the duffel bag, and she did not place it in the duffel bag.

Garcia admitted that she disobeyed Vasquez's direct order.

Under cross-examination, she stated that Corbo joked around a lot, and "it's not always in good taste." Therefore, when Corbo spoke about ingesting cocaine, she assumed it was a joke, and she stated that she never witnessed him ingest cocaine. She informed DiGrazio about the possible cocaine use "out of an abundance of caution." She described her state of mind throughout this period as "hysterical [and] panicked." Thus, when Vasquez gave her the order to report, "[she] was really worried about [Corbo] and . . . didn't want to leave." Further, at this point, she "wasn't thinking clearly" that she had disobeyed a direct order.

Under re-direct, Garcia again admitted that she told DiGrazio that Corbo may have ingested a "bump" of cocaine. She stated that she had no reason to believe that she was the target of an investigation and acknowledged that, regardless, she violated a direct order from the Chief via Vasquez.

FINDINGS OF FACT AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act and its associated regulations govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1, et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. Among the causes for major discipline is conduct unbecoming a public employee. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3).

Factors determining the degree of discipline include the employee's prior disciplinary record and the gravity of the instant misconduct. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522-24 (1962). Conduct unbecoming a public employee is any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the governmental unit or which has a tendency to destroy public respect and confidences in the delivery of governmental services. The conduct need not be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior, which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye. In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the appellant is guilty of the charges brought against him/her and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500.

This case is particularly sensitive because it involves law enforcement officials.

> [A] police officer is a special kind of public employee. His primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law. He carries a service revolver on his person and is constantly called upon to exercise tact, restraint and good judgment in his relationship with the public. He represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public . . . .
> [Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966).]

Even more troubling is the fact that illicit drugs may be involved. "Every police officer understands that an officer who uses or sells drugs is a threat to the public." Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 189 (1993).

In this matter, the City bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). Thus, I must engage in a fact-specific analysis to determine which party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Delaware, Lackawanna and W. R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consolidated Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958).

Petitioner challenges whether the City has reasonable suspicion to order her to undergo a drug test.

> Reasonable suspicion is considerably less than proof of wrongdoing by a preponderance of the evidence. In fact, reasonable suspicion is a less demanding standard than probable cause not only in the sense that reasonable suspicion can be established with information that is different in quantity or content than that required to establish probable cause, but also in the sense that reasonable suspicion can arise from information that is less reliable than that required to show probable cause. Moreover, the concept of reasonable suspicion, like probable cause, is not readily, or even usefully, reduced to a neat set of legal rules. Rather, it requires an evaluation of the totality of the circumstances—the whole picture.
> [Tamburelli v. Hudson County Police Department, 326 N.J. Super. 551, 555-56 (App. Div. 1999) (internal citations and punctuation omitted).]

First, I note that contrary to petitioner's assertion in summation, reasonable suspicion does not require testimony that "she was acting strangely, or not performing her job properly, or that she had exhibited any signs of using drugs." Further, though it is obvious that I owe no deference to the determination of an Assistant Prosecutor regarding reasonable suspicion, I would be remiss not to afford his determination some weight, given that under the Attorney General's guidelines, a county prosecutor could in certain circumstances order a law enforcement officer to undergo a drug test based on reasonable suspicion. See Passaic County PBA Local 187 v. Office of the Passaic County Prosecutor, 385 N.J. Super. 11 (App. Div. 2006). I disagree with petitioner's characterization that the drug test was ordered based on "guilt by association"; Molinari testified that he ordered the drug test based on several factors, including the police report, thus based upon an evaluation of the totality of the circumstances. I CONCLUDE that respondent had a sufficient basis to order petitioner to submit to the drug screening.

The next question is whether Garcia refused to submit to a drug test. Contrary to petitioner's assertion, I FIND Luster's testimony credible. Though there may be inconsistencies in her testimony, there is nothing to lead me to conclude that she should be disbelieved. Further, I FIND Garcia's testimony that she was in an emotional state throughout this ordeal credible. However, petitioner has not presented any evidence to support her contention that she did not hear Luster's order. Even if assuming, arguendo, that she did not hear Luster's order, it does not excuse her insubordination in failing to respond to Vasquez's lawful order, which she readily admits she heard. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that respondent has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that petitioner refused to submit to a drug screening. I further CONCLUDE that respondent has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that petitioner was insubordinate by failing to follow a lawful order of a superior officer. I further note that petitioner admitted that she disobeyed Vasquez's order.

Therefore the charges of insubordination, neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming a public employee and refusal to obey a proper order from a superior are sustained.

As for the handgun, it is unclear how it ended up in the duffel bag in Corbo's hospital room. I FIND Garcia's testimony that she did not place it in the duffel bag and that she had no knowledge of how it ended up in the duffel bag credible. However, this does not sufficiently answer the question of how it ended up in the hospital room. In this case, the facts show that Garcia's off-duty weapon was found unsecured and loaded in Corbo's hospital room. Garcia had an obligation to keep the weapon secured, and if it were lost or stolen, to report it. It would require a "leap of faith," bordering on implausibility to imply that the handgun was placed in the duffel bag by a person or persons unknown with malicious intent. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that respondent has shown by a preponderance of the evidence that petitioner failed to properly secure her weapon. The charges of failure to perform duties, neglect of duty and failure to care of firearm off duty outside the home are sustained.

ORDER

The Union City Police Department's termination of Garcia is AFFIRMED.

IN THE MATTER OF
CARL MAGLOWSKI

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

Settled prior to Administrative Law Hearing

CSV 13883-2016S

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is agreed to by the County of Mercer ("County") and Carl Maglowski ("Employee") (collectively "parties") upon the following terms and conditions:

WHEREAS, Employee is employed as a Maintenance Repairer in the County's Department of Transportation/Buildings and Grounds; and

WHEREAS, on or about July 18, 2016 Employee submitted to an Alcotest pursuant to the terms of a Last Chance Agreement dated September 14, 2015; and

WHEREAS, the Alcotest was positive; and

WHEREAS, a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 21, 2016 was issued to Employee; and

WHEREAS, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated August 8, 2016 was issued removing Employee from his employment; and

WHEREAS, Employee filed a timely appeal of the FNDA with the Civil Service Commission bearing agency reference number 2017-655; and

WHEREAS, the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law bearing docket number CSV 13883-2016S for a de novo hearing; and

WHEREAS, the parties would like to resolve the matter amicably; and

WHEREAS, Employee has agreed to resign, upon and subject to the terms and conditions contained herein, which shall be considered a general resignation; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants contained herein and further good and valuable consideration, the parties mutually agree as follows:

1. Employee understands and agrees that his employment with the County ended effective July 18, 2016 and will be recorded as a general resignation. Employee understands and agrees that the County is not obligated to employ him, and that he will not seek reemployment or reinstatement or accept reemployment with the County or any of its subdivisions, at any time in the future.

2. Employee agrees to withdraw with prejudice the appeal pending at the Civil Service Commission bearing agency reference number 2017-655 and Office of Administrative Law Docket Number CSV 13883-2016S.

3. Employee agrees that the County accepting his resignation in lieu of seeking removal constitutes consideration for his waiver of claims contained in this Agreement. Employee will be given the opportunity to obtain medical coverage through the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act, 29 U.S.C. § 1166(a)(4) ("COBRA") for a period of up to eighteen (18) months starting from the date of his employment end date at Employee's own expense.

4. This Agreement is not, and shall not in any way be constructed, as an admission by the County and the Employee of any violation of any federal or state constitutional prohibition or any federal or state or local law or ordinance or regulation, or any express or implied contract of employment, or in violation of any other legal duty owed to or by employee, but instead constitutes the good faith settlement of a disputed claim and the parties specifically disclaim any liability to each other or to any other person. The parties have entered into this Agreement for the sole purpose of resolving the subject matter of this case and any related claims, both asserted and unasserted, in order to avoid the burden, expense, delay and uncertainties of litigation. No findings of any kind have been made or issued by any court and employee does not purport to be the prevailing party in any threatened or pending litigation.

5. Employee agrees that this Agreement shall operate as a complete and final disposition of this matter. As consideration for the County amending the charges in this matter and agreeing to these terms, Employee agrees to release and forever discharge the County, the County's officers, agents, officials, employees, attorneys, administrators, representatives, elected officials, departments, boards, officers and all persons acting by, through, under or in concert with, both in their official and individual capacities, from any and all claims relating to the subject matter of this agreement that he has now to any relief of any kind from the County, whether or not he now knows about those rights, arising out of his employment with County, including, but not limited to, claims for breach of contract; fraud or misrepresentation; violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Acts of 1964, or other federal, state or local civil rights law based on age or other protected class status including sex, race, color, national origin; the Americans with Disabilities Act; defamation; slander; libel; invasion of privacy; intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress; breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealings; promissory estoppel; negligence; violation of public policy; Conscientious Employment Protection Act; New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; Equal Pay Act; New Jersey Employer-

Employee Relation Act; New Jersey Family Leave Act, Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, 29 U.S.C. §621 et seq., and any other claims for unlawful employment practices with regard to this matter. It is emphasized that Employee is waiving all possible claims against the County with regard to this disciplinary matter.

6. Employee represents and certifies that he has carefully read and fully understands all of the provisions of and effects of this Agreement and further, certifies that he is voluntarily entering into this Agreement and that the County has not made any representations concerning the terms of effects of this Agreement other than those contained herein.

7. This Agreement is made and entered into in the State of New Jersey and shall in all respects be interpreted, enforced and governed under laws of the State of New Jersey. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall, in all cases, be constructed as a whole, according to its fair meaning and not strictly for or against any of the parties.

8. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining part(s)/term(s) or provision(s) shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement.

9. The foregoing constitutes a full and final disposition of this matter.

10. Employee shall not request relief with respect to this matter in any forum beyond that which is contained herein.

11. This Agreement may not be modified, altered or changed, except upon the prior express written consent of the parties.

12. This Agreement is the result of negotiations with Employee and the attorney for AFSCME Council 73, Local 2287, Employee's union, with whom Employee had an opportunity to consult prior to signing same and is satisfied with the representation.

13. Employee specifically acknowledges that he understands that this Agreement is a legally binding document, and that by signing this Agreement he is prevented from filing, commencing or maintaining any action, complaint, charge, or other proceeding against the County, except as expressly permitted by the terms of this Agreement. Employee further agrees that any fact, evidence, event or transaction currently unknown to Employee but which hereafter may become known shall not affect in any way or manner the final and unconditional nature of this Agreement. Employee acknowledges that he understands that he has the right to consult with an attorney of his choice to review this Agreement and that he is encouraged by the County to do so. Employee further acknowledges that he understands that he has twenty-one (21) days to consider and accept this Agreement from the date it was first given to Employee, although he may accept it at any time within those twenty-one (21) days. Employee further acknowledges that he understands that he has seven (7) days after signing the Agreement to revoke it by delivering to Kristina Chubenko, Assistant County Counsel, County of Mercer, McDade Administration Building, 640 S. Broad Street, Trenton, New Jersey 08650, written notification of such revocation within the seven (7) day period. If Employee does not revoke the Agreement, the Agreement will become effective and irrevocable on the eighth (8^{th}) day after he signs it (the "Effective Date").

If Employee elects to exercise his right of revocation, this Agreement and the promises contained in it, will automatically be deemed null and void.

14. This settlement fully and finally disposes of all issues in controversy. It is reached by way of compromise.

15. This Agreement shall neither set a precedent nor constitute a past practice.

16. This Agreement shall not be considered binding and/or final until approved by and executed by the County Administrator and/or his designee, and the New Jersey Civil Service Commission.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, and intending to be legally bound hereby, I have hereunto set my hand. WITH MY SIGNATURE HEREUNDER, I ACKNOWLEDGE THAT I HAVE CAREFULLY READ THIS AGREEMENT AND UNDERSTAND ALL OF ITS TERMS INCLUDING THE FULL AND FINAL RELEASE OF CLAIMS SET FORTH ABOVE. I FURTHER ACKNOWLEDGE THAT I HAVE VOLUNTARILY ENTERED INTO THIS AGREEMENT, THAT I HAVE NOT RELIED UPON ANY REPRESENTATION OR STATEMENT, WRITTEN OR ORAL, NOT SET FORTH IN THIS AGREEMENT AND THAT I HAVE BEEN GIVEN THE OPPORTUNITY TO HAVE THIS AGREEMENT REVIEWED BY MY ATTORNEY.

TARIQ MCLAMB, Appellant, vs. NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT, Respondent.	:	OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW OAL DKT. NO. CSV: 02383-2016N AGENCY REF. NO.: 2016-2152 SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The parties in this appeal have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Settlement Agreement that fully disposes of all issues and claims in controversy between Appellant Tariq McLamb ("Appellant" or "McLamb") and Respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("Respondent" or the "District"), and Appellant and Respondent intending to be legally bound, mutually agree as follows:

1. Appellant will withdraw, with prejudice, his appeal and request for a hearing filed under OAL Docket No. CSV 02383-2016N, Agency Ref. No.: 2016-2152 including all claims which were raised or which could have been raised in relation thereto.

2. Appellant also agrees to withdraw, with prejudice, any and all other suits or claims that he may have previously filed against the District that are still pending in any and all courts and/or before any and all agencies with the exception of workers compensation claims. This Settlement is intended to be the final resolution of all of Appellant's outstanding claims against the District related to his employment. It is understood by the parties that this Settlement Agreement will serve as a formal letter of withdrawal for any other suits or claims, except for workers compensation claims, should Appellant fail to submit a formal letter of withdrawal for each suit or claim.

3. In exchange, and for good consideration as hereby acknowledged by the the parties, the District will permit Appellant to resign his former position with the District in good standing so that Appellant's separation from employment effective September 16, 2015 will be converted to and deemed to be a voluntary and permanent "Resignation in Good Standing"

Appellant's personnel records will be amended to conform to the terms of the settlement.

4. Other than permitting Appellant to resign his former position, Appellant will not receive any monies or emoluments from the District as part of this Settlement Agreement.

5. Appellant agrees that he will not apply for reemployment with the District at any time. If Appellant does apply for reemployment with the District and is approved for employment, the terms of this Settlement Agreement will control and shall be grounds for immediate termination of Appellant's employment.

6. As of the date of his resignation, all of Appellant's employment rights, including, but not limited to salary, insurance coverage, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

7. Appellant waives all claims of any nature, either known or unknown, against Respondent with regard to this matter including all fees, back pay, front pay or any other monetary relief.

8. In exchange for the good consideration set forth in Paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, Appellant releases and discharges the District, its Advisory Board of Education and its Advisory Board Members, State District Superintendent and any and all other officers, employees, agents, representatives, successors and assigns of the District (the "Released Parties") with respect to all claims or rights that he may have against the District and the Released Parties relating to his employment with the District and/or separation from the District. This includes, without limitation the waiver of any and all claims, charges, or demands, known or unknown, that have arisen or that may arise relating to Appellant's employment with and separation from the District, including but not limited to any and all rights or claims she may have regarding discrimination on any basis, or any federal or state civil rights law, or any alleged violation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Family Leave Act or Family Medical Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law (and including any and all amendments to the above), the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution and/or any other federal, state, or local statute or common law relating to employment, wages, hours, or any other terms and conditions of employment and/or termination of employment as well as any other alleged violations of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance, and/or contract or implied contract or collective bargaining/contractual claim or tort law or public policy or whistleblower claim, having any bearing whatsoever on his employment with and separation from the District, including but not limited to, any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, front pay, vacation pay, sick pay, wage, commission or bonus payment, attorneys' fees, costs and/or future wage loss, except for workers compensation claims. Appellant agrees to hold harmless and indemnify the District and the Released Parties for any costs or expenses associated with the enforcement of this Settlement Agreement and the covenants and representations contained therein should enforcement of this agreement become necessary.

9. Notwithstanding Paragraph 8 of this Settlement Agreement, it is understood by the parties that Appellant is not waiving his rights to workers compensation claims. Further, it is also understood and agreed that the parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commissioner, or any other federal, state or local law agency. Should any entity, agency commission or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Paragraph 8, Appellant agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever.

10. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable, this Agreement advises Appellant of the legal requirements of the Act, and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Agreement. Accordingly, by executing this Agreement, Appellant acknowledges that he: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Agreement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Agreement; (iii) specifically waives his right to pursue any current claims he may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient and adequate time within which to consider this Agreement; and (v) has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Agreement to revoke it. Appellant understands that he may rescind this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the District either by hand or by certified mail within the seven-day period.

11. Nothing in this Settlement Agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party. This Settlement Agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other employees.

12. Appellant understands, agrees to and acknowledges that he is bound by this Release. Anyone who succeeds to Appellant's rights and responsibilities, such as Appellant's heirs or the executors of Appellant's estate, are also bound. This Settlement Agreement is made for the benefit of the Appellant and the District and all who succeed to their rights and responsibilities.

13. If any provision or portion of a provision of this Settlement Agreement is held by the Civil Service Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction or determined under applicable federal or state law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions or portions of the affected provision will remain and continue in full force and effect.

14. The parties respectively acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Settlement Agreement and that each is signing this Settlement Agreement freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion, or pressure from the other party.

15. This Settlement Agreement constitutes the full agreement among the parties and shall be construed and enforced pursuant to New Jersey Law.

16. This Settlement Agreement is subject to the approval of the State District Superintendent of the State-operated School District of the City of Newark and will only become effective on the District upon the approval of the State District Superintendent. Any disapproval by the Superintendent shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

17. This Settlement Agreement is subject to final approval by the Civil Service Commission and will only become final and binding on Appellant and Respondent upon the approval of the Civil Service Commission. Any disapproval by the Civil Service Commission shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

INITIAL DECISION SETTLEMENT
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 12724-15
AGENCY REF. NO. 2016-716

IN THE MATTER OF EDUARDO ROCES, CITY OF NEWARK, POLICE DEPARTMENT.

Anthony J. Fusco, Jr., Esq., appearing for appellant Eduardo Roces (Fusco & Macaluso, attorneys)

Corinne E. Rivers, Esq., appearing for respondent City of Newark Police Department (Willie L. Parker, Corporation Counsel, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 24, 2017 Decided: January 26, 2017

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

By Final Notice of Disciplinary Action effective January 2, 2014, the City of Newark Police Department (City) suspended Police Officer Eduardo Roces (appellant) for fifteen (15) days for neglect of duty, insubordination, and false statements relating to a domestic violence incident to which he was dispatched on March 9, 2015. Appellant filed a request for a hearing appealing his suspension which appeal was filed with the Office of Administrative Law by the Civil Service Commission for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13 on August 18, 2015.

The matter was assigned to me on August 27, 2015. I scheduled a hearing date for February 11, 2016. On February 9, 2016, the City requested that the hearing date be adjourned due to the unavailability of witnesses. Thereafter, a new hearing date was scheduled for May 31, 2016. Prior thereto, and at the joint request of the parties, the hearing was cancelled because the parties were in productive settlement discussions.

After periodic inquiries from the undersigned as to the status of the settlement, under cover of January 24, 2017, the parties submitted to the undersigned a fully executed Settlement Agreement. On the basis of the written agreement submitted, I FIND that all parties in this matter are satisfied with the terms and conditions of that agreement. I have reviewed the record and terms of the Settlement Agreement, made a part hereof, and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the signatures of the parties and/or their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the applicable law.

I CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and therefore, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be and are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement",) is made and entered into between Police Officer Eduardo Roces ("Roces" or "Appellant"), The Fraternal Order of Police ("FOP" or "Union") and the City of Newark ("City" or "Respondent") (Roces, the Union and the City are collectively referred to hereinafter as the "Parties"). The Parties herein have voluntarily agreed to resolve all disputed matters arising from the disciplinary action taken against him by the City's Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated April 19, 2015 (PNDA) and Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 21, 2015 (FNDA).

In consideration of the promises contained herein, it is agreed as follows:

1. On or about March 9, 2015, at Stratford Place, Police Officer Eduardo Roces did neglect his duty when he failed to diligently carry out all of the duties, responsibilities and functions of his position and/or employment, in that: he failed to exit his patrol unit to gain entry into the dwelling. Instead, the Officer notified dispatch that he was unable to gain access in to the building. It was later determined that the building is unsecured and the locks are inoperable. As a result of Officer Roces' neglect, the victim was assaulted a second time by the actor (the assault was overheard by call taker).

2. As a result of the conduct outlined in paragraph one (1) herein, the PNDA was issued and Roces was brought up on disciplinary charges for violating the following Newark Police Department ("NPD") Rules and Regulations: (1) neglect of duty, (2) obedience to orders, (3) false statements.

3. At the departmental hearing, Roces plead not guilty and waived the hearing to the Office of Administrative Law. He was suspended for fifteen (15) days beginning August 10, 2015 and ending August 28, 2015 and the FNDA was issued.

4. Roces appealed the decision on the FNDA to the Office of Administrative Law.

5. The parties have agreed to resolve all issues herein and herein referenced as follows:

    1. The City agrees to reduce Roces's suspension from fifteen (15) days to ten (10) days. Roces will receive five (5) days back.

    2. The City further agrees to amend the FNDA to merge charge two (2) obedience to orders, and charge three (3) false statements with charge one (1) neglect of duty.

    3. Roces further waives any and all rights and/or claims which he has and/or may have to: 1) A hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under the PNDA, FDNA and/or this Agreement; 2) To challenge the PNDA, FNDA and/or this Agreement; 3) Initiate and/or partake in Grievance procedures; and/or 4) Initiate, pursue and/or partake in any and all litigation against the City in State, Federal and/or Administrative Courts.

4. Roces and the Union each further agree that there is no consideration due Roces, his counsel (if applicable) and/or the Union, including, but not limited to, any claim for back pay and/or counsel fees, arising from his employment and/or the execution of this Agreement, except as otherwise provided herein.

5. Roces and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Public Employee Relations Commission, the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.

6. Roces and the Union further acknowledge that this Agreement further precludes either of them from bringing any type of legal or contractual action in any forum including, but not limited to, filing a Complaint in New Jersey Superior Court or United States Federal Court, filing any type of complaint with the City, Essex County, the State of New Jersey or the United States of America, and filing a grievance and/or requesting arbitration, that is in any manner grounded, based upon, or related to the FNDA.

7. The Parties are bound by this Agreement. Anyone and/or entity who succeeds to the Parties' rights and/or responsibilities, such as heirs, the executor/administrator of Roces's estate, and purchasers and/or assignees of Roces's, the City's and/or the Unions interests shall also be bound.

8. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent or practice in any matter involving the City or other City employees.

9. Roces and the Union further acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is based upon a unique set, combination and weighing of factors and shall not be used and/or construed as precedent and/or to in any way dictate, bind, limit and/or even guide the decisions that the City may make in future and/or currently pending disciplinary matters and/or labor negotiations.

10. Roces and the Union each agree this Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding of any type against or involving the City, except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, or as required by law.

11. This Agreement contains the sole and entire agreement between Roces, the Union and the City, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. Roces specifically represents and acknowledges in executing this Agreement that he has not relied upon any representation or statement by the City, or City's counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth herein. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by all the Parties, and expressly stated to be a modification of the Agreement.

12. Roces agrees and acknowledges that he has been fully and fairly represented by his Attorney and the Union in this matter, and he is satisfied with that representation and with the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

13. Roces agrees and acknowledges that he has had a full opportunity to review this Agreement with his Attorney and/or Union representative and he enters into same knowingly and voluntarily.

14. The Parties agree that if any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of the Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

15. By signing this Settlement Agreement, Roces states that:
    a. He has read it;
    b. He understands it and knows that he is giving up important rights, and any and all other federal and state employment related causes of any kind, not including potential Worker's Compensation claims, but including but not limited to The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Equal Pay Law, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended, The Conscientious Employee Protection Act, The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and any other constitutional, statutory or common law suit, attorney fees and costs of this proceeding, and any public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other State;
    c. He agrees with everything contained in this Agreement;
    d. His Attorney and Union representative negotiated this Agreement in his presence and with his knowledge and consent;
    e. He consulted with his Attorney prior to executing this Agreement;

f. He has signed this Settlement Agreement knowingly and voluntarily.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have caused this Settlement Agreement to be executed.

8. This Agreement is made and entered into in the State of New Jersey and shall in all respects be interpreted, enforced and governed under laws of the State of New Jersey. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall, in all cases, be constructed as a whole, according to its fair meaning and not strictly for or against any of the parties.

9. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining part(s)/term(s) or provision(s) shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement.

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made by and between the Respondent, PASSAIC COUNTY PREAKNESS HEALTHCARE CENTER ("Preakness") and its employee, Appellant, AYESHA WAITE;

WHEREAS Preakness and Mrs. Waite (cumulatively the "Parties") are parties to a matter currently before the Office of Administrative Law (OAL Docket No. CSV 413884-2016N, Agency Dkt. No. 2017-627) regarding Preakness' imposition of a disciplinary action against Mrs. Waite with an effective date of July 28, 2016 (See Exhibit A & B) and

WHEREAS, because of the cost and expense of prosecuting the charge and the uncertainty of its outcome, the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein rather than proceed with a hearing; and

WHEREAS the proposed settlement is in the best interests of the Parties and the public because it avoids an uncertain conclusion after protracted and costly proceedings at the expense of the public;

NOW THEREFORE, intending to be legally bound hereby, Preakness and Mrs. Waite have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them:

A. Preakness agrees to amend its Personnel records to show a resignation in good standing.

Nothing herein shall preclude Preakness from releasing information on this matter to anyone who has a release executed by Mrs. Waite or as consistent with the law. Re: Wayman Smith v. Department of Military and Veterans Affairs (CSC Docket No. 2017-1858; OAL Docket No. CSV 19011-16) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Scorzetti and Ms. Sweeney:

The appeal of Wayman Smith, a Residential Services Worker with the New Jersey Veterans Memorial Home at Paramus, Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, of his removal, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Lisa James-Beavers (ALJ), who issued her initial decision on February 23, 2017 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on February 27, 2017. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on April 13, 2017. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Based on this information, and given the fact that the matter was settled by the parties and a review of the settlement by staff indicates that it is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, there does not appear to be a basis to further delay a final disposition. Thus, the Commission has determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective April 14, 2017.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Re: Janusz Ksieski v. Department of Transportation (CSC Docket Nos. 2015-2698 and 2016-1504 and OAL Docket Nos. CSV 4746-15 and CSV 1587-16)

Dear Mr. Goldman and DAG Wagner:

The appeals of Janusz Ksieski, an Electrical Mechanic with the Department of Transportation, of his 10 and 45 working day suspensions, on charges, were before Administrative Law Judge Jeff S. Masin (ALJ), who rendered his consolidated initial decision on March 7, 2017, recommending upholding the 10 and 45 working day suspensions. No exceptions were filed by the parties.

The time frame for the Civil Service Commission (Commission) to make its final decision was to initially expire on April 21, 2017. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Prior to that date the Commission secured a 45-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than June 5, 2017. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, since one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Accordingly, the Commission sought consent from the parties, as required, to secure a second 45-day extension. However, neither party provided consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective June 6, 2017.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NOS. CSV 4746-15 & CSV 1587-16
AGENCY DKT. NOS. 2015-2698 & 2016-1504 (CONSOLIDATED)

IN THE MATTER OF JANUSZ KSIESKI, DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION.

Evan L. Goldman, Esq., for appellant Janusz Ksieski (Goldman, Davis & Gutfleish, PC, attorneys)

Nonee Lee Wagner, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 8, 2017 Decided: March 7, 2017

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ t/a/:

Janusz Ksieski appealed to the Civil Service Commission from two suspensions issued by his employer, the New Jersey Department of Transportation (DOT). The first, CSV 4746-15, was a ten-day suspension, effective March 16, 2015, imposed by a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) issued on February 24, 2015. The second was a forty-five-day working suspension, effective as of October 5, 2015, and imposed by a FNDA issued on September 21, 2015.[1] The Civil Service Commission deemed the matters to be contested cases and transferred them for hearing to the Office of Administrative Law, where they were consolidated by Order dated June 7, 2016. The parties each believed that the cases could be resolved by joint motions for summary decision, and arranged for the filing of briefs with the then-assigned administrative law judge, who they supplied with a Joint Stipulation of Facts and attached exhibits. Judge Bingham was then appointed to the Superior Court, and the cases were reassigned to this judge, sitting on recall. The final brief was received on February 6, 2017, and the record closed on that date.

Each of the cases involves alleged violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2-3(a)12 (Other Sufficient Cause). More specifically, in each instance the appointing authority identifies that cause as Mr. Ksieski's consistent failure to be available for emergency overtime, which the appointing authority claims violated Ksieski's obligations under NJDOT Guidelines for Employee Conduct and Discipline, Policy #532, Appendix A, Section I-Attendance, Subsection F-Failure to be Available for Emergency Overtime.

The ten-day suspension is premised upon the allegation that Mr. Ksieski responded to none of the thirteen calls for emergency overtime within the period from April 1, 2013 to August 30, 2013. The forty-five-day suspension arises from the contention that he failed to respond to any of twenty-five such calls within the period from September 1, 2013 to February 2, 2014. Before addressing the stipulated facts concerning these charges, it is useful to note the policy language and the contractual provisions regarding emergency overtime. The DOT's Employee Disciplinary Policy states

F. FAILURE TO BE AVAILABLE FOR EMERGENCY OVERTIME

Employees involved in emergency work operations are expected to be available > to work emergency overtime as a condition of employment. Employees who are scheduled to be available for emergency work for specified periods, (such as a weekly, biweekly or monthly period) must request to be excused from a particular assignment 24 hours in advance of the start of the assignment so that the request can be evaluated in terms of the Department's needs. Once a request to be excused is approved and emergency overtime is actually scheduled and worked for the employee's emergency work shift, the employee shall be treated as if he/she rejected an offer of overtime for purposes of equalization of overtime. If such request is denied, the employee must be available for emergency work. Also, an employee who has repeatedly not been available for unplanned emergency overtime may be subject to discipline.

[1] The Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action had sought Mr. Ksieski's removal, but the FNDA only imposed a forty-five-day suspension.

The penalties for violations of this policy are set forth for "CWA" employees and for "Others, and vary depending upon the number of violations."

Article 12, Section B.2, of the contract between the DOT and IFPTE Local 195 provides as follows, "A list showing the rotational order and the overtime call status of each employee and a record of the total overtime worked and refused by each employee shall be maintained in the work unit. Such records shall be made available for inspection on request to Union Officers, Stewards, and employees concerned." Article 12, Section. B.3., states, "the State will give advanced notice of all scheduled overtime to each employee concerned. Such scheduled overtime will be assigned minimally in units of one (1) hour and in hourly or half hourly increments thereafter when such overtime is to be performed contiguous to the employee's scheduled work shift. When overtime is scheduled not contiguous to the employee's work shift, it will be assigned minimally in units of two (2) hours and in hourly or half-hourly increments thereafter." Article 12, section C, provides "It is understood that each employee is expected to be available for a reasonable amount of overtime work. The existence of an emergency situation as defined by Article 14 shall be considered in determining the reasonableness of the amount of overtime work. An employee who refuses an overtime assignment because of a reasonable excuse shall be considered to have worked for the purpose of determining equal distribution of overtime and will not be subjected to disciplinary action." Article 14, section C, states, "The requirement of each employee to respond, if called when such emergency conditions are present, constitutes a condition of State employment. An employee who refuses an assignment because of a reasonable excuse will not be subjected to disciplinary action. However, any abuse or repeated absence or refusal to respond without good and sufficient reason, may be cause for such action."

In regards to the ten-day suspension, the Stipulation of Facts includes entries that affirm that on the following dates, Mr. Ksieski either "refused" or "did not answer" calls for after-hours overtime: April 17, May 2, May 9, June 4, June 5, June 16, June 29, July 14, July 21, July 22, July 30, August 3, August 16, August 17, and August 26. As the parties agree that he did not work emergency overtime on these dates, I FIND that he did not.

For the forty-five-day suspension, the parties stipulated to Exhibit 45, which is a chart that shows Mr. Ksieski did not answer calls for emergency overtime on the following dates: September 14, 24 and 26; October 6, 7, 11 and 30; November 11, 17, 22, 25, 27, and 30; December 3, 10, 16 (twice), 20, 22, 23, 31 (twice), January 1, 3, and 28; and February 1.[2] Again, I FIND that he did not work this emergency overtime.

The parties have also stipulated to Mr. Ksieski's Performance Assessment Review, for the period from April 1, 2012 to March 31, 2013, which includes, as a "Job Responsibility," that he is to respond "immediately" to "Emergencies, including overtime." Additionally, the Performance Review notes that Mr. Ksieski must have the flexibility to deal with the "emergency situations." His "Interim Development Plan" includes as "Specific action to be taken by ratee . . . More electrical training needs to respond to more and after/weekend emergency calls." And lastly, a "Job Responsibility" is to be "be available for overtime, both planned and emergency." This document predates the start of the time period in which the alleged failures to be available that supported the imposition of the ten-day suspension occurred.

There are several types of emergency situations that arise which can call for emergency repairs. These include when traffic signals are knocked down or there is an emergency repair needed for a lighting facility on roadway or interstate highway. In addition to traffic signals, traffic lights are also occasionally knocked down.

An examination of the stipulated records documenting Mr. Ksieski's response to overtime opportunities shows that in April 2013, there were four occasions where he was asked to perform overtime that were contiguous to his scheduled workday, on April 2, 10 and 26, but on April 17, when a traffic signal was knocked down on Route 1 and Manhattan Avenue, he refused to work overtime that was contiguous to the workday. In May 2013, on May 2 and 9, he refused to work overtime that was contiguous to his scheduled workday. He did work five hours on May 13. On May 28, he refused to work overtime, due to a vacation, and this was not marked against him. None of these calls involved emergency work that was not contiguous to his work day.

In June 2013, the appellant was provided with opportunities for emergency overtime non-contiguous to his workday on June 4 and 5, when he did not respond to telephone calls. Earlier on June 5, he had worked six hours of overtime contiguous to his scheduled workday. Then on June 16, he did not answer a call for emergency overtime, later informing his supervisor that he had been out to dinner. On June 18, he worked three hours of overtime contiguous to his workday. On June 29, he refused overtime, first not answering a call and then advising that he "gets no standby pay."

On July 1 and 16, Mr. Ksieski worked overtime contiguous to his work day. On July 14, 20, 21, 22 and July 30, he was called for non-contiguous emergency overtime. He did not answer the call on July 14, July 20, July 21, and 22. As to this last date, he later informed his supervisor that he was babysitting. This was the same reason he later provided for not answering the phone for the July 30, emergency overtime. Mr. Ksieski did work overtime that was contiguous to his work day on July 16.

In August 2013, the appellant worked overtime on August 12, 15 and 27, each situation involving overtime that was contiguous to his workday schedule. However, he refused emergency overtime on August 3, 16, 17 and 26. He was excused from callouts for emergency overtime on August 28.

State's Argument

The appointing authority contends that it is entitled to summary decision, as the facts concerning Mr. Ksieski's repeated refusal of and failure to respond to situations involving emergency overtime are undisputed and clearly demonstrate a violation of the condition of State employment which is part of his job responsibility. The contract and DOT disciplinary policy directly memorializes this requirement. The failure to do so renders the employee subject to discipline. During the period from April 1, 2013 to August 30, 2013, the stipulated records demonstrate that the appellant failed to work on thirteen occasions when he was called for emergency overtime. Only on a very few of these occasions did he offer an explanation for his refusal, that he was babysitting. On other occasions he either did not answer the phone, refused the request, and on one occasion specified that he did not receive "standby pay," apparently offering this as an excuse for his refusal. Thus, the DOT contends that Mr. Ksieski's violation of his job responsibilities and of the disciplinary policy is evident. There being no genuine disputes as to facts material to the charges, judgment must be rendered in the State's favor.

Ksieski's Argument

Mr. Ksieski's response to the motion for summary decision does not appear to deny his refusal to accept these emergency overtime calls or his failure to answer phone calls that were made to him regarding his performing such duty. Additionally, he does not dispute the characterization that he in one form or another refused or did not perform this emergency work, Instead, the response focuses upon the contract between the State and the union, specifically Article 12, section C. This reads, "It is understood that each employee is expected to be available for a reasonable amount of overtime work." He notes that where an employee refuses an overtime assignment because of a reasonable excuse, "he is to be considered as having worked for the purposes of determining equal distribution of overtime and will not be subject to disciplinary action." He notes that the term "reasonable" is not expressly defined in the contract. No other document regarding DOT policy and procedure defines this term. The only guidelines defining what is a "reasonable" amount of overtime are "informal and in conflict, further confusing the inquiry." In regard to this, the appellant points to Joint Exhibit 39, which the Joint Stipulation of Facts identifies as a "real and true copy of a summary created for the departmental hearing of the dates Ksieski worked, opportunities to work, and which opportunities and dates worked were contiguous or non-contiguous to the workday." Ksieski notes that on this document there is handwriting on the bottom of the second page (DOT 232) which appears to refer to some percentage which, according to his brief, "suggests an 'approx[imate]' 50% response rate is required for overtime calls.'" According to the brief, the note specifies that the appellant worked "42% of the requested times," just under this supposed 'approximate' 50% goal." In addition to this document, counsel for Ksieski includes with his Certification an e-mail, purportedly from Mr. Ksieski's former supervisor, Ralph Lewis, which talks about a "set 30% level for that time frame . . ." Counsel suggests that the e-mail indicates "that the standards and therefore application of discipline is not consistent within the department."

In his Certification, Mr. Ksieski claims that he was unaware of others working at the Newark location that were disciplined or terminated for failure to respond to "overtime work and/or meet certain overtime requirements allegedly imposed by the DOT." He denies ever seeing "specific standards or any other specific amount of overtime that employees were expected to work." He speaks of "differing standards that were verbally communicated to employees by managers . . . ." He also notes that after his discharge, DOT "no longer keeps any overtime records and does not enforce any "failure to be available for overtime issues," appearing to claim that his "raising these issues" caused DOT to "eliminate this requirement."

In summary, the appellant contends that the Department's application of discipline is "arbitrary and not based upon clearly defined and established guidelines." He notes that the Department's Policy 532, Section III, sub-section B, Item 4, provides that discipline is to be applied consistently, so as to ensure "that employees are treated equitably, disciplinary action shall be administered in a consistent manner. Similar penalties shall be imposed for similar breaches of discipline when the employees' disciplinary history, length of service and other mitigating circumstances are similar."

Summary Decision

The New Jersey Supreme Court defined the standard for determining motions for summary decision in Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, et al., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). In this case, the Court elaborated upon the standards first established in Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74-75 (1954). Under the Brill standard, a motion for summary decision may only be granted where there are no "genuine disputes" of "material fact." The determination as to whether disputes of material fact exist is made after a "discriminating search" of the record, consisting as it may of affidavits, certifications, documentary exhibits and any other evidence filed by the movant and any such evidence filed in response to the motion, with all reasonable inferences arising from the evidence being accorded to the opponent of the motion. In order to defeat the motion, the opposing party must establish the existence of "genuine" disputes of material fact. The substantive law governing a dispute determines which facts are material. Only disputes regarding "those facts that might affect the outcome of the suit under the governing law will properly preclude the entry of summary judgment." Dungee v. Northeast Foods, Inc., 940 F. Supp. 682, 685 (D.N.J. 1996), quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 248, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed.2d 202, 211 (1986)(Anderson).

In Judson, supra, at 75, the Supreme Court stated that the material facts allegedly in dispute upon which the party opposing the motion relies to defeat the motion must be something more than "facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious, . . . ," (citations omitted). Brill focuses upon the analytical procedure for determining whether a purported dispute of material fact is "genuine" or is simply of an "insubstantial nature." Brill, supra at 530. Brill concludes that the same analytical process used to decide motions for a directed verdict is used to resolve summary decision motions. "The essence of the inquiry in each is the same: 'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that a party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Id. at 536, quoting Anderson, supra, at 477 U.S. 251-52, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L.Ed 2d 214. In searching the proffered evidence to determine the motion, the judge must be guided by the applicable substantive evidentiary standard of proof, that is, the "burden of persuasion" which would apply at trial on the merits, whether that is the preponderance of the evidence or the clear and convincing evidence standard. If a careful review under this standard establishes that no reasonable fact finder could resolve the disputed material facts in favor of the party opposing the motion, then the uncontradicted facts thus established can be examined in the light of the applicable substantive law to determine whether or not the movant is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. However, where the proofs in the record are such that "reasonable minds could differ" as to the material facts, then the motion must be denied and a full evidentiary hearing held.

Discussion

As noted above, Mr. Ksieski does not deny that he did not work the emergency overtime on the various days identified in the Joint Stipulation. He only questions the lack of a definition of what is "reasonable." As noted by the deputy attorney general, in the face of a record of repeated and complete refusal to work any emergency overtime in the two distinct periods addressed by the PNDA's, as opposed to contiguous overtime, Mr. Ksieski's argument about the uncertainty of what was "reasonable" seems quite irrelevant. While he conflates emergency with non-emergency overtime, the latter worked contiguous to his normal work hours, to try to maintain that he was at worst not far off some alleged standard referred to in Exhibit 39, page 2, DOT231, and the e-mail quoted above,[3] the issue here is not about the totality of overtime, but the specific form involved in non-contiguous, emergency overtime. With regard to that specific element of his work responsibility, which, it is noted, was a specific focus of the Performance Review that preceded the dates in question here and which had already been the subject of disciplinary actions against him on two separate occasions, Ksieski cannot remotely claim to have worked a reasonable amount of overtime, and his resort to a defense based upon the definition is meaningless. Further, the remark in his

[3] It is noted that the handwritten material on the bottom of DOT231 is quite apparently not part of the printed "Emergency Overtime" breakdown for "April 2013 thru August 2013" and is not identified as to who wrote the handwritten material or what its source or authority is.

Certification that he is "not aware" of others being disciplined for failure to work overtime or "meet certain overtime requirements" is bereft of any detail to support that no such disciplines have occurred or that others were indeed similarly situated as he was with regard to the specific violations for which the discipline has been imposed in his case, or his history as a repeat violator. And, while he claims that the DOT has changed its overtime policy, he asserts that this occurred after he was discharged (it is noted this case does not address a discharge). The issue in these consolidated matters is whether Ksieski comported himself in conformity with the job requirements and responsibilities existing at the time when the offenses are alleged to have occurred, not whether his actions might have been viewed differently at some later time when he apparently was not even an employee of the DOT. As such, claims as to later occurring developments, even if true, are irrelevant to the current appeals.

Mr. Ksieski has not disputed the material facts relevant to deciding his appeals. I CONCLUDE that there are no material facts in dispute and no hearing is required to make the determination as to his liability for these charges. I FIND that the evidence produced, in the form of stipulations of facts that prove his failure to accept and/or respond to calls for him to undertake required emergency overtime, establishes that in regard to the periods of time encompassed by each of the PNDA's and the ensuing FNDA's, he violated NJDOT Guidelines for Employee Conduct and Discipline, Policy #532, Appendix A, Section I—Attendance, Subsection F—Failure to be Available for Emergency Overtime. The assertions made in response to the DOT's presentation do not rise to a level of legal relevance or evidential support necessitating further proceedings. I CONCLUDE that Mr. Ksieski's lack of compliance with the requirements of his job and his contractual obligations is so manifestly evident as to mandate the issuance of summary decision in favor of the DOT.

As for the penalties to be imposed for each of the two cases, the stipulation of facts and exhibits includes a prior disciplinary history showing that Ksieski was disciplined twice before for violating the requirement to be available for emergency overtime. He received a one- and then a two-day suspension for these offenses. The Guidelines for Employee Conduct and Discipline, Policy #532, Appendix A, Section I-

Attendance, Subsection, provide that for a third such violation the penalty shall be between six and fifteen days, and for a fourth violation the penalty shall be between fifteen days and removal. While such internal penalty guidelines are not binding upon the Civil Service Commission, nevertheless they serve as indications of the employer's view of the seriousness of offenses, particularly where the employee has repeatedly violated the same policy. Based upon the evidence herein and the Guideline, a ten-day suspension for the third and a forty-five-day suspension for the fourth offense are certainly within reason, and perhaps generous, especially for the fourth such offense, where removal could likely have been sustained.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that summary decision is GRANTED to the DOT. Mr. Ksieski's appeals are DENIED. IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that suspensions of ten days and forty-five days are imposed in CSV 4746-15 and CSV 1597-16 respectively.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 20745-15

AGENCY DKT. NO. CSC 2016-1806

JIANNA DIGGS,

Appellant,

v.

NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT,

Respondent.

Joseph Fusella, Esq., appearing for appellant

Bernard Mercado, Esq., for respondent (Newark Public Schools)

Record Closed: January 13, 2017 Decided: February 3, 2017

BEFORE THOMAS R. BETANCOURT, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant, Jianna Diggs, appeals a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, dated November 5, 2015, imposing a penalty of removal for Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, Neglect of Duty, Inability to Perform Duties and Other Sufficient Cause.

The Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on December 16, 2015.

A Prehearing Order, dated January 20, 2016, was entered by the undersigned. A hearing was held on December 2, 2016. The record was kept open for counsel to submit written summations. Both appellant's and respondent's written summations were filed with the OAL on January 13, 2017. The record was closed on January 13, 2017.

ISSUES

Whether there is sufficient credible evidence to sustain the charges set forth in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action; and, if sustained, whether a penalty of a removal is warranted.

STIPULATED FACTS

1. Appellant was employed by respondent, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (District) as a Teacher Aide commencing on or about March 4, 2002.
2. At all material times, appellant was assigned to the South 17th Street School as a Teacher Aide.
3. On May 4, 2015, appellant was on duty as a Teacher Aide at the South 17th Street School.
4. Appellant's son, G.D., attended the same school that appellant worked in as a Teacher Aide.

SUMMARY OF RELEVANT TESTIMONY

Respondent's Case

Quadriyyah Williams testified as follows:

She is the Chief Innovation Officer for the South 17th Street School. She is responsible for the daily operation of the school.

Teacher Aide shifts start at 8:20 a.m. and end at 2:55 p.m. Teacher Aides are required to stay until the end of their shift. Teacher Aides require prior authorization from their supervisor to leave early. They are required to act appropriately in front of students. They are role models. Use of profanity, making threats, and being disruptive is not permitted.

Ms. Williams knows the appellant.

On May 4, 2015, she was advised that two male eighth-grade students were in a fight. She went upstairs to the eighth-grade classroom with a security guard. When she arrived the fight was over. One of the students, G.D. that engaged in the fight was the son of appellant. She spoke with both students. She advised them that fighting is an automatic suspension. She asked both if the matter was settled. While one of the students said the matter was settled, G.D. stated it was not.

After the conversation, she sent G.D. to the classroom where his mother was working as a Teacher Aide. Ms. Williams then went to the office to have a clerk type a report to give to the students' parents before school let out.

At this point, she heard appellant using profanity in the hallway. She was saying things like "Ain't going down this way," "Not my fing son," "I'm punching the fk out." Appellant was with her son at this time. Ms. Williams asked them to go into the principal's office to talk about what happened. Appellant was screaming. She stated "You see my son's face," I am going to have him fight him until his fing face looks like that." Appellant was screaming when she made these statements. Ms. Williams perceived the statements by appellant as threats and thought them inappropriate.

Ms. Williams could hear appellant screaming from down the hallway. Everyone in the office heard her. There were children in the hallway at this time.

Assistant Principal Ramey then entered the office and tried to calm down appellant. At this point appellant stated "my people are going to come around and fk him up," meaning the other student. Ms. Ramey was not able to calm appellant. Ms. Ramey walked appellant from the office. Appellant remained furious at this time. Ms. Ramey walked appellant and her son out of the school.

She then called the other student's parents to advise them of the threat by Appellant. She and security escorted the other student to the school bus.

Appellant had clocked out of work at 2:34 p.m. Her shift ends at 2:55 p.m. Appellant did not have authorization to leave early. Leaving early created a classroom disruption. Appellant needed to assist the students to get ready to leave upon dismissal.

She did notice that G.D. had a red mark on his face. She observed no other injuries to G.D. She did not observe any injury to the other student. She does not believe G.D. was sent to the school nurse. Generally, an injured student would be sent to the nurse. She is unsure why G.D. was not. G.D. was sent to his mother as he was still making threats. She thought it was more important to diffuse the situation then send G.D. to the nurse. Appellant never asked for her son to see the nurse.

Appellant works in the kindergarten class. School was still in session when she sent G.D. to appellant in her classroom. This was not the first time G.D. was sent to his mother's classroom when he was involved in something at school. In hindsight, she would not have sent G.D. to appellant on this occasion. Sending G.D. to appellant disrupted the kindergarten class.

She did not speak with the kindergarten teacher the day of the incident. She did speak with the teacher thereafter. She was not aware that the teacher permitted appellant to leave the classroom. The teacher told Ms. Williams that appellant was acting "crazy."

Ms. Williams agreed she is responsible to report violations of the law to the police. She did not report this incident to the police. If a fight can be resolved at the school level she does not contact the police.

Marie Ramey testified as follows:

She is the Vice Principal of the South 17th Street School. She is the supervisor for grades kindergarten through third grade. This includes teachers and support staff.

A teacher aide has much responsibility. They must assist the teacher when students arrive; prepare for lessons; assist with breakfast; make photocopies; assist with lessons; take students to the bathroom; monitor lunch; get students ready for dismissal; and, assist with other activities. The shift is from 8:20 a.m. to 2:55 p.m.

Should a teacher aide wish to leave early the protocol is to request the same from their immediate supervisor. The protocol is reviewed yearly with staff. Leaving early has a negative impact.

It is inappropriate to use profanity, yell, or scream. This is outside the standard of conduct. There is zero tolerance for threats, bullying, or violence. This is always reviewed with staff. This is disruptive to the instructional environment.

Standards are reviewed every year and staff sign off on them. They are also reviewed during the school year at staff meetings.

Students at the South 17th Street School come from a "tough environment."

Ms. Ramey is appellant's supervisor. She knows G.D. She authored the incident report regarding this matter.

She was summoned to the main office. As she was walking there, she heard loud talking in the principal's office. Appellant was out of control. She was screaming, yelling, and cursing. Appellant was very upset with what happened with her son. She was irate and unstable. There were children in the hallway. Ms. Ramey tried to get appellant to calm down, but was not successful.

After appellant and her son left the school, she was going back to her office when she was summoned by security who advised that appellant and her son were still on school property. Ms. Ramey went outside and asked appellant why she was still there. Appellant replied that she was waiting for a ride. Thereafter appellant and G.D. walked down the street.

Ms. Ramey does not recall if appellant asked for her son to see the school nurse. Protocol is to send a student to the nurse if he or she is hurt in a fight.

Appellant punched out at 2:34 p.m. the day of the incident. She punched out early without authorization. Leaving early causes disruption in the classroom as teacher aides assist students for dismissal.

Appellant's actions were unprofessional, irresponsible, and inappropriate.

Ms. Ramey prepared performance evaluations of appellant, which were generally favorable. Evaluations do not have anything to do with appellant's conduct.

G.D. was sent to his mother's classroom in the past. Appellant had a calming effect on him.

Appellant's Case

Jianna Diggs, Appellant, testified as follows:

She is employed at the South 17th Street School as a teacher aide. She has been so employed for nineteen years. She is assigned to Ms. Cavalaro's kindergarten class. She has no prior disciplinary history. She receives semi-annual evaluations, many of which were prepared by Ms. Ramey.

She saw her son come into her classroom with a black eye. She spoke with her son and then told the kindergarten teacher that she was leaving. She said, "I have to be a mother at this point." The teacher expressed no displeasure with her leaving.

She clocked out and was going to speak with someone in the office. She had just returned to work after a five-day bereavement period.

She works hard and diligently. She became irate when her son was sent to her classroom unescorted. Her son told her he walked there by himself. She was "fussing" at him, using vulgar language, and "cussing" him out. She confirms her shift ends at 2:55 p.m. and that she clocked out early. She then went to the main office as she wanted to speak with someone. She admits to using vulgar language. She states she was angry that her day was interrupted. She works very hard to get things accomplished. She was also upset that her son was not sent to the nurse.

She speaks with a strong voice. "When I speak, I speak with power." She admits to being very irate. She denied threatening the other student. She did say some things. She stated, "Yes, I am from the hood." She explained her comment was not meant as a threat, but something that could happen.

Ms. Diggs stated that Ms. Williams was upset with her that day, and "had every right to be upset with me."

She stated she had an agreement with Mr. Allen, the principal, when her son would go to see her. She stated everyone knew how to handle him, referring to her son.

Ms. Ramey had come into the office to try and calm her down. She confirms that she was cursing in the hallway, and stated she could not control herself at that time.

Ms. Diggs was upset that her son could not have been kept in the office. She was in her classroom working. She became irate. She felt as though she did not receive the proper respect. She was irate that day.

Ms. Diggs agreed that her actions were inappropriate. She lays blame on several factors: She had just returned from bereavement where she buried her grandmother; Ms. Williams should have kept her son in the office and waited for school to be over before summoning her to the office; and, she was interrupted during work.

CREDIBILITY

When witnesses present conflicting testimonies, it is the duty of the trier of fact to weigh each witness's credibility and make a factual finding. In other words, credibility is the value a fact finder assigns to the testimony of a witness, and it incorporates the overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, consistency, and how it comports with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963); see Polk, supra, 90 N.J. 550. Credibility findings "are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463 (1999). A fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973).

The finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness, and credibility does not automatically rest astride the party with more witnesses. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). Testimony may be disbelieved, but may not be disregarded at an administrative proceeding. Middletown Twp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962). Credible testimony must not only proceed from the mouth of credible witnesses but must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954).

Ms. Williams testified in a straightforward, direct, and calm manner. She related the facts of the incident as she observed them. Nothing in her demeanor or manner suggested that she was not merely relating what she observed. I deem her very credible.

Likewise, Ms. Ramey testified in a straightforward, direct, and calm manner. She too simply related the facts as she observed them. I deem her also very credible.

Ms. Diggs's testimony is problematic. While she does not dispute the basic facts regarding her behavior, the explanation she provides for why she acted as she did make little sense, and are not believable. She maintained that she was more upset that G.D. was sent to her classroom as it disrupted her job than the fact that he was in a fight. She further maintained that her comments regarding the threat were misinterpreted. Neither explanation makes sense. Both defy credulity. She blames Ms. Williams for causing the problem by not keeping G.D. in the office until after school. She admits to saying what she said, but maintains it was taken out of context. She was at times hostile. I deem her not credible. Her explanations for her actions are simply not believable.

I FIND the following FACTS:

On May 4, 2015, appellant's son, G.D. was engaged in a physical altercation with another student in the eighth-grade classroom. Ms. Williams responded to the classroom and removed the two students to her office where she spoke with them. G.D. informed Ms. Williams that the matter was not over. Ms. Williams then sent G.D. to appellant in the kindergarten classroom where appellant worked as a Teacher Aide. It was not uncommon for G.D. to go to his mother in the classroom.

Upon G.D.'s arrival at appellant's classroom appellant became irate and began to loudly use vulgar and profane language in the presence of students. Appellant continued to use vulgar and profane language while waking in the hallway towards the main office her son.

Appellant threatened the other student, in a vulgar and profane manner, with physical violence.

Appellant was requested to calm herself by Ms. Williams, and later by Ms. Ramey. Appellant did not calm herself, but continued to use vulgar and profane language in a loud manner.

Appellant's shift on May 4, 2015, was from 8:20 a.m. to 2:55 p.m. Appellant clocked out at 2:34 p.m. without permission. This is a violation of school protocol. Appellant neglected her duty by leaving early, and thereby rendered herself unable to perform her duties as a teacher aide.

Appellant's actions on May 4, 2015, were entirely of her own choosing. Her actions were wholly inappropriate and unprofessional.

Appellant's conduct on May 4, 2015, was not a single outburst when confronted with unpleasant information. It was, rather, a sustained tirade, wholly avoidable but for her actions, that lasted for some time, in the presence and earshot of students, faculty, and staff.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The Civil Service Act, N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to -12.6 governs a civil service employee's rights and duties. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified personnel to public service and is to be liberally construed toward attainment of merit appointments and broad tenure protection. See Essex Council No. 1, N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. Gibson, 114 N.J. Super. 576 (Law Div. 1971), rev'd on other grounds, 118 N.J. Super. 583 (App. Div. 1972); Mastrobattista v. Essex County Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). The Act also recognizes that the public policy of this state is to provide appropriate appointment, supervisory and other personnel authority to public officials in order that they may execute properly their constitutional and statutory responsibilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b). In order to carry out this policy, the Act also includes provisions authorizing the discipline of public employees.

A public employee who is protected by the provisions of the Civil Service Act may be subject to major discipline for a wide variety of offenses connected to his or her employment. The general causes for such discipline are set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2 2.3(a). In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relies by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Therefore, the judge must "decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). This burden of proof falls on the agency in enforcement proceedings to prove violations of administrative regulations. Cumberland Farms v. Moffett, 218 N.J. Super. 331, 341 (App. Div. 1987).

There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for neglect of duty, but the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee has failed to perform and act as required by the description of their job title. Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure. Generally, the term "neglect" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977), neglect of duty implies nonperformance of some official duty imposed upon a public employee, not merely commission of an imprudent act. Rushin v. Bd. of Child Welfare, 65 N.J. Super. 504, 515 (App. Div. 1961).

This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, in accordance with a reasonable probability of truth. Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein, supra, 26 N.J. at 275. The burden of proof falls on the appointing authority in enforcement proceedings to prove a violation of administrative regulations. Cumberland Farms, supra, 218 N.J. Super. at 341. The respondent must prove its case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, which is the standard in administrative proceedings. Atkinson, supra, 37N.J. 143. The evidence needed to satisfy the standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis.

Appellant is charged in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action with conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7); inability to perform duties in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(3); and, other sufficient cause in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11). It is not necessary to engage in an exhaustive analysis of what constitutes the above behavior. Clearly, appellant is guilty of the charges, as she readily admitted in her testimony. The question is what the appropriate discipline is.

An appeal to the Merit System Board requires the Office of Administrative Law to conduct a de novo hearing and to determine appellant's guilt or innocence as well as the appropriate penalty. In the Matter of Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987). In determining the reasonableness of a sanction, the employee's past record and any mitigating circumstances should be reviewed for guidance. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Although the concept of progressive discipline is often cited by appellants as a mandate for lesser penalties for first time offences, > that is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.

> [In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33-34 (2007) (citing Henry, supra, 81 N.J. 571).]

Although the focus is generally on the seriousness of the current charge as well as the prior disciplinary history of the appellant, consideration must also be given to the purpose of the civil service laws. Civil service laws "are designed to promote efficient public service, not to benefit errant employees . . . . The welfare of the people as a whole, and not exclusively the welfare of the civil servant, is the basic policy underlining the statutory scheme." State-Operated School District v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App. Div. 1998). "The overriding concern in assessing the propriety of the penalty is the public good. Of the various considerations which bear upon that issue, several factors may be considered, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record." George v. N. Princeton Developmental Center, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463, 465.

In Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522, which was decided more than fifty years ago, our Supreme Court first recognized the concept of progressive discipline, under which "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 29 (citing Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 522). The Court therein concluded that "consideration of past record is inherently relevant" in a disciplinary proceeding, and held that an employee's "past record" includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously brought to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 523-24.

As the Supreme Court explained in Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30, "[s]ince Bock, the concept of progressive discipline has been utilized in two ways when determining the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." According to the Court:

> . . . First, principles of progressive discipline can support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct . . . .

> The second use to which the principle of progressive discipline has been put is to mitigate the penalty for a current offense . . . for an employee who has a substantial record of employment that is largely or totally unblemished by significant disciplinary infractions . . . .
> . . . [T]hat is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when . . . the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> [Hermann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30-33 (citations omitted).]

In the matter of In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182 (2011), a Camden County pump-station operator was charged with falsifying records and abusing work hours, and the ALJ imposed removal. The Commission modified the penalty to a four-month suspension and the Appellate Court reversed. The Court re-examined the principle of progressive discipline. Acknowledging that progressive discipline has been bypassed where the conduct is sufficiently egregious, the Court noted that "there must be fairness and generally proportionate discipline imposed for similar offenses." Id. at 193. Finding that the totality of an employee's work history, with emphasis on the "reasonably recent past," should be considered to assure proper progressive discipline, the Court modified and affirmed (as modified) the lower court and remanded the matter to the Commission for reconsideration.

The concept of progressive discipline has been used to reduce the penalty of removal in other cases involving a law enforcement officer who used racist language in public but who otherwise had a largely unblemished employment record. In In re Roberts, CSR 4388-13, Initial Decision (December 10, 2013), adopted, Commission (February 12, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, for example, an on-duty police officer who, while arresting an uncooperative black suspect, shouted to his K-9 police dog, "Zero, bite that nigger," had his penalty modified from removal to a six-month suspension. The ALJ had found that his misconduct was "plainly aberrational," as his past record only included an oral reprimand for a motor vehicle accident over the course of seven years of service and several of his minority co-workers credibly testified that he had otherwise treated citizens in an impartial and respectful manner. While the ALJ found that, due to mitigating circumstances, "termination is too severe a penalty," he nonetheless concluded that, despite a past record that included only an oral reprimand, the "fitting" penalty "is the longest suspension which the law allows: six months."

While concept of progressive discipline in determining the level and propriety of penalties imposed requires a review of an individual's prior disciplinary history a "clean" record may be out-weighed if the infraction had issued a serious in nature. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Further some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate. Destruction of public property is such an infraction. Kindervatter v. Dep't of Envt'l Protection, CSV 3380-98, Initial Decision (June 7, 1999), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

In determining the penalty to be imposed, the court noted that none of the factors justifying mitigation of removal were present. Namely mistake, negligence, or remorse. The Court was compelled to hold that whatever the employee's motive, and regardless of the worth of the computer, she had to be subject to major discipline. While the goal of discipline is to either remove an employee unsuitable for public service or to impose some lesser sanction when the employee may be rehabilitated, the Court held that the extraordinary serious offense in this case could not be mitigated by a prior good-service record as that mitigation is reserved only for lesser offenses.

In deciding what penalty is appropriate, the courts have looked toward the concept of progressive discipline. In Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 523-24, The New Jersey Supreme Court held that evidence of a past disciplinary record, including the nature, number, and proximity of prior instances of misconduct, can be considered in determining the appropriate penalty. Also, where an employee's misconduct is sufficiently egregious, removal may be warranted and need not be preceded by progressive penalties. In re Hall, 335 N.J. Super. 45 (App. Div. 2000), certif. denied, 167 N.J. 629 (2001); Golaine v. Cardinale, 142 N.J. Super. 385, 397 (Law Div. 1976), aff'd, 163 N.J. Super. 453 (App. Div. 1978), certif. denied, 79 N.J. 497 (1979). The penalty imposed must not be so disproportionate to the offense and the mitigating circumstances that the decision is arbitrary and unreasonable.

In the instant matter, appellant has no prior disciplinary record. Further, appellant has received generally good evaluations during her eighteen years of employment. However, appellant's actions were egregious. This was not a simple outburst. This was a sustained act which included profanity in a school setting with children present, a threat against another student, and a refusal to control herself even though given ample opportunity and requests to do so. Further, appellant is unable to accept full responsibility for her actions.

Based upon the above authorities, I CONCLUDE that progressive discipline should not apply. Here, appellant's actions were so egregious, coupled with her inability to accept full responsibility for actions, that removal is warranted.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that appellant's appeal is DENIED.

It is further ORDERED that the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, dated November 5, 2015, providing for a penalty of removal, effective May 26, 2015, is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. I am the Assistant Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Rahmaun Horton indicating his 60 working day suspension is being modified to a 30 working day suspension.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, we need to know how to account for the remaining 30 work days. Is that time frame to be categorized as an unpaid leave of absence or something else?

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties regarding the above. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties. The sooner the information is provided the better.

CSC DKT. NO. 2017-858

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION
OF THE

ISSUED: MAR 13 2017 BW

The appeal of Johnny Mendez, Senior Maintenance Repairer/Water Repairer, City of Newark, Department of Water and Sewer, resignation not in good standing effective July 5, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge John P. Scollo, who rendered his initial decision on February 7, 2017. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on March 9, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

Although the resignation not in good standing is reversed, since the appellant was retired before the alleged infraction occurred, he is not entitled to any back pay or seniority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:202.10.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in resigning the appellant not in good standing was not justified. The Commission therefore reverses that action and grants the appeal of Johnny Mendez.

Re: Johnny Mendez

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
SUMMARY DECISION
OAL DOCKET NO. CSV 15234-16

JOHNNY MENDEZ,
Appellant,
v.
CITY OF NEWARK, WATER AND SEWERS,
Respondent.

John D. Feeley, Esq., for Appellant Johnny Mendez (Feeley & LaRocca, attorneys)

Kenneth Calhoun, Esq., Corporation Counsel for Respondent, City of Newark

Record Closed: January 3, 2017 Decided: February 7, 2017

BEFORE JOHN P. SCOLLO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant, Johnny Mendez, appeals from the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated September 1, 2016, rendered after an August 8, 2016, disciplinary hearing before Hearing Officer L'Tanya L. Williamson.

Newark alleges that Mendez took fifteen vacation days that he had not yet earned and must compensate Newark for same.

In both the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) dated July 15, 2016, and the FNDA, the employer, Respondent City of Newark, Department of Water and Sewers (Newark) charged Mendez with Resignation Not In Good Standing under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2.

A hearing was held on August 8, 2016, out of which came the unsigned FNDA stating: "Resignation Not In Good Standing, effective July 5, 2016." The FNDA was served on Mendez on September 12, 2016.

Mendez requested a fair hearing before the Office of Administrative Law. The matter was filed on October 5, 2016, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52: 14F-1 to -13.

The tribunal received Appellant's Motion to Dismiss the Charges on December 19, 2016. The City of Newark has not submitted opposition and the time for doing so expired on January 3, 2017, and the record closed that day.

ISSUE

The issue in this case is whether the charge of failing to report to work on July 1, 2016, through July 5, 2016, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2 can be sustained. This legal question depends upon the determination of the question of whether or not Mendez was still an employee on July 1, 2016, and thereafter.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are not in dispute:

On May 18, 2016, Mendez submitted his application to the Public Employees Retirement System (PERS) for early retirement with an effective retirement date of July 1, 2016. On June 9, 2016, the City of Newark submitted its Certification to PERS in connection with Mendez's application. In its June 22, 2016, letter sent simultaneously to Mendez and Newark, PERS approved Mendez's retirement application with an effective date of July 1, 2016.

On May 25, 2016, Mendez submitted a request to take fifteen vacation days between June 10, 2016, and June 30, 2016, stating on the request that he would return to work on July 1, 2016. This vacation request was approved by Newark. According to the PNDA, Mendez called in sick on July 1, 2016; Mendez has not disputed this assertion. Mendez did not report to work on July 1, 2016, or on any date thereafter. According to Mendez, he became retired effective July 1, 2016; Newark has not disputed that Mendez's status was "retired" as of July 1, 2016.

The FNDA was not signed. Besides the unsigned FNDA, actual adjudication has not been received by this tribunal. The "Memorandum" of Hearing Officer L'Tanya L. Williamson dated August 29, 2016, does not set forth an adjudication of the charges, but only makes a "recommendation" that the Newark Law Department should "pursue repayment" of the vacation days that Mendez had used but (allegedly) had not yet earned.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.1(a) any employee may resign in good standing by giving the appointing authority at least fourteen days written or verbal notice.

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(a) if an employee resigns without complying with the required notice set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.1, he is considered and recorded as having resigned not in good standing.

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(b) an employee who fails to return to duty for five consecutive business days without the approval of his superior is considered to have abandoned his position and shall be recorded as having resigned not in good standing.

Under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.2(c) an employee who fails to return to duty for five consecutive business days following an approved leave of absence shall be considered to have abandoned his position and shall be recorded as having resigned not in good standing.

It is beyond question that Mendez met the notice requirement set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.1 when he submitted his written application for retirement on May 18, 2016. Newark submitted its Certification in connection with Mendez's retirement application on June 9, 2016, which makes it clear that Newark knew about Mendez's retirement application and that the requested effective date of July 1, 2016. The June 22, 2016, letter that PERS sent to Mendez approving his retirement application with an effective date of July 1, 2016, was simultaneously sent to Newark.

From the undisputed facts and the logical deductions that follow from them, I CONCLUDE that Newark was put on notice by Mendez and by PERS that on July 1, 2016, Mendez would no longer be an employee, but would be a retiree. I CONCLUDE that under the aforesaid regulations only employees are required to report to work and I CONCLUDE that retirees are not required to report to work. I CONCLUDE that on July 1, 2016, Mendez was a former employee and was a retiree as of that date forward, and, therefore, was not required to report to work.

I CONCLUDE that inasmuch as N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.1 and -6.2 only apply to employees—and not to retirees—it was impermissible to charge Mendez for violation of these sections for any action or inaction of his from July 1, 2016, forward. I CONCLUDE that the charges brought by Newark against Mendez under the aforementioned sections were null and void when brought. Given the fact that the FNDA has not been signed, it is not clear to this tribunal that an adjudication has actually been made against Mendez.

I nonetheless CONCLUDE that any adjudication of wrongdoing against Mendez under said charges must be and hereby is reversed.

Newark raises an issue as to whether Mendez was entitled to take fifteen vacation days or some other amount of vacation days or none at all between June 10, 2016, and June 30, 2016. Newark alleges that Mendez was paid for vacation days that he had not yet earned as of his last official day as an employee, June 30, 2016. As noted above, the only issue properly before this tribunal is the issue of whether Mendez complied with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.1 and -6.2. This tribunal has decided that Mendez fully complied with said notice requirements. I CONCLUDE that the issue of whether Mendez owes or does not owe money to Newark for vacation days he used with Newark's approval (whether due to Newark's mistake or due to some other reason) is beyond the scope of the issue before this tribunal. As noted above, the only proper issue before this tribunal is whether Mendez was still an employee on July 1, 2016, and thus obligated to report to work. That question has been answered herein.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the charges brought against Johnny Mendez under N.J.A.C. 4A:2.6.2 must be DISMISSED; and it is ORDERED that any adjudications of wrongdoing entered against Johnny Mendez on the basis of the aforesaid charges must be and hereby are REVERSED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF CHRISTOPHER MONAHAN, TOWNSHIP OF SCOTCH PLAINS DEPARTMENT OF RECREATION.

Steven I Adler, Esq., for appellant (Mandelbaum Salsburg, attorneys)

Amanda E. Miller, Esq., for respondent (Decotiis, Fitzpatrick & Cole, attorneys)

BEFORE KIMBERLY A. MOSS, ALJ:

Record Closed: January 23, 2017 Decided: February 7, 2017

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Christopher Monahan (Monahan), appeals his ten day suspension by respondent, Township of Scotch Plains Department of Recreation (Scotch Plains or respondent), on charges of violation of federal drug and alcohol use by and testing of employees who perform functions related to the operation of commercial vehicles and other sufficient cause. At issue is whether Monahan engaged in the alleged conduct, and, if so, whether that warrants a ten-day suspension.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 18, 2016, respondent served Monahan with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. A departmental hearing was held on April 26, 2016. Respondent served Monahan with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated May 5, 2016, sustaining charges of violation of federal drug and alcohol use by and testing of employees who perform functions related to the operation of commercial vehicles and issued a ten-day suspension.

Following Monahan's appeal to the Civil Service Commission, it transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, where it was filed on June 10, 2016, for determination as a contested case. A motion for Summary Decision was filed by respondent on November 2, 2016. Petitioner filed opposition on November 22, 2016. I denied that motion on November 28, 2016. The hearing was held on December 2, 2016. Respondent submitted closing briefs on January 18, 2017. Appellant submitted closing briefs on January 20, 2017, at which time I closed the record.

I FIND the following undisputed FACTS:

Monahan has been employed by Scotch Planes for thirty-three years. Monahan has had numerous random drug screenings as an employee of Scotch Plains. On April 16, 2016, Monahan was on a list of individuals to be given a random drug and alcohol test by Lexann Francis (Francis) an on-site collector. Monahan reported for the testing to give a urine sample. He was told that he had not provided enough urine and would have to provide another sample. Monahan left the building where the testing was taking place before attempting to give an additional urine sample. Monahan received an employee handbook from Scotch Plains in 2012.

Lexann Francis

Francis works for Valley Medical Group as a collector tech. Her duties include drug and alcohol testing. She has trained as a collector tech and has retraining every three to five years. She follows the collection guidelines of the Department of Transportation (DOT). Francis has done on-site testing for Scotch Plains for sixteen years.

Francis is given a list of approximately three employees from Valley Medical group. The list is a random list of safety sensitive employees. It includes employees who are required to have a commercial driver's license. She arrives on site and locates the supervisor. She gives the supervisor the list of people to be tested. Prior to the test, the employee's identification is checked and the custody and control form is done. The employees are asked if they need to take anything out of their pockets, the employee then choses a test cup. Francis puts a line on the cup to show the amount of urine that is required for the test. If the employee does not provide enough urine, the sample is discarded and the employee is told to drink water and stay in her eye sight and do not leave. When an employee does not provide enough urine it is called shy bladder. The testing site is the garage of the Department of Public Works. The entrance to the garage is between where her table is set up and the restroom. There is another set of doors fifty yards from the restroom. Francis can see both doors from the table.

On April 14, 2016, Francis was on-site testing in Scotch Plains. She was going to other test sites after Scotch Plains but was not rushing to leave the site. Francis sets up outside of the supervisor's office. The testing site is where her supplies and kits are. Monahan came for testing on April 14, 2016, at approximately 7:15 a.m. She told him to choose a cup. Francis marked the cup with a line to show the amount of urine that was required. She puts the mark at the sixty-five milliliter (ML) on the cup. The cup has a temperature strip and she marks the cup above the temperature strip. The temperature strip is always near seventy-five ML. The cup has a line at forty-five ML. Monahan was told not to run the water. Francis did not secure the water source but did check that the toilet had a blue covering agent in it. She also took the garbage can out of the room. Francis does not sit during the testing process.

Monahan was the first person she tested that day. She asked him to empty his pockets and he took out his wallet. He provided a urine sample that was not sufficient for testing. She did not have to hold the cup to the light to know that the sample was insufficient. Francis followed the shy bladder guidelines. For shy bladder guidelines the tester has to wait up to three hours for the employee to provide a sufficient urine sample. She told Monahan that he had to provide another sample, to drink water, and not to leave until he provided a second sample. She told him if he left it would be considered a refusal. She discarded the insufficient sample in accordance with the protocol. Francis next prepared the chain of custody form for the next person to be tested. She did not see Monahan drink any water after he was told that he had to provide a sufficient sample. As Francis was doing the procedure with the next person, she realized that Monahan had left. Monahan did not ask her if he could leave. Francis was the only collector present at that time.

When an employee leaves in the middle of shy bladder testing, it is considered a refusal to test. Monahan returned after 8:00 a.m. He was advised that since he left the site that it was considered a refusal and the test could not be completed. Monahan became upset when he could not provide another sample. He never stated that he had provided a sufficient urine sample. Francis called Alexander Mirabella, the city administrator, and informed him that Monahan had left the testing area before completing the testing. She faxed a report to Mirabella from Westfield, which was her next stop. On Monahan's report controlled substance and alcohol use testing, Francis did not check that Monahan did not provide sufficient urine. The specimen bottle was not released to Fed Ex as stated in the custody and control form. Francis filled out this form prior to the testing being completed.

Francis had previously tested Monahan more than ten times. He was always told that he had to provide 45 ML of urine for the test to be complete.

Alexander Mirabella

Mirabella is the municipal manager and appointing authority for Scotch Plains. Scotch Plains has a drug and alcohol testing policy for employees with commercial driving licenses. Valley Medical does the drug and alcohol testing.

On April 14, 2016, three employees were called for testing. Mirabella was informed that one of the employees, Monahan, left the testing area which is considered a refusal. He gathered information and then spoke to Monahan. Monahan stated that he was called for the test and he left the area to conduct other business. After the meeting Monahan emailed him to further explain his version of what happened. In the email Monahan stated that he gave a urine sample and was told it was insufficient. He drank five bottles of water. He then left the testing site in a golf cart to go to his jobsite. When he returned to the testing site, he was told that his leaving the test site was considered a refusal. Mirabella spoke to witnesses Frank Dinizzo, Nick Dinizzo, Franco Sabino, Richard Dare, and Ron Walkonic, who all saw Monahan leave the test site. They also knew that you could not leave the test site.

The employees are given an Employee Handbook, which contains the drug policies one of which is if an employee refuses a drug test they are subject to disciplinary action. The Handbook follows the DOT guidelines. The Handbook does not state where the drug testing site is located or what happens when an employee gives an insufficient urine sample.

April 14, 2016, was Monahan's first day back to work after a vacation. He was beginning new duties.

Richard Dare

Richard Dare (Dare) works for Scotch Plains doing maintenance and repair. Monahan was his supervisor. Monahan explained the drug testing policy to Dare and a group of other people. He told them that there was random testing, that they had to stay in the facility until the testing was done and the testing was done in the DPW building. This conversation was not done in connection with Dare being a new hire. There were six people present during this conversation. Dare worked in the Recreation Department for Scotch Plaines until 2015.

Christopher Monahan

Monahan has been employed by Scotch Plains for thirty-three years. He is the facility and golf course manager. He works for the Recreation Department which shares space with DPW. He went on vacation in early April 2016. Once he returned he would have increased job responsibilities. The drug testing was done in the front sixth of the recreation building. The recreation section is in the right rear section of the building. The drug testing table is in the left two-thirds of the building.

Monahan began getting drug tested approximately twenty years ago. Francis is the only person that he can remember who has drug tested him. In prior testing he had to wait to give a full urine sample. He waited near the building but not in the testing area. Previously he went to the recreation area while waiting to give a second sample, other employees left before the second test. Monahan later stated that he does not know if any of the people he saw were in the shy bladder protocol. Monahan had never previously given insufficient urine in a drug test. The people he saw walking around were waiting to give a urine sample.

Monahan arrived at work at 7:00 a.m. He learned that he was to be tested at 7:10 a.m. He went to the testing area and saw Francis and the kits. Two-thirds of the area is visible from the testing table. He did not see other employees that were not being tested that day using the rest room. There were people walking around at this time. Monahan waited five to ten minutes before providing a urine sample. He was not asked to take anything out of his pockets. Francis drew a line on the sample cup. He was told to fill the cup to the line and give the cup back to Francis. He would normally turn on the water and flush the toilet to facilitate using the bathroom. The urine sample that he gave was at the area where the temperature strip was. The sample was more than 45 ML.

Monahan gave Francis the cup with urine, she held it eye level and told him that the sample was not sufficient and he would have to provide another sample. He was not told that he could not leave the site or he had to stay in a specific area. He drank two bottles of water that he retrieved from a water cooler next to the testing table. Monahan went outside, spoke to some people then took a golf cart to the golf course. He went to the pro shop where his office is to conduct golf course business. He checked emails and receipts. He returned to the testing site seven or eight minutes later. He did not leave township property.

When Monahan returned to the testing site Francis told him that he was in violation. He asked could he give the sample at that time and was told that he could not. He had previously left the testing are prior to giving a urine sample and never told that he had violated the policy. He was not told that he had the right to get his own test done.

Monahan does not recall speaking to Dare about drug testing. The most he would have said is that there was random drug testing. On cross-examination he stated he never told any of the people that work for him that there would be random drug testing or the drug testing procedures. Monahan emailed Mirabella and stated that he had provided four ounces of urine.

He went home and put four ounces in a cup that was similar to the cup used in the testing. He estimated that was the amount of urine he provided to Francis. Four ounces is 120 ML. He believes that the urine sample that he provided was seventy-five ML. Monahan did not write down the sample size or take a photograph of it. He had previously received the Employee Handbook, which he reviewed approximately five years ago.

Monahan did not tell Francis that he had provided a sufficient amount of urine. He did not know in April 2016 what the dimensions of the testing site were. He did not ask about the dimensions of the test site.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In light of the contradictory testimony presented by respondent's witnesses and appellant, the resolution of the charges against Monahan requires that I make credibility determinations with regard to the critical FACTS.

The choice of accepting or rejecting the witness's testimony or credibility rests with the finder of facts. Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J. Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, for testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 60 N.J. 546 (1974); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961).

A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness even though not contradicted when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521-22 (1950); see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997).

Having had an opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND Francis, Mirabella, and Dare are credible. Francis's testimony regarding the procedure for the urine testing was clear. Her reasoning for putting a line on the cup above the forty-five-ML line was understandable. She admitted that she did not secure the water source but did check that the toilet had the blue covering agent. Mirabella was also credible his testimony regarding his conversation with Monahan and Monahan's email were uncontested. Dare has no reason to not be truthful regarding Monahan speaking to a group of people who he supervised regarding drug tests. I FIND Monahan to be less credible, his testimony was contradictory. He stated that he previously had gone to the recreation area before being required to give a second urine sample. He later testified that he had never previously given an insufficient urine sample. He testified that he gave a four-ounce urine sample but four ounces is one hundred and twenty MLs. He testified that other workers left the test site before a second test but later testified that he did not know if the other workers were in the shy bladder protocol.

Having reviewed the testimony and evidence and credibility of the witnesses, I make the following additional FINDINGS of FACTS:

When Monahan reported for the urine test, he did not provide a urine sample that was at least forty-five ML. A urine sample must be at least forty-five ML. When someone does not provide a sufficient urine sample the tester disregards the insufficient sample. The tester then tells the employee to drink fluids. If the employee leaves the test site before the collection process is complete, the tester must discontinue the collection. This is considered a refusal to test. There is no requirement for the tester to inform the employee that failure to remain at the test site constitutes a refusal. Francis told Monahan that he had to give another urine sample, drink water and do not leave the area. He was in the shy bladder protocol. He was supposed to wait and provide a second sample with sufficient urine. Monahan drank some water and left the DPW building where the testing was taking place.

Monahan went to his office in the pro shop of the golf course and returned to the testing site at approximately 8:00 a.m. Francis informed him that his leaving the test site prior to giving the second urine sample is considered a refusal to take the urine test. He asked could give the urine sample now but Francis said that he could not.

Monahan has been taking drug and alcohol tests for Scotch Plains for twenty years. It strains credibility to believe that he did not know where the testing site was. When he was told that he was going to be tested on April 16, 2016, he went to the DPW garage where the collection table was located. Monahan had previously told Dare and approximately five other employees about the drug policy and that the drug testing was done in the DPW building and that they had to stay at the testing site until the testing was completed.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the charges of violation of federal drug and alcohol use by and testing of employees who perform functions related to the operation of commercial vehicles and other sufficient cause are sustained.

The purpose of the Civil Service Act is to remove public employment from political control, partisanship, and personal favoritism, as well as to maintain stability and continuity. Connors v. Bayonne, 36 N.J. Super. 390 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 19 N.J. 362 (1955). The appointing authority has the burden of proof in major disciplinary actions. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. The standard is by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Major discipline includes removal or fine or suspension for more than five working days. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2. Employees may be disciplined for insubordination, neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and other sufficient cause, among other things. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. An employee may be removed for egregious conduct without regard to progressive discipline. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474 (2007). Otherwise, progressive discipline would apply. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

Hearings at the OAL are de novo. Ensslin v. Twp. of N. Bergen, 275 N.J. Super. 352 (App. Div. 1994), certif. denied, 142 N.J. 446 (1995).

49 C.F.R. § 40.65(a) provides:

> As a collector, you must check the following when the employee gives the collection container to you:
>
> (a) Sufficiency of specimen. You must check to ensure that the specimen contains at least 45 mL of urine.
>
> (1) If it does not, you must follow "shy bladder" procedures (see § 40.193(b)).
> (2) When you follow "shy bladder" procedures, you must discard the original specimen, unless another problem (i.e., temperature out of range, signs of tampering) also exists.

(3) You are never permitted to combine urine collected from separate voids to create a specimen.

(4) You must discard any excess urine.

49 C.F.R. § 40.193(a) and (b) provide:

(a) This section prescribes procedures for situations in which an employee does not provide a sufficient amount of urine to permit a drug test (i.e., 45 mL of urine).

(b) As the collector, you must do the following:

(1) Discard the insufficient specimen, except where the insufficient specimen was out of temperature range or showed evidence of adulteration or tampering (see § 40.65(b) and (c)).

(2) Urge the employee to drink up to 40 ounces of fluid, distributed reasonably through a period of up to three hours, or until the individual has provided a sufficient urine specimen, whichever occurs first. It is not a refusal to test if the employee declines to drink. Document on the Remarks line of the CCF (Step 2), and inform the employee of, the time at which the three-hour period begins and ends.

(3) If the employee refuses to make the attempt to provide a new urine specimen or leaves the collection site before the collection process is complete, you must discontinue the collection, note the fact on the "Remarks" line of the CCF (Step 2), and immediately notify the DER. This is a refusal to test.

(4) If the employee has not provided a sufficient specimen within three hours of the first unsuccessful attempt to provide the specimen, you must discontinue the collection, note the fact on the "Remarks" line of the CCF (Step 2), and immediately notify the DER.

(5) Send Copy 2 of the CCF to the MRO and Copy 4 to the DER. You must send or fax these copies to the MRO and DER within 24 hours or the next business day.

In this matter Monahan left the test area after he failed to provide a sufficient urine sample and was told to stay in the test area. The DOT regulations are clear that if an employee leaves the collection area during the shy bladder protocol prior to providing a sufficient urine sample that it is considered a refusal. Monahan left the collection site to go to his office, prior to giving a sufficient urine sample.

When determining the appropriate penalty to be imposed, the appointing authority must consider an employee's past record, including reasonably recent commendations and prior disciplinary actions. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 500. Depending on the conduct complained of and the employee's disciplinary history, major discipline may be imposed. Id. at 522–24. Major discipline may include removal, disciplinary demotion, suspension or fine no greater than six months. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a); N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.4. A system of progressive discipline has evolved in New Jersey to serve the goals of providing employees with job security and protecting them from arbitrary employment decisions. The concept of progressive discipline is related to an employee's past record. The use of progressive discipline benefits employees and is strongly encouraged. The core of this concept is the nature, number and proximity of prior disciplinary infractions evaluated by progressively increasing penalties. It underscores the philosophy that an appointing authority has a responsibility to encourage the development of employee potential.

In this case Monahan violated the federal drug testing policy by leaving the test area before providing a forty-five ML urine sample.

Under the circumstances, major discipline is appropriate; I CONCLUDE that the penalty of a ten-day suspension is appropriate.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and applicable law, it is hereby ORDERED that the determination of the Township of Scotch Plaines, Department of Recreation that Christopher Monahan be suspended for ten days is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MAR 10 2017 BW

The appeal of Esther Tyndall, Clerk 1, City of East Orange, Department of Property Taxation, two 180 calendar day suspensions, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joan Bedrin Murray, who rendered her initial decision on February 3, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant. A reply to exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on March 9, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision to modify the first 180 calendar day suspension to a 90 calendar day suspension and uphold the second 180 calendar day suspension.

Since the penalty has been modified, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits, and seniority, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, following the 90 calendar day suspension. However, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), the award of counsel fees is appropriate only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in any disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges, not whether the penalty imposed was appropriate. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121, 128 (App. Div. 1995); James L. Smith v. Department of Personnel, Docket No. A-1489-02T2 (App. Div. March 18, 2004); In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although one of the penalties was modified by the Commission, charges were sustained. Thus, the appellant has not prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues of the appeal. Consequently, as the appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a), counsel fees must be denied.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in disciplining the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore modifies the first 180 calendar day suspension to a 90 calendar day suspension and upholds the second 180 calendar day suspension. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted 90 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. An affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

IN THE MATTER OF ESTHER TYNDALL, CITY OF EAST ORANGE, DEPARTMENT OF PROPERTY TAXATION.

Jason L. Jones, Esq., for appellant Esther Tyndall (Weissman & Mintz LLC, Attorneys at Law)

Marlin G. Townes, Assistant Corporation Counsel, for respondent City of East Orange (Khalifah L. Shabazz, Esq., Corporation Counsel)

Record Closed: May 29, 2016 Decided: February 3, 2017

BEFORE JOAN BEDRIN MURRAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This consolidated matter involves disciplinary charges against appellant Esther Tyndall, who was employed as a Clerk 1, (previously known as Assessing Clerk, Typing), with respondent City of East Orange (the City), Department of Property Taxation (the Department). Appellant appeals from the imposition of two separate one hundred eighty-day suspensions beginning September 6, 2012, and May 29, 2013. The suspensions stemmed from determinations that appellant engaged in a pattern of performing tasks unrelated to her duties as Clerk 1, that she failed to advise her supervisor that she had taken leave time under the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), that she failed to perform her assigned duties in a timely manner if at all, that she argued with her supervisors when directed to perform a task, that she was hostile and non-communicative in her dealings with them, and that she engaged in other acts of insubordination as set forth below. Appellant contends that she conducted herself in an appropriate manner at all times herein, and that she could not complete her assigned duties due to her large workload and for other reasons.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 23, 2012, the District issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) informing appellant of the charges of insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and neglect of duty against her. N.J.A.C. 4A:2- 2.3(a)(2), (6), (7). (R-6.) Specifically, appellant was charged with taking leave time under the Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA) without notifying her supervisor, Tom Small, who was the newly-appointed tax assessor. Further, when she returned from such leave, she engaged in a course of conduct that proved disruptive to the Department. Namely, she persisted in performing duties unrelated to those performed in the Tax Assessor's Office, while neglecting the duties assigned to her. In addition, appellant was charged with ignoring her immediate supervisor's directive to complete a "request for time" form when she was called for jury duty. The PNDA also alleged that appellant provided certain information to a taxpayer, despite being directed not to do so, aiding that person's prosecution of her property tax appeal against the City of East Orange. Further, appellant was charged with refusing to comply with the directives of Diane Ross (Ross), her immediate supervisor, and being argumentative and disrespectful. Finally, the PNDA charges appellant with extending her one-hour lunch break by a half hour, despite being told not to do so.

After a departmental hearing, the District issued an amended Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated September 5, 2012, sustaining the charges and providing for appellant's suspension for one hundred eighty days. (P-2.) Appellant requested a hearing, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on September 27, 2012, for hearing and determination as a contested matter under OAL docket number CSV 13300-12.

The Department issued a separate PNDA dated August 7, 2012, informing appellant of the charges of insubordination and neglect of duty issued against her. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) and (7). (R-9.) Specifically, appellant was charged with failing to perform certain tasks assigned to her, including those that were time-sensitive. Further, the Department alleged that appellant filled out a request for personal time that was effective on that same date, leaving pressing work undone and the office understaffed.

After a departmental hearing, the Department issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated May 23, 2013, sustaining the charges and providing for appellant's suspension for one hundred eighty days. (P-3.) Appellant filed an appeal and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on July 8, 2013, under OAL docket number CSV 09602-13.

CSV 13300-12 was initially assigned to be heard by the Hon. Tahesha Way, A.L.J.; CSV 09602-13 was initially assigned to be heard by the Hon. Tiffany Williams, A.L.J. On February 6, 2014, the matters were consolidated and scheduled to be heard by the Hon. Tahesha Way, A.L.J. Thereafter, the consolidated matters were assigned to the undersigned. A hearing was scheduled for October 9, 2014, and October 21, 2014, but was adjourned at the request of respondent with the consent of appellant. The matters were rescheduled to be heard on January 12, 2015, and January 13, 2015, but was adjourned at the request of the appellant with the consent of respondent. The matters were heard on May 11, 2015, and May 12, 2015. After the conclusion of testimony, the record remained open for the receipt of post-hearing submissions. Following a number of requests by both parties for additional time within which to file documents, the record closed upon receipt of the last submission on May 29, 2016.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Appellant was hired as an Assessing Clerk/Typing by the Department on April 1, 2007. Her job title changed to Clerk 1 on or about April 9, 2011. She remained in that position until leaving the Department sometime in 2013. These matters pertain to the period of time after the appointment of Thomas Small (Small) as Tax Assessor for the City of East Orange (the City) on March 28, 2011. As director of the Department, Small was appellant's supervisor, and Diane Ross (Ross), the Senior Assessing Clerk in the Department, was appellant's immediate supervisor.

1. AS TO CSV 13300-12

This matter concerns various infractions with regard to appellant's work activities from March 2011 through May 2012. As to these charges, the Department presented testimony by Thomas Small, Diane Ross, and Annmarie Corbitt, and appellant testified on her own behalf. Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, I FIND the following preliminary FACTS:

A. Incident as to FMLA Leave

Approximately two weeks after Small's appointment as tax assessor in March 2011, appellant became ill and thereafter was admitted into the hospital. She never informed Small that she was hospitalized, or that she would not be returning to work for an extended period of time. Nor did she notify Ross, her immediate supervisor, that she had fallen ill. Instead, she told her friend, Sonia Harris (Harris), another employee in the Department, that she was in the hospital. Harris obtained the necessary paperwork that appellant needed in order to apply for FMLA leave. Harris was not appellant's supervisor. Small did not know of appellant's whereabouts until he contacted the City's personnel director, who informed him that she had taken FMLA leave. During said leave, appellant did not contact Small. Small relied on the personnel director to send her letters asking that she contact his office intermittently. Appellant returned to her post on August 1, 2011.

B. Incident at the Tax Collector's Office

On October 28, 2011, appellant was working with a senior couple in the tax assessor's office. They wanted to replace their deceased daughter as the record owner of certain property in the City. Their goal was to then apply for property tax relief under the Property Tax Reimbursement Program (Senior Freeze). As Assessing Clerk, Typing, appellant's job was defined by the New Jersey Department of Personnel as follows:

> Under direction performs routine clerical work involved in the assessment of real and personal property; does other related duties and typing as required. (See R-3.)

In addition to the above job definition, appellant defined her job duties as Assessing Clerk, Typing, in an attachment to a May 28, 2008, letter to Reginald Lewis, City Administrator notifying him of her passing the Civil Service Exam. (R-4.) She listed the following duties, in pertinent part:

> Compiling list to be used in appeal process;
> Compiling property record cards on all tax appeals (County and State;)
> Reviewing each appeal for tax status and municipal charges;
> Notify Assessor of outstanding taxes on all appeals;
> Compiling list of appeals on schedule for hearing at the County Board of Taxation;
> Process all deeds received from the County Board of Taxation;
> Review the usable status with the Assessor;
> Key in all deeds into the MOD IV System;
> Update Property Record Cards with new ownership information. Ibid.

Appellant's job duties did not include assisting residents in completing and filing the Senior Freeze application. This was a function of the Office of the Tax Collector, headed by Annmarie Corbitt (Corbitt). Corbitt credibly testified that the collection staff fills out the Senior Freeze forms, entering the property block and lot numbers and other information, and verifies that the applicants have paid their property taxes. The applicants can choose to send their receipts directly to the New Jersey Division of Taxation (the State), or Corbitt can sign the form acknowledging that the property tax has been paid.

The Tax Collector's Office is located next to the Tax Assessor's Office, where appellant works. The two offices have separate entrances off the main hallway in the municipal building. In order to visit the tax collector, one must pass through a closed double doorway that opens into a hallway. At the end of the hallway are two windows that provide counter service. One window is staffed by the cashier. Residents wait in the hallway for service. Behind the windows lies the office space for the tax collection staff, including Corbitt. This area is accessed through a locked door near the windows.

On the aforesaid date, the above-mentioned senior couple approached the cashier's window asking to have their Senior Freeze application filled out. They were upset because the cashier told them that they were not the record owners of the property, and there was no proof that they paid the property taxes. The couple left, then returned to the office with appellant. They stood in the hallway inside the tax collection office, in front of the windows. Other customers were present. Corbitt testified that appellant asked her if she was going to sign the form, to which she replied that she could not. She asked appellant to come into the office behind the windows, testifying that she wanted to tell appellant in private why she was unable to sign the form. Appellant became loud and disruptive, demanding that Corbitt talk to her in front of the couple. Corbitt repeated that she would not sign the form, telling appellant that the couple's daughter died two years ago, and that the property taxes were being paid by the lender. She said that the couple could send their receipts to the State instead. At that point, appellant and the senior couple left Corbitt's office, only to return a few minutes later. Corbitt testified that appellant yelled at her, demanding that she sign the form. When Corbitt declined, appellant told her that she had just called Trenton, and Trenton said she could sign the form. Again, this occurred in the presence of other customers waiting in the hallway. Corbitt did not sign the form. She stated that she was angry and embarrassed by the incident, maintaining that she kept her composure due to the fact that the incident occurred in the crowded hallway of her office. Later that day, she memorialized the incident in an email to Small, appellant's supervisor. (See R-2.)

With the exception of the nature of her demeanor and tone during this incident, which is addressed in the following section, appellant did not dispute Corbitt's testimony.

She explained that she accompanied the couple to the tax collector's office to find out why the form was not signed, and had an exchange with Cheryl at the window. She first testified that she changed the deed itself to reflect that the parents owned the property, but later stated that she changed the address on the deed. She was under the impression that once the address was changed to that of the couple, they were eligible to complete the Senior Freeze application. When rebuffed by Cheryl, she returned to her own office and called Trenton. She did not elaborate as to what she meant by "Trenton." She said that Trenton told her that the tax collector's office could complete the application. She then brought the couple back to Corbitt's office. She acknowledged that Corbitt asked her to join her in the back office, but that she refused to speak with Corbitt privately because she wanted the couple to hear what she had to say. Appellant told Corbitt that she explained the circumstances to Trenton, and was told that Corbitt could sign the application. She testified that Corbitt was upset during this exchange "because she felt as though I was telling her what to do." She denied raising her voice at Corbitt, explaining that she would not do that with seniors present. She said that she did not believe that she was behaving unprofessionally. She asserted that it was her job to help seniors with tax relief, but conceded that it was not listed in her own description of her job duties. (See R-4.)

Small refuted her testimony, credibly testifying that it was not appellant's job to fill out the Senior Freeze applications. Further, these applications were unrelated to the assessing department. Instead, she was required to simply give a Senior Freeze book to the taxpayer, and not take any further action. Small stated that after he received Corbitt's email, he made it clear to appellant that this was her sole responsibility.

C. Incidents as to Appellant's Non-Compliance with Directives

The Department offered undisputed testimony regarding appellant's unwillingness to comply with directives on a number of occasions.

In March 2012, Appellant advised Ross, Senior Assistant Clerk and her immediate supervisor, that she was called to report for jury duty. Ross directed appellant to fill out a time request form. Appellant refused to do so since she was not taking personal time, even though Ross explained to her that she would not be charged for the time. Ross testified that as part of her job duties, she needed to keep track of time for the Department's staff. Appellant acknowledged that there was a "back and forth" with Ross concerning her refusal to fill out a time request form. She justified her recalcitrance by stating that the time request form was only for personal, vacation, or sick time, not jury duty. She then asked her union representative for guidance. She insisted that usually you need to show only your jury duty letter to the supervisor, and that is sufficient. However, she acknowledged that this was her first experience with jury duty. Eventually, appellant saw the box on the time request form marked "Other", and agreed to complete the form. She also testified that she had not been given any written policy regarding jury duty procedure.

In another incident, Ross asked appellant to search on the computer for unpaid water bills. She directed her to not make copies of the bills, but simply make a notation of the amount owed, so that the tax appeal petitions could be flagged for non-payment of water services. Appellant disregarded this directive, making copies of the water bills. She testified that she would need to make copies later anyway, as Ross did not have access to the water system. She then corrected her statement, saying that Ross did have access but never used the system. She then said that Ross's code to get into the system was outdated; therefore, Ross did not have access to the water system. She based this on a conversation she overheard in the office. Regardless, appellant did not dispute that Ross directed her to not make copies.

In addition, Small testified that appellant habitually combined her one-hour lunch break with her two fifteen-minute breaks, leaving the office for one and a half hours. He credibly testified that she continued to do so, even after he told her it was an unacceptable practice. In response, appellant told Small that under the prior tax assessor, the practice was to permit a combined lunch period. Small countered that he later became informed that this was not the case. Nevertheless, it is undisputed that she was given notice that she was limited to a one-hour lunch break, and disregarded that directive.

In addition to the evidence underlying the above preliminary facts, other pertinent testimony follows:[1]

D. Incident as to Notifying the NJHMFA about Alleged Over-Assessments

Sometime in October 2011, a taxpayer approached appellant in the tax assessor's office to complain about her assessment being high, in preparation for filing a property tax appeal. Appellant stated that she was unable to provide the person, Mrs. Bellamy (Bellamy), with pertinent information. Appellant testified that she later received a telephone call from Linda Gargiulo (Gargiulo), who was the Operation Manager of the Housing Affordability Service (HAS) within the New Jersey Housing and Mortgage Finance Agency (NJHMFA). This state agency monitors the assessments of affordable housing units. According to appellant, she did not initiate the call to Gargiulo, instead stating that Bellamy had taken appellant's business card, and must have called Gargiulo herself to question the assessment. Appellant stated that she directed Gargiulo to contact Small. However, communications from Gargiulo indicate that a detailed conversation ensued. (See R-7; R-8.)

Small then received an email from appellant dated October 27, 2011, stating: "Good Morning Tom, Attached please fine [sic] the information regarding the affordable housing units prices." (R-7.) Appellant attached an email from Gargiulo referencing their discussion about certain properties in the City that were over-assessed pursuant to NJHMFA regulations. Ibid. Small testified that he had no prior notice of a conversation between appellant and Garguilo until he received the email. He never directed appellant to confer with the NJHMFA, nor was it part of her job duties. Small then received a copy of a letter addressed to appellant from Gargiulo. (R-8.) The letter included a spreadsheet listing approximately forty properties in the City with their current values under the affordable housing program. The Department was directed as follows: "Your prompt attention to adjusting the assessed values would be appreciated . . . " Ibid. Small testified that a reduction in assessments would have resulted in a loss of revenue to the City. He then had a number of conversations with Gargiulo, and was able to rectify the situation only with the intervention of the City's legal department.

[1] For purposes of clarity and in order to distinguish the two appeals, the lettering of the sections is continuous through the undisputed and disputed testimony in CSV 13300-12.

E. Second Incident at the Tax Collector's Office

Several months later after the first incident detailed in Section B above, Corbitt again found appellant in her office hallway helping two seniors fill out the Senior Freeze applications. She did not engage her, but simply walked past and entered the back office. Corbitt stated that she spoke to someone about this, and was told to send a memo to Small. On July 10, 2012, she emailed Small about the second incident. (See R-1.) Appellant, on the other hand, denied helping seniors in Corbitt's office after the October 2011 incident.

F. Appellant's Tone and Demeanor

Both Ross and Small credibly testified as to appellant's inappropriate tone and demeanor. Ross stated that appellant responded to most directives with a harsh, disrespectful tone, and was routinely argumentative. Small stated that appellant continued to have problems following instructions, and at times would simply refuse to do certain tasks.

ADDITIONAL FINDINGS OF FACT

In view of the divergent testimony regarding certain matters noted above in Sections D, E, and F, it is necessary for me to assess the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. For testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963).

After carefully considering the evidence and evaluating the demeanor and credibility of the witnesses, I found Corbitt, Small, and Ross to be forthright and credible. They presented candid testimony as to pertinent facts; further, their testimony was not undermined or impaired on cross-examination. For example, Corbitt's anger at appellant for barging into the tax collector's office and trying to force her to sign the Senior Freeze application was palpable. Her description of the incident was detailed and believable. On the other hand, an evaluation of the totality of appellant's testimony casts doubt on the reliability of her version of events; namely, that she was not loud or disruptive in the tax collector's hallway. Her acknowledgment that she rejected Corbitt's request to speak privately in the back office points to her desire to keep the matter public. It also is evidence of appellant's lack of professionalism and good judgment. In fact, she admitted that Corbitt was upset "because she felt as though I was telling her what to do." Appellant's self-assessment in this regard was correct. Her testimony that she was not loud, disruptive, or unprofessional does not hang together with the other evidence, including her own contradictory statements.

In addition, I am persuaded by Corbitt's credible testimony that she again saw appellant in her office several months later with another senior couple.

As to the incident in which appellant is alleged to have contacted the NJHMFA about over-assessments of property in the City, I credit the testimony of Small while finding appellant's version of the incident to be improbable. Interestingly, this matter occurred at approximately the same time as the incident in the tax collector's office. Appellant is charged with contacting a manager at NJHMFA to question if a homeowner's property was over-assessed. She testified that it was the homeowner who contacted the NJHMFA, who then contacted appellant. She further stated that she told the NJHMFA administrator to contact Small. This is a highly unlikely scenario. Appellant's testimony simply does not hang together with the other evidence, including an email and letter directed to appellant from Gargiulo at the NJHMFA referencing their conversation. I note that the letter makes no reference to Gargiulo being contacted by the homeowner. Once again, it is clear that appellant reached out to a higher authority without permission from her supervisor.

Ross's testimony regarding appellant's non-compliance with directives was also credible, as opposed to appellant's versions of why her work was not completed. An example is her contradictory testimony regarding Ross not having access to the water system. I also credit Small's testimony concerning appellant's recalcitrance and refusal to do certain tasks. The manner in which appellant justified her actions makes it clear that she did not feel bound by office protocol or directives.

Based upon a review of the testimony and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses who testified, I FIND the following additional pertinent FACTS:

On or about October 28, 2011, appellant entered the tax collector's office with a senior couple. Other customers were present. Appellant tried to induce Corbitt, the Tax Assessor, to complete and sign the couple's Senior Freeze application. This was outside of appellant's job duties; the Senior Freeze applications were handled by Corbitt's office. Corbitt declined to process the application. Appellant persisted, yelling at Corbitt and disrupting the business of the office. She rejected Corbitt's attempt to bring her into the private office in order to explain why she could not sign the form. She then brought the couple back to the tax assessor's office, returning to Corbitt's office a few minutes later. Appellant claimed that she had spoken to Trenton, and that Corbitt could sign the form. The incident caused Corbitt to be embarrassed and angry. Several months later, Corbitt witnessed appellant helping another couple in the hallway of the tax collector's office, despite having been told by Small to not do so.

On or about October 2011, without the permission or knowledge of Small or Ross, appellant contacted the NJHMFA to advise that certain properties in the City were over-assessed. This was in response to a homeowner who believed the assessment on her property was too high. This act was outside of her job duties. As a result of her intervention, the Department was contacted by the NJHMFA with a directive to reduce the assessments on approximately forty properties in the City. In order to rectify the situation, the matter had to be referred to the City's legal department.

Appellant habitually used a harsh, disrespectful tone with her supervisors, and was argumentative when asked to perform a task.

2. AS TO CSV 09602-13

This matter concerns various infractions with regard to appellant's work activities from June 2012 through August 7, 2012, the period of time when municipalities defend against property owners' tax appeals before the County Boards of Taxation. As to these charges, the Department presented testimony by Thomas Small, Diane Ross, and Ryan Linder, and appellant testified on her own behalf. The pertinent facts surrounding this appeal are not disputed. Therefore, based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, I FIND the following pertinent FACTS:

A. Incident as to Appellant's Failure to Prepare the Tax Appeal Calendars

On or about June 19, 2012, Small emailed the Department's staff instructing them on certain procedures that would be in place while he was on vacation, which was during tax appeal season. (R-10.) In short, Ross was left in charge. The staff was directed to not ask Ross for specific work requests in writing. Small said this was necessary because appellant was in the habit of demanding that all tasks required of her be put in writing. Nonetheless, on June 21, 2012, Ross prepared a memo directing appellant to perform certain tasks with regard to pending tax appeals, to wit: "Please see attached list for Tax Appeals calendars date July 23, 25 & 26 will you please pull application and make copies. Also please advise me whether water is current for the following properties." (R-13.) The memo also directed appellant to check the status of the water bills for the July 12 calendar. Ibid. Having received no response to her request, Ross wrote a second memo to appellant on July 5, 2012, asking her to provide the requested information by July 6, 2012. (R-14.) Again, no response was forthcoming. Ross made a third request to appellant by memo dated July 9, 2012, with no action taken by appellant. (R-15.) She sent a fourth memo to appellant dated July 10, 2012, reminding her that the homeowners must be notified ten days before the tax appeal hearing. She requested that the work be completed by the end of the day. (R-16.) Ryan Linder (Linder), the City's assistant corporation counsel, clarified that if a homeowner was noticed seven days before his or her appeal date that he or she owed municipal charges, the City could properly move to dismiss the appeal if the charges remained open on the hearing date. Thus, the work product requested of appellant was important to the City's ability to defend against the large number of appeals filed. In fact, Linder testified that as the attorney representing the City before the Essex County Board of Taxation during this time period, he was unable to raise non-payment of water charges as a defense in those cases where the letters were sent out late. He did not elaborate on the number of appeals affected. On July 12, 2012, Ross sent a fifth memo to appellant asking for the information no later than July 16, 2012 at noon. (R-17.) Appellant finally complied with the request on said date, delivering the work to Ross at 12:40 p.m.

Appellant testified that she could not perform the above tasks because she was busy working on deeds. Referring to the first memo Ross sent her, dated June 21, 2012, appellant stated:

> [W]hat I didn't understand is that [Ross] also knew that our sampling period was coming to an end June 30th. So that means that the deed needed to be updated, and the records in the computer, the MOD4 and the Microsystem need to be updated and maintained. So this date here is coming close to the June 30th date, and now I'm swamped with deeds.

She asserted that her former supervisor, Barbara Williams (Williams), told her that working on the deeds was a priority. Williams left the Department almost one year prior to Small being appointed tax assessor. She acknowledged that neither Small nor Ross directed her to give priority to the deeds. Appellant knew that Ross needed the information requested in the five memos, but felt that Ross should have known that her workload was significant. Nevertheless, she made no effort to tell Ross that she was having issues completing the work. She simply did not do it until after receipt of Ross's fifth memo on July 12, 2012.

B. Incident as to the Water System Software

Ross testified that along with the above incident as to her neglect of the tax appeals, appellant blamed inoperable software for her inability to check on the status of the water bills. Rather than notify Ross or Small, she contacted the Information Technology (I.T.) Department for help. When Ross asked her how long the system had been inoperable, appellant could not answer. Ross told appellant that she should have notified her instead, as she would be able to contact the supervisor at the water department directly. As a result of the passage of time, many of the water bills were not sent to the taxpayers in a timely manner. Ross also stated that the delays occasioned by appellant in all aspects required her to step in and complete the work, since the appeals packets had to be ready for review by Linder and Small prior to each hearing date.

C. Incident as to Last-Minute Personal Leave

In Small's above-mentioned vacation memo dated June 19, 2012, he wrote that if someone had a personal emergency, he or she should notify Ross of their absence, and he would approve the time upon his return. (See R-10.) Ross testified that during the week that Small was on vacation, she saw appellant toss a paper into her basket and leave the office at approximately noontime. She did not know if appellant was going to lunch or elsewhere until she picked up the paper and saw that it was a request for a personal half day, effective as of the moment appellant walked out of the office. Small testified that the protocol was for the staff to tell him they needed personal time, and then submit the request to Ross. It was not protocol to submit the request and then walk out the door. Ross stated that appellant did not say anything to her before leaving.

Appellant explained that she had a dire emergency and had to leave work. She testified that she told Ross that there was an emergency, handed her the paper, and departed. When asked on cross-examination how Ross would know if she was returning that day, appellant replied: "The paper stated that I was taking the remainder of the day." As to how she knew the request was approved, she stated: "I didn't know it was approved. I was merely giving that paper to her to let her know that I was going to take. That was covering myself for my time not being in the office."

The emergency appellant referred to was that she had effected a lockout of her tenant, and the tenant was going to court to vacate it. Appellant wanted to ensure that the lockout took place.

Small approved the above time request on June 26, 2012, after he returned from vacation. (R-11.) He explained that she had already taken the time, and he did not want to get into a fight over how to handle the situation. He stated that she was extremely hostile, and that he did not want to engage her. He summarized his feelings as follows:

> I knew what was going on and I was new in the job. I didn't want to come into a new position and then immediately start a conflagration with . . . an old employee. I was hoping it would take care of itself; time passed, but it didn't.

Ross echoed Small's sentiments, characterizing appellant as very hostile and non-communicative.

> She refused to communicate with me and as far as work it was hard to ask or to get – to get [appellant] to do anything that I needed in a timely fashion. So she was very hostile to me.

In general, appellant was hostile and non-communicative with Small and Ross during all relevant time periods. I further FIND that Small and Ross were disinclined to address the above issues with appellant, taking a passive stance while appellant ran amok in the Department, rejecting their authority.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto govern the rights and duties of a civil service employee. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1, et seq. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. See N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. The issues to be determined at the de novo hearing are whether the employee is guilty of the charges brought against him and, if so, the appropriate penalty, if any, that should be imposed. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

In this matter, the Department bears the burden of proving the charges against appellant by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). This forum has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis.

An appointing authority may discipline an employee for various causes as set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. With regard to the FNDA dated September 5, 2012, the Department charged appellant with insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and neglect of duty. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2), (6) and (7). As to the FNDA dated May 23, 2013, the Department charged appellant with insubordination and neglect of duty. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2) and (7).

Insubordination encompasses an employee's failure or refusal to follow a directive, order or instruction of a supervisor. Eaddy v. Dep't of Transp., 208 N.J. Super. 156, 158–59 (App. Div.), certif. granted, 104 N.J. 392, order vacated, appeal dismissed, 105 N.J. 569 (1986); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317, 322 (App. Div. 1967). Neglect of duty is predicated on an employee's omission to perform, or failure to perform or discharge, a duty required by the employee's position and includes official misconduct or misdoing as well as negligence. Clyburn v. Twp. of Irvington, CSV 7597-97, Initial Decision (September 10, 2001), adopted, Merit System Board (December 27, 2001), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; see Steinel v. Jersey City, 193 N.J. Super. 629 (App. Div.), certif. granted, 97 N.J. 588 (1984), aff'd on other grounds, 99 N.J. 1 (1985).

Conduct unbecoming a public employee has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "'conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency'" of the public entity or "'which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services.'" In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted); see Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). It is generally understood that chronic conduct is conduct that continues over a long time or recurs frequently. Good v. N. State Prison, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 529, 531.

Based upon the aforesaid FINDINGS of FACT, I CONCLUDE that the Department has shouldered its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that appellant's actions in intervening with the business of the tax collector's office on two occasions, non-complying with her supervisor's directives, unilaterally contacting the NJHMFA to report alleged over-assessments by the City, and exhibiting a pattern of being disrespectful and uncommunicative with her supervisors constitute insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and neglect of duty. The record clearly demonstrates that appellant's actions disrupted the Department for an extended period of time. Although there is no evidence that appellant was obligated to notify Small of her FMLA leave, the incident is another example of her repeated failure to communicate with her supervisors. Aside from the credible testimony of the Department's witnesses, appellant's own testimony leads to the unmistakable inference that she simply did not believe that she owed a duty to the Department.

Based upon the aforesaid FINDINGS of FACT with regard to appellant's failure to prepare the tax appeal calendars, obtain the water bills, along with her taking personal leave time without permission, and continuing to foment a hostile work environment by virtue of her disrespectful conduct, I CONCLUDE that the Department has shouldered its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that appellant's dereliction amounts to insubordination and neglect of duty.

The only remaining issue concerns the penalty that should be imposed. In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983).

Here, appellant has no prior disciplinary history. Nonetheless, I am persuaded that the pattern of conduct that she engaged in with regard to CSV 13300-12 merits a major discipline. In determining if the one hundred eighty-day suspension imposed is warranted, I am guided by the testimony of Small, wherein he candidly stated that he knew what was going on with appellant, and he hoped the situation would take care of itself over time, but it did not. Unfortunately, Small and Ross remained passive, failing to take meaningful steps to alter appellant's conduct. While one can appreciate the discomfort in reprimanding a hostile employee, in this matter appellant was simply emboldened to continue her pattern of dereliction and insubordination. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that a ninety-day suspension is reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances presented.

With regard to the one hundred eighty-day suspension imposed with regard to CSV 09602-13, I CONCLUDE that such discipline is reasonable and appropriate under the circumstances, and comports with the concept of progressive discipline. It is clear that appellant returned from her first suspension determined to continue to make her own rules. During this time period, the Department was in the midst of tax appeal season. Appellant was well aware that in order for the City to be successful, all Department employees had to perform their jobs in a timely manner. Appellant's excuses for not being able to do her job are plainly without merit. At this point, appellant had ample notice and warning of the deficiencies in her performance. Yet, she continued the pattern of insubordination and neglect of duty, to the detriment of the Department and her co-workers.

ORDER

I ORDER that with regard to appellant's appeal from the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated September 5, 2012, the charges of insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and neglect of duty be and hereby are SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that, based upon the aforesaid sustained charges, appellant be and hereby is suspended for ninety days.

I ORDER that with regard to appellant's appeal from the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated May 23, 2013, the charges of insubordination and neglect of duty be and hereby are SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that, based upon the aforesaid sustained charges, appellant be and hereby is suspended for one hundred eighty-days.

I further ORDER that back pay and other benefits be issued to appellant as may be dictated by N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement",) is made and entered into between Police Officer Bethzaida Vallejo ("Vallejo" or "Appellant"), The Fraternal Order of Police ("FOP" or "Union") and the City of Newark ("City" or "Respondent") (Vallejo, the Union and the City are collectively referred to hereinafter as the "Parties"). The Parties herein have voluntarily agreed to resolve all disputed matters arising from the disciplinary action taken against her by the City's Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated May 8, 2013 (PNDA) and Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated July 16, 2013 (FNDA).

In consideration of the promises contained herein, it is agreed as follows:

1. On or about March 31, 2013, Police Officer Bethzaida Vallejo, assigned to the Fourth Precinct Patrol, did commit an act of insubordination directed at Sergeant Marilouise Dorch, a superior officer, assigned as Central Communications Supervisor, to wit: during a telephone conversation regarding queue being backed up.

2. Moreover, Officer Vallejo talked over Sergeant Marilouise Dorch and continued to question her authority of having the ability to request updates from Officer Vallejo.

3. As a result of the conduct outlined in paragraph one (1) and two (2) herein, the PNDA was issued and Vallejo was brought up on disciplinary charges for violating the following Newark Police Department ("NPD") Rules and Regulations: (1) acts of insubordination, and (2) demonstration of respect.

4. At the departmental hearing, Vallejo plead not guilty and waived the hearing to the Office of Administrative Law. She was suspended for thirty (30) days beginning August 5, 2013 and ending September 13, 2013 and the FNDA was issued.

5. Vallejo appealed the decision on the FNDA to the Office of Administrative Law.

6. The parties have agreed to resolve all issues herein and herein referenced as follows:

    1. The City agrees to reduce Vallejo's suspension from thirty (30) days to fourteen (14) days.

    2. Vallejo further waives any and all rights and/or claims which she has and/or may have to: 1) A hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under the PNDA, FDNA and/or this Agreement; 2) To challenge the PNDA, FNDA and/or this Agreement; 3) Initiate and/or partake in Grievance procedures; and/or 4) Initiate, pursue and/or partake any and all litigation against the City in State, Federal and/or Administrative Courts.

    3. Vallejo and the Union each further agree that there is no consideration due Vallejo, her counsel (if applicable) and/or the Union, including, but not limited to, any claim for back pay and/or counsel fees, arising from her employment and/or the execution of this Agreement, except as otherwise provided herein.

4. Vallejo and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Public Employee Relations Commission, the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.

5. Vallejo and the Union further acknowledge that this Agreement further precludes either of them from bringing any type of legal or contractual action in any forum including, but not limited to, filing a Complaint in New Jersey Superior Court or United States Federal Court, filing any type of complaint with the City, Essex County, the State of New Jersey or the United States of America, and filing a grievance and/or requesting arbitration, that is in any manner grounded, based upon, or related to the FNDA.

6. The Parties are bound by this Agreement. Anyone and/or entity who succeeds to the Parties' rights and/or responsibilities, such as heirs, the executor/administrator of Vallejo's estate, and purchasers and/or assignees of Vallejo's, the City's and/or the Unions interests shall also be bound.

7. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent or practice in any matter involving the City or other City employees.

8. Vallejo and the Union further acknowledge and agree that this Agreement is based upon a unique set, combination and weighing of factors and shall not be used and/or construed as precedent and/or to in any way dictate, bind, limit and/or even guide the decisions that the City may make in future and/or currently pending disciplinary matters and/or labor negotiations.

9. Vallejo and the Union each agree this Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding of any type against or involving the City, except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, or as required by law.

10. This Agreement contains the sole and entire agreement between Vallejo, the Union and the City, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. Vallejo specifically represents and acknowledges in executing this Agreement that she has not relied upon any representation or statement by the City, or City's counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth herein. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by all the Parties, and expressly stated to be a modification of the Agreement.

11. Vallejo agrees and acknowledges that she has been fully and fairly represented by her Attorney and the Union in this matter, and she is satisfied with that representation and with the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

12. Vallejo agrees and acknowledges that she has had a full opportunity to review this Agreement with her Attorney and/or Union representative and she enters into same knowingly and voluntarily.

13. The Parties agree that if any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of the Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

14. By signing this Settlement Agreement, Vallejo states that:

a. She has read it;

b. She understands it and knows that she is giving up important rights, and any and all other federal and state employment related causes of any kind, not including potential Worker's Compensation claims, but including but not limited to The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Equal Pay Law, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended, The Conscientious Employee Protection Act, The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and any other constitutional, statutory or common law suit, attorney fees and costs of this proceeding, and any public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other State;

c. She agrees with everything contained in this Agreement;

d. Her Attorney and Union representative negotiated this Agreement in her presence and with her knowledge and consent;

e. She consulted with her Attorney prior to executing this Agreement;

f. She has signed this Settlement Agreement knowingly and voluntarily.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have caused this Settlement Agreement to be executed.

Mr. Deshpande and Ms. Rivers:

I am the Assistant Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Bethzaida Vallejo indicating her 30 working day suspension is being modified to a 14 working day suspension.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, we need to know how to account for the remaining 16 work days. Is that time frame to be categorized as an unpaid leave of absence or something else?

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties regarding the above. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties. The sooner the information is provided the better.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 01809-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-2350

IN THE MATTER OF MARION WILSON, CAMDEN COUNTY, DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

William Hildebrand, Esq., for appellant Marion Wilson

Antonieta Paiva Rinaldi, for respondent Department of Corrections

Record Closed: January 13, 2017 Decided: February 8, 2017

BEFORE SARAH G. CROWLEY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant Marion Wilson appeals from a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated January 28, 2016, suspending her for sixty days from her position as a Correction Officer with the respondent Camden County Department of Corrections (CCDOC). Officer Wilson was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action on July 15, 2015, charging her with the following: N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), incompetency, inefficiency, failure to perform duties; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause. She was also charged with violating CCCF

Rules of Conduct 1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct Unbecoming; 1.3 Neglect of Duty; 2.8 Leaving Assigned Duty Post; 2.10 Ineffectiveness to Duty: 3.1 Supervision; 3.2 Security; et al. The specifications in the Notice of Disciplinary Action allege that Officer Wilson left her post in the visiting area for approximately one and a half hours, when there were visitors coming and going. This was a blatant disregard of her duties and jeopardized the safety of the visitors, the staff, and the facility.

On January 28, 2016, CCDOC issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action sustaining the above charges. Officer Wilson appealed and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (AOL), where it was filed on January 29, 2016, to be heard as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1to 13. The matter was heard on January 9, 2017. The record was held open for a submission from CCDOC on the issue of past disciplinary record, which was filed on January 13, 2017, and the record closed on that date.

FACTUAL FINDINGS AND TESTIMONY

The following facts are not in dispute. Petitioner has been employed with the CCDOC for nineteen years. She was assigned to the fourth floor visiting area on July 20, 2013. She was working the 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. shift. At approximately 2:30 p.m., she went down to the information desk, and remained there for an hour and a half. Petitioner was aware that there were visitors and that she was required to be up there to supervise and check visitors for contraband. When Captain Taylor came out and saw her at the information desk, at approximately 4:00 p.m., she told her to get back to her post and advised her supervisor to write her up for leaving her post. Appellant does not dispute any of the foregoing facts, but claims "it was no big deal." She challenges the duration of the suspension.

Warden Karen Taylor has been at the CCDOC for approximately twenty years. She was promoted from Captain to Warden three months ago. She is familiar with this case, because she witnessed petitioner away from her designated post on the afternoon of July 20, 2013. When she saw her down at the information desk, instead of at her post in the visitor's area on the fourth floor, she instructed her to get back to her post. She also instructed her supervisor to write her up for being away from her post. The video was viewed by the court. The video shows petitioner leaving her post at approximately 2:40 p.m. and going to the information desk in the lobby of the main jail, where she remains until 4:03 p.m., when Captain Taylor advised her to return to her post.

Warden Taylor testified regarding the importance of staying at your post. The visitors need to be supervised during their visitation for several reasons, all having to do with the safety and security of the facility. There are fights that break-out between the visitors or the children that are brought in can be left unattended and get hurt. There is also a risk of inappropriate conduct between visitor and inmates. Although there is a Plexiglas divider between them, inappropriate sexual interactions have been known to occur. In addition, you are supposed to limit the time of the visits and check for contraband. Petitioner was out of her post and failed to supervise the visitation and check for contraband for one hour and a half.

Warden Taylor discussed the various infractions which petitioner was cited for. In addition to the neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming, there are very specific rules regarding leaving an assigned post. Rule 2.10 relates to inattentiveness to duty and 3.1 apples to supervisors, who are held to a higher standard. Warden Taylor discussed the rules which relate to security. Petitioner was to monitor visitors on her post, and check for contraband before and after each visit. Warden Taylor felt it was a very serious infraction, since she left for not just a few minutes but for an hour and a half and that the resulting risk to safety and security of other inmates, visitors and other officers.

For appellant:

Marion Wilson is a correction officer at the CCDOC, where she has worked for the last nineteen years. She was posted on the visitor's station on the fourth floor and was working the 7:00 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. shift on July 20, 2015. She did not dispute that she left her posit at approximately 2:40 p.m. and did not return until Warden Taylor instructed her to return to her post at approximately 4:00 p.m. She testified that she was down at the information desk. She testified that visitors had no physical contact and they communicate by phone only, so it was no big deal. She testified that in protective custody they do not have a guard on duty, so she is not sure why she has to remain on the visitor's area. She acknowledged that she was assigned to that post, she was aware of the rules with respect to staying there and she probably should not have left. She testified that she did not check anyone for contraband during the time she was down at the information desk. She also acknowledged that visitors were supposed to be there for only twenty minutes and she did not monitor this during the day in question.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The resolution of the charges against Officer Wilson requires that I make a credibility determination regarding some of the facts. However, the critical facts in this case are undisputed. Officer Wilson does not dispute that she left her post for approximately one and a half hours, and she failed to check visitors for contraband, supervise visits or monitor the duration of the visits. The only factual issue that is in dispute is the importance of the rules in question. The choice of accepting or rejecting the witnesses' testimony or credibility rests with the finder of fact.-Freud v. Davis, 64 N.J. Super. 242, 246 (App. Div. 1960). In addition, for testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experiences and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances, See Spagnuolo V. Bonnet, 16 N.J. Super. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witnesses' story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F. 2d 718,749 (1963). A fact finder is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness, even though not directly contradicted, when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions that alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence, excite suspicion as to its truth. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. Super. 514, 521-22 (1950). See DAmato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). With respect to the importance of remaining in your post and doing your job in a correction center, I found the testimony of Warden Taylor sincere and credible. I found that appellant's claim that "it was no big deal" to leave your post for an extended period of time to be not credible.

Based on this testimony and evidence in the record I FIND that Officer Wilson left her post in the visitor's area for approximately one hour and a half. I further FIND that the duties of the visitor's post required her to remain in the visitor's area. I further FIND that the duties of this post required Officer Wilson to check visitors for contraband, supervise all visitors and monitor the duration of the visitation. I further FIND that Officer Wilson failed to perform her duties and that such failure presented a significant safety risk to visitors, inmates as well as fellow officers

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A civil service employee's rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act and the regulations promulgated pursuant thereto. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1to 12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1,1 to 4A:10-3.2. A civil service employee who engages in misconduct related to his or her duties or who gives another just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2 -2.3(a). In appeals concerning major disciplinary actions brought against classified employees, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The standard of proof in administrative proceedings is a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. Super. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. Super. 143 (1962).

This matter involves a major disciplinary action brought by the respondent appointing authority against the appellant seeking a sixty-day suspension. The appellant is charged with inability to perform duties, neglect of duty, conduct unbecoming and other sufficient cause. She is also charged with violating Rules of Conduct 1.1; Rule 2.8 Leaving Assigned Duty Post; Rule 2.10 inattentiveness to Duty; Rule 3.1 Supervision; and Rule 3.2 Security. The charges all relate to the appellant leaving her post in the fourth floor visiting area for approximately one hour and a half on July 20, 2015. She is also charged with the failure to supervise, check for contraband or monitor duration of visits. Officer Wilson does not dispute the forgoing violations, and I have found as fact that she did in fact violate all of the foregoing rules. In addition to the undisputed testimony, there is a video which cooperates all the foregoing undisputed facts.

I therefore CONCLUDE that the respondent has satisfied its burden of proving that appellant violated all the foregoing rules by failing to remain in her post, monitor visitors, or check for contraband. I CONCLUDE that the charges are SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

Once a determination is made that an employee has violated a statute, rule, regulation, etc., concerning his/her employment, the concept of progressive discipline must be considered. West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. Super. 500 (1962). While this case did not specifically use the phrase "progressive discipline," its facts strongly suggest that a record of progressive discipline should precede the ultimate penalty, which is removal. The concept of progressive discipline involves consideration of the number of prior disciplinary infractions, the nature of those infractions and the imposition of progressively increasingly penalties. It is well settled that correction officers, like police officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than other public employees because of the sensitive nature of the position they occupy. Twp. of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), cert, denied, 47 N.J. Super. 80 (1966). It has also been noted in corrections cases, that failure to adhere to security precautions could have potentially serious consequences, which may give rise to a more serious penalty regardless of the lack of any past disciplinary consequences. I /M/O Martha Hicks and Antonio Price, OAL Dkt. Nos. CSV 11373 and CSV 11494-13; 2014 N.J. Agen. Lexis 469 (2014).

The appellant received a sixty-day suspension for the foregoing violations, which were not only a violation of her specific duties, but such duties were critical to security of both inmates, visitors and fellow employees. The appellant has argued that under the applicable case law, only seven years of discipline should be reviewed. The respondent argues that all prior discipline should be considered. I CONCLUDE that regardless of whether I go back seven years or fifteen years in appellant's disciplinary history, the penalty is appropriate under the circumstances and is sustained. Appellant sustained major discipline in 2009 resulting in a thirty-day suspension for a Supervision charge, and two other Supervision charges as well as three neglect of duty charges in the seven years preceding the charge in the within matter. I also find that the appellant's lack of remorse and position that these infractions which jeopardized the security in the facility were "no big deal," is an aggravating factor in this case. I therefore, CONCLUDE that the sixty-days suspension without pay is appropriate under these circumstances.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that the charges be AFFIRMED, and the suspension of sixty-days SUSTAINED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Sherray Brooks v. Kean University (CSC Docket No. 2016-969 and OAL Docket No. CSV 17380-15)

Dear Ms. Munsat and DAG Jones:

The appeal of Sherray Brooks, a Motor Vehicle Operator 2 with Kean University, of her removal, effective May 14, 2015, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge John P. Scollo (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on March 17, 2017, recommending upholding the removal. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

The time frame for the Civil Service Commission (Commission) to make its final decision was to initially expire on May 1, 2017. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Prior to that date the Commission secured a 45-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than June 15, 2017. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, since one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Accordingly, the Commission sought consent from the parties, as required, to secure a second 45-day extension. However, the appointing authority did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective June 16, 2017.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

SHERRAY BROOKS,
Appellant,
v.
KEAN UNIVERSITY,
Respondent.

Michelle Joy Munsat, Esq., for Appellant

Caroline Jones, Deputy Attorney General (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 2, 2017 Decided: March 17, 2017

BEFORE JOHN P. SCOLLO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent, Kean University (Kean), brought a major disciplinary action against appellant, Sherray Brooks (Brooks), a "Motor Vehicle Operator 2" or shuttle bus driver. The event which gave rise to the charges brought against Brooks occurred on Tuesday May 5, 2015, when Brooks called her supervisor, Denis Castanon to report that she had been involved in an accident involving her shuttle on the premises of a Burger King Restaurant at 439 Morris Avenue, Elizabeth, New Jersey. According to the Police Report dated May 5, 2015, (Exhibit K-5, bearing Bates stamp KU 43) the incident was reported at 1753 hours or 5:43 p.m.

Kean alleged in its May 13, 2015, PNDA that Brooks's conduct was actionable under three different sections of the New Jersey Administrative Code:

(1) N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1) [Incompetency, Inefficiency, Failure to Perform Duties];

(2) N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) [Neglect of Duty]; and

(3) N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) [Misuse of Public Property].

The Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) was presented to Brooks on May 14, 2015, at a Loudermill meeting. A confirming letter was sent to Brooks via Registered Mail-R.R.R. on May 18, 2015. (K-6.)

A disciplinary hearing was held on July 15, 2015. Brooks did not attend the hearing. Her Union representative appeared on her behalf. Hearing Officer Kenneth C. Green concluded that, based on the evidence, Kean proved that Brooks violated the above-cited regulations and so the charges were sustained. (K-7.) Kean served a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated August 24, 2015, removing Brooks from her job effective May 14, 2015. (K-7.)

On August 27, 2015, Brooks requested a hearing and forwarded her appeal to the Civil Service Commission, which in turn on October 26, 2015, transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). This matter was filed with the OAL on October 29, 2015, as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The Tribunal heard the matter on November 15, 2016, and December 5, 2016, and the record closed on February 2, 2017, after receipt of written summations from both parties.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Testimony of Denis Castanon

Denis Castanon is Kean University's Director of Residential Student Services. His duties include the direct supervision of the shuttle bus drivers. He is familiar with Sherray Brooks's employment history and her shuttle bus driving record. On May 5, 2015, at approximately 5:53 p.m. he received a telephone call from Sherray Brooks informing him that she had been involved in a shuttle-related accident at the Burger King restaurant on Morris Avenue about a block and a half from the Kean University campus. He testified that he notified the campus police and the Elizabeth Police about the accident and personally went to the accident scene. While there he spoke with Brooks about how the accident happened and took photographs (K-3) of the damage to the driver's-side rear roof area of the shuttle and severe damage to an awning at the Burger King's drive-through lane. He testified that Brooks told him that she drove around a first awning but made contact with a second awning causing the damage. Castanon testified that a shuttle driver is responsible for knowing the dimensions of his/her vehicle and is responsible to take appropriate notice of height and other restrictions when driving the shuttle. Kean's argument is that Brooks's inattention to the dimensions of her shuttle and the height restrictions of the Burger King drive-through lane demonstrate Brook's incompetency. Castanon also testified that a shuttle driver is responsible to stay on his/her assigned route, to keep to the time schedule for all stops and departures, and not to deviate from the route. He testified that Brooks deviated from her assigned route by going to the Burger King in question. Kean's argument is Brooks's deviation from her route demonstrates her neglect of duty. Kean's argument is that Brook's use of the shuttle to run an off-route errand solely for her own purposes during work hours demonstrates her misuse of public property.

Castanon also testified about Brooks's history of prior accidents and a cell phone violation while driving a shuttle for Kean. He testified about the following:

(1) On September 20, 2004, Brooks, with students on board her shuttle, backed into another vehicle while in an intersection causing damage (K-21);
(2) On January 18, 2005, Brooks damaged her shuttle (K-20);
(3) On November 10, 2008, Brooks, with students aboard, damaged the shuttle's passenger side mirror on a gate as she crossed a bridge (K-19);
(4) On September 1, 2011, Brooks hit two parked vehicles with her shuttle (K-17 and K-1);
(5) On October 20, 2012, a Kean student photographed Brooks using her cell phone while driving the shuttle and reported this to Kean. This led to an investigation, charges, a settlement, and the imposition of discipline in the form of a suspension. Brooks was also required to complete a defensive driving course (K-10 through 13).

Testimony of Ken Green, Chief Labor Counsel for Kean University

Ken Green testified that in his position, among his many duties is the duty to review and be responsible for hearing and ruling on any and all disciplinary matters at Kean University. Ken Green was not personally familiar with Brooks, but he testified about the progressive disciplinary process at Kean University (called the "corrective action continuum"). He testified that the primary goal of Kean's policy is to correct problematic employee behavior and to prevent its re-occurrence. The corrective action continuum starts with a letter of counseling and written warning. Should problematic behavior continue, the continuum switches to discipline where a written reprimand is issued and charges are brought. If sustained, the charges can result in suspension, demotion, or removal. Green testified that if a single offense was serious enough, Kean could proceed directly to the disciplinary process and any penalty, including removal, could be imposed. Green also testified that in evaluating discipline, Kean would look at how many times an employee had been given notice of problematic conduct, how many times the employee had had an opportunity to correct his/her conduct, and what things management did to assist the employee in improving his/her conduct.

Turning specifically to the case of Sherray Brooks, Green identified K-1, her corrective action continuum. He testified that the May 5, 2015, accident at the Burger

King led to the issuance of a PNDA. Green testified that Kean considered this May 5, 2015, accident to be a serious safety issue justifying disciplinary measures in and of itself. Green testified that Kean considered the circumstances of the May 5, 2015, accident, Brooks's prior accident and disciplinary history, and Kean's own efforts to motivate Brooks to change her conduct, including participation in a defensive driving course. Green concluded that Brooks demonstrated a lack of concern for rules. Green also concluded that the only responsible course of action was to remove Brooks from her position in the interest of the safety of Kean's students and constituents.

On cross-examination, Green re-iterated that in evaluating this matter he considered Brooks's entire corrective action continuum.

Testimony of Sherray Brooks

Sherray Brooks is presently forty-eight years old and, until removed, had worked as a shuttle bus driver for Kean since 2001. Previously she had worked as a bus driver, teen counselor, and data-entry clerk.

Brooks described her typical daily duties as a shuttle bus driver for Kean as picking-up and dropping-off students according to a pre-planned route within a pre-determined time schedule. She described how and when she would take her break time.

Regarding the fifth of May in 2015, Brooks recalled that she was involved in an accident while driving her shuttle bus at a Burger King restaurant on Morris Avenue, which was a short distance from the Kean campus. She recalled that she departed the campus to go to the Target Store. She testified that she was to take a break from 5:55 p.m. to 6:25 p.m. and then depart Target to return to the Kean campus. However, Brooks testified that when she departed the campus she did not proceed directly to Target, but rather drove to the Burger King to buy food which she planned to consume during her upcoming break. Brooks did not deny that she left her designated route when she drove to the Burger King. She stated that she thought that she had enough time to stop at the Burger King and still arrive at the Target store at the designated arrival time.

Brooks testified that while at the Burger King she saw a white bar warning drivers of the height restrictions of the drive-through lane. She avoided the first such awning, shouted her meal order to the clerk and drove to the pick-up area where there was a second awning. She stopped the shuttle, alighted to pay for and pick-up her meal and then re-boarded the shuttle. Then she began to drive forward. However, she made contact with the second awning and damaged it and her vehicle's roof. Brooks immediately called Denis Castanon, her supervisor to report the accident. Sometime later Castanon arrived to speak with her and to take scene photos. Brooks also gave a statement to the Elizabeth Police officer who arrived at the scene. Brooks offered no explanation for why she drove her shuttle in a way that made it contact the awning.

Brooks next testified about why she did not testify at the July 15, 2015, hearing. She agrees that her union representative represented her at said hearing and that the hearing resulted in an adverse result for her. Brooks produced medical documentation stating that she was undergoing medical care following the May 5, 2015, incident and was taking prescription medications for anxiety, etc., which she testified was due to the stress of the charges brought against her. However, none of the medical documents (including P-15, a disability claim form dated June 14, 2015) produced during discovery or during the hearing stated that Brooks was unable to participate in her defense at the hearing. (Brooks Transcript at p. 62, ll. 2-19.) On cross-examination Attorney Jones established that in K-25 Dr. DiGiacomo cleared Brooks to return to school or work on June 22, 2015, which was twenty-three days before the July 15, 2015, hearing date.

Brooks next testified about her prior accidents and about the discipline meted-out for using a cell phone while driving the shuttle on October 20, 2012. (See K-9 through 13.) Most of this testimony was focused on establishing that she settled the charges without admitting to texting while driving. (Brooks Transcript of testimony at p. 37, ll. 1-22 (December 5, 2016).) During the hearing Brooks admitted to using her cell phone and an earpiece to receive an incoming call, to have a conversation of indeterminate length and then to end the call. (Brooks Transcript, p. 37, l. 25 to p. 38, l. 7.) Moreover,

Brooks added that it was her understanding that she was not doing anything wrong when she took that phone call. (Brooks Transcript at p. 38, ll. 9-12 (December 5, 2016).) During cross-examination, Brooks asserted that Denis Castanon was lying when he testified that she admitted to him that she was indeed texting during the October 20, 2012 incident. She also asserted that the two complaining students (K-8 and 9) were also lying.

On cross-examination, Brooks admitted that the Burger King restaurant was not on the route that she was supposed to take on May 5, 2015. (Brooks Transcript at p. 45, l. 6-17.)

SUMMARY AND ANALYSIS OF RELEVANT EXHIBITS

Appellant's Exhibits

P-1 through P-12 are Brooks's Job Expectations & Evaluations (JE&Es) covering certain periods of her employment with Kean University (July 1, 2005 to June 30, 2015) but not all periods. They were offered by Appellant Brooks to demonstrate her "satisfactory" ratings. The favorable JE&E's are noted. However, there are multiple time gaps in these records.

The significance of the time gaps is that Brooks's accidents fall within the gaps, i.e. the time periods not covered by these "satisfactory" ratings. The accident of October 4, 2004, occurred in the gap period between P-2 and P-3. The accident of January 18, 2005, occurred in the gap period between P-2 and P-3. The accident of November 10, 2008, occurred in the period covered in P-6, but is not mentioned therein. The accident of September 1, 2011, occurred in the gap period between P-8 and P-9. The cell phone incident of October 22, 2012, occurred in the period covered by P-9.

The overall assessment of Brooks's performance set forth in P-9 demonstrates that she scored a "one" out of a possible "three" in six of ten categories, including "Quality of Work" (failed to achieve most or all essential quality criteria"); "Timeliness" (rarely met work schedules or deadlines"); "Conscientiousness" (being "off-schedule" and being "resistant to learning new skills to enhance her work"); "Job Knowledge/Skills" ("rarely demonstrating application of skills and knowledge which has an adverse effect on job performance"); "Problem Solving" ("failed to identify and/or distinguish risks and benefits"); and "Safety" ("failed to follow safety rules").

P-13 is the attachment to the PNDA issued in connection with the October 22, 2012, cell phone incident. P-14 (also marked as K-11) is a photo taken by the complaining student. P-15 is a June 14, 2015, Disability Application containing entries by Brooks's physician, Manfred K. Obi, M.D. This document does not say that Brooks was unable to participate in her July 15, 2015, hearing. It does not offer the Tribunal assistance in determining the issues in this case. In K-25, discussed below, Dr. DiGiacomo, another doctor consulted by Brooks, states that she would be ready to return to school/work by June 22, 2015.

Respondent's Exhibits

K-1 lists Brooks's disciplinary history at Kean.

K-2 through K-7 chronicle the facts, charges and hearing results of the May 5, 2015, shuttle accident at the Burger King.

K-8 through K-13 chronicle the allegations, proofs, charges and outcome of the October 22, 2012, cell phone incident.

K-14 through K-16 chronicle the reporting of a driving incident as alleged by a concerned citizen, the investigation thereof, the proofs submitted, and Kean's decision not to implement formal disciplinary action. Exhibits K-14 through K-16 are not being given any consideration by this Tribunal in the outcome of the case at bar.

K-17 and K-18 chronicle the investigation of Brooks's shuttle accident dated September 9, 2011.

K-19 chronicles Brooks's shuttle accident dated November 10, 2008.

K-20 chronicles Brook's shuttle accident dated January 18, 2005.

K-21 chronicles Brooks's shuttle accident of September 20, 2004

K-22 is the same as P-11; however, K-22 contains two additional pages plus Brooks's time records.

K-23 is the same as P-12, they are the JE&E for the period July 1, 2014, through June 30, 2015. The tribunal notes that on the last page of both exhibits, titled "Section 6 – Fact Sheet of Significant Performance Events," there is no information about the May 5, 2015, Burger King accident.

K-24 is a map of the greater Kean University area showing the locations of Kean University, the subject Target store, and the subject Burger King restaurant.

K-25 is the "Certificate to Return to Work or School" signed by Dennis DiGiacomo, M.D. dated June 5, 2015, stating that Brooks would be able to return to work/school on June 22, 2015.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The parties agreed that all of their Exhibits would go into evidence. They also agree that this matter is a progressive discipline case and that evidence of past incidents and past disciplinary matters are relevant to the issue of the appropriateness of the type and amount of discipline imposed, if any. There is no dispute between the parties about the fact that shuttle drivers must be aware of the physical dimensions of the shuttles and must be aware of the physical limitations of the areas over and through which they drive the shuttles.

After carefully considering the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following FACTS:

(1) On May 5, 2015, Brooks was employed by Kean as a shuttle bus driver under her supervisor Denis Castanon. On that same date, Brooks was scheduled to depart the Kean campus on Morris Avenue in Elizabeth, N.J. at 5:30 p.m. and proceed westbound on Morris Avenue to the Target store in Union, N.J. along a designated route assigned to her. Her scheduled arrival time at the Target store was 5:55 p.m. Instead of proceeding on the designated route, Brooks, driving Kean's shuttle, departed the Kean campus and proceeded eastbound on Morris Avenue to a Burger King restaurant at 439 Morris Avenue in Elizabeth, N.J., which was not on her designated route to purchase food for her own consumption during her upcoming break scheduled for the time period 5:55 p.m. to 6:25 p.m. The purchase of food was not a work-related function and was a personal errand which Brooks performed solely on her own behalf.

(2) Brooks arrived in the shuttle at the Burger King a few minutes before 5:53 p.m. and became involved in an accident involving the shuttle and part of the structure of the Burger King building (an awning), which was reported to the Elizabeth Police Department at 5:53 p.m. (K-5.) Brooks immediately called her supervisor, Denis Castanon, to report the accident.

(3) After receiving Brooks's call informing him of the accident, Denis Castanon went to the accident scene at the Burger King and, once there, spoke with Brooks about the accident and took photographs of the damaged shuttle and the damaged Burger King awning. (K-3.)

(4) Brooks admitted that she saw a sign at the subject Burger King's drive-through lane, which she referred to as a "white bar," and was aware of the height restrictions at the Burger King's drive-through lane. Brooks drove around a first awning, stopped to pay for and pick-up her food order, but upon re-entering the shuttle drove away making, contact with a second awning causing damage to it and to the Kean shuttle.

(5) Neither P-15 nor K-25 contain anything that says that Brooks was or would not be able to attend the July 15, 2015, disciplinary hearing. Although she did not personally attend the July 15, 2015, disciplinary hearing, Brooks was represented at that hearing by her labor union representative.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Applicable Standard

The Civil Service Act and the implementing regulations govern the rights and duties of public employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1 to 4A:10-3.2. An employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties or who gives other just cause may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a). In a civil service disciplinary case, the employer bears the burden of proving sufficient, competent and credible evidence of facts essential to the charge. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(2), -21; N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c); N.J.A.C. 1:1-2.1, "burden of proof," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4. That burden is to establish by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

An appointing authority may discipline an employee on various grounds, including inability to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee, insubordination, and other sufficient cause. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). Such action is subject to review by the Merit System Board, which after a de novo hearing makes an independent determination as to both guilt and the "propriety of the penalty imposed below." W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 519 (1962). In an administrative proceeding concerning a major disciplinary action, the appointing authority must prove its case by a "fair preponderance of the believable evidence." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Polk, supra, 90 N.J. at 560; Atkinson, supra, 37 N.J. at 149.

The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958.) Greater weight of credible evidence in the case—a preponderance—depends not only on the number of witnesses, but "greater convincing power to our minds." State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47, 49 (1975). Similarly, credible testimony "must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself." Perrone, supra, 5 N.J. at 522.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1) Incompetence, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties

In this type of breach an employee performs his or her duties, but in a manner that exhibits insufficient quality of performance, inefficiency in the results produced, or untimeliness of performance, such that his or her performance is sub-standard. See Clark v. New Jersey Dep't of Agric., 1 N.J.A.R. 315.

Incompetence means that an individual lacks the ability or the qualifications to perform the duties required of him or her. Steinel v. City of Jersey City, 7 N.J.A.R. 91, modified, 193 N.J. Super. 629 (App. Div. 1984), aff'd, at 99 N.J. 2 (1985).

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) Neglect of Duty

Neglect of duty means not performing one's job. That duty may arise by specific statute or may arise from the nature of the position itself. Steinel, supra, 7 N.J.A.R. 91.

Neglect of duty arises when an employee, without just cause, fails to perform the normal duties required by the position which he or she holds, either by failing to initiate the discharge of those duties or failing to complete same. It includes, but is not limited to, official misconduct or misdoing along with negligence. Clyburn v. Twp. of Irvington, CSV 7597-97, Initial Decision (September 10, 2001), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. This is in contrast to insubordination, which involves the employee's refusal to discharge his or her duties or his or her willful failure to carry out a specific order.

Neglect of duty has been interpreted to mean that "an employee . . . neglected to perform an act required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge." In re Glenn, CSV 5072-07, Initial Decision (February 5, 2009) (citation omitted), adopted, Civil Service Commission (March 27, 2009), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/. The term "neglect" means a deviation from the normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977). "Duty" means conformance to "the legal standard of reasonable conduct in light of the apparent risk." Wytupeck v. Camden, 25 N.J. 450, 461 (1957) (citation omitted). Neglect of duty can arise from omitting to perform a required duty as well as from misconduct or misdoing, cf. State v. Dunphy, 19 N.J. 531, 534 (1955). Neglect of duty does not require an intentional or willful act; however, there must be some evidence that the employee somehow breached a duty owed to the performance of the job.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) Misuse of Public Property

Misuse of Public Property arises when an employee uses property owned by a public entity for his/her own gain; without authorization; and/or for a purpose that is contrary to the public entity's purposes or for other than its intended use for the public entity's business, that is, for an inappropriate use.

The Chair of the Civil Service Commission interpreted N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) so as to define conduct that constitutes misuse of public property in the case of In re Gray, CSV-6389-13 Final Decision, Civil Service Commission (June 18, 2014), issued on July 17, 2014. There, Chairman Szuch stated:

> N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8) was enacted to curb an employee's improper use of a State car and to make such a violation a specific cause of discipline. However, it was not just limited to penalize employees for the use of the State car for their own personal gain or other inappropriate use. An improper use of a vehicle may encompass an employee's act of negligence in operating the vehicle.

Legal Issues Presented

(1) Does the aforementioned conduct constitute Incompetency or failure to perform duty under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1)?

(2) Does the aforementioned conduct constitute neglect of duty under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6)?

(3) Does the aforementioned conduct constitute misuse of public property under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8)?

First Legal Issue

Regarding the first legal issue, in the definition of "Incompetence, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties" the emphasis is on the employee's failure to produce the necessary quantity or quality of results which a person in his position should be expected to produce. Emphasis is also put on the employee's knowledge or skill level (i.e. competence) needed to perform the types of work for which he was hired. In the case at bar there is evidence that Brooks lacked or was significantly deficient in demonstrating that she had the requisite skills needed for the performance of a shuttle bus driver's duties. The evidence presented went to the issue of whether Brooks's failure to reconcile the known dimensions of her shuttle bus with the posted height restrictions at the Burger King's drive-through lane was due to some dereliction of duty or was due to circumstances which Brooks had little or no control over.

I CONCLUDE that respondent Kean has proven, by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence—including the testimony of Brooks herself that she saw and understood the posted height restrictions at the Burger King's drive-through lane—that the accident in question was the result of Brooks's negligence, a dereliction of duty, and that the Respondent proved the charge of Incompetency, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1) by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence.

Second Legal Issue

Regarding the second legal issue, in the definition of "Neglect of Duty" the emphasis is placed on the negligent performance of one's duty or on the actor's neglect to perform an act required by his job duties. In the case at bar, Brooks knowingly and willfully proceeded off her designated, assigned route to go to the Burger King rather than proceed along her route to the Target store. Brooks admitted during cross-examination that the Burger King was not on her designated route for the assignment she was supposed to be performing. I CONCLUDE that Brooks knowingly and willfully deviated from the route that she was obligated to follow in order to pursue her own personal interests and therefore was neglectful of her duties.

Based on the foregoing facts and applicable law, I CONCLUDE that respondent has proven, by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence, the charge of Neglect of Duty, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7).

Third Legal Issue

Regarding the third legal issue, evidence was presented that at the time of her deviance from her prescribed route Brooks was using Kean's shuttle bus to pursue her own personal interests at the Burger King. I CONCLUDE that using Kean's shuttle to run an errand for herself was conduct that constituted a misuse of public property, namely the shuttle. At the time of the accident, Brooks was not using the Shuttle to further the interests of her employer. I CONCLUDE that this too was a misuse of public property. Since the shuttle Brooks was driving was only one of two shuttles in service, and since Brooks did not move the shuttle between the time of the accident at 5:53 p.m. and the 9:00 p.m. conclusion of the Police department's interview, Brooks almost certainly caused transportation interruptions or delays affecting the Kean students who required the services of the shuttle. I CONCLUDE that Brooks's misuse of the shuttle had an adverse effect upon the operations of her employer's business. Brooks's disregard of the shuttle's dimensions and of the height restrictions posted at the Burger King's drive-through lane was negligent conduct which caused the accident resulting in damage to the shuttle. I CONCLUDE that Brook's driving of Kean's shuttle in an area where signs warned that the shuttle would not fit constitutes Misuse of Public Property.

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has proven, by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence, the charge of Misuse of Public Property under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8).

APPROPRIATNESS/INAPPROPRIATNESS OF REMOVAL

I CONCLUDE that Brooks's failure to know and/or appreciate the dimensions of the shuttle in relation to the physical roadway over and through which she was driving the shuttle on May 5, 2015, at the Burger King restaurant's drive-through lane was a significant failure on her part which directly caused the accident in question and the damage to the shuttle and to the Burger King building. I CONCLUDE that Brooks's conduct on this occasion alone—willfully leaving her designated, assigned route to pursue personal matters during work hours in Kean's shuttle, and then failing to reconcile the dimensions of the shuttle to the restrictions of the roadway environment (i.e. the drive-through lane at the Burger King) and then failing to drive her vehicle forward in a safe manner—was in and of itself enough to warrant her removal from her employment. See Klusaritz v. Cape May County, 387 N.J. Super. 305 (App. Div. 2006), where the Appellate Division ruled that where an employee cannot competently perform the work required of his position, termination, rather than progressive discipline, is the appropriate action.

I CONCLUDE that Brooks's past driving and disciplinary history at Kean contains prior instances of accidents and willful a violation of established rules (e.g. cell phone use while in the act of driving the shuttle), contains ample numbers of counseling and Kean's attempts to enable her to improve her conduct, and an insufficient response on the part of Brooks to abide by the rules governing proper and safe operation of a shuttle bus. Brooks's prior record bolsters the correctness of the finding of the disciplinary hearing of July 15, 2015, and of the conclusion of this Tribunal, stated above. Therefore, Brooks's removal from her employment is hereby affirmed.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the determination of sustaining the charge of Incompetency, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties, specifically N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), involving the violation of the aforesaid sections of the Regulations is hereby AFFIRMED.

It is further ORDERED that the determination of sustaining the charge of Neglect of Duty, specifically N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), involving the violation of the aforesaid sections of the Regulations is hereby AFFIRMED.

It is further ORDERED that the determination of sustaining the charge of Misuse of Public Property, specifically N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8), involving the violation of the aforesaid sections of the Regulations is hereby AFIRMED.

It is further ORDERED that the determination that Brooks be removed from her employment is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MARCH 23, 2017 BW

The appeal of John Baker, Senior Security Officer, Ann Klein Forensic Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Human Services, removal effective June 14, 2012, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Elia A. Pelios, who rendered his initial decision on February 10, 2017. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on March 22, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of John Baker.

Re: John Baker

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 09967-12
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2012-3655

IN THE MATTER OF JOHN BAKER, ANN KLEIN FORENSIC PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL, DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES.

Stuart J. Alterman, Esq., for appellant (Alterman & Associates, LLC, attorneys)

Adam Verone, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: September 28, 2015 Decided: February 10, 2017

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent Ann Klein Forensic Psychiatric Hospital, Department of Human Services (Ann Klein) removed senior medical security officer (SMSC), John Baker, for N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 7 Neglect of duty; A.O. 4:08 B2 Neglect of duty, loafing or idleness or willful failure to devote attention of tasks which could result in danger to persons or property; A.O. 4:08 B3 2 Sleeping while on duty; A.O. 4:07E1 Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure or Administrative decision; and A.O. 4:07 C8 Falsification: Intentional misstatement of fact in connection with work in any record or report. The matter arises from appellant allegedly sleeping on duty, and failing to make his required counts and census of the patient population.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 24, 2012, respondent served on appellant a preliminary notice of disciplinary action removing him. Appellant did not request a departmental hearing. Respondent Ann Klein issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action on June 13, 2012, removing appellant effective April 28, 2012. Appellant filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission on or about July 25, 2012. The Office of Administrative Law (OAL) filed the matter as a contested case on July 25, 2012, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was heard on August 21, 2013, and September 17, 2014. The record was held open for submission of closing briefs, and the record closed on September 28, 2015. Orders were entered in this matter to allow for the extension of time in which to file the initial decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Ron McMullen (McMullen) testified on behalf of the appellant. He has been employed at Ann Klein for eighteen years, is a senior medical security officer, and is also the union president. He described the role that he plays in disciplinary proceedings as trying to keep employees employed, or to reduce their disciplines. He is familiar with sleeping cases, but cannot remember how many he has been involved with. McMullen is familiar with a number of cases, but is not aware of similar employees being removed from Ann Klein regarding intentional misstatement or for violation of a rule. He was involved in negotiating the penalty for appellant in the present matter. Appellant has never received a major discipline. One major discipline appellant was charged with was reduced to a five-day suspension that he did not serve. Baker has no prior charge for falsification of documents; one prior discipline for sleeping on the job; and one prior discipline for neglect of duty. McMullen has observed officers fail to make their checks, and has been aware of it as union rep as well.

Sandy Hereford (Hereford) testified on behalf of the respondent. Hereford has worked at Ann Klein since November 4, 1989, and was serving as a security supervisor on the third shift, with hours between 10:30 p.m. to 6:30 a.m. The position involved ensuring the well-being of patients and staff. Hereford was working on April 12 through 13, 2012, and knows the appellant who was also employed at Ann Klein. Hereford and the appellant had no problems outside of work.

On April 12, 2012, Hereford was on duty in base two. A call was received from another supervisor, Thomas Savage, requesting Hereford's presence in unit four. When Hereford arrived the unit nurse was present, and asked Hereford to look at the unit. Hereford observed the appellant sitting in front of the television, with no other people around him. Security supervisor Savage then asked the supervising nurse to also describe what she observed. Hereford went to check on patients at about 4:20 a.m. Hereford began with room one, and by the time she got to room five, the appellant jumped-up, but stayed where he was while Hereford continued to check the rooms. Hereford picked-up the census and the periodic patient observation (PPO) sheets, performed a check of all twenty-five rooms, and noted appellant had been one and one-half hours behind on inspection logs.

Hereford reviewed the policy about counts, (R-2) including a description of what was required of the patient room check. It is important that the policy be followed because patients are vulnerable. Beginning at 10:30 p.m., a patient-check is to be performed every half-hour by walking around, checking-in, and signing-off on the names. Signing-off ahead of time defeats the purpose of the check, and the form should never be signed-off if the check was not actually performed.

Hereford noted that the 4:30 a.m. check was initialed, but not signed. The backs of the documents were signed by nursing at 4:20 a.m. and 4:25 a.m. Hereford also reviewed documents which memorialize the PPO check. This requires that you get-up, go to the door, and look-in on the patients. PVL stands for periodic visual observation, and one of the memorializing documents requires face-to-face observation.

Hereford also reviewed document R-5. These were notations for patient W.M., who required fifteen minute observations as a precaution for self-harm and assault. From 12:45 a.m. to 3:00 a.m., all indications were that the patient was resting. Although there should have been, no checks were performed between 3:00 a.m. and 4:15 a.m. The unit nurse signed off at 4:20 a.m., and the supervisor of nursing signed off at 4:25 a.m. Hereford also reviewed document (R-6), which was her statement, which she believes is accurate and consistent.

The video of the incident was then shown in the hearing room. Hereford identified Baker in the video, as he was the only officer inside working on the third shift. The video shows Baker sitting in a chair, and there was considerable movement and conversation. Between 12:46 a.m. and 1:08 a.m., Baker had not moved from the chair, and is observed switching channels on the television. At 1:55:29 a.m. Baker gets up from the chair, walks around for about forty seconds, and later appears to be surveying the area before sitting again. At 2:08 a.m., Baker gets up, sits down again at 2:09 a.m., without performing a check. At 2:11 a.m., he performs a check, and sits down at 2:19 a.m. At approximately 2:58 a.m., the unit nurse comes through. At 3:19 a.m. no check has been performed, and Baker appears to be reclined in his chair. At 4:17 a.m., supervisor Savage is seen entering the control room, and at 4:18:58 brings in the unit nurse. At 4:20 a.m. Hereford enters the control unit, Baker does not react to these three individuals staring at him. At 4:25 a.m. Baker stands-up, takes the sheets, stands by the television. At 4:33 a.m. Baker goes to the bathroom, returns and sits down again at 4:34 a.m. He does not perform a check. At 5:35:50 a.m. Baker gets-up and performs a check. At 5:48:21 a.m. he sits back-down. At 6:21 a.m. there is a shift-change, Baker puts the chair back where it belonged, and performed no further checks. At 6:25:18 a.m. the video concluded.

On cross-examination, Hereford noted that there are twelve medical supervisors at Ann Klein, and three are usually on the third-shift. It is noted that the center officer can see the inside officer. Nothing was reported to Hereford about Baker. Hereford did not see the supervisor perform a check, and noted that the nurse sign-off was on a PPO sheet, not a census sheet. Hereford's statement was written on April 18, 2012, five days after the incident. Hereford did not want to be involved, and did not want to be accused of harassing Baker. Hereford described it as frustrating when you need to keep redirecting someone about their regular job duties. Hereford did not actually see Baker with his legs up, and could not see his face, therefore, could not see that Baker's eyes were closed. It is noted that a buzzer sounds when the door opens. Baker did not say anything when Hereford asked for his sheets. Hereford noted that Baker never listens to redirections.

Thomas Savage (Savage), security supervisor for Ann Klein, also testified on behalf of the respondent. He knows Baker, and remarked that they started at the same time. He was a supervisor for about five years at the time of the incident in question. He had no problem with Baker outside of the work area, and had no personal issues with him. He believes that a supervisor is negligent if not adequately supervising the officers under them. Savage states that he had spoken with Baker on a few occasions about being more attentive. He notes that the third-shift sometimes has a lax attitude, and generally was reserved for the older officers. Savage observed Baker in the chair, and noted that he appeared to be asleep. Baker was not aware of Savage's presence or any nurse who came in after. Savage called a fellow supervisor and a supervising nurse down to observe, as past practice in these instances was to get a second set of eyes. He identified his statement in the matter document (R-7), and asserted that it is accurate.

On cross-examination, Savage explained that four- to six-checks are performed per shift. The checks involve going to the unit to make sure that everyone is attentive. It is not required for Savage to physically observe patients during his shift. Earlier in the day of the incident, he had knocked on the glass, and described it as knocking three times in rapid succession. He could see Baker in the front and right side, sitting in the chair, though Savage does not recall if Baker's feet were up. He did observe that his eyes were closed. He has never seen the video of this incident, and testified based on his report as recollection. Savage was never asked to provide a report; he wrote the statement on his own.

Savage noted that the third-shift is fairly quiet and cold. Officers often wear jackets and hats, they are not permitted to bring blankets with them. A collar being up is not appropriate, but is not an issue. Having the jacket over one's head, however is not acceptable. Savage advised that he has never had to go to the lengths with other officers which he has had to with Baker.

Rosita Kane (Kane), a registered nurse who works at Ann Klein, also testified on behalf of the respondent. She was working the overnight shift on April 12 through 13, 2012. She knows Baker from work, and has no problems with him outside of work. Kane described that Savage asked her to come out of the nursing room and to come to the center. He asked her what she saw, and she responded that she saw Baker sitting in the chair as her signature indicated on Exhibits R-3 and R-5. On cross-examination, she noted that she performed her own check earlier. Kane was doing paperwork when Savage contacted her. All she saw was Baker sitting in the chair, she could not see if his head was up, and she does not remember what side she saw. She could not see Baker's face. Kane went back to her station, and does not know how long it was before she signed the paperwork. She signed the documents because Savage asked her to.

Sharon Herring (Herring) also testified on behalf of the respondent. She's worked at Ann Klein for twenty-five years, and was the third-shift nursing supervisor. She knows the appellant, and has worked with him on the third-shift. Herring was working on the date in question, on the third-shift. She recalled that she was called into unit four by Savage to witness Baker, who was not attentive. In her words, he appeared to be sleeping. Savage wanted witnesses, and she recalls that they were talking loudly while they were in the unit, and Baker did not even acknowledge their presence. Herring referred to the census sheet for that date, and signed at 4:25 a.m., because it had not been updated. Baker did sign from 2:36 a.m. to 4:20 a.m. She signed document (R-5), because it was not updated. A self-harming patient needs to be observed for fear of suicide, self-mutilation, and such a patient is more likely to harm himself overnight. No check was performed since 3:00 a.m., and she signed the document at 4:25 a.m.

Herring reviewed the video of the April 19, 2012 incident, and identified Baker in the lower right-hand corner. By 2:00 a.m., Herring had not seen any checks by Baker. At 2:05 a.m. she entered the control center, and saw Baker sitting in the chair with a coat over his head. She could not see his face. Herring asked the center officer to knock on the window to get Baker to bring the census check form for her to sign. As of 3:30 a.m., there still was not any census check performed. The same was true at 4:30 a.m. At 6:03 a.m. there is a shift change, and by 6:30 a.m., there still were not any checks performed at the end of Baker's shift.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The appointing authority presented video evidence and testimony by witnesses which was credible and consistent. Appellant's only testimonial evidence did not contradict the eyewitness versions of the events, but largely spoke to the appropriateness of penalty. Considering the forgoing, I FIND that on April 12 and 13, 2012, and again on April 19, 2012, appellant slept while on-duty and in so doing failed to perform the majority of his required checks and counts of the patient census. I further FIND that appellant submitted paperwork indicating he had performed checks which he had not.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:-2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

In the present matter, respondent has charged appellant with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)7 (neglect of duty); and violations of Administrative Orders 4:08 B2 (neglect of duty), B3 (Sleeping While on Duty), E1 (Violation of a Rule . . .) and C8 (Falsification).

"Neglect of duty" has been interpreted to mean that "an employee . . . neglected to perform an act required by his or her job title or was negligent in its discharge." In re Glenn, CSV 5072-07, Initial Decision (February 5, 2009) (citation omitted), adopted, Civil Service Commission (March 27, 2009), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. The term

"neglect" means a deviation from the normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977). "Duty" means conformance to "'the legal standard of reasonable conduct in the light of the apparent risk.'" Wytupeck v. Camden, 25 N.J. 450, 461 (1957) (citation omitted). Neglect of duty can arise from omitting to perform a required duty as well as from misconduct or misdoing. Cf. State v. Dunphy, 19 N.J. 531, 534 (1955). Neglect of duty does not require an intentional or willful act; however, there must be some evidence that the employee somehow breached a duty owed to the performance of the job.

In the present matter, the record reflects that appellant did not perform the majority of his required census checks on April 12 and 13, 2012, and April 19, 2012. I CONCLUDE that his failure to do so constituted omissions of required duties, and therefore, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that the charges of violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)7 (neglect of duty), and Administrative Order 4:08 B2 (Neglect of Duty) should be and are hereby SUSTAINED.

Appellant was also charged with a violation of AO 4:08 B3, Sleeping while on duty. The record reflects that on both dates in question appellant was observed sleeping while he was on duty and while expected to be performing his census checks. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that the charge of violating Administrative Order 4:08 B3 should be and is hereby SUSTAINED.

Appellant was also charged with a violation of AO 4:08 C8, Falsification: Intentional misstatement of material fact in connection with work, employment, application attendance or in any record, report, investigation or other proceeding. The record reflects that on both dates in question appellant completed forms indicating he had performed census checks of patients when in fact he had not. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that the charge of violating Administrative Order 4:08 C8 should be and is hereby SUSTAINED.

Appellant was also charged with a violation of AO 4:08 E1, Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure order or administrative decision. The record reflects that on both dates in question appellant failed to make required checks and counts as specifically required by Policy and Procedure 603 (R-2). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that the charge of violating Administrative Order 4:08 E1 should be and is hereby SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.9(d) specifically grant the Commission authority to increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. Typically, the Board considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463.

"Although we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962), that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990).

Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).

In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007), citing Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197-98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense); see also, In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007) (DYFS worker who waved a lit cigarette lighter in a five-year old's face was terminated, despite lack of any prior discipline):

> . . . judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.

> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980).

N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 provides that the Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, but removal shall not be substituted for a lesser penalty. See, Sabia v. City of Elizabeth, 132 N.J. Super. 6, 15-16 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, Elizabeth v. Sabia, 67 N.J. 97 (1975).

The record reflects that the appellant's position involves the care and protection of members of one of this State's most vulnerable populations, and that the nature of his misconduct causes a risk of harm to this population. The patients and their families are entitled to expect that care, observation, and required checks on the patients' well-being, will be conducted in accordance with governing procedures, and appellant failed repeatedly to do so, and completed paperwork which purported that he had. Clearly this constitutes an act of severe misconduct, and a breach of trust required of his position, one which he has performed several times prior, and continues to repeat.

A copy of the Department of Human Services Disciplinary Action Program (R-9) was placed into evidence, and indicates recommended penalties for various violations. Although not binding on this tribunal, this document offers a reasonable basis for imposition of penalty which may be considered. For each of the Administrative Orders violated by appellant, a maximum penalty of removal is indicated for even a first offense. Considering the volume of infractions over multiple occasions, and in consideration of the foregoing, along with appellant's disciplinary records (R-10, R-11), I CONCLUDE that the respondent's action in removing the appellant was justified.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charge of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 7 Neglect of duty; A.O. 4:08 B2 Neglect of duty, loafing or idleness or willful failure to devote attention of tasks which could result in danger to persons or property; A.O. 4:08 B3 2 Sleeping while on duty; A.O.

Rachel M. Caruso, Esq., for respondent, (Roth D'Aquanni, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 21, 2017

Decided: February 23, 2017

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

These are two consolidated petitions of appeal filed by Toronda Matthews, a former employee of the Union County Department of Human Services. Her first appeal (CSV 15158-15) challenged a 45-day suspension, and was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on September 25, 2015. A second appeal challenged her removal, effective July 5, 2016, and was transmitted to the OAL on August 19, 2016 (CSV 12601-16). The two matters were consolidated at the request of the parties via order dated August 29, 2016. See: N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.1. At the time, Ms. Matthews was represented by her union, the Communication Workers of America (CWA); although the representative assigned to assist her changed during the course of the litigation, and most recently was Julia Barocas.

The consolidated matters were scheduled for hearing on January 4, 2017.[1] By letter dated December 28, 2016, Ms. Barocas asked for an adjournment of the hearing. As she cited no reason for her request, I inquired further. She followed with a letter of the same date advising that the CWA was no longer representing Ms. Matthews. That day, I wrote to Ms. Matthews and counsel for Union County, and advised that I would like to schedule a telephone conference to discuss next steps. I confirmed that the CWA had withdrawn its representation; suggested three dates for a telephone conference; and asked the parties to contact my assistant with their availability.

I received no reply from Ms. Matthews and accordingly, issued a notice for a telephone conference for January 30, 2017. That afternoon, my assistant unsuccessfully tried to contact Ms. Matthews via telephone; the numbers we had on record were disconnected. By letter dated January 30, 2017, I alerted Ms. Matthews that we had been unable to reach her. I gave her until February 21, 2017, to contact my assistant and advise where she could be reached by telephone. I indicated that if I did not hear from her I would dismiss her case. I again received no reply.

None of the letters or notices sent to Ms. Matthews were returned to the OAL as undeliverable. They were all sent to the address on record and included in the agency transmittal documents.

[1] The suspension appeal had previously been scheduled for hearing in January 2016, but that hearing was adjourned at the request of the parties, and in anticipation of the filing of the appeal on the removal action.

I CONCLUDE that Ms. Matthews' appeal should be dismissed for failure to prosecute; repeated failure to be responsive to correspondence from this tribunal; and for failure to appear at the scheduled status conference. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 provides that, if, after appropriate notice, neither a party nor a representative appears at any proceeding, the judge shall hold the matter for one day before taking any action. If the judge does not receive an explanation for the nonappearance within one day, the judge shall direct the Clerk to return the matter to the transmitting agency for appropriate disposition. I have received no explanation for Ms. Matthews' nonappearance.

ORDER

I ORDER that the consolidated appeals filed by Ms. Matthews be DISMISSED, and I direct the Clerk of the OAL to return the appeals to the transmitting agency per N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Pereira was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) on February 16, 2016. The Township held a hearing on March 11, 2016, after which it issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) sustaining all charges and removing Pereira effective March 11, 2016.

Pereira appealed and the Civil Service Commission (Commission) transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, where it was filed on April 21, 2016. The hearing was held on August 1, 2016, and September 7, 2016. The record closed on October 7, 2016, upon receipt of post-hearing closing submissions from the parties.

EVIDENCE AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Background

The following material facts are largely undisputed. Accordingly, I FIND them to be the FACTS of this case:

Paul Pereira had been employed by the Township as a heavy-equipment operator (HEO) in the DPW since June 18, 2012. Pereira operated many types of heavy equipment, including backhoes, excavators, bulldozers, front loaders, and track loaders. A Class "A" commercial driver license (CDL) is required for an HEO position, because an HEO must be able to drive a tractor-trailer to transport heavy equipment to a job site. A Class "B" CDL is required for a truck driver. HEO is a "safety sensitive" position.

On or about January 23, 2016, and January 24, 2016, a winter storm had left close to thirty inches of snow in the Township. In order to perform the snow-removal operations for the Main Street business area, Main Street and its intersections had been closed from Route 35 all the way down to the Township Hall on January 27, 2016, into January 28, 2016. The Parks Division and Roads Division were on site operating equipment and had basically split the road. Some employees drove front loaders to scoop up the snow on the road or heavier piles and dump the snow into the tandems to be trucked out. Some employees used a backhoe to pull snow off the sidewalks by back-dragging it and removing it. There was also manpower on the sidewalks shoveling snow from areas that the equipment could not reach, like under benches and around street signs.

On January 27, 2016, Pereira had worked his regular shift, which ended at 3:30 p.m. He returned to work at 8:00 p.m. for overtime snow removal. The snow-removal job was not mandatory. Pereira was operating a backhoe on Main Street, back-dragging the snow off the sidewalks and then picking it up and loading it into trucks to be hauled away. The backhoe had the Township logo on each side. That evening (January 27, 2016, into January 28, 2016), while on duty and receiving double-time pay, Pereira entered the Main Tavern, a local bar on Main Street, and left his backhoe parked outside for at least ten minutes.

Some of the other employees performing snow removal complained to Joseph Gregus that Pereira had been in the Main Tavern. Gregus has been employed by the Township DPW as the safety officer since September 2012. Gregus interacts with and oversees DPW employees, but is not their direct supervisor. Gregus is on the road daily with the employees in various divisions.

Later that evening, Pereira again entered the Main Tavern and left his backhoe parked outside for at least ten to fifteen minutes. That time, through the glass window in the Main Tavern door, Gregus observed Pereira inside with a rocks glass in his hand. Gregus contacted Carmine Barbato and advised Barbato that Pereira had been in the Main Tavern. Barbato has been employed by the DPW for forty-one years, and has been the superintendent of Public Works, Division of Streets and Sewers, since 2010. He oversees various projects and crews of the DPW, including HEOs. Barbato was Pereira's supervisor. Barbato had already left the snow-removal site, and by the time he returned several minutes later, Pereira was again operating his backhoe. Barbato confronted Pereira about being in the bar and removed him from the job site at approximately 12:30 a.m. on January 28, 2016.

Dennis Henry has been employed by the Township for forty-three years, and has been the DPW director for more than ten years. As DPW director, he oversees the operations of the entire DPW, which consists of approximately seven divisions, including Parks and Roads, and he supervises the DPW employees. Henry asked Gregus and Barbato to each provide him with a report of the incident.

Robert Landolfi has been employed by the Township for twelve years as the business administrator. In that capacity, he oversees the day-to-day operations of all the Township's departments, and all department heads report to him. Landolfi prepared the PNDA. A Loudermill hearing was held, at which hearing Pereira admitted he had been drinking on the job.

Pereira received and signed for the Township of Woodbridge Employee Handbook (Employee Handbook) and the DPW's Alcohol and Drug-Free Workplace Policy (DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy) upon being hired in 2012. (R-4; R-5.) Both the Employee Handbook and the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy remained in effect at the time of the January 2016 incident.

Pereira has no prior disciplinary history with the Township.

Testimony

Paul Pereira testified on his own behalf. Dennis Henry, Carmine Barbato, Joseph Gregus, Robert Landolfi, and David Valguarnera testified on behalf of the Township.

Joseph Gregus

On the night of the January 2016 incident, Gregus was told by other Township employees that Pereira had entered a bar to use the bathroom. The Main Tavern is almost dead center between Route 35 and the other end of Main Street. Gregus saw Pereira come out of the Main Tavern. During the course of the evening, he noticed Pereira was operating the backhoe. Gregus spoke with quite a few employees, and several asked Gregus if he were going to let that go on all evening. One employee told Gregus he suspected Pereira had been drinking, and other employees also felt that Pereira may not have been in the bar for the bathroom.

Gregus later observed the backhoe parked in front of the Main Tavern, running. It struck Gregus as not being right. Gregus waited a few minutes, and then walked up to the Main Tavern door. He looked through the door's glass window and saw Pereira inside. Pereira was with several patrons, having a good time, drinking with a rocks glass in his hand. Gregus was devastated, angry, and could not believe what was happening. In his tenure as safety director, Gregus had never observed another employee in a bar drinking while on duty.

Gregus contacted Barbato, who was in charge of the entire snow-removal operation, and told Barbato what was going on and that he needed him there as fast as he could get there. Gregus observed Pereira leave the bar and get back into the Township backhoe. By the time Barbato arrived, Pereira had driven the backhoe up Main Street toward Route 35 near a hair salon to work on that operation. Barbato and Pereira seemed to have some words in the street. Pereira was removed from the job site. Pereira started to walk back to the DPW, but then Barbato picked him up and took him to the DPW. Gregus remained at the job site.

Barbato returned to the job site and Gregus told Barbato that he had seen Pereira inside the Main Tavern drinking with a rocks glass in his hand. Barbato asked Gregus to go back into the bar and talk to the bartender to verify that Pereira had been in there and that he had been drinking. Gregus went into the bar and introduced himself to the bartender, Tom Sullivan. Sullivan advised that Pereira had been in the Main Tavern on two separate occasions that evening, and on both occasions had consumed alcohol.

Gregus spoke later with Barbato. They talked about what had happened and what Sullivan had said. Barbato and Gregus both entered the Main Tavern and had the same conversation with Sullivan, but Barbato took the lead. Sullivan again advised that Pereira had come into the Main Tavern on two separate occasions that evening and consumed alcohol.

Gregus did not speak to Pereira at all. Gregus did not stop Pereira from using the backhoe, and he testified that an alcohol test would have been Barbato's decision. Gregus thought Pereira was driving a little erratically—quickly going forward and backward, faster than it should have been done, multiple times. Gregus did not know why he omitted from his statement that Pereira had been driving erratically. Gregus had the authority to remove Pereira from the backhoe, but did not do so because it was such a sensitive issue and he thought it best that Barbato handle it. He did not call Barbato the first time Pereira went into the Main Tavern, because Pereira allegedly had gone in to use the bathroom.

At the request of Henry, Gregus returned to the Main Tavern on January 29, 2016, and asked Sullivan if he would be willing to provide a written statement of what he had told Gregus and Barbato. Sullivan provided Gregus with a written statement, which Gregus provided to Henry.

Gregus testified that the Main Tavern is not the place that you would want to go into even if it were just to use the bathroom, because other people were around and the perception would not have been good. Other places were open at the time, like the Rio Diner, the QuickChek, Township Hall, and the police department basement. The Rio Diner would have been, with the street closed, a thirty- to forty-second drive right to the top of the street, and QuickChek or Township Hall would have been a minute, because it would have been necessary to go around people and vehicles. All those establishments had restrooms and were within walking distance.

Paul Pereira

Pereira testified that the Main Tavern was located right where he had been clearing the snow, and that both times he had gone into the bar he used the bathroom. Pereira first went into the Main Tavern around 11:30/11:45 p.m. to use the bathroom. He testified that he saw a couple people he knew, said "hi" and "bye," and walked out. He also testified that he used the bathroom and was in and out in ten minutes, and also testified that he bought a beer and a shot for someone and walked out. Pereira clarified that after he came out of the bathroom the first time, he saw his two "friends." He later identified them as "Louie" and "Harry." He initially stated that he could not reveal their last names, but thereafter testified that he did not know their last names. Pereira asked them both if they wanted drinks, but Harry declined, so Pereira bought a beer and the shot for Louie.

The second time Pereira went inside was approximately fifteen to twenty minutes later, around midnight. He went inside because he had to use the bathroom again. He used the bathroom and then he bought a beer and a shot of Jack Daniels. He walked out of the bar and went back to his duties. He continued working for thirty to forty-five minutes before Barbato pulled up and called him out of the backhoe. He went to Barbato's truck. Barbato asked him if he was drinking. Pereira was scared and panicked and said "No." Barbato asked Pereira if he could call the police to get a breathalyzer and Pereira said, "Sure, no problem." After Barbato talked to Pereira, two supervisors, Ed Doering and Jim Mulrooney, came over and talked to Pereira. They were right in front of Pereira's face, having a conversation to try to detect the smell of alcohol.

Pereira testified that Barbato told him that Gregus had seen him drinking. Pereira panicked and said he was not drinking. Pereira did not deny going into the bar, because he had used the bar's bathroom. After the conversation with Barbato, Pereira was not permitted to continue working. Barbato took Pereira back to the DPW. Pereira punched out, drove his own vehicle home, and went to sleep. If Barbato had not made him leave, Pereira would have continued to work at the job site. Pereira was upset because they accused him of being drunk and saying they were going to call for a breathalyzer, but he was not drunk and he thought he deserved to remain on duty.

Pereira knows it was inappropriate to leave his job site and drink alcohol while on duty. He had diarrhea and had to go to the bathroom "real bad," and the Main Tavern was a lot closer than QuickChek. He was clearing snow two stores away from the Main Tavern. QuickChek was two blocks away, and the Rio Diner was around the corner, one block away. He has had to go to the bathroom plenty of times while on duty, and goes to the closest store he can find. He testified that when you have to go to the bathroom, you go to the closest place, but he made a big mistake going into the bar.

According to Pereira, the time difference between going to the Main Tavern and going to the Rio Diner in his backhoe, with all the vehicles and salt spreaders and the road blocked, would have been maybe ten or fifteen minutes. It would have taken him about seven minutes to drive to Township Hall and fifteen minutes to walk there. The QuickChek is just before Township Hall, so maybe a minute less to go there.

On the morning of January 28, 2016, Pereira was scheduled to work at 7:00 a.m. He was exhausted and overslept. A phone call from a coworker woke him up at 9:00 a.m., and Pereira got to work at approximately 10:30 a.m. When he arrived, he went to Barbato's office, but was told to go to Henry's office. Henry asked what happened, and Pereira told him that he went into the Main Tavern to use the bathroom, and he had a beer and a shot. Henry told Pereira that he was suspended and to go home and he would call him tomorrow. Pereira received a call the next day at 10:00 a.m. to take a drug-and-alcohol test at 11:00 a.m. The results were negative. Henry recommended that Pereira talk to a drug-and-alcohol counselor. Pereira did so and paid out of pocket. Pereira also completed an education and rehabilitation program, but they did not find anything wrong with him.

Pereira does not know what caused him to do what he did that evening. He was working overtime, and had been working nonstop. Pereira was not required to work overtime, but when it snows he never says no to money like that. He was exhausted, not thinking, and not in the right frame of mind. He is also diabetic. He has never been in trouble, has had no problems, and anything they wanted him to do, he did. Pereira was not erratic. He lied to his supervisor because he was scared and wanted to protect his job.

Carmine Barbato

Barbato was unsure of what time he left the job site on the night of the January 2016 incident. Shortly after he left, Gregus called and texted him to tell him that he needed to return as soon as possible because men were complaining that Pereira had come out of the Main Tavern. Barbato returned to the job site within six to eight minutes. When he arrived, Pereira was operating the backhoe like he was supposed to be, but the guys were complaining that Pereira had come out of the Main Tavern. Barbato did not witness anything unusual or erratic about Pereira's driving, and no one told Barbato that night that Pereira's driving was unusual or erratic. Barbato pulled Pereira out of the backhoe and asked him if he had been in the Main Tavern. Pereira admitted that he had been in the Main Tavern, and when Barbato asked what he had been doing in there, Pereira told Barbato that he "went in to take a shit." Barbato asked Pereira if he had been drinking, but Pereira denied that he had been drinking. Barbato did tell Pereira that he would call for a breathalyzer, and Pereira told him that was not a problem. Barbato did not call for the breathalyzer because Pereira told him he "took a shit." Barbato had two supervisors on site, Jim Mulrooney and Ed Doering, get right in front of Pereira to determine if they detected an odor of alcohol, but reasonable suspicion was not established. Barbato thought the two had been trained in reasonable suspicion, but thereafter learned that they had not.

Barbato took Pereira back to the DPW and made him punch out and leave the premises. After Pereira punched out, Barbato returned to the job site. That is when Barbato found out that Gregus had observed Pereira in the Main Tavern with a rocks glass in his hand.

Barbato and Gregus went into the Main Tavern so Barbato could interview the bartender. The bartender told them he had served Pereira drinks. If Barbato had known earlier that Gregus had observed Pereira with a rocks glass or if Pereira had admitted to drinking alcohol, he probably would have called the police and had the police administer a breathalyzer.

In a town of 100,000 people, Barbato cannot have an employee coming out of a bar while working. Pereira was operating a backhoe, pulling the snow off Main Street, which is very much considered a safety-sensitive function.

David Valguarnera

David Valguarnera has been employed by the Township for approximately ten years, and has been a truck driver for approximately the past four or five years. As a truck driver, he interacted with other DPW employees, including Pereira. Valguarnera was working with Pereira on the night of January 27, 2016, into January 28, 2016, cleaning snow from Main Street. Valguarnera was hauling snow from Main Street to the Community Center, where the ice melter was. The snow was getting loaded into Valguarnera's truck by an operator. Pereira was in a backhoe cleaning the street and sidewalks, getting ready to load the trucks.

Valguarnera saw Pereira's backhoe parked outside the Main Tavern, farther down from where they were working. Valguarnera was surprised to see it there and spoke to Craig Mackenzie and Gregus about it. It was a general conversation about whether Pereira perhaps had broken down, or there was something wrong with the machine, or if Pereira was on his cell phone, because they were waiting to get loaded up. It was weird that, out of the blue when they were working on upper Main Street, the backhoe was down at the Main Tavern.

Valguarnera later saw Pereira operating his backhoe, scraping down the sidewalk and dumping the snow into the truck. Pereira was operating his vehicle somewhat "erratic" based on just the speed on a closed road at night, forward and reverse, when there were people standing around shoveling the sidewalks and Valguarnera was standing outside his truck watching it get loaded. Valguarnera felt that something was not right and that other operators do not act in that manner with the backhoe. Valguarnera was concerned because he did not want to get hit, and he is responsible for his truck, so he did not want the backhoe to crash into his truck. Valguarnera spoke to Gregus about it that night because Gregus was the safety officer on duty.

Valguarnera explained that by "erratic" he meant moving faster than normal on a closed street. He did not recall anything else about Pereira's driving.

Dennis Henry

Rules regarding drugs and alcohol for a CDL holder are governed by federal regulations. Drinking on the job and operating a vehicle is a violation of Township policies and federal Department of Transportation (DOT) policies. Drinking before or while operating heavy equipment or performing safety-sensitive functions at work is prohibited. Drinking while on the job is prohibited even if not operating a vehicle. The Township has an Employee Handbook and a DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy. The purpose of the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy is to keep employees, coworkers, and residents safe when the DPW is working. If the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy is not followed, employees could damage equipment or injure themselves, coworkers, or residents.

Henry was not present for the January 2016 incident. He was advised of it by Barbato and Gregus the following morning. Henry asked them if Pereira were in, but he was not and had not called in for his 7:00-a.m. scheduled shift as required. Henry asked Barbato and Gregus each to provide him with a report, and to obtain a written statement from Sullivan. Henry received the reports and written statement.

Henry understood that Pereira had denied drinking when asked by Barbato, but later testified at the Loudermill hearing that he had been drinking. Pereira was on duty that night and being paid to work at the snow rate, which was double time, and he was operating a backhoe, performing safety-sensitive functions. Henry was also told by the safety officer that employees had concerns about the way he was operating the equipment on site.

Pereira's discipline was not based on a random drug or alcohol test. Per the DOT, the window of opportunity for an alcohol test is within two hours, and cannot exceed eight hours. Pereira did not show up for his scheduled shift, so he could not be tested. Henry did not attempt to contact Pereira. When Pereira was a no call/no show, Henry was not sure what was going on, and he was not going to be able to get a DOT alcohol test. If Pereira had worked his scheduled shift, the Township would have been within the required eight hours, and he would have been tested.

After a meeting with Barbato and Henry, Pereira volunteered to take a test, so he was given a test on January 29, 2016. Henry felt that there would have been reasonable suspicion to have tested Pereira on site because Gregus had seen Pereira in the tavern with a glass in his hand. However, Gregus did not have the authority to have Pereira tested. The authority would lie with Barbato, but Barbato's report stated that he was not aware that Gregus had seen Pereira with a drink in his hand until after he had escorted Pereira to the DPW to punch out and returned to the job site. An alcohol test was not administered on site because Pereira denied drinking and Barbato did not feel he had reasonable suspicion at that time. If Barbato had known Pereira was seen with a drink he would have felt he had reasonable suspicion.

Robert Landolfi

Landolfi signs all major discipline notices and served as the hearing officer for Pereira's Loudermill hearing and departmental hearing. Charges were brought against Pereira because his actions violated several policies and levels of decorum expected of a municipal employee, and removal was sought because of the setting. The Township was performing snow-plowing and snow-removal operations for the worst storm in Township history—over thirty inches. While on duty, receiving double pay, Pereira abandoned his safety-sensitive job and twice entered a local tavern, consumed alcohol, and fraternized with patrons. He returned to a clearly marked Township vehicle, and continued to perform his job in a manner that caused fellow employees to be concerned. He was asked by a supervisor if he had been drinking, but denied drinking. He was sent home and therefore was no longer able to aid Township efforts.

Pereira was insubordinate because he was asked a direct question by a supervisor and was purposefully deceitful when he denied drinking. He was expected to be truthful, and his lie impacted decisions that were made. Pereira misused municipal equipment, because he took a clearly marked municipal vehicle to a local tavern, consumed alcohol, and returned to and operated the equipment in an inappropriate manner, causing coworkers to be concerned for their equipment and safety. Pereira also violated federal CDL regulations and Township regulations by drinking and driving while on duty.

Pereira impeded the Township's obligation to its citizens and did so in a manner that reflected very poorly on the Township and his department. Anything less than termination would send the wrong message to coworkers and the public, who have a right to expect better of public employees and government in general.

Factual Discussion

A credibility determination requires an overall evaluation of the testimony in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 555 (1954). It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1, 5 (App. Div. 1961). "The interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted).

Pereira's testimony was contradicted by a number of witnesses, and at times was not probable under the circumstances. His testimony about the two patrons in the bar was stilted and inconsistent. He testified that the patrons who had purchased the alcohol for him, and for whom he had purchased alcohol, were friends, but then he was hesitant about their names and testified that he had only seen them around town while he was plowing. Additionally, Pereira's testimony was that he had only gone into the Main Tavern rather than another establishment with a bathroom because that was the closest place and he had diarrhea. However, if that were true it seems unlikely that he would be inclined to consume alcohol.

Gregus testified that he saw Pereira's backhoe parked outside the Main Tavern, and he walked down and looked inside the bar and saw Pereira. His written report reflects that at 12:08 a.m. he saw Pereira enter the Main Tavern, and was then approached by several employees who asked how long he was going to allow that to go on. (R-1.) Given the difference, it is not entirely clear whether Gregus saw Pereira enter the Main Tavern or at what time he entered, but his testimony and statement, as well as the statements of others who spoke to Gregus, were consistent in that Gregus had observed Pereira with a rocks glass in his hand inside the bar. Additionally, the bartender's statement reflects that on two occasions that evening he served a Township employee beer and shots, and Pereira testified that he had a beer and a shot. (R-2.)

With respect to Pereira's driving, the testimony of Gregus and Valguarnera was almost identical in that Pereira's forward and reverse speed was "erratic," because it was too fast. Normally, consistency would bolster the reliability of the testimony, but in this case, the significant similarity in the terminology used, coupled with a general lack of specificity other than that Pereira was driving too quickly in forward and reverse, appeared contrived. Faster is not a manner generally expected or consistent with use of the term "erratic," and there was not a single incident report that referenced erratic driving or that Pereira's speed was too fast. The testimony that Pereira's driving was erratic or unsafe is further undermined by the failure of a single person, including supervisors on site, to instruct Pereira to drive slower or to remove him from his backhoe, and by Barbato's testimony that he did not observe Pereira driving erratically. Further, although Barbato had not had the opportunity to observe Pereira's driving for as long as some of the others, it is significant that no one told him that night that there was anything unusual about Pereira's driving. Accordingly, I ascribe greater reliability to Barbato's testimony, and credit Barbato's testimony that he was not aware that Gregus had seen Pereira with a rocks glass in his hand until after Pereira had punched out and gone home. Additionally, although Pereira testified that he told Barbato and Henry that he had a beer and a shot later on January 28, 2016, I credit Barbato's and Henry's testimony that Pereira never admitted to them that he consumed alcohol. Rather, it was not until the Loudermill hearing on February 3, 2016, that Pereira admitted to having consumed alcohol.

Having had an opportunity to consider the evidence and to observe the witnesses and make credibility determinations based on the witnesses' testimony, I FIND the following additional material FACTS in this case:

After Pereira had entered the Main Tavern the second time, he was observed by Gregus with a rocks glass in his hand. Other patrons were inside the Main Tavern. Gregus contacted Barbato, who had left the site, and Barbato returned and briefly observed Pereira operating the backhoe. Barbato did not observe anything unusual or erratic about Pereira's driving and no employee advised Barbato that Pereira's driving had been unusual or erratic. Barbato escorted Pereira back to the DPW and Pereira punched out. Barbato returned to the job site, at which time Gregus advised him that he had observed Pereira with a rocks glass in his hand inside the bar. At the request of Barbato, Gregus went into the Main Tavern to confirm that Pereira had been inside drinking. Sullivan confirmed that he had on two separate occasions that evening served Pereira alcohol. Gregus informed Barbato of what Sullivan had said, and both Gregus and Barbato went into the Main Tavern to again speak to Sullivan, who again confirmed what he had told Gregus.

Pereira consumed at least one beer and at least one shot of whiskey while on duty that night.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 through 12-6, the "Civil Service Act," established the Civil Service Commission in the Department of Labor and Workforce Development in the Executive Branch of the New Jersey State government. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-1. The Commission establishes the general causes that constitute grounds for disciplinary action, and the kinds of disciplinary action that may be taken by appointing authorities against permanent career-service employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6 vests the Commission with the power, after a hearing, to render the final administrative decision on appeals concerning removal, suspension or fine, disciplinary demotion, and termination at the end of the working test period of permanent career-service employees.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2(a) provides that major discipline shall include removal, disciplinary demotion, and suspension or fine for more than five working days at any one time. An employee may be subject to discipline for a number of reasons enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), including incompetency, inefficiency or failure to perform duties (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1)); insubordination (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2)); conduct unbecoming a public employee (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6)); misuse of public property, including motor vehicles (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(8)); violation of federal regulations concerning drug and alcohol use by and testing of employees who perform functions related to the operation of commercial motor vehicles, and State and local policies issued thereunder (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(10)); and other sufficient cause (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12)). In appeals concerning such major disciplinary actions, the burden of proof shall be on the appointing authority to establish the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the believable evidence. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

The Employee Handbook and the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy state that "the abuse of alcohol and/or drugs by Township employees is incompatible with the Township's obligation to seek to provide a safe and productive work environment and its responsibility to the public to insure their safety and trust in the Township." (R-4; R-5.) The Employee Handbook and the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy also state:

> Any Township employee reporting for work and found to be under the influence of alcohol or drugs or using drugs or alcohol while at work . . . will be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination. This policy is in effect for all employees while on Township property, to include the parking lots, or while engaged in Township business.

Both provide for a drug-testing program, but the DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy is more extensive and includes random testing. The DPW Alcohol/Drug Policy additionally reflects that the drug-testing program would also be to comply with the Department of Transportation regulations that it would be in effect for all CDL holders. (R-5.)

Citing the "Return to Duty Testing," appellant argues that removal is inappropriate and that at most a thirty-day suspension should apply. The Return to Duty Testing states, in pertinent part:

> Notwithstanding the above, the Township reserves the right to take disciplinary action against an employee for a positive drug or alcohol test. An employee who tests positive on a random drug/alcohol test may be subject to disciplinary action, but will not be terminated for testing positive on the first random drug/alcohol test. A first offense under a random drug/alcohol test shall result in a minimum of a thirty (30) day suspension. A first offense shall remain on an employee's record for a ten (10) year period. An employee shall be subjected to immediate termination for a second offense during the ten (10) year period. Employees who test positive to other types of drug and alcohol screening conducted in accordance with this policy may be subject to disciplinary action up to and including termination.

From the emphasis, it is evident that the thirty-day suspension applies specifically to a "random" test, and a random test is not implicated in this matter. Further, it is noted that "SUBSTANCE ABUSE REALTED [SIC] BEHAVIOR" reflects that "[a]ny employee engaging in the manufacture, distribution, dispending [sic], possession or use of prohibited substances on Township premises, in Township vehicles, or while on Township business may face disciplinary action, up to and including termination." (Ibid.)

Appellant argues that the Township failed to prove Pereira was under the influence of alcohol or that he was operating the backhoe unsafely, and that "he was merely taking an unauthorized break." While there is no dispute that Pereira consumed alcohol, I concur that there was no proof that Pereira was impaired. However, it is noted that there was no test to establish Pereira's blood-alcohol concentration, in part because Pereira had denied consumption of alcohol when asked at the site by his supervisor. Additionally, while I concur that the evidence fell short of establishing that the backhoe was being operated "erratically," it likewise fell short of establishing that it was safe for Pereira to have been operating the backhoe. Further, had Pereira's conduct been merely an "unauthorized break," violations of State and federal law would not have been implicated.

The Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, though removal cannot be substituted for a lesser penalty. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. When determining the appropriate penalty, the Board must utilize the evaluation process set forth in West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), and consider the employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like, as well as formally adjudicated disciplinary actions and instances of misconduct informally adjudicated. Since West New York v. Bock, the concept of progressive discipline has been utilized in two ways when determining the appropriate penalty for present misconduct: to support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct, and to mitigate the penalty for a current offense. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 30–33 (2007). However, in an instance where an employee commits an act sufficiently egregious, removal may be appropriate notwithstanding the lack of prior history of infractions. See, e.g., In re Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. 19.

According to the Supreme Court, progressive discipline is a worthy principle, but it is not subject to universal application when determining a disciplined employee's quantum of discipline. Id. at 36.

> Although progressive discipline is a recognized and accepted principle that has currency in the [Civil Service Commission's] sensitive task of meting out an appropriate penalty to classified employees in the public sector, that is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the > employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.

>
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580, 410 A.2d 686 (1980); Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 306, 633 A.2d 577 (App.Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469, 640 A.2d 850 (1994).

The theory of progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question, as some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). The Supreme Court has noted that "the question for the courts is whether the punishment is so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness." Ibid. (citing In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982)). The Supreme Court also noted that the Appellate Division has likewise acknowledged and adhered to this principle where the acts charged, regardless of prior discipline, warranted the imposition of the sanction. In re Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 485.

Pereira's arguments for a suspension are unpersuasive in view of the totality of the circumstances. While on snow-removal duty receiving double-time pay, and in view of the general public, Pereira twice left his Township backhoe parked outside of the Main Tavern and entered the Main Tavern. He was inside at least ten minutes each time, and on at least one occasion he consumed beer and whiskey and fraternized with other patrons. Then, after consuming the alcohol, he returned to his Class-"A"-CDL-required HEO safety-sensitive job operating a backhoe in the vicinity of other heavy equipment and Township employees. Although there is no dispute that Pereira had no prior disciplinary history in his approximately three and a half years of employment with the DPW, his conduct was sufficiently egregious to warrant removal in the absence of prior disciplinary history, and I CONCLUDE that sufficient cause was established by the Township to warrant Pereira's removal from his position as a heavy-equipment operator.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charges against Pereira are SUSTAINED and that the Township's removal of Pereira from his position of heavy-equipment operator, effective March 11, 2016, is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B 10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Kevin Weatherbee v. Department of Corrections (CSC Docket No. 2017-1162; OAL Docket No. CSV 16083-16) - SETTLEMENT

Dear Mr. Weatherbee and Ms. Rudow:

The appeal of Kevin Weatherbee, a Senior Repairer with the Department of Corrections, of his removal, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Lisa James-Beavers (ALJ), who issued her initial decision on March 22, 2017 indicating that the parties had reached a settlement.

The Civil Service Commission (Commission) received this matter on March 28, 2017. Accordingly, the time frame for the Commission to make its final decision expires on May 12, 2017. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. In this regard, if the Commission could not decide the matter by that date, it would normally secure an initial 45-day extension of time to render its final decision. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, currently one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, thus, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Until such a quorum is secured, or, in other words, until an additional Commission member is seated, this matter cannot be decided by the Commission. We have no timeframe as to when that may occur. Based on this information, and given the fact that the matter was settled by the parties and a review of the settlement by staff indicates that it is in compliance with Civil Service law and rules, there does not appear to be a basis to further delay a final disposition. Thus, the Commission has determined not to seek any extensions on this matter and, per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), it is to be considered deemed adopted, effective May 13, 2017.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Re: David Clark v. New Jersey City University (CSC Docket No. 2017-229 and OAL Docket No. CSV 11605-16)

Dear Mr. Cohen and DAG Castiglione:

The appeal of David Clark, a Senior Building Maintenance Worker with New Jersey City University, of his removal, effective June 27, 2016, on charges, was before Administrative Law Judge Kelly J. Kirk (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on March 28, 2017, recommending modifying the removal to a 60 working day suspension. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant and on behalf of the appointing authority.

The time frame for the Civil Service Commission (Commission) to make its final decision was to initially expire on May 12, 2017. See N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6. Prior to that date the Commission secured a 45-day extension of time to render its final decision no later than June 26, 2017. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.8. However, since one of the three Commission members must be recused from participating on this particular matter, there is not a quorum of members available to vote. Accordingly, the Commission sought consent from the parties, as required, to secure a second 45-day extension. However, the appellant did not provide consent for an additional extension. Under these circumstances, the ALJ's recommended decision will be deemed adopted as the final decision in this matter per N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), effective June 27, 2017.

Since the appellant's removal has been modified, he is entitled to back pay, benefits and seniority for the period 60 working days from the onset of his separation until he is actually reinstated. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. However, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, as charges have been upheld and major discipline imposed, the appellant is not entitled to counsel fees. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation should be submitted to the appointing authority within 30 days of said reinstatement. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay dispute.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 11605-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2017-229

IN THE MATTER OF DAVID CLARK,
NEW JERSEY CITY UNIVERSITY.

Arnold Cohen, Esq., for appellant David Clark (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Kristen L. Settlemire, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent New Jersey City University (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 10, 2017 Decided: March 28, 2017

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

New Jersey City University terminated senior building maintenance worker David Clark for conduct unbecoming a state employee, use of obscene language/threats, and inappropriate physical contact with a coworker.[1]

[1] The Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action and Final Notice of Disciplinary Action do not reference N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about June 14, 2016, New Jersey City University served David Clark with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA). (P-4.) A departmental hearing was held on June 27, 2016, and the charges of conduct unbecoming a state employee, use of obscene language/threats, and inappropriate physical contact with a coworker were sustained. (P-5.) On or about June 28, 2016, New Jersey City University served Clark with a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA), removing him effective June 27, 2016. (P-5.)

Clark appealed and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on August 1, 2016. The hearing was held on November 10, 2016, and December 9, 2016, and the record remained open for post-hearing submissions. The record closed on February 10, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Quashanna Smith, Donald Dantzler, Sumintra Perry, Robert Piaskowsky and Leon Sanders testified on behalf of New Jersey City University. David Clark testified on his own behalf.

Background

Having had an opportunity to consider the evidence and to observe the witnesses and make credibility determinations based on the witnesses' testimony, I FIND the following FACTS in this case:

David Clark has been employed by New Jersey City University (NJCU) as a senior building maintenance worker since December 12, 2015. Quashanna Smith has been employed by NJCU as a building maintenance worker since January 25, 2015. Leon Sanders has been employed by NJCU in the housekeeping department for approximately five years, and Donald Dantzler has been employed by NJCU in the housekeeping department for thirteen years. Sanders and Dantzler know Clark and Smith from working at NJCU. Sumintra Perry has been employed by NJCU for almost twenty-three years. Perry started as a building maintenance worker, but she has been night supervisor for the past fifteen years. Building maintenance workers are responsible for cleaning the buildings, including offices, classrooms, bathrooms, hallways and floors.

On June 9, 2016, Clark was working at "K" building. After Smith completed her work at another building, Perry instructed Smith to go to "K" building to complete the cleaning of the building. Smith went to "K" building at approximately 10:30/10:45 p.m. At "K" building, Smith and Clark engaged in a verbal altercation over work duties. After the verbal altercation, Clark and Smith resumed working.

Later, at approximately 11:15 p.m., as Clark, Smith, Sanders and Dantzler were walking to another building to clock out, another incident occurred between Clark and Smith, during which Clark made physical contact with Smith. After the incident, Clark and Smith each clocked out. While clocking out, Smith told Jay Smalls, the shop steward, about the incident. While in the parking lot, Clark made a verbal complaint about Smith to Perry.

In the morning on June 10, 2016, Perry spoke to Smith about the incident. Perry reported the incident to her supervisor, Gary Klaus, and Klaus thereafter reported the incident to Robert Piaskowsky. Piaskowsky has been employed by NJCU since September 1996 and he has been the director of Human Resources since June 1999.

Testimony

Quashanna Smith

When Smith arrived at "K" building she started on the top floor and worked her way down. When she got to the third floor, Clark and a few other men were there doing floor work. Smith was walking with a garbage can toward the restroom, but Clark blocked her. Clark is a big guy and the workers called him "Big Dave." Smith later testified that when she got to the third floor there were chairs in the middle of the aisle. Smith told Clark to move out of the way, and he told her to "f-cking wait." Smith said, "Get the f-ck out of my way." Clark replied, "Don't get f-cking mad at me because you got to come in here and do our job." Smith told Clark she was not in the mood and to leave her alone. Clark replied, "Well, don't get mad at me because you've got to come clean up the building." Smith said, "If you all would have did y'all job, I wouldn't have to clean up the building."

Smith also testified that when Clark blocked her she said, "Watch out, Dave—Big Dave." He said, "Are you f-cking mad?" Smith was trying not to curse and said, "Then get out of here." Clark said, "Are you mad because you got to come in here and do our job?" She said, "Nobody ain't mad. Maybe if you all would have did your jobs, I wouldn't have to come in here to do your job." Smith then proceeded to the restroom and continued to work.

Later, at approximately 11:15 p.m., the maintenance workers were walking to clock out. Smith was walking and talking with Dantzler and Sanders, and another coworker was walking behind them. Clark was sitting on the bench on his phone waiting to clock out. Smith had pizza in her hand, and Clark said to her out of nowhere, "I should f-cking rob you." Smith looked at him and Clark repeated his statement and stood up in front of her. Smith said, "Whatever, you know, Big Dave." Smith also testified that she said "Dave, if you don't get out of my face---." Clark said, "What, you going to go get your baby father?" Smith replied, "What? You don't even know my baby father. You don't know nothing about him." Clark replied, "Oh, I know about him. I know a lot about him." Smith said, "Whatever, Dave. You know, whatever." Smith also testified that she said, "You don't know sh-t about him. You know nothing." Clark then proceeded to put his hands on Smith, and she said to Clark "don't f-cking touch me." Clark did it a second time, and again Smith said, "Don't f-ing touch me." Clark did it a third time and said to Smith, "What, you gonna pick up the brick?," referring to a nearby brick. Smith responded, "If you f-cking touch me again, yes, I'm going to pick up the brick and I'm going to bust you with it." Clark touched Smith again and she went to pick up the brick, but two coworkers said to Clark, "Stop putting your hands on her. She asked you not to touch her. Why you touching her?" Clark replied, "You all get on my nerves at this job. It's always something. You all come here one day, you're all jolly. The next day, you're all, you know, hard up." Smith said, "Don't put your hands on me, like I said." Clark called Smith a "f-cking fat b-tch." Smith said, "I'm not your b-tch." Your girl is a b-tch.'" Clark said, "No, I don't disrespect my girl." Smith said, "Well, you're not going to disrespect me." Clark replied, "Yeah, you're right." Smith kept walking. Smith saw Smalls, the shop steward, and she approached him and asked Smalls to tell Clark not to put his hands on her or say anything to her. Smalls pulled Clark aside and talked to him. Then Smalls returned to Smith and asked her if she was okay. Smith said, "Yeah, I'm good. Just talk to him." Smith did not say anything about the incident to anyone but Smalls. Smith left work and went about her business, and she thought Clark went about his.

On June 10, 2017, Smith was scheduled to work from 11:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. When she arrived at approximately 10:30 a.m., she was pulled aside by Perry. Smith thought Perry wanted to talk to her about a work project, but the supervisor said, "Well, while nobody's here, let me talk to you now. What is going on with you and this guy?" Smith responded, "What guy?" and Perry said, "Dave." Smith said, "Nothing—nothing going on." Perry told Smith that Clark had flagged her down the night before as she was leaving and made a complaint about Smith. Smith laughed it off because at that point she thought it was funny that Clark had made a complaint about her. Perry said that Clark told her Smith had come to "K" building and was harassing him, and calling out his name. Smith denied that she had done so, and told Perry, "No. What it was, was Mr. Clark put his hands on me and I told him not to f-cking touch me." At that point, Smalls entered and Perry told Smalls that she would need to take Smith's statement and get Clark's statement.

Smith testified that she could have told Perry the night before what had happened, but after Smith talked to Smalls, she left it alone. Smith thought that maybe Clark was going through a rough day, and that was why he took it upon himself to make a complaint that she did something to him.

Smith testified that Clark did not touch her, he hit her. "He didn't touch me. He hit me, like, hit me. Hit me to the point when I went over and I was like, 'Don't touch me.' About the third time he did it, I said, 'Don't f-cking touch me. Don't put your hands on me.' And he said, 'What? You gonna pick up the brick?'" Picking up a brick was not even on her mind, but she said, "You f-cking touch me again, yeah, I'm gonna pick up the brick and I'm gonna bust you with it." He touched her again and she was going to pick up the brick, but her coworkers told Clark to stop touching Smith because she asked him not to touch her.

Smith also testified that "hit" and "touched" are the same thing.

A. Hit and touched—not the same thing?
Q. Oh, so hit and touch are the same thing.
A. Well, to me, it is. Well, he hit me. He put his hands on me. He should not put his hands on me.
Q. So he touched you.
A. He hit me.
Q. I thought you said hit and touch were the same thing.
A. He hit me. He touched me. Like, what do you want me to say? He should not put his hands on me, point blank. I'm not his child. I'm not his friend. I was a coworker, so—

Smith further explained how Clark touched her, "He put his hands—like, I'm standing here, I'm walking. He hit me and I "linked" over. Like, he kept hitting me on my right shoulder." Clark hit her with one hand, open fist. His hand was open, like when pushing someone, but he was hitting her, which caused her to move. Smith explained that Clark had put his hands on her right shoulder. She did go back and forth verbally with Clark, but she never touched him. The incident made her feel upset at the time. She was angry because they were at work and no one should put their hands on anyone, and if there is nothing nice to say, nothing should be said.

The other witnesses to the earlier verbal exchange inside the building were Sanders and "Martin," another coworker. Dantzler was down the hallway. Smith had no exchange with Clark that day outside the presence of witnesses.

With respect to the Voluntary Statement reflecting "sexual harassment," Smith testified, "Sexual harassment. Like I told them, it was harassment and assault. Sexual harassment, I guess, at NJCU—I don't know if they took it as, because he put his hands on me . . . ."

David Clark

Clark knows Smith from work, and she was called to "K" building to complete the work. Smith got off the elevator on the fourth floor "talking garbage" and cursing at Clark, saying, "you motherf-ckers need to learn how to do your job and do it right so nobody have to come over here and clean it up." Clark did not say anything to her until she approached him and pushed him. There were only three classrooms left, and Smith did not have to do anything else. Clark asked Smith why she was speaking to him like that and he said it was not his fault, and that anything Smith had to say she should have said to her supervisor and not to Clark. Smith said, "You need to do your f-cking job." Clark was pulling and trying to tie the wax bucket and mop up so that it would not spill and trying to move chairs out of Smith's way so she could get by, and Smith said, "Get the heck out of my way." Clark said, "Wait, your fat ass needs to wait." Smith said, "Just get the f-ck out my way," and Clark moved out of the way and let Smith proceed. She was cursing and being disrespectful so he did not say anything further and went back to what he was doing. He did not want to go back and forth with anyone. He was just going to wait until he got back to the office and tell the supervisor, because he did not want anyone to say that he started the situation when he did not and was just there doing his job.

Later, when they were leaving, Sanders was in front and Smith was on Clark's right. Dantzler was walking behind them after coming out of another building. Dantzler heard everything that was going on. Clark took his four fingers and laid them on Smith's shoulder. He tapped her on her shoulder and said "Relax, the day is over with, there is no sense in you being hostile, the day is over with." Smith was cursing at him outside and he was not taking that. She was saying, "Motherf-cker, don't touch me." He touched her shoulder and said, "Relax the day is over with." She said, "Don't f-cking touch me." Clark said, "All right, no problem." Clark also testified that Smith said, "Don't f-cking touch me or I will bust you in the head with this brick." Smith kept talking and being disrespectful, and Clark just kept walking. Smith went over to Smalls and told him about it, and Smalls told Clark not to say anything to Smith. Clark replied, "I don't say nothing to her, I never did say anything to her but I think she needs to be approached because she was called over to the building to do her job and she was cursing at me." Clark also testified that he touched Smith twice. After the second time he touched her she said, "Don't touch me no f-cking more." He said, "Relax, why are you cursing at me?" He just moved away from there, and that is when she ran over to Smalls.

Later, Clark saw Perry in the parking lot and told Perry that Smith came to the building being very disrespectful, cursing at Clark as she got off the elevator as though he had been the one calling her to come do his job. Perry left, and Clark did not say anything to anyone else about the incident.

On Friday, Piaskowsky approached Clark and said that he needed to speak to Clark in his office about a matter. Clark was given a letter and told that he cannot work and was being removed from the premises because of the incident. Clark asked why he was being removed if he had not started the situation, and was told that it was their understanding he had started it. Clark gave a statement and left.

Clark denied telling Smith he was going to rob her. He testified that he is fifty years old, a grown man, and does not talk to people like that. He did not say that he would "f-ck up her baby's father." He does not know Smith; does not talk, socialize, or eat lunch with her; knows nothing about her; and does not live in the same area. Other than a period of time when both Clark and Smith were driven home by the same person, Clark did not speak to Smith.

Donald Dantzler

Dantzler, Smith, Clark, Sanders, and Smalls left the buildings where they had been working and were all walking together to the shop to sign out and go home. They started walking at approximately 11:00, but they were walking slowly and talking, and stopping occasionally because they are not supposed to go into the office until 11:15 p.m. Everyone was glad to be getting off work. Sometimes people laugh and play around because they are happy to be leaving. Clark and Smith were walking and Clark

"touched her on the shoulder," and she said, "David. Stop. You know, I'm not playing." Dantzler did not see any animosity and thought Clark and Smith were playing. Clark touched Smith again, and she said, "Dave, I'm not playing." Dantzler was still walking and talking to Sanders and not paying it any attention, but when Clark touched Smith a third time, Smith cursed at Clark and Dantzler realized Smith was not playing. That was the end of it, and Clark walked off to the side and did not touch Smith again.

Dantzler saw Clark touch Smith's shoulder two or three times. There was no real force. It was nothing more than just touching. But as far as Dantzler was concerned, if a woman says to stop, it should stop. Dantzler did not hear any other verbal exchange between Clark and Smith. Dantzler did not hear Clark say anything about robbing Smith or about her baby's father.

Sumintra Perry

That night, as they were all leaving work, Clark staring cursing, going up and down the street, and he came to Perry's car, so Perry asked him what happened. Clark said, "Don't ever put that fat mother-cker back in this building to work with me anymore." Perry asked why, and Clark told her it was because Smith kept complaining about everything in the building. Clark was very upset. Perry told Clark she would deal with it the following day. Perry did not speak to Smith that night. Perry spoke to Smith the following day about what had happened, and Smith told Perry that "David pushed on her." Smith also told Perry that she had already talked to Gary Klaus that morning about what happened, so Perry left it alone after that. Other than speaking to Clark the night of the incident and Smith the following day, Perry spoke to no one else about the incident.

Robert Piaskowsky

Robert Piaskowsky is responsible for employee relations, benefits, staffing and personnel records. Employees are not permitted to use profanity or obscene language on the job. NJCU has such a policy because they are a higher-education institution with students throughout the campus, and therefore employees are required to have a level of professionalism. Employees are also not permitted to make unwanted physical contact with coworkers, or engage in physical violence, harassment, sexual harassment, or threats against other employees. Clark would have been aware of the policies prohibiting such conduct because Clark would have signed the policies when he was hired.

Piaskowsky became aware of the incident from Klaus, the day after it occurred. His understanding was that there had been an altercation between Clark and Smith, Clark allegedly touched Smith, and touched her two more times after she told him to stop. Piaskowsky received a report from public safety on the investigation and witness statements from Dantzler and Sanders. Based upon the allegations, Clark was suspended because it was not appropriate to have him on campus until there was an adjudication of the matter. In a situation involving the use of obscene language, threats, and inappropriate physical contact with a coworker, the penalty sought would be removal because that cannot be tolerated, especially not at a college. People in certain positions have access to the campus, as do students, and minors.

Leon Sanders

Sanders witnessed the incident between Clark and Smith. At approximately 11:00 p.m., Sanders, Smith, and Dantzler were walking. Clark was already outside. Clark and Smith "were jokingly playing or whatever," and Clark touched Smith's shoulder area. Smith asked Clark to keep his hands to himself. Clark touched her again, and she again asked him not to touch her. Clark touched her again, and Smith yelled at Clark to "keep his f-cking hands off of her." Sanders kept walking. After Smith yelled at him, Sanders knew it was not joking.

Sanders thought they were jokingly playing because he has seen them talk before and it did not look serious, because they were both smiling. Sanders did not know if Clark took it seriously when Smith first told him to stop, or if he thought she was playing, because he touched her again. Sanders did not recall Clark saying anything about robbing Smith or about him "f-cking up her baby's father." Clark did make a statement, which Sanders took to be joking, that he will go to jail and beat her baby's father, because he is incarcerated. She replied, "I doubt if that will happen."

Additional Findings of Fact

A credibility determination requires an overall evaluation of the testimony in light of its rationality or internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 555 (1954). It must be such as the common experience and observation can approve as probable in the circumstances. Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1, 5 (App. Div. 1961). "The interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted).

The testimony and incident reports of Clark and Smith vastly differed as to what actually occurred on June 9, 2016, and the testimony of both was inconsistent with their own incident reports and with the other witnesses' testimony. Additionally, much of their testimony about their conduct was not probable under the circumstances. For the reasons hereinafter detailed, I credit the testimony of Dantzler and Sanders to establish what occurred on June 9, 2016, rather than the testimony of Clark or Smith.

Dantzler's testimony was concise and consistent with his statement that he saw Clark touch Smith on the shoulder three times, and that Smith told him to stop each time before she used profanity. Likewise, Sanders' testimony was concise and consistent with his statement that Clark touched Smith three times, twice after she told him to keep his hands off her.

Clark's testimony that he only touched Smith twice, and that she did not instruct him to stop until the second time he touched her, was overborne by the testimony of Dantzler and Sanders. Additionally, Clark's testimony, whereby he attempted to portray his exchanges with Smith as polite and mannerly, was improbable under the circumstances. Clark also testified that Smith had pushed him, but Clark failed to note that Smith had pushed him in his Voluntary Statement and there was no evidence that Smith had pushed him.

With respect to Smith's testimony, if she had been threatened or harassed it makes no sense that when she was asked by Perry the following morning what was going on with Clark, Smith would have said nothing was going on. Likewise, Smith did not mention to Perry that Clark threatened to rob her or to "fuck up her baby's father." Additionally, Smith's Voluntary Statement, completed five days later, reflects that the incident was "sexual harassment," but there is nothing in the record to corroborate any sexual harassment. Further, although Smith's statement reflects that Clark said, "I should rob you" about three times, Dantzler and Sanders denied hearing Clark say that to Smith even one time. Likewise, although Smith's statement reflects that Clark "hit me and my left[2] arm shoulder part about five times," the credible testimony of Sanders and Dantzler was that Clark touched her shoulder three times.

Having had an opportunity to consider the evidence and to observe the witnesses and make credibility determinations based on the witnesses' testimony, I FIND the following additional FACTS in this case:

Smith and Clark both used profanity while engaged in a verbal altercation over job duties while in "K" building. Later, when Smith, Clark, Dantzler and Sanders were walking toward the office to punch out for the night, Clark touched Smith's shoulder with his fingers, and she responded by instructing him not to touch her. Clark touched Smith's shoulder a second time, and Smith again instructed him not to touch her. Clark touched Smith's shoulder a third time, and Smith yelled at him not to "f-cking" touch her. Dantzler and Sanders did not realize there was any animosity or that Smith and Clark were not playing around until Smith's use of profanity after the third time Clark touched her. Clark did not "strike" Smith.

[2] Smith testified that it was her right shoulder.

N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 through 12-6, the "Civil Service Act," established the Civil Service Commission in the Department of Labor and Workforce Development in the Executive Branch of the New Jersey State government. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-1. The Commission establishes the general causes that constitute grounds for disciplinary action, and the kinds of disciplinary action that may be taken by appointing authorities against permanent career-service employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6 vests the Commission with the power, after a hearing, to render the final administrative decision on appeals concerning removal, suspension or fine, disciplinary demotion, and termination at the end of the working test period, of permanent career-service employees.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2(a) provides that major discipline includes removal, disciplinary demotion, and suspension or fine for more than five working days at any one time. An employee may be subject to discipline for reasons enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), including conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) and (12). In appeals concerning such major disciplinary actions, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to establish the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the believable evidence. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

Clark is charged with conduct unbecoming a state employee, use of obscene language/threats, and inappropriate physical contact with a coworker. The burden of proof is on New Jersey City University to prove the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) does not define conduct unbecoming. However, the Appellate Division has held that conduct unbecoming a public employee is "any conduct . . . which has a tendency to destroy public respect for municipal employees and confidence in the operation of municipal services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). In Emmons, which involved a police officer charged with conduct unbecoming, the Appellate Division also held that conduct unbecoming is "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the bureau." Ibid. What constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee is primarily a question of law. Karins v. Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 553 (1998).

The FNDA alleges that Clark "struck a female employee several times on the shoulder after being told to stop and used obscene language." There did not appear to be a dispute that NJCU has written policies prohibiting profanity, threats, harassment, and assault in the workplace, for which Clark would have signed, but no such policies were presented. Nevertheless, common sense would dictate that whether there exist written policies or not, such conduct is not appropriate or acceptable. From the testimony it did not appear that the use of obscene language by the maintenance workers was uncommon, and the evidence reflects that Clark and Smith both used obscene language that evening. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the charge of use of obscene language is sustained. However, while such language is certainly not appropriate or acceptable at work, it is noted that Clark and Smith were in the presence only of other maintenance workers, and not any students, faculty, or others.

It is noted that while the PNDA alleges that Clark made "remarks about [Smith's] baby's father and robbing her," the FNDA did not include this allegation, but both charge Clark with use of threats. The testimony of Clark and Smith was unreliable, and neither Sanders nor Dantzler heard Clark say anything about him robbing Smith. Additionally, with respect to the remarks about her child's father, Sanders heard Clark say that he would go to jail and beat her baby's father, to which Smith responded that she doubted that would happen. Sanders thought the two were kidding around with each other, as he did not think anyone would deliberately go to jail just to fight someone. In view of the foregoing, the evidence falls short of establishing that Clark threatened to rob Smith, and given the attenuated nature of the comment regarding going to jail and beating her child's father, coupled with Sanders's belief that Clark was kidding, I CONCLUDE that the charge of use of threats is not sustained.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the evidence reflects that Clark made physical contact with Smith three times, including twice after being told by Smith to stop. Contrary to the allegation in the FNDA, the evidence fell short of establishing that Clark "struck" Smith, as opposed to "touched" Smith. Moreover, while inappropriate and unacceptable, it is noted that the touch was neither forceful nor sexual in nature. Nevertheless, there is no justification or excuse for Clark's having "touched" or made physical contact with a coworker, especially after Smith instructed Clark not to touch her. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the charge of inappropriate physical contact with a coworker is sustained.

In view of the totality of the facts and circumstances of this case, I CONCLUDE that Clark's conduct was unbecoming a public employee.

The penalty imposed by NJCU was removal. The Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, though removal cannot be substituted for a lesser penalty. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. When determining the appropriate penalty, the Commission must utilize the evaluation process set forth in West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), and consider the employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like, as well as formally adjudicated disciplinary actions and instances of misconduct informally adjudicated. However, in an instance where an employee commits an act sufficiently egregious, removal may be appropriate notwithstanding the lack of a prior history of infractions. See, e.g., In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19 (2007). According to the Supreme Court, progressive discipline is a worthy principle, but it is not subject to universal application when determining a disciplined employee's quantum of discipline. Id. at 36.

> Although progressive discipline is a recognized and accepted principle that has currency in the [Civil Service Commission's] sensitive task of meting out an appropriate penalty to classified employees in the public sector, that is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.

> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980); Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 306 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).
> [Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 33–34.]

The theory of progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question, as some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). The Supreme Court has noted that "the question for the courts is 'whether such punishment is so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness.'" Ibid. (quoting In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982)). The Supreme Court also noted that the Appellate Division has likewise acknowledged and adhered to this principle, where the acts charged, regardless of prior discipline, warranted the imposition of the sanction. Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 485.

Clark has no prior disciplinary history, but it is noted that his employment with NJCU was of short duration. The credible evidence reflects that Clark and Smith had a verbal altercation at work and Clark later touched Smith on her shoulder three times, despite her instructions that he not touch her. Although the touch was neither forceful nor sexual in nature, such conduct cannot be countenanced. However, Clark's conduct does not warrant his termination. Rather, I CONCLUDE that a sixty-day suspension is an appropriate penalty in this matter.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, use of obscene language, and inappropriate physical contact with a coworker are SUSTAINED, and that the penalty of removal shall be MODIFIED to a sixty-day suspension, and that Clark shall be awarded back pay, benefits, and seniority in accordance with the guidelines set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Subsequently, appellant filed a separate appeal from a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated September 10, 2014, providing for his suspension for a fifty-day suspension and demotion to police officer effective October 16, 2014, which was transmitted to and filed with the OAL on September 30, 2014, under OAL Dkt. No. CSV 12669-14.

On June 2, 2015, I issued an order consolidating the matters. Prior to the commencement of a scheduled hearing, the parties engaged in discussions toward an amicable resolution of the matter. Under letter dated February 17, 2017, counsel for respondent forwarded the attached Confidential Settlement Agreement and Release, indicating the terms of agreement between the parties.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

CHIEF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE

CONFIDENTIAL SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

THIS AGREEMENT ("Agreement") is reached by and between the Township of South Orange Village, the Township of South Orange Village Police Department (collectively "Township") and Hugh Ames (hereinafter "Ames", "you", or "your") who is currently employed by the Township as a Police Officer:

RECITALS:

A. As of October 27, 2012, Ames had been employed by the Township as a Police Officer for approximately 30 years and held the position and rank of a Step 2 (top) Lieutenant on the Township's Police Force;

B. On or about October 27, 2012 a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter "PNDA 1") was issued and served by the Township upon Ames, asserting violations allegedly having occurred on or about June 30, 2012 (hereinafter referred to as the "McKendall Incident");

C. On or about March 27, 2013 a second Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter "PNDA 2") was issued and served upon Ames asserting violations allegedly having occurred on or about January 15, 2013 (hereinafter referred to as the "Wald Incident") proposing termination of Ames' employment for said alleged violations;

D. On or about April 10, 2013 a third Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (hereinafter "PNDA 3") was issued and served upon Ames asserting violations allegedly having occurred on or about February 22, 2013 (the "Dispatcher Incident") proposing termination of Ames' employment for said alleged violations;

E. Ames went out on sick leave beginning April 2, 2013 and was scheduled to return to work on July 15, 2013;

F. Ames was suspended with pay on July 15, 2013, pending final disposition of disciplinary proceedings;

G. On July 29, 2013 Ames sent a Notice of Tort Claim to counsel for the Township via facsimile, wherein he raised potential claims against the Township including, without limitation, age discrimination;

H. A hearing was held with regard to PNDA 1 and the McKendall Incident on or about August 6, 2013;

I. Hearings were held before a hearing officer on PNDA 2 and PNDA 3 on December 27, 2013, January 28, 2014, February 4, 2014, February 11, 2014, and February 25, 2014;

J. On or about April 11, 2014, the hearing officer of PNDA 1 (the McKendall Incident) upheld a five (5) day suspension of Ames, finding that certain of the violations had occurred and a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued on or about April 29, 2014, upholding the five (5) day suspension of Ames;

K. Ames filed a Complaint on an Action in Lieu of Prerogative Writ, in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Essex County, Docket No L-2977-14 ("Essex Case") seeking to appeal and overturn the finding and suspension on PNDA 1 (McKendall Incident) and the FNDA entered thereon and said Essex Lawsuit is still pending;

L. The hearing officer of PNDA 2 (Wald Incident) recommended, in a written decision dated June 29, 2014, to uphold a fifty day (50) day (or 3 months based upon an 8 hour work day) suspension of Ames under PNDA 2, and determined that Ames should be demoted to the rank of Sergeant;

M. The hearing officer of PNDA 3 (Dispatcher Incident), in a written decision dated August 1, 2014, recommended a fifty day (50) day (or 3 months based upon an 8 hour work day) suspension of Ames under PNDA 3, with the suspension to be stayed pending any appeal relative to PNDA 2, and recommended that Ames should be demoted to the rank of Sergeant;

N. On or about July 10, 2014, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued on PNDA 2 (Wald Incident), upholding the fifty day (3 working month) suspension of Ames (which became effective on the same day, July 10, 2014) and further demoting him to the position and rank of Sergeant;

O. On or about September 10, 2014, a final Notice of Disciplinary Action was issued on PNDA 3 (Dispatcher Incident), effective as of and on that day, demoting Ames to the rank and position of Patrol Officer;

P. Ames served his suspensions (without pay) as aforementioned, which ended on October 16, 2014;

Q. On or about October 20, 2014, Ames returned to work as a Patrol Officer;

R. Ames filed appeals of the decisions of the hearing officer and Final Notices of Disciplinary Action on PNDA 2 and PNDA 3, with the New Jersey Civil Service Commission, to be tried before the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law (PNDA 2 or the Wald Incident being filed under OAL , Docket no. CSV-09157-2014N, Agency Reference # CSC Docket # 2015-121 and PNDA 3 or the Dispatcher Incident being filed under OAL Docket no. CSV-12669-2014N; Agency Reference # Docket 2015-884) with both such appeals having been consolidated (the "OAL Cases") seeking to overturn the PNDA's, FNDA's and decisions and sanctions thereon;

S. As of the date of this Agreement to OAL Cases and the Essex Case are pending and awaiting trial;

T. In addition to the claims indicated in his Notice of Claim, Ames seeks, in the Essex Case and in the OAL Cases, among other things, a determination that the charges set forth in PNDA 1, PNDA 2 and PNDA3 were not supported and that the charges should have been dismissed, rescission and overturning of his demotion from the rank and position of Lieutenant, an award of back pay at his Lieutenant's rate of pay for the periods of suspension that he served, an award of the differential between what he was paid after returning to duty as a Patrol Officer on or about October 16, 2014, to date, and what he would have been paid as a Lieutenant had he not been demoted, and an award of counsel fees;

U. On or about December 30, 2015, Ames was issued a Fourth PNDA, hereinafter referred to as "PNDA 4," asserting violations of Department General Order 2013-007 and other violations relating to the internal affairs investigation of that matter, referred to here as "the GO 2013-007" matter;

V. PNDA 4 based upon the GO 2013-007 matter imposed an immediate suspension without pay pending the outcome of a departmental hearing on the charges;

W. Ames asserts that PNDA 4 was issued without the Township having complied with N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(b) which affords the right to a hearing where on the issue of the propriety of the immediate suspension without pay, and asserts other legal challenges to PNDA 4 as well as having pleaded "not guilty" and having requested a hearing and seeking to exercise his appeal rights;

X. In addition to denying any legal liability to Ames, whether as asserted in Ames' Notice of Claim or otherwise, the Township maintains and asserts that all four PNDA's and all underlying charges should be sustained, that the suspensions, demotions and other sanctions or remedial measures taken were proper and should be upheld, that Ames is not entitled to any back pay during the period of suspension (and further that Ames failed to mitigate during his period of suspension) any back pay differential as described above, or attorneys' fees;

Y. Ames and the Township recognize that the outcome of any pending or threatened legal claim or litigation is uncertain, that in the pending OAL Cases and the Essex Litigation, and Ames' threatened lawsuit (as mentioned in the Notice of Claim) a wide range of different outcomes could be decided (and the same uncertainty would apply to any further appeals of the ultimate outcomes of those matters), and that in addition to the risk inherent in such matters, there is a high cost associated therewith in the form of legal fees and other expenses;

Z. After extensive negotiation between the parties, who have throughout said negotiations each been represented by competent counsel of their choosing (and the parties hereby acknowledging by signing this Agreement that they are satisfied with the representation and advice of their respective attorneys throughout the course of all of these proceedings, with the exception that Ames makes no such representation as to the representation by his former attorney, Patrick Toscano, only acknowledging satisfaction with the legal services provided by Todd J. Gelfand, Esq. of Barker, Gelfand and James) the Township and Ames have, in light of the uncertainty of outcome and the costs of these disputes determined to settle all of their differences, pending claims, threatened claims, appeals, future appeals and any other claims or rights they might have to assert against each other until reaching this settlement, in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

THEREFORE, in exchange for the mutual covenants, promises, dismissals of claims and litigation, payments, and forbearances set forth below, and for other good and valuable consideration (receipt of which is acknowledged by the parties' execution of this Agreement) agreed as follows:

1. Ames will immediately, within 5 days of both parties executing this agreement in writing, file his application for a special pension retirement with the Division of Pensions and Benefits with his date of retirement as April 1, 2016, and Ames shall retire as an employee of the South Orange Police Force, effective on April 1, 2016.

2. The Township agrees, based upon Ames' retirement as set forth above, that it shall:

(a) Rescind Ames' demotion from the position of lieutenant to the position of police officer from and as of the date of same, thus reinstating Ames as a Step 2 (top) Lieutenant as of and effective as of July 10, 2014, when his without pay suspension commenced.

(b) Pay Ames the difference between what he was paid as a Patrol Officer and what he would have been paid as a Step 2 (top) Lieutenant from October 16, 2014, when he returned from his suspension without pay (which shall not include any differential on previously paid overtime pay) through and including his date of permanent retirement, namely April 1, 2016. Said sum shall be paid to Ames but Ames hereby agrees that upon receipt of the Township's payment he is obliged to immediately endorse the check to his attorney, Todd J. Gelfand Esq.'s attorney trust account for immediate deposit in said Trust account, and his attorney shall hold same in escrow pending a decision on Ames' retirement pension application by the Pension Board;

(b)(1) PNDA 4 shall be dismissed and withdrawn, for the mutual promises contained in this agreement, and Lt. Ames shall receive back pay at the lieutenant rate reflected herein above in paragraph 2(b) for the period of suspension from December 30, 2015 through January 17, 2016. From January 17, 2016 through March 1, 2016, Lt. Ames shall utilize his accumulated 24 days vacation time for 2016 and shall continue to receive full pay through April 1, 2016; and from March 1, 2016, Lt. Ames will exercise 30 days terminal leave as provided by the collective bargaining contract so that his final date will be March 31, 2016 with an April 1, 2016 date of retirement.

(c) Township will pay Ames said differentials after ordinary payroll deductions, including his employee pension contribution(s).

(d) Ames shall be entitled to utilize and shall be required to utilize 24 vacation days he is due for 2016 starting immediately and retroactive to his reinstatement date of January 17, 2016, which shall result in paid vacation from January 17, 2016 date of reinstatement (from which time Lt. Ames will be deemed to have been on paid vacation and using vacation time) through

March 1, 2016. Ames shall thereafter be entitled to utilize 30 days terminal leave as per the collective bargaining agreement through March 31, 2016.

3. Based upon Ames' retirement as mentioned above the Township will upon the effective date hereof, further dismiss PNDA 1, PNDA 2 PNDA 3 and PNDA 4, and all Final Notices of Disciplinary Action entered thereon with prejudice and shall not pursue same further. On and as of the effective date, the Township shall further, on the basis of Ames' retirement, terminate all disciplinary proceedings and pursue no further or any other charges, internal affairs investigations, or other investigative or disciplinary actions that might be underway, under investigation, pending or contemplated.

4. In addition to his general release to the Township as set forth below, and his covenant hereunder not to sue or pursue further claims against the Township, Ames agrees that he shall not be entitled to any back pay for the period of time where he was suspended without pay in 2014, but shall be entitled to back pay from the date of his suspension without pay from PNDA 4 (December 30, 2015). However, and consistent with the terms of this Agreement, including, without limitation, the dismissal of the charges, it is hereby agreed that Ames' periods of suspension in 2014 (50 days) shall be deemed and treated as an approved unpaid leave of absence.

5. Pursuant to this settlement, Ames and the Township shall further upon the effective date hereof, have their attorneys dismiss the OAL Cases, the Essex Case, Ames' request for a hearing on PNDA-4 and a PBA grievance filed concerning PNDA-4 with prejudice.

6. It is understood that the "effective date" hereof shall be the date that the Pension Board determines that Ames' retirement and pension as a Lieutenant has been approved. On said effective date this Agreement will become final and binding, Ames' retirement as called for hereunder shall become permanent and irrevocable and the Township's remaining obligations hereunder shall likewise become final. Upon the award of the Lieutenant's pension Ames' attorney, Mr. Gelfand, will be permitted to release the escrowed differential in back pay award called for in ¶2(b) above, to Ames.

7. Should Ames be denied, by the Pension Board, a retirement pension at the grade of Lieutenant, then this entire agreement shall be null and void. In such case, Ames will be permitted to rescind and withdraw his retirement and pension application, the Township will reinstate all sanctions, disciplinary proceedings and disciplinary actions previously taken, pending or contemplated (including, without limitation, Ames' demotion to Patrol Officer) the OAL Cases, Essex Case and PNDA-4 and the suspension issued thereunder will be re-activated and the parties will be permitted to pursue or raise all rights, claims and issues they would have been entitled to pursue or raise as though this Agreement was never reached. It is further agreed that in the event this Agreement does not go into effect and becomes null and void as aforesaid, Ames shall be required to cause his attorney, Todd Gelfand, and Todd Gelfand separately agrees as escrow agent, to within five (5) business days, return to the Township the funds he is holding in escrow pursuant to ¶ 2(b) above.

8. Ames shall receive and retire with all rights, entitlements, and benefits of any Police Lieutenant honorably retiring and in good standing from the Township. The Township agrees to cooperate to whatever extent is necessary and reasonable to ensure that Ames' pension application is acted upon by the New Jersey Pension Board as soon as practicable after his retirement as specified above. Should Ames seek a "SORA" card for security certification purposes, a permit to carry a firearm as permitted by law as a retired law enforcement officer, and a retired law enforcement id card, the Township agrees that it shall comply with all measures and procedures ordinarily and customarily required of a municipality where a retired police officer formerly under its employ seeks same.

9. Except in the case that this Agreement is deemed null and void and of no effect pursuant to ¶ 7 above, Ames hereby covenants and promises not to sue, assert claims against or make demands upon the Township, for any of the claims, rights, choses in action or demands referred to in this Agreement or otherwise arising (or known or discoverable with the exercise of reasonable diligence) up to and as of the effective date of this Agreement, including, without limitation, any and all claims and demands raised in the OAL Cases, the Notice of Claim, the Essex Case, the request for a hearing concerning PNDA-4 and the PBA grievance filed in connection with PNDA-4, and any and all claims that could or should have been raised in same whether pursuant to New Jersey claim preclusion principles (including, without limitation, the entire controversy doctrine) or otherwise.

10. As used, referenced and mentioned in this Agreement the "Township" shall mean the Township of South Orange Village, its agencies and departments (including, without limitation the South Orange Police Department) its elected and non-elected officials and officers (including without limitation its governing body, managers and department heads) and its employees, servants, agents and representatives.

11. In exchange for the consideration set forth herein, you, Ames, on behalf of yourself, your spouse, family, agents, attorneys, heirs, executors, administrators, and anyone else who has or obtains any legal rights or claims through you, Ames, are, as of the effective date hereof, waiving, relinquishing and releasing and shall hereafter be forever barred from asserting or pursuing, all known or unknown claims and causes of action you have or may have, as of the day you sign this Agreement, against the Township, and any other affiliated, related or associated companies, subsidiaries, divisions, parents, predecessors, successors, current and former officers, elected or non-elected officials, directors, managers, employees, shareholders, agents, attorneys, representatives, insurance companies, insurers, and assigns of such named companies and entities (collectively, the "Released Parties"), arising from any reason or cause, including but not limited to your employment, disciplinary actions and your separation from employment as set forth herein. SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT BETWEEN ELIZABETH BLEVINS AND THE COUNTY OF ATLANTIC

This Settlement Agreement, hereinafter referred to as "Agreement" is made by and between ELIZABETH BLEVINS, hereinafter referred to as "Employee," and Atlantic County referred to as "Employer" or "County." Employee and the County are sometimes hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Parties."

WHEREAS, Employee was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action for incidents which occurred on August 3, 2016 and August 4, 2016, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A; and

WHEREAS, the disciplinary sanction being sought in the above Preliminary Notice of Discipline (31A) was a 6-day suspension from employment; and

WHEREAS, Employee requested and appeared at the departmental hearing for the above disciplinary sanction on September 15, 2016; and

WHEREAS, The Hearing Officer upheld the 6-day suspension and a Final Notice of Discipline Action (31B) was issued on October 14, 2016, a copy of which is attached as Exhibit B.

WHEREAS, Employee appealed the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law (Docket No: CSV 18422-2016 S); and

WHEREAS, the parties to this agreement have decided to resolve the disposition of the charges in a summary fashion without the necessity for a hearing, and in order to avoid the expense and burden of litigation, and in resolution of all other matters and proceedings that might arise between Employee and Employer as a result of the aforesaid charges.

NOW, THEREFORE, Employee and Employer agree as follows:

1. The above recitals are repeated, incorporated and made a part of this Agreement.

2. Employee shall attend a minimum of six (6) sessions of mandatory EAP.

3. Modified Action: In consideration for entering into this Agreement and attending mandatory EAP, the Employer agrees to modify the 6-day suspension charge noted above to a 3-day suspension on the record, with no time served. Employee agrees to waive any rights to appeal..

(a) A new Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) will be issued, reflecting a 3-day suspension (minor discipline), and will be maintained in Employee's personnel file. Other documents retained in the personnel file related to this action will be limited to the Hearing Officer's decision and supporting documents.

(b) Employee shall withdraw her appeal to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law within 10 days of the execution of this agreement.

(c) Should Employee not complete the mandatory sessions of EAP as outlined in this agreement, the negotiated 3-day suspension will convert back to the initial 6-day suspension, all of which will need to be served. Should this occur, there will be no further negotiation of the number of days to be served.

The County's decision to modify the employee's 6-day suspension to a 3-day suspension on the record, is expressly conditioned upon Employee agreeing to the terms of this Agreement and Employee waiving her right to a departmental hearing and a hearing before the New Jersey Department of Personnel / Civil Service Commission.

THE PARTIES ACKNOWLEDGE THESE ARE MATERIAL TERMS AND THE EMPLOYEE'S FAILURE TO PERFORM UNDER THE TERMS OF THIS SECTION SHALL BE CAUSE FOR THE COUNTY TO PROCEED WITH AND PURSUE THE FULL SUSPENSION NOTED ABOVE IN EXHIBIT A.

4. Nondisclosure. All parties to this Agreement agree that the terms of this Agreement, and the circumstances surrounding same, are not to be divulged to any outside sources, either directly or indirectly. Outside sources do not include various agents of the County of Atlantic, the State of New Jersey, the United States of America, or any court of competent jurisdiction.

The provisions of this paragraph are binding only on the Employee and Employer. The Employer makes no representation and takes no responsibility for any unofficial actions of other employees who are not parties to this Agreement.

5. Discipline and Future Conduct. Employee EXPRESSLY ACKNOWLEDGES AND UNDERSTANDS future violations of policy regarding conduct will not be tolerated. Future violations of any County policy will result in progressive discipline up to and including termination of employment.

6. General Release/Exclusions. Except as expressly provided in paragraph 6(a) below, Employee knowingly and voluntarily releases and forever discharges for herself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, the Employer and any employees and agents of the Employer, of and from all demands, complaints, causes of action, claims and charges whatsoever, as a result of the charges and conduct at issue, including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of:

- any public policy contract (whether oral or written, expressed or implied), tort or common law;

- any claim for costs, compensation, fees or other expenses including attorney's fees incurred in these matters.

7. Exclusions The above general release specifically excludes only claims to enforce this settlement.

8. Waiver of Right to Costs and Fees. The Parties agree that the Employee waives any claims for fees and costs, including but not limited to attorney's fees.

9. Governing Law. This Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

DPF-31B Revised 03-24-11

4/5/17

STATE OF NEW JERSEY

In the Matter of Clement Collins
Newark School District

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

CSC DKT. NO. 2015-1743
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 17044-14

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2017 BW

The appeal of Clement Collins, Supervisor of Custodians, Newark School District, 45 working day suspension (10 days in the form of a fine), on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joan Bedrin Murray, who rendered her initial decision on January 6, 2017 reversing the 45 working day suspension. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 5, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

Since the penalty has been reversed, the appellant is entitled to the equivalent of 45 days of back pay, benefits, and seniority, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Further, since the appellant has prevailed, he is entitled to counsel fees pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. Feb. 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay and counsel fees are finally resolved.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in suspending the appellant was not justified. The Commission therefore reverses that action and grants the appeal of Clement Collins. The Commission further orders that appellant be granted the equivalent of 45 days back pay, benefits, and seniority. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Proof of income earned and an affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

The Commission further orders that counsel fees be awarded to the attorney for appellant pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12. An affidavit of services in support of reasonable counsel fees shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2.12, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay or counsel fees.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay or counsel fees within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter shall be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 17044-14
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2015-1743

IN THE MATTER OF CLEMENT COLLINS,
NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT.

David Bander, Esq., for appellant Clement Collins (Mets Schiro & McGovern, LLC, attorneys)

Christina Abreu, Esq. and Ramon E. Rivera, Esq., for respondent Newark Public School District (Scarinci Hollenbeck, attorneys)

Record Closed: July 25, 2016 Decided: January 6, 2017

BEFORE JOAN BEDRIN MURRAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent Newark Public School District (the District) suspended appellant Clement Collins, who is employed as a Supervisor of Custodians, for a period of forty-five days, which was effectuated by imposing a twenty-five day suspension beginning

December 2, 2014, and a fine equivalent to ten working days.[1] The suspension stemmed from a determination that appellant had a duty to report to the District that his driving privileges had been suspended for a period of two years, a fact that became known to the District after appellant's driving privileges were restored. Appellant contends that there was no policy, written or otherwise, that required him to report the loss of his driving privileges.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On August 19, 2014, the District issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) informing appellant of the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee, misuse of public property, including motor vehicles, and other sufficient cause against him. N.J.A.C. 4A:2- 2.3(a)(2), (8), (12). A revised PNDA issued on August 29, 2014, with a Rider attached containing revised specifications to each charge set forth in the initial PNDA. Along with failing to report his driver's license revocation, the revised specifications charged appellant with driving his assigned vehicle while his license was suspended, thereby exposing the District to liability and compromising the well-being of students, staff, and others. In addition, the revised specifications alleged that driving was a necessary element of appellant's job duties, and that he was required to have a driver's license.

After a departmental hearing, the District issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) dated November 24, 2014, dismissing all charges in the PNDA except for the charge of other sufficient cause, "insofar as [appellant] had a duty to report his suspension." (J-3.) The FNDA provided for appellant's suspension for twenty-five working days, along with a fine equivalent to ten working days. Appellant requested a hearing, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on December 19, 2014 for hearing and determination as a contested matter. The initial hearing date was adjourned at the request of the District with the consent of appellant, and the matter was heard on July 15, 2015. The parties filed briefs and reply briefs. The record closed on July 25, 2016.

[1] The hearing officer below left it to respondent to impose a fine at a ratio of one day for every two days of suspension for all or part of the suspension. (J-18.)

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

At the hearing, the District presented testimony by Ronald Hale, Nate Harp, and Keith Barton. Appellant testified on his own behalf, and also presented testimony by Mark Tucker. Based on a review of the pertinent testimony and documentary evidence presented, I FIND the following FACTS.

Appellant began his employment with the District in 1992 as a per diem custodian worker, and rose through the ranks to attain his current position as Supervisor of Custodians. On or about November 15, 2009, appellant was charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI), which led to a two-year suspension of his driving privileges for the period of February 17, 2010 through February 17, 2012. Appellant did not notify the District that his driving privileges had been suspended, nor did the District have a written policy requiring facilities employees to make such notification. Such a policy was promulgated in July 2014, when the District became aware of appellant's suspension.

Appellant testified that he was embarrassed by the DWI conviction, and also believed that news of it would diminish him as a leader in the eyes of his staff. He thought of himself as a role model at work, due to the fact that he began his work with the District as a per diem custodian and worked his way up to Supervisor of Custodians. In not reporting the DWI, he was not motivated by fear. Instead, he stated that he had nothing to fear because he refrained from driving. He also stated that had there been a policy requiring him to notify the District of the DWI conviction, he would have done so. He stated that he never drove the District's vehicles during the period of his suspension. Instead, he made modifications at home and work that enabled him to continue to perform his work duties.

As Supervisor of Custodians, he was assigned to the North Region, which encompassed approximately fifteen schools. The main office for the facilities staff was located at the Rafael Hernandez School. Approximately four months after his driving privileges were suspended appellant moved his family from Bloomfield, New Jersey to Newark, New Jersey, within walking distance of the Rafael Hernandez School. Another school in the region, Branch Brook, was on the same street as the Rafael Hernandez School. The majority of the other schools in the North Region were within a two-mile radius of appellant's new home. Appellant either walked to work, or relied on family members and friends; occasionally co-worker Mark Tucker drove him to work in the morning.

The facilities staff, including appellant, Carlos Edmundo, a building manager, Mark Tucker (Tucker), a Supervisor of Trades, and his two trades workers would then map out their day, including any plans to travel to the region's schools. If appellant needed to visit a school, he shared a ride with whomever was headed to that destination. In addition, each of the three supervisors, including appellant, was assigned a vehicle. One of the three vehicles was often inoperable, so the team would share the other two vehicles. The trades workers frequently used the vehicle assigned to appellant due to the fact that it had a liftgate, enabling them to move equipment and supplies from one location to another. There were several sets of keys to each vehicle. Appellant and Tucker testified that the atmosphere in the North Region facilities office was very congenial, and that the custodial and trades staffs often crossed over to assist with the other's tasks.

Another factor in appellant's favor was that commencing sometime in 2010, the mode of delivering supplies to the region's schools changed. Previously, all the region's supplies were delivered to the Rafael Hernandez School, requiring appellant to then deliver them to the various other schools. In 2010, these supplies were delivered directly to the recipient school, eliminating the need for appellant to transport them by car. In sum, appellant's job performance during his two-year license suspension period did not come into question by the District.

Regarding the performance of his work duties relative to his loss of driving privileges, the job description for the Supervisor of Custodians position states that:

> Appointees will be required to possess a driver's license valid in New Jersey only if the operation of a vehicle, rather > than employee mobility, is necessary to perform the essential duties of the position.

> (J-9.)

Appellant testified that as far as he understood, operation of a vehicle was not a necessary part of his job. He further stated that he was able to perform his job efficiently without operating a vehicle. Tucker also differentiated the need for a driver's license from employee mobility as he applied it to his trades workers. He stated that his trades workers needed only to get to the job, and then be able to perform their tasks.

Keith Barton (Barton), Executive Managing Director of Operations for the District, disagreed that appellant did not require a driver's license pursuant to the above job description. He based his opinion on the fact that visiting the region's schools was a basic function of appellant's job. During the period of appellant's license revocation, Barton served as a special assistant to an assistant superintendent in a different region. He stated that based on his knowledge of the facilities department, the supervisors of custodians and trades would not be regularly traveling to the same schools. However, in the case of emergencies, which are frequent in the District, both would likely be needed on the scene. Barton had no firsthand knowledge of the daily operations of the North Region between February 2010 and February 2012, and was unable to speak to appellant's job performance during that time period.

Ronald Hale (Hale), the District's risk manager since November 1996, testified that he assumed responsibility for its commercial automobile insurance program from Joe Somaie (Somaie) in July 2014. He testified that Somaie had obtained motor vehicle abstracts for all employees who drove District vehicles, but he relied on the notice on the abstract that the person's driving privileges were in good standing rather than review the entire document. Hale reviewed appellant's driver's abstract sometime in July 2014, and although his privileges were in good standing, the report listed a DWI suspension for the two-year period noted above. (See R-12.) Hale notified the District's legal department and Laurette Asante, Esq. (Asante), Director of Labor Relations, that appellant should no longer be allowed to drive its vehicles. Asante sent a letter dated July 25, 2014, to appellant advising him that he would be immediately prohibited from doing so. (R-5.) The letter also noted that the district had received a Named Driver Coverage Limitation Endorsement (the Endorsement) effective July 1, 2014, that listed appellant among other employees whose liability coverage would be limited to statutory minimum limits for claims arising from accidents or losses. (R-6.) Hale stated that full liability coverage under the policy was $1,000,000, whereas the endorsement limits were $15,000 for bodily injury and $30,000 for property damage. Hale testified that while appellant never notified him that his license was suspended, he may have had a conversation with him about the DWI. Six months after Asante's July 25, 2014 letter issued, she sent him a notice that he was again permitted to operate the district's motor vehicles. (R-7.)

Hale corroborated appellant's testimony that the District had no written policy requiring facilities employees to notify a supervisor if they were facing a license suspension or other driving-related problem. He testified that such a policy went into effect in July 2014. The policy is fourteen pages long, and lists approximately one dozen specific motor vehicle infractions that will result in disciplinary action. Each employee is required to acknowledge that he or she has read the policy by signing the document.

Other testimony was offered by the District; however, it was not pertinent to the issue at bar and, as such, cannot be afforded weight in formulating the FINDINGS of FACT.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6, -20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3. In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relied by a preponderance of the competent, relevant and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975).

Appellant has been charged with other sufficient cause insofar as he had a duty to report the DWI-related suspension of his driving privileges. However, it is undisputed that the District had no such policy in place at any time during the subject period. The District only promulgated a policy requiring notification in response to Risk Manager Hale's review of appellant's motor vehicle abstract, and discovering the prior license suspension. The policy currently in place is lengthy, as one might expect, and sets forth with specificity the violations that will result in disciplinary proceedings. Further, employees are required to acknowledge receipt of the policy.

The District relies on Herbert Holman v. Newark Board of Education, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d 454, 1992 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 4576 (1992), as its case on point in support of its argument that a written policy is not required in order for the charge against appellant to be sustained. Holman was a mechanic who failed to report to the Newark Board of Education that his license had been suspended due to his involvement in a fatal accident while on vacation. However, the facts in Holman are distinguishable from those at bar. First, the ALJ found that Holman drove his assigned vehicle on several occasions while suspended, which is not the case in the instant matter. Also, Holman, a Union member, was subject to a negotiated contract with the Newark Board of Education that required him to have a driver's license in good standing. No such proof has been offered in this matter. In light of the absence of any conclusive evidence to the contrary, the equivocal wording of the job description for Supervisor of Custodians, and divergent testimony as to its meaning, I CONCLUDE that the operation of a vehicle was not a necessary element of appellant's job. Moreover, lack of a driver's license did not prevent him from performing his regular and emergency duties in the North Region, nor was any such proffer made by the District to that effect.

In sum, there simply is no evidence that the District gave appellant any type of notice, written or otherwise, that he had a responsibility to report a DWI-related suspension. Still, a major discipline ensued. Appellant cites Nicholas Condito v. County of Essex, 2007 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 117 (March 8, 2007), for the proposition that a civil service employee cannot be held responsible for an action in the absence of a policy or regulation to guide him. In Condito, a corrections officer was held not to be responsible for allowing subordinate officers to leave their posts without proper relief. There, the respondent had no rules or regulations in place to guide Condito. The ALJ noted that in the absence of a policy, differing interpretations ensue as to what is appropriate.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the District has not met its burden of proving, by a preponderance of the credible evidence, that appellant's failure to report the suspension of his driving privileges constitutes other sufficient cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the charge by the appointing authority of other sufficient cause be and hereby is DISMISSED.

It is further ORDERED that the forty-five day suspension against appellant be and hereby is rescinded.

It is also ORDERED that back pay and other benefits be issued to appellant as may be dictated by N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT BETWEEN RHONDA DENSON AND THE COUNTY OF ATLANTIC

This Settlement Agreement, hereinafter referred to as "Agreement" is made by and between RHONDA DENSON, hereinafter referred to as "Employee," and Atlantic County and the Atlantic County Justice Facility referred to as "Employer" or "County." Employee and the County are sometimes hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Parties."

WHEREAS, Employee was served with Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action for an incident which occurred on May 31, 2016, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A; and

WHEREAS, the disciplinary sanction being sought in the above Preliminary Notice of Discipline was a 6-day suspension from employment; and

WHEREAS, Employee waived the departmental hearing for the above disciplinary sanction, and a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) was issued, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B; and

WHEREAS, Employee served the 6 days' suspension associated with the disciplinary sanction and appealed the 31-B to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law (Docket No: CSV 17675-2016 S); and

WHEREAS, Employee also supplemented her appeal with an affirmative claim of retaliation under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-5.1 and 5.3; and

WHEREAS, the parties to the agreement, having attended a settlement conference with the Honorable Bernard Goldberg on January 17, 2017, have decided to resolve the disposition of all of the above charges and claims in a summary fashion without the necessity for hearings, and in order to avoid the expense and burden of litigation, and in resolution of all other matters and proceedings that might arise between Employee and Employer as a result of the aforesaid charges.

NOW, THEREFORE, Employee and Employer agree as follows:

1. The above recitals are repeated, incorporated and made a part of the Agreement.

2. Modified Suspension Time. In consideration for entering into the Agreement, the Employer agrees to modify the suspension as follows:

(a) A new Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) for the May 31, 2016 violation will be issued, and the suspension will be reduced to 5 days. Employee will not have to serve these days, as they have already been served. Employee will be paid one (1) day's pay in consideration for the one day she served which exceeds the five (5) days of settled discipline.

(b) Employee shall withdraw her pending appeal to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law (Docket No: CSV 17675-2016 S) within 10 days of the execution of the agreement.

(c) Employee shall dismiss the affirmative claim of retaliation which was submitted with the appeal of the 31-B to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law with prejudice, and in writing, within 10 days of the execution of the agreement.

The County's modification of Employee's suspension as listed above is expressly conditioned upon Employee agreeing to the terms of the Agreement and Employee withdrawing her appeal and dismissing her affirmative claim before the New Jersey Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law for the above-referenced charge. THE PARTIES ACKNOWLEDGE THESE ARE MATERIAL TERMS AND THE EMPLOYEE'S FAILURE TO PERFORM UNDER THE TERMS OF THIS SECTION SHALL BE CAUSE FOR THE COUNTY TO PROCEED WITH AND PURSUE ALL OF THE CHARGES NOTED ABOVE IN EXHIBIT A AND B.

3. Nondisclosure. All parties to the Agreement agree that the terms of the Agreement, and the circumstances surrounding same, are not to be divulged to any outside sources, either directly or indirectly. Outside sources do not include various agents of the County of Atlantic, the State of New Jersey, the United States of America, or any court of competent jurisdiction.

The provisions of the paragraph are binding only on the Employee and Employer. The Employer makes no representation and takes no responsibility for any unofficial actions of other employees who are not parties to the Agreement.

4. Discipline and Future Conduct. Employee EXPRESSLY ACKNOWLEDGES AND UNDERSTANDS future violations of policy will not be tolerated by the Atlantic County Justice Facility. Future violations of any County policy will result in progressive discipline up to and including termination of employment.

5. Release/Exclusions. Except as expressly provided in paragraph 5(a) below, Employee knowingly and voluntarily releases and forever discharges for herself, her heirs, executors, and administrators, the Employer and any employees and agents of the Employer, of and from all demands, complaints, causes of action, claims and charges whatsoever, arising from the charges and conduct associated with the May 31, 2016 incident (specifically excluding any and all other incidents and claims Employee may have), including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of:

FINAL ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2017 BW

The appeal of Joshua Feldman, County Correction Sergeant, Hudson County, Department of Corrections, removal effective September 1, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kelly J. Kirk, who rendered her initial decision on March 10, 2017. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 5, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Joshua Feldman.

Re: Joshua Feldman

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSR 14933-16

IN THE MATTER OF JOSHUA FELDMAN, HUDSON COUNTY (DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS).

Matthew W. Young, Esq., for appellant Joshua Feldman (Mason Thompson, attorneys)

Daniel W. Sexton, Assistant County Counsel, for respondent Hudson County Department of Corrections (Donato J. Battista, County Counsel, attorney)

Record Closed: February 1, 2017 Decided: March 10, 2017

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

County correction sergeant Joshua Feldman was removed from his employment at the Hudson County Department of Corrections (HCDOC) for alleged insubordination, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause, as a result of his driving while intoxicated and involvement in a motor-vehicle accident on October 30, 2012.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 2, 2012, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) reflecting that he was suspended effective November 2, 2012. (J-1.) He was issued a Notice of Immediate Suspension on November 2, 2012, reflecting that suspension was necessary to maintain safety, health, order, or effective direction of public services, and because he had been formally charged with a crime of the first, second, or third degree. (J-1.) A departmental hearing was held on November 9, 2012. (J-1.) On April 4, 2013, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) reflecting that he was indefinitely suspended. Feldman was thereafter indicted on one count of assault by auto (third degree) and three counts of endangering the welfare of a child (second degree). On or about June 24, 2013, Feldman pleaded guilty to (1) assault by auto; (2) DWI with minors; and (3) DWI, and entered Pretrial Intervention (PTI) with conditions. The charges of careless driving and endangering the welfare of a child were recommended for dismissal. (J-1.) Feldman completed PTI, and an order was entered on June 24, 2016, dismissing the complaint/indictment/accusation and discharging the posted bail.

On June 27, 2016, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a second PNDA. (J-1.) A second departmental hearing was held on August 29, 2016. On September 1, 2016, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a second FNDA, removing him from his employment effective September 1, 2016. (J-2.) Feldman filed a request for a hearing with the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the Civil Service Commission (Commission). The appeal was received by the OAL on September 20, 2016, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and N.J.S.A. 40A:14-200 et seq., and was perfected on September 22, 2016.

I heard the matter on January 4, 2017, and the record closed on February 1, 2017.[1]

[1] The record was to have closed on January 25, 2017, but respondent's brief was not received via email, and the hard copy was received on February 1, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Background

Having had an opportunity to consider the evidence and to observe the witnesses and make credibility determinations based on the witnesses' testimony, I FIND the following material FACTS in this case:

Feldman commenced employment with the HCDOC as an officer in September 1997 and was promoted to sergeant in August 2006.

On October 30, 2012, the day after Superstorm Sandy, Feldman was driving home from a gathering. Feldman's wife and three children, then ages eleven, ten and four, were with him. At approximately 6:55 p.m., Feldman swerved over the double yellow lines and crashed head-on into another vehicle (the crash). Special Officer Haley had been traveling behind the other vehicle and witnessed the accident. (R-1.) Det. Ryan Hoppock has been employed by the Woodbridge Police Department since October 2009 and was a patrol officer at the time of the crash. He was dispatched to the crash scene. Lt. Joseph Licciardi has been a police officer since 1995, and was a patrol sergeant at the time of the crash. Licciardi arrived at the crash scene shortly after Hoppock.

Hoppock observed two vehicles with heavy damage disabled in the middle of the road. It appeared to Hoppock that there was a serious injury to the other driver (injured driver) and that he was trapped inside his vehicle. The fire department was at the crash scene and had to cut the driver-side door to remove the injured driver. Licciardi arrived as the fire department was trying to remove the injured driver from his vehicle.

After the injured driver was removed from his vehicle and taken to the hospital, Hoppock went to speak to Feldman. It appeared to Hoppock that Feldman had been drinking. After determining that there were no injuries to Feldman or his family, Hoppock asked Feldman if he had been drinking. Feldman admitted to having consumed alcohol.

Hoppock told Licciardi that he detected an odor of alcohol on Feldman's breath and told Licciardi that Feldman said he had consumed alcohol. Licciardi went to speak to Feldman. Licciardi greeted Feldman and observed that his eyes were bloodshot and watery. Licciardi also detected an odor of alcohol on Feldman's breath. Licciardi asked Feldman what happened and Feldman told him that he crossed over the double yellow lines to avoid a tree branch and then he struck the other vehicle. (R-3.) Licciardi asked Feldman about alcoholic beverages and Feldman admitted that he had consumed alcohol.

Licciardi commenced the standard field sobriety testing. Licciardi was trained at the State Police Standard Field Sobriety Testing course in 1996 and he was a breathalyzer operator and is now an Alcotest operator. Licciardi checked Feldman's eyes for nystagmus by having Feldman follow a pen with his eyes. Licciardi observed a lack of smooth pursuit in both eyes, nystagmus at maximum deviation in both eyes, and an onset of nystagmus prior to forty-five degrees in both eyes. Licciardi asked Feldman to do the one-leg stand after demonstrating it to him. Feldman stood on his right leg and immediately fell down, so Licciardi stopped the one-leg stand test. Licciardi then conducted the "walk and turn" test, and Feldman missed every step on that test. Licciardi concluded that Feldman was intoxicated, and he was placed under arrest and taken to the police station.

Hoppock completed a New Jersey Police Crash Investigation Report and Incident Report. (R-1; R-2.) Licciardi completed an Incident Report. (R-3.) Feldman was charged with driving while intoxicated (DWI), DWI with minors, and careless driving. Due to the seriousness of the injuries to the other driver, Feldman was also charged with aggravated assault (N.J.S.A. 2C:12-1(b)), and because his children were in the vehicle Feldman was also charged with three counts of endangering the welfare of children (N.J.S.A. 2C:24-4). (R-2; R-3.) Hoppock determined that Feldman was responsible for the crash. (R-1.) Feldman was polite and cooperative with the officers.

Licciardi attempted a breathalyzer at police headquarters, but the machine malfunctioned. Feldman consented to a blood sample, and was taken to the hospital for a legal BAC[2] sample. Feldman's BAC was .298.

On November 2, 2012, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a PNDA reflecting that he was suspended effective November 2, 2012. (J-1.) He was issued a Notice of Immediate Suspension on November 2, 2012, reflecting that suspension was necessary to maintain safety, health, order, or effective direction of public services, and because he had been formally charged with a crime of the first, second, or third degree. (J-1.) A departmental hearing was held on November 9, 2012. (J-1.) On April 4, 2013, the HCDOC served upon Feldman a FNDA reflecting that he was indefinitely suspended. Feldman was thereafter indicted on one count of assault by auto (third degree) and three counts of endangering the welfare of a child (second degree). On or about June 24, 2013, Feldman pleaded guilty to (1) assault by auto; (2) DWI with minors; and (3) DWI, and he entered PTI with conditions. The charges of careless driving and endangering the welfare of a child were recommended for dismissal. (J-1.)

On June 24, 2013, Feldman admitted on the record that he consumed beer and liquor prior to operating his vehicle on October 30, 2012; that his toxicology results were a .298; that it impaired his ability to operate his vehicle; that his three children, ages eleven, ten, and four, were with him in the vehicle; that as a result of his alcohol consumption he was involved in a motor-vehicle accident with another vehicle; and that as a result of his driving while intoxicated he caused serious injury to the driver of the other vehicle. He entered pleas to driving while intoxicated (a traffic violation) and driving while intoxicated with minors in the vehicle (a traffic violation), and to assault by auto (a third-degree crime). In exchange for the pleas, the three counts of endangering the welfare of a child (a second-degree crime) would be dismissed at the time of sentencing, and the charge of careless driving (a traffic violation) would also be dismissed. The assistant prosecutor noted on the record that Feldman "is a Hudson County Corrections officer, and he understands that by pleading guilty to this, as a condition of PTI, that he will not be able to work while he's in PTI." (R-6.) Likewise, the judge stated, "I'm being told that as a condition of pre-trial intervention, you will not be able to work. I'm inferring from that that once PTI is up, he can go back to work. But I have no idea." (R-6.)

An Order of Postponement was executed on June 26, 2016, which reflects the following:

> In accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 2C:43-12 & 13 & R. 3:28, and upon the recommendation of the PTI Director and with the consent of the Prosecutor and defendant to the attached listed terms and conditions of the supervisory treatment, it is ORDERED that all further proceedings be and are postponed for a period of 36 months, beginning June 26, 2016.

The terms and conditions reflected on the Special Conditions of PTI Supervisor (Special Conditions) included, inter alia, fifty hours of community service, restitution to the injured driver, certain drug/alcohol testing and/or counseling, and medical/psychological tests/evaluations or counseling. (R-4.)

Feldman completed PTI. On June 26, 2013, an Order of Dismissal and Discharge of Bail (Dismissal Order) was entered by the Honorable Alberto Rivas, P.J.Cr., ordering that the complaint(s)/indictment(s)/accusation(s) were dismissed and the posted bail discharged. (P-2.) Feldman received a copy of the Dismissal Order on July 13, 2016. (P-3.) On August 26, 2016, an Order was entered by the Honorable Mary K. Costello, P.J.Civ., denying with prejudice the HCDOC's Order to Show Cause for an order forfeiting Feldman's public employment. (P-4.)

Feldman's disciplinary history includes some minor discipline for lateness and one major discipline in 2008 for excessive force, for which he received a twenty-day suspension.

Testimony

Ryan Hoppock

At the crash scene, Feldman told Hoppock he had a couple of drinks today.

Joseph Licciardi

Licciardi observed Feldman swaying and unable to stand. Licciardi asked Feldman what type of alcoholic beverages he had consumed and Feldman stated, "ten beers." Feldman was alert and conscious and spoke coherently. Standard field sobriety testing only indicates whether someone is a .08 or above; .08 is the legal limit. Feldman's BAC of .298 is significantly above the legal limit. However, Licciardi has seen people with a .30 remain standing, and some people at .08 or .09 falling during the standard field sobriety testing.

The other driver was seriously injured. Licciardi happened to see the injured driver a couple of years after the accident, and he was still recuperating.

Chris Yurecko

Capt. Chris Yurecko started as an officer in September 1997. He became a lieutenant in 2012 and became a captain a year ago. As a lieutenant, he was the unit commander. Unit commanders handle discipline of members.

Yurecko testified that Feldman's was not a run-of-the-mill DWI. A typical DWI is when someone gets pulled over and they are .08 or above, and it results in a six-month driver's-license suspension. Feldman's DWI involved aggravated assault by auto, endangering the welfare of minors, a guilty plea, and PTI. Feldman was a sergeant at the time. An officer, in particular a supervisor, being arrested on a charge that hurts a person does not reflect well on the officer or the HCDOC. Officers are held to a higher standard, and supervisors are held to a higher standard than officers. Typically if an officer and a supervisor are found guilty of the same infraction at a hearing, the supervisor winds up with a more severe punishment.

James Nieves

Sgt. James Nieves has been employed by the HCDOC since October 1994 and has been a sergeant for eleven years. He is the PBA president for the Supervisor's Association. At the time of the crash he was a trustee.

Nieves has known Feldman since Feldman commenced his employment with the HCDOC. Feldman is a strong individual, and is liked by everyone. Nieves has never heard a complaint about Feldman, but he has heard compliments. Feldman worked in an area that many supervisors try to avoid. If a mistake is made in that area, it could result in suspension or termination. Feldman is an exceptional supervisor. Nieves had no knowledge of any drug or alcohol abuse by Feldman. Feldman made a mistake.

Joshua Feldman

At the time of the crash, it was dark out and there were no lights or power because of Superstorm Sandy. Feldman could only see headlights coming. There was debris on the road. Feldman moved over the center line and the two vehicles hit their headlights together. On impact, Feldman's body hit the steering wheel and his eyeglasses went flying. Feldman was all bruised the next day. He thought he lost consciousness for a second. His wife was screaming. Feldman closed his eyes and opened them and made sure his children were okay. His son was screaming. Feldman got out of the car. The airbags had deployed on the other vehicle, and the injured-driver's face was bleeding.

Several police officers came and spoke to Feldman. Feldman was concerned about his eyeglasses because he could not see, but they were unable to locate them. The first "officer" on scene was a "special" officer, not a full officer. Hoppock arrived shortly after that. Feldman told Hoppock that he had crossed the double yellow lines to avoid debris on the road and then he collided with the other vehicle.

Feldman denied telling Licciardi he had ten beers. Feldman said "two" to everyone he spoke to, but one officer reported he said "ten," and another reported he said "too much." Feldman was drinking. He does not recall how many beers. He had a lot of beers throughout the day, and before he left he had a couple of mixed drinks. Feldman is not contesting the DWI.

Feldman thought he was just getting tickets, and did not find out about the criminal charges until after the breathalyzer and blood test. He thought the charges would impact his employment, so he hired an attorney and spoke to numerous people, including his superiors, union representatives, and colleagues. Feldman appeared in Superior Court on the criminal charges. There was an offer of PTI, and he discussed the implications of PTI with the HCDOC. The prosecutor had mentioned pleading guilty to one of the charges, and that Feldman should pick one. Feldman did not think that would be good for his job, so he discussed it with Deputy Director Eady. Eady contacted county counsel. Feldman waited for answers, but did not immediately get feedback. On June 10, 2013, at 2:45 p.m., Feldman's criminal attorney emailed Donald Battista, county counsel. Battista emailed back that he would let the criminal attorney know. Battista did not further respond via email or in writing. Feldman's criminal attorney received a telephone call from Battista, who told his criminal attorney that it was fine for PTI with a guilty plea and that Feldman was not going to be terminated, but that he would definitely have to go through the disciplinary process. Before Feldman entered into PTI, Feldman's criminal attorney told him Battista had input. Feldman had numerous discussions about not wanting to go to a hearing. He was told once PTI was completed and dismissed, he could get his job back. Feldman has nothing in writing about getting his job back.

Feldman entered PTI on June 26, 2013, after making sure he had his job secure. Feldman's understanding, based on his consultations with various people, was that after he signed the PTI paperwork he could go right back to work after the disciplinary hearing; that he could work while on PTI; and that he would be demoted and suspended for six months. Feldman received a PNDA on November 2, 2012, and everything was held in abeyance until any final proceedings in the criminal matters took place. Since PTI took so long, the HCDOC had to issue the PNDA. Feldman received another PNDA on June 27, 2013, because the previous PNDA had been for an indefinite suspension pending the criminal charges.

Feldman was not allowed to return to work while on PTI or at any time since the accident. Feldman's license was suspended. Feldman had a breathalyzer in his car for seven months.

Feldman was in PTI for thirty-six months. The entire indictment was dismissed on June 24, 2016, after he satisfied all the requirements. Feldman received another PNDA on June 27, 2016. He did not receive the Dismissal Order until July 27, 2016, when his current attorney forwarded it to him via email.

Hudson County filed a complaint against Feldman in Superior Court in July 2016 seeking automatic forfeiture of Feldman's employment for a third-degree crime. However, Feldman does not have a criminal record because all charges have been dismissed.

Feldman feels horrible about the crash. One event changed his life. He will regret it for the rest of his life. His memory of the crash is clear because it happened to him and his family. The crash scene is near his house. He passes it daily and thinks about this. Feldman acknowledges the DWI and that it was conduct unbecoming to drink and drive and disobey the law. It happens. He made a bad judgment call and a bad mistake. He is not an alcoholic, and he did not have to go for treatment. Feldman's conduct does not warrant his termination. He was offered six months, and many other officers were not terminated for similar conduct. Feldman feels remorseful about what he did. Feldman does not deny that .298 was his BAC or that he was drinking. Feldman acknowledged drinking and careless driving. He made a stupid mistake. He did not purposely assault the other driver with his vehicle. He got into a car accident.

Feldman was promised numerous times that he would get his job back and he followed the correct protocol for it. At one point Feldman went and got his uniform without his sergeant stripes on it, but was told to get the stripes because he was going back to work. However, thereafter he was no longer receiving telephone calls and was told not to get the stripes. Instead, he was told to shut up and not say anything and to come back in three years because HCDOC had every right to fire him then if they wanted to. Feldman looked up title 4A of the New Jersey Administrative Code relative to actions involving criminal matters, and determined that the HCDOC could do whatever it wanted involving PTI. The HCDOC could allow Feldman back to work, fire him, give him a hearing, or have him wait until PTI was completed. Feldman decided that if the HCDOC wanted him to wait he would humbly wait until he completed PTI, because he did something wrong. Feldman did not want to forfeit his job. He thought he was getting his job back after PTI, but the HCDOC thereafter suddenly did everything in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.7 and gave him a hearing the following Monday. It is a game the HCDOC plays. Feldman feels that he has been treated unjustly, but is not sure by whom. Deputy Director Eady told him he could have his job back. Director Nalls gave Feldman a big hug at a retirement party and said that she could not wait until Feldman finished PTI, and that he would get his job back. After Nalls became the director, county counsel told her not to speak to Feldman anymore.

Feldman was involved in the Officers' Union from 2001 to 2008, and was treasurer until he became a sergeant in 2008. Thereafter, he served as treasurer, vice-president, and acting president of the Supervisors' Union. Feldman was a union representative numerous times. Feldman has never had a subordinate make a complaint about him. He has good rapport with all officers and the chain of command.

Additional Findings of Fact

Based upon the testimony, I FIND the following additional FACTS:

Feldman had "a lot of beers throughout the day" on the day of the crash, and before he left the gathering he had a couple of mixed drinks. There exists nothing in writing that Feldman was to be reinstated to his employment.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 through 12-6, the "Civil Service Act," established the Civil Service Commission in the Department of Labor and Workforce Development in the Executive Branch of the New Jersey State government. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-1. The Commission establishes the general causes that constitute grounds for disciplinary action, and the kinds of disciplinary action that may be taken by appointing authorities against permanent career-service employees. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6 vests the Commission with the power, after a hearing, to render the final administrative decision on appeals concerning removal, suspension or fine, disciplinary demotion, and termination at the end of the working test period, of permanent career-service employees.

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2(a) provides that major discipline shall include removal, disciplinary demotion, and suspension or fine for more than five working days at any one time. An employee may be subject to discipline for a number of reasons enumerated in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a), including "insubordination," "conduct unbecoming a public employee," "neglect of duty," and "other sufficient cause." In appeals concerning such major disciplinary actions, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority to establish the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the believable evidence. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962).

Feldman is charged with insubordination (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(2)), conduct unbecoming a public employee (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6)), neglect of duty (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7)), and other sufficient cause (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(12)). The HCDOC Rules and Regulations reflect that insubordination may include, but shall not be limited to, (1) refusing to obey lawful orders or commands from a supervisor, (2) using profane or insulting language to a supervisor, and (3) making insulting gestures to a supervisor. The HCDOC Rules and Regulations also reflect that custody-staff members shall not commit acts of insubordination, and that the following specific acts are prohibited: (1) failure or deliberate refusal to obey a lawful order, verbal or written, by the director of corrections, deputy director, deputy warden(s), unit manager(s), or other supervisory staff member(s) or any authorized person; and (2) any disrespectful, mutinous, insolent, obscene, and/or abusive behavior or language towards any supervisory staff member or their orders (verbal and/or written). In view of the applicable HCDOC Rules and Regulations regarding insubordination, I CONCLUDE that the charge of insubordination is not sustained.

Per the HCDOC Rules and Regulations, custody staff members (CSMs) are prohibited from engaging in "unprofessional or illegal behavior, both on and off duty that could in any manner reflect negatively on the HCDOC"; every CSM shall "[c]omply with all federal and state laws, regulations and/or statutes"; every CSM shall "[a]dhere to all rules, regulations, policies, procedures, orders, and directives of the HCDOC"; intoxication is subject to disciplinary action and may include that which is "off duty, not in uniform, and arrested"; "[a]ny act or omission to act contrary to good order, discipline, or accepted social practice may subject a custody staff member to disciplinary action"; CSMs "shall comply with all Federal and State laws; HCDOC policies, procedures, rules and orders"; and CSMs "shall conduct their private and professional life in such a manner as to avoid an adverse reflection upon themselves and the HCDOC." Feldman's conduct, including driving while intoxicated with three children in the vehicle, resulting in serious injury to another driver, was illegal; was a violation of federal and State laws, regulations, and statutes; was a violation of several Rules and Regulations of the HCDOC; and was contrary to acceptable social practice. The HCDOC Rules and Regulations reflect that "neglect of duty" may include failure to comply with HCDOC Rules and Regulations. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the charge of neglect of duty is sustained.

With respect to conduct unbecoming a CSM, the HCDOC Rules and Regulations state:

> A custody staff member of the HCDOC is a conspicuous representative of the Department and all of its custody staff members. To the majority of people, he/she is a symbol of stability and reliability. His/her conduct is scrutinized and when his/her actions are found to be excessive, unwarranted, or unjustified, he/she is criticized far more severely than comparable conduct of persons in other fields of endeavor. The conduct of a public employee, on and off duty, reflects upon the HCDOC. Therefore, custody staff members must avoid conduct that might discredit themselves or the Department.

The HCDOC Rules and Regulations state that a CSM may be subject to disciplinary action for conduct unbecoming an officer and infractions of rules and regulations and/or policy and procedures of the HCDOC.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, conduct unbecoming an employee need not "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (citation omitted). Per N.J.S.A. 2A:154-3, correction officers are recognized as law-enforcement officers, and as such may enforce the criminal law of this state, and a correction officer's involvement in maintaining security at the jail is a compelling public interest. Allen v. Cnty. of Passaic, 219 N.J. Super. 352, 374 (Law Div. 1986). Police officers are held to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576–77 (1990). This higher standard of conduct is one of the obligations a police offer undertakes upon voluntary entry into the public service. In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136 (App. Div. 1960). A police officer's primary duty is to enforce and uphold the law, and a police officer "represents law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560, 566 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). The obligation to act in a responsible manner is especially compelling in a case involving a law enforcement official. In re Philips, supra, 117 N.J. at 576.

By his own admission, Feldman had "a lot of beers throughout the day," and before he left the gathering he had a couple of mixed drinks. Feldman nevertheless drove his vehicle while intoxicated, with a BAC of .298, at night the day after Superstorm Sandy when there was no power, with three children in the vehicle, and he caused a head-on collision resulting in serious injury to the other driver. I CONCLUDE that such conduct, especially by a law-enforcement officer, in particular a sergeant, is unbecoming a public employee and sufficient cause for discipline pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a).

Section 1.14 of the HCDOC Rules and Regulations reflects, in pertinent part, that CSMs, "regardless of rank or position, shall be subject to disciplinary action according to the nature of the offense for violating their oath and/or trust by committing an offense punishable under the laws or statutes of the United States of America, the State of New Jersey, or Municipal ordinances" or for violation of any general order or rules of the HCDOC. Section 1.14 also reflects that "[d]isciplinary action in all cases shall be decided on the merits of each case."

The Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, though removal cannot be substituted for a lesser penalty. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. When determining the appropriate penalty, the Commission must utilize the evaluation process set forth in West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962), and consider the employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like, as well as formally adjudicated disciplinary actions and instances of misconduct informally adjudicated. Accordingly, my review of the case is de novo, and I am not bound by a prior penalty determination.

Appellant argues that Feldman's guilty plea and entry into PTI should not constitute sufficient cause for removal on their own. I concur with appellant, as the determination as to the appropriate penalty is instead based upon Feldman's conduct on October 30, 2012. As such, the parties' difference of opinion as to the effect of PTI upon appellant's criminal record, specifically whether appellant does or does not have a criminal record after the Dismissal Order was entered, is immaterial, and no determination or opinion is made herein as to appellant's current criminal record. Likewise, the parties' difference of opinion relative to the forfeiture statute is immaterial. Appellant also argues that he was the subject of unfair and unequal treatment by the HCDOC. However, any such treatment would be cured by the within de novo review.

Since West New York v. Bock, the concept of progressive discipline has been utilized in two ways when determining the appropriate penalty for present misconduct: to support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct, and to mitigate the penalty for a current offense. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 30–33 (2007). However, in an instance where an employee commits an act that is sufficiently egregious, removal may be appropriate notwithstanding the lack of a prior history of infractions. See, e.g., In re Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. 19. According to the Supreme Court, progressive discipline is a worthy principle, but it is not subject to universal application when determining a disciplined employee's quantum of discipline. Id. at 36.

> Although progressive discipline is a recognized and accepted principle that has currency in the [Civil Service Commission's] sensitive task of meting out an appropriate penalty to classified employees in the public sector, that is not to say that incremental discipline is a principle that must be applied in every disciplinary setting. To the contrary, judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580, 410 A.2d 686 (1980); Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 306, 633 A.2d 577 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469, 640 A.2d 850 (1994).

In addition, "[o]ur appellate courts also have upheld dismissal of employees, without regard to whether the employees have had substantial past disciplinary records, for engaging in conduct that is unbecoming to the position." Id. at 34.

The theory of progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question, as some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). The Supreme Court has noted that "the question for the courts is 'whether such punishment is so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness.'" Ibid. (quoting In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982)). The Supreme Court also noted that the Appellate Division has likewise acknowledged and adhered to this principle, where the acts charged, regardless of prior discipline, warranted the imposition of the sanction. Id. at 485.

Feldman did not present any recent history of promotions or commendations, but prior to his removal, Feldman's only major discipline was a twenty-day suspension in 2008 for excessive force. As a correction officer, Feldman is undeniably subject to a higher standard, and it is imperative that he represent law and order and present an image of personal integrity and dependability. A number of aggravating factors exist that far exceed a DWI. Feldman operated his vehicle at night the day after Superstorm Sandy when there was no power and there was debris on the roads, with a blood alcohol concentration of .298, and with three children in the vehicle, and caused a head-on collision and serious injury to another driver. Although Feldman testified that he swerved to avoid debris, and that it was "an accident," opting to swerve into an oncoming vehicle rather than hit a tree branch suggests impairment and that his intoxication, rather than the tree branch, was the cause. Additionally, he was not charged solely with DWI. He was charged with assault by auto, a third-degree crime; endangering the welfare of three children, a second-degree crime; DWI with minors; and careless driving. Likewise, the result was not the typical penalty for a first-time DWI. Instead, he was in PTI for thirty-six months and required to comply with a number of conditions.

Progressive discipline has been bypassed especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. Feldman's conduct caused actual harm to the injured driver and to property, and caused risk of harm to his wife and children. In view of a totality of the circumstances, I CONCLUDE that removal is not shocking to one's sense of fairness and is the appropriate penalty.

vs.	:	AGENCY REF. NO.: 2016-4194
NEWARK PUBLIC SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT
Respondent.	:

The parties in this appeal have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Settlement Agreement that fully disposes of all issues and claims in controversy between Appellant Tami Moore-Abedu ("Appellant") and Respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("Respondent") and Appellant and Respondent intending to be legally bound, mutually agree as follows:

1. Appellant will withdraw, with prejudice, her appeal and request for a hearing filed under OAL Docket No. CSV 08925-2016N, Agency Ref. No.: 2016-4194 including all claims which were raised or which could have been raised in relation thereto.

2. Appellant also agrees to withdraw, with prejudice, any and all other suits or claims that she may have previously filed against the District that are still pending in any and all courts and/or before any and all agencies with the exception of workers compensation claims. This Settlement is intended to be the final resolution of all of Appellant's outstanding claims against the District related to her employment. It is understood by the parties that this Settlement Agreement will serve as a formal letter of withdrawal for any other suits or claims, except for workers compensation claims, should Appellant fail to submit a formal letter of withdrawal for each suit or claim.

3. In exchange, and for good consideration provided as hereby acknowledged by the parties, the District will permit Appellant to resign her former position with the District in good standing. Appellant's separation from employment with the District effective March 31, 2016 will be converted to and deemed to be a voluntary and permanent "Resignation in Good Standing". The District will amend Appellant's personnel records to conform to the terms of the settlement.

4. Appellant will not receive any back pay or any monies from the District as part of this Settlement Agreement.

5. Appellant agrees that she will not apply for reemployment with the District at any time. If Appellant does apply for reemployment with the District and is approved for employment, the terms of this Settlement Agreement will control and shall be grounds for immediate termination of Appellant's employment.

6. As of the date of her resignation, all of Appellant's employment rights, including, but not limited to salary, insurance coverage, tenure and seniority, will permanently end.

7. Appellant waives all claims of any nature, either known or unknown, against Respondent with regard to this matter including all fees, back pay, front pay or any other monetary relief.

8. In exchange for the good consideration set forth in Paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, Appellant releases and discharges the District, its Advisory Board of Education and its Advisory Board Members, State District Superintendent and any and all other officers, employees, agents, representatives, successors and assigns of the District (the "Released Parties") with respect to all claims or rights that she may have against the District and the Released Parties relating to her employment with the District and/or separation from the District. This includes, without limitation the waiver of any and all claims, charges, or demands, known or unknown, that have arisen or that may arise relating to Appellant's employment with and separation from the District, including but not limited to any and all rights or claims she may have regarding discrimination on any basis, or any federal or state civil rights law, or any alleged violation under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Family Leave Act or Family Medical Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law (and including any and all amendments to the above), the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution and/or any other federal, state, or local statute or common law relating to employment, wages, hours, or any other terms and conditions of employment and/or termination of employment as well as any other alleged violations of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance, and/or contract or implied contract or collective bargaining/contractual claim or tort law or public policy or whistleblower claim, having any bearing whatsoever on her employment with and separation from the District, including but not limited to, any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, front pay, vacation pay, sick pay, wage, commission or bonus payment, attorneys' fees, costs and/or future wage loss, except for workers compensation claims. Appellant agrees to hold harmless and indemnify the District and the Released Parties for any costs or expenses associated with the enforcement of this Settlement Agreement and the covenants and representations contained therein should enforcement of this agreement become necessary.

9. Notwithstanding Paragraph 8 of this Settlement Agreement, it is understood by the parties that Appellant is not waiving her rights to workers compensation claims. Further, it is also understood and agreed that the parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commissioner, or any other federal, state or local law agency. Should any entity, agency commission or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Paragraph 8, Appellant agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever.

10. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, if applicable, this Agreement advises Appellant of the legal requirements of the Act, and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Agreement. Accordingly, by executing this Agreement, Appellant acknowledges that she: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Agreement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Agreement; (iii) specifically waives her right to pursue any current claims she may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient and adequate time within which to consider this Agreement; and (v) has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this Agreement to revoke it. Appellant understands that she may rescind this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the District either by hand or by certified mail within the seven-day period.

11. Nothing in this Settlement Agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party. This Settlement Agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other employees.

12. Appellant understands, agrees to and acknowledges that she is bound by this Release. Anyone who succeeds to Appellant's rights and responsibilities, such as Appellant's heirs or the executors of Appellant's estate, are also bound. This Settlement Agreement is made for the benefit of the Appellant and the District and all who succeed to their rights and responsibilities.

13. If any provision or portion of a provision of this Settlement Agreement is held by the Civil Service Commission or a court of competent jurisdiction or determined under applicable federal or state law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions or portions of the affected provision will remain and continue in full force and effect.

14. The parties respectively acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Settlement Agreement and that each is signing this Settlement Agreement freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion, or pressure from the other party.

15. This Settlement Agreement constitutes the full agreement between the parties and shall be construed and enforced in accordance with New Jersey Law.

16. This Settlement Agreement is subject to the approval of the State District Superintendent of the State-operated School District of the City of Newark and will only become effective on the District upon the approval of the State District Superintendent. Any disapproval by the Superintendent shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

17. This Settlement Agreement is subject to final approval by the Civil Service Commission and will only become final and binding on Appellant and Respondent upon the approval of the Civil Service Commission. Any disapproval by the Civil Service Commission shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

Importance: High

Ms. Styza and Mr. Wenocur:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Tami Moore-Abedu indicating that the removal is being settled to a resignation in good standing, effective March 31, 2016.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, the appellant's removal date on the Final Notice of Disciplinary is January 5, 2015. Thus, the time period between the effective date of her removal and the effective date of her resignation must be accounted for. For example, will those days be considered an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else? Without clarification, the settlement cannot be acknowledged by the Commission and would instead be remanded back to the Office of Administrative Law.

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties. As we would like to have this matter on the Civil Service Commission's April 5, 2017 meeting agenda, I would need the information as soon as possible.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

Sincerely,

Nicholas F. Angiulo

Any information regarding the underlying charges will be provided to the Public Employees Retirement System pursuant to N.J.S.A. 43:1-3.3 as amended effective April 14, 2007.

E. Appellant waives all other claims against Respondent, Juvenile Justice Commission, with regard to this matter, including any award of back pay, counsel fees or other monetary relief, except as may otherwise be provided herein.

F. Except for the assessment of Kathleen Staples' disciplinary record in any subsequent personnel disciplinary hearing, nothing in this agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in matters involving other employees.

G. Appellant waives all claims, suits or actions, whether known, unknown, vested or contingent, civil, criminal or administrative, in law or equity against the State of New Jersey, the Appointing Authority, Juvenile Justice Commission, their employees, agents, or assigns, including but not limited to those which have been or could have been made or prosecuted on account of any conduct of any party occurring at any time with respect to the events, information or disputes giving rise to this action up to the date of this agreement, including, but not limited to, all claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Family Leave Act, the Family and Medical Leave Act, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the Equal Pay Act, the Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the Age

This waiver includes all claims involving any continuing effects of actions or practices which arose prior to the date of this Settlement Agreement and bars the use in any way of any past action or practice in any subsequent claims, except pending workers' compensation claims.

H. The parties agree that if any portion of this Settlement Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of this Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

I. Both parties agree not to file exceptions or cross exceptions in this matter.

J. This agreement will become effective only if approved by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION. Any disapproval by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT BETWEEN CARLOS VALENCIA AND THE COUNTY OF ATLANTIC

This Settlement Agreement, hereinafter referred to as "Agreement" is made by and between CARLOS VALENCIA, hereinafter referred to as "Employee," and Atlantic County and the Atlantic County Justice Facility referred to as "Employer" or "County." Employee and the County are sometimes hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Parties."

WHEREAS, Employee was served with Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action for an incident which occurred on July 28, 2016, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit A; and

WHEREAS, the disciplinary sanction being sought in the above Preliminary Notice of Discipline was a 17-day suspension from employment; and

WHEREAS, Employee failed to appear at the departmental hearing for the above disciplinary sanction, and a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) was issued; and

WHEREAS, Employee served the 17 days' suspension associated with the disciplinary sanction and appealed the 31-B to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law (Docket No: CSV 15924-2016 S); and

WHEREAS, Employee was served with a second Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action for an incident which occurred on September 20, 2016, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit B; and

WHEREAS, the disciplinary sanction being sought in the second Preliminary Notice of Discipline was a 6-day suspension from employment; and

WHEREAS, Employee was served with a third Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action for an incident which occurred on September 28, 2016, a copy of which is attached hereto as Exhibit C; and

WHEREAS, the disciplinary sanction being sought in the third Preliminary Notice of Discipline was a 6-day suspension from employment; and

WHEREAS, the parties to this agreement have decided to resolve the disposition of all of the above charges in a summary fashion without the necessity for hearings, and in order to avoid the expense and burden of litigation, and in resolution of all other matters and proceedings that might arise between Employee and Employer as a result of the aforesaid charges;

NOW, THEREFORE, Employee and Employer agree as follows:

1. The above recitals are repeated, incorporated and made a part of this Agreement.

2. Modified Suspension Time. In consideration for entering into this Agreement, the Employer agrees to modify the suspensions as follows:

(a) The 17 suspension days which Employee has already served will be split between the July 28, 2016 and September 20, 2016 violations, as set forth in subparagraphs (b) and (c) below.

(b) A new Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) for the July 28, 2016 violation will be issued, and the suspension will be reduced to 11 days. Employee will not have to serve these days, as they have already been served. Employee shall withdraw his appeal to the Civil Service Commission/Office of Administrative Law within 10 days of the execution of this agreement.

(c) When the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) for the September 20, 2016 violation is issued, no changes will be made. The 31-B will reflect a 6 day suspension. Employee will not be required to serve these days, as they have already been served. Employee agrees to waive any rights to appeal.

(d) When the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-B) for the September 28, 2016 violation is issued, it will reflect a 6 day suspension, all of which will be held in abeyance for 6 months. Should Employee violate Atlantic County Policy P.S. 5.11 and /or ACJF policy 1.3.1D (Personnel Time and Attendance) within six months of the date of execution of this agreement, Employee will be required to serve these 6 days. Employee agrees to waive any rights to appeal.

The County's modification of Employee's suspension(s) as listed above is expressly conditioned upon Employee agreeing to the terms of this Agreement and Employee waiving his right to a departmental hearing and a hearing before the New Jersey Department of Personnel / Civil Service Commission for all of the above-referenced charges. THE PARTIES ACKNOWLEDGE THESE ARE MATERIAL TERMS AND THE EMPLOYEE'S FAILURE TO PERFORM UNDER THE TERMS OF THIS SECTION SHALL BE CAUSE FOR THE COUNTY TO PROCEED WITH AND PURSUE ALL OF THE CHARGES NOTED ABOVE IN EXHIBITS A, B, C.

3. Nondisclosure. All parties to this Agreement agree that the terms of this Agreement, and the circumstances surrounding same, are not to be divulged to any outside sources, either directly or indirectly. Outside sources do not include various agents of the County of Atlantic, the State of New Jersey, the United States of America, or any court of competent jurisdiction.

The provisions of this paragraph are binding only on the Employee and Employer. The Employer makes no representation and takes no responsibility for any unofficial actions of other employees who are not parties to this Agreement.

4. Discipline and Future Conduct. Employee EXPRESSLY ACKNOWLEDGES AND UNDERSTANDS future violations of policy will not be tolerated by the Atlantic County Justice Facility. Future violations of any County policy will result in progressive discipline up to and including termination of employment.

5. General Release/Exclusions. Except as expressly provided in paragraph 5(a) below, Employee knowingly and voluntarily releases and forever discharges for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, the Employer and any employees and agents of the Employer, of and from all demands, complaints, causes of action, claims and charges whatsoever, as a result of the charges and conduct at issue, including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of:

Ms. D'Ancona:

I understand your explanation, however, that was not my original understanding (or maybe I was just missing the point). Let's see if I now have it.

The record we have indicates that the employee actually served the suspension on 17 working days from 10/23/16 to 11/18/16. The settlement reduces that to an 11 working day suspension. Per your explanation, it appears that, in essence, the reduction to an 11 working day suspension would cover the first period of those dates and the 6 working day suspension would be cover by the remainder of the days? Thus, there would be no unaccounted for days. If so, that would appear to be sufficient clarification.

Please let me know.

Thanks!

Nick

Hi Mr. Angiulo:

I cannot remember if this settlement agreement was forwarded to CSC, so if it was, I apologize for re-sending it. We used the 6 day balance from the 17 days already served to cover Officer Valencia for a new 6 day suspension that he received after the 17 days. It is all laid out in the attached agreement. So the second 6-day went on his record, but it did not have to be served because we had reduced the 17 day to an 11 day after it was already served. So we did not pay him back pay, and we did not consider it an unpaid leave of absence either. Is this okay?

He then had a third 6 day imposed, but we agreed to just hold that one in abeyance and so he did not serve any additional days on that.

Mr. Mormando and Ms. D'Ancona:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Carlos Valencia indicating that the 17 working day suspension is being reduced to an 11 working day suspension. It also provides two additional matters not appealed to the Commission.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, the appellant served 17 suspension days which will be reduced to 11 days. The remaining 6 working days that he served must be accounted for in his personnel record. For example, will he receive 6 days of back pay for those days, will they be considered an approved leave of absence without pay, or something else? Without clarification, the settlement cannot be acknowledged by the Commission.

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

ISSUED: APRIL 6, 2017 BW

The appeal of Victoria Vartolone, Human Services Aide, Bergen County Board of Social Services, release at the end of the working test period, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Kelly J. Kirk, who rendered her initial decision on February 27, 2017. No exceptions were filed.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on April 5, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in releasing the appellant at the end of the working test period was justified. The Commission therefore affirms that action and dismisses the appeal of Victoria Vartolone.

Re: Victoria Vartolone

This is the final administrative determination in this matter. Any further review should be pursued in a judicial forum.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 09825-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-4523

IN THE MATTER OF VICTORIA VARTOLONE, BERGEN COUNTY BOARD OF SOCIAL SERVICES.

Victoria Vartolone, pro se, appellant

Yaacov Brisman, Esq., for respondent Bergen County Board of Social Services (Cleary Giacobbe Alfieri Jacobs, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 27, 2017 Decided: February 27, 2017

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Bergen County Board of Social Services terminated human services aide Victoria Vartolone effective June 3, 2016, at the end of her working test period, because she failed to demonstrate the ability to successfully perform her job duties.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 3, 2016, the Bergen County Board of Social Services issued Victoria Vartolone a Memorandum terminating her employment, effective June 3, 2016, at the end of the working test period. Vartolone appealed, and the Civil Service Commission transmitted the contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on July 1, 2016. The hearing was held on November 29, 2016, and the record remained open for post-hearing submissions. The record closed on January 27, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Susan Silverstein and Allan LaRobardier testified on behalf of the Bergen County Board of Social Services. Victoria Vartolone testified on her own behalf.

Background

The following material facts are largely undisputed. Accordingly, I FIND them to be the FACTS of this case:

Susan Silverstein has been employed by the Bergen County Board of Social Services (Board) for forty-two years. She has been in the Training Department for twenty-five years and has been training supervisor for the past eighteen. Silverstein develops the training module and testing, and she writes the evaluations. Silverstein and her assistant, Victoria Osborne, conduct the training. Osborne has been employed by the Board for thirty years. Allan LaRobardier has been employed by the Board for nine years. LaRobardier is a provisional permanent human services specialist 4, which is a supervisor position. LaRobardier was a temporary supervisor in the "intake" and "interviewing" department for eleven months, and has been a provisional permanent supervisor in his own test period for just over a month. LaRobardier's department deals with food stamps and cash assistance. LaRobardier's workers interview the clients, document their stories on an application, and then request required verifications so that completed interview packets may be sent to the processing department and benefits may be issued.

Robert Calocino is employed by the Board as acting director and personnel officer. On October 9, 2015, Calocino issued to Vartolone a letter offering Vartolone a position as a temporary, part-time (twenty-five hours per week) human services aide (HSA), to commence on October 26, 2015. (R-1.) As such, on October 26, 2015, Vartolone reported to Silverstein for training. Vartolone completed the new employee forms, and Silverstein conducted an orientation. Orientation typically lasts two days and consists of an overview of the entire agency, what the agency does, what the agency administers, the different programs, and eligibility for the programs. After the first two days, the actual program training commences. Silverstein started with food-stamps training. The trainees are given a manual, and it takes approximately one month to review the food-stamps policy and computer systems. Tests are administered to the trainees during the first month to determine progress. At the end of the first month, the trainees receive a thirty-day progress report, and the trainers go over the tests with the trainees, so the trainees are aware of their scores.

On November 30, 2015, Silverstein prepared a 30-Day Training Progress Report for Vartolone. (R-2.) The 30-Day Training Progress Report, signed by Silverstein and Vartolone, states, in pertinent part, as follows:

> Ms. Vartolone scored a 68% on the Food Stamp Program Eligibility Test, indicating that she had difficulty understanding the Food Stamp regulations. The average score for this test for the class was 84%, therefore she scored below the average. Ms. Vartolone scored a 62% on the Financial Eligibility Test and the average for the class was 82%. This exhibits that Ms. Vartolone had difficulty understanding the financial eligibility requirements of the Food Stamp Program. However, after reviewing the test, she now has a better understanding of the financial eligibility requirements of the Food Stamp Program. Ms. Vartolone scored 96% on the FAMIS and DOVE Inquiry Test, indicating that she has a very good understanding of how to access our systems and interpret the information on the screens. The average for the class on this test was 96% therefore she scored at the average on this test. The final > test, the Utility Allowance Test, Ms. Vartolone scored 94%. The average for the class on this test was 92% therefore she scored above the average. She has a good understanding of the HEA coding and eligibility for the utility allowances.

> Ms. Vartolone's Manual Research Exercise had several omissions, which exhibits an inability to research the manual and determine the correct citations for the questions that were imposed.
>
> There is concern that Ms. Vartolone scored below average on two of her tests. However, she is aware of her shortcomings and has shown improvement on the last two tests.
>
> In the next 30 days, the class will learn the SNAPTrac system as well as coding cases into UAP and integrating the OnLine Food Stamp application. They will then begin to interview clients and develop the interviewing skills necessary for the successful processing of a case.

On January 14, 2016, Silverstein prepared an Interim Progress Report, which she delivered to Vartolone. The Interim Progress Report states, in pertinent part, as follows:

> You exhibit a professional manner, you work independently and you are organized. Your case notes are well-written and thorough. You have good interviewing skills, however at times you have difficulty understanding a situation and applying it to the Food Stamp regulations. You are not asking follow-up questions when necessary and therefore don't have the client's total situation. You need to analyze each circumstance and determine how to proceed based on the circumstances. Some verification requests were not complete and some cases were missing DOVE screens. There were also some budgeting problems which caused issues with determining if a case should be expedited. It is imperative that you take more time and review your work thoroughly prior to submission.

After thirty days, the trainees work on real food-stamp cases, and must conduct telephone interviews of the clients and ask numerous questions. The food-stamp application is approximately ten to twelve pages, and there are computer systems into which data must be entered.

On February 29, 2016, the Board issued a letter to Vartolone confirming that she had accepted the part-time HSA position and that her appointment was contingent upon her successful completion of the ninety-day working test period (WTP), after which permanent status would be granted. (R-4.) On February 29, 2016, Calocino issued a memorandum to Vartolone confirming that although she had been advised that her start date was February 29, 2016, she would remain in temporary status until Board approval was received. (R-5.)

On March 7, 2016, the Board issued a letter to Vartolone confirming its offer and Vartolone's acceptance of a position as a part-time (twenty-five hours per week) HSA, effective March 7, 2016, and that the appointment was contingent upon her successful completion of the ninety-day working test period, after which permanent status would be granted. (R-6.) Vartolone was instructed to report to supervisor LaRobardier on March 7, 2016. (R-6.)

LaRobardier completed three Employee Performance Reviews for Vartolone: a thirty-day evaluation, a sixty-day evaluation, and a ninety-day evaluation. Specifically, on April 20, 2016, LaRobardier completed an Employee Performance Review for Vartolone's 30-Day Evaluation (30-Day Review). (R-8.) On May 12, 2016, LaRobardier completed an Employee Performance Review for Vartolone's 60-Day Evaluation (60-Day Review). (R-9.) On June 3, 2016, LaRobardier completed an Employee Performance Review for Vartolone's 90-Day Evaluation (90-Day Review). (R-10.) Vartolone's 30-60-90-Day Reviews reflect the following scores (on a scale from poor to outstanding) and comments:

In addition, 27.6% is significantly higher than 17.6%, the 60 day evaluation period average error rate for the other trainee interviewers.
90-Day	0	Ms. Vartolone completed 80 interviews, 25 of which contained errors, for an error rate of 31.3%. This error rate is above the training class average of 12.2% for the 90 day evaluation period. In addition, 31.3% is elevated from the previous period's error rate of 27.6%.

REVIEWERS' COMMENTS

Review
30-Day	As this is Ms. Vartolone's first evaluation period, needing improvement is unsurprising. Ms. Vartolone is expected to lower her error rate and increase her speed as she gains experience as an interviewer through repetition.

60-Day	HSA trainees are expected to decrease their error rate while increasing their quantity of interviews. Unfortunately, this has not been occurring with Ms. Vartolone. While her quantity of interviews has increased along with the average for the trainees, her error rate has not shown improvement. Ms. Vartolone must drastically reduce her rate of errors.
90-Day	During the 90 day evaluation period, Ms. Vartolone was unable to demonstrate that she is able to complete the required quantity and quality of work that is essential for a Human Services Aide.

OVERALL RATING OF EMPLOYEE:

22-40 Meets job requirements/job done satisfactorily
41-50 Exceeds job requirements (comments required)

Review	Score	RECOMMENDATION
30-Day	23
60-Day	20.5	Ms. Vartolone must thoroughly review her completed applications, checking for errors. She may find it helpful to review her training materials and to ask questions of her fully trained co-workers and her supervisors when challenging interview circumstances arise. Ms. Vartolone must understand that asking questions is not a hindrance to her training as an interviewer but a necessary step in learning and improving.
90-Day	18.5

The 90-Day Review reflects that LaRobardier did not recommend Vartolone for permanent status. (R-10.) On June 3, 2016, Calocino issued a memorandum to Vartolone confirming that Vartolone was terminated from her employment with the Board effective June 3, 2016, at the end of the working test period because she did not demonstrate the ability to successfully perform the duties of the HSA title. (R-11.)

Vartolone's personnel file includes fifty-six Referrals for Case Correction. (R-15.) Of those referrals, Vartolone signed fifty. (R-15.)

Testimony

Susan Silverstein

Clients apply for food stamps online or by mailing in an application, and food-stamp-application interviews may be conducted via telephone. The client is contacted and interviewing requires that trainees ask proper questions of the clients. Certain client answers require follow-up questions that do not appear on the application. By way of example, if a client told the interviewer that his income is $1,000 per month and his rent is $1,500 per month, it should suggest to the interviewer that something is amiss and trigger additional questions. Analyzing is very important, and it was a problem with Vartolone. Vartolone was given feedback and was asked to contact clients a second time because she had not asked the proper questions to obtain all necessary information. Vartolone also had problems with budgeting and with coding in the computer systems.

Trainees are kept in the Training Department for ninety days, at which point a decision can be made about whether a trainee is able to handle the position or should be terminated. Silverstein and the other administrators were concerned that Vartolone was not doing very well, so they and the other trainer decided to give Vartolone additional time to see if additional time and reduced class size for more one-on-one attention would help. After the additional month, Vartolone was sent to the "intake" and "redetermination" department, where she continued to interview clients and perform the same tasks she had been performing. At that point, the 30-60-90-Day period commenced, and Silverstein had no more formal interaction with Vartolone. However, at the request of Vartolone's supervisor, Silverstein reviewed some of Vartolone's cases.

A "Referral for Case Correction" was issued when a case was reviewed and determined to contain an error. The referral is a way of providing feedback to correct the error. The December 23, 2015, referral pertained to household composition and was issued because of incorrect application of the food-stamp regulations. (R-15A.)

DOVE is a computer system by which it can be verified if a client has been working or receiving unemployment, disability, or Social Security. Each case record must contain a DOVE screen for every individual aged eighteen and older. (R-15B.) The December 28, 2015, referral was issued because DOVE screens were missing. The January 11, 2016, referral pertained to a food-stamp regulation called "expedited screening." If a client meets certain criteria the client may receive benefits within seven days because of an emergency situation. Every case must have an expedited screening tool completed within seven days after the interview to determine whether it should be expedited or not. Expedited eligibility is important because those clients need food stamps within seven days, when a normal application is processed within thirty days. If a client is eligible for expedited food stamps, it is mandated that the benefits be received within seven days because of their situation, and an issue with interviewing could delay receipt of benefits. The January 11, 2016, referral was issued because that case was past seven days, and because the client's expenses exceeded her income, but there was no follow-up questioning from Vartolone as to how the client was paying her bills. Additionally, the client's daughter was receiving disability benefits, but there was no notice reflecting why, and no documentation of whether the client was receiving child support when there was no father in the household. (R-15C.) A second January 11, 2016, referral was issued because the budgeting for the expedited screening was not correct, because the income used was incorrect. There is a definite formula that is to be used, and it was not used correctly. (R-15D.) The January 25, 2016, referral was prepared by Osborne. The referral reflects that the client-verification request was not complete, and that Vartolone did not request the proper information, proof of contributions, phone, or work history. (R-15E.) The March 11, 2016, referral was signed by Silverstein because even though Vartolone was no longer under her supervision, Silverstein was assisting LaRobardier in reviewing some of Vartolone's cases and another trainee's cases. (R-15F.)

Vartolone's scores for the Food Stamp Program Eligibility Test and Financial Eligibility Test reflected in the 30-Day Training Progress Report were not acceptable scores. Additionally, there were numerous Referrals for Case Correction, including in March, April, and May. Fifty-six referrals is high and not acceptable. An employee with that number of referrals should not be hired permanently. At the end of the WTP, Silverstein opined that Vartolone could not handle the position. Vartolone had been in training since October 26, 2015, and had received training on all the issues raised in the referrals. She should have known how to properly handle the cases. Vartolone's errors were in many different areas, but interviewing skills and budgeting or determining expedited eligibility were major problems for Vartolone.

Allan LaRobardier

LaRobardier supervises employees during their working test period (WTP employees). The WTP employees are usually coming from training, so his department completes their thirty-, sixty-, and ninety-day evaluations, assigns them work on a daily basis, continues to train and advise the workers, reviews their work and meets with them to discuss mistakes and corrections, and keeps track of work completion. Data is kept on the WTP employees' performance. Every time a WTP employee makes a mistake it is called an "error," and the WTP employee is given an error sheet. LaRobardier takes great pride in making sure his error sheets are very thorough. He does not just state what the error was, but also provides detailed instruction on how to correct it and how to avoid making the same mistake in the future.

Vartolone was assigned to LaRobardier on or about March 7, 2016. (R-12.) LaRobardier completed all of Vartolone's reviews, with some advice from his administration. From March 7, 2016, until April 20, 2016, his interaction with Vartolone would have been getting cases back to her that had errors and discussing the errors.

Quality is a statistical representation of how well the work is being completed, and how many and how often errors are made. It is an objective criteria, determined from statistical data. The scores can be anywhere from 0 to 100. If every application taken was wrong, it would equate to a 100 percent error rate, and if no application taken was wrong, it would equate to a 0 percent error rate. The scoring scale is 0 to 6, with average being a 3 or 4. In LaRobardier's experience, Vartolone's error rate was on the high side for a 30-Day Review, so she was scored at 1.5 for quality. Vartolone's quantity was below the average for the other WTP employees, so she was scored at 2.5. In assessing job knowledge and skill, LaRobardier usually considers the quality and quantity of work. Vartolone's low quantity of work was showing a significant number of errors, which demonstrates lack of job knowledge and skill. Vartolone was always professional, always on time, and did not use any sick time during the WTP, so she was scored at 4 for professional conduct. Her customer service was scored at 3 because LaRobardier did not receive complaints or compliments about her. With respect to the remaining factors—self-motivation/initiative, communication, teamwork, flexibility/adaptability—LaRobardier explained that Vartolone was scored at 2.5 out of 5, which were fairly standard scores, because she was average in those areas and it is difficult for a trainee, WTP employee, or new employee to score above average. After the 30-Day Review, LaRobardier looks for improvement. A WTP employee is always going to make errors, but he expects the WTP employee to learn from the errors and not continue to make the same ones. LaRobardier also expects the WTP employees to increase their speed and the number of interviews completed.

For her 60-Day Review, Vartolone's error rate was higher than on her 30-Day Review, so she was given a score of 0 for quality. A 0 is not a common score, but it was given because her quality and speed had not increased. Additionally, in comparison with the other WTP employees in her training class, most showed improvement, but Vartolone did not. Although Vartolone's number of interviews had increased, she was not given a higher score on the 60-Day Review than she had received on the 30-Day Review because she remained below the class average. Her overall score was 20.5, which was lower than her 30-Day Review and indicated that she was not meeting the job requirements. It is not common for the score to be lower on the 60-Day Review than on the 30-Day Review.

Throughout the WTP, LaRobardier encourages WTP employees to seek guidance and ask questions of LaRobardier, the other supervisor, and the specialist. WTP employees were provided with handouts and documentation from the Training Department to use as a reference at their desks, and LaRobardier also makes sure there are other trained coworkers situated on either side of them to answer questions. LaRobardier recalled telling Vartolone specifically that she was one of the WTP employees who least frequently came to his office to ask questions, which was why he made it clear in his comments that it was not bad to ask questions. He tells the WTP employees that it is an investment of his time to make sure they have the correct information and do not make the same mistakes in the future.

LaRobardier's 90-Day Review of Vartolone was reviewed by the lead administrator. On the 90-Day Review, Vartolone received a score of 0 for quality because her error rate had increased, which is not common and is not acceptable. Based on this score alone a WTP employee would not be retained. Vartolone received a score of 2.5 for quantity, because although she had increased the number of interviews, she was still below average. Vartolone received a score of .5 for job knowledge and skill because of her high error rate. A score of .5 is not an acceptable score, and based on this score alone a WTP employee would not be retained. Vartolone received a score of 3 for professional conduct. Her score was reduced one point from the prior review because the lead administrator felt that there could be adverse repercussions for clients if work was not done properly, and work not done properly is not very professional. Vartolone's score for customer service remained the same, but her score for self-motivation/initiative decreased to 2 because her applications had to be reviewed thoroughly to ensure proper eligibility. Her increasing error rate was becoming a hindrance to the Board. The hope is that a WTP employee's work improves and requires less review, but it was taking time for LaRobardier to review all of Vartolone's cases thoroughly because there were so many errors. Vartolone's overall score was 18.5. Vartolone did not demonstrate the ability to successfully perform the duties of an HSA, and LaRobardier did not recommend her for permanent status. LaRobardier had discussions with other supervisors and administrators, and no one felt that Vartolone should be hired after the WTP.

Victoria Vartolone

Vartolone testified that she did not know anything about a ninety-day probation period until training commenced. At the end of the ninety-day training period, she was kept an extra month. She was not told what was going on, and only knew that she was going to be kept there for a couple of weeks to see how she would do. Daily, she never knew if she was going to be laid off or not, which made her nervous and was very confusing to her.

The supervisors did not go over the 90-Day Review with her. She was called into Calocino's office and he gave her the 90-Day Review and told her that he was sorry it did not work out. She was not given an opportunity to look at the 90-Day Review before her swipe card was taken. It was very overwhelming, and she did not understand why the supervisors did not at least sit down with her and go over everything. Vartolone's understanding was that she was terminated because of her error rate.

LaRobardier had been very helpful, and she understood the corrections LaRobardier gave her. LaRobardier did not give her half as many corrections as Silverstein and Hall, another supervisor. LaRobardier had told her to come to his office if she had any questions, which she did. She also asked her coworkers for help or guidance if LaRobardier was busy, but then she would get the case back from Silverstein or Hall and be told it was wrong. Vartolone asked Silverstein, LaRobardier, and her coworkers about a client on unemployment, and she received different answers from each person. Vartolone never really understood the right way, and it was very confusing and overwhelming. Sometimes if she asked Hall to help her understand what was wrong, Hall was dismissive and did not help. Vartolone brought it to LaRobardier's attention on three separate occasions that Silverstein had given her back a case. Vartolone did not understand it at all and tried to figure it out. Additionally, on one occasion Vartolone was on the phone with a client conducting an interview when she was interrupted by Hall, who had a question about a case and asked Vartolone what she did wrong. Vartolone had to hang up with the client and later call the client back. She was back and forth to Hall's office for approximately half an hour, and she was unable to finish her cases on time.

Vartolone has a hard time with test-taking and she spoke to Silverstein about it. Vartolone is more hands-on, working with clients. Vartolone never knew how to process cases the right way because everyone had a different way of doing it, especially coworkers. She felt that Hall targeted her and belittled her a little if she had questions to ask, so she never really felt comfortable when Hall was the supervisor. Hall corrected a lot of Vartolone's cases, and she would put cases on Vartolone's desk and other coworkers would see her doing it, which was embarrassing because Vartolone got a lot of cases back.

Vartolone did not sign many of the referrals for case correction. Some she refused to sign because she did not feel they were wrong. Others she refused to sign because she knew she had been thorough and printed everything, but received a correction that the items were not there. Additionally, on some of the cases Silverstein gave back to her for correction, Vartolone had already stated everything that needed to be stated, so she wrote "check case notes." There were also multiple occasions where Vartolone was given a correction for another employee's cases, and they had to go back and redo it, which took time from her cases for that day. Vartolone stayed basically every day until 3:30–4:00 p.m. correcting cases she was given by Hall and Silverstein, trying to figure out what was wrong and asking her coworkers. She was becoming more overwhelmed. Even staying late, she could not finish her caseload because she had to go through corrections. She was unable to do anything properly because she was nervous every day.

Vartolone testified that she dedicated a lot to the job. She admits that there were problems with budgeting that she was not correct on, and that was not her strong point.

Additional Findings of Fact

LaRobardier adequately explained the criteria for and means by which Vartolone was evaluated and provided adequate justification for the scores that were given to Vartolone. Neither LaRobardier nor Silverstein felt that Vartolone's evaluation scores were acceptable. Additionally, even if Vartolone had been given some corrections in error, there were still a significant number of referrals.

Having had an opportunity to consider the evidence and to observe the witnesses and make credibility determinations based on the witnesses' testimony, I FIND the following additional FACTS in this case:

Vartolone scored below the class average on both the Food Stamp Program Eligibility Test and the Financial Eligibility Test. Vartolone's error rate was significantly above the class average for each evaluation period, and her error rate increased with each evaluation. Vartolone's quantity was below the class average for each evaluation period. Vartolone did not acquire the requisite job knowledge and skill to properly conduct client interviews and analyze client data, and was therefore unable to meet the job requirements of an HSA.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 through 12-6, the "Civil Service Act," established the Civil Service Commission within the Department of Labor and Workforce Development in the Executive Branch of the New Jersey State government. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-1. It is the public policy of this state to select and advance employees on the basis of their relative knowledge, skills and abilities. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(a). The Commission is vested with the authority to, after a hearing, render the final administrative decision on appeals concerning employees terminated at the end of the working test period for unsatisfactory performance. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(4).

N.J.S.A. 11A:4-15 provides as follows:

> The purpose of the working test period is to permit an appointing authority to determine whether an employee satisfactorily performs the duties of a title. A working test period is part of the examination process which shall be served in the title to which the certification was issued and appointment made. The commission shall provide for:
>
> a. A working test period following regular appointment of four months, which may be extended to six months at the discretion of the commission, except that the working test period for political subdivision employees shall be three months and the working test period for entry level law enforcement, correction officer, and firefighter titles shall be 12 months;
> b. Progress reports to be made by the appointing > authority and provided to the employee at such times during the working test period as provided by rules of the commission and a final progress report at the end of the entire working test period shall be provided to the employee and the commission;

>
> c. Termination of an employee at the end of the working test period and termination of an employee for cause during the working test period; and
> d. The retention of permanent status in the lower title by a promoted employee during the working test period in the higher title and the right to return to such permanent title if the employee does not satisfactorily complete the working test period, but employees removed for cause during a working test period shall not be so returned.

The WTP furthers the Civil Service Act's purpose "'to fill government positions upon a basis of merit and fitness to serve' by creating a probationary period of service during which time the appointing authority can observe and evaluate the appointee." Commc'ns Workers of Am. v. N.J. Dep't of Pers., 154 N.J. 121, 130 (1998) (citing Devine v. Plainfield, 31 N.J. Super. 300, 303 (App. Div. 1954)). Employees are to be selected based upon knowledge, skills and abilities, and the working test period allows for progress reports in order to determine whether an employee should be retained or terminated for unsatisfactory performance. Based upon the record, I CONCLUDE that the Board satisfied its burden to prove that Vartolone's performance as an HSA was unsatisfactory, and required her termination at the end of the working test period.

ORDER

I ORDER that the respondent's termination of Vartolone at the end of the working test period is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my Initial Decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, P.O. Consolidated Appeals

THIS SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT is dated February 7, 2017 is entered into by and between Judy Bellamy ("Employee") and the Mercer County Department of Public Safety ("County") (collectively "the parties") to settle and resolve the above-captioned appeals pending at the Office of Administrative Law and before the Civil Service Commission. For good cause shown, the parties settle and resolve the disciplinary appeals as follows:

WHEREAS, Employee was issued Final Notices of Disciplinary action dated July 1, 2015 (amended July 14, 2016), [Docket No. CSV 13694-2015S] "FNDA 1"; August 30, 2016 [Docket No. CSV 14042-2016S] "FNDA 2"; and August 30, 2016 [Docket No. CSV 14043-2016S] "FNDA 3", respectively seeking a 5 day suspension, an 8 day suspension, and a 10 day suspension all for late infractions; and

WHEREAS, Employee appealed the FNDAs to the Civil Service Commission ("CSC"), Agency Reference numbers 2016-674, 2017-742 and 2017-743, respectively, and the CSC transferred the matter to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL"), for de novo hearings; and

WHEREAS, all three matters were consolidated and the parties have agreed to resolve all consolidated appeals by entry into this settlement agreement; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants contained herein and further good and valuable consideration, the parties mutually agree as follows:

1. With respect to FNDA 1, the Employee hereby pleads guilty to the disciplinary charges of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(4 and 12) specifically chronic or excessive absenteeism or lateness and other sufficient cause and A-7 step 3 on the Mercer County Table of Offenses and the County agrees to reduce the penalty to a 4 day suspension. As such, 1 day of compensatory time will be reimbursed to employee's compensatory time bank. In addition, the County agrees to review and determine if it has already reimbursed employee for 3 days that were to be reimbursed as compensatory time following June 13, 2016 as a result of the amendment of the FNDA. If such reimbursement has not been made, it will be done by the County and those 3 days will be added to employee's compensatory time bank.

2. With respect to FNDA 2, the County agrees to dismiss the charges in their entirety and will reimburse the employee with 8 days of compensatory time reimbursed to employee's compensatory time bank.

3. With respect to FNDA 3, the Employee hereby pleads guilty to the disciplinary charges of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(4 and 12) specifically chronic or excessive absenteeism or lateness and other sufficient cause and A-7 step 3 on the Mercer County Table of Offenses and the County agrees to reduce the penalty to an 8 day suspension. The fine imposed of $42.43 shall not be rescinded. As such, 2 days of compensatory time will be reimbursed to employee's compensatory time bank.

4. The parties agree that this shall settle and fully resolve appeals pending at the Civil Service Commission and is subject to approval by the Administrative Law Judge assigned to these consolidated appeals and the Civil Service Commission's review. Upon approval, personnel records shall be amended to reflect these dispositions.

5. This Agreement is not, and shall not in any way be constructed, as an admission by the County and the Employee of any violation of any federal or state constitutional prohibition or any federal or state or local law or ordinance or regulation, or any express or implied contract of employment, or in violation of any other legal duty owed to or by employee, but instead constitutes the good faith settlement of a disputed claim and the parties specifically disclaim any liability to each other or to any other person. The parties have entered into this Agreement for the sole purpose of resolving the subject matter of this case and any related claims, both asserted and unasserted, in order to avoid the burden, expense, delay and uncertainties of litigation. No findings of any kind have been made or issued by any court and employee does not purport to be the prevailing party in any threatened or pending litigation.

6. Employee agrees that this Agreement shall operate as a complete and final disposition of this matter. As consideration for the County amending the charges in this matter and agreeing to these terms, Employee agrees to release and forever discharge the County, the County's officers, agents, officials, employees, attorneys, administrators, representatives, elected officials, departments, boards, officers and all persons acting by, through, under or in concert with, both in their official and individual capacities, from any and all claims relating to the subject matter of these three disciplinary matters that she has now to any relief of any kind from the County, whether or not she now knows about those rights, arising out of her employment with County, including, but not limited to, claims for breach of contract; fraud or misrepresentation; violation of Title VII of the Civil Rights Acts of 1964, or other federal, state or local civil rights law based on age or other protected class status including sex, race, color, national origin; the Americans with Disabilities Act; defamation; slander; libel; invasion of privacy; intentional or negligent infliction of emotional distress; breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealings; promissory estoppel; negligence; violation of public policy; Conscientious Employment Protection Act; New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; Equal Pay Act; New Jersey Employer-Employee Relation Act; New Jersey Family Leave Act and any other claims for unlawful employment practices with regard to this matter. It is emphasized that Employee is waiving all possible claims against the County with regard to these disciplinary matters.

7. Employee represents and certifies that she has carefully read and fully understands all of the provisions of and effects of this Agreement and further, certifies that she is voluntarily entering into this Agreement, that she is satisfied with her representation and is voluntarily entering into this agreement, and that neither the County nor anyone else has made any representations concerning the terms of effects of this Agreement other than those contained herein.

8. This Agreement is made and entered into in the State of New Jersey and shall in all respects be interpreted, enforced and governed under laws of the State of New Jersey. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall, in all cases, be constructed as a whole, according to its fair meaning and not strictly for or against any of the parties.

9. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining part(s)/term(s) or provision(s) shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement.

10. The foregoing constitutes a full and final disposition of this matter.

11. Employee shall not request relief with respect to this matter, in any forum beyond that which is contained herein.

12. This Agreement may not be modified, altered or changed, except upon the prior express written consent of the parties.

13. This Agreement is the result of negotiations with Employee and Employee's attorney with whom Employee had an opportunity to consult prior to signing same and is satisfied with the representation.

14. This settlement fully and finally disposes of all issues in controversy. It is reached by way of compromise.

15. This Agreement shall neither set a precedent nor constitute a past practice.

16. This Agreement shall not be considered binding and/or final until approved by and executed by the County Administrator and/or his designee. Any subsequent disapproval by the Civil Service Commission shall cause all the terms and conditions of this agreement to be null and void and shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue this matter further.

David:

As long as the comp time can be "cashed out," which, in essence makes it the equivalent of back pay, I think that would be sufficient for us, so long as this is okay with Ms. Chubenko.

My concern here is that she is receiving back pay. It is in the form of comp time, which can be cashed out by the employee or used as leave time. Either way it recognizes that she is is being paid for that day. I don't want that time counted as unpaid leave time, when it is actually being paid. We could, in the alternative count the time as paid leave time so that her service time is accurate for seniority and pension purposes.

When a party settles a suspension to a lesser suspension and does not receive actual back pay for all suspension days actually served, we cannot categorize any unaccounted for days as "paid working days." In this regard, any form of "time" received in lieu of back pay essentially leaves a "gap" in the employee's personnel record. For example, even in a settlement of a suspension where an employee receives back vacation days, personal days, compensatory time, etc., (all of which can be used at a later date as paid leave) in lieu of the previous days of suspension served, the actual suspension days must still be accounted for in the employee's personnel record since the employee was actually not at work those days. The most common method of categorizing such days is as "leave of absence without pay" since the employee was not at work during those days and not paid.

Mr. Angiulo:

The eleven days were ones that should be deemed paid working days. However, in lieu of receiving back pay, Ms. Bellamy agreed to receive compensatory time. This is similar to what can happen with overtime where an employee can receive comp time that is equal to a comparable amount of overtime pay for the work. Here, the comp time is at straight time; not at 1.5 times the hours (or days) worked. Thus, I believe the eleven days should be classified as working days. She is being paid for the days. She is receiving comp time in lieu of pay so the days are not unpaid or a leave.

I believe from my exchange with Ms. Chubenko that the County is in agreement with this position, but I will let her weigh in. Thanks,
David Beckett

In lieu of back pay for the balance of the days, the appellant will receive 11 compensatory days.

Specifically, we need to know how to account for the 11 working days that the appellant is receiving compensatory days for. DECISION
OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

In the Matter of Luis DeLeon

CSC Docket No. 2017-533
OAL Docket No. CSR 13016-16

ISSUED: MAY 04 2017 (ABR)

The appeal of Luis DeLeon, a Sheriff's Officer with the Camden County Sheriff's Department, of his removal, effective July 22, 2016, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Joseph Lavery (ALJ), who rendered his initial decision on February 21, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, including a review of the testimony, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 19, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion, as contained in the attached initial decision, and the ALJ's recommendation to reverse the removal.

DISCUSSION

The appellant was charged with conduct unbecoming a public employee and other sufficient cause. Specifically, the appointing authority asserted that the appellant provided false and misleading information by failing to disclose his involvement in five prior domestic violence incidents during pre-employment processing, as required. Upon the appellant's appeal, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing as a contested case.

The ALJ set forth in his initial decision that the appointing authority required the appellant to complete a Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation in December 2015 after he was involved in a domestic violence incident, charged with simple assault and had a temporary restraining order (TRO) filed against him. The appellant was suspended following that incident and the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation occurred after the simple assault charge was dismissed without prejudice for six months and the TRO against the appellant was also dismissed. Jennifer Kelly, Ph.D., ABPP administered the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation on December 29, 2015 and deemed the appellant to be fit for duty, but noted that the appellant made statements which were inconsistent with his responses during a November 2014 pre-employment psychological evaluation, which was part of the pre-employment process that culminated in his appointment to the title of Sheriff's Officer. In that regard, Dr. Kelly indicated that the appellant, during the December 2015 Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation admitted to his involvement in five domestic violence incidents prior to his employment with the appointing authority, including one where he held down the hands of his child's mother in order to grab his keys out of her hand, and another where his child's mother had threatened to burn him with an iron, grabbed him by his shirt, and pulled him back while holding that iron. Dr. Kelly stated that the appellant failed to disclose those incidents during the pre-employment psychological evaluation. None of the five incidents predating the appellant's employment with the appointing authority involved police intervention or resulted in criminal charges. Based upon Dr. Kelly's assertions in her Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation, the appointing authority conducted an internal investigation of the appellant and removed him for his apparent failure to report past domestic violence during the November 2014 pre-employment psychological evaluation.

The appellant testified that Dr. Kelly's questions during his pre-employment psychological evaluation were derived from his responses to three questionnaires he completed prior to the interview. The appellant stated that Dr. Kelly's "Aggression History" question asked if he had been involved in any fights, using examples of bar fights and similar scuffles. The appellant said that, based upon the way the "Aggression History" question was posed, he told Dr. Kelly that he had not been involved in any fights. The appellant also indicated that he answered "no" to Dr. Kelly's "Relationship History" question, which asked if he had "ever been charged with domestic violence, any restraining orders, or [had] any feuds with anyone?" The appellant testified that he believed his statements to Dr. Kelly were truthful based upon the way she formulated her questions and the rigid nature of the interview. The appellant stated that the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation was conducted in a different manner, where Dr. Kelly's line of questioning concerning domestic violence was far more specific, with questions that referenced the November 2015 incident. The appellant also indicated that the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation was more conversational, where Dr. Kelly would ask follow-up questions if she needed him to elaborate or expand upon a statement. As to the incident where he grabbed his child's mother's arm, the appellant testified that he was attempting to leave the premises of his child's mother, but she got hold of his keys and refused to return them. The appellant indicated that he grabbed one of her arms in an effort to recover his keys, but that she then moved them into her other hand. The appellant stated that he proceeded to grab her other arm and bring it down to her waist, at which point he recovered his keys and left the premises. The appellant maintained that he did not pin her down during this incident and that no physical altercation followed that event. The appellant testified that the incident with the iron merely involved her threatening him.

The ALJ indicated that the case hinged upon whether the appellant's answers during the pre-employment psychological evaluation were truthful. In that regard, the ALJ observed that the appointing authority needed to prove that a reasonable candidate for a Sheriff's Officer position would understand that Dr. Kelly's questions during the pre-employment psychological screening would require those incidents to be disclosed as "domestic violence." The ALJ found that Dr. Kelly's questions, as posed during the pre-employment interview, were more in the nature of "yes" or "no" options and did not invite the detailed responses that the appellant provided during the subsequent Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation. The ALJ observed that the appellant was forthright about his relationship with his child's mother during the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation, even though his openness could have negatively impacted his employment. The ALJ saw no evidence that the appellant would have concealed the five incidents during the pre-employment psychological evaluation if it had been structured in the same manner as the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation. The ALJ believed the appellant was truthful in testifying that he perceived the pre-employment psychological evaluation questions concerning aggression to address bar brawls and similar incidents. Accordingly, the ALJ found the appellant's demeanor and the persuasiveness of his testimony concerning the nature of the pre-employment psychological interview, including his belief that he answered Dr. Kelly's questions to the extent required, to be credible. The ALJ also found that the appointing authority failed to demonstrate that Dr. Kelly's questions during the pre-employment were formulated in a way that made it reasonably clear that the appellant was required to disclose the five incidents which predated that interview, particularly since there was no written evidence in the record which spoke to the content of Dr. Kelly's questions.

In its exceptions, the appointing authority, represented by Catherine Binowski, Assistant County Counsel, argues that its removal of the appellant should be sustained as the ALJ erred in requiring it to prove its definition of "domestic violence" and in concluding that the appellant was not untruthful during the pre-employment psychological evaluation. It maintains that the ALJ erred in requiring it to prove its definition of "domestic violence" because the appellant never claimed that he did not understand what that term meant and he was the one who characterized the five underlying incidents as "domestic violence" during the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation. As to the appellant's untruthfulness, the appointing authority contends that the ALJ did not accord proper weight to Dr. Kelly's testimony that she asked the appellant about prior intimate relationships and whether he had a history of domestic violence or physical violence during the pre-employment psychological evaluation. The appointing authority argues that there is no basis in the record to support the ALJ's finding that the appellant believed he was obligated to report only domestic violence involving police intervention, formal charges, or convictions during the pre-employment psychological interview with Dr. Kelly. It notes that the appellant stated on direct examination that he was asked during the pre-employment psychological evaluation whether he had "ever been involved in domestic violence." The appointing authority emphasizes that Dr. Kelly's questions about domestic violence incidents during the pre-employment psychological evaluation were not limited in scope to events involving criminal charges. It maintains that the only instance where a question was limited to the appellant having "ever been charged with or convicted of any domestic violence offense," was in the pre-employment application, not the pre-employment psychological evaluation with Dr. Kelly. The appointing authority also observes that both the appellant and Dr. Kelly confirmed that the appellant was asked during the pre-employment psychological evaluation if he was involved in any physical altercations after turning age 18. It maintains that the appellant was untruthful in denying such a history because the incidents he described to Dr. Kelly during the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation and before the ALJ were physical altercations. Accordingly, the appointing authority argues that its removal of the appellant should be sustained, as the appellant's failure to disclose those prior domestic violence incidents was false, misleading and violated its rules regarding truthfulness.

In the instant matter, the principal issue is whether the appellant was untruthful in the answers he provided to Dr. Kelly during his pre-employment psychological evaluation in November 2014. As such, the Commission must ascertain whether it was reasonable for the appointing authority and Dr. Kelly to expect the appellant to have disclosed the five incidents at issue during the pre-employment psychological evaluation based upon Dr. Kelly's questions. While the record includes Dr. Kelly's written summaries of the appellant's answers during the evaluation questions, it does not contain any documentation with the exact questions Dr. Kelly asked the appellant during either the pre-employment psychological evaluation or the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation. Consequently, the testimony of the appellant and Dr. Kelly constitute the only significant evidence of Dr. Kelly's questions to the appellant during those sessions. This necessarily requires a determination of the credibility of both the appellant's and Dr. Kelly's accounts of the interviews. The Commission acknowledges that the ALJ, who has the benefit of hearing and seeing the witnesses, is generally in a better position to determine the credibility and veracity of the witnesses. See Matter of J.W.D., 149 N.J. 108 (1997). "[T]rial courts' credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of the witnesses and common human experience that are not transmitted by the record." See In re Taylor, 158 N.J. 644 (1999) (quoting State v. Locurto, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1999)). Additionally, such credibility findings need not be explicitly enunciated if the record as a whole makes the findings clear. Id. at 659 (citing Locurto, supra). The Commission appropriately gives due deference to such determinations. However, in its de novo review of the record, the Commission has the authority to reverse or modify an ALJ's decision if it is not supported by the credible evidence or was otherwise arbitrary. Nevertheless, upon review of the entire record, including the testimony provided at the hearing, the Commission finds that there is sufficient evidence in the record to support the ALJ's credibility determinations. With regard to the standard for overturning an ALJ's credibility determination, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c) provides, in part, that:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record.

See also N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6(c); Cavalieri v. Public Employees Retirement System, 368 N.J. Super. 527 (App. Div. 2004). The Commission finds that in this case, this strict standard has not been met.

In the instant matter, the ALJ provided explicit detailed reasons for his credibility determinations and the Commission agrees with those determinations. The appellant testified that the November 2014 pre-employment psychological evaluation was more rigid and less conversational in nature than the December 2015 Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation. The appellant noted that Dr. Kelly asked him to elaborate on some of his responses during the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation, but did not recall her doing so during the pre-employment psychological evaluation. That account appears to be consistent with Dr. Kelly's testimony that her pre-employment psychological evaluation and Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation interviews with the appellant were structured differently. It is noted that Dr. Kelly explained that her pre-employment psychological evaluation interview with the appellant was more structured and her questions mirrored those contained in a written Personal Background Questionnaire completed by the appellant prior to their session. Dr. Kelly stated that the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation, in contrast, was a "semi-structured interview," where she formulated her questions in response to his statements, rather than planning them ahead of the interview. She indicated that her questions during the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation were more pointed, as they referenced the events which transpired during the underlying 2015 domestic violence incident.

When Dr. Kelly asked the appellant about domestic violence incidents in the November 2014 pre-employment psychological evaluation, the appellant had not yet been hired or formally trained by the appointing authority. There is no indication that police had ever been called to respond to a domestic violence incident involving the appellant as of that date. The only altercation in the record involving the appellant making physical contact with his child's mother prior to his employment with the appointing authority was an incident where she took his keys in an attempt to prevent him from leaving her and he "grabbed her arm and grabbed [his] keys," without pinning her down, and proceeded to walk out. Prior to his pre-employment psychological evaluation, the appellant had completed a pre-employment application which asked if he had "ever been charged with or convicted of any domestic violence offense." Both Dr. Kelly and the appellant maintain that the physical altercation examples Dr. Kelly provided during the pre-employment psychological evaluation were bar fights and similar brawls. Against this backdrop, the Commission believes that the ALJ could reasonably conclude that Dr. Kelly's examples of bar fights and brawls and the pre-employment application's reference to criminal charges did not reasonably put the appellant on notice that he would need to disclose the five aforementioned incidents, including one where he recovered his keys from his child's mother's arm. The ALJ's conclusion is bolstered by the fact that Dr. Kelly's questioning during the pre-employment psychological evaluation did not appear to employ questions which were meant to elicit detailed responses from the appellant or expand upon the answers he provided in the way that the Fitness-For-Duty Evaluation did.

One final comment is warranted. The Commission notes that its decision is based on the testimony and evidence in this matter regarding whether the appellant's answering of the questions asked regarding "domestic violence" were truthful. In this regard, the testimony and evidence demonstrates that his answers comported with his understanding of what that phrase meant during both evaluations. Thus, the actual definition of that phrase is immaterial since the substantive issues were the content of Dr. Kelly's questions, the appellant's responses to those questions, and the truthfulness of his answers.

Accordingly, the Commission agrees with the ALJ's conclusions and dismisses the disciplinary charges against the appellant. As such, the appellant is entitled to immediate reinstatement and back pay and benefits for the period of his separation from employment. See N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. Additionally, since the appellant's disciplinary charges were dismissed, he is entitled to reasonable counsel fees pursuant to N.J.AC. 4A:2-2.12.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. February 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay and/or counsel fees is finally resolved.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the appointing authority's action in removing Luis DeLeon was not justified. Therefore, the Commission reverses the appellant's removal and orders that the appellant be granted back pay, benefits and seniority for the period of his separation from employment. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10. The appellant is also entitled to reasonable counsel fees pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12. An affidavit of mitigation and an affidavit of services in support of reasonable counsel fees shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, the parties shall make a good faith effort to resolve any dispute as to the amount of back pay and/or counsel fees. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed pending resolution of any potential back pay and/or counsel fees dispute.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter should be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.

OAL DKT. NO. CSR 13016-16

IN THE MATTER OF LUIS DE LEON, CAMDEN COUNTY.

Andre A. Norwood, for appellant Luis DeLeon

Catherine Binowski, Assistant County Counsel, for respondent Camden County (Christopher A. Orlando, attorney)

Record Closed: January 5, 2017 Decided: February 21, 2017

BEFORE JOSEPH LAVERY, ALJ t/a:

Luis DeLeon, appellant, brings this appeal before the Civil Service Commission, asking for reinstatement following his removal for cause. The appointing authority has terminated him on charges of giving "false and misleading" information during a psychological examination undertaken on November 25, 2014 by not disclosing incidents of "domestic violence" later revealed in a Fitness-For-Duty assessment on December 29, 2015.

Respondent Sheriff's Office of Camden County, appointing authority, contests the appeal, and asks that appellant's removal be upheld as the proper penalty for untruthfulness, in violation of those regulations cited in its final notice of disciplinary action dated July 22, 2016 (Exhibit J-3).

Today's Initial Decision reverses the penalty of removal and restores appellant to his position of Sheriff's Officer, County of Camden.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This is an appeal filed in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 23, 2016, pursuant to L. 2009, c. 16, supplementing Title 40A of the New Jersey Statutes (N.J.S. 40A:14-200 through -212) and amending N.J.S. 40A:14-150 and N.J.S. 40A:14-22.

Originally, this case was assigned for hearing to Honorable Robert Bingham, II, by the Acting Director and Chief Administrative Law Judge. Following the judge's appointment to the Superior Court, the case was calendared with the undersigned. On January 5, 2017, plenary hearing convened and concluded, thus closing the record.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Background:

Many of the material facts are not in dispute:

Following a conditional offer of employment in November of 2014, appellant, previously a State employee with the Department of Transportation and a veteran of service in Iraq as a National Guardsman, underwent what the appointing authority, Camden County Sheriff's Office, refers to as a "post-offer psychological screening." The screening occurred on November 25, 2014. This process is standard in the Sheriff's Office, and results in a rating by the psychologist/examiner of "qualified," "unqualified," or "indeterminable" for the duties of a sheriff's officer. An appointment to this position occurs only after a candidate's success in this psychological examination. The police psychologist, Jennifer Kelly, Ph.D., ABPP conducted appellant's interview, which was not recorded. In her report, she certified appellant as "qualified" (Exhibit R-1). The doctor's decision permitted appellant's unfettered appointment.

To reach her conclusion that appellant was qualified for the position, Dr. Kelly's report shows that she made use of a number of "assessment techniques," which were listed therein: the California Psychological Inventory (CPI) and Personality Assessment Inventory (PAI), both utilizing the Public Safety and Selection Report; the Psychological History Questionnaire (PsyQ) (Exhibit R-10); the Comprehensive Clinical Interview, and a review of agency-provided background records.

Dr. Kelly also resorted to use of "psychological screening dimensions," which allowed her to estimate the "anticipated degree of risk of performance problems on essential job elements for public safety positions." These estimates were gauged as "high," "mod" [moderate], or "low" (Exhibit R-1, at 1-2). In the case of appellant, Dr. Kelly found that all the dimensions placed him at "low" anticipated degree of risk, except in "Cluster D: Work Attitudes." In a subsection thereof, set apart by the introduction: "Integrity/Ethics," the dimension to be measured was described as:

> Integrity/Ethics: Maintains high standards of personal conduct; exhibits attributes such as honesty and trustworthiness; conforms to laws and personal commitments etc.
> [Exhibit R-1, at. 2; emphasis added]

She assessed appellant's likelihood of performance problems with respect to the foregoing characteristics as being of "moderate" risk.

Also pertinent in this report are Dr. Kelly's comments on page 4, quoted here:

Aggression History:

Mr. DeLeon denied involvement in any physical altercations since turning 18.

Relationship History:

Mr. DeLeon is single with one child who resides with the child's mother. He denied a history of Division of Child Protection and Permanency involvement and indicated he pays child's support based on a mutually agreed upon amount. He denied a history of having a restraining order filed against him or a history of perpetration of domestic violence. Mr. DeLeon currently lives alone. He does not feel there is anything about his current relationship that would negatively interfere with the prospective position.

[Ibid. Emphasis added]

Dr. Kelly characterized this first session with appellant as a "clinical interview." Her professional conclusions arose from that interaction. She also gained insight from appellant's completion of a psychological history questionnaire, as well as by review of the collateral materials provided by the Sheriff's Office. Dr. Kelly specifically listed the topics of discussion and testing, with short summaries of what appellant divulged. The topics addressed were "Education;" "Employment;" "Military Service;" "Previous Public Safety Psychological Assessments;" "Previous Public Safety Employment;" "Driving Record;" "Financial History;" Legal History;" "Substance Use;" "Aggression History;" "Relationship History;" Mental Health History and Provider Contact;" and "Recreation." [Id., at 3-4].

Dr. Kelly concluded over all:

In consideration of the assessment information available to me at this time, I conclude that Mr. DeLeon satisfies the minimum standard for psychological qualification as a Sheriff's Office [sic] with the Camden County Office of the Sheriff. No specific deficits in essential job elements were identified in the present evaluation and Mr. DeLeon was found to possess the full range of psychological competencies and traits known to be associated with successful performance as a law enforcement officer.

[Id., at 5]

Appellant, thus cleared by Dr. Kelly, was appointed to the position of sheriff's officer pending successful performance at the New Jersey Police Training Academy[1].

Appellant's time on the force thereafter was not marked by any negative incident of record until November 2015. At that point, specifically on November 14, 2015, he was the subject of a complaint-summons in Pennsauken Township, initiated by his child's mother, charging simple assault. A temporary restraining order issued on that date. Appellant was suspended from his law enforcement duties and was required to surrender his weapons. On December 8, 2015, the order was eventually dissolved, and replaced by a consent order. The simple assault charge was dismissed without prejudice, for six months (Exhibits R-2, R-3).

As a consequence of this event and its resolution, the appointing authority, pursuant to Attorney General Guidelines for dealing with domestic disputes, requested that Dr. Kelly administer a "Fitness-For-Duty" psychological examination (Exhibits R-2, R-3). It took place on December 29, 2015. The examination differed from appellant's post-offer evaluation, being concerned only with his fitness to return to full-job performance, rather than with exploring his pre-employment psychological state. The tests administered were also not the same as in appellant's first screening. They were: the Minnesota Multiphasic Personality Inventory, the State Trait Anger Inventory, and the Substance Abuse Subtle Screening Inventory.

The interview of appellant with Dr. Kelly, which again was not recorded, was in-depth, and during it the child's mother, A.E., who had brought the complaint on November 14, 2015, was telephoned for questioning. This attempted inquiry was not successful:

> [A.E.] was contacted by myself and asked if she would be willing to speak about her relationship with Mr. DeLeon as well as the domestic incident in question. [A.E.] indicated that she was not interested in speaking to me or > answering any questions as she did not want to be responsible for negatively impacting Mr. DeLeon's job.

> [Exhibit R-3, at 3]

Dr. Kelly in her questioning of appellant explored the incident of November 14, 2015, which had prompted the Fitness-For-Duty evaluation. She summarized in her report her version of the information provided by appellant describing what had occurred (Exhibit R-3, at 4, full paragraphs 1-4]. Additionally, Dr. Kelly offered her further summation of what appellant told her regarding another, earlier incident in February 2015. [Id., at 5, first full paragraph]. Both events happened after her post-offer psychological evaluation in the prior year, on November 25, 2014.

However, beyond these two events, Dr. Kelly, in this same Fitness-for-Duty Report, declared that her examination on December 29, 2015, had unearthed "inconsistencies" in appellant's statements from the year before in the post-offer evaluation:

> Mr. DeLeon denied all accusation that her [sic] pushed or kicked [A.E.] and also denied ever pulling her hair in the past as was alleged by her. Nonetheless, Mr. DeLeon indicated that he and [A.E.] have known each other since 2005 and lived together for three years but he ultimately had her move out when she threatened to burn him with an iron in 2012. On occasion he indicated that she had grabbed him by the shirt and pulled him back with the iron in her hand. During their relationship, Mr. DeLeon stated they have had five domestic violence incidents, including one in which he grabbed her arms and held them down in order to get his keys from her hand. He stated that none of the prior domestic incidents were reported to the police. The fact that the couple had numerous domestic incidents in the past was inconsistent with what Mr. DeLeon had reported to me one year prior when his [sic] was evaluated for hire with the Camden County Office of the Sheriff.
> [Id., at 4-5; emphasis added]

Because of this assertion of "inconsistency" by Dr. Kelly, the Camden County Sheriff's Office conducted an internal investigation. Relying on the Fitness-For-Duty suggestion of failure to report past domestic violence in the post-offer interview, the sheriff at the time removed appellant from his position. Appellant brought an appeal, and these proceedings followed.

Arguments of the Parties:

The appointing authority's charge:

The Office of Sheriff, Camden County, as the appointing authority, presented its case through documentary exhibits and testimony. The foremost exhibits pertaining to the final notice of disciplinary action (FNDA) (Exhibits J-2, J-3) specifications which are offered as factual evidence and supplemented by the testimony of their author, Dr. Kelly, are: the Post-Offer Evaluation Report (Exhibit R-1), the Fitness-For-Duty Report (Exhibit R-3) and the Camden County Office of the Sheriff Application For Employment (Exhibit R-4). The appointing authority maintained that, in total, they show by a preponderance of the evidence that appellant in his first interview with Dr. Kelly intended to, and did, withhold information disclosing aggression and domestic violence.

In her testimony, Dr. Jennifer Kelly, Ph.D., ABPP, stated that she had been a board certified, licensed psychologist with a concentration in law enforcement pre- and post-employment evaluations for the past ten to eleven years. During that time she had completed over 2,000 such post-offer interviews weekly and perhaps a total of 200 Fitness-For-Duty interviews. In her testimony, Dr. Kelly essentially reiterated what she had conveyed in her two reports.

Dr. Kelly stated that, in the first, post-offer report, appellant had answered that he had never been involved in any "altercations" or "scuffles" after the age of eighteen. She recalled that she had probed further with the additional standard question of whether he had been involved in, or had a history of, interpersonal domestic "violence," or "physical violence," including such as would have the police called to the home because of "interpersonal contact," or "aggression," or whether a restraining order for such behavior had ever been issued. His answer, according to Dr. Kelly, was that none of these things had ever occurred (Exhibit R-1, at 4, "Aggression History;" Id., "Relationship History."). She noted that he completed a "very detailed" psychological history questionnaire, which covered the same topic, inquiring as well whether there had ever been "slapping, hitting, interpersonal conflict relationships" (Exhibit R-10). The questionnaire warned each examinee that lack of honesty in answering could result in not being qualified for the position. Appellant signed, Dr. Kelly recalled, attesting that he understood his need for total honesty.

In December 2015 (Exhibit R-3), Kelly further observed that appellant had again been asked about "incidents of domestic violence" with his child's mother, A.E., which had precipitated the need for this evaluation. However beyond this, and because of his long-standing relationship with this woman, appellant described other "incidents" which took place which had not been disclosed during the earlier post-offer examination. Dr. Kelly said she summarized their conversation in her report (Id., at 4-5).

Dr. Kelly stated that during their three years together there were five physical altercations. One involved A.E.'s threat with the hot iron in 2012, another involved appellant pinning her down because she had taken his keys. She was "absolutely" certain that appellant had indicated that these incidents pre-dated her first, post-offer evaluation, and that this behavior was not unusual between the two. This, despite his earlier denial at that time of any such conduct. This, Dr. Kelly felt, was an inconsistency. Therefore, she concluded, appellant had been untruthful. Lack of veracity would have been sufficient grounds for her to not recommend appellant for employment, had she known during the earlier post-offer interview. Domestic violence is a critical element particularly relevant to self-control in police work, she emphasized. For that reason, she brought it to the attention of the appointing authority (Exhibit R-3, at 5).

However, Dr. Kelly added, because of the American With Disabilities Act (ADA), only a finding of underlying psychiatric condition would have allowed her to find lack of fitness to be restored to his job. In contrast, lack of truthfulness, was an administrative, not a medical, problem.

Dr. Kelly agreed that her summary (Ibid.) was not a quotation. She conceded that her questions during the Fitness-For-Duty examination were more pointed and detailed than in the post-offer evaluation, now that more information was in place to draw on. On the other hand, she was certain that the general questions she asked in the second interview were also asked during the first evaluation. Dr. Kelly explained that she had made more expansive inquiries in the second interview only because she had learned more from appellant. She believed the headings in her reports were not "relevant" to what were the actual questions she had asked during each interview about physical violence.

Sergeant Corinne Mason, the sergeant-in-charge of the internal investigations for the Camden County Sheriff's Office, testified that appellant's psychological examination inconsistencies, as found by Dr. Kelly, proved he had been dishonest. She recalled that this same report showed that appellant had held down the hands of the mother of his child in order to retrieve his keys. This was assault as defined in the "2C," the "Criminal Code" and the "Domestic Violence Act." Sergeant Mason stated that she could not be expected to recite the specific titles and content of these legal references from memory. In any event, she stated, "anyone" would recognize this incident as an altercation which should have been disclosed to Dr. Kelly in the post-offer examination in answer to the questions concerning Aggression History and Relationship History (Exhibit R-1, at 4).

Camden County Sheriff Gilbert Wilson testified that, though only in the office for one year, he was familiar with the case. He confirmed that dishonesty in police work warranted removal from the position, since honesty is the foundation of police work. His office's Manual of Rules and Regulations assesses untruthfulness as a Class 1 offense, thus requiring dismissal (Exhibit R-6, at 3, Rule 3.14.19, at 30). The sheriff concluded from review of Dr. Kelly's reports that there were clear discrepancies in appellant's answers to the questions in issue.

The County argued in summation that the facts confirm appellant's failure to disclose, on his application (Exhibit R-4) and during the post-offer phase, five domestic violence events occurring earlier than appellant's pre-employment application. This document and the psychological assessments together prove by a preponderance that appellant was dishonest. In the view of the Sheriff's Office, untruthfulness warrants removal.

Appellant's case in reply:

Relying entirely on his own testimony, appellant denied that he had been untruthful during the post-offer interview with Dr. Kelly. He maintained that during this first interview with her the question-and-answer session had been more direct. No elaboration was possible. With respect to aggression, he interpreted these questions as referring to bar fights and the like. He had engaged in none. As to relationship history, Dr. Kelly had asked whether he had experienced a restraining order or been in any feuds with others.

The second interview (Exhibit R-3), he recalled had been more conversational and open-ended, in his recollection. Dr. Kelly typed as they talked and asked follow-up questions, appellant said. This allowed him to be voluntarily more descriptive of the history with the baby's mother, which had included friction, at times physical, which marked their relationship. He gave Dr. Kelly more detailed replies, including dates and times. She had asked that he elaborate. During the first interview, appellant insisted, he was telling the complete truth in answer to the questions in the form that they had been asked. In appellant's memory, she had only asked if he had been involved in domestic violence or had been under a restraining order.

In sum, appellant declared, the first interview called for more of "yes-or-no" answers, while the second interview had been more "loose" and "relaxed." In neither instance had he been untruthful, appellant stated. Appellant thought it significant that none of the incidents Dr. Kelly had described in the Fitness-For-Duty report had been assigned specific dates or times.

On cross-examination, however, appellant acknowledged that, pre-employment and prior to the post-offer interview, he had been involved in what had been characterized as "domestic violence" incidents. He agreed that he had not reported them during this first evaluation. Nonetheless, he did not agree that he had been untruthful by not disclosing them, since they did not involve outside intervention. For the same reasons, he had not divulged these incidents on his application for employment, which also asked about domestic violence (Exhibit R-4, at 18).

Addressing the later Fitness-For-Duty interview, appellant recalled voluntarily telling Dr. Kelly of some domestic incidents involving himself and the baby's mother. He believed these outbursts centered on A.E.'s fear that he would leave her. He recalled that on one occasion she had grabbed his shirt and pulled him back. On another occasion, he added, she had made threats with a hot iron, without physical involvement. During an argument in which she had been shifting his keys from hand-to-hand to prevent his departure, appellant was certain he had done no more than hold down her arms to retrieve the keys. "I grabbed her arms and grabbed my keys."[2] He denied "pinning her down" and stated that his intent was to remove himself from the house.

In closing statement, appellant argued that he believed that he had been asked whether he had been charged or convicted of domestic violence on his application. He knew he had not. During the post-offer interview, his answer responded to the questions posed, e.g., whether he had been in aggressive and violent altercations, such as bar fights, in which he had never been a participant. Dr. Kelly's questions were yes-or-no in nature, appellant insisted. There had been no invitation to expand or explain. During the post-offer interview he did not think that he was being asked about more than formal domestic charges and conviction. When questioned in detail and at length in the Fitness-For-Duty interview, he maintained that he had been completely honest and open. Further, he had never "threatened, assaulted or harassed" another person, as asked in his application. Finally, appellant argued, it is not actually known what exactly was asked in either unrecorded interview, and this information is fundamentally necessary to determine whether he had been truthful.

Burden of proof:

The burden of persuasion falls on the agency in enforcement proceedings, such as those in which it is sought to prove an employee has engaged in violations susceptible to removal as a penalty, under controlling regulations, Cumberland Farms, Inc. v. Moffett, 218 N.J. Super. 331, 341 (App. Div. 1987). The agency must prove its case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, which is the standard in administrative proceedings, Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Precisely what is needed to satisfy the standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis. The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion, Bornstein v. Metropolitan Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power, State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975).

Findings of fact:

To resolve disputes of material fact I make the following FINDINGS:

1. Appellant and the mother of his child, A.E., during the three years they lived together engaged in five angry "domestic incidents"[3] which at times turned physical to an unknown degree. These incidents predated appellant's post-offer interview Dr. Kelly.

2. The extent of violence, if any, inherent in these five instances of argumentative physicality is not of record, with the exception of: (a) A.E'.s threat against appellant with a hot iron, (b) an occasion when A.E. pulled him by the shirt, and (c) the event when appellant held A.E.'s arms in order to retrieve his car keys which she had taken and was withholding to prevent his leaving.

3. Appellant never pushed, kicked or pulled the hair of A.E.[4]

4. In the Post-offer interview with Dr. Kelly, Appellant did not disclose any of the foregoing history of five disputes with A.E.

5. In the post-offer interview, appellant believed he was obliged only to report domestic violence which had involved police intervention, formal charges, or convictions for that offense. Questions on aggression he interpreted as referring to bar fights and the like.

6. In the post-offer interview, Dr. Kelly questioned appellant more narrowly than in the Fitness-For-Duty interview. These questions invited only brief, constrained answers.

7. In the post-offer interview, appellant filled out a Psychological History Questionnaire. The questions within it are not in the record, and only the penciled entry-marks on an answer sheet are in evidence (Exhibit R-10)

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Analysis:

The charges and specifications:

The appointing authority, in its amended final notice of disciplinary action (FNDA) dated May 3, 2016 provided the specifics for its action:

> Incidents(s) giving rise to the charge(s) and the date(s) on which it/they occurred:
>
> On December 29, 2015, during a Fitness for Duty Examination, which stemmed from a domestic violence incident, Camden County Sheriff's Officer DeLeon disclosed he had been involved in five (5) domestic violence incidents in the past, one in 2012. This contradicted statements he made one year earlier in a psychological examination.
>
> On November 25 2014, in accordance with Attorney General Guidelines Internal Affairs Policy & Procedures relative to (Pre-Hire Screening and Investigation), Appendix Q.V.B & Q.IV.C, S/O Luis DeLeon #659 was given a psychological examination as a post-conditional offer of employment. During his psych screening, S/O DeLeon provided false and misleading information, relative to his personal history, indicating he had no history of domestic violence.
> [Exhibit J-1]

The appointing authority in this same document charges that appellant's conduct was in violation of Civil Service Rules (N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6 Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee; N.J.A.C. 41:2-2.3(a)12 Other Sufficient Causes); Attorney General Guidelines Internal Affairs Policy and Procedures relative to (Pre-Hire Screening and Investigation), Appendix Q.IV.C and Appendix Q.V.B.; and finally, Camden County Sheriff's Rules and Regulations: Rule 3.4.19 Truthfulness.

It must be emphasized that, because this is a case seeking imposition of penalty, analysis of the facts of record herein must be restricted to their import when measured against the exact wording of the specifics in the FNDA. Similarly, scrutiny of the regulatory violations of which appellant is accused in the FNDA are also limited to only the foregoing citations listed by the appointing authority. There can be no determination in this tribunal that criminal laws or domestic violence statutes have, or have not, been violated. This tribunal is without authority to do so. Collectively, the FNDA charges and specifications are all that appellant had official notice of to prepare his defense. Consequently, these alone must form the boundaries from within which findings of fact and conclusions of law may be sought.

Untruthfulness is the sole offense to be decided:

This case is about appellant's truthfulness, or lack of it, in his efforts to become a sheriff's officer. The appeal does not call for an adjudication of domestic violence as defined in the law, nor can this tribunal supply its own meaning to the appointing authority's term: "domestic violence." That is the obligation of respondent. Today's Initial Decision resolves the charges as they stand in the appointing authority's final notice of disciplinary action (FNDA). That document (Exhibit J-3) presupposes that appellant engaged in five undefined and largely undescribed episodes of "domestic violence." Its central charge turns on whether he was untruthful in his answers during the post-offer psychological assessment by the police psychologist.

Sworn law enforcement officers are special public officers held to higher standards:

It is important to recall while examining the proofs that well-settled law has established the special nature of sworn law enforcement positions. Twp. of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80, 219 A.2d 417 (1966)]. In the case of In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 485-486 (2007) affirming removal of a police officer who slept while on duty, the Court held:

> In matters involving discipline of police and corrections officers, public safety concerns may also bear upon the propriety of the dismissal sanction. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580, 410 A.2d 686 (1980) (affirming appellate reversal of Board decision to reduce penalty from dismissal to suspension for prison guard who falsified report because of Board's failure to consider seriousness of charge); In re Hall, 335 N.J. Super. 45, 51, 760 A.2d 1148 (App. Div. 200) (reversing Board's decision to reduce penalty imposed on police officer for attempted theft from dismissal to suspension), certif. denied, 167 N.J. 629, 772 A.2d 931 (2001); Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06, 633 A.2d 577 (App. Div. 1993) (holding that it was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable to reduce penalty from removal to six months suspension for prison guard who gambled with inmates for cigarettes), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469, 640 A.2d 850 (1994).

With the foregoing in mind, if appellant were to be found to have committed an offense of dishonesty, as charged here, it is unlikely that any penalty short of removal would be appropriate. In The Matter of Angelo Reillo, Camden County Police Department, OAL Dkt. No. 1477-14 (June 26, 2014); adopted Civil Service Commission (October 1, 2014).

However, for the reasons outlined below, there is no preponderating evidence that appellant untruthfully "provided false and misleading information, relative to his personal history, indicating he had no history of domestic violence." (Exhibit J-3). This conclusion derives from the facts of record. Today's decision is not in any way intended to suggest that dishonesty during a psychological evaluation conducted by a police psychologist could not be a chargeable offense. Neither are the rules and regulations cited in the FNDA by the Office of Sheriff, Camden County inapposite when untruthfulness is established.

The proofs necessary:

Thus informed by the law, it must now be said that the record is replete with discussion of appellant's domestic disputes with his child's mother. However, what the appointing authority must show with preponderating evidence for its charges to be upheld is (a) the facts, time-frames and level of seriousness of the five occurrences in issue to establish "domestic violence;" (b) what the appointing authority defines as "domestic violence;" and (c) whether the questions as posed by Dr. Kelly during the post-offer interview could be understood by any reasonable sheriff's officer applicant to demand disclosure of these occurrences as "domestic violence," within the meaning of the FNDA (Exhibit J-3).

The proofs presented:

On the facts of this record, the appointing authority has not shown that appellant could not reasonably maintain that, during the first post-offer interview, he lacked understanding that he had committed "domestic violence," as charged in the FNDA, on five occasions. Further, the appointing authority has not proven that appellant intentionally withheld information of such incidents from Dr. Kelly at that time. Without that intention proved, there can be no finding of untruthfulness. It is fatal to the charge that neither Dr. Kelly nor the appointing authority has precisely defined the FNDA's concept of "domestic violence." This term is the crucial element underlying appellant's termination. Further, it cannot be discerned from this record whether the incidents of "domestic violence" confessed by appellant during the instant hearing were of a nature reasonably expected to compel disclosure to Dr. Kelly during the post-offer interview. It is believable that he did not think they were, as he answered the questions as posed. There are but three instances of angry contact conceded by appellant at hearing as predating the post-offer interview. None involved police intervention or worse, which is what appellant presumed was intended when discussing domestic violence.

More specifically, the reasons for the foregoing conclusions are, first, that "domestic violence" is the term the appointing authority employs, but it is unclear whether the term is meant to embrace: (a) any relationship argument, (b) conflict involving a police call, an arrest, or an adjudication pursuant to applicable law, or (c) some other generally understood personal clash between romantic partners. As an example, Sergeant Mason from Internal Affairs, for example, whose Internal Affairs office conducted the appointing authority's investigation believed that appellant's restraining of A.E.'s arms to recover his keys and leave the house to avoid angry confrontation amounted to "assault." She believed it was assault as defined by unspecified statutory sections of criminal law or of the Domestic Violence Act. As such, the sergeant felt that not reporting this to Dr. Kelly was dishonest. Yet, the FNDA makes no comparable accusation. In any event, this tribunal has neither authority nor data from the record to reconcile the two, nor may this tribunal unilaterally supply the lack in either.

Second, on the present record, it is not a persuasive argument that appellant should have been alerted to his duty to disclose a stormy relationship with A.E. when faced with the "same general questions" in the first interview as were asked in the second, according to Dr. Kelly. We do not know what those general questions were. Appellant stated with credible demeanor that, whatever their content, the questions as posed then invited only cursory reply. In his recollection, they were more in the nature of "yes" or "no" options. Absent adequate rebuttal, and taking into account the record, it must be concluded that the testimony of appellant is the more believable.

Finally, Dr. Kelly testified that a psychological history questionnaire which appellant had completed in this first post-offer interview contained detailed questions. She stated that they pertained to behavior of a type which appellant freely described at length in the Fitness-For-Duty examination. This questionnaire, in her view, should have elicited admission of the five domestic events of which he later spoke. Not finding those answers led her to believe that appellant had consciously withheld the information. Yet, while the pencil-marked answer sheet to those questions was provided at hearing (Exhibit R-10), the questionnaire itself was not. As a result, neither its content nor appellant's choice of answers to its questions are known. With a serious penalty at stake, far more than mere reference to questions and answers not provided in the record of hearing is needed. Thus, the reference can be afforded scant evidentiary weight. It is the appointing authority which has the burden of persuasion, not appellant.

In contrast, for his part, appellant in his demeanor and in the persuasiveness of his testimony emerged as credible. His testimony was direct and forthright. He did not deny a turbulent relationship with A.E. What was clear to him and ultimately to this tribunal after full assessment of the proofs, is that he believed he had answered Dr. Kelly's post-offer questions to the extent she had required. He had no intention to dishonestly omit information. He viewed the five domestic occurrences in issue as part of his rocky relationship with his child's mother. Additionally, it is believable that appellant perceived questioning during the post-offer interview concerning aggression to address bar brawls and the like in the former and violence prompting police intervention in the latter.

Appellant's contention is likewise credible that the post-offer questions of Dr. Kelly did not invite the depth of response encouraged in the later Fit-For-Duty evaluation. In the latter interview, all agree, he was unfiltered and forthcoming even though his openness concerning the relationship with A.E. could well have prompted adverse employment consequences. There is nothing in this record to persuade that he would have been less honest in the first interview, which had its own element of employment risk. His testimony is at least as supported by the proofs as Dr. Kelly's. Where the evidence is in equipoise, the proofs do not preponderate. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Land, 186 N.J. 163, 169 (2006).

The Post-offer report's assessment of Integrity/Ethics:

Respondent's highlighting of Dr. Kelly's psychological screening dimension "Integrity/Ethics"[5] affords very little evidentiary weight. Her psychological assessment of appellant's "moderate" risk of not adhering to "honesty," among other virtues listed therein, is essentially a prediction. It was not sufficient a forecast to prevent Dr. Kelly from rating him "qualified." More to the point, prediction of a risk of "moderate" psychological propensity to be dishonest cannot serve to confirm actual wrongdoing. It does not prove that appellant provided "false and misleading information." That is the heart of the FNDA charges.

[5] (Exhibit R-1, at 2, Cluster D: Work Attitudes, Integrity/Ethics

In the same vein, if reference to this predictive element of the post-offer report is meant to cast doubt on appellant's character, it fails (Cf. N.J.R.E. 404(b) and (c)). There is no concrete evidence in this record of dishonest disposition. The Sheriff's Office has not proffered an official discipline record of any kind. It must be presumed therefore that appellant has not been disciplined for dishonesty in his past public employment. Further, his military record ended in honorable discharge, without qualification, after deployment to the war zone of Iraq. From an evidentiary perspective, this data counterweighs and exceeds the predictive "moderate" risk of dishonesty brought forward in the post-offer report.

The application for employment:

Finally, the appointing authority's claim that appellant was dishonest in his application for employment will not be considered, per se. It was not part of the charges in the FNDA. As noted above, the charges in a penalty case must be strictly limited to those offenses stated. However, to the extent that appellant's employment application answers were to be considered as further suggesting untruthful proclivities, the effort has not succeeded. Consistent with the findings and conclusions stated herein, and evaluating the employment application on its own terms (Exhibit R-4), I FIND further that the application contains no preponderating evidence of dishonesty. First, because no proofs offered have shown that appellant "threatened, assaulted or harassed" A.E.[6] Secondly, because that application's inquiry concerning domestic violence clearly refers to offenses involving formal charge or conviction, neither of which occurred.[7]

Conclusion:

[6] Exhibit R-4, at 18, question 8.

[7] Id., question 9

I CONCLUDE, therefore, that appellant was not untruthful by reason of providing false and misleading information relative to his personal history, as charged in the final notices of disciplinary action, 31-B and 31-C, both dated July 22, 2016 (Exhibits. J-2, J-3).

ORDER

I ORDER, therefore, that the removal of appellant be REVERSED, and that appellant be REINSTATED to his position of sheriff's officer, County of Camden.

I ORDER further that appellant be awarded back pay and counsel fees pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.10 and -2.12

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 40A:14-204.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 12787-16
AGENCY REF. NO. 2017-232

IN THE MATTER OF ICYLIN ELLINGTON, ESSEX COUNTY DEPARTMENT OF CITIZEN SERVICES.

David Weiner, Union Representative, appearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)6 for appellant

Keisha Clark, Esq., and Jill Caffrey, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: March 20, 2017 Decided: March 24, 2017

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Icylin Ellington, a former Family Service Worker employed by the Essex County Department of Citizen Services (the County), appeals her dismissal at the conclusion of her working test period. She alleges that she was terminated in bad faith. The County replies that Ellington was unable, despite being given ample training and assistance, to properly fulfill her job responsibilities.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Via letter dated July 1, 2016, Ellington was notified that she did not successfully complete her working test period. The letter noted that since her evaluation resulted in an unsatisfactory rating, her last day of employment would be Friday, July 8, 2016. Ellington appealed the County's action on July 13, 2016. The contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 23, 2016. A hearing was conducted on February 27, 2017. Written summations were filed by the parties on March 20, 2017, at which time the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The essential underlying facts are not in dispute, and I FIND as follows:

After successfully completing the civil service examination in January 2016, Ellington secured employment with the County. Her working test period began on April 11, 2016, and extended for ninety days. Previously, Ellington had served as a kinship navigator. She felt she was quite successful in her prior employment, which entailed doing home visits and assessments as part of making guardianship arrangements for children.

Ellington was hired as a Family Service Worker; in that role, her job was to assist clients in applying for public welfare benefits. She spent the first thirty days of the working test period in a classroom setting. Lisa Maddox-Douglas is the training supervisor. Newly hired Family Service Workers are introduced to the substantive regulations that will guide their work, and to the computer programs that are used to input client data and calculate benefit entitlements. A day and a half is spent training to use the Universal Applications Processing System (UAP), a computer program. Along the way, trainees are tested on their knowledge in eight different modules; a final test is administered at the end of the first month. A perfect score would be 100; a score of 80 must be achieved to pass.

Maddox-Douglas twice talked with Ellington about her progress during the training period. Her test scores were low. Ellington passed a test of her substantive knowledge about the General Assistance program, and a test about her knowledge of the Emergency Assistance and SNAP (food stamps) programs. But on a test of her knowledge of the Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) program, Elllington only achieved a score of 75. She received the same score relative to her knowledge of Medicaid. And her scores in areas that asked her to master computer technology were particularly low. FAMIS is a computer program used to determine benefit entitlements; Ellington received a score of 36.[1] Likewise, "coding" and "calculations" pertain to use of the computer and the calculation of benefits; Ellington received scores of 67 and 58 respectively in these critical areas. Maddox-Douglas met with Ellington on April 25, 2016, and alerted her that in order to pass the training month of her working test period, she would have to do well on the final examination. Ellington achieved a score of 74.

A thirty-day evaluation completed by Maddox-Douglas on May 10, 2016, gave Ellington unsatisfactory scores in the area of quality and quantity of work. This resulted in an average rating of 1.6; Maddox-Douglas explained that a score of 2 was needed to satisfactorily complete the first month of training. She emphasized that the computer was a particular challenge for Ellington, noting that she even had difficulty with the passwords needed to access the necessary programs, and locked herself out on at least two to three occasions. Ellington was contrite when advised that she had not passed, indicating that she was sorry that she had "let them down." Maddox-Douglas told her to work hard in the next phase of training; to make her proud. To promote Ellington's success, she was assigned to a unit that handled food stamp benefits for one-adult households. Clients in this unit were typically disabled or elderly, with few if any changes in their income. The work was described as more straightforward and slower paced than that in other units.

Maddox-Douglas and Loy Tenyhwa, the Supervisor of Ellington's new unit, described the work of the Family Service Worker, and the output that was expected of a typical worker. Family Service Workers process a case from start to finish. They meet with a client; obtain needed information and verifications; input data into the computer; and calculate and determine benefits. A Family Service Worker typically processes 10-[1] FAMIS and UAP are related computer programs that Family Service Workers need to master to do their jobs.

12 cases a day. A worker in training typically completes 5-6 cases a day. Ellington completed only one or two cases during the sixty-day period she was assigned to the food stamps unit.[2]

Ellington was not expected to work without assistance or supervision. Indeed, Tenyhwa detailed the support Ellington received during the first thirty days in her unit. She was asked to shadow experienced workers, and she was asked to complete interim reports (IRF's). Even these were completed quite slowly; only three a day and with help. Ten a day would be a more typical output. Her coaches were expected to give Ellington cases of their own to complete under their mentorship. They became quite frustrated because she was unable to do so, and thus, their own work fell behind. At the end of the sixtieth day of her working test period, Ellington was told that she was not performing to expectations. She should have been able to complete cases independently. She should have already been a "member of the unit." Ellington's difficulty in completing the work seemed primarily caused by her lack of facility with the computer. Ellington's evaluation on June 10, 2016, again was unsatisfactory. Tenyhwa told Ellington that moving forward she would meet with her once per week to review her ongoing progress and attempt to assist her. Ellington urges that Tenyhwa did not directly supervise her work, but the fact that they met weekly, and both worked together in a small unit of only five to six workers demonstrates otherwise.

But Ellington's problems persisted during the final thirty days of the working test period. Tenyhwa indicated that a typical client interview would take about thirty minutes; Ellington spent as much as two and a half hours interviewing a client. Ellington urged that her difficulty stemmed from the fact that the client was not English speaking; but Tenyhwa explained that interpreters were available to assist workers who were not fluent in a client's language. There were almost daily password issues; Ellington was locked out of her computer repeatedly because she could not properly enter her password. The frustration of Ellington's co-workers mounted. On July 7, 2016, at the end of the ninety-day probationary period Ellington and Tenyhwa met again, and she again received an unsatisfactory rating.

Ellington's testimony only served to bolster the credibility of the witnesses who described her as struggling during the working test period. Ellington was a soft-spoken, polite and deferential witness; this is how her supervisors described her as well. She admitted to her many difficulties during the working test period, and her description of the relevant events differed from Tenyhwa's only to the extent that Ellington repeatedly blamed others for her problems.

She claimed that she received insufficient training. Ellington confirmed that she was directed to shadow three more experienced co-workers, but she urged that she found them, with one exception, less than eager to help. One co-worker loudly urged that others should not assist Ellington; on another occasion a co-worker gave her an assignment and timed her. Ellington felt humiliated. She suggested that these co-workers were not supervisors and should not have assigned work to her. But the record makes it clear that the workers she shadowed were peer coaches and never were assigned to supervise Ellington's work. I thus FIND that notwithstanding Ellington's perception that she was being asked to hit the ground running, she in fact had little or no work of her own during the probationary period, and instead, was only asked to work alongside her peers in a continuation of her training.

Ellington confirmed that the computer systems, most specifically UAP, were hard to master. When she asked for help Tenyhwa told her to work with a co-worker because as a supervisor she did not use the program in quite the same way, and had not done so for many years. This became a focal point for Ellington, who urged repeatedly that Tenyhwa's lack of facility with UAP should somehow excuse her own. While Ellington disputed the assertion that she could not enter a computer passcode correctly, she was aware, apparently from experience, that after several tries the computer locks the user out. Ellington urged that in her three months of employment she was never tardy, and never reprimanded for misconduct on the job. This was not disputed by the supervisory personnel who testified at the hearing.

As for Ellington's assertion that her termination was in bad faith, I heard no factual support for this allegation. Both Tenyhwa and Maddox-Douglas appeared to genuinely like Ellington, and the record reflects ongoing efforts by both during the working test period to assist her; to include the very purposeful assignment to the food stamp office; weekly meetings with her; and access to peer shadows. The assertion that Division Head Jeanette Page-Hawkins somehow bore Ellington ill-will was particularly spurious. Although Page-Hawkins was one of several signatories to Ellington's final evaluation form, I was offered no evidence that Page-Hawkins even really knew Ellington, much less sought to terminate her for proscribed reasons. Page-Hawkins was subpoenaed to appear at the hearing and then was asked nothing of any substance. Instead, Ellington's representative simply established that Page-Hawkins expressed extreme aggravation when she was served with the subpoena and even went so far as to thrust the requisite fee back at him. But this testimony only established that Page-Hawkins was irritated by the prospect of having to attend a hearing; not that she or her agency were somehow "out to get" Ellington.

It is uncontroverted and I FIND that notice that her employment would be terminated was served on Ellington on Friday, July 8, 2016, when the July 1, 2016, letter was handed to her. Her employment terminated effective July 8, 2016. The ninety-day working test period was to end on July 10, 2016.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Civil Service Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 11A:1 to 9, reflects the public policy of the State of New Jersey to encourage and reward meritorious performance by employees in the public service and to retain and separate employees on the basis of the adequacy of their performance. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(c). In furtherance of this public policy, the Act and the regulations of the Civil Service Commission place an obligation on the appointing authority to monitor a probationary employee during a working test period as part of the examination process. It is designed to permit an appointing authority to determine whether the employee can satisfactorily perform the duties of the title. N.J.S.A. 11A:4-15; N.J.A.C. 4A:4-5.1(a). The purpose of a working test period is to furnish an additional test of efficiency. Devine v. Plainfield, 31 N.J. Super. 300 (App. Div. 1954). The court held in Dodd v. Van Riper, 135 N.J.L. 167, 171 (E. & A. 1947), that "a basic condition of permanent appointment for any civil service employee is the favorable opinion of the employee's fitness as formed by the appointing authority during the probationary period." Termination at the end of the working test period may occur for unsatisfactory performance. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6(a)(4); N.J.A.C. 4A:2-4 and N.J.A.C. 4A:4-5.4(a).

An employee who seeks to challenge her termination at the end of a working test period faces a heavy burden of proof. She must establish that "the action was in bad faith." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-4.3(b); Dodd, supra, 135 N.J.L. at 172. In Briggs v. N.J. Department of Civil Service, 64 N.J. Super. 351, 356 (App. Div. 1960), the court stated that the only issue in such a case is whether the appointing authority exercised good faith in determining that the employee was not competent to satisfactorily perform the duties of the position.

Although the courts have not defined "good faith" or "bad faith" specifically in the context of a working test period case, "good faith" has generally been defined as meaning honesty of purpose and integrity of conduct with respect to a given subject. Smith v. Whitman, 39 N.J. 397, 405 (1963). Hence, if the decision to terminate an employee at the end of the working test period lacks integrity of conduct, then the decision was rendered in bad faith. "Bad faith" is the antithesis of good faith and must be a thing done dishonestly; it contemplates a state of mind affirmatively operating with a furtive design or some motive of interest or ill will. Schopf v. Dep't of Labor, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 853, 857.

I CONCLUDE that Ellington has not met her burden of proof. I heard no evidence that her termination was for any reason other than her inability to master the skills needed to perform the duties of a Family Service Worker. I CONCLUDE that her petition of appeal should be dismissed.

In accordance with N.J.A.C. 4A:2-4.1(c), notice of termination must be served not more five working days prior to or five working days following the last day of the working test period. Here the working test period was to conclude on July 10, 2016, a Sunday; the notice was served on July 8, 2016. Accordingly, notwithstanding the fact that the letter of termination is dated July 1, 2016, I CONCLUDE that its service was timely and compliant with the requirements of the regulation.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

OAL DKT. NO. CSV 07825-16
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-4019

IN THE MATTER OF KENDRA HALL, SUPERIOR COURT OF NEW JERSEY,
MONMOUTH VICINAGE.

Franceline Ehret, CWA Staff Representative, appearing pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-5.4(a)(6) for appellant

Susanna J. Morris, Esq., for respondent, Superior Court of New Jersey, Monmouth Vicinage

Record Closed: March 1, 2017 Decided: March 27, 2017

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, Acting Director & Chief ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

Appellant Kendra Hall appeals the action by the Superior Court of New Jersey, Monmouth Vicinage, terminating her from her position as a Judiciary Clerk 4, on grounds of conduct unbecoming, neglect of duty, misuse of public property, and other sufficient cause related to personal use of confidential Judiciary systems. Ms. Hall contends that she is not guilty of the actions attributed to her.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Hall was suspended without pay on February 26, 2016, effective February 25, 2016, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-25(a)(1). On March 6, 2016, she was served with a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. She waived her right to a departmental hearing, and on May 4, 2016, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action sustaining the charges was issued. Her removal from employment was effective as of February 26, 2016. On May 9, 2016, Hall filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission, which determined to transmit the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on May 25, 2016. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. It was heard on January 30, 2017, and the record left open to March 1, 2017, for closing statements. The record then closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Some facts are not in dispute. Appellant, who had worked for the Judiciary for approximately nine years in February 2016, had started in the Middlesex Vicinage, eventually accepting a promotion into the Judiciary Clerk 4 position in the Finance Division of the Monmouth Vicinage. She was the lead worker in the Mechanic Street Office, which accepts payments from the public for probation and for child support. In general, persons working in the first-floor Cashiers Office have access to the NJ Kids Child Support data system, which they use to ensure that child support payments are attached to the correct cases. They also have access to the Automated Complaint System and the Automated Traffic System. From August 2015 to February 2016, appellant also had access to the Judiciary's Promis/Gavel database, as the plan was to eventually undertake some reporting on open bail.

Judy Fread, administrative supervisor in the Finance Division, had six direct-reports, one of them Appellant. She testified that Hall primarily worked upstairs in the Mechanic Street office, but opened the safe downstairs if someone needed change, and was in charge of closing down the cash register at 2 p.m., getting the tape from the register, ensuring the tally was correct, and removing the cash to a safe. To her knowledge, in February 2016, Hall was not yet assigned to actually undertake an open bail report, and had no work-related reason to be in Promis/Gavel, ATS, or ACS.

Fread also testified to the Judiciary policy concerning Information Technology Security, which is provided annually to all Judiciary employees, who are required to acknowledge that they received and read the policy and agree to abide by it. The policy states in Section 3 that "except for the incidental personal use, users shall not use (the computer, computer networks, E-mail and other electronic communications systems of the Judiciary) for personal use, and have no reasonable expectation of privacy regarding this equipment." (R-1.) Further, employees are required to respect the confidentiality of the resources in the Judiciary's databases. Section 4 states that, "Such information is to be accessed and used solely for legitimate Judiciary business purposes." (Ibid.) The Code of Conduct for Judiciary Employees states in Canon 2A that "A court employee may not disclose to any unauthorized person for any purpose any confidential information acquired in the course of employment, or knowingly acquired through unauthorized disclosure by another." (R-2.) Hall's learning transcript shows that she acknowledged receipt of the Information Security Policy in August of 2013, July 2014, and August 2015. She similarly acknowledged receipt of the Code of Conduct in 2013, 2014, 2015, and on January 27, 2016. She received three hours of in-person training on the code in 2007 and 2010. (R-7.)

Eileen McEneny, Finance Division Manager, testified that she assigned Hall to be her "eyes and ears" at Mechanic Street because the appellant had done well and was eager to grow in her positon. McEneny created a training schedule to ensure that Hall would feel comfortable in her new role as lead worker. In addition to the end-of-day close-out work, Hall was responsible for ensuring the cashier's office had coverage at 8:30 a.m., when it opened, and that funds were transferred properly. She also was responsible for delegating modifications, which are changes to child support agreements, which must be entered correctly in the NJ Kids system. On some occasions, Hall was the highest-ranking person at the location.

Various witnesses referenced the Judiciary's various databases. A certification from John Stewart, Administrative Supervisor 3a, lists the Comprehensive Automated Probation System (CAPS), Promis/Gavel, the Automated Complaint system (ACS) and the Automated Traffic Complaint system (ATS). (R-10.) The certification explains that Promis/Gavel "captures information concerning defendants who have been charged with indictable offenses and tracks the processing of those defendants from initial arrest through appellate review." (R-3.) The ACS tracks "all the pertinent incident and defendant data" from the municipal courts. (R-4.)

Esperanza Rangel, a Judiciary Clerk 3, testified that at 3:15 p.m. on February 11, 2016, she went to the cashier's room to cover another employee's regular break time. Entering through a back door into the room, she noticed that Hall was on the CAPS database on the computer. She testified that this caught her attention, because she knew of no reason Hall would need to be in that database. Rangel was concerned that she might have made an error in posting a payment to CAPS, and asked Hall if something was wrong. Hall replied that there was nothing wrong, that she was looking up the case of someone she knew who had been stopped by the police, and she thought there was an issue with identity theft. Hall got her cell phone out, and while talking to someone on it, sent something to the printer, which she then picked up. After the other employee returned from break, Rangel went back upstairs. At 4:15 p.m. she came down to do the day's second cash out. On leaving, she noticed papers that said "Hamilton," laying on the counter. Hall grabbed the papers, which she put into her purse, and Hall, Rangel, and the other employee all left work together. Rangel decided to tell a supervisor the next day because she said they had all been told many times that they could not access a computer for private business, and had been directed that if they saw something, they were to report it. She acknowledged that she did not have a good relationship with Hall, who she thought picked on her, but she had never filed a report with anyone complaining about mistreatment.

Rangel reported to management through an email to Dalia Hyppolite, a supervisor, on the next day, February 12, 2016. (R-6.) The email indicated that when she entered the cashier room, she noticed that Hall had the CAPS system open at a time when "we had finished proving out." (R-6.) On February 12, Hall's supervisors requested a review of Hall's computer access logs. John Stewart, an administrative supervisor at the Judiciary, stated in a certification that on February 16, 2016, he accessed the logs, which showed activity in all three systems between 12:41:29 and 15:50:50. For example, they showed that on 3:04:44 p.m., Hall logged into ACS/ATS, leaving it again at 3:05:59. She was also logged into Promis/Gavel twice, once around 3 p.m. and again around 3:24 p.m. She was in CAPS from 15:09:51 to 15:15:03. (R-10.)

On February 17, 2016, McEneny and Terry Mapson-Steed, a Human Relations liaison, interviewed Rangel, and on February 18, 2016, Hall. McEneny testified to the content of the interview notes, both of which she had prepared. Rangel told the two questioners that Hall had said she was looking up someone she knew who had been pulled over by police. Hall mentioned that the individual received a DUI ticket and that the individual did not realize the magnitude of the ticket. Additionally, Hall said the individual believed (he or she was) being charged for someone else's charges, someone with the same name. (R-8.)

In the McEneny and Mapson-Steed interview, when Hall was asked whether she remembered having a conversation with Rangel about a DUI, Hall replied, that she "did not remember, possibly." (R-9.) She did not remember making a comment about identity theft. Asked more directly about a "very concerning" incident about a DWI, and whether that rang a bell, Hall replied "possibly." Given details about the alleged conversation with Rangel, Hall "was quiet for a brief period, then responded that she may have had a conversation with (the other employee, Veronica), but the conversation was private." (Ibid.) Asked if she went in to any system to research information, she was silent briefly then replied, "Oh My Goodness." (Ibid.) When the interviewers inquired about folding and placing papers in her personal bag, she stated they were recipes and research and things like that.

The Judiciary also produced a copy of a video of the cashier's room made between 3 p.m. and 4:26 p.m. on February 11, 2016, which did not show Hall on a cell phone in the time frame that Rangel described. (J-1.) However, it did show that Rangel entered the cashier's room at about 3:15 p.m., walked over to Hall, and engaged in conversation with her briefly. It also showed that Hall was on and off the cell phone for much of the next half-hour. (J-1 and R-11.)

Hall testified on her own behalf. She stated that at no point was she improperly accessing Judiciary databases for her own purposes. She said she did have a friend who knew someone that police had first stopped for a tail light, then alleged he was driving on the revoked list, which caused a big problem. However, she did not access the man's records. Her comment of "Oh My Goodness," in the interview was caused by her sudden realization of what exactly she was accused of doing. Her recollection is that she was in CAPS because she had received a call earlier in the day from the mother of a probationer who thought she may have made a double payment. As per normal procedures, Hall had transferred the woman to the probation officer, but she had still pursued the question in the data base in an attempt to be helpful. She did not tell this story during her interview, because during the interview with management, her mind went blank. She did acknowledge that on February 11, 2016, she had been using the Judiciary internet access to look up and print recipes and other information, because her sister was getting married, and she was trying to help with a choice of venues, party favors, and things like that. She said those were the papers Rangel saw.

Asked about the annual request by the Judiciary to review and sign the Code of Conduct, Hall acknowledged receiving them, but said she just signed them. She never read them. She had not been trained on the Code in many years.

Essentially, the evidence comes down to two conflicting stories. The appellant contends that Rangel was a disaffected employee, who found a way to cause trouble for a higher-level employee she did not like. She had additional incentive in that removal of Hall would open a pathway for promotion from her position as Judiciary Clerk 3 bi-lingual. Her testimony is unreliable because Rangel said she saw Hall on CAPS, which is the probation system, which would not have carried traffic ticket or municipal court information, and therefore would not have been useful to the friend she alleged Hall was helping. She also said Hall was talking on the cell phone when she approached her, which the video does not support. The respondent argues that Rangel's story is generally true, and Hall, who is a year short of vesting, is desperately trying to save her career. The determination of factual findings thus requires a weighing of the credibility of the witnesses, i.e., "an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it 'hangs together' with other evidence." Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963). A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience or because it is overborne by other testimony." Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Here, supporting evidence tends to corroborate Rangel's version of events. Her recollection of the timing of her entrance into the cashier's room aligns with the video, which also shows a conversation between the two shortly after her entrance. Although Hall is not on the phone at the moment Rangel pinpointed in testimony, Hall did use the cell phone twice while Rangel was still in the room, once at 3:24 p.m. and again at 3:28 p.m. Moreover, while Rangel was there, Hall twice printed things. (J-1 and R-11.) Further, the Judiciary's log-in tracking system shows Hall in and out of the system Rangel recalled at about the time Rangel recalled it. Hall was in CAPS from 15:09:51 to 15:15:03 (R-10), which is consistent with the 3:11 time of Rangel's arrival in the room. Further, the Judiciary's system shows that at 3:04:44 p.m., Hall logged into ACS/ATS, leaving it again at 3:05:59. She was also logged into Promis/Gavel twice, once around 3 p.m. and again around 3:24 p.m.

Hall's testimony, on the other hand, was improbable. Even if the story of the child support double-payment call is true, Hall had no legitimate business reason to be poking around once she followed the proper procedure and transferred the call to Probation. Similarly, she may have been using the Judiciary's equipment to research wedding-related things for her sister. But she said nothing about the child support double payment in her initial interview with her employer, and little beyond "recipes, research" about what she was printing. She attempted to explain those omissions with the statement that her brain went blank with the shock of the accusation. The "Oh My Goodness," may well have reflected surprise at the accusation, but it was more likely tied to knowledge of its core of truth than to confidence the allegation could not be proven.

Thus, based on Rangel's credible testimony, which in general was supported by other objective evidence, I FIND as FACT that Hall was accessing the various computer systems that day for personal use, which is prohibited by both the Judiciary's Code of Conduct and its Information Technology policy. I further FIND that although Hall elected not to read them, she had been repeatedly provided with copies of the policies, and that she signed that she had read and understood them.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3. In an appeal from such discipline, the appointing authority bears the burden of proving the charges upon which it relied by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

Here, the appellant is charged with conduct unbecoming, neglect of duty, misuse of public property and other sufficient cause, namely violating the Judiciary Code of Conduct. Conduct unbecoming is a term that encompasses actions adversely affecting the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or having a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). In her position, Hall had access to sensitive, private information, which is available only because of the court's role in enforcing financial orders. If citizens begin to believe that the Judiciary's systems are being manipulated for private purposes, that loss of respect threatens a central element of our three-pronged system of government. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has proved the charge of conduct unbecoming.

Neglect of duty is not defined under the New Jersey Administrative Code, but the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee has failed to perform and act as required by the description of his or her job title. Generally, the term "neglect" connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186

(App. Div. 1977). It has been applied both to not fully carrying out duties and to acting incorrectly. See, e.g., In re Marucci, CSV 07241-09, Initial Decision (January 1, 2010), modified, CSC (March 6, 2010), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, aff'd, A-3607-09T1 (App. Div. January 3, 2012), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/> (removal of a police officer with no disciplinary record where he failed to remove drugs from under a sewer grate and then lied about his actions). Here, the neglect of duty charge here is supported by the finding that she was conducting personal business "on company time." While doing so, she was not performing the duties with which she was charged. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the neglect of duty charge has been proved. Similarly, respondent has proved misuse of the Judiciary's equipment. Finally, there is no question that respondent has shown other sufficient cause, as the access violated both the Judiciary's Code of Conduct, and its Information Technology Policy.

Progressive discipline is the general rule for civil service cases. W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Typically, the Civil Service Commission considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Nonetheless, progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question. Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007). Some infractions are serious enough on their own to warrant termination. In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007).

In Herrmann, our Supreme Court affirmed the removal of a worker from the Division of Youth and Family Services (now known as the Child Protection and Permanency Agency) who had waved a lit lighter in front of a child's face, while asking about how the child set a fire. The Court noted DYFS's need to rely on the demonstrated good judgment of its workers to protect the integrity of its system. Similarly, here, even though the evidence showed that Hall had excellent performance evaluations on top of a discipline-free record, the Judiciary's dependence on the good judgment of its employees means that termination is the appropriate penalty.

In the Matter of Marjorie Londregan

CSC Docket No. 2015-2336
OAL Docket No. CSV 4716-15

REMAND TO THE OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

ISSUED: APR 24 2017 (NFA)

The appeal of Marjorie Londregan, a Graduate Nurse with Passaic County, Preakness Healthcare Center, of her removal, effective January 15, 2015, was before Administrative Law Judge Joann LaSala Candido (ALJ), who rendered her initial decision on March 31, 2017, dismissing the appeal. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the ALJ's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission (Commission), at its meeting on April 19, 2017, did not adopt the recommendation to dismiss the appeal. Rather, the Commission remanded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL).

DISCUSSION

The pertinent procedural history of this matter is detailed in the ALJ's initial decision. In this regard, the ALJ, based on myriad issues, adjourned the matter several times until ultimately scheduling a peremptory hearing date of March 31, 2017, where the appellant failed to appear. However, the ALJ also noted that, as confirmed in the appellant's exceptions, that there was a possibility that the matter could be settled. While the Commission does not find the appellant's exceptions otherwise particularly persuasive, and does not condone the appellant's lack of appearance in this matter, it finds that the matter should be remanded to the OAL. Specifically, the policy of the judicial system strongly favors settlement. See Nolan v. Lee Ho, 120 N.J. 465 (1990); Honeywell v. Bubb, 130 N.J. Super. 130 (App. Div. 1974); Jannarone v. W.T. Co., 65 N.J. Super. 472 (App. Div. 1961), cert. denied, 35

N.J. 61 (1961). This policy is equally applicable in the administrative area. Accordingly, since it appears that there is still a possibility that this matter can be amicably resolved, the Commission is inclined to afford the appellant that opportunity.

Accordingly, the Commission remands this matter to the OAL to allow the parties to explore further efforts at settling the matter. In this regard, the OAL should schedule one last peremptory hearing date as soon as possible where the hearing will proceed absent a settlement. The Commission notes that, should the appellant fail to appear on that date, the appellant will not be afforded another opportunity.

ORDER

The Commission orders that this matter be remanded to the OAL for further proceedings as set forth above.

INITIAL DECISION

DISMISSAL

MARJORIE J. LONDREGAN,

Petitioner,

v.

PASSAIC COUNTY PREAKNESS HEALTHCARE CENTER,

Respondent.

Samuel Wenocur, Esq. on behalf of petitioner (Oxfeld Cohen, PC)

Jose Santiago, Esq. on behalf of respondent (Assistant County Counsel)

Record Closed: March 31, 2017 Decided: March 31, 2017

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

Petitioner, Marjorie Londregan, appealed her termination as a graduate nurse by respondent, the Passaic County Preakness Healthcare Center, by Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated January 22, 2015.

Petitioner requested a hearing on the matter, and it was transmitted as a contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and filed on April 7, 2015. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b); N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.8. Hearings were scheduled and adjournments were requested by petitioner as follows:

Petitioner requested an adjournment of the September 24, 2015 hearing date for medical reasons; petitioner requested an adjournment of the February 16, 2016 hearing date and waived back pay; petitioner requested an adjournment of the May 2, 2016 hearing date because she was ill; petitioner requested an adjournment of the September 21, 2016 hearing date because she would be out-of-state; the January 10, 2017 hearing date was adjourned because the parties reached a settlement. Petitioner's counsel anticipated having a written agreement signed within the next few weeks; on February 16, 2017, a telephone conference was conducted requesting status of the settlement. No settlement was reached and on March 2, 2017 another telephone conference was conducted to obtain the status of settlement. No settlement was reached; petitioner requested an adjournment of the March 16, 2017 hearing date because she was out-of-state and her home needed emergency repair. Petitioner's counsel stated that there is still a likelihood of settlement, although petitioner still has not provided him with an original or signed copy of the settlement agreement and is working on signing and returning the document; a peremptory date was scheduled for March 31, 2017 and petitioner failed to appear at the peremptory hearing.

Because petitioner failed to appear for the peremptory hearing date and has had many opportunities to present her case, I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. It is ORDERED that this matter be DISMISSED for failure to appear.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Memorandum of Agreement Between the County of Atlantic Department of Administration and David McAdoo

1. This Agreement is to address the pending departmental appeal filed by David McAdoo and his Union, Teamsters Local #331, and representative Marcus King. That appeal was scheduled for a trial on March 30, 2017 in the OAL under Docket No. CSV 13698-2015S.

2. McAdoo was appealing his termination from the position of "Animal Shelter Employee." The Notice of Termination was based upon alleged misconduct and violation of a previous workplace performance agreement occurring on or about March 22, 2015.

3. Prior to the commencement of the OAL hearing, all parties have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and entered into the following settlement which fully disposes of all issues and controversies between them.

4. The Appellant McAdoo withdraws his appeal and request for a hearing and, along with the Respondent appointing Authority County of Atlantic Department of Human Services, agrees that his removal from the position of Animal Shelter Employee will be recorded as a Resignation in Good Standing, effective April 13, 2015. In full consideration of this resolution and settlement thereof, McAdoo promises and agrees that he will never again apply for or be granted any employment by or with the County of Atlantic, its agencies or subsidiaries.

5. The County of Atlantic (Respondent) shall amend Mr. McAdoo's personnel records available for review to non-licensing non-credentialing, health care authorities or other inquiries, and not connected to reporting obligations under N.J.S.A. 26:2H-12.2c, to conform to the terms of this settlement by reflecting that McAdoo resigned in "Good Standing."

6. McAdoo waives any and all other claims against Respondent Atlantic County, its agents, officers, departments and employees with regard to this matter, including any award of back-pay, counsel fees or other monetary relief, except as may be otherwise provided herein.

7. Nothing in this Agreement is an admission by either party of any violation of the law. Employee knowingly and voluntarily releases and forever discharges for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, the Employer and any employees and agents of the Employer, of and from all demands, complaints, causes of action, claims and charges whatsoever, as a result of the filing of the charges and separation from employment, including, but not limited to, any alleged violation of:

   - any other federal, state or local civil or human rights law or any other alleged violation of any local, state or federal law, executive order, regulation or ordinance;
   - any public policy contract (whether oral or written, expressed or implied), tort or common law;

- any allegation for costs, fees or other expenses including attorney's fees incurred in these matters.

8. This Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey and venue of this matter is Atlantic County, New Jersey.

9. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement between the parties. This Agreement supersedes all prior and contemporaneous agreements, representations, and understandings. No supplement, modification, or amendment of this Agreement shall be binding unless in writing and executed by the parties. No waiver of any of the provisions of this Agreement shall be deemed or shall constitute a waiver of any other provisions, whether or not similar. Nor shall any waiver constitute a continuing waiver. The Parties have negotiated the terms of this Agreement through and by their counsel and/or union representation of their choosing. Accordingly, this Agreement shall be construed without regard to any presumption or other rule requiring construction against the party causing this Agreement to be drafted.

11. Employee waives his rights to the following:

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement") is entered into this 17th day of February, 2017 between the County of Hudson (hereinafter referred to as the "County") and Gilberto Reyes (hereinafter referred to as "Reyes" or the "Employee").

WHEREAS, the Employee is employed with the County as a Corrections Officer; and

WHEREAS, the County instituted a disciplinary action against Reyes in a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated September 25, 2015, ("hereinafter referred to as the Disciplinary Action"), and charging the following violations: conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; insubordination and other sufficient cause; and

WHEREAS, the Employee requested a departmental hearing on the Disciplinary Action which occurred on December 2, 2015 and January 26, 2016; and

WHEREAS, the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee; neglect of duty; insubordination and other sufficient cause were sustained by the Hearing Officer at the conclusion of the departmental hearing; and

WHEREAS, the Hearing Officer set forth a penalty of a forty-five (45) day suspension on Reyes; and

WHEREAS, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated February 23, 2016 was issued to the Employee following the outcome of the departmental hearing; and

WHEREAS, Reyes filed an appeal of the Hearing Officer's determination to the Office of Administrative Law, Docket No. CSV 04380-2016 N; and

WHEREAS, the County and Reyes desire to resolve all outstanding issues with respect to the Disciplinary Action and the appeal filed in the Office of Administrative Law;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration for the promises and conditions set forth herein, the County and Reyes agree as follows:

1. DISCIPLINARY ACTION

   a. Reyes agrees that he is guilty of the charge of failure to provide requested information during the course of an investigation in violation of the Rules and Regulations of the Hudson County Department of Corrections. The remaining charges contained in the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action dated September 25, 2015, are withdrawn.

   b. The County agrees to reduce the disciplinary penalty from a forty-five (45) day suspension to a twenty (20) day suspension. Reyes agrees to accept a disciplinary penalty of a twenty (20) day suspension, without pay which shall be recorded as such with the New Jersey Civil Service Commission.

   c. As Reyes has already served a forty-five (45) day suspension, Reyes will receive twenty-five (25) days of back pay, which shall be subject to all applicable withholdings.

   d. Except as set forth above in Paragraph 1.c., Reyes agrees to waive any and all claims to back pay, benefits, and any and all other monetary claims including, but not limited to, attorney's fees with respect to the Disciplinary Action.

2. COMPLETE RELEASE

In further consideration of the settlement herein above, the Employee, her heirs, assigns and agents (hereinafter referred to collectively as "Releasor") voluntarily enter into this Agreement, and certify that Releasor has not been threatened or coerced into signing this Agreement, on the terms which follow:

a. Releasor hereby releases, waives and discharges the County, its affiliated departments, and its officers, trustees, agents, employees, successors and assigns (hereinafter collectively referred to as the "Releasees") from each and every claim, demand, cause of action, obligation, damage, complaint, or action or writ of any kind, nature, character or description that Releasor had, now has, or may in the future have against the Releasees on account of or arising out of the Disciplinary Action. This Complete Release includes, but is not limited to, any claim, demand, cause of action, obligation, claim for damages of any kind, complaint, expense, compensation, or action or writ of any kind, nature, character or description arising out of or under Federal, State or municipal statute or ordinance and any other law (whether such be common law, decisional law or statutory law), rule, regulation, executive order or guideline, and any and all claims for attorney's fees and costs arising from the above acts including, but not limited to:

ii. Any federal claim, cause of action demand or complaint arising out of or under the Federal Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 (Title VII) or the Civil Rights Act of 1991, as amended, which, among other things, prohibit discrimination in employment on account of a person's race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

The aforesaid list shall not be deemed exhaustive but by way of example and the recitation of a release of all claims as set forth in 2a. shall not be diminished thereby.

Releasor has consulted with an attorney, with respects to this Agreement and reviewed with his attorney all of the terms and conditions of this Agreement prior to executing this Agreement.

5. REASONABLE PERIOD OF TIME.

Releasor agrees that she has been given a reasonable period of time of at least 21 days within which to review and consider this Agreement prior to executing this Agreement, but that Releasor may waive this 21 day period by signing in the space provided at the end of this Agreement.

6. COMPLETE AGREEMENT.

This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the Employee and the County, and each of them, with respect to the subject matter and supercedes all prior agreements or understandings dealing with the same subject matter. There is no agreement on the part of the County to do anything other than as is expressly stated in this Agreement. This Agreement shall in all respects be interpreted, enforced and governed by the Laws of the State of New Jersey.

7. MODIFICATION.

No modification or amendment of this Agreement will be enforceable unless it is in writing and signed by the party to be charged.

8. SEVERABILITY.

Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court of competent jurisdiction to be illegal, invalid or unenforceable, the legality, validity, and enforceability of the remaining parts, terms, or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal, unenforceable or invalid part, term, or provision shall be deemed not part of this Agreement.

9. EMPLOYEE ATTESTS

Releasor represents and warrants that she has carefully read each and every provision of this Agreement and that she fully understands all of the terms and conditions contained in each provision of this Agreement. Releasor represents and warrants that she enters into this Agreement voluntarily, of her own will, without any pressure or coercion from any person or entity including, but not limited to, the County and/or Releasees.

IVAN RODRIGUEZ, Appellant, v. CITY OF NEWARK, Respondent	:	STATE OF NEW JERSEY OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW OAL DOCKET NO.: CSV 02382-2016 N SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

2017 MAR 29 P 12:46

IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between the City of Newark ("City"), International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 68 ("Union/Local 68"), and Employee Ivan Rodriguez[1] ("Rodriguez"), to resolve the disciplinary matter as it relates to the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action ("FNDA") dated December 11, 2015. Rather than continuing further with the appeal of Rodriguez's termination at the Office of Administrative Law on the charges of inability to perform duties; conduct unbecoming of a public employee; and other sufficient causes, as codified at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2-3, the City, the Union and Rodriguez (collectively referred to hereinafter as the "Parties") have determined to resolve this matter by this Agreement, and agree as follows:

1. The Parties hereby agree that all charges associated with the FNDA issued on December 11, 2015 will be upheld. The City will amend the disciplinary action in the FNDA from removal/termination to suspension based on the charges and Rodriguez will execute a new "Letter of Conditional Employment".
2. The amended FNDA will reflect Rodriguez served a three (3) month suspension, effective December 11, 2015, for the above stated offenses.

[1] On the date which gave rise to the incident noted in the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, Mr. Rodriguez was employed as a Plumber, in the Department of Water and Sewer Utilities, City of Newark, New Jersey.

3. Any additional days exceeding his three (3) month suspension will be accredited as an accepted unpaid leave of absence.
4. Rodriguez acknowledges he will be subject to immediate termination for any violation of the terms of the "Letter of Conditional Employment".
5. Rodriguez's return to work is subject to his performance of all obligations and conditions that are set forth in this Agreement.
6. Rodriguez's return to work is subject to the review and approval of the NJ Department of Community Affairs (DCA).
7. Rodriguez shall waive and will not be entitled to any back pay from the date of his initial removal until the date of his return to work.
8. Rodriguez shall be subject to random drug testing pursuant to the Letter of Conditional Employment, which is attached hereto and is incorporated and made a part of this Agreement.
9. The Parties acknowledge under N.J.A.C. 17:1-2.18(b) and (c), no pension or seniority time may be credited for periods for which the employee is not paid by the employer.
10. Rodriguez further waives any and all rights or claims which he has or may have to a hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under this Agreement and/or to challenge the suspension penalty imposed as a result of same, including, but not limited to, any right to a departmental hearing concerning the charges in the FNDA.
11. Rodriguez and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.
12. Rodriguez and the Union each further agree that there is no consideration due Rodriguez, his counsel and/or Union, including, but not limited to, any claim for back pay and/or counsel fees, arising from his employment and/or the execution of this Agreement, except as otherwise provided herein.

13. Except for the assessment of Rodriguez's disciplinary record in any subsequent personnel disciplinary hearing, nothing in this agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party.

14. Rodriguez and the Union further acknowledge that this Agreement further precludes either of them from bringing any type of legal or contractual action in any forum including, but not limited to, filing a Complaint in New Jersey Superior Court or United States Federal Court, filing any type of complaint with the City, Essex County, the State of New Jersey or the United States of America, and filing a grievance and/or requesting arbitration, that is in any manner grounded, based upon, or related to the FNDA.

15. Rodriguez is bound by this Agreement. Anyone who succeeds to Rodriguez's rights and responsibilities, such as heirs or the executor of his estate, shall also be bound.

16. This Agreement shall not constitute a precedent or practice in any matter involving the City or other City employees.

17. Rodriguez and the Union each agree this Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding of any type against or involving the City, except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement, or as required by law.

18. This Agreement contains the sole and entire agreement between Rodriguez, Local 68 and the City, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. Rodriguez specifically represents and acknowledges in executing this Agreement that he has not relied upon any representation or statement by the City, or City's counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth herein. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by all the Parties, and expressly stated to be a modification of the Agreement.

19. Rodriguez agrees and acknowledges that he has been fully and fairly represented by his Union in this matter, and he is satisfied with that representation and with the terms and conditions of this Agreement.
20. Rodriguez agrees and acknowledges that he has had full opportunity to review this Agreement with his counsel and/or union representation and he enters into same knowingly and voluntarily.
21. The Parties agree that if any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of the Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.
22. This agreement will become effective only if approved by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION. Any disapproval by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.
23. By signing this Settlement Agreement, Rodriguez states that:
    a. He has read it;
    b. He understands it and knows that he is giving up important rights, and any and all other federal and state employment related causes of any kind, including, but not limited to The New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, The New Jersey Equal Pay Law, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, The Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, as amended, The Conscientious Employee Protection Act, The Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and any other constitutional, statutory or common law suit, attorney's fees and costs of this proceeding, and any public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other State;
    c. He agrees with everything in it;
    d. His representative negotiated this Agreement with his knowledge and consent;

e. He has been advised to consult with his attorney prior to executing this Agreement, and has in fact done so;

f. He has been given at least 21 days within which to review and consider this Agreement, although he may choose to sign it sooner, and thereafter, has seven (7) days to revoke that signature;

g. He understands that for a period of 7 days following the execution of this Agreement he may revoke this Agreement and the Agreement shall not become effective or enforceable until the revocation period has expired; and

h. He has signed this Settlement Agreement knowingly and voluntarily.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have caused this Settlement Agreement to be executed.

You did not request a hearing. On December 11, 2015 a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was executed. The matter went before the Office of Administrative Law on October 13, 2016. During a conference, you and the Department of Water and Sewer reached an agreement. You have expressed your willingness to participate in a substance abuse rehabilitation program, and have entered a rehabilitation program administered by the City of Newark's Employee Assistance Program ("EAP"). As a result of these representations, it is the decision of the City's Department of Water and Sewer ("Department") to adjust the Major Disciplinary Action as indicated in the settlement agreement. In addition, you will be subjected to the following conditions as terms for your continued employment with the City of Newark:

1. You must participate in and successfully complete an EAP substance abuse rehabilitation program and present confirmation of completion of same in writing to the Department and to the City's Personnel Department within seven (7) calendar days of completion. You will comply with all conditions set forth by the EAP program for your continued rehabilitation. Further, you will describe the conditions for continued rehabilitation set forth by the EAP program. You must submit written proof of your enrollment in said EAP program to the Department within seven (7) calendar days of your execution of this document.

2. Failure to provide proof of enrollment and successful completion of substance abuse rehabilitation program, as stated above, shall be deemed sufficient reason for terminating the employment of Rodriguez with the City.

3. You must attend any/all aftercare sessions and/or outpatient treatment sessions of continued rehabilitation pursuant to the EAP program. If you fail to attend any of the continued rehabilitation sessions or treatments, you must substantiate your reason for not attending. On each occasion you are unable to attend said appointment(s) for continued rehabilitation, you will make arrangements within twenty-four (24) hours of missing said appointment(s) to reschedule said appointment(s) and you shall provide to the Department written confirmation of the new appointment(s).

INITIALS

For all aftercare sessions and/or outpatient treatment sessions of continued rehabilitation, you must submit written proof of your attendance at each to the Department within seven (7) calendar days of the completion of your last continued rehabilitation aftercare and/or treatment appointment.

4. You will refrain from the use of illegal drugs, any mood altering substance and the abuse of alcohol for the duration of your career with the City. Further, you will refrain from the abuse of any prescription pharmaceuticals for the duration of your career with the City.

5. In the event you take internally, at the direction of a physician, any medicine or drugs, you will advise the Department of Child and Family Well-Being Medical Director's Office that you are taking such medication prior to its use or immediately thereafter. As described in paragraph three (3) hereinabove, you will refrain from the abuse of any medicine or drugs prescribed to you by a physician.

6. When absent for reasons stated or identified as personal illness, you will continue to advise your supervisor personally, via telephone, of the circumstances surrounding your absence and submit the appropriate documentation of same, when required.

7. You will continue to perform your job to satisfactory levels expected of all City employees. Any irregular work behaviors or failure to notify your supervisor of an absence (no call/no show) will result in termination.

8. From this point forward, you will submit to unannounced mandatory drug testing when ordered to do so. Failure to submit to testing or testing that results in a positive reading will result in termination.

9. The terms of this Letter of Conditional Employment shall supersede any prior Letter of Conditional Employment.

The conditions outlined above are designed to assist you in your rehabilitation effort. If there is any evidence that you have returned to the cause of your problem or you violate the conditions stated above, you will be subject to immediate discharge.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 13685-12
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2013-739

IN THE MATTER OF PAUL SERDIUK, MILITARY AND VETERANS' AFFAIRS.

David B. Beckett, Esq., for appellant (Law Offices of David Beckett, attorneys)

John F. Regina, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: September 1, 2016 Decided: March 2, 2017

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent, the State of New Jersey, Department of Military and Veterans' Affairs (MVA. Agency) removed Personnel Assistant 2 (PA2), Paul Serdiuk (appellant, Serdiuk) for Insubordination, Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, and Other Sufficient Cause, specifically, violation of Departmental Directive 230.05 - Insubordination. Respondent alleges appellant failed to carry out a reasonable order to destroy all copies of outdated workbooks entitled "Prevention and Response Strategies to Workplace Violence" from the basement storage area in a timely manner.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 3, 2012, for a hearing as a contested case. A hearing was held on March 10, 2016. The record was held open to allow for the submission of written summations. The record closed on April 26, 2016. The record was reopened on June 29, 2016 to allow the parties to address what appeared to be a discrepancy in the record of the case and an alleged fact as described in one party's closing submission. The record closed again on September 1, 2016. Orders were entered in this matter to allow for the extension of time in which to file the initial decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Loreta P. Sepulveda (Sepulveda) testified on behalf of the Agency. She is employed by the Department of Health as Director of Human Resource Services (DHS). She has held this position for three years, and was a Director of Human Resources until April 2013 at the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs. In that role, she supervised mandated-State training, and any other training offered. Sepulveda supervised the training unit, mentored the appellant and nurses in nursing homes, as well as supervised other employees. The appellant was a Personnel Assistant under her supervision in the training unit. Serdiuk's job is to make sure that employees are given mandated-training, and to provide on-site training.

Sepulveda reviewed a memo dated January 12, 2012 (R-3), which she stated she wrote to the appellant, and referenced a December 8, 2011 memo (R-5) from the appellant, regarding the supplying of training. She also referenced another memo, authored by appellant (R-5, page 3). In the memo, the appellant was expressing concern about the online learning management system (LMS), stating his preference for in-person, instructor-led training. He was the instructor who provided such training. LMS involves web-based webinars, which reduces the need for instructors. Sepulveda complied with a directive from the Civil Service Commission (CSC) in implementing LMS. The appellant had no discretion in implementing LMS, but repeatedly made clear that he did not believe that the LMS was best-practice. Sepulveda's reply to his communication was her January 12, 2012 memo, which directed him to proceed with assigning the training.

Appellant was instructed that he would be the administrator and that he would no longer go out and provide instruction-led training on-site. Sepulveda was troubled that the appellant continued to show reluctance to follow the State-adopted procedures. She repeated her instructions to assign the prevention of workplace-violence training to central office staff by January 20, 2012. Sepulveda had previously assigned this task, and the appellant had not completed it. She told him to assign it to three veterans' homes, and that it should be assigned by February 3, 2012. Sepulveda told the appellant that he no longer needed to provide in-person training, and should destroy all workbooks and recycle them by January 20, 2012. She further ordered him to enhance online-training and Microsoft PowerPoint training, as well as to create a PowerPoint training module by February 27, 2012. She noted that this was her third request to assign the training, and indicated that she would treat any further delay as insubordination. She asked to be informed promptly of any barriers to completion of the task.

Sepulveda did not remember if the appellant assigned training to central office or nursing home staff. She did not recall if he ever created the PowerPoint module. The destruction of the workbooks was not completed, and Sepulveda noted that she ordered their destruction because she was concerned that they would continue to be used. She went to the supply closet after the deadline she had given, and saw that the workbooks were still present. Sepulveda reviewed six photographs of the supply closet that she took with her camera that were date- and time-stamped, five pictures were on February 3, 2012, and one on March 1, 2012. When the task was not completed, she pursued discipline, although she noted that previous charges were pending against the appellant at that time. The appellant never reported any barrier that he could not perform due to any injury.

On cross-examination, Sepulveda acknowledged that she did not know the number of boxes that contained workbooks. She believed it was eight to ten. She noted appellant's memo dated October 26, 2011, (R-5, page 3), which was a weekly report identifying what the appellant was working on. Item number four of appellant's weekly report indicated: "spoke to Director of Training, the Department of Human Services, willing to discuss with you the need for instruction with training." Sepulveda did not recall if she called the DHS Director. She did not recall anyone telling her that DHS had any concern, and she was not aware of the issue of care workers for whom English is a second language.

Sepulveda is aware of appellant's concern that not everyone is proficient with computers. She did review an email from the Director of IT, who identified limited computer access at certain facilities. She stated that the current charges were only brought for the failure to complete the workbooks assignment. Sepulveda knows that the shredding bin does get full, but the workbooks were to be recycled not shredded. She also knows that the appellant was the department's representative to the Governor's Task Force for Recidivism. Sepulveda signed and reviewed the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (R-2). She acknowledged that the appellant never expressed any objection to destroying the books, and that no document indicates any earlier request by her to complete this task.

Sepulveda was aware that the appellant objected to the implementation of LMS, but was not aware that the appellant filed a discrimination charge against her.

The next witness was Susan Sautner (Sautner), who works for the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs, which handles union matters and is the final arbiter of discipline. Sautner is Administrator of Employee Relations, a position she assumed in August 2015. She was not employed by the Department at the time of the events of this matter. She stated the policy on discipline has not changed from 2012 through the present, and discussed progressive discipline as a theory of discipline. She reviewed the Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) (R-1), which were the charges in the matter, noting that at the time the FNDA (R-1) was filed, there were previous charges against appellant. Serdiuk did have a pending charge for conduct unbecoming, and insubordination, at the time of the FNDA (R-1) being filed. Those charges were sustained, and a 180-day suspension was imposed. Reviewing the "New Jersey Department of Military and Veterans Affairs Corrective and Disciplinary Action Policies and Responsibilities" (R-7), Sautner noted that number nine on page two stated that a first offense ranges from counseling to removal, and a second offense ranges from a five-day suspension to a removal, noting that the next step available after a 180-day suspension is removal. The second charge of conduct unbecoming is undisputed. Sautner noted that the guidelines do not state that if the first offense receives sixty-days, that the second offense has to be more, but that is her understanding of progressive discipline.

The appellant then called Michael Bobinis (Bobinis), who also worked at the Department of Military and Veterans Affairs from June 2001 to March 2015, and is currently employed elsewhere. At the time, Bobinis was the Chief Technology Officer. He noted that the Division has 100 employees, ten of whom sit at desks, and that there are more personnel than there are computers. Bobinis supplied computers and accounts for personnel, so he believes he would know of these details. He stated that shredders were used for destruction of documents and hard drives, and that the documents that came to him were shredded, not recycled. Bobinis stated that the appellant did come to him with a large number of documents that were ultimately disposed of, but he did not remember the exact date. He stated a contractor would come once a month to perform shredding, and stated that he was never asked about disposing of the workbooks by Sepulveda. The contractor would come every thirty days, on a specific day of the month, every month. On cross-examination, Bobinis stated that he did provide and administer training to his own personnel. He stated that the appellant came to him, and said that he had a lot of boxes that were in the way, and his supervisor told him to get rid of. Bobinis told him to put what he could into the shredding bins, and store some of the overflow in one of his areas until the bins were empty again.

Appellant Paul Serdiuk testified on his own behalf. He has been employed by the Department of Military Veterans Affairs for twenty-one years, and is also a member of the Governor's Task Force on Reduction of Recidivism, which started just after the holidays of the year in question. Serdiuk updated his supervisor on this activity which required attendance two days a week, or eight days a month, in Trenton, New Jersey, representing the Department. He toured many of the prisons in the State in January and February of that year, of which his supervisor was aware. He acknowledged that he wrote the October 26, 2011 Weekly Report to Sepulveda (R-5, page 3). Serdiuk stated that he had spoken with the individual from DHS because he knew that they had similar levels of computer access. He said that DHS would not implement LMS, and he told his supervisor because he thought it was not mandatory, but recommended. To the best of his knowledge, Sepulveda did not follow-up with DHS. He acknowledged that he also sent a copy to his supervisor's supervisor, and to an attorney representing him in another matter, because he always keeps him informed. Serdiuk understands what orders are as he was in the military. He understands that Sepulveda's January 12, 2012 memo (R-3) directed him to get the program up and running.

Appellant never had a prior conversation about workbooks, and had no objection to their destruction. He spoke to Bobinis because he knew he was in charge of the shredding. Serdiuk believes that he approached Bobinis one- to two-days after receiving the January 12, 2012 memo (R-3), although he did not do so in writing. When removed from work, Serdiuk lost the opportunity to check his email, so he could not say if he had sent one. He did not recall exactly how many boxes had workbooks, but believed the number was more than ten. Serdiuk took one to two boxes down to the shredding bins, and then got busy with the task force. Bobinis was to inform him when the truck would be there.

Serdiuk stated that he never used the materials after he was told to destroy them. Sepulveda did not come to talk to him about those documents after February 3, 2012. Appellant never approached her about barriers, and she never informed him that he failed to implement the training. The appellant stated that boxes were in the Human Resources supply room, and then were moved to Bobinis's area. He did not understand the threat of insubordination charges to include destruction of the workbooks, and thought it only meant assigning the training and completing the PowerPoint. In reviewing Sepulveda's January 12, 2012 memo (R-3), he agreed as to the goals and duties and signed the document. He made notes on the last page because he did not believe that he was to personally shred the documents. Serdiuk had a difficult relationship with the supervisor.

In the present matter, the testimony of appellant's witness Bobinis was directly in conflict and inconsistent with, that of appellant in that Bobinis testified that he had told appellant where to leave the boxes of workbooks, and how to arrange for their shredding while appellant testified that he was waiting to hear back from Bobinis. Accordingly, the credibility of this conflicting testimony must be ascertained.

Credibility is best described as that quality of testimony or evidence which makes it worthy of belief. The Supreme Court of New Jersey considered the issue of credibility in In Re Estate of Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950). The Court pronounced:

> Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances.
> [Ibid. at 522]

See also, Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, (1954), State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6 (App. Div.1955).

In order to assess credibility, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Furthermore, a trier-of-fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura- Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

Bobinis did not appear to have a particular axe to grind with anyone involved, nor did he seem to have any palpable interest in the outcome of these proceedings. Appellant's testimony, on the other hand, serves to place any responsibility for delay on Bobinis having not gotten back to him. Given the relative disparity in the respective interest in the outcome of these proceedings, I give greater weight to Bobinis's testimony, and deem the credibility of appellant's testimony to be undermined.

Given the foregoing, and having also considered the documentary and testimonial evidence in the record, I FIND that on January 12, 2012, Sepulveda directed appellant to destroy all copies of the "Prevention and Response Strategies to Workplace Violence," by January 20, 2012. I further FIND that as of March 1, 2012, that task had not been completed.

I do not FIND that the failure to complete this task was a result of appellant waiting to hear from Bobinis concerning when the shredding contractor was expected to be on-site.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

In an appeal from a disciplinary action or ruling by an appointing authority, the appointing authority bears the burden of proof to show that the action taken was appropriate. N.J.S.A. 11A:-2.21; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The authority must show by a preponderance of the competent, relevant, and credible evidence that the employee is guilty as charged. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). When dealing with the question of penalty in a de novo review of a disciplinary action against an employee, it is necessary to reevaluate the proofs and "penalty" on appeal, based on the charges. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19; Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962).

In the present matter, respondent has charged appellant with Insubordination, Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, and Other Sufficient Cause, specifically, violation of Departmental Directive 230.05 - Insubordination.

With regard to the charge of a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)2 - insubordination. Black's Law Dictionary 802 (7th Ed. 1999) defines insubordination as a "willful disregard of an employer's instructions" or an "act of disobedience to proper authority." Webster's II New College Dictionary (1995) defines insubordination as "not submissive to authority: disobedient." Such dictionary definitions have been utilized by courts to define the term where it is not specifically defined in contract or regulation.

> 'Insubordination' is not defined in the agreement. Consequently, assuming for purposes of argument that its presence is implicit, we are obliged to accept its ordinary definition since it is not a technical term or word of art and there are no circumstances indicating that a different meaning was intended.
> [Ricci v. Corporate Express of the East, Inc., 344 N.J. Super. 39, 45 (App. Div. 2001) (citation omitted).]

Importantly, this definition incorporates acts of non-compliance and non-cooperation, as well as affirmative acts of disobedience. Thus, insubordination can occur even where no specific order or direction has been given to the allegedly insubordinate person. Insubordination is always a serious matter, especially in a paramilitary context. "Refusal to obey orders and disrespect cannot be tolerated. Such conduct adversely affects the morale and efficiency of the department." Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 59 N.J. 269 (1971).

In the present matter, the record reflects that appellant was given a directive by his supervisor on January 12, 2012. Specifically, he was directed to destroy the workbooks previously described. He was given a deadline of January 20, 2012. By March 1, 2012, the task had not been completed and the record is devoid of attempts by appellant to update or inform his supervisor why the task had not been completed. Appellant's argument that the directive was not coupled with a threat of discipline is unpersuasive. The directive was given, and it was not complied with. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has proven, by a preponderance of credible evidence, that petitioner has violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)2. The charge of Incompetency is SUSTAINED.

Appellant was charged with "[c]onduct unbecoming a public employee." N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also, In re Emmons, 63 NJ. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 [quoting In re Zeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)]. Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) [quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429

(1955)]. Suspension or removal may be justified where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off-duty. Emmons, supra, 63 N.J. Super. at 140.

In the present matter, appellant failed to carry-out an order to destroy copies of workbooks. While such behavior is not to be encouraged, as evinced by the sustaining of the charge of insubordination, it can hardly be said to "offend publicly accepted standards of decency" or to otherwise undermine public confidence in the carrying-out of the public's business. I CONCLUDE that the record does not support the sustaining of a charge of Conduct Unbecoming, and that charge is hereby DISMISSED.

Appellant has also been charged with a violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) (Other Sufficient Cause). Specifically, appellant is charged with a violation of Departmental Directive 230.05 - Insubordination, which includes "Intentional disobedience or refusal to accept reasonable order" (R-7). To the extent that this charge overlaps with the analysis for the regulatory violation of insubordination addressed and sustained above, such charge is also SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

The Civil Service Commission's review of penalty is de novo. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.9(d) specifically grant the Commission authority to increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority.

General principles of progressive discipline apply. Town of W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962). Typically, the Board considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463.

"Although we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962), that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990).

Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).

Some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007), citing Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197–98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense); see also, In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 33 (2007) (DYFS worker who snapped lighter in front of five-year-old):

> . . . judicial decisions have recognized that progressive discipline is not a necessary consideration when reviewing an agency head's choice of penalty when the misconduct is severe, when it is unbecoming to the employee's position or renders the employee unsuitable for continuation in the position, or when application of the principle would be contrary to the public interest.
> Thus, progressive discipline has been bypassed when an employee engages in severe misconduct, especially when the employee's position involves public safety and the misconduct causes risk of harm to persons or property. See, e.g., Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571, 580 (1980).

The Commission has authority to increase the penalty beyond that established by the appointing authority's Final Notice of Disciplinary Action, but not to removal from suspension. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19. The Civil Service Commission may increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority, but removal shall not be substituted for a lesser penalty. See, Sabia v. City of Elizabeth, 132 N.J. Super. 6, 15-16 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, Elizabeth v. Sabia, 67 N.J. 97 (1975).

In the present matter, the record reflects that appellant has a previous charge of insubordination sustained which resulted in a 180-day suspension. The presence of the present, additional subsequent charge leaves little room for any other conclusion but the imposition of the penalty of removal and such penalty is SUSTAINED.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charge of Insubordination and Other Sufficient Cause be SUSTAINED. I further ORDER that the charge of Conduct Unbecoming be DISMISSED. I finally ORDER that respondent's removal of employee also be SUSTAINED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

6. Estes further waives any and all right or claim which she has or may have to a hearing on the merits of the disciplinary action taken under this Agreement and/or to challenge the suspension penalty imposed as a result of same, including, but not limited to, any right to a departmental hearing concerning the charges in the FNDA.
7. Estes and the Union each agree not to appeal the terms and conditions of this Agreement to any agency or court, including, but not limited to the New Jersey Civil Service Commission and/or to any other New Jersey State Court or agency and/or to any United States Court or agency.

INITIAL DECISION SETTLEMENT
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 17083-16
AGENCY REF. NO. 2017-1279

IN THE MATTER OF BARASA KUKUBO, CITY OF UNION CITY, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC SAFETY.

Barasa Kukubo, appellant pro se

Michael Garcia, Esq., appearing for respondent City of Union City (O'Toole Fernandez, Weiner, Van Lieu, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 30, 2017 Decided: April 4, 2017

BEFORE GAIL M. COOKSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

By Final Notice of Disciplinary Action dated September 14, 2016, and made effective July 26, 2016, City of Union City, Department of Public Safety removed appellant Barasa Kukubo (appellant) from his civil service position as an Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) for insubordination and other sufficient cause, namely that he failed to comply with orders and requirements to maintain current certification as an EMT in New Jersey. Appellant filed a request for a hearing appealing his removal, which appeal was filed with the Office of Administrative Law by the Civil Service Commission for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13 on November 10, 2016.

The matter was assigned to me on November 14, 2016. On November 30, 2016, I convened a telephonic case management conference. Among other issues discussed, a hearing date for February 21, 2017, was scheduled. In light of appellant's pro se status, I also deferred ruling on a Motion for Summary Decision, explaining that a de novo hearing was required and that the evidentiary hearing date would stand.

At the scheduled plenary hearing, the parties set forth the outline of a settlement on the record and the hearing was adjourned. The parties were given the opportunity to reduce the settlement to writing. Under cover of March 30, 2017, the parties submitted to the undersigned a fully executed Settlement Agreement. On the basis of the written agreement submitted, I FIND that all parties in this matter are satisfied with the terms and conditions of that agreement. I have reviewed the record and terms of the Settlement Agreement, made a part hereof, and FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the signatures of the parties and/or their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the applicable law.

I CONCLUDE that the agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and therefore, it is ORDERED that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be and are hereby concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

CSC DKT. NO. 2016-678
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 16936-15

DECISION OF THE
CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

ISSUED: MAY 04 2017 BW

The appeal of Joanne Marino, Assistant Family Service Worker 2, Department of Children and Families, removal effective June 30, 2015, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Irene Jones, who rendered her initial decision on March 22, 2017. Exceptions were filed on behalf of the appointing authority and a reply to exceptions was filed on behalf of the appellant.

Having considered the record and the Administrative Law Judge's initial decision, and having made an independent evaluation of the record, the Civil Service Commission, at its meeting on May 3, 2017, accepted and adopted the Findings of Fact and Conclusion as contained in the attached Administrative Law Judge's initial decision.

Since the removal has been modified, the appellant is entitled to back pay, benefits and seniority following her suspension until the date of her reinstatement. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12(a) provides for the award of counsel fees only where an employee has prevailed on all or substantially all of the primary issues in an appeal of a major disciplinary action. The primary issue in the disciplinary appeal is the merits of the charges. See Johnny Walcott v. City of Plainfield, 282 N.J. Super. 121,128 (App. Div. 1995): In the Matter of Robert Dean (MSB, decided January 12, 1993); In the Matter of Ralph Cozzino (MSB, decided September 21, 1989). In the case at hand, although the penalty was modified by the Commission, the charges were sustained. Consequently, as appellant has failed to meet the standard set forth at N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12, counsel fees must be denied.

This decision resolves the merits of the dispute between the parties concerning the disciplinary charges and the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. However, in light of the Appellate Division's decision, Dolores Phillips v. Department of Corrections, unpublished, Docket No. A-5581-01T2F (App. Div. Feb. 26, 2003), the Commission's decision will not become final until any outstanding issues concerning back pay are finally resolved.

ORDER

The Civil Service Commission finds that the action of the appointing authority in removing the appellant was not justified. The Commission therefore modifies the removal to a six-month suspension. The amount of back pay awarded is to be reduced and mitigated as provided for in N.J.A.C. 4A2-2.10. An affidavit of mitigation shall be submitted by or on behalf of the appellant to the appointing authority within 30 days of issuance of this decision.

Counsel fees are denied pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.12.

The parties must inform the Commission, in writing, if there is any dispute as to back pay within 60 days of issuance of this decision. In the absence of such notice, the Commission will assume that all outstanding issues have been amicably resolved by the parties and this decision shall become a final administrative determination pursuant to R. 2:2-3(a)(2). After such time, any further review of this matter shall be pursued in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division. However, under no circumstances should the appellant's reinstatement be delayed based on any dispute regarding back pay.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 16936-15
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-678

IN THE MATTER OF JOANNE MARINO,
DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES.

Nancy Mahony, Esq., for appellant Joanne Marino (Law Office of Nancy Mahony, LLC, attorneys)

Elizabeth A. Davies, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent Department of Children and Families (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 7, 2017 Decided: March 22, 2017

BEFORE IRENE JONES, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant Joanne Marino ("appellant" or "Marino") was employed by the Department of Children and Families ("respondent" or DCF) for more than twenty-four years. On June 29, 2015, she was issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) that charged her with incompetency, inefficiency, failure to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, violation of Department policy(ies) or procedural violation of Court Order, and other sufficient cause. The PNDA suspended her with pay but advised that her removal was a possible penalty. On July 20, 2015, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) was issued wherein appellant was removed from her position, effective June 30, 2015. The appellant timely filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission.

On October 16, 2015, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case. On September 26, 2016, the appellant moved for summary decision. Respondent filed an answer in opposition on September 28, 2016. The respondent's answer was treated by the undersigned as a cross-motion.

On February 3, 2017, respondent's cross-motion for summary decision was GRANTED on the issues of neglect, failure to perform duties, incompetency, and conduct unbecoming a DCF employee. However, summary decision was DENIED on the penalty of removal. On January 24, 2017, a hearing was held on the penalty issue only. At the hearing, the parties presented witnesses and evidence in support of their respective positions. The parties submitted post-hearing closing statements on February 7, 2017, at which time the record closed.

UNDISPUTED FACTS

Based on the record, I FIND the following facts to be undisputed, thus they are adopted as the FACTS herein:[1]

1. Appellant was employed by the DCF for more than twenty-four years. At the time of her termination, she held the title of assistant family service worker 2, a position she held since 2007.

2. On December 1, 2014, appellant was assigned to a supervised visitation with "Jamie,"[2] his sister, and their parents. The visitation occurred at a McDonald's in Bayonne, New Jersey, from 1:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m.

[1] For a full discussion of the facts, see Order Granting Partial Summary Decision that is attached hereto.

[2] Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 9:6-8.10a, the name of the child is fictitious.

3. In addition to appellant, two other caseworkers were present for part of the visit. A home health aide was also present. At some point, Jamie, who was playing with his sister in the McDonald's play area, fell and hurt his leg. Jamie began to cry and his parents brought him to the appellant, stating that he was hurt.

4. The home health aide and Jamie's parents suggested to the appellant that Jamie be taken to the doctor.

5. The appellant did not see that Jamie was seriously injured and elected not to take him to the doctor or a hospital for examination.

6. The appellant did immediately end the visitation and called Jamie's resource parent to inform him that they were returning to the house.

7. Jamie was carried to the car.

8. The appellant called Jamie's caseworker, the DCF switchboard operator, and her immediate supervisor, Rhonda Johnson. She was only able to speak to the switchboard operator.

9. Jamie's parents called his caseworker and informed her that Jamie had hurt his leg.

10. The appellant did not examine Jamie's leg and/or touch him.

11. It was later revealed that Jamie had broken his leg.

FACTS

The DCF, the appointing authority herein, contends that the penalty of removal is appropriate and just.

In support of its case, the DCF presented the testimony of assistant area director Kristen Pinho ("Pinho"). Pinho testified that the role of an assistant family service worker (AFSW) includes supervising parent-child interactions during visits. If an incident occurs or if there is a problem during a visit, an AFSW is expected to seek supervisory assistance. Supervisory assistance is always available. In cases of immediate need, an AFSW is to act immediately, contact 9-1-1, and contact a supervisor. Appellant was an AFSW 2, and as a senior AFSW she should have had a more advanced skill set. Pinho concludes that the appellant's termination was just because she ignored the pleas of the child's parents to get immediate medical attention. Further, she failed to call 9-1-1. Appellant violated her duties, the duties of an AFSW 2 as set forth in R-1. She failed to assess the situation, conduct an interview, and gather the appropriate information to make a reasoned decision. (R-1.)

Pinho acknowledges that she and the appellant worked together for eighteen years, and she was appellant's supervisor for part of that time. She concedes that prior to this incident the appellant was good at her job. She does not dispute that she applauded the appellant's performance on an unrelated matter that was an extremely difficult case. (R-2.) However, she does not now believe that the appellant can function as an AFSW 2, in spite of her long-term experience with the DCF. Notwithstanding her view that the appellant should be terminated, she considers that the appellant's behavior in this incident was out of character because she is an extraordinarily compassionate person.

Pinho admits that appellant's Performance Assessment Review (PAR) (P-3) reflects a satisfactory rating for September 2014 through August 2015. The incident herein occurred during that PAR rating period. She did discuss the PAR rating with the appellant's direct supervisor, Rhonda Johnson. However, Johnson did not include this incident in the PAR and did not issue a revised evaluation after she spoke to her.

Pinho further acknowledged that the Office of the Public Defender, Law Guardian Section, conducted an investigation into this matter. It did not find substantiated abuse, but did find neglect for the risk of substantial injury. The Hudson County Prosecutor's Office also conducted an investigation because of the injury and how it was inflicted. The investigation was concluded without any indictment.

Martha Thomas ("Thomas") and Olivia Ahumada ("Ahumada"), the appellant's coworkers, testified on her behalf. Thomas has known the appellant for twenty years. She was her last supervisor. She considers the appellant to be an outstanding AFSW 2, who went above and beyond her duties for her clients. Appellant was very generous, compassionate, and empathetic with her clients. Despite a heavy caseload, she did extra work, such as painting a client's family room. (P-5.)

Ahumada has worked for the DCF since 2002. She is a caseworker supervisor. She knows the appellant and is testifying on her behalf because she values and respects her. Appellant is hard working, organized, dependable, helpful, energetic, and loving. However, Ahumada acknowledged not having any personal knowledge about this incident.

Georgina Anzivino also testified for appellant. Her testimony essentially mirrored that of Thomas and Ahumada. She noted that the appellant has an extraordinary work ethic, but Anzivino conceded that she has no personal knowledge of this incident.

Rhonda Johnson, DCF supervising family service specialist 1, has worked for the DCF since 1999. She supervises three supervisors and their units. She supervised the appellant for two years. After being told about this incident, she spoke to the appellant. Exhibit P-3 is the PAR that she prepared. It included the December 2014 incident timeframe. Johnson stands by her positive PAR evaluation. The appellant was a great AFSW 2. She always did her assignments, and she was one of the best. Appellant did what was asked of her. The kids loved her and she loved them. She worked well with coworkers. Johnson was not consulted about appellant's termination. Under cross-examination, Johnson admitted that appellant did not call her about this incident on the date that it occurred. She did recall speaking to her one or two days after the incident. She admitted that this was unusual, since the appellant would usually call her, even at her home.

Joanne Marino, the appellant herein, testified that she is a high-school graduate. She started with the DCF on November 4, 1989, when she was twenty-nine years old. She was hired as a principal home service worker. She transported students, helped students, and would buy their groceries. A few years ago her title changed to AFSW 2. She loves her job and always wanted to be a case aide.

On December 1, 2014, after learning of Jamie's injury, she immediately ended the visit with the parents. Thereafter, she called the office and spoke to the switchboard operator. She also called Jamie's caseworker and spoke to her. Exhibit P-10 is a copy of her cell-phone records, and it shows that on December 1, 2014, she called the office at 2:32 p.m. Further, she called Mariann Mattia at 201-320-xxxx at least six or seven times. She also called the foster-parent worker in the Bayonne office three times. She never spoke to Rhonda Johnson on that day. However, Johnson's cell number is 201-452-xxxx, and appellant's phone records reveal that she called Johnson two to three times on that day. Prior to the incident, she had one CPR training session and one car-seat training session. She had no medical training.

P-13 is appellant's disciplinary history. She concedes that she has one prior infraction for using a State car improperly. In that incident, she drove a State car to a State training session and was fined $18.00 for the gas expense.

Under cross-examination, she admitted that on December 1, 2014, she called Johnson on her cell phone at 7:00 p.m. in the evening for one minute and at 7:21 p.m. for one minute. She further admitted that she told the prosecutor's office that she should have called her supervisor and should have gotten an ambulance after learning of Jamie's injury.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

The only issue is whether the penalty of removal is the appropriate penalty. It is well beyond dispute that New Jersey is a progressive-discipline jurisdiction. Town of West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). Under the doctrine of progressive discipline, a trier of fact must consider an employee's entire disciplinary history and not just the incident that lies before it. In re Wilkinson, No. A-2355-11T1 (App. Div. February 24, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>, affirms that even in the most egregious cases, the doctrine of progressive discipline still attaches. Indeed, the Wilkinson court cited to In re Stallworth, 208 N.J. 182 (2011), wherein our Supreme Court discusses what should be considered when conducting a progressive-discipline analysis:

> To assure proper "progressive discipline," and a resulting penalty based on the totality of the work history, an employee's past record with emphasis on the "reasonably recent past" should be considered. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. at 524. This includes consideration of the totality of the employee's work performance, including all prior infractions. See Carter, supra, 191 N.J. at 484. . . . [P]rogressive discipline is a flexible concept, and its application depends on the totality and remoteness of the individual instances of misconduct that comprise the disciplinary record. The number and remoteness of timing of the offenses and their comparative seriousness, together with an analysis of the present conduct, must inform the evaluation of the appropriate penalty. Even where . . . the present conduct alone would not warrant termination, a history of discipline in the reasonably recent past may justify a greater penalty; the number, timing or seriousness of the previous offenses may make termination the appropriate penalty.
> [Wilkinson, supra, No. A-2355-11T1 (App. Div. February 24, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>, (quoting In re Stallworth, supra, 208 N.J. at 199).]

In imposing the penalty of removal, the court noted that the appellant therein had a record of disciplinary actions.

> [Wilkinson]'s actions are sufficiently egregious and warrant his removal even without consideration of his prior employment record. Nevertheless, in this case [his] employment record also reveals two major disciplinary actions (a 30-day suspension in 2002 for engaging in a verbal and physical altercation with a co-worker and a 53-day suspension in 2004 for . . . leaving his assigned work area without permission, falsification and negligence) and several minor disciplines [sic] since his employment commenced in 1999. Finally, as noted above, even if the > Commission found that [Wilkinson]'s conduct did not rise to the level of patient abuse and was, rather, inappropriate physical contact, his actions, coupled with this disciplinary history, justify his removal.

> [Ibid. (quoting In re Wilkinson, OAL Dkt. No. CSV 8568-09, Final Decision (December 9, 2011)) (citation omitted).]

Likewise, the court most recently affirmed this analysis in In re Knowlden, No. A-4963-11T2 (App. Div. April 30, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collection/courts/>, where the appellant, a human services technician, was charged with physical abuse of a patient, inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, falsification, conduct unbecoming a public employee, and violation of Department of Human Services (DHS) policy and procedures with regard to reporting an incident where the appellant was found to have punched a patient after being attacked. The administrative law judge found the appellant guilty of the charges and removed him from his position, finding the conduct so egregious as to warrant removal in spite of mitigating circumstances and a de minimis disciplinary history. On review, the Civil Service Commission modified the finding and the penalty. The Commissioner found that the punch was a reflexive act in response to the attack by the patient and that there was no intent to harm him. The Commission found the appellant guilty of inappropriate physical contact of a patient, constituting conduct unbecoming a public employee, and reduced the penalty to a six-month suspension.[3]

On appeal, the appellate court affirmed the Commission and held that their review would consist of a three-prong analysis. The first prong, the agency-review test, is whether there was an express or implied violation of legislative policies—whether the decision "was not premised upon a consideration of all relevant factors [or conversely] a consideration of irrelevant or inappropriate factors." Knowlden, supra, No. A-4963-11T2, <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collection/courts/> (quoting In re Warren, 117 N.J. 295, 297 (1989) (citations omitted)). The court concluded that one relevant factor was the employee's disciplinary history. Thus, a reviewing court may intervene in an agency's modification of a penalty when the agency fails to consider the significance of the employee's prior record. See Stallworth, supra, 208 N.J. at 200 (remanding where the Commission reduced the penalty without fully addressing employee's extensive record of misconduct).

[3] On reconsideration, the Commissioner acknowledged that Administrative Order (A.O.) 4:08 was amended to eliminate malicious intent, thus, In re Taylor, 158 N.J. 644 (1999), on which the Commission had relied, was not applicable. The Commissioner further acknowledged that Knowlden's action satisfied the DHS definition of physical abuse.

The court further held that another relevant factor is the severity of the conduct, finding that "[a] reviewing court may intervene when the agency fails to consider the seriousness of the misconduct within the overall context of the work environment as it relates to public safety and the safety of other employees." Knowlden, supra, No. A-4963-11T2, <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collection/courts/> (citations omitted).

The Knowlden case also makes clear that although the DHS removed malicious intent from the A.O., the court found that the Commission could reasonably reduce the penalty to something less than termination where there is a lack of prior major discipline and a lack of malicious intent.

In this matter, the record reflects that the appellant does not have a prior major disciplinary history. Her conduct in this instance was isolated and aberrational. Indeed, it is not disputed that appellant was well respected by all her coworkers and supervisors. Her only disciplinary history is for a minor infraction, and it occurred more than twenty years ago. The penalty for the infraction was an $18.00 fine. While there is no doubt that appellant's inattentiveness/neglect conduct was inappropriate, I CONCLUDE that the conduct was isolated and no harm was inflicted by the appellant. Even if appellant had taken Jamie straight to the hospital, the outcome would have not been any different.

I CONCLUDE that after considering all of the aforementioned factors, a six-month suspension is the appropriate penalty herein. Respondent's removal penalty totally ignores appellant's minimal disciplinary history and her exemplary service to the DCF.

ORDER

Therefore, I hereby REVERSE the action of the respondent that terminated appellant from her position.

It is ORDERED that appellant is hereby suspended for six months, effective from her date of separation.

It is ORDERED that appellant be returned to her position with back pay and seniority.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." IN THE MATTER OF JOANNE MARINO, DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES.

Nancy Mahony, Esq., for appellant Joanne Marino (Law Office of Nancy Mahony, LLC, attorney)

Elizabeth A. Davies, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent Department of Children and Families (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

BEFORE IRENE JONES, ALJ t/a:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Appellant Joanne Marino ("appellant" or "Marino") was employed by the Department of Children and Families ("respondent" or DCF) as an assistant family service worker for some twenty-four years. On June 29, 2015, she was issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) that charged her with incompetency, inefficiency, failure to perform duties, conduct unbecoming a public employee, neglect of duty, and other sufficient cause, violation of Department policy(ies) or procedural violation of Court Order. The PNDA suspended the appellant with pay but advised that her removal was a possible penalty. On June 30, 2015, a pre-termination hearing was conducted. The hearing officer imposed an immediate suspension, finding that appellant neglected her duties.

Appellant received a second PNDA on July 1, 2015. This second notice was identical to the first except that it indicated that the suspension was effective June 30, 2015, without pay. On July 20, 2015, a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (FNDA) was issued wherein appellant was removed from her position, effective June 30, 2015.

Appellant filed an appeal with the Civil Service Commission, and on October 16, 2015, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing as a contested case. On September 26, 2016, the appellant moved for summary decision. Respondent filed an answer in opposition on September 28, 2016.[1]

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Appellant was hired by respondent DCF, Division of Child Protection and Permanency (DCPP) (formerly the Division of Youth and Family Services), on November 5, 1990, as an assistant family service worker 2 (AFSW2). (Resp't's Opp. to Summary Decision at Ex. A.) Appellant was hired on November 4, 1989 as a principal home service worker where she was required to transport and assist clients and with shopping for food, among other duties. She was elevated to an AFSW 2 in April 2007, a title that she held until her removal. According to the DCF, the duties of an AFSW2 may include providing transportation services, setting up medical or dental appointments, and the oversight of visitation between children and families. (Id. at Ex. C.) Appellant's duties included assisting caseworkers in their oversight of the care of children whom the court has placed in the DCPP's custody.

[1] Respondent's opposition is treated as a cross-motion for summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(h), (p).

By Order of the court dated September 8, 2014, the DCF had custody, care, and supervision of two children, four-year-old "Jamie"[2] and his younger sister. The court Order authorized the DCF to provide or secure routine and emergent medical treatment for the children. Supervised visitation between the parents and the children was permitted. The parents' request for unsupervised visitation was specifically denied by the court.

Jamie's case was assigned to the appellant for supervised visitation on December 1, 2014. (App.'s Mot. for Summary Decision at 3.) The supervised visit was to last for two hours, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., at a McDonald's located in Bayonne, New Jersey. Both of Jamie's biological parents were present for the visitation.

During the visit, DCF caseworkers Mariam Attia ("Attia"), who was assigned to the family, and Alexandra Troast ("Troast") stopped at the McDonald's. A home health aide was also present. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D.DCF33.) According to Attia's Certification, she was there to drop off bus tickets to Jamie's parents. (Id. at Ex. F:2.)

On her arrival, appellant informed Attia that she (Marino) was going to the counter to get coffee. (Ibid.) Appellant explained that it is common for DCF employees to cover for each other while one employee uses the restroom or is briefly indisposed, and that she expected Attia to remain with the family until she returned. (App.'s Mot. at 4). It is undisputed that while appellant was on line at the McDonald's, Attia and Troast approached her to notify her that they were leaving. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. F:2; App.'s Mot. at 4.) As Attia left she saw Marino heading back to the play area. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. F:2). The area is separated from the restaurant area by a large glass wall. The play area includes an apparatus that allows children to climb into a tunnel and down to the floor. (Ibid.)

The parties agree that during the visit Jamie somehow fell and hurt his leg. However, it is unclear whether Marino was present when he fell or whether she was still on line at the McDonald's counter.

Marino avers that she did not see Jamie fall, and that his father was holding him in his arms when she approached after getting coffee. (Ibid.) However, the home health aide avers that appellant returned from buying coffee about ten to twenty minutes before Jamie was injured. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D:DCF34.) Similarly, the aide further avers that appellant was seated drinking her coffee when his father brought Jamie over crying. (Id. at Ex. D:DCF33.) Appellant recalls that Jamie cried, then smiled and laughed, and then cried again. (App.'s Mot. at 4.) Respondent asserts that Jamie only laughed because his parents were trying to distract him from the pain he was in. (Resp't's Opp. at 5.)

It is undisputed that Jamie said that his leg hurt. (App.'s Mot. at 4). Further, it is undisputed that appellant did not seek or immediately obtain emergency medical care for the child at the time of injury. (Ibid.; see also Resp't's Opp. at 6.) Although the home health aide suggested that Jamie be taken to the doctor, appellant did not see any indication that Jamie was seriously hurt or that he needed immediate medical attention. (App.'s Mot. at 4.) Rather, appellant immediately ended the visit and returned Jamie to his resource parent so he could be monitored to determine whether he needed medical attention. (Ibid.) Jamie was carried to appellant's car. None of the witnesses commented on whether there was any attempt by anyone to see if Jamie was capable of standing on his own.

At or around 2:34 p.m., appellant attempted to call caseworker Attia to notify her about Jamie's injury, but was unable to reach her. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. F:2.) She left a voicemail explaining that Jamie had hurt his leg and that she (Marino) was going to contact his resource parent. (Id. at Ex. F:2.) Attia stated that appellant's voicemail indicated that she was bringing Jamie home so that his resource parent, M.S., could take him to the doctor. (Ibid.) At or around 2:35 p.m., appellant called a second time and spoke to Attia, reiterating what she had left in her previous voicemail. Attia does not verify that she spoke to appellant at that time. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. F:2.) However, appellant claims that Attia did not offer her any guidance suggestions or alternatives to taking Jamie home to his resource parent. (App.'s Mot. at 5.)

At or around 2:36 p.m., both of Jamie's biological parents called Attia informing her that Jamie needed to go to the hospital immediately because his injuries were more severe than appellant had described. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. F:2.) Indeed, Jamie was crying hysterically and was very upset. (Id. at 6.) As a result, Attia immediately contacted appellant to share the parents' concerns. (Id. at Ex. F:3.) Allegedly, appellant thought that the parents were exaggerating and that Jamie could see a doctor the following day. Attia states that despite the parents' concerns, appellant was bringing Jamie back to his resource parent because she was already in-route, she did not know where the nearest hospital was, and she did not have his Medicaid card. (Ibid.) Attia advised appellant that she could find the nearest hospital using her GPS. Attia denies appellant's contention that Attia told her to "use her own judgment" on how to proceed.

Appellant further avers that she attempted to contact her supervisor, Rhonda Johnson ("Johnson") on her cell phone, but that Johnson did not answer the call. (App.'s Mot. at 5, Ex. 12.) Johnson denied having any contact with appellant on December 1, 2014, nor did she receive a voicemail from appellant regarding Jamie's injury.

Appellant alleges that failing to reach Johnson, she attempted to contact her a second time and called the DYFS switchboard operator, Nabile Elraheb ("Elraheb") (Id. at 5), who reported that Johnson was in training and could not be disturbed. (Ibid.) Neither party presented a certification, interview, or affidavit from Elraheb. However, appellant submitted a list of calls she allegedly made and their relevant alleged outcomes. (Id. at Ex. 12).

Johnson asserts that she learned of Jamie's injury on December 2, 2014, through an internal department email. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. J-2.)

Appellant asserts that on the thirty-minute drive from McDonald's to the resource parent's home in Harrison, Jamie did not cry. (App.'s Mot. at 5.) Appellant claims that upon arriving at the resource parent's residence, Jamie began crying when the caregiver asked him what was wrong. (Id. at 6.) The resource parent believed Jamie needed immediate medical attention, proceeded to call 911, and sought medical treatment. (Ibid.) She picked up Jamie from his car seat and carried him inside until an ambulance arrived because he was unable to walk. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D.DCF36.) The resource parent recalled hearing bones cracking in Jamie's leg. (Id. at 6.) None of the witnesses indicated whether Jamie was asked to walk when he arrived at the residence. At 3:27 p.m., Attia received a hysterical phone call from the resource parent telling Attia that she was waiting for an ambulance to arrive to take Jamie to the hospital. (Id. at Ex. D.DCF31.)

Appellant stayed with the resource parent until the ambulance arrived. (App.'s Mot. at 5.) She offered to accompany them to the hospital, but the resource parent refused. (Ibid.) Jamie was then transported via ambulance to University Hospital in Newark, where he was treated by Dr. Maureen Rickerhauser in the emergency room. It was determined that he had a "significant fracture in his left femur which is the same as a broken leg." (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D.DCF28.) He was admitted to the hospital at 9:49 p.m. Jamie's injury required surgery and the insertion of two small rods in his leg. (Id. at Ex. D.)

On December 10, 2014, appellant was interviewed at the Hudson South Local Office in Bayonne by investigators from the Office of the Public Defender ("OPD"), Law Guardian Conflict Investigators Unit, at 10:22 a.m. In this interview, appellant recalled that she only called Attia and the resource parent; she admitted that she should have called her supervisor. (Id. at 7.)

Christina Gervasi, the general manager of the McDonald's, stated that management was not informed of Jamie's injury at the time it occurred and that no video was available of the play area. (Id. at Ex. D:DCF35.)

While the DCF was conducting an internal investigation into the incident, appellant was reassigned to the Department's Intake Unit. Respondent now contends that the reassignment was done to prevent Marino from endangering additional children. (Ibid.)

On February 2, 2015, after the instant incident but prior to appellant's removal, appellant received a performance evaluation with an overall rating of "satisfactory." (App.'s Mot. at 7.) This rating was applicable to "problem solving," defined as "identifies and analyzes problems, uses sound reasoning to arrive at conclusions; finds alternative solutions to complex problems; distinguishes between relevant and irrelevant information to make logical judgments." (Ibid.) Appellant contends that because she received this review after the instant incident involving Jamie, the DCF was indicating that her handling of the incident with Jamie was appropriate. (Ibid.) However, the DCF states that the evaluation was performed prior to the completion of the internal investigation, and therefore the December 1, 2014, incident was not included in the evaluation. (Resp't's Opp. at 21). Despite the DCF's assertion, the interim performance evaluation designates the relevant rating period as between September 1, 2014, and August 31, 2015. (App.'s Mot. at Ex. 13.)

On or about February 19, 2015, the OPD, Law Guardian Conflict Investigators Unit, issued a report ("Report") that determined that child abuse was established for neglect of substantial risk of physical injury to the child, and that the appellant was the person responsible for medical neglect of the child. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D.DCF44.) It concluded that appellant knew or should have known to promptly obtain medical care for the child, or, at a minimum, seek guidance from a supervisor. As a result of this determination, the DCF asserts that it can no longer rely on the appellant to carry out her job duties and responsibilities as an assistant family service worker. (Id. at 3.)

On July 15, 2015, Johnson wrote a letter stating that the appellant was an asset to the Department. (Id. at 9.) In the letter, Johnson wrote that appellant had never received a complaint regarding her work with families or children and that she always went above and beyond. (App.'s Mot. at Ex. 1). Despite this, Johnson asserts that she had never directly observed the appellant working with families or children. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. J:2.) In her certification, Johnson clarified that she considered appellant to be an asset because she was punctual and there had been no complaints regarding her work. (Ibid.)

Findings

Based on the above, I make the following Findings of Fact. On December 1, 2014, the DCF was responsible for the custody, care, and supervision of four-year-old Jamie. Appellant, an assistant family service worker 2, was assigned to accompany Jamie to a supervised visit with his biological parents at a McDonald's restaurant, during which she was responsible for his care. The child was injured during the visit. Appellant did not promptly notify her supervisor of the incident, and she did not seek immediate medical attention for the child. The OPD, Law Guardian Conflict Investigators Unit, issued a report that determined that child abuse was established for neglect of substantial risk of physical injury to the child, and that the appellant was the person responsible for medical neglect of the child. The DCF subsequently brought disciplinary charges against appellant, and removed appellant from her position effective June 30, 2015.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Under the New Jersey Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, a party may move for summary decision regarding all or any substantive issues in a case. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(a). Motions for summary decision may be granted if the papers and discovery, together with any supporting affidavits, show there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b).

A motion for summary decision is almost identical to the standard used for summary judgment under the New Jersey Rules of Court, which provides that summary judgment should be granted if > the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law. An issue of fact is genuine only if, considering the burden of persuasion at trial, the evidence submitted by the parties on the motion, together with all legitimate inferences therefrom favoring the > non-moving party, would require submission of the issue to the trier of fact.

> [R. 4:46-2(c).]

In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520, 536 (1995) (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 251–52, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 214 (1986)), the New Jersey Supreme Court further refined the standard for summary decision, stating that the inquiry is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require [a hearing] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Thus, a court should deny a motion for summary decision only where the party opposing the motion has come forward with evidence that creates a genuine issue of material fact. Id. at 529. The Court stated:

> [a] determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact-finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial."

The Brill standard contemplates that the analysis performed by the trial judge in determining whether to grant summary judgment should comprehend the evidentiary standard to be applied to the case or issue if it went to trial. "To send a case to trial, knowing that a rational jury can reach but one conclusion, is indeed 'worthless' and will 'serve no useful purpose.'" Id. at 541.

As a result, for a party opposing summary decision to prevail, that party must file a responding affidavit setting forth specific facts demonstrating the existence of a genuine issue that can only be determined by an evidentiary proceeding. Ibid. The opposing party must demonstrate, moreover, that the disputed issue of fact is material to the adjudication. See Frank v. Ivy Club, 120 N.J. 73, 98 (1990). The genuinely disputed material fact must be essential to the decision in the case. Ibid. In addition, the opposing party must establish the issue with competent evidential materials. Robbins v. City of Jersey City, 23 N.J. 229, 240–41 (1957). "Bald allegations or naked conclusions" are insufficient to warrant an evidentiary hearing. J.D. v. Div. of Developmental Disabilities, 329 N.J. Super. 516, 525 (App. Div. 2000). If the opposing party fails to raise a material factual issue with competent proofs, then the issue should be resolved on summary decision. Frank, supra, 120 N.J. at 98–99.

In the instant matter, there is no genuine dispute of material fact that Jamie was injured while on a supervised visit during which appellant was ultimately responsible for his care, and that appellant did not report the child's injury to her supervisor or seek immediate medical attention for the child. Based on the facts and the analysis of the law, I CONCLUDE that appellant failed to exercise due diligence in determining the extent of Jamie's injury, specifically, whether he required immediate medical attention. I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct constituted neglect, failure to perform duties, incompetency, and conduct unbecoming a DCF employee. Clearly, appellant neglected her duties as a DCF in failing to determine the nature and extent of Jamie's injury. Further, her failure to take Jamie to the hospital for examination also constitutes failure to perform her duties, incompetency and conduct unbecoming a DCF employee. I am persuaded that Jamie's parents and the home health aide alerted the appellant that Jamie was hurt. The appellant choose to ignore them and to simply hand Jamie off to his resource parents for further care.

However, the appropriate penalty is a materially disputed fact.

New Jersey is a progressive-discipline state. The theory underlying progressive discipline provides that "past misconduct can be a factor in the determination of the appropriate penalty for present misconduct." In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 29 (2007) (citing West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962)). An employee's past record includes "an employee's reasonably recent history of promotions, commendations and the like on the one hand and, on the other, formally adjudicated disciplinary actions as well as instances of misconduct informally adjudicated, so to speak, by having been previously brought to the attention of and admitted by the employee." Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 523–24.

"While a single instance [of misconduct] may not be sufficient, numerous occurrences over a reasonably short space of time, even though sporadic, may evidence an attitude of indifference amounting to neglect of duty." Id. at 522. "[P]rinciples of progressive discipline can support the imposition of a more severe penalty for a public employee who engages in habitual misconduct." Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 30.

Conversely, In re Carter, 191 N.J. 474, 484 (2007), recognizes that "some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record." See Rawlings v. Police Dep't of Jersey City, 133 N.J. 182, 197–98 (1993) (upholding dismissal of police officer who refused drug screening as "fairly proportionate" to offense). Thus, the question for the courts is "whether such punishment is 'so disproportionate to the offense, in the light of all the circumstances, as to be shocking to one's sense of fairness.'" In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 578 (1982) (considering punishment in license-revocation proceeding) (quoting Pell v. Bd. of Educ., 313 N.E.2d 321 (1974)).

Progressive discipline has also been used to mitigate the penalty for a current offense. Herrmann held that progressive discipline may be used to downgrade the penalty for an employee who has "a substantial record of employment that is largely or totally unblemished by significant disciplinary infractions." In re Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 27–28; see, e.g., Saniuk v. Div. of Youth and Family Servs., CSV 2251-01, Initial Decision (December 20, 2001), modified, MSB (March 18, 2002), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/> (Merit System Board reduced forty-five-day suspension to written reprimand because of employee's long record of public service without any major disciplinary infractions). In Stein v. Division of Youth and Family Services ("DYFS"), CSV 4336-01, Initial Decision (May 23, 2003), adopted, MSB (August 22, 2003), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, an ALJ recommended reduction of a penalty of removal for a DYFS worker who had been charged with improperly divulging confidential information, constituting conduct unbecoming a public employee under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). The ALJ found the worker's record from years of service in his position to be "more than commendable" and, in fact, "exemplary," and concluded that the employee's high performance ratings and praise from supervisors warranted a suspension instead of removal.

Likewise, it is undisputed that given the sensitive nature of work performed by the DCF, and the importance of the proper care and welfare of children, egregious conduct may demand removal. In In re Herrmann, the Court acknowledged public-policy concerns that the Division faces, including frequent contact with families, remediation of family conflicts, and investigations of abuse and neglect. In re Herrmann, supra, 192 N.J. at 35. DCPP workers are the people trusted to behave appropriately and to use sound judgment when making, at times, on-the-spot decisions about the families they visit and supervise. The DCPP must be able to rely on a worker's demonstrated good judgment from the moment of the initial investigation until the best interests of the child have been secured. Id. at 36.

Here, appellant has not engaged in numerous instances of misconduct during her career with the DCF and, as a result, is not subject to removal on the basis of habitual misconduct. Appellant's only prior disciplinary issue arose when she used a State vehicle for training purposes. (Resp't's Opp. at Ex. D:19). As a result, she was required to reimburse the DCPP the sum of $19.46. (Ibid.) This offense is a minor disciplinary infraction, and the penalty reflected that. However, notwithstanding the appellant's lack of major disciplinary history, it is undeniable that the injury Jamie sustained while under appellant's supervision is far more severe than misuse of a State vehicle. The OPD Report found this to be an isolated incident, meaning that appellant had never had an issue like this before involving Jamie or any other child that had been placed in her care. (Id. at Ex. D:DCF44). Indeed, appellant has the support of her coworkers, who signed a petition, as well as multiple letters from professionals who observed appellant's work with children and families throughout her career. (App.'s Mot. at Ex. 3-10).

Therefore, for the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that the issue of the appropriateness of the instant penalty is a materially disputed fact.

ORDER

Based on the above findings and conclusions, summary decision is GRANTED to the respondent on the issue of neglect, failure to perform duties, incompetency and conduct unbecoming a DCF employee. Summary decision is DENIED on the issue of penalty.

This order may be reviewed by DIRECTOR OF THE CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

Mr. Limsky and Mr. Rosen:

Initially, please accept my apologies for the typo in my initial e-mail. As noted below by Mr. Limsky, the "gap" that I was asking about was actually 45 days, not 15 days. Additionally, the clarification indicated below by Mr. Limsky is sufficient.

I will ensure that the settlement gets placed on an upcoming Civil Service Commission agenda for acknowledgment.

Thanks for your cooperation!

Hi Mr. Anguilo. We have agreed that the discipline should reflect a 15 day suspension for the original 30 day; a 30 day suspension for the original 60 day; and a 45 day unpaid leave of absence. In your initial email you indicated it would be a 15 day unpaid leave. However, that would not account for all of the time. The total initial suspension was 90 days, not 60. Please feel free to contact me with any questions.

Very truly yours,

As Ms. Odoms has indicated that she no longer represents Hudson County, I have sent this e-mail to Mr. Rosen. Per the below e-mail, I am still awaiting the clarification regarding the above-captioned settlement. Please respond as soon as possible as we do not want to delay this matter going before the Commission for acknowledgement.

Mr. Limsky and Ms. Odoms:

I am the Deputy Director in charge of this agency's hearings unit. We have received the proposed settlement agreement for Sabrina Minervini indicating that her 30 and 60 working day suspensions are being modified to a 45 working day suspension.

Before this matter can be presented to the Civil Service Commission for acknowledgement, clarification is necessary. Specifically, the we need to know how the suspension is being separated for the separate Final Notices. For example, will the appellant be given a 15 working day suspension for the first FNDA and a 30 working day suspension for the second FNDA, or something else? Additionally, we need to account for the remaining 15 suspension days. Will the appellant be receiving back pay for those days or is that time to be categorized as an unpaid leave of absence, or something else?

Please let me know as soon as possible the intention of the parties regarding the above. An e-mail response is sufficient so long as it is agreed upon by the parties. The sooner the information is provided the better.

Thank you in advance for your cooperation.

AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Agreement and Release ("Agreement") is entered into this 10th day of April 2017, and is by and between Monmouth County and the Monmouth County Board of Recreation Commissioners (collectively, "County"), Emerald Platzer ("Platzer" or "Employee"), and CWA Local 1075 ("Union").

RECITALS

WHEREAS, Platzer is employed as a Park Ranger by the County, and is a member of the Union; and,

WHEREAS, on July 17, 2015, the County issued Platzer a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (DPF-31A) (the "Disciplinary Action") relating to an incident that occurred on June 14, 2015; and,

WHEREAS, the Disciplinary Action charged Platzer with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(1), (2) (6), (7) and (12); and County Policies 104, 502 and 701; and,

WHEREAS, based on the charges and specifications contained in the Disciplinary Action, the County determined that a ten (10) working day unpaid suspension was the appropriate penalty; and,

WHEREAS, following a departmental hearing conducted on March 17, 2016, the charges and proposed penalty of a ten (10) working day unpaid suspension were sustained, and she thereafter was suspended from May 4, 2016 through May 17, 2016; and,

WHEREAS, Platzer timely filed an appeal of the Disciplinary Action to the New Jersey Civil Service Commission ("Commission"), which was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case under docket number CSV 7456-2016S; and,

WHEREAS, prior to the scheduling of a hearing date at the OAL on the Disciplinary Action, the parties engaged in settlement discussions; and,

WHEREAS, the County, Platzer and Union now desire to resolve all outstanding issues with respect to the Disciplinary Action via this Agreement.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and conditions set forth herein, the adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, the County, Platzer and Union hereby agree as follows:

1. RESOLUTION OF THE DISCIPLINARY ACTION.

   a. Platzer agrees the charges contained in the Disciplinary Action have been sustained.

   b. Platzer hereby withdraws her appeal with the Commission and request for a hearing at the OAL, and the parties agree that the following result will occur with regard to the sustained charges: The proposed penalty of a ten (10) day suspension shall be reduced to a five (5) day suspension, which is considered "minor discipline" under Commission regulations. As Platzer has already served the entirety of the ten (10) day suspension, the final five (5) days she served during her suspension shall be reclassified in her personnel records as an approved, but unpaid, administrative leave. Accordingly, she shall not be entitled to any back pay or other compensation as a result of this Agreement.

   c. The parties agree that Platzer's personnel and Civil Service records shall reflect that the Disciplinary Action was reduced to a "minor discipline."

   d. Platzer and the Union irrevocably waive any rights they might have to appeal or challenge the outcome of the Disciplinary Action in any forum whatsoever.

e. Platzer waives any and all claims arising from or relating to the Disciplinary Action including, but not limited to, back pay, benefits, seniority, attorneys' fees and/or costs.

f. The parties acknowledge that no pension or seniority time may be credited for periods for which Platzer is not paid by the County.

g. The County will amend its records to confirm to the terms of this Agreement.

2. RELEASE AND RELINQUISHMENT OF CLAIMS.

In consideration of the settlement hereinabove, and to the fullest extent permissible by law, Platzer, along with her successors, assigns, heirs, representatives and estates (collectively, "Releasor"), agrees to irrevocably and unconditionally relinquish any and all causes of Action, demands or claims, including claims for attorney's fees and costs, Releasor had, has or may have from the beginning of time up to the date this Agreement is executed against the County of Monmouth and the Monmouth County Board of Recreation Commissioners, as well as all of their officers, agents, employees, agencies and instrumentalities (collectively, "Releasees"), regardless of whether such claims are presently known or unknown to Releasor, with respect to the events, information or disputes giving rise to this matter, the Disciplinary Action, or the Agreement.

This release also specifically includes, but is not limited to, matters arising at common law, such as breach of contract, expressed or implied, promissory estoppel, wrongful discharge, tortious interference with contractual rights, infliction of emotional distress, defamation and any other common-law tort.

This release also specifically includes, but is not limited to, claims for reemployment by contract or recall rights, compensatory damages, punitive damages, reinstatement, back pay, overtime compensation, back benefits, back emoluments, seniority credit, attorneys' fees, equitable relief, or any other relief.

This release also specifically includes, but is not limited to, the right to receive any monetary relief in connection with the prosecution of a charge or suit brought on the Releasor's behalf by a third party, including any federal, state or local governmental agency or entity.

This Agreement is intended to comply with the federal Older Workers Benefit Protection Act (OWBPA), and Platzer acknowledges she specifically is waiving rights and claims under the OWBPA. Therefore, this Agreement and Release shall not be effective nor shall any payments hereunder be made, until the expiration of the seven (7) day revocation period set forth in the OWBPA.

4. ACKNOWLEDGEMENT.

Any rule of construction to the effect that ambiguities are to be resolved against the drafting party shall not apply in interpreting this Agreement. The language in this Agreement shall be interpreted as to its fair meaning and not strictly for or against any party.

9. MODIFICATIONS TO BE IN WRITING.

The parties agree that this Agreement and Release may not be altered, amended, modified, superseded, canceled or terminated except in writing and duly executed by all the parties, or their attorneys on their behalf, which makes specific reference to this provision.

10. ENTIRE UNDERSTANDING.

This Agreement and Release sets forth the entire understanding between Platzer, the County, and the Union, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings between them pertaining to the subject matter thereof, if any.

11. NON-ADMISSION.

Nothing in this Agreement shall be construed as an admission by any party that any action taken was unlawful or wrongful, or that any action constituted a breach of contract or violated any federal, state, or local law, policy, rule or regulation.

12. AGREEMENT NON-PRECEDENTIAL.

The parties agree that this Agreement shall be non-precedential, is limited to specific, unique facts and circumstances, and is not intended to create a past practice nor shall it be binding with respect to any other employee of the County. ISSUED: MAY 04 2017 BW

The appeal of David Reid, Senior Medical Security Officer, Ann Klein Forensic Center, Department of Human Services, removal effective November 9, 2015, on charges, was heard by Administrative Law Judge Dean Buono, who rendered his initial decision on April 4, 2017. No exceptions were filed.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 19728-15
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-1804

IN THE MATTER OF DAVID REID, ANN KLEIN FORENSIC CENTER,
DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES.

David P. Schroth, Esq., appearing for appellant, David Reid

Elizabeth A. Davies, Deputy Attorney General, appearing for respondent, Ann Klein Forensic Center, Department of Human Services (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: March 10, 2017 Decided: April 4, 2017

BEFORE DEAN BUONO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, David Reid (Reid or appellant), a Senior Medical Security Officer (SMSO) at respondent, Ann Klein Forensic Center (Center), appeals disciplinary action seeking his removal for conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), physical or mental abuse of a patient, client or resident in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-3, and inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of patient client, resident or employee in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-5. The appellant denies the allegations and contends that he acted appropriately.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 9, 2015, the Center issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action suspending appellant without pay. On November 9, 2015, the Center issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action sustaining the charges and removing appellant from his position effective November 9, 2015. Appellant filed a timely Notice of Appeal.

The Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs of the Civil Service Commission transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on December 3, 2015, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The hearing was held on June 7 and October 25, 2016. The record remained open until March 10, 2017, for the receipt of transcripts and briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

TESTIMONY

For respondent

H.H. was an affable, forty-five-year-old male that has been a patient at the Center for nearly four years. He admitted to being self-abusive and bore the visible facial scaring and injuries to prove it.

On May 27, 2015, he admitted to "trying to hurt myself" and was banging his head on the window sill while smashing his fist on the same sill. This caused severe lacerations over his right eye and head, leading to a substantial amount of bleeding. He recalled that "Reid had a One-to-One"[1] and never had a problem with Reid. "I don't know why he did it." Reid attempted to restrain H.H. but he was uncontrollable.

H.H. recalled that he began fighting and spitting at the security officers that were called into his room to assist Reid. At this point, the security officers were attempting to place H.H. in the Medical Safety Net (Net).[2] As he was being restrained by three officers, Officer Page (Page) was on his right side, Reid was on the left side, and Officer Glenn (Glenn) was up by his head, H.H. stated, "I can't breathe." This was because the outside of Reid's forearm was on H.H.'s throat. H.H. was very clear in his description that Reid's "Forearm was pushing on my throat."

H.H. passionately stated that, "I was not trying to hurt them," but "A lot of staff was beating on me" over the years. He admitted that at the time he may have yelled that 'they were going to lose their jobs!" After H.H. was put in the Emergency Restraint Chair (ERC) he indicated his intention of pressing charges. The next morning his neck was sore on the left side as well as the front of his throat.

Frankie Page has been employed at the Center from 1996 to 2006 and from 2008 to the present, as a Supervisor Senior Medical Security Officer (SSMSO).

On May 27, 2015, at approximately 3:30 a.m., H.H. was acting out and had a "One-to-One." The officers were attempting a Net restraint on H.H. and Page was on the left side of H.H.'s head and was securing his left arm, but H.H. was still spitting and resisting putting his arms into the Net. Suddenly, Reid leapt across H.H.'s body and

[1] A "One-to-One" was explained by the officer that due to the aggressive/violent/unpredictable nature of a particular patient, a full-time security staff member is assigned to them for their own safety and the safety of the staff members and patients.

[2] The "Net" was described by the officer as a Medical Safety Net protective restraint device that is comprised of mesh netting with arm holes and straps. The patient's arms are placed through the arm holes and the Net is then strapped to the bed as a cocoon. The FDA defines "protective restraint" at 211 C.F.R. Section 880.6760 as: "a device, including but not limited to a wristlet, anklet, vest, mitt, straight jacket, body/limp holder, or other type of strap that is intended for medical purposes and that limits the patient's movements to the extent necessary for treatment, examination, or protection of the patient or others."

choked him with his right hand. He described the choke as Reid's thumb having been on one side of H.H.'s neck and his other fingers having been on the opposite side of H.H.'s neck.

At that time, Reid was a distraction, so Page called for a supervisor to get Reid out of the room. As soon as Reid left, H.H. calmed down and complied with all commands. After the incident, Reid confronted Page in the hallway and said, "You don't know what you're doing. We can do whatever we want." According to Page, Reid and Page do not get along.

Randolph Brown (Brown) has been employed at the Center for eight years as a SMSO. He recalled an incident on May 27, 2015, involving H.H. who suffers from a self-injurious condition. H.H. was kicking, spitting and fighting with officers after they tried to subdue him. The officers were attempting to put H.H. in a Net restraint and were not successful. At that time, someone called for the chair restraint and Reid was on top of H.H. Reid was straddling H.H., but Brown could not see his hands. Brown described "straddling" as Reid's leg having been on either side of H.H.'s body. As he was being straddled, H.H. exclaimed that he could not breathe. Both Page and Glenn were telling Reid to stop choking H.H., but Reid did not comply. It was at this point that Page grabbed Reid and physically pulled him off H.H. Page then asked for Reid to be removed from the room and then H.H. calmed down.

James Jones (Jones) has been employed as a SMSO at the Center for five years. He recalled the incident with H.H. on May 27, 2015, where he was tasked with assisting other officers who were placing H.H. in the Net. He recalled that Page told Reid to stop choking H.H., but couldn't see what happened.

Renee Maxwell (Maxwell) has been employed at the Center for thirteen years, the past five years as a SMSO. On May 27, 2016, at 3:40 a.m., she was called to Unit 2 for a call of a patient injuring himself. Upon arrival, H.H. was hurting himself and was covered in blood. The Net was needed and Reid was called in to help because H.H. was wiggling out of the restraint. H.H. was so combative, officers needed to restrain him. Reid was laying on top of H.H., chest-to-chest, in such a way that they were in the orientation of an X. At that point, Page was yelling for Reid to get out of the room. As soon as Reid left the room, H.H. calmed down. Maxwell also recalled that Reid and Page had an altercation afterwards.

Julie Baranowski (Baranowski) is a Registered Nurse (RN) who has been a Charge Nurse (CN) at the Center for six-and-a-half years. She recalls H.H. as a forty-five-year-old male who is self-abusive and was usually on a One-to-One with staff. On May 27, 2015, she was the CN and recalled that H.H. was being put in restraints. Although she could not see what was happening, she could hear that H.H.'s voice went up several octaves and it sounded as if someone was restricting his throat, or that he was in distress. Her notes were authored contemporaneous to reflect the same. (R-6, Tab 11).

On cross-examination, she conceded that an individual's voice could have gone up several octaves for a number of reasons. For example: being excited, fighting, or being tired. She also recalled that H.H. was bleeding and bloody, but not spitting.

Sandy Ferguson (Ferguson) has been employed by the Center for thirty years as Director of Training, but is also a RN. In her capacity as a trainer she provides staff development and training to all staff members in the facility. Training is inclusive of de-escalation techniques which includes assessing patient needs and providing it to the, so they can calm down.

She described that all staff receive annual training. Reid's attendance is accounted for in the 2014 class. Also, The Policy on Control and Defense Manual is also provided to each employee and discussed in the class. (R-7, Tab 20) (R-8, Tab 26). The policy covers a crisis management continuum, including the use of verbal commands and then increasing into restraint techniques, including only two holds that are permitted to deal with an unruly patient. Holds are discussed and taught in Advanced Emergency Holds (AEH). (R-15, Tab 24). AEH are described as different techniques to restrain a patient. This involves arm locks and only one requires a leg lock. The physical skills involved in making contact with an aggressive patient involve verbal techniques and de-escalation techniques. Reid took the AEH class on December 8, 2014. The AEH class provides there is never a reason for an officer to climb on a patient, to lay or be near the chest, (R-14, Tab 23), nor should an officer have his face near the patient's face. In fact, there is nothing that permits contact above the diaphragm so as to not restrict or obstruct the airway.

On cross-examination, Ferguson demonstrated the techniques involved in restraint. It was specified that the individual who is restraining the patient must simply hold onto the limbs and allow the patient to tire out. H.H. was banging his hand and head so hard for ten minutes on the window that he was still bleeding. You are supposed to hold on to them, until they burn out. Since people eventually get tired, only four people are needed. However, Ferguson was not aware if more than four people were on the scene with Reid restraining H.H. Nevertheless, there is never a reason for someone to lie across or stretch across a person to restrain them. Nor is it permitted to control the individual's shoulders.

Doris Ballentine (Ballentine) has been employed at the Center for the last seven-and-a-half years as a RN and as an Investigator. To qualify as an investigator, she completed an investigative training course, which includes interviewing and evidence gathering. She explained that only nineteen percent of all investigations are substantiated.

In this case, after her investigation, she completed an Investigative Report. (R-17-Tab3). Her conclusion was that H.H. was harming himself and the Net was ordered because he was out of control. A number of officers went in and could not put H.H. in the Net and they needed more officers. It is her opinion that Reid had inappropriate contact with H.H., despite the fact that Lopez indicated that he did not see any abuse by Reid, and Officer Charles Glenn's (Glenn) handwritten statement also indicated no abuse witnessed by him.

However, Glenn's handwritten statement was well after the incident and it is clearly based on the evidence that there was "inappropriate contact" because of Reid's own statements. Reid indicates that his "hand was on the upper chest of H.H. to keep him from getting up." Also, Reid's statement indicates that "I pushed him back to his mattress, my hand slides [sic] forward toward the neck" and "of course at this point it's going to look as if I'm choking H.H." (R-5, Tab 12).

For appellant

Officer Charles Glenn has been employed Ann Klein Forensic Center as a Medical Security Officer (MSO) for six years. On May 27, 2015, between 2:00 a.m. and 4:00 a.m., he had a "One-to-One" with H.H. who is a very unpredictable patient who would harm staff and himself. He began to act out and spit at Glenn, tried to throw urine and harm himself by banging his head against the wall. Glenn asked for a code "grey" and another officer came in. The supervisor also came in and asked for more help because H.H. was bloodied and combative. They tried to get him into the Net, but were not successful. Next, they tried to put him in the restraint chair. Again, this was not successful.

At this point, Glenn was on H.H.'s right side, up by his head, and Reid was next to Glenn on the right side of H.H., near his waist. Reid took H.H.'s right arm under control and also reached across and helped Page control H.H.'s left arm. Reid never choked H.H. nor did he do anything inappropriate. "It could have appeared that Reid was across H. H.'s body, but he wasn't."

Glenn was questioned about the discrepancies in his statements. When confronted with his first statement (P-3), Glenn says he misunderstood what was asked of him and the statement is incorrect. As a result, he thought about it more clearly and wrote the second statement. (P-2). Also, the (P-4) incident report "Incident Description" is his, but he did not write the statement, Patient stated, "he was choked by MSO Reid."

On cross-examination, Glenn indicated that H.H., "tried to throw urine," but nothing was in his original written statement about urine or spitting. Interestingly, he did note those facts in his subsequent statement. (P-2). Also, his new statement was written five months after the incident and solely to help Reid. The original Glenn interview was completed on May 28, 2015, at 12:00 a.m. (R-17, Tab 3).

Glenn specifically stated that Reid did reach over H.H. to try to control his other arm while lying across H.H. Reid was next to him the entire time, but in his first statement he indicated otherwise, that he did not know Reid's position. Again, the reason was that he "misunderstood the questions." Also, as further clarification, Reid was "not laying across H.H.," he was standing up. Finally, Glenn stated that it was not permissible to touch a patient on the chest, "but it does happen." He then testified it is not permissible but it happens when confronting a combative patient.

Officer Robert Green (Green) indicated that he had been employed at the Center as a MSO since 2001. He understands his job is ensuring the safety of patients.

Green testified that after the incident, he recalled being present when the investigator approached H.H. for the interview. He was assigned to relieve a MSO for H.H., when he pulled the covers over his head. The investigator wanted to speak with H.H. about the "choking incident."

Green recalled that the investigator asked H.H., "When Mr. Reid choked you, was it like this or this?" Green said, "You shouldn't be leading a witness. You should ask open-ended questions," an investigator would not lead a witness.

On cross-examination, Green conceded that he was not witness to any other interview of H.H. He did not know if H.H. was the one who described the incident, and Reid as choking him. Also, despite being previously charged with abuse of a patient, he found Reid's reputation to be, "pretty sound."

David Reid is currently employed at Volunteers of America as an Employment Coordinator. He took a civil service test in 2009, and worked until 2011, when he became a part-time staff member. In 2012, he became a full-time MSO at the Center.

Pointedly, Reid was asked if he knew H.H. His response was, "we know the patients better than anyone. H.H. and I are buddies and I would never hurt him. I ordered a soft mattress for him. He intimidates staff; his one hand is his main weapon."

On May 27, 2015, he had been on the job for six years and was assigned to patient V.A., when he could hear H.H. yelling and screaming two doors away. He left V.A. to peer in the hallway to see Glenn, while H.H. was banging his head and arm on the window sill. Soon after he went back to V.A.'s side, he was called to H.H.'s room at approximately 2:00 a.m.

Reid went into H.H.'s room and could see a doctor and others, "shaking their heads." He entered the room and saw H.H. battered and bloody. H.H.'s feet were being secured by two other officers and Page was on H.H.'s left arm. So, "I excused myself and tippy-toed" around the officers and took a position near H.H.'s head, next to Glenn. Reid was on the right and Glenn was on the left of H.H. Then he took five seconds to assess the situation.

Reid could see that Page's glasses fell off and he was foaming at the mouth. Reid claims that because Page is a smoker, he looked like he was in distress. Page was flustered and had his difficulties with the situation. In Reid's mind, it was clear that Page was the trigger mechanism for H.H.

At this point, H.H.'s hands were crossed at the wrist and Reid leaned over H.H. and grabbed both arms and spread them apart. Reid's had slipped up to H.H.'s neck. H.H. was still using abdominal sit-ups to head-butt people and spit on people. Reid then reached across and grabbed H.H.'s left arm with both hands and slipped it in the restraint sleeve. Reid placed his right hand on H.H.'s chest and did not hurt him because, "H.H. is my boy. Me and H.H. are boys. Everything I'm doing is to be honest," and "I'm being honest." Reid testified that Glenn's testimony was not correct chronologically.

It was at this point that "Page punched me." He reached across, hit and punched Reid and told him to leave the patient's room. Reid told Page that he is a dictator. At 3:30 a.m., Page started arguing with Reid that, "I don't like you" and you "brushed up against me." Reid testified about a prior history with Page and described an incident where he was "proactive" and Page was smoking and "maybe drinking." Smoking on the premises was not allowed and a supervisor thought it was Reid. He also testified that Page comes in drunk and curses at people. Reid has smelled alcohol on him on several occasions, but never reported it. He felt that he can say that in court without getting in trouble.

Finally, Reid testified that there was nothing in any manual that addresses restraining a patient in the prone position. "You can lay across a patient and place your hands on the chest" to restrain or subdue the patient.

On cross-examination, Reid reiterated that it was permissible for a MSO to place their hands on a patient's chest or lay on the person, as long as they were not harming a person. He stated that Ferguson gave the wrong testimony and did not testify about the restraint techniques correctly. These were "discrepancies in her testimony that should be brought out."

Reid claims that he never laid chest-on-chest with H.H. Instead, he demonstrated that he leaned over him, without any contact and with one leg up in the air, all while holding H.H.'s flailing arms, while H.H. was doing sit-ups to head-butt and spit on staff. However, the bed is only two feet off the ground. He acknowledged that H.H. exclaimed, "I can't breathe," and Reid immediately got up. Reid said he only controlled H.H.'s upper body. "I was never choking [H.H.] intentionally. It would seem that I did it."

Reid also claimed that Page was a "drunk" but was promoted after this incident, despite being a "drunk." He also claimed that he never testified about "tip-toeing" upon entering H.H.'s room, or that Page's mouth was "ashy" and not "foaming." This happened because Page was "passing out and dehydrated." Reid disputes that the restraint chair came in at 3:19:17 a.m. because the video was never provided to counsel. In fact, Reid claims that he did not enter H.H.'s room at 3:18:49 a.m. He says the whole incident happened at 2:00 a.m., "an hour earlier." Reid claimed that he has a "razor-sharp memory."

Rebuttal Witness

Page acknowledged that he restarted smoking but has no troubles with physical ability to perform the job. "I'm good." He disagreed that he ever came to work intoxicated and that the statement by Reid about Page's glasses falling off is also untrue. In fact, he was not wearing glasses because they are only used for reading.

Page agreed that H.H.'s arm was loose and he was having difficulty restraining him, but then Reid came in and landed on top of him. This happened when H.H. was in a forty-five degree crunch position and Reid landed on H.H.'s torso and went "splat."

FINDINGS OF FACT

For testimony to be believed, it must not only come from the mouth of a credible witness, but it also has to be credible in itself. It must elicit evidence that is from such common experience and observation that it can be approved as proper under the circumstances. See Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954); Gallo v. Gallo, 66 N.J. Super. 1 (App. Div. 1961). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Also, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted).

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

After hearing the testimony and reviewing the evidence, I make the following findings of fact:

On May 27, 2015, the appellant was engaged in the restraint of patient, H.H. H.H. was known to be a difficult patient. He was aggressive and unpredictable, and had engaged in behaviors that presented a danger to himself and others. He was self-abusive. The appellant was charged with restraining him and keeping him safe. However, consistent with Brown, Page and Reid's testimony, Reid was on top of H.H.'s body and his hand slipped near H.H.'s neck.

The testimony of respondent's witnesses was especially credible and persuasive. Despite the varying degrees of observation on the position of Reid when it came to H.H., their testimony as a whole was more convincing in that Reid had inappropriate contact and had abused H.H.

Conversely, Reid's testimony was both credible in terms of his factual recitation of the case, but not credible with the manner in which it was given. Reid's own testimony assisted the respondent in proving the facts of the case by a preponderance of the evidence. His testimony that H.H.'s hands were crossed at the wrist and Reid leaned over H.H., grabbing both arms and spreading them apart, was believable in concert with the testimony from the respondent's witnesses. Also believable with the testimony from the respondent's witnesses was Reid's testimony that his hand slipped up to H.H.'s neck but "I was never choking [H.H.] intentionally." Furthermore, when he stated that, "it would seem that I did it," was particularly poignant.

It was obvious that Reid attempted to "sell" his version of the facts to the undersigned. Particularly, not only was his recitation and demonstration of the contact with H.H. not credible, but also not realistic to believe that Reid could have performed that maneuver in that setting under those circumstances. Reid's claim that he never laid chest-on-chest with H.H. was not believed because it defies logic. The mechanics of the maneuver described by Reid are simply not possible. Also, when Reid testified that upon entering H.H.'s room, "I excused myself and tippy-toed" around officers, was not realistic under the circumstances. Furthermore, the fact that Reid constantly had to reassure the undersigned that he and H.H. were "boys" and that everything he said was "truthful" and "honest" because he has a "razor-sharp memory" detracted from any modicum of credibility. Coupled with the fact that, he discounted the testimony of Page because he was a "drunk," Ferguson because her testimony had "discrepancies" and his own witness, Glenn, who's testimony was "chronologically" incorrect, undermined the believability of his testimony.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Civil service employees' rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act and regulations promulgated pursuant thereto. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified people to public service and is to be liberally applied toward merit appointment and tenure protection. Mastrobarrista v. Essex Cnty. Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). However, consistent with public policy and civil-service law, a public entity should not be burdened with an employee who fails to perform his or her duties satisfactorily or who engages in misconduct related to his or her duties. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(a). A civil-service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her duties, or gives other just cause, may be subject to major discipline, including removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-6; N.J.S.A. 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2. The general causes for such discipline are set forth in N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a).

This matter involves a major disciplinary action brought by the respondent appointing authority against the appellant. An appeal to the Merit System Board requires the OAL to conduct a hearing de novo to determine the appellant's guilt or innocence as well as the appropriate penalty, if the charges are sustained. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987). Respondent has the burden of proof and must establish by a fair preponderance of the credible evidence that appellant was guilty of the charges. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Evidence is found to preponderate if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact alleged and generates a reliable belief that the tendered hypothesis, in all human likelihood, is true. See Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959), overruled on other grounds, Dwyer v. Ford Motor Co., 36 N.J. 487 (1962).

The Center has charged the appellant with conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), physical or mental abuse of a patient, client or resident in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-3, and inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident or employee in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-5.

Respondent sustained charges against appellant for Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee, N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1988); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained-of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publically accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In re Zeber, 156, A.2d 821, 825 (1959). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App.Div.) (1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)). Suspension of removal may be justified where the misconduct occurred while the employee was off duty. Emmons, supra, 63 N.J. Super. At 140.

It is difficult to contemplate a more basic example of conduct which could destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services than the image of a public employee laying on top of and choking a mentally or emotionally disadvantaged patient. I CONCLUDE that appellant's actions constitute unbecoming conduct, and the charge of such is hereby SUSTAINED.

As to the charges of violation of section C-3 of the DAP, "Physical or mental abuse of a patient," the DAP at Supplement 3 defines physical abuse as:

> ... a physical act directed at a client, patient or resident of a type that could tend to cause pain, injury, anguish, and/or suffering. Such acts include but are not limited to the client, patient, or resident being kicked, pinched, bitten, punched, > slapped, hit, pushed, dragged, and/or struck with a thrown or held object.

The actions of appellant do fit directly within the definition of physical abuse as set forth in the DAP. Appellant directed an act of retaliation at H.H. by laying on him that would tend to cause pan, injury, anguish, and/or suffering. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden of proof that appellant did physically or mentally abuse patient H.H. pursuant to DAP section C-3.1 and that this charge is SUSTAINED.

With regard to the charge of a violation of section C-5.1 of the DAP, "Inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient," the appointing authority has proven that appellant did act inappropriately by laying on to of H.H. and I CONCLUDE that the appointing authority has met its burden of proof on this issue and that this charge is also SUSTAINED.

PENALTY

Where appropriate, concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used in imposing a penalty and in determining the reasonableness of a penalty. West New York v. Bock, supra, 38 N.J. 523-24. Factors determining the degree of discipline include the employee's prior disciplinary record and the gravity of the instant misconduct.

However, it is well established that where the underlying conduct is of an egregious nature, the imposition of a penalty up to and including removal is appropriate, regardless of an individual's disciplinary history. See, Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980). It is well settled that the theory of progressive discipline is not a fixed and immutable rule to be followed without question. Rather, it is recognized that some disciplinary infractions are so serious that removal is appropriate notwithstanding a largely unblemished prior record. See, Carter v. Bordentown, 191 N.J. 474 (2007).

The record reflects that appellant has a fairly unremarkable disciplinary record. It is noted that a single charge of Incompetency, Inefficiency or Failure to Perform Duties by itself, can be sufficient grounds for termination in the absence of any other disciplinary history. Absence of judgment alone can be sufficient to warrant termination if the employee is in a sensitive position that requires public trust in the agency's judgment. See, In re Herrmann, 192, N.J. 19, 32 (2007) (DYFS worker who waved a let cigarette lighter in a five-year-old's face was terminated, despite lack of any prior discipline).

"There is no constitutional or statutory right to a government job." State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Newark v. Gaines, 309 N.J. Super. 327, 334 (App.Div. 1998). (NOTE: Gaines had a substantial prior disciplinary history, but the case is frequently quoted as a threshold statement of civil service law).

"In addition, there is no right or reason for a government to continue employing an incompetent and inefficient individual after a showing of inability to change." Klusaritz v. Cape May County, 387 N.J. Super. 305, 317 (App. Div. 2006) (termination was the proper remedy for a county treasurer who could not balance the books, after the auditors tried three times to show him how).

> In reversing the MSB's insistence on progressive discipline, contrary to the wishes of the appointing authority, the Klusaritz panel stated that "[t]he [MSB's] application of progressive discipline in this context is misplaced and contrary to the public interest." The court determined that Kluwsaritz's prior record is "of no moment" because his lack of competence to perform the job rendered him unsuitable for the job and subject to termination by the county.
> [In re Herrmann, 192 N.J. 19, 35-36 (2007) (citations omitted).]

Considering the foregoing, and the record in the present matter including the appellant's disciplinary record, the nature of the job duties and the nature of the charges, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's action terminating appellant were justified.

ORDER

I ORDER that the charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), physical or mental abuse of a patient, client or resident in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-3, and inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident or employee in violation of Administrative Order 4:08 C-5 be SUSTAINED. I further ORDER respondent's action terminating the appellant be AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." INITIAL DECISION
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2016-3162

IN THE MATTER OF ISAAC REYES, CAMDEN COUNTY, DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS.

Micole C. Sparacio, Esq., for appellant (The Vigilante Law Firm, P.C., attorneys)

Antonieta Rinaldi, Esq., for respondent (Camden County, Office of County Counsel)

Record Closed: February 21, 2017 Decided: March 28, 2017

BEFORE CATHERINE A. TUOHY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant, Isaac Reyes, a Corrections Officer at Camden County Correction Facility (respondent) appeals a 120-day suspension he received as major discipline as a result of his participation in posing for a photograph with other corrections officers inside a jail cell on November 9, 2014 and the subsequent Internal Affairs investigation surrounding same. Appellant was charged with violations of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), Conduct unbecoming a public employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) Neglect of duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), Other sufficient cause; Camden County Corrections Facility

Rules of conduct:1.1 Violations in general; 1.2 Conduct unbecoming; 1.3 Neglect of duty; 2.10 Inattentiveness to duty; 3.2 Security; General Order# 73, #74; and Internal Affairs order #001; et al. The appellant denies the allegations and maintains he did nothing wrong.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 13, 2015 respondent issued a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (R-1, page 1) setting forth the charges and specifications made against the appellant. After a departmental hearing on January 27, 2016, the respondent issued a Final Notice of Disciplinary Action (R-1, page 2) on February 16, 2016 sustaining the charges in the Preliminary Notice and suspending appellant from employment for 120 days. Appellant appealed on March 4, 2016 and the matter was transmitted by the Civil Service Commission Division of Appeals and Regulatory Affairs to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on May 16, 2016, for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15; N.J.S.A. 52: 14F-1 to 13. The hearing was held on February 8, 2017. The record remained open to allow the parties to submit post-hearing submissions and the record closed on February 21, 2017.

FACTUAL DISCUSSIONS AND FINDINGS

John Jones has been employed by the respondent for seventeen years: thirteen years as a corrections officer; four years as a sergeant; and one month as a lieutenant. At the time of this incident, he was a sergeant in the Internal Affairs Department (IA). He has been in IA for ten years. His primary duties involve conducting criminal and administrative investigations and preparing reports. He prepared a five page IA report in connection with this case (R-2). Lt. Jones stated that on December 30, 2015, his supervisor gave him a photograph (R-3) of five correctional officers posing for the picture in a jail cell and requested an investigation to be conducted. Lt. Jones identified the five officers shown in the photograph as follows: the top left in the photograph is Officer John Gillen; Officer Jason King is below him gesturing with the middle finger; next to him kneeling, giving the #1 sign with his index finger, is Officer Isaac Reyes; Officer Matthew Bulzak has both hands on his belt and is to the right in the photograph; next to him on the right is Officer Damion Pearson, who also is making the #1 sign with his finger. Lt Jones conducted an IA interview of Officer Reyes on January 26, 2015 which was audiotaped and later transcribed (R-4). During the IA interview, Officer Reyes admitted he was familiar with the policies and procedures of the correctional facility. He knew that personal cell phones are not permitted as they are considered contraband. He also identified all of the officers in the photograph (R-3). Lt. Jones testified that during his IA interview, Officer Reyes was not forthcoming and that he lied and made excuses. He denied posing for the photograph and he denied knowing it was Officer Michael Jacobs personal cell phone. He believed it was the official county camera that Officer Jacobs was using. Officer Reyes was in the process of conducting the shakedown in the toilet area of the cell and he looked up and Officer Jacobs took the photo with the county camera. Officer Reyes could not describe the county camera. Lt. Jones described the county camera as being a red Nikon camera with a pop-up flash. The cell phone used by Officer Jacobs to take the photo was a black I-Phone 6, yet Officer Reyes insisted it was a county camera. He never admitted to seeing a cell phone. Lt. Jones advised Reyes that the consequences of lying to IA could include disciplinary charges as well as possible termination. Officer Reyes was adamant that he was giving a truthful statement. He never admitted to posing for the photo even though he was questioned why he was looking directly at the lens and making the #1 sign with his finger. Lt Jones also conducted IA interviews of Sgt. Pearson (R-5); Officer Bulzac (R-6); and Officer John Gillen (R-7). None of these officers denied posing for the photograph or said it was taken with the county camera. None of the other officers lied to IA. Officer Jason King was not interviewed by IA because he went out on an extended medical leave after the photograph (R-3) surfaced. As a result of his investigation, Lt. Jones recommended charges and issued a Supervisory Staff Complaint against Officer Reyes (R-8). He stated that the warden issues the charges and determines the penalty. Officer Reyes said he had previously seen Officer Jacobs with a cell phone so he believed he was allowed to have it. Lt. Jones stated that Officer Jacobs was previously reprimanded for having his cell phone in the jail before this incident. Lt. Jones stated that all of the officers who appeared in the photo (R-3) were brought up on charges.

John Gillen has been a Camden County Correctional Officer for twelve years. On November 9, 2014, he was involved in a "shakedown" while assigned to 3 North C Block. There were ten officers assigned to the shakedown including Officers Bulzac, Jacob, King, Reyes, and the supervisor, Sgt. Pearson. Officer Gillen identified all of the officers appearing in the photograph R-3, including himself shown on the top left corner of the photograph. Officer Michael Jacobs took the photo with his personal cellphone. They all posed for the photograph when Officer Jacobs said "Let's pose for a picture fellas". (R-7, page 6 line 236). Officer Gillen was familiar with the policies and procedures of the jail and knew that cellphones were not allowed in the correctional facility as they are contraband and could be a security breach if introduced to the inmates. He admitted observing Officer Michael Jacobs in possession of a personal cellphone that was smuggled into the prison, but did not notify his supervisor, Sgt. Pearson. He admitted this to IA. Officer Gillen also admitted to IA that Michael Jacobs took the photograph and that in his opinion it was clearly a cellphone and not a county camera. The photograph was not taken by surprise. He admitted that he made a bad judgment call allowing the photo to be taken of himself in uniform and with making the hand gestures. It was an embarrassment to himself and not indicative of his character as a law enforcement officer. He took full responsibility for his actions. Officer Gillen stated that he told IA the truth. On cross-examination, Officer Gillen admitted that he knew Officer Jacobs was using his personal cell phone on that date but did not report him to the supervisor because he did not want to get involved personally in what Officer Jacob was doing. Also, he did not want to report Officer Jacobs because they were friendly outside the facility.

Karen Taylor has been employed by the Camden County Department of Corrections for twenty years, the last three months as warden. When this incident occurred, she was the administrative captain. Her responsibilities included touring the facility; reviewing the cameras; and ensuring that the staff was following all policies and procedures. She would make decisions regarding discipline. She served as both an administrative captain as well as a regular captain assigned to a platoon. An administrative captain reviewed policy and recommended discipline.

This matter first came to her attention in early March 2015, following her receipt of the Supervisory Staff Report that was generated following the IA investigation concerning the circumstances surrounding the taking of the photograph R-3. Captain Taylor reviewed the photograph (R-3) of several staff members posing inside a cell inside the correctional facility that was taken by another staff member. She reviewed all of the documents including the IA report (R-2); the transcripts of the IA interviews of the officers involved (R-4, R-5, R-6, R-7); the Supervisory Staff report (R-8); Officer Reyes rebuttal (R-9); and the chronology of discipline of Officer Reyes (R-15). Based on her review of all the reports and prior discipline, she issued the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action 31A (R-1) dated 3/13/15. She recommended a 120-day suspension, but the warden makes the final decision.

Captain Taylor found Officer Reyes guilty of violating the orders, policies and procedures of the Camden County Corrections Department. All of the other officers admitted to posing for the picture and admitted that Officer Jacobs took the photo with his personal cell phone. They all admitted it except Reyes. Officer Reyes impeded the IA investigation claiming that he did not do anything wrong. Captain Taylor stated she questioned whether Officer Reyes would have advised his supervisor if Officer Jacobs had been bringing drugs in to the facility. She thinks not which goes to her belief that he has no accountability for his actions. Captain Taylor feels that he has to be made to understand which is why she recommended 120 days. Captain Taylor admitted that a 120-day suspension was a significant penalty, but he could have been terminated. Captain Taylor signed the Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (31-A) dated March 13, 2015 (R-1).

Captain Taylor was asked on cross-examination whether after seeing the photograph (R-3) was there anything else she would have needed in order to charge the officers involved. She stated that an investigation was necessary to make sure R-3 was the only photograph.

Officer Isaac Reyes testified on his own behalf. Officer Reyes was working November 9, 2014 and was assigned to a shakedown. He was shown R-3 and identified himself in the photograph that was taken on that date. He was interviewed by IA on January 26, 2015 and saw the photograph for the first time. He has in the past been issued a department approved cell phone and an approved camera when he worked as a videographer. He explained that at the time many officers had authorized cell phones. On November 9, 2014, he did not know Officer Jacobs had a personal cell phone in his possession. He assumed Officer Jacobs had a county camera in his possession. Officer Reyes also stated that he didn't realize Officer Jacobs was taking a picture that day. At the time, they were shaking down the cell and Officer Reyes was in the toilet area of the cell, when Officer Jacobs walked in with the device. Officer Reyes could not describe the device but assumed it was a camera that day. He stated that it looked like a camera. He now knows it was Jacobs' cell phone which makes him upset. He always assumed his fellow officers were acting lawfully. Officer Reyes did not think Officer Jacobs was in possession of anything unauthorized. He did not remember why he was holding up his finger making the #1 sign. Officer Reyes stated that a picture can say a thousand words. He was not aware that Officer Jacobs was taking a picture. Officer Reyes was asked whether he believed the other Officers were lying as to what they saw that day. He testified no, that was their interpretation. He was very much on the defense during his IA interview, however he did not lie to IA. Officer Reyes feels that everyone was telling the truth based on what they thought that day.

When assessing credibility, inferences may be drawn concerning the witness' expression, tone of voice and demeanor. MacDonald v. Hudson Bus Transportation Co., 100 N.J. Super. 103 (App. Div. 1968). Additionally, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963).

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App Div. 1958).

I deem Officer Reyes' testimony to be unbelievable. The other officers involved admitted to the photograph being taken by Officer Jacobs with his personal cellphone. Officer Reyes insisted he did not know Officer Jacobs was in possession of his personal cell phone and thought it was the county camera although he could not describe the device. Officer Reyes stated he did not pose for the photograph although he is looking right at the lens and gesturing with his finger and clearly posing in R-3. Based on the above, I do not believe Officer Reyes to be a credible witness.

In reviewing the record therefore, and after having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

1. Officer Reyes did pose for the photograph (R-3) in the jail cell on November 9, 2014 along with four other officers that was taken by Officer Jacobs with his personal cell phone.

2. Officer Reyes knew that Officer Jacobs used his personal cell phone in the jail to take the photograph.

3. Officer Reyes knew that personal cell phones were contraband and were not permitted in the jail.

4. Officer Reyes did not report Officer Jacobs to his supervisor.

5. Officer Reyes did not provide truthful answers during the course of the IA investigation.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Appellant's rights and duties are governed by laws including the Civil Service Act and accompanying regulations. A civil service employee who commits a wrongful act related to his or her employment may be subject to discipline, and that discipline, depending upon the incident complained of, may include a suspension or removal. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2, 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A2-2.

Appellant raises the issue that the internal charges should be dismissed since the respondent failed to comply with the requirements of the forty-five-day rule as set forth in N.J.S.A. 30:8-18.2. This rule does not apply to general causes for major discipline listed under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a). McElwee v. Bor. Of Fieldsboro, 400 N.J. Super. 388 (App. Div. 2008). Furthermore, since there was no appeal to the Commissioner for interim relief at the time the charges were brought pursuant to N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.5(e), procedural irregularities are deemed waived.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that any objections to the timeliness of the internal charges are waived.

The Appointing Authority bears the burden of establishing the truth of the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962) Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co , 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct 1940) (citation omitted). Stated differently, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see also Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J Super. 93,104 (App. Div. 1959).

Appellant was charged with "Conduct unbecoming a public employee," N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6). "Conduct unbecoming a public employee" is an elastic phrase, which encompasses conduct that adversely affects the morale or efficiency of a governmental unit or that has a tendency to destroy public respect in the delivery of governmental services. Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998); see also In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). It is sufficient that the complained - of conduct and its attending circumstances "be such as to offend publicly accepted standards of decency." Karins, supra, 152 N.J. at 555 (quoting In reZeber, 156 A.2d 821, 825 (1959)). Such misconduct need not necessarily "be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." Hartmann v. Police Dep't. of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992) (quoting Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955)).

Appellants status as a corrections officer subjects him to a higher standard of conduct than ordinary public employees. In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 576-77 (1980). They represent "law and order to the citizenry and must present an image of personal integrity and dependability in order to have the respect of the public." Township of Moorestown v. Armstrong, 89 N.J. Super. 560 (App. Div. 1965), certif. denied, 47 N.J. 80 (1966). Maintenance of strict discipline is important in military-like settings such as police departments, prisons and correctional facilities. Rivell v. Civil Serv. Comm'n, 115 N.J. Super. 64, 72 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 50 N.J. 269 (1971); City of Newark v. Massey, 93 N.J. Super. 317 (App. Div. 1967). Refusal to obey orders and disrespect of authority cannot be tolerated. Cosme v. Borough of E. Newark Twp. Comm., 304. N.J. Super. 191, 199 (App. Div. 1997).

> The need for proper control over the conduct of inmates in a correctional facility and the part played by proper relationships between those who are required to maintain order and enforce discipline and the inmates cannot be doubted. We can take judicial notice that such facilities, if not properly operated, have a capacity to become "tinderboxes" [Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305-06 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994).]

Officer Reyes allowed the contraband cell phone into the jail. He failed to report the contraband to his supervisor. He posed for the photograph in the jail cell with other officers all of whom were making various hand gestures which were unprofessional and brought discredit to the Department. In posing for the photograph he was not attending to his duties and breached security protocol. During the course of the IA investigation Officer Reyes was not forthcoming, impeded the investigation and lied to IA.

I CONCLUDE that appellant's conduct rose to the level of conduct unbecoming a public employee, and that the respondent has met its burden of proof on this issue.

Appellant was also charged with neglect of duty in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7). There is no definition in the New Jersey Administrative Code for neglect of duty, but the charge has been interpreted to mean that an employee has failed to perform and act as required by the description of their job title. Neglect of duty can arise from an omission or failure to perform a duty and includes official misconduct or misdoing, as well as negligence. Generally, the term 'negligent' connotes a deviation from normal standards of conduct. In re Kerlin, 151 N.J. Super. 179, 186 (App. Div. 1977), neglect of duty implies nonperformance of some official duty imposed upon a public employee, not merely commission of an imprudent act. Rushin v. Bd. Of Child Welfare, 65 N.J. Super. 504, 515 (App. Div. 1961).

Officer Reyes allowed the contraband cell phone into the jail. He failed to report the contraband to his supervisor as he was required to do. He failed to report Officer Jacobs for bringing in the contraband to the jail. He allowed the photograph to be taken of him and the other officers with the contraband cell phone. By posing for the photograph he was inattentive and neglecting his duties. By posing for the photograph he brought discredit to the Department. Officer Reyes was under a duty to respond truthfully to IA and he did not. He failed to cooperate with the IA investigation and impeded the IA investigation by maintaining that the cell phone was a county camera. He failed to accept responsibility for his actions and his conduct.

I CONCLUDE that respondent has met its burden of proof in establishing that appellants conduct constituted neglect of duty.

Appellant has also been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), "Other sufficient cause." Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standard of good behavior that devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Appellant's conduct in posing for the photograph in the jail cell, failing to report the contraband cellphone and being untruthful throughout his IA interview, violates the implicit standard of good behavior one would expect from a corrections officer. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has met its burden of proof in establishing a violation of other sufficient cause.

The appellant was also charged with violations of C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct: 1.1 Violations in General; 1:2 Conduct Unbecoming; 1.3 Neglect of Duty; 2.10 Inattentiveness to Duty; 3.2 Security; General Order #73, #74; and Internal Affairs Order #001. Officer Reyes violated the C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct (R-11, section 1.2) "Conduct Unbecoming" in that his conduct in posing for the photograph brings discredit upon the department. Officer Reyes also violated section 1.3 of the Rules of Conduct (R-11) regarding "Neglect of Duty in that he failed to notify his supervisor of the contraband that was brought into the facility and he had a duty to do so. He lied during the investigation. Furthermore, while he is posing for the picture, he is not paying attention to his duties and inattentiveness to duty is dangerous in a corrections facility (R-11 section 2.10) Allowing contraband into the facility and failure to report the contraband is a breach of security (R 11, section 3.2). Officer Reyes also violated General Order #73 (R-13) which requires all department employees to conduct themselves in a manner that will not bring discredit or criticism to the department. Common sense and good judgment are to be the guiding principles for the expected employee standard of conduct. Officer Reyes lied to IA and continued to lie to IA in his rebuttal by maintaining that the cell phone was a county camera. He did not accept responsibility for his actions. He also violated General Order #74 (R-14) which requires all sworn personnel to conduct themselves in a professional and ethical manner at all times. Officer Reyes conduct in this matter detracted from the professionalism required of all department members. Officer Reyes also failed to report the contraband as required by R-14, section 5. He also violated the Department of Corrections IA policy Order #001 (R-10, page 7, Section 9(h)) which states: "Employees being questioned are obligated to answer all questions truthfully or he/she will be subject to disciplinary action, up to and may include termination." All of the other officers told the truth that it was a cell phone and that they posed for the picture. Officer Reyes did not. He lied to IA.

I CONCLUDE that Respondent has met its burden of proof in establishing violations of these department rules of conduct and orders.

PENALTY

The Civil Service Commission's review of a penalty is de novo. N.J.S.A. 11A:2-19 and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.9(d) specifically grant the Commission authority to increase or decrease the penalty imposed by the appointing authority. General principles of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. Town of W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962). Typically, the Board considers numerous factors, including the nature of the offense, the concept of progressive discipline and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463.

"Although we recognize that a tribunal may not consider an employee's past record to prove a present charge, West New York v. Brock, 38 N.J. 500, 523 (1962), that past record may be considered when determining the appropriate penalty for the current offense." In re Phillips, 117 N.J. 567, 581 (1990). Ultimately, however, "it is the appraisal of the seriousness of the offense which lies at the heart of the matter." Bowden v. Bayside State Prison, 268 N.J. Super. 301, 305 (App. Div. 1993), certif. denied, 135 N.J. 469 (1994). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

For his actions arising out of this incident, appellant has been found to have violated N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) Conduct Unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) Neglect of Duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) Other Sufficient Cause; C.C.C.F. Rules of Conduct: 1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct Unbecoming; 1.3 Neglect of Duty; 2.10 Inattentiveness to Duty; 3.2 Security; General Order #73, #74; and Internal Affairs Order #001. Appellant received a 120-day suspension from February 17, 2016 to June 15, 2016 (R-1). Respondent provided appellants chronology of discipline (R-15) which indicates he had been disciplined on three previous occasions. On September 15, 2014 and September 25, 2014 appellant received a reprimand for abuse of sick leave (AWOL). On June 18, 2013, he received a five-day suspension for neglect of duty. He also received a one day suspension on June 18, 2013 for neglect of duty. On September 12, 2012 appellant received a thirty-day suspension for neglect of duty, failure to perform duty, insubordination, conduct unbecoming and various other rules of conduct arising out of an incident that occurred on May 11, 2012. On that date, appellant was in the control booth engaged in conversation when he should have been patrolling the moat area. During the time appellant was failing to perform his duties, an inmate was severely assaulted requiring hospitalization. Appellants failure to take accountability for his actions, his impeding the IA investigation and being untruthful during his IA interview, support the imposition of the 120-day suspension. After having considered all of the proofs offered in this matter and the impact upon the C.C.C.F. regarding the behavior by appellant herein, and after having given due deference to the impact of and the role to be considered by and relative to progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that appellant's violations are significant to warrant a penalty of a 120-day suspension. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the imposition of a 120-day suspension was an appropriate penalty.

ORDER

I CONCLUDE that the respondent has sustained its burden of proof as to the charges of violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6) Conduct Unbecoming; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7) Neglect of Duty; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12) Other Sufficient Cause; C.C.C.F Rules of Conduct: 1.1 Violations in General; 1.2 Conduct Unbecoming; 1.3 Neglect of Duty; 2.10 Inattentiveness to Duty; 3.2 Security; General Order #73, #74; and Internal Affairs Order #001.

Accordingly, I ORDER that the action of respondent in suspending the appellant for 120 days is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

CONFIDENTIAL SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Confidential Settlement Agreement and General Release (the "Agreement") is by and between Arti Sahni ("Sahni") and Ewing Township ("Ewing"), collectively referred to as the "Parties".

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the promises and mutual covenants set forth in this Agreement, together with other good and valuable consideration, the sufficiency and receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Definitions. As used in this Agreement, any reference to Ewing shall include its predecessors and successors and all of its present, past, and future directors, elected officials, officers, employees, representatives, attorneys, insurers, reinsurers, agents and assigns, as well as all of its affiliates, parent or controlling corporations, partners, divisions and subsidiaries. Any reference to Sahni shall include, her family, heirs, administrators, representatives, agents, successors and assigns.

2. Conclusion of Employment. Sahni's employment with Ewing has concluded effective August 5, 2014. Sahni and Ewing desire to amicable resolve any and all claims arising out of Sahni's employment and separation therefrom.

3. Release. In consideration of the obligations created by this Agreement, together with other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and adequacy of which is hereby acknowledged, Sahni freely and unconditionally relinquishes, waives and releases Ewing from all possible claims, complaints, charges, liabilities, promises, obligations, demands, agreements, damages, debts, dues, sums of money, covenants, and lawsuits of any nature whatsoever, whether presently known or unknown, which may have arisen from the beginning of time through the date of signature on this Agreement, exclusive of a claim for breach of this Agreement. "All possible claims" includes those arising from, involving or relating to Sahni's claims set forth in EEOC, New Jersey Department of Labor, New Jersey Division of Civil Rights, PERC, OAL, and including but not limited to, any and all claims for damages of whatever kind or nature whatsoever, injunctive relief, attorneys' fees, expenses and costs. This release of claims includes but is not limited to, any and all claims for employment discrimination on the basis of age, race, color, religion, sex, national origin, veteran status, disability and/or handicap, marital status, sexual orientation, or any other characteristic protected by law; any and all claims for unlawful retaliation; and any and all claims in violation of any federal, state or local statues, ordinance, executive order, or common law doctrine including, but not limited to, claims for discrimination under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; the Americans with Disabilities Act, as amended; the Americans with Disabilities Amendments Act of 2008; the Employee Retirement and Income Security Act of 1974, and any other applicable federal or state statue relating to employee benefits or pensions; 29 U.S.C. Sec. 1000; the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair

Labor Standards Act; the Rehabilitation Act of 1972; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Wage Payment Law; and amendments to any and all of these laws; all New Jersey wage and hour, overtime, disability and family leave laws; the New Jersey Constitution; the U.S. Constitution; and any other federal, state, foreign, or local laws or regulations prohibiting employment discrimination of any kind; the common law, civil codes; any action in tort or wrongful discharge or breach of any other contract, express or implies, or breach of covenant of good faith and fair dealing, or express or implied public policy of the United States, the State of New Jersey, or any other state; any and all claims in tort or contract; any and all claims for compensatory, emotional distress or punitive damages; and any and all claims for attorneys' fees and/or costs.

4. Monetary Consideration. Within thirty (30) days of receipt of the executed Agreement by Sahni, Sahni will receive payment in the gross amount of Nine Thousand Three Hundred Twenty Five Dollars ($9,325.00) (referred to herein as the "Settlement Amount"). In full and final settlement of all claims between the Parties. The Settlement Amount will be paid by one (1) check in the amount of Nine Thousand Three Hundred Twenty Five Dollars ($9,325.00), made payable to Arti Sahni. The check identified above shall be sent by certified mail to the offices of Sahni's counsel, Jason Jones, Esquire. The Settlement Amount will be paid in exchange for Sahni's general release of claims and other promises in this Agreement, as recited in Paragraph 3 above.

5. Indemnification. Sahni understands that for the purpose of Federal and State Income Tax, Sahni shall be solely responsible for the allocation of the Settlement Amount referred to herein. Sahni acknowledges that Ewing has not made and makes no representations to Sahni as to the tax treatment of the Settlement Amount. Ewing has no monetary liability or obligation regarding payment whatsoever (other than delivering valid check in the sum referenced in Paragraph 4 of this agreement to Sahni and her counsel). Sahni agrees to bear all tax consequences, if any, attendant upon the payment to her of the Settlement Amount. Sahni agrees to defend, indemnify and hold Ewing harmless for any adverse tax consequences arising out of the payment of the Settlement Amount, including required tax withholdings, penalties, additions to tax and/or interest that Ewing is obligated to pay because of the tax treatment of the Settlement Amount.

6. Waiver of Re-employment. Sahni understands that she is waiving all rights to employment, re-employment and/or reinstatement with Ewing, and that should she apply for re-employment, Ewing may lawfully and by this Agreement decline such application with impunity.

7. All Compensation Due. Sahni specifically represents and warrants that she was paid all compensation due and owing and arising out of her employment with Ewing, including but not limited to wages, overtime, sick, bonuses, and any other form of compensation.

8. Agreement To Refrain From Filing Claims. Sahni represents that she has not filed any lawsuit or initiated any proceeding against Ewing, except the Claims identified above, Sahni also agrees not to bring any lawsuit or initiate any proceeding for any claim waived in any Paragraph of this Agreement, and agrees, further, not to encourage anyone else to do so on her behalf, to the maximum extent possible under applicable law.

9. No Admission of Liability. This agreement is a compromise of disputed claims. Neither the execution of this Agreement nor any provision or term hereof constitutes an admission of liability or fault on the part of Ewing. Sahni acknowledges that Ewing is entering into this Agreement for the sole purpose of avoiding further protracted and expensive litigation. Nothing in this Agreement is an admission of liability by Ewing and nothing in this Agreement may be interpreted as an admission of liability.

10. Public Interest. Settlement of this matter is in the public interest and avoids the financial, legal and administrative burden which will result from continued litigation.

11. CONFIDENTIALITY. SAHNI AGREES TO KEEP THE TERMS OF THIS AGREEMENT, INCLUDING THE SETTLEMENT AMOUNT, AND THE NEGOTIATIONS LEADING TO THIS AGREEMENT, STRICTLY CONFIDENTIAL. SAHNI REPRESENTS THAT SHE WILL NOT DISCLOSE, SUCH INFORMATION TO ANYONE, EITHER DIRECTLY OR INDIRECTLY, WITH THE FOLLOWING EXCEPTIONS: SHE MAY DISCLOSE THE AGREEMENT TO HER SPOUSE, ATTORNEYS, ACCOUNTANTS, AND/OR TAX ADVISORS IN ORDER TO OBTAIN PROFESSIONAL ADVICE WITHIN THE SCOPE OF THEIR REPRESENTATION. THIS PARAGRAPH DOES NOT PROHIBIT SAHNI FROM STATING THAT THE MATTER HAS BEEN AMICABLE RESOLVED IN RESPONSE TO INQUIRIES REGARDING THE CLAIMS.

12. Non-Disparagement. Sahni agrees that she will not make any negative statements (oral, written, or otherwise) about Ewing or otherwise disparage Ewing.

13. Neutral Reference. In response to written employment verification and/or reference inquiries on behalf of Sahni to Ewing, Ewing will provide a "neutral" reference by confirming Sahni's employment with Ewing and providing her job title, dates of employment, and rate of pay. All inquiries must be directed in writing to Hilary Hyser, Personnel Director. Sahni's separation from employment shall be listed as a "Resignation in Good Standing" per N.J.A.C. 4A:2-6.3.

14. Medicare.

    a. While it is impossible to accurately predict the need for medical treatment, this settlement is based upon a good faith determination of the Parties to resolve a disputed claim. The Parties have not shifted responsibility of medical treatment to Medicare in contravention of 42 U.S.C. Sec. 1395y(b). The Parties resolved this matter in compliance with both state and federal law. The Parties made every effort to adequately protect Medicare's interest and incorporate such into the terms and conditions of this Agreement.

b. Sahni, and her counsel warrant that Sahni is not a Medicare beneficiary as of the effective date of this Agreement. Because Sahni is not a Medicare recipient as of the effective date of this Agreement, no conditional payments have been made by Medicare.
c. Sahni will indemnify, defend and hold Ewing harmless from any and all claims, liens, Medicare conditional payments and rights to payment, known or unknown, If any governmental entity, or anyone acting on behalf of any governmental entity, relating to Sahni's alleged injuries, claims or lawsuit, Sahni will defend and indemnify Ewing and its Insurer, and Ewing and its Insurer harmless from any and all such damages, claims, liens, Medicare conditional payments and rights to payment, including any attorney's fees sought by such entities.
d. While these claims are included in the waiver of claims set forth in Paragraph 3 of this Agreement, Sahni further expressly acknowledges and agrees that she is waiving any and all further actions against Ewing, including but not limited to any private cause of action for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1395y(b)(3)(A) et seq.

15. Breach. Sahni is not aware of any other claim that could be asserted against Ewing. Sahni understands that if she brings any future legal action, proceeding of any kind against, or makes any claim against Ewing for any claim arising out of, on account of, based upon, or in any way related to all or any part of the subject matter of the Claims, or the prosecution or defense thereof (other than an action or claim based upon a breach of the Agreement) or if she otherwise breaches this Agreement, Sahni shall immediately return to Ewing 85% of any consideration she received under this Agreement. Ewing shall be entitled to recover any damages proven to result from such breach and shall be entitled to be reimbursed by Sahni for all reasonable legal fees, costs and expenses, including any lost profits, incurred by Ewing in defending itself in enforcing its rights relative to such matters.

16. Severability. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining parts, terms or provisions shall not be affected thereby, and said illegal or invalid part, term or provision shall be deemed not to be part of this Agreement. This Agreement expresses the complete and only understanding between the Parties with respect to its subject matter, and no promise, inducement or agreement not herein expressed has been made. No change or modification to this Agreement shall be binding on any Party unless it is in writing and executed by all Parties.

17. Acknowledgement of Waiver of Claims Under the ADEA.

a. Sahni acknowledges that she is waiving and releasing any rights she may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967 ("ADEA") and that this waiver and release is knowing and voluntary and complies with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act ("OWBOA"). Sahni acknowledges that the consideration given for this waiver and release agreement is in addition to anything of value to which she was already entitled.
b. Sahni further acknowledges that she has been advised by this writing that (a) she should consult with an attorney prior to executing this Agreement; (b) she has at least twenty-one (21) days within which to consider this Agreement; (c) she has seven (7) days following her execution of this Agreement to revoke this Paragraph 17 (the "Revocation Period"); (d) this Agreement shall not be effective until the Revocation Period has expired (the "Effective Date"); and by executing the Agreement in advance of the expiration of the 21 day period stated herein, Sahni thereby voluntarily waives the 21 day consideration period discussed in subsection (B) of this Paragraph.

18. Construction. This Agreement shall be governed by, and construed in accordance with, the laws of the State of New Jersey. Any disputes relating to this Agreement shall be resolved exclusively by a state or federal court in the State of New Jersey, and the Parties hereto consent to the jurisdiction of the venue of said courts. This Agreement shall be construed according to its plain language, and not strictly for or against any Party hereto. Captions herein are inserted for convenience, do not constitute a part of this Agreement, and shall not be admissible for the purpose of proving the intent of the Parties.

19. Counterparts. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts, each of which shall be deemed an original, but all of which shall constitute one and the same instrument.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. CSV 14860-12
AGENCY DKT. NO. 2013-963

IN THE MATTER OF JOHN WILLIAMS,
TRENTON PSYCHIATRIC HOSPITAL

William A. Nash, Esq., for appellant John Williams (Nash Law Firm, attorneys)

Peter H. Jenkins, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent Trenton Psychiatric Hospital (Christopher S. Porrino, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 13, 2017 Decided: March 21, 2017

BEFORE EDWARD J. DELANOY, JR., ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Appellant John Williams was removed from his position as a human services technician (HST) at the Trenton Psychiatric Hospital (TPH) after charges pertaining to a physical altercation with another employee of TPH on February 20, 2012, were sustained. The specifications underlying the charges set forth:

> Through a review of the video, on 2/20/12, you violated Executive Order 48, and TPH's zero tolerance of violence in the workplace by physically assaulting another employee.

> The video revealed that you used a clipboard as a weapon when you threw a clipboard with the intent to injury [sic] another employee. In fact, you caused injury to Charge Nurse, MK which required medical attention. Your behavior was threatening, intimidating and caused intentional injury to MK. Behaviors that comprise [sic] safety of employees and patients will not be tolerated. This is not the conduct one would expect from a TPH employee that is responsible for the well being of patients. Your conduct reflects negatively on TPH and is in violation of the policies prohibiting violence in the workplace.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 18, 2012, appellant was charged in a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action. (R-1.) A departmental hearing was held and all charges were sustained. A Final Notice of Disciplinary Action was filed on October 1, 2012, removing appellant from his position effective April 18, 2012. (R-2.) Appellant appealed on October 10, 2012, and on October 23, 2012, the matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The matter was assigned to Administrative Law Judge John F. Russo, Jr. on December 20, 2012. On March 26, 2013, the appellant passed away while the case was pending before Judge Russo and by request of appellant's counsel, the matter was held open while the parties applied for an administrator of the estate. On March 26, 2013, John Paul Dickerson was appointed as co-administrator of the Estate of John Williams. By letter dated September 30, 2014, the State requested this matter be placed on the inactive list for a period of sixty days to provide sufficient time to determine whether appellant's estate would enter an appearance in this case. No written order of inactivity was issued by Judge Russo; however, a motion to reinstate the appeal was submitted by appellant's counsel on January 8, 2015. The State opposed the motion and requested the motion be denied and dismissed as no documentation was produced nearly one year later as to whether appellant's estate was pursuing the appeal. Judge Russo granted appellant's order on August 13, 2015. Prior to the conclusion of this matter, Judge Russo was appointed to Superior Court and the case was reassigned to me on January 5, 2016. The Estate of John Williams determined to continue this matter to a hearing. After several conference calls with the parties, a hearing date was scheduled and held on January 10, 2017. Summation briefs were fully submitted on February 13, 2017, and on that date the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Mary Kuriakose has been employed as a charge nurse by TPH for sixteen years. Kuriakose worked with HST Williams for ten years at TPH. Kuriakose knew Williams to have anger management issues, and he would slam doors and kick items in TPH.

On February 20, 2012, Williams arrived late for his shift. He was angry for some unknown reason. Kuriakose assigned Williams a temporary 1:1 observation of a difficult elderly female patient who had confusion issues, as well as a propensity to undress and touch herself inappropriately. Williams was unhappy with this assignment, and as he began observing the patient, he began screaming loudly. Williams was requesting to switch off the 1:1 of this patient, and for assignment to another patient. When Kuriakose responded negatively, Williams answered with profanity. Kuriakose requested Williams to quiet down, and he responded by throwing a hard clipboard at Kuriakose. The clipboard struck Kuriakose in her upper left arm, and Kuriakose later produced a statement and informed her supervisor of the incident. As a result of being struck by the clipboard, Kuriakose received a two-inch-long by half-inch-wide black mark on her upper left arm. Her left arm was not injured before the incident. She was treated and released from a local emergency room. Kuriakose did not call the police or file criminal charges against Williams. It was not against TPH policy for a male HST to undertake a 1:1 observation of a female patient.

Kuriakose viewed a video recording taken on February 20, 2012, showing an angle from inside TPH where the incident occurred. (R-10.) The video does not have audio. The video shows Williams at 1:42 a.m. At 1:45 a.m., Williams is seated and Kuriakose is standing. At 1:47 a.m., Williams stands and then sits, so that he can observe the patient. At 1:48, Williams is cursing at Kuriakose, and he throws a clipboard at Kuriakose. The video is unclear as to whether it struck Kuriakose. Williams then stands up and retrieves the clipboard.

John Paul Dickerson is the co-administrator of his father's (John Williams) estate. Dickerson has worked at TPH for fifteen years. On February 20, 2012, Williams requested Dickerson to meet him. Williams discussed the incident with Dickerson. Williams told Dickerson that he requested to be switched to another patient, and that he exchanged words with Kuriakose. Kuriakose advised Williams that she would not make the switch, and that if he did not like it, he could retire. Williams stated that he never struck Kuriakose with the clipboard, and that he was very upset about the incident.

Audrey Houston worked with Williams at TPH for fifteen years. Williams was not a violent man, but he was outspoken. The day after the incident, Williams spoke to Houston. He advised her that he requested to be switched to another patient because his patient was stripping off her clothes and touching herself. Kuriakose advised Williams that she would not make the switch, and Williams was upset. Williams stated that he did throw the clipboard at Kuriakose, but that he never struck Kuriakose with the clipboard.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Given that the Estate of John Williams has challenged the credibility of Kuriakose, it is my obligation and responsibility to weigh the credibility of the witness in order to make a determination. Credibility is the value that a fact finder gives to a witness's testimony. The word contemplates an overall assessment of a witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Credible testimony has been defined as testimony that must proceed from the mouth of a credible witness and must be such as common experience, knowledge, and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955) (quoting In re Perrone's Estate, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950)). In assessing credibility, the interests, motives or bias of a witness are relevant, and a fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973). Credibility does not depend on the number of witnesses and the finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re Perrone's Estate, supra, 5 N.J. 514.

The respondent's evidence was the testimony of Kuriakose and the recorded video of the incident. The recording was from a camera located above the room where the incident occurred. This camera angle does clearly show a view of what occurred, and what actions were undertaken by Williams. (R-10.) Kuriakose subsequently filed a report confirming the incident. (R-6.) Respondent's position is that the video revealed that Williams threw a clipboard at Kuriakose, and that he hit Kuriakose with the clipboard. Williams had a responsibility to refrain from this type of action. The altercation was sufficiently egregious as to require the removal of Williams.

The Estate of John Williams did not produce any evidence refuting the respondent's evidence. Their position is that the clipboard did not hit Kuriakose, and that the video confirms this. They submit that the video reveals that Kuriakose does not react to the clipboard hitting her, and her left arm must have been injured prior to this incident. Although Kuriakose testified that she immediately reported the incident to her supervisor, the statement of Kuriakose's supervisor, Inese Conklin, reveals that Kuriakose did not report the matter to her supervisor until 3:00 a.m. (R-9.) Finally, the Estate of Williams argues that Williams was improperly assigned to a watch a female patient who was disrobing in front of him.

After my review of the video, I note that it is recorded with relatively high-definition clarity, and it does provide a sufficient view of the incident. Although audio is not provided, the camera shows Williams addressing Kuriakose for several minutes before throwing a hard clipboard at Kuriakose. The video is unclear as to whether it struck Kuriakose, and Williams then stands up and retrieves the clipboard. Based simply on that video, it is clear that John Williams throws a hard clipboard at Kuriakose. Unfortunately, because of his untimely death, John Williams could not share his version of what occurred on that day. Nevertheless, the Estate of John Williams urges that the clipboard did not hit Kuriakose, and the Estate argues that Kuriakose lacks credibility.

The Estate offers as proof the fact that Kuriakose does not react in the video to the clipboard allegedly hitting her. However, the unrefuted credible testimony of Kuriakose was that the clipboard did hit her, and that it caused bruising on her left arm. There is also no evidence in the record that the left arm of Kuriakose was injured prior to this incident. Although Kuriakose testified that she immediately reported the incident to her supervisor, the statement of Kuriakose's supervisor, Inese Conklin, reveals that Kuriakose did not report the matter to her supervisor until 3:00 a.m. I attribute this inconsistency in the testimony of Kuriakose to the passage of time and the dimming of her memory because of such time passage. Finally, the fact that Williams was assigned to a watch a female patient who was disrobing in front of him was not against TPH policy, according to the unrefuted testimony of Kuriakose. As such, this is also not an issue herein. For all of the aforementioned reasons, I give credibility to the testimony of Kuriakose.

The record in this matter includes video evidence and the credible testimony of an individual who witnessed or had knowledge of the incident they described. After carefully considering the testimonial and video evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to review the video on numerous occasions and to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter:

On February 20, 2012, Williams arrived late for his shift and angry for some unknown reason. Kuriakose assigned Williams a temporary 1:1 observation of a difficult elderly female patient who had confusion issues, as well as a propensity to undress and touch herself inappropriately. Williams was unhappy with this assignment, and as he began observing the patient, he began screaming loudly. Williams was requesting to switch off the 1:1 of this patient, and for assignment to another patient. When Kuriakose responded negatively, Williams answered with profanity. Kuriakose requested Williams to quiet down, and he responded by throwing a hard clipboard at Kuriakose. The clipboard struck Kuriakose in her upper left arm, and Kuriakose later produced a statement and informed her supervisor of the incident. As a result of being struck by the clipboard, Kuriakose suffered a two-inch-long by half-inch-wide black mark on her upper left arm. Her left arm was not injured before the incident. It was not against TPH policy for a male HST to undertake a 1:1 observation of a female patient.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Civil service employees' rights and duties are governed by the Civil Service Act and regulations promulgated pursuant thereto. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-1 to 11A:12-6; N.J.A.C. 4A:1-1.1. The Act is an important inducement to attract qualified people to public service and is to be liberally applied toward merit appointment and tenure protection. Mastrobattista v. Essex Cnty. Park Comm'n, 46 N.J. 138, 147 (1965). However, consistent with public policy and civil service law, a public entity should not be burdened with an employee who fails to perform his or her duties satisfactorily or who engages in misconduct related to his or her duties. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(a). Such a civil service employee may be subject to major discipline. N.J.S.A. 11A:1-2(b), 11A:2-6, 11A:2-20; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2, -2.3(a).

In appeals concerning major disciplinary actions brought against classified employees, the burden of proof is on the appointing authority. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-1.4(a). The standard of proof in administrative proceedings is a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958). The preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in a case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Testimony, to be believed, must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness, but it must be credible in itself. Spagnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546, 554–55 (1954). Both guilt and penalty are redetermined on appeal from a determination by the appointing authority. Henry v. Rahway State Prison, 81 N.J. 571 (1980); W. New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962). An appeal to the Civil Service Commission requires the Office of Administrative Law to conduct a de novo hearing and to determine the appellant's guilt or innocence, as well as the appropriate penalty. In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143 (App. Div. 1987); Cliff v. Morris Cnty. Bd. of Soc. Servs., 197 N.J. Super. 307 (App. Div. 1984).

Based on the specifications in the charges, John Williams was charged with unbecoming conduct, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and other sufficient cause, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11). In addition, John Williams was charged with violations of Department of Human Services Disciplinary Action Program (DAP) C3-1, physical or mental abuse of a patient, client, resident, or employee; C5-1, inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident or employee; and E1-1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, or administrative decision. John Williams was removed from his duty as a result of this incident.

John Williams has been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming a public employee. Conduct unbecoming a public employee has been described as an elastic phrase that includes any conduct that adversely affects the morale of governmental employees or the efficiency of a public entity or conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for governmental employees and confidence in public entities. Karins v. City of Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532, 554–57 (1998); In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136 (App. Div. 1960). A finding or conclusion that a public employee engaged in unbecoming conduct need not be based upon the violation of a particular rule or regulation and may be based upon the implicit standard of good behavior governing public employees consistent with public policy. City of Asbury Park v. Dep't of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 32, 40 (App. Div. 1992).

The video showed John Williams throwing a hard clipboard at his supervisor. Whether or not the clipboard struck Kuriakose, and I have found that it did, the actions of John Williams represent conduct that could adversely affect the morale of governmental employees or the efficiency of a public entity or conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for governmental employees and confidence in public entities. Such actions do not reflect the implicit standard of good behavior governing public employees consistent with public policy. Therefore, as to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that John Williams did commit an act of unbecoming conduct. I do so CONCLUDE.

John Williams has been charged with violating N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12), other sufficient cause. Other sufficient cause is an offense for conduct that violates the implicit standards of good behavior which devolve upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. As to the charge of other sufficient cause, respondent has met its burden of proof that John Williams threw a hard clipboard at his supervisor. Therefore, respondent has proven that John Williams committed an act that violated standards of good behavior for an HST, and I do so CONCLUDE.

John Williams has been charged with violating DAP section C3-1, physical or mental abuse of a patient, client, resident, or employee. As to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that John Williams threw a hard clipboard at his supervisor, who is an employee of TPH. Therefore, respondent has proven that appellant committed an act of physical abuse of an employee, and I do so CONCLUDE.

John Williams has been charged with violating DAP section C5-1, inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident or employee. As to this charge, respondent has met its burden of proof that John Williams threw a hard clipboard at his supervisor, and that the clipboard physically contacted her. The supervisor is an employee of TPH. Therefore, respondent has proven that appellant committed an act of inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of an employee, and I do so CONCLUDE.

John Williams has been charged with violating DAP section E1-1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, or administrative decision. Respondent alleges that appellant has violated TPH Policy and Procedure 3.500 ("Procedure"). The Procedure sets forth that:

> The safety and security of all employees at Trenton Psychiatric Hospital is of the utmost importance. It is the policy of the Hospital that threats and threatening behavior, harassment, intimidation, physical acts of violence, and intentional property damage committed on hospital property will not be tolerated.

> Any intent to use or use of, any object as a weapon is also a violation of this policy.
> [R-4]

Respondent has proven that appellant intended to use the clipboard as a weapon, in violation of the Procedure. Appellant also harassed and threatened a fellow employee of TPH. Therefore, respondent has proven that appellant committed a violation of the Procedure, and I do so CONCLUDE.

PENALTY

In determining the appropriateness of a penalty, several factors must be considered, including the nature of the employee's offense, the concept of progressive discipline, and the employee's prior record. George v. N. Princeton Developmental Ctr., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (CSV) 463. Pursuant to West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 523–24 (1962), concepts of progressive discipline involving penalties of increasing severity are used where appropriate. See also In re Parlo, 192 N.J. Super. 247 (App. Div. 1983). The question to be resolved is whether the discipline imposed in this case is appropriate.

John Williams has been found guilty of unbecoming conduct, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(6); and other sufficient cause, in violation of N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(12). In addition, appellant has been found guilty of violations of DAP C3-1, physical or mental abuse of a patient, client, resident, or employee; C5-1, inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a patient, client, resident or employee; and E1-1, violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, or administrative decision. John Williams has been removed for his actions on February 20, 2012.

The parties have stipulated that appellant has no prior disciplinary action on his record. While I am aware that the penalty of removal is substantial, I am satisfied that appellant's actions herein were egregious.

Appellant did physically abuse an employee of TPH. If an action of abuse is found, then the appropriate discipline is found in the DAP of the New Jersey Department of Human Services. (C-1.) This document calls for removal of an employee when abuse is found. (C-1 at 10.) There is no discretion allowed in the document. Concepts of progressive discipline or discussions of a range of disciplines are not to be considered. Such action from an employee in the position of appellant is unacceptable. It is impossible to see how the appointing authority could have continued to allow appellant to remain in his position. The removal of appellant was not inappropriate, and it was necessary to maintain the diligence and integrity of the appointing authority staff. I CONCLUDE that the finding of abuse requires removal, and that the action by the appointing authority was acceptable.

Appellant also committed inappropriate physical contact or mistreatment of a employee. The DAP calls for a penalty for a first offense ranging from official reprimand to removal. (C-1 at 11.) There is discretion allowed in the document for this violation. Concepts of progressive discipline or discussions of a range of disciplines may be considered for this violation. However, such action from an employee in the position of appellant is unacceptable. It is again impossible to see how the appointing authority could have continued to allow appellant to remain in his position. The removal of appellant was not inappropriate, and it was necessary to maintain the diligence and integrity of the appointing authority staff. I CONCLUDE that the finding of inappropriate contact requires removal, and that the action by the appointing authority was acceptable.

Finally, appellant violated the Procedure. The DAP calls for a penalty for a first offense ranging from counseling to removal. (C-1 at 16.) There is discretion allowed in the document for this violation. Concepts of progressive discipline or discussions of a range of disciplines may be considered for this violation. However, such action from an employee in the position of appellant is unacceptable. The appointing authority could not be expected to have continued to allow appellant to remain in his position. The removal of appellant was not inappropriate, and it was necessary to maintain the diligence and integrity of the appointing authority staff. I CONCLUDE that the finding of the Procedure requires removal, and that the action by the appointing authority was acceptable.

Given the actions of appellant on February 20, 2012, imposition of major discipline is necessary to maintain the diligence and integrity of the appointing-authority staff. Appellant's behavior was serious and unprofessional. As a public employee, the appellant's actions must be above reproach.

Having considered all the proofs offered in this matter, and the impact upon the institution of the behavior by appellant herein, and having given due deference to the concept of progressive discipline, I CONCLUDE that appellant's misbehavior on February 20, 2012, was so significant as to warrant his removal. which, in part, is meant to impress upon TPH employees, as well as others, the seriousness of his infractions. Therefore, based on the totality of the record, I CONCLUDE that the imposition of removal was appropriate.

ORDER

I ORDER that the appeal of John Williams is DENIED, and that the disciplinary action of the TPH removing appellant is AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Civil Service Commission does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the DIRECTOR, DIVISION OF APPEALS AND REGULATORY AFFAIRS, UNIT H, CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION, 44 South Clinton Avenue, PO Box 312, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0312, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.
