Gov. Whitman to Meet with Employees of New Jersey Performing Arts Center

Governor Whitman tomorrow will meet with employees of the New Jersey Performing Arts Center to commend them for their efforts and wish them luck on the eve of the Center's historic opening performance October 17.

NJPAC is the culmination of a decade of public and private efforts to plan and build a center for the performing arts in New Jersey. In addition to helping revitalize the local economy, the Center will create over 75 permanent jobs. During its construction, which began in 1993, the Center generated 1,000 jobs.

GOVERNOR'S SCHEDULE FRIDAY, OCTOBER 17, 1997
