SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured teacher, now retired from the district – contested the Board's denial of her claim for six additional workers' compensation days, instead charging her for six sick days for time lost due to a work-related injury in February 2004. The case was put on the inactive list pending completion of the workers' compensation matter, after which a hearing was held at the OAL in December 2009.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner made claims for more than 30 work related injuries during the course of her 25 years of employment with the district; petitioner's only documentary evidence in the record were multiple certificates of fitness from respondent's workers' compensation physician, which stated that her injuries resulted from bruising and presented dates upon which the physician had deemed petitioner able to return to work; petitioner's testimony lacked credibility; and petitioner failed to prove that the Board's rejection of her claim for additional workers' compensation days rather than sick days was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, or not otherwise in accordance with the law. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the instant petition dismissed.

Upon review, and in the absence of any basis in the record on which to dispute the fact-finding and credibility determinations of the ALJ, the Commissioner concurred that the petitioner failed to prove that the Board's decision to reject the petitioner's claim for additional workers' compensation days was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons expressed therein.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the reply exceptions filed by the Board of Education (Board).[1]

The petitioner takes exception to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) finding that the Board's decision to charge the petitioner for sick days rather than worker's compensation days was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The petitioner maintains that the evidence indicates that petitioner's absences in April 2004 were caused by her work-related injury; therefore, she should not be charged sick days for those absences. The petitioner further argues that there was nothing in the record to support the ALJ's credibility determination or his characterization of her injuries as "trivial."

In reply, the Board incorporated the arguments put forth in its post-trial submission to support its assertion that the petitioner received worker's compensation benefits as permitted by law, but was denied certain days in April 2004 because they could not be characterized as such. The Board also contends that the ALJ properly determined that the petitioner was not credible because during testimony, the petitioner contradicted herself with respect to the number of times she called her physician when she was in too much pain to return to work, and was allegedly directed by her physician to stay home.

Upon review, and in the absence of any basis in the record on which to dispute the fact-finding and credibility determinations of the ALJ pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987), the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petitioner failed to prove that the Board's decision to reject the petitioner's claim for additional worker's compensation days was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

BEFORE JAMES A. GERAGHTY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Beverly Gusler, contests respondent State Operated School District of the City of Paterson's denial of her claim for six workers' compensation days and instead charging her with six sick days. She requested a hearing and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 5, 2004. The case was placed on the inactive list pending completion of the workers' compensation matter. A hearing was held at the OAL on December 28, 2009. After post hearing briefing, the Director and Chief Administrative Law Judge extended the time for the issuance of this initial decision up to and including November 18, 2010.

STATEMENT OF THE ISSUES

The issue is whether petitioner was entitled to six workers' compensation days rather than being charged with six sick days.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner Beverly Gusler was a tenured teaching staff member who had been employed by the respondent since July 1981. On February 25, 2004 she slipped and fell on her buttocks and back, on the job, resulting in various injuries. Petitioner was awarded workers' compensation days for February 26, and 27, March 23 and 26, and April 1, 2004. P-8,9,10. The respondent charged her for sick days on April 2, 20, 21, 26, 29, and 30, 2004. P-10. Petitioner contends that these absences were work related for which she should not be charged. She filed a claim with the Division of Workers' Compensation for her injuries. The claims were denied. However, that matter was settled on April 25, 2008. P-11. The status of the six days in question became a contested matter before the OAL.

On February 25, 2004, on the date of her injury, the school nurse applied ice to petitioner's knee. Respondent's risk management supervisor, Linden Smith, had her transported by ambulance to Barnett Hospital. The City of Paterson Emergency Medical Services reported that petitioner complained of pain in her left knee, hip, and shoulder. P-1. P-2. The Barnett Hospital February 25, 2004 assessment references pain in petitioner's left shoulder, hip, and knee. P-3. The petitioner testified that she was not x-rayed and received no treatment. She suffered no broken bones.

Petitioner was examined on February 27, 2004 by respondent's workers' compensation physician Dr. Hadjanian whose certificate of fitness stated that petitioner could return to work on March 1, 2004. P-4. The diagnosis was contusions (bruses) to petitioner's shoulder, buttocks, and knee. There were no recommended restrictions or treatment beyond applying moist heat. Both petitioner and the doctor signed the certificate. Petitioner returned to work.

On March 5, 2004 petitioner was examined by Dr. Hadjanian who again diagnosed petitioner with contusions to her shoulder, buttocks, hip, and knee. He prescribed physical therapy three times a week for two weeks. The diagnosis and prescription were memorialized in a certificate of fitness which noted that the petitioner was working. P-5. Both petitioner and the doctor signed the certificate of fitness.

Petitioner testified that the physical therapy had been prescribed for four weeks although the certificate unequivocally states two weeks. Dr. Hadjanian again examined petitioner on March 19, 2004 during which she admitted to the doctor that she had not attended physical therapy, which the doctor noted in his follow up visit report. However, at the OAL hearing, petitioner contradicted her statement to the doctor and said that she attended physical therapy but missed only one or two sessions.

Petitioner next saw Dr. Hadjanian on April 1, 2004. The doctor's diagnosis remained unchanged and he prescribed physical therapy three times a week for two weeks. In addition, the doctor advised petitioner not to lift over twenty pounds or to lift objects over her head. P-6. With these restrictions, the certificate of fitness stated that petitioner was able to return to work April 2, 2004. Both the doctor and the petitioner signed the certificate.

Petitioner failed to return to work on April 2, 2004 despite the doctor's certificate. At the OAL hearing, she testified that she was in too much pain to return to work. In addition, she testified that Dr. Hadjanian told her that if she was unable to return to work, she should not return to work. Petitioner did not ask for a new certification or other document confirming his advice. Dr. Hadjanian was not called to testify.

The petitioner again visited Dr. Hadjanian on April 19, 2004. The doctor maintained the lifting restrictions and referred petitioner to an orthopedist. Both the petitioner and the doctor signed a certificate stating that she would return to work April 21, 2004. P-7. Petitioner failed to return to work on that date, as well as on April 26, 29, and 30, 2004. Petitioner testified that physical pain prevented her return, and that each time she contacted Dr. Hadjanian he told her that she need not return to work. However, as to the aforesaid four days during April 2004, petitioner adduced no certificate of fitness, medical witnesses, or other documentary evidence to substantiate her testimony. During cross examination, she admitted that she had called Dr. Hadjanian only twice during that period.

At the OAL hearing, petitioner admitted that she claimed more than 30 work related injuries during the course of her 25 years employment, and stated that she filed between 7 and 9 actual claims for workers' compensation. R-3.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the testimony and documents of record, I FIND:

1. Petitioner's testimony lacked both demeanor and circumstantial credibility. She claimed an inability to return to work for over two months after her fall although her only injuries were bruises. There were no fractures or other injuries and certainly no corroborating medical evidence. Petitioner lacked circumstantial credibility due to her numerous alleged work related injuries which exceeded the number of years that she was employed by the district.

2. Petitioner's doctor ordered her back to work on March 1, 2004. She complied. Later, the doctor prescribed physical therapy which petitioner admitted that she neglected. After the April 1, 2004 follow up visit, the doctor ordered her to return to work on April 2, 2004. She failed to comply and did not return that day or on five subsequent work days despite the Doctors subsequent order to return to work on April 21, 2009. Her claim to have been in too much pain is difficult to believe because of the trivial nature of her original injuries, her lack of credibility, and her failure to corroborate any of her statements.

3. Petitioner's testimony that her doctor told her to stay home from work if she was in excessive pain was uncorroborated hearsay.

LEGAL AUTHORITY

New Jersey State law defines sick leave as an employee's absence from work because of personal disability due to illness or injury, among other things. N.J.S.A. 18A:3-1. An employee injured due to an accident during the course of employment is entitled to full salary during the period of absence for up to one calendar year, and the absence is charged to annual sick leave accumulated by the employee. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.3. The district's decision to change the absences in question as sick days rather than workers' compensation days is sustainable unless arbitrary and capricious. Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1964).

Credibility is that quality of testimony or evidence which makes it worthy of belief. The Supreme Court has stated: "Testimony to be believed must not only proceed from the mouth of a credible witness but must be credible in itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances." In re Estate of Perrone 5 N.J. 514 (1950). See also, Spangnuolo v. Bonnet, 16 N.J. 546 (1954).

To assess credibility a trier of fact may draw inferences from a witness' expression, tone of voice, and demeanor. MacDonald v. Hudson Bus Transportation Co., 100 N.J. Super. 103 (App. Div. 1968). The witness' interest in the outcome of the matter or that person's motive or bias should be considered. State v. Spruill, 16 N.J. 73 (1954); State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600 (App. Div. 1952).

The fact finder may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible or inconsistent with common experience. Conglaton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp. 53 N.J. Super. 282 (App. Div. 1958).

Surrounding circumstances may affect credibility. In re Perrone, supra, at 521; D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1997). State v. Salimone, supra, at 608.

A fact finder's rejecting a witness' testimony must simply be reasonable. Renan Realty Corp. v. Community Affairs Department, 182 N.J. Super. 415 (App. Div. 1981).

Hearsay is admissible subject to the residuum rule that requires corroboration of ultimate fact questions. N.J.A.C.1:1-15.1, .5. Weston v. State of New Jersey, 60 N.J. 36 (1972).

DISCUSSION

Petitioner had the burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that her absences on the six days in question were necessitated by injuries which occurred during the course of her employment. Her only documentary evidence were certificates of fitness which state that her injuries resulted from bruising. She had no witnesses, expert or otherwise, and no substantiating documentary evidence that she had suffered injuries of a magnitude to cause her to justify absences from work, despite the doctor's orders to return two months after the event. Her credibility was seriously eroded by the circumstances, the nature of her injuries, her uncorroborated difficult to believe testimony, and her numerous prior injury claims which diminished rather than enhanced her credibility. She contradicted herself during cross examination on her number of contacts with her doctor and her failure to attend therapy. The doctor's purported advice, except for the certifications, constituted nothing more than hearsay which a trier of fact is free to reject.

Finally, petitioner failed to prove that the district's rejection of her claim for additional workmen's compensation days rather than sick days was arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable, or not otherwise in accordance with law.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and legal authority, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet her burden of proving by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the district's decision to consider the contested days in question as sick days was arbitrary or capricious, unreasonable, or otherwise not in accordance with law.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and legal authority, I decide this matter in favor of the respondent and ORDER petition DISMISSED.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT REGARDING ACTIONS PENDING BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

This Settlement Agreement is entered into by and between the Asbury Park Board of Education ("BOARD") and its tenured employee Marvin Davis ("DAVIS").

WHEREAS, DAVIS has been continuously employed by the BOARD as a custodial staff member for more than three years and a day and is tenured; and

WHEREAS, on October 14, 2010 the BOARD certified tenure charges against DAVIS to the Commissioner under the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, which charges were captioned:

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF MARVIN DAVIS, ASBURY PARK BOARD OF EDUCATION, MONMOUTH COUNTY.

OAL DKT NO. EDU 10523-2009 S
AGENCY REF. NO. 294-10/09;

WHEREAS, DAVIS filed an answer contesting the tenure charges;

WHEREAS, the BOARD and DAVIS have each retained independent counsel of their own choosing, and have been advised of their respective rights and responsibilities under the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law; and

WHEREAS, notwithstanding BOARD's right to pursue the tenure charges before the Commissioner and DAVIS's right to contest such charges and be afforded full procedural due process under the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law, the parties have knowingly, intelligently, and voluntarily agreed to waive such rights.

NOW THEREFORE, the matters in dispute having been amicably adjusted by and between the parties, it is hereby stipulated and agreed as follows:

1. The above recitals are repeated and made a part of this Settlement Agreement by reference;

2. The Board agrees to withdraw the tenure charges against DAVIS in return for his agreement:

a. Not to challenge an increment withholding previously imposed upon him;

b. Not to seek return pay for the 120-day suspension served without pay during the pendency of the tenure charges;

c. DAVIS will accept a reassignment of his shift and/or hours and/or building assignment;

d. With the exception to seek enforcement of the terms of this settlement, neither party shall seek anything further from the other with regard to this matter whatsoever.

3. The BOARD will seek the Office of Administrative Law's and the Commissioner's approval for this Settlement Agreement, and if both approve the Settlement Agreement without modification, ask the Commissioner to allow the tenure charges against DAVIS to be withdrawn and dismissed with prejudice;

4. Should the Office of Administrative Law or the Commissioner fail to approve this Settlement Agreement without modification, the parties have agreed to make every reasonable effort to reform this Settlement Agreement to meet any objections. In the event that such reformation is not possible, this Settlement Agreement will become null and void, the parties will return to the status quo as it existed before this Settlement Agreement was drafted, the matter will be listed for a tenure hearing and the parties agree, in advance that neither the settlement, this Settlement Agreement, the BOARD's Motion to Withdraw Tenure Charges, nor any representations of fact set forth in the settlement, this Settlement Agreement or the BOARD's Motion to Withdraw Tenure Charges will be admissible for any purpose in the hearing or any appeals arising therefrom.

5. DAVIS acknowledges that the BOARD's withholding of his increment for the 2009-2010 school year are and will be permanent increment withholdings. Provided, however, that nothing prevents the BOARD from restoring the increments at some time in the future pursuant to its discretionary power as acknowledged in *Probst v. The record, settlement agreement, and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that the file only includes what appears to be one page of an agenda for a Board meeting that lists the proposed settlement as a topic to be discussed. The file does not contain a copy of the Board's resolution approving the settlement and designating the Board President and/or the Business Administrator to sign the agreement on its behalf, nor was the settlement agreement signed by the Board's attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement agreement.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Stipulation of Settlement consistent with the concerns set forth above. If the parties are unwilling or unable to reach accord on a modified agreement for submission to the Commissioner, the matter shall proceed to hearing.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

IN THE MATTER OF GREG COLLINS,	:
MARION P. THOMAS CHARTER	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission recommends that respondent be suspended from the Marion P. Thomas Charter School Board until he has completed the online web-based Finance training program, and if respondent completes the web-based training program by December 15, 2010, the Commission recommends that respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program. The Commission further recommends that respondent should be removed from the board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010.

On December 16, 2010, the Commission advised the Commissioner that respondent had completed the requisite program. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Greg Collins be censured as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.*

IN THE MATTER OF GREG COLLINS Marion P. Thomas Charter School Essex County	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO ATTEND TRAINING
	:	DOCKET NO. T19-10/2

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that he was unaware of the training requirement and that when he became aware of the requirement, he had problems accessing training. The respondent has not completed the requisite training.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the online web-based NJQSAC training program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. However, should the respondent complete the online web-based training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF MAGDA NIEVES,	:
CAMDEN'S PROMISE CHARTER SCHOOL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CAMDEN COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty.

Because the respondent completed training prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting (but after the issuance of the Commission's September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause), the Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

The Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Respondent is thus hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to reply to the Commission's Order. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting and it, therefore, recommends a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as 'New Board Member Orientation' (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as 'NJQSAC' (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as 'Finance' (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the 'NJQSAC' training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the 'NJQSAC' training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that he had registered for training. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

CAMDEN'S PROMISE CHARTER SCHOOL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty.

Because the respondent had still not completed training at the time of the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting – one month after the issuance of the Commission's September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause – the Commission recommended a penalty of suspension from the board of trustees until the completion of training or, if training is not completed by January 8, 2011, removal from office. The Commission's decision provides, however, that if respondent completes her training before the issuance of the Commissioner's final decision, the penalty may be downgraded to censure.

Information has been provided to the Commissioner indicating that respondent completed training on December 13, 2010; however, the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA) inadvertently sent her the wrong training materials. The correct materials have now been forwarded, and NJSBA has advised that respondent has been given credit for QSAC training for 2009-10 and Finance training for 2010-11. Accordingly, censure is the penalty recommended by the Commission. As respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty or instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation, the Commissioner adopts the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor the obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Corynda Hagamin be censured as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.*

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order and has not attended the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the online web-based NJQSAC training program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. However, should the respondent complete the online web-based training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied to the Commission's Order that he experienced difficulty accessing the online training and would be willing go to training. The respondent has not completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the online web-based NJQSAC training program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. However, should the respondent complete the online web-based training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes,

P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF LINDA STERLING,	:
TEAM ACADEMY CHARTER SCHOOL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ESSEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty.

Because the respondent completed training prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting (but after the issuance of the Commission's September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause), the Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

The Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Respondent is thus hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advises all newly elected and appointed board members and trustees of this training requirement in writing upon their election or appointment and continues to advise them through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA conducted five NBMO training sessions between May 2009 and January 2010 at varying locations and continuously published the dates and times of those sessions in School Board Notes and on the NJSBA website. As well, by correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the School Ethics Commission notified all board members/trustees who were not compliant with the training mandate of a final opportunity to obtain the necessary NBMO training on June 12, 2010. In July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified this board member/trustee as having failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required training period. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied to the Commission's Order that she was unaware of the training requirement until August 2010 and could not attend training at that time because of pre-existing travel plans. Following receipt of the Commission's Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter, the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

This mandate is included both in the Commission's regulations (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)) as well as the regulations governing charter schools. (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d)). For the 2009-2010 training cycle, that program was identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (NBMO).

THE SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION FINDS AND CONCLUDES:

The NJSBA advises all newly elected and appointed board members and trustees of this training requirement in writing upon their election or appointment and continues to advise them through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA conducted five NBMO training sessions between May 2009 and January 2010 at varying locations and continuously published the dates and times of those sessions in School Board Notes and on the NJSBA website. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that he did not know that he was delinquent in training until July 2010. Following receipt of the Commission's Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

IN THE MATTER OF LAUREL DUMONT,	:
NEWARK EDUCATORS CHARTER	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting and it, therefore, recommends a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that until notification in July 2010, she believed that she had completed all of the necessary training. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

IN THE MATTER OF DEBORAH BURNS,	:
ACADEMY CHARTER HIGH SCHOOL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty.

Because the respondent completed training prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting (but after the issuance of the Commission's September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause), the Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

The Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Respondent is thus hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven Finance training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this third-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the third-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent did not provide a timely written response to the Commission's Order and did not complete the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the online web-based Finance training program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. However, should the respondent complete the online web-based training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. The Commission recommends that respondent be suspended from the Jersey City Community Charter School's Board until she has completed required training, and further recommends that she be removed from the Board if training is not completed by January 8, 2011.

To date, there is no indication that respondent has completed training. Nor has she filed exceptions to the recommended penalty or instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation. The Commissioner therefore adopts the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to honor the obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby suspended as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act, such suspension to remain in effect until the required training is completed; provided, however, that if such training is not completed by January 8, 2011, respondent shall be summarily removed from office.

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advises all newly elected and appointed board members and trustees of this training requirement in writing upon their election or appointment and continues to advise them through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA conducted five NBMO training sessions between May 2009 and January 2010 at varying locations and continuously published the dates and times of those sessions in School Board Notes and on the NJSBA website. As well, by correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the School Ethics Commission notified all board members/trustees who were not compliant with the training mandate of a final opportunity to obtain the necessary NBMO training on June 12, 2010. In July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified this board member/trustee as having failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required training period. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to respond to the Commission's Order and has not attended the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the New Board Member Orientation program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if the New Board Member Orientation Program is not completed by January 8, 2011. However, should the respondent complete the training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting and it, therefore, recommends a penalty of reprimand. Respondent filed neither exceptions nor proof of having attended the required training prior to the issuance of the Commission's Order to Show Cause. Respondent also did not appeal the Commission's underlying finding of violation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes respondent for failing to honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law, since such failure has resulted in unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven Finance training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this third-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the third-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to respond to the Commission's Order. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that upon receipt of the Commission's Order he registered for training. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven Finance training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this third-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the third-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied that she missed training because of difficulty accessing online training. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 690-11/10

IN THE MATTER OF JUDITH RIVERA KIRTZ, CAMDEN'S PROMISE CHARTER SCHOOL, CAMDEN COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. The Commission recommends that respondent be suspended from Camden's Promise Charter School's Board until she has completed the New Board Member Orientation program, and further recommends that she be removed from this board if this training is not completed by January 8, 2011. Respondent filed neither exceptions nor proof of having attended the required training. Respondent also did not appeal the Commission's underlying finding of violation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission and additionally admonishes respondent for failing to honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law, since such failure has resulted in unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby suspended as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act, such suspension to remain in effect until the required training is completed; provided, however, that if such training is not completed by January 8, 2011, respondent shall be summarily removed from office.

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on November 1, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advises all newly elected and appointed board members and trustees of this training requirement in writing upon their election or appointment and continues to advise them through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA conducted five NBMO training sessions between May 2009 and January 2010 at varying locations and continuously published the dates and times of those sessions in School Board Notes and on the NJSBA website. As well, by correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the School Ethics Commission notified all board members/trustees who were not compliant with the training mandate of a final opportunity to obtain the necessary NBMO training on June 12, 2010. In July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified this board member/trustee as having failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required training period. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required time period.

The November 1, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to respond to the Commission's Order and has not attended the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on November 23, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the New Board Member Orientation program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if the New Board Member Orientation Program is not completed by January 8, 2011. However, should the respondent complete the training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to attend charter school trustee training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. The Commission advises that the respondent ultimately completed training after the issuance of its September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause, but prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting and it, therefore, recommends a penalty of reprimand. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven Finance training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this third-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the third-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "Finance" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order. Following receipt of the Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

IN THE MATTER OF GERALD MURRAY,	:
WOODBINE BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CAPE MAY COUNTY.	:	DECISION

The Commissioner has considered the record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to timely attend Board of Education member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty.

Because the respondent completed training prior to the Commission's October 26, 2010 meeting (but after the issuance of the Commission's September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause), the Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand. Respondent has neither filed exceptions to the recommended penalty nor instituted an appeal, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4, of the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

The Commissioner concurs with the penalty recommended by the Commission in consequence of respondent's failure to timely honor an obligation placed upon charter school trustees by law. Additionally, respondent is admonished for causing the unnecessary expenditure of administrative and adjudicative resources at both State and local levels.

Respondent is thus hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advises all newly elected and appointed board members and trustees of this training requirement in writing upon their election or appointment and continues to advise them through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes. The NJSBA conducted five NBMO training sessions between May 2009 and January 2010 at varying locations and continuously published the dates and times of those sessions in School Board Notes and on the NJSBA website. As well, by correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the School Ethics Commission notified all board members/trustees who were not compliant with the training mandate of a final opportunity to obtain the necessary NBMO training on June 12, 2010. In July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified this board member/trustee as having failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required training period. This notice also provided the opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent replied to the Commission's Order that he had missed training because it conflicted with work. Following receipt of the Commission's Order to Show Cause, the respondent completed the requisite training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission finds that although a finding of violation is warranted, the respondent's completion of the program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause may fairly serve to mitigate the penalty in this matter. Therefore, the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

IN THE MATTER OF HENRIETTA COOMBS,	:
CHESILHURST BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for failure to attend board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – forwarded to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for final determination on the Commission's recommended penalty, have been reviewed. The Commission recommends that respondent be suspended from the Chesilhurst Board until she has completed the online web-based NJQSAC training program, and further recommends that she be removed from the board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. Should respondent complete the web-based training program by this date, the Commission recommends that respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program. On December 16, 2010, the Commission advised the Commissioner that respondent had not completed the requisite program.

By letter dated November 18, 2010, addressed to the Executive Director of the School Ethics Commission, respondent stated "I'm writing this letter to inform you that I have been seriously ill since July 2010 to the present. It's been an honor and a privilege being a member of the Chesilhurst Board of Education. I would like to continue being a member when my health problems improve."

Upon review, the Commissioner is compelled to concur with the penalty recommended by the Commission. The statutory provision which directs the training required for board members, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, makes no exception – for any reason – to its stated requisites. Absent satisfaction of this statutory edict, respondent cannot be permitted to continue to serve on the Chesilhurst Board of Education.

Accordingly, respondent is hereby removed from office, as of the filing date of this decision, as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IN THE MATTER OF HENRIETTA COOMBS Chesilhurst Board of Education Camden County	:	DECISION FOR FAILURE TO ATTEND TRAINING
	:	DOCKET NO. T27-10/2

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from an Order to Show Cause issued by the School Ethics Commission on September 22, 2010 to the above-named respondent alleging that the board member/trustee failed to complete training as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and offered by the New Jersey School Boards Association (NJSBA). Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, all board members and charter school trustees must complete:

- during the first year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA identified as "New Board Member Orientation" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d));
- in the second year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA which, for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "NJQSAC" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a));
- in the third year of their first term, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Finance" (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)); and
- within one year after re-election or re-appointment to a board, a training program offered by the NJSBA, which for the 2009-2010 training cycle, was identified as "Legal Update." (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a)).

The NJSBA advised all board members and trustees of this training requirement through notices published in its newsletter, School Board Notes, beginning March 25, 2009. The NJSBA conducted seven NJQSAC training sessions between May 20, 2009 and January 9, 2010 at varying locations. The NJSBA also made available an on-line web-based opportunity to meet this second-year training requirement from January 12, 2010 through May 28, 2010. These training opportunities were published in School Board Notes and posted on the NJSBA's website. By correspondence dated April 30, 2010, the Commission notified all board members and charter school trustees of their non-compliance with the training mandate and reminded them of the opportunity to obtain training or to inform the Commission of errors in its data.

Additionally, in July 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Board Secretary/Charter School Administrator, with a copy of the same to the respondent, notifying that the NJSBA identified the board member/trustee as having failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required training period. In addition to providing another opportunity to inform the Commission of any errors in its data, this notice identified a final on-line training opportunity, made available by the NJSBA from July 19, 2010 through August 27, 2010, to fulfill the second-year training requirement at a time convenient to the respondent's schedule.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c), the NJSBA is required to provide the School Ethics Commission with a report listing those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate. The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that the respondent failed to complete the "NJQSAC" training program within the required time period.

The September 22, 2010 Order to Show Cause sent to the respondent via regular and certified mail, specifically stated, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6, that the respondent must show cause under oath and in writing before the Commission, within 20 days of receipt of the Order, reasons why the board member/trustee should not be found in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent did not reply to the Commission's Order and has not completed the training.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators; N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training, as specified above.

There is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(d) provides that board members and trustees failing to comply with the training mandate shall be considered in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The respondent failed to timely comply with the training mandate, and is, therefore, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

DECISION

At its meeting on October 26, 2010, the Commission voted to find the respondent in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 and to recommend a penalty, as set forth below.

PENALTY

If a violation of the School Ethics Act is found by the Commission, it may recommend to the Commissioner the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12. Upon review of the record in this matter the Commission recommends to the Commissioner of Education that the respondent be suspended from the above-named Board until demonstrating completion of the online web-based NJQSAC training program, and further recommends that the board member/trustee be removed from the Board if this online web-based training program is not completed by December 15, 2010. However, should the respondent complete the online web-based training prior to the Commissioner's issuance of a final decision in this matter, the Commission recommends that the respondent be censured for failing to timely complete the program.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. The school official may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

HEARING OF BIL MORGAN,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

OF CORRECTIONS, SOUTH WOODS	:

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges against respondent – a teacher of media arts – for conduct unbecoming a teacher and other related charges, including: taking the electronic signature of the prison administrator without authorization and affixing it to a document; downloading a "bootleg" movie still in general release in the theaters; downloading software on the prison's computer to bypass the encryption code on rented DVDs in order to copy the films prior to their return to the rental company; and using prison inmates to edit video footage produced by respondent's private company. The Board sought dismissal of respondent from his tenured employment.

The ALJ found that: respondent claimed naivet regarding the ramifications of his admitted conduct, none of which represents conduct of a teacher that an inmate should emulate; respondent's explanations of his behavior lacked credibility; and the Board has carried its burden to prove the charges against respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended respondent's removal from his tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. Respondent was dismissed from his tenured employment, and the matter transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the New Jersey State Department of Corrections has sustained its charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher against respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence, warranting respondent's termination from his tenured position at South Woods State Prison.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons clearly presented therein, and respondent is hereby terminated from his tenured position. A copy of this decision will be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action, as that body deems appropriate, against respondent's certificate(s).

BEFORE ANA C. VISCOMI, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent appeals from certified tenure charges seeing his removal as a media arts teacher at the South Woods State Prison for alleged conduct unbecoming a teacher and other related charges. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 30, 2010, for a hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.1 et seq., and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. The hearing was heard on July 27, 2010, August 2 and August 11, 2010. The record closed on October 18, 2010, upon receipt of post-hearing summations.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The parties have stipulated to the following.

On January 6, 2010, Senior Corrections Officer S. Buscemi was touring the facilities at South Woods State Prison, Facility One. He noticed that the movie "2012" starring John Cusack was being played to inmates. On the following day, this information was passed through the chain of command, and Captain Moretz and Lieutenant Stevens met with Bil Morgan, who confirmed that he brought this movie into the South Woods State Prison. The Captain and staff retrieved the movie and referred the matter to the Special Investigation Division. (J-1). That concludes the stipulated facts.

The following summary of facts is essentially undisputed and shall constitute my findings of fact.

Respondent, Bil Morgan has taught Media Arts to inmates at South Woods State Prison for the past 11 years. He is 68 years old. As a Media Arts teacher, his responsibilities included providing instruction to inmates regarding media arts, which includes print, television, computer editing and marketing.

His responsibilities were later enhanced to include the setting up of films to be shown to the inmates throughout the prison population. The films would be ordered by his supervisor, David Metlow, through the prison's Netflix[1] account. Unbeknownst to Metlow, when the films arrived from Netflix, respondent would make multiple copies of each respective film on both DVD and VHS tapes and maintain them in his office. (C-2, P-9, P-6, DOC 27). Metlow never ordered the film "2012" from the prison's Netflix account.

[1] Netflix is a web-based company offering subscriptions to movies that have already been released.

The reason the matter was referred to the Special Investigation Division is because the movie "2012" was still being shown in the movie theaters and had not yet been released to DVD at the time respondent brought the movie into the prison to be shown to the inmates. The investigation was conducted by Investigator Eleazor Spratley. The DVD of the movie "2012" was confiscated because Spratley believed, and later verified, it was a "bootleg[2]" version of the movie. As part of the investigation, Spratley interviewed respondent, his supervisor, and prison Administrator Karen Balicki. Additionally, Senior Investigator Jeffrey Poling, who is assigned to the Computer Forensic/Polygraph Unit of the Special Investigations Division, conducted a forensic examination of the hard drive of the respondent's computer. This computer was not accessible to any of the inmates. The examination revealed the following: two files pertaining to the movie "2012" which consisted of an internet search of the movie's title and the DVD cover art; 46 files from the recycle folder which had been deleted by the user; two scanned images of Karen Balicki's signature which were found in the recycle folder and had been deleted by the user; 115 graphic files depicting DVD cover art; 33 files that had references to Mecca Video; 3 programs related to media art which included Arcsoft software for video editing; Google Video Player for viewing video files; Epson Print CD for printing on CDs and DVDs; 45 files pertaining to internet searches for DVD cover art; 15 files pertaining to internet searches on methods to copy DVDs; and one Google search on how to unlock a hard drive. (P-7).

The interview of the respondent was conducted in the presence of his union representative. (C-2, P-6, DOC 26). He was advised, prior to the interview, that the subject was regarding DVD and VHS duplication and introduction of contraband into the prison facility. (C-2, P-6, DOC 26). As a result of the interview, respondent admitted to the following conduct, which he incorporated in a written statement (C-2, P-6, DOC 27 – DOC 30) in response to specific questions. (C-1). Respondent admitted to bringing the movie "2012" into the facility without any permission and although he indicated that it was for use in class instruction on special effects, he showed the movie to the general inmate population. (C-2, P-6, DOC 27). He knew the movie was still being shown in theatres but did not know when the DVD was to be released. (C-2, P-6, DOC 27). Respondent admitted to making copies of the movies rented from Netflix, without any authorization or knowledge from the supervisory staff. (C-2, P-6, DOC 27). No one authorized the introduction of the software which enabled him to bypass the Netflix security encryption which enabled him to copy the DVDs. (C-2, P-6, DOC-28). He brought footage from his outside company, Mecca Productions, so that his student inmates would get experience in editing music, graphic and video. (C-2, P-6, DOC 28). He scanned Administrator Balicki's signature to reproduce a graduation certificate for one of the inmates. (C-2, P-6, DOC 29).

Based on the foregoing admissions, as well as the interviews conducted and the forensic examination of the respondent's computer, certified tenure charges were filed. It should be noted that petitioner initially treated this matter as a civil service disciplinary matter and part of the charges address violations of the civil service regulations.[3] Respondent was also charged with violation of the tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, conduct unbecoming a teacher, relating to the following: the introduction of a pirated videos into the secured perimeter of the institution for inmate viewing; copying DVD's rented from the institution's Netflix account by using outside software without permission; using inmates to edit filmed material for respondent's outside film business; using his work computer for his private business; conducting searches on how to unlock a hard drive; downloading of DVD cover art; and scanning images of Administrator Balicki's signature and forging them onto documents. This initial decision addresses the only charges of which I have jurisdiction, the tenure charges.

The following relevant testimony, not addressing previously noted factual findings and stipulations, was offered at this hearing.

Investigator Spratley testified that he visited the Media Arts Center at the prison and saw 58 DVDs and 210 VHS video cassettes stored there. He compared the titles of these films with the list of movies rented by the prison through its Netflix account and noted they matched completely. (P-9). Respondent admitted to copying these films through computer software he downloaded on his computer at the Media Arts Center located within the prison. Spratley also testified that his investigation revealed that inmate David Taylor, one of respondent's students, also copied the movies. Taylor also admitted to Spratley that he edited footage from respondent's private enterprise, Mecca Productions.

[3] Specifically, respondent was charged with violations of NJAC 4A:2-2.3(a)(6), conduct unbecoming an employee; N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(7), neglect of duty; and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)(11), other sufficient cause. Respondent was also charged with violations of internal policies as reflected in the Human Resource Bulletin for the Department of Corrections. (P-8).

Respondent had explained to Spratley that the reason the movies were copied onto VHS cassettes was because the DVD carousel purchased by the institution did not allow for continuous play of the movies throughout the facility during the overnight hours. The equipment was locked in the Media Arts building, so once Morgan set the movies to play prior to leaving work for the day, the door to his office was locked and no one, with the exception of corrections officers, could enter to continually re-run the movies. Inmate Taylor confirmed that the Netflix DVD movies could not be played continuously on the DVD carousel. Respondent Morgan also told Investigator Spratley that it was his understanding, based upon his own research, that as long as he copied the films for educational purposes; he was not in violation of any Netflix licensing agreement.

David Metelow has been employed with the New Jersey Department of Corrections, South Woods Prison since December 1997. He has been the Supervisor of Education since 2000. His duties include overseeing all academics, vocational education, recreation and the law library. He was respondent's supervisor. He had no knowledge that respondent was copying movies. Their respective offices were located in different buildings at the prison facility. The inmates had complained often they were not being shown new film releases. Respondent made a list of newer films in response to the inmate complaints and provided the list to Metelow. The inmates in respondent's film class were supposed to be making educational films for the inmates on such topics as MRSA and HIV.

Karen Balicki has been the Administrator of the South Woods State Prison for the past three and one-half years. She testified that while the institution had an account with Netflix, the Media Arts Center was to maintain a video library of educational movies. While she visited the Media Arts Center and saw the movie library respondent maintained, she assumed it was the educational films but never looked at any of the titles. It wasn't until the bootleg version of "2012" was brought to her attention that she learned of the commercial movie library maintained by respondent.

She also testified that no one, with the exception of her assistant, is authorized to sign any document on her behalf. She has not authorized anyone to scan her signature on a document. She would accommodate any request for an immediate signature even if she was not in the institution by having her assistant sign on her behalf.

Respondent Bil Morgan testified he started Mecca Productions in 1985. He primarily produced videos used at church conventions. He had not produced any videos for Mecca since the late 1990s, but he retained the video tapes. He donated his video equipment, worth approximately $90,000 to a youth organization in Camden. (R-3, R-4). The reason he brought the Mecca footage to the prison was to show the inmates how to shoot film. He did not make any profit from having the inmates edit his Mecca produced film.

When his department was told it would be responsible for showing the films to the inmate population, he requested a DVD player. The DVD he was provided had five slots for five movies. The DVD machine player ran each film once and then stopped. This was a problem because his office was secured after he left work at 3:00 p.m. That is why he began making copies. Additionally, the Assistant Recreation Supervisor asked him to make copies of the movies for the inmates housed in the drug prevention program at South Woods known as Nu Way. He was concerned about copyright laws and researched Federal Communication Commission (FCC) regulations and determined that the copying of the films was not illegal because it was for educational purposes. He did not tell anyone he was making copies but the copies were stored in a visible area of his office.

With regard to the movie "2012," respondent testified that his class that was graduating had been watching the movie trailer on the television. One of them said that he would like to see the movie before he graduated. Morgan downloaded the movie on his home computer and burned it onto a DVD. The reason he wanted to show the movie to his students was for the special effects, a topic he had been teaching at the time.

Respondent testified that he was about to take a vacation and had submitted a list of graduates to Administrator Balicki's secretary. He realized that he forgot to include a graduate's name on the list. He found the template for Administrator Balicki's signature but his attempt to insert it on the inmate's certificate was futile. He then requested a certificate from Administrator Balicki's secretary.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Respondent has been charged with conduct unbecoming a teacher, a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, for which the Department of Corrections seeks the removal of his tenure and thus, the termination of respondent's employment as a teacher. The burden of proof in this matter rests with the petitioner who must prove by a preponderance of the competent, credible evidence that the certified tenure charges should be affirmed. The petitioner herein has met that burden in this matter. The expectation of teachers in the prison system is no less than the expectation of teachers in our schools. Teachers are to conduct themselves in a manner for which society expects them to be role models for their students. This expectation is even greater perhaps in the prison system where inmates are in the process of hopefully being rehabilitated and being taught skills so they have the opportunity to become productive members of society once they have completed their sentence and are released. In this matter, respondent Bil Morgan attempts to claim naiveté about the ramifications of his admitted conduct: taking the electronic signature of the prison administrator and affixing it to a document; downloading a "bootleg" movie still in general release in the theaters; downloading software on the prison system's computer that would enable the encryption code on rented DVDs to be bypassed so that he could make copies of the films prior to their return to Netflix; and using inmates to edit footage from his private company. None of this represents conduct of a teacher that an inmate should emulate. Respondent's explanations after being caught are feeble and not credible. If there was an issue of the inability of the supplied DVD equipment to show continuous play of the movies, he should have brought it to the attention of his supervisors. The movies had previously been shown continuously by corrections officers and operated from a secure area. It is incredulous that a media arts teacher who is supposed to be teaching film making and editing would claim that he did not realize there would be a problem in copying movies or downloading a "bootleg" version of a movie still being shown in the theaters. This is not an issue, as respondent claims, of violation of copyright laws or not being privy to the contract between the institution and Netflix. Rather, this concerns conduct unbecoming a teacher. Similarly absurd is the notion of respondent attempting to justify the copying of movies rented from Netflix for "educational" purposes wherein the reality is that it was for the entertainment purposes of the prison inmates. Although respondent presented some evidence that he donated some electronic equipment from Mecca Productions, that is not proof that he did not continue to operate that concern as evident from the 33 files referencing Mecca Video that were found on his work computer hard drive. No justification whatsoever could be made for the copying of the prison administrator's signature onto a document.

Record Closed: November 29, 2010 Decided: December 2, 2010

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, T.Z., on behalf of minor child, S.Z., contends that the respondent, Haddon Township Board of Education (Board), has failed to comply with law and policy in addressing harassment, intimidation and bullying of a child, necessitating the child's removal from school and treatment by medical/counseling professionals. Petitioner seeks out-of-district placement, compensatory education and reimbursement of expenses incurred. The parties agreed to a settlement of all issues in dispute and prepared a settlement agreement, which I have attached and fully incorporated herein, together with a copy of the Board's Minutes of the Regular Meeting of November 18, 2010 wherein the settlement was approved.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 9, 2009, T.Z. filed a petition on behalf of minor child, S.Z., seeking out of district placement, compensatory education and reimbursement of expenses. On December 15, 2009, respondent Haddon Township Board of Education filed an answer. This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for resolution as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. It was filed on January 5, 2010. During a prehearing conference on April 14, 2010, the parties discussed that the relief being sought was more appropriately obtained through a petition filed with the Office of Special Education Programs. On June 22, 2010, petitioner filed a Petition for Due Process with the Office of Special Education Programs seeking similar relief. A hearing was scheduled for July 14, 15 and 16, 2010, but adjourned because the Petition for Due Process had not been transmitted to the OAL. The hearing was rescheduled for October 4 and 5, 2010. These dates were adjourned so that the parties could pursue mediation, which was scheduled in October. On November 18, 2010, the parties advised that they had settled both cases. On November 29, 2010, the parties appeared at the OAL and placed the settlement on the record.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

PETITIONERS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTHERN HIGHLANDS REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioners have failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. Although this case involves a suspension from extracurricular activities, the irreparable harm alleged by the petitioners was not the student's inability to participate in four scrimmages and two regular season basketball games, but rather the fact that the Board's policy involving suspension from extracurricular activities is unlawful and will remain in effect unless emergent relief is granted.

The Commissioner finds that the continued existence of the Board's policy does not rise to the level of irreparable harm necessary to establish an entitlement to emergent relief. [1]

[1] In so holding, I am fully cognizant of the longstanding precedent that a prohibition from participation in activities such as sports does not, in and of itself, rise to the level of irreparable harm necessary to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioners' application for emergent relief is adopted. This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

of the harm have frequently been addressed together; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that applications of this kind typically fail. *Martin A. Record Closed: December 8, 2010 Decided: December 9, 2010

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON ALJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE

S.N.K., Jr. is on the Varsity Basketball Team of Northern Highlands Regional High School.

On or about October 9, 2010, S.N.K., Jr. after attending a private party in New Jersey with several other students and they were then taken by bus to a restaurant in New York where the party continued. Alcohol was consumed by S.N.K., Jr. a fact not in serious dispute.

As a result of this off-campus alcohol consumption, S.N.K., Jr., after a hearing, was prohibited from participating in the first two Varsity Basketball games of the upcoming season in addition to being unable to participate in Interschool scrimmages. He was not prohibited from practicing with the team.

THE LAW

It is conceded by petitioners that participation in co-curricular activities is a privilege rather than a right. Conduct violations involving drugs or alcohol among other violations can lead to a prohibition of participation in co-curricular activities, a disciplinary action which does not give rise to irreparable harm. See C.D. v. Board of Education of Monroe Twp., Closter County OAL DKT. No. EDU 0100-89, Initial Decision, 1989 (S.L.D. 2169, aff'd. August 4, 1989). The Commissioner of Education has held that students do not suffer irreparable harm when they are prohibited from participating in extra-curricular activities such as interscholastic sports. See Board of Education of Elmwood Park v. N.J.S.I.A.A. 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 106 (1993); City of Camden v. N.J.S.I.A.A. 92 N.J.A.R.2d (E DU) 182 (1992); Board of Ed. of City of Trenton v. N.J.S.I.A.A. 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 158 (1991).

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) codifying Crowe v. DeGioia 90 N.J. 126 (132-34 (1982) provides four prongs to consider when determining the need for emergent relief. Prong 1 is whether the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the required relief is not granted. Prong 2 is if the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is well settled, Prong 3 is that there is a likelihood that the petitioner will prevail on the merits of the underlying claim and Prong 4 is when the equity and interest of the parties are balanced whether the petitioner would suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Although suspension from the Varsity Basketball Team undoubtedly amounts to discipline, it is not discipline that will result in irreparable harm. Case law and statutory law confirm this proposition and it has not been overcome by the argument of the petitioner.

The essence of petitioners' argument is that "Off-Campus" conduct which does not affect the school itself is not conduct that can be addressed by and disciplined by the Board of Education. This principle is certainly not well settled and in fact is not a proposition supported by any case law. Without addressing the likelihood of petitioners' success on the merits nor is it necessary to balance the equities and interests of the parties for it is with little doubt that I CONCLUDE that suspension from two varsity games and some basketball scrimmages does not amount to irreparable harm warranting the granting of emergent relief.

It is ORDERED that petitioner's application for Emergent Relief requesting that S.N.K., Jr. be restored to full varsity basketball activities with no suspension is hereby DENIED.

DECISION

Review of the record in this residency matter reveals that petitioners 1) failed to appear in the OAL at a telephonic hearing of which they were duly advised by notice dated October 7, 2010, and 2) failed to subsequently offer any explanation for their non-appearance, despite a notice dated December 9, 2010, advising them that they could file a written explanation with the Commissioner within thirteen days of receiving said notice. In light of the foregoing, petitioner's appeal is dismissed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4. As no counterclaim for tuition was filed by respondent, disposition of this case is complete.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF DENISE NICHOLSON,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
TOWNSHIP OF ORANGE, ESSEX	:
COUNTY.	:

The petitioning Board certified charges of conduct unbecoming and insubordination against respondent – a tenured administrative secretary – for, inter alia: defiant, combative, and unprofessional behavior; failure to adhere to expectations regarding punctuality and absenteeism; failure to adhere to the district's dress code policy; and failure to comply with the professional improvement plan(s) developed for her. Respondent denied the charges.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board's witnesses presented credible testimony, supported by documentation; testimony from no less than six administrators stated that respondent was rude and abusive to students, parents, and coworkers, and that respondent failed to complete assignments and ignored directives; respondent clearly exhibited a pattern of behavior that included an inability to complete tasks and stay on task, difficulty working with fellow staff and supervisors, and problems with punctuality and attendance. The ALJ concluded that the Board has carried its burden to prove the charges against respondent, and ordered her dismissed and removed from tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF DENISE NICHOLSON,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE	:	DECISION
TOWNSHIP OF ORANGE, ESSEX	:
COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by respondent, and the Board of Education's (Board) reply to respondent's exceptions.[1]

The respondent's exceptions largely reiterate the substance of her post-hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously sustained the Board's charges. Respondent asserts that the ALJ erred in finding respondent guilty of unbecoming conduct and insubordination, and that the forfeiture of respondent's tenure is too severe a penalty. Respondent generally maintains that the Board's witnesses, who consisted of a number of different administrators, were not credible because they provided contradicting testimony with respect to who was in charge of providing respondent with her assignments, the number of assignments she was permitted to work on at one time and her work location. With respect to the Board's charge that respondent did not improve after two performance improvement plans were established, respondent contends that the Board relies on general allegations rather than specific facts, and that there was confusion as to what events occurred while the performance plans were in progress. In her exceptions, respondent also argues that her attendance and lateness record over a few months did not rise to the level of conduct that would require removal of her tenure.

In its reply, the Board urges the adoption of the Initial Decision asserting that the respondent's exceptions essentially challenge the credibility determinations made by the ALJ. The Board stresses that the choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness rests with the trier of fact and such determination must simply be reasonable. The Board maintains that the ALJ gave each witness a fair and ample opportunity to testify, and that her assessment of the witnesses' testimony was reasonable; therefore, the conclusions drawn by the ALJ should be upheld.

In the absence of any basis in the record on which to dispute the fact-finding and credibility determinations of the ALJ pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987), the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board has established that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct and insubordination. The Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments and objections previously raised before the ALJ and clearly taken into account by her in weighing the testimony and evidence and in concluding that the record overall supported the Board's charges. Notwithstanding respondent's contentions to the contrary, the Commissioner finds no basis in the record to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. In this regard, the clear and unequivocal standard governing the Commissioner's review is:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. [N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c)].

Moreover, the Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ's assessment of respondent's conduct in light of applicable law and prior decisional precedent, and agrees that the conduct proven in this proceeding amply warrants respondent's dismissal from tenured employment.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision of the OAL directing removal of respondent from her position of tenured employment is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 08375-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 265-8/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DENISE NICHOLSON, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ORANGE, ESSEX COUNTY.

Melvin C. Randall, Esq., for petitioner Board of Education of the City of Orange (Love & Randall, attorneys)

Nancy Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent Denise Nicholson (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 23, 2010 Decided: December 9, 2010

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 14, 2010, the Board of Education of Orange, New Jersey, filed tenure charges against respondent Denise Nicholson. The respondent was charged with eleven counts of unbecoming conduct and insubordination. The charges included that on May 18, 2010, Ms. Nicholson was "defiant, insubordinate and assaultive" toward Dana Gaines, assistant principal at Orange High School; on October 15, 2009, the respondent acted unprofessionally toward a parent and her son; on February 27, 2009, she acted unprofessionally toward a student; on October 6, 2009, Ms. Nicholson acted unprofessionally and insubordinate toward a supervisor, Mr. Gaines, and on October 21, 2010, acted unprofessionally and insubordinate toward a supervisor, Mr. Green; on April 23, May 14 and May 17, 2010, she "failed to adhere to the recognized procedures regarding punctuality, absenteeism and/or leaving the school building during the school day"; in April 2010 "she failed to adhere to the school district's dress code policy"; on February 5 and February 8, 2010, Ms. Nicholson refused or was unwilling to perform an assigned task given to her by a supervisor; on May 17, 2010, she was combative and attempted to walk out of a meeting with her supervisors; on April 1, 2010, Ms. Nicholson "refused and/or failed to comply with the professional improvement plan(s) developed for her"; and Ms. Nicholson "exhibited a continuing pattern of conduct unbecoming" including insubordination on September 10, 2003, defiant and disruptive behavior on October 28, 2003, insubordination on October 19, 2006, and a pattern of unsatisfactory performance documented on September 18, 2007, and prior evaluations.

On August 2, 2010, the respondent filed an Answer to the tenure charges. On August 8, 2010, the matter was forwarded from the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on August 11, 2010. On August 13, 2010, the Orange Township Board of Education filed additional charges nunc pro tunc against Ms. Nicholson and asked that those charges be consolidated with the prior charges. A prehearing conference was held on August 24, 2010, at which time a discovery schedule and hearing dates were determined and an Order was issued. The matter was originally scheduled for hearing on October 22 and 29 and November 8 and 9, 2010. However, the District asked for the October 22 date to be adjourned because Mr. Randall had a conflict. The matter was heard on the remaining dates. Simultaneous summation briefs were received on November 23, 2010.

ISSUES

1. Did the actions of the respondent rise to the level of insubordination and conduct unbecoming such that Ms. Nicholson should lose her tenured position?

2. What penalty, if any, should be imposed on the respondent?

FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The following facts have been stipulated by the parties: (See Joint Stipulation of Facts with Exhibits)

a. On or about August 1999, petitioner employed respondent as an administrative secretary.

b. Upon employment, the respondent possessed an associate's degree in applied science and secretarial arts dated April 15, 1994.

c. Upon employment, respondent was given a job description.

d. The respondent served in the capacity of administrative secretary at several schools in petitioner's school district. The schools are:

Central Elementary
Park Elementary
Orange Middle School
Orange High School

e. During her employment respondent received job performance evaluations.

f. In February, during the 2009–10 school year, respondent was denied a salary increment by petitioner for the 2010–11 school year based on performance.

2. The following are facts found as a result of the review of testimony and exhibits entered into evidence:

Prior to May 18, 2010, Dana Gaines, the assistant principal of Orange High School and Ms. Nicholson's immediate supervisor, gave Ms. Nicholson an assignment to complete. On May 18, 2010, Mr. Gaines and Oliverto Agosto, another assistant principal at the high school, were standing near the school entrance watching the students as they entered to make sure that they were abiding by the school dress code. Ms. Nicholson approached Mr. Gaines and told him that she could not do the assignment he had given her because it was not in the format that she used. Mr. Gaines told her that the format was not the problem, but Ms. Nicholson said that she had too much work to complete the assignment. Mr. Gaines said that it was critical that the work be done. At that point Ms. Nicholson took a lanyard holding a large set of keys from around her neck, balled the keys up in her hand, and forcefully slammed and partially threw them into Mr. Gaines's folded arms. She said that she had work to do in another office and he could do the assignment himself. Mr. Gaines did not shout or do anything that would have caused Ms. Nicholson to act in that manner, and he had never had a personal conflict with her prior to this incident.

Barbara Clark is the director of Special Services at Orange High School. On October 15, 2009, she sent a memo to Ms. Nicholson titled "Unprofessional Demeanor." Ms. Clark outlined that she had shared a complaint with Ms. Nicholson from a parent, Athena Smith, alleging that she had called the guidance office two times and the person who answered hung up on her. Ms. Clark came to the guidance office several times following this complaint and observed that the door was locked and Ms. Nicholson did not get up to open the door to let people in. (Ms. Nicholson was situated in the guidance office at that time.) The door to the guidance office was never to be locked for safety reasons, because of fire hazards and because the school wished to project a welcoming climate for parents and students at the guidance office.[1]

On February 27, 2009, Mr. Gaines walked into the office where Ms. Nicholson was assigned to work. He witnessed the respondent yelling at a student about a print job that he had delivered from the print shop and that was not to her liking. The student was visibly upset. Mr. Gaines intervened and removed the student from the office. Mr. Gaines put a formal reprimand in Ms. Nicholson's file (Ex. C) regarding this incident

[1] Ms. Clark testified to other instances in which she was informed by parents of Ms. Nicholson's rude behavior toward them. While I allowed the testimony in under the residuum rule, since there was no direct testimony regarding her behavior toward parents, I could not make a finding of fact as to these allegations.

asserting that her actions were inappropriate and unprofessional. In the memo, he also recommended ways that Ms. Nicholson could develop more positive relationships with students.

Another reprimand was placed in Ms. Nicholson's file as a result of an incident that occurred on or about October 6, 2009. Mr. Gaines gave Ms. Nicholson a priority task to complete by 3:00 p.m. on October 6, 2009. Sometime after 3:00 he spoke to Ms. Nicholson about the task and was told that it had not been completed. He did not recall Ms. Nicholson giving him any excuse for not completing the work. (See Exhibit D.) He then told her to forego any other tasks and attend to the task he had assigned her. The next day, Mr. Gaines tried to call Ms. Nicholson to see if the task had been completed, but she did not answer her telephone. He tried to track her down through another secretary, who reported that Ms. Nicholson was in fact at her own desk. After several more telephone calls, Ms. Nicholson finally picked up the telephone. When Mr. Gaines asked her to come to his office, she responded, "why?" Ms. Nicholson said that she was busy assisting a parent.[2] Mr. Gaines told her to have another secretary assist the parent. When she came to his office, she informed Mr. Gaines that she still had not completed the task that he had given her as a priority the day before.[3] Mr. Gaines tried to make suggestions to Ms. Nicholson about getting to work on time and prioritizing her tasks. He also told her that, if she felt that a time frame that she was given for a task was not reasonable, then she should let it be known. Ms. Nicholson refused to sign the October 13, 2009, Notice of Reprimand.

Jason Green is the athletic director at Orange High School. Originally during the 2008–09 school year he worked on a part-time basis. Beginning in September 2009 Ms. Nicholson worked part time for Mr. Green and part time for Mr. Gaines. Prior to Mr. Green's coming aboard full time, Ms. Nicholson was located in the main office. When he came in September, she was in the guidance office. She remained there for a few months. However, there were problems with the staff in the guidance office and Mr. Green suggested that Ms. Nicholson be moved to his office and work for him. In [2] Mr. Gaines pointed out that there were six other secretaries who could have assisted the parent, thereby leaving Ms. Nicholson free to complete her assignment.

[3] As per the union contract, Mr. Gaines called an OEA representative to come to the meeting with Ms. Nicholson.

November she was moved to Mr. Green's office, and for a time she only did work for the Athletic Department. In January she was moved to the central office of the high school, even though she was still working for the Athletic Department. Following this, Ms. Nicholson was moved to the nurse's office.

On April 21, 2010, Mr. Green approached Ms. Nicholson and asked her what assignments she was working on that day. She responded that she had assignments to complete for administrators. When he asked what administrators, Ms. Nicholson rolled her eyes and said, "Sir, not today." He asked her again and she responded the same way. Mr. Green then told her about the newly assigned lunch schedule. (Prior to this time Mr. Green had told Ms. Nicholson orally that she needed to relieve Ms. Banks, the guidance secretary, so that she could take her lunch.[4]) Ms. Nicholson was to take lunch from 11:30–12:30 and relieve Ms. Banks at 1:00. Ms. Nicholson then stated that the directive was not in writing. Mr. Green sent Ms. Nicholson a "Reprimand" on April 21, 2010, informing her that this was her official notice of insubordination. (E-6.)

Ms. Nicholson received a number of written reprimands regarding her late arrival, failure to sign in and absences. She was late on January 12, 2010; Mr. Green sent a memo to Ms. Nicholson (E-12) noting that between September 2009 and January 2010 she had used eleven and a half sick days. The school has a policy that if a staff member is going to be absent, the staff member is to call a central sub-service no later than 7:00 a.m. on the date of the absence so that a substitute can be arranged. In the alternative, the staff member could call the main office to report the impeding absence. Ms. Nicholson was to be at work at 8:00 a.m.

On Monday, January 19, 2010, Ms. Nicholson did not arrive at work on time, nor did she call sub-service or the main office. At 9:05 a.m. she called Mr. Green on his cell phone and told him that she was not coming into work that day. Ms. Nicholson claimed that she could not call sub-service or the main office because her phone would not allow her to call the 908 area code. Ms. Nicholson had no response when Mr. Green asked her why, if that was the case, she had not called him on his cell over the prior weekend or before 7:00 a.m. on Monday. (See E-11.)

[4] This schedule was being implemented because there had been complaints that Ms. Nicholson had not returned from lunch in a timely fashion to relieve the secretary in the Guidance Department.

On Wednesday, January 21, Ms. Nicholson called Mr. Green at 8:05 a.m. on his cell phone and informed him that she would be arriving at the high school at 11:00 a.m. She did not call the sub-service or the main office by 7:00 a.m. Mr. Green wrote a reprimand (E-10) regarding the incident, which Ms. Nicholson refused to acknowledge. On January 26, 2010, Ms. Nicholson arrived at the main office at 8:40. She did not call sub-service or the main office and refused to put her time of arrival on the sign-in sheet when requested to do so by Mr. Green. (E-9.) She also refused to sign the acknowledgment of the reprimand.

A similar incident occurred on January 27, 2010, when she arrived at 8:42 a.m., did not notify anyone of her late arrival, and refused to put the time of her arrival in the sign-in book. (E-8.) On February 4, 2010, Mr. Green sent Ms. Nicholson a written notice of excessive absenteeism/lateness. (E-7.) He outlined that between September 2009 and February 2010 she had used fifteen and a half sick days. This amounted to an additional five sick days since the January notice. From Tuesday, April 20, through Friday, April 23, 2010, Ms. Nicholson was late arriving at work and failed to sign the daily attendance log with the appropriate time of arrival. On April 23, 2010, Mr. Green sent a written reprimand to Ms. Nicholson outlining this situation and reminding her again to call sub-service or the main office and/or him prior to 7:00 a.m. if she were going to be late or absent. (E-5.)

On April 23, 2010, Ms. Nicholson was supposed to relieve Ms. Banks at 1:00 p.m. so that she could take her lunch from 1:00 to 2:00. Ms. Nicholson left for lunch on time, but did not return to the building until 1:55. Mr. Green found Ms. Nicholson out in the parking lot speaking to the grandparent of a student. Ms. Nicholson did not return to the building until she was instructed to meet with Mr. Green, Ms. Stewart, the principal, Mr. Markel and Ms. Easley. Ms. Nicholson's actions caused Ms. Banks to miss her assigned lunch time. (E-4.)

On May 14, 2010, Mr. Green sent Ms. Nicholson another written reprimand outlining her late arrival to work from April 26 through April 30, May 3 through May 7, and May 10 through 14, 2010. Again Mr. Green pointed out that Ms. Nicholson had failed to call sub-service, the main office or him to inform him of her late arrival, and that her behavior was detrimental to the operations of the school and the morale of the rest of the staff. (E-3.)

On May 17, 2010, Ms. Nicholson did not arrive at work until 8:44. She did not call sub-service or inform the school or Mr. Green of her late arrival. Mr. Green again reminded Ms. Nicholson of the District policy regarding late arrival and absences. (E-1.)

On March 22, 2010, Mr. Agosto received a telephone call from the principal of the high school, who instructed him to go to the nurse's office and inspect how Ms. Nicholson was dressed. Ms. Nicholson had on an Orange High School tee shirt and a pair of thin black sweatpants. This outfit was not in conformity with the Orange High School dress code for staff and teachers. Mr. Agosto asked the respondent why she was dressed that way, and she said, "because she was going to be working on dirty files in the guidance office."[5] Mr. Agosto said that he has observed other secretaries working on files and they were dressed according to the dress code, which is on the school website and in the teachers' manual. Ms. Nicholson had never asked anyone in administration whether she could dress "informally" in order to do this job. Mr. Agosto told her to go home and change. Ms. Nicholson told him that she would not change, and made it clear that she worked for Mr. Gaines and not Mr. Agosto.[6] Mr. Agosto told her to go to Human Resources (HR). Ms. Nicholson snatched up some bags next to her and left the room. By the time she got to HR, she had changed into professional clothing. Ms. Nicholson told Ms. Smiley, administrative assistant to the superintendent for operations and human resources, that she had to work with dirty files and the location of the files would mean that her "tush would be in the air," exposed to the students walking by in the hall. From Ms. Nicholson's explanation, Ms. Smiley thought that she would be sitting on the floor. As a result, Ms. Smiley wrote a memorandum to Ms. Nicholson.

[5] Mr. Agosto stated that the Guidance Department is not in the basement and does not have a dirt floor. People work on files in the guidance office every day and adhere to the dress code.
[6] Mr. Agosto described Ms. Nicholson's response as defiant and insubordinate.

On February 5 and February 8, 2010, Mr. Green gave Ms. Nicholson assignments that were to be completed by the end of the day. Ms. Nicholson did not complete the tasks; she sat in the guidance office chairs that were supposed to be for visitors and did not work on the assignments. When Mr. Green asked her why she had not completed the assignments, Ms. Nicholson said that she was waiting for the internet to be fixed in the nurse's office. At the time Ms. Nicholson had the athletic office laptop, which was wireless. The tasks could have been completed on the laptop. On February 5, 2010, Mr. Green told Ms. Nicholson that he needed the laptop in order to do some work over the weekend. Ms. Nicholson left early without Mr. Green's knowledge and took the laptop home with her. On Monday, February 8, 2010, Mr. Green again asked Ms. Nicholson for the laptop. She told him "no," and said that he would have to wait until after the school board meeting. She rolled her eyes, turned her head and walked away. (F-2.) While there was testimony, and Exhibit F-3 was entered into evidence regarding a failure to complete an assignment given on January 4, 2010, this incident was not addressed in the tenure charges and therefore will not be dealt with in the Findings of Fact.

On May 17, 2010, Mr. Green convened a meeting with Ms. Nicholson, Mr. Gaines and Ms. Easley. Mr. Green handed the respondent two letters of reprimand and an updated Professional Improvement Plan. Mr. Green asked Ms. Nicholson to review the letters, but she refused to review them. During the meeting Ms. Easley and Mr. Gaines informed Ms. Nicholson of her new assignment to compile a list of students who were in danger of failing. She was then supposed to input the information into a computer system which would generate a letter to the parents of students who were failing. In addition, she was to organize student records in alphabetical order for the 2007–08 school year. Ms. Nicholson was combative and tried to walk out of the meeting. Mr. Gaines had to call her back into the meeting several times. At the meeting Mr. Gaines and Ms. Easley informed Ms. Nicholson of assignments that were past due since March 9, 2010. (E-2.)

Because of problems with her performance, Mr. Green gave the respondent a sixty-day Professional Improvement Plan (PIP) for the period of January 25 to March 23, 2010. This plan included recommendations to improve her performance and professional-development goals. Following this period, Mr. Green did not see any improvement in Ms. Nicholson's performance and developed another PIP. (M-1.) This PIP was to cover the period of April 1 to May 20, 2010. At the end of this period, Mr. Green did not see any improvement and so he recommended on May 23, 2010, that Ms. Nicholson be terminated.

On May 26, 2010, Ms. Stewart, the principal of the high school, wrote a letter to the superintendent of schools in which she stated:

> There are great concerns regarding the decision to return Ms. Nicholson to Orange High School. Her inappropriateness, deficiencies, and insubordination have been documented during her tenure with Orange and she has gone through a number of district schools. The administrative team has grave concerns with her return to Orange High School for the following reasons:
> Safety and security of Administrative team
> Adverse impact of Ms. Nicholson's actions on her colleagues.

This letter was also signed by Mr. Gaines, Mr. Agosto, Mr. Green, Ms. Easley and three other administrators at the high school.

On June 27, 2001, Ms. Nicholson received an evaluation from Ms. Whitworth, her supervisor. Ms. Whitworth gave her "satisfactory" in "attitude toward children, computer skills and telephone etiquette." She received an evaluation of "needs improvement" in "ability to work with staff, clerical and organizational skills, knowledge of job and overall evaluation." She received "unsatisfactory" in "ability to work independently, human relations skills and punctuality and attendance." Ms. Nicholson "vehemently disagreed" with the evaluation. Ms. Nicholson received good evaluations in 2002. In 2004, while her overall evaluation was satisfactory, the principal pointed out that she had trouble focusing on her primary assignment and functions in the health office. She was also told that her duties required "consistency of attendance and temperament" and better collaboration with other staff members. Her 2006 evaluation by Mr. DePalma of the Athletic Department was "outstanding." The 2007 evaluation was "satisfactory," although "unsatisfactory" with regard to "punctuality and attendance." Her 2008 evaluation was "satisfactory" in all respects. Her evaluation by Mr. Gaines in 2009 was overall "needs improvement." He graded her "satisfactory" in "ability to work independently, computer skills and knowledge of job." She was rated "unsatisfactory" in "clerical and organizational skills" and "needs improvement" in all other areas.

According to a memorandum dated September 18, 2007, from Mr. McGriff, the athletic director, Ms. Nicholson's performance was unsatisfactory in that it took her three to four days to complete a task that should have taken only a few hours. (Ex. H.) On October 19, 2006, Kimberly Hall, assistant principal of Orange High School, wrote a letter to Ms. Nicholson stating that the respondent failed to follow a directive from Dr. McCaskill, the principal, and herself to assign a locker to a student. Ms. Nicholson claimed that she had other responsibilities that took priority. (Ex I.) On October 28, 2003, Ms. Nicholson received a memorandum from Antonine Gayles, the principal of Orange Middle School, regarding her unauthorized departure from the school. Ms. Nicholson claimed that she could not remain in the building because her room was very cold. According to Ms. Gayles, there were two portable space heaters in the room; alternatively, Ms. Nicholson could have relocated to another room until the matter was resolved. Ms. Nicholson failed to follow protocol for notifying the building supervisor about a problem in the workplace and disregarded the instructions of the assistant principal to not leave the building without talking to Ms. Gayles. On September 10, 2003, Ms. Gayles sent a memo to Ms. Nicholson in which she claimed that Ms. Nicholson was insubordinate and rude. The memo stated:

> Our conversation today marks the third occasion in which I have spoke to you about your lack of professionalism in performing your assigned tasks. I will not tolerate your verbal challenges, rude behavior, and disrespectful manner one more day.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES AND ANALYSIS OF THE LAW

1. Arguments

The District argued that from the beginning of her employment there were problems with Ms. Nicholson's performance, and that her July 2001 evaluation concluded that her performance was unsatisfactory and that there were concerns regarding her human relations skills, punctuality and attendance, and ability to work independently. She also had problems working with other staff members, and problems with clerical and organizational skills. However, instead of terminating her the District transferred her to another school. These same concerns manifested themselves again in her 2008–09 evaluation by Mr. Gaines. The areas in which Mr. Gaines recommended improvement were the areas in which Ms. Nicholson's performance had deteriorated. Because of the concerns regarding punctuality, human relations skills, ability to work with others, etc., the administration instituted a professional-improvement plan for Ms. Nicholson. However, Ms. Nicholson did not adhere to the plan, which led to her unsatisfactory evaluation for the 2009–10 school year. This negative evaluation and the other incidents outlined caused the District to file tenure charges against Ms. Nicholson.

Ms. Nicholson argued that the issue was not what had occurred when she was first employed, but what happened during the 2009–10 school year. The respondent claimed that she was put in an impossible situation. She was given directives from supervisors in different departments. If she obeyed the orders of one administrator, then another administrator would be upset with her. She gave as an example the incident involving the keys to the nurse's office. She said that she was put in charge of the nurse's office while the nurse was out. However, Mr. Gaines told her to leave the nurse's office and deal with the job that he wanted her to do. She claimed that the administration could not coordinate among themselves; she had too many bosses.

In reviewing the testimony it is clear that the reason that Ms. Nicholson had different people giving her different assignments was that she failed to complete the assignment of one administrator and was unable to work with any one of them. Out of frustration she was assigned to do work for another administrator. However, in each case, she failed to complete that assignment as well. The problem therefore was not that she had too many bosses, but that she failed to complete the work given to her. She appeared to believe that she could work on her own timetable and pick and choose which assignment she wanted to work on. She used the other assignments that she never completed as an excuse not to do the next assignment given to her. In addition, contrary to her assertion, Mr. Gaines or Mr. Green, depending on the time period, was the person through whom assignments to Ms. Nicholson were funneled. They might have allowed other administrators to give her assignments, but that was done serially, not simultaneously, and Mr. Gaines or Mr. Green was aware of her workload. Therefore, her contention that she had too many masters to answer to is not persuasive. This same problem of focusing on her primary job responsibilities was noted in her May 24, 2004, evaluation by principal Samuel H. Hazell. He stated:

> Ms. Denise Nicholson has demonstrated on many occasions the capacity and competence of a competent, well-intended administrative secretary. . . . Nevertheless, there is a need for Ms. Nicholson to focus more pointedly on the duties of her primary assignment and function: Health Office Administrative Secretary. There are records to record and files to systematically keep. Ms. Nicholson frequently has assisted in the Main Office. . . . The principal strongly recommends that Ms. Nicholson focus her attention to duties, obligations and responsibilities in the Health Office.
> [Ex. C, Stipulation of Fact.]

Further, Ms. Nicholson took on responsibilities that were not part of her assignment. The key incident seems to have stemmed from the fact that Ms. Nicholson was upset that she was ordered to complete a priority assignment for Mr. Gaines when she had been given the keys to the nurse's office and believed that she had to remain there to open the office. However, there was testimony from Mr. Gaines that if the nurse was not in her office, then the student would be referred to the nurse in the adjoining school. If that nurse needed the student's records, then it would be her responsibility to retrieve them from the high school nurse's office. Ms. Nicholson decided that since the high school nurse had given her keys to the office, she now had to assume that responsibility, despite her other assignment. Mr. Gaines and Mr. Agosto's testimony was quite clear and convincing that Ms. Nicholson forcefully slammed the keys into Mr. Gaines's folded arms. However, even if I were to give credence to Ms. Nicholson's testimony, that she took a lanyard of keys from around her neck, held them up in the air and dropped them into Mr. Gaines's folded arms, this would have been a clear act of defiance. It was the equivalent of saying, if you insist on my completing your priority assignment, then you deal with the nurse's office.

I agree with Ms. Nicholson that the charges regarding reports made to Ms. Clark, who sat on the PTO Council, regarding inappropriate behavior by a secretary in the guidance office cannot be sustained, since they are based entirely on hearsay. While hearsay is admissible in OAL hearings under the residuum rule, it cannot be the basis for determining an ultimate fact. Barbara Clark, the director of special services, did testify that Ms. Nicholson ignored her when she tried to talk with the respondent at her desk, and she observed that the guidance office door was locked on a number of occasions when Ms. Nicholson was the secretary in the office. Clearly, from the point of view of fire safety and accessibility of parents to the Guidance Department, Ms. Nicholson's locking the guidance office door for whatever reason was not appropriate. However, this was not among the tenure charges lodged against the respondent. The only direct testimony regarding an incident with Michelle Ogilvie came from Ms. Nicholson, who claimed that she did not respond when Ms. Ogilvie said "God bless you" after she sneezed. While it is hard to believe that a student observing this interaction would have exclaimed that "no parent should be treated that way," there is no direct testimony from which I can conclude that Ms. Nicholson was rude to this parent.

However, there was direct testimony from Mr. Gaines regarding an incident that he observed on February 27, 2009. He testified that he encountered the respondent addressing a student in a loud, negative tone. He intervened and removed the student from the room. The incident led Mr. Gaines to write a memo to Ms. Nicholson regarding her behavior. Ms. Nicholson's explanation, if believed, that the student had been rude to her was still not sufficient to warrant her "dressing down" the student. Further, it was not necessary for Mr. Gaines to repeat the exact words used by Ms. Nicholson to sustain the charge that she was abusive toward the student. He observed the encounter and certainly could draw conclusions from Ms. Nicholson's words and tone of voice.

The District alleged that Ms. Nicholson failed to complete an assignment that Mr. Gaines had given her on October 6, 2009, and which he designated as "priority." When Mr. Gaines attempted to contact her to find out the status of the assignment, she eluded him and did not answer his telephone calls. When he finally made contact with her, Ms. Nicholson claimed that she was busy helping a parent. When Mr. Gaines told her to come to his office, her response was "why?"[7] The respondent countered that if she responded to Mr. Gaines, she would have been seen as being rude to the parent she was speaking with. She was again in the double bind of not knowing which master to answer to. In addition, she claimed: "If Mr. Gaines cannot keep track of the assignments that he gave to Respondent, why should he expect her to do a better job?" This argument is specious. The fact that Mr. Gaines could not remember a year after the incident what assignment he had given Ms. Nicholson on October 6, 2009, is certainly not proof that he could not keep track of his assignments at the time. Mr. Gaines documented the incident in his Notice of Reprimand on October 13, 2009. (Ex. D.) In addition, Ms. Nicholson's continuing pattern of doing other people's work and getting sidetracked from her own assignments is evidenced in this incident. Ms. Nicholson could have referred the parent's inquiry to another secretary without being rude. Instead she chose to continue her conversation with the parent, disregarding the priority work that had been given to her by her supervisor.

The District charged that on April 21, 2010, Ms. Nicholson was disrespectful to Jason Green, athletic director at Orange High School. Mr. Green had asked Ms. Nicholson what she was working on that day and she responded that she had assignments to complete for administrators. When Mr. Green inquired who the administrators were, respondent became testy, rolled her eyes and commented, "Sir, not today." Ms. Nicholson responded that the charge is a generalized allegation by Mr. Green and was inconsistent with his testimony that all assignments went through him. Since there has already been testimony that Ms. Nicholson failed to complete a number of assignments, it is not unusual that Mr. Green would ask what assignment she was working on, on a particular day. As to the charge that "the testimony support[ing] this charge is a generalized allegation," it is not clear how that relates to this particular allegation. Mr. Green testified to the statements and actions taken by Ms. Nicholson; that was not a generalized allegation.

[7] In his testimony Mr. Gaines said that there were a number of other secretaries who could have assisted the parent that Ms. Nicholson was talking to.

Ms. Nicholson was also charged with not providing coverage to the guidance secretary when she had been instructed to do so. She was to take lunch from 11:30–12:30 and relieve the guidance secretary at 1:00. On this occasion Ms. Nicholson was seen outside in the parking lot, and she did not return until well after 1:00 to relieve the secretary. Ms. Nicholson's explanation was that she was talking to the grandparent of a student who was asking for advice about how her grandson could improve his performance in school. She believed that it was her responsibility to counsel this grandparent and that is why she ignored the directive to take lunch from 11:30–12:30 and relieve the secretary at 1:00. Ms. Nicholson's response is indicative of the behavior that has caused her to have problems with her supervisors. As pointed out in this decision, Ms. Nicholson had been advised in prior evaluations that she should handle her own tasks rather than be sidetracked by doing other people's jobs. In this case we have a secretary taking on the responsibility of counseling a grandparent regarding a student's performance. This matter should have been referred to the Guidance Department or the particular teacher involved; it was not within the purview of a secretary.

Part of the tenure charges related to Ms. Nicholson's pattern of tardiness, failure to list the sign-in time, absences, and failure to follow the call-out procedure. Ms. Nicholson did not deny that she was late or absent. She claimed that she was in a state of semi-homelessness and therefore had trouble coming to work, being on time for work and calling in to report that she would be absent or late.[8] However, she did not explain why she did not call the central office or Mr. Green on his cell phone, which was not in the 908 area code, prior to her absences and tardiness.[9] She never explained why she had not called Mr. Green on his cell phone over the weekend to tell him that she would be out of work, when she knew that she would be absent on Monday. Ms. Nicholson argues that she should not be terminated based on the absence issues, but rather progressive discipline must be utilized prior to termination. If absences, tardiness and failure to report were the only issues in this hearing, Ms. Nicholson's argument would hold more weight. However, it is clear that this was part of a broader pattern of failure to follow the directives of her superiors and insubordination.

From the testimony of the District's witnesses and their appearance at the hearing, it is clear that proper attire was an important feature that was stressed to the students at Orange High School. The teachers and staff were expected to set a good example for the student body and the dress code was in the teacher/staff handbook (Ex. R) and on the website. There was testimony that on two occasions Ms. Nicholson was not properly attired when she came to work. One time Ms. Nicholson explained that she was in the process of moving and did not have any clothes to wear other than sweats. On the other occasion she stated that she wore clothes that she believed to be appropriate to her working with dirty files. She had brought a change of clothes, so that when she was done working with the files she could change into proper attire. In fact, when Mr. Agosto told her to report to Human Resources because she was dressed inappropriately, she changed her clothes before going to the HR office. It does not appear that Ms. Nicholson was wearing revealing clothes. The problem is that Ms. Nicholson took it upon herself to decide to wear clothing that was not sanctioned by the school, without consulting with her superiors. There was testimony that other secretaries worked on these files and were dressed appropriately. The files were not located in the basement or another dirty area. Ms. Nicholson might not have felt comfortable, as she said, working with her "gluteus maximus in the air," but if she wanted to deviate from the dress code she should have discussed this with her supervisors.

[9] Ms. Nicholson did not refute Mr. Green's testimony that she could have reported her absences and/or tardiness by either calling the sub-service, the central office or his cell phone.

The District asserted that on January 4 and 13, 2010, Ms. Nicholson was insubordinate and failed to meet an assignment deadline. While Exhibit F-3 outlines this occurrence and Mr. Green gave testimony on this issue, it is not part of the tenure charges and the District did not move to amend the petition to add these charges. Therefore, the allegations regarding incidents that occurred that were not part of the tenure charges will not be considered.

The District did argue, as part of its charges, that the respondent refused and/or was unwilling to perform a task assigned to her on February 5 and 8, 2010. There was testimony that on Friday, February 5, 2010, Mr. Green gave Ms. Nicholson an assignment to complete by the end of the day. Mr. Green also stated that he observed Ms. Nicholson sitting in one of the visitor's chairs in the guidance office and she was not performing any task. When questioned, Ms. Nicholson said that she was waiting for someone to fix the internet service in the nurse's office. However, Mr. Green said that Ms. Nicholson had the Athletic Department's laptop, which was wireless. When he asked for the computer back to do work of his own, she told him "no," and that he had to wait until after a board of education meeting. In response, the respondent claimed that this charge had to be dismissed because "If the Board of Education and Mr. Green cannot identify the assignment given to the Respondent, how can she be expected to begin to work at it, let alone to complete it?" However, during direct and cross-examination Ms. Nicholson never claimed that she was unable to complete the February 2010 job because she did not know the nature of the assignment. In addition, when questioned about the computer, she admitted that she did not turn it over until after the board meeting. Refusal (either actively or passively) to complete an assignment and to turn over department equipment ordered by a superior demonstrates insubordination on the part of the respondent.[10]

Ms. Nicholson was also charged with being combative and trying several times to walk out of a performance-review meeting, held on May 17, 2010, with Mr. Green, Mr. Gaines and Ms. Easley, the supervisor of guidance at the high school. In addition, the respondent was informed by Ms. Easley at the meeting that she still had not completed an assignment given to her on March 9, 2010, to place the files of students for the 2008–09 school year in graduation order in order for the records to be archived. Ms. Easley acknowledged that she did not know what other assignments Ms. Nicholson was handling at the time of this assignment, but the head of guidance was able to complete the assignment for the 2003–04 through 2006–07 school years in one day.[11] Ms. Nicholson claimed that during the performance-review meeting the supervisors pressed her to sign several documents, and she would not sign them until she had reviewed them. Thinking the meeting was over, Ms. Nicholson left. I do not find it plausible that someone would just get up from a meeting with a group of supervisors and leave without being told that the meeting was over, or that she was free to leave. From the testimony, it appears that Ms. Nicholson again took it upon herself to unilaterally decide what she would do and how she would do it.

[10] There was testimony regarding a reprimand dated March 29, 2010, (F-1) about charges of insubordination and unprofessional conduct in front of students and staff members. However, this incident was not part of the tenure charges and therefore will not be dealt with in this opinion.

The District argued that Ms. Nicholson failed to adhere to two Professional Improvement Plans, one for the period of January 25 through March 23, 2010, and the other for the period of April 1 through May 20, 2010. As a result of her failure to improve in the areas suggested, her performance was determined to be unsatisfactory. The respondent has claimed that > it is very difficult to understand the exact facts relied upon by the Board of Education in support of this charge. Again, there are generalized allegations, not facts and a confusion of events which occurred while the PIPs were in progress with events which occurred at other times.

She argues that the only charges that have been clearly addressed are lateness and dress-code violations, and these are de minimis claims that would not support termination.

While a number of the charges do involve absenteeism and tardiness, there are others that involve unprofessional demeanor, such as an incident with Mr. Green in which Ms. Nicholson refused to respond to him and slammed the door and the books on the desk, resulting in a March 29, 2010, reprimand (F-1); an incident on February 8 in which Ms. Nicholson did not complete an assignment and did not turn over a laptop (F-2); and a problem on January 13, 2010, when Ms. Nicholson did not complete an assignment and refused to go to a room where she was directed to go by Mr. Green. During Ms. Nicholson's second Professional Improvement Plan period, April 1 through May 20, 2010, she was cited for late arrival on a number of dates in April (E-5); excessive absences on May 14 (E-1); and failure to sign in on May 17 (E-2). There was a written reprimand for her behavior on April 21, 2010, which involved her response to Mr. Green when he asked her what work she was doing. She answered that she was working for other administrators. When he asked who, she responded by rolling her eyes and saying, "Sir, not today." In addition, on May 17, 2010, there was the incident in which Ms. Nicholson slammed the keys into Mr. Gaines's folded arms. (Ex. A.) The situation had become so severe that all of the administrators in the school signed a memo, composed by the principal, asking for Ms. Nicholson's removal from the school. (Ex. O.)

Ms. Nicholson's original Professional Improvement Plan outlined a number of goals, including arriving at work on time, signing the attendance log, adhering to the dress code, improving her professional and personal manner of conduct, completing tasks assigned to her, interacting with her immediate supervisor in a more respectful manner and maintaining a positive working relationship with staff. The second PIP basically mirrors the first set of goals. The testimony and exhibits clearly show that Ms. Nicholson did not demonstrate improvement in any of these areas. While the respondent has honed in on the fact that the school did not approve courses that it had recommended in the PIP to improve her performance on the job, the District correctly pointed out that Ms. Nicholson did not need courses to learn to come to work on time, to sign in on time, to call to report her absences, to complete her assignments in a timely fashion and to be more respectful of supervisors. She had been a secretary in the Orange school system for many years and should have been aware of the proper way to interact with her supervisors and fellow staff.

Finally, Ms. Nicholson is charged with prior incidents of insubordination on September 10, 2003, October 28, 2003, and October 19, 2006. Ms. Smiley, special assistant to the superintendent, identified the documents that outlined these charges. (See Stipulation of Facts, Ex. C.) There were also documents submitted regarding a memorandum from Mr. McGriff, former athletic director, dated September 18, 2007, wherein he voiced his concerns regarding Ms. Nicholson's performance; a memorandum from Kimberly Hall, assistant principal, that stated that Ms. Nicholson refused to carry out the directive to assign a locker to a student; and a memorandum from Antoine Gayles, principal of Orange Middle School, regarding insubordinate behavior. There was no testimony from anyone who authored the memoranda. However, some of these documents mirror a pattern of behavior that is evident in the present charges, namely, Ms. Nicholson's inability to complete tasks and to stay on task, difficulty working with fellow staff and supervisors, and punctuality and attendance.

2. Analysis of the Law

The tenure of education personnel is authorized by the Education Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to -18. According to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, no person under tenure of office, position, or employment shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. Tenure is a status in a particular position created by statute, not the agreement of the parties, therefore, it is a "'statutory right imposed upon a teacher's contractual employment' . . . [that] may not be forfeited or waived." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 77 (1982) (quoting Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 72 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508, 9 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1963), and citing Red Bank Educ. Ass'n v. Red Bank Bd. of Educ., 78 N.J. 122, 141 (1978)). While tenure was designed to protect employees "from dismissal 'for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons,'" Wright v. Bd. of Educ. of E. Orange, 99 N.J. 112, 118 (1985) (citing Zimmerman, supra, 38 N.J. at 71), teachers (and other tenured employees) are responsible to act in a professional manner and to serve the welfare of the students in their care. Tenure charges can be sustained based on a history of unprofessional conduct (In re Riddick, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 345), or on a single incident, "if sufficiently flagrant." In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967) (citing Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944)).

Among the charges lodged against Ms. Nicholson was "conduct unbecoming." This conduct was defined by the administrative law judge in In re Tenure Hearing of Motley, State-Operated School District of Newark, Essex County, EDU 7421-97, Initial Decision (May 5, 1999), aff'd as modified, Comm'r (August 4, 1999), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (December 1, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>:

> "Unbecoming conduct" is an elastic term broadly defined to include any conduct "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [government] employees and [confidence] in the operation of [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct "need not be predicated upon a violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 22, 40 (App. Div. 1992). Despite the apparent vagueness of this standard, "it fairly and adequately conveys its meaning to all concerned." Laba v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 23 N.J. 364, 384 (1957). In the context of a school tenure case, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974).

It is the obligation of the District to prove the tenure charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The Commissioner, in In re Tenure Hearing of Grundfest, School District of Madison, Morris County, EDU 5326-98, Comm'r (June 20, 2000), rev'g Initial Decision (March 29, 2000), aff'd, St. Bd. (November 1, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, outlined what a board of education had to prove in order to meet its burden in a tenure charge:

> Sustaining tenure charges for unbecoming conduct, however, is a very serious matter. The ramifications for respondent would be not only the loss of his tenured employment, but also the automatic referral of the matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of his teaching certificate, and the possible loss of his pension benefits. Since the penalty for respondent would be severe, it is the Board's responsibility and its burden to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence [the tenure charges against respondent].

In this case there was testimony from no less than six administrators, all of whom stated that Ms. Nicholson was rude and abusive to students, parents and themselves. They also testified that Ms. Nicholson failed to complete assignments and ignored their directives, and was assaultive toward Mr. Gaines when she half threw a ball of keys into his folded arms. In addition, there was testimony that the respondent was excessively absent and/or tardy and did not follow the instructions of her supervisor to call in prior to being late or absent. Ms. Nicholson failed to elicit any evidence to show that any of these witnesses had previous ill feelings toward her or that they had any motive to lie about what had occurred.

Determinations often turn on credibility. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to the testimony of a witness. The process of evaluating the credibility of witnesses entails: (a) observing demeanor; (b) evaluating the ability to recall specific details; (c) considering the consistency of the testimony under direct and cross-examination; (d) determining the significance of any inconsistent statements or evidence; and (e) otherwise developing a sense of the witness's candor. This requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. See Carbo v. U.S., 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963), cert. denied sub. nom. Palermo v. U.S., 377 U.S. 953, 84 S. Ct. 1625, 12 L. Ed. 2d 498 (1964).

In evaluating the weight, trustworthiness and reliability of the evidence, factors such as motive, bias, confirming witnesses or statements, corroborative evidence, and common sense must be considered. Frequently, the trier of fact relies on the innate sense of whether the testimony has the ring of truth.

In the instant case, there is no evidence of bias or motive on the part of the administrators to concoct charges against Ms. Nicholson. Though the District's witnesses might not have recalled every detail of each assignment given to Ms. Nicholson, they were consistent in their overall recollection of the respondent's actions and what led up to the charges against her. The various memoranda composed shortly after the incidents occurred reinforce the District's rendition of Ms. Nicholson's behavior. In addition, several of Ms. Nicholson's prior evaluations point out the same type of behavior that led to the filing of tenure charges.

CONCLUSION

Based on the Findings of Fact and reasoning outlined in the Arguments and Analysis of the Law above, I CONCLUDE that the District has sustained its burden of proving the tenure charges against the respondent.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner challenged a disciplinary suspension imposed upon her during her senior year of high school, in the aftermath of an altercation with another student. Petitioner was readmitted to school following her suspension, went on to graduate in June 2009, and is currently on active duty in the United States Marine Corps. The school district contends that the issues raised in the petition have been rendered moot by Ms. Robinson's graduation, and asks that the matter be dismissed.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the claims raised in the petition are moot, as petitioner has already received her high school diploma and there is no longer any record of the suspension maintained in petitioner's student records; petitioner's assertions that the suspension was imposed in violation of her due process rights and that the district's disciplinary procedures are legally flawed are likewise moot because petitioner is no longer subject to the force of school procedures or regulations; and petitioner's argument that her within claims require resolution so that she may pursue claims against the district elsewhere is flawed as dismissal here does not preclude petitioner from later bringing her defamation and other claims before the appropriate court. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the petition should be dismissed.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons comprehensively detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition as moot.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner requested and was granted an extension of time within which to file exceptions to the Initial Decision. These exceptions and the District's reply thereto were filed in accordance with the modified timelines.

Petitioner's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate her arguments advanced below. As the Commissioner finds that such arguments were fully considered and addressed by the ALJ in her decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively detailed on pages 4-6 of her Initial Decision – that this matter is appropriately dismissed as moot.

[1] It is noted that a prior named petitioner in this matter, Stephen Kent, was dismissed as a petitioner by Interlocutory Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) dated November 23, 2009. In this order the ALJ further determined that there was no authorization which would allow Mr. Kent to serve as a non-attorney representative of Ms. Robinson in this matter. The Commissioner is in full accord with the ALJ's November 23, 2009 Interlocutory Order.

Accordingly, the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Asia Robinson, a former student of the State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson (the school district), challenges a disciplinary suspension imposed upon her during her senior year of high school. The school district contends that the issues raised by the petition have been rendered moot by Ms. Robinson's graduation. The school district asks that the petition be dismissed.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed her appeal before the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on or about June 8, 2009. The school district filed an answer and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 27, 2009. At the time of the filing of the petition, Stephen Kent was named as a co-petitioner. Mr. Kent, who described himself as a surrogate father to Ms. Robinson, and is not a licensed attorney, also asserted that he intended to serve as Ms. Robinson's non-attorney representative. Ms. Robinson is an adult, and was at the time the petition was filed.

A prehearing conference was conducted via telephone on October 7, 2009. It was agreed that it was appropriate to preliminarily address Mr. Kent's standing to assert the claims contained in the petition, and his right to represent Ms. Robinson's interests in this proceeding.[1] I invited briefs on these issues, which were filed by the parties. In its brief, the school district additionally asserted that the petition should be summarily dismissed as moot. Mr. Kent filed a brief in opposition that addressed all the arguments raised by the school district.

By order dated November 23, 2009, I dismissed Mr. Kent as a petitioner, and determined that he should not be permitted to serve as a non-attorney representative for Ms. Robinson. I reserved my decision on the mootness issue, and afforded Ms. Robinson a forty-five-day period within which to either retain an attorney, or reply pro se to the school district's request that the petition be dismissed. Mr. Kent had indicated in his submission that Ms. Robinson was actively serving in the military. Accordingly, I further directed that if her active service precluded Ms. Robinson from [1] It should be noted that prior to the transmittal of this case to the OAL, the Department communicated with Mr. Kent and raised concerns about both his standing to proceed as a petitioner, and the appropriateness of his representation of Ms. Robinson. It was ultimately decided that these issues would be transmitted to the OAL, and to me as the judge assigned, for determination.

filing written opposition to the school district's motion she should so advise me in the form of an affidavit that complied with the requirements of R. 1:13-6.

I received an affidavit from Ms. Robinson via letter dated December 29, 2009, in which she confirmed that she was actively serving in the United States Marine Corps, and was stationed at Camp Lejune, North Carolina. She stated that she was unable to prosecute this matter as she was participating in "boot camp," and might then be deployed to Iraq or Afghanistan. Via order dated January 4, 2010, I placed this matter on the inactive list for a period of six months. In accordance with R. 1:13-6, the order indicated that the matter would be automatically restored to the active hearing calendar unless Ms. Robinson filed an additional affidavit attesting to the fact that her ability to prosecute this matter continued to be materially affected by her military service.

Hearing nothing further from Ms. Robinson, via letter dated July 13, 2010, I confirmed that the matter had been restored to the active calendar, and again asked for any opposition to the school district's pending motion. In reply, on August 24, 2010, Ms. Robinson again filed an affidavit and asked that her case continue on the inactive list. She stated that she was now stationed in Red Bank, New Jersey.

Via letter order dated September 15, 2010, I denied Ms. Robinson's request. The court rule affords me that discretion, and I advised that I did not believe that Ms. Robinson's ability to respond in writing to the motion continued to be materially affected by her military service. I afforded Ms. Robinson until October 15, 2010, to submit opposition to the school district's motion to dismiss. As of October 27, 2010, she had not done so, and, accordingly, I closed the record. Thereafter, on November 2, 2010, I received correspondence from counsel for Ms. Robinson, in which she indicated that an October 14, 2010, letter to me confirming her representation had been misfiled. She sought leave to file opposition to the pending motion on Ms. Robinson's behalf.

I reopened the record and conferred with counsel via telephone on November 10, 2010. I granted counsel for Ms. Robinson leave to file opposition to the motion, which she did via letter dated December 1, 2010. Counsel for the school district replied via letter dated December 10, 2010, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts relevant to the school district's request that the petition be dismissed are not in controversy and I FIND:

Ms. Robinson was a senior at the district's Silk Academy, when, in or about October 2008, she was suspended in the aftermath of an altercation with a fellow student. A hearing was conducted before the district hearing committee on March 5, 2009. The committee determined that Ms. Robinson had committed the offenses for which she was charged, but readmitted her to Silk Academy. She graduated in June 2009, and is currently actively serving in the United States Marine Corps. The district has submitted the certification of its general counsel, Mark Tabenkin, Esq., who states that he has reviewed Ms. Robinson's student records and they contain no reference to the October 2008 disciplinary incident.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The district asks that the petition be dismissed because Ms. Robinson's claims are moot. It urges that she has graduated, and that her permanent school records contain no reference to the controverted disciplinary incident. Accordingly, the district contends that there is no relief that the Commissioner can grant to Ms. Robinson.

An action is moot when it no longer presents a justiciable controversy because the issues raised have become academic. For reasons of judicial economy and restraint it is appropriate to refrain from decision-making when an issue presented is hypothetical, judgment cannot grant effective relief, or the parties do not have a concrete adversity of interest. Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976); Fox v. Twp. of E. Brunswick Bd. of Educ., EDU 10067-98, Initial Decision (March 19, 1999), aff'd, Comm'r (May 3, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; S.J. v. Bd. of Educ. of Mountain Lakes, EDU 07081-03, Initial Decision (October 7, 2003), aff'd, Comm'r (Nov. 17, 2003), aff'd, St. Bd. (Feb. 3, 2004) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

The claims raised by this petition are moot. Ms. Robinson challenges a disciplinary suspension that took place during the 2008–2009 school year. At the end of that year, Ms. Robinson received a high school diploma. If her suspension were ongoing, I arguably could order her return to school. But in light of her graduation, doing so now plainly would be academic.

Likewise, I arguably could order that Ms. Robinson's school records be expunged. But as indicated in the certification supplied by the school district, there is no longer any record being maintained of the suspension, and, accordingly, nothing to expunge.[2] In her opposition to the motion to dismiss petitioner renews her assertion that the suspension was imposed in violation of her due process rights, and that district disciplinary procedures were legally flawed. But our courts have recognized that where a petitioner is no longer a student, and no longer subject to the force of school procedures or regulations, a challenge to those procedures or regulations becomes academic and moot. Oxfeld v. S. Orange-Maplewood Bd. of Educ., 68 N.J. 301, 304 (1975).

Petitioner's contention that her claims before the Commissioner require resolution so that she may pursue claims against the district elsewhere is unpersuasive. The school district correctly asserts that dismissal of this action does not preclude petitioner from later bringing her defamation and other claims before the appropriate court. Indeed, the administrative forum exists to afford concrete relief to litigants, not simply to create a record for use in a subsequent proceeding. For this matter to be justiciable here, petitioner must have suffered a distinct injury or harm that can be remedied by the Commissioner. See e.g. :New Jersey Turnpike Auth. v Parsons, 3 N.J. 235, 240 (1949). It is not the role of the Commissioner to function in the abstract or to enter rulings that are advisory. See: N.J. Civil Serv. Ass'n v. State of New Jersey, 88 N.J. 605, 611 (1982); Crescent Park Tenants Assoc. v Realty Eq. Corp. of New York, 58 N.J. 98,107.

[2] The district points out that disciplinary records are not a part of the permanent student record mandated to be maintained by the district under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.8(e).

Nor does this case raise any matter of great public importance compelling a definitive resolution of the issues raised despite their mootness. Id. at 303. As a result, and because there is no effective relief that could be granted to Ms. Robinson in this forum, I CONCLUDE that the claims raised by the petition should be dismissed.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the petition of appeal be dismissed as moot.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF SHAWN JOHNSON, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ASBURY PARK, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The petitioning Board certified charges of conduct unbecoming, misbehavior, and neglect against respondent – a tenured custodian – for leaving the school building before the end of his shift on several occasions and for falsification of time sheets. Respondent contended that he was forced to leave his post early whenever his co-worker – a custodian who possessed a "black seal' license to operate the building's boilers – wanted to leave early, because respondent did not hold the "black seal" license and was therefore not allowed to remain in the building alone to complete his shift.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: on several dates in the 2008-2009 school year, respondent – by his own admission – left his assigned job prior to the 11 p.m. end of his shift; respondent gave credible testimony that he did so at the direction of a more senior custodian, because respondent did not hold the "black seal" license; and respondent's testimony was corroborated by the school's head custodian, who also admitted that Johnson had complained to him about being forced to leave early at the insistence of his co-worker. The ALJ concluded that: the Board met its burden of proof relative to the charges of conduct unbecoming and misbehavior, but did not meet its burden on the neglect charge as the record reflects that respondent performed his actual duties and was by all accounts a good employee; respondent's lack of any disciplinary history and his reputation as a good worker who performed the tasks required of him – and who advised his immediate supervisor about the problem with his co-worker insisting that he leave early – mitigate against his dismissal from his tenured position. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent be suspended without pay for the period of one hundred twenty days.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. The Commissioner ordered that petitioner 1) reinstate respondent to his tenured position, and 2) ensure that respondent has not lost more than 120 days of pay and benefits.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 293-10/09

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF SHAWN JOHNSON, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ASBURY PARK, MONMOUTH COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

A review of the record in this matter supports the findings in the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) that the respondent tenured custodian was a good worker, but was liable for misbehavior and unbecoming conduct when, on a number of occasions, he left work before the end of his evening shift and did not so indicate on his time sheets. The petitioning district certified tenure charges to the Commissioner seeking the termination of respondent's employment.

In the course of the hearing in the OAL, however, testimony was presented by respondent – and corroborated by at least one of petitioner's representatives – that respondent's early departures were the result of the early departures of a senior employee. That employee had a black seal license to operate the building's boiler. On a number of occasions he left work before the end of the evening shift, at which time he advised respondent – who lacked a black seal license – that he could not remain in the building alone.

It is also undisputed that respondent had complained to petitioner's head custodian about the occasions on which he was told to leave work early, but that petitioner's representatives did not institute measures to deter further such incidents. Nor was respondent given permission by his superiors to remain in the building to finish his shift if the employee with the black seal license were to continue to depart prematurely.[1] As the senior employee apparently did continue to leave before the end of the work shift, respondent continued to be subjected to reductions in his work hours upon the whim of a colleague. With these circumstances in mind, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) determined that dismissal was too severe a penalty, and that an 120-day suspension without pay is a consequence that better fits the offense.

There is no question that respondent's falsification of time sheets warrants discipline. However, in light of 1) petitioner's failure – when advised of the problem that precipitated respondent's infractions – to ameliorate same, 2) the testimony of petitioner's representatives that respondent is a hard worker who not infrequently arrived at work early, and 3) the absence of prior disciplinary action against respondent, the Commissioner deems reasonable the determination that dismissal is too severe a penalty in the present case.[2]

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case. Respondent shall be reinstated and petitioner will ensure that respondent has not lost more than 120 days of pay and benefits.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

[1] It also appears from the record that for a period of several months respondent's time cards had shown frequent handwritten entries for the end-of-shift sign-out – as opposed to showing end-of-shift clock stamps. The administrators responsible for approving the time sheets, however, had not investigated this alleged aberration from official procedure.

[2] No exceptions to the reduced penalty recommended by the ALJ have been filed by petitioner.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 293-10/09

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF SHAWN JOHNSON, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ASBURY PARK, MONMOUTH COUNTY.

Douglas J. Kovats, Esq., for petitioner, Board of Education of City of Asbury Park (Kenney, Gross Kovats & Parton, attorneys)

Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., for respondent, Shawn Johnson (Detzky & Hunter, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: December 2, 2010 Decided: December 21, 2010

BEFORE PATRICIA M. KERINS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Shawn Johnson is employed by petitioner, the Board of Education of the City of Asbury Park (Board), as a custodian under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A.

18:17-3. The Board seeks his removal for his failure to work assigned hours and falsification of time records.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 18, 2009, tenure charges were filed with the Board by Corey Lowell, Business Administrator and Board Secretary, and served on Johnson. On October 14, 2009 the Board determined that probable cause existed to credit the evidence in support of the charges, and that the charges, if so credited, warranted Johnson's dismissal from his employment. Also on October 14, 2009, the Board suspended Johnson without pay, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

On October 22, 2009, the Board filed the certified charges of unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, and neglect against Johnson, with the Commissioner of Education who directed Johnson to file an answer to the charges. When an answer was not filed on behalf of Johnson within the allowed time, the Commissioner issued summary decision on behalf of the Board on November 18, 2009. On November 20, 2009, respondent's counsel filed an answer and moved for reconsideration of the summary decision. On December 9, 2009, the Commissioner vacated her earlier decision. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on December 16, 2009.

A prehearing conference was held on January 19, 2010, and the matter was scheduled for hearing on April 6 and 8, 2010. At the request of counsel (See Kovats letter of January 25, 2010) the matter was rescheduled to May 3 and 5, 2010. By letter of April 30, 2010, the parties jointly requested an adjournment of the scheduled hearing dates as a settlement had been reached. By letter dated April 30, 2010, the Board filed a Motion, Certification and proposed form of Order in support of its application pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 to dispense with the prosecution of the tenure charges. On May 19, 2010, an executed copy of the signed Settlement Agreement was forwarded by Board's counsel but on May 25, 2010, counsel for the Board advised that the Resolution affirming the agreement by the Board would not be placed on the May 26, 2010 agenda. A telephone status conference was held on June 1, 2010, and due to the failure of the Board to ratify the settlement, the matter was rescheduled to July 22, 2010.

The charges transmitted consisted of six counts and the district proceeded on five of those counts, placing on the record at the hearing that they were not proceeding on Charge Five. Hearings were conducted on July 22, 2010, and August 5, 2010. The record remained open until December 2, 2010, for the receipt of transcripts documentary evidence and post-hearing briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Many of the material facts in this matter are not in dispute. Johnson has been employed by the Board as a school custodian since 2004, and has acquired tenure in that position. Assigned to the Bradley Elementary School in Asbury Park, his direct supervisor was Head Custodian Douglas Cobb. Johnson was assigned to the evening shift at the school with a more senior custodian, Marvin Davis. According to the job description for the custodian position, work schedules are assigned by the "Head Custodian, Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds and/or the Principal of the school" (R-2). The collective bargaining agreement in effect between the Board and the Asbury Park Education Association for the relevant time period, the 2008-2009 school year, provides that the workweek for custodial and maintenance staff will be forty hours and five days, Monday through Friday. (R-1 – Article XIII (B)).

While he was assigned to the Bradley School, Johnson's scheduled work hours were 2 p.m. until 11:00 p.m., with two fifteen minute breaks and an hour for dinner, a nine hour shift with an hour and a half for dinner and breaks. The custodians at the school clocked in and out through a time clock at the beginning and end of each shift. Custodians also clocked in and out during their one hour dinner break. The time clock was originally located at the back entrance to the school, near the custodians' work area and boiler room. It was then moved to the front of the school in the main office area. The time cards were collected and reviewed by the Head Custodian for the building, in this case, Douglas Cobb. Then they were sent on to Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds, Angelo Del Pizzo, for review and processing.

When clocking out at the end of their evening shift, the custodians were charged with setting the building's alarm. On the evening of March 5, 2009, Del Pizzo, received a call from the district's security alarm company. He was informed that the alarm at the Bradley Elementary School had been alerted. The security service had tried unsuccessfully to reach the custodians supposed to be in the building at the time. The service then tried Head Custodian Douglas Cobb, but received no response. They then contacted Del Pizzo, who went to the school, arriving sometime between 8:45 and 9 p.m. Upon walking the school premises, he found no one there. As it was prior to 11 p.m., the evening custodial staff of Johnson and Davis should have been at the school. Del Pizzo contacted his superior and the school's vice principal the next morning.

Del Pizzo testified to his review of Johnson's time cards. No cards could be located by the district prior to 2008. Del Pizzo has been in his current position since 2008. Although custodians should punch out their time card at the end of their shift, Del Pizzo allowed that an occasional handwritten notation could be acceptable, depending on the circumstances. He does not review the cards on a daily basis, but rather reviews two weeks worth as they are processed for payroll. During his testimony he reviewed Johnson's time cards for the 2008-09 school year (R-4 and 5). Each time card showed some handwritten entries for the daily clock out. Appointed to his position in October 2008, Del Pizzo described his counseling of Johnson when he began to review the cards. He advised Johnson perhaps four times that he needed to clock out on the machine rather than writing in his departure. He did not feel a reprimand was in order since he felt Johnson was making an effort to comply.

Vice Principal Kelly A. Gayle also testified. After being informed of the alarm incident, she held a meeting on March 10, 2008 with the custodians. At the meeting, Johnson admitted he had left early that day and on other days due to Marvin Davis. According to Johnson, Davis told him he had to leave the building early when Davis wanted to leave because Johnson did not have a "black seal" license to operate the building's boilers. Davis insisted that Johnson therefore could not remain in the school alone to complete his shift. Gayle further recalled Johnson explaining that Davis had insisted on leaving early on occasions over the years. Johnson also explained that he had informed his supervisor Cobb about Davis insisting he leave the building early at times.

Gayle described Johnson as a good employee. She often worked late at the school and while she was there, the custodians were always present for their shift.

Douglas Cobb was the final witness for the Board. The head custodian at Bradley for sixteen years, he is present at the school for the earlier day shift, setting his own hours. He testified that despite being head custodian it is not his practice to review the time cards, he merely collects them and sends them on for payroll processing. However, at times he will initial a handwritten notation by a custodian. He denied that all of the initials on the handwritten entries on Johnson's time cards were his. Present at the meeting with Gayle and Johnson, he too recalled Johnson explaining that Davis and his lack of a black seal license were his reason for leaving early.

Cobb also admitted that Johnson had complained to him about Davis' insistence that he leave early. Cobb took no formal action about the situation but said he advised both men not to leave early. He found Johnson to be a good worker who often came in early for his shift.

Johnson testified on his own behalf and admitted leaving early on the evening of March 5, 2009. As on other occasions, Davis had insisted he leave early due to his lack of a black seal license. As to the other occasions during the 2008-09 school year when he had not clocked out on the time clock, but had written in his departure as 11 p.m., he admitted that on some of those evenings he had left early at Davis' insistence. However, he said the majority of the handwritten entries were evenings when he had forgotten to clock out at the end of his shift. Johnson stated he was a good worker who had gone to his immediate supervisor on several occasions with his discomfort over Davis' insistence that they leave the shift early. He said that no one had clarified for him whether he was allowed to remain in the building without another custodian with a black seal license. He had been hired without one, and Asbury Park had not completed arrangements for him to obtain his license. Johnson further pointed out that he walked to work and would arrive early or work through his breaks to be certain that even if he left early, his work would be complete.

From the evidence presented, I FIND that on March 5, 2009, and on at least several other dates in the 2008-09 school year, Johnson by his own admission, left his assigned job prior to the 11 p.m. end of his nine hour shift. Johnson was credible in his testimony that he did so at the direction of the more senior custodian, Marvin Davis. Johnson's assertion that Davis insisted he could not remain in the building alone without a black seal license was also credible and corroborated by Cobb.

Prior Disciplinary History

Johnson has no prior disciplinary history.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 ". . . no tenured employee in the public school system of the State shall be dismissed except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." The specific rights of custodial employees are set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 as follows:

> Every public school janitor of a school district shall, unless he is appointed for a fixed term hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation . . . except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense . . . .

The Board has charged Johnson with neglect, misbehavior and conduct unbecoming a tenured custodian. The Board bears the burden of proving these charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). After giving careful consideration to the competent credible evidence, I CONCLUDE that the Board has met its burden of proof relative to the charges of conduct unbecoming and misbehavior. The Board has not met its burden on the neglect charge as the record reflects that Johnson performed his actual duties and was by all accounts a good employee.

The Board urges that Johnson's conduct warrants his dismissal from his tenured position of employment. However many facts in this case mitigate against such a drastic sanction. Johnson has no prior disciplinary history and by all accounts was a good worker who performed the tasks required of him. He often began work early, in effect giving the district work time, albeit not within his fixed schedule of hours. Concerned over the more senior Davis' behavior and unsure about his duties relative to the black seal requirement, he advised his immediate supervisor, Douglas Cobb, but to little avail. While these facts do not obviate Johnson's behavior, they do speak to the severity of the penalty.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Johnson is to be suspended without pay for one hundred twenty days.

ORDER

I ORDER that Johnson be suspended without pay for the period of one hundred twenty days.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The records of these consolidated matters, the proposed Settlement Agreement (Agreement) and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

The Commissioner notes that paragraph 1 of the Agreement states that the settlement payment is due within thirty (30) days from the date of the Initial Decision. That date has preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves the settlement.

In light of the foregoing, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, provided that the parties have already implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory alternate date for the effectuation of the settlement payment. Assuming same, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

BEFORE KIMBERLY A. MOSS, ALJ:

The initial matter (EDU 13229-09) was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for resolution as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. The matter was initially assigned to ALJ Howard Solomon. On or about March 23, 2010 the matters were reassigned to the undersigned. A status was conducted on March 29, 2010 in lieu of a hearing. During the status conference it was determined that the hearing should be rescheduled to June 22, 2010. On or about June 11, 2010 the Board filed a petition against the petitioners which was received by the Department of Education on April 6, 2010. The matters were consolidated on June 16, 2010 and the June hearing date was adjourned to September 14, 2010.

During the September 14, 2010 hearing, the parties engaged in extensive settlement discussions. Hearings were scheduled for November 29, 2010 and January 7, 2011. However, the November 29, 2010 hearing was converted into a telephone conference and the parties resolved all issues in dispute. On December 28, 2010 the OAL received the Stipulation of Settlement with original signatures and an extract from the minutes of the Board of Education meeting held on December 16, 2010.

Having reviewed the contents of the attached Stipulation of Settlement, I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures and/or the signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore

ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

On November 22, 2010, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner approved a settlement obligating Graham and Kathleen Bazikian to pay $61,160.18 in tuition to respondent for their children's period of ineligible attendance in the public schools of the district – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. The Board subsequently requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the unsatisfied portion of the tuition on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. Petitioners responded to the Board's request but offered no cognizable reasons why the judgment against them should not be so docketed.

Accordingly, as Graham and Kathleen Bazikian are – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10 – subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $61,160.18, with interest to accrue as provided by law, the Commissioner directs that judgment in that amount be docketed against them.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE WARREN COUNTY TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, WARREN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

In November 2007, petitioner was a tenured secretary in the office of respondent's business administrator. The instant controversy arose when, on or about November 8, 2007, respondent demanded that petitioner sign a contract containing a provision that would allow the district to terminate her upon ten business days' notice. She declined to sign the contract, advising respondent that to do so would be to abdicate her tenure rights. Respondent nonetheless fired petitioner effective December 1, 2007, paid her salary until [1] On February 2, 2011, petitioner filed a request to submit a set of exceptions to the Initial Decision of the OAL. The Commissioner rejects same. First, the deadline for the filing of exceptions has passed. Second, on November 3, 2010 petitioner submitted a reply to respondent's exceptions. The arguments in petitioner's most recent submission could have and should have been made at that time.

December 14, 2007 and paid her benefits until April 1, 2008. It is undisputed that, subsequent to her termination, petitioner neither sought employment nor applied for unemployment benefits.

On February 26, 2008, petitioner filed with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) a petition requesting 1) a "declaratory ruling" that respondent had violated her tenure rights, and 2) an order reinstating her to her prior employment. During the same time period the business administrator reorganized his office to create better efficiencies, and recommended the elimination of the post which petitioner had occupied. On March 19, 2008, the respondent board of education approved the recommendation, and petitioner's old position was abolished.

After a hearing at the OAL, an Initial Decision was issued on April 23, 2009, finding that respondent had terminated petitioner unlawfully. Referring to the fact that the petition had been submitted as a request for a declaratory ruling, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) ordered no relief. He did, however, correctly note that if petitioner were to be reinstated she would not necessarily be entitled to the same position that she had previously held or even a post in the same department.

The ALJ further found that petitioner had neglected her obligation to mitigate damages.[2] On May 27, 2009, the Commissioner issued a final decision 1) adopting the ALJ's determination that petitioner had been improperly terminated, 2) rejecting the balance of the Initial Decision and 3) ordering respondent to reinstate petitioner "to a secretarial position" with back pay and emoluments – less mitigation. The decision further directed that a new petition be filed if the parties could not agree on an appropriate mitigation figure.

[2] Claims made by persons illegally dismissed by a board of education are subject to the common law rule of mitigation of damages. Mullen v. Board of Education of Jefferson Township, 81 N.J. Super. 151, 159 (App. Div. 1963).

Documentary evidence in the record indicates that at the time of the Commissioner's decision, the only secretarial vacancy in respondent's district was the position of secretary to the child study team (CST Secretary). This position was offered to petitioner on or before April 28, 2009 – five days after the Initial Decision and a month before the Commissioner's final decision. The record contains correspondence indicating that respondent reiterated its offer on June 3, 2009, June 22, 2009 and July 27, 2009. It is also undisputed that respondent offered petitioner a salary equal to her prior salary.

On the other hand, respondent advised petitioner that since she had taken no steps to mitigate her damages, it would disburse no back pay or benefits. It appears that petitioner ultimately did not accept the position that she was offered, but instead filed a new petition on September 8, 2009, seeking resolution of the issue of back pay and emoluments.

While the second petition did not raise the issue of reinstatement, the ALJ heard argument about it at the OAL hearing. Ultimately, however, he concluded that a determination as to whether respondent had complied with the Commissioner's May 27, 2009 order – that petitioner be reinstated to a secretarial position – constitutes an enforcement issue and must be adjudicated in Superior Court, pursuant to R. 4:67-6(a)(2) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-3.1(b). The Commissioner will address this conclusion below.

Turning his attention to petitioner's claim for back pay and respondent's position that absent good faith mitigation efforts petitioner is due no back pay,[3] the ALJ studied the job descriptions for 1) petitioner's post in the business administrator's office (Petitioner's Exhibit P-2) and 2) the position of CST Secretary (Respondent's Exhibit 9, annexed to the Affidavit of Allan P. Dzwilewski, submitted with Motion for Summary Decision dated March 8, 2010), which position was offered to petitioner on April 28, 2009. He found, as a matter of fact, that the two positions were comparable, and the record would appear to support that finding. Consequently, the ALJ determined that petitioner had had the opportunity to mitigate as of April 28, 2009, but did not. He concluded that she therefore did not qualify for back wages past April 27, 2009, and the Commissioner agrees.

Central Foundry Co.*, 68 N.J.L. 14, 15 (Sup. Ct. 1902). However, since the employee has available time which may be used profitably, the employer has been permitted to reduce its damages by showing that the employee has earned wages from other employment. Sandler v. Lawn-A-Mat Chemical & Equipment Corp., 141 N.J. Super. 437, 455 (App. Div. 1976), certif. den. 71 N.J. 503 (1976); Rogozinski v. Airstream by Angell, 152 N.J. Super. 133, 158 (Law Div.

As to the period between December 15, 2007 and April 27, 2009, the ALJ found that respondent had not proven that petitioner could have – but did not – mitigate her damages with employment similar to that which she had held in respondent's district. Since mitigation is an affirmative defense, placing on the wrongdoer (in this case respondent) the burden of proving the appropriateness of its application, see, e.g., Goodman v. London Metals Exchange, supra, 86 N.J. at 40, the ALJ concluded that petitioner was entitled to full back pay for that time period. However, the ALJ concluded that he did not have before him sufficient facts to calculate the award. Nor does the Commissioner.

The ALJ's concern was that while the record indicates that petitioner's last annual salary was $48,747.50, it was not clear whether she was a twelve-month employee. Petitioner responded to this concern in her reply exceptions, wherein she indicated that she had been a twelve-month employee. Even with this information, however, a fact-finding hearing is necessary to arrive at the amount of back pay due petitioner. For example, the record does not contain sufficient information about the benefits withheld from petitioner for the period between April 1, 2008 and April 27, 2009. Nor does the record reveal whether any increments would have been due petitioner for the 2008-2009 school year.

1977), mod. 164 N.J. Super. 465 (App. Div. 1979). The employer may also reduce the award by showing that the employee could have secured other employment by reasonable efforts, but did not. See Roselle v. La Fera Contracting Co., 18 N.J. Super. 19, 28 (Ch. Div. 1952); Goebel v. Pomeroy Brothers Co., 69 N.J.L. 610, 611 (Sup. Ct. 1903); Moore v. Central Foundry Co., 68 N.J.L. at 15-16; Larkin v. Hecksher, 51 N.J.L. 133, 138 (Sup. Ct. 1888). (Emphasis added)

Thus, the Commissioner directs that a fact finding hearing concerning back pay be held in the OAL. In the course of same, the ALJ shall evaluate respondent's position that petitioner could have sought substitute employment or applied for unemployment insurance, and that her failure to do so should be considered in determining a back pay amount for the period from December 15, 2007 (for salary) and April 1, 2008 (for benefits) through April 27, 2009. Further, although no demand for interest was included in either of Ms. Bush's petitions, or debated at the January 23, 2009 and July 1, 2010 hearings, the ALJ has the discretion to allow or deny argument on petitioner's belated demand for 4% pre-judgment interest.

As to the issue of reinstatement, the Commissioner concludes that the factual finding of the comparability of CST secretary with the position that petitioner had held in the business administrator's office is fatal to any claim by petitioner for reinstatement. Petitioner's refusal of the "comparable" CST position terminated her tenure rights. See, e.g. Annette O'Toole v. Larry Forestal, Principal, Parthenia Smith, Director, Millburn School for the Hearing Handicapped a/k/a/ New Jersey Regional Day School at Millburn and Division of Field Services of the Department of Education, 211 N.J. Super. 394, 402-03 (App. Div. 1986).

In light of the foregoing, there is no need for petitioner to institute an action in Superior Court. While actions to enforce Commissioner decisions are generally filed there, N.J.A.C. 6A: 3-3.1(b)(1) allows the Commissioner to take jurisdiction when enforcement adjudication requires further determinations concerning school law issues. The present case called for a ruling on the comparability of the CST Secretary position to the position petitioner once held in the business administrator's office. That ruling having been made, the issue of reinstatement is resolved.

Accordingly, to the extent that petitioner seeks reinstatement, that request is denied. The case is hereby remanded to the OAL solely for fact finding and recommendations on any and all issues – including the issues set forth above – related to the amount of back pay for salary and benefits that is due petitioner for the period between December 15, 2007 and April 27, 2009, less any applicable mitigation.

VIRGINIA BUSH,
Petitioner,
v.
WARREN COUNTY TECHNICAL SCHOOL DISTRICT,
Respondent.

Ty Hyderally, Esq. for petitioner (Hyderally and Associates, attorneys)

Allan P. Dzwilewski, Esq. for respondent (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein, Celso & Zitomer, attorneys)

Record Closed: August 5, 2010 Decided: October 1, 2010

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

BACKGROUND

Petitioner, Virginia Bush (Ms. Bush), was a tenured secretary in the Warren County Technical School District (District). Her official title was secretary to the board secretary. On November 30, 2007, Respondent, the District's Board of Education (Board), terminated Ms. Bush for refusing to sign an employment contract. Subsequent to her termination, Ms. Bush continued to be paid up to and including December 14, 2007. Thereafter, on or about February 26, 2008, Ms. Bush filed a Petition of Appeal, challenging her termination as violative of New Jersey's tenure laws. On January 23, 2009, a hearing was held at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Four months later, on April 23, 2009, Judge Geraghty issued an Initial Decision, finding that the Board unlawfully terminated Ms. Bush in violation of her tenure rights. By this time, however, it was alleged by the Board that Ms. Bush's position was abolished. On April 28, 2009, an email was sent to Ms. Bush's counsel wherein it was asserted by the Board's counsel, "[a]s per your request, checked - no other positions available other than CST Secretary." The official title of this position is administrative assistant to the CST office (administrative assistant).

On May 27, 2009, the Commissioner of Education issued a Final Decision. In relevant part, the Commissioner's decision ordered > that the Board of Education of the Warren County Vocational School District immediately reinstate petitioner to a secretarial position and award her back pay-less mitigation-and emoluments due her consistent with this decision. If the parties are unable to agree on an appropriate mitigation figure, a new Petition of Appeal should be filed in this regard.

On June 03, 2009, email was exchanged once again between the parties. Pursuant to the Board's counsel, "[t]he secretarial position available still remains CST Secretary . . . ." On June 22, 2009, written correspondence was exchanged. In said letter the Board reasserted the availability of the administrative assistant position and asked Ms. Bush to provide her decision in writing. The letter noted, "[f]ailure to respond in the affirmative . . . will be viewed as a refusal of the offer of employment." Finally, on June 27, 2009, a letter from the Board's counsel set forth that Ms. Bush's compensation as administrative assistant would have been equivalent to what she was receiving as secretary to the board secretary at the time of her termination.

On or about August 10, 2009, Ms. Bush filed a second Petition of Appeal. The appeal was filed pursuant to the parties' inability to come to terms on back pay and emoluments. At the hearing, however, the scope of the issues was expanded to include reinstatement. The latter issue will be discussed first.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The OAL is not the Proper Forum to Enforce the Commissioner of Education's Order to Reinstate Petitioner

"Parties seeking enforcement of judgments of the Commissioner [of Education] shall generally bring an action in the Superior Court as provided in New Jersey Court Rules at R. 4:67-6." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-3.1(b). New Jersey Court Rule 4:67-6 is applicable to "all such enforcement actions brought by a party to the administrative proceeding in whose favor a written order or determination was entered affording that party specific relief." R. 4:67-6(a). If the order sought to be enforced provides in full or in part for a non-monetary remedy, the action shall be brought in a trial division of the Superior Court. R. 4:67-6(b)(1). Generally, actions in which the principal relief sought is equitable in nature are brought in the Chancery Division, General Equity, even though legal relief is demanded as well. R. 4:3-1(a)(1).

In this matter, a dispute has arisen as to whether the Board has complied with the Commissioner's order to "reinstate petitioner to a secretarial position." In particular, Ms. Bush asserts that contrary to the Commissioner's order, the Board has failed to reinstate her to the position of secretary to the board secretary, or in the alternative, to offer an equivalent position if in fact her position no longer exists. In response, the Board contends that the Commissioner's decision calls only for reinstatement to a secretarial position, irrespective of the department, and Ms. Bush's refusal to accept it equates to a forfeiture of her tenure rights and relinquishes the Board from any further duty to reinstate her.

In the alternative, Ms. Bush contends that assuming arguendo that the Board is correct in their interpretation of the Commissioner's order, the position offered was secretarial in neither title nor nature. In retort, the Board, by Certification of Edmund Zalewski, business administrator/board secretary, proclaims that the position was originally titled "Secretary to the CST Office," but was subsequently re-named. The Certification further sets forth that despite this change in title, no substantive changes were made to the job description.

Pursuant to R. 4:67-6, parties seeking enforcement of judgments of the Commissioner of Education must bring an action in the Superior Court. Accordingly, the OAL is not the proper forum for the entertainment of the reinstatement issue presented. Rather, if Ms. Bush wishes to pursue her rights, an action should be brought in the Chancery Division, General Equity of the Superior Court.

Ms. Bush is Entitled to Back Pay for the Time Period of December 15, 2007, to April 27, 2009

Any person holding office, position or employment in the public school system is entitled to back pay and emoluments if removed without cause in violation of his/her tenure rights. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-30; Mueller v. Bd. of Educ. of the Hunterdon Central Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 419, 422; Bourhis v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Fort Lee, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 540, 543; Snack v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Orange, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 509, 511. In the pursuit of equity and justice, interest may be added to the award of back pay. Decker v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Elizabeth, 153 N.J. Super. 470, 475 (App. Div. 1977).

Subsequent to termination and irrespective of wrongdoing, an employee has a duty to mitigate his/her damages by looking for substitute employment. See Goodman v. London Metals Exchange, 86 N.J. 19, 21 (1981) (mitigation principles encourage the unemployed to seek employment, a socially desirable goal); O'Lone v. Dep't of Human Serv., 357 N.J. Super. 170, 181 (App. Div. 2003). Succinctly, > mitigation . . . is the deduction of other income received, from the amount of back pay otherwise recoverable . . . . [W]here other income is not actually received, the amount of back pay awarded may be reduced by the amount the discharged employee could or should have received by reasonable and sincere efforts to locate other employment . . . when there is no showing by the employer that the > employee obtained other employment, or could have done so by the exercise of diligence, the measure of damages is the contract price.

> [Zielenski v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Guttenberg, 1981 S.L.D. 759, 762, 766.]

"In order to invoke mitigation there must, of course, be available jobs. In their absence, mitigation is not feasible." Goodman, supra, 86 N.J. at 23; accord O'Lone, supra, 357 N.J. Super. at 180 ("the Court's conclusion in Goodman that the availability of substitute employment is relevant to establishment of this defense is also applicable in the present context"). Accordingly, "[w]hether the individual sought a job [is] irrelevant in the absence of the existence of a position." Goodman, supra, 86 N.J. at 32. In O'Lone the issue presented to the court was whether an employer may deny a back pay claim based solely on the employee's failure to seek substitute employment during the period of separation from public service, without considering the availability of such employment. O'Lone, supra, 357 N.J. Super. at 173. Factual findings at the administrative level demonstrated that "O'Lone did not apply for a single job. He did not send out a single resume. He did not register with any employment agency. He did not attend any job fairs. He did not prepare a resume. His efforts to find work [were] to review classified ads and review job positions on the Internet and talk to a few friends." Id. at 175. Concurring that the employee made no serious efforts to obtain substitute employment, the court nevertheless concluded that "appellant's failure to seek substitute employment was a not a sufficient basis for the denial of his back pay claim, without any consideration of the availability of such employment." Id. at 176-77.

Further, an employee is not required to mitigate his/her damages by taking any job which presents itself. Rather, "[i]t has been held that in a breach of employment contract context that mitigation depends on the time lost 'before similar employment can be obtained by using proper diligence.'" Goodman, supra, 86 N.J. at 24 (emphasis added) (citation omitted). Similar employment is determined by looking at three factors: a) the nature of the work; b) the location of the job; and c) the rate of compensation. Ibid. The first characteristic—the nature of the work—involves flexibility and is determined by analyzing the particular responsibilities and skills of the job. Ibid. The degree of comparability required, however, is not static. With the passage of time, circumstances may require the claimant to lower his sights and accept employment with lower pay, with different work, or at a more distant location. Id. at 26-27. This notion is known as the lower-sights principle and it is applied with caution in cases where the employee is terminated unlawfully. See Id. at 31.

Mitigation, including the lower-sights principle, is an affirmative defense and the initial burden of proving the appropriateness of its application rests with the employer. Id. at 32; O'Lone, supra, 357 N.J. Super. at 18 ("In the absence of an administrative rule that sets forth the employee's and the appointing authority's evidentiary burdens in a case where an appointing authority claims that a back pay award should be denied or reduced due to the employee's failure to seek substitute employment . . . the appointing authority should bear the initial burden of presenting evidence of the employee's failure-to-mitigate."). Notably, if termination results from the employer's wrongful conduct, the employer will not establish a prima facie case by presenting evidence that the aggrieved party made no efforts to secure substitute employment. Rather, to shift its burden, the employer must make an initial showing that comparable employment opportunities were available and, if the lower-sights doctrine is applicable, that there were other suitable jobs. Goodman, supra, 86 N.J. at 32. Only then does the burden of going forward shift to the employee who may introduce evidence that comparable employment did not exist, that reasonable and diligent efforts on his/her part had not been successful, or that the circumstances did not justify acceptance of a dissimilar job. Ibid.

In the matter at hand it is undisputed that Ms. Bush made no efforts to mitigate her damages from November 30, 2007, the date she was terminated, to July 01, 2010, the date of this hearing. In fact, Ms. Bush conceded at the hearing that since her termination she had neither looked for another position nor applied for unemployment benefits. Pursuant to this admission, the Board asserts that mitigation principles warrant a total bar on recovery of back pay. The Board, however, overlooks the well-founded principle that mitigation is an affirmative defense and the initial burden of proving the appropriateness of its application rests with the employer. As will be discussed below, the Board has failed to present prima facie evidence that comparable employment existed between December 15, 2007, and April 27, 2009. Accordingly, the Board has failed to shift its initial burden and Ms. Bush is entitled to back pay for said time period.

To properly determine whether the Board has met its initial burden, a brief analysis of the termination itself is in order. Ms. Bush was terminated in violation of her tenure rights, and accordingly, the wrongful act was committed by the Board. That being the case, and in conformity with the Goodman and O'Lone holdings, the Board has to make an initial showing that comparable employment opportunities were available, or if the lower-sights doctrine was applicable, that there were other suitable jobs. Due to the fact that Ms. Bush was paid up to December 14, 2007, a back-pay award may go back as far as December 15, 2007.

On April 23, 2009, Judge Geraghty held that the Board unlawfully terminated Ms. Bush in violation of her tenure rights. Thereafter, on April 28, 2009, email was exchanged which confirmed the availability of a "CST secretary position" for Ms. Bush. However, as has been articulated in Goodman, Ms. Bush was not required to take this job, for purposes of mitigation, unless it was similar to her position as secretary to the board secretary. This determination requires an analysis of the nature of the work, the location of the job and the rate of compensation. As will be articulated below, the two positions are sufficiently similar for the purposes of mitigation.

First and foremost, the rate of compensation for the two positions was identical. This fact is supported by a July 27, 2009, letter from the Board's counsel. This letter was provided in response to a July 21, 2009, correspondence from Ms. Bush's counsel, inquiring among other things, into the position's pay rate. Second, had Ms. Bush taken the position offered, she not only would have been working in the same geographical region, but within a block of her old building, if not in the same building itself. Third, the nature of the work is sufficiently similar for purposes of mitigation. Notwithstanding that this factor naturally involves flexibility on the part of the employee, the two positions were in the same field, were for the same employer, required equivalent skills and shared a number of responsibilities. These responsibilities included, taking phone calls and messages, typing, filing, running computer-generated reports, and other clerical tasks as assigned. As such, the Board has satisfied its initial burden of presenting evidence that comparable employment existed as of April 28, 2009. Finally, although Ms. Bush has pointed out several differences in the job's responsibilities, for purposes of mitigation, they are not substantial enough to justify her refusal of the position. Being that the two positions were equally compensated, Ms. Bush must be denied all back pay from April 28, 2009, to the present.

Finally, in the Board's post-hearing brief, it is asserted in passing that a position was offered to Ms. Bush in the summer of 2008. Nothing, however, is revealed as to the type of position which was offered or the exact date it was offered. Further, this blanket statement is supported by neither documentary evidence nor any testimony at the hearing. Accordingly, it is impossible for this forum to discern whether this position—assuming it was actually offered—was comparable to Ms. Bush's position, and in turn, whether Ms. Bush failed to mitigate her damages by not accepting it. Mitigation is an affirmative defense and the initial burden of proving the appropriateness of its application rests with the employer. The Board has failed to carry its initial burden of proving that comparable employment existed between December 15, 2007, and April 27, 2009. Accordingly, Ms. Bush is entitled to back pay for said time period.

More Facts are Necessary to Accurately Calculate the Amount of Back Pay Owed to Ms. Bush

Ms. Bush is entitled to back pay for the time period of December 15, 2007, to April 27, 2009, at a rate of $48,747.50 per year; the rate she was making at the time of her termination. This monetary figure was not disputed by the Board, and accordingly, should be used for purposes of calculating back pay. In addition, Ms. Bush is requesting interest in the amount of four (4) percent for moneys held by the Board during the relevant time period.

The difficulty in assessing Ms. Bush's back pay award stems from the fact that the parties did not shed light on the length of Ms. Bush's work year. In a June 03, 2009, letter, Ms. Bush's counsel indicates that "Ms. Bush's salary at the time of her termination was $48,747.50 per year, or approximately $937.45 per week." By dividing the two amounts, it appears that Ms. Bush worked fifty two weeks; or in other words, the whole year. It is possible, however, that this is an oversight and Ms. Bush only worked when school was in session. That is, from September 7 to June 17.[1] Although it is undisputed that one (1) year, fourteen (14) months and thirteen (13) days has passed between December 15, 2007, and April 27, 2009, it is impossible to accurately determine the amount owed to Ms. Bush without knowing the actual number of work days missed. Accordingly, an inquiry into the length of Ms. Bush's work year is in order.

CONCLUSION

The OAL is not the proper forum to enforce the Commissioner's Order to reinstate Ms. Bush to a secretarial position. As such, a ruling as to the issue of reinstatement has not been made. As to the issue of back pay, Ms. Bush should be compensated for the time period of December 15, 2007, to April 27, 2009. This amounts to a minimum of $48,747.50. However, as I do not know the length of her work year, this information should be provided to the Commissioner to facilitate his calculation of the back-pay award. Finally, Ms. Bush should be awarded all emoluments due to her from her employment with respondent.

It is ORDERED that Ms. Bush be awarded back pay plus interest for the time period of December 15, 2007, to April 27, 2009.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners Charles Jackson and Janice Williams seek an emergent order from the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq., that the respondent Trenton Board of Education be: 1) enjoined from denying Petitioner Jackson his right to an appointment in the position of Head Basketball Coach of the Trenton High School boys' team, 2) required to appoint Petitioner Jackson to this position and 3) restrained from assigning respondent Greg Grant the duties of the position. Further, petitioners seek an order restraining Greg Grant from accepting or performing the duties of the position.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 21, 2010, petitioners filed a petition for emergent relief with the Commissioner of Education. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on December 22, 2010, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 for determination as a contested case. On December 29, 2010, petitioners filed a Motion to Amend the Petition. I granted the motion to amend and heard the application for emergent relief on January 3, 2011. The record remained open for the submission of an answer to the amended petition and transcripts from the two public board meetings in question. On January 10, 2010, I received respondents' answer to the amended petition with minutes from the two meetings in question, rather than transcripts. In order to have the matter resolved expeditiously, petitioners' counsel sent the audio CD recordings of the two meetings. As the meetings were over five hours long collectively and could not be queued to the appropriate place, listening took a considerable amount of time. The record closed on January 10, 2011.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The following facts are not in dispute. Petitioner Jackson is a tenured certified teacher employed by the Trenton Board of Education. Petitioner Williams is a citizen and taxpayer in the City of Trenton who is also the Grievance Chair of the Trenton Education Association. Respondent Grant is not an employee of the Trenton Board of Education and is not a certified teacher. Grant possesses a substitute teacher credential. Petitioner Jackson applied for the position of Head Coach of the boys' basketball team. Respondent Grant also applied for the position of Head Coach of the boys' basketball team. The Director of Human Resources informed the superintendent that Jackson was entitled to the job because a certified teacher in the district is preferred to an applicant who is not a certified teacher in the district. On December 6, 2010, the appointment was on the Board agenda, but the Board did not appoint Jackson. Many members of the public voiced their opinion in favor of Grant being coach, including the captain and members of the basketball team, during public comment. The members of the team focused on how Grant believed and taught them that they were students first and athletes second and that they must be scholar athletes. After a lengthy executive session, the Board appointed Grant. Specifically, pursuant to the minutes of the public meeting, the Board voted unanimously to appoint Grant as Head Coach at the JV Coach salary and appoint Jackson as JV Coach at the Head Coach salary. Jackson filed a petition to overturn the decision of the Board.

The Trenton Board of Education is under the watch of a State Monitor, Mark Cowell. On December 15, 2010, Cowell met with Jackson, Grant and the principal of Trenton Central High School. Jackson was not represented by counsel or a union representative at the time of this meeting. At some point during the meeting, Cowell and the principal left the room and the two coaches remained talking. After the meeting, by letter dated December 15, 2010, Jackson signed a letter to the Board that he was withdrawing his name from consideration for the coaching position. Cowell accepted the withdrawal. On December 17, 2010, Jackson's counsel sent a letter to Cowell with a copy to the acting superintendent and Kathleen Smallwood-Johnson, Executive Director of Human Resources, rescinding the withdrawal. The letter was written and received by fax by all parties including the superintendent, the monitor and board attorney on December 17, 2010. Cowell did not accept the rescission of Jackson's withdrawal from consideration as head coach.

On December 20, 2010, two team members and nine members of the public expressed support of the Board's vote to appoint Grant Head Coach. Cowell expressed to the Board that its vote of December 6, 2010 was in violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19 because a certified teacher was a candidate for the position, but the Board chose a person who was not certified. Cowell stated at the meeting that he did not believe that the Board violated N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 because from his research he believed that Acting Superintendent Broach made the recommendation for Grant to be the head basketball coach. Cowell advised the Board that Jackson had withdrawn his name from consideration. He then advised the Board that he would be overturning its December 6, 2010 vote and recommending the appointment of Grant as head basketball coach. During the December 20, 2010, meeting, the Board voted to approve adding the appointment of Grant as Head Boys' Basketball Coach to the consent agenda. The appointment of Grant was then approved by all board members present.

The above facts are undisputed and I therefore, FIND them as FACT.

There are disputed facts regarding the purpose of the monitor's meeting with Jackson, Grant and the principal; the reason that Jackson wrote the letter withdrawing from consideration; the reason that Jackson through counsel rescinded his letter of withdrawal and the reason that the monitor did not accept the letter from Jackson's counsel rescinding the letter of withdrawal. However, petitioner argues that the disputed facts are immaterial to the question of whether Jackson is entitled to the position of head coach. Respondents contend that not only is the issue of Jackson's withdrawal from consideration for the position a material issue, it is the only issue. The Board contends that Jackson was not an applicant for the Head Coach position as of the December 20, 2010 meeting and therefore the Board did not violate N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19. Cowell had accepted his withdrawal and did not accept the rescinding of his withdrawal. These disputed facts could only be determined at a full hearing.

DISCUSSION

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 sets forth the standard for emergent relief as follows:

> (b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. De Gioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The moving party bears the burden of proving each of the elements for emergent relief "clearly and convincingly." Waste Mgmt of N.J. v. Union County Util. Auth., 399 N.J. Super. 508, 520 (App. Div. 2008).

1. Whether Petitioners Will Suffer Irreparable Harm

Petitioner Jackson contends that he will suffer irreparable harm if he is not appointed as head coach immediately because the season will be over before this matter is remedied and he will not be able to recover the time he could have coaching the team. Petitioner must show that immediate, substantial and irreparable injury will result if emergent relief is not granted. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-33. The Court in Crowe found that "[h]arm is generally considered irreparable in equity if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Id. at 132. Irreparable injury has been defined as "substantial injury to a material degree coupled with the inadequacy of money damages." Stroh Assoc., supra, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) at 237 (citing Judice's Sunshine Pontiac, Inc. v. General Motors, Inc., 418 F.Supp. 1212 (D.N.J. 1976); John Tully v. Mott Supermarkets, Inc., 337 F.Supp. 834 (D.N.J. 1972)).

I have heard the arguments of the parties and read their submissions. Regarding irreparable harm, petitioners' Motion for Emergent Relief further contends that they meet the standard of irreparable harm because the team is already midway into the basketball season in which Jackson wants to coach. If the case is not decided on an emergent basis, the season will be over and that is irreparable harm. Petitioners note that this application is not about the money. Indeed, the Board voted to pay Jackson the head basketball coach's stipend even without him serving in that capacity. Petitioner Jackson further argues that having worked seven years previously as Assistant Coach, the Board's action irreparably interfered with his career trajectory as this was his time to move to a head coach position. Petitioner Williams representing taxpayers argues that there is also irreparable harm in hiring an individual who is less qualified for the position and is not a certified teacher to be the coach. The Respondent Board and Grant contend however, that this is not an emergent matter and there is no irreparable harm. Respondent argues that if the head coach position was so substantial as to cause him irreparable harm if he were not appointed, then he would not have withdrawn from consideration. Respondent argues, although no evidence has been presented to support, that Jackson has not attended any practices or games of the team since the beginning of December 2010.

Since both petitioners Jackson and Williams claim irreparable harm to the children and public of Trenton by not hiring Jackson who is a certified teacher, it seems only fair to consider the other side of that argument. Specifically, that by overturning the appointment of Grant and granting Jackson the appointment as head coach, the basketball team will have to adjust to a completely new coaching style and philosophy at the end of the season. In short, granting such relief would alleviate the harm to Jackson at the expense of the players that he so badly wants to coach. Such a scenario does not present an ideal coach-player relationship that competing teams will have developed with their coach by the time the relief is granted. I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not proved that the harm to be suffered by Jackson if he is not appointed as head coach is immediate and substantial and therefore I CONCLUDE that petitioners have failed to prove the first prong of irreparable harm.

Although I need not continue to analyze the other three prongs since all four prongs have to be met and petitioners have not met that burden, I will continue so that the Commissioner of Education has complete conclusions of law.

2. Whether the Legal Right Underlying Petitioners' Claim is Settled

Petitioners argue that their legal rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19 have been violated. They argue that the Superintendent recommended the appointment of Petitioner Jackson on December 6, 2010. Yet it hired Grant, in clear violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1, which provides that the Board can appoint an employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator. The Respondent Board concedes that the December 6, 2010 vote was in error as it has been told by the State Monitor. However, the State Monitor stated at the December 20, 2010 meeting that the vote was not invalid pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1because his "research" showed that the acting superintendent made the recommendation for Grant to be head coach. From the minutes, it appears clear that the recommendation was for Jackson to be head coach, but the Board voted for Grant. This constitutes a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1. However, the analysis cannot stop there, as petitioners argue, because as of December 6, 2010, the Board vote would be nullified and there would be no head coach appointed.

Respondent argues that, in any event, the December 6, 2010 vote was subsequently overturned by the State Monitor and the Board voted again legally on December 20, 2010 to appoint Greg Grant as coach. From the minutes and CD of the December 20, 2010, meeting, it is unclear who actually made the recommendation for Grant to be head coach. The State Monitor said near the beginning of the meeting that "a recommendation will be submitted this evening for the appointment of Mr. Grant as the TCHS boys' head basketball coach" in the passive voice not indicating who will make that recommendation. Later, someone called attention to the fact that the appointment of head coach was not placed on the consent agenda and two board members moved and seconded to have it considered on the consent agenda. The consent agenda then passed unanimously. For the foregoing reasons, the law is settled, but there is a factual dispute as to whether the superintendent made the recommendation and thus, whether the law was actually violated. Further complicating the issue of whether petitioners' legal right underlying the claim is settled is petitioner Jackson's intervening withdrawal from consideration. I CONCLUDE that the circumstances surrounding Jackson's signing of the withdrawal and subsequent rescission of his withdrawal are factual disputes that are material to the issue of whether the Board violated the N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1.

With regard to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19, respondents concede that this regulation was violated on December 6, 2010, when the Board appointed Grant over Jackson who is a certified teacher in the district. At the December 20, 2010, the State Monitor made the announcement that the violation had occurred and that the vote was being overturned on that basis. Cowell went on to say, however, that Jackson voluntarily agreed to withdraw his name for consideration such that, at the time of the appointment, the only person being considered was a person who was not a certified teacher and therefore, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19 no longer operated to give Jackson a legal right to the position. Petitioners argue, however, that the State Monitor had no authority to unilaterally decide to not accept Jackson's letter rescinding his withdrawal from consideration. The withdrawal, they argue, was null and void as of the date of the letter rescinding it, December 17, 2010; as the Board had not taken any action on it. Petitioners cite CF Lippincott v. Board of Education of the Borough of Riverton, 1990 SLD (April 26, 1990) (slip op. at 3) for the proposition that a resignation is not effective until the Board accepts it at a public meeting and can be rescinded at any time before that. In the present case, Petitioner Jackson was not resigning from his job, but withdrawing his name from consideration, the distinguishing factor being that he did not yet have the position as the employee did in Lippincott.

Taking into consideration the totality of the circumstances surrounding the two meetings in question, I cannot find that petitioners established by clear and convincing evidence that their legal right underlying their claim is settled. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this prong has not been met.

3. Whether Petitioners Have a Likelihood of Prevailing on the Underlying Claim

In addition to the arguments enumerated under number two, petitioners contend that even if the superintendent ultimately recommended Grant's appointment on December 20, 2010, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.19(c)3 requires that the Board obtain the county superintendent's approval prior to such employment. There is no evidence in the record thus far that the board has ever acquired such approval. The respondent board relies on the fact that the State Monitor recommended that such action be taken after announcing that Jackson had withdrawn from consideration. In the absence of some authority shown that the State Monitor may act in the place of the County Superintendent, I CONCLUDE that, on this point, petitioners have demonstrated a likelihood of success on the merits.

4. Whether Petitioners Can Show that when the Equities and Interests of the Parties are Balanced, the Petitioners Will Suffer Greater Harm than the Respondent Will Suffer if the Requested Relief is Not Granted.

Petitioners contend that the Board will suffer no harm as it is only being required to do what it was legally bound to do in the first instance. It similarly argues that Grant will suffer no harm as he "merely will be prohibited from being employed in a position in which he had no legal entitlement or right to." Petitioners argue as enumerated in section one above, that Petitioner Jackson and the public will be irreparably harmed by not being able to get this coaching season back and possibly not getting another opportunity to serve as head coach as he was destined to do after seven years as an assistant coach. The public will be harmed by having an unqualified person serving in that capacity. Respondents argue, mostly in oral argument, that the team will suffer irreparably by placing Jackson in the position of head coach at this time. The team came out united in support of Grant being their coach as the members indicated that he is interested in their academic accomplishments and not just their record of wins and losses.

As set forth in the discussion of prong one above, petitioners have not adequately demonstrated that the harm to them is irreparable. There is no question some harm, but the petitioners cannot demonstrate that their harm is greater than the disruption of the team and by extension, the high school, by replacing the currently serving coach with Jackson. Further, to say that no harm will come to Grant a result of Grant being removed because he was not entitled to the position in the first place overlooks the bond that Grant has developed with the team in the absence of Jackson from December until the present. The public comment on the CDs of the board meetings indicates that there will be suffering on the part of Grant and the team members if that relationship is not allowed to continue. I CONCLUDE therefore, that petitioners have not demonstrated that the relative hardship to the parties militates in favor of an award of emergent relative and the fourth prong has not been satisfied.

In summary, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have failed to establish irreparable harm, that the legal right underlying their claim is settled and that the harm to the petitioners outweighs the harm to respondents if the relief is not granted. Because all four standards have to be met, I CONCLUDE that petitioners did not satisfy N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 and the Crowe v. DeGioia standards and the petition for emergent relief must be denied.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergent relief is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Jessica S. Swenson Esq., for petitioner (Fox and Fox, attorneys)

Karen A. Murray, Esq., for respondent

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 29, 2010, Jillian Allen filed with the Commissioner what purports to be a petition but instead is set forth as a "letter brief in support of Ms. Allen's request for emergent relief and appeal of the Elizabeth Board of Education's failure to honor Ms. Allen's contract for the 2010-2011 school year." The application is supported by a certification of Allen with attached exhibits.

In essence, Allen, who had been a non-tenured social studies teacher, argues that, although the Board renewed her contract for the 2010-2011 school year on June 24, 2010, she was informed by the Board's Executive Director for Human Resources, Karen Murray, on August 11, 2010, that she had received the contract in error and that, "[s]ince you had not earned tenure, you should not have been renewed for the 2010-2011 year, as a result of the Board's budgetary reduction in force." Allen contends that the action by Murray was improper because there was no Board action deeming Allen's contract as non-renewed. Allen further contends that Murray's letter followed her July 2010 request for maternity leave and Family Medical Leave effective September 5, 2010, several days after the commencement of the school year, a request which Murray allegedly denied.

On January 4, 2011, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the emergent relief application to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13, for determination as a contested case. Although not transmitted with the file from the Department, I learned on the return date of the emergent relief application, that the Board had filed a Motion to Dismiss on January 13, 2011, contending that the petition should be dismissed as time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) and for failure to comply with the required format for a petition in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4.

I heard the application for emergent relief on January 18, 2011, but declined to rule on the Motion to Dismiss at that time.

DISCUSSION

For a request for interim relief or stay, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

(b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

These four standards are in the conjunctive, and petitioner must satisfy all requirements in order to entitled to the requested relief.

I have heard the arguments of all parties and read their submissions. I CONCLUDE that Allen is not entitled to emergent relief in that she has not satisfied all of the four requirements. The likelihood of her prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim is questionable in that the petition was filed on December 29, 2010, approximately 137 days after her receipt of Murray's August 11, 2010, letter advising her that the renewal of her contract had been in error. Allen argues that the filing limitations period did not start accruing from the date of Murray's letter because it did not constitute notice of legitimate Board action in the absence of a Board resolution or consideration at a Board meeting. The regulation establishing a ninety-day limitation for the filing of a contested action does not appear to be so limiting as to require actual Board action before a cause of action arises. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) provides:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.
> [emphasis added]

Allen has not made a sufficient showing of irreparable harm. If the renewal of her contract had been improperly reversed, a remedy would lie in money damages. The issue of health insurance for her newborn child has been resolved according to Allen's certification, which indicates that he is receiving COBRA coverage. Her claim of emotional stress associated with being terminated due to her request for maternity leave is not a remedy within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergent relief be DENIED.

It is further hereby ORDERED that supplemental briefs supporting or opposing the Motion to Dismiss shall be filed by February 18, 2011, and responses, if any, shall be filed by March 4, 2011.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

Petitioner challenged a three day suspension imposed upon her during her senior year of high school, in the aftermath of an altercation during a football game. Petitioner sought to remove the discipline from her student records, and additionally sought reimbursement of attorney's fees. The suspension was subsequently expunged from petitioner's student records.

The ALJ dismissed that portion of the complaint related to discipline as moot, and found that the Commissioner has no authority to award attorney's fees in claims arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed with prejudice the petitioner's appeal for attorney fees.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition.

Record Closed: January 10, 2011 Decided: January 14, 2011

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, ACTING DIRECTOR AND CHIEF ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This is an appeal by petitioner of the Board's disciplinary action, seeking removal of the discipline from her record and attorney's fees. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on March 29, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

In a May 12, 2010, telephone conference, the parties agreed that the Board of Education would be asked to conduct a hearing on the matter in closed session on May 17, 2010, as a means of curing the lack of due process hearing and would additionally provide petitioner with various elements sought in discovery. Alternatively, the parties agreed that expunging the record would obviate the need for the various procedural steps outlined above. Correspondence received at the OAL on December 28, 2010, from counsel for petitioner and on January 6, 2011 from counsel for respondent confirm that the discipline was expunged. Therefore, the portion of the complaint related to the discipline itself is now moot.

The correspondence from counsel also incorporated short briefs on the purely legal issue of whether the Commissioner of Education has the authority to award legal fees in a matter such as this. There being solely an issue of law remaining, the matter is appropriate for summary disposition. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995). The inquiry is "'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to [a fact finder] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law. Liberty Surplus Insurance Corp., Inc. v. Nowell Amoroso, P.A., 189 N.J. 436 (2007).

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The primary issue is whether the Commissioner of Education has the authority to award legal fees. The Appellate Division and the Supreme Court have answered this question in the negative, in a case involving a female high school student who objected to being excluded from the football team on the basis of sex. Following a consent order that allowed her to participate, the student sought recovery of counsel fees from the Commissioner of Education. The Appellate Division concluded that the Commissioner "does not have plenary authority to award counsel fees in determining "controversies and disputes" presented under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The core proposition was affirmed in 117 N.J. 434 (1990), which also determined that although the Commissioner and the Director of Civil Rights both have authority to resolve discrimination complaints arising in the education setting, the authority to award attorneys' fees growing out of such complaints arising under the Law Against Discrimination rests entirely with the Division on Civil Rights. For this reason, I CONCLUDE that the Commissioner has no authority to award attorney's fees in claims arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

ORDER

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's appeal concerning her disciplinary record must be DISMISSED as MOOT and her appeal for attorney's fees must be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I ORDER, therefore, that the appeal of Tricia Witkins be, and hereby, is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP EDUCATION ASSOCIATION, ON BEHALF OF THERESA KWIAKOWSKI, LINDA PIRO, EILEEN KORZ AND JACQUELINE CALANDRIELLO,	:
PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MIDDLETOWN, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners alleged that respondent Board's policy regarding the preparation of annual written performance reports (AWPR) for teaching staff members does not comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4(f), which states that the report "shall be prepared by a certified supervisor who has participated in the evaluation of the teaching staff member." Petitioners contended that this regulation requires the individual who performs the end of year performance report to be the same individual who participated in the mid-year, in-class observation of the teacher. The Board argued that the regulation permits different administrators to conduct the mid-year observation and the AWPR, so long as they are properly certified. Both parties submitted motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the evaluation of a teacher's performance involves a process that is broader in scope than the annual, in-class observation, and the regulation only mandates that the preparer of the AWPR be a certified participant in the evaluation process; and the Board's practice of having a building principal or assistant principal complete the AWPR does not, on its face, violate the dictates of *N.J.A.C.*6A:32-4.4(f). Accordingly, the ALJ granted the respondent's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP EDUCATION ASSOCIATION, ON BEHALF OF THERESA KWIAKOWSKI, LINDA PIRO, EILEEN KORZ AND JACQUELINE CALANDRIELLO, Petitioners,

v.

MIDDLETOWN TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION, MONMOUTH COUNTY,

Respondent.

Sanford R. Oxfeld, Esq., for petitioner (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Christopher Parton, Esq., for respondent (Kenny, Gross, Kovats and Parton, attorneys)

Record Closed: December 6, 2010 Decided: January 6, 2011

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

This matter, involves the proper interpretation of a regulation, N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4(f), which provides and poses the question whether the respondent Board of Education's policy regarding the preparation of annual written performance reports (AWPR) for its tenured teachers is consistent with, or violative, of the regulation. The parties have stipulated the record and each requested summary decision.

> The Annual Written Performance Report shall be prepared by a certified supervisor who has participated in the evaluation of the teaching staff member.

The Stipulation of Facts reads

1. The Education Association represents a wall-to-wall unit of employees employed by the Middletown Township Board of Education (hereinafter "the Board"), including all professional, non-administrative staff.
2. This matter involves the observation and evaluation of tenured staff members.
3. The District has required the once-a-year in-class observation and subsequent report to be performed and completed by a District-wide subject matter supervisor. (Examples include District Director of Humanities, District Director of Student Services, etc.).
4. In many instances the District has the required annual written performance report (AWPR) as per N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4 to be performed/completed by a building administrator, such as the Building Principal or Assistant Principal.
5. In most instances, the school administrator who performs the annual evaluation is said teaching staff member's direct day-to-day supervisor; but not the individual who performed the yearly, in-class observation as set forth in paragraph 3, supra.
6. The Association's position is that said regulation, at sub-paragraph F, requires the individual who performs the end-of-year AWPR to be the same individual who participated in the mid-year, in-class observation referred to in paragraph 3, supra.
7. The District's position is that the regulation permits different administrators to conduct the observation/report referenced in paragraph 3, supra, and the AWPR referenced in paragraph 4 supra.

It should also be noted that counsel for the petitioner has expressly advised that, should its position carry the day, it does not seek any reevaluation for prior years but only to assure that the Board will comply in the future with the regulatory scheme. In his own cross-motion, counsel for the Board has requested that apart from the Board's request for dismissal of the petitioner's case because the Board policy does comply with the regulation, the petition should also be dismissed as even if the evaluation procedures violate the regulation, there is no remedy available for such a violation.

The parties not surprisingly agree that an understanding of the meaning of the regulation must first be sought in its own words. Again, it reads

> The Annual Written Performance Report shall be prepared by a certified supervisor who has participated in the evaluation of the teaching staff member.

As the parties agree that the persons involved in the preparation of the AWPR under the current District practice are all "certified supervisor[s]", the key phrase is "participated in the evaluation." The Association contends that any proper reading of the regulation must be made in pari materia with N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4 as a whole, which mandates that districts "adopt policies and procedures" dealing with annual evaluations whose purpose it is to "provide a basis for the review or performance of teaching staff members." In so doing, it is apparent that having an administrator "other than the administrator who did the previous observation" cannot achieve the goals of the process, which are defined, as related specifically to the AWPR

> 1. Performance areas of strength;
> 2. Performance areas needing improvement based upon the job description;
> 3. An individual professional development plan developed by the supervisor and the teaching staff member;
> 4. A summary of indicators of student progress and growth, and in statement of how these indicators relate to the effectiveness of the overall program and the performance of the individual teaching staff member; and
> 5. Provisions for performance data, which have not been included in the report prepared by the supervisor, to be entered into the record by the evaluatee within 10 working days after the signing of the report.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4(f)]

The Association argues that an administrator who did not observe the teaching staff member performing his or her tasks cannot identify areas of strength or weakness. While conceding that it might be theoretically possible for another administrator to participate in development of a teacher's professional development plan or other such performance analysis "based upon test results" nevertheless it cannot see how such a "bifurcated process" as is in place in Middletown adheres to the regulation. Additionally, it looks to the language of the first sentence of the regulation, which requires that the AWRP be prepared by one who has "participated in the evaluation" and argues that the plain meaning of the words, "leads to a clear and unambiguous result" and therefore ends the interpretive process, citing In the Matter of the Probate of the Alleged Will of Macool, 416 N.J. Super. 298, 310 (App. Div. 2010), which itself cites the education matter, Klumb v. Bd. of Ed. of the Manalapan-Englishtown Reg'l High Sch., Dist., 199 N.J. 14, 23-24 (2009). The Association understands the stipulated facts to demonstrate that the policy is inappropriate, for the Board has agreed that the "individual who performed the yearly, in-class observation" is "not the individual" who performs the annual review.

The Board responds that a plain reading of the regulation demonstrates that, contrary to the Association's "claustrophobic construction", the Board is acting properly. The regulation nowhere commands that the only person who can prepare the AWPR is the person who performed the in-class observation. The wording demands that the preparer of the AWPR be "a certified supervisor," a fact that is stipulated to be the case in Middletown. It further commands that the preparer have "participated in the evaluation of the teaching staff member." It does not define what that participation must be, or what it must consist of; only that the preparer be a part of the evaluation process for that staff member. And the Association's perception that that "participa[tion]" must perforce be the formal, in-class observation, and that only, is simply wrong. Case law has long recognized that the process of evaluation for a teacher can include a number of different elements. Indeed, it has been recognized that evaluation of teachers can involve "observations" and "formal evaluation instruments" as well as "formal and informal" evaluation, even by school board members who may have access to teaching staff evaluations. Stevens v. Board of Education of the Township of Spotswood, 93 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 453, adopted (Comm'r of Education, 93 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 456. While Board members are certainly not authorized to prepare the AWPR, the point is that the evaluation of a teacher's performance involves a process that is broader in scope than merely the annual, in-class observation, and the regulation only mandates that the preparer of the AWPR be a participant in that evaluative process. If the preparer has reviewed data about the teacher, has reviewed the report of the in-class observation and other relevant materials, including perhaps the persons own assessment of the teacher, then as a person who has participated in considering the teacher's performance, the person is authorized by the regulation to prepare the AWPR. Had the drafter of the regulation deemed it appropriate for only that person who performs the annual observation to prepare the AWPR, they could easily have said so in the regulation, i.e. "certified supervisor who conducted the annual, in-class observation." They did not, and a reading of the regulation to impose that restriction would be unduly narrow and not in consonance with the actual wording itself, or with the overall tenor of the entire regulation. While a person who performs the annual, in-class observation is no doubt a person with the ability and knowledge to "provide a basis for the review or performance of teaching staff members", that person is not necessarily the only such person.

Having considered the positions of the parties, I agree that as the matter is currently presented, summary decision is an appropriate means to resolve the case. The petitioner has approached the issue as one involving nothing other than the question of whether the practice as described in the stipulated facts conforms to the regulation. No specific facts have been offered to demonstrate how in any specific case the District has applied the policy. Given the limits of the attack on the policy, I am persuaded that the Board is correct in its argument that it has not violated the regulation, and that so long as the preparer of the AWPR is someone who has in fact been involved in the evaluation of the teaching staff member, that person may prepare the AWPR even if he or she is not the person who observed the teacher during the annual, in-class observation, which it is truly argued, is by no means the sole element involved in the overall evaluation of a teacher's ability. While perhaps it might be that in any given situation, the person in the best position to write the AWPR is that observer, there is no evidence in the record that that person is in general, or in any given case, the sole person involved in evaluating the teacher. And there is nothing in the record that precludes the notion that others involved in the evaluation are in a reasonable position to offer the teacher, alone or in concert with other properly certified personnel, the assistance and guidance contemplated by N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4.

Based upon the record, I FIND that there are no material facts in dispute and as such, summary decision is appropriately invoked. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. I CONCLUDE that the practice as stated in paragraph 4 of the Stipulation of Facts does not, on its face, violate the dictates of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.4(f). The respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED and the petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BRICK, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – who previously served the district as Interim Superintendent – challenged his April 30, 2008 termination by the respondent Board, contending that their action violated the terms of a written employment contract which did not expire until November 20, 2008. The Board contended that petitioner was employed through a verbal agreement in which the sole remuneration was $700 per day for each day worked.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: all of the competent, credible and reliable evidence in this matter supports a finding that the petitioner had a valid and enforceable written contract with the Board, which appointed him as Interim Superintendent through November 20, 2008; petitioner's contract required 30 days written notice, and he is therefore only entitled to 30 days reimbursement in the amount of $21,000, reflecting the month of May 2008; petitioner otherwise was compensated appropriately pursuant to his contract. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent pay petitioner $21,000, and dismissed the respondent's counterclaim for reimbursement of $17,804.66 for payments the Board claimed were erroneously made to petitioner for days not worked and for expenses he was not entitled to as a per diem appointment.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

MELINDO A. PERSI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF BRICK, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions and reply exceptions of both petitioner and respondent – filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein.

The parties' exceptions – in pertinent part – recast and reiterate their arguments advanced below which it is determined were clearly considered and addressed in the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) decision and, therefore, do not require further elaborative comment.[1]

Upon comprehensive consideration of the record in this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted on December 9, 2009, April 27 and April 30, 2010 – the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly detailed on pages 9-10 of her Initial Decision – that "[a]ll of the competent, credible and reliable evidence supports a finding that petitioner Melindo Persi had a valid, enforceable contract with the Brick Township Board of Education as reflected in J-C, as amended, appointing him as Interim Superintendent through November 20, 2008." (Initial Decision at 9-10) In so determining, the Commissioner has given full consideration to all evidentiary proofs which comprise the record and recognized that of particular importance was the ALJ's assessment of the credibility of the witnesses. Such being the case – and the ALJ having had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her, and having made findings of fact based upon their testimony – the standard governing the Commissioner's review is clear and unequivocal:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent and credible evidence in the record. (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c))

The Commissioner's reasoned review of the entire record before him provides no basis whatsoever for any alteration of the ALJ's determinations.

The Commissioner further concurs with the ALJ "that the BOE employees, in furtherance of the valid contract, paid petitioner appropriately as to salary and expenses" (Initial Decision at 10-11) and, therefore, respondent's counterclaim for reimbursement of $17,804.66 – which is predicated on a finding that no valid contract existed between the parties – is appropriately dismissed.

Finally – for the reasons presented by the ALJ on page 12 of her decision – the Commissioner finds and concludes that the sole compensation due petitioner in this matter, pursuant to his contract, is 30-days pay at his per diem rate of $700, or $21,000.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. The Board of Education of the Township of Brick is hereby ordered to pay petitioner $21,000 and its counterclaim for reimbursement is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE ANA C. VISCOMI, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter commenced as a verified complaint in lieu of prerogative writ filed in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Ocean County of June 6, 2008. Plaintiff therein challenged the action of defendant Brick Board of Education (hereinafter "BOE") terminating the employment of the plaintiff as Interim Superintendent, effective April 30, 2008. Defendants therein counterclaimed for return of certain money received by the plaintiff in connection with his purported per diem compensation. By Order of December 5, 2008, the Honorable Vincent J. Grasso, A.J.S.C., transferred the matter to the Commissioner of Education for disposition of all claims. On January 8, 2009, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. By Amended Consent Order dated September 30, 2009, counts 1, 2 and 3 of the complaint were dismissed with prejudice as the Brick Board of Education and dismissed without prejudice as to respondents Daniel Woska, Virginia Reinhold, Kim Terebush, Michael Pifko and Vicky Leone. It was further Ordered that count 4 of the complaint and corresponding counterclaim would be the only remaining issues for determination. The matter was then scheduled for hearing based upon counsels' availability; December 9, 2009; April 27, 2010; and April 30, 2010. The record closed on July 14, 2010, upon receipt of written summations. Several extensions were granted in order to issue this Initial Decision.

Count 4 of the verified complaint addresses the crux of the issue presented herein: was there a valid, written contract entered into between the petitioner Melindo Persi and the Brick BOE or did the arrangement consist of a verbal agreement in which the sole remuneration consisted of $700 per diem actually worked.

Petitioner has 53 years of experience in education in the state of New Jersey, holding such positions as Acting Assistant Commissioner, County Superintendent, fiscal monitor, School Superintendent, Business Administrator, teacher and Interim Superintendent. From November 20, 2006, through June 30, 2007, petitioner had a consultant agreement with the BOE in which he served as Board Administrator/Board Secretary. (J-N). Notably, that agreement indicated petitioner's office address as 3900 Galt Ocean Drive, #801, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. (J-N). By letter dated June 14, 2007, Brick Superintendent of Schools Thomas Seidenberger tendered his resignation effective September 10, 2007. (J-R). Petitioner testified Seidenberger's resignation was not a surprise as he had been looking for another position. In the Spring of 2007, several BOE members approached him to consider becoming the Interim Superintendent after Seidenberger resigned.

On June 11, 2007, the BOE adjourned to closed session to discuss the appointment of petitioner as Interim Superintendent. (J-A) Board members Daniel Woska and Brian DeLuca,[1] respectively, were present. (J-A). Woska testified that during closed session he asserted that petitioner should remain Interim Business Administrator/Board Secretary and the BOE should search for a permanent Superintendent. Woska also testified that a majority of BOE members disagreed with him. He further testified that no discussion of contractual terms occurred at that meeting.

On June 19, 2007, the BOE adjourned to closed session to discuss the appointment of petitioner as Interim Superintendent. (J-B). Board members Woska and DeLuca, respectively, were present as was legal counsel, John Sahradnik. (J-B). Board meeting minutes reflect that petitioner initially left the closed session since his potential employment was to be discussed but returned approximately 45 minutes later to discuss contract provisions. (J-B). Woska testified that petitioner presented an unsigned draft contract (R-1) and that the BOE members discussed it in closed session. The proposed contractual term at issue herein, as drafted by petitioner and rejected by the BOE provided:

> 7. This Agreement may be terminated by mutual agreement of the Board and Persi or by the Board upon 30 days' written notice to Persi. If the Board terminates this Agreement, it shall pay Persi the balance due under the Agreement plus 3% of the balance due under this Agreement. (R-1).

Woska testified that he questioned the 3% clause and paying petitioner for not working. He further testified that while several BOE members disagreed with his position, everyone just decided that petitioner would be hired at a rate of $700 per day with no written contract. BOE President DeLuca then presented agenda item (t), the appointment of petitioner as Interim superintendent "at a salary of $700 a day, pursuant to the attached contract effective July 1, 2007." (J-W). No contract was attached to the BOE minutes; however, petitioner testified that the proposed contract was provided to the BOE members as a "walk through" item for consideration during the closed session. DeLuca similarly testified that the contract was handled as a "walk through" which he indicated was common practice for the Brick BOE. All BOE members were provided a copy of the proposed contract at that meeting, DeLuca testified. The BOE voted 5-2, approving the appointment; DeLuca voted in favor and Woska voted against in open session.[2] (J-W). Petitioner testified that the contract was voted on by reference to letter "t" at the meeting and was not read into the record.[3] Petitioner also testified that Board President DeLuca referenced the resolution by paraphrasing it and made no mention to the contract even though each BOE member had the resolution which specifically referenced the contract. DeLuca testified that contracts are not included as part of agenda for BOE meetings; it is part of the paperwork available for BOE members to read if they want. However, Woska testified that once the BOE returned to open session, the motion that was made by BOE President DeLuca was consistent with what was discussed in closed session; the appointment of petitioner on a per diem basis with no mention of a contract. (Petitioner also continued in his role as Business Administrator/Board Secretary. [4]) (J-X).

A written "Interim Superintendent Agreement" was executed by petitioner and BOE President DeLuca by date of August 10, 2007. (J-C). Petitioner testified that the gap in time from the BOE resolution approving the contract to the execution date is probably explained by the fact that when the Board Secretary sends the contract to the BOE president, he or she will sign it when available. DeLuca testified that he did sign the contract as BOE President on August 10, 2007, at BOE offices. Petitioner testified that he drafted the contract based upon the prior contract he had with the district as Business Administrator/Board Secretary, made some changes and provided it to BOE

[2] Woska testified that although the only vote presented that evening in relation to petitioner was to appoint him at a per diem rate of $700, Woska still voted against him because he did not want Persi to be the Interim Superintendent.

[3] The video of the July 19, 2007 BOE meeting indicates that as to item "t" the BOE was asked to approve hiring petitioner as Interim Superintendent "at a rate of $700 per diem." (R-2). Assistant Board Secretary Marie Barnes testified that it would have been "unusual" for the BOE to discuss contractual terms during the open session portion of a meeting.

[4] The BOE ultimately approved the appointment of James Edwards as Business Administrator/Board Secretary. (J-Y).

counsel Sahradnik, who ultimately drafted the contract that was executed. DeLuca testified that the BOE asked Sahradnik at the June 19, 2007, meeting to review the contract prepared by petitioner. DeLuca further testified that BOE members wanted a 90 day termination clause in order to have a smooth transition to a new Superintendent. DeLuca testified that during closed session BOE member Dr. Athera expressed concern regarding the notice issue as the BOE members were looking to protect the district if Persi wanted to leave. Sahradnik recommended the 30 day provision. DeLuca also testified that the BOE wanted the termination to be effectuated by a "written" notice as the members did not want there to be any discrepancy as to the termination. DeLuca testified that by inclusion of this requirement, the BOE members knew the BOE would have an additional 30 days of Persi's services when he decided to leave or if the BOE wanted to replace Persi prior to the expiration of his contract. DeLuca testified that he reviewed the contract with Sahradnik the week leading up to the vote. Provision #7, as executed, indicates:

> This Agreement may be terminated by either party upon 30 days' written notice. (J-C).

DeLuca testified there would be no severance short of the 30 days written notice. He further testified that the last sentence of proposed contract provision #7, as presented by petitioner (R-1), was deleted at the June 19, 2007, meeting at the direction of BOE counsel Sahradnik during closed session. The duration of the agreement was from July 1, 2007, through November 1, 2008, "unless extended by mutual agreement of the parties," (J-C), although petitioner testified the duration was April 2008. (The extension later requested would bring him to a two year statutory limit, November 20, 2008, as he was already collecting his pension.) The agreement further provided that petitioner would be paid based on a 240-day schedule at a per diem rate of $700 "and there shall be no deductions for days not in attendance or for school holidays." (J-C). The agreement also contained the following clause:

> 11. This Agreement embodies the entire agreement between the parties hereto and cannot be varied except by written agreement of the undersigned. (J-C).

The agreement listed petitioner's address as 3900 Galt Ocean Drive #801, Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. (J-C). Assistant Board Secretary Marie Barnes testified that she recalls typing an agreement and that she worked with the Human Resources department to make sure the contract was signed and filed where it belonged.

By e-mail dated October 12, 2007, Barnes, forwarded board counsel Sahradnik information she located regarding petitioner's employment. (J-D). The subject matter of the e-mail indicated the information was being provided for the motion on the BOE agenda of that date. (J-D). The information provided, indicates:

> November 15, 2006: Personnel Teaching item (r)
>
> Move the Board of Education approve the appointment of MAP Associates LLC, Melindo A. Persi as Interim Business Administrator/Board Secretary, effective November 26, 2006, on an as-needed basis at a rate of $600 per day. This appointment will be in effect until a permanent replacement is hired.
>
> June 19, 2007: Personnel Teaching item (t)
>
> Move the Board of Education approve Melindo A. Persi to the position of Interim Superintendent of Schools, pursuant to the attached contract effective July 1, 2007.
>
> Resolution for today's packet
>
> Be it resolved by the Board of Education of the Township of Brick that pursuant to NJSA 18A:56-53.2b, and because of a dire need for filling the vacant position of superintended of schools, approval is hereby granted to extend the appointment of Melindo A. Persi, as Interim Superintendent of the Brick Township Public Schools through November 20, 2008. (J-D).

BOE minutes for October 18, 2007, reflect that the BOE approved the following:

> Be it resolved by the Board of Education of the Township of Brick that pursuant to NJSA 18A:56-53.2b, and because of a dire need for filling the vacant position of superintended of schools, approval is hereby granted to extend the appointment of Melindo A. Persi, as Interim Superintendent of the Brick Township Public Schools, in keeping with the previously approved contract, (emphasis added) through November 20, 2008. (J-E).

The resolution passed 5-0, with one abstention. (J-E). Board members Woska and DeLuca voted in the affirmative. (J-E). Woska testified he assumed they were voting to extend the per diem oral contract to November 20, 2008. Board counsel Sahradnik was present. (J-E). De Luca testified that the BOE wanted to "lock in" petitioner for as long as possible. The members did not realize, until advised by Sahradnik, of the statutory limitation. By letter dated October 18, 2007, Business Administrator/Board Secretary James Edwards forwarded the "resolution concerning the extension of the appointment of Melindo A. Persi as Interim Superintendent of Schools for the second year concluding on November 20, 2008," to Ocean County Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Bruce Greenfield, for his approval. (J-F). Edwards testified that he added the following certification to the BOE minutes because he needed to send the agenda to the county superintendent. (J-E):

> To whom it may concern: This is to certify that the items on this page were approved by the Brick Township Board of Education at their Public Meeting held on October 18, 2007.

This certification was signed by Edwards as Board Secretary. (J-E). Greenfield approved the extension by letter dated October 24, 2007. (J-G).

Petitioner testified that prior to early 2008; no one approached him to express concern with regard to his contract. At that point, Assistant Board Secretary Barnes advised him that BOE member Woska requested a copy of his contract; he directed her to provide it to him.

By e-mail dated March 17, 2008, Business Administrator/Board Secretary James Edwards inquired of Board counsel Sahradnik whether specific items petitioner submitted for reimbursement were covered by his contract or whether state Department of Education Circular 08-13-OMB X.A. superseded the contractual language. (J-H). Sahradnik's associate, Lauren Dooley, Esq., responded by e-mail dated April 8, 2008, and approved some of the reimbursements pursuant to the contract with petitioner. (J-H). Edwards testified that he first requested to see the contract in January 2008 because petitioner wanted to attend a seminar in Florida and due to the then recently enacted accountability regulations; the BOE was required to approve the expenditure prior to the seminar. Human Resources did not have a copy so he asked petitioner for a copy. Petitioner initially provided an unsigned copy which Edwards did not accept. Petitioner provided a copy of the signed contract with one week thereafter.

BOE election occurred on April 15, 2008. Petitioner testified that some BOE members that had voted favorably on his appointment as Interim Superintendent lost their respective bids to remain on the BOE. Petitioner testified that after the election, he knew "the handwriting was on the wall" as he sensed a different attitude towards him from some of the BOE members.

Assistant Board Secretary Marie Barnes testified that she was contacted by Business Administrator Edwards at 8:00 a.m. on April 25, 2008, to send petitioner a Rice notice. Barnes testified Edwards told her that Woska directed him to send out the notice. Edwards testified that Woska told him the "BOE" wanted to discuss petitioner's employment at its next meeting. Woska testified that he did not discuss sending the Rice notice with anyone prior to directing Edwards to send it. Schools were not in session as it was Spring break. Barnes testified that she had spoken to petitioner prior to Spring break and he advised he would be in Florida with his family. By letter of same date, Barnes forwarded petitioner the Rice notice advising that his employment would be discussed at the BOE meeting of April 29, 2008. (J-I). The notice was mailed to petitioner at the Florida address he provided, as reflected on the agreement, (J-P), by certified mail (J-Q), and at an address in Lavallette located by Barnes that proved to be erroneous. (J-I). Petitioner conceded that the Florida address is his primary residence. Barnes also called and spoke with petitioner to advise of the notice. She read it to him over the telephone. While petitioner initially did not recall receiving this call from Barnes, he later testified that he did speak with Barnes wherein she advised she was sending the Rice notice and she apologized for it.

Petitioner testified that prior to the meeting, he cleaned out his office. He also had dinner with Edwards and Assistant Superintendent Hrycenko and referred to it as "the Last Supper." Edwards testified that earlier that day petitioner told him that the BOE may terminate his employment at the meeting.

On April 29, 2008, after the BOE election, the BOE held its reorganization meeting. (J-AA). Board counsel, Sahradnik was replaced by Mr. Montenegro's firm. (J-AA). The BOE adjourned to closed session to discuss petitioner's employment. (J-AA). The BOE returned to open session and board member Woska made a motion to terminate petitioner's employment as Interim Superintendent effective April 30, 2008. (J-AA). The motion passed 5-2. (J-AA, J-J). Petitioner commented that he was to be provided 30 days' written notice and that BOE member Woska replied that he had no contract. Petitioner testified that he never received written notice to terminate his contract. He was paid through April 29, 2008.

Petitioner testified that pursuant to the contract, because he never was provided 30 days' written notice, he should be paid through the expiration of the agreement; approximately $92,000. [5] He also seeks reimbursement of counsel fees. Petitioner concedes; however, that he performed no services on behalf of the Brick Township school district after his termination through what would have been the expiration of the contract, November 20, 2008. And in October 2008, he commenced per diem employment at the Belleville school district at a rate of $750 per day.

Edwards testified that based upon the BOE's counterclaim that no contract existed and that petitioner was to be paid $700 per diem of days worked, the respondent is entitled to reimbursement from petitioner in the amount of $17,804.66 as he only worked 179 days and he was erroneously paid an additional $951.00 in expenses. (J-L). With regard to the expenses, Edwards testified that since petitioner had no contract, he was not entitled to expenses.

Having had an opportunity to assess the credibility of the witnesses and having considered the evidence in this case, I make the following FINDINGS OF FACT.

All of the competent, credible and reliable evidence supports a finding that petitioner Melindo Persi had a valid, enforceable contract with the Brick Township Board of Education as reflected in J-C, as amended, appointing him as Interim Superintendent through November 20, 2008. This is reflected by the credible testimony of petitioner, Brian DeLuca and Marie Barnes as well as the documents in evidence. Additionally, Business Administrator/Board Secretary James Edwards certified to the meeting minutes of October 18, 2007, which he forwarded to County Superintendent Dr. Bruce Greenfield, to approve the contract extension through November 20, 2008. Those meeting minutes specifically referenced the extension "in keeping with the previously approved contract." (J-E). With regard to the initial contract appointing petitioner to the position of Interim Superintendent, petitioner's testimony that contracts are routinely handled as "walk through" items was corroborated by former BOE President DeLuca and Assistant Board Secretary Marie Barnes. DeLuca even indicated this was common practice for Brick BOE. Woska's testimony that all they voted on was an oral agreement providing for paying petitioner $700 on a per diem basis is belied by his "no" vote. His explanation that he voted no because he did not want petitioner appointed to the position of Interim Superintendent is not credible. The video of the public portion of the June 19, 2007, meeting in which BOE President DeLuca paraphrased what the Board was voting upon in relation to the Petitioner is not dispositive. This was also corroborated by Barnes who testified that contracts are not read in open session. DeLuca credibly testified that prior Board counsel Sahradnik negotiated the contract with Persi and advised the BOE as to the effect of the language. DeLuca credibly testified that Sahradnik directed that the last sentence of provision #7 as reflected in the draft agreement provided by petitioner (R-1) be deleted as reflected in the final executed document of August 10, 2007. (J-C). This was corroborated by Barnes who typed the agreement, made sure it was signed, and that a copy was placed in Human Resources files. The existence of this executed contract, rather than the verbal per diem agreement suggested by the respondent, is further corroborated by the exchange of e-mails from Business Administrator/Board Secretary Edwards with Sahradnik's office in which Edwards asks counsel whether specific items submitted by Persi as expenses were reimbursable pursuant to the contract or whether the accountability regulations superseded the contract. It is clear from the evidence in this case that the BOE was advised by legal counsel throughout the negotiation process with the petitioner and that advice, which furthered the intention of the majority of the Board, resulted in the execution of a valid contract with the petitioner. I also find that the BOE employees, in furtherance of the valid contract, paid petitioner appropriately as to salary and expenses.

I further find that the contract specifically indicated that the executed agreement reflects the entirety of the contract. The contract did not provide for any separation pay short of that which would be encompassed in a 30 day written notice. While petitioner contends he has never been provided written notification pursuant to the express contractual terms, I find that the Rice notice, followed by petitioner's presence at the reorganization meeting of April 29, 2008, in which he was terminated, constructively acted as reasonable notification that his contract was terminated.

I further find that the Rice notice was forwarded to the petitioner to the Florida address he provided to the BOE as his primary residence and as reflected in the executed contract. Petitioner was also telephonically advised by Assistant Board Secretary Barnes of the Rice notice as she read the full contents of the form letter to him. Based upon petitioner's actions wherein he remarked to Business Administrator/Board Secretary Edwards that his employment was probably being terminated and he cleared out his office in anticipation thereof, petitioner was put on notice of his possible termination and knew his rights pursuant to the Rice requirements.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Petitioner asserts that exhibit J-C entitled "Interim Superintendent Agreement" is a valid, binding contract because the contents of the document were presented during an open meeting as well as acted upon and authorized by the Brick Township BOE at a public meeting in compliance with all procedural regulations under the Open Meetings Act and pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:66-53.2(b). Petitioner further contends that the BOE failed to comply with the terms of the Open Meeting Act relating to his termination at the April 29, 2008 public meeting, thereby violating the Rice requirements in advance of the public meeting. Petitioner contends the Board has failed to comply with the contractual requirement to provide him 30 days written notice and therefore, petitioner asserts he is owed the remainder due on his contract; $106,615.08 in addition to attorney's fees. Petitioner contends the Rice notice was improper because it was issued by Woska at his own volition; he was not the BOE President and he did not consult any BOE members or counsel.

Respondent contends that exhibit J-C was never presented to, acted upon, or authorized by the Brick Township BOE. Respondent relies upon the video of the June 19, 2007, public action by the Board wherein Board President DeLuca in his motion merely indicated that the Board was seeking to appoint petitioner as Interim Superintendent at $700 per day. Thus, respondent contends no written notice was due to petitioner and petitioner was paid erroneously for days not worked and for expenses he was not entitled to as a per diem appointment. Thus, the respondent contends it is entitled to reimbursement of $17,804.66.

Based upon my findings as noted above, I conclude the petitioner is entitled to 30 days reimbursement reflecting the month of May 2008, in the amount of $21,000.00. While petitioner contends that he is entitled to the remainder of his contract reflecting payment from May 1, 2008, through November 20, 2008, the executed contract did not provide for that relief as it merely called for 30 days' written notice. The failure to provide written notice in the manner prescribed by the petitioner would elevate form over substance. The Rice notice, albeit unusual, was received by the petitioner. He acted in furtherance of it and appeared at the meeting and failed to exercise his right to have his employment discussed during the public session at his own volition. He understood that right. The intent of Rice was otherwise satisfied; petitioner received reasonable advance notice to enable him to make a decision on whether he desired a public discussion and to prepare and present an appropriate request in writing. Rice v Union County Regional High School, 155 N.J. Super. 64, 73 (App. Div. 1977). There was no violation of the Open Public Meetings Act. N.J.S.A. 10:4-6, et seq. At most, separation pay would also be limited to the remaining salary due under the contract, or three months pay for each year remaining, whichever is the lesser. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-3.1(e)(4), New Jersey Association of School Administrators v. Schundler, 414 N.J. Super. 530 (App. Div. 2010). However, by terms of the executed contract, only 30 days is reimbursable.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I ORDER respondent pay petitioner the amount of $21,000.00 and respondent's counterclaim is hereby DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." CONTROVERSIES & DISPUTES

Re: Schiavoni v. Morton
Agency DKT. No. 7-1/11
Petitioner Response to legal arguments in respondent's motion

With regret, petitioner does respectfully request to withdraw the petition. Following is the legal reasoning:

A controversy or dispute under the State school laws arises when one party alleges that another has violated State statutes governing education (Title 18A). Such a violation occurred when the Sparta Board of Education failed to uphold NJSA 18A:17A-3 et seq, and specifically within the understanding of that law, NJSA 18A:12-24. 1(j), which states that the school board or advisory board refers all complaints to the CSA and acts on the complaints at public meetings only after failure of an administrative solution. In addition, according to Sparta Board of Education policy 0120, the Board functions only when in session, and at no time, while in session, did the Board of Education as a body, take action on petitioner's complaint. There are no recorded votes in any minutes regarding the complaint. No votes were taken authorizing action, such as a dismissal of the complaint or the writing of a letter by the Assistant Superintendent. No individual board member could have or should have authorized action. (NJSA 18A:12-24 1(d).) This failure to properly deal with petitioner's complaint was contrary to law and an indication of bad faith on the part of the board. Therefore the Commissioner has jurisdiction in this matter. When a board of education, including a superintendent, fails to uphold the statues, the Commissioner can act to ensure that statutory and regulatory requirements are followed.

The issue of accountability is a more difficult one. Citizens, including petitioner, have a right to truthful and accurate information as presented by the Board of Education. This is essential if the school system is to have the support of the public. Petitioner believes that acting with integrity and truthfulness is at the heart of the legal system, but this particular situation is a legal Catch 22. When a board of education, including a superintendent, fails to interpret faithfully the information citizens need to be properly informed, support for the system falters. However, there does not appear to be a specific law that compels public officials to speak truthfully and accurately nor does the Commissioner seem to have authority to determine accountability on the part of public officials. On balance, therefore, regardless of any violation of statute, petitioner appears to be without options and affirms the withdrawal of the petition.

RESPONDENT

Re: Schiavoni v. Morton
Agency DKT. No. 7-1/11
Petitioner Response to legal arguments in respondent's motion

With regret, petitioner does respectfully request to withdraw the petition. Following is the legal reasoning:

A controversy or dispute under the State school laws arises when one party alleges that another has violated State statutes governing education (Title 18A). Such a violation occurred when the Sparta Board of Education failed to uphold NJSA 18A:17A-3 et seq, and specifically within the understanding of that law, NJSA 18A:12-24. 1(j), which states that the school board or advisory board refers all complaints to the CSA and acts on the complaints at public meetings only after failure of an administrative solution. In addition, according to Sparta Board of Education policy 0120, the Board functions only when in session, and at no time, while in session, did the Board of Education as a body, take action on petitioner's complaint. There are no recorded votes in any minutes regarding the complaint. No votes were taken authorizing action, such as a dismissal of the complaint or the writing of a letter by the Assistant Superintendent. No individual board member could have or should have authorized action. (NJSA 18A:12-24 1(d).) This failure to properly deal with petitioner's complaint was contrary to law and an indication of bad faith on the part of the board. Therefore the Commissioner has jurisdiction in this matter. When a board of education, including a superintendent, fails to uphold the statues, the Commissioner can act to ensure that statutory and regulatory requirements are followed.

The issue of accountability is a more difficult one. Citizens, including petitioner, have a right to truthful and accurate information as presented by the Board of Education. This is essential if the school system is to have th e support of the public. Petitioner believes that acting with integrity and truthfulness is at the heart of the legal system, but this particular situation s a legal Catch 22. When a board of education, including a superintendent, fails to interpret faithfully the information citizens need to be properly informed, support for the system falters. However, there does not appear t o be a specific law that compels public officials to speak truthfully and accurately nor does the Commissioner seem to have authority to determin accountability on the part of public officials. On balance, therefore, regardless of any violation of statute, petitioner appears to be without options and affirms the withdrawal of the petition.

Subsequent to the Commissioner's approval of the parties' proposed settlement agreement in this matter on July 23, 2010 (see Attachment A), the parties advised that the Attorney General's Office expressed certain reservations about the lack of specificity contained within the agreement relating to the satisfaction of a disability retirement lien affecting Ms. Klumb and the Teacher's Pension and Annuity Fund (TPAF). The parties have now collectively revised their Settlement Agreement to address these concerns to the Attorney General Office's satisfaction and now request that the Commissioner approve their settlement agreement as amended.[1]

Upon his full review, the Commissioner approves the parties' revised Settlement Agreement. This matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MANALAPAN-ENGLISHTOWN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT,	:	ADDENDUM TO STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT
Respondent	:

This matter having come before the Office of Administrative Law upon a remand to the Department of Education by order of the Supreme Court of New Jersey for proceedings consistent with the order of the Supreme Court, and the parties having amicably resolved the matter, it is hereby stipulated and agreed as follows:

WHEREAS, on or about April 29, 2002, petitioner filed a lawsuit against the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District and agents servants and employees of said Board of Education, seeking re-employment after retirement, back-pay and other monetary damages; and

WHEREAS, said matter was transmitted to the New Jersey Department of Education and heard by the Office of Administrative Law and decided by the Commissioner of Education on or about June 16, 2005; and

WHEREAS, in accordance with the decision of the Commissioner of Education, petitioner was re-employed by the respondent Board of Education in or about September 2005, and terminated her employment on or about June 30, 2010; and

WHEREAS, after review by the State Department of Education, the Appellate Division of the Superior Court and the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, the matter was returned to the Department of Education for a hearing to resolve the issues relating to back-pay as set forth in the decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey dated May 11, 2009 and its supplemental order entered July 2, 2009; and

WHEREAS, the remanded matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, the matter was settled pursuant to the terms and conditions of the Stipulation of Settlement attached hereto, and approved by the Office of Administrative Law, and by the Commissioner of Education on or about January 23, 2010; and

WHEREAS, the funds for the settlement (minus federal, state and local taxes on the entire amount) have been deposited in the trust account of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C., for distribution in accordance with the terms and conditions of the settlement agreement; and

WHEREAS, in order for the Teacher's Pension and Annuity Fund (TPAF) claims against the funds payable to the petitioner to be resolved between the petitioner and TPAF, the TPAF has required that the settlement agreement state the specific dollar amount, and label such funds as back wages with specific beginning and ending dates; and

WHEREAS, the Stipulation of Settlement referred to above did not contain a specific allocation as required by TPAF, and it is in the interest of the petitioner that there be a specific allocation of the funds in order that the TPAF claim may be resolved;

NOW THEREFORE, the parties agree to amend the Stipulation of Settlement as follows:

1. The settlement amount ($240,000.00) set forth in paragraph 1 of the Stipulation of Settlement shall be allocated as follows:

(A) $210,000.00 is stipulated by the parties to be allocated for back wages for the school years 2002-03, 2003-04, and 2004-05 ($70,000.00 per year); said sums represent back wages allocation based upon salary guide rates of $74,570.00 (2002-03); $76,070.00 (2003-04); and $77,445.00 (2004-05), minus agreed upon mitigation in accordance with the decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey;

(B) the remaining $30,000.00 is allocated for and in consideration of waiver of all back-pay claims for any preceding years, all claims for future employment and future pay, all claims for benefits of whatsoever kind or nature, and in consideration of the continued waiver and release of all claims against the District of whatsoever kind or nature as set forth in the paragraph 7 of the Stipulation of Settlement previously agreed upon and approved by the Commissioner of Education.

2. The parties understand and agree that the aforesaid allocation is for the purpose of concluding the matter in order that the claims against the petitioner by TPAF may be resolved, so that payment may be made to the petitioner out of the funds that are being held in trust for her benefit. This allocation represents a compromise of the claims of the parties, and neither party, by making this allocation, makes any admissions with respect to any of the claims or defenses in the matter.

3. This Supplement to the Settlement Agreement is contingent upon final approval by the Commissioner of Education. The proceeds of the settlement amount set forth in paragraph 1 shall not be released by the law firm of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C. until such time as there is final approval by the Commissioner of Education.

4. The parties understand and agree that the proceeds of the settlement shall not be released from the trust account of the law firm of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C. until such time as there is a full and final release by the TPAF of any and all claims it may have with respect to the proceeds of this settlement. The parties understand and recognize that the Respondent Board of Education does not take any position with respect to the amount of the settlement proceeds to be paid to TPAF, and that said amount shall be negotiated between petitioner herein and TPAF, or resolved through the ordinary administrative and legal procedures for the resolution of said claims. No amount of the settlement proceeds shall be released to TPAF without the approval of petitioner herein or order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

5. Upon resolution of the claims of TPAF and upon approval of this Supplement to the Settlement Agreement by the Commissioner of Education, a portion of the proceeds of this settlement shall be paid to TPAF in the amount determined by agreement of petitioner and TPAF or by other legal proceedings; and the remainder shall be paid to petitioner herein by payment to the trust account of Richard Swarbrick, Esquire, attorney for the petitioner.

6. The Stipulation of Settlement and this Supplemental Agreement represent the full agreement between the parties, and no other promises or agreements have been made by or to either party. All parties represent that they have consulted with counsel prior to the execution of this agreement and that they are satisfied with the representation of counsel, and all parties agree that they are responsible for payment of their own attorneys' fees. This agreement is being made voluntarily and with full understanding of the terms and conditions herein. To the extent this Supplement to the Stipulation of Settlement is inconsistent with the Stipulation of Settlement approved by the Commissioner, this Supplement to the Stipulation of Settlement shall prevail, upon approval by the Commissioner of Education. Otherwise, the terms and conditions of the Stipulation of Settlement shall remain in full force and effect.

7. This agreement is expressly subject to approval of the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District. In the event the aforesaid approval is not obtained, then this agreement shall be null and void.

The record of this matter, the proposed "Stipulation of Settlement," and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. v.

MANALAPAN-ENGLISHTOWN BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

Richard C. Swarbrick, Esq., for petitioner

Patricia D. Connelly, Esq., for respondent (Brown & Connelly, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 10, 2010 Decided: June 14, 2010

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ t/a:

This matter concerns the determination of the back salary and emoluments due to the petitioner, Charlotte Klumb, pursuant to the final decision of the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) dated June 16, 2005, and the decision of the State Supreme Court dated May 11, 2009.

The matter was referred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 27, 2009 for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 22, 2004, I rendered an initial decision based on a motion for summary decision, in which I concluded that there were no factual disputes and that the respondent, the Manalapan-Englishtown Board of Education (Board) had the right to deny the petitioner's request that she be rehired to her former teaching position after the Board of Trustees of the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund (TPAF Board) had determined that her disability had disappeared or substantially diminished. On June 16, 2005, the Commissioner rejected my initial decision and held that the pension statute mandated the rehiring of a formerly disqualified employee and ordered her reinstated as of March 1, 1999, with all appropriate emoluments and back pay. It was noted that March 1, 1999, was the day that the Board interviewed the petitioner for an existing elementary teacher vacancy but that the Board did not rehire her until September 1, 2005.

The State Board of Education (State Board) affirmed the Commissioner's decision on January 4, 2006, and the Appellate Division of the Superior Court (Appellate Division) affirmed the State Board's decision on July 25, 2005. The State Supreme Court on May 11, 2009 affirmed the Appellate Division's decision as to the rehiring of the petitioner but remanded to the Commissioner issues relating to the back salary payment. The period of time in issue as to the back salary issues is between March 1, 1999 and September 1, 2005.

The Commissioner then remanded the back salary issues to the OAL. It is OAL's policy to give a remanded matter to the administrative law judge (ALJ) who had initially handled the case. Consistent with this policy, the matter was reassigned to me.

Richard C. Swarbrick, Esq., on behalf of the petitioner, filed a motion to disqualify me from hearing the remanded matter since I had issued the initial decision in the original case, had ruled against the petitioner, and other ALJs were available to handle the matter.

As to the motion, I concluded that the petitioner had not shown any legal reason why I should recuse myself and that there was no reason to believe that I could not provide a fair, unbiased and impartial hearing and determination in this matter. On October 29, 2009, I ordered that the petitioner's motion for recusal be denied. Swarbrick filed an appeal with the Director and Chief Administrative Law Judge. On November 24, 2009, Director Laura Sanders issued a final order in which she affirmed my decision.

Both parties filed a number of motions regarding the issue in this matter as well as discovery, and I handled the matters in a number of orders. After there was substantial compliance by the petitioner as to the discovery requests, I had a settlement conference with the parties on April 26, 2010. During the conference, we were able to agree to the outline of a settlement of the matter. The parties had to work out the details of the settlement and have a discussion with a representative of the TPAF Board. I received a written and signed stipulation of settlement on June 10, 2010.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a settlement agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the settlement terms and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

This matter having come before the Office of Administrative Law upon a remand to the Department of Education by order of the Supreme Court of New Jersey for proceedings consistent with the order of the Supreme Court, and the parties having amicably resolved the matter, it is hereby stipulated and agreed as follows:

WHEREAS, on or about April 29, 2002, petitioner filed a lawsuit against the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District and agents, servants and employees of said Board of Education, seeking re-employment after retirement, back-pay and other monetary damages; and

WHEREAS, said matter was transmitted to the New Jersey Department of Education and heard by the Office of Administrative Law and decided by the Commissioner of Education on or about June 16, 2005; and

WHEREAS, in accordance with the decision of the Commissioner of Education, petitioner was re-employed by the respondent Board of Education in or about September 2005, and remains an employee in the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District; and

WHEREAS, after review by the State Department of Education, the Appellate Division of the Superior Court and the Supreme Court of the State of New Jersey, the matter was returned to the Department of Education for a hearing to resolve the issues relating to back-pay as set forth in the decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey dated May 11, 2009, and its supplemental order entered July 2, 2009; and

WHEREAS, the remanded matter was transmitted by the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing; and has been lengthy and protracted and further litigation will result in continued extensive time and expense, which is not in the best interest of the parties;

WHEREAS, the matter is ripe for settlement at this time because it will allow petitioner to make plans for retirement at the end of this school year (2009-10), and for the respondent Board of Education to conduct educational planning for the next school year (2010-2011) in a prudent, timely and fiscally responsible manner; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire to resolve any and all claims of petitioner that may have arisen during her employment with the Board of Education in order to finally resolve all claims and put a conclusive end to any and all disputes between the parties; and

WHEREAS, the New Jersey Teacher's Pension and Annuity Fund (hereinafter "TPAF") has certain claims to the proceeds of any back-pay award that may have been made in this proceeding, and resolution of the claims in this matter will enable TPAF to recover funds out of the proceeds of this settlement;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants contained herein, the parties agree as follows:

1. Within 30 days of the date hereof, the Respondent Board of Education shall issue payment in the amount of TWO HUNDRED FORTY THOUSAND DOLLARS ($240,000.00) minus all federal, state and local withholding taxes on the entire amount, said payment representing full and final settlement of all claims of the petitioner in this matter. Payment of the aforesaid net amount shall be made payable to the trust account of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C., to be held in trust pending resolution of claims by TPAF and pending final approval by the Commissioner of Education, as set forth below.

2. Petitioner agrees that she shall finally and conclusively end her employment with the Respondent Board of Education on or before July 1, 2010, and hereby waives any and all claims of whatsoever kind or nature to re-employment at any time after July 1, 2010. Said agreement to leave the employ of the respondent Board of Education is final and absolute, and is not contingent upon approval of petitioner's retirement application by the Division of Pensions or resolution of any claims that the Teacher's Pension and Annuity Fund may have against petitioner or against the settlement proceeds, or any other contingencies for release of the funds from the trust account of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C.

3. This settlement agreement is contingent upon approval by the Administrative Law Judge assigned to this matter and upon final approval by the Commissioner of Education. The proceeds of the settlement amount set forth in paragraph 1 shall not be released by the law firm of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C. until such time as there is final approval by the Commissioner of Education.

4. The parties understand and recognize that the TPAF has certain claims against the proceeds of the settlement amount set forth in paragraph 1, for payments that were made to petitioner by TPAF or for payments that petitioner may be required to make as contribution to her retirement from the settlement proceeds. In light of these claims, the parties understand and agree that the proceeds of the settlement shall not be released from the trust account of the law firm of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C. until such time as there is a full and final release by the TPAF of any and all claims it may have with respect to the proceeds of this settlement. The parties understand and recognize that the respondent Board of Education does not take any position with respect to the amount of the settlement proceeds to be paid to TPAF, and that said amount shall be negotiated between petitioner herein and TPAF, or resolved through the ordinary administrative and legal procedures for the resolution of said claims.

5. Upon resolution of the claims of TPAF and upon approval of this settlement agreement by the Commissioner of Education, a portion of the proceeds of this settlement shall be paid to TPAF in the amount determined by agreement of petitioner and TPAF or by other legal proceedings; and the remainder shall be paid to petitioner herein by payment to the trust account of Richard Swarbrick, Esquire, attorney for the petitioner. No amount of the settlement proceeds shall be released to TPAF without the approval of petitioner herein or order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

6. The parties understand and agree that this settlement represents a compromise of the claims and positions of the parties, and that neither party makes any admission with respect to the claims or defenses of the other party to these proceedings.

7. In consideration of this agreement, petitioner hereby expressly releases and forever discharges the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District and its agents, servants, employees, and Board of Education members, past and present, from and against any and all claims, demands, actions, causes of action, of whatsoever kind or nature, including but not limited to any claim for interest, attorneys' fees, costs or expenses by reason of any act or omission of the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District or any of its agents, servants, employees or Board of Education members, past or present. This release includes, but is not limited to, any claims which have been made, or could have been made, under the education laws of State of New Jersey, Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code, the civil rights acts of the United States of America and the State of New Jersey, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Family and Medical Leave Act and the Family Leave Act, the Workers' Compensation Law of the State of New Jersey, the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, and all other laws and statutes relating to civil rights, employment, retirement, pensions and wages, and any action for tort, defamation, infliction of emotional stress, tortious interference with employment or contract, personal injury, breach of contract or other common law action. Petitioner specifically releases all parties named in the complaint filed under Docket No. MON-2190-02, and all claims raised or which could have been raised in that proceeding or the proceedings before the New Jersey Commissioner of Education.

9. Petitioner agrees to hold harmless the law firm of Brown & Connelly, L.L.C. from and against any and all claims by petitioner or any other party to the settlement proceeds to be held in trust by said law firm pending resolution of the claims set forth above.

10. This agreement represents the full agreement between the parties, and no other promises or agreements have been made by or to either party. All parties represent that they have consulted with counsel prior to the execution of this agreement and that they are satisfied with the representation of counsel, and all parties agree that they are responsible for payment of their own attorneys' fees. This agreement is being made voluntarily and with full understanding of the terms and conditions herein.

11. This agreement is expressly subject to approval of the Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District. In the event the aforesaid approval is not obtained, then this agreement shall be null and void.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
LEAP ACADEMY UNIVERSITY CHARTER SCHOOL, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a non-tenured high school English teacher employed by respondent LEAP Academy University Charter School (LEAP), appealed the termination of his employment contract. In lieu of an answer, LEAP filed a motion to dismiss, contending that the petition was not timely filed.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: procedurally, respondent's motion to dismiss must be considered a motion for summary decision; the material facts are undisputed, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; the threshold issue is whether the petition was timely filed; petitioner received written notice on November 20, 2009 that he was being terminated in accordance with the sixty-day notice provision of his employment contract, and that is the date from which the ninety-day period within which to file an appeal began to run; petitioner's appeal was not filed until July 29, 2010. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition as untimely.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

v.
LEAP ACADEMY UNIVERSITY CHARTER SCHOOL, CAMDEN COUNTY,
Respondent.

Cristal Holmes-Bowie, Esq., for petitioner (Michael Armstrong & Associates, attorneys)

Nicholas J. Repici, Esq., for respondent (Genova, Burns & Giantomasi, attorneys)

Record Closed: December 1, 2010 Decided: January 20, 2011

BEFORE ISRAEL D. DUBIN, ALJ:

Joseph Cumberland appeals from the termination of his employment contract by the LEAP Academy University Charter School. Cumberland filed his petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education on July 29, 2010; LEAP filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of answer on August 30, 2010;[1] and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law where it was filed on September 14, 2010, for hearing as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A pre-hearing conference was held on November 3, 2010, at which time it was agreed that Cumberland would be permitted to file his brief in opposition to the motion by November 24, 2010, and LEAP would file its rebuttal by December 1, 2010. The record was closed upon receipt of LEAP's brief on December 1, 2010.

The material facts are undisputed and I therefore find them as follows. Joseph Cumberland was employed as a high school English teacher by the LEAP Academy University Charter School, Inc., on June 3, 2009. Among other things, his contract provided that it could be "TERMINATED BY EITHER PARTY GIVING TO THE OTHER SIXTY (60) DAY'S WRITTEN NOTICE OF INTENTION TO TERMINATE THE SAME." Employment Contract, Exhibit P-1 (emphasis in original).

By letter dated November 20, 2009, Exhibit P-2, Cumberland was notified by LEAP's Chief Learning Officer, Dr. Deanna Burney, that his employment was being terminated in accordance with the sixty-day notice provision of his employment contract, "subject to ratification by the Board of Trustees at its January Board Meeting." Cumberland was also advised that while he would be paid for the next sixty days, he was not to report to work or otherwise enter LEAP Academy's building or grounds. His personal belongings were delivered to his home by messenger on December 22, 2009.

By letter dated January 20, 2010, and delivered on January 21, 2010, Exhibit P-3, Cumberland was notified that the LEAP Board of Trustees would be hearing "recommendations regarding [his] employment at LEAP Academy University Charter School in a private meeting" the evening of January 21, 2010. He was also advised of his right to request that the matter be heard during the public session of the meeting, but that any such request had to be submitted to Dr. Burney by no later than 4:00 p.m. the day of the meeting. Cumberland did not attend the meeting.

[1] LEAP requested and was granted a two-week extension of time in which to file its answer by the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes.

By letter dated January 22, 2010, Exhibit P-4, Cumberland's counsel, Ms. Holmes-Bowie, notified LEAP's counsel, Mr. Repici, that the "Rice Notice" her client received had been "insufficient" because it had been delivered less than twenty-four hours before the scheduled meeting and therefore constituted "less than reasonable notice of the board's intention to discuss his employment, as required." Ms. Holmes-Bowie also asserted that the Board had "erred" in not sending her, as Cumberland's attorney, notice of the date, time, and place of the meeting. Consequently, she requested that the Board "rescind any action that it may have taken with respect to his employment, continuing his employment until he is properly and timely noticed and given the opportunity to be heard by the Board of trustees." Ibid.

By letter dated February 24, 2010, Exhibit P-5, Mr. Repici denied the request and advised Ms. Holmes-Bowie that the Board had not gone into executive session during the meeting on January 21, 2010. He also advised her that Cumberland's employment had not been discussed during the public session. Rather, the termination of his contract:

> was simply listed as an agenda item and voted on by the Board.[2] Thus, since no discussions of Mr. Cumberland's employment occurred in executive sessions (sic) or otherwise, there was no obligation on the part of LEAP Academy to send Mr. Cumberland a Rice notice. Thus, the insufficiency of notice to Mr. Cumberland (a point contested by LEAP Academy) is a moot issue and the Board will not rescind its action.

The Board has filed a motion to dismiss the petition, which is not recognized by the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1, et seq. However, "[w]hen required in individual cases, the judge at any time of the proceeding may convert any form of proceeding into another, whether more or less formal or whether in-person or by telephone." N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(d). The administrative law judge may also render any ruling or order necessary to decide any matter presented which is within the jurisdiction of the transmitting agency. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(h). Additionally, "[t]he judge may take such other actions as are necessary for the proper, expeditious and fair conduct of the hearing or other proceeding, development of the record and rendering of a decision." N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.6(p). Consequently, this matter is hereby converted to a motion for summary decision and shall be governed by N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b) provides that a motion for summary decision may be granted where "there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and . . . the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." In deciding whether a genuine issue of material fact exists, a court must consider "whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995). Where the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," summary decision should be granted. Id. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 252, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 214 (1986)). In the present matter, the parties agree on the essential facts as presented by Cumberland. I therefore conclude that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the matter is appropriate for summary decision.

The threshold issue in this matter is whether Cumberland's petition alleging that the Board improperly terminated his contract was timely filed. The regulations promulgated by the Department of Education provide that a petitioner may challenge the action of a board of education by filing a petition conforming to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. In addition to serving the petition upon the respondent, the petition must be filed:

> no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

Although this provision does not address the type of notice that may be considered "adequate notice" under the rule, the New Jersey Supreme Court has held that "adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 572, 597 (1993). Therefore, the ninety-day limitation period for commencing an action begins to run when the "plaintiff learns, or reasonably should learn, the existence of that state of facts which may equate in law with a cause of action." Id. at 587, citing Burd v. New Jersey Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291 (1978). Stated differently, the ninety-day period begins when a petitioner learns of facts that would enable him or her to file a timely claim. Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., supra, 131 N.J. at 588-89.

It is now well-established that a non-tenured teaching staff member:

> whose cause of action arises out of the nonrenewal of his or her employment must—unless facts necessary to make a claim are unknown at the time—file a petition within 90 days of the notice of nonrenewal, and that the running of the regulatory limitations period is not tolled by the possibility that the petitioner might ultimately persuade the board to offer reemployment through statutory and regulatory mechanisms provided for this purpose.[3]
> [Lygate v. Board of Educ. of the Borough of Carteret, Middlesex County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2660-07, Commissioner's Decision, (March 18, 2008) <http://www.nj.gov/njded/legal> (emphasis in original).]

Therefore, a petitioner must file his petition within ninety days of the notice of his nonrenewal, not within ninety days of his exhaustion of the other avenues and mechanisms he might have employed in seeking the renewal of his employment. Wise v. Board of Educ. of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, OAL Dkt. No. 160-00, [3] See N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1b (nontenured employee who is not recommended for renewal by the chief school administrator shall be deemed nonrenewed, but shall be permitted to make an informal appearance before the board of education to convince it to offer reemployment). See also N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.6(c) (nontenured teaching staff member whose contract has not been renewed may request an informal, non-adversarial appearance before the board "to permit the staff member to convince the members of the board to offer reemployment.").

Commissioner's Decision No. 301-00 (September 11, 2000), aff'd, State Board of Education (January 3, 2001) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In other words, the cause of action arises upon notice that the employment will not be renewed, not upon ratification of the nonrenewal or, as in this case, termination, by the board of education. Lygate v. Board of Education of the Borough of Carteret, Middlesex County, supra.; Charapova v. Board of Education of the Township of Edison, Middlesex County, OAL Dkt. No. 6722-05, State Board of Education Decision No. 30-06 (August 1, 2007), reversing Commissioner's Decision No. 224-06 (June 20, 2006).

The ninety-day requirement has been strictly followed and applied almost without exception. Regardless of whether the board has complied with statutory, administrative or regulatory requirements, the petitioner is required to file the petition no later than ninety days after the receipt of notice of the decision. Portee v. Newark Board of Educ., 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 381, 383.

The ninety-day rule may only be relaxed under exceptional circumstances or if there is a compelling reason to do so. Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., supra, 131 N.J. at 590; DeMaio v. New Providence Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 449, 453. As a general rule, relaxation will not be permitted unless strict adherence would be inappropriate, unnecessary or where injustice would occur. Ibid. In this regard it has been held that the ninety-day rule will be relaxed "only where there is some compelling reason for the same, such as the presence of a substantial constitutional or other issue of fundamental public interest beyond that of concern only to the parties themselves." Bogart v. Board of Educ. of the City of East Orange, OAL Dkt. No. 6245-82 (January 26, 1983), aff'd by Commissioner (March 14, 1983).

Here, on November 20, 2009, Cumberland received written notice that he was being terminated in accordance with the sixty-day notice provision of his employment contract, and it was then that the ninety-day period within which to file his appeal began to run. Consequently, his appeal should have been filed by no later than February 18, 2010. Even if one were to accept his argument that, pursuant to the notice of termination, the decision to terminate was subject to ratification by the Board, which occurred on January 21, 2010, the petition would have to have been filed by April 21, 2010. And even if one were to accept his additional argument that he did not receive actual notice of his termination until his counsel received Mr. Repici's letter of February 24, 2010, the petition would have to have been filed by no later than May 25, 2010, to be considered timely.

Although Cumberland has argued that the limitations period may be extended or relaxed where there is an issue of fundamental public interest beyond that of the parties themselves, he has failed to articulate any such issue. The fact is that he did not file his petition of appeal until July 29, 2010—well after the ninety-day period in which to do so had expired. Therefore, without regard to the merits of his case, I find that the petition of appeal was not filed within ninety days of the notice(s) of his termination and conclude that the petition should be and is hereby dismissed with prejudice.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The record of this matter, the proposed "Memorandum of Agreement" (Agreement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that the record does not include a copy of a Board resolution approving the Agreement and authorizing Diana C. Lobosco, District Superintendent, to sign the Agreement on respondent's behalf. Nor, in the alternative, is the Agreement signed by the Board's attorney, who is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation. Also absent from the record are bylaws indicating who has the authority to enter into contracts on behalf of petitioner. Nor, in the alternative, is the Agreement signed by petitioner's attorney.

Consequently, the Acting Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement and hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Agreement to either be executed by the attorneys of record or to include as exhibits 1) the Board resolution approving the

BEFORE JOANN LaSALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on November 2, 2009 for resolution as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. A telephone prehearing was scheduled for November 20, 2009 at which time a settlement conference was scheduled. Several status conferences were conducted wherein the parties engaged in extensive settlement discussions. During the pendency of the May 12, 2010 conference the parties advised that the matter was resolved and that the settlement agreement would follow within the next few weeks thereafter. After several inquiries to both counsel, on January 20, 2011 respondent's counsel submitted a letter stating that this matter was resolved on June 9, 2010, however, he simply forgot to forward the settlement. The Settlement Agreement was prepared and executed indicating the terms of the agreement, which are incorporated herein by reference.

Having reviewed the contents of the attached Stipulation of Settlement, I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures and/or the signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that her daughter, S.S., was not eligible for a free public education in the Northern Valley Regional High School district during the 2009-2010 school year. The respondent contended that S.S. was domiciled with her father in Cresskill during the time period in question. Petitioner contends that S.S. was domiciled with her in Closter – a town within the Northern Valley district – and spent limited time in Cresskill with her father, from whom petitioner is separated.

The ALJ found that: the weight of the evidence indicates that petitioner and her daughter were domiciled within the school district, in an apartment in Closter, during the 2009-2010 school year; petitioner and S.S. then moved into a home in Demarest – another town within the district – in June 2010; and the occasional presence of S.S. at the Cresskill home of her father does not amount to residency at that address. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that the respondent's determination that S.S. was not domiciled in the Northern Valley Regional High School district for the 2009-2010 school year be reversed; and further ruled that the respondent Board is not entitled to tuition reimbursement from petitioner.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTHERN VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision have been reviewed. Respondent submitted exceptions which reiterate the arguments it presented in its post-hearing brief – which arguments are unpersuasive in light of the record as a whole. Accordingly, and for the following reasons, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

In this controversy, petitioner challenges respondent's determination that during the 2009-2010 school year, her minor child, S.S., was ineligible to receive a public education in the Northern Valley Regional High School District. In the Commissioner's view, the facts support the conclusions that 1) petitioner provided sufficient evidence of her own residency in respondent's district during the 2009-2010 school year, 2) petitioner provided evidence that her minor child, S.S., lived with her in the district during the 2009-2010 school year, and

3) respondent presented insufficient evidence to support its position that S.S. lived outside the district with her father during the 2009-2010 school year.[1]

Accordingly, the petition is granted. To the extent that the third affirmative defense in respondent's answer – in which respondent stated that it would seek tuition reimbursement – can be regarded as a counterclaim, that counterclaim is denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

[1] The testimony of respondent's investigator – upon which respondent's case primarily relies – was not thorough. He did not keep accurate records of his reconnaissance. He could not provide specific dates, times, or the exact number of occasions that he observed each of the addresses given to him, and he provided testimony – such as the date of his first encounter with S.S.'s father at the out-of-district home – which was discrepant with certain correspondence between himself and school administrators. Further, assuming arguendo that respondent's investigator – who admittedly spent no more than 21 hours over the course of nine months on the instant case – saw S.S. with her father on the occasions described in his testimony, it would still not rebut the prima facie case presented by petitioner that S.S. was domiciled with her mother, S.G.S., in an apartment in respondent's district for all but a few days of the 2009-2010 school year.

BEFORE SANDRA ANN ROBINSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

During the 2008/2009 school year (SY), petitioner, S.G.S., her husband J.S., and their daughter, S.S., resided together at 15 Churchill Street in Cresskill, New Jersey. S.S. attended Northern Valley Regional High School (Northern Valley) even though she did not reside in the school district. Petitioner was required to pay tuition for S.S. to attend Northern Valley.

Petitioner submitted an application and payment for S.S. to return to Northern Valley for the 2009/2010 SY. However, prior to the first day of the new school year S.S.'s parents changed their minds about Northern Valley and enrolled S.S. in Cresskill High School. A student-transfer card and withdrawal-consent form was completed on September 1, 2009, and S.S. started the 2009/2010 SY at Cresskill High School.

On September 3, 2009, S.S. left Cresskill High and returned to Northern Valley with the consent of the vice principal and guidance counselor. Petitioner explained to the Northern Valley administrators that S.S. would be more comfortable at Northern Valley. On September 4, 2009, J.S., S.S.'s father, received a telephone call from the Northern Valley vice principal that informed the family that S.S. could not be re-admitted as a tuition student because the school could not meet her needs. S.S. had been attending collaborative classes. On September 7, 2009, J.S. sent an e-mail to the vice principal and guidance counselor that informed Northern Valley that the family found a house in-district and would be moving to Closter on Thursday of the same week. A registration form dated September 8, 2009, was completed listing S.S.'s new address as 120 High Street, Closter. Closter is included in the Northern Valley School District.

The Cresskill property, 15 Churchill Street, was placed on the market during the summer of 2009; a Contract For Sale with a provision for a sixty-day closing from completion of attorney review; and a requirement to vacate the premises within thirty-days was signed in August 2009. The purchase and sale was not completed and the Contract was voided. Prior to the voiding of the Contract For Sale, petitioner and her husband found an apartment unit in Closter and signed a one-year lease that commenced on September 7, 2009.

On November 5, 2009, the chief school administrator for Northern Valley wrote to petitioner to advise that the school district had determined that S.S. was ineligible to attend the high school because she was not living in the school district. The letter also informed petitioner that a tuition assessment at the rate of $81.98 for each day S.S. was in attendance could be imposed. In June 2010, a sale of the Cresskill property occurred with another purchaser. During July 2010, and after the closing on the Cresskill house, S.G.S. purchased a house, in her name only, at 42 Stelfox Street, Demarest, New Jersey. Demarest is also included in the Northern Valley School District. Petitioner challenges the determination of the school district.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Department of Education Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted this case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 22, 2009, for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 et seq. and N.J.S.A. 52:14 F-1 et seq. Hearings were to commence on February 18, 2010, and continue and conclude in April 2010. Respondent's counsel was required to appear for oral arguments before the Third Circuit Court of Appeals in April 2010. Taking into consideration the time required for the Third Circuit matter, the onset of school recess, pre-planned vacation schedules, and the OAL Case Calendar, the completion of testimony was delayed until August 18, 2010. Thereafter, respondent's counsel proposed the submission of post-hearing briefs with petitioner's counsel's consent. A briefing schedule was finalized once the parties received transcripts. The record was closed on December 14, 2010, upon receipt of all briefs and reply briefs by the undersigned.

ISSUE

Was petitioner S.G.S. and her daughter S.S. residents of the Northern Valley Regional High School District during the 2009/2010 school year? If residency is not established, what is the amount of the tuition reimbursement due from petitioner to respondent?

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

Louis D' Arminio is a licensed private investigator in the State of New Jersey and is the residency officer for Northern Valley Regional High School. He has conducted approximately one hundred investigations of which fifty percent of the families were cleared. In September 2009, he was provided with an address in Cresskill and in Closter to investigate the residency of S.S.

The investigator testified,

> I went to both the Cresskill and Closter properties on several occasions, typically on mornings, evenings, and weekends, from early September until September 23, 2009, before finally meeting with J.S., who is S.S.'s father, at the Cresskill property.[i] During the conversation J.S. told me that S.S. was not feeling well, was sick and in bed upstairs. J.S. never made mention of the High Street address in Closter during the September meeting.[ii]
> I was never provided pictures of either S.G.S. or her daughter and did not know what they looked like. I saw S.S. on two occasions at the Cresskill address. Prior to June 1, 2010, on the first occasion, both her father and mother were present. On the second occasion, on June 1, 2010, I saw S.S. leave the Cresskill property with her father who drove her to school. I also went several times, perhaps half a dozen or more, between September 23rd and October 25, 2009, to the Closter address and I did not make any observations or have any contact with S.G.S., S.S. or her father. I was able to ascertain from the mail boxes that two families were living at the Closter address one of whom was S.G. I was not aware that S.G. was the mother of S.S. and I was not aware that she sometimes uses her maiden name, S.G.

On cross-examination, the investigator said he went to Closter apartment on three or four occasions, but never saw anyone. He went to the Cresskill home about six times and saw no sign of anyone being home; there were no cars in the driveway. He acknowledged that no days, dates, or hours had been recorded for his reports or forms.

[i] The investigator testified that he first met J.S. in early October 2009, but his October 6, 2009, email indicates that he met J.S. on Wednesday September 23, 2009. (See Exhibit R-14.)

ii It is noted that the investigator's email pertaining to the September 23 meeting indicates that J.S. discussed the Closter property in detail. (See Exhibit R-14.)

Raymond Jacobus, assistant superintendent for business and board secretary at Northern Valley Regional High School testified that a notice was provided to the family about the tuition rate of $81.98 per diem that would be assessed if S.S. was determined by the Commissioner to be ineligible.

Jacobus stated the student tuition for the district is consistent with the provisions for Calculation of Tuition, as set forth in, N.J.A.C. 6A:22-6.3(a) and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-4.2(b). He also testified that the district is seeking additional money above the standard rate because S.S. had an IEP and was classified eligible for special education. The 2009/2010 SY annual rate for special education students is $24,000. Jacobus said he did not know if a letter was sent to petitioner regarding an added rate, or different rate, for special education students. The usual-educational process for special education students is to have them placed at another school with a special education curriculum. In this case, S.S. had an IEP with a prescribed educational program.

S.G.S., petitioner, testified that on September 14, 2009, D. Storicks Moving Company transported belongings and furniture from the family's Cresskill home to petitioner's Closter apartment on the first floor of a two-family house. Petitioner said,

> My daughter and I moved to Closter and my husband continued residing in the Cresskill home. I leased the apartment with the expectation that the Cresskill home would be sold by the end of October. I was having on-going marital problems and expected to separate and purchase my own place when the Cresskill house was sold.

Petitioner explained that the procedures taken to settle in the Closter apartment included the signing of a one-year house lease commencing on September 7, 2009 (a copy of the Lease was provided); changing of auto driver's license address (copy of license, showing date of issuance September 9, 2009, was provided); establishing gas service (copies of the PSE&G monthly statements for September 2009 through January 2010 was provided); establishing electric service (copies of Orange and Rockland Electric bill statements for September 2009 through January 2010 was provided); establishing water service (copies of the United Water Company statements for October 2009 and January 2010 was provided); setting-up Cablevision (copies of the December 2009 and January 2010 bill was provided); changing of address for bank account (copies of Lakeland Bank Checking Account Statements for October 2009 through January 2010 was provided); and acquiring Renter's Insurance (copy of the application and binder, effective November 13, 2009, was provided).

Petitioner testified that the Cresskill home was sold in June 2010 and closed on June 24. Shortly thereafter petitioner moved from the Closter apartment and purchased a home, in her name alone, in Demarest, New Jersey. Petitioner, her daughter, her mother, and a housekeeper reside in the Demarest home and petitioner's husband moved into the Closter apartment. Petitioner produced an Affidavit of Title and a Deed both dated July 13, 2010, for the Demarest property she purchased. She signed a Certificate of Residency to attest ownership and occupancy, including the fact that her husband does not reside with her.

In regard to the living arrangements for petitioner's daughter, petitioner testified, "My husband and I agreed that my daughter would live with me and she would see her father whenever she and he wanted and she would stay on occasion at the Cresskill address. My daughter stayed with me three to seven days per week." On cross-examination, petitioner explained that her mother lived in Florida until recently and petitioner and petitioner's daughter would visit petitioner's mother in Florida during vacation time. Petitioner said she never met respondent's investigator.

On cross-examination petitioner responded,

> A couple of days before school started in September 2009, my husband and I thought about S.S. not returning to Northern Valley, but going to Cresskill or Old Tappan. She did not have an IEP on June 30, 2009, at the end of the school year at Northern Valley. We had gotten a private IEP for S.S. and provided her with tutors. She was taking collaborative classes with two certified teachers, one is an EDS teacher. In September 2009, S.S. was classified as eligible for special education. We did know that Northern Valley did not take special education students as tuition students.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the law, the credible testimonial and documentary evidence, I FIND the following as FACTS in this matter:

1. During the 2008/2009 SY petitioner, S.G.S., her husband J.S., and their daughter, S.S., resided together at 15 Churchill Street in Cresskill, New Jersey;

2. The town of Cresskill, New Jersey, is not in the Northern Valley School District;

3. S.S. attended Northern Valley Regional High School during the 2008/2009 SY as a tuition student;

4. Petitioner planned to have S.S. attend school at Northern Valley again for the 2009/2010 SY and to that extent submitted an application and payment for S.S. to return to Northern Valley;

5. Prior to the first day of the new school year S.S.'s parents reversed the decision about Northern Valley and enrolled S.S. in Cresskill High School. Student-transfer and withdrawal documents were completed on September 1, 2009, and S.S. was in class at Cresskill High School on the first day of school;

6. On September 3, 2009, petitioner withdrew S.S. from Cresskill and returned her to Northern Valley with the consent of the vice principal and guidance counselor. Petitioner explained to administrators that S.S. would be more comfortable at Northern Valley;

7. On September 4, 2009, J.S., S.S.'s father, received a telephone call from the Northern Valley vice principal that advised that S.S. could not be re-admitted as a tuition student because the school could not meet her special education needs;

8. S.S. did not have an IEP at the close of the 2008/2009 SY at Northern Valley. Petitioner obtained a private IEP for S.S. and equipped her with two certified teachers who tutored her; one teacher was a special education teacher. In September 2009 S.S. was classified as eligible for special education classification. Northern Valley placed S.S. in collaborative classes;

9. On September 7, 2009, J.S. sent an e-mail to the vice principal and guidance counselor that informed Northern Valley that the family found a house in the district and would be moving to Closter on Thursday September 10. During the week of September 7 petitioner transported personal items to the Closter apartment. On September 14, 2009, D. Storicks Moving Company moved heavy furnishings and items belonging to petitioner and her daughter into the Closter apartment;

10. The Cresskill property, 15 Churchill Street, had been placed on the market during the summer of 2009 and a Contract For Sale was signed in August 2009. The Contract was renegotiated in September 2009, but ultimately was voided;

11. In anticipation of a sale of the Cresskill property in October 2009, petitioner signed a one-year lease commencing on September 7, 2009, for the apartment in Closter;

12. Only petitioner and her daughter moved into the Closter apartment. J.S. continued to reside in the Cresskill home;

13. On September 8, 2009, Northern Valley filed a registration form that listed S.S.'s new address as 120 High Street, Closter. The town of Closter, New Jersey is included in the Northern Valley School District;

14. On November 5, 2009, the chief school administrator for Northern Valley advised petitioner that S.S. was ineligible to attend the high school because she was not domiciled in the school district. The letter included a possible tuition assessment rate of $81.98 if S.S. was ineligible;

15. In June 2010 the Cresskill property was sold. In June petitioner purchased a house, in her name only, at 42 Stelfox Street, Demarest, New Jersey. Demarest is included in the Northern Valley School District. Since June 2010 petitioner and her daughter have resided in Demarest, New Jersey;

16. Petitioner's proofs of residency in Closter are a signed one-year house lease commencing on September 7, 2009, an auto driver's license issued on September 9, 2009, showing the Closter address, copies of the PSE&G monthly statements for September 2009 through January 2010 for the Closter, copies of Orange and Rockland Electric Bills Statements for September 2009 through January 2010 for Closter, copies of the United Water Company statements for October 2009 and January 2010 for Closter, Cablevision bills for December 2009 and January 2010 for Closter, copies of Lakeland Bank Checking Account Statements for October 2009 through January 2010 with the Closter address, and Renter's Insurance effective November 13, 2009, with the Closter address;

17. Petitioner's proofs of residency in Demarest are an Affidavit of Title and a Deed both dated July 13, 2010, for the Demarest property she purchased, and a Certificate of Residency to attest ownership and occupancy, including the fact that her husband does not reside with her;

18. Commencing in September 2009, petitioner's daughter lived with petitioner in Closter for three to seven days each week depending on a). when the daughter wanted to visit her father, b). when the father wanted to see his daughter, c). when the mother and daughter were visiting Florida, and d). when the mother and daughter were on vacation. Commencing in June 2010 petitioner's daughter moved with her mother to a house in Demarest;

19. The investigator went to Closter apartment on three or four occasions and never saw anyone. He went to the Cresskill home on six occasions and saw no sign of anyone being home, there were no cars in the driveway;

20. On September 23, 2009, the investigator found J.S. at the Cresskill home and spoke with him. S.S. was at the Cresskill home on Wednesday September 23 and she was ill and in bed upstairs while the investigator and J.S. conversed;

21. J.S. spoke to the investigator about the High Street apartment in Closter and said some furnishings had already been taken to the rental unit;

22. The investigator provided reports to Northern Valley that he had met with J.S. in September 2009 at the Cresskill home, that he saw S.S. with her mother and father at the Cresskill home on one occasion prior to June 1 and that on June 1, 2010, he saw S.S. leave the Cresskill property with her father who drove her to school;

23. The investigator saw names on the mail boxes of the Closter two-family house. One name was S.G., the mother of S.S. The investigator was unaware that petitioner used her maiden name, S.G., at times;

24. The investigator was never provided pictures of either S.G.S. or her daughter and did not know what they looked like;

25. The investigator did not record days, dates, or hours for his investigative reports.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

A student is eligible to attend a school free of charge if the student is domiciled within the school district. A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is living with a parent or legal guardian whose permanent home is located within the district. A home is permanent when the parent or guardian intends to return to it after being absent from the home and has no present intent of moving from the home, notwithstanding the existence of homes or residences elsewhere. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). Domicile may also be defined as a residence. N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1.

In accord with N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1)(i), where a student's parents are domiciled within different school districts, and where there is no court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance, the student's domicile is the school district with whom the student lives for the majority of the school year, regardless of which parent has legal custody.

Consideration in proving residency for purposes of establishing eligibility for school district placement is found at N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.4(a),

> (a) A district board of education shall accept a combination of any of the following or similar forms of documentation from persons attempting to demonstrate a student's eligibility for enrollment in the school district:
>
> 1. Property tax bills, deeds, contracts of sale, leases, mortgages, signed letters from landlords and other evidence of property ownership, tenancy or residency;
>
> 2. Voter registrations, licenses, permits, financial account information, utility bills, delivery receipts, and other evidence of personal attachment to a particular location;
>
> 4. Receipts, bills, cancelled checks, insurance claims or payments, and other evidence of expenditures demonstrating personal attachment to a particular location, or, where applicable, to support of the student;
>
> 6. Affidavits, certifications and sworn attestations pertaining to statutory criteria for school attendance, from the parent, guardian, person keeping an "affidavit student," adult student, person(s) with whom a family is living, or others as appropriate;
>
> and
> 8. Any other business record or document issued by a governmental entity.

> (b) A district board of education may accept forms of documentation not listed in (a) above, and shall not exclude from consideration any documentation or information presented by a person seeking to enroll a student.
> (c) Information and documentation offered by an applicant, and shall not deny enrollment based on failure to provide a particular form of documentation, or a particular subset of documents, without regard to other evidence presented.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) and N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a) sets forth the right of a student to a free public education, which in pertinent parts states:

> Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:
>
> a. Any person who is domiciled within the school district[.]
>
> . . .
> (a) A student over five and under 20 years of age pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, or such younger or older student as is otherwise entitled by law to free public education, is eligible to attend school in a school district if the student is domiciled within the district.

CONCLUSION

Based on all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that the weight of the evidence indicates that petitioner and her daughter were domiciled in Closter, New Jersey, during the 2009/2010 SY. There was never a time after petitioner moved from the Cresskill home on September 14, 2009, that respondent witnessed her and her daughters occupancy again in the Cresskill home. The presence of the mother, father, and daughter on one occasion outside of the Cresskil home and the one occasion on which S.S. stayed overnight with her father during an illness does not amount to residency in the Cresskill home. Therefore, on September 14, 2009, petitioner and her daughter established a permanent residence in Closter, New Jersey, until she purchased a home in Demarest, New Jersey in June 2010. The Closter apartment and the Demarest house are in the Northern Valley Regional High School District.

I also CONCLUDE that respondent's rebuttal of petitioners' evidence of being domiciled with her daughter, initially in the Borough of Closter, from September 2009 through July 2010, and thereafter in Demarest from July 2010 to the present, is not supported by the testimony and documentation. The fact that petitioner and respondent did not possible other witnesses has no impact on the other evidence that was presented and the final outcome of the case.

I finally CONCLUDE that since September 2009 petitioner has remained a resident of Closter and Demarest, New Jersey, and thus has been domiciled in the Northern Valley School District and therefore entitled to have her daughter enrolled at the Northern Valley Regional High School, without responsibility for tuition reimbursement.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the determination of the Northern Valley Regional High School Board of Education that S.S. was not domiciled in the school district for the 2009/2010 SY shall be REVERSED.

It is further ORDERED that the Northern Valley Regional High School Board of Education shall be not be entitled to tuition reimbursement from petitioner for the 2009/2010 school year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

ADELAIDE L. SANFORD CHARTER SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, an elementary school teacher formerly employed by respondent Adelaide L. Sanford Charter School, appealed the non-renewal of his employment contract. Petitioner asserted that he was not given written notice of his non-renewal on or before May 15, 2010, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, and was not provided with written reasons for his non-renewal as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner was timely served with notice of his non-renewal; while there appears to have been a technical procedural violation of the statute with respect to him being provided with written reasons for his non-renewal, such violation did not impact petitioner's ability to present his case to the Board at a hearing on July 13, 2010. Petitioner additionally failed to sustain his burden to prove that respondent's decision not to renew his contract was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ recommended dismissal of the petition.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner's exceptions essentially attempt to relitigate his case. In so doing, he 1) challenges the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that he was served with notice of his non-renewal on or before May 15, 2010 as required by statute, presenting a myriad of reasons he believes demonstrate that the testimony of the individual who claims to have delivered such notice was not believable, and 2) disagrees with the ALJ's discounting of the significance of the school's failure to provide a written statement of reasons for his non-renewal.

Upon full consideration, finding petitioner's exception arguments to be non-persuasive, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly and thoroughly presented in her decision – that petitioner was timely served with notice of his non-renewal (Initial Decision at 5-6)[1]; that any procedural violation with respect to the provision of written reasons for petitioner's non-renewal was cured (Initial Decision 6-7); and that petitioner has failed to sustain his burden of establishing that the Charter School's decision not to renew his teaching contract was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable (Initial Decision at 7-8).

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

[1] It is noted that the ALJ's determination of this issue was solely based upon her assessment of the credibility of the witnesses. The Commissioner's applicable standard of review in this regard is clear and unequivocal – he "may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent and credible evidence in the record." (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c)) A reasoned review of the ALJ's stated reasoning in this regard, with this governing standard in mind, does not provide a basis for concluding that her implicit credibility assessments and resultant fact finding were without the requisite level of support.

KEVIN GILBERT,

ADELAIDE L. SANFORD CHARTER SCHOOL,
ESSEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Kevin Gilbert, pro se

Dwayne D. Warren, Esq., for respondent (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein & Celso, attorneys)

Record Closed: December 22, 2010 Decided: January 19, 2011

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 30, 2010, Kevin Gilbert (petitioner) sent a letter to the Commissioner of Education appealing the non-renewal of his contract by the Adelaide L. Sanford Charter School (respondent). On July 1, 2010, the Department of Education (DOE) sent a letter to Mr. Gilbert asking him to supplement his appeal by providing certain necessary information. Upon his request, on July 13, 2010, Mr. Gilbert appeared before the Board of the Adelaide L. Sanford Charter School to informally present his case for renewal of his contract. The Board denied his request for renewal of his contract. On August 27, 2010, the matter was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law, and it was assigned to the undersigned on September 13, 2010. A pre-hearing conference was held on September 20, 2010, and a discovery schedule was arranged. The matter was scheduled to be heard on December 6 and 7, 2010. On November 18, 2010, Mr. Gilbert asked for an adjournment of the dates in order to seek counsel. The matter was rescheduled for December 21 and 22, 2010, and heard on those dates.

ISSUES

a. Was Mr. Gilbert served on or about May 15, 2010, notifying him that his contract was not going to be renewed?

b. Did the Board provide Mr. Gilbert with the reasons why his contract was not being renewed within the time provided?

c. Was the Board's decision not to renew Mr. Gilbert's contract arbitrary and capricious?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The petitioner was employed by the Adelaide L. Sanford Charter School for three years. He was a second-grade teacher for one year, and followed the students into the third grade the next year. This procedure is called looping a student with a teacher. It is supposed that the teacher's having the same students for two years will result in a "bounce" in the students' test scores. This did not occur with Mr. Gilbert's students.

In September of the 2009–2010 school year Mr. Gilbert's class was moved to the conference room. The lighting in the room was poor, the walls were leaking and there was trouble with the heat. Mr. Gilbert asked to have the class moved, but the class was not moved until February 2010.

During his second year of employment, Mr. Gilbert and another teacher worked with students on test preparation for the NJ ASK, which is a State-mandated test that is taken in the third and eighth grades. The first year he volunteered for the position. The second year he was paid for his services.

The students were also required by the school to take the TerraNova examination in May of each year. This test was not required by the State. The TerraNova assessment tests proficiency in the core curriculum. The test is designed to show how effective a teacher has been in the delivery of information and whether the students have been able to retain the information. Teachers were given sample tests and coaches were provided to help students prepare for the TerraNova examination. The results of this test were sent home to the parents. In the 2009–2010 school year Mr. Gilbert's class scored in the 31st percentile on the TerraNova test. The other third-grade class, whose teacher was new to the school, scored in the 51st percentile.

The teachers in the school were aware that if their students did not meet expectations on the standardized test, then their contracts might not be renewed. The Board was very focused on raising the students' standardized test scores. In addition, the school was up for renewal of its charter by the State Department of Education, and scores on standardized tests were an important factor in deciding whether a school would be recertified. In the past, DeLacy Davis, the school leader (principal), had discussed the importance of the standardized test results with Mr. Gilbert.

Mr. Davis signed the letter terminating Mr. Gilbert. However, he did not discuss the termination letter with the petitioner, nor did he handle the delivery of the letter. He had instructed the people who were to deliver the termination letters that delivery should not be done in school, since there had been incidents in the past when teachers had reacted badly to receiving the letters and it caused a disturbance in the school.

Deshon Tutt, who worked for Joseph Simpson Investigators, was assigned to serve termination letters to teachers at the Charter School. On May 15, 2010, at approximately 6:30 p.m., he delivered an envelope to 362 Bath Avenue, Long Branch, N.J., which was Mr. Gilbert's address. Prior to delivering the letter, he had checked with the landlord to make sure that Mr. Gilbert lived at that address and to find out his apartment number. Mr. Tutt went to the apartment, looked in the window and saw that the air conditioner was on. He knocked on the door, but no one answered. Mr. Tutt stuck the envelope on the side, near the bottom of the door. On May 21, 2010, he sent a memo to the attorney for the Board giving confirmation of service. In July he went back to the apartment to leave another envelope with a notice regarding a Board meeting.

Mr. Gilbert sent an "acceptance letter" to the school dated May 24, 2010, but which was actually delivered on May 18, 2010. In it he stated that since the school had "failed to give me notice of renewal or non-renewal on or before May 15, I hereby accept employment for the 2010–2011 school year. This request is in accordance with state laws (N.J.S.A. 18A:27-11 and 12)."

When Mr. Gilbert appeared at the Donaldson hearing in July 2010, along with his prior evaluations he brought documents that critiqued the TerraNova standardized tests. Mr. Gilbert's prior evaluations were generally positive, though there were a number of areas in which he was told he needed improvement.

LEGAL ARGUMENT AND ANALYSIS

N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, Written offer or notice to nontenure teachers, states:

> On or before May 15 in each year, each nontenured teaching staff member continuously employed by a board of education since the preceding September 30 shall receive either > > a. A written offer of a contract for employment from the board of education for the next succeeding year providing for at least the same terms and conditions of employment but with such increases in salary as may be required by law or policies of the board of education, or > b. A written notice from the chief school administrator that such employment will not be offered.

Mr. Gilbert claimed that he was not given notice of the non-renewal of his contract by May 15, 2010, as required, and that the Charter School had not provided sufficient documentation that the termination letter was delivered in a timely manner. Since the Charter School had not terminated him by May 15, he had the right on May 24, 2010, to send a letter to the school accepting employment for the 2010–2011 school year. Mr. Gilbert also argued that the fact that he was allowed to stay on teaching until the close of the school year, even though the termination letter stated that his services ended on June 1, 2010, was proof that he had not been properly terminated. The Charter School asserted that it had given notice to Mr. Gilbert on May 15, 2010, via personal service, and therefore had conformed to the notice requirement of the statute.

There was testimony from Mr. Tutt that, at the instance of the attorney for the Charter School, he delivered an envelope to Mr. Gilbert's apartment on May 15, 2010. He described the apartment complex in detail, the time when he was at the apartment, and the location where he left the envelope. Mr. Gilbert claims that he did not receive the notice until May 18, 2010, which would have been past the May 15 deadline under the statute. The issue of whether the notice of termination was timely served depends upon the credibility of the testimony of Mr. Tutt and Mr. Gilbert. Determinations often turn on credibility. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to the testimony of a witness. The process of evaluating the credibility of witnesses entails: (a) observing demeanor; (b) evaluating the ability to recall specific details; (c) considering the consistency of the testimony under direct and cross-examination; (d) determining the significance of any inconsistent statements or evidence; and (e) otherwise developing a sense of the witness's candor. This requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. See Carbo v. U.S., 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963), cert. denied sub. nom, Palermo v. United States, 377 U.S. 953, 84 S. Ct. 1625, 12 L. Ed. 2d 498 (1964).

In evaluating the weight, trustworthiness and reliability of the evidence, factors such as motive, bias, confirming witnesses or statements, corroborative evidence, and common sense must be considered. Frequently, the trier of fact relies on the innate sense of whether the testimony has the ring of truth. In this case I found Mr. Tutt to be a credible witness. He had good recollection of the circumstances surrounding the service of the notice. He gave a good physical description of the apartment complex and described where he left the notice. He also described the location where he telephoned the landlord to find out the location of Mr. Gilbert's apartment. He did not appear to have any bias against Mr. Gilbert; it was purely a business matter and he did not appear to have any motive to present a false statement. Therefore, I FIND that personal service was attempted on Mr. Gilbert on May 15, 2010, as per the requirements of the statute.

Mr. Gilbert also claimed that he was not given written reasons for his termination. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 states:

> Any teaching staff member receiving notice that a teaching contract for the succeeding school year will not be offered may, within 15 days thereafter, request in writing a statement of the reasons for such nonemployment which shall be given to the teaching staff member in writing within 30 days after the receipt of such request.

The District did not present proof that it had provided written notice to Mr. Gilbert of its reason for non-renewal. However, it asserted that the reasons were known to the petitioner prior to his appearing at the Donaldson hearing on July 13, 2010. Mr. Gilbert did admit on cross-examination that at the Donaldson hearing he brought information to refute the value of the TerraNova testing. He stated that he brought this along with other information regarding his teaching abilities. The purpose of the written-notice requirement is to allow the teacher to know, prior to the hearing, the basis for his non-renewal. In that way he can prepare his case to be presented to the Board. While it appears that there was a technical procedural violation of the statute, it does not seem that this violation impacted Mr. Gilbert's ability to present his case to the Board. In addition, any procedural deficiencies were cured when the petitioner was given a de novo hearing at the Office of Administrative Law.

The petitioner also asserted that the reasons eventually given for his non-renewal were flimsy and based on an arbitrary standard, i.e., his students' test scores on the TerraNova examination, rather than his overall teaching performance. He pointed to evaluations that he had received from his supervisors, which were generally positive. He also testified that in a competition among seven charter schools, the third graders in his school[1] won second place. He asserted that if a standardized test was to be used to judge his performance, it should have been the NJ ASK test, which is State mandated, rather than the TerraNova test, which is not required by the State. He also claimed that he was not given the proper supplies to help him perform his duties successfully.

The school argued that the school leader's decision to terminate Mr. Gilbert was based on the students' achievement, which was not up to the standards of the school. Mr. Gilbert's students received the lowest score on the TerraNova examination of the two third-grade classes, and the scores were in the 31st percentile. The school pointed out that Mr. Gilbert had not presented any testimony to show that there were deficiencies in the scoring on the TerraNova testing. In addition, he had not shown that the school's decision to use the results of the test as the standard to decide whether to renew his contract was arbitrary or capricious.

The Commissioner has held that "[i]t is by now axiomatic that a board has virtually unlimited discretion in hiring or renewing non-tenured teaching staff members." Adams v. Trenton Bd. of Educ., EDU 8237-07, Comm'r (August 13, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>. "[A]bsent constitutional constraints or legislation affecting the tenure rights of teachers, local boards of education have an almost complete right to terminate the services of a teacher who has no tenure and is regarded as undesirable by the local board." Dore v. Bedminster Twp. Bd. of Educ., 185 N.J. Super. 447, 456 (App. Div. 1982). The Supreme Court, in Donaldson v. Board of Education of North Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236 (1974), pointed out that the discretionary authority of the school board was not unlimited. Quoting from the Commissioner's decision in Ruch v. Board of Education of the Greater Egg Harbor Regional High School District, Atlantic County, 1968 S.L.D. 7, the Supreme Court stated that "the board's discretionary authority was not unlimited and that its action could be set aside if it was 'arbitrary, unreasonable, capricious or otherwise improper.'" A board could not resort to discriminatory practices or adopt practices "'based on frivolous, capricious, or arbitrary considerations which have no relationship to the purpose to be served. 1968 S.L.D. at 10.'" Donaldson, supra, 65 N.J. at 247. The teacher had the burden of proof and bare allegations of arbitrariness were not sufficient.

[1] He was teaching third grade at the time.

There was a rational basis for the Charter School's decision not to renew Mr. Gilbert's contract, which was his students' poor performance on the TerraNova examination. While the school could have used another standard, such as supervisors' evaluations, to decide on renewal, I cannot say that the standard used by the Charter School was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

CONCLUSION

Based on the testimony and exhibits presented and having reviewed the legal arguments, I CONCLUDE that the Charter School's decision to not renew the petitioner's contract was neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable.

Further, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner was served in a timely manner as per the statute, and that any procedural violations of the written-notice requirement were cured.

ORDER

It is therefore ORDERED that the petitioner's prayer for relief be dismissed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." IN THE MATTER OF J. GARFIELD JACKSON, JR., EAST ORANGE BOARD OF EDUCATION, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The School Ethics Commission determined that East Orange Board of Education member J. Garfield Jackson violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(d), (e) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members when he took private action in unilaterally proposing to the district administration that he develop a student-level database, without consulting with the Board. After considering the nature of the charge, the Commission recommended that the Commissioner of Education impose a penalty of censure.

Upon a thorough review of the record, the Commissioner found that even if the respondent's action constituted a violation, it was fully supported by the superintendent, was well intentioned and designed to benefit the District. Accordingly, the Commissioner found that respondent's conduct does not warrant the imposition of a penalty.

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission – finding that respondent violated the School Ethics Act for unilaterally proposing to the administration that he develop a student-level database, without consulting the Board – have been reviewed. The Commission's decision was forwarded pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 for the Commissioner's final determination on the recommended penalty. Respondent did not file exceptions, nor was the Commission's underlying finding of violation appealed to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4.

Notwithstanding the Commission's finding of a violation of the School Ethics Act, which the Commissioner is not empowered to review, the Commissioner finds that even if the respondent's development of a student database without the Board's approval was a violation, the respondent's effort to assist the District in correlating curriculum with standardized test results was fully supported by the superintendent, was well intentioned and designed to benefit the District. BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 24, 2011, R.J.M., Jr. (petitioner) filed a due process petition with the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, seeking expungement from his record of a one-day out-of-school suspension imposed on him; immediate reinstatement to the school's hockey team; and permanent and immediate removal from his school record of all disciplinary actions relative to the "swirly" incident.[1]

Petitioner also filed a request for emergent relief, seeking immediate return to the varsity hockey team pending resolution of the due process petition.

The Board of Education of the Hunterdon Central Regional High School, County of Hunterdon, (respondent) opposed the request for emergent relief, contending that petitioner failed to satisfy the requirements for such relief. It also alleged that petitioner's due process rights were not violated; that discipline was properly imposed by the school; that the petition should be dismissed; that judgment should be entered in respondent's favor; and that counsel fees and costs should be awarded to it.

The petition and the request for emergent relief for reinstatement to the hockey team were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 27, 2011, for determination as a contested case. The parties were advised that the emergent matter would be heard at the OAL on February 1, 2011.

At a telephone conference on January 31, 2011, petitioner advised that he had also filed a Verified Complaint and Order to Show Cause in the Superior Court, Law Division, Hunterdon County, under Docket No. L-49-11, which was scheduled to be heard on February 2, 2011, before the Honorable Peter A. Buchsbaum, J.S.C. Due to the matter pending in the Superior Court, the petition for emergent relief was rescheduled to the afternoon of February 4, 2011.[2]

On the morning of February 4, 2011, the Order to Show Cause was heard in the Superior Court. That afternoon, the parties appeared at the OAL and provided a copy of the order entered by Judge Buchsbaum denying plaintiff's (petitioner's) request for temporary restraints and immediate reinstatement to the hockey team. The other claims set forth in petitioner's Verified Complaint remain pending in the Superior Court.

[1] The gravamen of the underlying discipline concerned an incident involving three hockey players who gave another teammate a "swirly" [sticking the head in the toilet bowl and flushing] for violating a "team pact" to not cut their hair for a certain number of games, in which it is alleged that the petitioner, although not a direct participant, incited the others to action.

[2] The adjournment in the OAL was due to the postponement of the Order to Show Cause in the Superior Court to the morning of February 4, 2011, and to accommodate counsel's trial calendar.

At the OAL hearing, respondent argued that the matter should be dismissed because, although the Commissioner of Education has primary jurisdiction, it is not the sole jurisdiction, and having chosen to proceed in Superior Court, petitioner was barred from re-litigating the same issue in the OAL. Petitioner argued that Judge Buchsbaum stated that he did not have primary jurisdiction but that the Commissioner and the OAL did, although the Commissioner's and the OAL's jurisdiction was not sole and exclusive. Therefore, the issue was not precluded from being heard in this forum.[3] Counsel also argued the matter on the merits.

ISSUE

Is this matter properly before the OAL (and the Commissioner of Education) when the Superior Court has chosen to exercise its jurisdiction over the issues presented on emergent relief?

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Generally, an election to pursue either the judicial or the administrative remedy where jurisdiction is concurrent will ordinarily bar subsequent pursuit of the alternate remedy. See Hermann v. Fairleigh Dickenson Univ., 183 N.J. Super. 500 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 91 N.J. (1982); Aldrich v. Manpower Temp. Servs., 277 N.J. Super. 500 (App. Div. 1994), certif. denied, 139 N.J. 442 (1995); M.E.F. v A.B.F., 393 N.J. Super. 543, 557–59 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 192 N.J. 479 (2007). If the agency does not have exclusive jurisdiction, and a party chooses to litigate the matter in court, the party will not be allowed to later assert that the trial court should have transferred the administrative matters to the agency. Allstate Ins. v. Orthopedic Evaluations, 300 N.J. Super. 510, 517–19 (App. Div.), certif. granted and summarily remanded, 151 N.J. 67 (1997).

[3] Due to the emergent nature of the proceedings, no transcript of the Superior Court proceedings was provided.

The recent unpublished decision in P.P., a Minor, by his Parent and Guardian, A.S. v. Board of Education of the Pinelands Regional School District, No. A-2683-09T2 (N.J. App. Div. January 11, 2011) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/search.shtml>, involved the appeal from school disciplinary action commenced as an action in lieu of prerogative writs in the Superior Court. The Law Division dismissed the first count (alleging that the Board's actions exceeded its authority under governing statutes and regulations) as time-barred, as it was filed more than forty-five days beyond the time limit set forth in R. 4:69-6, and dismissed the second count (alleging a violation of the student's procedural due process rights) without prejudice, and transferred it to the Commissioner of Education, concluding that it had primary jurisdiction. The Commissioner (after a hearing in the OAL) then dismissed Count Two as also being time-barred under the rules. On appeal, the Appellate Division reversed as to the second count and remanded that issue to the Law Division so that the plaintiff's due process claim could be litigated.

The court noted:

> Our Legislature has enacted on extensive scheme for enforcement of our public education laws. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 provides that "[t]he commissioner shall have jurisdiction to hear and determine . . . all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws . . . ." Chapter 37 of Title 18A, in turn, provides a comprehensive scheme for the discipline of children attending public schools. This includes a non-exhaustive list of the grounds for suspending or expelling a student, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2; procedures for discipline involving assaultive conduct by a student, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-2.1 to -2.5; procedures for the immediate suspension of a student, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-4; procedures for disciplinary action against students found with firearms, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-7 to -12; and procedures for disciplinary action based upon "bullying," N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13-15.
>
> The Commissioner, in turn, has adopted numerous regulations implementing the statutory scheme. See N.J.A.C. 6A:16-1.1 to -7.10. . . .
> We have noted "our institutional respect for the Department's subject matter interest and for the Commissioner's first-instance jurisdiction 'to hear and > determine . . . all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws[.]'" Archway Programs, Inc. v. Pemberton Twp. Bd. of Educ., 352 N.J. Super. 420, 424 (App. Div. 2002) (quoting N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9). "The Commissioner's authority is plenary." Ibid. (citing Abbott v. Burke (I), 100 N.J. 269, 301 (1985)).

> Rule 4:69-5 provides that "[e]xcept where it is manifest that the interest of justice requires otherwise, actions under R. 4:69 shall not be maintainable as long as there is available a right of review before an administrative agency which has not been exhausted." Had plaintiff properly raised a challenge to his suspension via a timely administrative appeal, the Commissioner's decision would have been directly reviewable by this court based upon a full agency record. R. 2:2-3(a)(2). As plaintiff chose not to do so, we will not now intervene. We affirm the dismissal of Count One of plaintiff's complaint.

The Appellate Division recognized that when a plaintiff chooses to seek relief in the Superior Court, he is bound to that election. In P.P., the result was that the plaintiff's first count was dismissed in its entirety. Rather than having a full hearing with the Commissioner of Education, he had opted for the remedies available in the Superior Court.

As to the second count, alleging due process claims, the Appellate Division remanded the matter to the Law Division, finding that the judge's invocation of primary jurisdiction in the agency and referral to the Commissioner was not inappropriate.

> "Under the doctrine of primary jurisdiction, when enforcement of a claim requires resolution of an issue within the special competence of an administrative agency, a court may defer to a decision of that agency." Campione v. Adamar, Inc., 155 N.J. 245, 263 (1998) (citations omitted). "Thus, it may be appropriate, in order to avoid piecemeal adjudication or duplicative, anomalous or contradictory results, for a court to defer in its jurisdictional exercise, even if only temporarily, while the administrative agency with the primary interest sorts out the issues and the claims." Archway Programs, Inc., supra, 352 N.J. Super. at 425 (citations omitted).

> The doctrine of primary jurisdiction is designed to foster "the resolution of technical questions of facts through the agency's specialized expertise, prior to judicial consideration of the legal claims." Unalachtigo Band of the Nanticoke-Lenni Lenape Nation v. State, 375 N.J. Super. 330, 345–46 (App. Div.) (citations and quotations omitted), certif. denied, 184 N.J. 210 (2005). The Law Division judge reasonably and undoubtedly believed that he would benefit from the development of a full factual record before the Commissioner. Of course, for the reasons stated, he was denied that opportunity. In any event, we cannot conclude that the Law Division judge mistakenly exercised his discretion in referring the matter to the Commissioner. See Alliance for Disabled In Action, Inc. v. Cont'l Props., 371 N.J. Super. 398, 408 (App. Div. 2004) (noting the trial judge's decision to invoke the doctrine of primary jurisdiction is subject to review under an abuse of discretion standard), aff'd, 185 N.J. 331 (2005).
> However, under the doctrine of primary jurisdiction, the court is not divested of its jurisdiction ultimately to decide the legal claims plaintiff has raised based, in theory, upon the agency fact-finding. Boss v. Rockland Elec. Co., 95 N.J. 33, 42 (1983). By dismissing Count Two of the complaint without prejudice, it would appear that the Law Division judge anticipated that the legal issues might ultimately need to be resolved in court.

Because the plaintiff in P.P. never had the opportunity to present his claim that the Board's policy violated constitutional guarantees, Count Two was reinstated in the Law Division.

Issue preclusion (also considered to be collateral estoppel) "bars relitigation of any issue which was actually determined in a prior action, generally between the same parties, involving a different claim or cause of action." State v. Gonzalez, 75 N.J. 181, 186 (1977). The four requirements of collateral estoppel are: (1) the identical issue was decided in a prior adjudication; (2) there was a final judgment on the merits; (3) the party against whom the bar is asserted was a party or in privity with a party to the prior adjudication; and (4) the party against whom the bar is asserted had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue. Bd. of Trs. of Trucking Employees of North Jersey Welfare Fund, Inc. v. Centra, 983 F.2d 495, 505 (3d Cir. 1992). Issue preclusion prevents a litigant from contesting an issue that was already decided in a different case or controversy and that may or may not involve the same parties to the previous action.

In this request for emergent relief, all four elements are present. The parties are the same; the issue in dispute is the same; the petitioner had the full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue; and there was a decision in the Superior Court as to the emergent relief sought.

Additionally, this forum does not have authority to change the ruling made by Judge Buchsbaum. Any arguments as to jurisdiction, fairness, and applicability of that Order must be made to the Superior Court. To do otherwise could result in inconsistent decisions: if an independent finding were made in this forum that the petitioner was entitled to reinstatement to the varsity hockey team, then the parties would be left with a Superior Court decision denying such relief, and an administrative law decision granting such relief.[4] Such an inconsistency is precisely what the Court Rules try to avoid: once a forum is selected, the parties are bound by that forum's decision. To do otherwise would encourage forum shopping.

Had Judge Buchsbaum dismissed the Order to Show Cause rather than hearing it on its merits, then this forum would have jurisdiction. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner, having chosen to assert his right to be heard on the emergent matter in Superior Court and having proceeded to a decision in that court, is precluded from relitigating this issue in this forum.

[4] Having determined that this forum is without jurisdiction to hear the emergent application, no decision has been rendered on its merits.

It is ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergent relief is DISMISSED. This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a grounds and maintenance employee of the District since 1999, contends that the Board violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 when it docked him for nine vacation days during a period of time when he was out of work and receiving worker's compensation during the 2009-2010 school year. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the facts in this matter are not in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1(b) provides that leave taken by an employee because of a work-related injury shall constitute satisfactory service; petitioner's reliance on Fabrizio v. Board of Education of Farmingdale, EDU 10050-99, Initial Decision (January 9, 2001) is well founded in this case; respondent's action in docking the petitioner for vacation time against his entitlement for the subsequent year has the same effect as assessing an employee vacation time while being out on work-related leave, and is violative of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioner is entitled to his full allotment of vacation time for the 2009-2010 school year and must be credited with the nine days of vacation that he was docked.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions of the Board and petitioner's reply thereto – filed in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein.

The Board's exceptions merely recast and reiterate its arguments advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. As all of these were fully considered and addressed by the ALJ in her Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in her decision – that that the action of the Board in refusing to credit petitioner with his full complement of vacation days during the 2009-2010 school year was violative of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, necessitating that these vacation days be restored and credited to his future vacation entitlement.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. The Board is hereby directed to immediately restore the nine vacation days impermissibly withheld from petitioner for the 2009-2010 school year.

RANCOCAS VALLEY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Record Closed: December 8, 2010 Decided: January 25, 2011

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Gary D. Gray seeks a determination from the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) that respondent Rancocas Valley Regional High School Board of Education violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 and that it must provide him with nine vacation days that the respondent docked him during the 2009-2010 school year.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 9, 2009, petitioner filed this petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking an Order that he be returned nine vacation days that the respondent docked him. On November 24, 2009, respondent filed an Answer. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on December 14, 2009, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 for determination as a contested case. Over the course of several status conferences counsel discussed whether there would be a hearing or cross motions for summary decision. Once it was determined that counsel would file cross motions of summary judgment, a schedule was set for briefing. The last reply brief was received on December 8, 2010. The record closed on that date.

STIPULATIONS OF FACT

1. The Board is a body corporate and politic of the State of New Jersey empowered by law to administer the Rancocas Valley Regional High School District.

2. The petitioner began his employment with the Board as a grounds/maintenance person since in or about July 1999, working twelve months a year, and has been employed continuously since then. The school year for a twelve month employee is from July 1 to June 30 of each year.

3. On or about December 2, 2008, petitioner injured his right shoulder during the course of his employment with the Board as a grounds/maintenance person when he slipped and fell going down a flight of steps. On or about January 22, 2009, petitioner incurred another injury to that same shoulder while on the job working for the Board, doing demolition work inside of a school building.

4. The injuries to petitioner's right shoulder were found to be compensable under the workers' compensation law. Petitioner was held out of work on account of those injuries by the workers' compensation doctor with whom he was designated to treat on December 4 and 5, 2008 for the first injury, and for the second injury from on or about January 23, 2009 through July 5, 2009. Petitioner was authorized and did return to work on July 6, 2009. During the time petitioner was held out of work, he received full salary benefits pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. The Board was reimbursed for the payment of full salary benefits to petitioner during this time period through its insurance.

5. During the time petitioner was held out of work by the workers' compensation doctor, the medical records show that he treated with the doctor, underwent surgery to his right shoulder and attended physical therapy.

6. For the 2009-2010 school year, petitioner was entitled to fifteen vacation days under Article XXI of the collectively negotiated agreement between the Board and the Rancocas Valley Regional High School Education Association (Exhibit "A" annexed to counsels' Stipulations of Fact).

7. On or about August 14, 2009, petitioner received his payroll statement and noticed that the Board was not crediting him with fifteen vacation days for the 2009-2010 school year. When petitioner questioned this, he was informed, in or about the first week of school in September 2009, that because he was out of work receiving workers' compensation benefits from January 23, 2009 through July 5, 2009, he did not accrue any vacation time for the 2009-2010 school year during that period. Petitioner was informed that he would receive a reduced complement of vacation days for the 2009-2010 school year based on the time that he was actually on the job during the 2008-2009 school year. The superintendent confirmed this by letter dated October 15, 2009 (Exhibit "B" annexed).

8. The petitioner was charged nine days against the fifteen day 2009-2010 vacation day entitlement, leaving him with six vacation days for the 2009-2010 school year. This was based on the calculation that since he only worked five out of twelve months, this was the equivalent of 42% of the school year and 42% of the school year times the fifteen day vacation day entitlement is 6.3 rounded to six days. Thus, petitioner received six vacation days for the 2009-2010 school year. His annual sick leave entitlement and personal day entitlement were not impacted.

9. While petitioner maintains he should not have been charged any vacation time, he calculates based on a 260 day work year, he actually worked approximately seven out of twelve months, and that this is the equivalent of 52.11% of the school year. Petitioner disagrees with the Board's calculation set forth in Paragraph Eight above.

10. S.K. is an employee of the Board who suffered two on-the-job work-related injuries. He was out of work and received full salary benefits pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 for those two injuries from December 6, 2005 to February 10, 2006 and from September 10, 2007 to November 30, 2007, respectively. Upon his return to work on both occasions and effective the succeeding school years, he was not docked any vacation days as a result of being out of work due to workers' compensation leave.

11. J.N. is an employee of the board who suffered two on-the-job work-related injuries. He was out of work and received full salary benefits pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 for those injuries from October 21, 2005 to November 11, 2005 and from November 27, 2007 to December 31, 2007, respectively. Upon his return to work on both occasions and effective the succeeding school years, he was not docked any vacation days as a result of being out of work due to workers' compensation leave.

12. T.E. is an employee of the Board who suffered an on-the-job work injury and was out of work during the 2007-2008 school year from October 10, 2007 until June 30, 2008 and the 2008-2009 school year, from July 1, 2008 to March 5, 2009. From October 10, 2007 to October 9, 2008, she received full salary benefits pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 and fully salary from October 10, 2008 to March 5, 2009. T.E. was not docked vacation days for the 2008-2009 school year as a result of being out of work due to workers' compensation leave during the 2007-2008 school year. As a result of being out of work due to workers' compensation leave during the 2008-2009 school year, for the 2009-2010 school year the Board changed the procedure for calculating vacation days and she was docked for a total of seven vacation days using the same formula utilized involving the petitioner.

13. The petitioner suffered a work injury while employed by the Board in or about the early part of 2006, and was out of work and received full salary benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 from May 2006 to July 17, 2006 covering parts of both the 2005-2006 and 2006-2007 school years. Upon his return to work and effective the succeeding school years, he was not docked any vacation days as a result of being out of work due to workers' compensation leave.

14. The action taken to reduce petitioner's vacation day entitlement for the 2009-2010 school year was due to his absences resulting from his on-the-job work injuries on December 4 and 5, 2008 and from January 23, 2009 to June 30, 2009.

15. A grievance filed by the Rancocas Valley Regional High School District Education Association on behalf of the petitioner with respect to this matter has been held in abeyance pending a determination by the Commissioner of Education of the within Petition of Appeal (Exhibit "C" annexed).

16. A Verified Petitioner of Appeal was filed on behalf of the petitioner on November 9, 2009 with the Commissioner of Education.

17. An Answer to the Verified Petition of Appeal on behalf of the Board was sent to the Commissioner's office and filed by way of letter dated November 24, 2009.

18. There is no dispute as to timeliness of the Petition of Appeal or Answer.

19. The parties agree that this Stipulation may be signed in counterparts and that facsimiles of signatures will have the same force and effect as original signatures.

LEGAL ISSUES

1. Whether this matter can be decided on Summary Decision.

2. Whether the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, when it docked petitioner nine vacation days.

3. Whether respondent should be ordered to restore petitioner's vacation days.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

1. Can the case be decided by summary decision?

Pursuant to the rules governing practice in the Office of Administrative Law, a motion for summary decision may be granted, if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. This provision mirrors the language of Rule 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant Summary Decision should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits, which may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of American, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a Motion for Summary Judgment.

> The determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the Motion Judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party... are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

The parties have stipulated to all of the relevant and material facts in the case. Therefore, based on the Briefs and Affidavits presented by the parties, I FIND that there is no genuine issue of material fact and CONCLUDE that the case can be decided on Motion for Summary Decision.

2. Whether the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, when it docked him nine vacation days.

As set forth above, petitioner contends that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 when it refused to give him his full complement of vacation days for the 2009-2010 school year while he was recuperating from his work injuries and receiving full salary and benefits. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 ensures that an employee receives full salary during an absence caused by an accident that arose in the course of his employment without being charged sick leave. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1(b) provides:

> Leave taken by an employee pursuant to subsection a. of this section shall constitute satisfactory service as provided pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 and any other provision, statutory or contractual, relating to employment, adjustment or other increments and shall not constitute inefficiency or other good cause for the withholding of an employment or adjustment increment.

Petitioner argues that the law's mandate that leave taken pursuant to it "shall constitute satisfactory service..." means that an employee who sustains a work-related injury and who is absent receiving full salary benefits for the one-year period is not to be penalized in any way for those absences. He quotes the Statement accompanying the enactment of N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, which sets forth, "This bill will assure that employees are not penalized in any manner for taking sick leave as a result of work-related accidents." In contrast, respondent argues that there is no reference to vacation time in the statute, only sick leave, employment, adjustments and increments. Respondent recognizes that it cannot reduce petitioner's salary, entitlement to sick leave or withhold his increment, as a result of his work related absence. However, it argues this does not preclude respondent from adjusting his vacation days; and therefore, in keeping with the rules of statutory construction, the agency should not, "under the guise of interpretation, extend a statute to give it a greater effect than its language permits." GE Solid State, Inc. v. Director, Division of Taxation, 132 N.J. 298, 306 (1993).

The parties disagree over the applicability of Fabrizio v. Bd. of Educ. of Farmingdale, EDU 10050-99 Initial Decision (January 9, 2001) adopted, Commissioner of Education (February 26, 2001) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html. In that case, Fabrizio sought the return of sick and vacation time after a worker's compensation judge determined that her work injuries were compensable. Fabrizio appealed the Board's refusal to restore sick and vacation time after the worker's compensation judge ruled in her favor. Judge Duncan held that, "[R]espondent may not treat petitioner differently from any other employee who was in a full-pay status during the year" and therefore, "respondent may not charge petitioner with the use of sick days or vacation time because of her absence from work." Respondent argues that reliance on Fabrizio is misplaced however, because Fabrizio had actually earned sick and vacation days, which were later assessed against her during the work-related leave. In the present case, respondent contends, petitioner was assessed earned vacation time, but rather, due to his absence during the 2008-2009 school year, he did not earn his full complement of sick days for the 2009-2010 school year at the outset. Respondent's argument fails to take into account that the practical effect of the Board's action is the same, which is to deny an employee who was in full-pay status during the year the full carryover that all other employees received for the 2009-2010 year. Petitioner received benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 during the two days in December 2008 and for the period from January 23, 2009 through July 5, 2009. To dock petitioner vacation time against his entitlement for the subsequent school year has the same effect as assessing an employee vacation time while being out on work related leave. It is a penalty that the law was designed to prevent.

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 when it declined to give petitioner his full allotment of vacation days for 2009-2010.

3. Whether respondent must restore petitioner's vacation days.

During the time that petitioner was absent from work receiving worker's compensation benefits pursuant to the statute, his time constituted satisfactory service. The statement accompanying the enactment of the law makes it clear that petitioner is to receive no less than any employee that was able to work during that time. He was therefore entitled to the same vacation time during this period just as any employee in full-pay status would have been entitled. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1, petitioner was entitled to his full allotment of vacation time for the 2009-2010 school year and must be credited with the nine days of vacation time that he was docked.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that the petitioner's request for reinstatement of nine days of vacation time for the 2009-2010 school year is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The petitioning Boards of Education send their high school students to Millville High School, and challenged the process in which the respondent calculated tuition for the 2006-2007 school year. They allege that improper methodology used in the calculations resulted in an overcharge of $1,543 per student. Petitioners also sought an order declaring N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7 invalid. All parties filed motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there is no dispute that, although respondent first estimated the tuition using the "A-41" method – which resulted in a higher per pupil tuition cost of $6,147– a settlement was later reached with the respondent using an actual cost per student of $4,657, and petitioners received tuition credits to reflect the difference; therefore nothing further may be awarded to petitioners, and the issue is moot; and there is no jurisdiction to hear petitioners' challenge of the validity of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7. Accordingly, the ALJ denied the petitioners' motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision for the reasons set forth therein.

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter arises from a dispute between petitioners Maurice River Township Board of Education, Commercial Township Board of Education, Lawrence Township Board of Education, and Woodbine Board of Education (petitioners), who send their high school students to Millville High School, and the Millville Board of Education (respondent). Petitioners are challenging the process in which the respondent calculated tuition for the 2006-2007 school year. They also seek an order declaring N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7 invalid.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 1, 2009, the petitioners filed a Verified Petition with the Commissioner of the Department of Education (Department). On April 15, 2010, the respondent filed an Answer to Petition. On May 11, 2009, the case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law where it was filed as a contested case.

On March 25, 2010, the petitioners filed a motion for summary decision. On April 5, 2010, the Department filed a motion for summary decision. On May 25, 2010, respondent filed a cross-motion for summary decision. On August 12, 2010, oral argument was held. The parties requested additional time to resolve one remaining issue. Several conference calls were held to address this issue. On January 20, 2011, a conference call was held and it was indicated that this decision would resolve all outstanding issues. Petitioner agreed to resolve any outstanding issues remaining in Count Two of the Petition.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The sending districts (petitioners) allege that respondent improperly changed its tuition calculation method under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-17.1 (formerly N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1) by using what is known as the "software method" to calculate a tentative tuition rate of $6,200 per student for the sending districts for the 2006-2007 school year and the "A41 method" to calculate an actual tuition rate of $6,147 for that year. The petitioners contend that this methodology change was improper and resulted in an overcharge of $1,543 per student, as the actual tuition charge should have been $4,657 if the respondent had used the "software method" to calculate the actual tuition rate. As a result, petitioners seek the respondents to credit them for the tuition overpayments. Petitioners further allege that the respondents have failed to give tuition credits.

Bruce Kell, the business administrator for the respondent, described the process for tuition calculation. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1, he used the A-41 method to calculate an estimated tuition of $6,200 per student for the 2006-2007 school year. The software method was not used. Petitioners paid this estimated sum pending the State certifying the actual tuition due. If the respondent had used the software method, the tuition cost per student would have $4,657 per student.

Three years later, respondent determined the actual cost per student to be $6,174 for the 2006-2007 school year. The respondent agreed to charge the sending districts an actual cost per student of $4,657 for the 2006-2007 school year (R-1). On July 14, 2009, the petitioners received tuition credits to reflect the difference between the tentative tuition of $6,200 that the sending districts paid and the actual tuition charge of $4,657 (R-2).

Respondents no longer receive parity aid or its equivalent under the School Funding Reform Act (SFRA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63 funding formula (R-1). Petitioners argue that they have not received any additional aid from the State of New Jersey which would remedy the short fall from the phase out of parity aid.

There is no evidence that respondents receive any parity aid or its equivalent under the SFRA, and there is no support for the proposition that the petitioners are entitled to some sort of credit based on any aid respondents do receive from the State under the SFRA. The petitioners argue that they have not received any additional aid from the State of New Jersey which would remedy the short fall from the phase out of parity aid.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The facts involving this motion are not in dispute. Therefore, this matter is ripe for a determination as to the motion to dismiss.

The School Funding Reform Act (SFRA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-43 to -63, is the most recent legislative effort to provide New Jersey's school children with a thorough and efficient education. In Abbott v. Burke, 199 N.J. 140, 175 (2009) (Abbott XX), the Supreme Court held that the SFRA is constitutional under the thorough and efficient clause of the State constitution and relieved the State from the Court's prior remedial orders regarding the provision of parity aid and supplemental funding for disadvantaged Abbott districts so that the State may apply one funding formula to all school districts under the SFRA.

The Commissioner of Education is tasked with promulgating rules and regulations necessary to effectuate the provisions of the SFRA. N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-34. Pursuant to those rules, a receiving school district shall phase-out over four years the reduction of the actual cost per pupil by the amount of Abbott Parity Remedy Aid, Education Opportunity Aid and Discretionary Educational Opportunity Aid received in the 2007-2008 school year. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7.

The first issue to be determined is whether the Office of Administrative Law has the jurisdiction to determine the validity of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7.

There are several cases in which an ALJ and the Commissioner have found that an ALJ does not have jurisdiction over a challenge regarding the validity of an education regulation. For example, in Jersey City Adm'rs and Supervisors Assoc. v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of the City of Jersey City, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 150, the ALJ and the Commissioner found that petitioners challenged the validity of former N.J.A.C.

6:7-2.1 and 2.2. According to the Commissioner, any challenge to the "standards embodied in the regulatory scheme promulgated for State-operated school districts . . . lies with the Appellate Division of the Superior Court, not with this forum." (Id. at 13).

Similarly, in Elizabeth Bd. of Educ. v. New Jersey Dep't of Educ., EDU 5493-03, Initial Decision (September 26, 2003), adopted, Comm'r (October 20, 2003) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, the ALJ and Commissioner found that a facial challenge to an education regulation could not be brought before the OAL. In his final decision the Commissioner stated, > [t]he Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the District's challenge to the definition of 'maintenance budget' in [former] N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2 is a facial challenge to the regulation and that the OAL does not have jurisdiction to determine directly or indirectly the validity of N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.2, as such determination is solely within the jurisdictional purview of the Appellate Division or the Supreme Court. [Id. at 1-2 (citing R. 2:2-3(a); Pascucci v. Vagott, 71 N.J. 40, 51-52 (1976); Wendling, supra, 279 N.J. Super. at 485).]

Here, as in Jersey City and Elizabeth, petitioners challenge the validity of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7 in Count II of their petition. However, as concluded by the ALJ and Commissioner in those cases, the OAL does not have jurisdiction over facial challenges to an administrative regulation. See also, 37 N.J. Practice, Admin. Law and Practice §§ 3.2 & 7.10 (Lefelt, Miragliotta & Prunty) (2d ed. 2000). Therefore, I FIND that there is no jurisdiction to hear the petitioner's challenge of the validity of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-8.7.

Petitioners also challenge the decision by the respondents to use the A-41 method instead of the software method, and are also seeking tuition credits for the overpayment. I FIND that both of these issues are moot.

It is not in dispute that although respondent first estimated the tuition using the A-41 method, a settlement was reached with the respondent using an actual cost per student of $4,657, which is the amount calculated if the software method had been used. There is also no dispute that the respondents have been given the petitioners tuition for difference. There is nothing further to award the petitioners.

An issue is moot when a decision that is being sought in a particular matter will, when rendered, have no practical effect on the existing controversy. In re Conroy, 109 N.J. Super. 453, 458 (App. Div. 1983). In such cases, the issues that have become moot or academic prior to judicial scrutiny" are generally considered to be ... improper subject[s] for judicial review." Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976).

Petitioners' motion for summary decision is DENIED because they have already received credit for tuition overpayments they allegedly made for the 2006-2007 school year. The petitioners have already received the relief they now seek before the OAL with respect to Count I of their petition.

It should further be noted that there has been no showing that the actions of the respondents in making their calculations are not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable standard by which the validity of an agency action is judged consists of three inquiries: (1) whether the agency action violates the enabling act's express or implied legislative policies; (2) whether there is substantial evidence in the record to support the findings upon which the agency based application of legislative policies; and (3) whether, in applying the legislative policies to the facts, the agency clearly erred by reaching a conclusion that could not reasonably have been made upon a showing of the relevant factors. Pub. Serv. Elec. And Gas Co. v. New Jersey Dep't of Envtl Protect., 101 N.J. 95, 103 (1985).

DECISION AND ORDER

Therefore, it is ORDERED that the petitioners' motion for summary decision is DENIED. Respondents' motion for summary decision is GRANTED in full as to Count One and in part as to Count Two. Petitioners have voluntarily agreed to withdraw the remainder of Count Two. The appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF MARY LOU FORSELL, WEST WINDSOR – PLAINSBORO SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION ORDER

Upon review of the tenure charges filed in the above-captioned matter, the Commissioner notes that the record includes several exhibits which include images of minor children (Statement of Evidence, Exhibits 2-38). Petitioner has moved to seal the exhibits and respondent has indicated that she has no objection.

New Jersey Court Rule 1:38-11(a) allows court records to be sealed for good cause, and R. 1:38-11(b)(2) instructs that good cause exists where a person's interest in privacy "substantially outweighs the presumption that all court and administrative records are open for public inspection . . . ." The Commissioner finds that the privacy of the minors depicted in the above referenced exhibits is of high importance, and that disclosure of the images to the public serves no public purpose in the instant tenure case. Thus, as regards the exhibits, the presumption of public access to court and administrative records is overcome.

Accordingly, the above-referenced exhibits are hereby SEALED

Petitioners alleged that the failure of the respondent Board to comply with State regulations and its own policy governing random drug testing rendered its actions arbitrary and capricious, such that the record of C.Q.'s drug test results should be expunged. The Board contends that: the drug test result is not part of the student's record; the policy – Board Policy No. 5536, Pupil Athletics and Extracurricular Activities Drug Policy – is sufficiently legal; and that ignoring the test results is contrary to the public policy goal of deterring students from using drugs and alcohol.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the respondent's drug policy did not comply with either *N.J.S.A.*18A:40A-24(d) or N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, as it falls short of requirements for describing the procedures involved in randomly selecting students for alcohol and drug testing, and also fails to fully comply with the requirement that procedures for challenging the test results be included in school drug testing policies; the Board's failure to alter its policy in the wake of the enactment of *N.J.S.A.*18A:11-1 resulted in the enforcement of a policy that no longer complies with State law; and the Board's action was therefore arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The ALJ concluded that C.Q.'s drug testing results must be expunged.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: respondent's drug policy did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d), as it does contain a mechanism for challenging a positive test result; the Board did not act in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in imposing discipline upon C.Q. for failing the random drug test, as petitioners were aware of the drug testing policy, did not challenge the method by which C.Q. was randomly selected, and stipulated at hearing that C.Q. had failed the drug test; and the drug test policy is a valuable method by which to identify students with drug problems and provide them with the support and resources they need. Accordingly, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision as to the finding that the drug policy violated N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d), and with regard to the ALJ's determination that C.Q.'s failed drug test should be expunged. Additionally, the Commissioner directed the Board to revise the drug policy to bring it into full compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4.

PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE GATEWAY REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Board of Education and the petitioners reply thereto.[1] This case involves Board Policy No. 5536, Pupil Athletics and Extracurricular Activities Drug Policy (drug policy). Pursuant to the drug policy, students who participate in extracurricular activities or receive an on-campus parking permit are subject to random drug testing. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the policy did not comply with either N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(c)[2] or N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, and as a result found that C.Q.'s positive drug test result should be expunged.

In its exceptions, the Board argues that there may have been nominal violations of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, but that the drug policy meets the overall spirit and public policy goal of legislation that encourages random drug testing. Further, the Board contends that the testimony presented at the hearing established that the actual procedures that were used to select and test

[1] The record contains no transcripts from the hearing conducted at the OAL on January 18, 2011.

[2] The Initial Decision appears to mistakenly cite N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(c) as the applicable statutory provision. N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d) is the provision stating that drug testing policies must include procedures for challenging positive test results.

C.Q. were in compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4. Additionally, the Board takes exception to the ALJ's holding that C.Q.'s failed drug test result should be expunged. The Board maintains that even if the drug policy does not completely comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, the remedy should be to bring the policy into compliance, not to expunge C.Q.'s drug test result. The Board points out that the petitioners did not challenge the accuracy of the test or the manner in which he was randomly selected, and they stipulated at the hearing that C.Q. failed the drug test. Finally, the Board argues that ignoring C.Q.'s positive drug test result is not in the best interest of C.Q. because he may not get the added support he may need should there be another offense.[3]

After consideration and review, the Commissioner finds that the drug policy did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d) – which requires drug testing policies to contain a procedure for challenging positive drug test results – and, although the policy did not fully comply with the provisions outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, the Board did not act in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in imposing discipline upon C.Q. for failing the random drug test.[4]

The drug policy contains a provision that allows for pupil or parent/guardian grievances. The applicable provision states, "[a] pupil or parent/guardian who contests a positive test result on a random drug test may utilize the district's internal grievance procedure as referenced in Policy 5710 and Bylaws 0133[5] in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1." Additionally, the drug policy states that a split urine sample will be taken for all tested students,

[3] In reply the petitioners simply stated that they support all of the findings of the ALJ.

[4] In its exceptions, the Board erroneously suggests that the consequence imposed on the students for failing a drug test is not a form of discipline. Although participation in extracurricular activities is a privilege, and not a right, that does not negate the fact that a board's decision to revoke a student's ability to participate amounts to a form of discipline. G.D.M. and T.A.M., on behalf of minor child, B.M.M. v. Board of Education of the Ramapo Indian Hills Regional High School District, Bergen County, Commissioner Decision No. 383-10, decided September 13, 2010. http://www.state.nj.us/education/legal/commissioner/2010/sep/383-10.pdf and if a student or parent/guardian chooses to challenge a positive result they have the option of sending the split sample to an approved testing facility. Therefore, the Commissioner finds that the drug policy was in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d) because it did contain a mechanism for challenging a positive test result. With respect to the provisions contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's finding that the drug policy should have provided more information regarding the manner in which the eligible student information was generated and provided to the physician's office and the methods used to verify and document the random selection procedure.

Notwithstanding that the drug policy itself lacked certain regulatory details envisioned by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, the Commissioner cannot find that it has been demonstrated on this record that the Board's handling of this case was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, necessitating the expungment of C.Q.'s failed drug test. When a local school board acts within its discretionary authority, its decision is entitled to a presumption of correctness and will not be upset unless there is an affirmative showing that the decision was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Ed. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd 46 N.J. 581 (1966). Here, the petitioners were aware of the drug testing policy and that C.Q. would be subject to random testing;[6] the method by which C.Q. was randomly selected was not challenged by the petitioners; and the petitioners stipulated at the hearing that C.Q. failed the drug test. Moreover, the failed drug test result is not a part of C.Q.'s disciplinary record, and any potential ramification for C.Q. at this juncture will only be triggered if C.Q. fails another random drug test.[7] If C.Q. were to fail another random drug test, it would be considered a second infraction, resulting in a longer suspension from extracurricular activities and more substance awareness counseling and education. The drug policy is not simply a means to discipline students but also a valuable method by which to identify students with drug problems and provide them with the support and resources they may need. The overall intent of the drug testing legislation is to ensure the health and safety of students by recognizing and addressing the seriousness of substance abuse among school-aged children. An order expunging the failed drug test result in the absence of any evidence questioning the validity of the result or testing method would be putting form over substance, to the detriment of C.Q.'s well-being.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is rejected as to the finding that the drug policy violated N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(d), and with regard to the ALJ's determination that C.Q.'s failed drug test should be expunged. The Board is directed to revise the drug policy to bring it into full compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4.

K.Q. AND L.Q., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, C.Q., Petitioners,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF GATEWAY REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,
Respondent.

Matthew Wolf, Esq., for petitioners (Pappas & Wolf, attorneys)

Kelly M. Estevan, Esq., for respondent (Capehart & Scatchard, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 18, 2011 Decided: February 1, 2011

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, ACTING DIRECTOR AND CHIEF ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

K.Q. and L.Q. brought a petition on behalf of their minor child, C.Q., alleging the failure of the Board of Education of the Gateway Regional School District in Gloucester County (the District) to comply with State regulations and its own District policy governing random-drug testing, rendering its actions arbitrary and capricious, such that the record of C.Q.'s drug-testing results should be expunged.

The Board contends that first, the drug-testing result is not part of the student's record; second, that the policy, although it predates the current regulations, is sufficient legally; and third, that ignoring results is contrary to the public-policy goal of deterring students from using drugs and alcohol.

The petition was first filed at the Department of Education on March 3, 2010. An amended version was filed on March 10, 2010, and by letter dated April 7, 2010, the Commissioner transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(b). It was filed at the OAL on April 16, 2010, and following a November 2010 adjournment was heard on January 18, 2011. At the hearing, the petitioners determined to narrow the issues to the District's failure to follow its own policy and the allegation that the District's policy does not comply with State regulations.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Most of the facts are not subject to dispute. On November 30, 2009, the Gateway Regional School District conducted one of its regular, biweekly random substance-abuse tests. The District's usual process was followed. This entailed the District's creation of a list of high school students who were either involved in extra-curricular activities or were in possession of a parking permit. On the day before the testing was conducted, the list was forwarded using e-mail to the off-site office of Christopher Trotz, M.D., the school physician. At Dr. Trotz's office, Kelly Murphy, R.N., opened the list and then moved it into a computerized-randomizer program. Murphy clicked a button on the computer, which then ran the randomizer program, generating a list of twenty student names and five-additional names to be used as alternates if the twenty were not present at school on the testing day. Murphy then forwarded the list to Steven M. Hindman, principal. On the testing date, Hindman located the various students and escorted them to the testing location, which is the nurse's office at school. Murphy was present in the nurse's office on testing day and was responsible for receiving the specimens, splitting each sample, testing one, and sending a second test to a laboratory. On December 10, 2009, Gateway Regional Superintendent Shannon Whelan received the results of the tests conducted on November 30, 2009. The results included a positive test for drugs for C.Q.

The policy under which the test was conducted was District Policy Number 5536, adopted by the Board of the District in 2007. (P-1.) In pertinent part, it defines an eligible student as, "any student grades 9-12 participating in, freshman, junior varsity and/or varsity interscholastic athletic programs, extra curricular activities/clubs, or in possession of an on-campus parking pass for the Gateway Regional School District." The paragraph entitled "Random Selection for Testing" states:

> On a biweekly basis, a maximum of twenty (20) of the eligible students that sign up for an athletic team/activity/club/parking shall be tested for illegal drug use.
> . . .
> A description of the random selection software methodology and procedure is on file in the district office.

The paragraph entitled "Testing Facility" explains that a student or parent/guardian "shall have the option to send a split sample to an approved testing facility of his/her choosing, utilizing the same screening parameters and levels identified in this policy at his/her expense."

Superintendent Whelan testified without contradiction that the description of the random-selection software is a document entitled "How the Randomizer Works—Methodology." (R-1.) The document incorporates the Microsoft Office explanation of the four-step process involved in its Randomizer product, plus some general explanation of the mathematics involved, along with information on lawsuits in drug-testing programs, provided next to the insignia of the Drug and Alcohol Testing Industry Association.

Whelan stated that the "How the Randomizer Works—Methodology" document is retained in her office, and although she cannot personally recall a situation where someone has requested the document over the phone, she believes it has occurred in the past, and that the District has forwarded a copy in the mail. She acknowledged that the document is not physically part of District Policy 5366. Regarding the policy and split-samples, she said that a parent would have to contact the school physician's office in order to make a request for testing of the split-sample. While the petitioners did contact her office about the split-sample, Whelan did not know whether they were told about contacting the physician. She stated that she did offer to meet with the parents on two-separate occasions but they rejected the offer.

Whelan also stated that she is the only person to receive student-testing results. She maintains them in a locked cabinet until such time as the student graduates, at which point they are destroyed.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4(a) states that each district board of education that chooses to adopt policies and procedures for the random testing of students pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-22 et seq. for the use of controlled dangerous substances . . . or alcoholic beverages . . . shall take a number of steps including a public hearing prior to adoption of the policy and provision of written notice to all ninth through twelfth grade students. N.J.A.C. 6A16:4-4.4(b) requires each such policy to include at least the following components:

> 2. A description of the procedures for randomly selecting students for alcohol or other drug testing, which at a minimum, shall include:
> i. The manner in which students shall be randomly selected for alcohol or other drug testing;
>
> ii. An explanation of the sampling statistical principals supporting the random selection process;
>
> iii. An explanation of how implementation of the random selection process shall be documented; and > iv. An explanation of how implementation of the random selection process shall be verified.

At the time, the regulation was first proposed on July 16, 2007, the explanatory summary stated that N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4(b) set forth the minimum components of written alcohol or other drug-testing policies and procedures. The social-impact statement noted that the policy was designed to impose appropriate disciplinary sanctions regarding privileged participation in extracurricular activities and possession of parking permits, while providing treatment support for individual students, and maintaining school safety and discipline. It also noted that district boards of education would make decisions on whether to establish the policy "in part, based on input from the community, as a result of the public hearing requirement . . . . This will provide the community with the opportunity to influence the district board of education's decision regarding the composition of the drug-testing policy." See 39 N.J.R. 2579(a).

With regard to each of the four elements, Policy 5536 is thin, at best, in relation to the first two components. The fact that a new master list of students is generated prior to every testing is missing, as is the inclusion of alternate-student names. The absence of the information on the critical component concerning randomization—which technology is being used to select the students—makes it difficult for parents to assess the fairness of the procedure. Although no evidence of less-than-random selection was offered at hearing, the point of the fair-hearing requirement was that parents have an opportunity for input on the overall program. Not including a key component in the broadly disseminated policy frustrates that policy goal.

Looking at factors three and four, the policy is silent on methods to be used to ensure documenting and verifying the random-selection procedure. For example, the District generates a list that is then transferred through e-mail to the physician's office. The policy contains no indication of how the accuracy of the basic list is determined. Once at the physician's office, the list must be transferred into the programming software. The policy contains no indication of what steps the District has taken to verify that the list is transferring properly, or whether the District has a process for making sure that the software is operating properly. While the policy does lay out the step-by-step handling procedures and flags what to do in the event of a chain-of-custody problem, it is silent on the procedures for verifying that the various handlers are actually performing according to the District's requirements. These are fundamental protections aimed at ensuring the fairness of the testing procedure.

It should also be noted that N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4(b)(9) requires districts to spell out "the procedures for students or their parents to challenge a positive result from the alcohol or other drug tests." This echoes N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(c), which requires policies to include the procedures for a student or his parent or guardian to challenge a positive test result. While the policy clearly states that a student or parent/guardian shall have the option to send a split-sample to an approved-testing facility of his/her choosing, it does not include the critical information that in order to do so, the parent or student must contact the physician's office to make the necessary arrangements. In this regard, the superintendent's lack of certainty in regard to whether anyone told petitioners about this important element underscores the need to have the procedure spelled out in the policy.

Based on the above, I CONCLUDE that the District's policy does not comply with either N.J.A.C. 6A:16-4.4, or N.J.S.A. 18A:40A-24(c).

The remaining question is whether this conclusion compels any particular result with regard to C.Q.'s test. In general, the imposition of discipline on students is within the discretionary powers of a school board, and the decision of the local board as to the appropriate penalty should not be disturbed absent evidence that the board's action was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. J.D. and E.D. o/b/o B.D. v. Bd. of Educ. of Toms River Reg. Sch. Dist., EDU 6009-07, Initial Decision (December 29, 1997), adopted, Comm'r (July 8, 1998), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

Nonetheless, this authority is constrained by statute. Under N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, a board is empowered to enforce the rules of the State board (paragraph b) and "make, amend and repeal rules, not inconsistent with this title. . . ." In this instan matter, the Board failure to alter its policy in the wake of the enactment of the statute and the regulations resulted in the enforcement of a policy that no longer complies with State law. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable, and the disciplinary action must be expunged.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER C.Q.'s testing results EXPUNGED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SYNOPSIS

The controversy herein involves five audits conducted by the respondent Department on Archway's accounts for the school years from 1994-1995 through 1998-1999, in which the Department disallowed approximately $9 million in non-allowable costs and expenses and ordered these tuition overcharges returned to the sending districts. Archway appealed this conclusion.

The Office of Administrative Law (OAL) has to date issued three Initial Decisions in this case. In September 2008, the ALJ made recommendations regarding resolution of legal issues in connection with the five audits, but sent the case back to the Commissioner for computation and presentation of final calculations as to the disallowances; the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommendations regarding resolution of legal issues, but remanded the case back to the OAL with a directive for the ALJ to make the necessary calculations. On remand, the ALJ determined that it was appropriate to initially resolve only the first audit year as it will have a carryover effect on the remaining audits, and issued a Partial Initial Decision ordering Archway to reimburse the sending districts the amount of their overpayments for the 1994-1995 school year. The Commissioner adopted the decision, ordered Archway to return a total of $2,315,855.51 to the sending districts, and returned the matter to the OAL in order to make the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing for the remaining audit years. Archway appealed this decision to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court, which determined that, as all claims as to all parties in this consolidated action had yet to be resolved, Archway's appeal as a final agency determination was premature. In February 2011, the ALJ issued a second Partial Initial Decision, which addresses the amount of monies due and owing by Archway for the 1995-1996, 1996-1997 and 1997-1998 school years, but leaves unresolved the amount due and owing for the 1998-1999 school year.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner found that review of the instant Partial Initial Decision – which resolves final calculations for only three of the four remaining audit years – would be nonproductive at this point in time. The Commissioner instead determined to reserve review of this Partial Initial Decision until after the OAL has concluded the fifth and final audit year. The Commissioner therefore returned the matter to the OAL for resolution of the issues surrounding the 1998-1999 audit year and issuance of a final Initial Decision in this matter; he further requested that the ALJ's final Initial Decision present the calculated monetary figure due and owing by Archway for each of the five audit years at issue.

ARCHWAY PROGRAMS, INC.	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,	:	PARTIAL DECISION ON REMAND
RESPONDENT.	:

The petitioner, Archway Programs (Archway) is a non-profit corporation which operates a private school for the handicapped (PSH) authorized to educate handicapped public school students pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-14(g), and receives tuition from sending districts commensurate with its actual cost per pupil as determined by a certified audit. Pursuant to governing regulations, certain specified items may not be included in the computation of a tuition rate chargeable to the sending districts. The controversy herein involves five audits conducted by the respondent Department of Education (DOE) on Archway's accounts for the school years from 1994-1995 through 1998-1999, in which the DOE disallowed approximately $9 million in non-allowable costs and expenses and ordered these tuition overcharges returned to the sending districts. Archway appealed this conclusion. In September 2008, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued an Initial Decision recommending resolution of legal issues concerning methodologies and allowable costs in connection with the five contested audits, and further recommended that the Commissioner calculate and present final mathematical calculations as to disallowances based upon these resolutions. In a final decision dated December 5, 2008, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's recommendations regarding resolution of legal issues, but rejected the proposal regarding computation and presentation of final mathematical calculations. The Commissioner remanded the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for such further proceedings as were necessary to allow the ALJ to conclude these consolidated cases by making the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing.

On remand, the ALJ found that it was appropriate to initially resolve only the audit for the 1994-1995 school year – and to reserve recommendation on the remaining years – as resolution of this particular audit will have a carryover effect on the remaining later audits, and ordered that the DOE prepare a new audit of the 1994-1995 school year. Based on that audit, and the fact that Archway indicated no objections to the mathematical calculations contained therein, the ALJ determined that the revised DOE audit dated June 25, 2010 includes the amount that petitioner is obligated to return to the sending districts, and she issued a Partial Initial Decision ordering Archway to reimburse these districts the amount of their overpayments for the 1994-1995 school year.

By decision dated October 28, 2010 (Commissioner Decision #453-10R), the Commissioner adopted the Partial Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision as to the 1994-1995 school year, and ordered Archway to return – within 60 days of this decision – a total of $2,315,855.51 to the districts which sent students to its PSH during the 1994-1995 school year. The matter was returned to the OAL for further action deemed necessary by the ALJ in order to make the requisite calculations and recommended determination of monies due and owing for the remaining audit years. Archway appealed this decision to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court, which determined that – as all claims as to all parties in this consolidated action had yet to be resolved below – Archway's appeal as a final agency determination was premature.

On February 10, 2011 the Agency received the attached second Partial Initial Decision from the OAL which purports to resolve the amounts of monies due and owing by Archway for the 1995-96, 1996-97 and 1997-98 school years, leaving yet unresolved monies due and owing for the 1998-99 school year. Exceptions and reply exceptions to this decision were duly filed by Archway and the Department, respectively.

Upon review – pursuant to the authority granted him under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(e) – the Commissioner declines to review the instant Partial Initial Decision of the OAL as he finds and determines that immediate review of this decision – which resolves final calculations for only three of the four remaining audit years – at this point in time will not serve to avoid unnecessary litigation or expense. The Commissioner, therefore, is returning this matter to the OAL for resolution of the issues surrounding the last remaining audit year in this contested case and for issuance of a final Initial Decision in this consolidated matter. The instant Partial Initial Decision will then be reviewed at the end of the contested case. Additionally, it is hereby requested that the ALJ's final Initial Decision in this matter clearly present the exact calculated monetary figure due and owing by Archway for each of the five audit years at issue.

Record Closed as to this partial initial decision on February 2, 2011

Decided: February 7, 2011

BEFORE BEATRICE S. TYLUTKI, ALJ t/a:

On December 5, 2008, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) remanded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) that portion of the consolidated case (OAL Dkt. Nos. 6956-00, 8646-00, 4834-01, 4607-03, 4608-03 and 427-06), which deals with the audits by the New Jersey State Department of Education (DOE) of the records of Archway Programs, Inc. (Archway) for its private school for the handicapped (PSH) for the 1994-95, 1995-96, 1996-97, 1997-98 and 1998-99 school years (audits in issue).

Archway is a non-profit human services organization that provides various educational, social, psychological and residential services for developmentally disabled and mentally and physically challenged adults and children. It has both PSH programs and non-PSH programs. The PSH programs provide special education services to public school children, ages 3 to 21, with special needs. The number of school districts and the number of students sent to Archway varies from year to year. Archway's PSH programs are subject to state audits.

Archway's PSH programs are operated at two locations, a campus in Atco, Camden County and another campus in Washington Township, Gloucester County.

It was agreed at the hearing in the consolidated case that the former regulations that determined tuition rates for PSHs that were in effect during the years covered by the audits in issue were applicable in the consolidated case. These regulations were previously codified at N.J.A.C. 6:20-4.1 et seq. and were introduced into evidence at the consolidated case as J-1 and R-8. These regulations are also applicable in this matter.

In the final decision as to the consolidated case, the Commissioner adopted the conclusions in my September 2, 2008 initial decision as to the various schedules contained in the five audits in issue, but rejected my recommendation that the Commissioner calculate the final amounts that Archway must return to the sending school districts for the five school years. The Commissioner required that there be a procedure in the OAL to compute the revised audits for the five school years consistent with my initial decision and the Commissioner's final decision.

The remanded matter was transmitted to the OAL on December 5, 2008 for disposition pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. I was assigned to the case.

I had a conference with the parties on January 7, 2009 regarding the remand. During the conference, I established a schedule whereby the DOE was to submit a recalculation of the 5 audits to determine the exact amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts. Archway would have the opportunity to review these recalculations and submit its objections, if any. Based on the filings by the parties, I would then decide if a hearing was necessary or that I could make a determination as to the amounts that Archway had to return to the sending school districts based on the written submissions.

I received the DOE's revised audits on January 23, 2009. Archway filed a response dated April 23, 2009 and listed 21 objections to the DOE's revised audits. I had a telephone conference with the parties on May 7, 2009, and I gave the DOE the opportunity to file a response as to these objections, which I received on June 24, 2009. Also, I gave Archway the opportunity to file a reply, which it did on August 7, 2009.

I held settlement conferences with the parties, and we were able to resolve 19 of the objections raised by Archway. The unresolved objections are number 7, which applies to the 1994-95 school year audit, and number 19, which only refers to the 1998-99 school year audit.

By letter dated September 1, 2009, I told the parties that I wanted them to submit briefs as to Archway's objection applicable only to Objection Number 7 and that initially I wanted only to resolve the 1994-95 audit. It was not disputed that the resolution of the 1994-95 school year audit will have a carryover effect on the later audits.

After receipt of briefs from the parties, I issued an Order on May 6, 2010, in which I reached a conclusion as to Objection Number 7. I ordered that the DOE prepare a new audit of the 1994-95 school year using this order and the settlements as to the other objections raised by Archway which relate to this audit.

I received a revised audit from the DOE on June 25, 2010. By letter dated August 24, 2010, Archway indicated no objections to the mathematical calculations in this audit which are consistent with my prior rulings and the decision of the Commissioner. I issued an initial decision as to this audit on September 15, 2010.

Thereafter, I ordered that the DOE prepare new audits as to the 1995-96, 1996-97 and 1997-98 school years consistent with my May 6, 2010 order and the settlements as to the other objections originally raised by Archway. Further, I stated that these revised audits are to be submitted to me and to Archway. Archway would then have the opportunity to review the audits and the opportunity to submit a response as to the mathematical calculations only. Once this is resolved, I indicated I would issue another partial initial decision as to these audits.

Thereafter, I received the audits for the 1995-96, 1996-97 and 1997-98 school years as submitted by the DOE (Exhibit A), which include the amounts that Archway is obligated to return to the school districts who sent students to Archway's PSH during these school years. This exhibit is attached and fully incorporated herein. By letter dated January 24, 2011, Archway indicated no objections to the mathematical calculations in these audits. Exhibit B contains this letter and is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I ORDER that Archway reimburse the sending school districts the amount of their overpayments for the 1995-96, 1996-97 and 1997-98 school years within sixty (60) days after the final decision in this matter.

I hereby FILE this partial initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended partial decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make final decisions in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this partial decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended partial decision shall become a final partial decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended partial decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." Dear Parties:

I have reviewed the parties' submissions with respect to DAG Christopher Huber's Motion for Reconsideration of Assistant Commissioner Barbara Gantwerk's January 7, 2011 decision in the consolidated matters captioned Margaret Dolon v. Carmen Centuolo, Executive County Superintendent, Union County and Rochelle Hendricks, Acting Commissioner, New Jersey State Department of Education, Agency Dkt. No. 708-12/10 and Board of Education of the Town of Westfield, Union County v. Dr. Carmen M. Centuolo, Executive County Superintendent, Union County, Agency Dkt. No. 709-12/10. The Assistant Commissioner's decision dismissed these consolidated matters (which sought: an order rescinding Executive County Superintendent Centuolo's letter of December 2, 2010, which directed that the parties void the proposed employment contract of the District's Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Margaret Dolan; an order immediately approving this contract; and an order declaring that the Acting Commissioner's November 15, 2010 memorandum to all Executive County Superintendents – instructing that superintendent contracts are not to be approved – is contrary to law, and rescinding such memorandum) for lack of jurisdiction as it appeared from the allegations in the petitions that the Acting Commissioner had already ruled on this issue, making this matter a final agency action appealable to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1. Upon full review and consideration, I have determined to deny the Motion for Reconsideration.

In arguing that the consolidated cases should not have been dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, the Attorney General's office, purportedly on behalf of Respondent Centuolo, states: "The sole issue in this case is whether Respondent approved the proposed employment contract before it was approved by the Westfield Board of Education on November 9, 2010." If that statement were accurate, these matters would be appropriately before the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-3.1(f). The petition in the case bearing docket number 708-12/10, however, specifically names then-Acting Commissioner Rochelle Hendricks as a respondent in the case, attributes the ultimate responsibility for the December 2, 2010 letter to Acting Commissioner Hendricks and seeks by way of relief against the Acting Commissioner, inter alia, a declaration by the Acting Commissioner that her action in issuing the November 15, 2010 memorandum was illegal and ultra vires. The petition in the case bearing docket number 709-12/10, without actually naming the Acting Commissioner as a respondent, also alleges that the Acting Commissioner directed Respondent Centuolo to send the December 2, 2010 letter in issue. Both cases are challenging the actions of the Acting Commissioner.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2., a motion for reconsideration shall be considered based upon the following:

i. claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute "mistake" for purposes of this section;
ii. newly discovered evidence likely to alter the outcome of a matter, where such evidence could not have been previously discovered by due diligence;
iii. newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party, where such misrepresentation could not have been previously known; or
iv. reversal of a prior judgment on which the present matter is based.

Upon full review and consideration of the parties' submissions, the Commissioner is compelled to deny the Motion for Reconsideration as he concludes that it fails to satisfy any of the requisites for granting such relief specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2. Accordingly, the Motion for Reconsideration is hereby DENIED.

Sincerely,

Christopher D. Cerf
Acting Commissioner

BEFORE ROBERT BINGHAM II, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, A.M., applies for emergent relief, seeking an order compelling the respondent, Board of Education of the Lenape Township Regional High School District (Board), to enroll his daughter, J.A.M., in the Lenape Township Regional High School (Lenape). The Board contends that he and J.A.M. do not reside within the school district, and thus do not meet the residency criteria for the provision of a free public education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about September 13, 2010, A.M. filed a pro se Petition of Appeal requesting that the Board enroll J.A.M. at Lenape, after receiving a letter dated August 13, 2010 from the Board's attorney which indicated that J.A.M. would not be allowed to attend Lenape in the 2010-2011 school year. On or about September 21, 2010, the Board filed a Motion to Dismiss the petition. On October 4, 2010, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a non-emergent contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to-15. A.M. subsequently filed another pro se petition, containing supplemental documentation.[1] The due process hearing was scheduled for February 28, 2011, but rescheduled for April 5 and 7, 2011, at the parties' request, while A.M. obtained counsel.

On March 7, 2011, A.M. filed with the Commissioner of Education a pro se Petition for Emergent Relief, which was transmitted to the OAL under Docket Number EDU 10523-10, as an emergent matter. On March 9, 2011, the case was scheduled to be heard on March 11, 2011. On March 10, 2011, A.M.'s attorney filed his appearance. On March 11, 2011, an emergent hearing was held and concluded.

Many of the material facts are undisputed. Accordingly, I FIND AS FACT the following.

[1] On February 18, 2011, A.M. filed another petition requesting J.A.M.'s enrollment and attached thirty seven exhibits to prove residency. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the OAL as supplemental documentation under the same docket number as the September 13, 2010 petition, EDU 10523-10.

A.M. is a single parent of three children and his daughter, J.A.M., is sixteen years of age. His son, B.M., is eighteen years of age and no longer resides with him. The controversy over whether petitioner and his children reside within the Lenape school district dates as far back as the 2005-2006 academic school year (Exhibit R-21).[2] Central to that dispute, at least most recently, is the question of whether they have been domiciled at 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054, a location within the Board's school district.

On September 28, 2009, A.M. filed a petition to have J.A.M. and B.M. enrolled in Lenape (Exhibit R-10). They attended Lenape during the pendency of that appeal and actually completed the 2009-2010 school year. In a final decision dated June 17, 2010 (Exhibit P-15), the Commissioner of Education dismissed the petition for A.M.'s unexplained failure to appear at a scheduled OAL telephonic hearing.

By letter dated August 13, 2010 (Exhibit R-16), the Board's attorney notified A.M. that J.A.M. would not be allowed to attend Lenape for the 2010-2011 school year "based upon the dismissal of your appeal entered by the Commissioner of Education." Ibid. On or about September 13, 2010, A.M. filed a pro se Petition of Appeal requesting that the Board enroll J.A.M. at Lenape and, on September 21, 2010, the Board moved to dismiss the petition. On October 4, 2010, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a non-emergent contested case.

[2] On February 15, 2006, petitioner entered an agreement with the Board to withdraw his child, A.M., from Lenape following a residency investigation. A.M. and B.M. returned to Lenape during the 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 school years. However, after petitioner failed to appear at a departmental residency hearing in January 2008, A.M. and B.M. were removed and Lenape sought tuition reimbursement. Litigation in Superior Court over the agreement ensued and is ongoing. In July 2009, J.A.M. was enrolled at Lenape and, following another residency investigation, the Board concluded that petitioner did not reside at 2307 Denham Court in Mt. Laurel, but rather at 6 Illinois Avenue in Burlington. The Board notified him that J.A.M. would be removed from school. (Exhibit R-21) His appeal was ultimately dismissed by the Commissioner of Education's final decision dated June 17, 2010 (Exhibit R-15).

A.M. subsequently filed another pro se petition (Exhibit P-44),[3] appending supplemental documentation to prove residency (Exhibits P-1 to P-37). That documentation included the following: a current New Jersey driver's license (Exhibit P-1); September 17, 2009 lease for 310 Rancocas Blvd., Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054 (Exhibit P-4); a card for A.M.'s GEICO automobile insurance policy, effective April 4, 2010 through October 10, 2010 (Exhibit P-3); and rent receipts for the period of time between September 2009 and June 2010 (Exhibit P-5). All of those documents bore the address of 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054. A.M.'s exhibits also included copies of postmarked envelopes addressed to him at that address from Lenape, the Board, the Board's attorney, service providers and others (Exhibits P-6 through P-27). Finally, it included certifications, some undated, from alleged neighbors of A.M., purportedly confirming his residence at 310 Rancocas Boulevard (Exhibits P-28 through P-34).

On February 28, 2011, A.M. submitted additional documentation to the Board, including: a lease for tenancy dated September 1, 2010, for the premises at 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054 (Exhibit P-38); his current New Jersey driver's license, issued September 18, 2009, with an expiration date of August 31, 2011 (Exhibit P-39, same as P-1); a Comcast cable bill bearing the date of February 14, 2011 (Exhibit P-41); an AT&T bill for the billing cycle dated January 15, 2011 to February 14, 2011 (Exhibit P-42); and a Bank of America returned item notice, dated July 8, 2010 (Exhibit P-43). All are addressed to A.M. at 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054.

On March 7, 2011, A.M. filed a pro se Petition for Emergent Relief with the Commissioner of Education, and it was transmitted to OAL on the following day as an emergent matter. At the hearing, A.M. also produced the card for his GEICO automobile insurance policy, effective November 13, 2010 through May 13, 2011, bearing the address of 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey 08054 (Exhibit P-45).

[3] On February 18, 2011, A.M. filed another petition requesting J.A.M.'s enrollment and attached thirty-seven exhibits to prove residency. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the matter to the OAL as supplemental documentation under the same docket number, EDU 10523-10, as the September 13, 2010 petition.

The parties dispute A.M.'s domicile within the school district. A.M. contends that he has continually lived at 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, NJ 08054 since September 2009. The Board contends that he has not resided there and J.A.M. thus is not entitled to attend schools within the district. The parties stipulate that the Certifications in evidence are admissible, for purposes of this hearing, to be given due consideration and weight as deemed appropriate.

A.M. testified that he's been living at 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel, New Jersey, since September 2009 pursuant to a one-year lease (Exhibit P-44) that converted to a month-to-month tenancy at the end of the lease term. J.A.M. and B.M. have resided there with him, and J.A.M. continues to do so, although B.M. became independent and has moved out. A.M. testified that it has been and continues to be his intention to remain at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel. Previously, during the 2008-2009 school year, he had lived at 2307 Denham Court in Mt. Laurel.

According to A.M., he had produced his lease and other documentation requested by Mr. Hagar, Lenape's Business Administrator and Board Secretary, in order to enroll J.A.M. for the 2010-2011 school year. He thereafter filed pro se the documentation that, to his best understanding,[4] was required to compel enrollment. J.A.M. has not attended school during the 2010-2011 school year because she cannot register in another district, due to their residence in Mt. Laurel, and A.M. cannot afford a private education.

On cross-examination, he admitted spending time at 6 Illinois Avenue in Burlington in 2009 and that he had received hand-delivered correspondence while at that location. The Board's 2009 residency investigation had established that he spent considerable time there (Exhibit R-21). He explained that it was his former girlfriend's address and although he'd previously spent time there, his residence is 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel. He denied ever saying that he lived at the Illinois Avenue address or that he had refused mail at 310 Rancocas Boulevard. He conceded that he earlier had not provided a current automobile registration or insurance card to Mr. Hagar.

Hagar's certification (Exhibit R-21) asserted that A.M. "took no action," regarding Board counsel's August 13, 2010 letter, and "he did not attempt to enroll the students with Lenape schools." Ibid. The Department of Education, by letter dated September 22, 2010 (Exhibit R-19), had informed A.M. of the need to file a Motion for Emergency Relief if he desired J.A.M. to attend Lenape Regional schools.

Based on the record, I FIND:

1. A.M. has rented the premises at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel, New Jersey from September 2009 through the present time.
2. A.M. is a customer of Comcast and has taken cable service at 310 Rancocas Boulevard as recently as February 14, 2011.
3. A.M. has a current New Jersey driver's license reflecting the 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel address.
4. A.M. has a current GEICO automobile insurance card reflecting the 310 Rancocas Boulevard, Mt. Laurel address.
5. Since September 2009, Lenape and the Board have sent numerous letters to A.M. at 310 Rancocas Boulevard which, with one exception, have not been marked returned by the Postal Service.
6. A.M. intends to continue his and J.A.M.'s domicile at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel.
7. A.M. is without financial means to afford a private education for J.A.M.

8. J.A.M. is unable to attend public school in any other school district due to her residence with A.M. at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel.

9. The Board has not presented current documentation indicating any residence for A.M. or J.A.M. other than the premises at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel.

10. J.A.M. resides with her father, A.M., who is domiciled in Mt. Laurel, New Jersey, within the Lenape Regional High School District.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Every school district has an obligation to provide a free education to persons between the ages of five and twenty who are domiciled within the district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1; N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). A student is domiciled in the school district when she is living with a parent whose permanent home is located within the district. Ibid. A home is permanent when the parent intends to return to it when absent and has no present intent of moving from it, notwithstanding the existence of homes or residences elsewhere. Ibid.

A petitioner in a controversy or dispute involving a particular course of action by a district board of education may file a motion for emergent relief. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6. The standards for the consideration of an application for emergent relief are set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, which provides that such relief may be granted if the judge determines from the proofs that: (1) the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; (2) the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled; (3) the petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and (4) when the equities and interest of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The Board contends that A.M. has not met the standards for emergent relief. Specifically, the Board contends there is no likelihood of success on the merits because A.M. has relied upon documents that have expired or are unreliably stale, such as his motor vehicle registration and rental receipts. The Board casts as suspicious the certifications of alleged neighbors and further points to one item of mail that was returned. The Board argues that, in any event, all of A.M.'s documentation was late and no emergency exists. Additionally, the Board urges that the legal right underlying A.M.'s claim for the current school year is not settled because there was no Board "action," regarding enrollment for 2010-2011, from which A.M. properly appealed. Finally, the Board asserts that the taxpayers have previously funded the cost of educating A.M.'s children, but should no longer bear that burden when there is insufficient proof that he actually resides within the district.

A.M. contends that he has maintained a bona fide residence at 310 Rancocas Boulevard in Mt. Laurel since September 2009. He further contends that the Board's determination prohibiting J.A.M. from enrolling in Lenape is causing her irreparable harm, as she is losing precious time in furthering her education in her junior year. Although the Board may have had good cause to challenge A.M.'s residency in past years – a determination not made here – there appears to be none at the present time. A.M. has produced sufficient documentation of his current residence within the school district, notwithstanding his prior production of some stale information. His appearance and demeanor, including eye contact and body language, gave credibility to his testimony regarding his domicile.

After considering the testimony, documentation submitted and arguments of counsel, I CONCLUDE that J.A.M. would suffer irreparable harm if denied enrollment within the school district. I CONCLUDE that the legal right for enrollment of a child that resides within the public school district is well-settled. I CONCLUDE that there is a good likelihood of petitioner prevailing on the merits if there were to be a full evidentiary hearing. Further, I CONCLUDE that when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner, and J.A.M. especially, would suffer greater harm than the respondent would suffer if the requested relief was not granted. Specifically, I am satisfied that the relatively marginal cost to the school district of enrolling J.A.M. would be significantly less by comparison to the harm that would inure to her if she was denied the opportunity to attend school and further her education.

I further FIND and CONCLUDE that respondent does not waive its ability to challenge the legitimacy of petitioner's residency within the school district for the previous school year inclusive of this school year.

Accordingly, I FIND and CONCLUDE that petitioner is entitled to emergent relief and that the applicable regulations require the Board to enroll J.A.M. immediately.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the forgoing, I hereby ORDER that the Emergent Relief application of A.M. is GRANTED and the Board shall immediately enroll J.A.M. at Lenape Regional High School.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

K.C. and S.C. on behalf of minor child K.C.,	:
PETITIONERS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON MOTION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ENGLEWOOD, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioners ask that their son, high school senior K.C., be placed back in school pending a determination on the merits about the appropriateness of the discipline that was imposed upon him for making improper use of the school's computer system. Upon consideration of the record – including an audio recording of the March 1, 2011 hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) – and the Initial Decision, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that petitioners have met the standards for the emergent relief that they seek.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.4, petitioners' application for emergent relief must conform to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and meet the substantive standards articulated therein. The four standards are: 1) the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; 2) the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled; 3) the petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and 4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted. See also, Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Since the standards are conjunctive, petitioners must prevail on all four.

For the reasons articulated by the ALJ, the Commissioner finds that, as to the first of the above articulated standards, petitioners have met their burden to show that their requested relief is necessary to avoid irreparable harm to K.C. The second standard, i.e. K.C.'s right not to be the object of arbitrary action by respondent, is well settled.

As to the third standard necessary for a grant of emergent relief, i.e. a showing of a likelihood of success on the underlying merits of the case, the Commissioner sees no basis to disturb the ALJ's determination that the petitioners have presented facts that could show arbitrary action by respondent. More specifically, as the ALJ pointed out, respondent has established policies for disciplining students who violate its rules of conduct. Four levels of prohibited conduct are identified, with descriptions of qualifying infractions and penalties: Minor Infraction, Moderate Infraction, Major Infraction, and Judicial Infraction. Having adopted this disciplinary matrix, respondent's deviation from it can be regarded as arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

Petitioners do not contend that K.C.'s behavior could be characterized as a minor infraction. Rather, they argue that it falls under respondent's definition of a Level II moderate infraction, which definition expressly includes "violation of use of electronic devices and computer access and usage." (Petitioner's Exhibit D to the petition, at 4) That level of infraction brings a range of possible 'responses,' from counseling to suspensions of 1-3 days. (Ibid.) The ALJ found that K.C.'s conduct constituted a Level III severe infraction, punishable by, among other things, an in-school or out-of-school suspension of three to five days. (Petitioner's Exhibit D to the petition, at 5) Included in the definition of this level of infraction are, inter alia, fighting, destroying school property, using tobacco/alcohol/drugs, gambling, inciting a riot, theft, threatening weapon use, forging documents, bullying and wearing gang insignia. (Ibid.)

The Commissioner notes that respondent's Level IV Judicial Infraction refers to conduct – such as weapons possession, stalking, extortion, arson, drug sales, theft, assault resulting in serious bodily harm, gang activity, etc. – punishable under New Jersey's criminal statutes. (Exhibit D to the petition, at 6) The penalties for these offenses range from exclusion from extra-curricular activities to 10-45 day suspensions or expulsion. (Ibid.)

In comparing K.C.'s behavior and the punishment imposed upon him with the disciplinary matrix established by respondent – specifically the conduct assigned to each level of infraction and the consequences attached to same – the Commissioner cannot fault the ALJ for determining that petitioners could show arbitrariness on the part of respondent. Further, the ALJ correctly considered the fact that respondent did not appear to follow the mandate of its own disciplinary policy, that it consider several factors before applying discipline. (Petitioner's Exhibit D at 2) Among those factors are a student's past record – which in K.C.'s case was free of infractions – the circumstances leading to the offence, information from parents, teachers and others – which in K.C.'s case included supportive statements from three teachers – the student's intent, which was undisputedly not to harm the district's computer network, and the effectiveness of alternate forms of discipline. (Ibid.)

Finally, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's thorough analysis of the fourth standard which petitioners must meet, i.e., a showing that the harm to K.C. – should the requested relief not be granted – will be greater than the harm to respondent if it is granted. Indeed, the harm to K.C. has already been considerable, K.C.'s punishment is likely to serve as a deterrent to other students, and K.C. is unlikely to pose further risk to the integrity of respondent's computer network.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision on petitioner's motion for emergent relief. Pending a decision on the merits of this controversy, K.C. shall be immediately returned to the Academies program of the Dwight Morrow High School, with reasonable restrictions to ensure his proper use of respondent's computers.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE LELAND S. McGEE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

K.C. and S.C. o/b/o K.C. (Petitioners) filed a petition for Emergency Relief contesting the City of Englewood Board of Education's decision to remove their son, K.C., from the Academies @ Englewood in Dwight Morrow High School (The Academies). Petitioners also alleged that the City of Englewood Board of Education (Board) has failed to provide K.C. with the required educational services. The Board is unwilling to allow K.C. back in school because he violated its Student Discipline/Code of Conduct & Procedures by obtaining access to files in the school's network surreptitiously and without permission.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On February 17, 2011, Petitioner filed an application for emergent relief with the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Controversies and Disputes. On the same day, this matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing on the requested emergent relief. On March 1, 2011, the application for emergent relief was heard at the OAL, 33 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey, and the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The pertinent facts of this case are not in dispute and I FIND the following to be the FACTS of this case.

K.C. is a seventeen year old boy in the twelfth grade at The Academies in the Englewood School District (District). He resides in Englewood Cliffs which has a send-receive agreement with the Board. K.C. has been an A/B student throughout his high school career, and currently has a Grade Point Average (GPA) of 3.4 on a scale of 4.0. During this, his last semester of high school, he was enrolled in Advanced Placement (AP) English, AP Physics, AP Statistics, Engineering, Physical Education, and a Senior Internship.

In December 2010, during a free period at school, K.C. was using a school computer. While browsing the school's network, he accessed files and ran programs that violated the Academies' Acceptable Use Policy. In particular, K.C. used "ultrasurf" software to circumvent the District's security; installed and tested a "denial of service program;" explored networked computers and copied unsecured files; and used password-cracking software to open an encrypted file.

There is no dispute that "[n]o damage was done to our network nor is there evidence that he specifically sought to do harm..." Further, "[o]ur investigation of the incident suggests that he has limited hacker skills."

Since K.C. was first prohibited from returning to school on January 7, 2011, he has been visited by two tutors on three occasions for a total of approximately three hours. It was not until "last week" that the Board was able to secure instructors for K.C. in AP English, AP Physics, and AP Statistics. The person identified to instruct K.C. in Statistics has previously taught the advanced placement course. It is unknown whether the person identified to instruct K.C. in English has previously taught the advanced placement course. The person identified to instruct K.C. in Physics has never previously taught the advanced placement course.

Dwight Morrow High School is the only official public high school in the District. However, there are several distinct selective "programs" of specialization within the high school system. These programs, known collectively as The Academies @ Englewood, were originally designed to be an honors-level program to attract a more diverse student body in compliance with a desegregation mandate. Through an inter-district agreement, the State of New Jersey pays for out-of-district students to attend The Academies.

The Academies are housed in the school's "south campus" facility while the "north campus" facility (the original Dwight Morrow High School building) houses the remaining students. The Academies are distinguished from Dwight Morrow facility students, by a higher level of proficiency: there is an entrance exam designed to identify higher achieving students; the students generally have a higher GPA; they have higher SAT scores; college admissions is quantifiably different due to the higher level of student achievement.

When the programs were originally created, they were treated as separate from Dwight Morrow High School. There are still two separate admissions codes used for distinguishing between the two schools on college applications. Students who graduate from The Academies receive a diploma from Dwight Morrow High School with the noted distinction of having attended a specialized program. A diploma from The Academies is distinguished by the courses required to graduate. In the case of K.C., he only needs an English course and gym in order to graduate with a diploma from Dwight Morrow High School. However, in order to graduate with a diploma from The Academies, K.C. must complete AP English, AP Physics, AP Statistics, Engineering (not offered in Dwight Morrow High School), Senior Internship (not offered in Dwight Morrow High School), and physical health. Even if K.C. completes the advanced placement courses through home schooling, he is prohibited from completing the Senior Internship or the Engineering courses. He would therefore be prohibited from receiving a diploma from The Academies. K.C.'s official transcript would reflect that he was forced to withdraw from the courses that he is prohibited from completing. They will not be counted in the calculation of his GPA.

Prior to this incident, K.C. had not been a discipline problem. After the incident, he was suspended for ten days by the principal. When he appeared for a hearing before the Board of Education, three of his teachers were present to speak on his behalf – they supported his return to school. It was the Board that determined that he should be prohibited from returning to the Academies. Alternative educational services offered to K.C. included placement in another school district or home schooling for the remainder of the school year.

Since the incident with K.C., the District has removed the files that were accessed by K.C. from the area on the network that was outside of the District's security protocols. The District also put password protections on other areas that were not previously protected.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The standards which must be met by the moving party in an application for emergent relief are embodied in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). Emergency relief may only be granted if the judge determines that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The petitioner must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe test.

Irreparable Harm

The first consideration is whether K.C. will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted. Petitioners maintain that a child "suffers irreparable harm when he is deprived of an education for even a brief period of time." Citing P.H., on behalf of M.C. v. Bd. of Ed. of Bergenfield, et al., State Board of Education slip opinion, SB #27-01 (Sept. 5, 2001)(appeal dismissed as moot in Chess v. Bergenfield Bd. Of Ed., Docket No. A-4519-05T24519-05T2).

K.C. has been out of school since January 7, 2011, and has only received three hours of in-home instruction. The rigor associated with an advanced placement course, much less three AP courses, is significant and cannot be replaced by sparse tutorial sessions. It is unreasonable to expect that K.C. will receive adequate home instruction to complete the course load that he has. Almost two months after K.C.'s removal from school, the District has found instructors for the three advanced placement courses. It is not reasonable to presume that the time could be adequately made up with home instruction.

Irreparable harm is also rooted in the quality of the education that K.C. has received at The Academies. The District argues that it has only one high school. However, the education provided at the Dwight Morrow facility is distinctly different, by design, intent and expectation, from that offered at the Academies. If K.C. is not allowed the opportunity to receive the distinguished diploma that is issued by the Academies, his college admissions may be jeopardized. Although no testimony was offered regarding the college admissions process, conventional wisdom tells us that a student who is admitted to a college or university, is admitted based upon the then known course of study, and subject to the successful completion of that course of study. If a student is admitted based upon the distinction attendant to completing The Academies, and the student does not complete that program, it is reasonable to conclude that admission to the school may be withdrawn. Irreparable harm will result.

I CONCLUDE that Petitioners have satisfied the first prong of the Crowes test. Irreparable harm will result if K.C. is not allowed back into the Academies to complete this semester.

Right to Underlying Claim

As to the requirement that the right underlying the claim of a requesting party must be settled, it is clear that each school district is obligated to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to all children residing in its school district. N.J. Const. (1947), Art. VIII, 1, N.J.S.A. 18A:33-1. To carry out this policy, local boards of education have been granted discretionary authority at N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1c and d to adopt rules for the management of the public schools of the district, and to perform all acts and do all things necessary for the lawful and proper conduct of the public schools of the district.

In general, a board of education's actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where board actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Ed. of Educ. Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Ed. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962)).

The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of board actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as follows:

> In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis. Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is no room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached . . . Moreover, the court should not substitute its judgment for that of an administrative or legislative body if there is substantial evidence to support the ruling.

[Piccoli v. Ed. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Regional School District, OAL Dkt. EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dent. of Envir. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).]

In the present case, the District has established rules of conduct for its students. Those rules set forth policies for disciplining students who violate those rules. The District contemplates four levels of prohibited conduct: Minor Infraction, Moderate Infraction, Major Infraction, and Judicial Infraction. Upon review of K.C.'s conduct, at worst, his actions constitute a Level III infraction which is punishable by, among other things, an in-school or out-of-school suspension of three to five days. K.C. was initially given an out-of-school suspension of ten days which is consistent with a Level IV infraction.

Petitioners contend that K.C. should not have been removed from school indefinitely without having undergone "progressive" discipline. Petitioner relies on D.L.G. and B.B.G. on behalf of minor child, O.G. v. Board of Educ. Of the Township of Milburn, OAL Decision No. 489-10 (November 12, 2010) and M.R. on behalf of minor child, D.R. v. Board of Trustees of the Hoboken Charter School, OAL Decision No. 89-10 (March 22, 2010). Therein the Commissioner concluded that a student cannot be expelled unless it was a second infraction warranting possible suspension or expulsion, and after having served a long-term suspension for the earlier infraction.

I note that the term "expulsion" as defined by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.5, is the discontinuance of educational services or discontinuance of payment for educational services. Based upon this definition I disagree with Petitioners that K.C. was expelled from The Academies. However, he was permanently removed from his high school and the Board did not follow its policy of progressive discipline. In the spirit of the Court's decisions in M.R. and D.L.G., K.C. should have received some punishment short of a permanent removal. The Academies' administration deemed a ten-day out-of-school suspension sufficient punishment for the crime. K.C. has now been out of school almost two months. Based upon the foregoing and after having considered all the arguments advanced as well as the proofs offered by both sides, I CONCLUDE that Petitioners have satisfied the second condition of emergent relief because the right underlying petitioner's claim is settled based upon the arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable standard of review.

Likelihood of Prevailing on the Merits

Based upon the reasoning above, I further, CONCLUDE that the permanent removal of K.C. from school was unreasonable and that Petitioners have satisfied the third conditions of emergent relief.

Balancing of the Equities

The District contends that it must exact a penalty that sends a message to other students that K.C.'s conduct was egregious and will not be tolerated. It contends that if he is allowed back to school, the message to the students will be that "you can engage in egregious conduct and it's ok." The District further contends that it is concerned about the security of its network. Finally, the District has an interest in protecting the integrity of the trust that is accorded students who have the privilege of attending The Academies.

I disagree with the District that allowing K.C. to return to school to complete his final semester of high school sends the "wrong message." He was removed from school during his last semester of high school which "sends the message" that even a high-achieving student at the very end of his high school career will be disciplined for misconduct. I believe that this will have the deterrent impact that the District seeks.

It is not disputed that the files that K.C. was able to access should have been maintained in a password-protected environment on the network. The District has taken precautions to protect its network in ways that it admits should have previously been implement. The District can allow K.C. back to school and restrict his access to the network except with supervision. The District indicated that it identified an AP Physics instructor; however the instruction would have to take place in the school because the work requires access to the computer system. If the District is willing to allow K.C. to have access to the system for this purpose, he can be granted the same supervised access if allowed back into school. The District noted in an email to potential receiving school districts that K.C. "is aware that any placement will involve him with highly restricted or no computer access on campus...He is aware that police charges are an option we are holding open and will exercise if there is any hint that he violates another district's acceptable use policy." If this provision is operable in another district, there is no reason that it should not be operable in his home district.

The issue of trust must be judged by the legal standard of reasonableness. Under the circumstances, I CONDLUDE that it us unreasonable to assume, based upon the totality of the circumstances presented in this limited proceeding, that K.C. cannot be trusted to simply complete his course of study so that he can graduate from The Academies. Under the circumstances, Petitioners satisfied the fourth condition for emergent relief because the potential harm to K.C. if he's not allowed back to school outweighs the potential harm to the District if he is allowed back to school.

In view of the above, I CONCLUDE that the emergent relief requested by petitioners must be granted. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that petitioners' motion for emergent relief is granted.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of Education who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

118-11

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATES OF ROBERT F. GALGANO, CENTRAL JERSEY COLLEGE PREP CHARTER SCHOOL, SOMERSET COUNTY.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

In March 2010, an Order to Show Cause was served upon respondent – a non-tenured mathematics teacher – requiring him to show cause why his teaching certificate should not be suspended for unprofessional conduct pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for resigning his position on inadequate notice after two months of teaching. The respondent contended, inter alia, that he never executed a formal contract of employment and that the aforementioned statute was not applicable to him as a non-tenured charter school employee.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a binding contract is formed between two parties when there is a meeting of the minds evidenced by a written offer and an unconditional written acceptance; in the instant case, the November 2, 2009 letter offering respondent employment, which he signed as "accepted" on November 3, 2009, created a binding employment agreement to teach for the rest of the 2009-2010 school year; respondent ceased to perform his duties before the expiration of the term of his employment without the consent of the charter school, contrary to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10; respondent's conduct in announcing first that he was offering sixty days' notice of his resignation, only to leave on a one day notice a few school days later, was grossly unprofessional as it allowed no time for the school administration to smoothly transition his students to a new teacher. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that respondent's abrupt resignation without notice warrants the suspension of his teaching certificate for a period of one year.

Upon independent review of the record and the Initial Decision, the Commissioner found both an express contract between the parties and a contract implied in fact. He concurred with the ALJ that respondent's behavior warrants the suspension of his teaching certificate for a period of one year and forwarded a copy of the instant decision to the State Board of Examiners for the purpose of effectuating the suspension.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3805-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 49-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATES OF ROBERT F. GALGANO, CENTRAL JERSEY COLLEGE PREP CHARTER SCHOOL, SOMERSET COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

After review and consideration of the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the record for this case,[1] the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that respondent Galgano is subject to a one-year suspension of his teaching certificate for violating N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 when, without the consent of his employer, he ceased to perform his duties before the expiration of the term of his employment.

It is undisputed that on November 2, 2009, petitioner sent respondent an offer of employment as a full-time mathematics teacher for the 2009-2010 academic year at a salary of $49,152. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-1) On November 3, 2009, respondent signed the offer letter, checking the term "accepted," and returned same to petitioner. (Ibid.) He commenced teaching on November 4, 2009, and continued, ultimately, for two months.

In December, the school's curriculum director indicated to respondent that there were some deficiencies in his performance. Relations between Galgano and his supervisors subsequently deteriorated and respondent tendered his resignation on December 22, 2009, writing that he would "stay until a replacement [was] found for [him] or until the 60-day waiting period [was] over (February 22)." (Petitioner's Exhibit P-3)

[1] The Commissioner was not provided with a transcript of the December 10, 2010 hearing.

It is undisputed that a five-page form which the school had normally used for teacher contracts (the Long Form) – which was identified at the OAL hearing as Petitioner's Exhibit P-5 – was not presented to respondent when he was hired. Knowing this to be the case, respondent asked the principal, Bekir Duz, for a copy of 'his contract' when he came to work on January 5, 2010. When Duz realized that a Long Form had never been proffered to respondent, he asked the business administrator, Veli Altas, to give one to respondent to sign. Respondent refused, advised Altas that he would not return to work, and sent an email to Duz conveying same. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-4) The stated basis for respondent's precipitous abandonment of his position was "the school's failure to provide me with a contract of employment in a timely and professional manner . . . ." (Ibid.) Duz testified that he did not see the email until after 4 pm on January 5. (Initial Decision at 8)

The exceptions submitted by respondent have been considered, but are not persuasive. He first contends that no contract was ever formed between the parties because the November 2, 2009 acceptance letter contained insufficient terms. Citing to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-6, respondent points to the absence of a specific starting date, or information about the length of pay periods. Respondent further argues that the requirement in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-6(4) that a contract include "[s]uch other matters as may be necessary to a full and complete understanding of the contract" was violated because the November 2, 2009 written offer included far fewer terms than the Long Form.

It is axiomatic that a contract arises from an offer and an acceptance, which in the present case occurred on November 3, 2009. If parties agree on essential terms and manifest the intention to be bound by those terms, they have created an enforceable contract. See, Weichert Co. Realters v. Ryan, 128 N.J. 427, 435 (1992); West Caldwell v. Caldwell, 26 N.J. 9, 24-25 (1958); Johnson & Johnson v. Charmley Drug Co., 11 N.J. 526, 539 (1953); Knight v. New England Mutual Life, 220 N.J. Super. 560, 565 (App. Div.1987), certif. denied, 110 N.J. 184 (1988). The Commissioner finds that there was an express contract between the parties.

The offer letter from petitioner – which was expressly accepted by respondent on November 3, 2009 – sufficiently identified the nature of the services to be performed, the term of employment, and the salary to be paid in consideration of the services. The Commissioner sees no reason to invalidate an offer of employment for want of a written starting date, when the respondent admittedly commenced his employment the day after he signed the offer letter – with petitioner's blessing. Similarly, insofar as respondent worked – and was paid – for two months in petitioner's school, the Commissioner cannot conclude that the absence of a pay period schedule in the offer letter was fatal to the formation of the express contract.

Further, contracts are formed not just by executed writings – express contracts – but also by conduct, i.e. contracts implied-in-fact. Wanaque Borough Sewerage Auth. v. Twp. of W. Milford, 144 N.J. 564, 574 (1996) (Contracts are traditionally classified as express, implied-in-fact or implied-in-law. The contract is express if the agreement is manifested by written or spoken word, and implied-in-fact if the agreement is manifested by other conduct). Contracts implied in fact are no different than express contracts, although they exhibit a different way or form of expressing assent than through statements or writings. Ibid. Even without the accepted written offer of November 3, 2009, the parties in the instant case evidenced their assent to the offered employment relationship by respondent's assumption and continuation of teaching duties for several weeks, and by petitioner's payment of the promised remuneration therefor.

In summary, having manifested his assent to the offer of employment by signing and returning the offer letter, and having ratified his assent by performing in the offered position for two months and by accepting the offered remuneration, petitioner cannot now take the position that there was no contract. Nor is it of any consequence that respondent's contract with petitioner was formed differently than the contracts between petitioner and other employees.

Respondent's second argument appears to rely on language in the Long Form. More specifically, respondent refers to the last paragraph in the Long Form which reads: "This contract must be signed and returned by the Employee no later than _____. Failure by [sic] Employee to submit this Contract to the CJCP before this date nullifies this Contract K. and the offer of employment." The Commissioner finds that neither this language nor any other language in the blank Long Form controls the case, because at the time the contract between the parties was formed, that document was neither offered by petitioner nor accepted by respondent. Altas' subsequent presentation of the blank Long Form to respondent for signature does not negate the contract that had been entered into by the parties two months prior. [2]

In connection with Altas' proffer to respondent of a Long Form for signature, respondent contends that Altas advised him: "without a signed contract you cannot work here." (Initial Decision at 6) At the OAL hearing, Altas denied saying this. After consideration of this single material factual dispute, the ALJ found Business Administrator Altas credible. (Initial Decision at 6-7)

The Commissioner must defer to the ALJ's credibility finding unless it is clearly arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. See, e.g. D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div.

[2] The irrelevance of the blank Long Form renders moot respondent's assertion that its language must be construed against petitioner.

2004) and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c). A review of ALJ Bass' discussion of the bases for her credibility determination reveals nothing arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. To the contrary, the ALJ's description of Altas' non-aggressive demeanor and her consideration of other pertinent facts – such as his lack of authority to dismiss staff and the fact that threatening respondent with dismissal was counter to the school's interests until a replacement was hired – was adequate support for her finding that Altas did not tell respondent that failure to sign the Long Form would mean immediate termination of his job.

Regarding the one-year license suspension recommended by the ALJ, respondent urges that the penalty is too severe. He observes that the period of instructional disruption caused by him was no longer than that which occurred in October 2009, before the beginning of his employment by the school, and refers to the fact that the school administrators had already been obliged to contend with an abrupt departure before his sudden resignation on January 5, 2010. The Commissioner cannot regard these facts as mitigating circumstances. Respondent was cognizant that his students' instruction had been significantly disrupted before he arrived and surely could not have failed to foresee that another disruption only two months later could have an exponentially negative effect on their education. Nor did the fact that the school administrators had to replace the first mathematics teacher early in the year lessen the inconvenience caused by respondent's subsequent abrupt departure.

Finally, respondent contends, ignoring established precedent, that N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 does not apply to charter schools and that the Commissioner consequently has no authority to suspend respondent's teaching certificate. This contention was adjudicated some years ago and rejected by the Commissioner, whose decision was affirmed by the Appellate Division of Superior Court. See, IMO Suspension of the Teaching Certificate of Nadira Raghunandan, Grey Charter School, Newark, Essex County, et al., Commissioner Decision No. 297-08 (July 9, 2008); In the Matter of the Suspension of the Teaching Certificate of Melissa Van Pelt, Grey Charter School, Newark, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 170-09 (May 29, 2009), aff'd 414 N.J. Super. 440 (App. Div. 2010). It will not be revisited here.

Accordingly, the recommendation in the Initial Decision that respondent's teaching certificate be suspended for one year is adopted. A copy of this decision will be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for implementation of the suspension.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 03805-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 49-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATES OF ROBERT F. GALGANO, CENTRAL JERSEY COLLEGE PREP CHARTER SCHOOL, SOMERSET COUNTY.

Brenda Liss, Esq., for petitioner Central Jersey College Prep Charter School (Riker, Danzig, Scherer, Hyland and Perretti, attorneys)

Sanford Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent Robert Galgano (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 18, 2011 Decided: February 3, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Central Jersey College Prep Charter School (CJCP), seeks an order suspending respondent's teaching certificate for a period of one year, contending that he resigned from his teaching position with inadequate notice. Respondent, Robert Galgano, replies that he never executed a formal contract of employment, and that, accordingly, N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 does not govern his employment relationship with CJCP.

On March 10, 2010, at the request of CJCP, the Commissioner of Education ("the Commissioner") entered an Order directing Galgano to show cause why his teaching certificate should not be suspended for unprofessional conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10. Galgano filed an answer on March 26, 2010. On April 22, 2010, the Commissioner transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case.

Via letter memorandum dated June 23, 2010, Galgano moved to dismiss the petition on the grounds that N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is inapplicable to charter-school employees. CJCP replied via letter dated July 15, 2010. Via letter order dated July 19, 2010, the motion was denied.

A hearing was conducted on December 10, 2010. Posthearing submissions were filed on January 18, 2011, at which time the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

CJCP is a charter school created under N.J.S.A. 18A:36A-1, whose mission is to provide a college-preparatory education to students from diverse backgrounds. The school, which has been in existence since 2006, currently serves students in grades 7–12. Bekir Duz is the chief education officer/lead person for CJCP. Duz functions as the principal of the school, but also reports directly to the Board of Trustees, much like a superintendent of schools. CJCP employs twenty-eight teachers, including five teachers of mathematics.

CJCP solicits candidates for teaching positions through NJHire, a New Jersey Department of Education website that advertises available positions in public education. A committee screens candidates. Hirees are asked to execute an "offer letter," which upon their signature is forwarded to the Board of Trustees for final approval. Newly hired staff receives a teacher packet, which includes employment paperwork, a formal contract of employment and a teacher handbook. The contract is returned to Duz, who maintains it on file. Other paperwork, such as tax and health-insurance forms, is completed at the business office, which likewise provides the new teacher with keys, and Internet and technology information.

Galgano's appointment was a matter of some urgency, and, accordingly, certain steps in the process were omitted. He was hired mid-year to replace a terminated teacher. Galgano's predecessor was described as totally unable to control her class. According to Duz, continuing to retain her while a replacement was sought was deemed not in the best interest of his students. While a substitute covered the class, the position was advertised in NJHire, and résumés were received and reviewed, including one submitted by Galgano.

On November 2, 2009, Galgano was interviewed by a committee comprised of Duz, curriculum supervisor Deirdre Simon, and operations manager Barish Icin. CJCP's philosophy and mission were described to him, and he was afforded an opportunity to ask questions. In light of the urgent need to find a teacher, the committee did not reflect for long, and, indeed, forwarded an offer letter to Galgano via email that very day. (P-1.) The letter offered Galgano a "'mathematics teacher' position on a full-time basis for the 2009–2010 academic year," at a salary of $49,152. Galgano was instructed to sign and return the letter by the next day, November 3, 2009, which he did. On November 4, 2009, he assumed his duties at CJCP. Galgano was assigned an eighth-grade section, two ninth-grade sections, and one mathematics elective, Honors Algebra. It is uncontroverted that contrary to typical school practice, Galgano never signed a formal of contract of employment.[1]

[1] The standard form contract was admitted as P-5 in evidence. It states that the contract of employment may be terminated "upon written notice to the Lead Person of CJCP at least sixty (60) days prior to termination." It further states that the contract must be signed and returned by a date indicated, or it is null and void. But Duz clarified that he often leaves this latter provision blank. It is intended to expedite signature of a contract presented to a new employee, and is unnecessary when a contract is promptly returned signed by that employee.

On December 7, 2009, Galgano attended a faculty meeting that soured him on his newly obtained position of employment. At the close of the meeting, which was conducted by Simon, she asked several teachers, including Galgano, to remain behind. She advised them that their classroom management was subpar. Galgano testified that he was both stunned to be included in this group, and put off by Simon's management style. His teaching had never been observed, hence he did not understand the basis for her criticism. Galgano also strongly felt that any concerns about his teaching performance should have been addressed with him privately. Indeed, Galgano was not alone in his reaction to Simon's approach. He testified that afterwards he and a colleague had a "what just happened here?" sort of conversation.

Later that week, Simon observed Galgano's classroom performance. A post-observation conference took place on December 14, 2009. Galgano left that conference increasingly concerned about his professional future at CJCP. Simon told him that he was hostile and negative, and that she was uncertain he was a good fit for the school. According to Galgano, Simon stated that she felt uncomfortable being in the same room with him. Galgano took some time to reflect, and on December 18, 2009, he emailed Duz, described his interaction with Simon, and stated, "I'm not sure of how to go forward from here if you and your staff are going to second-guess your hiring decisions after such a short period of time." (P-2.)

That day, Galgano met with Duz, Simon and Icin, and reiterated the concerns expressed in his email. Simon replied that she did not feel that Galgano was living up to the school's expectations, indicating, "You are not the teacher we expected you to be." Galgano testified that the meeting offered no resolution to the concerns expressed in his December 18, 2009, email, and that at its conclusion he felt that the parties were at a "stalemate." He conferred with his wife, and expressed the feeling that his relationship with Simon was irrevocably damaged. Accordingly, he felt that he could not have a successful tenure at CJCP; that in essence, his fate was sealed. Galgano decided to resign, and did so via letter dated December 22, 2009. (P-3.) Although he had not received a formal contract, he clearly was aware that he was obligated to give sixty days' notice, as his letter stated, "I will stay until a replacement is found for me or until the 60 day waiting period is over."

Duz did not seek to change Galgano's decision, but rather promptly turned to the business of securing a replacement. The timing was very poor, as the Christmas holiday was just days away. Nonetheless, Duz posted in NJHire, intending to release Galgano as soon as he had found a suitable alternate teacher. The holiday break intervened and Duz did not interact again with Galgano until January 5, 2010, when Galgano returned to his classes. Although January 4, 2010, was a school day, Galgano had called in sick.

Galgano testified that a colleague had advised him that sixty days' notice was required when resigning, but he wanted "the real facts," so he sent an email to Duz on January 5, 2010, asking for a copy of his contract. He sent the email with full knowledge that no signed contract existed. His colleague's advice about the required notice notwithstanding, Galgano testified that since he had not received a contract he thought he could "just walk away from the job." Accordingly, his email plainly was sent to verify his belief that, in fact, he could leave his post immediately.

Duz consulted with Veli Altas, the business administrator, and it was discovered that there was no signed contract between the parties. Duz asked Altas to secure Galgano's signature on the form contract, asserting at hearing that his sole intent was to ensure that school files were complete. Duz's testimony was credible. There would have been no other reason to seek a signed contract at that time. Although Galgano suggests that Duz's actual purpose was to formalize his obligation to remain for sixty days, Galgano had already given his commitment to do so, per his December 22, 2009, letter of resignation. On the morning of January 5, 2010, Duz was still completely unaware that Galgano intended to renege on that promise.

Altas proceeded to follow up with Galgano, per Duz's request. What transpired between them is controverted. Altas testified that he brought the form contract to Galgano's classroom at about 9:00 a.m. Standing in the doorway, he engaged in a thirty-second conversation with Galgano, who was in the midst of teaching a class. Altas advised that he wanted a signed copy of the contract for their records, gave Galgano the document, and asked that he review and sign it.

At approximately 10:30 a.m., Altas stopped by the classroom again and inquired if Galgano had signed the contract. He had not. At 3:00 p.m., Altas passed Galgano in the hallway, and again asked about the contract. Galgano stated that he had already resigned, and Altas replied that he nonetheless required a signed contract for their files. Galgano's response, as described by Altas, sounded a bit like a non sequitur. Galgano advised Altas that he would not be signing the contract, and he said to Altas, "tell Mr. Duz that I will not be coming in tomorrow."

Galgano offered a somewhat different version of their interaction. He agreed that Altas appeared at his classroom in the morning, and asked that he sign the contract. Galgano informed Altas that he was teaching class, and that he could not immediately review the contract. He suggested that Altas return later. At about 10:40 a.m. Altas did so, and Galgano advised that he would not sign the contract. He testified that Altas replied that "without a signed contract you cannot work here." Galgano was unsurprised, as he viewed this statement as consistent with the contract language, which provided that absent a signature its terms were null and void. He took Altas' comment to mean that he was no longer permitted to work at CJCP. Accordingly, Galgano advised Altas to "please inform Mr. Duz that I will stay until the end of the day." Galgano asserted that the two did not speak again.

Altas was adamant that he did not advise Galgano that he could no longer work there, stressing that such a decision would have exceeded the bounds of his authority as school business administrator. His testimony was credible. Our courts have held that "credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of witnesses . . . that are not transmitted by the record." State v. Lourito, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1998). A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness' story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963).

Concededly, Galgano's statement that he would leave at the end of the day flows logically from a warning that he could no longer work there unless he signed the contract. But implicit in Galgano's version of the exchange is an aggressive reaction by Altas to Galgano's refusal to sign, in essence a threat that Galgano sign "or else." This is simply not consistent with the overall testimony, or with Altas' demeanor as a witness. It is clear that Altas and Duz sorely needed Galgano to honor his sixty-day notice commitment, as the students in his classroom had experienced ongoing discontinuity in instruction that year. Altas undoubtedly felt troubled by the loose end created by an unsigned contract. But directing that Galgano immediately leave if he refused to sign the contract would have been contrary to CJCP's best interests.

Nor did Altas present as an individual capable of angry threats. He was so soft-spoken that he had to be asked repeatedly to raise his voice so that counsel could hear his testimony. He exuded timidity. Furthermore, Galgano's contention that he was asked to leave by Altas is inconsistent with the tenor and content of the email Galgano sent later on January 5, 2010. Galgano advised Duz that, "in light of the school's failure to provide me with a contract of employment in a timely and professional manner, I hereby resign my teaching position effective at the close of business on Tuesday, January 5, 2010." (P-4.) There would have been no purpose in sending such an email if Altas had directed him to leave, as Galgano contended at the hearing.

I FIND that Altas did not tell Galgano that he could no longer work at CJCP absent a signed formal contract. I FIND that at no time did the discussion about the contract include a statement by Altas that justified Galgano's decision to leave at the end of the day. Galgano was looking for a way to leave as quickly as possible. Accordingly, I FIND that Galgano chose not to sign the contract precisely because he thought doing so would facilitate his immediate departure from CJCP.

Both Duz and Galgano described a meeting that took place on January 5, 2010, at about 2:00 p.m., at which volunteer tutoring assignments were discussed. Galgano testified that he was not offered the opportunity to participate; he urges that he was excluded because his superiors knew he would be leaving at the end of the day. Galgano testified that he was not asked to volunteer because he was "not eligible to work there anymore." But Duz convincingly testified that during the meeting he continued to think that Galgano would honor his commitment to stay for sixty days, as he did not receive Galgano's email of immediate resignation until later, sometime after 4:01 p.m. I FIND that Duz bypassed Galgano simply because Galgano was leaving CJCP shortly, and not because he was already aware of or had authorized Galgano's abrupt departure from the school.

Duz described the impact of Galgano's sudden resignation. Galgano failed to leave substitute plans, which Duz distinguished from lesson plans, and which he explained are a road map for the substitute, including tests and other assignments. Galgano did not deny that such plans were missing, but rather contended that he was uninformed that he was obliged to leave "substitute plans." This testimony lacked credibility, as he admitted on cross-examination that he had left work for substitutes when absent in the past, both at CJCP and at prior teaching positions. Other mathematics teachers were required to prepare work for the substitute called in to replace Galgano.[2]

It took about two weeks to secure a replacement for Galgano's classes. In the interim, his classes were taught by a substitute who was not a teacher of mathematics. Duz urged that this negatively impacted the students in Galgano's classes, students for whom instruction already had been disrupted. Importantly, while Duz asserted that Galgano's actions directly correlated to decreased test scores for his former students,

[2] It is uncontroverted that Galgano worked over the school holiday to prepare remediation plans for those students who were in danger of failing State high-school-graduation examinations. These plans most surely assisted his students, and the teacher who replaced him, but I heard no testimony that reflected that such plans could be used by the substitute teacher to guide day-to-day instruction pending retention of a permanent replacement for Galgano.

particularly those in eighth grade, Duz offered no proof that this was the case. Indeed, while he testified generally about diminished test scores in the eighth grade, he conceded that he had not disaggregated the scores by class. Duz thus could not verify whether Galgano's students were responsible for the overall poor performance in eighth-grade mathematics at CJCP. But it cannot be controverted that instruction was lost when a substitute again had to cover these classes for several weeks.

Based on the totality of the evidence, I FIND that Galgano resigned prior to the expiration of the term of his employment without the consent of his administrators or the Board of Trustees. I FIND that his actions caused disruption at CJCP, and negatively impacted his administrators, his colleagues, and, most importantly, his students.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 provides that "[a]ny teaching staff member employed by a board of education . . . who shall, without the consent of the board . . . , cease to perform his duties before the expiration of the term of his employment, shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct, and the commissioner may, upon receiving notice thereof, suspend his certificate for a period not exceeding one year." See also N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.9. The Commissioner has held that the central purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is "to provide notice to the school so that a suitable replacement can be hired without adversely impacting students." Penns Grove-Carneys Point Bd. of Educ. v. Leinen, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 405, 407.

The decision to suspend a teaching certificate pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is discretionary and the Commissioner has historically evaluated all circumstances specific to an individual case. As a general rule, however, with rare exception, the Commissioner has imposed suspensions for the one-year maximum period. Black Horse Pike Reg'l Sch. Dist. v. Mooney, 1984 S.L.D. 821; In re Suspension of the Teaching Certificate of Capshaw, EDU 12318-06, Initial Decision (April 30, 2007), modified, Comm'r (June 12, 2007) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; East Amwell Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Acken, 1986 S.L.D. 2803.

The Commissioner has declined to order a full-year suspension only when presented with compelling mitigating circumstances. In Black Horse Pike Regional, supra, 1984 S.L.D. 821, for example, the Commissioner did not suspend the certificate of a staff member who, due to her husband's relocation, resigned a week earlier than required by her contract. The teacher there had an understandable reason for her slightly early departure and had met with her successor in order to discuss the educational program. She had left lesson plans and final grades for her classes. The board in Black Horse Pike Regional was able to secure a replacement before the resigning teacher's departure and there was no disruption to the continuity of instruction.

None of these mitigating factors are present here. Galgano's conduct was grossly unprofessional. Although at first offering sixty days' notice of his resignation, only a few school days later he literally walked out on his students. He offered a less-than-perfect work environment and interpersonal conflict with his administrators as excuses for his conduct. While Galgano was well within his rights to decide that the climate at CJCP was not a good fit, it was nonetheless incumbent on him to afford the administration the time needed to smoothly transition his students to a new teacher. His assertion that he was within his rights to leave without notice because he was teaching without a formal contract is unpersuasive.

Galgano was contractually bound to perform his duties as a teacher of mathematics at CJCP, the absence of a more lengthy or detailed contract notwithstanding. A binding contract is formed between two parties when there is a meeting of the minds evidenced by a written offer and an unconditional written acceptance. Morton v. 4 Orchard Land Trust, 180 N.J. 118, 129–30 (2004) (citing Johnson and Johnson v. Charmley Drug Co., 11 N.J. 526, 538–39 (1953)). Here, the November 2, 2009, offer letter, signed as "accepted" on November 3, 2009, by Galgano, created a binding employment agreement under which Galgano agreed to teach mathematics for the remainder of the 2009–2010 academic year at a salary of $49,152.

It is well settled that parties may effectively bind themselves by an informal memorandum where they agree upon the essential terms of a contract and intend to be bound by the memorandum, even though they contemplate the execution of a more formal document. The Berg Agency v. Sleepworld-Willingboro, Inc., 136 N.J. Super. 369 (App. Div. 1975). It is not necessary for a writing to contain every possible contractual provision to cover every contingency in order to qualify as a completed binding agreement. Id. at 376–77. The essential terms of the understanding between Galgano and CJCP were crystal clear, as evidenced by Galgano's conduct in assuming his duties and accepting payment for those duties.[3] Thus, while Galgano urges that he had no contract whatsoever, he had in actuality entered into a contract that bound him to teach until June 2010, unless Duz consented to a shorter notice period. Duz did so by accepting Galgano's resignation on sixty days' notice.

Moreover, Galgano's attempt to evade his obligations under N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 by relying on technical niceties of contract law ignores that the statute simply echoes a general concept of teaching professionalism. Teaching is a unique occupation, where a change in personnel can affect many young lives. Accordingly, resigning teachers must afford as much notice as administration feels is needed to ensure that education will continue uninterrupted. N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 confirms that a dedicated teacher must always put his students first. Galgano did not do so.

Indeed, while the poor test scores of his students cannot be blamed exclusively on Galgano's conduct, it is incontrovertible that his abrupt departure disrupted instruction for his students, who were forced again to be taught by a substitute for several weeks, and then adjust to what would be their third teacher of the year. Likewise, Galgano's unprofessional conduct negatively impacted his administrators, who had to scramble to secure coverage for his classroom, and his colleagues, who, in addition to their own duties, had to assist in ensuring that some modicum of instruction took place in Galgano's classroom while a replacement mathematics teacher was secured.

[3] For this reason, Galgano's reliance on the language in P-5 stating that the long form contract must be signed and returned by a date indicated, or it is null and void, is misplaced.

Galgano acted "with nary a concern about the well-being of the . . . students in need of his assistance, [CJCP's] ability to find a suitable replacement on such short notice, or the increased workload for his co-workers." Capshaw, supra, EDU 12318-06, Comm'r (June 12, 2007) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Galgano is guilty of "unprofessional conduct" within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 and that his abrupt resignation from his teaching position, without notice, warrants suspension of his teaching certificate for a period of one year.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that Galgano's teaching certificates be suspended for a period of one year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION

Petitioner appealed as excessive a one-day out-of-school suspension imposed upon M.C., a high school student, for violation of its written policy against misconduct. School officials alleged that M.C. was complicit when another student inquired whether he could ask M.C.'s girlfriend if she performed certain sexual acts. The Board contended that M.C., by failing to discourage the other student from asking the harassing question, committed an act of misconduct.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board charged M.C. with misconduct for his failure to discourage the other student from making inappropriate comments to his girlfriend; the Board has an affirmative right to require that all students understand the severity of harassing language between students, and appropriately used its discretionary powers in making the finding that M.C.'s behavior constituted misconduct; as such, the Board's action was not arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable; the penalty of a one-day out-of-school suspension was not, however, appropriate for a first offense of misconduct; and the Board did act in an arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable manner in assigning the penalty as it disregarded the circumstances and the chart of offenses and their corresponding disciplinary actions which is included in the Board's Code of Discipline; the appropriate penalty for a first offense for misconduct should have been teacher detention. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the Board's imposition of a one-day out-of-school suspension for M.C.'s misconduct should be reversed, and a penalty of teacher detention should be imposed upon M.C. in consequence for his role in this incident.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, noting that under the Board's disciplinary guide, even a fifth offense of misconduct does not result in discipline at the level of an out-of-school suspension.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Jackson Township Board of Education (Board).[1] This case involves a student, M.C., who received a one-day out-of- school suspension based upon an incident that resulted in a charge of misconduct. The Board found that M.C. was complicit when another student asked him if he could ask M.C.'s girlfriend whether she performed certain sexual acts. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in finding that M.C.'s role in the incident constituted misconduct. The ALJ, however, found that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner when it imposed a one-day out of school suspension instead of a teacher detention, which is the penalty listed in the student code of discipline for a first or second misconduct offense.

The Board takes exception to the ALJ's determination that the Board was arbitrary and capricious in assessing a one-day suspension to M.C. based on his involvement in the incident. In its exceptions, the Board contends that the ALJ disregarded the Board's responsibility to maintain order and discipline in the schools, and that it is the discretion of the administrators to assess disciplinary penalties. The Board contends that, in this instance, the individuals tasked with responding to improper student behavior believed that due to the totality of M.C.'s conduct, a higher penalty was warranted. The Board points out that the Assistant Principal testified that she felt that the one-day suspension was appropriate in this case because M.C. was aware that A.K. had intentions to ask C.L. a sexually inappropriate question, he did not attempt to prevent A.K. from asking the question, he did not report the situation to administrators and, in fact, M.C. actually agreed that A.K. could ask the question.

In its exceptions the Board also argues that although misconduct is a disciplinary offense that does not carry a corresponding penalty of suspension, the student handbook and the code of discipline indicate that the administration may modify disciplinary penalties on a case by case basis. The Board claims that the ALJ ignored the preamble of the code of discipline that specifically states, "[t]he following is a general guide for disciplinary action. All disciplinary actions are subject to determination by the administration and are not limited to the rules in this book." The Board maintains that this language clearly gives the administrators the authority to assign whatever discipline is appropriate in light of the circumstances of the alleged infraction. Finally, the Board argues that the ALJ erred when he found that M.C. had no obligation to discourage another student from engaging in harassing behavior or to inform an administrator of the circumstances.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in finding that M.C.'s role in the incident constituted misconduct. The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ – for the reasons fully detailed on pages 14-15 of his decision – that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner when it imposed a one-day out-of-school suspension instead of a penalty that corresponds to a misconduct offense in the student code of discipline.

The student handbook contains a code of discipline which provides detailed guidelines for the level of discipline a student will be subject to based on the nature and severity of a student's conduct. Pursuant to the code of discipline, students who are found to have committed misconduct are subject to the following discipline:

$1^{st}/2^{nd}$ offense – teacher detention

$3^{rd}/4^{th}$ offense – 2 after school detentions

5th offense – 1 in school suspension

In this case, M.C. was found to have committed misconduct,[2] yet he received a one-day out-of-school suspension, which is a significant deviation from the penalty listed in the disciplinary code for a student's first misconduct offense. It is without question that the disciplinary decisions of school administrators are afforded a presumption of reasonableness, and the Commissioner is mindful of the language in the preamble which provides notice that the disciplinary code is only a general guideline. However, in this case the considerable degree of deviation from the penalty for misconduct listed in the code, and the penalty that M.C. received, was not reasonable. In finding that the discipline imposed was arbitrary and capricious, the Commissioner further notes that under the disciplinary guide, even a 5th offense of misconduct does not result in discipline at the level of an out-of-school suspension. Accordingly the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

MINOR CHILD M.C.,

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY

Record Closed: December 23, 2010 Decided: February 4, 2011

BEFORE EDWARD J. DELANOY, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This is an appeal by petitioner on behalf of an eleventh-grade student seeking to reduce as excessive a one-day out-of-school suspension imposed for behavior allegedly committed during his ninth grade school year. Jackson Township Board of Education ("Board") has imposed a one-day out-of-school suspension on a now sixteen-year-old student (identified herein as "M.C.") for violation of its written policy against "Misconduct." School officials allege that, while in technology class, M.C. was asked by his friend A.K. if M.C. would mind if A.K. asked M.C.'s girlfriend, C.L., if she undertook a specific sexual act, whereupon M.C. replied, "I guess you could." The Board contends that such conduct violates a school policy prohibiting harassment, and that M.C., by failing to discourage A.K. from asking the harassing question, committed an act of misconduct.

While acknowledging that some disciplinary action may be warranted, petitioner contends that the penalty is excessive and that a lesser penalty would have been sufficient. The Board maintains that the penalty was appropriate and that Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner") cannot set aside its determination unless a finding is made that the action was "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable."

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

By notice dated June 12, 2009, the Jackson Memorial High School vice-principal notified M.C.'s parents that their child would receive a one-day out-of-school suspension for misconduct. (J-5.) The imposition of the suspension was stayed pending an appeal of the penalty by petitioner. Petitioner's parent W.C. sought a review of the decision and on or about August 4, 2009, the Board's personnel/disciplinary committee denied W.C.'s appeal, and upheld the suspension assessed to M.C. M.C. has not yet served the one-day suspension.

Petitioner's parents filed an appeal to the Commissioner on September 14, 2009, and the Board filed its answer by way of a Motion to Dismiss the Petition on or about October 30, 2009. Subsequently, on November 23, 2009, the matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for hearing as a contested case. On April 6, 2010, an Order was entered on the Motion to Dismiss, granting the motion in part and denying the motion in part, leaving the issue of whether the discipline imposed upon M.C. was excessive. The OAL held a hearing on November 12, 2010. Upon receipt of post-hearing briefs, the record closed on December 23, 2010.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The parties have stipulated to the following statement of facts (J-11), and I therefore FIND the following as FACT:

1. At all times relevant, petitioner M.C. was a 9th grade student enrolled in the Jackson Memorial High School ("Jackson Memorial").
2. At all times relevant, students A.K. and C.L. were also 9th grade students attending Jackson Memorial.
3. On June 11, 2009, while A.K. and C.L. were in gym class, A.K., a male student, asked C.L., a female student, whether she performed a certain sexual act. See Joint Exhibits J-1, J-2, and J-3. Written statements of students C.L. and A.K., each dated June 12, 2009, respectively, and written statement of Steven Bado, Physical Education Teacher at Jackson Memorial High School, undated.
4. Upon questioning by District Administration, A.K. admitted asking the question to C.L., and also indicated that petitioner, student M.C., asked him (A.K.) to ask C.L, who was M.C.'s girlfriend at the time, whether she performed the sexual act. Exhibit J-2U.
5. In his written statement regarding the incident, petitioner M.C. stated that on June 10, 2009, at or about 10:40 a.m., during their Technology and Problem Solving class, he was asked by A.K. if he (A.K.) could ask C.L. if she performed a sexual act. M.C. stated that he replied "I guess you could." M.C. also stated that he saw pictures of C.L. on A.K.'s phone and deleted the photos. See Joint Exhibit J-4, written statement of student M.C., dated June 12, 2009.
6. Thereafter, on or about June 12, 2009, Dr. Lynn Coddington, the Vice Principal of Jackson Memorial High School, charged M.C. with "Misconduct" due to his alleged involvement in the incident between A.K.

and C.L. See Joint Exhibit J-5, correspondence from Dr. Coddington to M.C.'s Parent/Guardian, dated June 12, 2009.

7. Based on the charge of "misconduct," Dr. Coddington met with M.C. and assessed him a one (1) day, out-of-school suspension. Id. The imposition of the suspension was stayed by Principal Anthony Gaita, pending an appeal of the penalty by W.C., M.C.'s father.

8. On or about August 4, 2009, the Board's Personnel/Disciplinary committee denied W.C.'s appeal, and upheld the suspension assessed to M.C. See Joint Exhibit J-6, Correspondence from W.C. to Barbara Fiero, then-President of the Jackson Township Board of Education, dated June 24, 2009.

9. On or about August 4, 2009, the Board's Personnel/Disciplinary committee denied W.C.'s appeal and upheld the suspension assessed to M.C. See Joint Exhibit J-7, correspondence from Thomas Gianlanella, Superintendent, to W.C., dated August 6, 2009.

10. On or about September 14, 2009, petitioner filed the within petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education, alleging, among other things, that the District failed to provide due process to M.C., and that the one-day suspension imposed on M.C. for his involvement in the incident was excessive.

11. On or about October 30, 2009, respondent filed a motion to dismiss the petition. Both parties filed written submissions on the issue, and on April 6, 2010, the Hon. Edward J. Delanoy, Jr., ALJ, issued an Order granting respondent's motion in part and denying the motion in part.

12. Pursuant to Judge Delanoy's April 6, 2010 Order, the sole remaining issue in the case is whether the discipline imposed upon M.C. is excessive.

13. M.C. has yet to serve the one-day suspension.

14. Board of Education Policy #5751, entitled "Sexual Harassment," defines sexual harassment, in part, as:

> 2. . . . sexually harassing conduct (which can include unwelcomed sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, or other favors, or other verbal, nonverbal, or physical conduct of a sexual nature) by an employee, by another pupil, or by a third party that is sufficiently severe, persistent, or pervasive to limit a pupil's ability to participate in or benefit from an educational program or activity or to create a hostile or abusive educational environment."

See Joint Exhibit 7-8, copy of Board Policy #5751

15. Board Policy #5600, entitled "Pupil Discipline/Code of Conduct," incorporates by reference a "Code of Discipline," comprised of a chart of offenses and their corresponding disciplinary action(s). The Policy states, in part, that "school responses and consequences to violations of the behavioral expectations established by the Board...are graded according to the severity of the offenses, considering the developmental ages of the pupil offenders and the pupil's histories of inappropriate behaviors." See Joint Exhibit J-9, copy of Board Policy #5600 and corresponding "Code of Discipline."

16. The "Code of Discipline" chart indicates that "all disciplinary actions are subject to determination by an administrator and are not limited to the rules in this guide," and further, states that instances of sexual harassment shall be subject to a penalty of up to two (2) days of out of school suspension ("OSS") for a first offense, with further offenses subject to penalties of five (5) and ten (10) days OSS, respectively. See Joint Exhibit J-9.

17. The 2008-2009 Jackson Memorial High School Student Planner also contains a recitation of the Student Code of conduct. See Joint Exhibit J-10, copy of relevant sections of the 2008-2009 Student Handbook, at page 50.

Testimony

FOR JACKSON TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION:

Steven Bado

Steven Bado has been employed by the Jackson Township Board of Education as a physical education/health/driver's education instructor for seventeen years. On June 12, 2009, he was instructing ninth graders in the Clayton gymnasium at Jackson Memorial High School. A freshman girl, C.L., approached him in tears. C.L. told Bado that a freshman boy, A.K., had asked her if she liked "sucking dick." Bado immediately spoke to A.K. A.K. told Bado that C.L.'s boyfriend, M.C., had requested A.K. make the inquiry of C.L. A.K. also told Bado that he was only kidding. (J-3.) Although M.C. was not present in the gym class, Bado knew M.C. from coaching him in soccer, and Bado was aware that A.K. and M.C. were friends. Bado reported the incident to the school administration.

Dr. Lynn J. Coddington

Dr. Lynn J. Coddington, currently retired, began her career as a physical education teacher, and subsequently became supervisor of the physical education department. For seventeen years, including during the 2008-2009 school year, she was a vice principal of Jackson Memorial High School. She was the supervisor responsible for the safety of the schoolchildren.

On June 12, 2009, Bado met with Coddington and told her that a young female student, C.L., had approached him in gym class and told him that she was upset regarding a sexual comment made to her by a boy, A.K. Coddington contacted the students involved in the incident, and took verbal and written statements from them on June 12, 2009. (J-1, 2.) C.L.'s statement was consistent with what she had told Bado. A.K. told her that he had been asked by C.L.'s boyfriend, M.C., to ask C.L. the sexually related question, and to let M.C. know C.L.'s answer. A.K. also told Coddington that he was only kidding regarding the question.

Coddington spoke to M.C. M.C. admitted that A.K. asked him on the previous day in technology class if he could ask C.L. the sexually related question, and M.C. told A.K., "I guess you could." (J-4.) A.K. was not forced or coerced by M.C. to ask C.L. the sexually related question. Coddington then spoke to the school principal, Doctor Gaita, and a joint decision was made to charge M.C. with Misconduct, and to suspend him one day out of school ("OSS"). M.C. was charged with Misconduct for his failure to discourage A.K. from making the sexual comments to C.L., and because M.C.'s response to A.K. was improper. M.C. was a contributor to the incident, and admitted to his involvement. M.C. was not charged with sexual harassment, although Coddington did consider it as a possible charge. Coddington communicated the misconduct charges by letter to the parent/guardian of M.C. on June 12, 2009. (J-5.)

Coddington became aware of a history of incidents between C.L. and A.K. when she took their statements. A.K. had previously made an upsetting statement to C.L. in which M.C. was not involved.

The Jackson Memorial Student Planner ("Planner") is given to all students. (J-10.) The charge of Misconduct carries with it for the first or second offense a penalty of teacher detention. The third or fourth offense carries with it a penalty of two days after-school- detention, and for a fifth offense, the penalty is a one-day in-school-suspension. (J-10 at 49.) OSS is not a penalty listed for Misconduct. The Planner also recognizes serious and gross misconduct, (J-10 at 50-51), and the charge of serious misconduct encompasses sexual harassment. (J-10 at 50.) A charge of serious misconduct encompassing sexual harassment carries a charge for a first offense of two days out of-school suspension, and a parent conference. (J-10 at 50.)

Coddington felt the administration did have discretion to implement discipline under the Planner, except in the instance when a law is broken. Pursuant to section VI of the Planner, the Code of Discipline begins with the following preamble, "The following is a general guide for disciplinary action. All disciplinary actions are subject to determination by the administration and are not limited to the rules in this book." (J-10 at 46.) In addition, the Jackson School District High School Code of Discipline states that, "The following is a general guide for disciplinary action. All disciplinary actions are subject to determination by an administrator and are not limited to the rules in this guide." (J-9 at 4.) Discipline is normally handled in a progressive manner. The Jackson School District High School Code of Discipline also states that violations of behavioral expectations should be graded according to the severity of the offenses, considering the developmental ages of the pupil offenders and the pupils' histories of inappropriate behaviors. (J-9 at 1.) Coddington stated that M.C.'s misconduct behavior was in the form of an answer to a question.

FOR PETITIONER:

M.C.

M.C., currently age sixteen, began as a freshman at Jackson Memorial High School during the 2008-2009 school year. On June 12, 2009, M.C. was fifteen years old.

On June 11, 2009, M.C. was in his technology class working on a mousetrap car. A.K. was in the technology class with M.C. The two were not friends, but rather were acquaintances. M.C. was having difficulty getting the mousetrap car to work and he was becoming annoyed and frustrated. A.K. approached M.C. and asked M.C. if it was all right if he asked C.L. if she "sucks dicks." C.L. was M.C.'s girlfriend in school, but the two did not see each other outside of school because of C.L.'s busy schedule. M.C. was not paying attention to A.K., but rather continued to work on his mousetrap car. M.C., in attempting to terminate the conversation so he could concentrate fully on his project, made a passing remark to A.K. that, "I guess you could." (J-4.) He gave this answer to A.K. so that A.K. would leave him alone. M.C. did not think A.K. would ask C.L. the question. M.C. never told A.K. to talk to C.L.

C.L. had told M.C. that A.K. was bothering her, and M.C. asked A.K. to stop. A.K. had been interested in C.L., and he had inappropriate pictures of her on his cell phone. M.C. advised Dr. Coddington about the photographs.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In addition to the stipulated facts above, I FIND the following additional FACTS:

On June 11, 2009, M.C. was in his technology class working on a mousetrap car. A.K. was in the technology class with M.C. The two were not friends, but rather were acquaintances. M.C. was having difficulty getting the mousetrap car to work, and he was becoming annoyed and frustrated. A.K. approached M.C. and asked M.C. if it was all right if he asked C.L. if she "sucks dicks." C.L. was M.C.'s girlfriend in school, but the two did not see each other outside of school because of C.L.'s busy schedule. M.C. was not paying attention to A.K., but rather continued to work on his mousetrap car. M.C., in attempting to terminate the conversation, made a passing remark to A.K. that, "I guess you could." He gave this answer to A.K. so that A.K. would leave him alone to work on his car. M.C. did not think A.K. would ask C.L. the question. M.C. never told A.K. to talk to C.L.

On June 12, 2009, while in the Clayton gymnasium at Jackson Memorial High School, A.K. asked C.L. if she liked "sucking dick." C.L. became upset and went to Bado in tears. M.C. was not present in the gym class.

M.C. admitted to Dr. Coddington that he told A.K., "I guess you could," in response to A.K.'s inquiry. Coddington then spoke to the school principal, Doctor Gaita, and a joint decision was made to charge M.C. with Misconduct, and to suspend him one day out-of-school ("OSS"). M.C. was charged with Misconduct by Coddington and Gaita based upon his failure to discourage A.K. from making the sexual comments to C.L., and because M.C.'s response to A.K. was improper. M.C. was not charged with sexual harassment. Coddington communicated the misconduct charges by letter to the parent/guardian of M.C. on June 12, 2009.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Establishment of an educational program requires rules and regulations necessary for the maintenance of an orderly instructional program and the creation of an educational environment conducive to learning. R.R. v. Board of Educ., 109 N.J. Super., 337 (Ch. Div. 1970). The New Jersey Legislature has recognized that harassment, intimidation or bullying disrupts a student's ability to learn and hampers the school's ability to educate its students in a safe environment. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.

Courts and administrative agencies have demonstrated an increased willingness to protect victims of harassing behavior and to require school districts to carry out their obligation to stop such abuse. Most notably, in Shore Regional High School Bd. of Educ. v. P.S. ex rel. P.S., 381 F.3d 194 (3rd Cir. 2004), the Third Circuit held that a school district violated the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act because of its inability to protect a student from a pattern of bullying and harassment. Similarly, in L.W. v. Toms River Reg. Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. CRT 8431-01, http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/final/crt8535-01.pdf, the Director of the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights held a school district liable for civil damages and penalties under the Law Against Discrimination for tolerating a hostile educational environment of intimidation and bullying based on sexual orientation.

Local boards of education have been expressly charged with protecting the health, safety and welfare of its students, and ensuring the orderly conduct of the academic process. When a local board has acted within its authority, its actions carry a presumption of validity and will not generally be disturbed, absent an affirmative showing that its judgment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd., 46 N.J. 581 (1966); Quinlan v. North Bergen Bd. of Educ., 73 N.J. Super. 40, 46-7 (App. Div. 1962).

The imposition of discipline on students is considered within the discretionary powers of the school board, and the decision of a local board as to the appropriate penalty to be imposed upon a student for a disciplinary infraction should not be disturbed, absent evidence that the board's action was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. J.D. and E.D. o/b/o B.D. v. Bd. of Ed. of Toms River Reg. Sch. Dist., EDU 6009-97 Initial Decision (December 29,1997 adopted, Comm'r (July 8, 1998)), http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html.

In matters involving the exercise of a local board of education's discretion, the scope of the Commissioner's review is "not to substitute his judgment for that of those who made the evaluation but to determine whether they had a reasonable basis for their conclusions." Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 296 (App. Div. 1960). "Where there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dept. of Envt'l. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd. 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974). Therefore, petitioner must demonstrate much more than simply a difference of opinion over the action taken by respondent. In order to satisfy the arbitrary and capricious standard, petitioner must prove that respondent acted in either bad faith or in disregard to the circumstances.

The Board urges that the Commissioner's jurisdiction should be limited to determining whether it acted arbitrarily, capriciously and unreasonably. If it did not, then the Board insists that the Commissioner cannot substitute his own judgment for that of local authorities.

Under federal and state law, the Board has a duty to implement strong measures to prevent the harassment of students under its care. To carry out its responsibilities, the Board enacted Policy #5600, stating that:

> Every pupil enrolled in this district shall observe promulgated rules and regulations and submit to the discipline imposed for infraction of those rules. Regulation 5600 shall include a description of school responses and consequences to violations of the behavioral expectations established by the Board that, at a minimum, are graded according to the severity of the offenses, considering the developmental ages of the pupil offenders and pupils' histories of inappropriate behaviors pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(c)5.

The Board also set forth in its 2008-2009 Planner that sexual harassment was defined as:

> . . . unwelcome sexual advances, requests for sexual favors, and other inappropriate verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature when made by any member of the school staff to a student, or when made by any student to another student when: CHANGED

1. Submission to such conduct is made either explicitly or implicitly a term or condition of a pupil's education, or when:
2. Submission to or rejection of such conduct by an individual is used as the basis for academic decisions affecting that individual, or when:
3. Such conduct has the purpose or effect of substantially interfering with an individual's academic performance or creating intimidating, hostile, or offensive education environment.

Sexual harassment, as set forth in Section 11A, may include, but is not limited to the following:
KKK. Verbal harassment or abuse;
LLL. Pressure for sexual activity;
MMM. Repeated remarks to a person
NNN. Unwelcome touching;
OOO. Suggesting or demanding sexual involvement accompanied by
PPP. Implied or explicit threats concerning grades, job, etc.

(J-10 at 40.)

M.C. had received a copy of the Planner and was presumably familiar with its contents. The Board was also familiar with its contents. The Planner put both parties on notice that the Board would not tolerate "student conduct that in any way disrupts class work or involves substantial disorder or impedes the rights of others. Such behavior may be cause for suspension or expulsion." (J-10 at 40.) In addition, the Planner, in Section VI, entitled, "Code of Discipline" states that, "The following is a general guide for disciplinary action. All disciplinary actions are subject to determination by the administration and are not limited to the rules in this book." (J-10 at 46.)

Section VI of the Planner, entitled, "Code of Discipline," allows for three areas of misconduct. They are General Misconduct, Serious Misconduct, and Gross Misconduct. (J-10 at 46-56.) A subcategory of General Misconduct is Misconduct, and it provides various penalties for its violation, including teacher detention for a first/second offense. (J-10 at 49.) OSS is not listed as a penalty thereunder. Serious Misconduct includes the subcategory of Sexual Harassment, and provides for a first offense - 2 OSS; parent conference. (J-10 at 50.)

M.C. was charged with Misconduct for his actions under the category of General Misconduct. Nevertheless, M.C. was punished with one day OSS, a penalty seemingly more fitting under the more egregious category of Serious Misconduct, subcategory Sexual Harassment or Harassment of any Kind. The Board's justification for such a result is that it was imposed under the discretionary powers of the administration. Two issues therefore arise. First, does the conduct of M.C. in telling A.K., "I guess you could," when asked by A.K. if he could make a sexually suggestive comment to C.L., arise to the level of Misconduct? Second, if it does, did the Board properly exercise its discretion in punishing M.C. with one-day OSS, a penalty not provided for in the Student Planner for the act of Misconduct, but rather more suited for an offense under the more egregious category of Serious Misconduct, when M.C. was not charged with such a violation?

As to the first issue, M.C. admitted to, and is charged with, telling A.K., "I guess you could," when asked by A.K. if he could make a sexually suggestive comment to C.L. According to the Board, M.C. was charged with Misconduct for his failure to discourage A.K. from making the sexual comments to C.L. and because M.C.'s response to A.K. was improper, and for failing to report A.K. to a teacher or administrator. Therefore, M.C. was a contributor to the incident. I am not convinced that the Board is correct in this analysis, and I do not believe that M.C. necessarily did anything wrong in simply uttering the words, "I guess you could."

M.C. credibly testified that he was having difficulty getting his mousetrap car to work and he was becoming annoyed and frustrated. A.K. approached M.C. and asked M.C. if it was all right if he asked C.L. if she "sucks dicks." M.C. was not paying attention to A.K. but rather continued to work on his mousetrap car. M.C., in attempting to terminate the conversation, made a passing remark to A.K. that, "I guess you could." He gave this answer to A.K. so that A.K. would leave him alone to work on his car.

M.C. did not think A.K. would ask C.L. the question. M.C. never told A.K. to talk to C.L. M.C.'s words were never communicated to the female "victim" C.L., but rather were made to his male "friend" A.K.

M.C. did not have any affirmative obligation to discourage another student from any behavior that the other student may have chosen to undertake. M.C.'s role as a student is not to oversee and correct the behavior of his peers. Student discipline is the responsibility of the teachers and administration. M.C.'s role in the school is to get an education while not being disruptive, causing disorder, or impeding the rights of others. He did none of those things here. In addition, M.C.'s young age at the time of the incident should be considered a mitigating factor. Nevertheless, there must also be a balancing of the student's behavior with the knowledge that the Board is required to maintain discipline in its schools. Absent a determination that the Board's decision to charge M.C. with Misconduct is arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious, the Board must be given deference to its discretionary powers in making its finding. The Board is seeking to eliminate all forms of harassment in its schools. The Board has an affirmative right to require that all students understand the severity of harassing language between students. An aggressive approach to this issue is necessary. The Board did not act in an arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious manner in using its discretionary powers in making its finding. I therefore CONCLUDE that the finding of the Board that M.C.'s conduct did constitute Misconduct was correct, and that the finding did not constitute arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious behavior.

As to the second issue, an examination must be made to determine if the penalty of one-day OSS is correct. The Board charged M.C. with Misconduct. Under the terms of the Planner, as a first offender, M.C. should receive teacher detention. However, using its discretion, the Board saw fit to increase M.C.'s penalty to one-day OSS. This is a punishment that is akin to the more egregious charge of Serious Misconduct, which carries a two-day OSS penalty for a first offender under a charge of Sexual Harassment or Harassment of any Kind. W.C. on behalf of M.C. argues that this penalty was excessive, while the Board argues that it has discretion under the documents to impose this higher penalty, and that in any event, such a determination is not arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious.

Once again, a balancing must be undertaken with the knowledge that the Board is required to maintain discipline in its schools. Absent a determination that the Board's decision to charge M.C. with one day OSS for Misconduct is arbitrary, unreasonable or capricious, the Board must be given deference to its discretionary powers in making its finding.

In imposing this penalty, I CONCLUDE that the Board did act in an arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious manner in using its discretionary powers in making its finding, because it acted in disregard of the circumstances and penalties called for in the Planner. M.C. and his guardians were put on notice through receipt of the Planner as to the potential penalties for violating the rules of the high school. The Board was also aware of the Planner, and the penalties set forth therein for violating the rules of the high school. The Board argues that those penalties were subject to its discretion, the penalty given to M.C. was reasonable, and that it could impose a greater penalty than that set forth in the Planner. However, the Board cannot arbitrarily change the rules in the Planner by claiming the unilateral right to disregard them under certain circumstances. Although the Board does have discretion to choose the offense, once chosen, the Board should not have discretion to choose a penalty greater than what is called for in the Planner. Allowing the Board such unfettered discretion would make the rules in the Planner irrelevant, and that is neither fair nor appropriate to the students and their families. Any Board discretion in imposing a penalty should be limited to decreasing the penalty called for under the rules of the Planner, not increasing it. It is unfair to require a student to serve a greater penalty than which is called for under the offense for which he or she is charged by the Board. I therefore CONCLUDE that the finding of the Board that M.C. should receive one-day OSS for Misconduct was erroneous, and was arbitrary, unreasonable and capricious. The penalty was in disregard of that called for in the Planner. The appropriate penalty or a first offense for Misconduct under the dictates of the Planner should have been teacher detention, and I CONCLUDE that M.C. should be punished with teacher detention.

Based on the foregoing facts and the applicable law, I CONCLUDE that the Board's imposition of a one-day OSS for M.C.'s violation of its policy against misconduct should be REVERSED, and that the appropriate penalty should be teacher detention.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the relief requested by petitioner is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PITTSGROVE, SALEM COUNTY,	:	DECISION

Pro-se petitioner, a resident of Pittsgrove who is currently home-schooling her child, challenged – for the second time – the respondent Board's decision to send all first and second graders in its district to a school located in and leased from the neighboring Borough of Elmer. The instant petition offers a cause of action distinct from those articulated in the first petition, urging that respondent's use of the Elmer school facility violates New Jersey's compulsory education and residency laws. Respondent Board filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner's new claims were subsumed in and resolved once the send-receive relationship was adjudicated as valid and lawful, and are therefore barred under the principle of res judicata; by failing to present all of her claims in the first action, petitioner violated the entire controversy doctrine; and petitioner failed to present a factual or legal basis upon which relief can be granted. Accordingly, the ALJ granted respondent's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

Upon independent review of the record and the Initial Decision of the OAL, the Acting Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that respondent is entitled to summary decision, finding that the claims in petitioner's most recent appeal are without merit or support in the law, and precluded by both the entire controversy doctrine and by petitioner's withdrawal of her child from the public schools.

TRACEE EDMONDSON,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PITTSGROVE, SALEM COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner comes before the Commissioner for the second time, challenging the respondent Pittsgrove Board of Education's decision to send all first and second graders in its district to a school located in and leased from the neighboring Borough of Elmer.[1] As a basis for her second appeal, petitioner offers a cause of action distinct from those articulated in the first petition. Upon review of the record, Initial Decision and parties' exceptions, the Commissioner grants respondent's motion to dismiss this latest petition.

At the outset, the Commissioner must concur with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion that the entire controversy doctrine applies to this case. Petitioner's prior appeal, filed in May of 2010, implicated the same parties, facts and transactions. The theory of recovery now offered by petitioner could have – and should have – been asserted in the first appeal.

[1] The previous appeal brought by petitioner was a challenge to the send-receive relationship between Pittsgrove and Elmer which provided Pittsgrove with access to the Elmer school facility in question. The Commissioner dismissed the appeal on October 25, 2010 (Commissioner Decision No. 449-10).

The entire controversy doctrine:

> embodies the principle that the adjudication of a legal controversy should occur in one litigation in only one court; accordingly, all parties involved in a litigation should at the very least present in that proceeding all of their claims and defenses that are related to the underlying controversy. . . . The purposes of the doctrine include the needs of economy and the avoidance of waste, efficiency and the reduction of delay, fairness to parties, and the need for complete and final disposition through the avoidance of piecemeal decisions.
> [Cogdell v. Hosp. Ctr. at Orange, 116 N.J. 7, 15, (1989).]

In light of the foregoing, the instant appeal would be justifiably dismissed on procedural grounds.

The Commissioner also takes notice of respondent's exhibit R-15, a handwritten letter dated November 16, 2010 from petitioner to respondent stating her intention to home school her child. Such a withdrawal of a child from a school district's purview removes any issues concerning the child's education from the jurisdiction of the Commissioner. Nonetheless, the Commissioner will exercise his discretion to offer comment on the merits of this controversy.

The arguments in the current petition and the exceptions to the Initial Decision that petitioner submitted urge that respondent's use of the Elmer school facility violates New Jersey's compulsory education and residency laws. In the petition, these laws were initially identified as N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 and N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25[2] states, in pertinent part, that parents and guardians shall cause children from 6-16 years of age to regularly attend 1) the public schools of their districts, 2) day schools with equivalent instruction, or 3) other means of equivalent instruction. Petitioner erroneously interprets this statute to require that her child be educated in her school district.

[2]Attendance required of children between six and 16; exceptions.
Every parent, guardian or other person having custody and control of a child between the ages of six and 16 years shall cause such child regularly to attend the public schools of the district or a day school in which there is given instruction equivalent to that provided in the public schools for children of similar grades and attainments or to receive equivalent instruction elsewhere than at school.

If petitioner's interpretation were correct, it would conflict with the laws – such as N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8 – which allow school districts to enter into send-receive relationships. The rules of statutory construction dictate that laws shall, where possible, be interpreted to harmonize:

> When reviewing two separate enactments, the Court has an affirmative duty to reconcile them, so as to give effect to both expressions of the lawmakers' will. In other words, it is our obligation to make every effort to harmonize separate statutes, even if they are in apparent conflict, insofar as we are able to do so. . . . Statutes that deal with the same matter or subject should be read in pari materia and construed together as a "unitary and harmonious whole."
> [St. Peter's Univ. Hosp. v. Lacy, 185 N.J. 1, 14-15 (2005) (citing In re Adoption of a Child by W.P. and M.P., 163 N.J. 158, 182-83, (2000) (Poritz, C.J., dissenting) (citations and footnote omitted)).]

The gravamen of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 is not regulation of how districts provide public education, but rather an unambiguous directive to parents and guardians that they must see to it that their children are educated. Thus, petitioner's invocation of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-25 is rejected.

Petitioner's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 is similarly misplaced. This statute mandates, in pertinent part, that a student who is domiciled in or otherwise properly residing in a public school district on a long term basis is eligible for a free education provided by that district.[3] Rather than dictating how school districts may provide public education, this statute's plain language establishes criteria for determining in which school district a student may enroll. To construe it as petitioner urges would contradict the language and legislative intent, and ignore the directives of such other statutes as N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8.

Finally, it has been found by the Third Circuit Court of Appeals that there is nothing in New Jersey's residency or compulsory education laws . . . requiring that each school district construct and maintain its own schools in order to fulfill its obligation to educate students domiciled within the district. *See, English v. The statement shall be accompanied by documentation to support the validity of the sworn statements, information from or about which shall be supplied only to the board and only to the extent that it directly pertains to the support or nonsupport of the child. If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child. The resident may contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days of the date of the decision and shall be entitled to an expedited hearing before the commissioner on the validity of the claim and shall have the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence that the child is eligible for a free education under the criteria listed in this subsection. The board of education shall, at the time of its decision, notify the resident in writing of his right to contest the board's decision to the commissioner within 21 days. No child shall be denied admission during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. In the event the child is currently enrolled in the district, the student shall not be removed from school during the 21-day period in which the resident may contest the board's decision nor during the pendency of the proceedings before the commissioner. If in the judgment of the commissioner the evidence does not support the claim of the resident, he shall assess the resident tuition for the student prorated to the time of the student's ineligible attendance in the school district. Tuition shall be computed on the basis of 1/180 of the total annual per pupil cost to the local district multiplied by the number of days of ineligible attendance and shall be collected in the manner in which orders of the commissioner are enforced. Nothing shall preclude a board from collecting tuition from the resident, parent or guardian for a student's period of ineligible attendance in the schools of the district where the issue is not appealed to the commissioner . . . .

c. Any person who fraudulently allows a child of another person to use his residence and is not the primary financial supporter of that child and any person who fraudulently claims to have given up custody of his child to a person in another district commits a disorderly persons offense;

d. Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all-year-round dwelling place within the district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for the purposes of this section;

e. Any person for whom the Division of Youth and Family Services in the Department of Children and Families is acting as guardian and who is placed in the district by the division;

f. Any person whose parent or guardian moves from one school district to another school district as a result of being homeless and whose district of residence is determined pursuant to section 19 of P.L.1979, c.207 (C.18A:7B-12).

In her exceptions to the Initial Decision, petitioner adds N.J.S.A. 18A:8-1[4] as support for her position. However, that statute – which directs that most municipalities will subsume congruent school districts – contains no guidance about the manner in which a school district may 1) implement its responsibility to educate its students, or 2) allocate its resources. Petitioner also cites to Shuster v. Bd. of Education of Hardwick Tp., 17 N.J. Super. 357 (App. Div. 1952), a case in which a deed condition with no relevance to this controversy was construed, and Joshua Crawford, et al. v. Lucille Davy, et al., 2009 N.J. Super. LEXIS 3226 (Docket No. A-1297-07T2), an unpublished case with no precedential value.

In the latter case, a class of students from school districts that were not performing well argued, inter alia, that enforcement of the laws preventing them from obtaining free educations in other districts was unconstitutional. They demanded the restructuring of New Jersey's system of locally-based public schools, but the Appellate Division ruled that prior to there having been an opportunity for the full implementation and operation of the statutory evaluative and remedial measures outlined [in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-10 et seq.], the relief that the plaintiff class demanded was premature and, consequently, non-justiciable. Crawford v. Davy, supra, at 37. Thus – even if the case had precedential value, and even if the plaintiff class had prevailed – the relief demanded by the class was the opposite of the relief that the petitioner in this case seeks.

In summary, the claims in petitioner's most recent appeal are without merit or support in the law, and precluded both by the entire controversy doctrine and by petitioner's

Record Closed: January 11, 2011 Decided: February 2, 2011

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner challenges the send-receive agreement between Pittsgrove Board of Education (Pittsgrove) and Elmer Board of Education (Elmer) requiring her child to attend school at building located in Elmer. For the reasons discussed below, the relief sought by petitioner is DENIED.

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the OAL on December 1, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13.

The certification of Henry Bermann, Superintendent provides the pertinent background. It provides:

2. In April 2010, the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education and the Elmer Board of Education expanded a previous send-receive relationship that had encompassed grades 5 through 12, effective for the 2012-2011 school year. The expansion of the send-receive relationship meant that the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education would educate students residing in Elmer in grades K-12. In addition, the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education assumed the operation of the school buildings located in Elmer as part of the expanded send-receive relationship. The Elmer School was designated by the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education to house students from Elmer and Pittsgrove in grades 1-2, including the petitioner's child.

3. On or about May 11, 2010, the petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal, entitled "Petition: Violation of Law," with the Commissioner of Education, alleging that this new arrangement rendered the Elmer Board of Education a non-operating district, resulting in a de facto regionalization of the district that required a voter referendum. The petitioner requested that the school districts cease and desist from engaging in the non-compliant merger, that Pittsgrove return the Elmer School to Elmer, and that Pittsgrove disengage from operating a non-district facility. Exhibit R-1 (Petition: Violation of Law, dated May 10, 2010).

4. On or about June 21, 2010, the petitioner filed a second Petition of Appeal, entitled "Request for Commissioner Ruling," disputing the authority of the Elmer Board of Education to permit Pittsgrove to operate the Elmer School. The petitioner requested that the Elmer Board of Education cease leasing the Elmer School to Pittsgrove and that the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education cease as operator of the Elmer School. Exhibit R-2 ("Request for Commissioner Ruling, dated June 18, 2010).

5. On or about July 30, 2010, the petitioner also filed tenure charges against [Superintendent] myself with the Secretary of the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education. The charges, which were ultimately not certified by the Board, alleged sixteen counts of unbecoming conduct based upon the Board's decision to enter into a send-receive relationship with the Elmer Board of Education. Exhibit R-3 (Statement of Charges, dated July 30, 2010).

6. The petitioner thereafter filed three motions for preliminary injunctive relief with the Commissioner. The first motion, entitled "Motion for Stay of Action," sought a stay preventing Pittsgrove from sending students to the Elmer School. Exhibit R-4 (Motion for Stay of Action). The second motion, entitled "Motion for Expedited Hearing," sought an expedited hearing. Exhibit R-5 (Motion for Expedited Hearing). The third motion, entitled "Motion for Emergent & Interim Relief," sought tuition from the Pittsgrove Township School District for her child to be educated outside the District pending the Commissioner's final decision. Exhibit R-6 (Motion for Emergent & Interim Relief). On or about August 20, 2010, the three motions were dated, amended and submitted to Administrative Law Judge W. Todd Miller and counsel for both Pittsgrove and Elmer. Exhibit R-7.

7. In response to the original Petition of Appeal, the Respondents, Pittsgrove Township Board of Education, joined by the Elmer Board of Education, filed a Motion to Dismiss.

8. On September 10, 2010, the Administrative Law Judge . . . issued a decision granting the Respondents' Motion to Dismiss in which he concluded that:

> Elmer and Pittsgrove BOEs were lawfully permitted to expand their send-receive relationship in 2010 to include grades K-4, resulting in Elmer now sending all of its students to Pittsgrove. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. This event was not a > regionalization under N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34. It was an exercise of managements' prerogative permitted by law. Therefore a referendum was not required. While I agree that Elmer is now a non-operating school district because Pittsgrove receives all of Elmer's students, that action still does not equate to regionalization or de facto regionalization. The BOEs were lawfully permitted to proceed under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8 (the send-receive statute) rather than the regionalization statute N.J.S.A. 18A:13-34.

Exhibit R-8 (Initial Decision on Motion for Summary Decision, dated September 10, 2010).

9. On October 25, 2010, the Acting Commissioner of Education affirmed the decision of Administrative Law Judge, dismissing the Petitions of Appeal and motions for emergent relief filed pursuant thereto. Exhibit R-9 (Commissioner's Decision, dated October 25, 2010).

10. The petitioner thereafter filed a Notice of Appeal with the New Jersey Superior Court, Appellate Division. Exhibit R-10 (Notice of Appeal and Case Information Statement, dated October 29, 2010).

11. During the course of the aforementioned proceedings, the petitioner refused to send her child to the Elmer School to start the 2010-2011 school year. As a result, the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education was required to file truancy charges against the petitioner in Pittsgrove Township Municipal Court.

12. In response, the petitioner also filed charges against the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education in Pittsgrove Township Municipal Court, alleging violations of the residency, compulsory education and regionalization laws. Exhibit R-11 (Pittsgrove Township Municipal Court Summons, dated October 13, 2010).

13. On or about October 12, 2010, the petitioner also filed a third Petition of Appeal, entitled "Violation of Compulsory Education and Residency Laws," with the Commissioner, alleging that the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education, by requiring her child to attend the Elmer School pursuant to its send-receive relationship, is in violation of the compulsory education and residency statutes. Exhibit R-12 (Violation of Compulsory Education and Residency Laws, dated October 12, 2010).

14. On or about October 26, 2010, the petitioner filed a fourth motion for emergent relief, entitled "Emergent Issues – Request/Submissions," requesting that the Pittsgrove Township Board of Education fund home instruction for her child. Exhibit R-13 (Emergent Issues – Request/Submissions, dated October 26, 2010).

15. On November 9, 2010, Pittsgrove Municipal Judge Theodore Baker found the petitioner guilty of truancy, and assessed a fine of $100 per day for the forty-one days that the petitioner had refused to send her child to school.

16. That same day, the petitioner filed a fifth motion for emergent relief, entitled "Expedited Emergent Issues – Request/Submission," seeking relief from Judge Baker's order. Exhibit R-14 (Expedited Emergent Issues – Request/Submission, dated November 9, 2010).

17. On November 16, 2010, the parties appeared again in Pittsgrove Municipal Court. At that time, the petitioner signed a letter stating that she would be home schooling her child pending the resolution of the pending action before the Commissioner. Exhibit R-15.

18. To date, the petitioner has filed a total of three Petitions of Appeal and five Motions for Emergent Relief with the Commissioner.[1] The legal claims set forth in all of these pleadings involve the same parties and arise from the same factual basis; that is, the 2010 decision of the Pittsgrove and Elmer Boards of Education to enter into an expanded send-receive relationship, which includes the lease and operation of the Elmer School by the Pittsgrove BOE and the sending of all Pittsgrove and Elmer students in grades 1-2, including the petitioner's child, to the Elmer School.

FACTUAL SUMMARY

Petitioner is a resident of Pittsgrove. She has a daughter who is in second grade. Pittsgrove and Elmer are neighboring towns. In 2010 Pittsgrove and Elmer expanded their send-receive relationship. The end result of the 2010 agreement is that Pittsgrove now services all of the children from both districts. To accomplish this task, Pittsgrove utilizes some of the existing school buildings in Elmer.

Petitioner's daughter was assigned to a school building in Elmer rather than Pittsgrove. Petitioner has refused to send her child to the Elmer school for reasons that are unclear. Petitioner simply states that Pittsgrove is her domicile and her daughter is entitled to be educated the town where she is domiciled. Indeed, Pittsgrove, (petitioner's home town) is the provider of the educational services for her daughter, albeit at a building in Elmer. Petitioner seeks payment for out-of-school instruction encompassing twenty hours per week. She refuses to send her child to Elmer and has been prosecuted for truancy.

CONCLUSIONS

In a matter previously filed[2] with this ALJ, petitioner challenged the 2010 decision of the Elmer and the Pittsgrove districts to expand their send-receive relationship to include grades K-4. (R-8). The expanded relationship resulted in all students from Elmer being educated by the Pittsgrove Board of Education. Pittsgrove agreed to assume operations of certain school buildings located in Elmer, as part of the expanded relationship.

[1] And, as noted above, the Petitioner has also pursued this matter by filing tenure charges and charges in Pittsgrove Municipal Court.

[2] Tracee Edmondson v. Borough of Elmer Board of Education and Township of Pittsgrove Board of Education, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 6992-10 (Decided September 10, 2010). (R-8).

Petitioner asserted, inter alia, that a referendum was required prior to expanding the send-receive agreement and that the districts engaged in deception and fraud. (R-1). Petitioner argued that the districts were regionalized without voter approval, rendering Elmer a non-operating district. Petitioner sought a cease and desist order, return of the school buildings to Elmer, and for Pittsgrove to stop operating a non-district facility. (R-1).

I determined that petitioner's claims were without merit. Summary Decision was granted in favor Pittsgrove and Elmer on September 10, 2010. I observed that:

> School districts that have the necessary accommodations may receive, or may be required to receive pupils from another district not having sufficient accommodations in exchange for tuition. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8; English v. Bd. of Educ., 301 F.3d 69, (3d Cir. N.J. 2002). Send-receive relationships are subject to the supervision of the commissioner. Bd. of Ed. Merchantville v. Bd. of Ed. Township of Pennsauken, 204 N.J. Super. 508, 499 (App. Div. 1985). Elmer and Pittsgrove entered into a send-receive relationship in 1976. It was amended in 2003 and again in 2010. The 2010 amendment left the EBOE with no students within its district. All of the students are now sent to Pittsgrove.
>
> The legislature promulgated N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43 to 51, in an effort to merge and consolidate small non-operating school districts for operational efficiency and cost cutting. The law became effective June 30, 2009, and if read literally, is only applicable to those small non-operating districts at the time of its passage. ("Non-operating district" means a school district that is not operating schools on the effective date [June 30, 2009]). Under this new law any district this is "non-operating" on the effective date of the legislation will be eliminated.

I concluded that the districts acted well within the statutory framework for establishing a send-receive relationship. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. The districts had a pre-existing send-receive agreement dating back to 1976. The fact that the relationship expanded to include all of the students from Elmer did not require a referendum and was otherwise in compliance with the law. On October 25, 2010, the Commissioner of Education affirmed the initial decision. (R-9).

Pittsgrove is fulfilling its constitutional requirements by offering petitioner a free public school education. N.J. Const. 1947, art. VIII, § IV par. 1. Whether Pittsgrove accomplishes this in buildings located within its own boundaries or in buildings found in adjacent towns is not particularly relevant, absent some undue hardship, unreasonable burden or similar reason. Here petitioner has repeatedly objected without stating any cogent legal or factual basis. Petitioner embarked on a substantial petition filing campaign in an effort to frustrate or stop the send-receive agreement. The initial case decided by the undersigned is on appeal with the Appellate Division. While pending appeal petitioner filed tenure charges; multiple requests for rulings with the commissioner; requests for injunctive relief; request for stays; multiple motions for emergent relief; and municipal court charges against Pittsgrove. This type of shotgun approach blurs the genuine issues in dispute and complicates the procedural aspects of the case.

RES JUDICATA

Res judicata is a legal principle this is applied when "an issue has been definitely decided by judicial decision" Black's Law Dictionary (9th ed. 2009). A claim is barred under res judicata when (1) the prior judgment is final and valid, (2) the parties in the prior action are identical to or in privity with the parties in the pending action, and (3) the claim in the later action relates to the same occurrence or transaction as the earlier action. Reid v. Reid, 310 N.J. Super. 12 (App. Div. 1998).

In the case at hand, a: 1) final judgment was rendered on the validity of the districts' expansion of their send-receive relationship; 2) petitioner was a party to that action; and 3) many of the claims previously presented (or cognizable) are the same or similar as those addressed by the prior judgment. In the prior action, petitioner challenged to entire concept (macro approach) of an expanded send-receive agreement. She attacked the process and the statutory authority. These claims were dismissed on the merits resulting in a judgment.

Unsuccessful in the former case, petitioner now attacks the smaller parts (micro approach). For example, she argues that her daughter cannot be sent to Elmer from Pittsgrove under the send-receive agreement and asserts the right to tuition reimbursement for out-of-school instruction because the send-receive agreement violates her domicile (her daughter's right to receive an education in her resident town, as opposed to adjacent town). All of these (micro) claims were subsumed in and resolved once the send-receive relationship was adjudicated as valid and lawful. Successive filings are to be avoided. I CONCLUDE that petitioner's new claims are barred under the principle of res judicata.

ENTIRE CONTROVERSY

The entire controversy doctrine holds that all aspects of a controversy between the same parties should be litigated in a single action. R. 4:30A. The goal is to avoid waste, duplication, inefficiency, and piecemeal decisions resulting in protracted and expensive litigation. Here petitioner should have filed all of her claims (macro and micro; substantive and procedural) in one proceeding. Again the parties and the source of the controversy, and therefore all of the claims, were cognizable in the first action. Having failed to join the present claims in the first action, petitioner violated the entire controversy doctrine. I so CONCLUDE.

MERITS OF PETITIONER'S CLAIM

Summary Decision

Assuming res judicata and Entire Controversy doctrine do not stand scrutiny, respondent is also entitled to summary decision. The rules governing motions for summary decision in an OAL matter are embodied N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. These provisions mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary judgment should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits, which may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving party, to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court, in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of American, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary judgment. Therein the Court stated:

> The determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the Motion Judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party... are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

There is no merit to petitioner's claim for tuition reimbursement. This issue was addressed squarely in English v. Bd. of Educ., 301 F.3d 69, 2002 (3d Cir. N.J. 2002), cert. denied 537 U.S. 1148 (2003). A district has an obligation to educate, at its own expense, all persons, between the ages of five and twenty who are domiciled within the district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. However it does not require a district to construct and maintain its own schools in order to fulfill this obligation. Rather, a district may enter into a send-receive relationship with another district whereby it sends its pupils to the receiving district's schools for one grade or more (N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8) in return for a tuition payment that does not exceed the "actual cost" of the students enrolled, (N.J.S.A. 18A:38-19), with "actual cost" defined in detail by the New Jersey Administrative Code. N.J.A.C. 6A:23-3.1.

I CONCLUDE that the Pittsgrove fulfilled its constitutional and statutory obligation providing petitioner's child a free public school education in Elmer, pursuant to a send-receive agreement lawfully executed between the two districts. In fact Pittsgrove is the community in which petitioner resides, and Pittsgrove is the provider of the educational service, but is merely using buildings formerly occupied by and located in Elmer to met its commitments. Thus petitioner's child is not being sent to another district. She is being educated by her resident board of education.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to present a factual or legal basis upon which relief can be granted.

ORDER

Based upon the forgoing, respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED. The action filed by petitioner is DISMISSED based upon the principles of res judicata, Entire Controversy doctrine, and rules governing Summary Decision.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF HOBOKEN, HUDSON COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner's position was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF) prior to the start of the 2009-2010 school year. He contends that the Board's failure to renew his contract was a termination of employment and violated his tenure and seniority rights as a janitorial/maintenance employee. The Board asserts that petitioner was properly removed pursuant to a RIF and that he did not have tenure in his position.

The ALJ found that: petitioner held a unique position with requirements that replicated his education and work experience, and was very different from that of the district's janitorial employees; accordingly, petitioner's position was not within the general category of employees protected by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4; and petitioner did not have tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and does not have any rights to employment with respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4. The ALJ denied petitioner's appeal and dismissed the case.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto – filed in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

Petitioner's exceptions charge that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) reached inappropriate conclusions of law because he erroneously failed to adopt or give proper weight to a number of petitioner's proposed findings of fact which petitioner claims were supported by hearing testimony and documentary evidence. In so arguing, petitioner recasts and reiterates his advancements made below. As it is determined that petitioner's exception presentation raises no relevant or material arguments/issues left unaddressed by the ALJ, it merits no further discussion here.

Upon full consideration of the record in this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted at the OAL on September 22 and 27, 2010 – the Commissioner, specifically concluding that the ALJ's factual findings and resultant conclusions of law are comprehensive and fully supported by the record, agrees with the ALJ that petitioner's position was not within the general category of employees protected by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4; that petitioner did not have tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3; and, therefore, he does not have any rights to employment with the Hoboken Board of Education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons clearly articulated therein and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 09558-09
AGENCY DKT. NO. 149-7/09

ONOFRIO MEZZINA,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF HOBOKEN, HUDSON COUNTY,
Respondent.

Sheldon H. Pincus, Esq., for petitioner (Bucceri and Pincus, attorneys)

Marie-Laurence Fabian, Esq., and Eli S. Scheiman, Esq., for respondent (Porzio, Bromberg & Newman, attorneys)

Record Closed: October 26, 2010 Decided: February 3, 2011

BEFORE RICHARD McGILL, ALJ:

This matter involves a petition by Onofrio Mezzina ("petitioner") in which he alleges that a determination by the Board of Education of the City of Hoboken ("respondent") not to renew his contract for the 2009-2010 school year was in reality a termination in violation of his tenure and/or seniority rights as a janitorial/maintenance employee. Petitioner seeks a determination that respondent's actions constitute a violation of his tenure and/or seniority rights and an order requiring respondent to appoint him to a position with the scope of his tenure and seniority with back pay and benefits.

Respondent contends that petitioner was properly removed pursuant to a reduction in force and that he did not have tenure in his position. Respondent requests dismissal of the petition with a specific determination that petitioner has not acquired tenure and is not entitled to further employment with respondent.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed his petition with the Commissioner of Education on July 8, 2009, pursuant to the Commissioner's authority to hear and determine controversies concerning the school laws under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Respondent filed an answer on August 3, 2009, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on August 19, 2009, for determination as a contested case.

ISSUES

The issues in this proceeding are as follows: (1) whether petitioner had tenure as a maintenance employee; (2) whether respondent violated petitioner's tenure and/or seniority rights; and (3) if so, the relief to be granted.

FACTS

Petitioner testified on his own behalf, and he called as a witness Patrick Gagliardi, who was respondent's Superintendent of Schools for ten years ending in June 2007. Timothy Calligy, who is employed as respondent's Director of Facilities, testified for respondent.

Respondent's cross-examination of former Superintendent Gagliardi suggested a bias in favor of petitioner both as to the decision to hire him in December 2002 and as to testimony in this proceeding, but respondent's witness, Director of Facilities Calligy, gave essentially the same testimony as to the actual events. Therefore, irrespective of former Superintendent Gagliardi's motivation in hiring petitioner or any bias that he has in favor of petitioner, there is no real dispute as to the actual course of events.

Based upon the evidence presented at the hearing, I FIND as follows:

1. Petitioner began his employment with respondent on December 11, 2002, in the position of Maintenance/Air Conditioning and Commercial Appliance Repair.

2. Petitioner's education included a trade school, where he completed a course entitled "Electronics – Radio and TV" in 1969, and Lincoln Technical Institute, where he took a course entitled "Air Conditioning and Refrigeration" in 1979.

3. Petitioner's relevant work experience included three years as an electric apprentice and more than twenty years with Frigidaire/Electrolux as a service technician and lead technician in the area of major appliances and air conditioners.

4. Petitioner held multiple certifications including Type I and Type II technician as required by 40 C.F.R. Part 82, Subpart F.

5. At the beginning of December 2002, petitioner was unemployed.

6. Petitioner's wife was the secretary of former Superintendent Gagliardi.

7. Mrs. Mezzina was also a friend of former Superintendent Gagliardi's wife.

8. Director Calligy was hired on June 18, 2001. At the time, his title was different, but his duties were the same.

9. Director Calligy was responsible for the long-range facility plan, and on a day-to-day basis, he oversees the custodial and maintenance staff.

10. The long-range facilities plan covers all systems including heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC).

11. The school district was spending approximately $165,000 per year on outside contractors for work related to HVAC equipment and the boilers.

12. Former Superintendent Gagliardi and Director Calligy discussed the situation and decided to hire a person to move this function in-house.

13. Director Calligy was not particularly knowledgeable about HVAC, and he knew that Mrs. Mezzina's husband (petitioner) worked in air conditioning.

14. Director Calligy asked Mrs. Mezzina for assistance to determine the type of person who would be qualified for the job.

15. With Mrs. Mezzina's assistance, Director Calligy developed a job posting for the new position.

16. The job posting for the position of Maintenance/Air Conditioning and Commercial Appliance Repair Worker stated as follows:

PURPOSE: To promote proper maintenance of critical building systems in conjunction with a Comprehensive School Maintenance Program.

DUTIES:

1. Shall complete work assignments in accordance with the CMP.
2. Shall analyze each task in advance for tool and material requirements.
3. Shall obtain approval from the Assistant to the School Business Administrator (Facilities) prior to making purchases.

4. Shall evaluate system problems in order to determine most economical repair requirements.
5. Evaluates, with the Assistant to the School Business Administrator, (Facilities), the need to engage outside professional HVAC contractors.
6. Shall keep all workstations clean and orderly.
7. Shall routinely run applicable systems during off season to verify continued operational condition.
8. Shall be responsible for accurate accounting of Board of Education tools.
9. Shall respond to emergencies quickly and effectively.
10. Shall substitute for staff members in other categories as directed by the Assistant to the School Business Administrator (Facilities).
11. Shall perform other duties as assigned by the Assistant to the School Business Administrator (Facilities).

DESIRABLE TRAINING AND EXPERIENCE:

1. Satisfactory physical condition so as to be able to perform manual tasks requiring moderate physical strength.
2. Practical experience and training in the maintenance and repair of refrigeration and small climate control units.
3. Proven experience with a skill level in the particular area of appointment.
4. Type I Technician Certification in accordance with 40 CFR Part 82, Subpart F.
5. Type II Technician Certification in accordance with 40 CFR Part 82, Subpart F.
6. Graduation from an accredited Technical School with an emphasis on Servicing of Air Conditioning and Refrigeration units.
7. A valid New Jersey driver's license.

SALARY: Negotiable.

17. The job posting was circulated internally only.

18. No district employee met the qualifications, and none applied for the job.

19. Petitioner learned about the job posting from his wife, and he applied for the job.

20. Director Calligy interviewed petitioner and found that his resume was a good match for the qualifications set forth in the job posting.

21. Director Calligy recommended to former Superintendent Gagliardi that the school district hire petitioner.

22. Former Superintendent Gagliardi recommended respondent hire petitioner at an annual salary of $52,000.

23. On December 10, 2002, respondent passed a resolution approving the appointment of petitioner a/k/a Alfred Mezzina to the position of Maintenance/Air Conditioning and Commercial Appliance Repair at an annual salary of $52,000.

24. This figure was more than petitioner's highest salary in "the mid-40s" at Frigidaire.

25. On respondent's organizational chart, petitioner was placed in the Office of the Superintendent.

26. Petitioner had an office with a nameplate in the administration building.

27. With respect to the leave time, petitioner received twenty vacation days, fifteen sick days, three personal days and one professional day.

28. Petitioner received raises of five percent for the 2004-2005, 2006-2007 and 2007-2008 school years along with other non-union employees in the Office of the Superintendent.

29. Petitioner's main duties were to: (1) develop a comprehensive plan for maintenance and repair of HVAC systems; (2) evaluate whether to repair or replace equipment including the need for outside contractors; and (3) perform repairs that were beyond the skill set of other janitors and were previously done by outside contractors.

30. Petitioner performed other types of maintenance as well.

31. Petitioner performed hands-on maintenance work on a day-to-day basis.

32. On some days, petitioner spent more than fifty percent of his time in his office. On other days, petitioner spent five percent or less of his time in his office.

33. Petitioner maintained a daily log of his maintenance work.

34. Petitioner reported directly to Director Calligy. Petitioner spoke with Director Calligy on a daily basis, sometimes multiple times.

35. Director Calligy assigned work to petitioner and evaluated him.

36. Petitioner's evaluations ranged from satisfactory to excellent.

37. Petitioner held other non-paying titles which required specific certifications such as District Indoor Air Quality Officer and District Integrated Pest Management (IPM) Coordinator.

38. The Hoboken School Employees Association is the sole exclusive bargaining agent for all custodians and maintenance employees, and terms and conditions of their employment including pay scales are set forth in a collective bargaining agreement.

39. For a maintenance employee during the 2004-2005 school year, the salaries ranged from $24,218 for an individual with one year of service to $54,550 for one with twenty-five years of service. For the 2007-2008 school year, the corresponding range was from $27,242 to $61,361.

40. The janitorial employees were members of The Hoboken School Employees Association.

41. Petitioner was not a member of the union.

42. Petitioner received a larger salary, because he had a higher skill set.

43. Custodial and maintenance workers are not part of the Office of the Superintendent.

44. Custodial and maintenance workers do not have their own offices. They have a lunch/break room in each school.

45. Custodial and maintenance workers do not have their name on the door.

46. Leave time for custodial and maintenance workers is set forth in the collective bargaining agreement and is based on length of service. An employee would need ten years of service to receive four weeks of vacation time.

47. Petitioner's leave time would not have been consistent with the collective bargaining agreement.

48. The custodial staff worked during the February break. Petitioner did not.

49. The principal of each school evaluated the custodial and maintenance workers.

50. Respondent required petitioner to sign a contract for the position of District Wide Maintenance/HVAC Coordinator for the period from July 1, 2008, to June 30, 2009. Petitioner signed the contract on April 7, 2009.

51. Custodial and maintenance workers were not required to sign a contract.

52. Petitioner's annual salary for the 2008-2009 school year was $68,818.

53. By letter dated June 23, 2009, Superintendent of Schools John R. Raslowsky, II, advised petitioner that respondent voted not to offer him a contract for the 2009-2010 school year and that his employment with respondent would cease at the end of the June 30, 2009, work day.

54. Respondent has two full-time janitorial positions held by non-tenured staff members.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

Tenure is a status granted by statute. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 90 N.J. 63, 72 (1982). The purpose of tenure laws is to protect employees from dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Ed., 38 N.J. 65, 71 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S.Ct. 508, 9 L.Ed.2d 502 (1963).

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 provides for tenure for public school janitors. A school district may dismiss a public school janitor in connection with a reduction in force. Ibid. When any janitor is dismissed by reason of a reduction in force, the one having the least number of years to his credit shall be dismissed in preference to any other having a longer term of service. N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4.

Tenure statutes are construed liberally to achieve their beneficent ends. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 90 N.J. at 74. Terms like janitor and custodian are used in a generic sense with intent to include all janitorial and custodial employees. Barnes v. Bd. of Ed. of Jersey City, 85 N.J. Super. 42, 45 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 43 N.J. 450 (1964). In Brunner v. Bd. of Ed. of Camden, 1959-1960 S.L.D. 155, the school district wanted to remove a janitor who had been promoted to the position of chief janitor. The janitor contended that he had acquired tenure in the latter position. The Commissioner of Education stated as follows:

> While it is true that the specific title "chief janitor" is not mentioned in the law, the intent of the act is to extend protection in their employment to a general category of employees. . . . In the Commissioner's judgment, the position of chief janitor denotes a special assignment within the general classification of janitorial services and, therefore, it comes within the scope of the tenure statute.

Cases such as Barnes and Brunner are distinguishable in that they involved situations where an individual who was undisputably a janitor or custodian was promoted to another position. The question in this proceeding is whether petitioner was a janitorial employee within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 in the first place.

For the most part, petitioner's duties were different from those of the janitorial employees. Petitioner was hired to develop a maintenance plan for HVAC systems, to evaluate whether it would be better to repair or replace HVAC equipment, and generally to perform work that was previously done by outside contractors. There was some overlap with the work of other maintenance employees, but generally they did not have duties similar to those of petitioner.

Additionally, petitioner's terms and conditions of employment were much more favorable than those of respondent's maintenance and custodial employees. On respondent's organizational chart, petitioner was placed in the Office of the Superintendent, and he had his own office in the administration building. By comparison, the janitors shared a lunch/break room in each school. When he was hired, petitioner's salary was approximately double that of a maintenance worker with one year of service and roughly equal to that of an employee with twenty-five years of service. Unlike the janitors, petitioner was not a member of the union. From the start, petitioner received vacation leave which would have required ten years of service under the collective bargaining agreement. Further, petitioner had direct communication with and was evaluated by the Director of Facilities. In contrast, the custodial and maintenance workers were evaluated by the school principals.

In sum, the unique position held by petitioner with requirements that replicated his education and work experience was very different from that of the janitorial employees. The fact that petitioner did some hands-on maintenance work does not alter this assessment. Considering all of the above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's position was not within the general category of employees protected by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4. I FURTHER CONCLUDE that petitioner did not hold tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 and that he does not have any rights to employment with respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4.

Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the petition in this matter be dismissed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DECISION ON

APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF

The record of this emergent matter – which included a digital recording of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 28, 2011 – along with the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner adopts the recommended Order granting emergent relief in this matter, as he concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly stated in his decision – that petitioner H&S has satisfied the requisite standards for the granting of such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), most notably demonstrating a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of their underlying claim.

Accordingly, the application of H&S for emergent relief is hereby granted. Woodland Park is hereby enjoined from entering into the contract with Stone Creek for this project until a final determination on the merits of the entire contested case is issued. This matter shall proceed at the OAL for a recommendation as to this determination.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

H&S did not include Singer Food Service Company in its bid as its food-service equipment subcontractor because one of Singer's prequalification documents had expired. But when Stone Creek submitted the expired document, Woodland Park waived the requirement. Was this expired document likely a material defect that could not be waived? Yes. Under the test of materiality, a defect is material if waiver would undermine the standards of competition.

Tekton also included Singer in its bid as its food-service equipment subcontractor. Tekton, however, is also classified to do that work. Can Tekton likely substitute itself for Singer? No. Caselaw holds that contractors cannot substitute subcontractors after the bid has been awarded. Moreover, the bid instructions required bidders to identify their subcontractors and certify that they would use them.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Before January 26, 2011, a bid was advertised for the renovation and construction of a new cafeteria at Memorial Middle School and for the renovation and addition of a new kindergarten at Charles Olbon Elementary School in Woodland Park, New Jersey.

In the Instructions to Bidders, the project was referred to as "Renovations and New Cafeteria for the Memorial Middle School and Renovations and New Kindergarten Addition for the Charles Oblon Elementary School."

On January 26, 2011, the bids were opened. Stone Creek submitted the lowest bid ($2,385,800); Tekton submitted the second-lowest bid ($2,442,500); and H&S submitted the third-lowest bid ($2,453,900). As a result, on February 7, 2011, the contract was awarded to Stone Creek.

On February 11, 2011, H&S filed a motion for emergency relief with the Department of Education to stop Woodland Park from entering into the contract with Stone Creek. According to H&S, both Stone Creek and Tekton had submitted non-responsive bids because both Stone Creek and Tekton had listed Singer as their food-service equipment contractor when Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the School Development Authority (SDA) had already expired. Ultimately, H&S seeks the award of the contract for the project as the lowest-responsible bidder.

On February 11, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15, and the act establishing the office, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23, for a hearing under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6, and the rules of procedure established by the Department of Education to hear and decide controversies and disputes arising under school laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 to -1.17. Jurisdiction is conferred under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

On February 14, 2011, the OAL received the transmittal.

On that date, Tekton also filed a motion for emergency relief to stop Woodland Park from entering into the contract with Stone Creek because Singer's Certification of Prequalification the SDA had expired. Tekton, however, argues that it can substitute for Singer. As a result, Tekton seeks the award as the lowest-responsible bidder.

On February 16, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted this second case to the OAL and I consolidated it with the first.

On February 28, 2011, the parties appeared at the OAL for oral argument.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

The Instructions to Bidders

On pages five and six of the bid instructions, bidders and their subcontractors in the five-major branches of work were required to be prequalified by the SDA and classified by the Division of Property Management and Construction (DPMC) under N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-33. The bid instructions identified the five-major branches of work as "general construction, plumbing and gas fitting work, heating and ventilating systems and equipment, electrical work, and structural steel and ornamental iron work." In addition, bidders and their subcontracts in the five-major branches of work were required to submit "an Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA, a Notice of Classification and a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts (DPMC Form 701) from the Division of Property Management and Construction." More significantly, the bid instructions required bidders to submit this documentation for the specialty trades as well:

> Classification of Bidders
> A. For all School Facilities Projects, irrespective of project cost, all bidders and those subcontractors in the five (5) major branches of work (general construction, plumbing and gas fitting work, heating and ventilating systems and equipment, electrical work, and structural steel and ornamental iron work), must be prequalified by the SDA and classified by the DPMC pursuant to under N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-33 et seq. as to trade or work classification and aggregate rating limit, on which they must submit bids. The bidder shall submit as to the bidder and each of the subcontractors for the five (5) major branches of work and for all specialty trades for which classification is required, an Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA, a Notice of Classification and a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts (DPMC Form 701) from the Division of Property Management and Construction.
> [(Ex. B to Certif. of Brendan T. Murray, pp. 5-6 (February 11, 2011).)]

On pages eleven and twelve of the bid instructions, bidders were reminded that they had to comply with these instructions and submit these documents. To be clear, the bid instructions enumerated the forms the bidders had to complete and the documents they had to submit. Once again, bidders were instructed to submit the Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA, the Notice of Classification from the DPMC, and the Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts from the DPMC:

> Preparation of Bids
> B. All bidders must use and complete the following bid forms in full:
>
> 7. Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with following attachments as to the bidder and the subcontractors in the five (5) major branches of work and all specialty trades for which classification is required:
> a. NOTICE OF CLASSIFICATION from DPMC, as issued by the State of New Jersey, Department of Treasury, Division of Property Management and Construction (DPMC).
> b. Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts, DPMC Form 701.
> c. The New Jersey Schools Development Authority, Certificate of Prequalification, required for school facilities projects issued by the State of New Jersey Schools Development Authority (SDA).

The Form of Bid Proposal

On pages four and five of the bid proposal form, bidders were again reminded that they and their subcontractors had to be classified by the DPMC. In addition, bidders had to identify their subcontractors and certify that they would use them. Moreover, bidders were again reminded that they had to submit the same prequalification documents for their subcontractors as they had to submit for themselves. In particular, bidders had to submit their Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificates as well as the Business Registration Certificates:

SUBCONTRACTORS

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-26, in order to be eligible to submit a bid for the Project, the Bidder and its Subcontractors shall be classified by the New Jersey Department of Treasury, Division of Property Management and Construction in the following disciplines.

Identify the Subcontractors for the major trades and specialty trades listed below. By indicating the Subcontractors, the Bidder certifies that if it is awarded the bid, the named Subcontractors will be awarded the subcontracts, provided the Subcontractors are approved by the Architect. All pre-qualification documentation required for the Bidder shall also be submitted for the Major Trade and Specialty Trade Subcontractors.

All Subcontractors (irrespective of trade) must be registered by the State of New Jersey under the Public Works Contractor Act, N.J.S.A. 34:11-56.48 et seq., to work on school construction projects. The bid shall include the Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate and a Business Registration Certificate under P.L. 2004 c. 57.

[(Ex. 1 to Certif. of Jeffrey R. Merlino (February 16, 2011).)]

On page five of the bid proposal form, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, had the space to identify their subcontractors. More specifically, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C008 also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C030, Plumbing; trade C039, HVAC; trade C047, Electrical; and trade C043, Control Systems. If they were not deemed classified by the DPMC in any of those trades, then they had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

Similarly, on pages five and six of the bid proposal form, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C009, General Construction/Alterations & Additions, had the space to identify their subcontractors. For those bidders, they also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C030, Plumbing; trade C039, HVAC; trade C047, Electrical; and trade C043, Control Systems. But they also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C104, Food Service Equipment. If they were not deemed classified by the DPMC in any of those trades, then they too had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

C009 General Construction/Alterations and Additions (The Bidder must be classified in this trade, as well as the trades listed below, or engage properly classified subcontractors):

Addendum #3

Before January 26, 2011, Woodland Park revised its bid proposal form. In Addendum #3, bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C029, Structural Steel, and trade C104, Food Service Equipment; otherwise, they had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

C008 General Construction (The Bidder must be classified in this trade, as well as the trades listed below, or engage properly classified subcontractors):

With

C029 Structural Steel (Major Trade Contractor)
C030 Plumbing (Major Trade Subcontractor)

[(Ex. D to Certif. of Daniel Hernandez (February 9, 2011).)]

Given this addendum, bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, or bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C009, General Construction/Alterations & Additions, both had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C104, food service equipment, or engage properly classified subcontractors.

The Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA

Both Tekton and H&S are classified by the DPMC in Trade C 008 General Construction while Stone Creek is classified by the DPMC in Trade C009 General Construction/Alterations & Additions. Only contractors classified by the DPMC in Trade C008 General Construction, however, are also deemed by the DPMC to be classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment. Therefore, only Stone Creek had to engage a properly classified food-service equipment subcontractor—and it chose Singer.

But so did Tekton. Even though Tekton did not have to engage a properly classified food-service equipment subcontractor, it too chose Singer. As a result, both Stone Creek and Tekton listed Singer as their food-service equipment subcontractor and submitted a Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer in their bids.

Singer's certificate, however, had already expired. According to the SDA, Singer's Certificate of Prequalification had expired on December 7, 2010, and was not renewed until February 2, 2011. Although it was renewed retroactive to December 7, 2010, the certificate was still expired when Stone Creek and Tekton submitted their bids. In other words, Singer was not prequalified by the SDA when Woodland Park opened their bids on January 26, 2011.

Moreover, H&S represented that it too had considered engaging Singer as its food-equipment service subcontractor but had decided against it because Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA had expired. In fact, H&S represented that Singer's renewal had been pending for three months because the State Police had questions about Singer during its background check. For these reasons, H&S challenges the award of the contract to Stone Creek.

Paradoxically, Tekton also challenges the award of the contract to Stone Creek because Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA had expired.

Nevertheless, none of the parties challenge any of the other substantive or procedural requirements set forth in the specifications or the bids. They also stipulate that this project is not a SDA project. Finally, Stone Creek represents that eleven of the fifteen bidders listed Singer as their food-service equipment subcontractor and that only H&S listed itself as its food-service equipment contractor.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I.

Standards for Emergency Relief

Where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision prohibiting some action in a contested case, emergency relief pending a final decision on the whole contested case may be ordered upon application of a party. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The standards to be met for granting such relief are contained in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). They have since been codified for cases concerning an action by a district board of education or any other party subject to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education:

> 1 The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
>
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will not suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
>
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).]

In this case, the relevant issue is whether H&S or Tekton has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of their underlying claims.

Public Schools Contract Law

Under the Public Schools Contract Law, every contract for the performance of any service shall be awarded only by resolution of the board of education to the "lowest responsible bidder" after public advertising for bids. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a).

The "lowest responsible bidder" means the bidder who offers the "lowest price," is "responsive" to the bid, and is "responsible." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(t).

According to the statute, the "lowest price" means "the least possible amount that meets all requirements of the request," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(s); "responsible" means "able to complete the contract in accordance with its requirements," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(x); and "responsive" means "conforming in all material respects to the terms and conditions, specifications, legal requirements, and other provisions of the request," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(y).

This means that the contract must be awarded to the lowest bidder who complies with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications and that any material departure invalidates the non-conforming bid as well as any contract based on it. Meadowbrook Carting Co. v. Borough of Island Heights and Consol. Waste Serv., 138 N.J. 307, 313-14 (1994).

The Test of Materiality

These requirements notwithstanding, minor discrepancies and technical omissions can be waived. Id. at 314. The test is one of materiality. Originally set forth by Judge Pressler in River Vale v. R.J. Longo Construction Company, 127 N.J. Super. 207, 216 (Law Div. 1974), it was later adopted by our Supreme Court in Meadowbrook, supra, 138 N.J. at 315: (1) whether waiver would deprive the municipality of its assurance that the contract will be entered into, performed, and guaranteed according to its requirements; and (2) whether waiver would adversely affect competitive bidding by giving an advantage to one bidder over the other or by undermining the common standards of competition.

II.

SDA versus Non-SDA Projects

Both Woodland Park and Stone Creek argue that Stone Creek is the lowest responsible bidder who complied with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications because the bid did not require bidders to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors. In support of their argument, Woodland Park and Stone Creek rely on page four of the bid proposal. According to Woodland Park and Stone Creek, the bid proposal only required bidders to submit: (1) a Notice of Classification; (2) a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts; (3) a Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate; and (4) a Business Registration Certificate. Since Stone Creek submitted these forms and offered the lowest price, Woodland Park and Stone Creek conclude that Stone Creek was the lowest-responsible bidder.

Woodland Park and Stone Creek, however, overlook the obligatory language in the bid instructions. More specifically, on pages four to five of the bid instructions, and then again on pages eleven to twelve, Woodland Park required bidders to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors. By its own terms and conditions, Woodland Park required bidders to submit this certification in addition to the Notice of Classification, the Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts, the Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate, and the Business Registration Certificate. Although Woodland Park argues that this requirement is only for SDA projects (which this project is not) the bid documents do not make this distinction. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this distinction does not apply and that bidders were required to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors.

Mandatory versus Non-Mandatory Requirements

In the alternative, Stone Creek argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder who complied with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications because the requirement that it submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors is a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. According to Stone Creek, the requirement of prequalification or classification only applies to contractors or subcontractors in the five-major branches of work set forth in the statute.

In further support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon N.J.A.C. 19:38A-2.1(d). According to Stone Creek, this requirement of prequalification only applies to contractors when they submit their bids and only applies to subcontractors when they enter into their contracts. In other words, it does not apply to subcontractors at the time of bid.

The Appellate Division, however, rejected a similar argument in P & A Construction v. Woodbridge, 365 N.J. Super. 164 (App. Div. 2004). In that case, the governing body waived a financial statement because it was not one of the five-statutorily mandated items under the Local Public Contracts Law, N.J.S.A. 40A:11-1 et seq. Although the financial statement was not one of the five-statutorily mandated items, the Appellate Division reasoned that the protections of that law would be substantially weakened if the local contacting agency could waive any other item. Id. at 176. Finding no legislative direction, the Appellate Division held that waiver of any other bid defect must be considered under the test of materiality set forth in River Vale. P & A Construction, supra, 365 N.J. Super. at 177.

In this case, Singer is not a contractor or subcontractor in one of the five-statutorily mandated branches of work set forth in N.J.S.A. 1 8A:18A-18. And the Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA is not one of the statutorily mandated items set forth in the Public Schools Contract Law either. But given the Appellate Division's reasoning and holding in P & A Construction, I CONCLUDE that waiver of the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA must be considered under the same test of materiality set forth in River Vale.

Parenthetically, H&S and Tekton argue that the Appellate Division's decision in Begraft v. Franklin Board of Education, 133 N.J. Super. 415 (App. Div. 1975), is dispositive. In that case, the board of education disqualified a bidder which submitted its statutorily mandated qualifications after the date the bids were received but before the date the contract was awarded. Id. at 417. In affirming that decision, the Appellate Division explained that the board of education was without authority to accept the bid because the bid defect could not be waived. As a result, the Appellate Division held that qualification after the date for submission of the bid does not satisfy the requirements of the statute or the bid. Ibid.

Although this case concerns the submission of qualifications after the date the bids were received but before the date the contract was awarded, it still does not concern the submission of statutorily mandated qualifications. Again, such statutorily mandated qualifications cannot be waived. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Begraft does not apply and waiver of the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA must still be considered under the test of materiality set forth in River Vale.

The First Prong of the Test: Assurance of Performance

In considering this test of materiality, Stone Creek argues that its submission of an expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer was a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived because it did not deprive Woodland Park of its assurance that the contract would be entered into, performed, and guaranteed according to its specifications. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies on N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31. According to Stone Creek, the statute requires boards of education to give bidders the opportunity to cure any minor discrepancy or technical omission.

Stone Creek, however, overstates its reach. Under the statute, boards of education must give bidders the opportunity to present additional information to substantiate their qualifications or classifications—but only after they have first established them:

> Where there have been developments subsequent to the qualification and classification of a bidder which in the opinion of the board of education would affect the responsibility of the bidder, information to that effect shall forthwith be transmitted to the department for its review and reconsideration of the classification. Before taking final action on any such bid, the board of education concerned shall notify the bidder and give him an opportunity to present to the department any additional information which might tend to substantiate the existing classification.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31.]

In this case, Stone Creek did not first establish Singer's qualifications. Thus, there was no obligation for Woodland Park to notify Stone Creek and provide it with an opportunity to explain why Singer was still qualified. Had Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA expired after Stone Creek submitted its bid, then Woodland Park would have been obligated to provide Stone Creek with the opportunity to submit the renewal before taking final action on the award. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31 does not apply.

The Second Prong of the Test: Standards of Competition

Stone Creek also argues that its submission of an expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer was a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived because it did not adversely affect competitive bidding by giving an advantage to one bidder over the other or by undermining the common standards of competition. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon Tec Electric v. Franklin Lakes Board of Education, 284 N.J. Super. 480 (Law Div. 1995). According to Stone Creek, the case held that prequalification documents are immaterial defects that can be waived.

That case, however, is different. In that case, the prequalification document at issue was the Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change and it only had the potential to affect the classification by the DPMC. More significantly, it did not have the potential to affect the competitive-bidding process:

> With regard to the second criterion of the River Vale materiality test, the failure to submit a Prequalification Affidavit offered Tec no opportunity adversely to affect competitive bidding. The information contained in the Prequalification Affidavit concerns the bidder's current DBC classification rating, which in turn denotes a contractor's financial capacity, as well as availability of equipment and personnel, to do the job. It does not and could not influence the amount of plaintiff's or any other contractor's bid.
> [Tec Electric, supra, 284 N.J. Super. at 487.]

In this case, there is likelihood that the submission of the expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA did affect the competitive-bidding process because there is likelihood that it did affect the amount of the bids. As H&S represented, it had considered engaging Singer as its food-service equipment subcontractor but chose not to because Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA had expired. Although Stone Creek represents that eleven of the fifteen bidders listed Singer as their food-service equipment subcontractor as well, and only H&S listed itself as its food-service equipment contractor, it does not change the likelihood that it affected the amount of H&S's bid.

There is also likelihood that it lessened the pool of subcontractors. In a persuasive decision, the Appellate Division noted that to waive such conditions for some affords them an unfair-bidding advantage because it opens the pool of subcontractors for some while lessening the pool for others:

> As to the second prong of the River Vale analysis, we are in complete agreement with the trial court's findings:
> [B]oth [d]efendants were afforded an unfair bidding advantage insofar as they were not required to submit the subcontractor documentation in their initial bid submissions. Whether or not the burden of doing so is considered to be laborious, the requirement of obtaining Certificates and supporting documents from all subcontractors must surely lessen the pool of subcontractor candidates from which a > bidding contractor can choose in preparing the final bid submission. I therefore find it indisputable that a general contractor who is not required to obtain these documents prior to bid submission is placed in a position over its competitors.

> [Vanas Construction Co. v. Jersey City, A-1649-10, 2010 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 3087 (App. Div. Dec. 23, 2010).]

Finally, there is likelihood that it could create the perception of favoritism–a perception that our laws seek to avoid. See Bil Jim Construction Co. v. Manchester Twp. Bd. of Educ., 236 N.J. Super. 603 (Law Div. 1989) (where the court vacated the award and rejected all bids because the specifications failed to designate which classification was required for the contract and left the board with unbridled discretion after the bids were opened to determine which classification was required).

Although the specifications in this case designated the classifications, they also designated the qualifications. Both, however, were required for the contract. So to leave the board with the discretion after the bids were opened to waive those qualifications could create the perception of favoritism. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Tec Electric does not apply.

And given my discussion of the test of materiality and its application to this case, I CONCLUDE that the submission of the expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA by a bidder on behalf of Singer is a material defect that cannot be waived.

Therefore, I also CONCLUDE that both H&S and Tekton have a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of their underlying claims that Stone Creek is not the lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should not be awarded the contract for this project.

III.

Meanwhile, Tekton argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder because it is deemed classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment and can substitute for Singer. Both H&S and Stone Creek, however, argue that it cannot. In support of their argument, H&S and Stone Creek rely upon O'Shea v. New Jersey Schools Construction Corporation, 388 N.J. Super. 312 (App. Div. 2006).

In that case, the Appellate Division held that a general contractor may not substitute a major-trade subcontractor after a bid has been awarded because it is contrary to public-bidding laws and their underlying policies. Id. at 314.

In doing so, the Appellate Division reiterated that public-bidding statutes exist for the benefit of the taxpayers, that the underlying purpose of those statutes is to secure the benefits of public competition, and that the public-bidding statutes are to be strictly construed to achieve those ends. Id. at 319.

More specifically, the Appellate Division noted that the need to furnish the names of subcontractors along with the bid of a general contractor is also found in the public-bidding statutes of State government, State agencies, State colleges, county colleges, and the New Jersey Building Authority. Id. at 323. In particular, the court referenced boards of education and N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. O'Shea, supra, 388 N.J. Super. at 323. More significantly, the court reasoned that inconsistent treatment by the various State agencies would lead to uncertainty in the contracting community, open the door to mischief, and undermine competition in the processes. Ibid.

Although this case does not concern the substitution of a major-trade contractor, the same reasoning applies. Moreover, the bid instructions required bidders to identify their subcontractors and certify that they will use them—without making a distinction between major-trade subcontractors and specialty-trade subcontractors. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Tekton cannot substitute for Singer.

Tekton had relied on the unpublished Appellate Division decision, Contract for Science Wing Addition and Alterations v. Dobco, A-5395-07, 2010 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 443 (App. Div. March 4, 2010), in support of its argument. In that case, the Appellate Division held that the contractor could substitute one of its subcontractors because the subcontractor became unavailable after the award of the contract. It also distinguished O'Shea:

> Contractors can make changes to the subcontractors listed in their bids for performance reasons, especially when protecting the public interest. In O'Shea v. N.J. Schools Constr. Corp., 388 N.J. Super. 312, 315 n. 1 (App. Div. 2006), where we overturned a policy allowing substitution after the award of bids, we stated that our "opinion [did] not affect a general contractor's remedies if a subcontractor breaches after a contract between the general contractor and the subcontractor has been signed." In [Stano v. Soldo Constr. Co., 187 N.J. Super. 524, 534 n.3 (1983)], we refused to hold that invalidation of a contract would follow in all instances "where a proposed subcontractor named in the bidding papers becomes unavailable for some reason after the award[.]" Finally, in Serenity Contracting Group v. Borough of Fort Lee, 306 N.J. Super. 151, 157 (App. Div. 1997), certif. denied, 153 N.J. 214 (1998), we declared that there were no bidding statutes that "suggest[] a legislative design to supplant all exercises of principled business judgment by the contracting public entity that conform with the express provisions of the Law and its underlying policies."
> [Science Wing, supra, A-5395-07 at 31-32.]

This case, however, is different. Indeed, the distinction is the difference. In this case, there were no performance reasons or contractual breaches which would have necessitated substitution. More pointedly, Singer could not become unavailable after the award of the contract because it was already unavailable at the time of the bid. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Science Wing is unpersuasive and does not apply.

As such, I also CONCLUDE that Tekton does not have a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of its underlying claim that it is the lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should be awarded the contract for this project.

IV.

Finally, H&S argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder because it is classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment, named itself as the food-service equipment contractor, and does not need to substitute for Singer.

Since none of the parties challenge any of the other substantive or procedural requirements set forth in the specifications or the bids, I CONCLUDE that H&S has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of its underlying claims that it is lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should be awarded the contract for this project.

ORDER

Given my preliminary findings of fact and conclusions of law, I ORDER that H&S's and Tekton's applications for emergency relief are GRANTED and that Woodland Park is ENJOINED from entering into the contract with Stone Creek for this project until a final decision on the whole contested case is ordered.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified, or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who is authorized by law to make the final decision in this case. The final decision shall be issued without delay but no later than forty-five days from the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify, or reject this order within those forty-five days, this recommended order shall become the final decision on the issue of emergency relief under N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the papers filed in connection with the Petition for Declaratory Ruling in the matter captioned Board of Education of the Borough of Ramsey, Bergen County v. Ramsey Teachers Association, Agency Dkt. No. 48-2/11. Therein petitioner seeks a declaration as to whether or not the Board exceeded its authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-4.1 in adopting an April 28, 2009 Resolution approving a Memorandum of Agreement and Addendum to Memorandum of Agreement which adopted salary schedules for four school years, namely 2007-08, 2008-09, 2009-10, and 2010-11. The Board's submission further seeks various consequential reliefs dependent on such declaration. Please be advised that even assuming, arguendo, that the Board's request satisfied the requirements for a Declaratory Ruling pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-2.1, I have determined not to consider this matter as one for declaratory ruling, pursuant to my discretionary authority under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-2.1(a). I find, instead, that this matter should proceed as a Petition of Appeal.

Accordingly, this matter will be transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HOPEWELL, CUMBERLAND COUNTY. :

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that her son, T.K.G., was not eligible for a free public education in the Hopewell Township school district during the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner asserts that T.K.G. has been raised by K.R., his grandmother, since birth and has always been domiciled at K.R.'s home in Hopewell Township. The respondent Board contends that T.K.G. has been "kept in the home" of K.R. for reasons not involving economic hardship. After petitioner secured an order from Superior Court on May 21, 2010, granting K.R. primary residential custody, the Board conceded that subsequent to the court order, T.K.G. is domiciled in Hopewell and entitled to attend school in the district. However, respondent demands tuition reimbursement for T.K.G.'s school attendance in Hopewell from September 2009 through May 21, 2010.

The ALJ found that: C.R. is T.K.G's mother, but K.R. has been his guardian since birth; T.K.G. is and always has been domiciled in Hopewell Township with his grandmother, K.R.; N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a) provides that public schools shall be free to any school aged person who is domiciled within the school district; and the Superior Court issued an order on May 21, 2010 designating K.R. as the primary residential custodian, thereby memorializing what had always been true in fact. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the petitioner's residency appeal.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that T.K.G. has always resided in Hopewell Township. Further, by virtue of the fact that K.R. has served as T.K.G.'s de facto parent since his birth, he is domiciled with her and is entitled to attend the district schools free of charge. Accordingly, the petition was granted and the respondent Board's counterclaim for tuition was denied.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HOPEWELL, CUMBERLAND COUNTY. :

DECISION

The record of this matter[1] and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein. The Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's determination that T.K.G. is now, and was in September 2009, eligible for a free public education in respondent's district. The instant residency dispute presents unusual facts, but is easily resolved upon examination of the legislative intent underlying the relevant statutes and regulations.

The following facts are undisputed. T.K.G. was born in Maryland in 2004 while his mother, C.R., was in college. At that time C.R.'s domicile was her parents' home at 51 P. Terrace, Hopewell, New Jersey. A few days after T.K.G.'s birth, C.R.'s mother, K.R., took him back to New Jersey, and raised him at 51 P. Terrace from that day forward. When C.R. graduated from college in 2006, she returned to her parents' home in Hopewell and resided there until July 2007, when she leased an apartment at 83 C. Drive, Bridgeton, New Jersey.

[1] No transcript of the January 11, 2011 hearing in the OAL has been provided to the Commissioner.

In September 2008, T.K.G. was enrolled in a day care center that sent him for a few hours each day to a preschool class run by the Bridgeton Board of Education. As conceded by respondent in its exceptions, Hopewell did not have a pre-school program at the time. (Respondent's Exceptions at 2) C.R. used her Bridgeton address to enroll T.K.G. in the Bridgeton daycare/preschool program and brought him there in the mornings. K.R. picked him up in the afternoons.

In the following September – 2009 – C.R. registered T.K.G. for school in Hopewell. Where the registration form asked for the names of T.K.G.'s parents/guardians, she entered her and her fiance's names. (Respondent's Exhibit R-2) Where the form asked for the student's telephone number and address, she entered K.R.'s telephone number and address. (Ibid.) In response to the question on the form about what sort of residence T.K.G. lived in, including whether T.K.G. lived in "[an]other family member's" home, C.R. checked the space that indicated that none of the printed options applied to T.K.G. (Ibid.)

Subsequent to the registration of T.K.G., respondent assigned its truant consultant, Donald Wulff, to investigate T.K.G.'s residency. Wulff conducted nine early morning surveillances of K.R.'s residence in Hopewell and C.R.'s apartment in Bridgeton – over a period of four weeks. On three of the nine mornings, C.R. was observed bringing T.K.G. to K.R.'s home. On six of the occasions, as the ALJ noted, there was no evidence that T.K.G. was residing anywhere other than at K.R.'s home in Hopewell. Nonetheless, on March 8, 2010, respondent determined that T.K.G. was ineligible for a free education in Hopewell and sent notice to petitioner (at the Hopewell address) of same.

In consequence of respondent's determination, petitioner secured a court order dated May 21, 2010 memorializing K.R.'s residential custody of T.K.G. (Petitioner's Exhibit

P-1) Counsel for respondent has conceded that subsequent to the date of the Superior Court order, T.K.G. is "domiciled" in Hopewell and consequently entitled to attend school in the district. However, respondent demands tuition reimbursement for T.K.G.'s school attendance in Hopewell from September 2009 through May 21, 2010.

"Domicile" of a minor for purposes of entitlement to a free education in a given school district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, is defined by N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1)(i):

> (a) A student over five and under 20 years of age pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, or such younger or older student as is otherwise entitled by law to free public education, is eligible to attend school in a school district if the student is domiciled within the district.
> 1. A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose permanent home is located within the school district . . . .
> i. Where a student's parents or guardians are domiciled within different school districts, and where there is no court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance, the student's domicile is the school district of the parent or guardian with whom the student lives for the majority of the school year, regardless of which parent has legal custody.

While CR is TKG's biological parent, the record reveals that notwithstanding the absence of a court order, K.R. – T.K.G.'s grandmother – has served as T.K.G.'s de facto parent and/or guardian since his birth. She raised the child during the crucial bonding years of infancy. Moreover, the evidence as a whole supports petitioner's contention that when she moved to the Bridgeton apartment in 2007, T.K.G. – who at that point was over three years old – stayed in Hopewell with K.R. At the OAL hearing on January 11, 2011, C.R. testified that her son was being brought up by her parents in Hopewell, but that she enjoyed visitation, bringing T.K.G. to her apartment for overnight stays.[2] This testimony is harmonious with the results of Wulff's surveillance. (Initial Decision at 5)

The Commissioner will not punish a family which decided at the beginning of a child's life that his grandmother, rather than his biological mother, should be his primary parent. Requiring that T.K.G. leave his residence, or that the family pay tuition for his education in the district where he has always resided, would be punitive.

Further, as T.K.G.'s residence has always been in Hopewell, no attempts to 'school shop' can be attributed to C.R. or K.R. See, e.g. G.A. v. Borough of Somerville, 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 1012, 1015 (Where petitioner, a domiciliary of Somerville, had been the de facto guardian of several siblings since their arrivals in 1993, 1994 and 1995 from the Philippines, had received notices in 1995 that her siblings were ineligible for free public educations in Somerville, and had subsequently secured legal guardianship of the minor siblings, no back tuition was due to respondent; no 'school shopping,' a phenomenon which the 1994 amendments to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 were meant to curb, was suggested by the facts of the case).

The facts of this case lead to the conclusion that T.K.G.'s family has always intended that K.R. be T.K.G.'s primary parent and that T.K.G. reside with her. This conclusion is further corroborated by the fact that – as mentioned in respondent's exceptions – T.K.G. remains with his grandparents while C.R. has moved a considerable distance away after remarrying in June 2010.

In its exceptions, respondent asserts that the ALJ made an error of law in finding that K.R.'s de facto guardianship satisfies N.J.A.C. 6A: 22-3.1(a)(1)(i). That regulation states:

[2] She had so testified at the formal hearing before the respondent Board on March 8, 2010.

> A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose permanent home is located within the school district . . . . Where a student's parents or guardians are domiciled within different school districts, and where there is no court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance, the student's domicile is the school district of the parent or guardian with whom the student lives for the majority of the school year, regardless of which parent has legal custody.

Respondent reasons that since N.J.A.C. 6A:22-1.2 (Definitions) states that

> "Guardian" means a person to whom a court of competent jurisdiction has awarded guardianship or custody of a child, provided that a residential custody order shall entitle a child to attend school in the residential custodian's school district subject to a rebuttable presumption that the child is actually living with such custodian . . . .

K.R. was not a guardian of T.K.G. prior to May 21, 2010, and T.K.G. could consequently not have been domiciled in Hopewell before that date.

However, New Jersey law was never meant to penalize innocent parties, elevate form over substance or overlook the substantial state interest in ensuring the education of all its children. Gunderson v. City of Brigantine Bd. of Educ., 95 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 39, 42, adopted (Comm'r 1994), aff'd 95 N.J.A.R.2d 132 (St. Bd. 1995) (student who lived with petitioner, but whose only living parent refused to sign an affidavit assigning custody to petitioner, was entitled to a free education in the school district in which petitioner resided). T.K.G.'s family was clearly not school shopping when it enrolled him in respondent's school. The Commissioner is confident that a family court judge would have awarded K.R. residential custody prior to T.K.G.'s enrollment in school in 2009 – had the family realized that such an order would be needed and applied for same – and finds that the ALJ correctly concluded that T.K.G. is and has always been domiciled in Hopewell.

Accordingly, the petition is granted and the counterclaim is denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE HOPEWELL TOWNSHIP, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,

C.R., petitioner, pro se

Robert Malestein, Esq., for respondents

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

Record Closed: January 11, 2011 Decided: February 7, 2011

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner challenged the Board of Education's residency determination that her child, T.K.G., was not entitled to free education in the Hopewell Township School District.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The appellant requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the OAL on August 5, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The matter was heard on January 11, 2011, and the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

C.R. testified in support of her petition. Her son, T.K.G., was born out of wedlock on April 25, 2004, in the State of Maryland. His father has never at any time been a part of his life. At the time of his birth, his mother, C.R., was a full-time student at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore.

On the date of T.K.G.'s birth, C.R.'s legal residence was with her parents, E.R. and K.R., at 51 [P.] Terrace in Hopewell Township, New Jersey. Upon departing the hospital, T.K.G. was transported by his grandmother, K.R., to her home at 51 [P.] Terrace. T.K.G. has resided with his grandparents at 51 [P.] Terrace since that time. 51 [P.] Terrace is the only home T.K.G. has ever known.

C.R. continued her education at the University of Maryland, Eastern Shore as a full-time student and graduated in May 2006 with a degree in business administration. Thereafter, she returned home and took up residence with her mother and father at 51 [P.] Terrace.

In July 2007, C.R. leased an apartment at 83 [C.] Drive in Bridgeton. By that time, she had accepted employment as a customer service specialist with Pepco Holdings, Inc., a company which operates, inter alia, the Atlantic City Electric Company. T.K.G. continued to reside with his grandparents at 51 [P.] Terrace.

In September 2008, T.K.G. was enrolled at the Glory Tabernacle Daycare Center in Bridgeton, New Jersey. As part of the daycare program, T.K.G. was daily transported by the daycare center to the Geraldine Foster Preschool. He was returned to the daycare center each afternoon. His mother, C.R., dropped him off at the daycare center in the morning, and his grandmother, K.R., picked him up in the afternoon.

In September 2009, C.R. registered T.K.G. to begin school at the Hopewell Crest School in Hopewell Township. On the registration form (R-2), she listed 51 [P.] Terrace as T.K.G.'s address. She also placed K.R.'s telephone number on the registration form. One question on the form asked her to indicate if the child was residing at the home of "other family members." The form specifically references "aunt, grandfather, etc." C.R. checked the box denoted "None of the above apply." In her testimony, she explained that she marked that box because T.K.G. had always resided in K.R.'s home at 51 [P.] Terrace in Hopewell Township. K.R. has been his guardian since birth; accordingly, C.R. did not think she would be considered an "other family member."

For reasons unspecified, the school district became suspicious that T.K.G. did not reside in Hopewell Township. To pursue this issue, the school assigned its Truant Consultant, Donald Wulff, to the case. Wulff served with the Bridgeton Police Department for ten years and retired in 2007 on a disability pension. He has been employed as Hopewell Township's Truant Consultant for two years on a part-time basis. He was assigned the case on October 26, 2009, and provided with background and a picture of T.K.G.

Wulff commenced surveillance of the parties on October 29, 2009. He maintained surveillance for a period of nine days over the next month. His findings were as follows.

On October 29, 2009, he arrived at 51 [P.] Terrace at 6:30 a.m. At 7:10 a.m., a red Dodge pulled up and certain unidentified persons exited the vehicle. Wulff's view of the vehicle was obstructed, and he could not identify the persons exiting the vehicle.

On October 30, 2009, Wulff drove past 83 [C.] Drive in Bridgeton at 1:00 a.m. At that time, he observed a red Dodge Charger belonging to C.R. situated in the parking. At 6:30 a.m., he resumed surveillance of 51 [P.] Terrace, but the red Dodge was not there. He drove to 83 [C.] Drive. At 7:30 a.m., he saw C.R. and T.K.G. exit the building, enter the Dodge Charger, and depart. Wulff then drove to 51 [P.] Terrace where he observed T.K.G. exiting the red Dodge Charger.

On November 3, 2009, he arrived at 83 [C.] Drive at 6:30 a.m. The red Dodge Charger was in the parking lot. He made no observation of T.K.G. at that location. At 8:00 a.m., C.R. exited the building, got into the Dodge and drove away.

On November 4, 2009, Wulff appeared at 83 [C.] Drive at 6:30 a.m. He observed the red Dodge Charger in the parking lot. At 7:40 a.m., appellant and T.K.G. exited the building, got into the Dodge and drove away. At 2:15 p.m., he drove to 51 [P.] Terrace. A bus came to the area, but no one got off. Wulff could not specify that the vehicle he saw was T.K.G.'s bus.

On November 12, 2009, Wulff appeared at 51 [P.] Terrace at 7:15 a.m. He did not see anyone drop T.K.G. off. At 7:45 a.m., K.R. and T.K.G. emerged from the home. K.R. walked T.K.G. down the driveway, and he got on the school bus.

On November 13, 2009, Wulff appeared at 51 [P.] Terrace at 7:00 a.m. At 7:25 a.m., the red Dodge pulled in and C.R. exited the vehicle alone. C.R. entered the house. At 7:50 a.m., K.R. and T.K.G. emerged from the house and walked to the bus stop, where T.K.G. got on the bus.

On November 17, 2009, Wulff appeared at 83 [C.] Drive at 7:00 a.m. The red Dodge was not present. At 7:10 a.m., he arrived at 51 [P.] Terrace, but the Dodge was not there either. He made no further observations on that date.

On November 18, 2009, Wulff appeared at 83 [C.] Drive at 6:45 a.m. The red Dodge was in its usual parking place. At 7:15 a.m., C.R. and T.K.G. exited the building, got into the Dodge and drove to 51 [P.] Terrace.

On November 23, 2009, Wulff appeared at 51 [P.] Terrace at 7:00 a.m. He did not observe the red Dodge, nor did he see T.K.G. being dropped off at the location. At 7:45 a.m., K.R. and T.K.G. exited the house and walked down to the bus stop where T.K.G. got on the school bus. November 23, 2009, was the last date on which Wulff conducted his surveillance.

In summation, Wulff observed the two locations on nine different dates. On three occasions, he observed petitioner transport T.K.G. from 83 [C.] Drive to 51 [P.] Terrace. On the other six occasions, there was no evidence that T.K.G. was residing anywhere other than at 51 [P.] Terrace.

In her testimony, C.R. explained that T.K.G. resides with her parents at 51 [P.] Terrace. On certain nights, she has what she termed "visitation" with him. October 30, 2009, November 3, 2009, and November 18, 2009, were three of those nights.

On March 8, 2010, the Board of Education determined that T.K.G. was not entitled to free education in the Hopewell Township School District. Thereafter, on May 21, 2010, C.R. and K.R. obtained an Order from the Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division, Family Part, confirming that they share joint legal custody of T.K.G., with K.R. having primary residential custody (P-1). Counsel for the District conceded that the Board could not rebut the presumption that T.K.G. is entitled to attend school in Hopewell Township subsequent to the date of the Superior Court Order.

In her testimony, K.R. affirmed that she and her husband, E.R., have cared for T.K.G. from the time of his birth. The joint custody Order did no more than formalize the status quo.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Respondent Board of Education relied upon N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) in support of its determination that T.K.G. was ineligible to attend school in the Hopewell Township District. That statute states, in pertinent part:

> b. (1) Any person who is kept in the home of another person domiciled within the school district and is supported by such other person gratis as if he were such other person's own child, upon filing by such other person with the secretary of the board of education of the district, if so required by the board, a sworn statement that he is domiciled within the district and is supporting the child gratis and will assume all personal obligations for the child relative to school requirements and that he intends so to keep and support the child gratuitously for a longer time than merely through the school term, and a copy of his lease if a tenant, or a sworn statement by his landlord acknowledging his tenancy if residing as a tenant without a written lease, and upon filing by the child's parent or guardian with the secretary of the board of education a sworn statement that he is not capable of supporting or providing care for the child due to a family or economic hardship and that the child is not residing with the resident of the district solely for the purpose of receiving a free public education within the district. The statement > shall be accompanied by documentation to support the validity of the sworn statements, information from or about which shall be supplied only to the board and only to the extent that it directly pertains to the support or nonsupport of the child. If in the judgment of the board of education the evidence does not support the validity of the claim by the resident, the board may deny admission to the child.

The Board asserts that T.K.G. is being "kept in the home" of K.R. for reasons not involving economic hardship. Therefore, argues the Board, T.K.G. is not entitled to a free education in the Hopewell Township School District.

The Board's argument ignores the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1.(a). That statute states:

> Public schools shall be free to the following persons over five and under 20 years of age:
> a. Any person who is domiciled within the school district;

In this case, T.K.G. is now and has always been domiciled at 51 [P.] Terrace, in Hopewell Township, New Jersey. The uncontroverted testimony demonstrates that, from the time of his birth, he has physically resided at that address. Having now attained the age of five years, T.K.G. is entitled to a free education in the Hopewell Township school system.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) is intended to discourage parents from school shopping, that is, unilaterally depositing a child in a strange school district, thereby imposing upon that district a financial burden for which the district would not otherwise be obligated. But application of that portion of the statute presupposes that the child resided with its parent in a different school district to begin with. Such is not the case here. T.K.G. has been domiciled in Hopewell Township from the time of his birth. His grandmother was his de facto guardian from the time he left the hospital. The Superior Court recognized that state of affairs when it issued its order of May 21, 2010, designating K.R. as the guardian of primary residential custody. In so acting, the Superior Court did nothing more than memorialize what had always been true in fact: T.K.G. is domiciled at 51 [P.] Terrace in Hopewell Township.

The Board conceded at hearing that T.K.G. was domiciled with K.R. as of the date of the May 21, 2010, Court Order. Nothing in the record tends to prove that any other conclusion should be reached for the period prior to that date.

The issue of domicile is addressed in N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)1i, which states as follows:

> (a) A student over five and under 20 years of age pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, or such younger or older student as is otherwise entitled by law to free public education, is eligible to attend school in a school district if the student is domiciled within the district.
>
> 1. A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose permanent home is located within the school district. A home is permanent when the parent or guardian intends to return to it when absent and has no present intent of moving from it, notwithstanding the existence of homes or residences elsewhere.
>
> i. Where a student's parents or guardians are domiciled within different school districts, and where there is no court order or written agreement between the parents designating the school district for school attendance, the student's domicile is the school district of the parent or guardian with whom the student lives for the majority of the school year, regardless of which parent has legal custody.
> [Emphasis added.]

In this case, C.R. is T.K.G.'s mother, but K.R. has been his guardian since birth. The regulation specifies that when the parents or guardians are domiciled in different school districts and there is no court order or written agreement between them, the domicile is deemed to be that of the "parent or guardian" with whom the student lives the majority of the school year. In this case, that guardian is K.R. 51 [P.] Terrace in Hopewell Township is the only domicile T.K.G. has ever known. Based upon the standards set forth in the regulation, T.K.G. is unquestionably domiciled at that address.

Petitioner's residency appeal must be GRANTED.

Beth L. Finkelstein, Esq., for petitioner

Dana M. Lane, Esq., for respondent (Hill Wallack, LLP)

Record Closed: January 28, 2011 Decided: February 1, 2011

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Carolyn Gibson (petitioner) claimed that her tenure rights were violated when the district reorganized and eliminated her position. At the same time, the Board of Education of the City of Trenton (respondent) created new positions with unrecognized job titles, which she claimed were to circumvent her tenure rights. She sought an Order for the Board to place her in one of those newly created positions.

The parties agreed to a settlement of all issues in dispute and prepared a settlement agreement, which I have attached and fully incorporated herein.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed her petition with the Commissioner of Education on June 21, 2010. Respondent filed an answer on July 22, 2010. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on July 29, 2010, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13 for determination as a contested case. At a prehearing conference on November 23, 2010, counsel advised that they were close to reaching a settlement on the case. On January 4, 2011, they advised me that the settlement had been approved and would be voted upon at the next Board meeting. I received the settlement on January 28, 2011 and closed the record.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

3. The settlement is in the public interest as it conserves the Board's resources and delivers a final result whereby Gibson and the Trenton Board of Education agree to resolve the case amicably rather than incur the expense and risk the unpredictable outcome of a hearing.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a school bus driver – appealed the Department's determination to suspend her school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 after an alleged incident in which a young girl, A.L., was left on her bus in March 2010 because petitioner failed to conduct the mandated visual inspection at the end of her route. Petitioner asserted that she was a substitute driver on the route, that she did not know the children and they did not know her, and that she made every stop assigned on the directional sheet – which did not contain the name or bus stop of A.L. Respondent filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: on March 22, 2010, a young girl, A.L., was placed on a school bus driven by petitioner; petitioner parked the bus at the end of her route at a pizza shop and failed to perform the mandated visual inspection of the vehicle's interior before exiting, as is required by N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28; A.L. remained on the bus after it was parked; the child – crying but otherwise unharmed – was discovered on the bus after petitioner returned and heard a noise coming from the back of the bus; petitioner offered explanation for how the child was left on the bus, but presented no evidence in opposition to the facts showing that A.L. was left on the bus at the end of the route. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision in favor of respondent, ordered a six-month suspension of the petitioner's school bus endorsement – which is the mandatory penalty for a first offense pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 – and dismissed the petition.

Upon full review and consideration of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the Office of Criminal History Review is entitled to summary decision in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed and the respondent was directed to notify the Motor Vehicle Commission of its obligation to suspend petitioner's school bus endorsement pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 et seq., and to notify petitioner's employer that she is ineligible for the period of suspension for continued employment as a school bus driver.

v.

NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF CRIMINAL HISTORY REVIEW UNIT,

Respondent.

Donna Firman, petitioner pro se

Bryant Lawrence Horsley, Jr., Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: February 3, 2011 Decided: February 7, 2011

BEFORE EDWARD J. DELANOY, JR., ALJ:

The New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Criminal History Review Unit, intends to suspend Donna Firman's bus driver's license "S" endorsement due to an incident in which it is alleged that Firman, while serving as a school bus driver for the North Hanover Board of Education, left a child (A.L.) on the school bus which she drove. The child was discovered by Firman after she exited the bus at a pizza shop, and later returned and heard a "faint squeak" coming from near the back of the bus. Firman then walked to the back of the bus and encountered a child in her seatbelt, crying and afraid. The incident occurred on March 22, 2010. The young girl had been a passenger on the bus, which transported her from her program at Discovery School to home. The route was known as the North Hanover School District Route 7 Midday. Firman urges that she was not the regular driver on the route, she did not know the children and they did not know her, and that she made each stop assigned on the applicable directional sheet (which directional sheet did not contain the name or bus stop of the child A.L.). Firman states that she asked the last child exiting the bus if he was the last child on the bus, and the child responded affirmatively. Firman then called out several times to see if any children remained on the bus, and receiving no response, proceeded to the pizza shop on an emergent basis to use the bathroom because she felt ill. The child was left on the bus for approximately four to five minutes. The child was unharmed.

On April 8, 2010, respondent advised Firman by letter that it intended to suspend her "S" endorsement to operate a school bus, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28, which provides for such a suspension in a first instance of a driver's failure to conduct the required visual inspection of the bus at the end of a transportation route to assure that no pupil is left on the bus.[1] Firman requested a hearing to challenge the suspension, and the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on May 13, 2010.

The respondent has now moved for summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. In support of the motion, it has presented a brief, and relied on the sworn petition of appeal submitted by Firman herein.

In arguing on behalf of its motion, the respondent contends that the sole factual issues material to the matter are that the child was left on the school bus on March 22,

[1] N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28,
"A school bus driver shall visually inspect the school bus to which he is assigned at the end of the transportation route to determine that no pupil has been left on the bus. . . . ."
N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29. Violation, suspension, revocation of school bus endorsement "In the event that, after notice and opportunity to be heard, a school bus driver is found to have left a pupil on the school bus at the end of his route, his school bus endorsement shall be:
a. suspended for six months, for a first offense; or
b. permanently revoked, for a second offense."

2010, and that Firman was the driver of the bus that day. It argues that the materials offered in support of the motion amply establish these facts and that Firman has failed to demonstrate the existence of any genuine dispute of material fact that might defeat summary decision and require a full evidentiary hearing. Firman did not file a response to the motion.

SUMMARY DECISION

Summary decision, or as it is known in judicial matters as summary judgment, is a well-recognized procedure for resolving cases in which the facts that are crucial to the determination of the matters at issue are not actually in dispute and the application to that set of material facts of the applicable law and standard of proof lead to a determination of the case without the necessity of a hearing at which evidence and testimony need be taken. The procedure is equally applicable in judicial as well as executive-branch administrative cases. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The standards for determining motions for summary judgment were defined by Justice William Brennan, then a New Jersey Supreme Court Justice, in Judson v. People's Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74-75 (1954). The Supreme Court later elaborated on the motion and its standard in Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, et al., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Under the Brill standard, as in Judson, a motion for summary decision may only be granted where there are no "genuine disputes" of "material fact." The determination as to whether disputes of material fact exist is made after a "discriminating search" of the record, consisting as it may of affidavits, certifications, documentary exhibits and any other evidence filed by the movant and any such evidence filed in response to the motion, with all reasonable inferences arising from the evidence being accorded to the opponent of the motion. In order to defeat the motion, the opposing party must establish the existence of "genuine" disputes of material fact. The facts upon which the party opposing the motion relies to defeat the motion must be something more than "facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious, . . ." Judson, supra., at 75 (citations omitted). The Brill decision focuses upon the analytical procedure for determining whether a purported dispute of material fact is "genuine" or is simply of an "insubstantial nature." Brill, supra at 530. Brill concludes that the same analytical process used to decide motions for a directed verdict is used to resolve summary decision motions. "The essence of the inquiry in each is the same: 'Whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to a jury or whether it is so one-sided that a party must prevail as a matter of law.' " Id. at 536, quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, Inc., 477 U.S. 242, 251-52, 106 S.Ct. 2505, 2512, 91 L.Ed.2d 202, 214. In searching the proffered evidence to determine the motion, the judge must be guided by the applicable substantive evidentiary standard of proof, that is, the "burden of persuasion" which would apply at trial on the merits, whether that is the preponderance of the evidence or the clear and convincing evidence standard. If a careful review under this standard establishes that no reasonable fact finder could resolve the disputed facts in favor of the party opposing the motion, then the uncontradicted facts thus established can be examined in the light of the applicable substantive law to determine whether or not the movant is clearly entitled to judgment as a matter of law. However, where the proofs in the record are such that "reasonable minds could differ" as to the material facts, then the motion must be denied and a full evidentiary hearing held.

The very essence of the summary decision procedure is that in the appropriate case, the issues necessary to decide the case, that is, the material facts to which the applicable law must be applied to decide the matter, are not themselves the subject of any genuine dispute and therefore, there is no need for a testimonial proceeding. If, instead, the examination of the affidavits, certifications, and documentary evidence offered for and against the motion shows that there is a genuine dispute about any of these material facts, the motion must fail. As such, the appropriate question to be considered is, what are those material facts and are they in genuine dispute? To determine the first question, it is necessary to look at the words of the statute upon which the respondent bases its attempt to suspend Firman's endorsement.

The statutes that underlie the proposed suspension are very simple in form and there are few facts that must exist to form the basis for action thereunder. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28 only requires that a driver perform a visual inspection at the end of a route. The reason for this is stated as the need to assure that no pupil is left on the bus. Thus, evidentially it is necessary to establish that Firman was the driver of the bus in question, and she admits this in her sworn petition of appeal. If a child is left on the bus at the end of the route, the driver is to be suspended. Evidentially, that a child is left on a bus at the end of a route is itself at the very least prima facie evidence of a failure on the part of the driver to properly inspect the bus at the end of the route. The evidence offered by the Department of Education, in the form of its brief and Firman's petition of appeal, demonstrates that the child was placed on the bus, was transported on the bus, and was later found, in tears, in the pizza shop parking lot after the bus had been parked. There is clearly a prima facie showing that the child was not properly removed from the bus after the morning run. Taken together, this evidence leads to a seemingly inevitable conclusion that the child was left on the bus after it was parked, obviously without having been discovered there by the driver whose duty it was to inspect the bus and assure that no child was left behind.

It is the responsibility of a party opposing a motion for summary decision to present certifications or other evidence to establish the existence of genuine disputes of material fact. In the context of a motion for summary decision, the failure of the opposing party to offer any evidence whatsoever to support a dispute of material fact in opposition to the motion can itself support the grant of the motion. It is only where a properly plead motion is opposed by evidence of genuine dispute of the material issues that the motion is doomed. A mere denial is insufficient to defeat a properly supported motion. Although Firman did not respond to the motion, her sworn petition of appeal does not raise evidence of a genuine dispute of material issues, only an explanation for what happened. This explanation includes that she was not the regular driver on the route, she did not know the children and they did not know her, and that she made each stop assigned on the applicable directional sheet (which directional sheet did not contain the name or bus stop of the child A.L.). Firman contends that she asked the last child to exit the bus if he was the last child on the bus, and that the child responded affirmatively. Firman then called out several times to see if any children remained on the bus, and receiving no response, proceeded to the pizza shop on an emergent basis to use the bathroom because she felt ill. The child was then left on the bus for approximately four to five minutes. The child was unharmed. Firman has not offered anything to suggest that there is any genuine issue as to the material facts of this case. She admits to failing to thoroughly check her bus.

Based upon the evidence offered by the respondent, and giving all reasonable inferences to the opposing party, Firman, I FIND that on March 22, 2010, Donna Firman was the substitute bus driver on the North Hanover School District Route 7 Midday bus route. Firman and the children did not know each other. Firman drove a school bus upon which a young girl A.L. had been placed. The child and her stop were not listed on the directional sheet, and the child therefore never got off the bus. I FIND that Firman parked the bus at a pizza shop to use the bathroom, and failed to properly inspect the bus, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:39-28. As a result, she failed to discover that the young girl remained on the bus after it was parked and otherwise emptied. The child was subsequently found on the bus by Firman. The child was in tears, but otherwise not harmed. I FIND that the evidence presented by Firman does not establish any facts in material dispute. Given the limited facts that must be established to support a violation of the duty imposed by the Legislature on a school bus driver to properly inspect the bus at the end of a route to assure that no child is left on the bus, the arguments offered by the respondent amply support summary decision in its favor. And given the mandatory nature of the penalty for a first time violator of the mandate, the six-month suspension is the only outcome where the violation is proven. N.J.S.A. 18A:39-29a. The motion for summary decision is hereby GRANTED and it is hereby ORDERED that the petitioner's "S" endorsement shall be suspended for six months.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF PATRICIA MCNELIS, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES, OFFICE OF EDUCATION, PASSAIC COUNTY.	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter, the proposed "Settlement Agreement" (Agreement) and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

The Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the following observations. First, Section L of the agreement states that the Commissioner will refer this tenure matter to the State Board of Education for its review and possible action on respondent's teaching certificate(s). The parties are advised that it is the State Board of Examiners who will review the case and possibly take action.

Second, Section H of the Agreement references an action, i.e. respondent's resignation, that may have already taken place, and has therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

The foregoing notwithstanding, the Commissioner finds that the settlement is harmonious with the standards articulated in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and In re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842 (State Board 1983), and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

AGENCY REF. NO. 485-8/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF PATRICIA MCNELIS, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES, OFFICE OF EDUCATION, PASSAIC COUNTY.

Shona Mack-Pollock, Deputy Attorney General, for petitioner New Jersey State Department of Children and Families

AnnMarie Pinarski, Esq., for respondent Patricia McNelis

Record Closed: February 7, 2011 Decided: February 9, 2011

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALAJ:

On August 23, 2010 the New Jersey State Department of Children and Families ("the Department") certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming against the respondent, Patricia McNelis, a teacher employed by the Department. McNelis filed an answer denying the charges on September 21, 2010. Having deemed the charges sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary, the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the charges to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") and filed on September 24, 2010.

On October 12, 2010 at the prehearing conference, the parties began settlement negotiation. The matter was scheduled for a Settlement Conference on November 16, 2010. The parties were unable to reach settlement and hearings were scheduled for January 7 and 11, 2011. Prior to the January 7, 2011 hearing date, the parties advised the undersigned that they had reached a proposed settlement and requested an adjournment of January 7 and 11 hearing dates to allow sufficient time for clients to review and finalize the terms of settlement. Ms. McNelis and the Assistant Superintendent of the Director of the Department approved the settlement terms.

Based upon a review of the attached settlement agreement, I FIND as follows:

1. The nature of the charges has been documented by the submission of the Statement of Charges and Certificate of Determination to the Department of Children and Families.

2. Pursuant to the settlement agreement, Ms. McNelis will resign from her position effective January 7, 2011.

3. Ms. McNelis agrees not to seek further employment with the Department or its contracted agencies.

4. The proposed settlement agreement is with the consent of all parties.

5. By the terms of the proposed settlement agreement, Ms. McNelis has entered into this agreement with a full understanding of her rights.

6. Ms. McNelis has been advised that the Commissioner may refer this matter to the State Board of Education for review and that the State Board has the power to suspend or revoke teaching licenses.

7. The agreement does not contain any provisions which restrict public access under the Open Public Records Act.

I therefore CONCLUDE that this settlement agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that approval of this settlement is in the public interest.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF

Patricia McNelis

AND

The New Jersey Department of Children and Families

RECEIVED
STATE OF N.J.
OFFICE OF ADMIN. LAW
2011 FEB -8 A 8:34

The parties in this appeal have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them.

A. The Tenure Charges dated August 19, 2010 contained the following charges and proposed discipline:

Charge	Discipline	Dates Effective
1. N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6 - Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee and N.J.A.C. 4A:2- 2.3(a)11 Other sufficient cause with suspension effective May 14, 2010, to present and N.J.S.A. 18A:60-2 – Just Cause.

information regarding the underlying charges will be provided to the Public Employees Retirement System pursuant to N.J.S.A. 43:1-3.3 as amended effective April 14, 2007.

E. Appellant waives all other claims against Respondent Appointing Authority with regard to this matter, including any award of back pay, counsel fees or other monetary relief, except as may otherwise be provided herein.

F. Except for the assessment of Patricia McNelis's disciplinary record in any subsequent personnel disciplinary hearing, nothing in this agreement shall be deemed to be an admission of liability on behalf of either party. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in matters involving other employees.

G. Appellant waives all claims, suits or actions, whether known, unknown, vested or contingent, civil, criminal or administrative, in law or equity against the State of New Jersey, the New Jersey Department of Children and Families , their employees, agents, or assigns, including but not limited to those which have been or could have been made or prosecuted on account of any conduct of any party occurring at any time with respect to the events, information or disputes giving rise to this action up to the date of this agreement, including, but not limited to, all claims under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Civil Rights Act of 1991, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Family Leave Act, the Family and Medical Leave Act, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the Equal Pay Act, the Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, Title 11A - the Civil Service Act, the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act, the Occupational Safety and Health Act, the Public Employee Occupational Safety and Health Act, the New Jersey Smoking Act, New Jersey wages and hours law, public works statutes, unemployment compensation laws, disability benefits laws, the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution, any workers compensation or common law claims and any contract express or implied. This waiver includes all claims involving any continuing effects of actions or practices which arose prior to the date of this Settlement Agreement and bars the use in any way of any past action or practice in any subsequent claims, except workers compensation claims that arose during the course of employment.

H. Further, Patricia McNelis, Appellant, pursuant to N.J.A.C 4A:2-6.3, agrees to submit a General Resignation effective, January 7, 2011, and will not seek future employment with the Department of Children and Families or its contracted agencies, none of which include local school boards or private schools.

I. The parties agree that if any portion of this Settlement Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder of this Settlement Agreement shall be fully enforceable.

J. Settlement of this matter is justified and in the public interest because Ms. McNelis has agreed to resign and thus there is no need for a contested hearing on her appeal. Appellant's resignation and the accompanying withdrawal of the tenure charges is an equitable exchange for eliminating the time, uncertainty and expense connected with a tenure hearing and it achieves the Department's desired result.

K. Appellant and Respondent consent to the terms of this agreement.

L. McNelis acknowledges that she has been advised that the Commissioner may refer this matter to the State Board of Education for review. She has been further advised that the State Board has the power to suspend or revoke teaching licenses.

M. This agreement will become effective only if approved by the Commissioner of Education. Any disapproval by the Commissioner of Education shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

B. The parties have agreed to the following:

1. The total number of days of suspended pay, the Respondent has imposed on Appellant to date is as follows: from 7/26/10 through 1/7/10 (date of scheduled hearing) is 120 days.

2. The total number of days of backpay, if any, to be paid by the appointing authority to the Appellant is as follows: none.

3. Any other days from the time of last suspension day until reinstatement shall be treated as follows: not applicable.

C. The Appellant Patricia McNelis, agrees to resign from her position as a tenured Teacher 1 with the New Jersey Department of Children and Families and withdraws his/her appeal and request for a hearing, and the Respondent Appointing Authority New Jersey Department of Children and Families agrees that the following result will occur with regard to each tenure charge:

Charge(s)	Disposition
N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6 - Conduct Unbecoming a Public Employee and N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a) 11 Other Sufficient Cause to be amended to reflect N.J.A.C 4A:2-6.3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:60-2 Just Cause– General Resignation .

The parties acknowledge that under N.J.A.C. 17:2-4.5(b) and (c), no pension or seniority time may be credited for periods for which the employee is not paid by the employer.

D. New Jersey Department of Children and Families (Respondent) shall amend Appellant's personnel records to conform to the terms of the settlement. All internal records of the Department of Children and Families will be kept intact. Nothing herein shall preclude the Department from releasing information on this matter to anyone who has a release executed by appellant or as consistent with the law. Any

P.B. on behalf of minor child, Y.S.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that Y.S. does not reside in Ewing and is not eligible for a free public education in the Ewing school district. The respondent contended that Y.S. resides with her mother, Y.B., in Trenton and is dropped off in Ewing before the start of each school day. Petitioner supplied the school district with a Joint Residential Custody Order, entered September 9, 2010 and effective August 1, 2010, the application for which requested joint residential custody because "the child resides at both residences". Respondent Board maintains that this order does not establish that Y.S. resides in Ewing and therefore is entitled to enrollment in the district.

The ALJ found that: the witness for the respondent Board was credible in his testimony, while P.B.'s testimony was contrived and non-credible; at all times that surveillance of Y.S. was conducted by the District, Y.S. was residing with her mother in Trenton; P.B. has not established any family or economic hardship pursuant to N.J.S.A. 6A:22-3.2 that would allow Y.S. to reside with her in Ewing. P.B. failed to carry her burden of proof that Y.S. is entitled to a free public education in Ewing Township; and the District waived any claim for tuition in this case. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that Y.S. may be excluded from enrollment in the Ewing School District.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner concluded that Y.S. is not eligible for a free public education in Ewing. The joint custody order notwithstanding, the record shows that Y.S. has resided at all times with her mother in Trenton, and contains multiple examples of efforts by petitioner and Y.B. to enroll Y.S. in respondent's school district on false pretenses. Further, there is no basis for the Commissioner to reject the ALJ's credibility findings. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision and dismissed the petition.

P.B. on behalf of minor child, Y.S.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Upon review of the record[1] and Initial Decision in the instant residency controversy, the Commissioner concludes that Y.S. is not eligible for a free public education in respondent's district. The facts set forth in the record and summarized by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in the Initial Decision indicate that in 2003 a surveillance investigation disclosed that Y.S., whom Y.B. had enrolled in respondent's district in 2001, was being driven on each school day from Y.B.'s Trenton home to the Ewing residence of P.B., the mother of a former spouse of Y.B. Y.S. was consequently disenrolled from respondent's district in June 2003 and did not appeal the disenrollment.

However, in September 2009, when Y.S. was ready to enter high school, Y.B. again enrolled her in respondent's district. On this occasion Y.B. produced a purported lease between herself and P.B. for occupation of P.B.'s premises in Ewing. However, two subsequent surveillances showed that Y.B. and Y.S. still resided in Trenton and that Y.S. was again being driven to Ewing each school day. Respondent disenrolled Y.S. but allowed her to finish the school year. Y.B. did not appeal the disenrollment.

[1] The Commissioner was not provided with a transcript of the hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the parties have filed no exceptions.

Y.B. again attempted to enroll Y.S. in respondent's district in August of 2010 but her application was denied. A few weeks later Y.B. presented respondent with a family court order – dated September 9, 2010 – assigning joint residential custody to Y.B. and P.B. On the basis of the court order, P.B. filed the instant appeal of the enrollment denial with the Commissioner.

After hearing the parties' testimony and considering the documentary evidence, the ALJ found respondent's residency/attendance officer – who had ordered the above referenced surveillances and testified about same – to be credible. In contrast, he found that P.B.'s testimony was both internally inconsistent and contrived. More specifically, he did not believe P.B.'s testimony that Y.S. resides in her home in Ewing.

The Commissioner must defer to the ALJ's credibility finding unless it is clearly arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. See, e.g. D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004) and N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c). A review of ALJ Spence's discussion of the bases for his credibility determination reveals nothing arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. To the contrary, the record contained multiple examples of efforts by petitioner and Y.B. to enroll Y.S. in respondent's school district on false pretenses.

An order awarding residential custody does not, in and of itself, determine a minor child's domicile. If a district can show that a child does not actually reside with the person who has been named as his or her residential custodian, the district in which the purported custodian resides will not be obliged to provide the child with a free education. See, e.g. B.C., on behalf of M.W. v. Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City, Atlantic County, Commissioner's Decision No. 381-09, decided November 18, 2009 (if a petitioner claims that a child is entitled to attend school in a school district on the basis of a court order granting custody/guardianship to the domiciled petitioner, the school district may present evidence that the child is not in fact domiciled in the school district). In the instant case, respondent has met its burden to rebut the presumption of residence/domicile – created by the joint custody order – by offering credible evidence that Y.S. does not reside with P.B.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision of the OAL and dismisses the petition. Respondent may disenroll Y.S. However, no tuition shall be due respondent, as it has waived same. (Respondent's Exhibit R-15)

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 10545-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 537-9/10

P.B., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, Y.S.,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EWING, MERCER COUNTY,
Respondent.

P. B., on behalf of Y.S., petitioner, pro se

Jeffrey F. Belz, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: December 31, 2010 Decided: February 15, 2011

BEFORE JOHN J. SPENCE, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

P.B., on behalf of minor child, Y.S. (petitioner), challenges the determination made by the Ewing Township Board of Education (District) that Y.S. did not reside in Ewing. The District alleges that the minor child, Y.S., was residing with her mother, Y.B., in Trenton, New Jersey, and that Y.S. was being dropped off in Ewing before the start of each of her school days. At issue is whether Y.S. is entitled to be enrolled in the District free of charge under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 for purposes of receiving a thorough and efficient program of education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 13, 2010, the District notified Y.B., mother of minor child, Y.S., that Y.S. was disenrolled from the Ewing Township School District. On September 10, 2010, petitioner, P.B., appealed the decision of the District. On September 27, 2010, the case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case. The matter was heard on December 13, 2010, and the record closed on December 31, 2010.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

David Mikalauskas testified that he has been the District's residency and attendance officer for almost twenty-one years. It is his responsibility to "verify that children who are enrolled in Ewing Schools actually reside in Ewing". He estimated that sixty to seventy students per year are disenrolled in Ewing for "non-residency" and that most of the non-resident students come from Trenton.

It is uncontested that Y.B. is the biological mother of Y.S. It is admitted that P.B.'s son became the stepfather of Y.S. when he married Y.B., although they are "no longer together". P.B. acknowledged that there is no blood relationship between her and Y.S., but maintains that she considers herself Y.S.'s grandmother.

Mr. Mikalauskas testified that Y.S. was first enrolled in Ewing by her mother, Y.B., by way of a "new student" Registration Form dated August 10, 2001 (R-1). He described this document as a "Host Family Application" where it is alleged that one family is living with another family in Ewing. Y.B. stated on this first grade application that her daughter, Y.S., was residing at 386 Green Lane. This is the street address for P.B. in Ewing, but for unexplained reasons, Y.B. listed this street address as being in Trenton. It is uncontested that Y.B. owns and resides at a home located at 10 Fell Street, Trenton, New Jersey.

The witness stated that the residency status of Y.S. first came to his attention when a complaint was filed in April of 2003 alleging that Y.S. was being "dropped off" prior to school at P.B.'s Green Lane address (R-2). As a result of this complaint the District conducted a "residency investigation" where an investigator goes to the home in question early in the morning to determine whether the student in question spends the night at that home or whether the student is dropped off in Ewing from an area outside of Ewing. Eleven days of surveillance were conducted and on nine of those days Y.S. was transported early in the morning before school from an address outside of Ewing to Ewing. On the other two days Y.S. was listed as "tardy" and "late" (R-3). As a result of this investigation the District issued a "disenrollment letter" to Y.B., dated June 6, 2003 (R-4). No appeal was taken and Y.S. voluntarily left the Ewing District.

The witness testified that approximately six years later, on September 2, 2009, Y.B. completed a Ewing Registration Form on behalf of her daughter, Y.S. (R-5). In support of this application, Y.B. produced a lease dated August 28, 2009, between Y.B. and P.B. for the property owned by P.B. at 386 Green Lane, Ewing, New Jersey (R-6). Based on this lease the District enrolled Y.S. in the Ewing system for the 2009-2010 school year.

Mr. Mikalauskas stated that on September 15, 2009, he received an anonymous tip on the District's "residency Hot-Line" that Y.S. did not live at 386 Green Lane, but was being "dropped off" in the morning prior to school and being picked-up after school (R-7). As a result of this information the District conducted an additional investigation which produced two separate reports showing a total of nineteen days of surveillance from September 29, 2009, to October 21, 2009, and from April 19, 2010, to May 13, 2010 (R-8 and R-9). The witness testified that these reports show that on every day that surveillance was conducted, Y.S. was observed being transported early in the morning by her mother, Y.B., or another individual, from Y.B.'s home at 10 Fell Street in Trenton to P.B.'s residence in Ewing or to Ewing High School.

The witness stated that as a result of the investigation he sent another disenrollment letter to Y.S.'s mother, Y.B. He further testified that Y.B. "appealed" this disenrollment but P.B. did not join in the appeal and P.B. neither testified nor offered evidence at the hearing conducted before the District on May 13, 2010 (R-10). The witness testified that the transcript of that hearing shows that at that time Y.B. did not contest the facts developed by the surveillance (R-10).

Y.B. testified before the District that it was necessary for Y.S. to reside at P.B.'s Ewing address because of overcrowded conditions at her Trenton home caused by the temporary visit of Y.B.'s parents from Puerto Rico while her father underwent medical treatment in New Jersey. Y.B. offered no testimony that she needed the help or assistance of P.B. in raising her child, Y.S. The sole reason offered by Y.B. for the alleged move of Y.S. to Ewing, was that of overcrowding. Y.B. made no allegation at the hearing before the District that she had any financial difficulties or other hardship that would prevent her from caring for her daughter, Y.S. (R-10)

At the conclusion of this residency hearing the District determined that Y.S. was domiciled with her mother, Y.B., in Trenton, New Jersey and ordered Y.S. disenrolled form the Ewing District (R-11). Although no appeal of the disenrollment was taken, the District allowed Y.S. to remain in the Ewing system until the end of the school year in June 2010.

Mr. Mikalauskas testified that sometime in late August 2010, Y.B. again attempted to enroll her daughter, Y.S. in the Ewing system but based on the District's determination of May 13, 2010, he denied the application. Apparently Y.B. did not appeal this denial, but on September 10, 2010, P.B. filed a Pro Se Residency Appeal with the New Jersey Department of Education (R-12). As a result of this appeal the District allowed re-enrollment on behalf of Y.S. for the school year starting in September, 2010. The witness testified that subsequent to the District's most recent decision to deny re-enrollment P.B. has supplied the District with a Joint Residential Custody Order entered September 9, 2010, and effective August 1, 2010 (R-13). The application for the Order shows that P.B. and Y.B. request joint residential custody "since the child (Y.S.) resides at both residences". The District maintains that this Order does not establish that Y.S. resides in Ewing and is therefore entitled to enrollment in the District.

Although the District initially made a claim against P.B. for reimbursement or restitution for tuition, the District's written closing statement reads in part that it "is waiving any claim for tuition in the matter" (R-15).

P.B. stated that she was not present at the residency hearing conducted before the District on May 13, 2010. She testified before me that she considers Y.S. her granddaughter even though Y.S. is not a "biological" relative. She stated that initially Y.B. would not let Y.S. stay with her on a full-time basis. She testified that as time passed Y.S. and her mother, Y.B., began to get into "disputes" and Y.S. asked P.B. if she could "come and live" with P.B. P.B. said that since she was retiring soon she would permit Y. S. to live with her.

On cross examination P.B. acknowledged that she executed the Lease Agreement for her Ewing property between her and Y.B. on August 28, 2009, and testified that at that time Y.S. was "residing" back and forth between both the Ewing and Trenton addresses. She stated that she was not aware that this was just prior to the start of the 2009-2010 school year. P.B. stated that she would never deny Y.S. She further testified that Y.B. gave her "money" but would not say it was the $750 rent called for in the lease. No evidence of rent payment by Y.B. to P.B. was offered. When questioned further about the need for the lease P.B. altered her testimony somewhat by saying Y.B. needed another place to live because there were "problems" between her son and Y.B.

P.B. was again inconsistent when she stated that she told Y.S. she could move in with her when she retired. It was P.B.'s testimony that she retired March 1, 2010, and that is when she obtained the custody order. However, that order was entered September 9, 2010. On further cross examination P.B. stated that Y.S. "stays" with her mother in Trenton on weekends and with her on weekdays. P.B. testified that she goes "away" for the summers and was not sure where Y.S. "stays" in the summer and therefore admitted it was possible she spends the summers with her mother in Trenton.

P.B. described Y.B.'s home in Trenton as having three bedrooms and other than unnamed "personal conflicts or issues" between mother and daughter, could not give any reason why Y.B. could not take care of Y.S.

On cross examination P.B. stated that she and Y.B. obtained the custody order for Y.S. by "filling out" paperwork in the Clerk's office and without giving testimony or seeing a judge.

FINDINGS OF FACT

When facts are contested, as in this matter, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness' story in light of its rationality, its internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Circ. 1963). There is no mechanical formula for determining the truth, to the extent it can be discerned, and many factors may be considered and weighed. These include the demeanor of the witness and the manner of testifying, the interest the witness may have in the outcome, and the reasonableness and coherence of the testimony. Corroboration, knowledge, and common experience also play a role in assessing credibility. Dawson v. R.W. Vogel, Inc., CRT 4501-00, Initial Decision (April 15, 2002), adopted as modified, Dir., Division on Civil Rights (August 28, 2002) http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oa./search.html. Applying these standards to this matter convinces me that Mr. Mikalauskas offered truthful testimony concerning the residency of Y.S.

Conversely, I did not believe P.B.'s testimony regarding Y.S.'s residency. Her testimony appeared to me to be contrived so as to be self-serving. I believe P.B.'s obvious affection for Y.S. has influenced her testimony in an effort to permit Y.S. to attend school in Ewing.

After considering all the testimony and documentary evidence in this matter, I FIND that the following has been proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence:

1. At all times that the District conducted surveillance of Y.S. she was residing with her mother, Y.B., in Trenton.

2. Y.S.'s mother, Y.B., does not reside in Ewing.

3. Y.S. was being transported from Y.B.'s home in Trenton, to P.B.'s home in Ewing during the 29009-2010 school year.

4. P.B. has not established any family or economic hardship pursuant to N.J.S.A. 6A:22-3.2 which would allow Y.S. to reside with her in Ewing.

5. P.B. has supplied no legal basis for why it was necessary to obtain the Joint Residential Custody Order other than a desire to support the effort to obtain acceptance into the Ewing school system.

6. Y.B. and Y.S. were not living in the Ewing school district.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

A person who meets age requirements and is domiciled within a school district may attend its public schools free of charge. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). A person may have many residences but only one domicile. Somerville Bd. v. Manville Bd., 332 N.J. Super. 6, 12 (App. Div. 2000), aff'd, 167 N.J. 55 (2001). A child's domicile is normally that of his or her parents. Ibid. The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. Matter of Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Div. 1991), aff'd, 311 N.J. Super. 589 (App. Div. 1998), certif. denied, 157 N.J. 541 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S.

1051, 119 S.Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed.2d 518 (1999).

The acts, statements and conduct of the individual, as viewed in light of all circumstances, determine a person's true intent. Collins v. Yancey, 55 N.J. Super. 514, 521 (Law Div. 1959). The parent has the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)2.

Where a person has more than one residence, the following factors are useful in determining his domicile: the physical characteristics of each place, the time spent and the things done in each place, the other persons found there, the person's mental attitude towards each place, and whether there is or is not an intention, when absent, to return. Mercadante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39-40 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). A choice of domicile by a person, irrespective of his motive, will be honored by the court, provided there are sufficient objective indicia, by way of proofs, supporting the actual existence of that domicile." In re Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Div. 1991).

The Unanue court identified three elements which must be considered when trying to ascertain if a change of domicile has occurred; (1) whether there had been an actual and physical taking up of an abode in a particular state; (2) whether the subject had an intention to make his home there permanently or at least indefinitely; and (3) whether the subject had an intention to abandon his old domicile. (Unanue, supra at 376).

Here it is undisputed that at all times that surveillance of Y.S. was conducted by the District, Y.S. was transported from outside of Ewing into Ewing to attend school in Ewing and then transported back to her mother's residence in Trenton.

Based upon the circumstances surrounding this matter, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner, P.B., failed to carry her burden of proof that Y.S. is entitled to a free public education in the Township of Ewing during the relevant time periods. I further CONCLUDE that the District has waived any claim for tuition.

ORDER

It is, therefore, ORDERED that, without proof of current domicile/residency, Y.S. may be excluded from further attending the Ewing public schools, at the discretion of the District.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The record of this matter, the proposed settlement agreement and general release, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter,[1] with the following observation. The settlement agreement references a number of actions which may already have taken place[2], and has therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same. The foregoing notwithstanding, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on November 30, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14f-1 to -13. In this matter petitioner Nisha Williams (hereinafter "Williams") seeks an order restraining respondent from requiring her to undergo a psychological examination and from seeking copies of her medical records.

In a subsequently filed due process by her under OAL Dkt. No. EDU 8-11, Agency Dkt. No. 722-12/10, Williams challenged the decision by respondent, the Board of Trustees of the Trenton Community Charter School, Mercer County (hereinafter "Trenton") to suspend her without pay and requiring her to undergo a psychiatric evaluation despite the fact that her physician had cleared her to return to work. This matter was transmitted with the request for Emergent Relief relative to the above and was received at the OAL on January 3, 2011. It referenced the related matter of EDU 13271-10.

As a result, an emergent relief hearing was scheduled for January 10, 2011, at the OAL, Trenton, New Jersey. On that date the parties met and extensively negotiated all of the issues which were raised in both of the above-captioned matters.

At the hearing, the parties agreed to a global settlement of all the issues in both matters and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein. (J-1.) It was received at the OAL on January 28, 2011, at which time the hearing record closed, after Trenton has authorized a Resolution which empowered its President and Secretary to sign the Agreement on its behalf. (R-1). That Resolution was received concurrent with the fully executed Agreement.

I have reviewed the record, the terms of settlement, and the Resolution and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law. It also disposes of all issues raised pursuant to EDU 13271-10 and EDU 8-11.

Therefore, I ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." Record Closed: January 28, 2011 Decided: February 4, 2011

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 3, 2011, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14f-1 to -13. In this matter petitioner Nisha Williams (hereinafter "Williams") challenged the decision by respondent, the Board of Trustees of the Trenton Community Charter School, Mercer County (hereinafter "Trenton"), to suspend her without pay and requiring her to undergo a psychiatric evaluation despite the fact that her physician had cleared her to return to work. This matter was transmitted with the request for Emergent Relief relating to the above and was received at the OAL on January 3, 2011. It referenced the related matter of EDU 13271-10, which had been previously transmitted on November 30, 2010. In that matter, Williams sought an order restraining Trenton from requiring her to undergo a psychological examination and from seeking copies of her medical records.

As a result of all of the above, an emergent relief hearing was scheduled for January 10, 2011, at the OAL, Trenton, New Jersey. On that date, the parties met and extensively negotiated all of the issues which were raised in both of the above-captioned matters.

At the hearing, the parties agreed to a global settlement of all the issues in both matters and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein. (J-1) It was received at the OAL on January 28, 2011, at which time the hearing record closed, after Trenton had authorized a Resolution which empowered its President and Secretary to sign the Agreement on its behalf. The record of this matter and advisement of petitioner's failure to appear transmitted to the Commissioner by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 – along with copies of the notification sent to the parties by OAL on February 8, 2011 providing petitioner thirteen days to submit an explanation for such nonappearance – have been reviewed. There being no explanation filed by petitioner, the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed with prejudice due to petitioner's failure to appear at hearing or provide an explanation for her nonappearance.

Notwithstanding the dismissal of the petition, the Commissioner notes that the Board's Answer in this residency matter contained a counterclaim for tuition which was left unresolved by the Administrative Law Judge. In that the record before the Commissioner contains no affidavit of a responsible Board official attesting to the amount of tuition claimed by the Board as a consequence of the ineligible attendance of petitioner's children in its schools, this matter must be remanded to the OAL for supplementation of the record in this regard and an appropriate recommended order regarding the payment of tuition.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – the Superintendent of the school district – alleged that his contract will automatically renew upon its expiration on June 30, 2011 because respondent Board did not take the necessary steps to terminate his employment. The Board contended that its June 29, 2010 motion to renew the Superintendent's contract for a period of one year – which motion was defeated by the Board – served to non-renew petitioner's employment, and filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ identified two main issues in this case: 1) whether an extension of a superintendent's contract must be supported by a majority vote of the full membership of the board to be binding and effective, and 2) whether a board of education is legally authorized to bind successor boards by approving an extension for a term that commences after the existing board has been replaced. The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a majority of the full membership of the board would be required to amend or extend petitioner's contract for one additional year, even if this is not expressly enumerated in the statute, and accordingly the June 29, 2010 resolution of the Board is neither effective nor binding; boards of education do not have the statutory authority to approve appointments or contractual extensions if they are to take effect at a date beyond the current board's natural lifetime; the contract extension in the instant case was to commence more than two months after the 2011 board was elected, and accordingly was void. The ALJ concluded that the petitioner's contract is not renewed; the one year extension is invalid; and petitioner's employment is terminated at the conclusion of his current contract.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the June 2010 resolution extending petitioner's contract was not passed by a majority of the full board. Further, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: even if the board did not expressly vote on his non-renewal, petitioner was not automatically reappointed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1; and, should the instant litigation continue, the ALJ was correct in concluding that the current board has no authority to authorize an employment action which would begin during the tenure of a different board. The Commissioner granted respondent Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition, stipulating that petitioner's employment will terminate on June 30, 2011 unless the parties agree otherwise.

JOSE R. NEGRON,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

After review of the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and parties' exceptions, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that a June 29, 2010 resolution – proposing employment for petitioner from July 1, 2011 to June 30, 2012 and containing provisions differing from those set forth in his present contract – was not passed by the respondent board of education because the number of votes in favor of it was less than a majority of the full board. Nor can petitioner claim that, because respondent did not expressly vote on his non-renewal, he was automatically reappointed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. Accordingly, the Commissioner grants respondent's motion for summary decision and dismisses the petition.

The facts are sufficiently set forth in the Initial Decision. Petitioner's first employment with respondent began on October 1, 2007 and, pursuant to his contract, was to continue until June 30, 2011. On June 29, 2010, resolutions concerning his employment were presented to the respondent board at a meeting which all nine board members attended. The controversy centers around a resolution which proposed that the board approve an extra year of employment for petitioner, i.e. from July 1, 2011 to June 30, 2012, with terms that differed from those in his present contract. Of the nine board members present, four voted yes, two voted no and three abstained. Thus, the resolution did not receive approval from the majority of the board.[1]

For the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision, the Commissioner rejects petitioner's position that only a majority of a quorum of the board was needed to pass the resolution. Nor does petitioner's reliance – in his exceptions – on Matawan Regional Teachers Association v. Matawan-Aberdeen Reg. School Dist. Bd. of Educ., 223 N.J. Super. 504 (App. Div. 1988) support his position. In that case the Appellate Division noted [in dictum] that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 – a statute addressing various general powers of boards of education – is silent about the number of votes needed to exercise such powers. The court concluded that, in the absence of express language about voting requirements, the common law rule would apply. That common law rule, articulated in such cases as Barnert v. Paterson, 48 N.J.L. 395 (Sup. Ct. 1886), instructs that when a board's charter and state law do not provide to the contrary,

> "a majority of the board . . . constitutes a quorum and the vote of a majority of those present, there being a quorum, is all that is required for the adoption or passage of a motion or doing any other act the board has the power to do."
> Barnert v. Paterson, supra, at 400. [Emphasis added.]

Since, in the present case, "those present" were undisputedly nine in number, the common law rule required that on June 29, 2010, five members vote in favor of the proposed contract for it to pass.

[1] Abstentions are counted neither as 'yes votes' nor as 'no votes.'

Further, the Commissioner finds it significant that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 addresses "General mandatory powers and duties." As the ALJ thoroughly explained, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 and numerous other statutes relate more specifically to employment actions by the board, e.g. appointments, dismissals, renewals and transfers. Those statutes uniformly require action by a majority of the full board. There is no reason that a decision to employ petitioner for the 2011-2012 school year should deviate from that ubiquitous standard for personnel actions.

It appears that petitioner characterizes the proposal concerning his employment – set forth in the June 29, 2010 resolution – as a novation to his existing contract, as opposed to a new contract. He reasons that a novation may somehow avoid the scrutiny and consent of a majority of the respondent board that is mandated by N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 – the statute which governs the appointment of superintendents. The Commissioner finds, however, that whether the proposal concerning petitioner's employment is regarded as a novation or as a discrete contract for a term less than the three to five years articulated in N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15, the purpose underlying the statute – i.e. careful scrutiny and consent by a majority of the full board to the employment of a top school administrator – would have been no less applicable to the June 29, 2010 employment proposal than to petitioner's first contract.

Nor is petitioner's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A: 11-11 persuasive. That provision requires that the public be given adequate notice before certain school administrators' contracts are changed. (Petitioner does not dispute that respondent provided the required notice.) Nothing in the statute or legislative scheme suggests that the statute was meant to address anything other than notice. The Commissioner finds therefore that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-11 does not expressly or by implication govern voting requirements.

In his exceptions, petitioner also protests that the ALJ did not address his claim that even without the resolution, his employment continues past June 30, 2011 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. That statute dictates that a superintendent's contract will be automatically renewed if the board does not give him or her notice of nonrenewal – in writing – prior to the expiration of the first contract term. In petitioner's case, the written notice would have had to be given 120 days before June 30, 2011, i.e. March 2, 2011.

Consideration of the record leads to the conclusion that petitioner had ample notice – in writing – of the nonrenewal of his employment. First, a resolution to extend his employment was rejected by the board, and petitioner concedes in his exceptions that he was so notified by respondent's Board Secretary. Second, the board passed two resolutions subsequent to June 29, 2010 that affirmed the nonrenewal.[2] The Commissioner will not ignore this obvious notice because it was framed as a denial of renewal rather than an affirmation of nonrenewal.

Finally, because the Commissioner has determined that the resolution to extend petitioner's employment failed and no automatic renewal occurred, the question of whether respondent's current board can authorize an employment action which would begin during the tenure of a different board need not be reached. Nonetheless, should the instant litigation continue, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ 1) was correct in concluding that the current board has no such authority, and 2) appropriately relied on Gonzales v. Bd. of Educ. of the Elizabeth School Dist., 325 N.J. Super. 224 (App. Div. 1999).

[2] The record shows that on September 15, 2010 respondent voted 5 to 0, with two abstentions, in favor of a resolution clarifying that its June 29, 2010 action had failed to carry. On September 30, 2010 respondent voted 5 to 0, with two abstentions, to rescind the June 29, 2010 resolution in the event that four "yes" votes had been sufficient to pass it. In light of the Commissioner's findings, it is unnecessary to address these resolutions.

In sum, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision with the modifications set forth supra. Respondent's motion for summary decision is granted, the petition is dismissed, and petitioner's employment will terminate on June 30, 2011 unless the parties agree otherwise.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Maria M. Lepore, Esq., for petitioner

Marc H. Zitomer, Esq, for respondent (Schenck, Price, Smith & King, LLP, attorney)

Record Closed: December 6, 2010 Decided: February 9, 2011

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The South Plainfield Board of Education (Respondent) consists of nine (9) members. Pursuant to board policy 9325.4 (voting bylaw), respondent may take official action only at meetings where a quorum is present. Further, all adopted motions require a majority vote of those present and voting (minimally, a majority of the quorum), except as provided by code or statute.[1] Accordingly, a minimum of three (3) votes are needed for a majority of the quorum and a minimum of five (5) votes are needed for a majority of the full membership of the board.

On September 10, 2007, respondent entered into a superintendent's employment contract with Jose Negron (Petitioner) for a term beginning on October 1, 2007, and ending on June 30, 2011. Thereafter, on June 29, 2010, a year prior to the expiration of petitioner's contract, respondent voted on a resolution to renew petitioner's contract for the period of July 01, 2011, through June 30, 2015. This resolution failed by a vote of two (2) in favor, four (4) against, and three (3) abstentions. Following the defeat of said resolution, respondent, on the same day, voted on a second resolution to extend petitioner's contract for one (1) additional year at the expiration of petitioner's current contract. Entitled "Resolution to Amend the Superintendent's Employment Contract", the language read as follows:

> WHEREAS, the South Plainfield Board of Education and Mr. Jose Negron ("Superintendent") are parties to an employment contract for the period of October 1, 2007 through June 30, [2]011; and
>
> WHEREAS, the parties desire to amend the contract of the Superintendent and extend the current Agreement for a period of one year, such that the Superintendent's current contract would expire on June 30, 2012; and
>
> WHEREAS, the termination provisions in the current contract would likewise be extended such that the Board of Education must notify the Superintendent of its desire to renew his employment contract by June 30, 2011, in accordance with the provisions of New Jersey law, and
> WHEREAS, Mr. Negron has agreed to return his 3% salary increase for the 2010/2011 school year and has agreed to pay 1.5% of his salary for his health care benefits for both 2010/2011 and 2011/2012 school years; and

[1] http://www.plainfieldnjk12.org/Board_of_Education/Policies/9325%204%20Voting%20Method.pdf. Abstentions are not counted as either affirmative or negative votes.

> WHEREAS, the parties desire that all other terms and conditions as set forth in the current Agreement remain the same as those currently contained therein; and
>
> WHEREAS, the Executive County Superintendent has approved this addendum;
> NOW, THEREFORE, be it resolved, that the South Plainfield Board of Education hereby amends the current employment contract in effect between the Superintendent and the Board, and extends the employment of Mr. Jose Negron for an additional one year period, through June 30, 2012, on the same terms and conditions as set forth in the parties' current contract, except for those changes mentioned above, subject to any future modifications to such contract as the parties may mutually agree upon.[2]

The abovementioned resolution received four (4) votes in favor, two (2) votes against, and three (3) abstentions. Accordingly, said resolution received a majority vote of the quorum, but not a majority vote of the full membership of the Board. Thereafter, on July 1, 2010, petitioner personally delivered a letter to the Business Administrator/Board Secretary which inter alia accepted the extension of his contract for one (1) additional year. In response, on September 15, 2010, respondent voted on a resolution to reaffirm and clarify what it claims amounted to a June 29, 2010, decision not to extend petitioner's contract for one (1) additional year. The resolution passed with five (5) votes in favor, zero (0) votes against, and two (2) abstentions.[3] Finally, fifteen (15) days later, on September 30, 2010, respondent voted on a resolution to rescind the June 29, 2010, resolution, assuming arguendo that four (4) votes were sufficient to adopt it. This resolution likewise passed by a vote of (5) in favor, zero (0) against, and two (2) abstentions.

On September 26, 2010, petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education. Inter alia, petitioner requested a declaration that

[2] Petitioner's Cross-Motion for Summary Decision; Exhibit C.

[3] The crux of respondent's argument was that five (5) votes were required to pass the June 29, 2010, resolution, but only four (4) votes were actually cast in favor of the extension.

respondent's July 1, 2010, resolution passed and was binding on respondent. This matter was transmitted to the OAL on October 15, 2010.

ISSUES

1. Must an extension of a superintendent's contract be supported by a majority vote of the full membership of the board of education to be binding and effective?
2. Is a board of education legally authorized to bind successor boards by approving an extension for a term that commences after the existing board has been replaced?

RELEVANT AUTHORITY

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15. Appointment of Superintendent

The board of education of a Type I district and of any Type II district, now having or hereafter authorized to have a superintendent of schools, may, by contract appoint, for a term of not less than three no more than five years and expiring July 1, a superintendent of schools by the recorded roll call majority of the full membership of the board.

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. Reappointment of Superintendent

At the conclusion of the term of the initial contract or any subsequent contract as hereinafter provided, the superintendent shall be deemed reappointed for another contracted term of the same duration as the previous contract unless either: a. the board by contract reappoints him for a different terms which term shall be not less than three nor more than five years, in which event reappointments thereafter shall be deemed for the new term unless a different term is again specified; or b. the board notifies the superintendent in writing that he will not be reappointed at the end of the current term, in which event his employment shall cease at the expiration of that term, provided that such notification shall be given prior to the expiration of the first or any subsequent contract by a length of time equal to 30 days for each year in the term of the current contract.

DISCUSSION

THE JUNE 29, 2010, RESOLUTION TO EXTEND PETITIONER'S CONTRACT DID NOT PASS BECAUSE IT WAS NOT SUPPORTED BY A VOTE OF THE MAJORITY OF THE FULL MEMBERSHIP OF THE BOARD

When construing a statute, a court considers not only the provision in question, but the entire legislative scheme. Fiore v. Bd. of Consol. Freightways, 140 N.J. 452, 466 (1995). Of particular relevance to the issue at hand, statutory construction calls for statutes within the same Act to be interpreted by reading them in pari materia. Marino v. Marino, 200 N.J. 315, 330 (2009).

> "Statutes are considered to be in pari materia when they relate to the same person or thing, to the same class of person or things, or have the same purpose or object." 2B

> Sutherland on Statutory Construction § 51:3 (7th ed. 2008) (footnotes omitted); accord[,] State v. Crawley, 187 N.J. 440, 453, 901 A.2d 924 (2006). As this Court has explained:
>
> > Statutes that deal with the same matter or subject should be read in pari materia and construed together as a "unitary and harmonious whole." This maxim of statutory construction is especially pertinent when, as in this case, the statutes in question were passed in the same session.
> >
> > [St. Peter's Univ. Hosp. v. Lacy, 185 N.J. 1, 14-15, 878 A.2d 829 (2005) (citation omitted).]
>
> Resort to this maxim, like other tools used by courts to assist them in divining legislative intent, is helpful when the Legislature's intent is unclear. That is, [s]tatutes in pari materia are to be construed together when helpful in resolving doubts or uncertainties and the ascertainment of legislative intent." In re Return of Weapons to J.W.D., 149 N.J. 108, 115, 693 A.2d 92 (1997); see[,] Febbi [v. Bd. of Review, Div. of Employment Sec., 35 N.J. 601, 606 (1961)], supra, 35 N.J. at 606, 174 A.2d 481 (stating that Legislature's intent is to be derived from considering entire statute and reading all sections together as a unified whole).
>
> However, before undertaking an in pari materia analysis to discern legislative intent, the court must first decide whether the two statutes in question actually "concern the same object." 2B Sutherland, supra, § 51:3. Considerations such as whether both statutes were included in one enactment, whether the proofs required overlap, and whether they are "designed to serve the same purpose and objective," are particularly relevant to this question. Ibid.; see, Mimkon v. Ford, 66 N.J. 426, 433, 332 A.2d 199 (1975) (stating that statutes in pari materia should seek same overall legislative purpose).
> [Marino, supra, 200 N.J. at 330.]

Essentially, the task is to harmonize the individual sections and read the statutes in the way that is most consistent with the legislative intent. Fiore, supra, 140 N.J. at 466.

The controversy here revolves around respondent's June 29, 2010, resolution to extend petitioner's contract for one (1) additional year. Respondent contends that the resolution did not pass because it was not supported by a vote of the majority of the full membership of the board. In support of its argument, respondent avers that N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 stands for the proposition that the extension is a one (1) year appointment and must be supported by a majority vote of the full membership of the board. As petitioner has correctly pointed out, appointments and reappointments of superintendents are limited to "term[s] of not less than three nor more than five years". See N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15; N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 (emphasis added). Accordingly, respondent's contention that the extension is a one (1) year appointment is without merit and contrary to applicable law. Petitioner, on the other hand, contends that a simple majority of the quorum is required to carry resolutions dealing with extensions of superintendents' contracts. Despite petitioner's convictions, no case law or statute is provided to in support of this proposition. Furthermore, respondent argues that a board's employment of a superintendent "is one of the most vital and responsible duties that a board of education can perform." Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Morris, 89 N.J. Super 327, 334 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581 (1966). According to respondent, to require anything less than a majority of the full membership of the board to extend a contract would conflict with the recognized importance of such appointments while undermining the protections afforded to significant personnel actions.

After consideration of the facts and the law pertinent to the issues in this matter, I agree with respondent's proposition that a majority of the full membership of the board is required to amend/extend petitioner's contract for one (1) additional year. Although a one (1) year extension is not an appointment in its own right, once negotiated, the extension becomes an integral part of the unified whole; the appointment. Thus, an argument exists that extensions should be supported by a vote of the majority of the full membership of the board. In support of this proposition, consider that at a minimum the extension in our case is limited to a maximum term of two (2) years by the same statute that limits the current three (3) year appointment to five (5) years. N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15.[4] Accordingly, extensions fall within the limitations of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15, although not explicitly enumerated in the plain language of the statute. Additionally, if extensions were not governed by a majority vote of the entire board, the minority would be able to circumvent the protections envisioned for appointments. Specifically, if only a majority of a quorum was required to amend/extend a contract, the length and terms of the contract initially negotiated can be significantly altered at a later date by an amendment passed by as few as three (3) members in a nine (9) member board.

Notwithstanding the logical deductions above, it cannot be overlooked that neither the plain language of N.J.S.A. Title 18A, nor any other statute, expressly addresses the issue at hand. Namely, the requirement, or lack thereof, of a majority vote for amendments/extensions of a superintendent's contract. Accordingly, a look to the rules of statutory construction to clarify legislative intent and garner support for its aforementioned proposition is warranted. As the following paragraphs will illustrate, when N.J.S.A. Title 18A employment related personnel statutes are read in pari materia, the legislative intent to require a vote of the majority of the full board becomes clear.

First and foremost, all statutes in N.J.S.A. Title 18A pertaining to personnel appointments, renewals, transfers, suspensions and removals prescribe a vote of the majority of the full membership of the board. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15 (Appointment of Superintendent); N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (Appointment, Removal, Renewal and Removal of Certificated and Non-Certificated Personnel); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-5 (Appointment of Secretary of Board); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-13 (Appointment of Assistant Secretary); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-14.1 (Appointment of School Business Administrator); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-16 (Appointment or Removal of Assistant Superintendent); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.5 (Appointment of Administrative Principal); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-25 (Appointment of Business Manager); N.J.S.A. 18A:17-24.3 (Appointment of Shared Superintendent or Business Administrator); N.J.S.A. 18A:17A-1 (Appointment of Executive Superintendent); N.J.S.A. 18A:25-1 (Transfer of Teaching Staff Members); N.J.S.A. 18A:25-6 (Suspension of Assistant Superintendents, Principals and Teaching Staff); N.J.S.A. 18A:27-1 (Appointment of Teaching Staff). In fact, even the retention of salary increments is required to pass by a majority of the full membership of the board. N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 (Withholding of Salary Increments). Conversely, not a single statute in Title 18A prescribes a vote by the majority of the quorum, or anything less than the majority of the full membership of the board. Accordingly, it appears that legislative intent was to require a vote of the majority of the full membership of the board when dealing with all personnel employment related actions. This would be especially true for employment related actions of the superintendent; the highest ranking official of the school.

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15, prescribes a vote of the majority of the full membership of the board when appointing superintendents. Petitioner argues that because extensions are not expressly accounted for in the plain language of the statute, a vote of the majority of the quorum would suffice. Notwithstanding the in pari materia argument in the preceding paragraph (which includes the complete absence of quorum language), neither N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1 (Reappointment of Superintendent) or N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.2 (Dismissal of Superintendent) enumerate any standard for board voting. If petitioner's argument was supportable, a vote of the majority of the quorum would suffice when reappointing or dismissing superintendents. This could not have been the legislative intent. Therefore, the omissions in these two statutes support the in pari materia reading that a vote by the majority of the full membership is required even if not expressly enumerated in the statute.

Finally, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-11 sets forth that

> [a] board of education shall not renegotiate, extend, amend, or otherwise alter the terms of a contact with a superintendent of schools, assistant superintendent of schools, or other school business administrator[5], unless notice is provided to the public at least 30 days prior to the scheduled action by the board. The board shall also hold a public hearing and shall not take any action on the matter until the hearing has been held. The board shall provide the public with at least 10 days' notice of the public hearing.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:11-11 (emphasis added).]

[5] The inclusion of the assistant superintendent as well as the school business administrator in N.J.S.A. 18A:11-11 gives further support for the in pari materia comparison of the personnel employment statutes above.

Recognizing the vital public purpose that superintendents serve, the Legislature intended extensions of their contracts to, at a minimum, be afforded the extra protections of notice and a public hearing. Accordingly, it would be hypocritical for the Legislature to provide extra protections with one hand (N.J.S.A. 18A:11-11) while simultaneously taking them away with the other (majority of quorum suffices). Such a reading would strain legislative intent and undermine the importance of contract extensions for superintendents.

Finally, though no case was found that directly deals with the issue presented, Cummings v. Bd. of Educ. of Pompton Lakes does support the validity of the conclusion reached. Cummings v. Bd. of Educ. of Pompton Lakes, 66 S.L.D. 155, 155 (August 29, 1966). In Cummings, a board of education consisting of nine (9) members voted on a resolution to extend a superintendent's contract one (1) year before it had expired. The vote was four (4) in favor, two (2) against, and one (1) abstention. "Questions with respect to the validity of the vote were raised subsequently on the grounds. . .that the resolution had failed to be approved by a majority of the whole number of members of the Board." Ibid (emphasis added). On advice of counsel, the board reconsidered its action and voted on the matter again, passing it by a vote of six (6) to one (1). Id. at 155-56. Although the cited language was discussed in passing and not supported by authority, it was nevertheless addressed in the decision. Conversely, there was no case where an extension or any personnel action was approved by a simple majority of the quorum. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the June 29, 2010 resolution is neither effective nor binding.

THE JUNE, 29, 2010, RESOLUTION TO EXTEND PETITIONER'S CONTRACT IS VOID BECAUSE THE 2010 BOARD WAS NOT STATUTORILY AUTHORIZED TO BIND THE 2011 BOARD BY EXTENDING PETITIONER'S CONTRACT

It is well established that a board of education is a non-continuous body whose authority is limited to its own official life and whose actions can bind its successors only in those ways and to the extent expressly provided by statute. Gonzalez v. Bd. of Educ. of the Elizabeth School Dist., 325 N.J. Super. 244, 252 (App. Div. 1999), certif. denied, 163 N.J. 77 (2000); Cummings, supra, 66 S.L.D at 156. "No statutory authority is found under Title 18A expressly authorizing a local board to make . . . prospective appointments." Gonzalez, supra, at 252. Similarly, no statutory authority exists for prospective extensions of superintendents' contract. Cummings, supra, at 158.

In Gonzalez, the central issue raised on appeal was whether a public school board had the power to appoint a superintendent whose term would begin during the life of the succeeding board. The appellate court answered in the negative, finding that such an appointment was void ab initio. Gonzalez, supra, at 248. The facts of the case were as follows: On June 29, 1994, respondent, Board of Education, notified Mr. Dunn, the Superintendent, that his contract, expiring two years later on June 30, 1996, would not be renewed. Soon thereafter, Mr. Dunn was relieved of his duties[6]. Ibid. On July 13, 1994, petitioner, then an assistant superintendent, was appointed acting superintendent. By resolution of February 8, 1995, respondent appointed petitioner superintendent for three (3) years, commencing July 1, 1996, the date Mr. Dunn's contract expired. Gonzalez, supra, at 249. However, on May 1, 1996, after the annual school board election, the newly constituted board directed that Mr. Dunn resume his duties as superintendent and returned petitioner to his prior position as assistant superintendent. Thereafter, on June 6, 1996, the board appointed Mr. Dunn to a five (5) year term as superintendent, beginning July 1, 1996. Ibid. Essentially stripped of his superintendent's title and contract, petitioner filed a grievance with the Commissioner of Education, demanding restoration to the position of superintendent. After making its way through the regular procedural channels, including the Office of Administrative Law, the case came before appellate court.

In finding for the respondent, board of education, the court reiterated that statutory authority was required for the 1995 board to bind the 1996 board. Restated, to adopt a resolution appointing the superintendent to a term that was to begin during the life of the board which came into being on May 1, 1996, the 1995 board had to act pursuant to express statutory authorization. However, according to the appellate court, no such statutory authorization existed anywhere in Title 18A. Gonzalez, supra at 252. Petitioner contended, albeit in vain, that such authority was found in N.J.S.A. 18A: 17-[6] As the court pointed out, although Mr. Dunn was relieved of his duties, no vacancy occurred in his position until his contract naturally expired. This was the case because Mr. Dunn was statutorily entitled to the position for the duration of the contract term. Gonzalez, supra, at 248.

20.1, which required a local school board to notify its superintendent that he will not be reappointed at least one (1) year[7] before the expiration of the his term. Petitioner reasoned that by enacting said statute, the Legislature intended to authorize a school board to appoint a new superintendent at the time of such notification, with the term of the newly-appointed superintendent to begin upon expiration of the current superintendent's contract. Gonzalez, supra at 248. The court disagreed, construing the statue as accommodating superintendents under contract, "not as giving license to a board to reach forward beyond its official life by making an appointment effective after expiration of the incumbent superintendent's term." Gonzalez, supra at 254. Finally, mindful of petitioner's argument that a decision in favor of respondent would "leave new boards with a narrow two-month window, between May (the date the new board is elected) and July (the expiration of the superintendent's contract) to find a new superintendent", the court proclaimed that nothing prevented the current board from searching during its term, but leaving the ultimate decision to its successor. Ibid. The court concluded that "[i]n any event, it's is our view that such concerns, if justified, should be expressed to the Legislature, the body politic having the power to address them by appropriate amendment to the statute." Gonzalez, supra at 254-55.[8]

While Gonzalez displays the hard-nosed approach which the appellate court took with regard to prospective appointments, Cummings demonstrates that the same logic applies to extensions of contracts. Cummings, supra, 66 S.L.D. at 155. In Cummings, the incumbent superintendent was under contract which expired on June 29, 1966. However, on June 29, 1965, with one year left on the contract, the board voted to extend the superintendent's contract for additional years. Ibid. In coming to his/her ultimate decision, the Commissioner of Education noted that "it is well established that a board of education is a non-continuous body whose authority is limited to its own official life and whose actions can bind its successors only in those ways and to the extent expressly provided by statute". Id. at 156. Noting that the school board elections were to take place in February 1966, the Commissioner deduced that the superintendent's contract was to expire and a vacancy was to be filled during the term of the 1966, not the 1965 Board. Accordingly, the Commissioner reasoned that "[t]here was no necessity for the 1965 Board to act on this matter, and to do so usurped the prerogative of the 1966 Board." Ibid. Finding no statute in support, the Commissioner invalidated the extension, concluding that "the Board then in power had no authority to reach forward beyond its own official life and into the terms of its successor to make a decision not due until then." Ibid (citations omitted).

[7] The statute was amended in 2008 to require notification "by a length of time equal to 30 days for each year in the term of the current contract." N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1.

In the case at hand, on June 29, 2010, with one year left on petitioner's contract, the 2010 board voted to extend said contract from July 1, 2011, to June 30, 2012. According to respondent's website, school board elections are set to take place on April 19, 2011[9], at which point three board members may be replaced.[10] It is undisputable that petitioner's contract was naturally expected to expire on June 30, 2011, during the lifetime of the 2011 board. Therefore, the decision to extend petitioner's contract needed to be made by the 2011 board between April 19, 2011 (the date of the school board elections) and June 30, 2011 (the date petitioner's contract expired) unless express statutory authority provided otherwise. As has been discussed at length in Gonzalez and Cummings, a board is a non-continuous body and is not authorized to bind successor boards unless expressly authorized by statute. Boards of education do not have the statutory authority to approve appointments or contractual extensions if they are to take effect at a date beyond the current board's natural lifetime. The contract extension in the case at hand was to commence two and a half months after the 2011 board was elected. Accordingly, the extension voted on by the 2010 board was void, even if a simple majority of the quorum was sufficient to pass the resolution.

[8] As has been articulated in the previous footnote, the statute was amended to require thirty (30) days notice for each year of the superintendent's current contract. To date, no express authority has been given to the boards of education to bind successor boards in N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1.

CONCLUSION:

The June 29, 2010, resolution to extend petitioner's contract did not pass because it was not supported by the majority vote of the full membership of the board. However, even if a simple majority of the quorum was sufficient, the extension was void because the 2010 board was without authority to bind the 2011 board.

SYNOPSIS

The New Jersey State Department of Corrections filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate his employment at the Mid-State Correctional Facility. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from his tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from his tenured position with the Department, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate as that body deems appropriate.

No appearance by or on behalf of Michael Harper

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on February 18, 2011 through the certification of tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee by the New Jersey State Department of Corrections (hereinafter "Department") against Michael Harper, a tenured teacher assigned to the Mid-State Correctional Facility. The Commission seeks Mr. Harper's dismissal from his position.

By notice dated February 18, 2011, the Commissioner directed respondent, via both certified and regular mail – the certified green card, signifying delivery, having been returned to the Department on February 24, 2011 – to file an Answer to the tenure charges against him. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted by the charged employee. Because no reply has been received from respondent, or any attorney on his behalf, in response to the Department's charges, each count of the charges against respondent is deemed to be admitted.

The Commissioner has reviewed the tenure charges certified against respondent by the Department and the statement of evidence in support of those charges, which specify:

Charge One

N.J.A.C.* 4A:2-2-3(a)6: Conduct unbecoming an employee.
N.J.A.C.* 4A:2-2.3(a) 11: Other sufficient cause
Human Resource Bulletin 84-17 as amended (C-11): Conduct unbecoming an employee.

Charge Two

Human Resource Bulletin 84-17 as amended (E-1); Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure order or administrative decision.

Charge Three

Human Resource Bulletin 84-17 as amended (D-4): Improper or unauthorized contact with an inmate, undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families, or friends.

The specific allegations for each of these charges is identical and reads as follows:

> The Special Investigation Division has learned that on or around 1/14/2011, you met ex-MSCF inmate Gerald Snyder SBI#354525D (on ISP) at your residence in Browns Mills, New Jersey. This was the fifth such meeting at your residence since the inmate was released on ISP (Intensive Supervision Program). SID has also learned that the inmate gave his phone number to you while he was a Teacher's Aide of your's (sic) at Mid-State Correctional Facility. You subsequently called him upon release. You also provided contraband to the inmate while he was incarcerated. At your residence, you had the ex-inmate perform construction work for you. Further, you had sexual contact with said ex-inmate at your residence.

Deeming such charges to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the allegations against him, the Commissioner finds that the Department has demonstrated that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming and other just cause warranting the Department's requested penalty of respondent's termination from his position.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the Department, and respondent Michael Harper is hereby terminated from his position with the New Jersey Department of Corrections, Mid-State Correctional Facility effective with the filing date of this decision.[1] A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as it deems appropriate.

No appearance by or on behalf of Salvatore Piccoli

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on February 4, 2011 through the certification of tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee by the New Jersey State Department of Corrections (hereinafter "Department") against Salvatore Piccoli, a tenured teacher assigned to the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility. The Commission seeks Mr. Piccoli's dismissal from his position.

By notice dated February 4, 2011, the Commissioner directed respondent, via both certified and regular mail – the certified green card, signifying delivery, having been returned to the Department on February 9, 2011– to file an Answer to the tenure charges against him. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted by the charged employee. Because no reply has been received from respondent, or any attorney on his behalf, in response to the Department's charges, each count of the charges against respondent is deemed to be admitted.

The Commissioner has reviewed the tenure charges certified against respondent by the Department and the statement of evidence in support of those charges, which specify:

CHARGE(s)

N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2-3(a)11. Other Sufficient Cause; A6 Conduct unbecoming a public employee; HRB 84-17, as amended: D6a – Loss or careless control of keys, pagers/beepers or cellular telephones; C17 – Possession of contraband on State property; E1 Violation of a rule, regulation, policy, procedure, order or administrative decision; C:11 Conduct unbecoming an employee.

SPECIFICATION(s)

By your own admission and the findings of an SID investigation, it has been determined that on 12/10/10 you introduced your personal cell phone into the lobby of A.C. Wagner YCF and purposely left the unauthorized item unattended in an area frequented by inmates while you entered the institution to finish your workday in violation of PSM.001.017.

Deeming such charge to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the allegations against him, the Commissioner finds that the Department has demonstrated that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming and other just cause warranting the Department's requested penalty of respondent's termination from his position.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the Department, and respondent Salvatore Piccoli is hereby terminated from his position with the New Jersey Department of Corrections, Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility effective with the filing date of this decision.[1] A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as it deems appropriate.

SYNOPSIS

The New Jersey State Department of Corrections filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate his employment at the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4. Because no reply was received, the Commissioner deemed each count of the charges against respondent admitted and, by decision dated April 1, 2011, terminated respondent from his tenured position. However, on April 11, 2011 counsel for respondent filed a Motion for Reconsideration stating that respondent had mistakenly sent his written response to tenure charges to the Deputy Attorney General assigned to the case at the OAL rather than to the Commissioner. A copy was also sent to the Director of Educational Services at the Department of Corrections.

In light of counsel for respondent's explanation – submitted with appended exhibits supporting such explanation – the Acting Deputy Commissioner, to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33, determined to grant counsel's Motion for Reconsideration. Accordingly, the Commissioner's April 1, 2011 decision terminating respondent from his tenured employment was vacated and the matter was forwarded to the OAL for a hearing on its merits.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF SALVATORE PICCOLI, NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, ALBERT C. WAGNER YOUTH CORRECTIONAL FACILITY.	:	AMENDED DECISION COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on February 4, 2011 through the certification of tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee by the New Jersey State Department of Corrections (hereinafter "Department") against Salvatore Piccoli, a tenured teacher assigned to the Albert C. Wagner Youth Correctional Facility. The Commission seeks Mr. Piccoli's dismissal from his position.

By notice dated February 4, 2011, the Commissioner directed respondent, via both certified and regular mail – the certified green card having been returned to the Department on February 9, 2011 signifying delivery – to file an Answer to the tenure charges against him. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted by the charged employee. Because no reply was received from respondent, or any attorney on his behalf, in response to the Department's charges, by decision dated April 1, 2011 (#140-11), the Commissioner deemed each count of the charges against respondent admitted and terminated respondent from his tenured position.

On April 11, 2011, counsel for respondent submitted a Motion for Reconsideration of the Commissioner's decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)i. This provision specifies that a motion for reconsideration shall be considered in cases where there is a "claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute 'mistake' for purposes of this section[.]" In support of her Reconsideration motion, counsel provided the following explanation for respondent's failure to file an Answer to the tenure charges against him with the Commissioner:

> On February 4, 2011 the above referenced tenure charges were filed with the Commissioner. Exhibit A. While the notification of charges states that the respondent shall have 15 days to file a written response with the Commissioner, the notice also prominently lists Dianne Moratti, Section Chief as the attorney. Mr. Piccoli mistakenly sent a written response to the tenure charges via certified mail to Ms. Moratti. Exhibit B. He also sent a copy of his written response to Patty Friend, Director of Educational Services at the Department of Corrections. Both letters were delivered on February 17, 2011 – within the time limit required on the February 4, 2011 notice. Exhibit C. Clearly, Mr. Piccoli intended on filing a written response within the 15 day time frame. However, he mistakenly sent his response to the attorney listed on the notice rather than the Commissioner. Mr. Piccoli's mistake falls within the rule allowing reconsideration. Therefore, we respectfully request that the Commissioner vacate the April 1, 2011 Final Decision and process the tenure charges for hearing.

In light of counsel's explanation, along with the appended exhibits supporting such explanation, the Acting Deputy Commissioner – to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 – has determined to grant counsel's Motion for Reconsideration.

Accordingly, the Commissioner's April 1, 2011 decision terminating respondent from his tenured position is hereby VACATED, and this matter shall proceed to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing on its merits.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :

HEARING OF JAMES DOERBECKER, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP : DECISION

OF EDISON, MIDDLESEX COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified charges of conduct unbecoming and insubordination against respondent – a tenured custodian – for allegedly engaging in inappropriate sexually harassing conduct toward his coworkers. Respondent contended that the charges against him were fabricated in a scheme to get him fired, and were not true. The Board sought to dismiss petitioner from his tenured position.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board's witnesses were completely credible and truthful, and that respondent's offensive behavior and inappropriate workplace conduct had become so blatant that his coworkers were unable to withstand it any longer; respondent's testimony was not credible, convincing or reliable; the Board sustained its burden of proving that respondent's conduct was sexually harassing and inappropriate; and the Board further sustained its burden to prove that respondent was insubordinate in disregarding administrative directives and in flagrantly violating the Board's sexual harassment policy. Accordingly, the ALJ affirmed the charges of conduct unbecoming a custodian and insubordination, but made no penalty recommendation in the Initial Decision.

Upon independent review of the entire record in this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings, adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as to the ALJ's finding that respondent is guilty of both conduct unbecoming and insubordination, and dismissed the respondent from his tenured position.

AGENCY DKT NO. 53-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF JAMES DOERBECKER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	DECISION
OF EDISON, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed by respondent pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, and the Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

The respondent's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of his post-hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously sustained the Board's charges. Respondent asserts that the ALJ erred in finding respondent guilty of unbecoming conduct because he did not engage in sexually harassing behavior toward his coworkers. Further, the respondent contends that the Initial Decision is void of any legal analysis as to why and how the ALJ found the Board's witnesses to be credible, but the respondent's testimony to be unconvincing. The respondent maintains that the Board's witnesses were not credible because they testified to different versions of the alleged incidents. The respondent also argues that the Board failed to prove that he was guilty of insubordination because he followed Dr. Bank's directive to cease and desist from engaging in any alleged inappropriate behavior.

In his exceptions, respondent also points out that the ALJ did not recommend the appropriate penalty to be imposed if the tenure charges are sustained by the Commissioner. The Respondent argues that the penalty of removal and termination from his tenured position is too severe and disproportionate to the alleged charges. Respondent emphasizes the fact that the evidence showed that all of the custodians joked around and used foul language; he has been an employee of the Board since 1993; and he has had no prior incidents. Therefore, the respondent argues that a lesser penalty would be appropriate if the tenure charges are sustained.

The Board's reply also reiterates the positions advanced in its post-hearing submission at the OAL urging the adoption of the Initial Decision. In its reply, the Board stressed respondent's pattern of egregious conduct that occurred during the 2008-2009 school year and during the summer of 2009, citing examples of testimony that detailed respondent's inappropriate, sexually harassing conduct toward his co-workers. The Board also argues that the respondent's exceptions set forth a skewed recital of the hearing testimony, noting that the 18 Board witnesses were credible and all shared a common core in their factual allegations. With respect to the appropriate penalty, the Board argues that the nature and degree of respondent's unbecoming conduct and insubordination warrants dismissal from his tenured position of custodian. Despite the length of his employment, the Board argues that respondent's behavior deteriorated to the point where he was unable or unwilling to follow the directives of his supervisors to cease and desist from engaging in any and all inappropriate behavior. Finally, the Board contends that the evidence demonstrates that the respondent is unable to perform his job functions with even a modicum of the requisite demeanor appropriate in a school setting.

Upon a comprehensive review of the entire record in this matter, which included the transcripts of the hearing dates conducted at the OAL between August 20, 2010 and October 13, 2010, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board has established that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct and insubordination.

The Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments and objections previously raised before the ALJ and clearly taken into account by her in weighing the testimony and evidence, and in concluding that the record overwhelmingly supported the Board's charges. Based on her overall assessment of the Board's witnesses, the ALJ found that they were "persuasive, consistent and credible." On the other hand, the ALJ found the "respondent's testimony to be entirely unconvincing and completely unreliable." Notwithstanding respondent's contentions to the contrary, the Commissioner finds no basis in the record – which includes transcripts of six days of hearing – to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. In this regard, the clear and unequivocal standard governing the Commissioner's review is:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. [N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c)].

The Commissioner also finds that the ALJ's fact-finding analysis and conclusions as to the truth of the Board's allegations and the characterization of respondent's behavior as insubordinate and unbecoming conduct to be fully supported by the record and consistent with applicable law.

Turning to the appropriate penalty to be imposed in this matter,[1] the Commissioner is mindful that the "[f]actors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the individual's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Deborah Suitt-Green, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner October 14, 1997, slip. op. at 32, citing In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

[1] The ALJ determined that the Board "more than sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence that respondent engaged in conduct absolutely unbecoming a custodian" and that the respondent was insubordinate; however, the ALJ did not include a recommended penalty in the Initial Decision.

The Commissioner recognizes that the charges in this matter are serious in nature and finds that the respondent's inappropriate sexually harassing conduct necessitates the termination of his tenured position. The respondent's unbecoming conduct and insubordination was not the result of an isolated incident, but rather a pattern of egregious conduct that escalated during the summer of 2009, causing a hostile, uncomfortable environment at the school.[2] Importantly, respondent's inexcusable behavior occurred in the school building while children were present, putting them at risk of exposure to the sexually harassing and offensive conduct. The record also demonstrates that respondent has been unwilling or unable to improve his inappropriate behavior for the betterment of the school environment. His responses to the charges against him range from complete denial of the alleged behavior to allegations that such behavior was inconsequential in nature and/or provoked by others, a position which is completely inconsistent with the testimonial evidence. Finally, the Commissioner does not find that the record before him provides any indication that the respondent will improve his behavior, or adhere to the mandated policies regarding sexual harassment.

[2] The details and history of respondent's inappropriate behavior toward his coworkers are extensively outlined in the Initial Decision and need not be repeated here.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as to the ALJ's finding that the respondent is guilty of both conduct unbecoming a custodian and insubordination. Respondent is hereby dismissed from his tenured position with the Edison Township School District.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 03525-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 53-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JAMES DOERBECKER, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF EDISON, MIDDLESEX COUNTY.

Mary H. Smith, Esq., for petitioner School District of the Township of Edison, Middlesex County (Wilentz, Goldman & Spitzer, attorneys)

Ronald J. Ricci, Esq., for respondent James Doerbecker (Ricci ♦ Fava, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 5, 2011 Decided: February 17, 2011

BEFORE LESLIE Z. CELENTANO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On March 18, 2010, tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee and insubordination were filed against the respondent, James Doerbecker. Respondent is employed by the Board of Education of the Township of Edison ("Board" or "petitioner") as a tenured school custodian. Petitioner alleges that respondent engaged in inappropriate, sexually harassing conduct towards his coworkers.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On March 17, 2010, petitioner determined by a majority of its full membership that there was probable cause of the charges, sufficient to warrant a dismissal of respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. On April 1, 2010, the director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, Department of Education, determined that the charges were sufficient, and if true would warrant respondent's dismissal. The matter was referred to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 for a hearing. The matter was filed with the Office of Administrative Law on April 12, 2010.

Hearings were held on August 6, August 20, August 23, October 6, October 7, October 8, and October 13, 2010. On the final hearing date counsel requested an opportunity to submit post-hearing briefs, to be due thirty days following the receipt of transcripts. The record closed on January 5, 2011.

Daniel P. Michaud

Daniel Michaud is the Board secretary and business administrator for the district. The custodians report to the facility manager, Paul Jenney, Jr., who reports to Michaud as the business administrator, and he in turn reports to the superintendent. He supervises all of the custodians in the district. Daily problems or issues are brought to Mr. Jenney, but when they become serious enough he intervenes. He testified that this occurs less than once a month. He has known respondent since late 1997 when an issue arose with respondent that required his attention.

Michaud most recently interacted with respondent after a complaint was filed with the superintendent by other employees and he was called into closed session to discuss the issues with respondent. This was in the summer of 2009 when John DiMuzio was the acting superintendent. Complaints had been filed by several custodians alleging inappropriate touching and sexual comments during the work day. Michaud testified this was very uncommon, especially the level that the allegations reached here. Discrimination and sexual harassment are taken very seriously in the district and there is a zero-tolerance policy against them. Michaud testified that the current sexual harassment policy, P-7, dated January 21, 2003, was in place as of September 26, 1996, and therefore when the 1997 incidents with respondent took place, this policy was in force. The procedure for carrying out the policy is set forth in P-8. The nondiscrimination policy/sexual harassment policy, P-14, differs from P-7 because there is more detail regarding discrimination. That policy was adopted in December 1974 and was revised in March 2008.

In the summer of 2009 P-14 was in effect, and it serves to inform the public and staff what the district policy is and what actions will be taken if there is a violation. There are examples in the policy of what is considered to be sexual harassment, whether verbal or physical, and Michaud felt that five of the twelve itemized examples were committed by respondent. In this case there was contact, sexual flirtations, sexually degrading comments, obscene teasing, and questions regarding sexual conduct.[1] If there is a violation of the policy the procedure is to notify the supervisor and the complaint is investigated (P-15). Each year the affirmative action officer is appointed, and in the 2009–2010 school year the affirmative action officer was Dr. Michael Quinn.

Michaud received a telephone call from DiMuzio indicating that sexual harassment complaints by employees would be discussed at a closed-session meeting. Michaud was directed to give a "Rice notice" to respondent, which is a forty-eight-hour notice that they would be discussing him at a closed-session meeting. The notice was sent to respondent (P-21) notifying him that the matter would be discussed at the August 20, 2009, meeting, at which time DiMuzio reported the complaints that had been made by others, and indicated that an investigation would be conducted. Respondent was sent a letter (P-39) scheduling a meeting with Dr. Quinn and was sent another Rice letter on December 7, 2009, (P-40) indicating that his matter would again be discussed at a closed-session meeting, to take place on December 16, 2009. Prior to the meeting Dr. Quinn had reported that he had determined that there had been sexual harassment and that the complaints were credible. At the December 16, 2009, meeting Michaud was told to take disciplinary action against respondent. DiMuzio wanted respondent to resign, and the Board felt very strongly that it would not tolerate this conduct.

A third Rice letter was sent to respondent on January 15, 2010, (P-41) advising him that the matter would be discussed again in closed session on January 20, 2010. DiMuzio reported to the Board that respondent would not resign and that he was a tenured employee and had said the Board should bring tenure charges. Michaud reported that all of the Board members were appalled at what they had read and directed that tenure charges be brought immediately. Another Rice notice was sent to respondent on March 15, 2010, (P-42) notifying him of the March 17, 2010, Board meeting, at which time the Board voted unanimously to file tenure charges (P-43). Michaud testified that he has never seen sexual harassment by a custodian go to this level, and that tenure charges have only been filed four times in the district since 1997.

[1] Respondent stipulated that he received a copy of the policy.

Paul Jenney, Jr.

Paul Jenney has been supervisor of facilities since 1997 and has been employed by the district for thirty-five years in various capacities. He currently oversees all the custodians, and maintenance and grounds. Each building has a head custodian called a "facility manager," and there are monthly meetings with the facility managers. Jenney reports to Daniel Michaud. He testified that every year all employees attend sexual harassment training.[2] Jenney received a call from a union representative and was made aware of an incident involving respondent and other custodians. He had heard about a week earlier about problems between respondent and Steve Volturo and went to the school at that time, but was told by both that they had resolved their issue that day. He later learned that there had been previous issues between the two that he had not been made aware of. He has always believed that the custodians tried to work things out between them so that no one is "hurt," by losing their job for example, and believed that Volturo and respondent had tried to work out previous issues between the two of them first, as well.

Before August 2009 Jenney was not aware of any problems among the custodians at John Adams Middle School, where Joseph Meli is the facility manager. He spoke to Meli and asked about what else had gone on, and Meli described some of the problems he had not known about, and others he had tried to work out. When Jenney received a call from union vice president Scott Murphy on August 6 regarding the incident between Steve Volturo and respondent he did not know that the incident was of a sexual nature, and he went to school either that day or the next day to see what was going on. The men had each said that they worked it out after meeting with Dr. Banks, the principal. The next call he received was on August 13 from Murphy again, indicating that there was another conflict involving respondent and the other custodians, and that they were all in a garage attached to the school, where glass is stored. Murphy indicated that the other union representatives were there too, and told Jenney what respondent had said to the other custodians. Murphy said that they "didn't want to take it anymore." Jenney indicated that Dr. Quinn interviewed him on [2] Respondent stipulated to having attended all the training each year.

September 22, 2009, (P-31) and that his statement accurately reflects what he said to Quinn.

Jenney did not know at the time that others besides Volturo had issues with respondent, and when he learned that those issues were of a sexual nature he called the acting superintendent because he felt the situation was beyond his authority. Respondent was elsewhere in the building and Jenney told him to stay away. He directed the other custodians, including Volturo, Gary Higgins and Robert Janeski, to write down their complaints. Custodian John Finnerty was not there, as he is not in the union. The police were called and took over the situation and prepared a report (P-20). It was then that Jenney learned about the inappropriate touching, and the references to people's mothers, and heard that respondent had said things such as, "can I f- your mother?" and "do you want to suck me?" and similar comments. Volturo also indicated that respondent had touched him and run his hand up Volturo's leg. Jenney testified that he was very upset by the allegations and felt an obligation to act because this type of conduct cannot be allowed, especially in a school building where children are present. He articulated that kids should not hear or see these things, and it makes a difference to him that this all took place in a school building. He also added that this conduct should have been exposed long ago, not handled "in house," but the complainants did not want to get respondent in trouble.

On cross-examination Jenney testified that respondent was transferred to the John Adams Middle School in December 2008 based upon seniority in the district. He had the day shift, which could be 6:00 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. or 7:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., as it varies at the different schools. The other shifts are approximately 3:00 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. Volturo is usually on the 3:00-p.m.-to-11:30-p.m. shift, except for holiday weeks or if someone is away, and during the summer everyone works the same shift. Jenney testified that he wanted each of the custodians to put his allegations in writing so it was clear what each said, and all of them were in different places in the same room and not talking to each other, writing up their statements at the same time.

Jenney agreed that Volturo's statement (P-17) indicates that the conduct has been ongoing since respondent arrived at that school. He never asked Volturo why he did not report this conduct sooner than August 6, 2009.

Steven Volturo

Steven Volturo was a substitute custodian from December 2002 until June 2003 and was hired full time as of July 2003. In September 2003 he was assigned to John Adams, where he had spent most of his time, although he was transferred to the James Madison School for one year at some point.

In the fall of 2008 he began working with respondent, whom he described as a hard worker and a "good guy, but certain things he did were inappropriate." Volturo testified that respondent made sexual comments to him and to the other custodians all the time, and that he also touched him, mostly during the summer, which is when they spent the most time working together. During the school year respondent worked from 6:30 a.m. until 3:00 p.m. and Volturo worked from 3:00 p.m. until 11:30 p.m., and they only overlapped when there were school functions, meaning he had to come in at 1:30 p.m. to set up for wrestling matches or dances. Volturo estimated that there were about thirty times over the year where the shifts would overlap for approximately an hour and a half, during which all custodians would be together cleaning out the cafeteria for whatever event was taking place, and as such they worked together often. Respondent would constantly say, "can I suck your d-?" and "do you want to suck my d-?" Respondent made remarks to all the custodians, not just him. Volturo stated that they worked well together, but he grew tired of the comments and tired of hearing it and would get frustrated and tell respondent to just "shut the f- up." Sometimes respondent would stop, but then start up again later in the day or the next day with his remarks, and in the summer it was much worse. During the winter hours when they would sit in the break room, respondent would touch Volturo's leg in a manner that Volturo described as a soft touch that "you don't do to a guy" or to a coworker, and he would constantly tell respondent, "knock it the f- off."

Volturo testified that the entire crew saw this behavior. He said that telling respondent to knock it off should have been enough, but respondent would not stop, and things he did passed the boundaries of what was tolerable. Volturo testified that he did not report this conduct initially because respondent has a family, and there has to be something wrong "up there" for a guy to continue to do this.

In the summer of 2009, possibly mid-July, certain things respondent did, besides the comments, completely crossed the line. One day they were cleaning a classroom and Volturo was wearing shorts and standing on a radiator cleaning and dusting the blinds, and respondent put both his hands all the way up Volturo's shorts to the top and touched his bare skin. Volturo testified that he said, "get the f- out of here" and "knock it off," but respondent simply laughed and went back to cleaning. This was observed by Finnerty, Peter Scarcella and Janeski. All three saw what respondent did and could not believe it. They were annoyed too, and each felt that enough is enough, and they told respondent over and over to knock it off. After that incident respondent also grabbed Volturo's behind and squeezed his "butt cheeks," and no matter how often Volturo told respondent to stop he would not. Respondent touched his leg on other occasions too, but none of those incidents was as bad as this incident. Another time respondent dropped his pants in a classroom and exposed himself, saying, "look guys, do you want to suck this?" Volturo testified that he just turned around and kept cleaning; he testified, "what can you say to that?" He agreed that he did not tell anyone because he did not want respondent to lose his job, but the frustration over this conduct was increasing. In another incident in the kitchen respondent asked Volturo, "does your mother shave her c-?" Volturo said that he told respondent "shut the f- up," and that Pete also said, "yeah, Jimmy, shut the f- up." He stated that they gave respondent leeway all the time, and felt as though the conduct was just becoming worse. He agreed that he was yelling at respondent, which caused Joe Meli to come into the kitchen and ask why they were yelling at respondent, to which Volturo replied, "Joe, you have no idea what has been going on here." Volturo indicated that if respondent kept up this conduct he was going to call the superintendent. He did not want respondent to get in trouble, he just wanted him to stop this behavior. Union representative Scott Murphy arrived and spoke with respondent and Volturo, and Volturo agreed that he did not tell Murphy at that time that respondent had exposed himself, and also agreed that he did not tell Meli then either.

However, he did ask to meet with Dr. Banks, and he and Meli did speak to Banks and told her about the comments. They did not tell her about respondent sliding his hands up Volturo's pants or about exposing himself because they knew he would be fired if they revealed these things. Volturo said he thought the union would get respondent to stop the conduct, and Murphy had said to respondent while Volturo was there, "if you don't stop this it could get to be a sexual harassment thing."

After the meeting with Banks and the union president Volturo thought that respondent would have gotten the message and would stop the conduct. However, within a couple of days the conduct resumed and the entire custodial staff was tired of it. Volturo testified that he then told the union everything that had happened. John Kelly, the union president, was on vacation, but Andy Hibell, the secretary, and Scott Murphy, the vice president, were there, and they called Paul Jenney down to the school also so everyone could make their statements. They were informed that the superintendent was coming down and wanted the police called, and Jenney instructed the custodians to write their statements, and they all did, including Volturo (P-17). Each sat down and wrote his statement, and there was no discussion while the statements were being written, after which the police arrived. Three police officers came and were there for approximately an hour and a half with the custodians and the union reps. Volturo was listed as the victim on the police report. Volturo stated that as they were speaking to the police he was thinking to himself that he had not wanted it to go this far and that he wished respondent had just stopped his behavior. The day after that, respondent was gone on administrative leave.

Approximately one month later Volturo was interviewed by Dr. Quinn, and he was also interviewed again sometime later, and he told Quinn everything that had happened. The night of the incident the police called him and asked whether he wanted to press charges. Volturo said that he did not want to hurt anyone, but that he did his part in reporting the incident and just wanted to leave the whole matter in the Board's hands.

Volturo agreed that the custodians all teased each other with general joking around, but that he did not make sexual remarks. Volturo also testified that he had seen respondent touch others, and that children were in the building when respondent exposed himself. None of the children observed it, as they were in a classroom attending a "Read 180 program," which is an extra summer reading program. Respondent exposed himself in a room the custodians were cleaning, and a child could have walked by and looked in because the door was open, and there were children in classrooms approximately one hundred feet away. Respondent also made remarks when they were in the cafeteria, and children would come in and out for drinks and could have overheard him. Volturo estimated that he was touched by respondent every other day in the summer when he and respondent were working in the same classroom. Volturo testified that respondent also touched Finnerty once, and that Finnerty smacked respondent in response. Volturo had not smacked respondent, but kept telling him to "knock it the f- off."

Volturo testified that respondent's conduct was one of the most offensive and upsetting things that has ever happened to him, and that he told Dr. Banks that for someone to do this over and over he is not in his right frame of mind and might be "on something." He agreed that he might have said to respondent, "knock it the f- off, you druggie." After the initial dispute between them was resolved, however, on August 12, 2009, respondent rubbed Volturo's leg when they were in the custodian break room, and all of the custodians were there and all were frustrated with respondent's conduct. Later in the day respondent took a valve cap from Higgins's car and Higgins went to get Joe Meli, who went to see respondent, who in turn admitted taking the valve cap. Volturo said that there were no discussions that day about "we've had enough of Jimmy" with any other custodians, and it was not until the next day, August 13, 2009, that Janeski called in the union around 9:00 a.m. They had all started working at about 6:30 a.m. and decided they were calling the union. Janeski had never shared his feelings about respondent with Volturo; however, he said that he was tired of what respondent had been doing, and had made a decision to call the union.

Respondent's position has not been filled and is still open. Volturo and Janeski cover respondent's shift on a rotating basis. Volturo testified that it does not matter to him which shift he has, but if asked for a preference he would rather have the night shift because that shift pays an extra seventy-two cents an hour, and allows him to get other things done during the day, such as manage the apartments that he owns.

John Finnerty

John Finnerty is a part-time custodian substitute with the Edison Board of Education and fills in when others are on vacation or out. He is on an "on-call basis" and could be assigned anywhere. If he is on a long-term assignment he could be at one school for a few months, or a day here and a day there. He has been employed by the district since October 2008 and is not affiliated with the union.

Finnerty was assigned to John Adams Middle School from June 2009 to January 2010 and now is at Martin Luther King Elementary School. When he was at John Adams he worked a forty-hour week, as it was a long-term assignment. He worked with Higgins, respondent, Pete Scarcella, Joe Meli and others. He described John Adams as a good school to work at, indicating that he got along pretty well with most of his coworkers. Finnerty stated that he hopes to be hired full time by the district.

Finnerty described working with respondent as "aggravating," indicating that respondent was not a team player, did not work as hard as others and was always goofing around. He testified that "when it came time to work he was not always ready to work." He said he was constantly telling respondent to cut out the harassment and the goofing around and the lewd comments, indicating that respondent had "no workplace ethics." He was always touching and feeling others and grabbing their bottoms, and Finnerty felt this conduct was inappropriate for a work environment. Respondent would ask if he could "f- our mothers," and if we would "have a threesome with his wife." He would also ask whether we shaved our d- and our private parts, and also always asked "can I f- your mother?" and "does your mother shave her c-?" Finnerty testified that he heard respondent say this to Higgins and Volturo, and he kept telling respondent to stop. This conduct started immediately after Finnerty arrived at John Adams Middle School in June and persisted throughout his employment there. Respondent would say to Finnerty that he had a "nice ass," and he said sexual things to Volturo all the time. Finnerty was upset by this conduct, and indicated that it is not a usual thing to come across in a workplace. Respondent would grab his butt and massage his back, and all of this made him very uncomfortable and he constantly told respondent to stop. He also would push respondent away with two hands and say "get away from me," because it all made him very uncomfortable. He never teased respondent back and just kept telling him to "knock it the f- off."

Finnerty indicated, for example, that he and respondent would be walking to a classroom and respondent would start rubbing his back and say, "oh baby, you like that," and Finnerty would tell him to stop and he would not. Respondent also said to him, "are you some kind of fag, because you like it so you must be gay." He felt that respondent was coming on to him in a sexually harassing way and wanted him to stop.

One day he saw Volturo standing on a heater cleaning the blinds in a classroom and saw respondent put his hand up Volturo's shorts all the way towards his genital area, and Volturo told respondent to stop. They told Joe Meli, and he would yell to respondent to knock it off, and respondent would stop for a short time and then start all over.

Towards the end of the summer respondent exposed himself when Finnerty and Volturo were in the kitchen area putting back refrigeration equipment. On that occasion respondent had his pants and underwear down by his knees and yelled, "hey guys, do you like what you see?" and also "do you want to touch it?" and "do you want to suck it?" Finnerty testified that he told respondent to pull his pants up and knock it off, to which respondent replied, "what's the matter, don't you like what you see?" Respondent then asked, "does your mother shave her c-?" and "can I f- your mother?" He had asked these same questions before, over and over again. Finnerty agreed that he did not tell anyone, not even the union, at that point because he was trying to get hired full time and did not want to complain. He pushed respondent away, and if necessary would defend himself over his job interests. Finnerty did not want to get anyone in trouble, he just wanted to do his job and get the work done for the summer, and hopefully be hired full time.

There was a summer reading program being taught two classrooms over from the kitchen, with eight to ten children in the classroom. This "Read 180" program started the second week of June and ended two weeks before the start of the school year. The children in the class had to pass the kitchen on their left if they went to the bathroom, and any of the children could have seen respondent exposing himself. Finnerty did not know if any of the children did observe respondent's actions or hear his comments, but they were just two classrooms away.

Finnerty testified that the summer hours were the same for all custodians, 6:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and that during the school year the hours were 3:00 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. During breaks and lunch all the custodians would be in the same room. Even during breaks respondent made the same type of comments to the custodians. Finnerty also saw respondent touch Gary Higgins and say, "will you have my baby?" Pete Scarcella was very upset and got angrier faster than the others, so respondent did not touch him as much as he did the others.

Finnerty was present when the union representatives came on August 13, and he saw respondent argue with Volturo in the hallway after respondent said something about Volturo's mother. The police had come to the school as well, and the custodians, the union reps and the police were all in a meeting room. Finnerty was in the break room with respondent because he was not in the union, and so did not participate in the meeting. Respondent said to him at that time, "I'm not worried about anything that could happen because I have connections with a board member," indicating that he was referring to a board member by the last name of Romano. Finnerty felt that respondent thought that he was untouchable because of his relationship with Romano and that he would not get fired or get in any kind of trouble. At that point Paul Jenney took respondent's keys and escorted him off the property. Finnerty believes respondent is on administrative leave with pay.

When asked to give a statement Finnerty did so, and he met with Dr. Quinn as part of the affirmative action investigation. He told Quinn about respondent exposing himself and what happened with Volturo, and during a second meeting with Quinn revealed everything that had happened during the school year, including the fact that he has had lunch aides approach him to complain about respondent.

On cross-examination Finnerty elaborated about the incident where respondent exposed himself, indicating that he and Volturo were near a refrigerator and respondent was directly behind him. Respondent yelled to them to turn around, which they did, and respondent had his pants down. Finnerty said he was instructed to meet with Dr. Quinn in the teachers' room and did not know why, but just went when he was told to go. He agreed that the interview notes by Dr. Quinn (P-22) say that respondent exposed himself in a classroom rather than in the kitchen; however, Finnerty testified that he would have just told Dr. Quinn that they were cleaning a room, and that Quinn must have assumed that he meant a classroom. Finnerty agreed that the August 24 statement does not mention that he was touched by respondent as well, but he explained that all Quinn asked about that day was the incident with respondent and Volturo, and that he was not asked questions about himself.

Finnerty reiterated that respondent made the comment regarding knowing Joe Romano when all the other custodians were meeting with the union reps and respondent was in the break room with Finnerty, who was not in the meeting because he was not in the union. It was at that time that respondent said, "Joe Romano will take care of me."

Finnerty agreed that he heard Volturo fire back at respondent a few times, but Volturo never said anything like respondent said to them. Higgins would also answer respondent back after respondent made comments regarding Higgins's wife and mother or coworkers, but no one ever answered respondent the way respondent talked to them. Volturo did not insult respondent back, but would just tell him to knock it off or cut it out.

Finnerty also testified that he saw respondent take the tire valve cover from Higgins's car, and he told Higgins about it because Higgins had been having tire problems and just had a new tire installed. Respondent did not admit taking it at first, but then later returned it.

In Finnerty's second interview with Quinn (P-35) he did tell Quinn about respondent touching him several times and how he pushed him away, because in this interview he was asked specific questions about himself, which he answered. The first meeting with Quinn was to find out what had happened between Volturo and respondent, as Volturo was the complainant in the investigation and he and Volturo had witnessed the exposure incident in the kitchen. Finnerty explained that in his discussion with Quinn about the exposure incident he likely referred to "cleaning a room" rather than specifying the kitchen or a classroom. Finnerty testified that he did not want to get more involved in the whole scenario because he wanted to be hired full time, and he still wants to be hired full time.

Regarding the tire incident, Finnerty testified that he was walking by respondent, who was outside having a cigarette, and he saw respondent reach down by Higgins's tire and then put something in his pocket. He then told Higgins what he had seen.

Gary C. Higgins

Gary Higgins is a custodian at John Adams Middle School and has been employed by the Board since July 2007 when he started as a part-timer. His summer shift is 6:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and during the school year his shift is 3:00 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. He came in before 3:00 once or twice a week to break down the cafeteria or the gym for band practice, orchestra or after-school sports. He works with Pete Scarcella, Steven Volturo, Tony C., Joe Meli and Sal, a part-timer, as well as Finnerty. Higgins worked with respondent during the summer of 2009 and also during the previous school year at times. They worked together at other schools and got along fine and had no issues. However, issues began to arise because of respondent's touching, his language, and uncomfortable things he did. Respondent would say to Higgins, "can I see your co-?" or "can I touch your co-?" or "can I suck your co-?" or "do you want to see my co-?" Higgins found this very uncomfortable and not funny at all. Respondent would also touch Higgins by running his hands along his arm, the back of his ear, or his leg. He told many people about this, including his wife, and thought that respondent would grow up and would stop, but he did not. Respondent's comments were made all day every day throughout the summer, and also before the summer, when their shifts overlapped for a few hours a day and on school breaks.

Higgins testified that one day during a school break he was mopping the floor and respondent was buffing, and it was an all-day, "six-hour rant" by respondent. For six hours respondent said "can I see your co-?" and "can I suck your co-?" He would stop for ten minutes at a time and then start again. Higgins testified that he kept telling him to stop. During lunch or break time all the custodians sat together, and respondent would walk past Higgins to get in or out of the room and would touch him. Higgins testified that he would try and move away, but that some days respondent touched him multiple times. One summer when he and Janeski were changing locker combinations, which they do for all 1,100 lockers every summer, respondent walked by and touched his arm and rubbed his finger across it in a sexual way. Respondent's conduct eventually made Higgins so uncomfortable that every time he would approach Higgins, Higgins would move so that respondent could not walk near him. This conduct was very upsetting to him and he told his wife about it. He knew that all the other custodians had the same problem with respondent. Higgins saw respondent touching Volturo and Finnerty. He testified that some teachers also had problems with respondent, and they told Higgins, "come in if you see him come near me; I'm very uncomfortable around him." If he saw respondent in the room of a teacher whose first name was Magna he would go in and get respondent away from her and try and break up the conversation. Higgins testified that he would do that for anyone. The teachers were clearly uncomfortable around respondent. The kids in the school are approximately thirteen years old, and sometimes a female student would walk by and respondent would say, "look at that, isn't she cute?" This made Higgins very uncomfortable because he has daughters and granddaughters, and he kept hoping the conduct would go away. He did not report it; he knew that Meli had spoken to respondent, and he assumed respondent's conduct would stop.

One day in early August when they were doing summer cleaning he heard Volturo screaming at respondent "don't touch me," and he asked Volturo what had happened. Higgins said that was either the day that Volturo said respondent had "whipped his d- out" or was the day that respondent put his hands up Volturo's legs and said something about his mother. He had seen respondent touch Finnerty, Volturo and Scarcella and saw each react by trying to move away from respondent. Also in early August, Finnerty came in and said to Higgins, "go check your car," which he did, and a valve-stem cover was gone on a brand new tire. Finnerty told him that respondent had been squatting by his car, and Higgins agreed that he became very upset and spoke to Meli, who indicated that he would talk to respondent, which he did. Respondent said that he took the valve-stem cover because he needed one, but eventually he did put it back. Higgins said that he told respondent that he would have given him seventy-five cents to buy one, and told him not to touch his car. Higgins stated that this did not make him as upset as the touching, but agreed that it was the icing on the cake. He did not want to see respondent get in trouble and lose his job, because respondent had kids to feed, so he never mentioned the other problems with him.

The report Higgins wrote at the union's request (P-18) was done in the glacier shop with Volturo, Janeski and the union reps in attendance. All the custodians sat down in different spots in the room and wrote their reports at the same time. They each then spoke to the police, who were there more than an hour, and told them about the problems and issues with respondent. One of the police officers was a friend of respondent, and stated that he was not surprised when he read their reports. Higgins also was interviewed by Dr. Quinn.

Higgins testified that Volturo told him about respondent exposing himself in the summer of 2009, and stated that that was before the incident with his car. Volturo told him that respondent exposed himself and said, "do you want to suck this?" This incident took place when respondent Volturo and Finnerty were in the kitchen.

After respondent was sent home on August 13 Finnerty came into the room where the meeting with the police and the union had taken place and repeated to the others what respondent had said about being "untouchable," even if the Board heard what had been going on.

Robert Janeski

Robert Janeski is the head of warehouse and grounds for the Board and has been employed at the district for twelve years. Prior to working at warehouse and grounds he was a custodian, the night lead at John Adams Middle School, which means he handled all calls from the main office, to coordinate activities in the building. Prior to that he was a custodian at John Adams for five years, and prior to that was a custodian at other schools. He testified that during the school year he spent varying amounts of time with respondent, which could have been from one hour a day to three hours on days when he would come in early to set up for different things. However, he and respondent worked together every day in the summer, and also worked together at a prior job.

Janeski testified that when he worked with respondent at the school, respondent would come out with a lot of sexual comments, which he made to everyone, such as, "I want to suck your c-." He would also always grab himself and say, "here is what I've got for you," and everyone got tired of it. He would tell Joe Meli that the sexual conduct and comments were getting out of hand, and Joe would speak to respondent and things would improve for a day or two, and then the comments would start up again. The conduct was very bad in the summer, when Janeski saw respondent touch several others inappropriately, including Volturo and Higgins. He saw respondent come up behind Volturo, and put both hands up his shorts and go up towards his genitals, and Volturo told him to knock it off. He saw respondent touch Volturo's leg every day, and in the break room Volturo constantly told respondent to knock it off. He also saw respondent touch Higgins one day when they were changing all the locker combinations together. Respondent would walk by Higgins and Higgins would move away as respondent approached. Respondent ran his hand up Higgins's side and under his arm in a very slow sexual manner, and Higgins told respondent to stop. Meli had seen the inappropriate touching himself, and would talk to respondent and tell him to knock it off.

One day there was an argument between respondent and Volturo, and there was a classroom three or four rooms down the hall with children in it attending summer school. Respondent made comments during the school year also, when children were around, especially in the break room. Janeski testified that the locker rooms for the gym were across from the break room, and the kids' lockers were right outside the door, and any kid easily could have heard respondent's comments because they were very loud sometimes. Janeski spoke to Meli because of this conduct around kids. Janeski agreed that they all attended sexual harassment training, and according to the policy they were given respondent's conduct was inappropriate and he should be fired for engaging in it. Janeski reported that any time respondent got into trouble with management respondent would make comments that he was untouchable, saying, "I don't have to worry, nothing will happen to me." Janeski had a few teachers talk to him about respondent's "elevator eyes," which was a term defined in the sexual harassment policy. Michelle Anthony said that she felt very uncomfortable with the way respondent would look at her, and some other teachers said the same thing. He saw what they meant, because he would see respondent looking teachers up and down.

Janeski remembers the argument between respondent and Volturo on August 6 because that is his birthday. The union rep came in and all of them went to Dr. Banks's office. On August 13 the police were called, and Janeski was called by the union to file a grievance. They had all had enough of respondent; the comments and touching were not stopping and his conduct was getting completely out of hand. They told the union reps what had been going on, and the Board office was called to have the affirmative action person come over. Three police officers arrived along with Mr. Jenney, and all the custodians wrote statements at the direction of the Board office. Janeski wrote his statement (P-19), and was later contacted by Quinn and spoke to him twice.

On cross-examination Janeski agreed that Meli was in the room with respondent and others at times, and could see the touching for himself. Respondent would grab his genitals and say to Janeski and whomever else was there, "I got something for you guys."

Peter Scarcella

Peter Scarcella is a custodian at John Adams Middle School, where he has worked for ten years. He has worked with the district continuously since 1984, except for 1990 to 1993 when he lived out of state. He became full time in 1995 and worked with respondent. Respondent's first remarks to him were things such as, "can I have your baby?" They worked together every day in the summer from 6:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., and Scarcella felt very awkward when respondent made these types of comments. He also said other things that Scarcella initially referred to as "curse words."[3]

Scarcella testified that respondent asked him, "do you shave your balls?" and "does your mother shave her c-?" and would also say, "can I f- your mother's c-?" Respondent also touched him one day when they were standing in the break room and respondent was eating some peas; respondent put his peas in Scarcella's pocket with his hand. Scarcella testified that he was extremely mad, as he had his cell phone and his keys in there, and he told respondent to knock it off. He had no idea why respondent did what he did. He said another time respondent put a carrot in his pocket. He kept telling respondent, "do not touch me," and it was very uncomfortable when respondent did touch him. He also saw respondent touch Volturo when they were in a classroom dusting. Respondent put his hands up Volturo's pants leg and kept doing it even after Volturo told him to stop. He also saw respondent run his fingers up Higgins's arms and frequently make inappropriate comments to Volturo, Higgins and Finnerty.

On August 6 there was an incident in the cafeteria kitchen where respondent was arguing with Volturo, and Scarcella heard respondent say to Volturo, "can I f- your mother's c-?" Janeski told respondent to shut up, that what he was saying was not right.

Scott Murphy

Scott Murphy has been employed by the Board for fifteen years, initially as a custodian at John Adams Middle School and Martin Luther King Elementary School, and then with the grounds department. He is currently employed in maintenance.

On August 6, 2009, Murphy received a telephone call regarding a situation involving respondent and was asked to go to John Adams Middle School along with the union president to handle an altercation. At the time Murphy was vice president of the union, and when he arrived at the school he met with Volturo, who told him about the sexual comments made by respondent, including, "do you want to suck my co-?" and "does your mother shave her c-?" Murphy asked Volturo whether he wanted to file a complaint, and Volturo replied that he did not want respondent to be in trouble, he just wanted him to stop the conduct. When Murphy questioned respondent, his reply was that they all goof around; however, he did not admit or deny what Volturo had said. Murphy told respondent that his behavior was not appropriate for the workplace and respondent agreed to stop, and they shook hands. Murphy also reported that on another occasion Volturo told him that respondent had exposed himself.

[3] While all of the witnesses testifying were reluctant to use and hesitated at length before using the language respondent had used, Scarcella was extremely reluctant to use the actual words that had been spoken to him by respondent and hesitated even more than the others.

During a meeting with Dr. Banks on August 6, Dr. Banks explained the sexual harassment policy, and stated that if she heard any more about this conduct on respondent's part it would have to be formally addressed. On August 13, Murphy received a call from Janeski, who said that there were still problems at John Adams with respondent. When Murphy arrived at the school he was met outside by Janeski and Volturo, and they all went into the glacier shop. At that time, Janeski, Volturo and Higgins all told Murphy that the sexual comments and harassment by respondent had continued. Murphy was told about the incident where respondent put his hand up Volturo's shorts and the comments he always made, and Murphy called in John Kelly, the president of the association at the time, for help with the matter. Kelly was not available, and so Andrew Hibell, the secretary of the association, was called and came to assist. While they were all in the glacier shop Volturo also told Murphy about the incident where respondent exposed himself. All of the custodians present that day said that they had had enough of respondent and wanted to file a report. Murphy testified, however, that Volturo was adamant that he did not want respondent to lose his job or get in trouble, he just wanted the conduct to end.

Murphy stated that the policy was to call the facility manager; however, Joe Meli was not there at the time, nor was Dr. Banks, the principal, and so Paul Jenney, the next in line, was called. Mr. Jenney came to John Adams and was told what had transpired, and Mr. Hibell directed the custodians to each write down what had happened to preserve the details. Murphy said that he knew it was a serious matter, so he had Volturo, Janeski and Higgins all write their statements separately at a large table. He then briefed Jenney on the situation and called Superintendent DiMuzio, who called the Board attorney, who in turn instructed DiMuzio to call the police.

The police arrived and were told what happened and they took a report. The superintendent was there, and Jenney was instructed to put respondent on paid administrative leave, which was done. Respondent was informed of his rights and was told to call the union if he needed a lawyer.

Andrew Hibell

Andrew Hibell has been employed by the Board since 1994 as a custodian. He has had numerous positions within the union as well, and was involved in the situation with respondent. On August 13, 2009, he received a call from Murphy, the union vice president, asking him to come to John Adams Middle School. He was working at the time at Lincoln Elementary School, so he left there and brought the treasurer, Taglini, with him to John Adams. Respondent and Finnerty were outside the school, and Volturo, Higgins, Janeski and Murphy were in the glass shop. The four men started to tell Hibell what had been going on with Volturo, relaying all the sexual comments that respondent continually made. Janeski spoke of respondent rubbing up against him, and Higgins relayed that respondent rubbed up to him, and told Hibell the story involving the theft of his valve-stem cover. Hibell felt that all of the allegations were serious and that he needed to call someone. He attempted to contact Joe Meli, who was at a meeting, and then Dr. Banks, who was away, and ultimately reached Paul Jenney, who was their supervisor. Jenney said that he would be right over, and that he would call Superintendent DiMuzio. Hibell had the sexual harassment policy in his briefcase and reviewed it with those in the glass shop (Volturo, Higgins, Janeski and Murphy). He asked the three custodians to write down the events of that day on pads they were given, and all of them sat around a large butcher-block table which is used to cut glass. They were all sitting on different sides of the table, as Hibell had instructed them to separate in the room so that they wouldn't be writing their statements together. When Jenney arrived he was given the statements, and then DiMuzio arrived and was told what was going on. DiMuzio then advised Murphy and Hibell that he would be suspending respondent on administrative leave with pay immediately, and that the police would be called because of the exposure incident.

Hibell reported that none of the custodians wanted to file a complaint, they just wanted respondent's conduct to stop. When the police arrived they spoke with the custodians and then asked for copies of the statements the men had written. Respondent was advised that he was suspended and seemed shocked to hear that, but he turned in his keys and swipe card and left.

Jodi Dunkelman

Jodi Dunkelman has been a math teacher at the District for nine years and works at the John Adams Middle School. She was involved in an affirmative action investigation in March 2009 involving respondent. Dunkelman reported that she continually felt awkward and strange when respondent looked her up and down and stared at her chest when she walked by him. She reported that others said it happened to them as well. She would typically arrive at school early and walk to the faculty room and she would pass respondent in the hallway, at which point she got a "full body scan" from him. No other school employee made her uncomfortable in this manner, and she reported this conduct to Meli, who said he would speak to the principal, Dr. Banks. Dr. Banks called her down, and she told Banks that she had started taking a different route in the school to avoid respondent, because for weeks he had been acting in this manner that made her uncomfortable on each occasion that she passed by him. After reporting the conduct to Banks, any time she saw respondent in the hallway he would take an extremely exaggerated stance and stare at the lockers, and Dunkelman felt that this exaggerated conduct was to let her know that he knew she had complained about him.

Krystle Horan

Krystle Horan has been employed by the Board for seven years and is an English teacher at John Adams Middle School. She was involved in an affirmative action investigation in March 2009 involving respondent after numerous occasions where respondent made her feel extremely uncomfortable. She reported that when she walked by, respondent would scan her body, and she had learned that her friend Jodi Dunkelman had experienced the same conduct by respondent. She spoke to Dr. Banks when called in and explained what was going on, and indicated that no other employee in the district made her feel uncomfortable. After reporting respondent's conduct, any time she would walk by him thereafter he would exaggerate his conduct and look at the floor. She stated that she would not have brought it up had she not spoken to Jodi and learned that both were experiencing the same thing.

Lisa Ciatto

Lisa Ciatto has been employed for ten years as a special education teacher at the John Adams Middle School. In March 2009 she was involved in an affirmative action investigation involving respondent. She received a note telling her to go see the principal, and the principal asked her about respondent. She reported to Dr. Banks that when she sees respondent in the hallway, he looks her up and down.

Michel Parillo-Anthony

Michel Parillo-Anthony has been employed as a math teacher for seven years at John Adams Middle School. In March 2009 she was involved in an affirmative action investigation involving respondent. Joe Meli approached her and asked her if respondent's conduct made her feel uncomfortable, and she indicated that on two occasions she stopped to talk to him and he made her feel creepy because of where his eyes fell on her. She stated that he was looking at her abdomen and groin area. The first time she stopped to talk to him she had asked him to get her some pencils, and the second time was to congratulate him because she had heard his wife had a baby. On both those occasions he made no eye contact with her but just stared down at her lower body. Parillo-Anthony said that no other district employee made her feel creepy, and that she reported these two incidents to Dr. Banks.

Magdalena Zaremba

Magdalena Zaremba was employed by the Board for two years as a science teacher at John Adams Middle School. She was laid off pursuant to a reduction in force while she was involved in an affirmative action investigation in March 2009 involving respondent, after talking with her colleagues about how uncomfortable she felt around respondent. Any time she walked by him he would eye her up and down and not even say hello and that made her feel extremely uncomfortable. After this had been going on for a month or two she learned that other colleagues were saying the same thing, and she decided to go to the principal. Zaremba reported that it was a much bigger issue with her colleagues, but that it happened multiple times a day with her, every day, and that no other employee made her feel uncomfortable. She reported these incidents to Dr. Banks and also spoke with Joe Meli and Gary Higgins, who was the night custodian. She told Higgins because she runs the drama club and is sometimes at school late. She asked Higgins to "save" her if he ever saw respondent near her, and Higgins agreed to do so. Zaremba only spoke with respondent if she needed something. She did speak to Dunkelman and Horan about their experiences with respondent, and also knew that Ciatto had a problem with respondent as well. After she spoke with Dr. Banks, she avoided respondent.

Joseph Meli

Joseph Meli has been employed by the Board since 1993 and was a custodian until approximately 2002, when he became the facility manager. He has been at John Adams Middle School the whole time. His duties currently are to oversee the maintenance program and the custodial staff. He testified that respondent was assigned in November or December 2008 to John Adams after a job opened up there. Respondent was the most senior custodian in the district at the time, and so he bid for the job and received it. It was a 6:30-a.m.-to-3:00-p.m. shift and respondent was the only one on that shift. Pete Scarcella worked from 11:00 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. and Steve Volturo, Bob Janeski and Gary Higgins worked from 3:00 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. Meli testified that those on the 3:00 p.m. shift usually arrived around 2:15 or 2:30 p.m. and would sit around talking and having coffee in the custodians' room before the start of their shift. He reported that respondent was there at those times and that remarks were made that were not appropriate in a school setting. He testified that respondent said more vulgar things than the others would say in their joking around, and that he would object to vulgarities, which would still continue.

Meli received several complaints against respondent from the other custodians about respondent taunting them and instigating problems, and about respondent's friction with Scarcella, who had a hearing problem, about which respondent would taunt him. Respondent also made inappropriate remarks to Janeski and would do "touchy-feely" things and make remarks while touching him. Volturo also complained about respondent, indicating that he was constantly asked whether his mother shaves her "c-" and other vulgarities. Meli indicated that he could hear the vulgar comments being made in the kitchen from his office thirty-five to forty feet away, and that there were children in a class down the hall about the same distance away who had to pass the kitchen to go to the bathroom and easily could have heard respondent's language when walking by. Volturo also told Meli about the incident where respondent put his hands up Volturo's pants while he was cleaning, which Volturo was extremely angry about. Meli also received complaints from teachers that respondent was always staring at their breasts, which he reported to Banks, who indicated she would handle the complaints.

Finnerty told Meli one day that respondent had taken another custodian's air caps from his tires, and when Meli asked respondent why he had done that, respondent said that he needed them. Meli reached a point where he tried to limit the interaction between respondent and the other custodians, and to that end allowed respondent to leave ten or fifteen minutes early just to avoid interacting with the others around the table.

There was an incident in August 2009 where the police came, and respondent was not at work after that date. There have been no complaints from the custodians since respondent left regarding inappropriate remarks or vulgarity.

When Meli was interviewed by Dr. Quinn (R-2) he reported that he had seen respondent touching coworkers in the break room and rubbing up against them and touching their backs. The custodians complained, and Meli indicated that he told the respondent to stop that conduct, that it was not appropriate. He never witnessed what had gone on, but heard constantly from custodians about respondent's conduct. He did hear vulgarities related to "mother" comments from respondent, and never heard any comments like that from the other custodians. They always responded to what respondent said, but never with the same type of comments respondent had uttered. Each time he talked to respondent about ceasing the vulgar comments and unwanted touching he felt that the conduct would stop, but it never did. Meli agreed that he is not responsible for the teachers; however, when they complained to him he felt that it was harassment, and so he believed he should report it to Dr. Banks, who did supervise the teachers.

Dr. Michael Quinn

Dr. Michael Quinn was employed as the affirmative action officer for the district from 2008 until 2010. Prior to that he held a number of positions in the district, and prior to that had practiced law for a few years and did management consulting. He attended a full-day training session for affirmative action officers at the Department of Education, and also received in-house training from the district's law firm regarding sexual harassment. He also was involved in training some staff at the district.

Quinn became aware of an August 2009 incident with respondent when he returned from vacation. DiMuzio, the superintendent, asked him to investigate it, reporting that it was a serious incident and that he wanted Quinn to attend to it right away. Quinn made appointments with all the complainants, spoke to Paul Jenney, and reviewed the police reports and all statements. (P-17 through P-20.) He interviewed victims Volturo, Higgins and Janeski and witnesses Finnerty and Scarcella. He also interviewed Meli. Each witness was spoken to alone in a conference room and asked what happened. Quinn typed up the reports and DiMuzio indicated that he would wait until the investigation was complete to review them. After some difficulty attempting to schedule a meeting with respondent, Quinn was finally able to do so and to present the charges at a meeting attended by respondent, his attorney, the Board attorney and Quinn. Quinn noted, however, that after he typed up the reports he saw a lot of contradictions between what respondent had provided and what the others had all said, so he set up additional interviews. In his report (P-38) he concluded that the charges were all valid regarding the language, the touching and the exposure. He also referred to Finnerty and Scarcella as unbiased witnesses and extremely credible. After his investigation was concluded he presented his findings to DiMuzio. Quinn was troubled by the fact that all of this took place in a school, and that children were in the building and could have overheard or seen what had transpired.

On cross-examination, Quinn agreed that he reported the exposure incident to have taken place in "a room," and that on the following page (R-17) the kitchen is referenced. Quinn understood "room" to be a classroom, but indicated that he had "the impression" that the exposure incident occurred when the custodians were cleaning the classroom. He also felt that the exposure incident and the incident where respondent ran his hands all the way up Volturo's legs were the most serious allegations, and that Finnerty and Volturo corroborated each other regarding the exposure incident.

In respondent's interview (R-27) he admitted some of the allegations, but also said that the others pulled pranks on him as well, such as hiding his keys. He said that taking the valve-stem cover was a prank.

Quinn also testified that after he typed up the statements from notes that he had taken during the interviews, he did not go back and have each person review the typed statements for accuracy.

John DiMuzio

John DiMuzio was employed by the Board for forty-one years and three months, beginning as a teacher and retiring as acting superintendent on July 1, 2010. In August 2009 he was the acting assistant superintendent. He received a call from Paul Jenney, who told him that there was a problem at John Adams Middle School. He met Jenney and Hibell there, and Jenney reported that respondent had exposed his genitals to others. DiMuzio immediately called Board counsel, who advised that respondent should be placed on administrative leave pending a police investigation, and that if charges were not filed an affirmative action investigation would be conducted. DiMuzio told the Board of the allegations and respondent was suspended with pay as of August 13, 2010 (P-28). DiMuzio instructed Quinn to bring in all the parties involved and prepare a report, and when DiMuzio saw it he was stunned as to what had transpired. He felt that he should ask the Board to proceed with tenure charges, and after the Board members reviewed the report they were also stunned, and agreed that tenure charges should be filed. DiMuzio agreed that the exposure was the most serious of the allegations against respondent, but respondent had also put his hands up a custodian's pants, and that conduct, combined with the other findings and the exposure, was sufficient for tenure charges to be brought.

Maryann Banks

Maryann Banks was employed at the Edison Board of Education from December 1990 through December 2009 in various positions, and she left the District when she was in the dual role of principal and assistant superintendent. She is now a superintendent in Vineland, New Jersey. While she was the principal at John Adams Middle School the facility manager, Meli, spoke to her in March 2009 and indicated that several female teachers were uncomfortable around respondent. The teachers were reluctant to come forward, and so shared their discomfort with Meli, who in turn told her about it. Banks indicated that she asked for the names of the teachers and Meli provided them, and Banks interviewed each one individually. All of them had the same complaints against respondent, in that each was very uncomfortable with the way he looked at them, which they described as "a full body scan." The teachers also told her that the respondent stared at their breasts and groin areas, and one had indicated that he made her feel "creepy." Banks testified that she has known all of the teachers for years and finds them to be credible. She called respondent in to meet with her and the union rep, and he came in with two union reps. Respondent told her that he was unaware that he made anyone uncomfortable, and indicated that his conduct was not intentional, which Banks indicated was irrelevant because if the victim was uncomfortable then the conduct needed to be addressed. Banks instructed respondent to be aware of his conduct going forward, which he indicated he would. Banks advised him that she would refer it to the district affirmative action officer if the conduct recurred.

She didn't refer it at the time because she felt that respondent understood the seriousness of his conduct, which had also been emphasized to him by the union reps.

In the summer of 2009 Banks learned of an argument between the respondent and Volturo, and she met with Volturo, who said he had "had it" with the way respondent spoke to him and to the others, constantly making inappropriate comments. Volturo told her that he was uncomfortable telling her, to which she replied that she needed to know what had been going on. Volturo repeated to her the comments respondent made to him and to the other custodians regarding asking whether their mothers shave their privates, and used the crude references in their conversation. Banks told Volturo that she should have been made aware of this conduct sooner, and Volturo replied that he did not want to get respondent in trouble, he just wanted him to stop what he was doing.

Banks testified that about a week later she learned about a police complaint being filed against respondent by Volturo and called Volturo in to ask him about it. At the time, Volturo stated that he had not wanted to tell her everything during their previous meeting about respondent exposing himself and about another incident where respondent put his hands up Volturo's shorts. Banks testified that she was horrified at these allegations and indicated that she should have been told immediately because all of this constituted sexual harassment, and that she would now get the district's affirmative action officer involved. Volturo again reported to her that he did not tell her everything because he knew that respondent had a history of drug and alcohol problems and had just had a baby, and he didn't want to get him in trouble. Banks testified that she found Volturo to be credible.

Banks also found the five teachers who complained about respondent to all be credible, and indicated that none appeared to be fabricating anything they had said. Banks testified that after the incident where the police were called she expressed extreme displeasure to Volturo that she had not been made aware of everything that had been taking place, to which Volturo replied that they were trying to handle it amongst themselves because no one wanted to get respondent in trouble, they just wanted him to stop, but eventually they could not take his conduct anymore. Volturo indicated to her that this is why he initially did not tell her the details of the touching incidents and the exposure incident. Banks reiterated that she found Volturo to be credible.

James Doerbecker

James Doerbecker began working for the Board when he was fifteen years old, doing summer cleanup work. He worked part time until 1993, when he became a full-time custodian. He worked at several different schools, and then started at John Adams Middle School in approximately December 2008. At that time his wife was pregnant and not working and he was the primary income earner. With a new baby coming he wanted a day shift, and so he requested the available day-shift position at Adams (6:15 a.m. to 2:45 p.m.). Respondent wanted to be home with his kids and to help his wife. In a typical day at the school, respondent would check the boilers, get his coffee, turn the inside lights on, turn the outside lights off, and put coffee on for the secretaries. He would then open up the bathrooms, put the heat on in the trailers if it was winter, and clean up the kitchen and bathrooms. After that he would set up the cones in the parking lot and, if there was time, would buff the front-lobby floor. He also would sweep the front entrance, get the newspapers, and empty outside garbage cans. After lunch respondent cleaned the entire cafeteria, moved tables around, swept, mopped and usually finished around 2:30 p.m. The only other custodian there with him was Pete Scarcella, who worked from 10 a.m. to 6:30 or 7:00 p.m. The other custodians arrived as early as 1:00 or 2:00 p.m., sometimes on overtime for a shift that started at 3:00 p.m. There were times that the chairs in the cafeteria needed to be moved for a wrestling match or a dance.

Respondent testified that after his daughter was born in January 2009 he went to a rehabilitation facility in West Palm Beach for drugs and alcohol. He had been to outpatient drug and alcohol rehabilitation but this was the first time he was inpatient. He testified that alcohol and drugs were "killing him" and that he wanted to not have them control his life any longer. He also used cocaine and got drunk at night, but after his daughter was born he called a friend and indicated he needed help. His friend was acquainted with Joseph Romano, the vice president of the Edison Board of Education, and Romano, whom he already knew, told respondent that if he didn't do something the Board was going to fire him. As a result, respondent went to rehab, and his medical coverage paid for his rehab. He used his vacation time and sick time and was docked a few days as well. Respondent's rehab lasted from approximately January 20 through February 19, and he returned to work on his regular shift at the end of February.

In March 2009 respondent was called to Dr. Banks's office and told to bring a union rep with him, which he did. He had no idea what the meeting was about, and when he went to Banks's office he was told of the teachers' allegations. The union rep instructed him to stare at the walls or the floor when a teacher walked by from that day on. Respondent felt that Banks believed him, but she told him that if he made the teachers uncomfortable again, charges would be brought. Respondent testified that he did not know which teachers had complained, and that he does not know their names, only their faces. He changed his behavior because the union rep instructed him to look at the floor when a teacher passed by, even though he felt he had been accused of something he did not do.

Respondent testified that he did not spend much time near Volturo during the regular school year because Volturo did not come in until 2:30 or 3:00 p.m., and he would be doing his work and leaving as Volturo was arriving. Respondent also testified that he did not see Higgins or Janeski that much either, because they would be arriving when he was leaving.

Respondent indicated that Joe Meli never told him during the school year of complaints against him by other custodians, and there were no conflicts that arose that were addressed by the Board, the union or Meli. Respondent also testified that he did not talk to Volturo or Janeski or Higgins much, other than to say hello, and that he had a good relationship with Scarcella, who he says laughed at the peas and carrots being put in his pockets. However, he also agreed that Scarcella told him that his cell phone was ruined because of respondent's actions, and so he told Scarcella that he would buy him a new one. When Scarcella reached for his cell phone in his pocket he found peas instead.

Respondent testified that he never said any of the things to Volturo, Janeski, Scarcella or Higgins that they allege he said. He testified that he has never used those words to anyone, and never touched any of their bodies in any manner, anywhere. He agreed that rubbing an individual's arm slowly would be sexually inappropriate. Respondent stated that he is not attracted to men and would not have done any of what those men alleged. Respondent testified that none of the events alleged by the others ever happened.

Respondent then testified that in the summer, all of the custodians except Janeski made "mother jokes" to each other, and all of them said to each other, "can I f- your mother?" He agreed that he would say that to the others as well, after they started it, and that all of them thought it was funny except for Meli, who is "old school" and told them to stop. Respondent testified that all the custodians used profanity to each other, but never in front of any children. He said that he never called any of the female students "cute," and that he would not say it and is offended by that testimony. Respondent indicated that the summer class was held in either room 101, 103 or 105 and that the classroom door was always closed.[4] He indicated that no children were nearby, that he knows of, when "Volturo said these things," and that he did not think any of the children could hear it when "Steve said those things." Respondent testified that he never exposed himself "in a classroom" and never said "want to suck this?" He also testified that he never exposed himself in the kitchen or anywhere.

Respondent then testified that he asked Volturo if his mother shaves, but used the "p" word not the "c" word, and that this took place in a storage area and not on the day Volturo claims respondent exposed himself. He also never asked Volturo if he could "f- his mother." With regard to the August 6, 2009, incident, respondent testified that Volturo made comments regarding respondent's wife, and in return he made a comment to Volturo regarding his mother shaving, but he insisted that he did not use the "c-" word. He stated that Volturo then flipped out and was yelling and screaming, and that Meli was outside in another classroom and heard the commotion. After the union rep arrived and each man was spoken to separately, they shook hands, and [4] Respondent did not explain how he was unable to specify in which classroom the summer reading class took place, yet was able to testify that the door was always closed.

Dr. Banks told respondent to knock it off and nothing else. He was not disciplined for that incident and was never made aware of any allegations that others had made against him regarding sexual comments. Respondent asserted that the incident where respondent allegedly ran his hands up Volturo's legs never happened. As to the tire valve cover, he said he took it "as a joke," and that when Meli said to put it back, he did. He denied that he ever said he needed it.

Respondent agreed that he was sent home on August 13, 2009, after turning in his keys and swipe card, and no criminal charges were brought against him. He gave a statement to Dr. Quinn (R-27), and asserted that he never said "can I f- your mother?" or "does your mother shave her c-?" He said he used a word other than the "c-" word. Respondent denied all of the things that Higgins, Volturo, Janeski, Scarcella and Finnerty alleged happened, and denied ever touching anyone at John Adams Middle School. He testified that he does not touch men. Respondent said that he wants to fight for his job because he did not engage in any of the conduct alleged, and that Meli never came to him with any of these allegations. He believes Volturo, Higgins, Janeski, Scarcella and Finnerty all fabricated their allegations and lied about everything they said against him.

Patricia Doerbecker

Patricia Doerbecker has been married to respondent for seven years. She was not working when her husband worked at John Adams Middle School; however, she returned to work in October 2009. Her husband had discussed with her his applying for the day shift at Adams so that he could be home and have more family time. She indicated that respondent takes his job very seriously; however, she knew that the custodians at Adams didn't all get along.

DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Doerbecker contends that the charges against him should be dismissed because they are a product of a scheme or plan fabricated by the other custodians to get him fired because they want a chance to be assigned to the day shift. Doerbecker contended throughout the hearings that the others were determined to get him in trouble. According to Doerbecker, none of the acts described in the charges happened as alleged, and the allegations are not true.

The petitioner, the Edison Board of Education, asserts that Doerbecker should be dismissed from his position as custodian in its school system because of his unbecoming conduct and insubordination.

The burden of proof is on the Edison Board of Education. The Board must prove its case by a preponderance of the credible evidence, which is the standard in administrative proceedings. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this standard must be decided on a case-by-case basis. The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance may also be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975).

In the present case the facts are all contested. And, where the facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings. Credibility is the value that a finder of fact gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). Credible testimony has been defined as testimony that must proceed from the mouth of a credible witness and must be such as our common experience, knowledge and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955). A fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973). The fact finder is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950).

There is no mechanical formula for determining the truth, to the extent it can be discerned, and many factors may be considered and weighed. These include the demeanor of the witnesses and the manner of testifying. Corroboration, knowledge, and common experience also play a role in assessing credibility. Dawson v. R.W. Vogel, CRT 4501-00, Initial Decision (April 15, 2002), adopted as modified, Dir., Div. of Civil Rights (Aug. 28, 2002) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

It is well established that in administrative hearings hearsay evidence is admissible. Hearsay may be employed to corroborate competent proof, or competent proof may be supported or given added probative force by hearsay testimony. However, at the conclusion of the analysis, for a court to sustain an administrative decision that affects a substantial right of a party, there must be a residuum of legal and competent evidence in the record to support it. Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36 (1972); see also In re Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737 (App. Div. 1988); Hemsey v. Bd. of Trs., Police and Firemen's Ret. Sys., 393 N.J. Super. 524 (App. Div. 2007). Hearsay evidence is accorded whatever weight the administrative law judge deems appropriate. The nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, in general, its reliability must all be considered. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a).

Based on my common sense, intuition and experience, and overall assessment of the victim-witnesses, it is my opinion that the Board witnesses were completely credible and absolutely truthful, and I FIND that respondent's offensive behavior and wholly inappropriate workplace conduct had become so frequent and widespread that his coworkers were simply unable to withstand it any longer.

Having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony, review the documentary evidence and observe the witnesses, I FIND the following:

Charge One

Respondent is guilty of engaging in inappropriate and/or sexually harassing conduct towards his coworkers by:

a) making sexually explicit remarks to Steven Volturo about his mother

b) making unsolicited vulgar and inappropriate comments to Mr. Volturo and other custodians on a near daily basis since February 2009, including "can I suck your dick (hereinafter "d-")?" and "can I fuck (hereinafter "f-") your mother?"

c) inappropriately touching Mr. Volturo by rubbing his hands on Mr. Volturo's legs and up his shorts

d) exposing his genitals to Mr. Volturo and another custodian on July 29, 2009

e) asking Mr. Volturo "does your mother shave her cunt (hereinafter "c-")?"

f) using vulgar and inappropriate language in the workplace by yelling to Mr. Higgins and other custodians, "I see your cock (hereinafter "co-")," "Can I touch your co-?" "I like co-," "I like your co-," "Can I f- your wife?" "Can I f- your mother?" and "Can I f- you in the ass (hereinafter "a-")?"

g) inappropriately touching Mr. Higgins by running his fingers up Mr. Higgins's arm and side, touching his leg and squeezing his knee and repeatedly asking Mr. Higgins, "Can I suck your co-?"

h) making comments during the workday to Mr. Janeski and other custodians such as "I like co-" and "I want to suck co-," and grabbing his crotch while telling the other custodians, "I've got something for you"

i) yelling to Mr. Volturo and Mr. Finnerty, another custodian, "Hey, you guys want to see something?" and having his genitals fully exposed as they turned around, thereafter asking, "you guys want to suck my d-?"

j) making inappropriate comments to Mr. Scarcella, another custodian, such as, "Can I have your baby?" and also putting his hands in Mr. Scarcella's pockets on several occasions, including once when he stuffed peas into his pocket, and another occasion when he put a pencil in Mr. Scarcella's pocket

k) stealing valve stem covers from Mr. Higgins's car tires

Charge Two

Respondent is guilty of engaging in insubordinate behavior by:

a) repeatedly harassing his fellow employees in violation of Board Policy No. 4111.1/4211/1, Equal Opportunity/Non-Discrimination/Sexual Harassment Policy

b) continuing to engage in inappropriate and sexually harassing conduct after having been specifically directed by the principal to cease and desist in all inappropriate conduct towards the other custodians

I FIND respondent's testimony to not be credible. I FIND respondent's testimony to be entirely unconvincing and completely unreliable.

I FIND the Board witnesses to be persuasive, consistent and credible. All of the victim-witnesses' various written statements were consistent with each other and consistent with their testimony before this tribunal as to their accounts of respondent's behavior.

Respondent is accused of conduct unbecoming a custodian by engaging in inappropriate and sexually harassing conduct towards his fellow employees. I FIND his conduct as a whole to be sexually harassing and absolutely inappropriate.

I CONCLUDE that the Edison Board of Education has more than sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence that respondent engaged in conduct absolutely unbecoming a custodian by engaging in inappropriate, sexually harassing conduct towards his coworkers in 2009. I further CONCLUDE that the Board has sustained its burden of proving by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence that respondent was insubordinate in having disregarded administrative directives and violated Board policy by flagrantly ignoring directives to cease and desist from engaging in his inappropriate workplace conduct and flagrantly violating the sexual harassment policy.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the charges of conduct unbecoming a custodian and insubordination are AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured secretary – contended that the Board terminated her employment without affording her due process in violation of her tenure rights, and sought back pay and emoluments. After the filing of the petition in September 2009, the Board filed a motion for summary decision seeking to enforce a settlement agreement that was entered into by the parties in 2008, arguing that it lawfully terminated petitioner's employment because she had violated the terms of the settlement agreement. In November 2010, the Board also filed formal tenure charges against the petitioner in a separate action, and sought to consolidate this matter with the tenure charges.

The ALJ recited background history of this controversy, ie: in March 2008, the parties settled tenure charges against petitioner which alleged excessive absenteeism relating to petitioner's alleged substance abuse; and the terms of the settlement included acknowledgment by petitioner that she would be subject to termination of her employment and tenure if she violated the agreement. The ALJ found that: the Board is seeking to enforce the terms of the 2008 settlement agreement, which was adopted as a final decision by the Commissioner of Education and as such is governed by the New Jersey Rules of Court 4:67-6(a); therefore, the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) does not have jurisdiction to enforce the settlement agreement, which action should have been brought in the trial division of the Superior Court. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that this controversy was brought in the wrong forum and must be dismissed, and denied the request to consolidate the instant case with formal tenure charges which were filed by the Board against the petitioner.

The Commissioner found that: the ALJ wrongfully dismissed this matter, as the Commissioner does have jurisdiction to decide whether the termination of petitioner's employment was a violation of her tenure and due process rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 et seq.; the Commissioner has jurisdiction over all controversies arising under the school laws pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; petitioner is not seeking to enforce the 2008 settlement agreement but rather is seeking an order finding that the Board violated her tenure and due process rights, which is well within the Commissioner's jurisdiction; the Board's use of the settlement agreement as a defense to the claims made by petitioner does not automatically convert petitioner's case into an attempt to enforce a settlement agreement. The Commissioner determined that the proper course of action is to consolidate this matter with the tenure charges currently pending at the OAL, and accordingly remanded the case for further proceedings consistent with the concerns set forth herein.

CHARLOTTE ROBINSON,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed.[1] Upon such review, the Commissioner finds that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously determined that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to hear this matter.

A brief discussion of the background is required in order to understand the dynamics of this case and to assess whether jurisdiction appropriately lies with the Commissioner. The petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal in this case in September 2009, claiming that the Board's termination of her employment was a violation of her tenure and due process rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 et seq. After the matter was transmitted to the OAL, the Board filed a motion for summary decision seeking to enforce a settlement agreement that was entered into by the parties in 2008. The Board argued that it was entitled to summary decision as it lawfully terminated petitioner's employment because she had violated the terms of the 2008 settlement agreement. In January 2011, the ALJ denied the Board's motion for summary decision finding that the OAL does not have jurisdiction to enforce settlement agreements, and that there were material facts in dispute with respect to whether the provisions in the settlement agreement had been violated by the petitioner.

In November 2010, the Board filed formal tenure charges against the petitioner in a separate action, and in January 2011 the Board filed a motion to consolidate this matter with the tenure charges. Petitioner did not object to such consolidation. Without any further proceedings, the ALJ issued the Initial Decision dismissing the petition in this case finding that the OAL does not have jurisdiction to hear this matter because the Board is seeking to enforce the prior settlement agreement, and that the entire controversy was brought in the wrong forum. The ALJ further held that since the petition is dismissed, the motion for consolidation is rendered moot.

The Commissioner finds that the ALJ wrongfully dismissed this matter because the Commissioner does have jurisdiction to decide whether the termination of petitioner's employment was a violation of her tenure and due process rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 et seq. It is well settled that the jurisdiction "to hear and determine ... all controversies and disputes arising under school law" rests with the Commissioner. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Petitioner, who instituted this action, is not seeking to enforce the 2008 settlement agreement but rather is seeking an order finding that the Board violated her tenure and due process rights when it terminated her employment, a controversy which falls squarely under the jurisdiction of the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

In the Initial Decision, the ALJ relied on New Jersey Court Rules, R. 4:67-6 – which requires parties who are seeking enforcement of judgments to bring an action in New Jersey Superior Court – to find that the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction in this case. In so finding, however, the ALJ disregarded the claims advanced by the petitioner and simply dismissed petitioner's case based on a defense asserted by the Board. In order to evaluate the threshold question of subject matter jurisdiction it is necessary to look at the claims made in the petition, not the defenses raised by a respondent. Certainly, the Board's use of the 2008 settlement agreement as a defense to the claims made by the petitioner does not automatically convert petitioner's case into an attempt to enforce a settlement agreement, potentially precluding the Commissioner's jurisdiction. (But see N.J.A.C. 6A:3-3.1(b)). In this case a statutory entitlement under the tenure laws is implicated, and as such, it is properly before the Commissioner of Education.

Instead of issuing an Initial Decision dismissing petitioner's case for lack of jurisdiction, the proper course of action would have been to consolidate this matter with the tenure charges that are currently pending before the OAL. Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for further proceedings consistent with the concerns set forth above.

CHARLOTTE ROBINSON,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY,

Respondent.

Michael T. Barrett, Esq., for petitioner (Bergman & Barrett, attorneys)

Kenneth A. Skroumbelos, Esq., for respondent (Hill Wallack, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 22, 2011 Decided: February 28, 2011

BEFORE JOHN SCHUSTER III, ALJ:

In this matter Charlotte Robinson (petitioner) filed an appeal seeking reversal of her termination of employment as a tenured secretary for the Trenton Board of Education (respondent). By way of background, in August 2007, respondent filed tenure charges against petitioner alleging excessive absenteeism related to petitioner's alleged substance abuse. In March 2008, the parties settled that matter and a written settlement agreement was prepared, executed and approved at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). The Commissioner of Education adopted the settlement as a final decision the following month. As part of that settlement, the parties entered into Health Improvement Program Contract. That contract in part states "in the event of a violation of this agreement by ROBINSON, following the principles articulating in Yaniello,[1] supra, ROBINSON acknowledges that she will be subject to the termination of her employment and tenure." The contract between the parties also required petitioner to furnish a doctor's note regarding absences from work when requested by respondent or "be subject to termination of her employment and tenure." Petitioner was absent from work on April 22, 23 and 24, 2009, and produced a doctor's note for that period but without diagnosis. Petitioner was advised to have the note supplemented but petitioner failed to do so. As a result, petitioner was terminated and the appeal was filed.

Respondent's position is that pursuant to the express terms of the settlement agreement and the Health Improvement Program Contract, which is a part thereof, it has a right to terminate petitioner for a violation of the agreement and contract without the necessity of complying with the tenure procedures. In support of that position, respondent brought an action in the Superior Court to enforce the settlement agreement and thereby validate its action in summarily terminating petitioner. It was represented to the undersigned the Superior Court matter was dismissed without prejudice based on a finding that the OAL was the appropriate venue to seek enforcement of the settlement agreement since the settlement agreement originated from this Court.

Respondent then filed a summary decision motion in this Court seeking to enforce the 2008 settlement agreement and validating its action in terminating petitioner. Respondent's motion for summary decision was denied and respondent subsequently filed for interlocutory review with the State Department of Education. On or about that same time, respondent filed formal tenure charges against petitioner. An application was then submitted to the OAL to consolidate the two matters. The Department of Education has now determined not to grant interlocutory review.

The issue remains as to whether this court has jurisdiction to hear this matter. Respondent is seeking to enforce the terms of the 2008 settlement agreement which was adopted as a final decision by the Commissioner of Education in April, 2008. New Jersey Rules of Court 4:67-6(a) is applicable to all actions brought to enforce an order or determination entered by a state agency. Pursuant to (6) when a non-monetary remedy is sought an action shall be brought in the trial division of the Superior Court. See also New Jersey Practice Volume 37, Administrative Law and Practice Section 7.29. I CONCLUDE the Office of Administrative Law does not have jurisdiction to enforce the 2008 settlement agreement. I further CONCLUDE this entire controversy was brought in the wrong forum for determination and therefore must dismiss this action. As a result of this dismissal the application for consolidation becomes moot.

ORDER

For the reasons set forth herein I ORDER this action be DISMISSED without prejudice. I further ORDER the request for consolidation be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

On May 11, 2009, the petitioner filed an appeal challenging a two-day in-school suspension imposed upon his son by respondent Board, and sought expungement of the discipline from M.L.'s student record. The suspension occurred on December 11 and December 12, 2008. The Board filed a motion to dismiss the matter, asserting that the petition was not timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

The ALJ found that: in this case, the ninety-day period in which a petition of appeal may be filed began to run, at the very latest, on January 8, 2009 – the date upon which petitioner was sent written notice that the suspension was upheld; the petition was filed beyond the ninety-day time period and is not timely; and no exceptional or compelling circumstances were presented to justify relaxation of the rule. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion to dismiss the appeal.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition.

Record Closed: February 28, 2011 Decided: March 4, 2011

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In this matter, J.F.L. on behalf of M.L. (petitioner) appeals the two-day suspension imposed by the Borough of Audubon School District (Board) of his son and seeks the expungement of the record.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 11, 2009, petitioner filed a Verified Petition appealing the two-day suspension (P-1). On May 27, 2009, in lieu of an Answer, the Board filed a motion to dismiss asserting the petition was not timely filed (R-1). On September 17, 2007, the Board filed an Answer to Petition. On June 12, 2009, the case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed as a contested case.

On January 7, 2010, a motion to dismiss was granted in favor of the Board. On February 22, 2010, the Commissioner of Education remanded the case back to the OAL. On March 9, 2010, the case was transmitted back to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed as a contested case.

Numerous telephone conferences were held, and the attorney for the petitioner requested additional time to file opposition to the motion for summary decision. On February 24, 2011, the brief was received from the petitioner. On Febraury 28, 2011, a reply brief was received from the Board.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

M.L. was given an in-school suspension on December 11, 2008 and December 12, 2008 after an incident occurred involving him drawing a swastika on a desk and making an offensive remark to another student. On December 12, 2009, petitioner was advised of the in-school suspension and appealed the suspension to the Board of Education on December 30, 2009. On January 8, 2009, the Superintendant issued a letter sustaining the suspension (R-1). On January 15, 2009, the petitioner sent an appeal to the Board (P-1). The Board took no action on this letter. On May 11, 2009, petitioner filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education, which was more than 140 days after the suspension and more than 120 days after the decision by the Superintendant.

Petitioner asserts that the ninety days should not run because the Board took no action on the January 15, 2009 letter. The Board asserts that they would have to render a decision by February 6, 2009, and that would be the latest time to begin the ninety-day period. The right to appeal then would have ended on May 7, 2009.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) provides that a petitioner filing an appeal from the action or inaction of a board of education must file a petition "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education. . . ." The ninety-day rule expresses a public policy that favors a measure of repose to school districts. It allows for the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Kaprow v. Bd. Of Ed. Of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J., 572, 582 (1993).

Although this provision does not address the type of notice that may be considered "adequate notice" under the rule, the New Jersey Supreme Court has held that "adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 572, 597 (1993). Therefore, the ninety-day limitation period for commencing an action begins to run when the "plaintiff learns, or reasonably should learn, the existence of that state of facts which may equate in law with a cause of action." Id. at 587, citing Burd v. New Jersey Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291 (1978). Stated differently, the ninety-day period begins when a petitioner learns of facts that would enable him or her to file a timely claim. Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., supra, 131 N.J. at 588-89.

The ninety-day requirement has been strictly followed and applied almost without exception. Regardless of whether the Board has complied with statutory, administrative or regulatory requirements, the petitioner is required to file the petition no later than ninety days after the receipt of notice of the decision. Portee v. Newark Board of Educ., 94 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 381, 383.

The ninety-day rule may only be relaxed under exceptional circumstances or if there is a compelling reason to do so. Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Bd. of Educ., supra, 131 N.J. at 590; DeMaio v. New Providence Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 449, 453. As a general rule, relaxation will not be permitted unless strict adherence would be inappropriate, unnecessary or where injustice would occur. Ibid. In this regard it has been held that the ninety-day rule will be relaxed "only where there is some compelling reason for the same, such as the presence of a substantial constitutional or other issue of fundamental public interest beyond that of concern only to the parties themselves." Bogart v. Board of Educ. of the City of East Orange, OAL Dkt. No. 6245-82 (January 26, 1983), aff'd by Commissioner (March 14, 1983).

On January 8, 2009, the petitioner was sent written notice that the suspension was upheld. At that time, the ninety-day period within which to file his appeal began to run. The petitioner did not file an appeal until May 11, 2009. Even arguing that the January 15, 2009, letter to the Board tolled the ninety-day period, it did not toll the time period forever. Even if the Board had until February 6, 2009, to respond, the ninety-day period expired four days before the petition was filed.

The crux of the petitioner's argument is that since that Board did not respond to petitioner's January 15, 2009 letter, there was no final action to begin the ninety-day period. The Board asserts that time period begins upon the action or lack of action of the Board of Education, and for purposes of this motion, the Board was required to take action by Febraury 6, 2009, which would then begin the ninety-day period.

N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.7(b) states that if the appeal is made to the district board of education, a decision shall be rendered within twenty days. Even if the Board failed to take action, the decision would become final on February 6, 2009. Therefore, the petition is not timely and filed beyond the ninety-day time period. No exceptional or compelling circumstances have been presented to justify the relaxation of the rule.

No matter which date is used, January 8. 2009 (Superintendant letter), January 15, 2009 (petitioner's appeal to the Board), or February 6, 2009, the appeal would still not be timely.

Therefore I find that the petition of appeal was not filed within ninety days of the notice of his termination and conclude that the petition should be and is hereby dismissed with prejudice.

DECISION AND ORDER

The Board's motion to dismiss the appeal of the petitioner is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. SYNOPSIS

Petitioner alleged that her tenure rights were violated when she was involuntarily transferred from her position as Assistant Director for Human Resources/Personnel to the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health – a supervisory position within her area of certification – in October 2006. Petitioner filed her appeal in 2009. The respondent filed a motion to dismiss, contending that petitioner's claim is time-barred.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: based on the petitioner's own admissions, the 90-day limitations period for filing an appeal began in October-November 2006 when petitioner was involuntarily transferred and, soon after, learned that her position had been given to another person; petitioner did not file her appeal until November 2009, considerably later than the statutory 90 days after the district's action in transferring her to the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health; and there is no evidence to support petitioner's assertion that she was led to believe that she could informally seek relief and not be concerned about the time limitation for filing her petition. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioner's appeal was untimely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and dismissed the petition.

Upon review and consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

PASSAIC COUNTY,

Record Closed: January 27, 2011 Decided: March 9, 2011

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Anna Adams alleges violation of her tenure as a result of an involuntary transfer to a supervisory position within her area of certification. Respondent Paterson Board of Education, in lieu of an answer to the petition, filed a motion to dismiss based upon the expiration of the allowable time period for filing petitions for alleged violations of tenure rights.

Petitioner filed her petition alleging tenure violations on December 30, 2009. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, where on January 6, 2010, it was filed for determination as a contested case. The matter was initially assigned to Administrative Law Judge Sandra Robinson, and for administrative reasons the matter was transferred to the undersigned judge in September 2010. The matter was scheduled to be heard on September 13, 17, and 21, 2010; however, the parties acknowledged that the threshold issue was the timeliness of petitioner's appeal, and that issue had to be resolved prior to determining if there was a violation of petitioner's tenure rights. It was agreed that the timeliness issue could be decided on the parties' written submissions.

ISSUE

Was petitioner's claim timely filed?

FACTS

Petitioner, a tenured employee, alleges that in 2002 she was transferred to the position of Assistant to the Director of Human Resources by the respondent district. In 2003 she was promoted to the position of Assistant Director of Operations for Human Resources/Personnel, a tenured position in a non-bargaining unit. In 2006 petitioner applied for and was offered the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health; however, she declined the position. Petitioner alleges that she declined the position because it would have been a transfer to a non-tenured position with a salary freeze. Petitioner further alleges that despite her decision to reject the offer, later in October 2006 she was involuntarily transferred from her position as Assistant Director of Operations for Human Resources/Personnel to the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health, the same position she had declined. Petitioner further alleges that this position was non-tenured and froze her existing salary until it was in line with the guidelines set forth in the Paterson Administrators Association agreement.

Petitioner further alleges that in October 2006 her former position of Assistant Director of Personnel was abolished, and a new position with identical duties and responsibilities was created and titled Assistant to the Director of Human Resources. In December 2006 respondent abolished all assistant director positions, including petitioner's prior position as Assistant Director of Operations for Human Resources/Personnel.

Petitioner further alleges that on November 2, 2006, Olga Reyes, a/k/a Olga Freda, was hired as petitioner's replacement in the title of Assistant to the Director of Human Resources. In June 2008 Ms. Freda's position was renamed Supervisor of Human Resources in Charge of Operations. According to the petitioner, the newly named position of Supervisor of Human Resources in Charge of Operations is administrative, while Ms. Freda's prior position as Assistant to the Director of Human Resources was clerical. Petitioner further alleges that one of Ms. Freda's primary job functions is to assist in the supervision of the Human Resources Department, which was petitioner's primary job function as Assistant Director of Operations for Human Resources/Personnel. According to petitioner, the job description for her prior position as Assistant Director of Operations for Human Resources/Personnel is identical to Ms. Freda's job description as Supervisor of Human Resources in Charge of Operations.

Petitioner contends that under the above-stated scenario she holds tenure and seniority rights to the position Ms. Freda is currently holding.

Respondent, only for purposes of the pending motion to dismiss, assumes that the above factual scenarios are true and does not contest the factual allegations.

ARGUMENTS OF COUNSEL

Petitioner contends that respondent's motion to dismiss should be denied. Petitioner argues that her claim is not barred by the 90-day rule of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) because her tenure right is an absolute statutory entitlement and therefore the 90-day rule is inapplicable, and that N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.4(a) permits a relaxation of the 90-day rule to prevent injustices.

Petitioner contends that the violation of her tenure rights is a continuing one and it started when she was involuntarily and unilaterally transferred from her tenured position to her current non-tenured position.

Petitioner argues that the doctrine of equitable estoppel precludes respondent from asserting the 90-day rule. According to petitioner, respondent engaged in conduct that misled her to believe that the Board was going to address her grievances without her seeking court action or intervention.

Petitioner also argues that N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.4(a) provides that the Commissioner may in his or her discretion relax any rule if its strict adherence is deemed inappropriate, unnecessary or would result in injustice.

Lastly, with respect to the threshold issue of the 90-day rule, petitioner presents that public policy favors disposition of matters based on the merits, and that dismissals based on procedural grounds should not be condoned.

Respondent argues that the petitioner's claim is completely barred by the 90-day rule as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Respondent asserts that if petitioner claims that her tenure rights were violated when she was involuntarily transferred to the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health on or about October 16, 2006, then petitioner was required to bring her claim forward within 90 days of October 16, 2006. Instead, petitioner filed her claim on November 13, 2009.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The threshold issue in this matter is whether petitioner's appeal was timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The regulation states:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice or a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

In Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J. 572, 582 (1993), the New Jersey Supreme Court held that the Commissioner and the State Board of Education have the authority to establish a time limitation for the resolution of disputes arising under the school laws, and addressed the public-policy reasons behind the 90-day rule:

> The limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between the teachers and the administration. . . . The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. . . . N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) represents a fair and reasonably necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws.

In the instant case, petitioner first applied for the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health in 2006, and she was offered the position; however, on October 6, 2006, she declined the position, claiming that the position did not provide a salary increase, and that it would have been a transfer to a non-tenured position with a salary freeze. Later in October 2006 she was involuntarily transferred to the position of Supervisor of Physical Education and Health. And, on November 2, 2006, petitioner became aware that Olga Reyes, a/k/a Olga Freda, was hired as her replacement as Assistant to the Director of Human Resources. Therefore, petitioner was on notice no later than November 2, 2006, that she had perhaps been wronged.

Public policy, which favors providing school districts with "a measure of repose," must be weighed against the right of petitioners to be notified that the school district has taken a position adverse to them. Thus:

> Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate. Moreover, adequate notice under the regulation must be sufficient to further the purpose of the ninety-day limitations period.
> [Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 587.]

The Court explained the dual purposes of the limitations period as follows:

> The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. The second purpose is "to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose" by giving security and stability to human affairs.

In Kaprow, the petitioner was notified by a secretary of the respondent board that someone else was given her job. The Court held that such informal notice satisfied the notice of a "final order, ruling, or other action." Id. at 588. Here, the District's actions were open and readily known by the petitioner. Petitioner admits in her certification that she was aware of the District's actions as early as October 2006.

Petitioner further admits that in July 2008 she contacted the State District Fiscal Monitor and advised him of her concerns that the District had violated her tenure and seniority rights. Yet again, petitioner failed to pursue this matter.

The 90-day requirement has been strictly followed and applied almost without exception. In North Plainfield Education Association v. Board of Education of North Plainfield Borough, 96 N.J. 587 (1984), the New Jersey Supreme Court found that the petitioners were on notice that they had not advanced on the salary scale when they received their first paycheck for the subsequent school year. The Court held that it should have been obvious to the petitioners that they did not receive the benefit that they thought they should have and they were required to file their claim for a salary-scale credit within the 90 days following their receipt of their first paycheck.

The 90-day rule may only be relaxed under exceptional circumstances or if there is a "compelling" reason to do so. Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 590. Cases that are excepted from the rule include cases involving "(1) important and novel constitutional questions; (2) informal or ex parte determinations of legal questions by administrative officials; and (3) important public rather than private interests which require adjudication or clarification." Brunetti v. Borough of New Milford, 68 N.J. 576, 586 (1975). The facts herein do not meet any of these exceptions, nor do they merit a relaxation of the rule.

Petitioner further asserts that the time limitation should be waived because she was waiting for the results of the investigation of the State District Fiscal Monitor. The fact that she reported the alleged wrong to the State Monitor confirms that she was aware of her claim. I FIND, based on petitioner's own admissions, that the 90-day limitations period began in October–November 2006 when petitioner was involuntarily transferred and soon thereafter received notice that Olga Reyes, a/k/a Olga Freda, was given her position. Petitioner basically sat on her rights from October–November 2006 until November 2009, thereby far exceeding the 90-day limitations period. I further FIND that there is no evidence to support the assertion that petitioner was reasonably led to believe that she could continue to informally seek relief and not be concerned about the time limitation for filing her petition. She has failed to demonstrate that she was lulled into a false sense of security that continuing to argue and investigate her position would in some way extend the 90-day time limitation.

CONCLUSION

Having considered the arguments presented and the applicable regulations, policy and case law, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's claim was not timely filed and that the circumstances present here do not warrant a relaxation of the 90-day rule.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that respondent's motion to dismiss is GRANTED and petitioner's appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner's position as an Educational Media Specialist was eliminated – along with all other media specialists throughout respondent's district – in a reduction in force (RIF) at the end of the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner holds both an educational services certificate, under which she was employed by respondent Board, and an instructional certificate with an endorsement as an elementary school teacher. She did not contest the RIF, but asserted that – by virtue of having taught students in her former school about the Bill of Rights and the Civil War over a period of approximately six weeks during her tenth year as a librarian – she has bumping rights over non-tenured employees holding instructional certificates with the elementary endorsement.

The ALJ found that: petitioner's testimony was not credible; during her tenure career in the Carteret school district, petitioner served as an educational media specialist and was not required to teach any subjects to elementary school students; petitioner failed to present any documentary evidence to support her claim that she was instructed to teach the Bill of Rights and the Civil War to grades K-4 students over a six week period during the 2009-2010 school year; although petitioner would certainly have tenure and bumping rights pursuant to her educational services certificate, she does not have bumping rights attached to her instructional certificate because she has never worked under the auspices of that teaching certificate; and petitioner is a tenured librarian, but not a tenured teacher. The ALJ denied petitioner's appeal and dismissed the case.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions – filed on March 16, 2011 in response to an Initial Decision mailed on March 2, 2011 – were untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 and, therefore, were not considered herein.[1]

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly presented in his Initial Decision – that petitioner does not have bumping rights over non-tenured elementary school teachers with instructional certificates.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

Record Closed: January 28, 2011 Decided: March 1, 2011

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Lenore Douglas (Douglas) was hired by the Carteret Board of Education (Board) on or about July 31, 2000, as an Educational Media Specialist. She had an educational certificate issued by the Commissioner of Education.

As of June 30, 2010, the Board struggling through budgeting difficulties, eliminated the positions of all media specialists throughout the district. Douglas does not contest the reduction in force but contends that she has bumping rights over non-tenured employees with instructional certificates with an endorsement as elementary school teachers.

TESTIMONY

Douglas testified that in her tenth year as a librarian for the Board, she was requested to do instructional work, specifically, teaching kindergarten through fourth grade students about the Bill of Rights and the Civil War. She contended in her testimony that she taught the two subjects for a combined total of approximately six weeks. She further contended that it was at the instruction of the district administrator and a principal that she conducted these lessons.

During her testimony, Douglas attempted to differentiate her responsibilities as a librarian from the additional responsibilities she contended she was assigned that incorporated her teaching certificate. Peculiarly, the actual existence of the instructional certificate with the elementary school endorsement which Douglas possessed had not been disclosed to the board of education even after a request in March 2010 for disclosure of all certificates. It was not until after Douglas was riffed that she focused on her instructional certificate contending that in the weeks prior to her being riffed, she had been instructing the K-4 students in the school district on both the Bill of Rights and the Civil War.

At the conclusion of Douglas' testimony and the resting of her case, the school board made a motion to dismiss contending that Douglas had not established any aspect of her contention with credible evidence.

The only document marked in evidence by Douglas was P-1, which she purported to be the lesson plan supporting her contention that she was teaching both the Bill of Rights and the Civil War. During her cross-examination, she disclosed that P-1 was not prepared until after she was riffed and was composed to fortify the claims made in this litigation.

Douglas offered no corroboration of her claims that she was instructed to teach the Bill of Rights and the Civil War to K-4 students. She eviscerated her own credibility by contending that she had documentation establishing her claims that she failed to bring to the hearing and that a computer at school which had evidence supporting her claims had been deleted.

THE LAW

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, a teacher acquires tenure by 1) working in a position for which a teaching certificate is required, 2) holding the appropriate certificate, and 3) serving the requisite period of time. Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63 (1982). A teaching staff member who serves for the statutory probation period under an instructional certificate gains tenure in the designated position of "teacher." Ellicott v. Frankford Board of Education, 251 N.J. Super. 342 (App. Div. 1991). As distinguish from tenure, seniority accrues in specific "categories" within the broad position of "teacher," which are fixed by regulation and dependent upon the specific endorsements held on the instructional certificate. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10, -13; see N.J.A.C. 6A:9-9.2. In the event of a reduction in force, a tenured teachers re-employment rights extend to both the position in which the teacher attained tenure and all other positions within the scope of the teachers' instructional certificate and endorsements thereto, regardless of whether the teacher has actual experience in those areas. Dennery v. Board of Education of Passaic County Regional High School District No. 1, 131 N.J. 626 (1993).

There are three basic types of certificates that an educator may acquire: instructional, administrative, and educational services. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.2(a). Specific "endorsements" are designated under each type of certificate to coincide with educational subjects or positions that share, attributes and thus are grouped under a particular certificate. Employment in a specific teaching position requires that the teacher hold the endorsement required for that position under the appropriate certificate. In this case, Douglas held two different certificates, one was instructional and other was educational services. During her tenure career with Carteret, Douglas served as an educational media specialist and was not required to teach any subjects to any elementary school students. Although Douglas would certainly have tenure and bumping rights pursuant to her educational service certificate and any endorsements thereto, she does not have bumping rights attached to her instructional certificate with an endorsement as an elementary school teacher because she has never worked under the auspices of that teaching certificate. She is a tenured librarian but not a tenured school teacher. The skills are not transferrable.

CONCLUSION

After nine years of service as a librarian, Douglas claims, very unconvincingly, that she was assigned instructional duties almost contemporaneously with a reduction in force which terminated all media specialist in the district. Douglas' contentions are quite clearly contrived and in the absence of any documentary evidence to support her marginally credible testimony, the conclusion is that Douglas does not have bumping rights over non-tenured elementary school teachers with instructional certificates.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that Lenore Douglas' appeal contending that she has bumping rights over non-tenured instructional elementary school teachers is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

SYNOPSIS

The School Ethics Commission (Commission) found that respondents, members of the Livingston Board of Education, violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members when they released a complaint to the media that included confidential information relative to D.S., a student in the district. The Commission recommended the penalty of censure for each of the three respondents. The respondents filed no exceptions, nor did they appeal the Commission's underlying finding of violation.

The Commissioner, whose jurisdiction – in the absence of an appeal – is limited to reviewing the Commission's recommended sanction, adopted the Commission's recommendation that respondents be censured. Accordingly, the Commissioner ordered that the above named respondents be censured as school officials found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a complaint filed on May 24, 2010 by S.L.G. and M.S., as parents of D.S., a minor, as well as D.S., asserting that Charles L. Granata, Bonnie Granatir, Antonio Calcado and Stanley Graboski,[2] members of the Livingston Board of Education ("Board") violated the School Ethics Act ("Act"). Specifically, the complainants assert that the respondents violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members when they released to the media student information concerning D.S. that was a part of a prior complaint which they filed against S.L.G. in March 2010, which was docketed by the Commission as C12-10.

On June 17, 2010, a Motion to Dismiss was filed on behalf of the respondents. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-8.2(a), a responsive statement was filed on behalf of the complainants on July 7, 2010. The parties were notified by letter dated June 21, 2010 that this matter would be placed on the agenda for the Commission's meeting on July 27, 2010 in order to make a determination regarding the respondents' Motion to Dismiss the complaint. At its meeting on July 27, 2010, the Commission denied the respondents' Motion to Dismiss the complaint. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.8(a), the Commission voted to retain this complaint for hearing at a later date.

By letter dated October 14, 2010, the parties were notified that this matter would be scheduled for hearing at the Commission's meeting on November 23, 2010. However, the respondents requested an adjournment of this hearing, which was granted. The hearing was thereafter rescheduled for the Commission's meeting on January 25, 2011.

The parties attended the meeting on January 25, 2011. The complainants were represented by Robert J. Fettweis, Esq. and the respondents were represented by David B. Rubin, Esq. After hearing all testimony, the Commission voted during the public portion of its meeting to find that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members and to recommend a penalty of censure for the respondents, for the reasons set forth below.

SUMMARY OF THE RECORD

The complainants called John McEnroe as a witness. Mr. McEnroe is a former guidance counselor with the Livingston School District ("District") who retired as of July 1, 2010. He testified that he knew D.S. and was aware that he was interested in studying Hebrew. Although the District did not offer Hebrew as a course, an organization named Educere offered the course online. D.S. could take that online course, and then continue with his Hebrew studies at the community college. D.S. completed the online Hebrew course as reflected in Exhibit C-5, getting an "A" in the course.

Mr. McEnroe explained the need for Exhibit C-6, which is a "To Whom it May Concern" letter written by Mary Oates from the District. According to Mr. McEnroe, such a letter may be necessary to accompany a student's transcript when, for instance, a grade is not reflected on the transcript. McEnroe testified that he also sent letters to colleges for the purpose of recommending students and to clarify what may be in the transcript. Mr. McEnroe explained that other students had taken online courses and although they would get credit for the course, the grade would not appear on the student's transcript. Mr. McEnroe acknowledged under cross examination that the situation with D.S. was not handled any differently from the way it had been handled with other students.

Complainant S.L.G. testified that she is an attorney residing in Livingston; her husband is M.S., a co-complainant in this matter. She has a daughter in Middle School and her son, D.S. is now in college. In the 2008-2009 school year, D.S. was a junior at the Livingston High School and her daughter was in sixth grade. S.L.G. stated that Livingston is a five-member Board. She served as a Board member from 2001 to 2010. On two occasions she was the president and on one occasion she was the vice president. On April 20, 2010, she lost her bid for reelection.

S.L.G. testified that during the 2009-2010 school year, her relationship with fellow Board members was strained. She affirmed that during this time, the Superintendent had announced that he was not seeking renewal of his contract. S.L.G. attested that there was great disappointment about the Superintendent's announcement and a feeling that she was the reason he was leaving.

According to S.L.G., she filed her nominating petition for reelection on February 25, 2010 and Respondent Charles Granata was very vocal in supporting anyone running against her. Toward the end of March 2010, four members of the Board, Antonio Calcado, Stanley Graboski, Charles Granata and Bonnie Granatir, filed a complaint against her with the School Ethics Commission. S.L.G. testified that the complaint mentioned the issue with her son's online course. S.L.G. stated that she worked hard to repair her relationship with the Board and she was concerned that the search for a new Superintendent would be impacted by the filing of the March 2010 complaint. S.L.G further stated that, at the time, D.S. was involved in the college application process and she did not want articles in The Alternative Press about him. Therefore, S.L.G explained that she gave a public apology in an effort to keep her son "out of the picture."

However, the March 2010 complaint was filed and it included the issue with her son and the Superintendent. S.L.G. stated that the complaint made it seem that D.S. "was trying to take some flimsy course" and she, as a Board member, was trying to get him credit for it.

S.L.G. identified Exhibit C-1 as the Livingston Board's Student Records Policy #8330 and Exhibit C-2 as Livingston Board's Public Records Policy #8310. S.L.G. stated that she never provided written consent to the respondents in this matter to transfer any information about D.S.

S.L.G. testified about D.S.'s interest in developing fluency in Hebrew; she insisted that if he dropped his Spanish course, he must take Hebrew for credit. On October 27, 2008, S.L.G. sent an email to Liz Sanchez, the World Language Supervisor inquiring about options for taking Hebrew for credit. Ms. Sanchez responded on October 28, 2008, informing S.L.G. that Educere had an online Hebrew I course. (Exhibit C-3). Later, Ms. Sanchez informed S.L.G. that the Superintendent approved the request and that S.L.G could contact Educere to make all necessary arrangements. (Exhibit C-4). S.L.G. testified that she understood "approval" to mean that it would go on D.S.'s transcript, although she acknowledged that the email from Ms. Sanchez did not so state. D.S. dropped Spanish and completed the Hebrew course online. Exhibit C-7 is an email chain between S.L.G. and Lisa Yost, a learning coach from Educere, affirming that D.S. completed the course as of June 2009 and that a transcript would be forwarded to Livingston High School. S.L.G., upon receiving a copy of the transcript, notified Ms. Yost that because the transcript heading was "Whitmore Secondary School," she had concerns that it would not duly convey to colleges that D.S. "took a legitimate world language course in his junior year." (Exhibit C-7). Thereafter, S.L.G. had a conversation with the Superintendent and learned the school's position about not including grades for online courses within a student's transcript.

S.L.G. testified that The Alternative Press was an online news organization started by a Livingston High School graduate, Michael Shapiro, to focus on local issues. It was, according to S.L.G., an alternative to the The West Essex Tribune. She identified Exhibit C-8 as an email from Mr. Shapiro dated December 21, 2009 to all Board members asking questions about "tension" on the Board. Without naming D.S., the email makes reference to S.L.G.'s child and a decision made by the Superintendent that negatively impacted her child. Shapiro invited comment from the Board on "the situation." (Exhibit C-8) S.L.G. identified Exhibit C-10 as the comments submitted to The Alternative Press from Board members Charles Granata and Stan Graboski. The comments were forwarded to S.L.G., who stated that she made it "a policy to refrain from comment to the Alternative Press about any of my fellow Board members or their styles." (Exhibit C-9)

S.L.G. testified that, upon receiving the emails in Exhibit C-10, she was concerned that an article about her son would be run by The Alternative Press. In "a frantic move," she agreed to meet with Mr. Shapiro "off the record" to provide her perspective. She provided names of persons she termed "Board watchers" who had observed her in the nine years she served on the Board. Exhibit C-14 is an email from S.L.G to a member of the community asking if she would be willing to speak to The Alternative Press.

S.L.G. stated that on January 10, 2010, she received an email, identified as Exhibit C-15, from Mr. Shapiro, which included another list of questions. S.L.G. believed that The Alternative Press was moving forward on the issue with her child; she had heard that articles from The Alternative Press were being circulated. She agreed to issue an apology in the hope that the articles would stop. S.L.G. identified Exhibit C-19 as an agreement dated January 11, 2010 signed by her, Calcado, Granata, Graboski and Granatir. The statement attached to the agreement is an apology from S.L.G. (Exhibit C-19) The next day, S.L.G. received an email from The Alternative Press stating that "we have decided to put our investigation on hiatus" and there was no need to respond to the outstanding questions. (Exhibit C-20) According to S.L.G., two days later, Respondent Granata announced to The West Essex Tribune that S.L.G. was the reason the Superintendent was leaving.

S.L.G. affirmed that after filing her papers for reelection in February 2010, on March 22 or 23, 2010, Calcado, Granata, Granatir and Graboski filed a complaint against her. She identified Exhibit C-22 as an article published on March 25, 2010 by The Alternative Press which was captioned: "Four Members of Livingston Board of Education File Formal Ethics Complaints Against a Fifth Member, [S.L.G.]; [S.L.G.] Calls Complaints Baseless and Vows to Vigorously Contest Them." S.L.G. also identified Exhibit C-23 as an article published on April 1, 2010 by The Alternative Press captioned: "Four Board Members Release Statement Regarding Ethics Complaint, Allege [S.L.G.] was Notified of Intent to File Ethics Charges in Advance of Complaints Being Filed." (Exhibit C-23). As to Exhibit C-23, S.L.G. affirmed that when this was published, she had not yet received a copy of the complaint.

According to S.L.G., Calcado, Granata, Granatir and Graboski issued a press release on April 12, 2010 which was directed to a number of media sources: The Star Ledger, The Alternative Press, The West Essex Tribune, the Livingston Navigator and the Livingston Press. S.L.G. testified that she found the press release at Exhibit C-24 on Patch.com. Along with the press release, Calcado, Granata, Granatir and Graboski provided a copy of the complaint they had filed against S.L.G. Thereafter, The Alternative Press sent S.L.G. an email seeking a response to the complaint. (Exhibit C-25) S.L.G. testified that The West Essex Tribune also asked her for a response to the complaint.

S.L.G. identified Exhibit C-26 as the "redacted" version of the complaint which Calcado, Granata, Granatir and Graboski provided to The Alternative Press. This version of the complaint, with addenda, was, and according to S.L.G., still is, posted online. According to S.L.G., the complaint itself, as well as Addendum C of the complaint, although redacted, included information about her son. She testified that she was "fit to be tied," not only because it included information about D.S., but because it was not an accurate description of events. S.L.G. identified Exhibits C-27, C-28 and C-29 as articles that appeared in The West Essex Tribune, Newark Star Ledger and The Alternative Press, respectively, on April 15 and 16, 2010, after the complaint was released.

On cross-examination, S.L.G. acknowledged that she was upset when she learned that the Hebrew course would not be reflected on her son's transcript and she discussed the matter with the Superintendent. She admitted that she attempted to show the Superintendent that there was precedent for allowing the course to appear on the transcript by providing him with a copy of another student's transcript and acknowledged that on June 29, 2009, she provided the Superintendent, via email, with a copy of the other student's transcript. She insisted that the transcript had no identifying information. In response to further questioning on this issue, S.L.G. testified that she had the permission of the student's parents to be in possession of the transcript. In this connection, she explained that, as a member of the Livingston Municipal Alliance Committee, she was reviewing students' applications for scholarships. As to whether she used the student's transcript for the intended purpose, S.L.G replied that she was in possession of it and the Superintendent had the ability to use it anyway. S.L.G. acknowledged that the student's transcript reflected enrollment at another school for an entire year, rather than enrollment for a single course. She denied that when she spoke to the Superintendent about this matter, he gave her options for addressing the disagreement, such as appealing the matter to the Board or developing a new policy.

S.L.G. further acknowledged that she gave a statement to The West Essex Tribune; although she did not write the article, she is quoted therein. She identified that statement as included in Exhibit R-2, published April 8, 2010. She admitted that she did not discuss every issue raised in the C12-10 complaint, but stated that it was her understanding that much of what was in the complaint did not meet "the statute of limitations" and she did not need to "drag up things" that did not meet the limitations period. Therefore, the statement implied that the central theme of the complaint was the issue of how she dealt with parents.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-8.3(d), upon completion of complainants' case, the respondents' counsel moved to dismiss the complaint. After hearing arguments from the parties, the Commission asked the parties to leave the room so that it could deliberate. The Commission denied the Motion to Dismiss. Upon resumption of the hearing, the respondent's counsel called his witnesses, as summarized below.

Dr. Brad Draeger is the Superintendent of the Livingston School District; he was familiar with the circumstances surrounding the transcript issue relative to D.S. He discussed the matter with the Assistant Superintendent. He said that the granting institution would provide the course transcript, but that no child had ever had an outside course reflected on his/her transcript. Although there was no policy so stating, this was the District's practice. Dr. Draeger recalled a discussion by telephone with S.L.G., after which S.L.G. sent him another child's transcript showing credit for courses taken outside the District. Dr. Draeger distinguished the student's transcript as one which reflected an entire year of outside study. Dr. Draeger testified that he made it clear to S.L.G. that he was treating her as a parent and he would not deviate from past practice. He provided S.L.G. with two options: either appeal his decision to the Board or work on a new Board policy. Dr. Draeger testified that the phone call with S.L.G. became heated when he maintained that he would not do for her what he does not do for others. The call did not end pleasantly.

On cross-examination, Dr. Draeger acknowledged that as Superintendent, he would have had access to the transcript that was sent to him by S.L.G. He confirmed that at the time, the Board did not have a policy about dealing with outside courses, although he stated that one is evolving in light of changing graduation requirements. Dr. Draeger further acknowledged that he "alerted" Granata and Granatir that a Board member was requesting an exception for her child and he informed that Board member to appeal his decision or formulate a policy. He mentioned that the child was a High School student and he was treating the parent/member as he treated other parents. He did not recall whether the student's name was used.

Respondent Bonnie Granatir was called to testify that Exhibit C-24 offered by the complainants was not the version of the press release that the complainants in C12-10 prepared and she had no way of knowing whether this was still available on the internet. The "abbreviated" version prepared by herself, along with Calcado, Granata and Graboski is at Exhibit R-3. According to Granatir, this is the version she gave to The Alternative Press. She testified that the press release was drafted by Charles Granata; the others edited it and they agreed to the final, abbreviated version.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Commission finds the following facts to be material and undisputed in this matter:

1. Respondents Charles L. Granata, Bonnie Granatir and Antonio Calcado are three members of a five-person Board of Education.

2. S.L.G. was a member of the Board from 2001 until 2010. During the 2008-2009 school year, she had one child, D.S., attending Livingston High School.

3. On January 11, 2010, S.L.G., together with Charles L. Granata, Bonnie Granatir, Antonio Calcado and Stanley Graboski, signed an agreement which stated, in relevant part,

> All Board members will discontinue individual communication with The Alternative Press and any other media outlet with respect to this issue.
>
> All Board members will retract any statements which have been made to The Alternative Press which have yet to be printed.
>
> In the event that The Alternative Press or any other media outlet runs an article regarding the issue of [S.L.G.'s] son's high school transcript, the Board will issue a joint statement defending the confidentiality of all students. (Exhibit C-19 at paragraphs 2, 3 and 5).

4. In February 2010, S.L.G. filed her nominating petition to run for re-election in April 2010. She did not win reelection to the Board.

5. On March 25, 2010 Antonio Calcado, Stanley Graboski, Charles L. Granata and Bonnie Granatir, members of the Livingston Board of Education, filed a complaint against S.L.G. alleging that she violated the School Ethics Act. This complaint was docketed by the School Ethics Commission as C12-10.[3] It included eight charges.

6. On April 8, 2010, an article appeared in The West Essex Tribune which included a statement from S.L.G. The statement referred to the complaint as "frivolous." S.L.G. stated, in part:

[3] A Motion to Dismiss was filed on behalf of S.L.G. in C12-10. The Commission voted to grant S.L.G.'s Motion to Dismiss all allegations in the complaint, with the exception of the allegations set forth in Count 1 that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). A hearing on the remaining claims was scheduled for October 26, 2010. On October 19, 2010, the complainants notified the Commission that they were withdrawing the complaint. Consequently, the remaining allegations in C12-10 were administratively dismissed.

> This dispute could be best classified as a disagreement over the interpretation of a Board member's role when advocating for students and community members.
> I can say with confidence that it stems from my strong commitment to advocate for community members' concerns and in no way contradicts the high ethical standards the community should demand from me as an elected official.

The statement referenced concerns that S.L.G. had received from parents and how she responded to them. (Exhibit R-2)

7. On April 12, 2010, Antonio Calcado, Stanley Graboski, Charles L. Granata and Bonnie Granatir, issued a press release to the following sources: The Star Ledger, The Alternative Press, The West Essex Tribune, the Livingston Navigator and the Livingston Press. (Exhibit R-2) The press release stated, in relevant part:

> Four members of the Livingston Board of Education who recently filed formal ethics complaints against the fifth member [S.L.G.] will release the full complaint to the media today. The media outlets listed above will receive the entire substance of the charges sent on March 23 to the School Ethics Commission in Trenton. Although the complainants have repeatedly stated that they wished the case to be settled privately before the Ethics Commission, the documents are being issued in order to end speculation regarding the basis and substance of the charges, and to dispel inaccuracies that have been published relating to the charges. The four members stress their disappointment that [S.L.G.] has chosen to divulge selected portions of the complaint, which have been taken out of context. (Exhibit R-2)

8. Along with the press release, the respondents released a redacted version of the complaint docketed as C12-10 to the media, as set forth in Exhibit C-26.

9. The complaint that was released to the media included the following allegation:

> It appeared to individual Board members that the respondent, acting as an individual, engaged in antagonistic, retaliatory behavior directed at the Superintendent of Schools beginning in June 2009, pursuant to her dissatisfaction with an educational decision that the Superintendent made on behalf of her child.  (Exhibit C-26 at p. 5)

10. Page 6 of the complaint referred to Addendum C, which stated:

> It was reported to several Board members by [S.L.G.] that sometime in May 2009, she approached the Superintendent and asked him to consider adding a grade (for a foreign language course taken via an online educational service) to [STUDENT'S NAME REDACTED]'s transcript.
>
> Apparently, the Superintendent advised [S.L.G.] that he did not feel that the course should be added to the transcript, as the district could not verify that the final examination met the criteria of an equivalent in-house Livingston HS course. Further, he explained that the district lacked a policy governing the granting of transcript credit for such courses. He told [S.L.G] that in the interest of fairness he had made the same decision in [STUDENT'S NAME REDACTED]'s case that he would have made for any other student in the same situation.
>
> According to [S.L.G.] (and verified by the Superintendent), [S.L.G.] did not accept the Superintendent's verdict. She had heated discussions with him, pleading her case for the grade to be added to the transcript. The Superintendent declined to change his decision, offering two avenues of appeal to [S.L.G.]: bring the matter before the full Board for an appeal (as any [NAME OF GROUP REDACTED] has the right to do), and/or propose that the Board bring the process of granting transcript credit for online courses to a full Board policy discussion. [S.L.G.] rejected both suggestions. (Exhibit C-26 at p. 22).

11. The Board has a Student Records Policy #8330 which states, with respect to the access of student records:

> In order to fulfill its legal responsibility as a Board, the Board has access through the Superintendent or designee to information contained in a student's record. Information shall be discussed in executive session unless otherwise requested by the parent or adult student. (Exhibit C-1 at p. 4, paragraph 6).
>
> Organizations, agencies, and persons from outside the school if they have the written consent of the parent or adult student, except that these organizations, agencies, and persons shall not transfer student record information to a third party without the written consent of the parent or adult student. (Exhibit C-1 at p. 5, paragraph 12).

12. The Board's Policy #8330 further states, "In providing access to student records in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.5, individuals shall adhere to requirements pursuant to N.J.S.A. 47:1A-10, the Open Public Records Act (OPRA) and 34 CFR Part 99, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA)." (Exhibit C-1 at p. 6).

13. The Board's Public Records Policy #8310 states, as to public records, "confidential and exempt records" which are exempt from public review include, "information concerning individual pupil records or information regarding grievance or disciplinary proceedings against a pupil to the extent disclosure would reveal the identity of the pupil." (Exhibit C-2 at p. 2).

The complainants bear the burden of factually proving any violations of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members in accordance with the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a). See also, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(b).

Here, the complainants allege that the respondents violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) and (g). The complainants argue that when the respondents released the complaint docketed as C12-10 to the media on April 12, 2010, they publicly disseminated confidential information relative to D.S., then a student at the Livingston High School. Moreover, they contend that the information in the complaint was both inaccurate and misleading, as it suggested that the Hebrew course taken by D.S. was substandard and not pre-approved by the Superintendent. The complainants further assert that the respondents filed the complaint and released its contents to the media in an attempt to defeat S.L.G.'s re-election campaign, as there had been a strained relationship between S.L.G and the other four members of the Board during the 2009-2010 school year. They argue that, notwithstanding the redactions, the complaint released to the media clearly identified D.S. as the student referenced in Addendum C.

The respondents concede that the redacted version of the complaint was released to the media on April 12, 2010, but they argue that this release was necessary to counter the statement that S.L.G. made to The West Essex Tribune, published on April 8, 2010, which left a reader with the impression that the charges in C12-10 solely concerned S.L.G.'s advocacy for community members. Thus, they reason that S.L.G. "opened the door;" that is, when S.L.G. misrepresented to the public the nature of the complaint, respondents were compelled to release a full copy of the complaint so that no one would be misled. In this connection, respondents argue that as parties to the C12-10 complaint, they had a "qualified privilege" to release the complaint to the community, since the community shared a common interest in knowing the truth about the substance of the complaint.[4] Finally, respondents contend that the redacted version of the complaint deleted S.L.G.'s son's name and minimally references the transcript issue focusing primarily on S.L.G.'s reaction to the issue.

[4] Respondents argued that, "Our courts have recognized a qualified privilege 'if the circumstances lead any one of several persons having a common interest in a particular subject matter correctly or reasonably to believe that there is information another sharing the common interest is entitled to know.' Gallo v. Princeton Univ., 281 N.J. Super. 134, 143 (App. Div.) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Torts § 596), certif.. denied, 142 N.J. 453 (1995); see also Murphy v. Johns-Manville Prods. Corp., 45 N.J. Super 478 (App. Div.), certif.. denied, 25 N.J. 55 (1957)." (Respondents' Brief, January 13, 2011 at p. 3).

The Commission first considers N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g), which provides:

> I will hold confidential all matters pertaining to the schools which, if disclosed, would needlessly injure individuals or the schools. In all other matters, I will provide accurate information and, in concert with my fellow board members, interpret to the staff the aspirations of the community for its school.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of the confidentiality provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g) shall include evidence that the respondent(s) took action to make public, reveal or disclose information that was not public under any laws, regulations or court orders of this State, or information that was otherwise confidential in accordance with board policies, procedures or practices. Factual evidence that the respondent violated the inaccurate information provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g) shall include evidence that substantiates the inaccuracy of the information provided by the respondent(s) and evidence that establishes that the inaccuracy was other than reasonable mistake or personal opinion or was not attributable to developing circumstances. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)7.

The Commission finds that the undisputed facts on this record establish that by releasing the complaint to the media on April 12, 2010, the respondents took action to make public, reveal or disclose information that was confidential in accordance with board policies, procedures or practices. Specifically, the complaint referenced S.L.G.'s "dissatisfaction with an educational decision that the Superintendent made on behalf of her child."  (Exhibit C-26 at p. 5). Even the redacted version of Addendum C provided the following information about S.L.G.'s child: (1) he attended Livingston High School (S.L.G. testified that she had only one child in the high school at the time); (2) he took an online foreign language course; (3) his grade for the online course did not appear on his transcript; (4) the Superintendent advised S.L.G. that he did not feel that the course should be added to the transcript; (5) S.L.G. did not accept the Superintendent's decision about D.S.'s transcript; and (6) the Superintendent offered S.L.G. two avenues of appeal regarding this transcript dispute.

The Commission further finds that, even granting that the respondents enjoyed a "qualified privilege" to share information with the media and the community, such a privilege may not be carried out in disregard of a student's regulatory and statutory rights to confidentiality. If the respondents felt compelled to clarify "misrepresentations" made by S.L.G., they could have released a summary of the complaint which did not reveal information about the student's academic record. Thus, the Commission finds that the complainants established that the respondents violated the confidentiality provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). In so doing, the Commission finds no cause to reach to the complainants' allegations that the respondents also violated the "inaccuracy" provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g).

The Commission next considers the complainants' allegation that the respondents violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b), which provides:

> I will make decisions in terms of the educational welfare of children and will seek to develop and maintain public schools that meet the individual needs of all children regardless of their ability, race, creed, sex, or social standing.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) shall include evidence that the respondent(s) willfully made a decision contrary to the educational welfare of children, or evidence that the respondent(s) took deliberate action to obstruct the programs and policies designed to meet the individual needs of all children, regardless of their ability, race, color, creed or social standing. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)2.

The Commission finds that this record supports the conclusion that the respondents willfully made a decision contrary to the educational welfare of D.S. As Board members, the respondents are entrusted with confidential information about students. Notably, when the respondents released the C12-10 complaint to the press, they redacted the student's name so as to indicate that they recognized that the complaint contained information about a student's record. Yet, they failed to consider, or they failed to take the time to consider, that the redaction was insufficient, under these circumstances, to protect the student's identity, for the reasons set forth above under the analysis of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). In this connection, the Commission does not rule out the complainants' contention that the release of the complaint was strategically timed for days before the April election. Unfortunately, it appears to the Commission that in the respondents' eagerness to redress the conduct of S.L.G., they acted with indifference to her son's rights. Accordingly, the Commission finds that the complainants established that the respondents violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b).

Finally, the Commission notes that there was much testimony provided in this matter about the circumstances surrounding the release of the complaint. While that testimony provided a context, ultimately, it offered almost no information that was of legal consequence to the Commission's determination. Thus, although the Commission did not find S.L.G.'s testimony as to these background events to be convincing and while the Commission acknowledges that counsel for the respondents deftly impeached what minimal credibility S.L.G. offered, the Commission is nevertheless constrained to find that the determinations herein are essentially driven by the undisputed fact of the release of the complaint.

DECISION

The Commission finds that respondents, Charles L. Granata, Bonnie Granatir, Antonio Calcado, violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

PENALTY

If a violation of the Act is found, the Commission may recommend to the Commissioner of Education the reprimand, censure, suspension or removal of the school official. Here, the Commission recommends that the Commissioner impose a penalty of censure on each of the three respondents. In I/M/O Edward Vickner, Ewing Township Bd. of Ed., Mercer County, C36-01(May 28, 2002), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 272-02SEC, decided July 16, 2002, the Commission found that a Board member violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g) when he sought out and disclosed student information to the Board after being advised by the Superintendent that the information was confidential. The Commission recommended a penalty of censure, which was approved by the Commissioner. While, in the instant matter, the Commission did not find a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), it did find a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(b), along with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). By recommending a penalty of censure, the Commission seeks to impress upon these respondents the seriousness of their breach of duty to abide by the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. Parties may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation. Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
OF NATALIZIA BUSNELLI-ALJALLAD	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF	:	DECISION
SECAUCUS, HUDSON COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified charges of conduct unbecoming, incapacity and other just cause against respondent – a tenured secretary employed as administrative assistant to the Superintendent of Schools – for, inter alia: sexually harassing a school resource officer employed at Secaucus High School, making false statements about the activities of sitting Board members, and slandering and defaming members of the Board by falsely implicating them in crimes of official misconduct. Respondent admitted making false statements to the school resource officer, but contended that – while it was technically wrong to lie – her behavior was essentially harmless and should not have provoked the reaction of those around her.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the respondent fabricated a complex tale in which she implicated two Board members in serious misconduct in an attempt to garner attention from and cultivate a relationship with the school resource officer by leading him to believe that he was being investigated by members of the Board; respondent's testimony was not credible, while witnesses for the Board were credible; and the Board carried its burden to prove that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent be dismissed from her tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings, noting that the proven charges in this matter denote outrageously inappropriate behavior clearly inimical to the professional obligations of a confidential secretary in the office of the Superintendent of Schools. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the respondent was dismissed from her tenured position.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING : OF NATALIZIA BUSNELLI-ALJALLAD : SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF :
SECAUCUS, HUDSON COUNTY. :

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and the District's reply thereto – filed in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

Respondent's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate her arguments advanced before the Administration Law Judge (ALJ) below. As it is determined that such arguments were considered and adequately addressed in the Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon a considered review of the entire record in this matter – which included transcripts of the hearing conducted at the OAL on October 15, October 26, December 6, December 22, and December 29, 2010 – the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the District has sustained its burden of establishing respondent's unbecoming conduct as specified in Charges 1, 2, 3, 4 and 6 and that respondent's removal from her tenured position is the appropriate penalty.

In so determining, the Commissioner has given full consideration to all evidentiary proofs comprising the record and is cognizant of the importance of the ALJ's assessment of the credibility of the witnesses. This being the case – and the ALJ having had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her, and having made findings of fact based upon their testimony – the standard governing the Commissioner's review is clear and unequivocal:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. (N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c))

The Commissioner concludes that the record amply supports the ALJ's ultimate determination with respect to respondent's credibility, i.e. – "I did not deem Aljallad's testimony to be credible, in large part because she is an admitted and shameless prevaricator," (Initial Decision at 10) – and her concomitant fact-finding analysis and conclusions as to the truth of the District's allegations.

Turning to the appropriate penalty to be imposed in this matter, the Commissioner is mindful that "[f]actors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the individual's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Deborah Suitt-Green, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner October 14, 1997, slip. Op. at 32, citing In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

The Commissioner finds that the proven charges in this matter denote outrageously inappropriate behavior clearly inimical to the professional obligations of a confidential secretary in the office of the Superintendent of Schools. Also particularly disquieting is that, notwithstanding that respondent's actions here disrupted the lives – both professionally and personally – of a number of individuals, she has expressed no remorse or contrition nor does she appear able or willing to understand and appreciate the egregiousness of her behavior.[1] These factors lead to the inevitable conclusion that – should respondent be returned to her position – the Commissioner could not harbor any confidence that she would conform her behavior to that dictated for one in such a position which – by its very nature – demands the utmost candor and trustworthiness.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Natalizia Busnelli-Aljallad is hereby dismissed from her tenured position with the School District of the Town of Secaucus.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 06890-10
AGENCY REF. NO. 119-6/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF NATALIZIA BUSNELLI–ALJALLAD, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF SECAUCUS, HUDSON COUNTY.

Philip Feintuch, Esq., for respondent (Feintuch, Porwich and Feintuch, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 14, 2011 Decided: March 16, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Natalizia Busnelli-Aljallad (Aljallad) is employed by petitioner, the Secaucus Board of Education (the Board), as a secretary under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. On April 14, 2010, tenure charges were filed with the Board and served on Aljallad. She filed a response, under oath, on April 28, 2010. On June 7, 2010, the Board determined that probable cause existed to credit the evidence in support of the charges, and that the charges, if so credited, warranted Aljallad's dismissal from her employment. The Board suspended Aljallad without pay, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

On June 8, 2010, the Board certified charges of unbecoming conduct, incapacity, and other just cause against Aljallad pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. An answer was filed and the matter transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on June 29, 2010. Hearings were conducted on October 15 and 26, 2010, and December 6, 22 and 29, 2010. A motion to dismiss made by counsel at the conclusion of the Board's case was denied on the record.

Via letter dated November 3, 2010, Aljallad moved for an order directing the Secaucus Police Department to release the personnel records of School Resource Officer (SRO) Reinaldo Cruzado. I directed that these records be released, subject to a protective order, on November 24, 2010. Cruzado had already completed his testimony, but my order indicated that if Aljallad wished to recall him after reviewing his personnel file, I would entertain a proffer of the anticipated testimony. I did not hear further from respondent's counsel until the final day of hearing, December 29, 2010, when he advised me that the police department had not complied with my order. I informed counsel that my order is not self-executing, but that if he wished to move in Superior Court to enforce it, I would continue to entertain a request to recall Cruzado, provided that his testimony was scheduled prior to February 14, 2011, the date upon which briefs were to be submitted. I heard nothing further from counsel.[1] Post-hearing briefs were submitted on February 14, 2011, at which time the record closed.

[1] In his post-hearing brief, Aljallad's counsel alludes to impediments to his ability to present his case. These include the inability to secure Cruzado's personnel records, as well as the failure of two additional witnesses to appear pursuant to subpoena. As to these witnesses, I advised counsel on the record that their subpoenas likewise could be enforced in Superior Court. He did not ask that I provide him with an opportunity to pursue enforcement.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

The Charges

The Board filed eight tenure charges against Aljallad, all of which arose from her interactions with Cruzado, who was assigned to Secaucus High School during the 2009-2010 school year. The charges allege that Aljallad engaged in conduct unbecoming a school district employee. Charges one, two, and three assert that Aljallad sexually harassed Cruzado in violation of the Law against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-12 and local policy. Charges four, five, and six allege that Aljallad made false statements to Cruzado about the activities of sitting Board members, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4(a), and local policy. Charge eight accuses Aljallad of slandering and defaming two members of the Board by falsely implicating them in crimes of official misconduct. Charge seven, in which the Board asserted that Aljallad did not have the mental capacity to perform the requirements of her position of employment, was withdrawn by counsel for the Board, on the record.

On February 2, 2010, Aljallad was charged criminally with filing a False Report with Law Enforcement. N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4. By letter dated March 26, 2010, the Hudson County Prosecutor's office advised that it was dismissing the criminal complaint, and returning the matter to the Board to be addressed administratively. These tenure charges followed.

The Testimony

During the 2009-2010 school year, Aljallad was employed under tenure as a clerical employee in the Office of the Superintendent of Schools, Cynthia Randina. The job description for administrative assistant to the superintendent of schools provided that Aljallad's function was to "perform secretarial duties for the Superintendent of Schools involving confidential information related to students and staff, Board of Education members, the community and professional committees." She was bound by the Board's code of ethics, which obligated her to "keep the trust under which confidential information may be given," and "endeavor to establish good working relationships with other employees." (P-23.)[2] Randina emphasized that her office requires a support staff that she can trust implicitly with highly sensitive information.

Cruzado is employed as a police officer by the Secaucus Police Department, but was assigned for several years full-time to Secaucus High School, where he served as a SRO until the end of the 2009-2010 school year.[3] He had previously worked with school children in his role as a DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) Officer in the elementary schools, and was delighted when offered the SRO position. Although Cruzado technically remained employed by the police department he also reported to the high school administration. His responsibilities involved assisting school personnel in keeping the children safe, and supporting administration's efforts to maintain discipline and order in the school. Cruzado testified that he worked to build a strong rapport with the students, and that his goal was to "move them in the right direction" as citizens. He loved his work, and the regular hours afforded by this assignment allowed him time to enjoy his family, which includes a wife and two teenage daughters.

Cruzado first encountered Aljallad in November 2009, when his wife asked that he pick up documents related to her pending assignment as an English as Second Language (ESL) teacher at the district administrative offices. Aljallad was at the reception desk, and handed Cruzado an envelope with the documents he had been sent to retrieve. They had a casual conversation, and she commented that "I see the connection, you are Georgina's husband." After this brief encounter, she "friended" Cruzado on Facebook, the social-networking website. Cruzado confirmed that he has a Facebook account and, like many people, thousands of "friends." He thus thought little of it, and accepted Aljallad as a Facebook "friend." She made light conversation with him through Facebook, commenting on people they knew in common from Hoboken High School, and stating "see you around."

[2] Also admitted into evidence were two other Board policies, including a policy prohibiting inappropriate staff conduct (Policy 4281) (P-24) and one providing that the "sexual harassment of any employee of the district is strictly prohibited" (Policy 4352). (P-25.) Policy 4281 prohibits inappropriate interactions with students, and stresses that staff must at all times protect the health safety and welfare of students.

[3] Cruzado worked at the high school under a Shared Services Agreement between the school district and the local police department. Under the terms of this agreement, the school district reimbursed the police department for a portion of Cruzado's salary in return for his full-time assignment within the district schools.

The two did not interact again face-to-face until December 11, 2009. Cruzado was at his desk at the entrance to the high school when Aljallad entered the building. She asked for directions to the school office, which he supplied. About an hour later, as she was about to exit the school, Aljallad stated to Cruzado, "Ray, you passed the test." Cruzado was a bit taken aback, and asked what she meant. She declined to elaborate, but indicated that she would fill him in on her meaning at a later date. Cruzado found her comment strange. Accordingly, he called Aljallad at the Board office. Aljallad again declined to elaborate, advising that she could not talk on the school phone line. This left Cruzado quite concerned; as it was unimaginable to him that Aljallad had information to share that could not be discussed at school. Cruzado immediately relayed the incident to his wife, via text message.

Cruzado next saw Aljallad on December 14, 2009, when she returned to the high school and gave Cruzado a bag containing Avon men's cologne, and a business card with her contact information. Aljallad advised him that he could call her at lunch. That same day, at 12:15 p.m., Cruzado contacted Aljallad on her cell phone. Aljallad informed him that two Board members, Michael Makarski and Frank Trombetta, were concerned that Cruzado was a "threat to the ladies" at the school. The "threat" she was alluding to clearly was sexual, the implication being that Cruzado was inappropriate in his interactions with female students and staff. Aljallad advised that the two Board members had directed her to go to the high school and see if Cruzado "crossed a line with her." Aljallad gave Cruzado the clear impression that these Board members were acting on their own, and not under the authority of the full Board. Aljallad advised that she informed them that Cruzado was a perfect gentleman.

Cruzado was appalled. He viewed this allegation as entirely baseless, and indeed, he had never been advised by his superiors that there were any concerns about his job demeanor or performance. His instincts as a police officer told Cruzado that he should report the situation to his police chief, but Aljallad implored him not to, urging that her position of employment might be jeopardized. Accordingly, Cruzado asked if she could forward an email to him that detailed the instructions she had been given by the two Board members. Cruzado again immediately advised his wife about his conversation with Aljallad.

Aljallad emailed Cruzado the next day, December 15, 2009. Aljallad confirmed the substance of their phone conversation, and elaborated further on the instructions she had allegedly received from the two Board members, who she referred to as "those 2 idiots." She reiterated that she had advised them that Cruzado was a gentleman, stating in her email that she had advised that Cruzado "did not once drop [his] eyes on me or anyone else that was walking by for that matter." But Aljallad noted that the Board members nonetheless asked her to check on Cruzado at least once a week, and to even have lunch with him in the cafeteria "just to make sure that [he was] not just on [his] best behavior the first time around." Regarding the Board members, Aljallad wrote, "[t]hey are out of their minds." Regarding the notion of lunching together, she wrote, "that would not look well at all." Aljallad added:

> Now get this one . . . in addition to the above, they want me to befriend your wife to see if you guys have any marital problems and if so, if it is caused by infidelity or you seeing any other women on the side.

Aljallad had invited Cruzado's wife to join her for a drink, so she reassured Cruzado as follows: "[p]lease don't think that I asked Georgina out for a drink because I was going to drill her. I really do want to befriend her, but for all the right reasons."

Cruzado testified that he was extremely disconcerted, particularly that his wife had been drawn in to what he believed to be an unauthorized investigation. He replied to Aljallad with thanks for the information she had shared. Cruzado's email described the behavior of the Board members as "improper and illegal." Aljallad replied with a further email, again disparaging the public officials she claimed had directed her to investigate Cruzado, as follows:

> [y]ou know what it is with these guys, the power of being a board member goes right to their heads. They think that they can control people and play with their lives. They should really look at themselves in the mirror and see what > they are made of. I guess they do this to feel better about themselves. I see no other reason for it.

Cruzado testified convincingly that he fully believed Aljallad's story, and thus concluded that the Board members were engaged in official misconduct. He asked Aljallad not to communicate further with him, having become uncomfortable with their email exchange. She agreed not to, but then followed with a December 17, 2009, email in which she shared a "YouTube" video, but renewed a promise to send no further emails. On December 23, 2009, Cruzado filed a formal police investigation report in which he charged Board members Makarski and Trombetta with official misconduct and conspiracy to commit official misconduct, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:5-2 and N.J.S.A. 2C:30-2. The report stated that the two were acting without the authority of the full Board, and had secured Aljallad's cooperation by threatening her continued employment.

On December 24 and December 27, 2009, Cruzado received additional emails from Aljallad.[4] The December 27, 2009, email served to further reinforce Cruzado's belief that Board members were engaged in illegal activity. Aljallad informed Cruzado that their requests that she participate in their investigation were ongoing, stating "[e]ven though they have asked me to do more stuff . . . I refuse to do so." In light of this latest email, Cruzado testified that it did not occur to him to put the brakes on the police investigation he had initiated. Although Cruzado had sought to terminate his email communications with Aljallad, he replied to this latest email because he felt sorry for her. He felt Aljallad was being used. Cruzado filed a supplementary investigation report with the police department in which he shared this latest email exchange.

A meeting at the police department took place on January 19, 2010. Cruzado was present, as was the Police Chief Dennis Corcoran, Superintendent Randina, School Business Administrator Edward Walkiewicz, and counsel for the Board. It was readily confirmed that an investigation of Cruzado had not been initiated with the knowledge or direction of the full board or school district administration. School district personnel were informed that the matter had been referred to the County Prosecutor, who had recommended that it be investigated administratively. Police officials agreed that Cruzado would cooperate with that investigation, and the police department supplied its file to school officials.

[4] The December 24, 2009, email again acknowledged that Cruzado wished to stop their email exchange, and stated "consider this your last one." But Aljallad wrote again on December 27, 2009. She elaborated further in both emails on the break-up of a high school romance, and on the later break-up of her marriage. She wrote in the December 27, 2009, email that she was "starting to get that funny feeling" that Cruzado was ignoring her.

On January 21, 2010, Randina and Walkiewicz interviewed Cruzado, Georgina Cruzado, Trombetta, Makarski, and Aljallad. During her interview, Aljallad informed school administration that she had entirely manufactured the tale that two Board members had directed her to investigate Cruzado's conduct. Consistent with Aljallad's admission, Trombetta and Makarski steadfastly denied any involvement in Aljallad's activities. Aljallad stressed in her own defense that she never lied to administration. Indeed, School Business Administrator Ed Walkiewicz, testified that he was somewhat taken aback by Aljallad's demeanor during their January 21, 2010, interview. Walkiewicz explained that they had been provided with the emails she had sent to Cruzado, and Aljallad replied immediately that she had "made the whole thing up." Randina and Walkiewicz informed Aljallad that her actions were a serious breach of her professional obligations, and they left the room to afford her an opportunity to reflect and consider if she wished to add any information in her own defense. When they returned she was casually looking at a magazine, and stated that she had nothing to add.

Aljallad's version of the events leading to the tenure charges differs from Cruzado's as to some unimportant details, but not as to most of the salient points. Aljallad testified that she had attended a football game with a friend. Cruzado passed by, and her friend made a face "of disgust," expressing dislike for him. The friend advised that her daughters, who attend Secaucus High School, had complained that Cruzado looked at them in a way that made them uncomfortable; so much so, that they took pains to change their route within the school building to avoid him. The friend recounted that she had heard similar complaints from other parents. According to Aljallad, this troubled her enough to embark on a private investigation of Cruzado's activities, but not enough to report her friend's concerns to Randina.

Aljallad confirmed that, on December 11, 2009, she went to the high school to deliver Avon products, and that Cruzado opened the door for her, and walked her to the office, making small talk about such things as an upcoming birthday celebration for his daughter. She testified that she did not say "you passed the test" to Cruzado as she exited the school; rather, in Aljallad's version, she sent him a Post-It note with this phrase written on it, via inter-office mail. When asked what she meant by "you passed the test," Aljallad testified that, to her observation, he was well mannered. Aljallad confirmed that she was "testing" his conduct as they walked together to the office and chatted. She asserted that she conducted this "test" because of her friend's allegations.

Aljallad indicated that she communicated via Post-It note because she knew this would provoke a reaction from Cruzado, and that she simply wanted to let him know what people were saying about him. Aljallad wanted him to take the allegations seriously, so when they finally spoke, she did not tell Cruzado that she was investigating complaints from parents, rather she told him that she had monitored his demeanor with students because she had received complaints from "a couple of Board members." Why she would seek to assist a man she barely knew, and one accused of serious wrongdoing, was unexplained by Aljallad. Aljallad readily admitted that she lied about the two Board members; that her account was, to use her words, "a fabrication."

Aljallad verified that Cruzado asked her to put the story in writing, and that she did so, via email on December 15, 2009. Aljallad likewise confirmed that she then sent additional emails, in which she spun a tale that became increasingly complex and convoluted. Her testimony readily brought to mind the well-known quote, "Oh, what a tangled web we weave/When first we practice to deceive!"[5] Indeed, Aljallad stated rather emotionlessly that the details she added with each new email, such as the Board member requests that she lunch with Cruzado, or befriend his wife, were simply "part of the fabrication."

Accordingly, it is uncontroverted, and I FIND, that Aljallad fabricated a complex tale in which she implicated two sitting Board members in serious misconduct; suggesting that without authorization of the full Board, and using threats against Aljallad's continued employment they directed her to investigate Cruzado's professional and personal behavior.

[5] From the poem, "Marmion," by Sir Walter Scott.

The only critical testimonial discrepancy surrounds Aljallad's contention that she never named Trombetta and Makarski, and that Cruzado merely assumed they were the Board members in question. Cruzado was firm in his testimony that he obtained these names directly from Aljallad. She just as vehemently denied it, and did so when she met with Randina and Walkiewicz as well. A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). In making a credibility determination, it is appropriate to consider contradictory testimony, or testimony impeaching the witness's truth and veracity.

I did not deem Aljallad's testimony to be credible, in large part because she is an admitted and shameless prevaricator.[6] But she also offered evasive answers at hearing, and ones inconsistent with prior statements. For example, in one email she asserted that a Board member made a "pass" at her at a Unico dinner. She stated that he did so via text message but then asserted in discovery that the "pass" was via voice message. Aljallad then changed her story again, testifying that no Board member had made a pass at her at all, and that her statement to that effect was again, "part of the fabrication." Similarly, Aljallad testified that she was investigating only Cruzado's conduct with students, and was not attempting to ascertain if he would look at her in a sexual way. But she could not explain away the comment in her email that Cruzado did not "drop [his] eyes on [me]."

Moreover, although in an email response to her dated December 27, 2009, Cruzado mentions Board members Trombetta and Makarski by name, at no time did Aljallad correct him, or make any effort whatsoever to disabuse him of the notion that these two particular Board members had directed her investigation. The credibility of [6] A theme in Aljallad's defense is that although it was technically wrong to lie, it was essentially harmless behavior that should not have provoked the reaction of those around her.

Cruzado's assertion that Aljallad named the two Board members who had allegedly directed her conduct is buttressed by his wife's testimony. She indicated that her husband immediately identified Trombetta and Makarski as the Board members in question. Accordingly, I FIND that Aljallad named Makarski and Trombetta as the Board members she claimed were directing her investigation of Cruzado's activities.

Several board witnesses, including Board President Eleanore Reinl, urged that there was a flirtatious feel to Aljallad's email exchanges with Cruzado, and that this was offensive.[7] I likewise FIND that the emails were flirtatious. Her December 15, 2009, email spoke to whether Cruzado looked at her in a sexual way. The phrase "drop your eyes on me" could have no other meaning. She hints that she and Cruzado meet regularly for lunch, deceitfully blaming the suggestion on the two Board members. Aljallad contemplated that these lunches could lead to romance as is plain by her statement that such lunches "would not look well at all." Her email goes on to ask if he is open to infidelity. She told Cruzado that Board members directed her to uncover this highly private information, but, by her own admission, that statement also was a lie. It was Aljallad's idea and her idea alone to inquire whether Cruzado made a practice of being unfaithful to his wife. She let Cruzado know that she is attractive to other men with her statement that a Board member made a "pass" at her. Aljallad's emails shared details about her romantic past. She persisted in sending emails despite being asked to stop by Cruzado.

Aljallad's demeanor at hearing buttressed my impression that she fabricated her story about the Board members to get to know Cruzado better, in a flirtatious way, and not because she was concerned about his conduct at the high school. Aljallad was surprisingly glib about her interactions with Cruzado. She described the first time she met Cruzado with the statement "one fine day he walked into the Board office." When asked point blank whether she was interested in Cruzado romantically, Aljallad did not firmly deny it, or assert with any indignation that pursuing a married man would be wrong. Rather, she stated, somewhat smugly, that she did not find him attractive, and that he really was not her "type."

[7] Cruzado's wife, Georgina, certainly agreed. She did not believe Aljallad's story about the Board members from the start, and immediately suspected that Aljallad was using this tale as a vehicle to get closer to her husband.

I FIND that Cruzado was greatly disturbed by Aljallad's behavior, and that her advances were unwelcome. Indeed, instead of responding in kind, he perceived he was the victim of an illegal investigation, reported the matter to his police superiors, and promptly shared the situation with his wife. Cruzado testified convincingly that the entire episode with Aljallad negatively impacted his life. He resigned as SRO, feeling that he would no longer be able to credibly serve in the position. He returned to a less desirable position within the police force. The episode created an unnecessary strain on his marriage.

Randina and Walkiewicz attested to the disruption created at the school district, with hours spent investigating, interviewing witnesses, and meeting with police representatives. Aljallad's conduct distracted the highest level of administration from its educational mission. The Board was forced to devote time better spent on educational-policy decisions to discussion and deliberation about Aljallad's actions. Makarski and Trombetta testified compellingly that Aljallad actions disrupted their lives personally and professionally. They are both local politicians, for whom public confidence in their integrity is essential. Trombetta is also a local businessman, who strives to protect his business reputation. He found it difficult to focus on work. He has a family, including a wife and children, and this incident was embarrassing and upsetting to them as well. Likewise, Makarski testified that he works in public relations with governmental entities, and that it is essential that he maintain a spotless reputation. I FIND that Aljallad's actions disrupted school district operations, and embarrassed Board members Makarski and Trombetta.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, " . . . no tenured employee in the public school system of the State shall be dismissed except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." The specific rights of secretarial employees are set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2(c) as follows:

> Any person, who has acquired . . . tenure in any secretarial or clerical office, position or employment under the board of education of a school district . . . shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense . . . .

The Board bears the burden of proving its charges of unbecoming conduct against Aljallad by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958).

"Unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and confidence in the operation of public services. Karins v. Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). A finding of unbecoming conduct does not require a violation of any specific rule or regulation, but rather may be based on an implicit standard of good behavior, "which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). The school district's legitimate expectation that its employees conduct themselves in a manner that will instill public confidence becomes heightened where, as here, the staff member is employed as a confidential secretary in the office of the superintendent of schools. The superintendent's secretary directly interacts with members of the public. Moreover, she is privy to the most critical policy-making decisions and has access and exposure to the policymakers as well. It is a position of trust. Weisel v. Hooks, 277 N.J. Super. 78, 86 (Ch. Div. 1984).

I CONCLUDE that the Board has demonstrated that Aljallad is guilty of unbecoming conduct. The first three tenure charges pertain to Aljallad's harassment of Cruzado, and charges two and three are couched in terms of violations of Board policy and the New Jersey Law against Discrimination (LAD), N.J.S.A. 10:5-12.[8] The Board alleges—and proved—that Aljallad made unwanted romantic advances toward [8] The Commissioner has concurrent jurisdiction over LAD claims. Hinfey v. Matawan Bd. of Educ., 77 N.J. 514 (1978).

Cruzado, and created an uncomfortable work environment for him. Board policy prohibits such conduct, and I CONCLUDE that the Board has proven the allegations in charges one and three against Aljallad.

Aljallad's argument that her conduct did not violate Board policy because Cruzado is not a school employee is unavailing. The clear intent of the Board's policy is that its schools be free of discrimination. Although Cruzado continued to receive a paycheck from the police department, his workplace was Secaucus High School, and like all who work there, he was entitled to enjoy an environment that was comfortable and free of harassment. Nor does Aljallad successfully argue that her conduct was simply harmless flirting that took place after school hours and had no impact on the functioning of the school district. Aljallad did not simply flirt and her behavior was hardly harmless. She informed Cruzado that he was suspected of serious improprieties with students. Her "flirtation" thus directly impacted the school district because it implicated Cruzado in school related misconduct, distracting him from his job responsibilities and ultimately causing him to abandon his position as SRO.

Aljallad's conduct was inappropriate, regardless of whether it created a "hostile work environment" as that term is defined by Lehmann v. Toys "R" Us, 132 N.J. 587 (1993). In re Young, EDU 09771-09, Initial Decision (September 3, 2010), adopted, Commissioner (October 15, 2010), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. But I CONCLUDE that the Board has amply demonstrated that Aljallad's conduct would not have occurred but for Cruzado's gender, and was severe or pervasive enough to make a reasonable person believe that his conditions of employment had been altered and were hostile and abusive. Lehmann, supra, 132 N.J. at 603. Indeed, in an effort to pursue a romantic relationship with Cruzado, Aljallad led him to believe that those in the highest authority in the school district were questioning his integrity and job performance. Her conduct negatively altered Cruzado's work environment, and I CONCLUDE that the Board has proven the allegations contained in charge two.

Likewise, I CONCLUDE that Aljallad's conduct in fabricating lies about Board members Makarski and Trombetta constitutes conduct unbecoming a staff member, as alleged in charge four. Aljallad wove a web of lies that made it appear that sitting Board members were abusing their role. Aljallad represents the Board and its individual members in her interactions with the school community and the public at large. Her conduct was completely lacking in respect for those she represents. As the charge successfully asserts, she engaged in this inappropriate conduct solely to flirt with Cruzado. The Board has proven the allegations of charge four.

The factual allegations that form the underpinnings of charge four are reasserted in charges five and six, which allege that Aljallad violated N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4(a), and the school district code of ethics, Policy Number 4215. The Commissioner of Education is without jurisdiction to address criminal charges and accordingly, I CONCLUDE that charge five must be dismissed.[9]

Alljalad urges that while the school district code of ethics speaks generally about the sort of behavior expected of school support staff, it does not squarely prohibit the conduct alleged in charge six.[10] I agree that the Board strains a bit to make the code of ethics specifically applicable here. The Board argues, for example, that Aljallad failed to maintain confidentiality by divulging personnel information about Mrs. Cruzado to her husband. But that is not a factual allegation contained in any of the charges. Likewise, the Board urges that the code of ethics obliged Aljallad to come to Randina with her concerns about Cruzado's misconduct, rather than conduct an investigation herself. But Aljallad did not really believe that Cruzado was a "threat to the ladies" at the school. Rather, as proven by the Board in the first three tenure charges, she fabricated this allegation because she wished to engage Cruzado in a romantic relationship. Nor did Aljallad's conduct violate any specific Board or administrative rules or regulations that were made a part of the record before me. Board Policy 4281 requires all staff to protect the well-being of students. But again, Aljallad did not fail to report concerns about student safety, precisely because she never harbored any such concerns.

[9] It is reiterated that criminal charges under N.J.S.A. 2C:28-4(a) were filed in the appropriate forum, and dismissed.

[10] Lying about the activities of Board members is so patently unethical that including a specific prohibition against such conduct in an ethical code could easily be viewed as redundant.

However, the code of ethics does require that staff members "endeavor to establish good working relationships with other employees." It is plain that Aljallad did just the opposite in her interactions with Cruzado, who was functioning as a school employee at the time. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board has proven the charges contained in charge six.

Finally, I CONCLUDE that charge eight must be dismissed, as the Commissioner does not have jurisdiction to address claims of libel and slander. These are tort claims that must be brought in the proper forum by those directly aggrieved by Aljallad's actions. The Board clearly has demonstrated that Aljallad falsely implicated Makarski and Trombetta in improper conduct, and caused them extreme embarrassment. Her conduct in this regard was unbecoming, as proven in charge four. But the assertion that Aljallad's conduct rose to defamation must be addressed elsewhere.

The Board urges that dismissal is the only appropriate penalty for Aljallad's conduct. I agree. Aljallad's actions were inconsistent with any accepted notion of professional behavior. Aljallad has argued, successfully, that the Board cannot sustain its charges of criminal violations and defamation. But in its remaining charges, the Board has amply proven that Aljallad is not fit to remain employed in the Secaucus School District. Indeed, both the tenure charges and counsel's discussion in their post-hearing submissions need have gone no further than the conduct itself, which I CONCLUDE was so outrageously inappropriate, and so inimical to Aljallad's role as a confidential secretary, that it is incontrovertible that she is guilty of conduct warranting her dismissal from her tenured position as a confidential secretary. My conclusion in this regard is buttressed by Aljallad's lack of sincere remorse for her actions, which she repeatedly has urged constituted minor lying and flirtation blown far out of proportion by Cruzado. Aljallad appears completely unable to grasp the gravity of her conduct. As a result, I am left with no confidence that, if returned to her position, she will be able to conduct herself as a trustworthy confidential secretary in the future.

Finally, Aljallad's post-hearing submission raises an easily disposed of procedural argument. She urges that the Board violated the requirements of the Open Public Meetings Act (OPMA) by failing to notify her of its discussion of the tenure charges so that she could opt for a public discussion. N.J.S.A. 10:4-12; Rice v. Union County Reg'l High Sch. Bd. of Educ., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977). The consideration of tenure charges is a well-established exception to the requirements of the OPMA, and indeed, N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-11 states explicitly that [t]he consideration and actions of the board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting." Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the actions of the Secaucus Board relative to the charges against Aljallad were procedurally sound.

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that Natalizia Busnelli-Aljallad be DISMISSED from her tenured position of employment with the Secaucus Board of Education.

3.3 The Board will not act on its own initiative to bring about any action. However, Ms. Paone understands that the Board will have an obligation to cooperate in the event of any proceeding against her. Ms. Paone reserves all of her rights to assert that no action should be taken against her.

4. Health benefits after separation.

4.1. Ms. Paone will be eligible for standard COBRA rights for the continuation of health benefits, after her separation from employment. 6. Time for review and consideration of this Agreement.

6.1. Ms. Paone has a period of 21 calendar days during which she can review this Agreement prior to signing it. This review period will run from the date it is received by Ms. Paone. Ms. Paone may sign this Agreement at any time during the 21 day review period and up to 5 days thereafter. This Agreement will then be signed by the Board President, following approval by the Board. This Agreement will become final on the eighth day after signing by both parties, unless revoked by Ms. Paone in accordance with section 11 of this Agreement.

If the parties have signed on different days, the seven day period will begin following the date of the later signature.

7.4. If this Agreement is revoked during this period, this Agreement will have no effect and the parties will not be bound to any of its terms. This means that Ms. Paone's resignation will be automatically withdrawn and neither party will have any obligation to carry out the settlement terms established by this Agreement.

7.5. If Ms. Paone does not revoke this Agreement, both parties will become bound by the terms of this Agreement on the eighth day following signing by both parties. After the eighth day this Agreement will be irrevocable.

7.6. In addition to the right to revoke delineated in 7.1 through 7.5, Ms. Paone can revoke this Agreement if the Commissioner of Education or the Administrative Law Judge refuse to accept the withdrawal of the tenure charges filed on behalf of the New Hanover Board of Education. Such revocation of this Agreement will become effective by written notice to the Board by Ms. Paone within seven days after she receives notice that the withdrawal of tenure charges has been rejected.

8. Attorney consultation. The Board hereby specifically advises Ms. Paone to consult with an attorney prior to signing this Agreement, and recognizes that she has done so.

9. Opportunity to consult attorney; voluntariness. The parties acknowledge that each has had ample opportunity to seek independent legal counsel, financial or other advice regarding this Agreement. The parties further acknowledge that each party fully understands the terms of this Agreement, and that each party is signing this Agreement freely and voluntarily, without any coercion, duress or pressure from the other party.

10. Circumstances Justifying Settlement (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6)

    10.1. The nature of all charges would require many days of hearing to present the charges, and to defend against them, resulting in significant loss of administrative time and an expenditure of considerable funds for legal fees by the Board.

    10.2. This settlement serves the public interest by achieving finality and certainty with a responsible outcome.

11. Entire agreement. This document contains the entire agreement of the parties and may not be altered, amended or modified except by instrument in writing signed by the parties.

Please read this Agreement carefully before signing.

Having reviewed the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and proposed "Stipulation of Settlement" (Settlement), the Commissioner is constrained to reject the Initial Decision. The Settlement recites, in Paragraph 5, that it is "subject to final approval by each party by way of a public adopted resolution at a duly convened meeting, certified copies of which shall be appended hereto as Attachments . . . ." While a resolution by the Orange Board of Education approving the settlement was presented to the Commissioner, the required resolution by the Hanover Board of Education was not. Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Emma Painter, Kingsway Regional School District, Gloucester County. Agency Dkt. No.387-12/07.

Dear Counsel,

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with the Kingsway Regional School District's motion to reinstate the tenure charges against Emma Painter. Upon review of the submissions, I find that the tenure charges in this matter should be reinstated based on the Appellate Division's November 8, 2010 decision reversing Ms. Painter's criminal conviction and remanding the matter for retrial. The Commissioner's September 29, 2009 decision dismissing the tenure charges as moot was based solely on the Order of Forfeiture of Employment in the criminal matter which found that Ms. Painter's employment with the District was forfeited based on her criminal convictions. In light of the Appellate Division's November 8, 2010 decision, the Order of Forfeiture is no longer controlling; therefore, it is now necessary to reopen the related tenure charges.

Accordingly, the District's motion to reinstate the tenure charges against Ms. Painter is hereby granted.

Sincerely,

Christopher D. Cerf
Acting Commissioner

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

THIS AGREEMENT IS MADE on this 3RD day of November 2010 by and between the Union Township Board of Education (hereinafter the "Board") and the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Fiscal Accountability and Compliance (hereinafter "OFAC"):

WHEREAS, in August 2006, members of the community filed a complaint with OFAC for excessive attorney's fees and the initiation of legal actions against members of the community. Upon completion of its initial investigation of the matter, OFAC's Investigations Unit issued a draft Summary Report of Examination; and

WHEREAS, on March 23, 2007, Board counsel provided a detailed response with a number of proposed corrections to the OFAC report; and

WHEREAS, OFAC issued a final Report of Examination on June 5, 2007, finding, inter alia, that the Board's decision to indemnify individual Board members' attorney's fees in actions brought against private citizens and the Board's decision to pay for an out-of-district placement was not a proper use of public funds; and

WHEREAS, the Board appealed OFAC's initial determination on August 9, 2007 on the basis that OFAC did not review all facts relevant to the Board's argument, and that OFAC is not the appropriate body to adjudicate whether the Board's actions were arbitrary and capricious; and

WHEREAS, by letter dated October 11, 2007, OFAC summarily denied the Board's appeal; and

WHEREAS, on November 2, 2007, the Board filed a second level appeal with OFAC, appealing the Report of Examination, dated June 5, 2007 and first-level Decision on Appeal, dated October 11, 2007; and

WHEREAS, OFAC issued a Second Level Decision on Appeal, dated July 31, 2008, dismissing the Board's arguments in a summary opinion; and

WHEREAS, the Board appealed the Second Level Decision, on or about October 28, 2008, with the New Jersey Department of Education; and

WHEREAS, the matter was referred by the New Jersey Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested matter, where it was assigned to the Honorable Israel Dubin, A.L.J..

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises set forth below, the Board and OFAC agree to the following terms and conditions:

1. The Board hereby agrees to forfeit approximately ONE THOUSAND, SIX HUNDRED EIGHTY FOUR and 42/100 DOLLARS ($1,684.42) in State aid from the New Jersey Department of Education as a result of payments made by the Board for legal fees incurred in connection with the affirmative legal claims filed by Board members against private citizens.

2. The Board hereby agrees not to dispute the approximately ELEVEN THOUSAND, FOUR HUNDRED NINETY EIGHT and 90/100 DOLLARS ($11,498.90) in State aid which was previously withheld in December 2008 regarding the payments made for an out-of-district student with a Section 504 Plan.

3. OFAC and the New Jersey Department of Education hereby agree not to take any action, legal or otherwise, against the Board, any past or present Board member or District employee, relating in any way to the findings contained in OFAC's June 5, 2007 Report of Examination. OFAC and the New Jersey Department of Education further agree that they have concluded any and all investigations related to the findings contained in OFAC's June 5, 2007 Report of Examination. OFAC and the New Jersey Department of Education retain the right to conduct investigations of the Board, or any past or present Board members, regarding any matters falling outside the scope of the instant matter and OFAC's June 5, 2007 Report of Examination.

4. The Board hereby agrees to take all necessary action to make this agreement binding upon the Board.

5. This Settlement and Release Agreement constitutes the full and complete agreement of the parties and may be changed or modified. This agreement is binding upon the parties and their respective heirs, assigns or successors in interest. This agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with New Jersey law. This Agreement shall be treated as if it were drafted contemporaneously by the parties.

6. This agreement is made without any admissions of liability or responsibility by any party hereto and shall not be admissible in any legal proceeding except to enforce its terms.

7. The Board and OFAC each hereby verify, affirm and represent that they have each had the opportunity to discuss the terms of this agreement with counsel, and are entering into this agreement voluntarily and with a full understanding of its meaning.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties hereto have executed this agreement.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MATAWAN-ABERDEEN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured principal at Cambridge Park School and director of Special Programs in respondent's district – appealed the May 2008 vote of the Board to withhold his employment and adjustment increments for the 2008-2009 school year, based on the district superintendant's determination that petitioner had not properly overseen the administration of the district's Terra Nova testing during the 2006-2007 school year. Petitioner contended that the Board failed to follow its own policy for withholding increments, and therefore the increments should be restored. The Board contended that the withholding of the increments was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: an individual contesting a salary increment withholding has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious, and without a reasonable substantive basis; the primary factual dispute is which of two Board policies – Policy 2132 or Policy 4117.51 – apply in the instant matter; Policy 2132, which sets forth a minimal process for evaluation of tenured administrators, applies here; the applicable policy procedurally requires only the preparation of a summary-review document by June 30 if an increment withholding is being recommended, and this requirement was met; petitioner received two written notices concerning the Board's intention to discuss his performance, and was offered and took the opportunity to offer a written rebuttal in the performance evaluation; and petitioner had an opportunity to persuade the Board to restore the increments through the grievance process hearing. The ALJ concluded that petitioner had not demonstrated that the Board acted arbitrarily or that he was substantially prejudiced. Accordingly, the ALJ affirmed the Board's action to withhold petitioner's increments.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that Policy 2132 applied to the petitioner and that respondent satisfied the requirements set forth therein. Additionally, the Commissioner found that several due process safeguards articulated in Policy 4117.51 were provided to petitioner, notwithstanding that they appeared on their face to be intended for the protection of teachers. Accordingly, respondent's action in withholding petitioner's salary increments for the 2008-2009 school year was upheld, and the petition dismissed.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MATAWAN-ABERDEEN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner's challenge to respondent's decision not to award him salary increments for the 2008-2009 school year comes to the Commissioner by way of cross applications for summary decision. After review of the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and parties' exceptions, the Commissioner is constrained to adopt the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case. The facts have been set forth in detail in the Initial Decision and will be referenced herein as needed.

It is undisputed that respondent's decision not to award petitioner increments was in consequence of mistakes or oversights he had made in the administration of Terra Nova testing[1] during the 2006-2007 school year. Supervising the administration of the tests was petitioner's responsibility, and it is undisputed that the flawed administration of same had a significant educational impact on the students in the district. Petitioner's sole claim before the

[1] A series of standardized achievement tests used nationally and designed to assess K-12 student achievement in reading, language arts, mathematics, science, social studies, vocabulary, spelling, and other areas.

The procedures set forth in Policy 4117.51 require an informal meeting within ten school days of whatever incident triggers the potential for withholding an increment. If the meeting does not resolve the problem, the administrator is required, within ten school days, to present the teacher with a written notice of:

> 1. The incident, deficiency or behavior complained of;
> 2. The corrective action which the administrator deems necessary;
> 3. In cases of deficiency in teaching performance, a warning that failure to correct the deficiency within ninety (90) calendar days may result in a recommendation for withholding of the employee's increment;
> 4. In cases of unacceptable, but non-flagrant behavior, a warning that repetition of such conduct may result in a recommendation for withholding the employee's increment.
>
> [Emphasis added.]
> (Joint Exhibit J-10a.)

The employee is required by the policy to acknowledge receipt of the warning by affixing initials to a copy of it, and has the right to respond in writing. If he or she fails to correct the deficiency in teaching performance within the ninety-day period or repeats the unacceptable behavior:

> the administrator may recommend to the chief school administrator that the employee's increment be withheld for the following academic year. Any such recommendation shall be in writing, giving the specific reasons for the recommendation and representing to the chief school administrator that the subject employee is being held to the same standards as all other employees under the administrator's supervision. A true copy of the administrator's written recommendation shall be transmitted on the same date to the employee and to the Matawan Regional Teachers Association. The affected employee shall have a period > of ten (10) school days to submit to the chief school administrator's office a written response to the administrator's recommendation . . . .

>
> i[Emphasis added.]
> (Joint Exhibit J-10a-11a.)

The remainder of Policy 4117.51 states that if the administrator determines to recommend to the board that the increment be withheld, "the employee shall be furnished with a true copy of the chief school administrator's recommendation, the reasons therefore and a notice that he/she may have a hearing before the Board prior to its vote" on the recommendation. Upon a vote to withhold, the board is required within ten school days to give written notice of the action to the employee, together with the reasons therefor, and to provide notice of his/her right of appeal to the Commissioner of Education. The Matawan Regional Teachers Association also must receive a copy of the notice. (Joint Exhibit J-11a.) The foregoing notwithstanding, Policy 4117.51 states that where "flagrant conduct" is involved, all the articulated procedures – save those described in this paragraph – do not apply. (Ibid.)

The Commissioner is not persuaded that, between the two policies under scrutiny, Policy 4117.51 governs this controversy. First, in all references to the 90-day correction period it is teaching that is specifically identified as the category of performance that receives the protection of a probationary period before imposition of a penalty. Thus, even assuming, arguendo, that Policy 4117.51 applied to petitioner, respondent was not obliged to follow the Policy 4117.51 guidelines pertaining to correction periods.

Second, the procedures in Policy 4117.51 A and B – calling for a meeting after an employee's offending conduct and a second meeting if the offending conduct reoccurs – also expressly refer to teachers and teacher performance. (Joint Exhibit J-10a) Similarly, the language of Policy 4117.51 D – which advises that uncorrected performance deficiencies may result in a recommendation for increment withholding – also specifically identifies teaching performance as the subject of the provision. (Joint Exhibit J–10a-11a) Moreover, Policy 4117.51 requires that a recommendation for increment withholdings be copied both "to the employee and to the Matawan Regional Teachers Association" (MRTA), and that notice of any affirmative vote by the board be sent to both the employee and the MRTA. (Joint Exhibit J–11a)

In sum, while Policy 4117.51 uses the word "employees" liberally, it is teaching performance and teachers that are identified in the specific provisions that describe the main procedures to be followed before and after a recommendation to withhold increments. Additionally, even if Policy 4117.51 did apply, its Section G instructs that "[s]teps A through D of [its] procedures need not be followed in the event of flagrant conduct." (Joint Exhibit J-11a) While flagrant conduct is not defined in the policy, the Commissioner would be hard-pressed to find that respondent was unreasonable in viewing as flagrant the deficient administration of an important state diagnostic test. In this regard, the Commissioner is mindful of the words of respondent's superintendent O'Malley who stated – in his letter to petitioner advising of the board's action – that the defective Terra Nova testing had a significant educational impact on the students in the district. See, Joint Exhibit J-32a.

The Commissioner also notes that respondent took several of the measures prescribed by Policy 4117.51 to ensure that petitioner was informed that the administration's concerns about his performance were significant enough to warrant presentation to the respondent board. As mentioned in the Initial Decision, petitioner received written notice as early as February 27, 2008 that his job performance would be discussed by respondent on March 3, 2008 and that he could opt for a public discussion of same. (Joint Exhibit J-12a) Petitioner did not opt for a public discussion but was allowed to communicate his position to the board attorney for input during respondent's closed session on March 3rd. In the Initial Decision the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that at this point petitioner knew that the focus of the concerns with his performance was the deficient administration of the Terra Nova testing. (Initial Decision at 4) Petitioner does not appear to dispute this.

On April 17, 2008 petitioner was sent another written notice that his job performance would be discussed in closed session at an April 23, 2008 board meeting. (Joint Exhibit J-13a) Further, it is undisputed that on May 16, 2008 petitioner met with his immediate supervisor to go over his annual evaluation, which evaluation memorialized his inadequate management of the Terra Nova testing. The record suggests that at that meeting the testing problems were discussed, and that petitioner was permitted to add a rebuttal to the evaluation document. (Joint Exhibit J-14a-18a)

Additionally, it is undisputed that before the May 19, 2008 board meeting, Superintendent O'Malley verbally advised petitioner that the board would be taking action on his recommendation to withhold increments from petitioner.[2] Thus, before the respondent board actually voted to withhold increments from petitioner, there had been multiple written and verbal notices to petitioner about the contemplated action and reasons therefore. Petitioner had been provided the opportunity to be heard – both by conveying his position to the board attorney at the March 3, 2008 board meeting and by attaching a rebuttal to his evaluation.

Consistent with procedure F of Policy 4117.51, on May 20, 2008, Superintendent O'Malley sent a letter to petitioner advising that the respondent Board had voted not to award him increments for the 2008-2009 school year. The letter provided the reasons for the action:

> ...your inefficiency in properly supervising and implementing the Terra Nova testing for the District, in your position as Principal/Director of Special Programs. As you know, only a portion of the Terra Nova test was completed by the students, since your instructions to the staff on proctoring the examination [were] incomplete and inaccurate. Obviously, the failure of the District to receive meaningful Terra Nova testing results jeopardized the educational performance and evaluation of the District's students.
> (Joint Exhibit J-19a)

Statutory authority, case law and respondent's policies instruct that increments are not automatic and may not be granted where performance is lacking. See, e.g., N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14; North Plainfield Education Ass'n v. Board of Education, 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984); Policy 4117.51 at 1. In contesting a salary increment withholding, it is the employee that has the burden of proof of demonstrating that the decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). In light of the foregoing discussion about the content of Policies 4117.51 and 2132, the Commissioner cannot conclude that respondent was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in determining that the latter policy, rather than the former, was the appropriate policy to follow in evaluating petitioner and assigning consequences to a less than satisfactory performance.

Thus, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that Policy 2132 applied to the petitioner and that respondent satisfied the requirements of same. The Commissioner further finds that several due process safeguards articulated in Policy 4117.51 were provided to petitioner, notwithstanding that they appeared on their face to be intended for the protection of teachers. Consequently, the Commissioner cannot conclude that respondent acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in deciding not to award increments to petitioner for the 2008-2009 school year.

Petitioner's motion for summary decision is accordingly denied and respondent's motion for summary decision is granted. The petition is dismissed and respondent's action to withhold increments from petitioner is upheld.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

Record Closed: December 21, 2010 Decided: January 19, 2011

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, ACTING DIRECTOR AND CHIEF ALJ:

PROCEDURAL HISTORY AND STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Wayne Spells (Petitioner), a tenured principal and director of special programs at Cambridge Park School in the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District, appeals the loss of employment and adjustment increments for the 2008-2009 school year. He contends that the Board of the Matawan-Aberdeen Regional School District (the Board) failed to follow its own policy for withholding increments, and therefore, the increments must be restored. The Board argues that the issue is not whether it employed the proper procedure, but whether the Board acted in a manner that was arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable.

On May 19, 2008, the Board adopted a resolution to withhold Spells's increments for providing incomplete and inaccurate instructions to staff proctoring the district's Terra Nova standardized testing. In the testing, students completed only a portion of the examination. By letter dated August 14, 2008, Spells appealed the increment-withholding decision to the Commissioner of Education. The Department of Education determined to transfer the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on October 2, 2008. The petition comprised two claims—the procedural defect and a challenge to the factual accuracy of the basis for the withholding. At some point prior to the hearing scheduled for April 2009 before Administrative Law Judge Douglas Hurd, a briefing schedule on cross-motions for summary decision was set. With the appointment of ALJ Hurd to the Superior Court, the matter was assigned to ALJ Israel Dubin, who on September 2, 2010, denied the cross-motions for summary decision. The matter was then assigned to the undersigned for hearing on November 16, 2010. On that date, counsel for the two parties advised that they had discovered neither could provide a witness with knowledge concerning the adoption or history of the policies in question. Additionally, they agreed that they were now prepared to stipulate to enough additional facts to render the matter appropriate for summary decision. The hearing having been adjourned, the stipulations were received on November 30, 2010, and on December 16, 2010. In those stipulations, the petitioner withdrew his challenge to the merits of the Board's action, and limited his claim to the Board's failure to follow the required procedures. Since the documentary appendices are essentially exhibits, they have been treated as joint exhibits. With the receipt of briefs on December 21, 2010, the record closed.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

What follows is a summary of the facts, as stipulated by the parties. Petitioner Wayne Spells is a tenured administrator employed by the respondent as principal of Cambridge Park School and director of Special Programs for the school district. He has served as president of the Matawan Regional Administrators Association (MRAA), the collective negotiations representative for principals, directors, and certain other district administrators, since 2007. The MRAA is a local affiliate of the New Jersey Principals and Supervisors Association.

On May 19, 2008, the Board voted to withhold Petitioner's increment for the 2008-2009 school year, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, on the recommendation of Superintendent Dr. Richard O'Malley, based on O'Malley's determination that petitioner had not properly overseen the most recent administration of Terra Nova testing.

At the time the Board took this action it had in effect a policy manual containing numerous written policies addressing many aspects of school district operations. The policies were organized into separate categories, or series, grouped together by general subject matter. The "2000" policy series was entitled "Educational Administration." The "4000" series was entitled "Certified Personnel." The 2000 series included Policy 2132, entitled "Evaluation of Administrative Personnel," adopted on April 21, 1977, and revised on October 16, 1996. The 4000 series included 4115/4116 entitled, "Supervision/Evaluation" and 4117.51, "Withholding an Increment." Policy 4117.51 was adopted by the Board on November 22, 1976, and last revised on October 16, 1996. Neither party is able to produce a witness with personal knowledge of the original intent of the policies, or the intentions of the Board at the time of the revisions. Nor can either party produce a witness who can recall any instance of an administrator's increment having been withheld.

In the period leading up to the Board vote, several actions were taken. On February 27, 2008, Deputy Superintendent Joel Glastein sent petitioner a written notice advising him that the Board of Education would discuss his job performance at its Committee of the Whole meeting on March 10, 2008, at 7 p.m. The letter also stated that petitioner should inform Glastein in writing no later than 3 p.m. on March 10, if he wished to have the matter discussed in public session rather than in executive session. (See J-12.) Petitioner did not submit a written request but appeared at the meeting with John Litchtenberg, a representative of the New Jersey Principals and Supervisors Association. Petitioner asked to address the Board members in closed session. The Board's Attorney, Michael Gross, informed the two that petitioner would not be allowed to address the Board's closed session. Gross instead offered an opportunity to convey to him any information they wanted communicated to the Board concerning their position on the testing issue that petitioner understood would be the subject of discussion. Petitioner and Litchtenberg communicated information to Mr. Gross. The parties stipulated that if Gross were to testify, he would have stated that he shared petitioner's information with the Board.

By written notice dated April 17, 2008, Deputy Superintendent Glastein again advised petitioner that his job performance would be the subject of discussion in closed session at an April 23, 2008, Board meeting. (J-13a.) Petitioner was again offered the opportunity to make a written request to have the matter discussed in public session. At that Board meeting, Superintendent O'Malley advised the Board in closed session of his intention to recommend that petitioner's increment be withheld at the Board's May 19, 2008, action meeting. (The parties have a factual disagreement on whether petitioner was advised by Gross and O'Malley on April 23 that he need not stay for the meeting since he would not be the subject of discussion. Petitioner contends this occurred; the Board denies that it did.)

On May 16, 2008, petitioner met with his supervisor, Kimberly Honnick, to review his annual performance evaluation. The review (J-14a through 17a) was generally favorable but did note "an error made on the development of the Terra Nova test schedule" during the 2006-07 school year. Petitioner was given the opportunity to present a written rebuttal, which was annexed to the evaluation. (J-18a).

Some time before the May 19, 2008, Board meeting, Superintendent O'Malley orally advised petitioner that the Board would be taking action to withhold his increment at that meeting. (The parties disagree on precisely when the conversation took place.

The Board contends that petitioner received the advice on May 18, 2008, and was afforded an opportunity to meet with Superintendent O'Malley to discuss the matter further. Petitioner contends the conversation occurred an hour before the meeting).

At the time that Superintendent O'Malley recommended that the Board of Education withhold petitioner's increment, O'Malley believed that Policy No. 4417.51 was inapplicable to petitioner. However, neither the policy nor any issues concerning its applicability were specifically discussed with the Board members themselves.

Following the meeting, petitioner by letter dated May 20, 2008, was notified that on May 19, 2008, the Board had voted to withhold the employment-and-adjustment increments for the 2008-09 year, and provided the reasons for the action. On receipt of the letter, Petitioner, on his own behalf and that of the MRAA, filed a grievance pursuant to the collective-negotiations agreement between the MRAA and the Board, culminating in a hearing before the Board on June 30, 2008, attended by Petitioner and Lichtenberg, his NJPSA representative. At the hearing, petitioner contended that no disciplinary action was warranted but that if the Board wished to impose a sanction, the sanction should be a letter of reprimand.

The collective-negotiations agreement defined "grievance" to mean "a claim by an administrator that there has been misinterpretation, misapplication, or a violation of Board Policy, this Agreement, or an administrative decision affecting him/her." At no time during the grievance process did petitioner specifically identify Policy No. 4117.5 as a "Board Policy" he believed had been violated, nor was it specifically mentioned by petitioner or his NJPSA representative at the June 30, 2008, grievance hearing. (See J-20a to J-32a, the agreement and grievance documents.) It should be noted that the parties disagree on the meaning of the grievance document. Were petitioner to testify, his contention would be that the phrases "due process," "a corrective action plan" and "improperly singled out for the blame" were intended as references to provisions of Policy No. 4117.51 that were violated in the withholding of his increment. (The Board contends that petitioner's position on this point is not credible, and that if petitioner believed that Policy 4117.51 were applicable, he would have referred to it specifically either in the grievance document or during the grievance hearing.)

At no time was petitioner given specific-written notices that the superintendent intended to recommend that his increment be withheld, nor did the superintendent make a specific-written representation to the Board that petitioner was "being held to the same standards as all other employees in a similar classification," as referenced in paragraph E of "Procedures" incorporated in Board Policy 4117.51.

Board Policy 4117.51 states that it is applicable to certified personnel. The prior policy, 4115/4116, also applicable to certified personnel, is written almost entirely in relation to teachers. However, the first page of 4117.51 does not use the word "teacher." Rather its directives speak to how withholding is to be addressed for "employees." It includes a single phrase about correcting teaching performance deficiencies, but all of the other language addresses conduct and behavior in general. The regulations that accompany 4117.51 utilize the term "employees," although an entire paragraph addresses the process if withholding is related to "deficiency in teaching performance" and there are three references to providing documents to the Matawan Regional Teachers Association.

Policy Number 4117.51 provides in pertinent part that:

>
> As a general policy, the Board will not withhold (emphasis in the original) a salary increment on the basis of a single poor evaluation or a single incident except in flagrant cases. A staff member should generally be given a minimum of ninety (90) calendar days to correct deficiencies in teaching performance and prior notice concerning unacceptable, non-flagrant behavior, before an increment is withheld.
>
> The chief school administrator shall represent to the Board that the standards to which the employee has been held are not exceptional or unusual and apply to all employees in a similar classification.
>
> Prior to voting on a recommendation to withhold a salary increment, the Board shall offer the employee the right to a hearing before the Board or a committee thereof to oppose the proposed withholding . . . .

> To insure due process protection, procedures as outlined in the accompanying regulations, will be utilized in connection with any withholding of increment action by this Board of Education.
> [(J-9a.)]

The regulations adopted in relation to Board Policy No. 4117.51 require an informal meeting within ten-school days of whatever incident triggers the potential for withholding an increment. If the meeting does not resolve the problem, the administrator is required within ten-school days to present the teacher with a written notice of:

> . . .
> 1. The incident, deficiency or behavior complained of;
> 2. The corrective action which the administrator deems necessary;
> 3. In cases of deficiency in teaching performance, a warning that failure to correct the deficiency within ninety (90) calendar days may result in a recommendation for withholding of the employee's increment;
> 4. In cases of unacceptable, but non-flagrant behavior, a warning that repetition of such conduct may result in a recommendation for withholding the employee's increment.
>
> . . .
> [(J-10a.)]

The regulations go on to state that the employee shall acknowledge receipt of the warning by affixing initials to a copy of it, and shall be given an opportunity respond in writing. If the administrator determines that the situation warrants it,

> . . .
> the administrator may recommend to the chief school administrator that the employee's increment be withheld for the following academic year. Any such recommendation shall be in writing, giving the specific reasons for the recommendation and representing to the chief school administrator that the subject employee is being held to the same standards as all other employees under the administrator's supervision. A true copy of the administrator's written recommendation shall be transmitted on the same date to the employee and to the Matawan

> Regional Teachers Association. The affected employee shall have a period of ten (10) school days to submit to the chief school administrator's office a written response to the administrator's recommendation . . . .
> [(J-10a; J-11a.)]

The policy goes on to state that if the administrator determines to recommend to the Board that the increment be withheld, "the employee shall be furnished with a true copy of the chief school administrator's recommendation, the reasons therefore and a notice that he/she may have a hearing before the Board prior to its vote" on the recommendation. Upon a vote to withhold, the Board is required within ten school days to give written notice of the action to the employee, together with the reasons therefore, and to provide notice of his/her right of appeal to the Commissioner of Education. (Emphasis added.) The Matawan Regional Teachers Association also must receive a copy of the notice. (J-11a.)

In contrast, Policy No. 2132 has few specifics. Individual goals are to be set for the school year; and by August 31 a summary-review document should be prepared by the chief school administrator in conference with the individual administrator and his or her supervisor. If an increment withholding is being recommended, the review document should be finalized by June 30.

The primary factual dispute is the question of which policy applies. Unfortunately, neither side has a witness with recollection of the intent of the 1996 Board that approved both policies, or of any tenured administrator having been subjected to withholding. As a plausible argument can be made for application of either policy, deciding which applies becomes a matter of evaluating actual wording and overall context. "Withholding an Increment" (Policy 4117.51) is older and its first page is written in all-encompassing language, except for the reference to providing ninety-calendar days to conduct deficiencies in teaching performance. It was first adopted on November 22, 1976, and then subjected to two revisions, one in 1989, the second on October 16, 1996. "Evaluation of Administrative Personnel," (Policy 2132) was first adopted on April 21, 1977, about five months after Policy 4117.51, and was revised only once on October 16, 1996, the same date that Policy 4117.51 was revised. The policies are structured identically—first a general statement of policy and then a follow-up delineation of procedures. Policy 4117.51 comprises an initial-policy statement on criteria and process for teacher evaluation, followed by a policy statement on increment withholding, and then a very-detailed process that addresses teaching deficiencies, and even for single, flagrant violations, provision of documents to the Matawan Teachers Association. Similarly, "Evaluation of Administrative Personnel" consists of an initial statement of policy as to the need for evaluation and the kinds of criteria appropriate, followed by a procedural document. The policy statement recites that the chief school administrator shall report to the Board his recommendations for changes of position, retention, dismissal, or salary increments as may be appropriate and require Board approval. The procedural follow-up lays out a detailed procedure for actions impacting non-tenured personnel, accompanied a brief separate section affecting tenured administrators. This section simply requires a summary-review document completed by June 30, if an increment withholding is being recommended. I am persuaded by the parallel construction of the policies; the very-detailed nature of the processes for teacher evaluation; and for non-tenured administrator evaluation; that the absence of detailed process in a document revised simultaneously with the others means that the minimal process for tenured administrators reflected a deliberate decision by the Board. Therefore, I FIND as FACT that Policy 2132 applied to tenured administrators, and that the process required was not greater than that required by the education statutes in general.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

In a salary-increment challenge, the burden is on the petitioner to establish by a preponderence of the credible evidence that the action of the Board was arbitrary, capricious, and without a reasonable substantive basis. Sturn v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of S. Plainfield, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 661 (Dept. of Education). Scotch Plains-Fanwood Bd. of Educ. v. Scotch Plains-Fanwood Educ. Assoc., 270 N.J. Super. 444, 451 (App. Div. 1994) (quoting Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294-96 (App. Div. 1960)).

In general, then, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1(c) gives Boards broad authority in making, amending, and repealing rules for the employment, regulation of conduct and discharge of their employees. But once a board has established such rules, logic and case law suggest those policies are then binding on the board. Sturn v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of S. Plainfield, Initial Decision (September 10, 1992) at 9, adopted in 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 661 (Dept. of Education) (citing Matawan Teachers Ass'n v. Matawan-Aberdeen Reg. Sch. Dist., 223 N.J. Super. 504 (App. Div. 1988)). Thus, if the Board's decision to withhold Spells's increment is inconsistent with its own policies, then the action should be viewed as arbitrary and capricious.

Petitioner has argued that his situation falls within Shifrinson v. Marlboro Township Board of Education, EDU 636-83, Commissioner's Decision (June 4, 1984). In Shifrinson, the Marlboro Board failed to provide a right to a hearing before the Board prior to a vote on withholding an increment, despite its own clear policy requiring a hearing before the action. The Board's failure to follow its own policy rendered its action arbitary.

Here, the applicable policy required nothing procedurally beyond the preparation of a summary-review document by June 30 in conference with individual administrators and their supervisors by June 30. I CONCLUDE that this requirement was met. Moreover, with regard to the broader question of fair notice, opportunity to be heard, and substantial prejudice, which underpin decisions such as Rice v. Union County Regional High School Board of Education, 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977), courts have held that an opportunity to be heard after a Board has taken its employment action is procedurally sufficient. See, for example, Cole v. Woodcliff Lake Bd. of Educ., 155 N.J. Super. 398 (1978).

The core question is whether petitioner knew the reasons for the Board's proposed action and was substantially prejudiced by the Board's procedure. Shifrinson, supra, EDU 636-83 (quoting Fitzpatrick v. Montvale Bd of Educ., 1969 S.L.D. 4). Here, it is clear that petitioner received two-written notices concerning the Board's intention to discuss his performance, was offered and took the opporunity to offer written rebuttal in the performance evaluation, and had at least oral notice before the actual Board meeting, such that he was clearly well aware that his performance was the subject of Board discussion. Moreover, through the grievance-process hearing, petitioner received an opportunity to persuade the Board to restore the increment. Under these circumstances, I CONCLUDE the petitioner has not demonstrated that the Board has acted arbitrarily or that he was substantially prejudiced by the process employed.

ORDER

Therefore, I ORDER the Board's action be AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF LOUIS MELILLO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION
OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY	:

SYNOPSIS

In 2004, the School District of the City of Elizabeth brought tenure charges of conduct unbecoming against respondent – a tenured custodian – and sought respondent's dismissal from employment. Respondent denied all charges, contending that the students who made the allegations of unbecoming conduct had fabricated their stories in a scheme to get him fired because he had caught them derelict in their work duties, had sent them home for not doing their work, and had their pay reduced. Following dismissal of criminal charges filed against respondent in the same matter, a hearing was held at the OAL; subsequently, all tenure charges against respondent were also dismissed. The Commissioner's final decision, issued in November 2010, remanded the case back to the OAL for proceedings to resolve the parties' disputes concerning back pay and emoluments.

The ALJ found that: tenured school employees who have been exonerated of tenure charges are entitled to be reinstated with back pay and emoluments, but have a duty to mitigate damages by seeking similar employment; any award of back pay may be reduced for failure to mitigate; respondent was under a duty to mitigate and seek suitable employment; respondent was employed from August 2004 to July 2005 in construction work; respondent did not seek further employment after being laid off from his construction job in July 2005, and continued on suspension with pay even after the Commissioner's final decision in November 2010 dismissing all tenure charges; however, the Board overlooked the fact that mitigation is an affirmative defense, and therefore the Board had the burden of proof. The ALJ concluded that respondent is entitled to full back pay and emoluments, minus what he earned while working in construction, and ordered that the Board: 1) pay the net amount of $16,781.14 as reimbursement of wrongfully withheld wages; 2) award respondent all increments to which he would have been entitled; 3) credit respondent for the sick days he has earned since his suspension; and 4) award respondent with vacation days he has accrued, beginning with August 2004.

The Assistant Commissioner, to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34, concurred with the ALJ that the Board failed to meet its burden of establishing that respondent's back pay should be subject to mitigation, and with the ALJ's determinations with respect to earned sick time and reimbursement for pay respondent was entitled to for the period during which he was inappropriately suspended. Additionally, the Assistant Commissioner found, inter alia, that: respondent is entitled to a credit for the vacation time he accrued but did not use prior to his suspension, not a monetary reimbursement; and respondent should have returned to work immediately following the dismissal of tenure charges in November 2010 and is consequently not entitled to any additional sick or incremental pay beyond November 30, 2010. The respondent shall be awarded back pay and increments due totaling $52,411.64, and shall be credited with 96 sick days through November 30, 2010 and 15 vacation days earned but not used prior to his suspension. No additional vacation time is warranted since respondent is being paid for the entire amount of time he was wrongfully suspended.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF LOUIS MELILLO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION
OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law – as well as the respective exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent and the Board of Education (Board), and the respondent's reply thereto – have been reviewed by the Assistant Commissioner, to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-34. On November 4, 2010, the Commissioner remanded this matter to OAL to fully resolve the parties' disputes concerning back pay and emoluments.[1]

The Board submitted exceptions arguing that the ALJ inappropriately found that the respondent's back pay should not be subject to mitigation. The Board contends that the ALJ erroneously found that the Board failed to present prima facie evidence that there were other comparable employment opportunities available to the respondent. The Board argues that the ALJ's finding with respect to mitigation was ludicrous because it was the respondent's obligation to put forth a good faith effort to mitigate the damages. In its exceptions, the Board points out that the respondent testified that he did not make any attempts to work during his suspension.

[1] In the November 4, 2010 decision, the Commissioner dismissed the tenure charges against the respondent.

The Board also takes exception to the ALJ's specific findings regarding respondent's increments and accrued vacation time. The Board contends that the ALJ wrongfully awarded the restoration of an increment from August 1, 2004 - June 30, 2005 even though an increment was not withheld during that period. Finally, the Board argues that respondent should not be reimbursed for his accrued vacation days, but rather he should be credited with those days.

The respondent submitted exceptions generally supporting the ALJ's findings with respect to the back pay and emoluments. In his exceptions, the respondent additionally argues that in light of the delay occasioned by waiting for the remand decision, the respondent should receive an additional 14 sick days and 2 personal days which accrue as sick days for the 2010-2011 school year. In reply to the Board's exceptions, the respondent contends that the ALJ properly found that it is the Board who has the burden of establishing the failure to mitigate, and that no such evidence was presented by the Board in this case. Again, in reply the respondent reiterated his position with respect to back pay and emoluments previously stated in his exceptions.[2]

Upon review of the record on remand, the Assistant Commissioner concurs with the ALJ for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision that the Board failed to meet its burden of establishing that the respondent's back pay should be subject to mitigation. The Assistant Commissioner further agrees with the ALJ's determination with respect to respondent's earned sick time, and the reimbursement for pay that he is entitled to for the period during which respondent was inappropriately suspended.

[2] The remaining arguments made by the respondent in reply are beyond the scope of remand, and are more directed at the Board's counsel and the number of delays that have occurred in this case. It should be noted that both parties have used their respective exceptions as a method to complain about the manner in which this case has been litigated.

In the Initial Decision the ALJ found that the respondent's increment for 2004 – 2005 should be restored. Based on the record on remand, it does not appear that the respondent's increment was withheld prior to July 1, 2005; therefore, no increment shall be restored for that time period. The ALJ also awarded respondent with the vacation time he accrued beginning August 2004. Since the respondent is being paid for the entire amount of time he was wrongfully suspended, no additional vacation time is warranted. It is also not clear from the Initial Decision whether the ALJ's recommendation was meant to be a credit for vacation time or if it was meant to be a reimbursement for that accrued time.[3] The Assistant Commissioner finds that respondent is entitled to a credit for the vacation time he accrued but did not use prior to his suspension, not a monetary reimbursement.

Finally, the Assistant Commissioner finds that the respondent should have returned to work immediately following the November 4, 2010 final decision dismissing the tenure charges.[4] See, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. Moreover, the Assistant Commissioner cannot even fathom why respondent has not returned to work, especially considering the amount of time that it has taken for the tenure proceedings to culminate. The portion of the November 4, 2010 decision that remanded this case to the OAL was strictly limited to the parties' disputes concerning back pay and emoluments, and should not have delayed respondent's return to work. As a result, the Assistant Commissioner finds that the respondent is not entitled to any additional sick or incremental pay beyond November 30, 2010.[5] [3] It is clear from the respective exceptions that the parties each interpreted the ALJ's finding differently.

[4] According to the record on remand the respondent has not yet returned to work; however, the record is devoid of any justification for such.

[5] On remand it appears that the Board provided the ALJ with all of the relevant back pay and emolument calculations up until November 30, 2010 with the expectation that the respondent would be back at work by that date.

Accordingly, the respondent shall be awarded $16,781.14, which amounts to his salary for the period when he was improperly suspended, reduced by the amount he earned while working in construction during that time period. The respondent shall also be awarded the increments he would have received between July 1, 2005 and November 30, 2010, which amounts to a reimbursement of $35,630.50.[6] As a result, the respondent shall receive a total of $52,411.64 in monetary reimbursements. Finally, the respondent shall be credited with the 96 sick days that he accrued during the suspension up until November 30, 2010, and the 15 vacation days that he had accrued but had not used prior to the suspension.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 12620-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 363-10/04
(EDU 11502-04 ON REMAND)

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF LOUIS MELILLO, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY.

Karen A. Murray, Esq., for petitioner City of Elizabeth Board of Education

Sheldon H. Pincus, Esq., for respondent Louis Melillo (Bucceri and Pincus, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 10, 2011 Decided: March 8, 2011

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ:

Respondent Louis Melillo, a school head custodian, was suspended with pay by the City of Elizabeth School District on July 16, 2004. On or about September 15, 2004, the school district served Melillo with tenure charges. The charges were certified and Melillo was suspended without pay, effective October 15, 2004. On or about December 3, 2004, a grand jury returned a four count indictment against Melillo. On or about August 26, 2005, a Stay was granted temporarily suspending the proceedings on the tenure charges until the criminal case was resolved. On September 28, 2005, Melillo was acquitted of all criminal charges and his suspension without pay was converted to a suspension with pay. Subsequent to the criminal case being resolved, a hearing on the tenure charges was held at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) under OAL Dkt. No. EDU 11502-04. In an Initial Decision dated September 20, 2010, I determined that Mr. Melillo was not guilty of any of the tenure charges filed against him. On November 4, 2010, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision, and remanded the matter "for such proceedings as are necessary to fully resolve the parties' disputes concerning back pay and emoluments." The remanded case was filed at the OAL bearing docket number EDU 12620-10.

The parties filed supplemental briefs addressing the issue of back pay and emoluments. The parties, in principal, do not disagree that respondent is entitled to back pay and emoluments. However, they disagree on the specific amounts. The Elizabeth Board of Education (Board) argues that Melillo had the duty to mitigate his damages, and he should not be awarded the full amount of his back pay unless or until he demonstrates that he took reasonable efforts to mitigate his damages. Melillo counters that the Board has not met its burden of establishing a failure to mitigate. Melillo argues that the Board bears the burden of proving the existence of comparable jobs that Melillo could have taken while the instant matter was pending. And, since the Board failed to address this issue prior to this remand, it cannot now present such an argument.

ISSUES

Is respondent entitled to back pay and emoluments and, if so, how much?

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Tenured school board employees who have been exonerated of tenure charges are entitled to be reinstated with back pay and emoluments. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-30. However, the employee has the duty to mitigate his or her damages, and any award of back pay may be reduced for failure to mitigate. White v.

N. Bergen Twp., 77 N.J. 538 (1978); Mullen v. Jefferson Twp. Bd. of Educ., 81 N.J. Super. 151 (App. Div. 1963).

> [M]itigation . . . is the deduction of other income received from the amount of back pay otherwise recoverable. . . . [W]here other income is not actually received, the amount of back pay awarded may be reduced by the amount the discharged employee could or should have received by reasonable and sincere efforts to find other employment.

What constitutes a reasonable and sincere effort to locate other employment in order to mitigate has been "liberally construed" as an "honest attempt" to find comparable employment. Siegel v. Garfield Bd. of Educ., 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 319. The term "comparable employment" has been interpreted to mean that the position is of a like character, which requires analysis of the particular responsibilities and skills of the job that the individual was denied. Goodman v. London Metal Exch., 86 N.J. 19, 36–37 (1981). In this regard, an employee's duty to mitigate requires him or her to seek similar employment in order to reduce the amount of his or her damages. Similar employment refers to the nature of the job activity, location and rate of compensation. Id. at 36.

Respondent argues that the Board must sustain its burden of proof on the issue of mitigation. Respondent relies on Roselle v. La Fera Contracting Co., 18 N.J. Super. 19, 28 (Ch. Div. 1952). Respondent further asserts that the Board belatedly argues mitigation, and the issue of a lack of mitigation was not raised previously.

I note the dialogue during Melillo's cross-examination by Ms. Murray on the subject of mitigation. (Tr. of March 11, 2010, at 10–14.) In summary, Melillo testified that he did not collect unemployment. He said he worked for Furino Construction as a laborer from August 2004. Melillo testified that he worked for Furino forty hours a week for approximately eleven months, after which he was laid off due to lack of work.[1] Melillo testified that he did not seek any further employment and remained unemployed.

[1] Subsequent to a request by this judge, respondent, on February 10, 2011, provided a certification stating that he worked for Furino Construction for approximately eleven months and earned gross wages of $29,783.36.

It is understood that to date, Melillo is still unemployed and has not returned to work at the Elizabeth Board of Education. Petitioner offered no other evidence on the subject of mitigation or Melillo's employment. I FIND that respondent was employed from August 1, 2004, until July 2005 at Furino Construction.

An employer is permitted to reduce its damages by showing that the employee has earned wages from another employer. Sandler v. Lawn-A-Mat Chem. & Equip. Corp., 141N.J. Super. 437, 455, 358 A.2d 805 (App. Div.), certif.. denied, 71 N.J. 503, 366 A. 2d 658 (1976); Roselle v. La Fera Contracting Co., 18 N.J.Super. 19, 28, 86 A. 2d 449 (Ch. Div. 1952).

Also during respondent's cross-examination on March 11, 2010, the following was the dialogue on the subject of mitigation:

> MS. MURRAY: Have you made any attempts to work between 2004, July and the present?
>
> MR. MELILLO: No.
>
> MS. MURRAY: And why is that?
>
> MR. MELILLO: Because I already am employed by the Elizabeth Board of Education.
>
> MS. MURRAY: But you have not been working at the Board, you've just been collecting a paycheck?
>
> MR. MELILLO: Yes.
> [Tr. at 10, lines 1–25.]

The Mullen case addressed whether the doctrine of mitigation was applicable in cases where a person holding a position with a local school board is entitled to full payment of salary for the entire period of the illegal dismissal, without mitigation. The court in Mullen found that the Legislature had intended that "all claims made by illegally dismissed persons under N.J.S.A. 18A:5-49.1 [now N.J.S.A. 18:6-30] be subject to the common law rule of mitigation of damages." Mullen, supra, 81 N.J. Super. at 159. The court also relied, in part, upon the common law principle that a "public employee's claim for back pay may justly be subjected to mitigation." Id. at 158. Respondent was under a duty to mitigate and seek suitable employment.

Respondent stated that he did not seek further employment after being laid off from Furino Construction in July 2005. When mitigating damages, individuals must exercise reasonable diligence and ordinary care. W. Orange Supplemental Instructors Ass'n v. W. Orange Twp. Bd. of Educ., 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 288. Respondent is essentially a laborer, and such work should have been fairly easily obtained, at least on a temporary and/or seasonal basis. It is clear from the above cited dialogue that Melillo made no effort to get other employment while he was suspended. To date, respondent continues on suspension with pay even though on November 4, 2010, the Commissioner of Education adopted this administrative law judge's findings and dismissed all of the tenure charges filed against the respondent. The Commissioner's decision was mailed on November 12, 2010.

However, in the case of O'Lone v. Dep't of Human Services, 357 N.J.Super. 170, 180 (App.Div. 2003), where the issue was whether an employer may deny a back pay claim based solely on the employee's failure to seek substitute employment during the period of separation from public service, without considering the availability of such employment. In O'Lone, as in this case, the facts revealed that O'Lone did not apply for a single job. O'Lone made no serious effort to obtain substitute employment. The court in O'Lone concluded that although O'Lone failed to seek substitute employment it was not a sufficient basis for denying him back pay, the availability of other comparable employment has to be established.

Mitigation is an affirmative defense and the initial burden of proving the appropriateness of its application rests with the employer. See Goodman, supra, at 32; O'Lone , supra, at 18. The appointing authority bears the initial burden of presenting evidence of the employee's failure to mitigate. It is the employer that must make an initial showing that comparable employment opportunities were available or that there were other suitable jobs. Only then does the burden of going forward shift to the employee who may introduce evidence that comparable employment did not exist, that reasonable and diligent efforts on his/her part had not been successful, or that the circumstances did not justify acceptance of a dissimilar job. Goodman, Ibid.

I FIND, that the Board has overlooked the well founded principle that mitigation is an affirmative defense and it is the Board that has the burden of proof. I FURTHER FIND that the Board has failed to present prima facie evidence that there were other comparable employment opportunities available to the respondent.

Therefore based on the above, I am constrained to CONCLUDE that respondent is entitled to his full back pay and emoluments minus what he earned while working at Furino Construction.

ORDER

It is therefore ORDERED that the Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth restore to the respondent the amount of $46,564.50, which covers the period he was improperly suspended, less $29,783.36, which is the amount he earned while working for Furino Construction. The net amount to be paid to respondent is $16,781.14 as reimbursement of wrongfully withheld wages.

It is further ORDERED that petitioner is to be awarded the increments for the periods of August 1, 2004, June 30, 2005, July 1, 2005 to June 30, 2006; July 1, 2006, to June 30, 2007; July 1, 2007, to June 30, 2008; July 1, 2008, to June 30, 2009; July 1, 2009, to June 30, 2010; and July 1, 2010, to November 12, 2010.

And, it is further ORDERED that respondent be credited with the sick days he has earned since his suspension.

And, it is further ORDERED that respondent be awarded the vacation days he has accrued beginning August 2004.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

Petitioner, A.T., has filed an application for emergency relief pursuant to N.J.A.C.1:1-12.6, through which he challenges his son's grade level placement. Petitioner seeks an order compelling the respondent, Rutherford Board of Education (the Board), to immediately return his son, S.T., to a first grade classroom. Effective December 2010, S.T. was removed from first grade and enrolled in a half-day kindergarten/half-day first grade program, due to administrative concerns about his academic readiness. Petitioner additionally seeks supplemental tutoring to compensate for the time missed since his transfer from the full-time first grade classroom.

The background facts are essentially uncontroverted and I FIND as follows:

S.T. is a six-year-old student, who completed kindergarten at a non-public school, and was enrolled in the Rutherford Public Schools as a first grader in September 2010. The Board's enrollment policy stipulates that a student seeking to enroll in the first grade "must be 6 years old on or before October 1, 2010, or be 6 years old by December 31, 2010, and have a transfer card indicating successful completion of kindergarten." S.T. turned six years of age on October 6, 2010. His parents felt that S.T. had a successful kindergarten experience, and he was initially enrolled in a first grade classroom in Rutherford. The district submitted the certification of Lincoln School Principal, Jeanna Velechko, who stated that S.T. was permitted to enroll as a first grader because he had attended kindergarten, but that since he technically missed to age cut-off for first grade, "his performance would be monitored to determine whether his placement was appropriate."

As early as October, 2010, S.T.'s classroom teacher began to document concerns about his academic performance, including an inability to remain on task, follow instructions, work well with the class group, hand in assignments on time, and participate appropriately in class discussions. Student progress reports were forwarded to his parents noting these concerns on October 26, 2010, and again on November 8, 2010.

By November 12, 2010, S.T.'s case had been brought to the attention of the district Intervention Referral Services Committee (IRSC) due to concerns about S.T.'s academic and social functioning in the classroom. The IRSC "is a professional problem-solving group whose purpose is to assist teachers in varying instructional strategies and to enable more individualized and effective alternatives for learners," and is a multi-disciplinary team of school professionals that includes a reading specialist, social worker and psychologist. S.T.'s teacher reported failing grades and an inability to work independently to the IRSC. It was noted that S.T. is capable, but not working to capacity. Socially, he appeared to be unhappy, sad and lonely, and he lacked peer relationships.

The IRSC met on November 30, 2010, and determined that it was in S.T.'s best interest to either return to kindergarten, or be enrolled in split day program where he would attend both kindergarten and first grade. He was determined not be developmentally ready for first grade, and accordingly, under either plan would be registered in kindergarten. The Committee stated that its preference was the split day program, and S.T.'s parents were given until December 6, 2010 to make a choice. To insure that the view of the IRSC was the correct one, Ms. Velechko arranged for additional testing of S.T., and she carefully reviewed his academic performance. She found that he was performing below average, and was struggling at the first grade level.

A.T. advised that he did not wish his son to be returned to kindergarten, and desired that he remain in the first grade. The change to a split day program was made over his parents' objections. Petitioner appealed to the Superintendent of Schools, Elaine Baldwin, who, in a letter dated December 7, 2010, stated that S.T.'s progress would continue to be monitored, and that if his performance improved he would be moved to first grade. Baldwin stated that, "[i]n the spring, a determination will be made regarding [S.T.'s] grade placement for the 2011-2012 school year."

S.T.'s parents thereafter arranged for private testing through Mae Balaban and Associates; they urge that this testing found that S.T. is capable of functioning at a first grade level. They further assert that the district's impression of their son is unfair, as he arrived at school in September exhausted after a trip to India, and suffering from an infection, negatively impacting his academic performance. A referral to the child study team was rejected by the district via letter dated January 11, 2011. That letter reported that S.T. was now doing well in his kindergarten program, was following classroom rules and routines, was attentive and engaged well with his peers and showed no evidence of a learning disability which warranted child study team intervention. But Velechko reports in her certification that S.T.'s difficulties in the first grade classroom remain ongoing. He continues to have difficulty working independently, his math performance continues not to meet first grade expectations, and he has weaknesses in reading comprehension. Developmental Reading Assessments completed by the district likewise show that S.T. is lagging behind his peers. Although his transition to his new split day program, which included a change to a different first grade classroom, has gone smoothly, S.T. continues to appear more socially comfortable with kindergarten peers.

An appeal to the Board seeking to overturn the administrative recommendation was rejected by the Board at its meeting of February 14, 2011.

In accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6, emergency relief may be granted "where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case..." My determination in this matter is further governed by the standard for emergent relief set forth by our Supreme Court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 102 N.J. 50 (1986), as follows:

> The judge may order emergency relief ....if the judge determines from the proofs that:
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted.
>
> 2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled.

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the relief is not granted.

The moving party must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe v. DeGioia standard to establish an entitlement to emergent relief. Id. at 132-35.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not satisfied the standard for emergent relief, as he cannot demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits of his claim. Nor is the legal right underlying petitioner's claim settled in his favor; rather, he will have weighty burden at hearing. The Commissioner has consistently held that local boards of education may promote or place students in public school grade levels according to their own rules and regulations. Shenkler v Ho-Ho-Kus Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 772, aff'd 1975 S.L.D. 1157; Boulogne v Bd. of Educ. of the City of Jamesburg, 1964 S.L.D. 107; Wilcox v Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Oceanport, 154-55 S.L.D. 75. See also: N.J.S.A. 18A: 4-24, which provides that while the Commissioner may inquire into whether a local district is providing a thorough and efficient education, "nothing in this section shall affect the right of each district to prescribe its own rules for promotion." Thus, generally, the Commissioner will defer to local board discretion in the area of grade level placement.

The Commissioner's view is consistent with the generally accepted notion that he will not overturn the decision of a local board in the absence of a finding that the action below was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, citing Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581(1966). The Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the board of education, whose exercise of its discretion may not be disturbed unless shown to be "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960).

Our courts have held that "[w]here there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Prot., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199–200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd, 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974). Thus, at plenary hearing petitioner must demonstrate that the Board acted in bad faith, or in utter disregard of the circumstances before it. T.B.M. v. Moorestown, supra, EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

This record presents no evidence that Rutherford school personnel were motivated by anything other than S.T.'s educational best interest. The Board made its determination that S.T. is not developmentally ready for first grade based on the advice of its educational professionals, who conferred as a committee and reviewed both informal observational data and testing data in making a determination. Based on the evidence before me, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not demonstrated a likelihood of prevailing on his claim that the Board's action here was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Nor has petitioner demonstrated irreparable harm. S.T. will continue to attend school pending a plenary hearing. It is clear that the issue of S.T.'s placement for the 2011-2012 school year can and will be the subject of further thoughtful discussion between the parties. I concur with the district that an immediate return to first grade runs a greater risk of irreparably harming S.T. than does continuing him on his present course pending a full exploration of the merits of petitioner's claims.

Accordingly, I ORDER that the petition for emergency relief be DISMISSED. A plenary hearing will be conducted at a date and time convenient for the parties.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner's position as a Teacher of Psychology was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF) at the end of the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner contended that her tenure rights were violated when her position was abolished and the Board retained non-tenured chemistry teachers despite petitioner's claim to those positions. On the date that petitioner's position was abolished by the Board – May 11, 2010 – petitioner held a standard instructional certificate with an endorsement as a Teacher of Psychology. On May 26, 2010, petitioner was issued an instructional certificate with an endorsement as a Teacher of Chemistry.

The ALJ found that: the controlling case on this issue is Francey v. Board of Educ. of the City of Salem, 286 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div.1996), in which the court found that a tenured teacher's right to re-employment may not be expanded by teaching certificates or additional instructional endorsements acquired after the date that the teacher's position was abolished through a RIF; pursuant to the findings in Francey, tenure rights are fixed on the date the Board passes its resolution effectuating a RIF; petitioner's position was abolished by the Board on May 11, 2010, which preceded – by approximately two weeks – the date of issuance of petitioner's second certificate to teach chemistry; accordingly, petitioner's after-acquired certificate affords her no rights to the chemistry positions presently held by non-tenured teachers in the district. The ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition with prejudice.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that Francey is the controlling case, and found that the petitioner's tenure rights became fixed on May 11, 2010, and the endorsement in chemistry acquired after that date is not afforded any tenure protections. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

KIMBERLY LOBELLO,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE WARREN HILLS REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, WARREN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Board of Education's reply thereto.

In her exceptions, the petitioner argues that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) wrongfully found that her tenure status at the time of the Board's May 11, 2010 decision to abolish her position did not extend to the Teacher of Chemistry endorsement that the petitioner applied for on April 27, 2010.[1] The petitioner recognizes that generally teachers may not count after acquired endorsements within the scope of tenure protections; however, she argues that this rule is not absolute. In her exceptions, the petitioner points out that the Commissioner has found that tenure protections can apply to endorsements issued after a notice of a reduction in force (RIF) if the process to obtain the new endorsement was initiated prior to the RIF. See, Albert v. Board of Education of the Scotch Plains-Fanwood Regional School District, Union County, 1997 S.L.D. (August 6, 1997). The petitioner further argues that the facts in this case are similar to those in Albert, and as such the analysis of Albert controls. Based on Albert, the petitioner contends that her tenure status includes the Teacher of Chemistry endorsement – which she applied for on April 27, 2010 prior to the Board's May 11, 2010 resolution approving the RIF – despite the fact that the endorsement was not issued until May 26, 2010.

[1] It is undisputed that the petitioner had obtained tenure as a teacher in psychology, and that on May 11, 2010 the Board abolished her position pursuant to a valid reduction in force.

In reply, the Board reiterates the positions advanced in its submission at the OAL, urging the Commissioner to adopt the ALJ's determination that the petitioner's after-acquired certificate to teach chemistry did not afford her any tenure rights. The Board argues that the petitioner's tenure rights were fixed when the Board approved the RIF, and at that time petitioner did not hold an endorsement in chemistry. The Board also contends that the petitioner's reliance on Albert is misguided, and that the ALJ properly distinguished Albert from the present case. The Board further argues that Albert was decided on very specific facts, was based on equitable considerations, and is not binding on this case. The Board maintains that the seminal case on this issue is Francey v. Board of Educ. of the City of Salem, 286 N.J. Super. 354 (App. Div. 1996). Under Francey, a tenured teacher's rights to reemployment may not be expanded by teaching certificates or additional endorsements acquired after the date the teacher's position was abolished through a reduction in force.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the Board is entitled to summary decision. On the date that the Board passed the resolution abolishing petitioner's position, the petitioner did not hold a Teacher of Chemistry endorsement, and as a result the Commissioner finds that she did not have any tenure rights with respect to teaching positions in chemistry.

Notwithstanding the existence of Albert, the Commissioner further finds that Francey is the controlling case on this issue. In Francey, the court found that only the endorsements held by the teacher at the time of the Board's decision to implement the RIF are afforded tenure protections. Francey, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 357, 361. Further, tenure rights are fixed as of the date of the RIF decision; therefore, any subsequent endorsements obtained by a teacher are not afforded any tenure protections. Id. at 358.

In this case, it is undisputed that when the Board voted to abolish petitioner's position on May 11, 2010, the petitioner did not hold a Teacher of Chemistry endorsement. As a result, the petitioner's tenure rights became fixed on May 11, 2010, and the endorsement in chemistry acquired after that date is not afforded any tenure protections. Finally, it is not necessary to analyze this case in conjunction with Albert because the bright line rule established by the Appellate Division is controlling.[2] Accordingly, the petition of appeal is dismissed.

Record Closed: March 4, 2011 Decided: March 15, 2011

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF FACTS AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about July 16, 2010, Kimberly LoBello, a full-time teacher of psychology with the Warren Hills Regional School filed a petition with the Commissioner contending that her tenure rights had been violated when her position was abolished and the school board retained one or more non-tenured chemistry teachers in derogation of LoBello's claim on those positions.

The Board contends that LoBello's certification as a chemistry teacher was issued after a reduction in force (RIF), which abolished LoBello's position as a teacher of psychology and resulted in her termination. The issuance of the endorsement as a chemistry teacher was, according to the Board, an after-acquired endorsement which extends no further rights to LoBello then the rights she had when she was notified of her termination.

FACTS

The FACTS in this matter are not in dispute and a signed Stipulation placed in evidence at the hearing set forth the stipulated facts as follows:

1. Petitioner Kimberly LoBello (hereinafter referred to as "LoBello") was employed by the Respondent, Warren Hills Regional School District Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as the "Board"), as a full-time teacher of psychology, beginning with the 2005-2006 school year. (See Joint Exhibit A.)

2. LoBello was hired under a provisional instructional certificate, issued "05/05" under her family name "Kimberly L. Waters," authorizing her as a "teacher of psychology." (See Joint Exhibit B.)

3. On or about May 26, 2006, LoBello submitted an application for a standard instructional certificate as a "teacher of psychology." (See Joint Exhibit C.)

4. In 2006, a standard instructional certificate with an endorsement as a "teacher of psychology" was issued to LoBello. The certificate did not have an endorsement as a teacher of chemistry.

5. LoBello continued to be employed by the Board on a full-time basis through annual-employment contracts for the 2006-2007, 2007-2008, 2008-2009, and 2009-2010 school years. (See Joint Exhibit D.)

6. LoBello was employed as a "teacher of psychology" during the 2005-2006 school year and as a "teacher of psychology and forensic science" during the 2006-2007, 2007-2008, 2008-2009, and 2009-2010 school years.

7. During the above timeframe, LoBello gained tenure in the position of 7-12 Subject Area Teacher.

8. The Board's job description for the position of 7-12 Subject Area Teacher list the first qualification for holding the position as "[a] teaching certificate issued by the New Jersey State Department of Education with the appropriate endorsement or HQT status according to teaching assignment." (See Joint Exhibit E.)

9. At the time of her initial employment, LoBello indicated she would pursue a standard certificate with endorsements as both a teacher of psychology and as a teacher of chemistry. When LoBello was not issued a chemistry-teacher endorsement in 2006 at the time she obtained her standard certificate with an endorsement for psychology, the Board did not know whether she had ever followed up on the chemistry endorsement.

10. On April 30, 2010, the Board sent LoBello a RICE notice informing her that her employment status would be discussed in executive session at the Board meeting to be held on May 11, 2010. (See Joint Exhibit F.)

11. On May 11, 2010, the Board abolished LoBello's position, effective June 30, 2010, pursuant to a valid reduction in force for reasons of economy and efficiency. (See Joint Exhibit G.)

12. By correspondence dated May 12, 2010, LoBello was informed that she would not be re-employed for the 2010-2011 school year. (See Joint Exhibit H.)

13. On or about the date the position was abolished, the Board contacted the Department of Education, Office of Licensure and Credentials, with a request for an expedited review of LoBello's credentials to determine what certificates and endorsements she held. (See Joint Exhibit I.)

14. On June 14, 2010, the Board received a copy of a standard teaching certificate authorizing LoBello as a "teacher of chemistry." The certificate was issued to LoBello under her family name, "Kimberly L. Waters," and stated that it was issued "May 2010." (See Joint Exhibit J.)

15. LoBello applied for the chemistry teacher certificate on or about April 27, 2010. (See Joint Exhibit K.)

16. On July 28, 2010, the Board submitted a government records request, under the Open Public Records Act (OPRA), for a document from the Office of Licensure and Credentials memorializing "the SPECIFIC date of issue of a standard teaching certificate issued to Kimberly L. Waters in May 2010, authorizing her as a 'teacher of chemistry.'" (See Joint Exhibit L.)

17. On August 9, 2010, the OPRA custodian from the Department of Education responded to the Board's request with a letter stating as follows: "Our records indicate that a standard Teacher of Chemistry certificate was issued to Kimberly L. Waters on May 26, 2010. The certificate was printed on May 27, 2010 and mailed on May 28, 2010." (See Joint Exhibit M.)

18. The Board currently employs two non-tenured teachers of chemistry for the 2010-2011 school year. (See Joint Exhibit N.)

In summary, LoBello was initially employed under a Provisional Instructional Certificate authorizing her as a "teacher of psychology". She subsequently became tenured in that position and remained employed with Warren Hills Regional until May 2010.

On April 30, 2010, LoBello received a RICE notice informing her that her employment status would be discussed at a Board meeting on May 11, 2010; on that date, the Board abolished LoBello's position; and on or about April 27, 2010, three days prior to the RICE notice, LoBello had applied for credentials as a chemistry teacher.

At the time LoBello's position as a teacher of psychology was abolished, the Board attempted to contact the Office of Licensure and Credentials to determine whether a chemistry-teacher endorsement had been issued to LoBello. It was not until mid-June 2010 that the Board actually received a copy of a standard teaching certificate authorizing LoBello as a "teacher of chemistry". Subsequent investigation revealed that the teacher of chemistry certificate was issued on May 26, 2010, approximately two weeks after LoBello was terminated and her position abolished.

THE LAW

A tenured teacher's right to re-employment may not be expanded by teaching certificates or additional instructional endorsements acquired after the date the teacher's position was abolished through a reduction in force. Francey v. Bd. of Educ. of City of Salem, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) (Vol. 4A) 449 (Comm'r), aff'd, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 347 (State Board), aff'd, 286 N.J. Super. 354, 360-61 (App Div. 1996).

The facts in Francey are directly on point for this matter although the time period between the abolishing of Francey's position and her subsequent expansion of her teaching certificate was substantially longer. Nonetheless, the principle enunciated in Francey has been uniformally applied by the Commissioner.

LoBello cites the matter of Albert v. The Board of Education of Scotch Plains, 1997 S.L.D. (August 6, 1997) in which Albert had submitted an application for certification to the Department of Education prior to the Board's action to reduce its staff and the Board was aware of such circumstance at the time of the action. The Albert matter can be distinguished from the facts in this matter in that the Board was aware of Albert's application at the time of their action. Albert was never terminated although her position was "reduced." The Commissioner's Decision itself stated that "we stress in so doing that our determination is predicated on the specific facts in the record of this case . . . ." The Warren Hills Regional School District acted quite responsibly by seeking to determine LoBello's status at the time of the RIF and in no way acted in a detrimental manner as that inferred in Albert.

The Appellate Division upheld the Francey decision, finding the interpretation of the Commissioner and the State Board with respect to the tenure statutes to be in accord with the underlying Legislative objective. The Court went on to quote the following portion of the Commissioner's rationale in the Francey decision as follows:

> The date of employees' RIF can be the only reasonable date certain on which the employees' rights can be reckoned for future entitlements purposes. To deprive Boards of this certainty permitting RIF staff to continually revised and expand their entitlements at will would at the very least impose an unreasonable administrative burden on the district, and, of more concern would likely lead to amassing of endorsements following RIF, reduced to ciaos any attempt by the District to ascertain its legal responsibilities upon the arising of a vacancy, and unduly restrict Boards in their efforts to provide a thorough and efficient education by choosing the most qualified staff for open positions."
> [Francey, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 360-61.]

Francey makes it clear that tenure rights are fixed on the date the Board passes its resolution effectuating the reduction in force. In this matter, that date was May 11, 2010, which preceded the date of LoBello's issuance of a certificate to teach chemistry by approximately two weeks. LoBello's after-acquired certificate to teach chemistry affords her no rights to the chemistry positions presently held by non-tenured teachers in Warren Hills Regional School District.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board sought an order placing respondent's children in the Maple Shade school district for the balance of the 2010-2011 school year, contending that Maple Shade is the school district of residence of respondent and placement in its schools is in the best interest of the children. Respondent, a former resident of Maple Shade, was designated "homeless" in November 2008 and since then has been relocated three times by the Burlington County Board of Social Services (BCBSS). In February 2010, the family was moved by the BCBSS to the municipality of Mount Laurel. Respondent enrolled his children in that school district for the current school year, and objected to their placement in the Maple Shade school district.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: from February 16, 2010 to the present, respondent and his children have continuously resided in the municipality of Mount Laurel; during this period, they have continuously been classified as "homeless" by the BCBSS; petitioning Board learned for the first time at the hearing in this matter that respondent and his family have resided in Mount Laurel since February 2010; petitioning Board has withdrawn its claim to have respondent's children enrolled in Maple Shade based on its understanding that it is no longer responsible for the educational costs of respondent's children; although a family may fall under the rubric of "homeless," it nonetheless achieves domicile for school law purposes after a continual year of residence in one district; accordingly, petitioning Board is responsible for the education of respondent's children until February 16, 2011, and thereafter Mount Laurel became their domicile pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d. The ALJ ordered the petition dismissed, and further ordered that the Maple Shade School District is no longer responsible for the education of respondent's children.

Upon review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the OAL's Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MAPLE SHADE, BURLINGTON COUNTY, Petitioner,
v.
G.F. ON BEHALF OF G.F. AND S.F.,
Respondent.

Damon Tyner, Esq., for petitioner (Parker McCay, attorneys)

G.F., respondent, pro se

Record Closed: March 10, 2011 Decided: March 14, 2011

BEFORE JOHN SCHUSTER III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter the Board of Education of the Township of Maple Shade, Burlington County (petitioner or district) seeks an order placing G.F.'s (respondent) children in the Maple Shade School District for the balance of the 2010 - 2011 school year. Respondent has objected to that placement. On September 23, 2010, the district filed a verified petition of appeal with the State Department of Education seeking the aforesaid relief. An answer was filed with the Department on November 4, 2010. The matter was then transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on November 10, 2010 as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing was scheduled for March 10, 2011 at which time the parties appeared, stipulations submitted and testimony and documentary evidence was given. At the conclusion of the hearing the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the joint stipulation submitted and confirmed by the testimony of the respondent the following are the relevant facts in this matter. Respondent resided in the municipality of Maple Shade from July 2004 through October 2008 and during that period of time respondent's children were enrolled in the Maple Shade School District. In November 2008, respondent was designated as "homeless" and was moved by the Burlington County Board of Social Services to the municipality of Mount Holly. The children remained in the Maple Shade School District until May 2009 when the Burlington County Board of Social Services moved the family unit to the municipality of Westhampton. The children were then enrolled in the Westampton School District and petitioner paid Westampton Board of Education the cost for the educational services provided by that district. The children remained in the Westampton School District for the entire 2009-2010 school year even though on February 16, 2010 the Burlington County Board of Social Services relocated the family unit to the municipality of Mount Laurel. While the children remained enrolled in the Westampton School District Maple Shade provided transportation to that district. In August 2010, in anticipation of the 2010-2011 school year, respondent enrolled his children in the Mount Laurel School System. The Maple Shade District did not approve of that enrollment as they wanted respondent's children to attend school in its system. In order to enforce that desire petitioner brought this action. I further FIND that on February 16, 2010 respondent and his family were moved by the Burlington County Board of Social Services to the Rodeway Inn located on Route 73 in Mount Laurel. I further FIND that on or about

January 1, 2011 and continuing until the present, respondent's have resided in another motel at the insistence of the Burlington County Board of Social Services which motel is also located in Mount Laurel, but is not disclosed in this initial decision for privacy concerns. I FIND that from February 16, 2010 until the present (March 10, 2011) respondent and his children had continuously resided in the municipality of Mount Laurel. I also FIND during this period they have continuously been classified as "homeless" by the Burlington County Board of Social Services. I also FIND that petitioner learned for the first time on March 10, 2011 that respondent has resided in Mount Laurel since February 16, 2010. This is evidenced by a document marked into evidence as R-1 which is statement from the Rodeway Inn that the arrival date of the respondent was that date. In addition I FIND that petitioner has withdrawn its claim to have respondent's children enrolled in the Maple Shade School District based on its understanding that the Maple Shade District is no longer responsible for the educational cost of respondent's children.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The applicable law on the issue herein is codified in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d. That statute provides that:

> Public schools shall be free to the following persons over 5 and under 20 years of age:
>
> a. (N/A) > b. (N/A) > c. (N/A)
> d. Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all-year-round dwelling place with in the district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for the purpose of this section.

As applied to respondent, Maple Shade has been his domicile from July 2004 to October 2008. On or about November 2008, he became a resident in Mount Holly and in May 2009, became a resident of Westampton. Since he was in neither location for an entire year and was classified as being in homeless status, Maple Shade continued to be his municipality of domicile. On February 16, 2010, respondent was relocated to the municipality of Mount Laurel and has resided in that municipality since that date. Therefore pursuant to the aforesaid statute Mount Laurel has now become respondent's domicile.

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1d provides that any student whose parent is not domiciled in a district because of being in homeless status, but has had an all year round dwelling place in the district for at least one year shall be deemed domiciled in that district which entitles that student to a free public education in that district of domicile. Therefore, although a family may fall under the rubric of "homeless" it nonetheless achieves domicile for school law purposes after a continual year of residence in one district. See Board of Education Egg Harbor Township v. Board of Education Mainland Regional High School District, et als., http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/html/initial/edu06680-09.

CONCLUSION

I CONCLUDE that petitioner is responsible for the education of respondent's children until February 16, 2011. I CONCLUDE that on that date respondent and his children resided for one full year in the municipality of Mount Laurel and that municipality became their domicile even though they maintained homeless status.

ORDER

For the reasons set forth herein, I ORDER petitioner's request to have respondent's children attend the Maple Shade Schools be DIMSISSED because of the withdrawal of that claim based on mootness. I further ORDER the Maple Shade District to no longer be responsible for educating respondent's children.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: J.K., on behalf of minor child, P.B. v. Board of Education of the Township of Springfield, Union County. OAL Dkt. No. EDU 9972-09, Agency Dkt. No. 219-08/09.

Dear Parties,

The record of this matter and the Order of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) denying the Springfield Board of Education's motion for summary decision has been reviewed. The Commissioner granted the Board's request for interlocutory review of the Order on April 20, 2011.

In its motion for interlocutory review, the Board contends that the ALJ failed to apply the proper standard for an unopposed motion for summary decision. The Board argues that since the petitioner did not respond to the motion, all of the material facts were essentially undisputed. Further, the ALJ should have presumed an absence of a material factual dispute instead of concluding that there were credibility determinations that needed to be made. The Board also takes exception to the ALJ's finding that N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 provides a private right of action to seek tuition reimbursement for the parents' unilateral decision to remove their son from Jonathan Dayton High School and place him in another school. Additionally, the Board argues that the case law on which the ALJ relied does not provide a legal right to the relief sought by the petitioner. The Board, therefore, urges the Commissioner to enter an Order granting summary decision and dismissing the petition.

In reply, the petitioner maintains that the Board is not entitled to summary decision because she has credible facts to be presented at the hearing, and that she deserves to have her story told. The petitioner also contends that the Board is completely at fault in this matter for not protecting her son within the confines of the school walls.

Upon careful and independent review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board is not entitled to summary decision. In so doing, however, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ did not conduct the appropriate summary decision analysis mandated by Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995). Under Brill, supra, the motion judge is obligated to conduct a thorough review of the record with all of the evidence viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party to determine whether there exists a genuine issue of material fact. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540.

As a threshold matter, the Commissioner finds that the failure of the ALJ to state in her Order that the petitioner did not file a response to the Board's motion for summary decision was improper given the analysis that is to be conducted by the motion judge when ruling on summary decision.[1] The petitioner's failure to dispute the statement of material facts submitted by the Board is an important component in the evaluation of "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement" necessitating a hearing on the matter. Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 536. Moreover, the ALJ did not appear to fully conduct the analysis required under Brill, supra, to properly evaluate the existence of a genuine issue of material fact, but instead denied the motion based on insufficient facts mainly attributable to the petitioner's pro se status.[2]

Despite the fact that the petitioner did not respond to the Board's motion, the documents that were attached to the Board's certification in support of its motion for summary decision show that there are genuine issues of material fact. Specifically, the pleadings filed by the petitioner coupled with the petitioner's answers to interrogatories illustrate that there are factual disputes regarding the extent of the bullying, and the actions taken by the Board to intervene and to properly investigate the matter. In light of the relief sought in this case, these factual disputes are not of an insubstantial nature but rather are genuine issues of material facts that prevent summary decision. In many cases, a non-moving party's failure to respond to a motion for summary decision would automatically result in a grant of summary decision in the absence of any counterstatement of facts. Here, the petitioner was fortunate and undoubtedly benefited from the fact that a complete copy of her interrogatory responses was submitted to the court with the Board's motion.

Additionally, like the ALJ, the Commissioner is not persuaded that the Board's motion for summary decision should be granted based on the Board's jurisdictional arguments. Accordingly, the Board's motion for summary decision is denied.[3] This matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

Sincerely,

Christopher D. Cerf
Acting Commissioner

[1] There is nothing in the record to indicate why the petitioner did not file a response to the motion.

[2] Petitioner was represented by counsel during part of the case, but it appears that she was no longer represented by counsel when her response to the motion for summary decision was due. The record also indicates that during a conference call with the parties, the ALJ informed the petitioner that she needed to provide a response to the motion.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF DANNY CASTRO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION
OF UNION, HUDSON COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified charges of excessive absenteeism and conduct unbecoming against respondent – a tenured attendance officer – for a disproportionate number of absences spanning the period from the 2001-2002 to the 2009-2010 school year, and for insurance fraud stemming from an incident in which respondent's medical insurance was billed for treatment of a person posing as respondent's estranged wife. The respondent argued that he was not excessively absent, and that his major absences were a paid leave that resulted from respondent's two arrests – which were later dismissed – and an unpaid leave to handle family problems; additionally, he argued that the insurance fraud charge was based on hearsay, and the Board has no competent evidence to prove the charge. The Board sought removal of respondent from his tenured position.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the respondent's testimony at hearing contradicted statements he had previously made, and was not credible; the testimony of the Board's superintendent was credible and forthright; as an attendance officer, respondent's frequent absences set a poor role model for student attendance; the insurance fraud charges were not based on hearsay evidence, as respondent – by his own admission – was at the doctor's office on March 2, 2010 when a woman posing as respondent's wife received treatment charged to respondent's medical insurance; and the Board carried its burden to prove that respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent be dismissed from his tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings, noting that the conduct proven in this proceeding amply warrants respondent's dismissal from tenured employment. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the respondent was dismissed from his tenured position.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

AGENCY DKT NO. 613-10/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF DANNY CASTRO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION
OF UNION, HUDSON COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent and the Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.[1]

In his exceptions, the respondent argues that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously sustained the Board's charges of excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct, and that the taking of respondent's tenure is too severe a penalty. The respondent maintains that the ALJ improperly calculated the respondent's absences between 2001 and 2009, and that the time that the respondent was absent because he was suspended should not count towards the analysis. The respondent also argues that there was no testimony that his absences adversely affected the delivery of services by the school system. With respect to the allegation of unbecoming conduct based on the alleged insurance fraud, the respondent contends that the ALJ improperly arrived at conclusions not supported by any facts presented at the hearing. Finally, the respondent asserts in his exceptions that the Board's case relating to the fraud allegations was based entirely on hearsay evidence.

[1] The record contains no transcripts from the hearings conducted at the OAL on January 25- 26, 2011, and March 2, 2011.

In reply, the Board urges the adoption of the Initial Decision, asserting that the respondent's exceptions essentially reiterate the arguments made by the respondent throughout the proceedings. The Board maintains that the respondent's argument that his suspensions should not be considered towards the calculation of absences because the board prevented him from working is disingenuous. The Board emphasized the fact that the respondent was suspended from work because he was criminally charged with serious offenses, including stabbing someone, impersonating a police officer and drug offenses. Additionally the Board points out that the respondent was an attendance officer, and he could not properly investigate truancy when he himself was continuously absent from work. In reply, the Board also contends that the ALJ properly relied on the direct and circumstantial evidence to support her conclusion that the Board proved the respondent committed insurance fraud. The Board stresses that in addition to other evidence, the ALJ relied on the respondent's own admissions and responses to interrogatories, as well as respondent's incredible hearing testimony to support her conclusions.

In the absence of any basis in the record on which to dispute the fact-finding and credibility determinations of the ALJ pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c), In re Morrison, 216 N.J. Super. 143, 158 (App. Div. 1987), the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board has established that respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism and unbecoming conduct. The Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments and objections previously raised before the ALJ and clearly taken into account by her in weighing the testimony and evidence, and in concluding that the record overall supported the Board's charges. The Commissioner also finds no basis in the record to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ found that the respondent's "testimony could only be characterized as incredible." On the other hand, the ALJ found that the superintendent was "credible and forthright in his responses and showed no personal animus towards the respondent." The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. In this regard, the clear and unequivocal standard governing the Commissioner's review is:

> The agency head may not reject or modify any findings of fact as to issues of credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. [N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c)].

Moreover, the Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ's assessment of respondent's conduct in light of applicable law and prior decisional precedent, and agrees that the conduct proven in this proceeding amply warrants respondent's dismissal from tenured employment.

Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent is hereby dismissed from his tenured position with the Union City School District.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 12493-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 613-10/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DANNY CASTRO, BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF UNION, HUDSON COUNTY.

Susanne Lavelle, Esq., for petitioner Board of Education of the City of Union

Phillip Feintuch, Esq., for respondent Danny Castro (Feintuch, Porwich and Feintuch, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 2, 2011 Decided: March 18, 2011

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 29, 2010, the Board of Education of Union City, New Jersey, (Board, or District, or UCBE), filed tenure charges against respondent Danny Castro. On October 21, 2010, the Board certified the charges against the respondent. Mr. Castro was charged with excessive absenteeism from the 2001–2002 school year through the 2009–2010 school year. In addition, he was charged with unbecoming conduct—insurance fraud, namely, that there was "strong circumstantial evidence that another female (probably Maria Concepcion) identified herself as Leslie Ventura, Castro's spouse, exhibited an insurance card and obtained an examination, but that on the same date and place, Castro accompanied the fraudulent Leslie Ventura to the appointment and had full knowledge of the fraud and conspired to commit the fraud."

On October 26, 2010, the respondent filed a Certification in Opposition to Tenure Charges. On November 12, 2010, the matter was forwarded from the Department of Education to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed. A prehearing conference was held on November 29, 2010, at which time a discovery schedule and hearing dates were determined and an Order was issued. The matter was scheduled for hearing on January 25, and 26, 2011, and heard on those dates. The District served a subpoena on Leslie Ventura, the estranged wife of Mr. Castro, to testify at the hearing. Ms. Ventura ignored the subpoena, and on January 25, 2011, the attorney for the District applied to the Superior Court for an order enforcing the subpoena. Ms. Lavelle reported that the process server attempted to serve the order, but Ms. Ventura evaded service. I granted an application by the District to add an additional hearing date in order to give them an opportunity to enforce the Superior Court Order. However, I denied their application to stay the resumption of payment of salary to Mr. Castro after the expiration of 120 days from the date tenure charges were certified by the Board, because there was no proof presented that the respondent was responsible for Ms. Ventura's failure to appear at the hearing. The matter was continued to March 2, 2011.

The Board sent a letter prior to the last date of the hearing requesting that Mr. Castro's salary not be resumed at the end of the 120 days, because the respondent falsely claimed that he was going to be in Florida the week of February 14, 2011, and could not be present at the OAL. The District alleged that Mr. Castro was in fact in Union City during the week of February 14 and therefore he should be denied the resumption of pay. At the hearing I stated that I would rule on the District's application in the Initial Decision. On the date of the hearing, the District was unable to produce

Ms. Ventura. Ms. Lavelle stated that Ms. Ventura had evaded service and the Superior Court had issued a warrant for her arrest, but she had not been apprehended as of the date of the hearing.

At the conclusion of the District's case, the District moved for the admission into evidence of Exhibits 1 through 22, except for Exhibit 12. The respondent objected to the admission of Exhibit 11, based on the fact that there was no testimony that the document was valid. He also objected to Exhibits 13 and 14 for the same reason, and because there was no testimony as to what the documents meant and who they were from. The District countered that Exhibit 11 was being introduced into evidence not for the truth of the statements in the document, but to show that it memorialized the testimony of Ms. Pirro that she had a conversation with Ms. Ventura. Exhibit 13 was being offered solely to show that Ms. Ventura had responded to a request made by Ms. Pirro during a conversation with her to provide proof that she was out of the country on March 2, 2010. The District claimed that Exhibit 14 was being introduced for the same reason. At the hearing I stated that I would rule on the admission of these documents in my decision.

ISSUES

1. Did the actions of the respondent rise to the level of conduct unbecoming such that Mr. Castro should lose his tenured position?

2. Did Mr. Castro's history of absenteeism warrant removal from his tenured position?

3. What penalty, if any, should be imposed on the respondent?

FINDINGS OF FACT

A. The following facts have been stipulated by the parties: (See Joint Stipulation of Facts with Exhibits)

1. Danny Castro was hired by the UCBE on October 1, 2001, as an attendance officer.

2. Danny Castro achieved tenure in his position on October 1, 2002.

3. On June 3, 2002, Castro was suspended with pay as the result of an arrest in NYC. These charges were eventually dismissed.

4. On March 27, 2004, Danny Castro was suspended with pay as the result of an arrest in Union City. These charges were eventually dismissed.

5. From October 31, 2006, through June 30, 2007, Castro requested and was granted an unpaid leave of absence.

6. Danny Castro's wife's name is Leslie Ventura.

7. On March 2, 2010, Danny Castro and Leslie Ventura did not live together.

8. On March 2, 2010, Danny Castro had an appointment with Kirti Dave, O.D.

9. On March 2, 2010, Danny Castro had medical, dental, vision and prescription health coverage through his employer, UCBE.

10. From October 1, 2001, to the present, Leslie Ventura was Danny Castro's covered spouse on all of his Board-provided medical, health, dental and vision insurance.

B. The following are facts found as a result of the review of testimony and exhibits entered into evidence:

1. The respondent is a ten-month employee. He is entitled to ten sick days and two personal days per year.

2. In the 2001–2002 school year, Mr. Castro was absent a total of 18 days: 1 sick, 1 personal, and 16 due to suspension.

3. In June 2002 Mr. Castro was arrested and charged with assault (stabbing) and impersonating a police officer. These charges were dismissed and the record sealed.

4. In the 2002–2003 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 17 days: 2 personal, 9 sick, 1 bereavement, and 5 for marriage.

5. In the 2003–2004 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 70 days: 2 personal, 7 sick, and the remainder was a suspension with pay as a result of outstanding criminal charges.

6. In March 2004 Mr. Castro was arrested on charges of possession of a controlled dangerous substance. These charges were also dismissed.

7. For the 2004–2005 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 22 days: 2 personal, 5 for family illness, and 15 sick. This exceeded his sick-day allowance by 5 days.

8. Mr. Castro was docked 1 day for excessive absences during the 2004–2005 school year in the June 15 pay period. He was sent a letter by the superintendent of schools' office stating that he had exhausted his sick-day bank. The letter stated that he was to sign the letter and return it to the Board's office. Failure to do so could constitute insubordination and he could be subject to further disciplinary action. Mr. Castro never signed or returned the letter.

9. For the 2005–2006 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 16 days: 10 sick, 2 personal and 4 unpaid.

10. Mr. Castro was sent similar excessive-absence letters from the assistant superintendent, Gerald Caputo, on February 23, 2006, docking him one day's pay; on April 26, 2006, docking him two days' pay; and on May 10, 2006, docking him one day's pay.

11. Mr. Castro did not sign and return any of the letters sent by the assistant superintendent.

12. For the 2006–2007 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 11 days. He took 9 sick days and 2 personal days from September 22, to October 31, 2006. On October 4, 2006, Mr. Castro requested an unpaid leave of absence from October 31, 2006, until June 30, 2007, in order to attend to personal family matters. The leave was granted.

13. For the 2007–2008 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 15 days: 11 sick, 2 personal and 2 unpaid leave. He was over the allowed days off by 3 days.

14. On March 17, 2008, Mr. Caputo sent Mr. Castro a letter docking him a total of three days' pay for excessive absenteeism.[1] The respondent did not sign or return the letter to the superintendent's office.

15. For the 2008–2009 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 13 days: 2 personal and 11 sick.

16. On June 8, 2009, a letter was sent to Mr. Castro docking him one day for excessive absenteeism. Mr. Castro did not sign or return the letter.

17. For the 2009–2010 school year Mr. Castro was absent a total of 13 days: 2 personal and 11 sick.

18. Mr. Castro was not disciplined at the time he failed to return any of the excessive-absence letters from the assistant superintendent. However, there was nothing in the letters saying that he could not be disciplined at a later time.

19. While Mr. Castro was entitled by law to 10 sick days per year and could carry over sick days, employees were supposed to use those days for sickness only. They were encouraged to accumulate their sick days and come to work on a regular basis, because it benefitted both the student body and the District to have all employees present at their jobs so that the school system could run efficiently and no one had to cover another person's work.

20. On March 10, 2010, Mr. Castro, accompanied by a female posing as Leslie Ventura, went to the office of Dr. Dave Kirti or Kirti Dave to obtain an eye examination. Mr. Castro and his female companion filled out an

[1] On cross-examination it was pointed out that at the time of the March 17, 2008, letter, Mr. Castro had only been excessively absent 2 days, so he should have been docked two days' pay rather than three. He was absent again on March 25, 2008.

information sheet. Mr. Castro listed his address as 521 15th St., Union City, N.J.,[2] his date of birth as May 13, 1967, his telephone number as 201-616-2433 and his referral person as Robert Ruiz, who is a friend of Mr. Castro. The person posing as Ms. Ventura listed her telephone number as 201-616-2433, her address as 521 15th St., Union City, the referral person as Robert Ruiz, and her birthdate as July 18, 1975, which is Ms. Ventura's birthdate.

21. The person posing as Ms. Ventura used Mr. Castro's medical-insurance card to pay for the examination. Since the person was not a named insured under Mr. Castro's policy, she was not entitled to use the card.

22. At the time of the March examination, Ms. Ventura was in the Dominican Republic with Mr. Castro's daughter, Mia Castro.

23. During the week of February 14, 2011, Mr. Castro was not in Florida as he represented to the court that he would be.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

Excessive Absences

The respondent argued that he was not excessively absent. His major absences were the result of his two arrests, which were later dismissed, and he received his full salary for those absences. These absences should not be held against him, since the charges were eventually dropped. The other major absence occurred when he took an unpaid leave to handle family-related problems. Based on this argument Mr. Castro was only absent an excess of three days in the period from 2001, when he commenced employment, to June 2010.[3]

[2] This is the address that Mr. Castro had submitted to the Board of Education when he completed a change-of-address form.

The respondent also pointed out that while the letters docking him for excessive absenteeism said that he could be disciplined further if he did not sign and return the letters, in fact, he was never disciplined. Therefore, the District had waived its right to discipline the respondent for failing to return the signed letters. Further, the respondent pointed out that he was not charged with failure to sign and return copies of the letters. In addition, the respondent claimed that it was never brought to his attention that he could lose his job as a result of absenteeism. In support of this position, Mr. Castro asserted that he never was denied an increment as a result of absenteeism.

The District's position was that the leave days were to be used only when necessary and should be accumulated if possible. By Mr. Castro's taking all of his allotted sick days, it became necessary for other people to pick up the slack and this affected the operation of the school system. In addition, since he was not performing his job, when he was absent, the students he might have picked up to attend school would not be attending. The District argued that since Mr. Castro had been out for extended periods of time due to arrests and family leave, he should have been especially zealous about being on the job the rest of the time.

As for the fact that the District had not taken action against Mr. Castro when he failed to return the letters, the District claimed that the letters did not specify a date by which disciplinary action had to be taken. The District never waived its right to discipline the respondent, and the present tenure charges are an exercise of that right.

Insurance Fraud

[3] According to the respondent he was out for sickness, in excess of the allowable amount of 10 days per year, by three days. This is figured by taking the amount in excess of the allowable amount (8 days) and subtracting the extra sick days that were not used in a given year (5 days) and bringing them forward.

The respondent argued that the insurance-fraud charge relied solely upon what Ms. Ventura reported to Ms. Pirro, which was that someone other than she was examined by the optometrist using Mr. Castro's medical card on March 2, 2010. However, he asserts that there is no evidence that this in fact occurred. Since Ms. Ventura did not testify, there is no evidence as to what actually happened. Ms. Ventura could have been examined and used the medical card on March 2, 2010, or someone could have gotten a hold of the card and used it on the March date. The respondent urged that he only stipulated to the fact that he had an appointment with the doctor on that date, but he never went to the doctor. He had no need for an examination, because he has 20/20 vision. Further, there was no competent proof of when or if Ms. Ventura left the country and when she returned. The documents marked for identification by the District would lead one to speculate that she left the country on February 13, 2010, but the alleged incident occurred on March 2, 2010. In addition, the passport stamp that was submitted to corroborate that Ms. Ventura was in the Dominican Republic did not have any indication that it was from Ms. Ventura's passport. Ms. Ventura could have gone to the doctor on March 2, 2010, and then concocted this story. Since the District has the burden of proof and has not presented competent evidence that Mr. Castro committed insurance fraud, the District's case must fail.

The District argued that it had in fact proved its case. In the first place, it had been stipulated that Mr. Castro had an appointment with the eye doctor on March 2, 2010. Before Ms. Bustamante, the doctor's secretary, changed her story, she told Ms. Lavelle that Mr. Castro had asked her for an examination for his wife and him. Exhibits 19 and 20, submitted by the District from the optometrist, clearly showed that the persons who filled out the medical forms knew Mr. Castro's and Ms. Ventura's dates of birth, phone number, and address and the respondent's position with the Board of Education. In addition, both Mr. Castro and Ms. Ventura gave Robert Ruiz as the person who referred them to the doctor. Mr. Castro admitted on the stand that Mr. Ruiz was a friend of his. There were just too many coincidences to make Mr. Castro's story that he never went to Dr. Dave ring true.

While Ms. Bustamante claimed that she did not remember seeing Mr. Castro on March 2, 2010, she did testify that it was the procedure of the office for either her or the doctor to call the patient and his wife into the examining room based on the form that was completed by the patient. It is incredible that Mr. Castro would not know the identity of the woman sitting next to him at the doctor's office who was called in as his wife. In addition, Mr. Castro's statement that he did not know whether his daughter was in Santa Domingo with her mother in February–March 2010 did not make sense. He had testified that he took his daughter to or from school daily. How could he not know her whereabouts? Further, it would not make sense that Ms. Ventura would have gone to the doctor three months later, if she had been at the same doctor on March 2, 2010.

The District also pointed out that the letter from Ms. Ventura, the boarding passes and the passport stamp were submitted, as per Ms. Pirro's testimony, in response to her request to Ms. Ventura to supply proof that she had been out of the country at the time of the March 2, 2010, examination. Ms. Lavelle pointed out that, while the date of issue of the airline tickets may have been February 13, the boarding pass to Santa Domingo clearly showed February 28, which corroborates the passport stamp and boarding pass and confirms that Ms. Ventura was out of the country at the time of the doctor's appointment. Further, the District asserted that on September 9, 2010, when Mr. Castro was confronted at a meeting with Mr. Caputo,[4] assistant superintendent of schools for the District, about the insurance fraud, the respondent stated that if a mistake was made, it was by him, not by Maria Concepcion.[5] The District hypothesized that if a person was informed that someone else had used his medical card and supplied personal information such as his name, address, and phone number, that person would have gone to the police to report an identity theft. Yet Mr. Castro never reported the theft to the police or the insurance company. According to the District, Mr. Castro's story and explanation were entirely incredible.

[4] See Exhibit 17.
[5] Maria Concepcion was the person who allegedly posed as Mr. Castro's wife at the doctor's appointment. At first it was alleged that Ms. Concepcion was his girlfriend. Later it appeared that Ms. Concepcion was his mother.

ANALYSIS OF THE LAW

The tenure of education personnel is authorized by the Education Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to -18. According to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, no person under tenure of office, position, or employment shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. Tenure is a status in a particular position created by statute, not the agreement of the parties, therefore, it is a "'statutory right imposed upon a teacher's contractual employment' . . . [that] may not be forfeited or waived." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 77 (1982) (quoting Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 72 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508, 9 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1963), and citing Red Bank Educ. Ass'n v. Red Bank Bd. of Educ., 78 N.J. 122, 141 (1978)). While tenure was designed to protect employees "from dismissal 'for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons,'" Wright v. Board of Education of East Orange, 99 N.J. 112, 118 (1985) (citing Zimmerman, supra, 38 N.J. at 71), teachers (and other tenured employees) are responsible to act in a professional manner and to serve the welfare of the students in their care. Tenure charges can be sustained based on a history of unprofessional conduct (In re Riddick, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 345), or on a single incident, "if sufficiently flagrant." In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967) (citing Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd, 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944)).

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-33 provides tenure for school district attendance officers and states that once they have obtained tenure, they shall "not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, conduct unbecoming an officer, or other just cause."

One of the charges against Mr. Castro is excessive absenteeism. It has been found that excessive absenteeism can constitute "incapacity," "unbecoming conduct," and/or "just cause" and thus can warrant dismissal. See State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City v. Pellechio, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267. This is so even when the absenteeism occurs for legitimate reasons, such as long-term poor health. Id. at 270

(dismissal appropriate despite teacher's chronic asthma); State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Paterson v. Watson, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 362 (dismissal of custodian warranted despite the fact that many absences were attributable to his having to care for an ailing mother). The determination of what constitutes excessive absenteeism initially falls within the prerogative and discretionary authority of the local board of education. Pellechio, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267. There are no absolute standards. In re the Tenure Hearing of Meade-Stephens, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 550. However, the sheer number of a teacher's absences may warrant dismissal. Watson, supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 362. Teacher absenteeism is usually considered more grievous because it involves the close relationship between the teacher and the students and the importance of the teacher being regularly present in the classroom. In Passaic Board of Education v. Viani, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 76, 79, the Commissioner observed that a Board seeking to dismiss a tenured custodian must demonstrate the extent of harm caused by the custodian's performance on the provision of a thorough and efficient education in an adequately equipped, sanitary and secure facility.

In this case we have a hybrid situation. Mr. Castro is not a classroom teacher whose absence would have a direct impact on students. However, Mr. Castro is responsible for making sure that students attend class so that they can receive an education. Therefore, his extended absences could have an adverse effect on students' education. While it is true that Mr. Castro's excess absences are reduced greatly if one subtracts the days absent for suspensions, a family-related wedding and a leave of absence, this does not tell the whole story. One would think that after taking so much time for suspensions with pay and a leave of absence Mr. Castro would be especially careful to keep his allowable time off to a minimum. This was not the case. Instead, he not only took all the time off he was permitted to take, but exceeded that amount. There was no showing that Mr. Castro had a chronic health condition that caused him to be out sick on a regular basis. In addition, when Mr. Castro was excessively absent and his pay was docked, he ignored the letters that directed him to acknowledge receipt of the letters and to return them to the District. Rather than this being a sign that the District had waived its right to discipline Mr. Castro, I see it as an indication that the respondent was in effect thumbing his nose at the administration. In addition, as an attendance officer Mr. Castro's job was to make sure that students lived up to their responsibility to attend school on a regular basis. He certainly could not be seen as a role model where attendance was concerned.

The fact that Mr. Castro's increments were not withheld is not proof that the District had abandoned its right to take disciplinary action against Mr. Castro. There was testimony from Mr. Caputo that when Mr. Castro was present at his job he performed well. This might have been the basis for the pay increments. However, the letters docking his pay clearly stated that the District could choose to discipline Mr. Castro for his absences. Therefore, the respondent's argument that he was not informed that he could lose his job because of excessive absences is without merit.

The other charge lodged against Mr. Castro was "conduct unbecoming." This conduct was defined by the administrative law judge in In re Tenure Hearing of Motley, State-Operated School District of Newark, Essex County, EDU 7421-97, Initial Decision (May 5, 1999), aff'd as modified, Comm'r (August 4, 1999), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (December 1, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>:

> "Unbecoming conduct" is an elastic term broadly defined to include any conduct "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [government] employees and [confidence] in the operation of [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct "need not be predicated upon a violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct. Hartmann v. Police Dep't of Ridgewood, 258 N.J. Super. 22, 40 (App. Div. 1992). Despite the apparent vagueness of this standard, "it fairly and adequately conveys its meaning to all concerned." Laba v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 23 N.J. 364, 384 (1957). In the context of a school tenure case, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Tenure Hearing of Grossman, 127 N.J.

> Super. 13, 29 (App. Div. 1974), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974).

It is the obligation of the District to prove the tenure charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The Commissioner, in In re Tenure Hearing of Grundfest, School District of Madison, Morris County, EDU 5326-98, Comm'r (June 20, 2000), rev'g Initial Decision (March 29, 2000), aff'd, St. Bd. (November 1, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, outlined what a board of education had to prove in order to meet its burden in a tenure charge:

> Sustaining tenure charges for unbecoming conduct, however, is a very serious matter. The ramifications for respondent would be not only the loss of his tenured employment, but also the automatic referral of the matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible revocation of his teaching certificate, and the possible loss of his pension benefits. Since the penalty for respondent would be severe, it is the Board's responsibility and its burden to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence [the tenure charges against respondent].

The charge of conduct unbecoming in this matter involves insurance fraud. If we were to believe Mr. Castro's testimony, he made an appointment for an eye examination, but either did not go to the appointment or did not recall going there. In addition, at the time of the appointment on March 2, 2010, he did not know the whereabouts of his wife and child. Mr. Castro's rendition of the facts is incredible. While the respondent stipulated that he made an appointment to see the doctor, he claimed on the stand that he did not recall going to see the doctor and in fact had no need to see an eye doctor, since he had 20/20 eyesight. That contradicts his affirmative response to #13 of the request for admissions: "On March 2, 2010, Mr. Castro went to an appointment with an eye doctor by the name of Dave Kirti or Kirti Dave."[6] It also contradicts his affirmative response to the question: "On March 2, 2010, did you have an appointment with an eye doctor named Dave Kirti located at 4414 Bergenline Avenue, Union City?" Further, Mr. Castro answered "yes" to the question: "Did you present your medical insurance card to the doctor's staff at the time of your appointment?"[7] Therefore, it appears that at the time he answered the interrogatories and request for admissions, Mr. Castro did recall his going to the doctor's office on March 2, 2010. If he was at the doctor's office on that date, then he would have known the identity of the person who was called in with him as his wife and who filled out identical personal information on the medical information form. He certainly would have known if his estranged wife, Ms. Ventura, was the person with him at the appointment or if someone else was posing as his wife. Mr. Castro's testimony also flies in the face of Mr. Caputo's testimony and the contents of the letter from Mr. Caputo to Mr. Castro memorializing their meeting. According to Mr. Caputo's testimony, when he confronted Mr. Castro with the insurance-fraud allegations, Mr. Castro admitted that he went to the eye doctor on March 2, 2010, and explained that his "ex-wife" must have also gone to the doctor. When Mr. Caputo presented Mr. Castro with evidence that Ms. Ventura was out of the country at the time of the appointment and the Board suspected that his girlfriend, Maria Concepcion, posed as Leslie Ventura and used her insurance card, "Castro stated that if a mistake was made, it was made by him and not 'her.'" These statements were certainly not indicative of someone who did not go or did not remember going to the eye doctor on March 2, 2010, and did not know who went with him to the doctor's office on that date.

Mr. Castro's assertion that he did not know his daughter's and wife's whereabouts on March 2, 2010, is equally incredible. Mr. Castro claimed that he had no contact with his estranged wife because there were mutual non-contact orders issued by a judge. However, he also testified that he either picked up or dropped off his daughter at school during the week. Even if we assume that the child was off from school from February 28 through March 19, 2010, it seems entirely unlikely that his daughter would not have mentioned to her father during one of the rides to or from school that she was going away to a foreign country with her mother. In addition, in answer to interrogatory #13i, as to whether Mr. Castro had spoken to Ms. Ventura about the allegations that were the subject of this complaint, Mr. Castro said that he had spoken to her on the telephone. It is clear that Mr. Castro did have some form of communication with Ms. Ventura, and it is therefore entirely likely that he knew her whereabouts and that of their daughter on March 2, 2010.

[6] Exhibit 22.
[7] While the responses to the interrogatories and request for admissions were not signed by the respondent, there was no objection by his attorney to have the answers marked into evidence.

Where facts are contested, the trier of fact must assess and weigh the credibility of the witnesses for purposes of making factual findings as to the disputed facts. Credibility is the value that a finder of the facts gives to a witness's testimony. It requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963), cert. denied, Palermo v. United States, 377 U.S. 953, 84 S. Ct. 1625, 12 L. Ed. 2d 498 (1964). There is no mechanical formula for determining the truth, to the extent it can be discerned, and many factors may be considered and weighed. These include the demeanor of the witness and the manner of testifying, the interest a witness may have in the outcome, and the reasonableness and coherence of the testimony. Corroboration, knowledge, and common experience also play a role in assessing credibility. Dawson v. R.W. Vogel, Inc., CRT 4501-00, Initial Decision (April 15, 2002), adopted as modified, Dir. (Aug. 28, 2002) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. "Credible testimony" must proceed from the mouth of a credible witness and must be such as our common experience, knowledge, and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955); see also Gilson v. Gilson, 116 N.J. Eq. 556, 560 (E. & A. 1934). A fact finder "is free to weigh the evidence and to reject the testimony of a witness . . . when it is contrary to circumstances given in evidence or contains inherent improbabilities or contradictions which alone or in connection with other circumstances in evidence excite suspicion as to its truth." In re Estate of Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 521–22 (1950); see D'Amato by McPherson v. D'Amato, 305 N.J. Super. 109, 115 (App. Div. 1997). In other words, a trier of fact may reject testimony as "inherently incredible" and may also reject testimony when "it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience" or "overborne" by the testimony of other witnesses. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958). Similarly, "'[t]he interest, motive, bias, or prejudice of a witness may affect his credibility and justify the [trier of fact], whose province it is to pass upon the credibility of an interested witness, in disbelieving his testimony.'" State v. Salimone, 19 N.J. Super. 600, 608 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 10 N.J. 316 (1952) (citation omitted). The choice of rejecting the testimony of a witness, in whole or in part, rests with the trier and finder of the facts and must simply be a reasonable one. Renan Realty Corp. v. Dep't of Cmty. Affairs, 182 N.J. Super. 415, 421 (App. Div. 1981). A fact finder is expected to base decisions of credibility on his or her common sense, intuition, or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837, 93 S. Ct. 2357, 37 L. Ed. 2d 380 (1973). In an administrative proceeding, testimony may be disbelieved, but it may not be disregarded. Middletown Twp. v. Murdoch, 73 N.J. Super. 511 (App. Div. 1962).

In the present case, Mr. Castro's testimony could only be characterized as incredible. His statements on the stand that he either did not go to the doctor's office on March 2, 2010, even though he stipulated that he made an appointment for that date, or that he did not recall going to the doctor, fly in the face of his prior admissions, answers to interrogatories and statements to Mr. Caputo, which he now denies making. He has given no explanation as to why Mr. Caputo would make the statement on the stand and in writing in the September 14, 2010, letter,[8] that Mr. Castro had stated that he had gone to the eye doctor on March 2, 2010, and if a mistake was made about the insurance card it was made by him and not by Maria Concepcion. The respondent had an opportunity to discredit Mr. Caputo's testimony during cross-examination and show some type of prejudice or motive for the assistant superintendent to make such statements; he did not do so. My observation of Mr. Caputo on the stand was that he was credible and forthright in his responses and showed no personal animus toward the respondent.

[8] Exhibit 17.

The respondent has asserted that the District's case is based entirely on hearsay evidence allegedly submitted by Ms. Ventura and therefore the Board of Education has failed to meet its burden of proof. Judicial rules of evidence do not apply to administrative agency proceedings, except for rules of privileges or where required by law. N.J.R.E. 101(a)(3); DeBartolomeis v. Bd. of Review, 341 N.J. Super. 80, 82 (App. Div. 2001); N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(a); N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1(c). Hearsay is admissible subject to the "residuum rule," which mandates that the administrative decision cannot be predicated on hearsay alone. Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36 (1972).

> [A] fact-finding or legal determination cannot be based upon hearsay alone. Hearsay may be employed to corroborate competent proof, or competent proof may be supported or given added probative force by hearsay testimony. But in the final analysis for a court to sustain an administrative decision, which affects the substantial rights of a party, there must be a residuum of legal and competent evidence in the record to support it.
> [Id. at 51.]

The Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules governing administrative agency proceedings codify this doctrine by requiring that "some legally competent evidence must exist to support each ultimate finding of fact to an extent sufficient to provide assurances of reliability and to avoid the fact or appearance of arbitrariness." N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(b). In assessing hearsay evidence, it should be accorded "whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability." N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a).

I disagree with the respondent's position that the fraud charges are based entirely on hearsay evidence. In fact, Mr. Castro, by his own admission, in answers to interrogatories and requests to admit, stated that he was at the doctor's office on March 2, 2010. In addition, his statement to Mr. Caputo at the meeting in September 2010 the residuum rule to corroborate the fact that Ms. Ventura was not the person who was at the doctor's office on March 2, 2010. Admission of the passport stamp is more problematic. While there was testimony that it was supplied in response to a request from Ms. Pirro, there is no identifying information on the document. While, as Ms. Lavelle stated, it strained credibility to think that Ms. Pirro took someone else's passport, stamped with the exact date of entry into Santo Domingo as Ms. Ventura claimed, and submitted it as that of Ms. Ventura, I will exclude Exhibit 14 because it is not clearly identified as Ms. Ventura's passport. The other documents will be admitted into evidence under the residuum rule. They are not being used to prove the ultimate fact that Mr. Castro was at the doctor's office on March 2 and permitted someone other than his wife to use his insurance card, but they are being used as corroboration of the testimony and exhibits that clearly show that Mr. Castro was at the doctor's office and was accompanied by someone who posed as Leslie Ventura.

The District also made an application to have the court exclude seven days (representing the week of February 14, 2011) from the period of the permissible suspension without pay, because it alleges that Mr. Castro misrepresented to the court that he was going to be on vacation the week of February 14, 2011, and therefore could not appear at a hearing. The District argues that Mr. Castro did this in order to exceed the 120-day suspension without pay so the District would have to commence payment of salary to him. The respondent's testimony on this issue was evasive at best. He testified that he was unable to go on his vacation to Florida during the week of February 14 because he got sick on February 16. As Ms. Lavelle pointed out, the February 16 date was subsequent to the time that he was already supposed to be in Florida. Mr. Castro claimed, as proof of his illness, that he was in the emergency room at Christ Hospital on February 19, 2011, because he was experiencing chest pains.[9] However, this was on the Saturday following the Monday when he was supposed to be in Florida. In addition, Mr. Castro claimed that he did not go to Florida because of a respiratory infection, not heart problems.

[9] Mr. Castro referred to an Emergency Room report from Christ Hospital, but he never had it marked for identification or placed into evidence.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the Findings of Fact and reasoning outlined in the Arguments and Analysis of the Law above, I CONCLUDE that the District has sustained its burden of proving the tenure charges against the respondent.

In addition, I CONCLUDE that Exhibits 11 and 13 should be admitted into evidence.

I further CONCLUDE that the five-day period of February 14–18, 2011, should be excluded when counting the exhaustion of the 120 days following which the respondent would be placed back in pay status.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the tenure charges against Danny Castro be sustained and that the respondent be terminated from his position.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

could be considered an exception to the hearsay rule as an admission against interest and a statement by a party.

Determining the application of the residuum rule to the use of hearsay evidence first "requires identifying the 'ultimate finding of fact' that must be supported by a residuum of competent evidence." In re Tenure Hearing of Cowan, 224 N.J. Super. 737, 750 (App. Div. 1988) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml> (quoting Weston, supra, 60 N.J. at 52). In this case the "ultimate finding of fact" is whether Ms. Ventura was out of the country on the day in question. Deciding this fact will determine whether another woman posed as Ms. Ventura for an eye examination in March 2010. Under the residuum rule, the hearsay statements by Ms. Ventura and the documents that she submitted at the request of Ms. Pirro could be employed to corroborate competent evidence presented in the stipulation of facts, answers to interrogatories, requests to admit and statement by Mr. Castro to Mr. Caputo that Mr. Castro was at the doctor's office on March 2, 2010, and that he was accompanied by someone who posed as, but was not, his wife, since Ms. Ventura was out of the country at the time.

Mr. Castro objected to the introduction into evidence of Exhibit 11 (letter from Ms. Ventura), Exhibit 13 (airline tickets) and Exhibit 14 (passport stamp). While Mr. Castro could not confirm that the signature on the letter was that of Leslie Ventura, there was testimony from Ms. Pirro that she spoke to Ms. Ventura in August 2010 and that the information in the letter was a rehashing of what Ms. Ventura stated over the telephone to Ms. Pirro. The airline tickets and boarding passes were submitted in response to a request by Ms. Pirro to provide corroborating information. The names of Ms. Ventura and her daughter were clearly listed on the tickets and boarding pass. This information substantiated that Ms. Ventura was out of the country and could not have been present at the doctor's appointment on March 2, 2010. Since Mr. Castro admitted that he was at the doctor's office on that date and the evidence showed that someone filled out a medical information card with the address, telephone number, date of birth and insurance information of his wife and him, the airline information can be used under

PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF OCEAN CITY, CAPE MAY COUNTY, and KATHLEEN TAYLOR, SUPERINTENDENT.	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner alleged that her eighteen year old daughter, E.N., was not given state required physical education courses in high school, and demanded tutoring for E.N. as well as damages. The petition was not filed until after E.N. had already graduated from high school. The Board filed a motion for summary decision, contending that beginning with her freshman year E.N. had submitted medical documentation calling for the limiting of her participation in physical education. The Board further argued that E.N. and her mother had rejected various attempts to modify E.N.'s physical education program, and had advocated for E.N. to be exempt from the physical education requirement. An exemption was consequently noted as an accommodation in E.N.'s 504 Plan, which was signed by both E.N. and N.N.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: E.N. was excused from physical education classes all four years of high school due to a medical condition; E.N. graduated from high school in 2010, having satisfied the number of credits required for graduation; petitioner previously filed a due process claim, which was settled in 2009 and which settlement memorialized the physical education accommodation in E.N.'s 504 plan; a second due process petition, seeking various evaluations and approval for other special education services, was filed in January 2010 and did not directly challenge the exemption from physical education; the petitioner's current claims are barred by the principle of res judicata and the entire controversy doctrine; and the petition was filed well beyond the 90-day limit set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3 and is therefore untimely. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner found that petitioner's claims are barred 1) on multiple jurisdictional grounds, 2) on the basis of the doctrines of res judicata and equitable estoppel, and 3) because respondent's actions were not arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF OCEAN CITY, CAPE MAY COUNTY, and KATHLEEN TAYLOR, SUPERINTENDENT.	:	DECISION

After review of the record, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and petitioner's exceptions, the Commissioner concurs with Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the petition must be denied.

At the outset, petitioner has no standing to pursue a petition on behalf of E. N., who has reached the age of eighteen. Second, as ALJ Miller noted, the petition was filed beyond the time allowed in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Third, on May 24, 2009, petitioner signed off on a 504 plan for E.N. which expressly provided that E.N. might be exempted from Physical Education. She is consequently equitably estopped from challenging the exemption over a year after her consent, and months after the successful completion of her daughter's secondary education. Fourth, on April 9, 2009, a final decision was issued by ALJ Gorman of the OAL approving a settlement between the parties wherein they agreed to implement the above referenced 504 Plan. Thus, as explained in the Initial Decision, the doctrine of res judicata bars petitioner from re-litigating the issue.

Finally, under New Jersey school law the requirement that students take physical education classes is not absolute. The relevant statutes, N.J.S.A. 18A: 35-5 and 18A:35-7, provide that:

> Each board of education shall conduct as a part of the instruction in the public schools courses in health, safety and physical education, which courses shall be adapted to the ages and capabilities of the pupils in the several grades and departments . . . .
>
> (N.J.S.A. 18A:35-5) [Emphasis added.]
>
> Every pupil, except Kindergarten pupils, attending the public schools, insofar as he is physically fit and capable of doing so, as determined by the medical inspector [licensed physician], shall take such courses, which shall be a part of the curriculum prescribed for the several grades, . . . , and the standing of the pupil in connection therewith shall form a part of the requirements for promotion or graduation.

There is ample evidence in the record that during her high school years, E.N.'s physical capabilities were affected by a medical condition, which would prohibit her from participating in most physical education activities. Specifically, respondent received notes from E.N.'s doctor asking that she not participate in physical activities that involve her hands.

In response to the doctor's requests, respondent offered E.N. a modified physical education class – which petitioner and E.N. rejected. Respondent then offered E.N. the opportunity to remain in her regular physical education class but perform exercises not related to the regular class curriculum. Because petitioner and E.N. rejected this option, respondent agreed to a waiver of physical education for E.N.

The Commissioner cannot conclude that respondent's action in allowing the waiver was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The above-referenced statutes clearly recognize that not all students will have the capability to perform the physical education curriculum, and respondent explained that waivers are not uncommon where students have limiting medical conditions.

E.N. was allowed to and did graduate from respondent's high school without taking physical education courses. Petitioner offers no basis to support her suggestion that E.N.'s diploma is invalid.

Accordingly, respondent's motion for summary disposition is granted, and the petition is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On September 10, 2010, N.N. filed a due process action asserting that Ocean City High School (Ocean City or district) failed to provide E.N. with appropriate physical education instruction during E.N.'s fours years of high school at Ocean City. The claims date back to E.N.'s freshman year. N.N states the she never consented to her daughter being excused from physical education. N.N. seeks damages in the form of payment for yoga or dance classes for E.N.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the OAL on October 7, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13.

Respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss the petition. N.N. and E.N. (hereinafter referred to in singular as petitioner) filed opposition and oral argument was held on March 14, 2011.

BACKGROUND

The certification of Dr. Matthew Jamison, Principal of Ocean City High School, provides the pertinent background. It provides:

1. I am the Principal of Ocean City High School and I am making this Certification to supplement the moving papers previously filed in this matter with information regarding the medical information and deferrals associated with E.N.'s physical education class.

2. I have been Principal of Ocean City High School since January 2007, which was E.N.'s freshman year and am fully aware of the facts and circumstances of this matter.

3. E.N. had medical documentation that limited her participation in physical education (P.E.) beginning with her freshman year (SY 06-07). See Exhibit "A" attached to Jamison Certification.

4. E.N. had medical documentation that more explicitly limited her participation in P.E. in her sophomore year (SY 07-08). See Exhibit "B" attached to Jamison Certification.

5. Throughout E.N.'s four years of high school, P.E. class was an issue because of E.N.'s medical diagnoses of Reynard's Phenomenon.

6. The school nurse, guidance counselors and P.E. teachers attempted to modify E.N.'s P.E. program and were met with resistance from E.N. and her mother, N.N.

7. The first accommodation was an adaptive P.E. class: E.N. and N.N. objected and refused the ccommodation.

8. The second accommodation was within E.N.'s existing P.E. class but with alternative activities: E.N. and N.N. refused, citing that it would single out E.N. and increase her purported anxiety with school and her medical condition.

9. Through the first three and three quarters of E.N.'s high school career, E.N. and her mother advocated for E.N. to be exempt from the P.E. requirement and only take the health portion of the requirement, which she did not take. See Exhibit "C" attached to Jamison Certification.

10. The school nurse and counselors/administration agreed to the P.E. exemption as being in the best interest of E.N. It is noted that when students have complicating health matters that are documented, this accommodation is often made with parent/nurse/administrative consent.

11. This exemption is also noted as an accommodatin in E.N.'s 504 Plan. See Exhibit "D" attached to Jamison Certification.

12. In the spring of E.N.'s senior year, N.N. had reversed her position on the P.E. exemption (it is noted that E.N. was not in agreement with her mother). This was done verbally and in a convoluted manner.

13. I verbally instructed N.N. that she needed to put her request for E.N. to be enrolled in P.E. class in writing for many reasons, primarily because it was counter to the 504 Plan and her medical documentation.

14. N.N. never officially requested a change/denial of the agreed 504 accommodation.

FACTUAL SUMMARY

N.N. is the mother of E.N. E.N. is eighteen years old. E.N. resides with her mother. E.N. provided her mother with consent to pursue this action.

E.N. attended Ocean City High School from 2006 to 2010 when she graduated. E.N. was excused from physical education classes all four years due to her diagnosis of Reynard's Phenomenon. And she graduated from Ocean City High School having satisfied the amount of credits necessary for graduation. E.N. had excellent grades, in spite of her diagnosis. N.N. is presently attending Atlantic Cape Community College ACCC.

CONCLUSIONS

N.N. contends that E.N. was not properly excused from physical education dating back to 2006-2007 school year. Every board of education shall provide children with physical education courses adapted to the ages and capabilities of the pupils. N.J.S.A. 18A:35-5. Additional requirements or rules as to medical inspection of school children may be imposed. Id. A physical education program shall be a part of the curriculum prescribed for the several grades, and shall form a part of the requirements for promotion or graduation. N.J.S.A. 18A:35-7. Students must be is physically fit and capable of doing so, as determined by the district's medical inspector. N.J.S.A. 18A:40-1. Every board of education shall employ one or more physicians, licensed to practice medicine and surgery within the state, to be known as the medical inspector. Id.

One obvious purpose of requiring a medical examination by a licensed "medical inspector" is to prevent unqualified individuals from making medical decisions that impact children. Imagine if the gym teacher made the determination whether a child with kidney disease could participate in gym class. A licensed doctor is the appropriate school official to make significant medical decisions. Each district, therefore, is required to retain a medical inspector for such purpose.

This present case presents a reasonable deviation in the decision-making process mentioned above. In 2006 and 2007, E.N. presented a medical note from her treating physician requesting an accommodation. E.N.'s treating physician stated that she could not fully participate in gym class due to Reynard's Phenomenon. The district accepted the medical notes from petitioner's doctor, in lieu of sending E.N. to its own medical inspector. And it was reasonable to do so. E.N.'s medical history was well known by the district. Her medical problems with Reynard's Phenomenon dated back to December 2005. (Petitioner's exhibits P-12A).

This was not a maneuver by E.N. to avoid participation in a core requirement. Nor would it have been prudent to force E.N. to participate in active physical education due to her phycial disability. And finally, there was no serious medcial decision facing the district. The medical decision was made by a medical professional, albeit E.N.'s doctor. The districted accepted E.N.'s request to be excluded from active physical education classes.

The district offered an accommodation, mindful of a pyhical disability. The district suggested E.N. participate in adaptive programs or alternative activities. (Cert. of Jamison). E.N. and N.N. rejected these proposals according to Jamison. N.N.

requested that her daughter be exempted from physical education and only participate in the health portion. Id. The district acquiesced and agreed with N.N. E.N. was exempted from physical education. The district could have challenged E.N.'s refusal to participate in a modified program but It did not.

In 2009, petitioner filed a due process petition. The matter was settled on April 9, 2009. (Cert. of Stanton, exhibits A-C). The settlement codified the physical education accommodation in E.N.'s 504 plan. (Cert. of Stanton, exhibits C.) The accommodation was incorporated for E.N.'s 11th grade curriculum. Cert. of Jamison exhibit C. The 504 plan was signed by both E.N. and N.N and approved by Hon. Bruce M. Gorman, ALJ on April 9, 2009. (EDU 4063-09). The 504 plan provides that E.N [is] was exempted from physical education class but must pass the health component. (Cert. of Stanton, exhibits C; Cert. of Jamison, exhibit D).

On January 21, 2010, petitioner filed another due process petition seeking various evaluations and approval for other special education services. E.N.'s exemption from physical education that previously approved by all parties and an ALJ in 2009, was not directly challenged as part of this new action. (Cert. of Stanton, exhibits D.). This case was heard to it conclusion and an Initial Decision issued on Macrch 31, 2010 (EDU 448-10).

RES JUDICATA

Res judicata is a legal principle this is applied when "an issue has been definitely decided by judicial decision." Black's Law Dictionary (Ninth Edition 2009). A claim is barred under res judicata when: (1) the prior judgment is final and valid, (2) the parties in the prior action are identical to or in privity with the parties in the pending action, and (3) the claim in the later action relates to the same occurrence or transaction as the earlier action. Reid v. Reid, 310 N.J. Super. 12 (App. Div. 1998).

In the case at hand 1) a final judgment (settlement in EDS 4063-09) was reached regarding E.N.'s 504 plan and the plan excluded E.N. from physical education; 2) petitioner was a party to that action; and 3) the claims herein are the same as those previously presented (or cognizable) and addressed by the settlement. Here petitioner is trying to re-litigate a prior settlement. I CONCLUDE that petitioner's new claims are barred under the principle of res judicata.

ENTIRE CONTROVERSY

The entire controversy doctrine holds that all aspects of a controversy between the same parties should be litigated in a single action. R. 4:30A. The goal is to avoid waste, duplication, inefficiency, and piecemeal decisions resulting in protracted and expensive litigation. Here petitioner should have filed all of her claims or any other cognizable claims in one proceeding. Again the parties and the source of the controversy, and therefore all of the claims, were cognizable dating back to the 2006-2007. This is when E.N. was first excluded from physical education. Having failed to join the present claims in pettioner's prior actions, the entire controversy doctrine has been violated. I so CONCLUDE.

STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS

Petitoner had ninety days from the action taken to petition for relief. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. Here E.N. was excluded from physical education in 2006-2007. This is the period of time when the action accrued. I CONCLUDE the time period to dispute this action has substantially passed. Moreover, E.N. graduated and is now attending college.

ORDER

Based upon the forgoing, the Ocean City Board of Education's Motion for Summary Decision is GRANTED. The action filed by petitioner is DISMISSED based upon the principles of res judicata, Entire Controversy doctrine, and the Statute of Limitations.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

CATHERINE JACOBS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged her non-renewal as a teacher of English, claiming that her non-renewal was a violation of her tenure and seniority rights. Petitioner had been employed as a long term substitute for the 2005-2006 school year and had been under contract as an English teacher for each school year from 2006-2007 to 2009-2010; petitioner, however, did not teach at all during the 2008-2009 school year, when she was on a combination of 12 days of paid leave at the beginning of the year and unpaid leave for the remainder of the school year. She was additionally absent on a combination of paid and unpaid leave from March 26 to May 31, 2007. Petitioner argued that her active teaching time between September 2005 and June 2010 provided respondent with sufficient opportunity to evaluate her performance, and tenure should be granted. Respondent Board asserts that petitioner had not acquired tenure in her employment with the Hamilton Township school district, and filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: petitioner was employed as a long term substitute during the 2005-2006 school year, and therefore falls under the tenure calculation exception of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1; a brief period of sick leave, such as petitioner's leave of absence for the nine weeks in 2007, does not deprive a Board of Education of the opportunity to evaluate a teacher's performance; and petitioner's paid and unpaid leave of absence for the entire 2008-2009 academic year precludes application of that year towards tenure as petitioner provided no services to respondent during this period. The ALJ concluded that petitioner had not completed three consecutive calendar years, nor three consecutive academic years, nor the equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years – any one of which is necessary under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 for the acquisition of tenure; accordingly, the ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Acting Deputy Commissioner – to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 – found that summary decision is appropriately granted to the respondent Board, as she agreed with the ALJ's conclusion that the petitioner had not acquired tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision and the petition was dismissed.

CATHERINE JACOBS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAMILTON, MERCER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed by the Acting Deputy Commissioner to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33. Petitioner's exceptions – filed in accordance with the directives of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Acting Deputy Commissioner in reaching her determination herein. The Board did not file reply exceptions.[1]

On exception, petitioner maintains that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erred in determining that she was not entitled to receive tenure acquisition credit for the 2008-09 school year. Citing Kletzkin v. Board of Education of the Borough of Spotswood, Middlesex County, 136 N.J. 275 (1994), she points out that the tenure statute is remedial in nature and should be liberally construed. Petitioner claims that the purpose of the probationary period a teacher must serve prior to the acquisition of tenure pursuant to N.J. S.A. 18A:28-5 is to allow a board of education adequate time to observe, assess, and evaluate the teacher's performance. Here, she avers:

[1] It is noted that on April 27, 2011, counsel for the Board sent a fax – addressed to Judge Schuster but transmitted to the agency's fax machine – requesting an extension to file a response. Counsel's request was not submitted until 23 days after the agency's receipt of petitioner's exceptions, way in excess of the regulatory deadline – pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – for the filing of reply exceptions; provided no reason for the untimely request; and did not indicate the length of additional time sought. Given the fact that the Commissioner's decision in this matter is due on or before May 6, 2011, counsel's request was denied.

> during five sequential contracts of employment, Petitioner provided Respondent with 27 months and 25 days of "active duty".... Her performance during that time resulted in Respondent's offering yet another sequential contract of employment for the 2010-2011 school year. Thus, this case presents a long-time employee who has provided service to the Respondent of sufficient extent to ensure adequate – and positive – assessment who now, by virtue of a Board-approved maternity leave is left with no more seniority or security than a new teacher on her first day. Remedial legislation should not be interpreted in a way which effectuates such an inequitable result. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 3)

Moreover, in denying petitioner tenure credit for the 2008-09 school year, notwithstanding that she had a contract of employment for this year, petitioner contends that the ALJ failed to recognize that, pursuant to such contract, she was entitled to twelve sick and personal days which she utilized prior to being placed on an unpaid leave for the remainder of the year. Although recognizing that an extensive unpaid leave may not be credited for tenure purposes, petitioner contends that she is entitled to credit for any time during which she was contractually entitled to be paid. A holding which finds that the use of collectively bargained-for contractual sick days is excluded from tenure calculation, she charges, contravenes the Court's finding in Kletzkin, supra, that continuous employment exists notwithstanding the mere occasional absence of a teacher by reason of illness or excuse. As such, petitioner maintains that she should be credited with twelve days of tenure acquisition credit during the 2008-09 school year and, therefore, deemed to have acquired tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c). (Id. at 4)

Upon full review and consideration, the Acting Deputy Commissioner finds that summary decision is appropriately granted to the Board as she agrees with the ALJ's conclusion that petitioner has not acquired tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In so determining, the

Acting Deputy Commissioner is cognizant that tenure is a statutory right[2] specifically conditioned on a teacher's full satisfaction of precise conditions articulated in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, which – in pertinent part – specifies:

> The services of all teaching staff members employed in the positions of teacher...shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and they shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, or conduct unbecoming such a teaching staff member or other just cause... after employment in such district or by such board for:
>
> (a) Three consecutive calendar years, or any shorter period which may be fixed by the employing board for such purpose; or
>
> (b) Three consecutive academic years[3], together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year; or
>
> (c) The equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years.
> (Emphasis added)

There is no assertion or evidence in the record that petitioner claims entitlement to tenure based on (a) above. In order to satisfy (b) petitioner would have to have been employed for three consecutive academic years. As the Acting Deputy Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner's service as a long term substitute during the 2005-06 school year is clearly precluded from the calculation of tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1, and further agrees with the ALJ's rejection – for the reasons presented on pages 3-4 of his decision – of petitioner's attempt to categorize this service year as anything other than "substitute" service, petitioner cannot claim tenure entitlement pursuant to this subsection. In order to satisfy (c) – the final alternative to Even assuming, arguendo, a service history most favorable to petitioner, as correctly recognized by the ALJ on page 5 of his decision, petitioner did not satisfy the minimum service requirement of this provision so as to allow acquisition of tenure. In so finding, the Acting Deputy Commissioner is compelled to reject out of hand petitioner's exception argument that the twelve days of paid sick and personal leave time she utilized in the 2008-09 academic year prior to her unpaid leave for the remainder of the year should be counted for tenure acquisition. As was made clear by the Court in Kletzkin, supra, "[a] teacher who performs services under a contract for the year is employed for purposes of the statute." (at 279) As recognized by the ALJ, petitioner "provided no services to respondent" during this academic year. (Initial Decision at 4) Consequently, the Acting Deputy Commissioner finds and concludes that because petitioner has failed to satisfy any of the alternative statutory requisites for the acquisition of tenure, she has not acquired tenure status pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

Record Closed: March 21, 2011 Decided: March 22, 2011

BEFORE JOHN SCHUSTER III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter, Catherine Jacobs (petitioner) brings an action by way of verified petition before the Commissioner of Education challenging her non-renewal of employment from the Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton, Mercer County (respondent) claiming her non-renewal was a violation of her tenure and seniority rights. The verified petition was filed with the State Board of Education on July 28, 2010. Respondent filed an answer and counter claim on August 23, 2010. The counter claim seeks an order from the Commissioner of Education holding petitioner has not acquired tenure in her employment with the respondent. This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on September 10, 2010 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-t o -13. Subsequently cross motions for summary decision have been filed by the parties.

FINDINGS OF FACT

- September 1, 2005 to June 30, 2006, petitioner was employed by respondent as a long term substitute.

- September 1, 2006 to June 30, 2007, petitioner was employed by respondent as a English teacher and she served in that position for the full academic year except she was on a combination of paid and unpaid leave from March 26, 2007 to May 31, 2007.

- From September 1, 2007 to June 30, 2008, petitioner was employed by respondent as an English teacher.

- From September 1, 2008 to September 12, 2008, petitioner was on paid leave.

- From September 13, 2008 to June 30, 2009, petitioner was on unpaid leave.

- From September 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010, petitioner was employed by respondent as an English teacher.

- Petitioner was not employed by respondent after June 30, 2010.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Petitioner argues that the 2005-2006 academic year should count towards the acquisition of tenure rights because even though the contract of employment between the parties characterized petitioner as a long term substitute, she did not teach the same subject as the teacher she replaced. Petitioner also argues that when the absent teacher returned to her duties, petitioner was retained as a regular member of the teaching staff. Petitioner also argues that her nine weeks of leave during the 2006-2007 academic year should not count against her tenure calculation. Petitioner's position is when you calculate all the time between September 2005 and June 2010 that petitioner was actively performing teaching duties respondent had sufficient time to evaluate her performance and tenure should be granted.

Respondent counters that petitioner's long term substitute position in the 2005-2006 academic year is not a position that counts towards tenure. It also argues that at least some, if not all, of petitioner's leave of absence during the 2006-2007 academic year should not count toward tenure because petitioner was not working during that period and therefore could not be observed by respondent. Respondent also argues that the 2008-2009 absence of petitioner from her teaching position should not count toward tenure because she did not work at all during that entire academic year.

The parties entered into a contract for the 2005-2006 academic year. That contract provided that petitioner would serve as a "long time substitute English". That contract also provided "you are replacing an employee who is on leave of absence and who may be returning to his/her position at the expiration of this contract. This position is non-tenurial and carries no seniority eligibility. You will be assigned to the Substitute Teacher List if no position is available at the expiration of this contract." Petitioner was hired as a substitute replacing Angela Mazza who taught Spanish. Even though petitioner was hired to teach English, she still replaced Ms. Mazza. It is not uncommon for school districts to regularly move teachers between assignments as is the district's prerogative for the operation of an efficient educational system. There is no requirement that a replacing teacher must teach the same subject as the teacher on leave. The tenure statute contains an exception for temporary employees. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1. However that exception is limited to employees hired to take the place of an absent teacher. "The courts are not free to expand that exception by judicial fiat." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Ed., 90 N.J. 63, 77 (1982). Petitioner is asked the expansion of that exception by interpreting the statute to mean that the long term substitute is required to teach the same courses as the teacher on leave. The statute as written does not restrict a school district from reassigning teachers for legitimate purposes but only provides that the exception to the tenure statute is for temporary employees who take the place of a teacher on leave. In this case Ms. Mazza was on leave for two years, from September 1, 2005 to June 30, 2007. Ms. Mazza returned to her former position on September 1, 2007. With respect to petitioner's argument that tenure should be applied to her position during the 2005-2006 academic year because when the absent teacher returned to her position, petitioner was retained as an English teacher. Actually petitioner was given a full-time position commencing on September 1, 2006 the year before Ms. Mazza returned from her leave of absence. That year then became her first teaching position which qualified her for tenure and seniority rights.

With respect to respondent's position that petitioner's leave of absence for the nine weeks between March 26 and May 31, 2007, should not count towards her tenure calculation, I CONCLUDE that a brief period of sick leave does not deprive a Board of Education of the opportunity to evaluate a teacher's performance. See Kletzkin v. Board of Ed. of Boro of Spotswood, 136 N.J. 275 (1994).

With respect to the 2008-2009 academic year, petitioner was on paid leave for twelve days and unpaid leave for the remainder of the year. She did not provide any teaching services during that year. I CONCLUDE that year should not be applied towards her tenure and seniority rights as she provided no services to respondent. I FIND that petitioner did provide services during the 2009-2010 academic school year as she was employed by respondent and performed the duties of an English teacher during that year.

Tenure is acquired by working one of three ways set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. They are:

> (a) Three consecutive calendar years, or any shorter period which may be fixed by the employing Board for such purpose.
>
> (b) Three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year.
> (c) The equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years.

Even though petitioner was employed for the 2005-2006 academic year, she was employed as a long term substitute and therefore falls under the tenure calculation exception of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1. Her first year of employment for tenure and seniority purposes was the 2006-2007 academic year and that continued in the 2007-2008 academic year. Petitioner did not work in the 2008-2009 academic year and therefore that year did not qualify for tenure and seniority purposes. She resumed her employment on September 1, 2009 and continued until June 30, 2010. Consequently for purposes of acquiring tenure the calculations of petitioner's teaching duties are for the periods September 2006 to June 2008 and September 2009 to June 2010. Therefore, petitioner has not had three consecutive calendar years nor three consecutive academic years nor the equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years. At best petitioner has had three academic years within a period of four consecutive academic years but not more than that amount as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(c).

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not acquired tenure and seniority rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

ORDER

I therefore ORDER petitioner's verified petition be DISMISSED and respondent's counter claim declaring that respondent has not acquired tenure be GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

RAY WATERS AND THE HORACE MANN INSURANCE COMPANY,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF TOMS RIVER, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner Ray Waters initially sought a defense and indemnification from the Board under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6 when he was named in a Superior Court lawsuit brought by a former student advancing certain allegations against petitioner while he was employed as an art teacher in the Toms River School District. When the Board determined not to provide a defense, the Horace Mann Insurance Company (Company) provided defense counsel to Waters under a policy held by the New Jersey Education Association and Waters subsequently entered into a settlement agreement which resulted in the lawsuit being dismissed as to all claims against Waters. In the instant matter, petitioners sought reimbursement from the respondent Board for costs incurred in defending petitioner Waters. The Board contended that Waters cannot be indemnified because he suffered no loss, and that it has no obligation to reimburse an insurance company for defending an employee.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that : the intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6 was to defray the employee's expenses; the subrogation clause in the insurance policy clearly states that the Company shall be subrogated to all the Insured's rights of recovery against any person or organization; petitioners' contention that the statute does not require an employee to personally go out of pocket to claim indemnification, and that it is sufficient that Waters petitioned for reimbursement, is in line with the Appellate Division's holdings in Sekuler v. Montgomery Township Board of Education, A-000091-96T1 (App. Div. May 8, 1997) certif. denied, 151 N.J. 464 (1997); and the interpretation urged by the Board is overly mechanistic and not within the statute or existing case law. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the petitioners' request for relief and ordered the respondent Board to reimburse petitioners for all costs and fees expended on behalf of Ray Waters in connection with the defense and settlement of the Superior Court lawsuit.

Upon a thorough and independent review, the Commissioner concurred that summary decision is appropriately granted to petitioners, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Exceptions of the Board and petitioners' reply thereto – filed in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

The Board's exceptions replicate its arguments advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. As it is determined that such arguments were fully considered and addressed in the Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon full consideration and review, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that the law applied to the undisputed facts in this matter clearly dictates that summary decision is appropriately granted to petitioner.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons clearly presented therein. The Board is hereby directed to

Record Closed: March 16, 2011 Decided: April 4, 2011

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, Acting Director and Chief ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners Ray Waters and The Horace Mann Insurance Company seek reimbursement from the Toms River Public Schools Board of Education (respondent, or the Board) for costs incurred in defending Waters in a Superior Court lawsuit.

Respondent filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. The respondent contends that it has no obligation to reimburse an insurance company for defending an employee.

Petitioners filed with the Commissioner of the Department of Education (the Department) on March 24, 2010. Following respondent's reply, which was received on April 12, 2010, the Department transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on April 30, 2010. Following a conference call on July 27, 2010, it was agreed that the case would proceed on summary decision. Petitioners' brief responding to the original motion to dismiss was received at the OAL on October 4, 2010, and respondent's reply was received on October 28, 2010. By letter dated November 10, 2010, petitioners advised that they did not choose to reply to the October 28, 2010, letter brief. The record was closed on November 11, 2010. On March 3, 2011, the file was transferred from Administrative Law Judge Israel Dubin to the undersigned, pending Judge Dubin's retirement. The record was reopened by letter dated March 3, 2011, requesting additional information concerning the insurance policy. The last response having been received on March 16, 2011, the record closed on that date.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

C.D. was a student at Toms River High School North, where Waters was an art teacher. In 2003, the student was placed in Waters' honors art class. In a lawsuit filed in Superior Court (Respondent's Brief, Exhibit A), the student alleged that following his placement in the class, Waters made inappropriate and unwelcome sexual suggestions and advancements toward him, including but not limited to asking him to dinner, offering to have him move in with Waters and questioning his virginity. The student further alleged that during a class trip, Waters made other inappropriate comments and suggestions. The student left school for a while, then returned, and according to the complaint, faced harassment and humiliation from other students over rumors circulating as a result of the prior year's incidents. C.D.'s lawsuit named not only Waters but also the Board of Education, high school principal John Coleman and schools superintendent Michael J. Ritacco, among others, alleging negligent supervision and violation of the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Statute. He sought damages.

The law firm of Gilmore & Monahan, P.A., represented the Board. By letter dated April 23, 2007, Michael B. Berman, Esq., on behalf of Waters, sought a defense and indemnification from the Board under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6. When the Board determined not to provide a defense, the Horace Mann Insurance Company provided defense counsel to Waters under a policy held by the New Jersey Education Association. (P-2.) The policy (P-3) provides under Section VIII(K), entitled "Subrogation," as follows:

> In the event of any payment under this contract, the Company shall be subrogated to all the Insured's rights of recovery therefore against any person or organization and the Insured shall execute and deliver instruments and papers and do whatever else is necessary to secure such rights. The Insured shall do nothing after loss to prejudice such rights.

On November 20, 2009, Superior Court Judge Craig L. Wellerson granted summary judgment for the Board, ordering that the complaint and any cross-claims against the Board, Coleman and Ritacco be dismissed with prejudice. Waters entered a separate settlement agreement resulting in the lawsuit being dismissed as to all claims against Waters. On February 15, 2010, the Board received correspondence from Waters' attorney requesting attorney's fees and costs in the amount of $59,023.82, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6. By letter dated March 24, 2010 (Respondent's Brief, Exhibit D), the Board refused to provide indemnification, citing Wellerson's order and the fact that an insurance policy and not Waters himself had paid the costs and fees associated with the matter.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

For purposes of determining whether a matter is appropriate for summary decision, an adjudicator should deny a summary-decision motion only where the party opposing the motion has come forward with evidence that creates a "genuine issue as to any material fact challenged." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995). On a motion for summary decision the court must grant all the favorable inferences to the non-movant. Id. at 536. The inquiry is "'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to [a fact finder] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law.'" Liberty Surplus Ins. Corp. v. Nowell Amoroso, P.A., 189 N.J. 436, 446 (2007); Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 536.

Although the Board's initial response to the petition repeated the argument that Wellerson's order included Waters' cross-claim against the Board, the parties did not address this argument in their cross-motions for summary decision. Therefore, this argument, which might otherwise have required a return to the Superior Court for clarification of what exactly Wellerson ordered, has been treated as abandoned. This leaves no factual issues for determination. Rather, the parties disagree as to what the law requires in the present instance, rendering the matter appropriate for summary decision.

While the Board of Education acknowledges the existence of a prior decision by the Commissioner of Education allowing reimbursement of defense fees to an insurance company that provided counsel to a teacher in a civil law suit, Lonky v. Board of Education of Bayonne, EDU 07205-07, Final Decision (July 7, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the Board contends that it does not apply here, because there is no reimbursement agreement between Waters and the Horace Mann Insurance Company. The Board relies upon Meisenbacher v. Board of Education of Newark, 1 N.J.A.R. 162 (1980), for the dual propositions that Waters cannot be indemnified because he suffered no loss, and that the insurance company has no rights against the Board because it is not a Board employee. Meisenbacher was counsel for a Newark schools employee, Ray James, in a successful defense of an assault claim. Meisenbacher then petitioned for his legal fees and costs of defense, and the ALJ and Commissioner concluded that Meisenbacher lacked standing to apply for payment under the statute. The ALJ stated "most emphatically" that James was free to apply for reimbursement, from which he could then pay his counsel.

The petitioners contend that the statute does not require an employee to personally go out of pocket to claim indemnification; it is sufficient that Waters has petitioned for reimbursement.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6 states in pertinent part:

> Whenever any civil or administrative action or other legal proceeding has been or shall be brought against any person holding any . . . employment under the jurisdiction of any board of education . . . for any act or omission arising out of and in the course of the performance of the duties of such . . . employment . . . , the board shall defray all costs of defending such action, including reasonable counsel fees and expenses, together with costs of appeal, if any, and shall save harmless and protect such person from any financial loss resulting therefrom.

Analyzing the statute, the Commissioner of Education in Lonky, supra, EDU 07205-07, Final Decision (July 7, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, stated:

> By its very terms, central to qualifying for protection afforded under this statute is that the conduct triggering the legal action against him or her must have 1) arisen out of the performance of his/her duties, and 2) occurred in the course of performing those duties. In the context of the defense of a civil action, the outcome of the litigation is irrelevant, the statute protects both successful and unsuccessful litigants as long as the above two criteria are satisfied.

Petitioners also cite an unpublished Appellate Division decision, Sekuler v. Montgomery Township Board of Education, A-000091-96T1 (App. Div. May 8, 1997) (attached), certif. denied, 151 N.J. 464 (1997), involving N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1, reimbursement for legal expenses upon a favorable final disposition in a criminal proceeding. Sekuler had paid some out-of-pocket legal expenses prior to the insurance policy's provision of defense coverage, but had not sought reimbursement directly from his employer. The panel found sufficient that a demand for the full amount of legal expenses paid by Sekuler had been filed by counsel otherwise supplied through the New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) policy.

> While Sekuler has not personally incurred the cost of his defense, the expenses and costs have been defrayed by the NJEA to whom he has a reimbursement obligation. We consider it too literal a reading of the statutory provision to > require that the payment be first made from plaintiff's own pocket before he was entitled to reimbursement. To be sure, the NJEA could have established a mechanism to provide that monies be disbursed directly to the attorney from Sekuler to satisfy the literal language of the statute if that were necessary.

> [Sekuler, supra, A-000091-96T1 (App. Div. May 8, 1997), at 5.]

The language of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6 makes clear that indemnification extends to civil settlements that release funds but contain no admission of guilt. No one has argued that Waters was not going about his duties as an art teacher when the events that gave rise to the allegations occurred. While Waters has not gone out of pocket for the expenses for which he now seeks reimbursement, in the face of the Board's refusal to provide a defense, Waters was faced with four choices: raise the money himself; persuade a defense counsel to take the case and cover the upfront costs in hopes of indemnification; forgo hiring counsel to provide a defense; or draw upon the insurance policy.

As a member of the NJEA and an employee of a school board, Waters was an insured under the policy, and the subrogation clause states clearly that "the Company shall be subrogated to all the Insured's rights of recovery therefore against any person or organization and the Insured shall execute and deliver instruments and papers and do whatever else is necessary to secure such rights." (P-3.) Waters signed the recovery petition at issue here on March 19, 2010, and is the first named petitioner in the instant matter. The intent of the statute was to defray the employee's expenses, and the Appellate Division decision in Sekuler essentially treats the insurance policy as a financial mechanism through which employees can raise the funds for otherwise potentially ruinous defense costs. This is consistent with Meisenbacher, which determined that the law firm alone had no standing under the statute, but pointed out that the teacher himself was entitled to payment, and the client's right to recover defense costs was intact. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the interpretation urged by the Board is overly mechanistic and not within the statute and existing case law.

ORDER

The petitioners' request for relief is GRANTED and respondent is hereby ORDERED to reimburse petitioners for all costs and fees expended on behalf of Ray Waters in connection with the defense and settlement of the lawsuit.

PAUL SEKULER and WILLS, O'NEILL & MELLK,

Plaintiffs-Appellants,

v.

MONTGOMERY TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Defendant-Respondent.

Submitted: April 22, 1997 Decided: MAY 8 1997

Before Judges Dreier, D'Annunzio and Newman.

On appeal from Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Somerset County.

Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys for appellants (Arnold M. Mellk, of counsel and on the brief).

Carroll & Weiss, attorneys for respondent
(David W. Carroll, of counsel and on the brief).

PER CURIAM

Plaintiffs, Paul Sekuler and his attorneys, Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, appeal from the dismissal of their complaint in lieu of prerogative writs. That complaint sought to direct defendant, Montgomery Township Board of Education, to pay Sekuler's legal fees incurred as a result of his successful defense of charges made against him for an alleged sexual assault upon a female seventh-grade student. The girl claimed that Sekuler had fondled her breast in an office storage area just before homeroom began and that he later whispered to her that she should not tell anyone what had happened. The girl reported the incident to the school nurse. Sekuler consistently and steadfastedly denied the charge, and the State never adduced any evidence to corroborate it.

Sekuler, however, was immediately suspended, and since he was a non-tenured teacher, his employment contract was not renewed. The indictment for second-degree sexual assault was dismissed without prejudice when serious questions arose concerning the student's credibility and when she refused to cooperate with the prosecution. On an appeal to this court, we were satisfied that the defendant was entitled to a dismissal with prejudice as well as to an expungement of his arrest record pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:52-6. State v. Sekular[1], No. A-2652-91T3, No. A-5335-91T3 (App. Div. May 5, 1993).

Plaintiffs then filed this complaint to be reimbursed the expenses of Sekuler's legal defense. On cross-motions for summary judgment, the motion judge granted defendant's motion and denied that of plaintiffs. In so doing, she did not reach the issue of whether or not the criminal charges against Sekuler "arose out of" his duties as a teacher within the meaning of the reimbursement statute. The motion judge did, however, rule that plaintiffs were not entitled to be reimbursed under N.J.S.A.

[1] This Appellate Division opinion incorrectly identifies Paul Sekuler as Paul Sekular.

18A:16-6.1 because Sekuler had not incurred any expense for legal services in the defense of the criminal action. The motion judge considered that the statute was intended to insure that the accused employee who received a favorable disposition of the criminal charge should not suffer financial loss as a result of the charge, but that the statute did not intend to extend financial coverage to other third parties who paid for the legal fees and costs incurred in the accused employee's defense to the charge. The motion judge concluded that the intent of the statute was not to provide third-party reimbursement through an employee who has already received a defense pursuant to the terms of the union's collective bargaining agreement at no expense to himself and has, thus, not suffered any financial loss in his defense.

On appeal, plaintiffs argue that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 calls for reimbursement, notwithstanding the advancement of the legal fees and costs on behalf of the accused employee by a third party labor organization. Plaintiffs assert that the motion judge erred in construing N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 too narrowly on the issue of reimbursement. We agree and reverse.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 provides for indemnity of employees upon a favorable final disposition of a criminal action. The statute reads:

> Should any criminal action be instituted against any such person for any such act or omission and should such proceeding be dismissed or result in a final disposition in favor of such person, the board of education shall reimburse him for the costs of defending such proceeding, including reasonable counsel > fees and expenses of the original hearing or trial and all appeals.

N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 became effective January 11, 1968. The statement to the bill had this to say about its purpose.

> This bill also proposes legal help under limited circumstances in the event of a criminal action against an employee. The Board of Education would be required to reimburse the employee for defense costs and counsel fees, for the original hearing or trial, and for all appeals, provided the action is dismissed or results in a final disposition in favor of such employee. Employees who are found guilty would be responsible for paying their own expenses.

As the statement makes clear, the obvious purpose of the bill was to have the Board of Education pay for the legal expenses of the employee successful in defending a criminal action, but let that employee be responsible for paying his or her own expenses when found guilty in a criminal proceeding. Cf. N.J.S.A. 40A:14-155 providing similar rights to a police officer who, if a criminal proceeding is dismissed or determined in his favor, is to "be reimbursed for the expense of his defense."

Here, pursuant to the New Jersey Education Association's (NJEA) legal services program, Sekuler, as a member of the NJEA, met the eligibility requirements for legal representation. In so doing, Sekuler signed an agreement "to reimburse NJEA in the amount of its financial assistance, including any reasonable attorney fees and court costs which NJEA expends to recover same, should I recover monies as a result of any claim for damages, fees or costs ...." Without financial assistance through the NJEA program, plaintiff may not have been able to afford to retain his own attorney. In this instance, Sekuler, at least, could look to the NJEA for financial help. While Sekuler has not personally incurred the cost of his defense, the expenses and costs have been defrayed by the NJEA to whom he has a reimbursement obligation. We consider it too literal a reading of the statutory provision to require that the payment be first made from plaintiff's own pocket before he was entitled to reimbursement. To be sure, the NJEA could have established a mechanism to provide that monies be disbursed directly to the attorney from Sekuler to satisfy the literal language of the statute if that were necessary.

Had Sekuler been found guilty of the criminal action, of course, there would have been no statutory obligation for reimbursement. However, because defendant was successful in defending against the criminal action, the Board of Education has the obligation to pay for the cost of defending such proceeding.

We also find no significance in the motion judge's reference to Sekuler's "still wholly unexplained" failure to claim reimbursement for fees he personally paid to the attorney he originally retained to assist him and represent him on the charge despite the fact that those fees were clearly eligible for reimbursement under the statute. The record discloses that a demand was made of the Board of Education by counsel for Sekuler in a letter of April 1, 1996, which submitted the bills of Thomas Pavics, who had originally been retained to represent plaintiff.

Moreover, the fact that the plaintiff law firm in this action has sought payment of $239,696.32 for fees and costs expended for Sekuler's representation does not mean that the law firm is entitled to that amount. According to the discovery, the law firm was paid $141,342.50. These legal fees were based on the defense of the criminal action at $110 per hour. In the complaint filed in the prerogative writ action, Wills, O'Neill and Mellk sought their usual and customary rate of $200 per hour. They would not be entitled to receive more than what was paid to them by NJEA on Sekuler's behalf. See Valerius v. City of Newark, 84 N.J. 591, 600 (1980) (involving a police officer). In other words, the law firm cannot make one agreement with the NJEA and then seek to recover a greater amount for their legal services when they accepted Sekuler's representation on the basis of the hourly rate billed to NJEA.

We do, however, agree with the motion judge that the civil rights statutes and decisions reached by courts applying those counsel fee provisions are neither dispositive nor instructive in the analysis of the statute before us. See 42 U.S.C.A. § 1988. The civil rights statutes are designed in part to encourage litigation by individuals asserting that their civil rights have been violated. See Rodriguez v. Taylor, 569 F.2d 1231, 1245 (3d Cir. 1977), cert. denied, 436 U.S. 913, 98 S.Ct. 2254, 56 L.Ed.2d 414 (1978). The goal of the statutory provision involved here is not to encourage litigation, but to protect a person who is a defendant in a criminal action from being asked to absorb the financial loss of the defense of that action when the defense has secured a final favorable disposition.

Furthermore, the recent decision of Bower v. Board of Education of the City of East Orange, 287 N.J. Super. 15 (App. Div. 1996) (argued before the Supreme Court on January 21, 1997 and opinion not yet filed) is not instructive on the issue presented here. In Bower, the issue of reimbursement was not addressed at all, but rather, the Court focused on whether the criminal charges arose out of and in the course of the performance of the duties of the employee under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.

We conclude that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1 requires reimbursement to Sekuler of the cost of defending the criminal action in the circumstances of this case in order to fulfill his reimbursement obligation. Because, however, the issue of whether the criminal action has arisen out of the performance of the duties of his employment has not been decided, the matter will be remanded for that issue to be addressed. On remand, the court may also address the reasonableness of the counsel fees and costs if raised by the Board.

Reversed and remanded for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original on file in my office.

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

In this consolidated matter, petitioner North Jersey Community Coordinated Child Care Agency, Inc. (NJCCCC) d/b/a Michael's Energy Factory and d/b/a Barney's Educational Center challenged action by respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson (District) to reclaim funds stemming from the District's review of financial records of NJCCCC's programs. On or about November 27, 2006, NJCCCC filed a Verified Petition of Appeal, and later filed an Amended Verified Petition, challenging the District's determination to reclaim funds related to fiscal years 2003-2004, 2004-2005 and 2005-2006. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed under OAL Dkt. No. EDU 1041-07. Subsequently, on October 20, 2008, I issued an order granting partial summary decision in the favor of the District and dismissed NJCCCC's claims related to fiscal year 2003-2004 and 2004-2005. On June 2, 2009, I issued an order denying the District's motion for summary decision as to fiscal year 2005-2006.

NJCCCC filed a separate Petition of Appeal challenging the District's determination to reclaim funds stemming from a review of financial records of NJCCCC's programs for fiscal year 2006-2007. The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the OAL, where it was filed under OAL Dkt. No. EDU 7984-08. On June 2, 2009, I issued an order denying the District's motion for summary decision.

Subsequently, on July 14, 2009, I issued an order consolidating the matters. Following various adjournments of the hearing at the parties' request, the matter was rescheduled for hearing on March 25 and 28, 2011. Prior to the hearing, counsel for petitioners submitted under letter dated March 23, 2011, the attached Stipulation of Settlement, indicating the terms of agreement between the parties.

Having reviewed the record and the settlement terms, I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that settlement should be approved. Accordingly, I approve the settlement and ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (the "Agreement") is made this 18 day of March, 2011, by and between petitioner North Jersey Community Coordinated Child Care Agency, Inc. d/b/a Michael's Energy Factory and d/b/a Barney's Educational Center ("Petitioner"), and respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Paterson ("Paterson") (collectively the "Parties").

5. The Parties agree that this Agreement constitutes the entire agreement between the Parties relating to the subject matter of this Agreement and that there are no other agreements, understandings, representations or warranties made or given, except as expressly set forth herein. All prior agreements, understandings, letters, and/or communications relating to the subject matter of this Agreement shall be null and void and shall be superseded by this Agreement, except as expressly set forth herein.

6. The modification, amendment, and/or waiver of this Agreement, or of any of the provisions of this Agreement, shall not become effective unless executed in writing by the party to be charged with such modification, amendment, or waiver, in each case by a duly authorized representative.

7. Should any provision of this Agreement require interpretation or construction, the Parties hereto agree that the court, administrative body, or other entity interpreting or construing this Agreement shall not apply any presumption that any provisions thereof shall be more strictly construed against one party, whether by reason of the rule of construction that the provisions of a document shall be more strictly construed against the party who itself or through its representatives prepared same, or otherwise, it being agreed that the Parties and their respective attorneys have fully participated in the preparation of all provisions of this Agreement.

8. This Agreement shall inure to the benefit of the Parties hereto, and their respective heirs, successors, and assigns.

TRACEE EDMONDSON,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PITTSGROVE, SALEM COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON MOTION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner's "Motion to Vacate Final Ruling" and respondent's reply thereto have been reviewed. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15, the Commissioner will treat petitioner's filing as a motion for reconsideration of Commissioner Decision No. 120-11, since there is no provision in the procedural rules allowing motions to vacate.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b) allows applications for reconsideration of decisions, providing that they are filed within ten days of the issuance of said decision. The decision for which petitioner seeks reconsideration was issued on March 18, 2011, and deemed filed on March 21, 2011. Petitioner's instant application, dated April 9, 2011, is clearly out of time.

Moreover, the motion fails to meet the standards outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:3 - 1.15(b)(2). Those standards allow reconsideration if a party claims that:

i. a mistake was made;[1]

[1] Disagreement with a decision or the analysis upon which the decision is based does not constitute a "mistake" for purposes of a motion for reconsideration.

ii. newly discovered evidence, which evidence could not previously have been discovered by due diligence, is likely to alter the outcome of the case;

iii. newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party – which evidence could not previously have been discovered by due diligence – warrants reconsideration; or

iv. a relied upon judgment has since been reversed.

In the present motion, no "mistake" is alleged by petitioner. Consequently, there are no grounds for reconsideration under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(i). Nor has petitioner presented new evidence, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(ii). Petitioner offers two events to support her position that the Commissioner's March 18, 2011 decision was tainted by bias: 1) a discussion about future uses of the Elmer school building at a public meeting in Pittsgrove in May 2010, and 2) a March 24, 2011 meeting between Elmer Board of Education members and representatives of the Department of Education concerning the Elmer school district's budget. The first event took place almost a year before the decision for which petitioner asks review and does not therefore qualify as newly discovered evidence. The second event took place after the issuance of the decision for which petitioner seeks review and cannot therefore have influenced same.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(iii) gives parties the opportunity to ask for reconsideration when they have discovered misconduct or misrepresentation by their adversary about which they could not have previously known. Petitioner's allegations in this motion appear to be directed not at her adversary, the Pittsgrove Board of Education, but rather at the Commissioner of Education and possibly the Elmer Board of Education, which is not a party to this case. Consequently, there are no grounds for reconsideration under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(iii). Finally, the motion does not appear to claim that a relied upon judgment has been reversed, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(iv).

If petitioner disagrees with the Commissioner's decision she may appeal it to the Superior Court, Appellate Division.[2] However, for the above stated reasons, the Commissioner denies petitioner's motion for reconsideration of his March 18, 2011 decision in the instant matter.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

[2] In that regard, the Commissioner brings to petitioner's attention regulation N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(d), which instructs that a motion for reconsideration does not necessarily toll the time in which a party may file an appeal to Superior Court.

vs.		AGENCY REF:600-10/10
		OAL DOCKET NO: EDU13022-2010S
Pittsgrove Township BOE,	:
Respondent	:	MOTION TO VACATE FINAL RULING

Petitioner moves to vacate the final judgment in the aforementioned case and seeks a new and unbiased ruling by an unbiased adjudicator (i.e. – a party other than the New Jersey Department of Education); Petitioner questions the commissioner's conduct in negotiating with the Respondent and claims the relationship could have influenced the outcome of the case. The Commissioner's conduct in negotiating with the Respondent resulted in financial assistance and fiscal management from the Commissioner to Respondent in early March 2011, which is during his final ruling on Edmondson v. Pittsgrove (OAL Docket No. EDU 13022-2010S) on March 18, 2011. (See Appendix A – Elmer Times 4/8/11 article.)

In DeNike vs. Cupo 196 NJ 502 (2008), the Supreme Court reversed the Appellate Court as follows:

> Judges must avoid actual conflicts as well as the appearance of impropriety to promote confidence in the integrity and impartiality of the Judiciary. Unfortunately, the negotiations between trial judge and lawyer in this case created an appearance of impropriety. Stated simply, the conduct here fell short of the high standards demanded of judges and fellow members of the legal profession and had the capacity to erode the public's trust. Because any lesser remedy would allow reasonable doubts to linger about the fairness of the outcome of the case, the judgment of the Appellate Division is reversed and the matter is remanded for a new trial.

In Edmondson v. Elmer and Pittsgrove (OAL Docket No. EDU-6992-10), the Commissioner ruled that pursuant to the definition in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-43, the "practical result of respondents' agreement" rendered "Elmer a non-operating district". New Jersey Department of Education ruled on October 25, 2010 that it was the responsibility of the executive county superintendent, who is an employee of the NJDOE and works directly for the Commissioner, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 to "effectuate involuntary district mergers" as "petitioner correctly points out". The Commissioner further asserts, "The recently enacted 'Non-operating District' statute provided for executive county superintendents to eliminate non-operating districts and merge same with the districts which receive the non-operating district's students. N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44(a)." The ruling mentioned that "there is no indication that the Salem County superintendent has made the determinations and taken the action prescribed in N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 to 8-49" "nor is there reason for the Acting Commissioner to order the initiation of such actions, since N.J.S.A. 18A:8-44 et seq. provides the means of effectuating involuntary district mergers". As a result of EDU 6992-10, the Commissioner's negotiating with Respondent and final judgment in EDU 13022-2010S are conflicts of interest and supports concerns about public confidence in the integrity and impartiality of our system of justice.

The Commissioner has known of its responsibility to close the Elmer School since the executive county superintendent's presentation before the Pittsgrove Township Council on May 13, 2010. http://www.pittsgrovetownship.com/TWPCOM/PITTSGROVE%20TOWNSHIP%20COMMITTEE%20SPECIAL%20MEETING%20-%20MAY%2013%202010%20DEFEATED%20SCHOOL%20BUDGET%20II.pdf, page 4 paragraph numbered "7", page)? The Commissioner's representative said as follows, "Mr. Bumpus anticipates that the Elmer School will become non-operating in 2010-2011 and for 2010-2012 it will become dissolved. The building will go to the municipality and the assets will be liquidated." However, Respondent, "Mr. Bermann interjected that a long term lease is being negotiated with Elmer. It will indicate what happens to equipment, supplies, etc. They do not intend the use of the building for anything but education. Counsel has indicated that the lease will prevail if challenged. There are laws that govern the process." The Respondent was asked why it had not considered a full merger, it responded, "not ready to merge, it's always been an expanded send/receive. Mr. Bermann stated that a merge is part of newer legislation." And the New Jersey Department of Education opined that not following "newer legislation" is a "win-win". These exchanges clearly indicate collusion and conflicts of interest between the New Jersey Department of Education and Respondent. As such, the New Jersey Department of Education should have recused itself in adjudicating any matters associated with Respondent.

Specifically, the issue here is whether a litigant who believes there may have been judicial misconduct or at least conduct implicating the appearance of judicial impropriety may sit back and utilize that information whenever he deems appropriate. Alternatively, is a litigant who has such a belief obligated to come forward forthwith with the assertion of untoward conduct so as to allow the judicial system to immediately address the assertions of impropriety?

Judge Doyne, in a 79 page Opinion, found that the litigant cannot "sit back" and has an obligation to immediately come forward to assert the untoward conduct. Please be advised that the Commissioner has formally been asked to immediately address the assertions of impropriety.

Respectfully submitted,

Tracée Edmondson

State Provides Fiscal Monitor And Help For Elmer School Board Budget

The Elmer School Board held a public hearing on the 2011-2012 School Budget during their meeting on Tuesday, March 29, 2011. News of a net difference between revenue and appropriations of minus $771,897.00 had been reported and about twenty Elmer residents and taxpayers turned out find out why. The challenge for the school board is they are not allowed by law to run a deficit and residents feared huge tax increases were coming. Earlier in March the board had asked for help from the New Jersey Department of Education. They explained the situation during a meeting that was held on March 24 with the state Commissioner of Education and Third District State Senator Stephen Sweeney. Prior to last Tuesday's meeting the business administrator, Suzanne Fox, received the following message from the NJ Department of Education: "Although the Elmer School District's 2011-12 budget is out of balance, the Department of Education will appoint a fiscal monitor and will also provide an advanced state aid payment as a loan, payable over a period of time not to exceed 10 years. In this way, the State will help the district meet current expenses."

Residents questioned the board on how the budget got so far out of balance. It was pointed out that tuition for special needs students and transportation costs had increased over $100,000 over what had been previously budgeted. The tuition line in the budget shows an increase of approximately $1.4 million from the 2009-10 expenditures to the 2011-12 appropriation. It was noted that Elmer is sending more students that make up a larger percentage of the total number of students in the Pittsgrove district than before and therefore carrying additional costs.

Another line item was the "surprise" bill from the state for the unemployment compensation of the former employees of The Learning Center. That line will amount to over $120,000 for the current 2010-2011 budget and another $160,000 for the coming year. Board member Joe Cardona explained to visitors that the board thought that all the staff from the Learning Center preschool program would move to Woodstown when they negotiated the move with the Salem County Vo-Tech Board. It is reported that only two of the six former employees moved with the equipment that the school board gave to assist the new location.

One resident asked School Superintendent Henry Bermann why the cost was only on Elmer when the district was now merged. Bermann pointed out that the two were still separate districts that were in a full send/receive agreement. He also noted that Pittsgrove pays rent for using the Front Street school building.

Pittsgrove is making some budget reductions with the retirement of five staff members that will not be replaced and some layoffs to save $300,000 in their budget. In Elmer the proposed budget is $3,626,591 which is an increase of $141,290 according to Suzanne Fox. The total local tax levy is $1,233,057 which is an increase of $67,180 that will equal a seven cent school tax increase for property owners in Elmer.

The issue of reducing the size of the Elmer School Board from nine members to five members was tabled during last week's meeting. There are three board member seats up for election on April 27th. The April 19th meeting will be moved to May for the purpose of reorganizing the board after the election.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GEORGE H. FRIERY, JR.,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF	:	DECISION
BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL,	:
SOMERSET COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

In January 2010, the petitioning Board certified charges of conduct unbecoming against respondent – a tenured Spanish teacher – for allegedly engaging in illegal sexual contact and interaction with a 15 year old student, which resulted in his arrest and charges on two counts of Endangering the Welfare of a Child. The Board sought to dismiss petitioner from his tenured position. Counsel for the respondent requested that the tenure charges be held in abeyance pending the disposition of the criminal charges against him.

In April 2011, the Board filed a motion for summary decision, reporting that respondent had, inter alia, entered a plea agreement whereby he was sentenced to 364 days in the Somerset County Jail and parole supervision for life, and been ordered to be subjected to the requirements of Megan's Law. Subsequently, counsel for respondent responded to the motion stating that the Superior Court had issued a Corrected Judgment of Conviction indicating that Mr. Friery must resign his position and forfeit his teaching license subject to Megan's Law. Accordingly, counsel pointed out that the Board's tenure charges are now moot.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred that the Order of the Superior Court directing respondent to resign his position and forfeit his certificate renders the Board's tenure charges moot. Accordingly, the tenure charges were dismissed and the matter was transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for effectuation of the Court's Order.

AGENCY DKT NO. 8-1/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF GEORGE H. FRIERY, JR.,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF	:	DECISION
BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL,	:
SOMERSET COUNTY.	:

For the District, Nicholas Celso, III, Esq., Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein & Celso

For Respondent, Edward Cridge, Esq., Wills, O'Neill & Mellk

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on January 15, 2010, through the certification of tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against George H. Friery, Jr., a tenured teacher, by the School District of Bridgewater-Raritan Regional, Somerset County.

The Commissioner directed Respondent, by notice dated January 15, 2010, sent both certified and regular mail, to file an Answer to the tenure charges. By letter dated January 19, 2010, Edward Cridge, Esq. entered representation on behalf of respondent and requested that – as respondent was a defendant in a concurrent criminal proceeding arising from the same allegations as those contained in the tenure charges – pursuant to Ott v. Board of Education of the Township of Hamilton, 160 N.J. Super. 333 (App. Div. 1978), the tenure charges be held in abeyance pending the disposition of criminal charges pending against respondent.

On April 5, 2011, counsel for the District filed a Motion for Summary Decision reporting that:

> [o]n or about March 18, 2011, Mr. Friery entered into a plea agreement wherein he pled guilty to Endangering the Welfare of a Child in the 3rd degree and Endangering the Welfare of a Child in the 4th degree and was sentenced to serve 364 days [in the] Somerset County Jail and parole supervision for life....Additionally, Mr. Friery was ordered to be subject to the requirements of Megan's Law, to register pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2C:14-3b and to pay monetary penalties. (District's Summary Decision Motion at 4)

The District alleges that based on respondent's admission of guilt on these charges – which involved conduct directly related to his employment, as the victim of the criminal acts was a minor female student – respondent must forfeit his employment with the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A 2C:51-2 based on the underlying criminal charges. (Id. at 6-7) The District, therefore, requests that Commissioner enter summary decision directing respondent's removal from his employment with the District.[1] (Id. at 8)

By letter dated April 12, 2011, counsel for respondent replied to the District's motion stating that on March 23, 2011 the Superior Court of New Jersey, Somerset County, issued a Corrected Judgment of Conviction, which counsel attached to his letter. Such document specifically indicates that the defendant must resign as a teacher at Bridgewater Raritan High School and must forfeit his teaching license subject to Megan's law. Counsel points out that "as Mr. Friery's plea agreement required the forfeiture of his teaching certificate, it would appear as though the tenure charges certified by the Board of Education in this matter are moot."

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with counsel for respondent that the Order of the Superior Court directing respondent to resign his position and forfeit his certificate renders the District's tenure charges against him moot and, therefore, such charges are hereby DISMISSED.

This matter shall be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners to ensure effectuation of the Court's Order.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a member of the Roxbury Township Board of Education, alleged that the Board acted improperly and beyond the bounds of its authority when it passed a resolution censuring her for unethical conduct in May 2010. She contended that a member of a local board of education can only be censured or disciplined for an ethical violation through the filing of a formal complaint with the School Ethics Commission (SEC), and sought indemnification pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-20 for legal expenses incurred in challenging the Board's action. The Board asserted, inter alia, that the action to censure one of its members was within its statutory authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, and was reasonable and consistent with the law. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the Board was required to utilize the statutory mechanisms set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 in order to censure one of its members for misconduct that fell under the authority of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1, the Code of Ethics for School Board Members; the Board's obligation to discipline the petitioner in accordance with statutory procedures cannot be avoided by excluding a reference to the Code of Ethics in its censure resolution; the actions of the Board deprived the petitioner of due process; and the Board's contention that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction in this matter is without merit. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the Board's resolution censuring petitioner must be vacated. As to petitioner's claim to indemnification, the ALJ concluded indemnification is not warranted, as no civil or administrative action or other legal proceeding has been brought against her.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the recommended decision of the OAL with modification.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Primary and reply exceptions of both petitioner and the Board – filed in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

The Board excepts to four of the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusions of law, specifically those which determined 1) "Castriotta has demonstrated that the Board has exceeded its authority in voting to censure her" (Initial Decision at 9); 2) "[T]he Board's obligation to discipline Castriotta in accordance with statutory procedures cannot be avoided by simply excluding a reference to the Code of Ethics in its censure resolution (Initial Decision at 11); 3) '[T]he actions of the Board deprived Castriotta of due process," (Initial Decision at 14); and 4) "[T]he Board's contention that [the Commissioner of Education] lacked jurisdiction is without merit." (Initial Decision at 14) (Board's Exceptions at 2)

With respect to the first and second of these legal conclusions – which the Board finds to be interrelated – it cites Crystal v. Bd. of Educ. Of the Twp. Of Barnegat, Commissioner's Decision No. 29-00, decided January 18, 2000, for the proposition that it is a long-established principle that a board of education has the right to censure a member. While recognizing that Crystal, supra, upheld this right, the ALJ – it charges – "breaks new ground" by concluding that because Crystal, supra, pre-dated the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, such is no longer the case. (Board's Exceptions at 2) In so concluding, the Board proffers, the ALJ "effectively declares the jurisdiction of the School Ethics Commission (the "SEC") to be preemptive and exclusive and also deprives all local boards of the right to censure a member – even though a Board may not file a complaint with the SEC."[1] In support of her first and second legal conclusions, the Board advances, the ALJ places great reliance on the Legislature's language in the findings and declarations provision of the Ethics Act, specifically:

> school board members and local school administrators should have the benefit of specific standards to guide their conduct and of some disciplinary mechanism to ensure the uniform maintenance of these standards among them.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(b)]

Stressing the term "uniform," the ALJ reaches the conclusion that "the clear intent of the Act was to have all concerns about board member ethics directed to the School Ethics Commission." (Initial Decision at 10) She further references the Act's enforcement procedures and determines that only the SEC, and not the Board, had authority to discipline petitioner for her alleged misconduct. (Board's Exceptions at 3-4) The position that the SEC preempts the right of the Board to censure one of its members, the Board argues, is not now – nor has it ever been – the law. Evidence of this can be found, it advances, in Sea Isle City Board of Education v. Kennedy, Commissioner's Decision No. 235-05, decided June 30, 2005, aff'd State Board, January 4, 2006, aff'd 393 N.J. Super. 93 (App. Div. 2007), aff'd as modified 196 N.J. 1 (2008), where the Commissioner established the guiding principle "that rights existing prior to the Act still remain unless expressly revoked."

[1] The Board charges that the ALJ's decision mistakenly states that the Board could authorize its Board President to file a complaint on its behalf. The Board points out that applicable regulations restrict the ability to file an ethics complaint to a "person," which is defined as "a human being and does not include boards of education, labor organizations or school districts[,]" and the Board's use of a designee to circumvent these regulations, as contemplated by the ALJ, is not within the intent of the regulations. (Ibid.)

(Board's Exceptions at 4) The ALJ's rejection of this underlying principle because there was no other school law which was applicable to disciplinary action for the type of behavior involved in this case is misplaced, it maintains, because "if rules of statutory construction establish that each and every word, clause and provision contained in a statute is purposeful, it necessarily follows that a statute's silence on a specific issue is also purposeful." (Ibid.) Finally, with respect to these two legal conclusions, the Board maintains that it did not discipline petitioner. "Rather, ...the censure resolution was nothing more than a public expression of dissatisfaction by a majority of the Board's membership and carries no other sanctions with it. Unlike the SEC's censure mechanism, the Board's censure is not a disciplinary action." (Ibid.) The Board, therefore urges that these first two legal conclusions of the ALJ be rejected.

As to the ALJ's third legal conclusion, i.e., that the Board deprived petitioner of her entitlement to due process, this, it avers, is a result of her prior two incorrect conclusions. Accepting, arguendo, that the Board's prior exception is valid, it presents its arguments advanced below – which were reviewed in the Initial Decision – to support its claim that petitioner was provided all of the due process to which she was entitled. (Board's Exceptions at 5-6)

In conclusion, with respect to the fourth of the ALJ's legal conclusions, the Board, similarly, replicates its arguments advanced below. Specifically, it again proposes that the Commissioner lacks jurisdiction over this matter, as petitioner's claims predominantly involve charges of constitutional violations of her due process and free speech rights rather than violations of school law. (Id. at 6-7)

In reply, petitioner charges that the Board continues to support its improper censure of petitioner with citation to Crystal, supra, and Sea Isle City, supra. She claims that neither of these cases support the proposition that local boards retain jurisdiction to sanction one of their members for alleged violations of the School Ethics Act. By way of example, she argues, not only does Crystal, supra, predate the enactment of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, but that particular case involved "explicitly stated violations of the local board's bylaws only..." (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1-2) Moreover, petitioner observes:

> [r]espondent's actions in this case reflect the very injustices and potential abuses the State Legislature sought to prevent when it enacted the Ethics Code and gave sole jurisdiction over its enforcement to the School Ethics Commission and Commissioner....The Legislature's expressed intent in creating the Ethics Commission and vesting it with sole jurisdiction was to "...ensure and preserve public confidence..." thorough "uniform maintenance of standards."...By enacting the Ethics Code and granting the Commission and Commissioner jurisdiction over its enforcement the Legislature ensured local boards could focus on their school districts rather than expending time adjudicating ethics allegations. Perhaps more importantly, the Legislature ensured the public confidence would be protected by having a well versed impartial body preside over alleged ethics violations in a system replete with due process protections. ...It also ensured free and open political discourse would not be hindered by majority members of local boards who might have design to use the formal governmental authority of the Board to silence political adversaries by publicaly [sic] damaging their reputation with humiliating and biased public censures. Consistent with their intended design the Legislature ensured ethics standards would be enforced uniformly by one adjudicative agency rather than haphazardly by local boards across the State whose individual members may not be well versed in the Ethics Code or interpretive legal decisions concerning the Code. (Id. at 2-3)

Here, petitioner argues, the Board takes the position that "its intentional avoidance of the use of the word ethics in its carefully crafted censure resolution holds it outside the jurisdictional mandate of the Ethics Commission." However, she posits, as noted by the Supreme Court in Board of Education of the Boro of Union Beach v. N.J. Educ. Ass'n., 53 N.J. 29:

> [t]he substance of a situation and not its shape must control. A doctrine designed to protect the public interest is equal to any demand upon it. It does not yield to guise or ingenuity (At 40-41) (Petitioner's Exceptions at 3)

Additionally, petitioner avers, the Board fails to address and consider the fact that in DeLuna v. Bertram, C31-06 (April 27, 2007) the School Ethics Commission specifically cautioned local school boards against taking action to discipline one of its members for violation of the Ethics Code, stating:

> The Commission is concerned that the Board took it upon themselves to determine that a fellow Board member had violated the Code of Ethics for School Board Members set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1, and then discipline[d] that board member based on its determination. While boards of education have the right to enforce their > own policies, the Commission has sole authority to determine if the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1, has been violated. However, even the Commission does not have the authority to impose discipline on a board member who has violated the Code of Ethics for School Board Members. That jurisdiction lies with the Commissioner of Education to whom the Commission makes a recommendation regarding the discipline of a school board member. The Commission cautions the Board that, in the future, if the Board suspects that the Code of Ethics for School Board Members has been violated, then a complaint should be filed with the Commission and the Board should not make its own determination that a violation has incurred [sic] and impose discipline. At p. 9 (emphasis added) (Petitioner's Exceptions at 4)

Petitioner urges that clearly the sole authority to discipline her for the allegations contained in the Board's censure resolution, which plainly sound in alleged violations of the School Ethics Code, lies solely with the Commissioner after reviewing the recommendation of the School Ethics Commission – who first conducts a full and fair hearing granting the accused a full measure of due process protections. Therefore, she maintains, the Board here was without power to censure petitioner and such censure should be vacated. (Id. at 5)

Turning to petitioner's primary exceptions – she excepts solely to the ALJ's dismissal of her claims for indemnification and legal fees. In so asserting she argues extensively, as she did below, that the censure hearing held by the Board qualifies as "other legal proceeding" within the intendment of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-20, justifying indemnification and counsel fees. As it is determined that the indemnification issue was fully considered, addressed and correctly resolved by the ALJ in her decision, further elaboration on this issue will not be presented here.

Upon comprehensive review and consideration, the Commissioner determines to adopt the recommended decision of the ALJ as modified below.

Initially, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that review and adjudication of allegations of Code of Ethics for School Board Members violations is solely within the jurisdictional purview of the School Ethics Commission. As such, a Board which wishes to have one of its members disciplined for misconduct falling within the ambit of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1 is required to utilize the statutory mechanisms set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29.[2] In this matter, it is undeniable that the impetus for the Board's action censuring petitioner was the letter received by its president from Superintendent of Schools Rossi charging that petitioner had "clearly and undeniably" violated the statutory Code of Ethics for School Board members, citing to numerous specific provisions of this Code which she is alleged to have violated, and requesting the Board's quick condemnation of her conduct, which the Board promptly acted on. Irrespective of the fact that the resolution censuring petitioner assiduously excluded any reference to the Code of Ethics in its wording, it is incontrovertible that the conduct petitioner was censured for would be violative of the Code and, therefore, adjudicable only by the School Ethics Commission. Consequently, the Commissioner is in full accord with the ALJ's conclusion that the Board exceeded its authority by censuring petitioner at a public meeting for perceived Ethics Code violations and, therefore, this action was ulta vires and must be vacated.

Next, the Commissioner finds – given that the Board exceeded its authority in taking it upon itself to adjudicate and impose discipline against petitioner for perceived Ethics Code violations – that the extent of the due process it provided her in this regard, although recognized as wholly deficient in terms of that which must be accorded an individual charged with Ethics Code violations, is irrelevant in this case.

This said, the Commissioner is compelled to clarify that the Code of Ethics for School Board Members does not operate to deprive a Board, under appropriate circumstances, of the ability to discipline one of its members, nor is Crystal,[3] supra – supporting the Board's authority in

[2] The Board's exception argument that it cannot initiate a complaint before the School Ethics Commission because it is not a "person" as required by that body's applicable regulations is disingenuous at best. It is without question that a Board could authorize its Superintendent of Schools, who fully satisfies the regulatory requirement, to file a complaint with the Commission. Similarly rejected as wholly meritless is the Board's contention that its censure of petitioner was not "discipline" but rather merely "an expression of its dissatisfaction with her conduct." Such a claim, the Commissioner concludes, is obviously a distinction without a difference.

[3] The petitioner in this case was censured by the Board for a violation of a clearly articulated Board Policy which provided:

this regard – preempted by the Code. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 specifically provides local boards of education with certain mandatory powers and duties. These powers and duties include the following:

a. Adopt an official seal;
b. Enforce the rules of the state board;
c. Make, amend and repeal rules, not inconsistent with this title or with the rules of the state board, for its own government and the transaction of its business and for the government and management of the public schools and public school property of the district and for the employment, regulation of conduct and discharge of its employees, subject, where applicable, to the provisions of Title 11, Civil Service, of the Revised statutes; and
d. Perform all acts and do all things, consistent with law and the rules of the state board, necessary for the lawful and proper conduct, equipment and maintenance of the public schools of the district. (emphasis added)

Pursuant to this statutory provision, the Commissioner finds and concludes that the Board is empowered to discipline one of its members who has violated a clearly constructed and adopted Board policy governing the conduct of its members. However, it is without question that such policy cannot mirror the conduct specifically prohibited by, and governed by, the Ethics Code.

Turning to the Board's challenge to the Commissioner's jurisdiction to adjudicate this matter, the crux of this case is a determination as to whether the Board exceeded its statutory authority with respect to the action taken against petitioner. Such an issue is unquestionably properly before the Commissioner, and the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ that the Board's arguments to the contrary are without merit.

Finally, with respect to petitioner's request for indemnification and legal fees, the Commissioner is compelled to agree with the ALJ – for the reasons detailed on pages 15-17 of her decision – that there is no legal authority which would authorize such an award in this matter.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as modified above. The Board's May 24, 2010 resolution censuring petitioner is hereby VACATED.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF ROXBURY, MORRIS COUNTY,

Respondent.

Erik A. Hassing, Esq., for petitioners (Hassing and DeFilippis, attorneys)

Stephen Edelstein, Esq., for respondent (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein and Celso, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 22, 2011 Decided: April 4, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Maureen Castriotta, a member of the Roxbury Township Board of Education (the Board), alleges that the Board acted improperly and beyond the bounds of its authority when it passed a May 24, 2010, resolution censuring her conduct. The parties have cross-moved for summary decision.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed her appeal before the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on July 1, 2010. The Board filed an answer and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 3, 2010.

The Board filed a motion for summary decision on November 23, 2010. Petitioner filed a cross-motion for summary decision on December 22, 2010. The Board filed a reply in opposition to the cross-motion on January 24, 2011, and petitioner filed a sur-reply on February 8, 2011. Oral argument was conducted on February 9, 2011.

Following oral argument the Board supplemented its submission with a February 18, 2011, letter citing additional case law. Counsel for petitioner responded via letter dated February 22, 2011, at which time the record closed.

ISSUES PRESENTED

The Board asserts that action to censure one of its members is within its statutory authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1; that its determination to do so here was reasonable and consistent with law; and that accordingly, the petition should be summarily dismissed. It further urges that the claims raised by the petition are primarily constitutional in nature, and thus not properly before the Commissioner for adjudication. Finally, the Board seeks dismissal of petitioner's claims for indemnification, asserting that there is no basis for these claims in either law or fact.

Petitioner has cross-moved for summary decision, urging that the Board lacked the authority to censure her. She argues that a member of a local board of education can be censured or otherwise disciplined for an ethical violation only through the filing of a formal complaint with the New Jersey School Ethics Commission, and only in accordance with the procedures set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 and N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.1 et seq. Petitioner seeks indemnification for the legal expenses she has incurred in challenging the action of the Board, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-20.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The facts pertinent to the pending motions are not controverted, and I FIND:

During the school day on April 27, 2010, a student walk-out took place at Roxbury High School. Administration, including Superintendent of Schools Michael Rossi and High School Principal Jeffrey Swanson, had been made aware that the student body intended to oppose Governor Chris Christie's proposed funding cuts. Protests of this nature had been organized by public school students Statewide. On April 27, 2010, Castriotta was a sitting member of the Board.

Rossi and Swanson decided not to attempt to prevent the walk-out, instead focusing on measures to ensure student safety and security. In a May 6, 2010, letter to the Board president, John Moschella, Rossi explained that he had thoughtfully acquiesced to the protest, writing:

> One choice was to try to stop them, either verbally and/or physically through restraint, warning or otherwise barring their access to outside. In our professional judgment, that clearly was not the best option. We chose to first and foremost keep our students safe, allow them an opportunity to express their views, get them back to class, and be done with it.

Castriotta learned of the walk-out, and vehemently disagreed with administration's approach. She thought the protest violated school policy, and she felt strongly that administration should make every effort to stop it. Concerned about what would transpire, Castriotta went to Roxbury High School on the morning of April 27, 2010.

Castriotta has insisted throughout that her conduct at the high school was polite and appropriate. Rossi and Swanson recalled the events that morning differently. In his letter to Moschella, Rossi expressed "outrage at the treatment that Mr. Swanson and I received on the morning of April 27, 2010 at Roxbury High School at the hands of Board member Maureen Castriotta." Rossi wrote that Castriotta "verbally confronted"

Swanson, advising that he was in violation of Board policy and directing him to return the students to class. Her treatment of Rossi was similar, and he recounted:

> Mrs. Castriotta tapped me on the back and started verbally berating me. Similar to her assault on Mr. Swanson, she told me that I was in violation of policy, started to pepper me with questions and accusations as to why that had happened, and also telling me how to run the event, how to supervise it by way of instructing me to get students back into class.

Rossi advised the Board president that Castriotta began to shout at him, emphasizing that she is Board member and taxpayer, and that "she will do what she wants, and she doesn't need to listen to me." According to Rossi, she verbalized her displeasure at how he was "running the district and the event." Rossi related that Castriotta approached students at the school, and engaged them in conversation.

Rossi informed the Board president that he felt that Mrs. Castriotta's actions "clearly and undeniably" violated the statutory code of ethics for school board members, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c),(d),(e) and (i).[1] He urged that she was interfering with "our running of the school district, in particular during the course of the school day." Rossi was most unequivocal in his feeling that Castriotta was attempting to administer the schools, urging in his letter:

> Please look at it this way: what other day-to-day operations or special and even unplanned, impromptu events that may take place will Board members feel that they need to intervene on and seek to administer the schools? Is the football coach now subject to the same confrontation on the sidelines because a Board member does not feel they are following the policy for proper supervision of kids? Should a Board member be able to enter into a school or an outside gathering based on a particular feeling about how that specific assembly, field trip, or lesson is unfolding? There would absolutely be no end in sight! The Administrative Code in this area was created specifically to protect those who are responsible for administrating the schools from this type of confrontation.

[1] Throughout his letter Rossi erroneously refers to the statute as an Administrative Code provision.

Rossi advised Moschella that Castriotta's misconduct did not end with the incident at Roxbury High School that day. Subsequent to the walk-out, she "proceeded to make headlines" in two separate newspaper accounts, and in a cable-television video spot. Rossi felt that Castriotta discussed confidential personnel matters with the media, including the possibility that the Board would consider disciplinary action against him or Swanson for the manner in which they responded to the student protest. In support of his contention that Castriotta's actions were inappropriate and unethical, Rossi cited N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g), which provides that Board members will "hold confidential all matters pertaining to the schools, which, if disclosed, would needlessly injure individuals or the schools."

Rossi asked the Board to act quickly to condemn Castriotta's conduct, stating:

> I herein ask again that you react to this swiftly and decisively and instruct Mrs. Castriotta to steer clear of me and my staff members as we are carrying out our duties in administering the schools . . . I don't see how any reasonable and rationale [sic] Board member given the training, the code of ethics, and the statutes the guide us, would come to any other conclusion that this is reprehensible behavior.

The Board did swiftly respond to Rossi's concerns. Indeed, via letter dated May 14, 2010, the Board secretary, Anthony Mistretta, advised Castriotta that the Board intended to consider a censure resolution at its meeting of May 24, 2010. Mistretta's letter included a copy of the proposed censure resolution language, and outlined the due process rights that the Board would extend to Castriotta. She was advised that the Board had set aside forty-five minutes for discussion, that she could present witnesses and address the Board directly if she so chose. Castriotta was informed that she could be represented by counsel, but was cautioned that in the Board's view she would not be statutorily entitled to indemnification for any legal expenses incurred by her. Mistretta advised that discussion would take place publicly unless Castriotta requested otherwise. He advised that regardless, however, the resolution would be voted upon publicly.

Castriotta responded via her attorney who urged that the hearing proposed by the Board was unfair in several respects. Counsel stated that he had been afforded inadequate time to properly defend his client's interests. He asserted that the draft resolution was insufficiently specific for him to understand the factual or legal basis for the Board's proposed censure action. Counsel urged that it was patently unfair for the Board to sit as "prosecutor, judge and jury" and that Castriotta could not be afforded a fair hearing as a result. If the Board insisted upon proceeding, counsel asked, at a minimum, that he receive legally sufficient notice of the legal and jurisdictional basis for the hearing; that the hearing be adjourned to afford Castriotta time to adequately prepare; that a list of witnesses and discovery be provided by the Board in advance of the hearing; and that the hearing not be limited to forty-five minutes in duration, but rather, take as much time as needed to adequately present witnesses and other evidence.

Counsel for the Board replied via letter dated May 21, 2010. He asserted that the Board was within its legal rights to vote upon a censure resolution, and that the proceeding contemplated by the Board was fair and assured Castriotta's due process rights would be protected. He stated that the proceeding would not be adjourned. The Board proceeded as planned on May 24, 2010. A verbatim transcription of the relevant portion of the meeting accompanies the petition of appeal. In an introductory statement, counsel for the Board alluded only to violations of local policy, and made no reference to the School Ethics Act. Rossi reiterated the events much as he had described them in his earlier letter to the Board president. Counsel for Castriotta sought leave to cross-examine him, which was denied. Swanson likewise made a presentation to the Board in which he urged that he was "accosted" by Castriotta, who was "very accusatory and critical" in her tone and language. Swanson informed the Board:

> The questioning tone, the criticism which were levied on me I felt were unnecessary and inappropriate, but quite frankly, it was nothing compared to the way that she badgered and harassed Dr. Rossi because when he got there, I saw her actually poke him in the back, you know, to try and get his attention, to answer me, you, know, as if she was a scolding mother talking to child who had misbehaved.

After the administrative presentation to the Board, the floor was turned over to Castriotta. Her counsel utilized the entire time allotted for his defense to reiterate his procedural objections to the proceeding before the Board. Castriotta asked to be permitted to speak, nonetheless, and the Board afforded her an opportunity to do so. She was adamant that she never gave Rossi or Swanson any instructions or directives. Castriotta advised the Board that she simply inquired if Rossi and Swanson knew that the walk-out was going to take place, and that she politely asked why the students were not being returned to class. Accordingly to Castriotta, it was Rossi who was "antagonistic and confrontational." He accused her of trespassing. Castriotta was incredulous, and she felt that as a "school board member, a long time taxpayer and a resident of Roxbury," she had every right to be there. She advised the Board that "at no time did my behavior contribute in a negative fashion to the proper operation of the school and student's safety." Relative to the comments Castriotta made to the media, she urged that this was her right; and that indeed, she was merely commenting on a matter of public concern.

After Castriotta's presentation, the Board members publicly discussed the pending resolution. Chris Rogers was the sole member of the Board to speak on Castriotta's behalf, stressing that she is a hard-working public servant who had engaged in no inappropriate conduct. But several others agreed that Castriotta's conduct was improper. Castriotta's counsel had renewed the argument that the legal basis for the proposed censure was unclear. Board member Carol Scheneck urged that this contention was groundless because Castriotta was privy to Rossi's letter to Moschella, which "clearly states the . . . four sections of Title 18A with which it was alleged Mrs. Castriotta violated." Scheneck stated that among the statutory ethical obligations of a Board member is the duty not to micromanage the schools.

Patricia Miller, vice president of the Board, stated that "[t]his has to do with a board member who was criticizing the superintendent and the high school principal in front of staff, in front of students when there is a process in place on what a board member should do when there are questions." Liz D'Abbraccio stressed that the right of Board members to be present on school property is not unbridled.

The resolution censuring Castriotta passed 7-2. It was in precisely the same form as the resolution shared with her in advance of the meeting. The resolution stated that on April 27, 2010, Castriotta was present on the premises of Roxbury High School, uninvited and unrelated to her duties as a member of the Board; that on that day she publicly berated the superintendent of schools and high school principal and inappropriately interacted with students; that she refused to leave despite being asked to do so; that she then made public statements that the administrators should be reprimanded for their conduct during the student walk-out; and that Castriotta's actions were inconsistent with her obligations as a Board member to the detriment of the School district. The Board resolved as follows:

> WHEREAS, a majority of the Board wish to express in a public forum their dissatisfaction with Mrs. Castriotta's conduct as aforesaid;
>
> NOW, THEREFORE, be it resolved that the Members of the Roxbury Board of Education hereby censure fellow Board Member Maureen Castriotta for the aforesaid unbecoming conduct and caution her to avoid such conduct during the balance of her term on the Board; and be it further
>
> RESOLVED that a copy of this Resolution shall be sent to the Commissioner of Education and the Executive County Superintendent.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Both parties seek relief pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, which provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." The regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "[t]he judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (quoting Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "'judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214.

The Censure Resolution

This matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing, and I CONCLUDE that Castriotta has demonstrated that the Board exceeded its authority in voting to censure her. The Board was required to utilize the statutory mechanisms set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 if it wished to censure one of its members for misconduct that fell within the ambit of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1. Accordingly, the action of the Board in censuring Castriotta at a public meeting was ultra vires and should be vacated.

In 1991, the Legislature enacted the School Ethics Act, (the Act) N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-21 et seq., declaring as follows:

> To ensure and preserve public confidence, school board members and local school administrators should have the benefit of specific standards to guide their conduct and of some disciplinary mechanism to ensure the uniform maintenance of those standards among them.
>
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(b) (emphasis supplied).]

The Act was amended in 2001 to create a Code of Ethics for School Board Members. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1. The Assembly Committee report makes it plain that the intent of the lawmakers was to have alleged ethical violations processed just as any other alleged violation of the Act, and the report states:

> The bill also establishes a code of ethics for school board members and provides that complaints regarding alleged violations of the code would be processed in the same manner as other complaints filed with the School Ethics Commission. The decision of the commission concerning a violation of the code would be rendered within 90 days of receipt of the complaint. The burden of proof would be on the accusing party to establish factually a violation of the code of ethics.
> [Assembly Education Committee Statement to A-1755, October 16, 2000.]

The use of the word "uniform" in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22(b) is purposeful. It is a cardinal rule of statutory construction that legislation be interpreted so that, if possible, full force and effect is given to "every sentence, clause and word thereof." Oldfield v. New Jersey Realty Co., 1 N.J. 63, 68 (1948). Unquestionably, the lawmakers believed that the primary goal of the Act, which is to "ensure and preserve public confidence," is best safeguarded by the establishment of well-understood standards of conduct, which are consistently enforced. I concur with Castriotta that the clear intent of the Act was to have all concerns about board member ethics directed to the School Ethics Commission (the Commission).

The Board unsuccessfully argues that it retains the right to privately censure Castriotta for her alleged misconduct here. Counsel took pains to note that the Code of Ethics is nowhere mentioned in the controverted resolution, urging that accordingly, it was under no obligation to proceed under the Act's procedural requirements. But this is a disingenuous argument. Indeed, Rossi's letter to Moschella prompted the censure resolution, and cites the Code of Ethics at length. One Board member, Carol Scheneck, apparently was unaware that reference to the statute was to be avoided, because prior to voting in favor of the censure resolution she stated, "there is a specific code of ethics and there are certain things school members can and cannot say and it is right in our New Jersey statutes and administrative code."

In fairness to Scheneck, however, the nexus between Castriotta's alleged conduct and N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1 was unavoidable. Indeed, the citations relied upon by Rossi were directly on point. Castriotta is accused of visiting school grounds during a school day uninvited; of attempting to micromanage the schools by directing the activities of administration and interacting directly with students; and of publicly insulting the superintendent and building principal in the process. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c) provides that a board member "will confine . . . board action to policy making, planning, and appraisal . . . ." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(d) states that a board member will "carry out [her] responsibility, not to administer the schools, but, together with . . . fellow board members, to see that they are well run." The Code of Ethics requires that Castriotta, and all members of the Board, act only in concert with the Board as a whole. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e). She is required to "support and protect school personnel in the proper performance of their duties." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(i). Plainly, Castriotta has been accused of conduct that would violate the Act.

Thereafter, it is contended that Castriotta publicly discussed her displeasure with administration, and publicly hypothesized that the Board might consider discipline against those in charge at Roxbury High School that day. Again, this is conduct that would violate the Act. The Code of Ethics obligates her to "hold confidential all matters pertaining to the schools which, if disclosed, would needlessly injure individuals or the schools." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board's obligation to discipline Castriotta in accordance with statutory procedures cannot be avoided by simply excluding a reference to the Code of Ethics in its censure resolution.

The Board's reliance on Crystal v. Barnegat Board of Education, EDU 2398-99, Initial Decision (November 30, 1999), adopted, Commissioner (January 18, 2000), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, is misplaced. Although Crystal upheld a local board to censure resolution, its decision predates enactment of the Code of Ethics. Thus, Crystal does not address the issue presented here, which is whether N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1 preempts a local board's censure of one of its members. Likewise, the Board cites dicta in Board of Education of Union Beach v. NJEA, 53 N.J. 29 (1968), a decision that holds that a local teachers' association cannot legally strike, but clarifies that teachers, either individually or collectively, may publicly criticize a local school board or its members "in the most searing terms, and even with a wide margin of error." Id. at 40. Union Beach lends no support to the Board's position.

The decision in Sea Isle City Board of Education V. Kennedy, EDU 2028-09, Initial Decision (May 16, 2005), rejected, Commissioner (June 30, 2005), affirmed, State Board (January 4, 2006), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, affirmed, 393 N.J. Super. 93 (App. Div. 2007), affirmed as modified, 196 N.J. 1 (2008), is similarly inapposite. Sea Isle City concerned a board member who had filed suit against his own board under the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, (IDEA), 20 U.S.C. § 1400 et seq., and on behalf of his disabled son. The administrative law judge (ALJ) found that continued membership on the board might have violated N.J.S.A. 18A: 12-2, which precludes a board member from being interested "directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board." However, the controverted conduct appeared to be permitted under the Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(j), which provides that, "[n]othing shall prohibit any school official, or members of his immediate family, from representing himself, or themselves, in negotiations or proceedings concerning his, or their, own interest." The ALJ determined that the Act superseded the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2.

The Commissioner reversed. Finding that Kennedy had an impermissible conflict of interest, the Commissioner ordered him removed from his position as a member of the Sea Isle City Board, doing so without reference to the disciplinary procedures contained in the Act. The Board here relies heavily on the following language in the Commissioner's decision:

> Significantly, [the School Ethics Act] did not act to repeal any part of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, as it clearly could have if it had intended to have all questions of conflict addressed through the School Ethics Act, or to remove the possibility of a board member's disqualification based on inherently incompatible interests as opposed to removal based on the commission of unethical acts while in office.
> [Kennedy, supra, State Bd. (emphasis in original).]

Thus, the Board urges that the Act did not vitiate preexisting rights and remedies except where expressly stated in the statute.

But the Commissioner in Kennedy held that not all questions of Board member conflict of interest must be resolved under the procedures established by the Act precisely because another provision of the school laws proscribed the conduct at issue. Conversely, Castriotta's alleged misconduct arose squarely under the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1. There is no other school-law provision applicable. This point may be emphasized by examination of the Code of Ethics itself. Ethical conduct should be readily intuited by any morally sound person, but N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1 makes it plain that some ethical requirements for board members must be taught.[2] As board member Scheneck aptly stated that evening, some obligations that come with being a board member also come "as a big surprise to a lot of [board] candidates." It was for this reason, and in the interest of a uniform understanding and enforcement of ethical conduct by members of public boards of education, that the Act and its accompanying disciplinary procedures were enacted by our legislature.

The statute establishes a thoughtfully delineated review process, which is further described in clarifying regulations. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29; N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.1 et seq. The regulations provide that, in order to achieve the goals of the Act, the Commission was created, "specifically for the purpose of enforcing those ethical standards through a procedure for reviewing complaints of ethical violations." N.J.A.C. 6A: 28-1.1(b) (emphasis supplied). Complaints filed with the Commission, including claimed violations of the Code of Ethics, are processed per the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:28-

[2] Undoubtedly for this reason Board members must mandatorily participate in training sessions. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

10.8. A formal complaint and answer are filed, and the matter is heard either by the Commission or at the OAL. Either way, the proceeding is conducted in accordance with OAL rules, to include an opportunity to present documentary and testimonial evidence, and with an opportunity to cross-examine witnesses. Ibid. The burden of proof lies squarely and unequivocally with the complainant. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4. OAL decisions are reviewed by the Commission and ultimately, the Commissioner of Education. The parties may appeal to the courts thereafter.

Accordingly, Castriotta correctly asserts that an ethics complaint filed against her with the Commission would be adjudicated with greater due process than that afforded by the Board at its May 24, 2010, meeting. The disciplinary process established by the Act—and its accompanying regulations—recognize the gravity of discipline against a Board member. Even the least-severe form of discipline, a "formal expression of disapproval" of the member's conduct, negatively impacts that member's credibility, her effectiveness as a public official, and her future political aspirations. The Board certainly intended to treat Castriotta fairly, giving her an opportunity to review the censure resolution in advance, appear with counsel, and speak on her own behalf. Its reliance on the procedures described in Donaldson v. North Wildwood Board of Education, 65 N.J. 236 (1974), would have been sound, had local consideration of disciplinary action against Castriotta been appropriate. But the Act demands more, and I CONCLUDE, as a result, that the actions of the Board deprived Castriotta of due process.

In light of my determination that the Board erred by failing to bring its concerns about Castriotta's conduct to the Commission for review and adjudication, its arguments in support of dismissal of the petition require only brief discussion.[3] Castriotta's challenge to the Board's resolution was properly brought before the Commissioner of Education, and I CONCLUDE that the Board's contention that he lacked jurisdiction is without merit. The Board posits this argument while nonetheless asserting that its right to proceed locally in censuring Castriotta arises under its general powers as a school board. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1. A determination whether this Board properly exercised those statutory powers can and should be made by the Commissioner, who is authorized to hear "all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. That Castriotta's claims implicate some constitutional considerations does not diminish that jurisdiction. It is well established that administrative agencies may consider constitutional issues when relevant and necessary to resolution of a question within their jurisdiction. Christian Bros. Inst. v. N.J. Interscholastic League, 86 N.J. 409, 416 (1981); Hunterdon Cent. High Sch. Bd. of Educ. v. Hunterdon Central High Teachers' Ass'n, 174 N.J. Super. 468 (App. Div. 1980), aff'd, 86 N.J. 43 (1981).

[3] The Board has urged that there is no mechanism for it, as an entity, to bring ethics charges against Castriotta. But it clearly can resolve to authorize its president to do so on its behalf. The president of a local school board, with the authorization of the full Board, executes many documents on the Board's behalf.

Similarly without merit is the Board's contention that summary decision should be granted in its favor because petitioner cannot demonstrate that its actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. It asserts that a determination in this regard would require no further factual inquiry, but the underlying facts are very much in dispute. The participants in the events of April 27, 2010, each accuse the other of belligerence, rudeness and disrespect. This factual dispute only serves to emphasize that a determination whether Castriotta's conduct was unethical must be based on a full and properly developed record, as required by the Act. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29; N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.8.

Importantly, in concluding that procedurally the Board should have brought its concerns about Castriotta before the Commission and should not have censured her locally, I reach no determination regarding whether Castriotta's presence and conduct at Roxbury High School on April 27, 2010, and her interactions with the media thereafter, violated her ethical obligations as a member of the Board of Education.

Castriotta's Right to Indemnification

Castriotta asserts that she is entitled to indemnification for the legal fees and costs incurred by her in bringing this action, urging that her rights spring from N.J.S.A. 18A: 2-20. The statute provides in pertinent part:

> Whenever a civil, administrative, criminal or quasi-criminal action or other legal proceeding has been or shall be brought against any person for any act or omission arising out of and in the course of the performance of his duties as a member of a board of education . . . the board of education shall defray all costs of defending such action, including reasonable counsel fees and expenses, together with costs of appeal, if any, and shall save harmless and protect such person from any financial loss resulting therefrom . . . .

The parties argue at some length about whether Castriotta's actions arose in the course of the performance of her duties as a board member, and they correctly recognize that this would be a critical factual underpinning to any successful indemnification claim. The record developed thus far does not permit me to determine if Castriotta acted within the scope of her duties on the morning of April 27, 2010. But I CONCLUDE that Castriotta's claim to indemnification must fail for a more fundamental reason; that is, that no civil or administrative action or other legal proceeding has been brought against her. I am unpersuaded that the Board's censure action constituted a "legal proceeding" within the intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-20. A legal proceeding is one brought in a legal forum, such as before a court or administrative agency. The only legal proceeding here was brought by Castriotta herself. Indeed, Castriotta cannot have it both ways—she has contested the process used by the Board to censure her precisely because it was not a proper legal proceeding, with formal discovery and a formal hearing process, as contemplated by the Act.

Castriotta's claim for indemnification has some surface appeal. Had Castriotta been permitted to defend herself in an administrative proceeding, her request for indemnification might have been viable. But the usual policy applied by New Jersey courts is to require parties to bear their own legal fees and costs. Rule 4:42-9 requires a denial of fees in the normal course, providing that "[n]o fee for legal services shall be allowed in the taxed costs or otherwise," except in certain special circumstances enumerated in the Rules themselves, or when counsel fees are specifically permitted by statute. Our courts have held that, "sound judicial administration will best be advanced by having each litigant bear his own counsel fee except in those few situations specially designated." Gerhardt v. Continental Ins. Co., 48 N.J. 291, 301 (1966). Likewise, the Commissioner is without authority to award attorney's fees or legal costs. Balsley v. N.

Hunterdon Bd. of Educ., 117 N.J. 434 (1990); Farmer v. Camden Bd. of Educ., EDU 6790-01, Initial Decision (November 17, 2003), adopted, Commissioner, (December 23, 2003), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.[4]

I CONCLUDE that Castriotta's claims for indemnification should be dismissed.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the Board's motion for summary decision is GRANTED as to petitioner's claim for indemnification, and these claims are DISMISSED. As to the remaining claims in the petition, summary decision is GRANTED in favor of petitioner, and the May 24, 2010, resolution of the Board censuring Castriotta is ORDERED vacated.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

[4] The Board contends that Castriotta seeks punitive damages, but the petition does not appear to claim extraordinary damages. In any event, the Board correctly asserts that punitive damages are unavailable before the Commissioner. Dunn v. Elizabeth Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 279, 281; Farmer, supra, EDU 6790-01.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 02898-11
AGENCY DKT. NO. 45-2/11

MICHAEL ESPOSITO,
Petitioner,
v.
STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY
Respondent.

Alfred Maurice, Esq. for petitioner (Springstead and Maurice, attorneys)

Robert E. Murray, Esq. for respondent

Record Closed: April 12, 2011 Decided: April 13, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on March 11, 2011, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Petitioner, who had been employed as a custodian by the respondent school district since 1999, asserts that he held his position under tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. He challenges the action of the respondent in terminating his employment effective December 13, 2010. The school district filed an answer to the petition in which it advised that petitioner's challenge to his discharge is the subject of a request for binding arbitration, which petitioner has filed pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement between the Paterson Custodial and Maintenance Association and the district. An arbitrator, Martin Scheinman, Esq., has been appointed to hear petitioner's claim to continued employment.

Via letter dated April 5, 2011, I was advised by Mr. Luis Rojas, Jr., the Director of Labor Relations for the school district, that petitioner has agreed to withdraw the petition pending before the Commissioner of Education, and pursue the remedies available to him before the arbitrator. An agreement confirming the understanding of the parties that this matter is withdrawn is attached to Mr. Rojas' letter, and has been executed by petitioner, a representative of his Association, and Mr. Rojas on behalf of the school district. A certification submitted by Mr. Rojas on April 12, 2011, confirms that he signed the withdrawal agreement on behalf of the school district.

TRENTON BOARD OF EDUCATION,
MERCER COUNTY,

Richard A. Friedman, Esq., for petitioners (Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum & Friedman, attorneys)

Dana M. Lane, Esq., for respondent (Hill Wallack LLP, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 12, 2011 Decided: April 12, 2011

BEFORE ISRAEL D. DUBIN, ALJ:

This matter arises out of petitioners' claim that non-tenured and less senior individuals were placed in positions from which petitioners were removed due to a reduction in force. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for determination as a contested case on November 16, 2006. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

Following a series of settlement conferences, the parties agreed to a settlement and executed a Settlement Agreement and Release containing the terms of their settlement (Exhibit J-1). The Board of Education also adopted a Resolution approving the settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I find:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I therefore conclude that this settlement agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and should be approved; that the parties should be directed to comply with the settlement terms; and that these proceedings should be concluded. It is so ordered.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

TRENTON EDUCATION ASSOCIATION, Petitioner, et al., vs. CITY OF TRENTON, BOARD OF EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY, Respondent.	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, STATE OF NEW JERSEY OAL DOCKET NO.: EDU 08748-2006 S AGENCY REF. NO.: 342-9/06 STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the City of Trenton ("the Board") is a body politic and corporate, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which is entrusted with maintaining and conducting the public schools of the Trenton Public School District; and

WHEREAS, the Trenton Education Association ("TEA") is the exclusive representative for the purpose of negotiations for a unit consisting of all employees of the Board in specifically defined teaching staff positions; and

WHEREAS, the Board implemented a Reduction in Force ("RIF") in the spring of 2006 to take effect for the 2006-2007 school year; and

WHEREAS, several teaching positions, including the positions of Teacher Leader, Facilitator, Liaison, Tutor, Specialist and Coach were affected by the 2006 RIF; and

WHEREAS, TEA filed an administrative Petition of Appeal with the Department of Education in September 2006 alleging that several of its members, including individuals in the above-referenced positions were not provided with lawful position changes and/or salary differences in conjunction with the 2006 RIF; and

WHEREAS, the Board filed an Answer to the Petition of Appeal in November 2006, generally denying the allegations and setting forth affirmative defenses; and

WHEREAS, the matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case for hearing, assigned to Administrative Law Judge Dubin; and

WHEREAS, the parties wishing to resolve the within matter amicably without the need for further, protracted litigation, while achieving the goals of both parties and the public interest, hereby stipulate to settle same, subject to the terms and conditions set forth herein, upon approval by the Commissioner of Education;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises contained herein, the legal sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, they agree as follows:

1. Dismissal of All Claims

This Stipulation is expressly contingent upon and subject to approval by the Commissioner of Education of New Jersey. The parties agree and consent that upon approval of this Stipulation of Settlement by the Commissioner, all claims by and between the parties are to be dismissed. Petitioners further waive any right to any additional compensation or position with Respondent that was the subject of this settlement. Upon final approval of this Stipulation, Respondent will forward settlement checks, minus regular payroll deductions, to all Petitioners actively employed by the Board. Petitioners not currently employed by Respondent will receive a settlement check and will be issued a Form 1099 for tax purposes. Each Petitioner receiving a settlement amount in conjunction with this matter has thoroughly reviewed and signed an individual Rider to this Stipulation which details the specific settlement amount for each claimant. Attached to this Stipulation and incorporated by reference herein are 46 signed Riders. Respondent agrees to provide for Petitioners seeking applications for lawful adjustments to pension credits pursuant to N.J.A.C. 17:3-4.7 the information that it is authorized or required to provide by law or regulation. However, Respondent makes no representation of a guarantee of or entitlement to any adjustment to pension credits in relation to this settlement. The parties agree, however, that in the event this Stipulation is not approved by the Commissioner of Education, they fully reserve their rights to proceed with this litigation and/or any other cause of action that they might have against one another and that their obligations under this agreement shall be null and void.

2. Public Interest

Settlement of this matter is in the public interest as it avoids the financial, legal and administrative burden which will result from protracted litigation where all parties agree to these terms of settlement. The parties are in agreement that it is in the best interests of all parties and the Trenton public schools for this matter to be resolved in this manner. Therefore, the parties agree to move forward with a prompt settlement and avoid further unnecessary litigation. This Stipulation has also been approved by the State-appointed Fiscal Monitor currently assigned to Respondent.

3. Release

In exchange for the mutual promises and consideration set forth in this Stipulation, each party and its successors, heirs and assigns hereby irrevocably and unconditionally waives, releases and forever discharges any claims or rights, whether known or unknown, which either party has or may have against the other regarding the 2006 Reduction in Force, specifically for claims which could have been raised in the within matter to any positions for the time period up until the conclusion of the 2010-2011 school year.

4. Board Approval

The Board President has been duly authorized by the Board at its Executive Session on March 14, 2011 to execute this Stipulation on behalf of the Board of Education. The Board will execute a Resolution adopting the terms of settlement, which shall be attached to this Stipulation and forwarded to Administrative Law Judge Dubin for review, approval and transmittal to the Commissioner of Education for final approval.

5. Assent to Terms

All parties hereby acknowledge having entered into this Stipulation with a full understanding of their rights and that they were fully informed of the implications of this Stipulation by legal counsel. No party enters into this Stipulation under duress. All parties enter this Stipulation by their free will and volition. All parties were given the opportunity to fully consider the terms and conditions of this settlement.

6. Entire Agreement

This Stipulation of Settlement represents the entire understanding of the parties as to the settlement and may be modified only in a subsequent written instrument, duly executed by the parties. No other representations of any kind shall be binding upon the parties.

7. Severability

In the event that a court or agency of competent jurisdiction shall deem any part of this Stipulation of Settlement to be contrary to law, the remaining portions of the agreement shall remain in full force and effect.

8. Governing Law

This Stipulation of Settlement and all provisions hereof shall be governed by and construed under the laws of the State of New Jersey.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have knowingly and voluntarily executed and delivered this Stipulation of Settlement on the dates set forth below.

PETITIONERS,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF NEPTUNE, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON MOTION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter – which included a digital recording of the proceeding conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 8, 2010 – and the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) Order have been reviewed. No exceptions were filed.

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the portion of the petitioners' August 23, 2010 petition of appeal which challenges the Board's adoption of its Original Uniform Policy – adopted by the Board in 2008 and of which petitioners were admittedly aware in August 2009 – is appropriately dismissed as time barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Commissioner further agrees with the ALJ that the circumstances existing in this matter present no justification for relaxation of the timelines dictated by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the ALJ granting the Board's motion for partial summary decision is adopted. That portion of the instant petition of appeal contesting the Board's adoption of its Original Uniform Policy is hereby dismissed. This matter shall proceed at the OAL for proceedings deemed necessary to bring it to conclusion.

ORDER GRANTING MOTION FOR PARTIAL SUMMARY DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 9854-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 483-8/10

ROBERT W. O'BRIEN, JR., AND MEGAN O'BRIEN, Petitioners,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF NEPTUNE, MONMOUTH COUNTY,
Respondent.

Robert O'Brien, Jr., and Megan O'Brien, petitioners, pro se

James T. Hundley, Esq., appearing for respondent (Hundley and Parry, attorneys)

BEFORE JOHN R. FUTEY, ALJ:

This is an Order issued relative to a partial summary decision motion filed by respondent, the Board of Education of the Township of Neptune (hereinafter "Neptune"). A response was submitted by petitioners, Robert W. O'Brien, Jr., and Megan O'Brien (hereinafter "O'Brien"). A reply to that response was made by Neptune, as a result of which oral argument was presented on December 8, 2010. At that time, certain concerns at the hearing were further identified which required additional briefing by the parties. Upon receipt of those additional responses, the matter closed for purposes of the instant motion.

FACTUAL BACKGROUND

This is a challenge to Neptune's adoption of a public school clothing uniform policy on September 24, 2008. On September 26, 2007, the Neptune Township Board of Education ("respondent" or "district" or "Neptune") had adopted a resolution approving Board Policy and Regulation 5511, Dress and Grooming ("Section 5511"), which was applicable to all pupils enrolled in the District, pre-school through high school. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibits 1 & 2.)

The Superintendent of Schools and Chief Administrator of the Neptune Township, Monmouth County, Public School District, David A. Mooij (hereinafter "Mooij"), certified that in January 2008 an ad hoc committee, comprised of board members, central office administrators, building principals, teaching staff members, and parents, was organized in the district "to investigate and make recommendations concerning the implementation of a pupil school uniform policy in the District." (Mooij Cert. ¶¶ 1 & 3.) From then until April 2008, the ad hoc committee reviewed pupil school uniform policies and regulations in other public school districts and visited another public school district that had a uniform policy. (Id. at ¶¶ 4-5.) In April 2008, "the ad hoc committee recommended that the Board adopt a mandatory school uniform requirement for all district pupils; grades pre-kindergarten through grade twelve." (Id. at ¶ 6.) However, Mooij further certified that while the Board accepted the recommendations, it decided to implement a uniform requirement for pupils attending the district's Early Childhood Center ("ECC") and elementary schools. (Id. at ¶ 7.) He then stated that the Board determined that if the uniform requirement was successful in the lower grades, "the school uniform policy would be incrementally extended to pupils attending the District's Middle School and High School." (Id. at ¶ 8.)

Neptune adopted a resolution to amend Section 5511 to include a uniform requirement for the ECC and elementary schools after a first reading on April 30, 2008, at a public meeting. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 3; Mooij Cert. ¶ 9.) From April 30, 2008, until September 24, 2008, Neptune held twelve public board meetings in which the public was permitted to and did comment. (Mooij Cert. ¶¶ 10-11.) Mooij also indicated that in September 2008 Neptune conducted a survey of parents attending Back to School Nights at the ECC, five elementary schools, the middle school and high school with results showing that parents overwhelmingly approved of the proposed pupil school uniform policy. (Mooij Cert. ¶ 12.) On September 24, 2008, Neptune adopted a resolution to amend Section 5511 after a second reading to include a school uniform requirement for pupils attending the district's ECC and elementary schools ("Original Uniform Policy"). (Neptune 's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 4-5; Mooij Cert. ¶¶ 13.)

The Original Uniform Policy, applicable only to the ECC and elementary schools, was set forth in Section E of Section 5511. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 5.) Section E contained a paragraph establishing exemptions for compliance with the policy including a "philosophical opt out provision":

> 11. A parent(s)/legal guardian(s) may request an exemption for their child wearing the school uniform by completing the Application for School Uniform Policy Exemption stating a bona fide religious or philosophical objection to wearing the school uniform.
> [(Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 5 at 7.)]

On October 24, 2008, Mooij notified parents and guardians of pupils enrolled in the ECC and elementary schools about the adoption of the Original Uniform Policy. (Mooij Cert. Exhibit A.) The Original Uniform Policy became effective on February 2, 2009. Parents and guardians of pupils enrolled in the ECC and elementary schools were reminded of this effective date on January 16, 2009. (Mooij Cert. Exhibit B.)

Petitioners Robert W. O'Brien, Jr., and Megan O'Brien enrolled their child in the district's kindergarten program in August 2009 and received a copy of the Student and Parent Handbook discussing the Original Uniform Policy. (Mooij Cert. ¶ 21, Exhibit D.) Petitioners first learned of the Original Uniform Policy at their child's kindergarten orientation in August 2009. (O'Brien Answer to Inter. # 28.)

In September 2009, Neptune published an article in its newspaper notifying parents that the Original Uniform Policy would continue for the 2009-2010 school year. (Mooij Cert. Exhibit C.) That same article stated:

> [Respondent] has reconvened an ad hoc committee to review suggestions garnered from surveys that were submitted before the end of the school year and over the summer. A parent representative from each school will serve on the committee. Under consideration at this time is the addition of a darker color for the pants.
>
> The Board has determined that the Uniformity of Dress Policy at the Middle School or High School will not move forward during the 2009-2010 school year. In the event that the Board considers the implementation of the policy at the second level, significant opportunity for parental input and advance information will be afforded.
>
> [Respondent] has established an email address, uniformity@neptune.k12.nj.us that may be accessed at any time to provide comment regarding this policy.
> [(Ibid.)]

Thereafter, on April 28, 2010, Neptune adopted a resolution, on the first reading, to revise Section 5511. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 6.) On May 26, 2010, Neptune adopted the same resolution on the second reading at a public meeting. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 7.) The newly-revised Section 5511 featured three significant changes. Two such changes amended the Original Uniform Policy ("Amended Uniform Policy"): the philosophical opt out provision was eliminated from the exemptions, and uniform enforcement procedures were amended. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 8 at 7.) The third change occurred in the initial language of Section 5511 in which Neptune established that the uniform policy in Section E would apply, not only to ECC and elementary school students, but also to students in the Neptune Middle School. (Neptune's Answer to O'Brien Exhibit 8 at 1.) Essentially, then, Neptune adopted an Amended Uniform Policy for students in the district's ECC and elementary schools, and adopted a new uniform policy, identical to the Amended Uniform Policy, for its middle school students which appeared to be consistent with the previously announced determination that it would otherwise extend the policy to the upper grades if it had worked successfully in the lower grades.

On August 23, 2010, the Commissioner of the Department of Education ("Commissioner") received a petition of appeal from petitioners requesting that Section E of Section 5511 be rescinded on the basis that the Original Uniform Policy and policy adopted on May 26, 2010, were not requested by principals, staff and parents of an individual school in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and -8. As to their challenge against Neptune's actions on May 26, 2010, O'Brien specifically stated

> On May 26, 2010, [respondent] adopted a new Uniformity of Dress policy that applied to all Pre-K, Elementary and Middle schools within the district. The policy claims to be in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and N.J.S.A. 18A:11-8. There was no request from the Principal or staff of any District school, including the Middle School, for this policy. We have spoken to a few Principals who have confirmed that they have not requested the policy and I have a letter dated June 21, 2010 [sic] from the Board Secretary Peter Leonard that states that no documentation exists of any Principal or staff member requesting this policy.

On September 2, 2010, the Commissioner received Neptune's answer to the petition, in which it set forth six affirmative defenses: 1) failure to file petition contesting the adoption of the Original Uniform Policy within ninety days pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); 2) O'Brien's demand for rescission of the Original Uniform Policy is barred by the equitable defense of latches; 3) the Original Uniform Policy was adopted in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and -8; 4) the Amended Uniform Policy was adopted in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and -8; 5) the petition fails to set forth specific allegations and essential facts contesting respondent's May 26, 2010, resolution to eliminate the philosophical opt out provision; and 6) petitioners' demand to immediately rescind the uniform policy pertaining to the middle school is barred by the equitable defense of latches.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") on September 8, 2010, and received by the OAL the next day. On October 5, 2010, the OAL received respondent's motion for partial summary decision arguing that the portion of the petition contesting respondent's adoption of the Original Uniform Policy should be dismissed because petitioners failed to contest its adoption in a timely manner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The OAL received petitioners' response on November 3, 2010. Petitioners, appearing pro se in this matter, asserted that a dispute of material fact exists as to whether respondent had the required requests to implement the policy pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and -8, and, as such, summary decision is not appropriate at this time. On November 5, 2010, the OAL received respondent's reply in which it reiterated its arguments.

As indicated hereinabove, a status conference was held on December 8, 2010. Oral argument on respondent's motion was heard at that time as well. As a result of petitioners' responsive argument regarding the elimination of the philosophical opt out provision, this tribunal requested that petitioners submit additional responses to the timeliness issue raised in respondent's motion for partial summary decision, since they had failed to address it in their response to the instant motion initially. (Furthermore, this tribunal requested that both parties submit briefs on the issue of whether petitioners have standing to challenge respondent's adoption of a middle school uniform policy. That issue has not been framed for purposes of the instant motion for partial summary decision however.) Briefs were to be submitted on December 29, 2010. Upon the parties' request, that date was extended to January 10, 2011.

On January 6, 2011, the OAL received petitioners' supplemental response to respondent's motion for partial summary decision. Petitioners clarified that their primary concern is respondent's elimination of the philosophical opt out provision through the adoption of the Amended Uniform Policy, an adoption that they believe did not conform to the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-7 and -8. Petitioners also once again addressed whether summary decision is appropriate by arguing that a dispute of fact exists regarding whether the policies were properly adopted. They now argue that their entire complaint is not time-barred because that (i.e., of the opt out provision) adoption occurred less than ninety days prior to the filing of their petition. They further argue, in essence, that should it be determined that their petition against the Amended Uniform Policy is time-barred because the Original Uniform Policy was adopted in September 2008, then the 90-day rule should be relaxed because strict adherence may result in injustice. The OAL received respondent's follow-up submissions regarding issues of timeliness (and standing) on January 10, 2011. Respondent reasserted its argument that petitioners are time-barred from continuing their action against its adoption of the Original Uniform Policy. Respondent, though conceding that petitioners' action against respondent's adoption of the Amended Uniform Policy is not time-barred, further argues that petitioners never raised the issue concerning the philosophical opt out provision in the petition or in the discovery conducted in the matter and, therefore, must amend their petition. Yet, it asserts such an amendment would be precluded by the 90-day rule. (As to the standing issue, respondent states that petitioners do not have standing to challenge respondent's adoption of a school uniform policy for the middle school. Once again, however, that issue is not part of the motion for partial summary decision at this time.)

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The only issue for purposes of this partial summary decision motion is whether Petitioners' Challenge to the Original Uniform Policy is time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3, a petition "for the Commissioner's determination of a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws" must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing" unless "a specific statute, regulation or court order provides for a period of limitation shorter than 90 days for the filing of a particular type of appeal." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(a)(i). The purpose of this limitation is two-fold: to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time and to punish laziness and provide repose. Kaprow v. Berkeley Twp. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993). The 90-day countdown under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), therefore, begins when a petitioner "knows or has reason to know" of "the existence of facts that may equate in law with . . . a cause of action." Ibid. (quoting Farrell v. Votator Div., 62 N.J. 111, 115 (1973); citing Burd v. N.J. Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291 (1978)).

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16 authorizes the Commissioner to relax procedural rules in his/her discretion "where a strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice." Id. at 590-91. However, relaxation of the 90-day rule "is invoked rarely and not unless strict application of the rule would be inappropriate or unnecessary, or injustice would occur, or the Commissioner finds a substantial constitutional issue or other issue of fundamental public interest beyond that of concern only to the parties themselves." D.Q. o/b/o S.Q. v. State Operated School Dist. of Newark Essex Co., EDU 7544-08, initial decision, (Dec. 5, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (Jan. 21, 2009) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

In determining when the 90-day countdown begins for board actions that are later amended, the focus should be on the challenged action and not on the date that action was last amended. In Coles v. Bayonne Bd. of Educ., EDU 10535-06, initial decision (Nov. 2, 2006), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 8, 2006), aff'd, State Bd. (Apr. 9, 2007), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, aff'd, No. A-4642-06T1 (App. Div. Apr. 29, 2008), the petitioners were time-barred from challenging a school uniform policy adopted on June 19, 2006, and amended several times to incorporate new rules for non-compliance, with the last amendment occurring on August 29, 2006. The petitioners brought challenges to the policy on October 10, 2006, arguing they had religious and medical exemptions. The ALJ determined that the action was time-barred because petitioners did not challenge the subsequent amendments but rather the district's initial action adopting the uniform policy. Therefore, the 90-day period began to run on that date. When addressing the petitioners' arguments that the 90-day rule should be relaxed, the ALJ determined that no novel Constitutional question existed over which the OAL had jurisdiction; that although the interests were not purely private, all district proceedings were formal and open to the public and, as such, the interests were not justifiable to relax the rule; and that a challenge to "the Board's action in implementing the Policy [by stating that it was] in violation of the [enabling] statute and applicable school laws . . . does not justify relaxing the 90-day rule." Ibid. In affirming the Commissioner's adoption of this decision, the Appellate Division stated that since the ALJ found that petitioners challenged the adoption of the policy and not the amendments made to it, petitioners had "failed to provide any reasonable excuse for their delay in pursuing the matter." Coles v. Bayonne Bd. of Educ., No. A-4642-06T1 *3-4 (App. Div. Apr. 29, 2008).

In the instant matter, by contrast, it is clear from the petition transmitted to the OAL and I FIND that petitioners are specifically challenging respondent's actions taken in adopting the Original Uniform Policy, in adopting the Amended Uniform Policy, and also in adopting a school uniform policy for the middle school. They assert that these policies were adopted in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-8, which sets forth the circumstances under which districts may adopt school uniform policies. The Original Uniform Policy was adopted in April 2008 at a public meeting, and petitioners also admit that they were aware of this policy in August 2009. It is undisputed, therefore, that the challenge to the adoption of the Original Uniform Policy has been brought well beyond ninety days after the district adopted it and after petitioners admit they were aware of the policy.

In their supplemental brief, petitioners argue that the 90-day rule should be relaxed. However, the circumstances of this matter, as they have been presented, do not evince any reason for doing so. The circumstances are quite similar to those that the ALJ and the Appellate Division in Coles, supra, determined unsupportable of relaxation: no novel Constitutional question exists over which the OAL has jurisdiction; although the interests are not purely private, the district held public hearings; and a challenge to respondent's action in adopting the Original Uniform Policy by stating that it was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-8 does not justify relaxing the 90-day rule. Furthermore, petitioners have not provided any reasonable excuse for their delay in pursuing the matter. Therefore, based upon the concession by the O'Briens that they failed to file an appropriate petition to challenge the original policy within 90 days of its formal adoption, I FIND that petitioners' challenge to respondent's adoption of the Original Uniform Policy should be dismissed as requested by respondent.

However, the Amended Uniform Policy and the uniform policy for the Middle School were adopted on May 26, 2010, and the petition was filed on August 23, 2010, one day before the 90-day period would have expired. Since petitioners specify that their challenge is against the way in which respondent adopted those policies, petitioners' challenge to respondent's adoption of the amended uniform policies is not time-barred and cannot be dismissed on those grounds.

The requirements for filing petitions challenging board actions pursuant to the State's school laws are found at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4. Subsection (a) of that regulation requires that > (a) A petition shall include . . . a statement of the specific allegation(s) and essential facts supporting them which have given rise to a dispute under the school laws; the relief petitioner is seeking; . . . . The petition should also cite, if known to petitioner, the section or sections of the school laws under which the controversy has arisen.

>
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4(a).]

The petition in the instant matter specifically alleged that respondent failed to follow statutory requirements when it adopted "a Uniformity of Dress policy . . . for all Pre-K and Elementary schools" and "a new Uniformity of Dress policy that applied to all Pre-K, Elementary and Middle schools within the district." The petition provided the dates upon which these actions took place and specified what actions or omissions supported the alleged violation of law. The petition also cited the sections of law that were allegedly violated.

Respondent asserts that petitioners' failure to specifically state in the petition that they are challenging respondent's elimination of the philosophical opt out provision requires that petitioners amend their petition to bring such a challenge, an amendment that, as respondent states, would be time-barred if requested. However, respondent is confusing the issues. The remaining challenge here is against respondent's adoption of the Amended Uniform Policy and the uniform policy for the middle school. The petition specifically alleged facts regarding respondent's actions and whether they conformed to the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-8. These are the essential facts that N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4(a) requires to be included in the petition. Petitioners, understandably but mistakenly so, identified respondent's actions on May 26, 2010, as one action – the adoption of a new policy for ECC, elementary, and middle school students; yet, evident in that is their challenge to respondent's action with regard to the policy as it pertains to the ECC and elementary schools. The question regarding the philosophical opt out provision arose when concerns regarding petitioners' standing to challenge respondent's actions began to surface. The facts regarding the elimination of the philosophical opt out provision are not essential to the outcome of this instant matter. Therefore, the omission of this information from the petition is not detrimental to petitioners' appeal and does not require that the petition be amended. And I so FIND. Hence, respondent's argument that petitioners would be time-barred from amending the petition to include a challenge to the elimination of the provision need not be addressed.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based on all of the foregoing and after having given deference to the arguments advanced by both sides, I CONCLUDE that petitioners' challenge against the adoption of the Original Uniform Policy is time-barred under N.J.S.A. 6A:3-1.3(i) and should be dismissed. The challenge to respondent's adoption of a clothing uniform policy on September 24, 2008, is untimely, as it was brought well beyond ninety days after petitioners reasonably should have known about it, and an amendment to the district's overall uniform policy did not restart the ninety-day countdown. It is so ORDERED.

However, as conceded by the district, petitioners may proceed with the challenge against the adoption of the Amended Uniform Policy. The adoption eliminated a significant provision from the original policy that directly impacts the parents of students in respondent's ECC and elementary schools. In that regard, I CONCLUDE that petitioners were not required under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4(a) to specifically establish in their petition that they were challenging the elimination of the philosophical opt out provision, as they properly specified they were challenging the adoption of the policy.

It is so further ORDERED.

It is therefore, ORDERED that the motion for partial summary decision by Neptune is GRANTED for all the reasons stated hereinabove. The matter shall proceed to hearing with reference to the adoption of the middle school uniform policy only.

Accordingly, the due process hearing is rescheduled for August 16, 17 and 18, 2011, at the OAL, Mercerville, commencing at 9:00 a.m. In anticipation of that hearing, the parties shall submit to this administrative law judge all of their exhibits, premarked for identification (P-1, et. seq. as to petitioners, and R-1, et. seq., as to Neptune) in loose leaf three ring binders, including index separators and a table of contents as to each, no later than August 5, 2011, along with their final and complete witness lists and a joint stipulation of facts.

It is so ORDERED.

This order granting partial summary decision is being submitted under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(e) for immediate review. This recommended order may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make the final decision in this matter. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended order shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this order was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a tenured 10-month secretary working with the District's Child Study Team, appealed the Board's decision to reduce her hours of employment from full-time to .6 time as part of a reduction in force in May 2010. Petitioner alleged that the Board maintained the full-time employment of a non-tenured secretary, while reducing petitioner's employment in violation of her tenure rights pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. Respondent contended that petitioner's rights were not violated, as the non-tenured employee in question – the Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent, a 12-month position with supervisory responsibilities – did not hold the same or similar position as the petitioner, who is employed as a secretary. The respondent Board filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: there are no genuine issues of material fact at issue, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner's job description for her position as secretary is consistent with the common understanding of the duties of a secretary, while the duties of the Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent are significantly different; the Administrative Assistant is a confidential position which includes supervisory responsibilities and the assumption of the Superintendent's duties in his absence. The ALJ concluded that the respondent did not violate petitioner's tenure rights when it reduced her time and compensation while maintaining the Administrative Assistant as a full-time employee because their positions are not substantially similar. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision to the Board, and dismissed the petition.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that respondent did not violate petitioner's tenure rights when it reduced her time and compensation pursuant to a reduction in force while maintaining the incumbent in the position of Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

JOANNE BURGER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF MAYWOOD, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Upon review of the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), petitioner's exceptions and respondent's replies thereto, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that respondent did not violate petitioner's tenure rights when it reduced her time and compensation pursuant to a reduction in force while maintaining the incumbent employee in the position of Administrative Assistant to the District Superintendent.

Both of petitioner's exceptions to the Initial Decision relate to the same premise. Petitioner argues that her own position and the Administrative Assistant position that she seeks are both secretarial positions, and that she is consequently entitled to be placed into the latter. Notwithstanding the ALJ's findings that – despite some overlap in duties – the positions require significantly different responsibilities, petitioner maintains that both positions are exclusively comprised of secretarial tasks and that the Administrative Assistant to the District Superintendent position (AADS) requires no duties that are too specialized for her to perform.

At the outset, the Commissioner cannot base a tenure decision on speculation. Thus, petitioner's contention that there is no task in the AADS job description that she could not perform cannot serve as a basis for determining whether the AADS position is substantially similar to petitioner's secretarial job.

Petitioner's exceptions appear to ignore two significant portions of the job description for the AADS. First, it is a supervisory position. The incumbent is charged with supervising all secretarial and clerical staff assigned to the superintendent's office. (Joint Exhibit J-11) Second, the AADS is charged with coordinating school-level and district-wide administrative activities (emphasis added). (Ibid.)[1] As the ALJ found, petitioner's job does not include such responsibilities – which are more comprehensive than the duties set forth in petitioner's job description. (Joint Exhibit J-12)

Based upon the differences in the two positions at issue – which differences are clearly set forth in the record – the Commissioner cannot classify the Administrative Assistant position as strictly secretarial, and cannot find that the two jobs demand identical responsibilities. Consequently, the Commissioner cannot conclude that respondent violated petitioner's tenure rights by not placing her in the AADS position. See, e.g., Mount v. Board of Education of the Borough of Tinton Falls, Monmouth County, Commissioner Decision No. 44-01 (Feb. 7, 2001).

Accordingly, the petition is dismissed.

BEFORE LELAND S. McGEE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Joanne Burger, appeals the decision of Respondent, Maywood Board of Education, to reduce her hours of employment while maintaining the full-time employment of a non-tenured secretary in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2. Petitioner further alleges that Respondent failed to take formal action against Petitioner by adopting a resolution reducing Petitioner's employment by name in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(a).

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

Summary Decision

Summary decision by an Administrative Law Judge is permissible where there is no genuine issue of material fact challenged and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). Summary decision proceedings are subject to the same standard that applies to summary judgment matters in the Superior Court. Contini v. Bd. of Ed. of Newark, 286 N.J. Super. 106, 121 (App. Div. 1995), certif. denied, 145 N.J. 372 (1996). Under this standard, the judge must determine whether the "materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party . . . , are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Id. at 122 (quoting Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995)). A motion for summary judgment will be granted where the pleadings and certifications do not show the existence of a genuine issue of material fact which would require disposition by a plenary trial. Ziemba v. Riverview Med. Ctr., 275 N.J. Super. 293, 298 (App. Div. 1994).

In the present case, the parties filed a Joint Stipulation of Facts. Petitioner did not dispute that it was necessary for Respondent to impose a reduction in force due to a cut in State aid in the amount of $859,000. Therefore, the material facts and legal issues are not in dispute. I CONCLUDE that it is appropriate to decide this matter by way of summary decision.

Tenure

Tenure statutes are "designed to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording to [covered employees] a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service." Viemeister v. Bd. of Educ. of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). In general, they are meant to protect competent and qualified employees who have completed a probationary period from removal for

"unfounded, flimsy, or political reasons." Zimmerman v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, 38 N.J. 65, 71 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508, 9 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1963).

To acquire the security of tenure, the precise conditions enunciated in the applicable statute must be met. See Picogna v. Bd. of Educ. of Cherry Hill, 143 N.J. 391, 400 (1996); Kletzkin v. Bd. of Educ. of Spotswood, 136 N.J. 275, 278 (1994); Spiewak v. Bd. of Educ. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63, 72 (1982); Zimmerman v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, supra, 38 N.J. at 72. Tenure "arises only by passage of the time fixed by the statute . . . ." Canfield v. Bd. of Educ. of Pine Hill, 97 N.J. Super. 483, 490 (App. Div. 1967) (Gualkin, J., dissenting), rev'd on dissent, 51 N.J. 400 (1968).

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 specifically governs the tenure of individuals who are employed by school districts in secretarial or clerical positions. In addition to specifying the statutory requirements for acquiring tenure in these positions, N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 also provides that individuals who acquire tenure under the statute "shall not be dismissed . . . except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense and only in the manner prescribed by [N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10]."

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, in turn, provides that no person under tenure "shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation, . . . except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing . . . ." However, it also includes the following exception: "Nothing in this section shall prevent the reduction of the number of any such persons holding such offices, positions or employments under the conditions and with the effect provided by law." In other words, a local board of education may conduct a reduction in force abolishing certain positions, even where tenured positions are affected. Dezuzio v. Bd. of Educ. of Bound Brook, EDU 771-06 (August 7, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (September 18, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml> (citing Klinger v. Bd. of Educ. of Cranbury, 190 N.J. Super. 354, 357 (App. Div. 1982), certif. denied, 93 N.J. 277 (1983) (school board may abolish the positions of tenured teachers as part of a reduction in force (RIF), if done for reasons of economy)).[1]

[1] Under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, the statute governing the tenure of teaching staff members, boards have the authority to eliminate a position, even when held by a tenured staff member, "for reasons of economy or because of reduction in

"Tenure in a position, even if it is a secretarial position, requires the conclusion that when other assignments exist within the same position title, a riffed tenured employee who held that position title is entitled to claim that vacancy as opposed to a non-tenured applicant." Sherrill v. Bd. of Educ. of Cinnaminson, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 727, adopted, Commissioner of Education, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 730, aff'd, State Board of Education, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 731. However, unlike teaching staff members who are riffed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, and janitorial employees, who are riffed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:17-4, the statutes applicable to secretaries and clerical employees do not require that terminations resulting from a reduction in force or reemployment of such individuals be made on the basis of seniority, Ferronto v. Board of Education of Wymouth, EDU 8774-02, State Board of Education (Feb. 1, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In the present matter, Respondent concedes that Petitioner is a tenured employee. The gravamen of the petition of appeal[2] is that she "had the right by virtue of her tenure to continue in a full-time position of employment over (Susan) Baliatico," a non-tenured employee who was not affected by the reductions. Petitioner argues that "[t]enure is not limited to a specific position in a district. Rather it is gained as a protection throughout the school system," citing Mackey v. Board of Education of Ridgefield, 1983 S.L.D. 96, 103. She further contends that "there is no legal authority" to distinguish between Baliatico's position of "Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent of Schools" and Petitioner's title of "Secretary." Finally, Petitioner argues that the issue is whether there are distinguishable qualifications required for each of the two positions in question. If not, then Petitioner should be entitled to displace Baliatico.

Words in a statute should be given their ordinary and popular meaning unless it is evident that they are employed in a technical sense. State v. Joas, 34 N.J. 179, 187 (1961). Webster's International Unabridged Dictionary (3rd ed. 1976) defines the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause . . . ."

[2] The petition of appeal was part of the Commissioner's transmittal to the Office of Administrative Law.

"secretary" to mean "one employed to handle correspondence and manage routine and detail work for a superior." Likewise, the Dictionary of Occupational Titles (4th ed. 1991) published by the United States Department of Labor describes the duties of a secretary in a school setting as encompassing composing correspondence, greeting visitors and directing them to their desired destination, disbursing funds and recording financial transactions.

It is well settled that title alone is not dispositive and actual duties should control over labels. See Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of N. Bergen, 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962); Beaute v. Bd. of Educ. of N. Arlington, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 0295-80 (July 28, 1981), adopted, Comm'r (Sept. 14, 1981), aff'd, St. Bd. (Feb. 3, 1982). Here the evidence clearly establishes that Petitioner performed duties traditionally regarded as secretarial responsibilities, including transcribing correspondence, dealing with the public, data entry, answering telephones and handling routine paperwork. Her duties required a degree of skill and knowledge in the use of office equipment and specialized techniques. In addition, the majority of her duties were shared with another employee. (Exhibit J-12.) Unlike paraprofessional assistants such as classroom or lunchroom aides, the scope of her responsibilities was not limited to assisting professionals "by relieving them of easy or repetitive tasks which do not require extensive training and expertise." Roach v. Sch. Dist. of S. Orange-Maplewood, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 370, 374.

In Dennery v. Board of Education of the Passaic County Regional High School District #1, 131 N.J. 626, 639–40 (1993), the Court stated that when the duties of the position in which a staff member has acquired tenure are substantially identical to those of the position that the person seeks, a local school board may not sidestep tenure rights by simply renaming the position or tacking on additional meaningless requirements. The local board must extend the staff member's tenure rights to the newly-created position. In its decision, the Court referred to Viemeister v. Board of Education of Prospect Park, supra, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (wherein it was held that a tenured principal should be reinstated because his position had not in fact been abolished when local school board created the position of "teaching" principal); Vogel v.

Board of Education, State Bd. of Educ. (June 5, 1985), slip op. at 5–6 (explaining that a "[b]oard's decision to abolish a position is not sacrosanct and will be disturbed if it is found that the duties of the abolished position essentially have been transferred to another position so as to defeat the rights of the tenured employee to the abolished position"); and Luppino v. Bayonne Board of Education, 1980 S.L.D. 1028, 1035–36 (ruling that duties of administrator of home instruction and principal of home instruction "were substantially the same" and change of title "did not involve the meaningful addition of extra duties").

However, the mere overlap in duties does not mean that two positions are equivalent for tenure purposes. If a newly-created position is similar to a tenure holder's abolished position but also requires additional duties or different responsibilities, then the newly-created position is not considered to be substantially similar to the former position. Santarsiero v. Bd. of Educ. of Parsippany-Troy Hills, 1984 S.L.D. 854, 879; see also Sandri v. Bd. of Educ. of Bergen Cty. Vocational Sch. Dist., 1986 S.L.D. 1501 (ruling that duties of abolished position of supervisor of guidance/shop were similar but of greater nature and scope than newly-created position of director of special needs and student services); Rufalo v. Bd. of Educ. of Livingston, 1986 S.L.D. 1699 (ruling that despite overlap of duties between post of vice principal and newly-created supervisor position, positions were "substantially different").

Petitioner contends that a dispositive issue is whether there are distinguishable "skill sets" necessary to perform the respective positions. Petitioner's analysis, in oral argument, was that, "walking in the door today," identical skill sets would be necessary for both positions. I disagree with this analysis. Based on the foregoing principles, it must be determined whether the duties of the secretarial position in which the Petitioner acquired tenure are substantially identical to those of Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent, the position that the Petitioner seeks.[3]

[3] Respondent questions whether Petitioner seeks to replace Ms. Baliatico or merely seeks to have her employment reduced to part time in order to comply with the tenure laws. For purposes of this decision, I have assumed that Petitioner seeks to replace Ms. Baliatico.

Petitioner's job description for Secretary is consistent with the "common" understanding of the duties of a secretary. However, the duties of the Administrative Assistant to the Superintendent are significantly different. First, they include supervisory responsibilities, such as the following:

> Supervises the activities of all other secretarial and clerical personnel assigned to the superintendent's office.
>
> Maintains personnel records of all certified staff.
>
> Oversees the hiring of substitute teachers; receives applications; verifies their credentials and prepares substitute teacher lists for board approval.
> [Exhibit J-11.]

Second, the "Job Goal" is "[t]o serve as the superintendent's confidential secretary; supervise all administrative secretarial duties in the superintendent's office; and coordinate school-level and district-wide administrative activities." Ibid. This goal is not similar in form or substance to the duties of Petitioner.

Third, Ms. Baliatico was a "confidential" employee, who admittedly was responsible to "stand in" for the Superintendent as the supervisor of the office when she was out of the office.

In Mount v. Board of Education of Tinton Falls, EDU 120-00, Initial Decision (Dec. 29, 2000), aff'd as modified, Comm'r (Feb. 7, 2001) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, petitioner Mount was hired to a full-time position (Transportation/Attendance Coordinator) and attained tenure in that position. Thereafter, Mount's position was reduced and subsequently eliminated. There were four secretarial positions held by non-tenured employees which Mount believed she should have been offered. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) held in favor of Mount. The Commissioner affirmed the determination of the ALJ with modification. While agreeing that Mount was entitled to one of the secretarial positions held by three of the employees, the Commissioner determined that she was not entitled to the position of the fourth employee, because the position, Clerical Assistant for District Services/Special Programs and Projects, was not secretarial in nature. Finally, the Commissioner held that the Board may exercise its discretion in selecting the secretarial position to be offered to Mount.

Similarly, in Fink v. Board of Education of Hunterdon County Polytech, EDU 6435-06 (Sept. 28, 2009), adopted, Comm'r (Nov. 2, 2009) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, petitioner Fink was a tenured secretary who appealed the respondent Board's decision to retain a full-time, non-tenured Secretary and reduce Fink's job to a part-time position. Fink claimed eligibility for the position of full-time Secretary, asserting that the duties and responsibilities of the position of Coordinator of Adult Education are essentially those of a Secretary, and that the individual holding this position did not have tenure in the secretarial position.

The ALJ in Fink found, inter alia, that mere overlap in duties does not mean that two positions are equivalent for tenure purposes. In that case, the duties of an Adult Education Coordinator involved higher level responsibilities that differ from the clerical and supportive responsibilities of a Secretary. Therefore, the ALJ found that the two positions were not substantially similar. Further, while there may have been some slight overlap in the duties of Secretary and those of Adult Education Coordinator, Fink did not perform virtually all of the duties and responsibilities of an Adult Education Coordinator during the time that she held the position of a tenured Secretary. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that respondent Board did not violate Fink's tenure rights, and ordered the petition dismissed. Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the Final Decision. The petition was dismissed.

Based upon the above analysis, I CONCLUDE that Respondent did not violate Petitioner's tenure rights when it reduced her time and compensation while maintaining Baliatico as a full-time employee, because their positions are not substantially similar.

Accordingly, I ORDER that summary decision is hereby entered on behalf of respondent.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MILLBURN, ESSEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Stephen M. Bacigalupo II, Esq. for petitioner (Kalac, Barger & Bacigalupo, attorneys)

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner seeks an Order for Emergency Relief directing respondent the Board of Education of the Township of Millburn (Essex County)(Board) to allow Millburn Middle School eighth-grade student J.H. to take eighth grade Algebra for the remainder of the 2010-11 school year.

In their underlying petition, petitioners request the following:

An ultimate determination that J.H. should have been automatically enrolled in the accelerated eighth grade math course (i.e. Algebra); an ultimate determination that J.H.'s Accelerated Connected Math 7 third trimester and final grades were miscalculated; an ultimate determination that Principal Michael Cahill's decision/refusal to amend J.H.'s Accelerated Connected Math 7 third trimester and final grades was arbitrary and capricious; an ultimate determination that J.H. will be irreparably harmed should her Accelerated Connected Math 7 third trimester and final grades not be amended; an Order amending J.H.'s Accelerated Connected Math 7 third trimester grade from a "C+" to a "B-"; and an Order amending J.H.'s Accelerated Connected Math 7 final grade from a "B-" to a "B."

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 18, 2011, petitioner filed a petition of appeal and application for emergency relief with the Commissioner of the Department of Education. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter on April 18, 2011, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13, for determination as a contested case. I heard the application for emergency relief on May 2, 2011.

On May 2, 2011, the Board made a motion to disqualify the firm of Kalac, Barger & Bacigalupo from representing petitioner. It contended that a conflict of interest existed because Paul Barger of that firm had represented the Board on various special education and regular education matters until March 2011. I denied the motion to disqualify after finding that none of Barger's previous interaction with Board personnel involved petitioner, J.H. or the claim raised by petitioner.

DISCUSSION

For a request for interim relief or stay, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

(b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

These four standards are in the conjunctive, and petitioner must satisfy all requirements in order to be entitled to the requested relief.

Petitioner's Position

During the 2009-10 school year J.H. took an Accelerated Connected Math 7 course while in seventh grade. The Middle School has a written policy whereby a seventh grade student in an accelerated math course would have to achieve a final grade of at least a "B" to be automatically enrolled in an accelerated eighth grade math course such as Algebra. The policy provides, "[s]tudents who are currently in an accelerated class as a 7th grader must achieve a final grade [of at least] B to remain in an accelerated section in 8th grade. If a 7th grade accelerated student earns a B- or below, he/she will be scheduled for a regular academic course."

J.H.'s father, also J.H., e-mailed daughter J.H.'s seventh-grade math teacher Mary Beth Cimino in June 2010 noting that J.H. had worked out her average for the third trimester, and it looked like it was a seventy-eight. Cimino replied that J.H.'s average was a seventy-eight and a final quiz would be given the next week. Cimino indicated that she would not be inclined to recommend J.H. "out" but believed that J.H.

would benefit from Connected Math 8 rather than Algebra in eighth grade. "It is not always advantageous for every students [sic] to take these classes (Algebra) before they are ready." J.H. scored a twenty-nine out of thirty on her final Accelerated Connected Math 7 quiz. Relying on the representation that J.H.'s pre-quiz average was seventy-eight, petitioner adds the quiz results to her average giving her two-hundred-forty-eight points out a possible three-hundred- eleven points or a 79.7 percent rounded off to 80 percent or a "B-" for her third trimester grade. Accordingly, petitioner contends that, after taking into account a third trimester final grade of "B-" and a first trimester grade of "B-" and a second trimester grade of "B+," the final grade for Accelerated Connected Math 7 should have been a "B." With a final "B" grade, petitioner contends that J.H. was entitled to placement in the accelerated eighth grade math course (i.e. Algebra). He also claims that Cimino led him to believe at the end of seventh grade that, despite her doubts about J.H., she would give her the benefit of the doubt. Despite the information given to petitioner by Cimino, J.H. was given a "C+" for her third trimester and a final grade of "B-." Petitioner considered the "C+" to be a "clerical error" or "miscalculation" that Principal Michael Cahill would not correct. He considers Cahill's refusal and the consequent ineligibility for the accelerated eighth-grade course to be arbitrary.

As a result of a recorded final grade of "B-," J.H. was placed in eighth-grade math rather than the accelerated Algebra class.

On or about February 15, 2011, petitioner received an e-mail from Assistant Superintendent Christine Burton advising that Cahill's decision was final and would not be overruled.

Respondent's Position

Respondent acknowledges the Board Policy set forth above regarding eligibility to move from the Accelerated Connected Math 7 course to eighth grade advanced Algebra—namely a final grade of at least a "B." Cahill contends that the decision for the placement of J.H. and all other students in the Middle School was based on the criteria set forth in the Board Policy and newsletters he sent to parents. The criteria include a final grade of "B" or better, teacher input in the Characteristic Checklist, and a score in the top 25 percent of the class on the NJ ASK standardized assessment. Contrary to the contention of petitioner, J.H. earned a final grade of "B-" in Accelerated Connected Math 7 based on a "B-" average in the first trimester, a "B+" average in the second trimester and a C+ or 78.7 percent for the third trimester. Also, she did not receive more than seven checks in her teacher checklist, and she did not score in the top 25 percent of the class on the NJ ASK. Notwithstanding Cimino's e-mail to petitioner indicating that J.H.'s average before the last quiz was 78 percent, her breakdown of J.H.'s points in the third trimester including the last quiz shows a total of 245 points out of 311 for a 78.7 percent or "C+" average rather than petitioner's calculation of 79.7 percent.

In June 2010, the end of J.H.'s seventh-grade year, Cahill sent a Newsletter to all parents explaining the following criteria for advanced placement:

> Seventh grade students are subject to review for all five academic courses, and I will use the same process incorporating grades, teacher feedback through the checklist, and scores. I am very conservative when placing students in Algebra class in eighth grade because many students re not yet ready for the abstract thinking required to learn Algebra. This Course is doubly accelerated because it is designed for students a year older (ninth grade) and is an accelerated high school level.
> All placement decisions are communicated by the end of July in a mailing that informs parents of the courses into which your child will be scheduled for the 2010-2011 school year.

A similar letter was provided to petitioner during J.H.'s sixth-grade year explaining the criteria for advanced placement.

> ...a packet of information about your child will be assembled which will contain various indicators including overall academic performance, standardized testing, and teacher assessment.... "What information constitutes the review packet? First, a final report card. Second, a Characteristics Checklist. Our faculty has brainstormed and created a list of > ten characteristics that describe the attributes necessary to be successful in an accelerated learning environment.... Third, New Jersey ASK 6 testing results when they become available. Placement in accelerated classes is not determined by ability or potential; it is predicated on demonstrated performance.... The check list allows teachers to view each individual in terms of how they are progressing as learners. Students are assessed separately by all their content area teachers in order for us to see a profile of the individual student. Accelerated learners are required to have seven out of the ten characteristics.

In January 2011, Burton advised that J.H. did not satisfy the criteria for placement in advanced Algebra for eighth grade based on her final grade in seventh grade and failure to score in the top 25 percent of the class on the NJ ASK score. Burton also advised petitioner of an alternative for J.H. whereby she would have the opportunity to take advanced Algebra over the summer of 2011. He declined because he was considering a summer camp for J.H.

Discussion

Petitioner contends that J.H. will suffer irreparable harm if her Accelerated Connected Math 7 third trimester and final grades are not corrected and if she is not permitted to take Algebra for the remainder of the 2010-11 school year. Her failure to take Algebra now imposes severe consequences upon J.H. in that it would delay her ability to take the prerequisite for other advanced science and mathematics courses later in high school. He argues that this choice in eighth grade cements an exclusion from calculus and physics later on. I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not demonstrated that J.H. will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted. The concerns expressed by petitioner are speculative that a delay, as opposed to an inability, in taking this one course will deny her ability to pursue certain fields of study. This is particularly so since she may be able to double up on math courses in high school, especially if, as her father has represented, he has been tutoring her in Algebra. Additionally, Burton has advised that J.H. has the opportunity to take Algebra in summer school. Petitioner's aversion to this opportunity because he wants to send J.H. to summer camp is a matter of choice and belies the notion of irreparable harm. Where concerns are speculative, relief should not be granted merely to allay the fears and apprehensions or to sooth the anxiety of the parties. Adams v. Freedom Forge Corp., 204 F.3d 475, 490 (3d. Cir. 2000). It is clear that emergency relief is not the only way of protecting J.H. from harm here. Accordingly such relief is not appropriate in this proceeding. See, Campbell Soup Co. v. ConAgra, Inc., 977 F.2d 86, 91 (3d Cir. 1992). Finally, delay in seeking emergency relief or a preliminary injunction cuts against finding irreparable injury. New Jersey Ass'n of Health Care Facilities v. Gibbs, 838 F. Supp. 881, 928 (D.N.J. 1993). Eight months of J.H.'s eighth-grade year has already expired and but two more months remain. Notwithstanding petitioner's efforts to seek relief informally through discussions with administrators of the Board, petitioner's delay in seeking emergency relief from an action about which he was aware at least as far back as August 2010, cuts against finding irreparable injury.

I CONCLUDE that neither is the legal right underlying petitioner's claim settled in its favor nor does the petitioner have a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim. In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of a board of education. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "The well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Board policies are entitled to a presumption of correctness, and will not be upset by the courts unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), affirmed, 46 N.J. 581 (1966). In order to fulfill its obligation to provide students with a thorough and efficient education, boards of education have been granted discretionary authority under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes to adopt policies and rules for the management of the public schools. Appropriate deference must be given to the professionals in a school district when assessing the appropriate placement of a student. Taking petitioner's certification in its best light, there is no showing at this stage of the proceedings, that the Board's action in denying J.H. access to the eighth-grade Algebra class was arbitrary and capricious, was without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Petitioner contends that the "C+" for the third trimester in Accelerated Connected Math 7 was a clerical error as evidenced by Cimino's reference in an e-mail to an average of 78 percent before J.H.'s final quiz. There is a concern that Cimino's initial reference to 78 percent was in the context of petitioner's e-mail to her one day earlier where petitioner advised her that "[J.H.] just worked out her average and it looked like she had a 78 average." That number is contradicted not only by J.H.'s third trimester report card grade but also by Cimino's breakdown of the points J.H. had earned for each quiz and assignment during that trimester. A determination of the accuracy of petitioner's assertion that Cimino only changed her calculations after communicating with Principal Cahill cannot be made at this time in an emergency relief proceeding. Likewise, petitioner's likelihood of success in the merits is also questionable in view of the position of the Board that NJ ASK performance also plays a part in a decision to place a student in an accelerated class. The Commissioner has consistently held that local boards of education may place students in public school grade levels according to their own rules and regulations. Shenkler v. Ho-Ho-Kus Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 772, aff'd 1975 S.L.D. 1157; Boulogne v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Jamesburg, 1964 S.L.D. 107; Wilcox v Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Oceanport, 154-55 S.L.D. 75. Such deference to local boards should be no less when determining placement in a particular class within a grade level.

After careful consideration of all of the arguments, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met all of the requirements for emergency relief and that his request for such relief must be denied.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that respondent's motion to disqualify counsel for petitioner be DENIED.

It is hereby further ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergency relief be DENIED.

It is further hereby ORDERED that the remaining issues in this matter proceed to a plenary hearing on September 14, 2011 at 9:30 A.M.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges of insubordination, failure to perform required duties, fabrication of records, prevarication, lack of professionalism and other just cause against respondent – a special education teacher employed by the district. Specifically, respondent, inter alia: refused to produce required back-up for some or all scores that she submitted after administering the quarterly Developmental Reading Assessment (DRA); resisted or refused utilization of district resources designed to assist teachers; failed to produce backup for final grades submitted for her students; refused to participate in the development of her performance improvement plan (PIP) and corrective action plan (CAP), and ignored the goals and directives incorporated therein; was uncooperative, unprofessional, hostile and disrespectful in her communications with colleagues, substitute teachers and parents; and refused to report to her assigned school at the beginning of the 2007-2008 school year after being informed verbally and in writing the previous Spring that she was being reassigned to a different school. Respondent denies the charges, and alleges that they are false, that her actions were taken out of context, and that her conduct was not reflective of her capability as a teacher.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the sixteen witnesses for the Board presented credible testimony, corroborative of the other witnesses' testimony; each witness described respondent as hostile, aggressive, demanding and unresponsive to reasonable requests for grades, progress reports, test scores and student information; this testimony was corroborated by the exhibits presented at hearing; respondent's own testimony over five days was repeatedly unresponsive to the questions asked by counsel and the directives of the ALJ; respondent's sudden production – two thirds of the way through the OAL hearing – of files that allegedly proved she had properly completed DRAs during the 2008-2009 school year further contradicted the credibility of her testimony; respondent replied to the charges against her with uniform denials of personal responsibility, insinuation that the behaviors in question were inconsequential, or provoked or caused by the actions of others; and, taken as a whole, the testimony and evidence presented in this matter clearly indicates that respondent's behavior was inappropriate and inconsistent with the decorum and responsibility expected of a professional educator. The ALJ concluded that the Board has met its burden of proof relative to each of the charges filed against respondent. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered that respondent be dismissed from her tenured position.

Upon independent review of the record and the Initial Decision, the Commissioner adopted the ALJ's decision as the final decision in this matter, with modification. Respondent was dismissed from her tenured employment, and a copy of this decision was forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 7-1/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JILL KUBICKI, LAWRENCE TOWNSHIP SCHOOL DISTRICT, MERCER COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

Petitioner brought tenure charges against respondent as a consequence of an alleged constellation of unbecoming behavior and other just cause, including insubordination, unprofessional conduct toward colleagues, students and parents, failure to properly execute job duties, prevarication and fabrication of records. After review of the extensive record – including transcripts of eleven days of hearings, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), respondent's exceptions and petitioner's replies thereto – the Commissioner concludes that respondent's dismissal is warranted.

Petitioner presented sixteen witnesses – all of whom had been sequestered – whose testimony was generally consistent and corroborative. Most of that testimony, and the evidentiary documents offered by petitioner, pertained to the 2008-2009 school year.[1] The conduct described in the testimony and referenced in the documentary evidence revealed troubling themes.

For example, Kristine Deni, Director of Student Services, Pamela Hernandez, petitioner's learning disabilities teaching consultant, Maureen Hayes, Director of Humanities, Special Education Supervisor Jay Billy, principals Judith McLaughlin and William Buss, and Superintendent Philip Meara all testified that throughout the school year respondent refused to produce required back-up for some or all scores that she submitted after administering the quarterly Developmental Reading Assessments (DRA). Deni explained that the DRA is an important diagnostic tool used to ascertain students' reading progress and to adjust individual education plans (IEPs), if necessary.

[1] There was also, however, testimony about an incident at the beginning of the 2007-2008 school year that bore significance.

The deadlines for submitting the results of the DRAs were printed on calendars distributed to the teaching staff on September 3, 2008, at the first faculty meeting of the 2008-2009 school year. The ultimate scores for the DRAs must be supported by the teacher's answers to specific questions about what the student was able to read and how the student comprehended the stories/texts used in the DRA. These supportive materials are referred to as "protocols" and "rubrics/grids." According to her supervisors, respondent produced little or no backup for most of the tests she administered; they therefore concluded that many of the DRA scores she submitted were invented.[2] This precipitated petitioner's charge of record fabrication.[3]

Second, testimony from several of petitioner's representatives revealed that petitioner resisted or refused utilization of the resources provided by the district to assist teachers. According to petitioner's witnesses, there were instruction kits, DVDs, and in-school trainings for the DRA, staff handbooks, and computer technicians available for staff who needed assistance with the use of the district's computer data programs. In addition, respondent refused offers of assistance from several of her peers and supervisors, either by direct refusal or non-cooperation. This pattern of resistance culminated at the end of the school year with her

[2] There is evidence in the record that some, but not all, of the back-up materials were submitted in late November, and none of the protocols or rubrics were submitted after the January and April testing cycles. The fact that the November DRA backup was incomplete is corroborated by respondent's own notes from a November 26, 2008 meeting with her supervisors. (Respondent's Exhibit R-18b)

[3] Respondent produced documents at the OAL on August 19, 2010 – the seventh day of the hearing and respondent's third day of testimony – which she alleged were her copies of the DRA protocols that her supervisors had been requesting from her since October of 2008. No explanation was offered as to why the documents had not been provided to her supervisors when they were due during the 2008-2009 school year – or even via discovery in the instant proceeding.

failure to produce backup for the final grades that she submitted for her students – even when her supervisors gave her extra time to do so. In the absence of same, and with respondent's history regarding the DRAs, the school administrators could not be sure how respondent had arrived at the grades that she submitted.

Third, respondent's supervisors testified that throughout the 2008-2009 school year, respondent would not work with them to formulate such professional development tools as performance improvement plans (PIPs) and a corrective action plan (CAP). When her supervisors crafted the PIPs and CAP without her, respondent ignored the goals and directives incorporated into same. Included in the PIPs and CAP, for example, were directives to improve her professional behavior and develop clearer and more informative substitute lesson plans. Respondent reacted defensively and aggressively to her supervisors' instructions and also, paradoxically, to their offers of assistance.

Fourth, the testimony of seven of respondent's peers indicated that during the 2008-2009 school year, respondent was not forthcoming with information that her colleagues needed from her, was hostile to requests for same, and on several occasions behaved disrespectfully both to her peers and to her supervisors. This unprofessional behavior included incidents where respondent declined to open her emails, required multiple days' notice from colleagues prior to discussing issues of concern to them, and returned – unread – documents placed in her mailbox.

Fifth, the issue of communication arose as well with respect to the substitute plans that respondent was required to provide. Special Education Supervisor Jay Billy testified that as the year progressed, respondent was absent more frequently. The substitutes assigned to her classes – including retired special education teachers – reported that respondent's plans were difficult to understand. Learning disabilities teaching consultant Pamela Hernandez testified that she also found the plans to be abstruse. Lesson plan improvement was part of respondent's CAP, see Petitioner's Exhibit P-24, but respondent contended that her plans were adequate and made no discernable effort to conform them as directed.[4]

Sixth, various witnesses testified that respondent overstepped the bounds of professional conduct in front of students and parents. One example was an occasion on which respondent criticized third grade teacher Donna Lawrance in front of the class, causing Lawrance's students to worry about their teacher. In other testimony, teachers reported unprofessional remarks by respondent during parent-teacher conferences. The record also includes testimony about parent complaints concerning respondent's demeanor toward the students. One student was apparently afraid of respondent to a degree that warranted the student's transfer to another teacher.

Finally, the testimony of principals Jonathan Dauber and Andrew Zuckerman, and Director Kristine Deni, indicated that in the Spring and Summer of 2007 petitioner was told verbally and in writing that she would be reassigned from Lawrence Intermediate School (LIS) to Lawrence Middle School (LMS) for the 2007-2008 school year. However, on September 4, 2007 she showed up at LIS and refused to report to LMS until after she had met with Deni and a union representative. Respondent's explanation for this behavior was that she had never been advised of her transfer to LMS. Petitioner's charge of prevarication is based in part upon this incident.

Teachers may be dismissed or have their compensation reduced for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. As an appointing agency, petitioner must establish one or more of these causes by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550, 560-61 (1982).

Conduct unbecoming a public employee includes a broad range of behavior which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the public entity or can destroy public respect for public employees and confidence in the operation of public services. See, e.g. In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). Insubordination has been defined as the willful and intentional disregard of the lawful and reasonable directives of an employee's duly authorized supervisor. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Charles Motley, State Operated School District of Newark, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 252-99 (August 4, 1999), at 2-3, adopted State Board (Dec. 1, 1999). As the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) correctly noted, conduct such as that described by petitioner's representatives has been found in prior Commissioner decisions to be unbecoming and insubordinate. See, e.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Carl A. Hill, Irvington Township School District, Essex County, Commissioner Decision No. 176-07 (May 15, 2007), adopted, State Board (Oct. 17, 2007); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Carol Ziznewski, School District of the Township of Edison, Middlesex County, Commissioner Decision No. 234-10 (August 3, 2010). Thus, if a weighing of the evidence in the instant case supports the substance of petitioner's charges, grounds exist for the dismissal of respondent.

The ALJ's evaluation of the evidence weighed in favor of petitioner. An important component of that evaluation was the ALJ's credibility findings. More specifically, the ALJ found that petitioner's witnesses – especially Kristine Deni, Jay Billy and Principal Judith McLaughlin – were well informed about respondent's conduct, and without motivation to offer false testimony. Similarly, the ALJ found that the other teachers and supervisors who testified made sincere efforts to be accurate and unbiased.

The ALJ regarded the individual testimony of each of petitioner's witnesses to be corroborative of the other witnesses' testimony, notwithstanding that the witnesses had been sequestered. She noted that each witness described respondent as hostile, aggressive, demanding and unresponsive to reasonable requests for grades, progress reports, test scores, and student information. Further the ALJ found that the hearing exhibits corroborated the testimony about respondent's refusal to follow direct instruction, and her obscure and disjointed style of communication.

In evaluating respondent's credibility, the ALJ had the benefit of observing respondent during eleven hearing days and listening to five days of respondent's testimony. She found the testimony to be rich in non sequitors and repeatedly unresponsive to the questions asked by counsel and the directives that she issued to respondent. The ALJ also viewed as contraindicative to respondent's credibility her sudden production of files – two-thirds of the way through the OAL hearing – that would allegedly have proven that she had in fact properly completed the DRA assessments during the 2008-2009 school year. See, Respondent's Exhibits R-78, R-79 and R-80.

The Commissioner will not reject the ALJ's determinations concerning the credibility of lay witness testimony unless it is first determined from a review of the record that the findings are arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable or are not supported by sufficient, competent, and credible evidence in the record. S.D. v. Division of Medical Assistance and Health Services and Monmouth County Board of Social Services, 349 N.J. Super. 480, 484 n.1 (App. Div. 2002). The Commissioner's review of the record reveals no such defects.

Further, the Commissioner accepts the ALJ's factual findings as amply supported by the record. Respondent's exceptions notwithstanding, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ's recitation of testimony is accurate and thorough, and that the ALJ measured conflicts, inconsistencies and potential biases in deciding which testimony to credit. In this regard, the Commissioner is unpersuaded by respondent's attempts to discredit witnesses by questioning their character.

As discussed supra, there was extensive testimony at the hearing depicting incidents of insubordination and unbecoming conduct that impacted both staff and students. It included 1) respondent's resistance to cooperating with her supervisors in formulating PIPs and her CAP, 2) respondent's refusal to utilize the various district software programs designed to record student information for multiple purposes – including information sharing by staff members and preparation of reports required by the State and other entities;[5] and 3) respondent's failure to ensure – by her own devices or with the offered assistance of peers and supervisors – that she properly executed all aspects of the DRA and other diagnostic tools that she was required to administer.

Some of the documentary evidence – including respondent's own memoranda and emails – supports the testimonial evidence concerning respondent's resistance to supervisory directives, refusals of assistance, and uncooperativeness with her peers. Other exhibits, such as the copies of the DRA files that were given to respondent's supervisors in 2008 and 2009, support the testimony of petitioner's representatives that respondent was not properly administering the DRA tests and was trying to hide the truth.[6] In summary, there are no grounds to reject the ALJ's credibility findings or factual findings.

In considering penalties, the adjudicator should take into account the nature and circumstances of the incidents underlying the charges, the respondent's prior record and present attitude, the effect of the identified conduct on students and staff, and the likelihood that the conduct would recur. See, e.g., IMO Tenure Carl A. Hill, supra, at 2. Thus, the ALJ addressed the effect of respondent's conduct on students:

> Some of the incidents described by respondent's fellow teachers occurred in the presence of the children. One class became afraid their teacher might be fired. Other children needed to be removed from respondent's classroom at the request of their parents. Additionally, it cannot be said with any certainty that the grades the children in respondent's class received for school year 2008–2009 were accurate. Nor can it be said that their DRA reading scores reflected their competence. This is unconscionable, particularly for students with IEP's whose goals and objectives must be met for them to progress with their peers. (Initial Decision at 108-09)

Similarly, the ALJ summarized respondent's effect on her colleagues and the implementation of educational objectives:

> [E]ach of the regular classroom teachers, the case managers, the social workers and the administrators reported having difficulty with respondent. Rather than act in a collegial manner with her colleagues, respondent forced them to work harder simply to best serve the needs of the children . . . . (Initial Decision at 109)

And the ALJ discussed respondent's attitude as it related to the likelihood that the conduct at issue would recur:

[6] The ALJ did not – and the Commissioner cannot – accept respondent's exhibits R-78, R-79 and R-80 as support for her contention that she had completed the backup for the DRAs at the times they were due. Petitioner's exhibits, the testimony of petitioner's witnesses, and respondent's own Exhibit R-18b contradict that contention. Nor did respondent adequately explain why she never produced the DRA protocols and rubrics until her third day of testimony.

> Despite receiving orders and directives, being counseled and transferred, respondent showed no understanding that her behavior was not compatible with the mission of the public schools. She responded to the charges against her with uniform denials of personal responsibility and the transference of blame to others. (Ibid.)

In connection with these latter findings by the ALJ, the Commissioner adds his unease about respondent's dismissal of the concerns manifested in the testimony of the large number of petitioner's witnesses. Her responses included in some instances denials of the alleged behavior or suggestions that the behavior was inconsequential, and in other instances allegations that the behavior at issue was provoked or caused by others. In light of this failure to accept responsibility for any of the problems described herein, it cannot be reasonably predicted that respondent will significantly change her attitude or style. More specifically, the record offers no indication that respondent will improve her interpersonal relationships with fellow staff members, yield to the authority of her supervisors without continued resistance, or adhere to the district procedures and policies applicable to her work.

In view of the foregoing, the commissioner concurs with the ALJ that dismissal is appropriate.

Upon review of respondent's four exceptions, the Commissioner finds that they are without merit. The first exception – alleging that the ALJ did not sufficiently tie her credibility and factual findings to the record, and did not give proper weight to the evidence provided by respondent – is rejected. At the outset, there is no authority requiring that specific citations to transcripts accompany the ALJ's findings. Further, the Commissioner finds, after his own review of the record, that the ALJ's conclusions about credibility and her evaluation of the evidence as a whole are well grounded. Respondent's reiteration of her testimony – in pages 19 through 60 of her exceptions – provides no basis for different findings.

Respondent's second exception also challenges the ALJ's evaluation of the evidence and is rejected for the reasons stated above.

In her third exception, respondent contends that petitioner improperly failed to follow the procedures outlined in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 relating to charges of inefficiency. As the ALJ noted, petitioner did not charge respondent with inefficiency. Nor did the ALJ believe that it was necessary for petitioner to bring or prove inefficiency in this case. The Commissioner concurs.

There is no authority requiring a board of education to bring or prove charges of inefficiency where other grounds exist and are proven. Even assuming, arguendo, petitioner had prosecuted a charge of inefficiency, the Commissioner is free to decide the matter on other grounds. In this regard the Commissioner notes that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 sets forth the grounds for discipline of tenured employees in the disjunctive, i.e., "inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause" (emphasis added).

Further, case law instructs that where tenured employees have been charged with both "inefficiency" and other grounds for discipline, the employees may be terminated or otherwise penalized in consequence of the alternate charges whether or not the inefficiency charge is sustained. See, e.g. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Carl A. Hill, School District of the Township of Irvington, Essex County, State Board Decision No. 14-07 (October 17, 2007) ("Even assuming arguendo that some of the allegations relating to the appellant's performance of his duties could be characterized as inefficiency, we find that the Irvington Board has more than amply demonstrated the appellant's unbecoming conduct, and we conclude that such charges warrant the appellant's dismissal from his tenured employment."); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of April Renee Bradley, School District of the City of Newark,

Essex County, 1990 S.L.D. 790, aff'd as modified by the State Board of Education, 1991 S.L.D. 2521 (inefficiency charges dismissed but respondent terminated based upon charge of unbecoming conduct).

Here, as elaborated on above, the record amply establishes that respondent engaged in a continuing pattern of professional misconduct which included: ignoring or defying direct orders or suggestions of her supervisors; exhibiting anger, hostility and disrespectfulness in her communications with fellow teaching staff members, at times in the presence of students; and, in a number of instances, categorically refusing to perform the duties required by her position. As such, the Commissioner finds and concludes – as did the ALJ – that the District's charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause have been amply established. Consequently, that one or more of the District's charges against respondent may be interpreted to sound in inefficiency is of no consequence in this matter. Accordingly, respondent's third exception is rejected.

Finally, respondent contends in her fourth exception that, in the event that the Commissioner upholds one or more of the charges, the doctrine of progressive discipline mitigates against imposition of the most stringent penalty – termination. However, there is no authority requiring the Commissioner to impose penalties based upon an employee's disciplinary record, vel non.

The one education decision upon which respondent relies, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Gilbert Alvarez, School District of the Township of Lakewood, Ocean County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 10067-09 (March 5, 2010) is not helpful. First, it acknowledges that the doctrine of progressive discipline can be set aside, even in cases where it would generally be used. Second, the penalty imposed by the ALJ was not adopted by the Commissioner. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Gilbert Alvarez, School District of the Township of Lakewood, Ocean County, Commissioner Decision No. 167-10R (June 3, 2010).

The Commissioner's analysis regarding the appropriate penalty in this case is set forth above, and respondent's fourth exception urging the imposition of a lesser penalty is rejected.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this case, for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision as modified herein. Petitioner's charges are upheld, and respondent is terminated from her employment in petitioner's district.

Further, this decision shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for its consideration and possible action against respondent's teaching certificate.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 284-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 7-1/10

IN THE MATTER OF TENURE HEARING OF JILL KUBICKI, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF LAWRENCE, MERCER COUNTY.

David W. Carroll, Esq., for petitioner Lawrence Township School District (Parker McCay, attorneys)

Jason E. Sokolowski, Esq., and Richard A. Friedman, Esq., for respondent Jill Kubicki (Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum & Friedman, attorneys)

Record Closed: November 23, 2010 Decided: January 7, 2011

BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Respondent Jill Kubicki is employed by petitioner, the Lawrence Township Board of Education (Board or BOE), as a special education teacher under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. On October 16, 2009, tenure charges were filed with the Board by superintendent of schools Philip Meara, and served on respondent. Respondent filed no response. On January 7, 2010, the Board certified charges of insubordination, failure to perform required duties, fabrication of records, prevarication, lack of professionalism and other just cause against respondent to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. An answer was filed by respondent on January 28, 2010, and on January 29, 2010, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The hearing was held on May 7, 11 and 17, June 10, 15 and 29, August 19, and September 14, 20 and 21, 2010.[1] Additional documents were provided on October 8, 2010, as agreed between counsel. Briefs were submitted by petitioner and respondent on November 15, 2010, and reply briefs on November 23, 2010, at which time the record closed.

Respondent denies the charges, and alleges that they are false, that her actions were taken out of context, and that her conduct was not reflective of her capability as a school teacher.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Testimony for Petitioner

Jonathan Dauber was the upper school principal (grades five and six) at Lawrence Intermediate School (LIS), and knew respondent, a special education teacher who taught in the out-of-class resource room (OCR) at LIS, although he had never seen respondent performing her job.

September 4, 2007—First Day of School

Dauber had been principal at LIS for one year when this incident occurred. In the spring of the 2006–2007 school year, Kristine Deni told him that respondent was going to be reassigned to Lawrence Middle School (LMS) for the 2007–2008 school year.

[1] Hearing dates were offered in April and May, but counsel for respondent was not available on four of the six original proposed dates. Other dates were offered during the summer months, but were not acceptable due to pre-planned vacations of counsel, parties and witnesses.

Prior to the end of the 2006–2007 school year, he had a conversation with respondent about her going to LMS, and told her that if she had any questions she would need to speak with Andrew Zuckerman, the principal at LMS. Dauber said it was clear from the conversation that respondent knew about the transfer to LMS because she was asking questions about that school. He had no further communications with her about the transfer and did not know if she had ever spoken with Zuckerman.

On September 4, 2007, the first day of school for reporting faculty members and staff for the 2007–2008 school year, Dauber returned to LIS at approximately 9:30 a.m. and found respondent at LIS. He told her she was supposed to be at LMS, and that there was no teaching assignment for her at LIS for that school year. Respondent said no one had informed her of that, and then she demanded that Deni come to LIS. Dauber told her that her assignment was at LMS, but respondent would not leave, and remained in his office. Respondent was upset, and refused to go anywhere until someone came from the Central Office. She was verbally critical of him, and continued to say she was not leaving, and that as principal he should be doing something.

Rebecca Gold, the union representative, was contacted, and said she would come and address the situation. Gold, Deni and Barbara Levine (the union president) met in Dauber's office while he went to a faculty meeting. He did not see respondent at LIS again. He said that this behavior of respondent was extremely disruptive to him, to his staff and to his secretaries on their first day of school, when they had meetings to attend and things to do.

Andrew Zuckerman has been principal of LMS for the past five years. Prior to the first day of the 2007–2008 school year, he knew that respondent had been assigned to LMS because the matter had been discussed in the spring of 2007. A new in-school suspension and study skills program (ISS) was opening, and they thought respondent could do the job of overseeing the ISS room. Board action approved the transfer of respondent to LMS.

Respondent's Assignment

At the end of May/beginning of June 2007, Zuckerman sent respondent an e-mail, and they exchanged e-mails and voice-mail messages. His message was that he was looking forward to working with her and that he wanted to talk with her about her assignment. He asked her to call him, but he did not include information on the new assignment. They had no further contact until they casually met at an end-of-school-year party, and had a conversation about working together. They discussed her position, but not the specifics, and he reiterated that he just wanted to have the opportunity to speak with her about the program. She appeared to have knowledge of the transfer. He was very positive in speaking about their working together during the coming school year. Zuckerman believed his assistant principal, Al Gilson, had provided a description of the program to respondent. Zuckerman and respondent did not speak over the summer.

About two weeks before the start of the school year, Zuckerman sent a letter to his staff, including respondent, about the upcoming term. Respondent's name was included in the letter as a new staff member. Respondent later told Zuckerman that she had received the letter, but that she did not look at it before the start of the 2007–2008 school year.

On September 4, 2007, respondent was not present at the beginning of Zuckerman's staff meeting, and he did not remember whether she showed up at all that day. He remembered being told by Gold that respondent would be joining LMS at some point that day. For the entire school year, respondent remained at LMS.

Professional Communications

Zuckerman described his communications with respondent as challenging, and said that he had received "mixed messages" from her. He had to repeat or reiterate what he had said so she would understand.

Zuckerman's staff came to him stating they were frustrated in their interactions with respondent. Ms. Ammirata, in particular, relayed her difficulties with respondent to him. She and respondent shared a room, and respondent would not let Ammirata stay in the room when both had to use it. Some of the child study team (CST) members had difficulty with respondent, and so did Gilson. Zuckerman described how it would be necessary, on occasion, for a teacher to have to get a computer for a student from another room. Respondent said this was not reasonable, so Gilson provided her with a cabinet and showed her how the computer would fit into it.

Respondent was supposed to oversee the ISS program, a program that had worked well in the high school, and that was designed to provide students who received in-school suspensions with study skills and personal attention. Until there were students actually assigned to the ISS program, respondent was supposed to be developing the program. She had meetings with the assistant principal about what her role would be. Dauber thought she could do this work because this was one of her areas of strength, and also because he thought she had the ability to work in small groups. He knew some written support was provided to her about the ISS program and her other assignment in language arts.

This was not a position calling for a highly qualified teacher. After she was assigned to the resource room, respondent had access to individual students' Individual Education Plans (IEP's) as students were assigned to the ISS during the course of the school year. As students went through the program, it would get modified and fine-tuned as teachers provided the work and the students completed their tasks. No lesson plan was required for the ISS program, although one was required for the one language arts class respondent was assigned to. The assistant principal provided respondent with a written job description for the ISS program, as well as some other descriptions of what the program was.

Respondent asked if the number of her students was up to code. She also asked about air quality in her room. The BOE brought in Occupational Safety and Health Administration inspectors and maintenance to try to address respondent's medical concerns about the room. Her original room assignment was switched.

Zuckerman and the assistant principal wrote respondent's evaluation for the school year and commended her for her performance in the classroom. Respondent was asked to sign the evaluation on multiple occasions, but she chose not to. Zuckerman would have recommended renewing her contract for the following year.

He thought that respondent had discussions with the Board because she was not happy with her placement in LMS, and expressed dissatisfaction with her position throughout the school year. She said that she had never done this work before and that she was not appropriate for the program. As to specific materials provided to her, other teachers and supervisors provided respondent with the language arts curriculum and other materials for the position.

PIP

Respondent's Professional Improvement Plan (PIP) should have been provided by her when she transferred to LMS in September 2007, but she did not provide one. The assistant principal created one for her, and was working on it with her. The purpose of the PIP was to work on improving professional skills during the school year.

Zuckerman did not think respondent's behavior for that school year was serious enough to bring tenure charges, although it concerned him. For the following school year, respondent was transferred to Ben Franklin School (BFS) in a position also shared with Lawrence Elementary School (LES).

Kristine Deni, director of Student Services for the Lawrence Township Public Schools, had been with the Township since July 2006. Her position required her to implement the special education, guidance, medical, and drug and alcohol programs. She had 130 staff district-wide, including child study team staff and interpreters, and also supervised forty-seven out-of-district placements. She had two supervisors who helped her: Jay Billy for grades pre-K to 5, and Erin Servillo for grades 6–12.

Deni had worked for the Mercer County Special Services School District for twenty-eight years as an assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction. Previously she was director of special education and an assistant supervisor. She had certificates for teacher of the handicapped, early childhood, supervisor, principal, and teacher of K–3.

Transfer to LMS

During school year 2006–2007, Deni had some contact with respondent in school when she dropped in occasionally. Respondent said she was unhappy at LIS, cried, and made comments about the principal, saying that she did not like his leadership style. This went on over time, and happened again when respondent's room had to be changed. Respondent spoke for some time about her displeasure at her assignment.

Deni had spoken with Zuckerman about the ISS program he wished to set up at LMS. As an in-school suspension program, the purpose was for students to not be removed from the school setting, but to maintain the school situation with in-school supervisors so the students could work on homework, meet with teachers, etc. They needed a certified staff member to supervise, and respondent seemed to fit the bill.

Deni had concurred with Zuckerman to try this program out with respondent since she had been unhappy with her previous principal, and this provided a chance for her to work with someone who wanted her. Respondent could put her own stamp on the program. Respondent said she was open to the change, but had questions about the program. Deni told her to call and speak with Zuckerman about the program and she thought respondent would do so. Deni met with Zuckerman about the ISS program during the summer, but she had no conversations with respondent, nor did she make any effort to contact her, nor did she provide any program materials to respondent.

The district reviewed staffing each year. They looked at the resources available and tried to come to collaborative decisions. Zuckerman wanted an ISS program and requested it from the superintendent. Zuckerman got permission to go forward, and needed a full-time instructor. He asked for respondent, but Deni did not remember why he requested her. She thought that he may have been at LIS for a while and that Zuckerman knew her. Respondent was qualified for the position to supervise the ISS program with her certification, as a certified staff member had to be present for the supervision of students excluded from their classes. Respondent also had one pull-out language arts class assigned to her.

Respondent was a ten-month employee. Deni did not send out notice of the transfers or the BOE meeting, but the union representative provided it to respondent at the September 4 meeting. Deni said that Zuckerman had sent out a welcome letter to respondent before the school year started.

ISS/BIP

A BIP is a behavior intervention plan and is part of an IEP that may or may not be relevant to a classified student. The State provided a rubric for how to provide a BIP. The staff targeted behavior and supported positive behavior. The idea was to reinforce the students to use more socially acceptable behavior to get the desired result. A special education BIP was not the same as a BIP adapted to general education. A BIP in an IEP rose to a different level. The BIP form was presented to the teacher and was really a form of behavioral management.

The whole idea of the ISS program was to work with students on their BIP's. Not much good came from keeping students out of school if they were suspended. The in-school suspension was designed to improve their behavior. When first assigned to LMS, respondent had no students, because none had yet been assigned to in-school suspension. Deni received e-mails from respondent directed to her and Gold about the program. Deni's response was to consult with Gold and Zuckerman, and they decided that Gold would resolve respondent's personal questions, and Zuckerman would provide a program description.

When Deni visited LMS, she referred respondent to her principal and personnel director for separate issues that respondent had raised during the school year. She also referred respondent to Gilson, the assistant principal, who had a lot of contact with her.

September 4, 2007—First Day of School

September 4, 2007, was the first day of school for teachers. That day was a combination of professional development, meetings and time to work in the classrooms. In the morning Deni received a telephone call from Dauber, who said that respondent had shown up at his school and refused to go to LMS, where she had been assigned for that school year. He asked Deni to come to a meeting. Union representatives Rebecca Gold and Barbara Levine were there. They met in Dauber's office, although he was not present.

Deni tried to persuade respondent to go where she had been assigned. Respondent said she never received notice of the change and refused to go. The meeting lasted about forty-five minutes to an hour. Deni said she had had previous conversations with respondent about the move. Also, there had been Board action, so respondent should have been aware of the change. As to the letter sent to respondent advising her of the change, respondent said she did not check her mail. Deni reminded respondent that her assignment was to LMS. Respondent said she was not qualified, at which point the union representatives called a halt to the conversation. After the union representatives spoke alone with respondent, respondent said she would go to LMS, and she subsequently reported there.

Deni characterized the events of that day as highly disruptive, as she was trying to deal with a lot of issues that day, including new staff, students, etc. Also, respondent had missed her first staff meeting. Deni thought respondent was not being truthful about having knowledge of the transfer, as she had spoken with respondent during the 2006–2007 school year about this. Deni considered respondent to be insubordinate to her, and had difficulty understanding why respondent would act this way.

Transfer to LES and BFS

Deni explained that students may be in two locations, ICS or OCR. ICS is in-class supplemental instruction and OCR is out-of-class resources. Children with an IEP could have either or both depending on the subject. Deni explained to respondent that she would be doing pull-out replacement at the resource center. This meant that when a student with an IEP had a pull-out, this had to occur at the same time as the general education instructor was teaching that subject. The special education teacher followed the IEP and collaborated with the general education instructor.

Deni consulted with the elementary school supervisor, Jay Billy, and the two principals at BFS and LES, because there was an increased need in these two elementary schools for out-of-class replacement services for students with IEP's and special education. Respondent was a teacher who was qualified to do it. She had a comfort level with younger children and had done pull-out replacement for a number of years at LIS.

Respondent had said that working at LMS made her uncomfortable. It was a recurring theme whenever she and respondent met during the previous year. Respondent would enter a conversation just to tell Deni she was uncomfortable with her assignment at LMS. Respondent also sent many e-mails saying how uncomfortable she was at LMS, even though Gilson and Zuckerman signed respondent's evaluation on June 12, 2008, and gave her a positive evaluation. After collaborating with the principals and Billy, the decision was made to transfer respondent from LMS to BFS and LES, both elementary schools with grades K–3, for the following school year. LES had approximately 206 students and BFS had approximately 400 students.
