Respondent was told in person by Deni, in the presence of Zuckerman, in the late spring of 2008 that she was being transferred to BFS and LES. Respondent appeared to understand what Deni was telling her, namely, that her home school would be LES. Respondent was told that they were getting the rosters and the caseloads together and explained the new position. Deni did not recall what respondent's reaction was to her new assignment. Deni gave nothing to respondent in writing about the transfer because the personnel department was handling it.

For school year 2008–2009, respondent was transferred to BFS and LES, sharing her time equally between LES, where Judy McLaughlin was the principal, and BFS, where William Buss was the principal. Respondent's primary assignment was LES. In order to effectuate the transfer, Board action was required and was taken. Notice was given to respondent of the transfer by Deni herself. Respondent reported the first day of the 2008–2009 school year without incident.

Other staff members had also traveled between buildings; it depended on student needs, but that school year no other special education teachers had to travel.

There were several reasons for the transfer. First, it depended on where a teacher was needed, and they needed a pull-out teacher at LES and BFS. Second, respondent had expressed discontent throughout the school year, and this was a return to the elementary school for her. Respondent had had problems with Servillo and had spoken to Zuckerman. Third, it had been a difficult year for respondent, and this was an opportunity for her to start fresh.

Prior to the 2008–2009 school year, Deni had communications with respondent, who needed further clarification about her position. Deni wrote her a note and restated her assignments and told respondent to contact her two principals, McLaughlin and Buss. McLaughlin was the principal at respondent's home school—the main school she would report to. Supervision of special education teachers was shared among four people: the two principals (McLaughlin and Buss), Jay Billy and Deni.

PIP

In September 2008, the first thing Deni and the other supervisors did was work on respondent's PIP. All certified staff received one. The implication of the PIP was that everyone needed to improve. A PIP could remain the same if the teacher remained in the same assignment, but this was not the case with respondent. To develop a PIP with respondent, Deni had a meeting at LES on September 26, 2008, with Billy and respondent. They were trying to write a PIP to reflect respondent's new assignment, but they did not get far. Respondent wanted to end the meeting, and showed Deni a document she had submitted to LMS as her PIP, but it was not appropriate for respondent's new position. They reached a standoff. Respondent was upset and agitated. Deni told respondent they would see if they could use her old PIP and embed it in the new one.

Respondent said that the software and special services technologies tools were intermittent and were causing her problems. Respondent was directed by Deni and Billy to go to the help desk, as the district provided personal laptops and computers in the library. It seemed that respondent had difficulty understanding the thread of her materials.

Respondent was extremely uncooperative in working on the PIP. Deni said that she would process a draft, and that they could then meet again with respondent and her union representative. Memos were exchanged between Deni and respondent after the first meeting on September 10. Deni prepared a draft of a new PIP. They needed to be very clear with respondent about communications. Goal III of the PIP, improvement of professional communications, was necessitated by previous communications difficulties with respondent that had been noticed by others.

Deni set the goals as follows:

Goal I:	gain understanding of the elementary curricula and core curriculum standards
Goal II:	use assessment data to inform different strategies
Goal III:	improve professional communications

Special education teachers in the Township had to be collaborative. This meant that educational professionals needed to seek out others and to offer each other professional guidance and assistance. Respondent was not mindful of how she should conduct herself. There was an expectation that respondent would cooperate, but her responses were hard to follow. Respondent rebuffed offers of help. She was brusque with case managers and coworkers, and there had been incidents from the beginning of September.

A second meeting about the PIP was held with respondent and the union representative on October 10, 2008, but was very short. Respondent again said that her access to the Contour Program was intermittent, and complained about the technology. Deni said they gave her guidance about the technology. The district used a Web Help Desk and had faculty services available. Billy also discussed this with respondent.

A third meeting was held on October 29, 2008, to finalize respondent's PIP. Rebecca Young, the union representative, was also present. Respondent disagreed with the draft PIP. She would not stay on topic and would not go forward. Deni followed up with a memo, something she had never had to do before, because the meeting was not on topic.

Respondent would often request that whatever had been discussed in a face-to-face meeting be placed in writing. Deni knew that respondent communicated with Billy and her principals about the PIP to improve respondent's performance. Deni said the language of respondent's reply to the proposed PIP was convoluted and difficult to understand.

DRA Background Information

The Developmental Reading Assessment (DRA) is a test given three times per year by the teacher that measures fluency and comprehension. Data are collected from all students and that data goes into the language arts folio. The general education teachers gave the test to regular education students; special education teachers gave the test to their students. The purpose of the assessment was to see where students were functioning. Scores were posted in October, January and April, and were kept in a databank district-wide.

The IEP defined the special elements of performance and set out the program for students. Seven students were assigned to respondent in her resource room over the school year. She could be teaching alone or in groups and was considered highly qualified for federal statutory purposes. The PLAAFP (present level of academic achievement and functional performance) drove the IEP: what did the student know?; what were the needs?; how was the student to go forward?

The child study team (CST) assessments were benchmarks of social skills, behavior, and academic performance. The CST relied on what teachers said to prepare the goals for the year to come. The IEP required progress reports for parent conferences and report cards. All students received a grade, but the progress report was important for determining objectives, goals, and progress. At the end of the year a new PLAAFP was written. The IEP team was even more specific than the CST: it was composed of the case manager, teachers, other therapists, and parents.

Two training sessions were conducted in 2008–2009, including one at BFS, and a PowerPoint presentation was given to faculty members by Pam Hernandez. Other training sessions were conducted by Deni in October and December. Regular and special education teachers were expected to share information. Security of records was important. Deni worked with principals to find out where to place them. Respondent had a locked file cabinet available to her.

DRA's

At the faculty meeting at LES on September 3, 2008, the calendar for the school year was provided to the teachers, including the DRA deadlines of October 31, 2008, and January 28 and April 3, 2009. The DRA had been in the district before, but the updated DRA2 was new to the district that year.[2] An additional copy of the assessments and assessment calendar had been given to respondent. The calendar was made by the Office of Curriculum and Instruction and had chronic reminders to the faculty about the schedule and due dates. Additional e-mails were sent to Buss and McLaughlin concerning the DRA.

A teacher of the handicapped would know about the DRA. Each test took approximately twelve minutes to complete, and work on them was done one-on-one with the students. Although the DRA2 had some nuance changes, it was still a relatively easy test to give. It was important to get pre- and post-testing for the students, and also for the IEP, as students could improve or regress. At PIP meetings, the DRA was discussed. There were videos and training. The DRA was not tricky. Deni received complaints about the DRA from none of her teachers except the respondent.

Respondent had not given the DRA by the end of October. She would not view the video. Billy arranged for Hayes, a language arts supervisor, to demonstrate a sample DRA test for respondent in late October. Billy and Buss asked respondent to get this done. Buss extended the deadline for respondent to November 19 for her DRA's, advising her by e-mail, which he delivered to her. There were no DRA scores from respondent by November 19, despite the extension. Respondent then provided scores for four students, but provided only one score for three of the students when there should have been two scores for each student, one for fluency and one for comprehension.

A meeting was scheduled at BFS on November 26, 2008, which was attended by the union representative, Buss, Billy, Deni and respondent. Respondent provided partial DRA scores but had incomplete data to back them up. At the meeting, respondent said she provided the scores. However, she had not done what was required of the teachers and provided the two required scores.

Respondent said she had discharged her duties, but that she did not know what the protocols were or what the score sheet was. Respondent was asked to get her data and she said it was in her car. Deni was concerned that the data was in respondent's car, as these were confidential student records and were not to be transported around in the trunk of a car. Respondent left speaking loudly. She returned with a folder.

Respondent said she put the records in the car because it was a safe place. She said she did not have a file cabinet, but Deni knew there were cabinets accessible to respondent.

The meeting was not pleasant. Buss spoke in an emphatic tone to respondent about her responsibilities. Deni believed that respondent may have fabricated the test scores. When the two looked at the protocols, they did not understand how someone could come up with the scores that respondent did. The data were "spotty." Sections were not completed. They took possession of the protocols, and then asked Hayes if they were complete and Hayes said no. Although respondent's scores were incomplete, they had to use what they were given.

Respondent was not disciplined with respect to the scores. Instead, she was given feedback that the scores were not complete, with the expectation was that she would improve her compliance. (Her second and third DRA's later in the year were also not completed.)

The scoring sheets of P-15 contained incomplete protocols. Other scoring sheets were incomplete and inadequate. A sheet for student V.G.B. said he was an independent reader, but his protocol was not complete. Deni could not find any assessments that were completed. It looked to her as if respondent were trying to figure out a level of performance. She concluded that the scores must have been made up because no backup data was present.

At the meeting, respondent was agitated and hostile. She took an unprofessional tone and was huffing and puffing, stating that the other parties present were out of line. Deni said that all they wanted were the scores for the children. Deni talked to respondent about her tone and her failure to deliver the scores. The purpose of the conference was to discuss the students. They also discussed the security of the students' files. Respondent was told to keep them secure. After the November 26 meeting, Deni sent a memo as a memorialization to respondent.

Buss explained that a parent had called and was in for a conference with him. The parent stated that the respondent had complained that she did not have the tools she needed and that the administration was not supporting her.

On December 4 Deni had a meeting with respondent, the union representative, Buss and Billy concerning the DRA's. Billy did most of the direct supervision of respondent after that date, although he and Deni met frequently. McLaughlin did the evaluation, and they decided that they needed to institute a formal corrective action plan (CAP).

DRA Follow Up

Apparently, all that counted with respondent were written communications. In person she was disruptive and her behavior was escalating. Her supervisors felt she was not adhering to consistent comportment as a teacher.

Also, Deni wanted to be clear about staff members' responsibilities, and tried to meet with respondent on March 17. Respondent would not participate in the meeting, and said she needed her New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) representative present. She then took off down the hall. Children were present when this happened.

Deni was trying to get respondent to work with the administration and needed some acknowledgment from respondent that she would. Deni offered respondent time to observe successful staff members on four occasions. Deni met with the principals two times a month to see if they could get respondent to conform to school standards. Respondent was directed to use a lesson plan format weekly and to present her portfolio on a weekly basis. Respondent was told to turn in her progress notes and to get things in by their due dates. On March 18, an e-mail was sent to respondent about her CAP. Respondent never contacted the principals and never followed up on any of the recommendations for her to follow.

Other Incidents

There were many incidents involving respondent. Deni became aware of an incident in April where respondent refused to accept an IEP from a case manager and stated that the student had been "pumped and dumped." Her files were missing progress notes and she frequently ran into the case manager's offices.

There was an incident in LES about recording a grade. Student B.H., in the general education class, was assigned to respondent after the first two marking periods. The student's grades needed to be re-entered on the computer system. Respondent refused to insert the grades and said it was falsifying records. All she had to do was insert the grades the student had previously received from the previous teacher. Respondent's principal met with her and told her to insert the record and register the existing grades, but respondent refused to do it.

Respondent declined to follow her principal's instructions even though it was just a cumulative reporting of the grade. Again, numerous e-mails followed, one from Deni to respondent telling her to work with her principal. However, respondent did not do it. Respondent was then ordered to transfer the grades, and she still did not do that. The teacher had to hold the parent/teacher conference without the information. In Deni's opinion, this was insubordination. There was no excuse for respondent to refuse to transfer a grade onto the student's grading chart when the grade had previously been received by that student.

McLaughlin sent a memo to respondent telling her that she was insubordinate. Respondent's response to every request was, "Are you directing me?" Because of this, respondent needed everything to be in writing.

Deni became aware of respondent's complaint with the Department of Education (DOE) wherein she alleged she was being told to falsify student records. Two investigators conducted an inquiry and concluded that there was no directive made to respondent to falsify records and that the allegation was unsubstantiated. There were also phantom memos reported to be distributed included in a packet of information sent by respondent. The packet was sent to the BOE, respondent's supervisors, Deni and other administrators. Although the memos indicated that Deni had been copied on some of these memos, none of them had been received by her. In fact, none of her other colleagues mentioned having received this information, nor had they received any e-mails with this information. Deni considered it unprofessional for respondent to send these e-mails to anyone, representing that they had been sent and received. Respondent was not being coerced to release her password or anything like that.

File Cabinet

Deni had purchased locking file cabinets and had them delivered to each school. A locked file cabinet was there at the start of the 2008–2009 school year and was in the resource rooms at both BFS and LES. Deni also became aware that Buss delivered a second file cabinet to respondent. On September 4, there was a file cabinet with keys waiting for use at BFS. Billy witnessed this and reported it to Deni. Respondent said she did not have a key and that it was lost, so Billy brought her a new cabinet with a key in December 2008. Billy said the keys had been on the cabinet on September 4 and did not remember when respondent first said she did not have a key.

Corrective Action Plan

A corrective action plan (CAP) was done to improve teaching performance. In March 2009 Deni was assigned to do respondent's plan. Before she wrote it up, Deni asked respondent for input. Deni did not meet with respondent to discuss the evaluation and plan, as respondent was out a great deal and her attendance was erratic. After the CAP was written and given to respondent, she asked for ten days to respond, which she never did. Deni recommended that respondent's increment be withheld for her failure to cooperate.

Board Action

The transfers of respondent from LIS to LMS and the following year from LMS to BFS and LES had been approved by the BOE. At some point a recommendation to withhold respondent's increment was made and the BOE took action. From the BOE meeting in April 2009 to the end of the year, more concerns became apparent with respondent. She had failed to complete the progress notes. She did not participate in parent conferences and failed to prepare her substitute teachers in her room. She continued to defy directions and continued to fail. She did not address the CAP that had been provided to her.

Meeting of June 16, 2009

Deni received a telephone call from McLaughlin. Some grades were missing for M.R., a student on respondent's roster. Respondent said she had entered them and refused to re-enter them. Deni went to LES and asked where respondent was and where the substitute was. Respondent had gone to her classroom and told the substitute to go away. Respondent then erased the board that the substitute was working on. Deni located the substitute in the school and brought her to respondent's classroom. She told respondent to come with her and to bring her computer, and that the substitute would be teaching.

Philip Meara, the superintendent, had arrived. Deni told respondent that they needed the grades for her students. Respondent had her computer with her and seemed to log on and log off. She also shielded her computer and refused to put it on a desk.

Deni told respondent to use the desk computer, but respondent refused. Deni called her back to the table and noticed that something was on the screen. Respondent refused to work on the grades. Deni said, "Let us get the data," because they needed the information. The superintendent backed Deni up. The union representative (Young) and McLaughlin went to respondent's room with her to get the data. Respondent came back with some folders and data, but it appeared to not be enough information to enter the grades. At that point Meara relieved respondent of her teacher duties and told respondent to go home and get the data together. At that time they thought the only grade missing on the computer was M.R.'s. Respondent went home and brought back information on other students. Respondent said she had records "in various locations." The records respondent provided were not sufficient to determine a grade for M.R. or to ascertain how the other students had received their grades. A memo was prepared to respondent memorializing everything that had happened.

Deni checked with the technical department to see if there was any support for the grades in the system but there was none. Deni's concern was that respondent had displayed a total lack of cooperation, even though she and others had tried to help her; that respondent showed a lack of intention to resolve the issue; that respondent had directly refused when the superintendent asked her to resolve the issue; and that respondent's folders did not show how the other students' grades were arrived at. This caused Deni extreme concern because of the previous experience with the DRA reading protocols.

There were just a few days left in the school year so the superintendent placed respondent on administrative leave. McLaughlin later followed up, but never received any response from respondent.

After discussion, the superintendent decided to bring tenure charges to the BOE and Deni supported this position. The reasons expressed were because of the issues of insubordination; refusal to comply with administrative directives; refusal to meet with supervisors and administrators as directed; refusal to participate as a team member; refusal to follow the IEP's and the goals and objectives; refusal to enter the grades; refusal to follow the corrective action plan; and failure to provide adequate lesson plans, substitute plans and progress notes for the students. And while this was happening, respondent was maintaining a constant stream of hostile and unprofessional conduct by being inappropriate in front of the parents who contacted Deni about their concerns. Respondent had also been inappropriate in an IEP meeting and refused to cooperate.

The superintendent's decision to recommend tenure charges was not based solely on the incident of June 16. It was based on a compilation of events occurring over time.

The reason for the administrative leave on June 16 was because respondent said she had the data in various places, including her home, so the superintendent allowed her time to gather the data and to call the principal to enter the grades. The administrative leave was also because many documents for other students were missing. Deni was called upon to complete the grades for student M.R., and they needed his grades and his progress notes and objectives. Respondent said she had entered the grades, but refused to do it again. Deni asked for the technical department to go back to check on the fourth-marking-period grades and noticed that some grades had been entered.

All grades were ultimately entered, but respondent never completed the progress reports. The administration was able to meet the deadline and decided to let stand the grades that respondent had entered for the children.

Pamela Hernandez, a learning disabilities teacher consultant, worked with service providers, teachers and parents as a case manager to ensure that students' IEP's were being met. She knew respondent during the 2008–2009 school year as the teacher of some of her students at BFS. At the beginning of the school year, Hernandez sent a resource room schedule to all the classroom teachers and therapists to advise them of important events and dates during the school year.

Professional Behavior

During the first week of school, Hernandez tried to meet with respondent, but respondent would not work outside of school hours. It was important for the respondent, as resource room teacher, to meet with her students as soon as possible to commence teaching. It appeared that respondent had not yet met with these students because she wanted to know about the medical issues for each child before she would start educating him or her. This information was available from the school nurse, and was also available on PowerSchool, a computer program that the entire school, including staff, had access to. This program included information on things like medical needs, IEP's, restraining orders, special pickups after school, etc. She did not know if respondent had access to PowerSchool, but if she did not, she just had to go to Web Help to get access. Additionally, the school's secretary could give her that information.

Respondent sent Hernandez e-mails that were confusing, as respondent said she did not have the proper assessment tools. Hernandez felt that respondent had more than sufficient information to begin working as a teacher, and that respondent would have been advised of any serious medical issues affecting her assigned children. She told respondent that the children needed to see their teacher as of the first day of school. It was important for them, but respondent was not pulling the children from their classroom to her resource room. Hernandez did not know if respondent had access to PowerSchool at the beginning of the school year, but respondent did not ask. Nor did respondent ask about WebTrack, another program which was only for students with IEP's and had limited access. When Hernandez went to the Web Help Desk, the technician told her that respondent had access after the first marking period in November or December.

DRA's

With regard to the DRA's, which were given three times per year (October, January and April), the staff was advised frequently by e-mails and memos that the first DRA scores were due at the end of October. When Hernandez asked respondent to turn in her scores, it became adversarial. Hernandez received the scores from the respondent three weeks late, but became concerned because they were incomplete. Respondent said she was not trained in administering the DRA, although the supervisor of language arts had offered to show her how to give the test. The purpose of the DRA was to assess oral fluency and comprehension, and to make sure they were "in sync." One score without the other was meaningless.

When Hernandez asked respondent about the scores, respondent seemed angry to talk about it. When respondent provided scores, she did not include the protocols that back up the scoring. Requests were made to respondent for the protocols, but she never produced them. Hernandez discussed this with other staff members, including Elizabeth Seipp, a second-grade general education teacher at BFS, Buss, and Hayes. As far as she knew, the protocols were never produced.

Hernandez was aware that respondent said she gave an envelope with the protocols to Seipp, but Seipp said she did not get them. Hernandez offered to help respondent, but respondent's response was muttering and angry. Hernandez felt she could not talk to respondent because the conversation became so tangential. She could not get a word in edgewise. Respondent would turn her back.

On one occasion, Hernandez tried to speak with respondent about the DRA's. Respondent refused. On another occasion, when respondent needed a PLAAFP, Hernandez tried to tell her how to access it, but respondent just shut her down.

Hernandez was extremely concerned about the DRA because, although respondent had provided scores, they could not be interpreted because of the lack of the protocols. They needed to know fluency and comprehension, and needed to keep a balance between the two, because it was important for more advanced learning in the fourth grade. The DRA score was used in the student's annual review of his IEP and was relevant in assessing progress. Regardless of whether the protocols were provided, the general education teacher may have used the scores provided by respondent.

The perception Hernandez had was that respondent was not a team player. Respondent could be complimentary, but when dealing with teaching and the school, her interactions were unprofessional. Other staff also complained. One teacher, Ms. Vegas, who was a team player and shared space with respondent, felt it was difficult and uncomfortable. Eventually, respondent was moved to another room.

Professional Communications

Ms. Livecchi told Hernandez that she had an upsetting encounter with respondent. She had gone into respondent's classroom to do something, and greeted one of her students by saying, "Hi." Respondent told Livecchi never to do that again. Hernandez noted that Livecchi was visibly shaken after her encounter with respondent.

Hernandez no longer communicated directly with respondent after a while, but rather by e-mail or by leaving a memo in her mailbox. She and others found that respondent sometimes would not open her e-mails, so after that they printed the e-mails out and put them in respondent's mailbox.

One particular matter involved T., a student with special needs in respondent's OCR. His mother reported that T. was unhappy and fearful in respondent's class, and became visibly upset with emotional effects, such as not wanting to go to school. After an IEP meeting, it was decided that he should be removed from respondent's class and kept in his general education class with in-class support. Another student also had a problem with respondent, reporting that respondent was mean to him and yelled a lot.

Substitutes

Other problems related to substitutes for respondent's class. Teachers were supposed to have substitute plans, but respondent either did not leave a plan for the substitute or the plan she left was incomprehensible. As a result, the substitutes had problems filling in for her class. There was no prescribed form for the substitute's plan; the teacher made it up as long as it could be understood. The only substitute plans of the respondent that Hernandez saw were the ones the substitutes showed her, and each time she saw one, she could not understand it.

Respondent also complained that she did not like being in two schools (although BFS is only one or two miles away from LES); that it was difficult to cart her things around; that her badge did not work, etc.,

Elizabeth Seipp, a second-grade general education teacher at BFS with twelve years' experience, worked with special services, OCR, etc. During the 2008–2009 school year she had four students who worked with respondent in the classroom next door during their OCR.

DRA's

The DRA was a reading assessment given three times per year which was used to assess the students' reading and progress. The teachers had brief in-service training, and there was a video for the teachers to watch. The DRA was scripted for the teacher, who only had to read and follow the basic instructions to perform the test. Three or four tests were done per day, as the students got tested. It became routine. Seipp tested the twenty-four students in her general education class, and respondent was supposed to test her special education students in her language arts and reading class. It was Seipp's understanding that she would receive all the students' scores (including the ones from respondent) and put them on her spreadsheet.

Seipp's first interaction with respondent was when she asked respondent for the scores. The deadline for the first set of tests was in the fall. Seipp was receiving e-mail reminders from the administration that the scores were due. She kept asking respondent, "Do you have the scores?" Respondent said she had put them in Seipp's mailbox, but Seipp never saw them there. Seipp asked for the protocols because she filed them in the students' portfolios. She sent several e-mails to respondent and said she needed the scores, but she never received them from respondent.

Professional Communications

Seipp and respondent had words about the DRA scores. Seipp stuck her head out of the classroom at dismissal time, and asked about the scores. Respondent said it was Seipp's fault, that she had given her the scores. So Seipp told respondent, "You better do your job!" Seipp even asked if the grades could be sent without the protocols. Seipp never saw the protocols. Although respondent said she put them in a sealed envelope and gave them to Seipp, they were never received by her. E-mails continued to go back and forth about the DRA's, but after November 25, Seipp had no further involvement with the respondent's DRA testing.

Professional Communications

Seipp observed respondent in conversation with the parents of K.C., a classified student. The parents seemed confused by a "mystery book" being used by respondent to teach the child language arts. Seipp did not think it was tied into the curriculum and could not figure out which skills were being used in this project.

Seipp characterized respondent's communication as confusing and frustrating, as respondent often was not direct or was off topic. When Seipp asked respondent about the DRA, respondent's answers were not specific. Seipp had the feeling that respondent was not being responsive. When Seipp asked again about the DRA, she received some numbers, but they were not complete. She asked respondent for copies for her files, but never received them.

Erin Kabo, a school social worker at LES and another school, was the case manager (for classified students) on the CST.

Professional Communications

During the 2008–2009 school year, Kabo had one student assigned to respondent's class. A classified student, M.R., had been in a self-contained classroom at the beginning of the school year, but a change had been made at his IEP meeting during the year because he needed more reading help and supplementary instruction. He was placed in the resource room with respondent.

Kabo went to see respondent about this in January 2009, and respondent said she was not available. Kabo was never able to speak with respondent, so Kabo put the student's IEP in respondent's mailbox, but it was returned to her unopened. Kabo had a conversation with respondent, as respondent wondered why M.R. was going into her classroom. Kabo attempted to answer, but respondent would not let her. Respondent called M.R. a "pump and dump." Kabo e-mailed her supervisor about this. E-mails were sent to respondent to find dates and times for a meeting, but she did not respond.

The meeting was never held. M.R.'s parent decided not to come for a meeting because respondent was out and not available.

Respondent did not say that she did not have a locked file cabinet, but Kabo assumed that was why respondent gave her the IEP back. Two days later respondent walked into Kabo's office, and they finally had a conversation about M.R. Kabo did not remember respondent showing her on the computer that she had no access to the Contour Program, so respondent could have had access to M.R.'s IEP.

Kabo did not remember speaking with respondent about the Wilson program (a program that blends words and sorts out sounds), but M.R. may have been using this program. Kabo thought respondent should have a general idea of what was going on with M.R. Eventually respondent taught M.R.

Basically, their interaction followed the IEP meeting revising M.R.'s IEP from a self-contained classroom to a resource room for supplemental instruction. Kabo went to see respondent, and respondent was busy and did not see her; Kabo put the IEP in respondent's mailbox; the IEP was returned; a decision was made to get respondent a locked file cabinet; and respondent never came back to discuss the IEP with Kabo.

Kabo considered respondent's actions unprofessional and inappropriate, because respondent went storming out of Kabo's office without discussing M.R.'s case in greater detail, and because respondent said that M.R. was a "pump and dump."

Elise Hobson, a Lawrence Township learning disabilities teacher with sixteen years of special education experience, had three of her students assigned to respondent at the beginning of the school year. Three additional students were assigned during the course of the year. Bryon H., a classified student, was referred from the CST, which concluded that he needed special education for reading and language arts. Although respondent was advised at the end of November that Bryon H. would be assigned to her class, it took a while for this placement to work out, and he did not enter respondent's class until January 2009.

Professional Communications

During the entire school year, Hobson met regularly with her special education and regular teachers. At their first meeting in October, Hobson was frustrated, as it seemed that respondent was showing her materials that were above the level of the students. At the second meeting she had with respondent, Billy was present, as he wanted to observe her with respondent. This meeting was a little more successful, as respondent described her "tools not working." However, respondent showed Hobson only a little about her students. The only way to characterize respondent's statements that day was "disorganized," although they were not rude.

At student Bryon H.'s IEP meeting the next day at 7:45 a.m., respondent was very irate and was getting in Hobson's face. Respondent said she should not have this material, and seemed mad at Hobson for giving her something that respondent should have had. They then went over the IEP goals and objectives and respondent expressed appreciation for the discussion. Hobson gave respondent information on Bryon H.'s goals and objectives, but respondent gave it back because she said she had no locked filing cabinet. When someone interrupted, respondent kept on talking over him. But since the parent had not yet signed the IEP, the child was not placed in respondent's class until January. An e-mail of respondent's where she said she never received an IEP for Bryon H. was not true, because Hobson gave it to respondent.

Respondent continued to say that she could not access the tools set forth in the Contour Program where the goals and objectives were listed for the IEP. But even if she could not get into the computer, there were hard copies in Hobson's office and access was always available to respondent, although she never tried.

In e-mails concerning student Breyanna H., an excessive number of skills was listed. Respondent never pared them down, so Hobson did it for her. Hobson had received no grades for Bryon H. from respondent, and told Billy, and he followed up. Respondent responded by saying she did not have the student in her class, but this was not true because he had been her student since January 5 and a whole month had gone by. The general education teacher ended up putting in his grade.

Hobson never saw the respondent's DRA protocols, but she had not asked for them. Hobson did not know about the accuracy of respondent's DRA's, although they did not show any progress or progression. As Maureen Hayes had trained respondent, Hobson assumed the scores would be accurate.

Respondent complained about a lot of things, such as the DRA, tools, etc. Hobson did not believe respondent when she said the tools were the problem, because everything was a problem for respondent and there was a lot of drama. Furthermore, respondent would have been provided with any information she needed if only she had asked for it. Or respondent could have gotten it from Contour.

Hobson had a difficult time communicating with respondent, and she wondered, if respondent could not communicate with her, how could respondent communicate with the students? Based on their interaction at the IEP meeting and her observations when respondent spoke with parents, Hobson felt there were problems with respondent's communications.

Donna Lawrance, a teacher with twenty-two years of experience, was teaching third grade as a general education teacher at LES for school year 2008–2009. She knew respondent was responsible for language arts for one of her students. At the beginning of the school year, the resource room teacher came to get the students from their homeroom; after that, the students went to the resource room on their own.

Professional Communications

Early in the school year (September or October 2008), student Breyanna H. was late in getting to the resource room because Lawrance's class was running behind. Usually there was a little leeway, and most resource room teachers would call to see if the student was there. Instead, respondent came to Lawrance's classroom for Breyanna and accused Lawrance of violating the student's IEP. Respondent yelled at Lawrance in front of her students, who became upset. They were afraid she was going to get into trouble or get fired and were concerned she had done something incorrectly. In order to defuse the situation in front of her students, Lawrance jokingly said that the IEP was not important. Lawrance did not think she violated Breyanna's IEP, and explained to her students that there was not a problem. Her quip was made to defuse the situation, and not because IEP's are not important.

Lawrance did not report this incident to anyone, although she later told respondent that she did not appreciate respondent coming into her classroom like that. Lawrance wanted to make it clear to respondent that she did not want her coming into her class and saying things like that in front of the students.

Workbook Incident

In March, one of Lawrance's students left her classroom to go to language arts, and came back with respondent for her workbook. Respondent came into the classroom and said that Lawrance had not given respondent the child's workbook. Respondent had never asked for the workbook before. Lawrance asked the student to get it, the student got it, and Lawrance handed it to respondent. It was the tenor and inappropriateness of the contact that bothered Lawrance, as respondent's tone was assertive. Lawrance had to stop her teaching to deal with respondent. Lawrance was taken aback that, all of a sudden, respondent needed the workbook; she could have simply asked for it to accompany the student. Lawrance sent an e-mail to her principal about this because she realized that respondent was taking notes on people, and the memo was to cover herself.

Substitute Plans

The principal had a format for substitute teaching plans and a template to use. Teachers could use any style they liked in formulating lesson plans. Lawrance left her substitute lesson plan on her desk and told substitutes about the procedure she followed. She tried to make clear what the substitutes were to do. In the main office there were emergency plans that were done at the beginning of the year. The principal asked for this, and also requested that the substitute lesson plans were clear enough so that the substitute would know what to do.

Respondent had been out ill and Auer, the resource room teacher, was rewriting respondent's lesson plans because the substitute could not find them. Lawrance went to help with them, and while she was looking for Breyanna's spelling program, she found a note in the child's file about what she had said to respondent about the IEP, as well as other things about her that had been written by respondent.

Flip Book

At a parent-teacher conference with Breyanna's parents, respondent spoke first and showed the parents a beautiful flip book allegedly done by Breyanna. As Breyanna had difficulty communicating, Lawrance's concern about the conference was that respondent had made it sound as if the book were the student's work. Lawrance could not reconcile this. Respondent was showing beautiful work, but Lawrance did not think the student was capable of doing this. On at least three occasions, Breyanna had not wanted to go to respondent's classroom. Breyanna said that respondent did not like what she wrote, so respondent would rewrite it and Breyanna would copy it.

DRA's

Lawrance had twenty-one students in her class and she gave the DRA to eighteen of them. The other three were to be tested in the resource room by respondent. Lawrance had watched a DVD at home and was self-taught in how to give the test. Respondent said she did not like to do things on her personal time. The scores were due at the end of the marking period (end of October/beginning of November). Lawrance was not sure if the scores were provided for the first marking period. Lawrance spoke with respondent and asked for Breyanna's scores and sent e-mails requesting them. Although respondent said she was not trained in the DRA, she later sent scores for the child. Other teachers had difficulty in getting scores from respondent, too.

Katrina Vegas was a resource room teacher at BFS for school year 2008–2009, and had been there for eight years. Vegas had first-, second- and third-grade students who were all classified, generally with learning disabilities. She and respondent shared a room for two periods in the afternoon, and had to deal with student overflow. Respondent had three periods in the afternoon. During lunch, respondent was by herself, and her last period was her preparation period.

DRA's

Respondent came over to BFS to assist with Vegas's schedule, as Vegas could not accommodate all of her students. They discussed the DRA's, and Vegas offered to help respondent, but respondent refused help from her. The DRA testing kit was in her room, to be shared with respondent. Respondent kept saying she was not trained on the DRA and that it would be invalid if she did it. Vegas learned how to do the DRA through faculty meetings, by talking to reading specialists in the building, by reading the book, and by doing it.

Professional Communications

Vegas's communications with respondent were friendly at first, but she thought respondent had a chip on her shoulder. Then respondent became very argumentative. Respondent was making comments through the students, so they would ask her why respondent hated her. One student said she was afraid of respondent and did not want respondent to teach her again. She said that respondent yelled. Respondent's students were pleased when the substitute was there and respondent was out. Vegas had a problem with respondent and difficulties with her, and their relationship became adversarial.

Originally they were both in classroom 213B, and there was one period when they both taught at the same time. Respondent did not use a teacher desk, as the room had only one, and it was small and cramped. This lasted until October, when she received an e-mail from Deni saying the room was not up to code. Since room 213A was available and empty, respondent would go to that room for a class and then return to 213B.

At the parent conferences in November, respondent said she did not have and could not supply the goals and objectives for the students because of technical glitches and problems. Respondent spoke of technical issues all the time. She complained that she did not have adequate materials. The Contour Program was supposed to have all the IEP's for the students. The resource room teachers needed the actual report card to write the goals and objectives. Most of the time, respondent's goals and objectives were not done. Vegas offered to help her, and even to print them out for her, but respondent refused. Everyone else had them. Also, the resource room had two computers to do an IEP or goals and objectives if they could not be printed from the laptop.

Respondent's tone with her students was harsh, and the students would complain that she changed their writings. Respondent was always harsh with Vegas. Vegas looked at the progress reports on the IEP's and could see that respondent had not done them, although there were plenty of materials available to help her.

Vegas did the DRA's for her students because she knew that respondent would not do them. Sometimes the scores of the protocols were not available and it looked like respondent may have been using the DRA for education purposes. This was not good, as the DRA was supposed to be an assessment, not a teaching tool.

Substitute Plans

Vegas was aware of the difficulty with respondent's substitute plans. Respondent was absent often, and would leave no lesson plans or inadequate plans, including some plans that were not understandable. So Vegas would have to stop her class to help the substitutes form a plan of instruction for respondent's students. When Vegas asked respondent to explain her lesson plans, respondent said they were clear and would not explain them further. Vegas sent e-mails to Billy about respondent's lesson plans and the problems with them, as the plans could not be deciphered. They definitely had verbal discussions about the plans before January 2009.

As to substitute plans, she did not know if there was a district-wide procedure. Everybody did their own, but the substitute plans should include a class list, fire-drill list, map of building, students who get picked up, and materials and teaching plans. They were also required to have emergency plans.

Professional Communications

In 2008–2009, the IEP's were made available in early September and before the school year started. The teaching assignments were received the first day of school. Vegas remembered an incident in the fall of 2008 where respondent complained about not having materials and about computer glitches. Parents were complaining. If there were a problem with the computers, then technical support was available. It was not professional to use this excuse at a parent meeting, where the goal was to focus on academics and behavior.

Student T.M. was scared to be in respondent's class and was regressing, so he was placed in Vegas's class. He was already her student for math, so she took him over for reading as well. Another student, T.I., was moved to Vegas's class with Wilson reading materials (a multi-source reading program) in September. The student was then switched to respondent, but that was not successful. After the November conference with parents, T.I. was taken out of respondent's class, and then received in-class support for language arts in her class.

File Cabinets

Vegas believed the file cabinets were available in the school. Respondent never complained to her about not having a locked file cabinet or key. The file cabinets were located in room 213B. Vegas said there was a new file cabinet and a file cabinet with a key hanging from it in the classroom at the beginning of the school year.

Eileen Auer was a resource room teacher at LES and in her third year of teaching. In 2008–2009 she was assigned to the resource room at LES and worked with respondent. Prior to the start of the school year, Auer was told she was getting extra help and was told to divide her students. Respondent was assigned three students in August, but Auer heard nothing from her prior to the start of the school year.

The first day of school was a professional day, and the second day was meetings. She and respondent initially shared a room, and had seven students: three were assigned to respondent and four to Auer. At midday, respondent had lunch and went to BFS. During respondent's lunch time, Auer was instructing

Respondent appeared upset and said she was transferred from LMS and did not know either the schedule or the children. Auer said she had e-mailed the schedule to respondent in August, but respondent said she did not open school e-mail on her personal time. Auer had been at the school in August. If respondent had come in, they might have had a chance to talk.

File Cabinet

In September 2008, the room assigned to Auer and respondent had wooden cabinets with locks, a black file cabinet, and a cabinet with two bottom drawers for files. Respondent had four boxes. Auer cleaned out space for respondent and showed her where things were kept. Respondent kept her materials in the file cabinet in Auer's classroom. A little later respondent got her own locking two-drawer file cabinet. The keys were in a baggie. Respondent said she did not have time to transfer her files, and never mentioned a file cabinet in the basement.

Professional Communications

Communications with respondent were difficult, as she was agitated, disgruntled, and defensive. Respondent kept writing things down and copying e-mails, and was taking copious notes. Respondent did not collaborate with Auer at all.

Auer and respondent had an issue with the master schedule, as respondent had left out a unit for a student. The IEP units must be documented in the master schedule and student M.S. was missing a unit. The schedule was e-mailed to respondent at the end of August, and she was provided with a list of students and subjects. Auer was directed to take the push-in students because they require more interaction with general education than the pull-out students. Every staff member could read the master schedule and had a handbook.

Many teachers felt uncomfortable interacting with respondent, as she was gruff and unpredictable. Teachers did not want to let respondent know if a student were running late, because respondent would allege that the teacher was not in compliance with the student's IEP.

Some students were shared by Auer and respondent (Auer for math, respondent for language arts and reading). A specialist in speech therapy came in during preparation time and asked if she could speak to respondent about a student, but the respondent said she needed three to five days to respond. Respondent never got back to the speech therapist and Auer thought this was inappropriate. For the resource room, communications were essential. In order to determine if the teacher in the resource room were effective, a student needed to demonstrate that the skills learned there were being transferred to the general education setting.

Substitute Plans

The district sent out a format about what needed to be in a lesson plan. The handbook also addressed substitute plans and the number of days of emergency plans that needed to be in the office. Each teacher had his/her own style of doing their own plans, but the plans should contain the basics of curriculum and content, and goals and objectives.

A substitute would come in during preparation time, and read and review the materials. Some of the substitutes were finishing college students, some were retired teachers, and some had subbed for years. When the respondent was out, the substitutes would have problems. Auer could not read through respondent's plans, nor could she understand them. As time went on there was not enough work and it was becoming too difficult for the students. Auer began providing materials to the substitutes, and finally did the substitute plans entirely. On one occasion she told respondent that a substitute had not been able to understand her lesson, and had a hard time figuring it out. Respondent said to her, "You are not my supervisor."

On another occasion, Auer saw respondent at the school copying something at the same time a substitute was teaching in respondent's classroom. Respondent said the substitute plans were right there, but Auer did not see them in the classroom. Respondent said she did not know why there was such a problem. It turned out that respondent was copying the plans. Auer never knew if the plans were turned over to the substitute.

Parent Conference

Auer attended meetings with parents. At parent conferences and IEP meetings, Hobson was also there. One IEP meeting was very uncomfortable. The first-grade teacher had said student K.D. was on target, and asked respondent for feedback. At the meeting a decision was made to discontinue reading for K.D., but to keep language arts. When K.D. was being discussed with the parents, respondent acted as if she had had no input into the decision, although she had been asked for her opinions and had input.

No parent complained to Auer about respondent in a parent conference, although one parent was upset that she did not have a parent conference with respondent in April when respondent was absent.

Materials

Respondent kept telling the parents that she did not have materials. She would call parents during class and complain. The comments she made to parents implied that the parents might question the services provided by the school. Respondent seemed to be always preoccupied with IEP compliance, but Auer thought it unusual for respondent to call parents on instruction time.

Respondent ate her lunch in the resource room and had a preoccupation with health and safety issues. Respondent had a lot of issues with the room: there were stains on the ceiling tile; the temperature was erratic, either too cool or too hot; and there was some white powder on objects in the room. Auer worked from a group table and used a teacher desk in the room. Respondent did not have a teacher desk in her classroom and always referred to the administration as "they."

Auer used a rolling cart with a SMART Board to separate the students and to avoid visual distraction for them. On one occasion, Auer had set up the SMART Board and respondent came and pushed it out of the way, saying it was a safety hazard. Auer told the students she needed a few more minutes to set it up, but respondent could have walked around it.

Their class divided in December or January because Auer and respondent received more students, and for the rest of the school year they were in separate rooms. As Auer was trying to instruct her students and get their materials, respondent would be collecting her students and bringing all of them into the resource room and then to her room. This was a distraction for the classroom teachers and for Auer.

DRA

The DRA2 was new to Auer at Lawrence Township. Auer read the instructions and tried out the protocols. It took about half an hour to an hour to learn, as the instructions were pretty explicit. Auer offered to show respondent her assessments and to help her with the DRA. Respondent said she was not going to look at the DRA kit or the accompanying DVD on her own time.

Maureen Hayes, in her fifth year in the Lawrence Township schools, was the director of humanities, kindergarten through sixth grade. She wrote and updated curricula and supervised teachers. She held an elementary education certification and a supervisor's certificate, and was also a reading specialist.

DRA

For school year 2008–2009, the DRA was to be administered by the teachers for kindergarten through grade three. The DRA had a teacher's manual and a DVD instruction, which was about forty to forty-five minutes long. To learn how to give the DRA, there was voluntary professional development, including a DVD to view, a manual, and consultation with the reading specialists. There was also a DRA kit in the classroom respondent shared with Auer. Hayes did not know any teacher who could not give the DRA, as this was not a new test or skill, and a teacher with experience, such as respondent, should be able to do it.

A voluntary presentation was given on this before the school year started, and during the first week of school there was an early dismissal so both regular and resource room teachers, and reading specialists, could go over the new language arts curricula, including the assessment schedule. Classroom teachers performed twenty to twenty-five of the DRA tests on their students who were not assigned to the resource room for reading or language arts. The DRA scores were due the first of November. This was all confirmed in e-mails.

Billy told Hayes that respondent needed some extra support. An e-mail was sent to respondent to set up a training session at the end of October or the beginning of November. From the time of the DRA scheduling until the memo from Billy, respondent never asked for training and Hayes never heard from her.

Respondent met Hayes at the main office at LES. Respondent became agitated and angry; she raised her voice and walked away from Hayes, who was taken aback, as she had never been spoken to in that way before. Hayes wrote an e-mail to Billy about respondent's behavior.

In the presence of principal McLaughlin and respondent, Hayes administered a DRA test to one of respondent's students so that respondent could see how it was done. Respondent became more upset, so McLaughlin told Hayes to leave. Hayes had been able to give only one test (although she had intended to do two), because the situation had become too tense, and there were other students in the room. She identified the tests given to student Kevin, and another for student Vinnie, but his had no rubric.

At the meeting on October 29, respondent appeared to be under the impression that Hayes would be testing all of her students. When they met on October 30, respondent said she had problems administering the test. Hayes did not have a chance to do anything else because respondent and McLaughlin got into a screaming match.

Hayes saw the information provided in respondent's DRA's. In some, the rubric on the back was not filled in, so Hayes questioned how much of the exam had been done by respondent, as the rubrics were supposed to be completed and they were not.

Jay Billy was the supervisor of special education, pre-K through fifth grade (since 2007), and had eighteen years' experience in special education (sixteen to seventeen in the district). He taught special education at Mercer County Special Services. He supervised the CST and special education programs and teachers, as well as the preschool program. Billy was respondent's supervisor at LES and BFS. He knew her, but had not supervised her prior to the 2008–2009 school year, nor was he involved in the decision to transfer her to LES and BFS.

Respondent had four supervisors: her principals (McLaughlin and Buss), Deni and Billy. Each building was managed by a principal, but Billy managed the programs. Respondent was the only teacher going to two schools, but there had previously been others.

After the opening ceremonies at the start of the school year, Billy stopped in respondent's classroom and met with her. She was concerned about the students assigned to her: she said she had not taught children that young for a long time, and that she was doing something she had not done. He told her "a teacher is a teacher is a teacher." Respondent started with seven students, three in one school and four in the other. He tried to stop in and see all the teachers, and was in and out of his buildings several times per week. He thought that respondent had taught elementary special education many years before.

PIP

A PIP was required for all teachers and needed to be done by the end of September for that school year if the teacher's position had changed. Otherwise the PIP prepared in the spring could be used. At a meeting with Deni and him, respondent was told that her PIP needed changes because her students were now younger. The PIP they had for her was not appropriate because it should have included elementary curricula as well as the goal of her working "to improve collegiality and improve relations with other teachers." Respondent did not appreciate having to attend another meeting about the PIP, nor did she like that goal. She said she did a PIP at her previous school and that that should be acceptable

The first meeting on the PIP did not go well and was cut short. E-mails were sent to him from respondent about the PIP, but Billy did not meet with respondent to discuss them, as he thought they could discuss these issues at the next PIP meeting. He had never been "supervised by a subordinate before," as respondent was doing to him. A second meeting also did not go well. Finally, he and Deni generated respondent's PIP for 2008–2009. They felt the goals were appropriate, particularly the goal to improve professional communications. He had heard that respondent was difficult with other teachers and that she was unhappy and complaining. Also, her memos could not be easily understood.

DRA's

The DRA was used to assess reading level. Respondent was not comfortable doing the DRA, so Hayes used e-mails to initiate a meeting in October with her about the DRA, as respondent said she would not take the kit home to learn about it on her own. After a conversation with Hayes and respondent, respondent was advised that she would have to do her own DRA's. At the meeting between Hayes and respondent, respondent was rude to Hayes, and Hayes sent Billy a memo. Respondent should have known about the assessments and when they were due. The information was posted on the website and there were notices about the DRA's. The DRA's were "not brain surgery"; they were not hard to learn.

Memos and e-mails were exchanged. Respondent was advised as to her behavior and was reminded about her PIP. She was told to get her DRA's done, but she did not complete them by October 31, and was given an extension. By November 19 she submitted scores but not the entire test. Teachers Seipp and Fernandez had been requesting the scores. In the reporting of scores by respondent, Billy had concerns, because it was hard to figure out from where respondent got the reading levels.

A meeting was held on November 26 with Deni, Buss, Billy and respondent. There was confusion as to whether respondent had ever delivered the scores. She said she did not know what the protocols were. There was a lot of concern from the teachers. Respondent was asked for the protocols, and she said they were in the trunk of her car. She became angry and went to her car. Billy was not comfortable with the protocols or scores, as the rubrics were not filled out. He questioned the validity of the scores and thought some of it was "made up."

Respondent had no explanation. She obfuscated and talked around the issue. She blamed technology, etc. She had been told to produce the scores and protocols. She continued to not be able to identify where she got the scores from. He was not convinced the scores were valid. He considered that at this meeting, respondent had been sternly spoken to about her responsibilities with regard to the DRA's.

The next DRA deadline was January. Respondent submitted scores, but they were late. The test results now showed different levels for the students, but still respondent did not produce the protocols/rubrics. When the protocols were finally produced, they showed the following

P-14 Kevin—not completed
P-15 Vinnie—no rubrics
P-16 Kyla—no rubrics
P-17 Davon—some done, looked like Hernandez's writing
P-18 Karrem—no rubrics
P-19 Breyanna—no rubrics
P-20 Paulina— no rubrics

Billy sent respondent a memo and told her to produce the protocols, but she never did. Respondent's submission of scores in March 2009 again provided no protocols, although these scores looked more complete than the ones submitted in January. Respondent never said why she did not submit protocols or give an excuse.

In February 2009 the grades and progress reports (explaining how they were reaching their goals) were due. The timing of grades and progress reports was simultaneous. Respondent was not getting them done in a timely manner. The progress reports were not turned in to him. In a memo from respondent dated February 17, 2009, respondent said she did all the tests, but the protocols were never given to anyone.

A document prepared at the end of June or early July showed that respondent's progress reports were not done. This put the district in a rush because the IEP required quarterly reporting. If not completed, the school district's finances were put at risk. Also, the parents of special education students were concerned about their children's progress toward their IEP goals. On numerous occasions, Billy asked respondent for these reports, but did not receive them.

A case manager told him that one of the teachers reported that respondent was using the DRA manual as a teaching instrument. This gave the students the information

Respondent was always aggressive and hostile to any directive and always had an excuse, saying that "something was not working." She was offered help and refused it. When Billy told her to do something, he would get a ten-page memo back. The whole process of dealing with her was difficult.

At one parent-teacher conference, respondent said she could not print in the building when a parent asked for a copy of the progress report. She fabricated this, because he checked and she had never done it. Respondent would say she did it, and that if she had not, it was because of technical problems. This was totally incredible to him—she was telling untruths to parents. He said the district was lucky parents did not notice this. He wrote a memo after this incident.

Respondent frequently complained about technology, and Billy told her to put in a web-ticket and get tech support. He did not follow up because he assumed he would hear if there were a problem. He did not sit down with respondent, because it was clear she did not want to discuss the issues with him. She had not followed through with directions given to her. Her memos to him told him how to do his job, so he did not respond in writing. Respondent was always confrontational in her written responses.

Substitute Plans and Lesson Plans

Respondent was out forty-five and a half days during the school year. Substitutes would complain and have a hard time. Buss and McLaughlin also sent him e-mails about respondent's lesson plans for her students. Information was provided to respondent, but she did not avail herself of it. A lesson planning format was sent to her on September 15, but she did not use it. Respondent was told she could call in, e-mail or fax the substitute lesson plans, but Billy continued to receive feedback from teachers that her plans were not done.

Billy had continuing concerns about the substitute lesson plans. He heard of an incident involving respondent not being professional. Buss sent him memos on this. There was no change in respondent's substitute plans during the year. Auer and Vegas were trying to figure out what needed to be done with respondent's classes when she on the test—like a pretest—and was not appropriate. However, he did not discuss this with respondent.

The district used other assessment tools such as the Northwest Educational Assessment (NWEA), which was computer based, formed baseline assessments, and was used to guide programs. The DRA tracked progress, so it should be accurate.

A memo was sent to respondent on April 27 telling her what to do, but she was only in school fifteen days during April and May. Billy did not think that respondent did any of the things she was directed to do. A follow-up e-mail was sent on May 18. He sent another e-mail to respondent on June 2 regarding a parent conference. Again, Billy asked for the progress reports and for them to be submitted to him. Respondent did not comply. Respondent's CAP was written on March 16, 2009, by Deni, who met with respondent and gave it to her, but he did not know if they had any other meetings about it.

Grades

Respondent also had a problem entering a student's grade. Hobson asked respondent to enter the grade, but she refused to do so.

Professional Communications

Billy had difficulties in communicating with respondent, as she stopped reading his e-mails at the end of the school year. He knew this because he checked their history and respondent had not opened them. His e-mail sent to respondent on April 20 was read by her on May 28; his e-mail of April 6 was read on May 26; his e-mail of April 14 was read on May 26. On April 23, Billy sent respondent an e-mail telling respondent to check her mail daily, as teachers are supposed to check their mailboxes and e-mails at least once per day. On April 26, Billy met with respondent and told her to check her e-mail daily, but she did not. He and Buss would then hand her memos. After being told to check her e-mail daily, respondent should have checked it daily.

was out, as there were multiple complaints from substitute teachers that they could not decipher respondent's plans.

File Cabinet

Respondent had a locked file cabinet in her room. On the first day of school at BFS, he met with her and saw the cabinet, with keys hanging, there at BFS. Billy had carried the new file cabinet down to the classroom. He received no complaints from respondent until the meeting of November 26, when she said she had no keys. He knew there was a locked file cabinet available to her and that she had access to one. Respondent said she had a problem with a locked file cabinet, so he brought her another one in January.

Progress Reports

Progress reports (covering goals and objectives as well as curriculum) were part of the IEP and were done quarterly. The teachers kept data during the school year and entered it into the progress report on WebTrack. Respondent stated she had problems with technology on her IEP progress reports, and that she did them, but if she did not, it was a technical problem.

Respondent complained so often about her computer he thought she was crying wolf. These were excuses used by her. She continued to obfuscate, but never took any help that was offered to her.

Staff Interactions

A new student was added to respondent's load while she was out of school. Upon her return, respondent said to Kabo that the student was a "pump and dump," and accused Kabo of dumping the student in her class. Respondent refused to accept the student's IEP and did not provide a reason. She taught the student, but her behavior baffled Billy.

Hobson reported to him that respondent did not speak positively with parents. At an IEP meeting, respondent said decisions would be made after she left the room. The teachers worked with the principal and vice principal on the IEP's. Hobson was diligent about having all teachers appear at the meeting and have input to the IEP.

Hobson provided other information. The staff was frustrated. it seemed that respondent was continually oppositional to other special education teachers, case managers, and other teachers. Some of the problems were when respondent yelled at Seipp in the hallway; when she entered Lawrance's room; when she was rude to Hernandez; and when she told the speech therapist she would not be able to get back to her for three to five days.

The staff was totally frustrated dealing with respondent. They would avoid interacting with her because respondent had an aggressive tone, she scared some of the staff, and she did not want to work collegially. People tried to avoid contact with her because she was inappropriate.

Billy said that if a teacher could not work with other people, then the teacher could not get insight into a child's needs. He never knew a teacher to lie to parents before. It put the district at risk. Clearly, respondent did not do her job. This could cause damage to the program's reputation and incur sanctions from the State.

Other concerns were respondent's personal comments in the student's running record, and the constant blaming of deficiencies on the computer. Billy thought respondent was unprofessional. No one had ever made comments to him the way respondent did, as when she told him how to do his job.

Judith McLaughlin had been the principal at LES since 1998, and was one of respondent's supervisors in school year 2008–2009. Prior to that she was a vice principal in Ewing Township and a teacher of the second, third and fourth grades. She knew respondent but had not supervised her.

Deni had told McLaughlin in mid-summer 2008 that respondent would be coming to LES in the fall to teach the resource room part time, originally for two students. Gold had said that respondent's certificate was not appropriate for LMS, but McLaughlin assumed her certificate was good for LES. McLaughlin had a brief conversation with Billy in the late summer about respondent's schedule. She also had conversations with Buss in the late summer because LES was the home school for respondent. Both of them knew respondent, and McLaughlin knew her from staff development and from LIS.

She called respondent in August and asked if she wanted to visit the school, but respondent said no.

September 2, 2008, was the first day of school. On that date everyone returned to their home building after the general meeting, and there was a faculty meeting, attended by respondent, to welcome new staff and to discuss policies and other school business. The calendar was discussed and the district-wide assessment calendar was distributed to the faculty. The faculty handbook showed the marking periods as well as the assessment schedule.

DRA's

For the first month, respondent was acclimating herself to the school. Respondent told McLaughlin that she did not know what she was teaching. Respondent also said she had no resources or materials. Auer had been there the year before, and McLaughlin knew there were resources in the school available to help respondent, including the case managers, reading specialists and others.

In the beginning, McLaughlin let respondent teach. However, McLaughlin noted that other teachers came to her to get things from respondent, which concerned her because the teachers usually helped each other.

McLaughlin's relationship with respondent started to erode in December 2008. Respondent was supposed to give a report to the speech teacher, and said she would get back to that teacher in five days, but she never did. Other teachers had complaints and reported that respondent was hostile and combative with them.

There was an e-mail from Buss to respondent dated November 12, 2008, where he needed to have the independent level of reading of students without the teacher's intervention. On November 19, respondent provided independent test-score levels to McLaughlin in an envelope in the mailbox.

McLaughlin was not part of the November 26, 2008, meeting. She had no conversations with Billy or Deni and their directives to respondent were contained in the memo to her. McLaughlin never told respondent to ignore Billy's or Buss's directives.

File Cabinets

Respondent had been assigned to room 218 with Auer, and there were two filing cabinets in her room. McLaughlin had concerns about respondent sharing a room with Auer, as Deni had said they could not teach in the same room. As one did more push-in classroom resource work and the other did more pull-out classroom resource work, McLaughlin thought the schedule would work. But then more children came in, and they had to split up the room.

Respondent had a preparation period at the beginning of the day and then taught reading and language arts. Respondent said she needed a written directive or she would not do anything. Because the teaching schedules of respondent and Auer overlapped, McLaughlin had to find another room for respondent, but some teachers did not want to share a room with her. Teacher Karen Hall then said she would share a room with respondent, as Hall is an in-class support teacher, not an out-of-class one.

Complaints From Parents

Dr. Elabasy (ph.) wanted a conference with respondent and the parents of a student, but respondent was not at LES for the conference. Respondent said she did not know that she had to make them up.

Teaching Observation

In March 2009, McLaughlin was assigned by assistant superintendent Crystal Lovell to observe respondent in her classroom. McLaughlin did this for all her teachers. If a teacher was tenured, sometimes someone else would do the observation. McLaughlin prepared to do an evaluation of respondent's teaching on March 3. McLaughlin asked for a pre-observation conference and reviewed the form. At a pre-observation meeting, respondent showed her the materials for the observation, but McLaughlin noted that while respondent had materials, she had no coherent lesson plan. Respondent said she would have it the next day.

McLaughlin observed M.R. in respondent's class that day. He had special education in a closed class on some occasions; on other occasions he would be pulled out of class to the resource room for reading. At first respondent said McLaughlin could not observe M.R. because she did not know and was not certified in the Wilson Reading Program and M.R. required that program. During the actual observation, the child said he could not read the materials. Although the Wilson Program is not listed in M.R.'s IEP, respondent could have used Wilson strategies, as she was certified in special education.

At the observation, respondent had a game set up, and McLaughlin watched the lesson. She saw the children becoming frustrated and thought the material was over their heads. Student B. started crying when he could not read the words. The lesson was going nowhere because the words were too hard. The observation, which McLaughlin characterized as fair and objective, was unsatisfactory.

McLaughlin went to the case manager and found out that these students needed easy words. Her concern was that the children were being taught on a level too high for them.

McLaughlin wanted a post-conference meeting with respondent where the focus would be on how to improve the lesson. At this meeting, which lasted about ten minutes, McLaughlin did not know if respondent had a copy of the report she had prepared following the observation. Respondent went off on a tirade, so McLaughlin ended the meeting.

McLaughlin had a supervisor's and principal's certificate and did not need other certifications to review respondent's class. McLaughlin was familiar with special education and had also taught reading. Respondent told her that she was not a special education teacher, so McLaughlin made arrangements for other supervisors (Billy and Hayes) to review respondent's teaching, but it never happened because respondent was absent.

Grades

The data for students' grades came from the comprehensive assessment list and included observations, assessments, the NWEA, DRAs, math tests, daily tests, rubrics, and performance tests. Each quarter the district had assessments for the students. The assessment calendar in the handbook stated that all the assessments and grades had to be given by a specific date.

There was a problem with the entry of respondent's grades. In January, student B.H. was put on respondent's roster. There was some confusion about his IEP. At the end of the marking period, a memo was sent to the faculty about the grades. Kristen DeFiccio had put in B.H.'s grades for the first and second marking periods. However, his reading and language arts had been left blank for the marking period. She went to respondent and asked for help getting B.H.'s grades. She saw respondent walking down the stairs, but when she asked respondent for help, respondent said she was too busy and could not provide B.H.'s grades.

Respondent had to put in DeFiccio's own grades for the first and second marking periods. In an April 3, 2009, memo from respondent, respondent said she was not giving grades. Respondent wanted it in writing that she could put in all the grades for B.H. On April 14, DeFiccio put it in writing and gave it to respondent. She said she had

This was the policy of the school district and all special education teachers knew it. The procedure used by the district was known from conversations with Guerra, Auer, the secretary and Deni, and was used to make sure that there was a full report card.

Respondent sent a memo to McLaughlin but McLaughlin did not respond. Much of what was said in the memo had not happened because respondent was not willing to meet with McLaughlin without the union representative being present. At that time, McLaughlin did not try to meet with respondent, because McLaughlin was more concerned with getting B.H.'s grades.

McLaughlin received another e-mail from respondent late in the day on April 15. At this point, it was too late. B.H.'s grades were in the cumulative file and McLaughlin was scrambling to put together the report card. She did not respond to respondent's memo.

McLaughlin's relationship with respondent eroded starting in December. Respondent simply would not respond. Other teachers had complaints about her, but there was no specific incident. They had started the year off well, as McLaughlin had been looking forward to working with respondent.

Substitute Lesson Plans

Most teachers left their plans on their desks if they knew they were going to be out. The substitutes could not understand the plans that were left by respondent, so McLaughlin sent respondent an e-mail. Respondent was told to prepare the plans and leave out the extraneous information. However, respondent's plans were not coherent, so Auer had to assist. There were also emergency plans in the cabinet if the teacher was out. Respondent had submitted these plans.

McLaughlin said they tried to get special substitutes for the students, including retired special education teachers. The substitutes said that they could not understand respondent's plans. McLaughlin received a letter from one of these retired teachers, Ruth Cook, who stated that respondent's lesson plans were "inadequate." Cook had to not yet gotten the grades back from respondent. DeFiccio was upset because there were no grades by April 15, so she sent another e-mail about getting this done.

McLaughlin's concern was to get a grade. She was also concerned that respondent was not doing her job; that she took up much time writing memos; that other teachers who worked with respondent could not get along with her; that parents were complaining; and that the substitutes did not understand respondent's lesson plans.

McLaughlin told respondent that she needed the grades. She contacted Chris Guerra from the Technical Support Unit and reversed the computer entry process. She put the grades in for the first and second marking periods. Respondent then filed a complaint with the Department of Fiscal Responsibility of the DOE. The hearing took one day and the conclusion was that there was no violation. McLaughlin also learned that respondent was pressing this further, and in May found out that respondent had sent a certified packet of information to her supervisor, Deni, Buss, McLaughlin and the BOE. McLaughlin noted that many of the memos that were revealed in discovery, and which were allegedly sent to her by respondent, had never been received by her.

In April 2009 it was necessary to input the grades for student B.H., as the regular teachers had access to PowerSchool once the child was assigned to a special education teacher. When asked for her grade, respondent stated that she was too busy to do it. Other e-mails were exchanged, and in an April 15 e-mail from McLaughlin to respondent, respondent said she would not let McLaughlin into her classroom. Respondent was not cooperative. She put her hand up and said she could not talk. She then raised her voice. McLaughlin got upset and frustrated. Respondent was telling McLaughlin what the law was. McLaughlin told respondent to put the grade on the report card.

Respondent offered several reasons for failing to enter B.H.'s grades, including that she was too busy, that she had sixteen other people to worry about, that it was against the law, and that there were technical glitches.

ask Auer and Kabo about the lesson plans, and Auer ended up doing them for the substitutes. The lesson plan complaints started in January, because respondent's attendance schedule had been becoming worse over the school year. She had been out four days in October, three days in November, and seven days in January.

After some e-mails, McLaughlin went to see respondent. Respondent said her plans were fine. McLaughlin asked respondent to classify her substitute plans and also asked respondent to get the children to come to her classroom. There was no policy about substitute lesson plans. No improvement plan was given to respondent, just directives in conversations. It was very difficult to talk to respondent even about the making of substitute plans.

McLaughlin acknowledged that there was nothing in the handbook about a particular form for the substitute lesson plan, but she said it should include the schedule, the roster, and the eight elements of an effective lesson plan. The problem with respondent's lesson plans was that they could not be followed. Lesson plans needed to be clear and concise and provided on a monthly basis. However, there was no district substitute lesson plan template, as they usually followed the regular district lesson plan format. The entire district received the lecture about what was in a substitute lesson plan at the beginning of the school year. McLaughlin did not know if there had been any problems with respondent's previous lesson plans. Respondent said that she had never changed the format of her lesson plans.

PIP

Respondent had a PIP that had been provided by Deni telling respondent to improve her planning and her substitute lesson plans. However, McLaughlin never gave an improvement plan to respondent and never gave her any ninety-day notice to improve her substitute plans.

Professional Conduct

McLaughlin expected the teachers to have their DRA protocols and to provide the scores to the teachers on time. She thought that respondent's scores looked inflated. In the fall, McLaughlin had told respondent to provide the scores to the homeroom teachers when they were due.

McLaughlin was not part of any investigation as to the rubrics. She had some input into the tenure charges, as there were several meetings towards the end of the school year. McLaughlin had to talk to other personnel such as Gold, Billy, Deni, etc. A lot of issues were going on, but her concern was trying to get respondent to do what she was supposed to do. Respondent was absent frequently. McLaughlin's concern was that she did not want the children to be harmed. Buss, Billy and McLaughlin asked to meet with the school board attorney and the superintendent about tenure charges in the late spring of 2009.

June 16 Incident/Grading

In June there was another incident. McLaughlin read every report card, and saw that grades appeared to be missing in the PowerSchool program for two students, M.R. and B.H. Then it appeared to be just for M.R. The last day of school was June 19 and the grades were due two days before the end of school.

McLaughlin told respondent that some grades were missing. Respondent taught six students or less at LES and said that she had entered their grades. On that day a substitute, Pat Rogers, stayed in respondent's classroom to make the transition with the students, as respondent had missed almost the entire marking period. Respondent walked into the classroom where Rogers was teaching, erased the board, and said she was in charge. One student asked McLaughlin to keep the substitute.

At the meeting on June 16, respondent said her computer was not working. McLaughlin called Deni. Respondent was combative and not cooperating. The building representative for the union, Rebecca Young, arrived, and so did Deni. At that time respondent said she could not get the grades. Deni then asked for the documents used to determine the grades, but respondent could not replicate the grades she had given.

McLaughlin noted that Deni was professional, but concerned. McLaughlin went to retrieve the data to support M.R.'s grades. She was looking for current DRA's, writing pieces, spelling tests, and daily or weekly reports. Respondent gave McLaughlin a folder from her room with the papers. Respondent never said she had any other data. McLaughlin took the data to her office to look for assessment data on M.R. because she needed the backup data that respondent used to provide a grade.

At one point they went to respondent's room to find the grades, and Young came up with folders from respondent's room. There was nothing from the fourth marking period. McLaughlin felt the situation was serious. The superintendent came over. Respondent had a confrontation with Meara. He said there was no documentation for the grades. Respondent walked to the file cabinets, said it was in there, and walked away.

McLaughlin was able to go to M.R.'s regular teacher, who gave him a reading grade. But when they looked at respondent's files, there was no backup for anyone. Respondent said the substitute could give the grades.

McLaughlin never heard from respondent about the grades, but McLaughlin did call her on or about June 18 saying she still had not received the documentation. She left a message on respondent's home telephone but never received anything further from respondent.

In summary, McLaughlin described that what happened on June 16 was that she met with Deni and Meara, and respondent was ordered to show her grades. Respondent said there was a problem with her computer, and then said the documentation was in her office in a box. McLaughlin asked respondent for the documentation. When it was reviewed, respondent was told it was not sufficient, and was told to not come back to school until she had it. McLaughlin became concerned because there was no backup for any of the students' grades, and confirmed that in a letter to respondent. Meara then placed respondent on administrative leave. McLaughlin understood that respondent could not return until her grades were done.

William R. Buss was the principal of BFS, which had 450 students from grades pre-K to third grade, plus twenty-four teachers and fifty support staff. Buss had forty-two years of experience in education, thirty-five years as a principal. He knew respondent and had worked with her at LIS, where she had taught elementary grades.

Buss had heard that there was going to be a reassignment of staff and that respondent would be working part-time at BFS. He had contact with her and sent her an e-mail welcoming her and telling her about the staff. On August 28, 2008, respondent sent him a note, so he sent her an e-mail. Respondent never contacted Hernandez, nor did she visit the school prior to the first day, when she appeared at BFS in the afternoon.

DRA's

The DRAs were given three times per year, in October (prior to the parent conferences in November), and again in January and April, and the profiles were shared with the parents. In October all the teachers with children who were assigned to respondent's class—Seipp, Vegas and Hernandez—were starting to look for data for the upcoming November parent conferences and wanted to have this information. Buss had concerns about respondent and talked to Billy about not getting the data from respondent.

Respondent and Buss sat down at the end of October or the beginning of November and spoke about what was needed for the DRA's. Buss knew that respondent had been trained and had been given the DRA kit, which explained how to perform these tests. He told respondent that she had until November 19 to get the tests done and to provide the independent level scores. Buss received information from respondent, but he had concerns that the information he received was not complete, that it was not sufficient to determine the fluency and comprehension for each student, and that the protocols were not there.

Buss had a meeting with respondent toward the end of November to discuss the situation. Billy, Deni, the building representative, respondent and Buss were present. The conversation began with their expectations of respondent, at which time she became angry and argumentative. Buss saw that they were not getting anywhere or getting anything accomplished. The immediate focus of this meeting was where the DRA protocols were located. Respondent said she had worked on them and that they were in her car. Buss said he had put a locked file cabinet in her room so that she could keep them there. Respondent became angry when asked to go to her car and get the protocols. She said, "I don't have to take this crap." At the meeting, the appellant became argumentative. She talked over people and slammed doors. Buss did not recall any of the administrators yelling at respondent and he said he did not raise his voice.

When asked to get the protocols from her car, respondent went and got them. Buss assumed she had keys to a file cabinet, but respondent said she did not have any.

After the profiles were produced by respondent, Billy and Deni looked at them and thought that they were not complete. Billy and Deni realized that the assessment parts of the DRA were not supported by the protocols, and concluded that they had not been done. At that time, the meeting became hostile. Buss raised a concern about communication and the need for the parties to work together as a team. He was concerned that the children would pick up on the hostility and the arguments among the parties.

Respondent said she did not know what the protocols were, but Deni had previously told her. At the end of the DRA, there was a grid—a rubric—which was the protocol that gave the level that the student had attained in reading. The grid sheet showed the grade level. The rubric was the descriptive part of the protocol.

A packet of information was forwarded to respondent on December 4. On that date, respondent was told when her assessments were due, and was directed to do them. The DRA schedule was provided to respondent, so she was aware of when the entire assessment schedule was to be completed for the school year. In addition, respondent could share technology with the other teachers in the school, who could help her. Buss provided a calendar to respondent to be sure she had it and to ensure her compliance. As far as submitting the DRA scores in the winter or spring, Buss was not aware as to whether respondent did so, because by that time Billy was dealing directly with respondent.

Parent Comments

Buss recalled receiving particular complaints from other teachers who indicated they were concerned about respondent's behavior when they approached her. In addition, two parents were concerned. One child needed to be removed from respondent's classroom, as that student's parent said that respondent was not answering her questions. Respondent said that technical glitches and administrative problems were the reasons that she could not answer the questions. Buss took issue with this because technicians were assigned to each school and could handle any type of technical problem that might develop. He confirmed this in an e-mail written after the meeting.

Two different parents at two different meetings also expressed concern with respondent. One parent was not happy with the information received from respondent and thought it focused too much on technical and administrative issues instead of focusing on the child. One parent insisted that the child be removed from respondent's class as that child was receiving a special reading program

Buss reported that some teachers had concerns about respondent's conversations with parents. Vegas reported that respondent blamed everything on technical glitches. Buss stated that he had received no direct complaints from students, although Seipp expressed concern that the children in respondent's care were confused and were not sure what was expected from them. As far as investigating Seipp's concerns, which came in around the time the first DRA's were due, basically Buss watched, listened and monitored respondent's behavior.

With regard to conversations Buss had with respondent, sometimes they were clear, and sometimes she was short and disrespectful. He noted that she would "not stay on topic."

Substitute Plans

The expectation of the school was that there would be substitute lesson plans in the classroom for the substitute to find so that he or she could instruct the children in the absence of the teacher. An emergency set of plans was also maintained in the main office. One substitute asked Buss to go to respondent's classroom because he could not find the respondent's lesson plans when she was absent. Together they were able to find the plans, but they could not understand them. It appeared that respondent provided no guidance to the substitutes. The substitute lesson plans did not even list the children or the classrooms that they were to be coming from. Buss told respondent to make her plans more clear for the substitutes who were coming in. This was particularly important because respondent's absences increased during the course of the year. Respondent stated that she wrote exactly what she meant and wanted to be taught, but the substitutes could not understand or follow her plans because they were so difficult and convoluted.

Buss did not report any problem with respondent's lesson plans, but noted that substitute plans were not the same as lesson plans. Teachers were required to do lesson plans every month and current plans every day. As far as respondent's substitute lesson plans were concerned, he could not understand them, as they were extremely detailed and very difficult to follow. Buss provided a list of what he wanted to see in respondent's lesson plans, but there was no particular policy for preparation of the substitute lesson plans. Each teacher used his or her own form. He expected that they would include the children's names, the periods, the times, and the curriculum standards that would be required. Emergency lesson plans were maintained in the main office. He did not see any individual folders for substitute lesson plans. He also noted that respondent's substitute lesson plans referred to other materials that they could not locate. Respondent was frequently absent from school. Buss raised this concern to special services supervisors Deni and Billy, especially because of the IEP's. However, no disciplinary charges were brought against respondent for her absenteeism.

File Cabinets

Deni and Billy made sure that all the special education teachers had working and locking file cabinets. Respondent and Vegas were assigned to room 213A, where both teachers had desks. Respondent also worked in room 213B. From September to the end of November, respondent had never complained to Buss about not having a locking file cabinet, and Buss was not aware that she did not have one. As soon as respondent said she did not have a file cabinet with a key, Mr. Buss specifically ordered one for her, although the original file cabinet was still in the room. He gave respondent the key on December 15, 2008, for which she acknowledged receipt.

Philip J. Meara

Phillip J. Meara was in his fifth year as the superintendent of Lawrence Township Public Schools. Previously he was a superintendent in Freehold Borough and Plumsted Township.

September 4, 2007—First Day of School

In 2007–2008, respondent had been transferred to LMS. There was an issue with her at the beginning of the school year, and the principals talked to him about it. Instead of going to LMS, respondent had gone to LIS, her previous assignment. The issue was resolved, but the director of personnel had to speak with respondent about her actions that day.

DRA's and Grading

The following school year (2008–2009), respondent was assigned to LES and BFS as a special education teacher in the resource room. Meara did not directly supervise her; rather, the principals and the director of special services did. Meara received e-mails from Deni, Billy and McLaughlin, and in general was copied on their e-mails. In April 2009, McLaughlin contacted him about an incident of insubordination, involving assessments and grades. Respondent's supervisors were having difficulty getting her to enter grades into the system because she was refusing.

By the end of April 2009, Meara had enough concerns to recommend withholding the increment that respondent was due under her contract, and a letter was sent from the Board reflecting that action. Meara reached that decision after speaking with Billy, Buss, McLaughlin, Deni and Gold and getting their input.

Meara became more involved in mid-June 2009. On May 16, McLaughlin had been looking for the grades for one student on PowerTeacher (a software program) and realized that there was no backup data available. Meara was called to LES again about concern for the respondent and her grades, and, in particular, the DRA assessment. Deni, McLaughlin, Meara and respondent met on June 16. It was the end of the school year, and at that time they could go through respondent's grading of her students. Respondent came to the meeting with her laptop and had a difficult time pulling up the grades on it. She did not want anyone to see the screen of the laptop and kept moving it around, blocking the view.

At the meeting, respondent did not know at first how many students she had. They started with one student, and respondent indicated that the grades were sent home. Meara said that, according to McLaughlin, all of respondent's fourth-quarter grades were not completed.

Respondent said she had the records in folders. McLaughlin, Deni and Meara looked at the folders, but they did not have the required information. Respondent said she might have the records at home. Meara told her to go home and get them, and put her on administrative leave until she got them. Meara anticipated that the administrative leave would be short and would last only until respondent returned with the records, which he thought would be the next day. Instead, respondent called him and wanted to know what an administrative leave was. Meara said he meant that she was on leave until she produced the records, and that she could come back once she had the data. Respondent said everything was finished as of June 15, and she left a voicemail for Meara on June 18, which was relayed through his secretary.

As far as the records were concerned, it was Meara's initial impression that everything respondent was supposed to do had been finished by the end of the school year. He contacted McLaughlin to follow up to see if everything had been completed, as he expected would be done when he placed respondent on administrative leave. McLaughlin said the files she had received from respondent were no different from the files respondent presented the day she was sent home, and were not complete.

Meara's administrators also shared their concerns about respondent's behavior toward parents and other staff. Usually, the staff worked together as a team. It surprised him that respondent interacted so negatively with the staff at both schools and also with different staff members. It seemed to be something more serious than a personality conflict; it appeared that there was just no level of cooperation from respondent.

Meara was aware of respondent's statements of her unwillingness to do anything outside of school. As far as the DRA training was concerned, respondent said she would not do it on her own time. She also said that she would not work beyond a regular school day. Meara could not imagine someone being a successful teacher without doing some work at home, and he expected that from his teachers.

Respondent was paid through the end of the school year (June 2009). For the 2009–2010 school year, a letter was sent to respondent on August 21, 2009, in which she was continued on administrative leave/suspension. Meara had concerns about whether respondent should return as a teacher given the allegations about the grades. He decided to recommend that tenure charges be brought against her, seeking her dismissal from the Lawrence Township public school system. He believed that what he saw indicated that she was responsible for what was happening in the school with her grades, and that if respondent were continued in her position, she would harm the children entrusted to her care.

The administration had showed him where respondent had been insubordinate. There were many instances where she had been told to do something and did not do it. Having a reading score without a protocol particularly concerned him, especially with special education children. The score for the DRA was the endpoint; the most important information was contained in the protocol. It appeared to him that respondent's DRA scores had been falsified, and to have any indication that the results were fabricated was a huge concern for him.

Meara spoke with counsel and his administrators over the summer about respondent's behavior and her failure to provide the basis for the grades that he believed she had fabricated. He relied on all these incidents to make the determination to file the tenure charges. He was concerned about the job that respondent was doing for the children. During the summer he and his staff went over everything that had happened during the year and the effect that respondent had on her students. Meara would not ever want a teacher who would harm a student. Language arts literacy relied on the DRA and the NWEA. The grade (as the endpoint) was not as important as the critical piece of information—the backup data—which simply was not there. While Meara did not personally review the information respondent provided, he listened to his administrators, who indicated that the only properly graded DRA's for respondent's students were the ones that were done by her supervisor.

Respondent was a ten-month employee. By letter of August 21, Meara told her she would be on administrative leave/suspension for the first few weeks of the school year while he considered his options. He thought that respondent might want to talk to him about the situation and he wanted to give her a chance to respond. Gold had reached out for respondent in June, but told him that respondent would not meet with him. Meara's secretary left messages for respondent, who returned a telephone call, but no meeting resulted. As far as Meara was concerned, respondent was not responsive.

Testimony for Respondent

Background

Respondent Jill Kubicki had been a licensed teacher in the state of New Jersey for eighteen years and had an instructional teaching certificate. She was a teacher of the learning disabled and a teacher of the handicapped. She had a bachelor of arts degree in special education and elementary education and a master's degree at New York University with thirty-one credits transferred in. She provided a copy of her transcripts and a copy of her teaching certificate.

In September 1992 she was hired by the Special Education Department in the Lawrence Township Public Schools. She had previously taught in the state of New York for three years. She had taught special education, reading, language arts and math and did out-of-class resource and the resource center starting in 1992. Originally she was assigned to LIS, grades five and six, and was offered a full schedule at BFS. When she started in 1992, she worked one period at Benjamin Franklin School in an OCR class. After the first year, from 1992 until 2006 she worked at LIS. At some point during the 1990s, LIS became grades four, five and six, mostly students from Eldrich Park. At that time she was teaching OCR, reading, language arts and math.

Also, for one year she did an in-class-support science program, where she sat in the classroom with various bands across the curriculum. For an IEP, the CST went through a process that included a social worker, psychologist, learning consultant, etc. The IEP was generated at the beginning of the school year and was done by hand. At some point the IEP was done by staff at each of the seven different buildings in the Lawrence Township schools. For 2008–2009 the IEP was done by the teachers and MicroGrade (a software program), prior to PowerTeacher/PowerGrade, another computer program, which has done this for the last two to three years.

An OCR, or resource room, had a variety of resources to accommodate how a student worked best based upon an informal assessment. Over the years, the State varied the number of students who could be in a resource-room class at any given time.

For fifteen years respondent taught at LIS and was part of parent/teacher conferences. At LIS she met with the parents, and then with the resource room teacher with the schedule. The goal was to maintain the student in the least restrictive setting, so first the parents met with the homeroom teacher and then with the OCR teacher. Respondent established portfolios where the students could share their work and accomplishments. Class work and formal and informal assessments were done during the course of the year showing the students' independent work. This could be done through reading and writing and the work of the student to show progress. Respondent had done assessments such as the Brigance test, a reading sight-word recognition comprehension test, and the Gates-MacGinitie, another reading test. Respondent considered them informal tests not mandated by the State. There was also the San Diego word recognition test, and, in the 1990s, the Stevenson reading program, which also had a math component, was introduced. In 1995 the Wilson Assessment reading program was also included, but respondent's roster did not have any students for this program. She was not certified to teach Wilson, although the school district did have some teachers who were.

As to mandatory tests, these were done at the beginning of each year to put the students in the mode of success. Most used was the Brigance and some materials from Scott Foresman. As part of Brigance, respondent maintained data. This was important for the child study team to see the progress the children made.

In 2003-2004, Gates-MacGinitie was used. Respondent maintained the assessment data but shared it with no one. She used the material to make assessments of her students. During her fifteen years at LIS, she had an annual classroom observation. Carol Stenett did it, and then Mrs. Katz, the assistant vice principal, did it. Then Matthew Keller did it, and Al Gilson at LMS, and McLaughlin in 2008–2009. Before the class observation occurred, there was always a pre-observation meeting, at which she showed her goals and objectives for her behavioral approach to students. Then there would be a post-observation meeting, which also took a full planning period. Then after the meeting, a PIP was developed. Usually her classroom observations were in February and March. The PIP's were done after the classroom observation and then filed with the Board office. Respondent's annual evaluations were all positive.

In 2006–2007 respondent had been accused of doing something she did not do and the school shut down her e-mail account. Students had written thank-you notes to Bill Gates and wanted to mail the letters and respondent used her account. The principal said she violated the Children's Internet Protection Act, but she was not disciplined. The principal sent a letter to her about this incident.

Transfer to LMS

In June 2007 respondent met with Deni during lunch to discuss her employment situation. It was a very brief meeting of less than fifteen minutes. Deni said she knew that there were difficulties with Principal Dauber and that Zuckerman had selected her to work in his school for the following year. Respondent said that there was no problem with Dauber or Deni. Deni said that respondent was accused of doing something she did not do. There was some issue about the computers and the children. Deni never used the word transfer, only that there was an opportunity at LMS, and Deni told her to speak with Zuckerman. Respondent did not understand what Deni was proposing.

Dauber said that respondent spoke about the transfer to LMS and had asked if she had spoken with Zuckerman, and she said not yet. Zuckerman called her and left a message. She said she sent a voicemail to him stating dates that she was available. However, she never met with Zuckerman. Respondent said that there was a staff party at Katmandu Restaurant at the end of the year at which respondent saw Zuckerman and all he did was wave at her.

Respondent did not recall receiving the letter sent to her in August 2007 about the transfer. She said she was away for a good portion of the summer and first saw this letter in discovery. On the first day of the 2007–2008 school year, she reported to Lawrence High School for staff meetings, etc. After the assembly, everyone went to their assigned buildings, turned in their ID badges, keys, etc. She went to the building at LIS and put her things down in the classroom in the library. There were no students, as there were no classes that day. The principal then had a meeting with the faculty. She then went to the main office and spoke with Denise O'Sullivan, who worked in the library, and told her that she did not have a key. Dauber was behind her and he said, "You are not in this building." Dauber gave her permission to call Personnel.

At that time, respondent was sitting there and waiting. She said she was not yelling, screaming or making gestures. Someone called Personnel, and respondent spoke with Personnel staff. She asked if the transfer information could be faxed over. They said she had to talk to Student Services. The Personnel office transferred respondent to Student Services. Deni was out of the district, so respondent asked for Servillo, who was not available either. Respondent said that if a person called in, she needed a transfer faxed over and needed to know what she was supposed to do.

Levine, the union president, who taught at LIS, was there. Levine said Deni and Gold were coming by and that respondent no longer worked in the building.

At the meeting, Levine, Gold, Whitehead, Deni and respondent were present. Deni handed respondent the Board minutes of July 2007, in which it said she was transferred. They also said that she would be teaching ISS, namely, instructional student support. Deni said that respondent would be supporting students and helping them. Gold said it was a perfect place for her because respondent could create her own job description. Respondent asked what kind of program it was. Deni said the students knew about her and that she would be great at it. Gold and Whitehead told her the same thing. Respondent told Levine that maybe she should go first. Respondent said she was not qualified. Respondent said nothing else, but stood up, and the meeting was over. They said that they were out of contract and that respondent should keep her mouth shut. Respondent asked if she was qualified at a previous job and was told she was not.

Deni provided the notice to respondent at the meeting, but respondent said that it had never been mailed to her. After the meeting, respondent got in her car, went to LMS and went in. She went to the main office to let them know she was there, and got her key and identification. She was told to speak with Zuckerman, who was in the middle of a faculty meeting. Gilson walked her to the ISS room. The room was a mess. There were boxes of materials and the room seemed to have teachers' storage boxes. Respondent was told it would be tidied up.

Respondent had a conversation with Gilson concerning the Behavioral Improvement Plan (BIP) and the Functional Behavior Assessment (FBA). For the first half of September, she had no students. She was told that she would get students for ISS, but they were not all classified students, as all students were eligible for ISS.

Respondent said she knew nothing of the program in writing. She understood that there were "ripple" effects to software and that she would handle issues concerning drug abuse, sex education, etc. She wanted Gilson to know she was not in highly qualified status. In year five of the building, they were not making any annual progress.

Respondent received minimal information on the first day of school. She received no other documents from Gilson about a program. Gilson said it would take time for her to get students. First, she would get to know the people in the building. Second, she would need to understand security. Third, she would need to know the program plan and where the materials were housed. And fourth, she would need to become familiar with the computer. She spent time with the union representative talking about having no roster, and she had headaches from the building. She checked the faculty list and found she was not on it. Apparently, with the computer, she was not at an LMS portal.

Respondent cleaned out her e-mail and did research about the FBA, so she was sitting in the building with no students and found out that she was not on any building faculty. She was not certified to teach elementary education in a general education classroom, but on one day she was asked to substitute teach for a math class, which she did.

She recalled receiving a letter that was given to her in response to some of the questions she had after a meeting on September 12. On September 12, she had a conversation with Zuckerman and Gold. Zuckerman had his walkie-talkie on and left because the buzzer went off. He told her to follow Ms. Laskin, who was in OCR with some students. The letter said she would be teaching seventh-grade language arts and resource room. Respondent did exactly what Zuckerman told her to do. In September she was bouncing around between rooms. There were kinks in the schedule and she was told that she had part of Laskin's schedule in an OCR. On September 12, respondent told Gilson she wanted everything filed in writing. Gilson responded that they were still juggling rooms around. An e-mail was the only response that she received to her letter. This was a memo to Gold and Deni dated September 23, 2007. Copies were provided to everyone.

Meara came to her room and she gave a letter to him in the room next to the library. Meara opened it and smiled and asked her how she liked her room. At that time she was in room 116. Zuckerman was trying to accommodate her with her union representative. Respondent would not give her medical information to Zuckerman. The memos of September 23 were similar to the questions to Gold on September 12. Respondent was still asking the same questions. She never received a response to her letter of September 23.

Another memo to Gold and Deni dated October 7, 2007, was delivered in person to their mailboxes, but respondent then said she did not recall whether in person or by placement in their mailboxes because it was two years ago. No response was received to that letter.

After September 17, she was instructed to shadow Laskin to start with language arts resource and to continue to teach language arts resource for the rest of the school year. Her first period was ISS, second period was language arts, third was professional planning, fourth was language arts, fifth was lunch, sixth was language arts. Also, on Tuesdays she was to split-teach in another room. On her A and B days, she was scheduled to use all the space in the building. On other days, the faculty sat as a team.

With respect to language arts, she said she had three periods of ISS and three periods of language arts for the rest of the school year.

Respondent drafted documents during the school year and kept a log. She sent in her PIP by the deadline, but it had not been completed and it needed to be in place. She sent an e-mail to Servillo and Dauber on May 8, 2007, with a draft PIP. Also, on June 7, 2007, the PIP was sent to more people, including Gold, Servillo and Zuckerman. Her 2007–2008 PIP was not done. Respondent said each PIP she was required to do was accomplished.

The annual evaluation was provided to her on her last day of school. It was a large classroom and she did not have time to read it that day. She said it was generally positive. Classroom observation had been done by Gilson and Zuckerman, but he left. The pre- and post-evaluation meeting with Gilson was positive. It covered language arts literacy and OCR. Gilson had received all documents with that lesson plan.

Transfer to LES and BFS

In May or June 2008 respondent was told at a surprise meeting that she would be going to a new school in September. Zuckerman said there was going to be a meeting in his office at which Gilson, Zuckerman, Rich Smith, Deni and respondent were present. Deni said respondent was going to be transferred to LIS or BFS or both for the upcoming school year for in-class support. Respondent said she had only done this once before. The meeting was very brief and she asked no questions about her position. She received nothing in writing about what she would be doing and she was not told to follow up with anyone. She e-mailed Zuckerman and sent a follow-up e-mail. She said she never received any reply.

Between June and August she did not hear from any principal as to where she would be teaching the following year. She wrote to Deni on August 17, 2008, and received a response on August 22, 2008, in which she was told that LES would be her home school.

She sent a memo to Buss and McLaughlin. McLaughlin left her a telephone message on August 28, and Buss sent her an e-mail which she got when she returned to school in September. She sent another memo to Buss and McLaughlin in which she stated that she needed clarification about her position.

For the 2008–2009 school year she went to LES, which was to be her home school. She was advised she would be sharing room 216 with Auer, another special education teacher. Respondent spoke with Auer, who pointed to a kidney-shaped table and told respondent it was hers. One teacher's desk had Auer's things and Auer was willing to share the kidney-shaped table.

Respondent had a student schedule and roster that she received from Auer in a different type of format than she had never seen. In prior years, the assistant principal had given the roster to her and she had never received it from a fellow teacher.

Respondent did not start teaching the first day because she did not have IEP's at either LES or BFS. At LES, she received a schedule from Auer which said she was to be teaching language arts and reading for grades one, two and three, and that she had three students. At BFS, the roster that she received from a case manager by e-mail said she had language arts, math and reading for grades two and three with five students in language arts and reading, and three in math.

Respondent wanted to open her computer. When she keyed in her password, nothing came up. She spoke with John Snyder and wanted to have print access. Snyder set it up for her. She had problems accessing PowerGrade and PowerTeacher at the beginning of the school year at both schools. PowerGrade and PowerTeacher include medical alerts for students, including allergies, medical condition, etc.

She had meetings with McLaughlin on both days for professional development for the faculty. McLaughlin responded with the first names of the children and said respondent needed to return the handbook that she received at the end of the meeting because she had one belonging to another teacher. Respondent did not receive a handbook until the end of September even though she asked each week.

Respondent said she was not at a faculty meeting on September 22, and never received any of the documents that were presented.

Respondent attended a meeting at LES on September 4, 2008, and was present for Maureen Hayes's presentation. There was only a brief discussion of the DRA's. Respondent spoke with McLaughlin about the DRA and asked what it meant. She later received a big kit for the DRA which she could take home and teach herself.

Respondent also went to BFS and spoke with Lori Tennan, a secretary, and was buzzed in because she had no keys or identification. At BFS, Hernandez and Vegas told her about her room. Respondent spoke with Hernandez at the high school that morning and met Vegas too. She and Vegas were sharing a classroom, number 213B. The classroom had two kidney-shaped tables and one teacher desk that they shared. Vegas was an OCR resource-room special education teacher as well.

Respondent sent a memo to Billy on September 5, 2008, with an attachment, about their meeting scheduled for September 13. There was a problem about her schedule at LES. Billy asked if she were angry, how her environment was, the area of the computer, and the roster given to her by a teacher. Billy said he did not know about her placement until late August, and said the attachment only went to him. The problems that were identified by respondent included her schedule; the building access problems, including no coded key or identification; the PIP that had not been done, so she had no closure on it; the OCR that was 100 percent of the time; and the work environment: the tile was stained, she had medical concerns, there was a prior problem, and Billy had not responded to her memo.

Respondent intended her e-mail with attachment of September 12, 2008, to be a tool to keep Billy advised of the situation. Finally, she did get some information on the children's medical needs, but she needed PowerTeacher and PowerGrade. She found out that one student wore glasses and one student had eye surgery, and she had not known this before. Hernandez sent her an e-mail in response to her e-mail to Hernandez about the medical information.

Respondent received no response to her e-mails. She sent an e-mail to Billy dated September 22, 2008, asking where they stood on week three concerning her issues, which were: internet access, because she could not access a printer from her laptop at BFS; sometimes the screen would freeze; the laptop was her file cabinet; she had two passwords; she had no keys for building access; and was maintaining a list so that Billy would know what was going on. Finally, on October 15, 2008, she received a key for room 218. At BFS she received identification, but she could not recall the date in September. She also received an e-mail in December that a key was available.

PIP

All teachers must do PIP's annually. After the classroom observation was when the PIP was drafted. The reason for the PIP was because every professional needed to improve and grow. Respondent sent an e-mail to Servillo on May 8, 2007, concerning the PIP. Servillo was the Student Services supervisor, and that e-mail attached a draft PIP. An e-mail from McLaughlin indicated that PIP's were due as of June 9, 2008. She provided a PIP to Carol Koch, the operations secretary, and attached four pages. LMS had had no concern about the PIP in March 2008. Zuckerman provided the PIP and her previous PIP's. At LMS the PIP was to be produced by June 9 and submitted in June for the following school year. Respondent said there was no follow up.

In 2007, respondent generated a PIP to be turned in in May 2007 for the 2007–2008 school year. She received a memo from Koch in December 2007 stating that the PIP was missing. She sent the PIP from May 2007 to Zuckerman in December 2007. Then Zuckerman submitted his own PIP at LMS in March 2008, but this PIP was not finalized. In June 2008, at LMS, Koch asked for the 2008–2009 PIP. Respondent provided the PIP that was done for 2008 but was not finalized. There was no further communication with the supervisors. Then she was transferred to LES/BFS and there was still no PIP. During 2008–2009, she met with Deni to discuss the PIP for that school year.

The PIP from 2008–2009 was different from the PIP she submitted in a prior year. It was the draft that was sent to her from Deni after the meeting with her and Billy at LES. Deni had asked her where her PIP was. Deni stated that she would imbed some of the prior PIP in the one that Deni was preparing for her. Respondent sent Deni her feedback. Except for the cover e-mail, it was the same as the prior one. There are three goals set forth in the PIP. Neither Deni nor Billy had told her to improve her professional communications.

On October 10, 2008, at a meeting during her planning period, which took forty minutes, Deni and Zuckerman had her sign off on the PIP. Respondent had a right to disagree with the PIP but had to sign off. The district can improve the PIP even if you disagree. Respondent stated that she followed the goals for the 2008–2009 school year to the best of her ability. There was a meeting on October 22, 2008, at the request of the district. Her PIP did not change during the 2008–2009 school year.

Substitute Lesson Plans

Respondent would write out substitute lesson plans and turn them out on the dates required. The plans went to the supervisor for many years. Lessons plans were sometimes provided on a monthly basis. There was a template which was used as a guide. At LES there were no problems or disciplines. Respondent provided examples of 2008–2009 lesson plans. The district had no problems with her plans. They were placed in a binder and placed in their mailbox. She was just told to leave them on the desk, and a copy was left in the main office. She said she did this at LIS and LMS, as well as at LES and BFS. The teacher handbook did not tell teachers how to do lesson plans.

At LES, respondent left the materials on the credenza, because she did not have any desk, and also in the main office. The substitute would know where the office staff kept them. At BFS she kept them in the upper right corner of her desk. In 2008–2009, she moved to different classrooms in each school. At LES and BFS, the lesson plans for the substitutes were in the same place. The form for the substitute plans did not change over the years. She always left them in a folder. She never received any training on how to draft a substitute plan, as each teacher used his or her own style and she used the style that she had previously used.

In January 2009 she received a memo from Billy and, for the first time, she was told there was a problem with her lesson plans. In October, McLaughlin had said there were no substitute plans, so respondent went to the office and showed her where they were. There was another person named "Kubicke" in the school that year and that caused some confusion. Once she showed McLaughlin where her plans were, she did not expect a problem. Respondent did individual folders for her students to show the work in progress. Any substitute could just go and use these folders.

Respondent did not agree with Billy's memo. She stated that she updated emergency plans monthly. She believed the lesson plans that she left for the substitutes were in appropriate places in each school. Buss said he had rules for placement of substitute plans. She never had a meeting with Billy to discuss the memo. Teachers could request a particular substitute. However, when she called out, she had no particular substitute that she liked. She thought that a certified special education teacher could cover her class when she was out. There were perhaps two that she liked, including Pat Rogers. During that school year, four to five substitutes were necessary for her due to her medical issues.

She identified her folders that complemented the lesson plans. This has always been the form for her substitute plans. She identified a memo to her dated March 30, 2009, about the substitute plans. She replied to Billy and copied Deni, McLaughlin, Buss, Nardi, and Personnel, and sent it by mail, regarding substitutes not understanding her lesson plans. Billy never responded to a meeting to discuss the memo and neither one set up a meeting to discuss her substitute plans. Respondent said documents were missing from her substitute lesson plans. Buss sent a memo regarding lesson plans to her, dated April 17, 2009. Her response was dated May 13, 2009. On April 17 she was supposed to have her annual evaluation. On April 27 things were due to the BOE office. There was a delay because of her illness and because she had other things to do. She disagreed with Buss's memo. Buss never responded to her in writing or otherwise about this memo and there were no discussions with him about the lesson plans.

DRA's

Respondent taught grades one, two and three at LES and grade three for language arts and reading, and grade two for math at BFS. Students changed during the year. One student moved out because he was using Wilson and she was not certified in Wilson.

The DRA assessment was not reported to anyone outside the school, it was just for the district in the database. Respondent had used other assessments: the Stevenson assessment, the Dolch word list (100 words by grade level), the San Diego quick assessment (flash cards) and the NWEA, which showed instructional level.

Before 2008–2009, she had no training in DRA. She heard about it during professional development days at the beginning of the school year from Hayes, and asked her about it and the schedule at the end of the second day of school. She had never heard of the DRA assessment and had never used it before. The instructor facilitated the assessment for reading and the test assisted the teacher with instruction.

Respondent attended the faculty meeting of September 3, 2008, and spoke with McLaughlin, but spent most of her time talking about the schedule and assessment calendar. Respondent said she did not receive the handbook, ID pass or calendar. She did not recall receiving the assessment calendar in September. She got her handbook in October and got her calendar at the end of October.

When respondent checked the school website, the screen showed basic things from the year before. She did not appear to have access to the school website.

She went to a session on reading strategies, but there was no DRA training. There was no specific training in the course catalog for the DRA and she was never notified of a DRA training course. She was not given a kit or video, but saw that there was a kit on the bookshelf, so she used that, and not the video.

Respondent spoke with Billy in October when they were talking about the PIP. She had previously spoken to him and Deni at the beginning of the year and also sent him e-mail about the DRA. She never told Billy she would not train at home. She said she also did work at home. She spoke with Hayes, but never received any training from her in August or January. Respondent did not recall receiving a memo from Hayes about the DRA, but met with her on September 4 or 5. Hayes sent respondent an e-mail about the DRA on October 21, and then Billy told her he would have Hayes help her with the DRA. Respondent e-mailed Billy and McLaughlin but respondent did not recall their response. Hayes sent Billy a memo about respondent.

Respondent was to meet with Hayes on November 1 to model the DRA. A student was there (K.D.P.), and also Auer, McLaughlin, and Hayes. A model was done on K.D.P. by Hayes. DeFiccio had already tested the student. That was the only model Hayes did. When the modeling was finished, respondent asked Hayes a question about the rubric—was it subjective or objective? She had a question about how to score it. Respondent did not recall raising her voice. She was in a hurry during the meeting, but she was not aggressive in the conversation. McLaughlin said she was unprofessional. Respondent said she was just asking a question.

Buss called for a meeting to discuss the DRA. Their meeting was brief (under fifteen minutes). He talked about the DRA. Respondent asked about benchmarks. One student had a benchmark in his IEP—she was asking about which students had or had not done the DRA. Buss said he would get back to her on that.

Respondent had to do the DRA's for the students. Buss gave her an extension to November 19 to get them done. The only thing Buss needed for her to do was to find the independent reading level for the children. Respondent conducted DRA testing on four students at BFS and three at LES. She said she followed the materials and filled it all out.

Respondent said she delivered the DRA scores for four students to Seipp and Hernandez at BFS and to Ms. Shields at LES. DeFiccio received the scores for her student. Respondent's handwriting at the bottom of the exhibits said all scores were delivered. Scores were provided to McLaughlin at LES. All respondent knew was what Hayes had told her—she did not know what a protocol was. Respondent said that the scores were accurate and that she followed Buss's instructions to her.

One particular student, Vinnie, appeared to have had three tests performed on him, and was assessed at level 6, grade 1, independent, but respondent could not remember why. She thought he wanted to have an easy book to read. Level 1 and level 2 were not completed, because it was too easy. But she did fill out the grid/rubric, which is the protocol. Respondent said she filled out the grids and protocols for each of her students, but that Exhibit P-15 was not the one she filled out for Vinnie. All pages were not complete.

The grid for another student, Kyla, was not completely filled out, but respondent said that was not the one she did. She said she would not hand in a blank grid sheet. It said Kyla tested at level 24, but this did not appear to be correct for her. Respondent had student K.N. testing at level 20, but there was no grid sheet because respondent had a question. She did not fill out one spacing on the grid until her question was answered. This was a training issue, the same one she had questioned before. For student B.H., who was tested and graded as level 20 and then level 24, the grids were not done, but respondent said she did them.

Seipp questioned the level of student P.Z., for whom there was no grid sheet. Respondent said she filled out the grid and handed it to Deni at the November 20 meeting

Meeting on November 26, 2008

Respondent was handed a note from Buss in the middle of second period telling her about the "surprise" meeting. Buss, Deni, Billy, Terry Alexa (the union representative) and respondent were present. They told her she was unprofessional and did not hand in the protocols and they were yelling at her. Respondent said she did not yell back. Because of respondent, the entire district had to get locking file cabinets. Respondent was accused of not doing the protocols. Respondent did not know the grid sheet was the protocol. Deni was quiet and smirked, Billy and Alexa were quiet. The meeting lasted about an hour and a half. Respondent was surprised by the meeting and said it was pretty dreadful. She had never experienced this conduct. She thought she had always worked well with Buss.

At the meeting, respondent had been asked for the protocol/grid sheets and she went to her car and got the information. She kept them in her car because it was a locked secure, environment. She said she had no key to the file cabinet. Deni said the materials did not belong in her car, and respondent said she needed a locked file cabinet. Respondent handed the documents to Deni—the backup with her writing, and the grid sheets. She wanted to know what the problem was with the testing. As Deni went through each student, respondent noted the problem with K.N.'s rubric. She said the grids were filled out and provided to Deni. (In her testimony, respondent went on and on about the protocols and grid sheets.) Next, Deni saw the materials and Buss saw the back-up data. Deni said she would keep the protocols and respondent did not need to re-do the testing. There was no other investigation about the fall scores and the other teachers accepted the scores.

File Cabinets

At the beginning of the school year in September, respondent was in room 218 at LES with Auer and in room 213 at BFS with Vegas. She did not have file cabinets. She received delivery of file cabinets in October, but did not use them because they were not secure. When she was in the building, she saw no keys dangling. Respondent mentioned to Billy that she needed a file cabinet and key, and Billy just nodded. She also told him about the problems with the computer programs. On December 8, Buss gave her keys to the file cabinet at BFS, and she had a file cabinet at LES but no key until January 9. She placed her locked materials in these cabinets after those dates. Respondent also noted that she did not receive room keys until December 4 at BFS and did not receive her identification badge for some time.

DRA Winter Scores

Respondent said she delivered the January 2009 DRA scores to the teachers, including Seipp and Lawrance, when due. The teachers did not ask for data or protocols.

Grid Sheets/DRA Protocols

Respondent represented the following as to the protocols and grid sheets:

> Fall (November) 2008—She said that she completed the grid sheets for her students and kept them in her car. She handed Deni grid sheets for all seven students at the end of November.
> Winter (January) 2009—She said that she completed grid sheets for eight students and gave the scores to the teachers. She maintained the grid sheets in her locked file cabinet. She made copies at that time and kept them on file. She took the duplicates home with her because she was suspicious.
> Spring (April) 2009—She said that she completed the grid sheets and gave the scores to the teachers, and that the protocols were in file folders in locked file cabinets where they were available for other teachers, or if Billy or Buss wanted them. There were complete records for each of the students, and the bases for the memos with scores. She took copies home with her when she left and put them in binders that she had. She offered the binders to her attorney. Respondent said she used the entire form to complete the DRA's. One document was provided to her counsel as a "sample" to show the work she had done.

Respondent kept the protocols for January and April in locked file cabinets. Billy asked for them but she did not send them to Billy. Neither did she tell him where they were. First she said she did not make copies of the protocols, and then she said she did, after the students did them. She said there are complete protocols for any student. She maintained the protocols for January and April because she did not get back the protocols from November. On June 16, after the meeting where she was asked to provide records and protocols, she offered them to McLaughlin.

In January, after she had a key to the file cabinet, she put the folders in the file. She took copies home and put them in a binder, and there one would find complete protocols on the students. She maintained January and April records, but not the ones from November because she did not get back those protocols. She indicated that she had copies and duplicates of all of the students' records, including their Dolch spelling tests and DRA's. Respondent took copies with her when she left the school and still had the copies. She stated that she offered to produce them to her attorney, but he did not want them.

Respondent copied all the student assessments, not their portfolios, and copied some samples of the students' work. There was more than one binder. She started to make copies when there seemed to be problems. Starting in February she was copying documents from January in order to have a running record of the assessments.

As to the first part of DRA testing, her memo to Billy just gave scores in a sealed envelope. She did not provide data and protocols to the teachers for November, just the scores, indicating that she was following the directions of McLaughlin at LES. At BFS she did the same thing. She gave the scores but did not provide the data or the protocols. She said she kept documents in her locked file cabinet once she had them. McLaughlin never told her that what she was doing was wrong. As to the scores for B.H., she said the student ended up at level 28. She used the DRA testing to give the students the opportunity for one-on-one time with her and the students liked that. The teachers accepted the scores that she provided.

During the hearing, respondent was directed to immediately produce these file binders to her attorney and to counsel for the Board. Respondent did not provide any explanation as to why she did not provide the binders to her counsel. On August 19, 2010, three binders, namely R-78, R-79, and R-80, were turned over to counsel by respondent.

Respondent represented that these binders were maintained at home by her and that they represented copies of the original test scores of her students, including the DRA testing, holistic writing, Dolch spelling tests and dictation tests. Respondent represented that the DRA testing scores for the winter and spring were in the binders.

Respondent said she made the copies because she needed them, and by the end of December she had her file cabinet to keep them in. By the end of January 2009 she had duplicate copies and offered them to other teachers so they could lock them in their file cabinets, but no teachers took her up on that offer. Also, if any teacher or child study team member asked for copies, she would have them in her file cabinet and they could be shared with parents. She stated that the originals were maintained in the building file cabinet, but that copies of the winter and spring scores were in the binders she produced at the hearing. In May 2009 she took possession of the duplicates that she had made and pulled the copies because she felt that she was being retaliated against and harassed and that it was an escalating routine at the school. This combination of things caused her to become concerned. She also noted that there was white powder embedded in the windows in the spring and in October when she got sick.

On June 15, Meara told her she was on administrative leave, but respondent wanted it in writing. She offered McLaughlin all the students' files, but she wanted only one, so respondent gave it to her. A suspension was not mentioned until August 2009.

Professional Interaction

Respondent knew Hernandez from BFS. In September some of the IEP's did not appear to match the roster and she could not print on the printer at BFS. She said she could only speak with Hernandez at the end of the day. Respondent said she was never reluctant to see her students, but she needed the medical information, which was not coming up on her computer. She denied ever losing her temper with Hernandez, but said that Hernandez lost her temper at her. Later in the school year Hernandez wanted respondent to do something and grabbed her wrist. She thought Hernandez was upset and inappropriate and not modeling appropriate behavior.

As to missing reading grades, respondent thought the office computer may not have integrated the grades properly. As to an e-mail from Seipp, Seipp was frustrated. Respondent said that she gave her the grades and put them in a sealed envelope for Seipp on at least two occasions. One student, Tyler, was on a roster for reading and language arts, but at his IEP meeting in February 2009 he was removed from her class. After the IEP meeting, a student brought her an e-mail saying the student was not in her language arts class. Hernandez explained that the student's parents wanted the roster changed, but did not say that the student was having emotional and behavioral problems in her class. Respondent stated that Seipp lost her temper and that respondent was always professional in her dealings with Seipp.

Respondent talked to student K.C.'s parents about a clue book that was for the purpose of organizing skills. That parent never said she had a problem with respondent, who felt that the clue book was related to the IEP and the core curriculum standards. Buss mentioned that a parent came to him about respondent, but Seipp never said that what respondent said was confusing.

She recalled Kabo attempting to provide an IEP for student M.R. in January. After Kabo attempted to do that, respondent asked if they could meet the following morning and Kabo walked away. Respondent said she would stay to do a working lunch.

Respondent spoke with Kabo the next day in an office she shared with Kabo and Hobson. That conversation lasted a short time and concerned student M.R. She stated that she had difficulty with technology and that on her computer she had no information about this student or about his PLAAFP. This was a student who was placed in her class when she was absent. Respondent said she was not certified to teach Wilson, which she thought was in the student's IEP. The goals and objectives appeared on Kabo's computer screen, but not on respondent's. Kabo told her to talk to McLaughlin about the Wilson program and the IEP. Respondent admitted that she used the term "plunk and dunk." She thought the student was getting double-dipped in reading. Kabo was not a subordinate or supervisor. She was a case manager for M.R. and was a colleague. Respondent said she was never hostile to Kabo, and said she let Kabo know that she had to leave and that a student was ready for her class. Respondent said she was professional during her conversations with Kabo, but this was the second incident involving two students where respondent did not have the IEP.

During the 2008–2009 school year, respondent met with Hobson according to the monthly schedule she provided. They touched base on three case assignments, which changed when B.H. was added to the roster in January. The meetings did not occur after February because of snow days, or scheduling conflicts, or because respondent was not in school. Most of the meetings were brief. Hobson observed respondent and saw that the students were making progress according to the IEP and the CST. Hobson never told respondent that she felt frustrated and never sent any materials about a student's level. Billy attended one meeting to observe Hobson but did not express any concern with these meetings.

Hobson was going over B.H.'s IEP in a conference room. Respondent had no documents and the parents had not signed off on the IEP. Because she did not have all the materials, respondent wanted to make sure everyone was in compliance with the student's plan. Respondent said she was not argumentative with Hobson. Hobson said respondent just needed the goals and objectives. They had a disagreement and needed information on Contour. B.H. began on January 5, but the student's IEP was not coming up in Contour. Hobson said she left the IEP under the computer. Respondent took the IEP and glanced at it, went to Hobson's office and asked for further information. Just before she had to teach a student, the IEP appeared. She provided grades for that student for the rest of the school year. There was an e-mail from Hobson to Billy stating that respondent had not done the grades for student B.H.

Respondent said that Hobson's testimony regarding what respondent said at a meeting for another student in February was not what respondent said. At the meeting, in the presence of Hobson, the case manager, and the child's parents, respondent said she had to leave, and that whatever was decided about the IEP would be decided after she left. Respondent said she had no ability to collaborate on this IEP review and would be left out of the group discussion because she had to leave. Respondent also did not say that the parents were unhappy with the child going to the basement. She did not know if the parents complained, but thought the student was progressing and was going to mainstream. Respondent did not think that she was unprofessional in her conduct.

With regard to Lawrance, a few times during the year respondent had to pick up her students. She said that she never entered Lawrance's classroom or said that Lawrance violated a student's IEP. She said something when the children were present, but she was not disruptive to Lawrance. She never thought Lawrance felt threatened. She said she did not interrupt a class, because the students were in transition from one subject to another.

As far as the substitute plans were concerned, she said that Billy never spoke to her about the workbook and never thought that she was inappropriate.

At a conference in the spring with Auer and Lawrance, student B.H.'s work was discussed. No one told her that what she had said was inappropriate. No one told her that they did not want her teaching B.H.

Vegas was teaching at BFS when respondent arrived to teach. She did not discuss any problems Vegas was having with her. Vegas never told respondent that she was not doing accurate DRA assessments. No supervisor gave her notice that her students were having any problems with her teaching them. Vegas was there for some meetings with parents and professionals. At one meeting for student K.M., respondent did not say to the parents that she did not have the goals and objectives for the student. She thought the parent was pleased.

Respondent worked with Auer at LES. She met with Auer and Kearney, who taught speech and was involved with the CST. Kearney asked if they could talk during respondent's planning time. She did not recall telling Kearney that she would talk to her in three to five business days, but she did think that she had a lot to do at that point and just told her to come back later. Collaboration time was the first thing in the morning. She thought she had gotten back to Kearney and had acted professionally towards her.

Respondent admitted that once in a while she would contact parents to reinforce positive behavior in the students, and she thought the parents were appreciative when she called. Auer never told her that the phone calls were inappropriate. When she and Auer were in the basement, Auer had a SMART Board and respondent had to go to the classroom to get to her file cabinet. The room was blocked. Respondent said she did not purposely bump the SMART Board, but the fit was tight and there were many wires on the floor. At some point respondent discussed this, but not during Auer's class. She thought it was the next day, and believed that the wires were dangerous. At the beginning of the school year, Auer did not complain about respondent coming into her class. At the beginning of January, respondent was moved to the classroom in the basement with Hall.

Testimony in Rebuttal

In rebuttal, Billy testified concerning the meeting on November 26 with Deni, Buss and respondent. Respondent was asked to get the DRA protocols and eventually she brought them in from the trunk of her car. She said these were all the protocols she had. A review of the documents showed they were not complete. The grids/rubrics were not filled out, except for the one done by Hayes. Respondent's explanation was that she gave the scores but did not know where they came from. Billy took these documents and kept them until he gave them to the school board's attorney. He substituted no pages, and Exhibits P-14 and P-20 appear to be the ones that he gave to his attorney.

Billy reviewed Exhibits R-78, R-79 and R-80, which are the protocols turned in by respondent during the middle of these court proceedings. Billy had given directives to respondent to turn in these protocols, but she had not, even after he had sent her reminders. Billy had never seen Exhibits R-78, R-79 or R-80 until the attorney showed them to him during the course of the hearing. This information had never been provided to Billy before in this litigation.

With regard to progress reports, which are usually done quarterly, the objective was to see progression in a child's skill level. Success was measurable because a teacher was supposed to keep a daily and weekly log to show a student's quantitative record. The resource room should keep a running record. If kept accurately, it should keep track of a student's learning. For school year 2008–2009, the progress reports should have been completed by respondent. He noticed that she was not doing this during the course of the year and wrote her memos about it. Her roster showed that progress reports were not done for various students, including D.P., B.H., and another student B.H. Also, respondent failed to complete B.H.'s report card; she did not complete the grades, and showed no grade for the first and second marking periods. The homeroom teacher gave the grades, and respondent was supposed to transfer them, but she did not do that.

Billy said that respondent had represented that the copies of the protocols she gave to him and Deni were the original documents. That was what his attorney had. When she handed him these documents, he told her they were incomplete. He sent several memos to respondent asking for the protocols because she needed to provide them to the case manager and later to him. She never provided the documents, even though she was asked to do so. She never told him that she offered these documents to the teachers and that they did not want them. Respondent was specifically directed to provide the documents to the teachers and the teachers complained, particularly Seipp, who complained to Hernandez, who complained to him. He recalled that after respondent was placed on administrative leave, he looked through her files at LES to see if she had any other DRA tools. He never located them.

In rebuttal, Deni testified, with regard to filing cabinets, that she needed to ensure that confidential student information would be maintained in a locked desk or file cabinet. She followed the DOE guidelines and saw that everyone had such a file cabinet. In April 2008, all locked file cabinets were given out. A search was performed for all buildings, including elementary and secondary schools, and file cabinets were placed in each one. In the 2008–2009 school year, the file cabinets remained where they had been placed. When she learned that respondent said she had no file cabinet, Buss bought an additional cabinet and brought it to her after the November meeting.

There had been a two-year State monitoring program in progress and extensive training for all the teachers. By the 2008–2009 school year, Deni thought that all the file cabinets for special education teachers, therapists and counselors were in place. It was the culmination of a two-year effort to make sure that teachers knew that confidential documents were to be maintained in the locked cabinets. Before this two-year effort of the State, the file cabinets were not maintained as diligently. They wanted to be thorough because the State was coming out for monitoring and it had been six to eight years since the State's last visit. It was good practice to have locked filed cabinets. Zuckerman saw that respondent had a locked file cabinet. Deni knew that a file cabinet had been delivered to respondent to secure a laptop that was used by a student. Respondent insisted on having a secure place for the computer, so she was provided with a file cabinet.

At the November meeting respondent stated that she did not have a file cabinet and that the trunk of her car was a secure locked place. Respondent was reminded that she had a file cabinet located at each one of her schools, one in Room 218 at LES and one in the resource room at BFS. Deni was struck by the comments made by respondent that she had no locked filing cabinets, since Deni knew there were locked file cabinets in those rooms because they were used by the teachers who also used those rooms.

Deni had communicated with Billy, and both Vegas and Auer assured Billy that there were locking file cabinets in their rooms. Prior to the November meeting Billy said there was a file cabinet in the room.

Respondent was told where to keep her confidential documents. Billy told her to keep the documents in the locked file cabinet. Billy assured Deni that there were locked file cabinets during the previous summer. Deni knew respondent had her own locked file cabinet because Billy told her that additional cabinets were delivered to BFS for respondent's use. All the new file cabinets had a key so they could be locked. One new cabinet was delivered to BFS in August or September and the key was attached.

With regard to respondent's complaints of inadequate computer assistance, a memo was sent to her in October 2008 giving her written directions and telling her to get a request to the Web Help Desk, where she would get the assistance that she needed.

In a memo at the end of October, respondent said she was having technical issues. She was told to use the Web Help Desk. It was clear that respondent required an administrative directive to use the Web Help Desk. Respondent said her access to the computer was intermittent and that she had trouble printing and going online. Respondent had her own laptop and access to a desktop at each school. If she had intermittent access from her own computer, she could use the desktop or go to a case manager to print. Technology was important because the school used a web-based system. Respondent did not use Web Help for the first two months of the school year even though she had been advised to work with the technicians to resolve her problems. At meetings that Deni had with respondent in September and October, respondent did not raise computer issues.

In rebuttal, Michael Dean, a technical coordinator (supervisor of technicians) at the Lawrence Township public schools since January 2008, said he was responsible for the Web Help Desk. He performed technical troubleshooting. Employees could log on and request service. The teachers were advised how to access Web Help. Web Help was requested by asking for "help tickets." The computer was necessary to getting the job done because many of the school programs, PowerTeacher, Contour, PowerGrade, were done by computer. Most teachers received laptops in 2008–2009 and used them. He would receive phone calls every day and would resolve teachers' problems as quickly as he could. Generally, the technician sent an e-mail to the teacher notifying the teacher that the problem had been corrected. He had a log of requests from respondent, which were resolved promptly during the school year.

FINDINGS OF FACT

In making findings of fact, it is necessary to determine the credibility of the witnesses who testified at the hearing.

Analysis of the Testimony

This case involves sixteen witnesses testifying on behalf of the petitioner, alleging serious acts of professional misconduct warranting loss of tenure, and that of respondent, who denies these acts. The credibility of the witnesses must be assessed in order to determine which party prevails.

Credibility is that quality of testimony or evidence that makes it worthy of belief. Testimony to be believed must be credible itself. It must be such as the common experience and observation of mankind can approve as probable in the circumstances. In re Estate of Perrone, 5 N.J. 514, 522 (1950). A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura-Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

In order to assess credibility, inferences may be drawn concerning the witness's expression, tone of voice and demeanor. MacDonald v. Hudson Bus Transp. Co., 100 N.J. Super. 103 (App. Div. 1968). In addition, the witness's interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered. In State v. Spruill, 16 N.J. 73, 78 (1954), the Court looked to the interest of a party in the outcome of a trial as a factor in evaluating the evidence, stating that every fact or circumstance tending to show the witness's relation to the case or the parties is admissible in order to determine the weight to be given to his evidence.

In this matter, I was impressed by the testimony of Deni, Billy and McLaughlin in particular. They were familiar with respondent's conduct and had no motivation to fabricate their testimony. They initially supported the respondent and wanted her to be successful. The others who testified, including the teachers and other supervisors, completed the picture of respondent's conduct during the school year. They impressed me with their efforts to accurately relay what had happened without any bias or prejudice against respondent. On the other hand, respondent's testimony could not be focused. She was distracted and rambling and could not or would not remain on the subject even when directed to do so. It would be hard to conclude that all the witnesses on behalf of the Board coordinated their testimony, despite being sequestered, and that all lied, as respondent would suggest. Given that some of the charges concerned respondent's failure to properly administer the DRA's, her failure to provide those file binders, which would allegedly prove that she had in fact properly completed the assessments during the school year, to her own counsel in discovery was startling, and affected her credibility.

After having the opportunity to view the witnesses, and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS, which will be addressed in the order of the specifications set forth in the Statement of Charges:

Specification 1. September 2007 Incident at LIS (Insubordination, Prevarication, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent was aware of her transfer to LIS in September 2007, but chose to ignore it and reported to LMS. She had been told personally by Deni and had received communications from Zuckerman concerning the new position. On the first day of school, respondent refused to leave LMS until Deni and the union representatives met with her. Her response to their directives was combative and confrontational. This caused disruption to the orderly administration of the educational process on the extremely busy first day of school.

I FIND that respondent was not being truthful in denying knowledge of the transfer; that she refused to report as directed; and that her communications with her supervisors were combative and confrontational.

Specification 2. DRA Assessments (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Fabrication of Assessment Results, Prevarication, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent was advised at the beginning of the 2008–2009 school year of the necessity for her to timely complete the DRA assessments, which were due at the end of October, January and April. Respondent had never given the DRA before. She refused to learn how to perform the assessment on her own or with the assistance of her colleagues. Hayes was assigned to demonstrate a DRA test for her, but respondent became upset and confrontational toward Hayes. Billy reprimanded respondent for the unprofessional manner in which she interacted with Hayes.

Respondent was reminded of the due dates for the DRA but was not in compliance. Seipp and Hernandez complained that the student test scores had not been completed or provided to them. Buss gave respondent an extension to November 19 to turn in the results, including the grades and reading levels (including fluency and comprehension) of the students. On that date, respondent turned in DRA levels without the protocols/rubrics that were used. Hernandez requested these from respondent and never received them. Seipp asked for them and respondent said she had provided them, but Seipp never received them from respondent.

On November 26, 2008, Buss, Billy and Deni met with respondent about the DRA scores. Respondent said she had completed the tests and had the protocols in her car trunk. She was asked to retrieve the documents and became hostile and angry. She was told that keeping the documents in her vehicle was contrary to policy and was an improper way to maintain confidential student files.

The documents revealed that only two out of seven protocols had been completely scored, one by Hayes, and one by either respondent or the classroom teacher. Respondent denied knowing what the protocols were, although she had been told by Deni and Hayes. Without the documentation and backup, it could not be determined how respondent had given the students their DRA scores; the scores that were given must have been fabricated.

I FIND that respondent failed to perform her duties in properly administering and grading the DRA for at least five students; that the scores for at least five students were fabricated or manufactured; that she was not being truthful when she denied being aware that the protocols/rubrics needed to be turned in; that her communications with her supervisors were confrontational; and that she was not truthful with regard to the DRA scores.

Specification 3. Meeting with Parents—November 2008 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent had been directed to maintain a professional demeanor when communicating with parents, colleagues and administrators as noted in her PIP. At parent conferences in November 2008, respondent did not have her progress reports prepared even though the students' teachers had requested them in time for the conferences. She complained to the parents about the administration, as well as technical glitches and the computer system. One parent was so concerned that the parent had the child transferred out of respondent's class.

I FIND that respondent failed to follow the PIP; that she failed to have the progress reports done in a timely manner; and that her communications with parents were inappropriate.

Specification 4. Meeting with Administrators—November 2008 (Insubordination and Lack of Professionalism)

This specification is also part of Specification 2. At the meeting on November 26, respondent became angry and hostile to the supervisors and administrators who were trying to get respondent to cooperate in the production of the DRA scores and protocols. She was aware that one of the goals set for her in her PIP was to be more professional in her communications. Rather, when faced with concern from the administrators about the DRA's, she responded with diatribes and ranting. She spoke over people, muttered epithets and slammed the door on the way to the car.

I FIND that respondent was angry and hostile to the administrators in her attitude and tone, and that she responded angrily to them.

Specification 5. Failure to Prepare Substitute Lesson Plans (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent was frequently absent, which necessitated adequate substitute lesson plans. By January 2009, Billy and McLaughlin had received complaints about the plans previously prepared by respondent. They were incomprehensible and difficult for the substitutes, some of whom were retired teachers, to understand. When asked to update or clarify the plans, respondent insisted that her plans had no problems. Other teachers were compelled to prepare substitute plans when respondent was out, thereby taking time from their own responsibilities. Respondent was ordered to improve her substitute plans but she never did.

I FIND that respondent failed to follow administrative directives to complete appropriate and comprehensible substitute lesson plans; that she continued to provide inadequate substitute lesson plans; and that she refused to recognize that her plans were inadequate or correct them.

Specification 6. Refusal to Accept IEP (Unbecoming Conduct, Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

At the end of January 2009, Kabo attempted to provide the IEP of a student who had been assigned to respondent's class during her absence. Respondent said she was unavailable to go over the IEP. When Kabo tried to give respondent a copy of the IEP, she refused to take it. When Kabo left a copy in respondent's mailbox, respondent returned it. On January 27, 2009, respondent angrily confronted Kabo and called the student a "pump and dump." Respondent refused to discuss the child's needs and left Kabo's office.

I FIND that respondent refused to discuss a student who had been entrusted to her care; that she ignored Kabo's reasonable requests to discuss the needs of the student; that she failed to review the IEP or discuss it with the case manager; and that she responded inappropriately to Kabo.

Specification 7. Continued Failure to Perform and Submit DRA's (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Fabrication, and Lack of Professionalism)

This specification is a continuation of Specification 2. After being directed at the meeting of November 26, 2009, to perform and complete the DRA's in a timely and appropriate manner, respondent did not complete the DRA's in a timely manner. Billy directed her to have the complete results by the beginning of February. Respondent did not submit the results until March. Even after being directed in an e-mail by Billy in April to provide the protocols, she never did.

I FIND that respondent ignored Billy's directive to complete the DRAs in a timely manner, including the protocols; that respondent failed to complete the DRA's as directed; and that the results without the protocols suggested that those results were fabricated.

Specification 8. Failure to Timely Submit IEP Progress Reports (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent was required to timely submit IEP progress reports. They are critical for the programs and to be in compliance with state and federal mandates. She was responsible for five students at LES and eight at BFS. Respondent was directed to enter the progress reports on the computer system and to provide the case manager with a copy. For the second quarter, respondent failed to timely submit progress reports for five students at BFS and two at LES; for the third quarter, she failed to submit progress reports for seven students at BFS and two at LES; for the fourth quarter, she submitted none at all.

I FIND that respondent failed to comply with the directive to complete the progress reports in a timely manner and that she failed to complete the progress reports.

Specification 9. Preparation for and Meeting with Parents—February 2009 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

At an IEP meeting in February 2009 to discuss the placement of a child, respondent stated to the student's parent that she had had no input into any placement decisions regarding the child, and that the placement decisions would be made after she left the room. The teachers and case managers work as a team, but respondent's comments made it appear that the team had not been collaborating.

I FIND that respondent's comments were inappropriate.

Specification 10. Communications Issues with Administration and Other Staff (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

It was expected by the Board that teachers would communicate in a professional manner and be collegial with their colleagues. The district emphasized cooperation and collaboration as best suited to meet the needs of the students, particularly those with IEP's. Appropriate communications were requested from respondent and it became a part of her PIP. Instead, through the course of the year, respondent engaged in communications which could be described, at best, as unpleasant. She was angry, hostile, demanding, and obfuscating. She blamed the computers and technology for problems. She refused to open e-mails despite being directed to, to the point where teachers and administrators would print out e-mails and put them in her mailbox. It became clear that this was not a personality clash, as almost every teacher or administrator she was in contact with could not communicate rationally with her. Even as respondent testified at the hearing, her answers wandered, she would not stay focused, and she would answer the question she wanted asked, not the one that was asked.

I FIND that respondent's comments were inappropriate and unpleasant and that she failed to follow administrative directives.

Specification 11. Inappropriate Interruption of Another Teacher's Class (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

Respondent entered the classroom of Lawrance, and demanded a student's workbook, while the teacher was in the middle of a lesson, causing disruption to the class. Respondent acted assertively to Lawrance, when all she had to do was ask that the workbook accompany the child when she went to the resource room.

I FIND that respondent's comments were inappropriate and disrespectful to a fellow teacher.

Specification 12. Issues Relating to Entry of B.H.'s Grades (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Lack of Professionalism, and Prevarication/Fabrication)

Each quarter the district had assessments and grades for the students which had to be given by a specific date. In January, student B.H. was put on respondent's roster. His teacher had put in B.H.'s grades for the first and second marking periods. For the third making period, respondent had to carry over and put in the grades the previous teacher had given him, as well as her own grade, which the computer program permitted her to do. In an April 3, 2009, memo respondent said she was not giving grades and wanted it in writing that she could do this. Respondent was ordered in writing by McLaughlin to enter the grades, but failed to do so.

By April 15 when the grades still had not been entered by respondent, McLaughlin contacted the technical support unit and entered the grades herself. Respondent then filed a complaint with the DOE, alleging that she had been told to falsify grades. She provided copies of memos that she had allegedly sent to Deni, Billy, McLaughlin and Buss on April 15, 16, 17 and 20, 2009, but which were never sent to them, and which were only revealed to them in the discovery process for this hearing.

I FIND that respondent failed to comply with school policy in the entering of grades and refused to do so even after being ordered to do so by her supervisor.

Respondent provided memos to the DOE and the Board representing that the grades had been sent to the alleged recipients, when, in fact, they had not.

Specification 13. Failure to Follow Corrective Action Plan dated March 16, 2009, and Administrative Directive of April 27, 2009 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

Deni gave the CAP dated March 16 to respondent on or about that date. The CAP incorporated specific directives to respondent, who was ordered to comply. On or about April 27, Billy and Buss provided additional directives to respondent, telling her to check e-mails; to provide the progress reports; to rewrite substitute plans; to make up meetings with parents; to obtain technology assistance; and to provide the DRA protocols.

Respondent failed to comply with any of these directives, as evidenced by her failure to check e-mails in a timely manner (one e-mail was read three weeks after it had been sent, others days or weeks later); her failure to provide the progress reports; her refusal to change her substitute plans even after being told that the substitutes could not understand them; her failure to meet with parents to make up the meetings she had missed during her absences; her refusal to obtain technology assistance; and her continuing failure to produce the DRA protocols when requested by the teachers, supervisors and administrators.

I FIND that respondent failed to comply with school policy in reading her e-mails and refused to do so even after being ordered to do so by her supervisors. Respondent failed to respond to the requests of teachers for the DRAs, protocols, and progress reports and failed to take advantage of technology assistance when it was offered to her.

Specification 14. Return to School in June 2009; Furnishing of Grades and Progress Reports; Issues Relating to Entry of B.H.'s Grades (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

After being absent from class, respondent returned to her classroom in June 2009 and told the substitute—who had been held over to make a smooth transition because of respondent's absence—to go away. Respondent then erased the SMART Board with the substitute's materials and said she was taking over the class.

Deni received a telephone call from McLaughlin. Some grades were missing for M.R., a student on respondent's roster. Respondent said she had entered them and refused to re-enter them. Deni went to the classroom and told the respondent to come with her, and that the substitute would be teaching.

Deni told respondent that they needed the grades for her students. Respondent had her computer with her and seemed to log on and log off. She also shielded her computer and refused to put the computer on a desk. Deni told respondent to use the desk computer, but respondent refused. Deni called her back to the table and noticed that something was on the screen. Respondent refused to work on the grades. Deni said, "Let us get the data," because they needed the information. Meara had arrived and backed up Deni.

The union representative (Young) and McLaughlin went to respondent's room with her to get the data. Respondent came back with some folders and data, but it appeared to not be enough information to enter the grades. At that point Meara relieved respondent of her teacher duties and told respondent to go home and get the data together. At that time they thought the only grade missing on the computer was M.R.'s. Respondent said she had records "in various locations." The data and information respondent provided were not sufficient to determine a grade for M.R. or to ascertain how the other students had received their grades. Deni checked with the technical department to see if there was any support for the grades in the system but there was none.

Respondent was placed on administrative leave and told she could return when she had the information for the assessments and the grades. Deni, Meara and McLaughlin expected that respondent would return the next day with the data. Respondent never provided the data, despite a follow-up call from McLaughlin. And while all the grades were ultimately determined to have been entered by respondent, the progress reports had never been completed.

During the hearing, respondent said she had all the data, protocols, and backups at her home and that she had been making copies of all the information ever since the meeting in November. The administrators reviewed this evidence and still found it incomplete and inadequate.

I FIND that respondent's conduct was disrespectful to a fellow teacher, and that she failed to provide the grades, the backup data and the progress reports of students in her class.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Respondent Jill Kubicki is a tenured teacher in the Lawrence Township School District. She has worked in the Lawrence Township public school system for eighteen years. Respondent is accused by petitioner, the Lawrence Township Board of Education, of violating her professional responsibilities as a tenured teacher by engaging in insubordination, failure to perform her required duties, fabrication of records, prevarication, lack of professionalism and other just cause.

The legislative design of the statutory tenure provisions is "to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording to principals and teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service." Viemeister v. Borough of Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). Tenure protects competent and qualified teachers during good behavior and guards them against "dismissal for 'unfounded, flimsy or political reasons.'" Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982) (citation omitted).

Teachers may not be dismissed or have their compensation reduced "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10(a). Pursuant to the Tenured Employees Hearing Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:35-1, a tenured teacher may not be removed from her position unless a school board successfully establishes one or more of these causes by a preponderance of the credible evidence. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982).

Because teacher are role models and are entrusted with the care and education of minors, the public is entitled to expect that teachers will fulfill their roles with a high degree of responsibility. In Saunders v. New Jersey Department of Education, 91 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 12, 14, the administrative law judge wrote:

> The educator imparts on her students not only academic knowledge, but also the development of social and moral values that are expected from parents, law enforcement officials, and the general public. Thus, teachers must be held to a higher standard of conduct than others who do not in their profession have direct contact with molding habits and nurturing young minds. Suffice it to say, children mimic what they see and they learn by example. Clearly, teachers play a direct role in influencing the opinions of their pupils and, indeed, teachers are role models. Teachers often impart the goals set by their students and the direction they take in achieving those goals.

Another expression of the role of the teacher is:

> Teachers are public employees who hold positions demanding public trust, and in such positions they teach, inform, and mold habits and attitudes, and influence the opinions of their pupils. Pupils learn, therefore, not only what they are taught by the teacher, but what they see, hear, experience and learn about the teacher.

The Board bears the burden of establishing the truth of the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962). This tribunal has the duty "to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to the reasonable probability of truth." Jackson v. Delaware, Lackawanna & W. R.R. Co., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A.

1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes the reasonable probability of the fact." Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124 N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). In other words, the evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958); see Loew v. Union Beach, 56 N.J. Super. 93, 104 (App. Div. 1959). Precisely what is needed to satisfy this burden necessarily must be judged on a case-by-case basis.

Conduct unbecoming a public employee has been described as an "elastic" phrase that includes "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency" of the public entity or "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960) (citation omitted); see Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). Behavior rising to the level of unbecoming conduct need not be predicated upon a violation of any particular rule or regulation and may be based simply upon a violation of the implicit standard of good behavior. City of Asbury Park v. Dep't. of Civil Serv., 17 N.J. 419, 429 (1955); In re Tuch, 159 N.J. Super. 219, 224 (App. Div. 1978).

In the context of a tenured teacher, the contours for dismissal set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 have been found to provide a sufficient standard which, while "general in terms," when "measured by common understanding . . . fairly and adequately conveys its meaning to all concerned." Laba v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 23 N.J. 364, 384 (1956). Succinctly stated, "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 65 N.J. 292 (1974). In an educational setting, unbecoming conduct has been held to be demonstrated by a series of incidents indicating a pattern of behavior, or by a single incident if sufficiently flagrant. See Redcay v. State Bd. of Educ., 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b., 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944). In Redcay, a school principal was found guilty of the charges of inefficiency, incapacity, insubordination, lack of cooperation, unfitness and conduct generally unbecoming a principal. 128 N.J.L. 281, 282 (Sup. Ct. 1942).[3] The court held:

> Unfitness for a task is best shown by numerous incidents. Unfitness for a position under the school system is best evidenced by a series of incidents. Unfitness to hold a post might be shown by one incident, if sufficiently flagrant, but it might also be shown by many incidents. Fitness may be shown either way.

Insubordination is defined as the willful and intentional disregard of the lawful and reasonable directives of an employee's duly authorized supervisor. In re Tenure Hearing of Motley, EDU 7421-97, Initial Decision (May 5, 1999), modified, Comm'r, (August 4, 1999), adopted, State Bd. (Dec. 1, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

The type of conduct that the Commissioner of Education has determined constitutes "insubordination" and "conduct unbecoming" varies significantly, from verbal/physical altercations and threats of both students and colleagues to failing to comply with school policies. The following are a few recent examples of cases involving conduct that is similar to the conduct in the present case. In these cases, the administrative law judges (ALJs) found the conduct of the tenured teachers to constitute insubordination and conduct unbecoming.

In In re Tenure Hearing of Hill, EDU 5979-06, Initial Decision (April 2, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (May 15, 2007), adopted, State Bd. (Oct. 17, 2007), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the ALJ found a teacher guilty of both insubordination and unbecoming conduct for refusing to accept letters from supervisors, failing to timely submit roll and grade books, using inappropriate language toward a student, and using disrespectful language and vulgar gestures towards colleagues on multiple occasions.

[3] This citation concerns the original case, in which the court remanded back to the board. The board's decision in the remanded matter was subsequently appealed and that opinion is the one published at 130 N.J.L. 369 (Sup. Ct. 1943), aff'd o.b., 131 N.J.L. 326 (E. & A. 1944).

In In re Tenure Hearing of Ash, EDU 2799-03, Initial Decision (May 30, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (July 10, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the ALJ found a teacher guilty of insubordination and unbecoming conduct for, among other things, failing to adhere to the district's attendance and leave policies, failing to comply with verbal warnings from supervisors, and failing to turn in required lesson plans.

In In re Tenure Hearing of Molokwu, EDU 9650-04, Initial Decision (Oct. 26, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 12, 2005), aff'd, State Bd. (May 3, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the Commissioner found that a teacher was guilty of conduct unbecoming for, among other things, failing to report to a period assignment, obtaining medical leave under false pretenses, pushing a female student, lying to his supervisor about attending a mandatory training program, making threatening comments to the building principal, and telling a ninth-grade female student that she was "acting like a street girl." The Commissioner found that, together, these instances of conduct "constitute[d] an ongoing pattern of conduct unbecoming a teacher and/or other just cause for dismissal."

In In re Tenure Hearing of Bradley, 1990 S.L.D. 790, adopted, Comm'r, 1990 S.L.D. 818, adopted, State Bd., 1991 S.L.D. 2521, a teacher was found to have demonstrated conduct unbecoming and insubordination for "defying Board administrative directives," failing to comply with call-in/sign-in policies, and refusing to speak with a supervisor who approached her about a previous incident that had occurred.

In her defense, respondent contends that the tenure charges filed against her allege inefficiency and that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, she was entitled to formal written notice of the alleged inefficiency and ninety days to correct and overcome it, relying principally on Board of Education of Bordentown Regional School District v. Finn, EDU 4205-99, Initial Decision (Feb. 10, 2000), aff'd in part, dismissed in part, remanded in part, Comm'r (March 10, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>. Furthermore, without this notice and the opportunity to correct the inefficiency, some, if not all, of the charges should be dismissed.

Petitioner concedes that while some of the charges brought against respondent may also constitute inefficiency, such as failure to correct the substitute plans, the questionable use of teaching materials, and the unsatisfactory classroom observation, it has not brought charges on those grounds, and therefore was not required to provide a ninety-day period to correct those inefficiencies. It further contends that it has no obligation to bring charges based on inefficiency, when respondent's conduct, taken as a whole, demonstrates an ongoing pattern of unbecoming conduct and other just cause and charges can be brought on that basis, relying on Hill, supra, EDU 5979-06, Initial Decision (April 2, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (May 15, 2007), adopted, State Bd. (Oct. 17, 2007) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In Finn, a teacher was subject to tenure charges that were dismissed on the basis that they actually constituted inefficiency, and that the teacher had never been provided with written notice and the opportunity to correct her performance. In Hill, the State Board found that, as long as sufficient evidence of unbecoming conduct or other just cause is proved, charges of inefficiency need not be brought or proven.

While it is clear from a review of the evidence that some of the tenure charges in this matter might also constitute inefficiency, I CONCLUDE that it was not necessary for the Board to file charges of inefficiency and to provide the ninety-day "last chance" to improve performance as set forth in the statute.

I also note that the demeanor and temperament demonstrated by the respondent during her testimony and in her numerous written memos and letters to other teachers, colleagues, supervisors, and elected officials were indicative of an unwillingness to change behavior. For example, when told that the substitutes, the teachers with whom she worked, and her supervisors thought that the substitute plans were inadequate and incomprehensible, respondent stated that there was nothing wrong with them and that they were the way she had always done them. Without any recognition that a change is required and/or that performance must be corrected, providing an opportunity for correction would be futile.

After giving careful consideration to the competent credible evidence, I CONCLUDE that the Board has met its burden of proof relative to each of the charges it has filed against respondent. Despite being sequestered, the testimony of the witnesses for the Board was consistent as to their observations of the respondent and her actions and behavior during the course of the 2008–2009 school year. They each described respondent as hostile, aggressive, demanding and unresponsive to reasonable requests for grades, progress reports, test scores, and student information. The schools' demonstrated preference for collegial teaching and professional decorum was not observed in the respondent by the witnesses.

Respondent's testimony, on the other hand, was all over the lot. She would not answer questions put to her, but answered questions she would have preferred to have received. She was directed on numerous occasions by me and by counsel to answer, and yet she demurred and went on off topic and rambled. Her e-mails and written communications were obscure and incoherent. Her refusal to follow direct instruction was apparent. Most startlingly, when asked about the grades and progress reports that were the subject of the June 16 meeting and her lack of production of these documents, which led to her being placed on administrative leave, she stated that she had all the documentation at her home and had been copying it since November. She said that she had told her attorney about these documents but he did not want them. This was the very subject of many of the charges against her! Why respondent would wait until the middle of the hearing to produce these documents was never satisfactorily explained by her.

Most importantly, the impact of her behavior on the children must be considered. Some of the incidents described by respondent's fellow teachers occurred in the presence of the children. One class became afraid their teacher might be fired. Other children needed to be removed from respondent's classroom at the request of their parents. Additionally, it cannot be said with any certainty that the grades the children in respondent's class received for school year 2008–2009 were accurate. Nor can it be said that their DRA reading scores reflected their competence. This is unconscionable, particularly for students with IEP's whose goals and objectives must be met for them to progress with their peers.

I also note that this matter is not a case of personality conflict. That might be the case if one or two teachers simply could not get along with respondent. But here, each of the regular classroom teachers, the case managers, the social workers and the administrators reported having difficulty with respondent. Rather than act in a collegial manner with her colleagues, respondent forced them to work harder simply to best serve the needs of the children. Respondent's behavior was inappropriate and inconsistent with the decorum and responsibility expected of a professional educator.

The Board seeks respondent's dismissal. Factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring. In re King, EDU 4241-00, Comm'r (February 25, 2002) (citation omitted) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

Here, some of the charges, standing alone, would not, in my view, warrant respondent's dismissal from her position of employment. These are the sorts of incidents that would typically warrant administrative counseling or minor discipline. But some of the charges, such as failure to complete the DRA's, failure to provide accurate assessments, failure to provide progress reports, and the repeated failure to follow the directives and orders of her supervisors, show a continuing pattern of behavior by the respondent, who has not amended her behavior to that which is expected of her as a professional educator. Despite receiving orders and directives, being counseled and transferred, respondent showed no understanding that her behavior was not compatible with the mission of the public schools. She responded to the charges against her with uniform denials of personal responsibility and "the transference of blame to others." King, supra, EDU 4241-00, Comm'r (February 25, 2002) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

Under similar circumstances, the Commissioner has aptly stated that a teacher's "apparent refusal to accept responsibility for his behavior does not portend a positive learning environment for the students entrusted to his care, or a harmonious working relationship with those administrators who supervise him." In re Tenure Hearing of Zofchak, EDU 146-02, Comm'r (Oct. 15, 2002) (citing King, supra, EDU 4241-00) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>. Based on this record, it cannot be said that respondent's behavior is an aberration, nor can it be said that it is likely that her behavior will change. Ibid. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that respondent's conduct warrants her dismissal from her position as a tenured teacher.

As to Specification 1, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate to Deni and Dauber, that she was not being truthful in denying knowledge of the transfer, and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism by her refusal to report as directed and in her communications with her supervisors.

Specification 2. DRA Assessments (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Fabrication of Assessment Results, Prevarication, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 2, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate to her supervisors when asked about the DRA scores; that she failed to perform her duties in properly administering and grading the DRA for at least five students; that the scores for at least five students were fabricated or manufactured; that she was not being truthful when she denied being aware that the protocols/rubrics needed to be turned in; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism in her communications with her supervisors.

Specification 3. Meeting with Parents—November 2008 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 3, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate by failing to follow the PIP; that she failed to perform her duties by not having the progress reports done in a timely manner; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism in her communications with parents.

Specification 4. Meeting with Administrators—November 2008 (Insubordination and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 4, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate to the administrators present by her attitude and tone, and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism in her communications with them.

Specification 5. Failure to Prepare Substitute Lesson Plans (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 5, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate to the administrators by not following their directives to complete appropriate and comprehensible substitute lesson plans; that she continued to provide inadequate substitute lesson plans; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism by her refusal to recognize that her plans were inadequate and by her refusal to correct them.

Specification 6. Refusal to Accept IEP (Unbecoming Conduct, Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 6, I CONCLUDE that respondent engaged in unbecoming conduct by refusing to discuss a student who had been entrusted to her care; that she was insubordinate to Kabo by ignoring reasonable requests to discuss the needs of the student; that she failed to perform her duties by not reviewing the IEP or discussing it with the case manager; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism in her response to Kabo.

Specification 7. Continued Failure to Perform and Submit DRA's (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Fabrication, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 7, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate to Billy by ignoring his directive to complete the DRA's in a timely manner, including the protocols; that respondent failed to perform her duties by not completing the DRA's as directed; that the results without the protocols suggest that those results were fabricated; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism by her failure timely complete the DRA's as directed.

Specification 8. Failure to Timely Submit IEP Progress Reports (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 8, I CONCLUDE that respondent was insubordinate by failing to comply with the directive to complete the progress reports in a timely manner; that she failed to perform her duties by not completing the progress reports; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism to the students, their parents, and the school.

Specification 9. Preparation for and Meeting with Parents—February 2009 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 9, I CONCLUDE that respondent's comments were inappropriate and insubordinate; that they represented a failure to perform her duties; and that respondent demonstrated a lack of professionalism.

Specification 10. Communications Issues with Administration and Other Staff (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 10, I CONCLUDE that respondent's comments to her supervisors were insubordinate; that she failed to perform the duties owed to her students and colleagues; and that she demonstrated a lack of professionalism by her failure to communicate in the manner expected from a professional.

Specification 11. Inappropriate Interruption of Another Teacher's Class (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 11, I CONCLUDE that respondent's comments were inappropriate and insubordinate, and demonstrated a lack of professionalism and a failure to perform her duties.

Specification 12. Issues Relating to Entry of B.H.'s Grades (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, Lack of Professionalism, and Prevarication/Fabrication)

As to Specification 12, I CONCLUDE that respondent's actions in failing to comply with school policy in the entering of grades and the refusal to do so even after being ordered to do so by her supervisor were insubordinate, and demonstrated a lack of professionalism and a failure to perform duties. Respondent prevaricated in providing memos to the DOE and Board while representing that they had been sent to the alleged recipients, when, in fact, they had not.

Specification 13. Failure to Follow Corrective Action Plan dated March 16, 2009, and Administrative Directive of April 27, 2009 (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 13, I CONCLUDE that respondent's failure to comply with school policy and follow reasonable administrative directives—including the failure to check e-mails, failure to complete progress reports, failure to revise her substitute plans, failure to meet with parents, failure to take advantage of technology assistance, and failure to produce the DRA protocols—was insubordinate and demonstrated a lack of professionalism and a failure to perform her duties.

Specification 14. Return to School in June 2009; Furnishing of Grades and Progress Reports; Issues Relating to Entry of B.H.'s Grades (Insubordination, Failure to Perform Duties, and Lack of Professionalism)

As to Specification 14, I CONCLUDE that respondent's conduct was insubordinate, represented a failure to perform her duties, and demonstrated a lack of professionalism. Her conduct with the substitute teacher lacked the professionalism expected of a teacher, and her failure to provide the grades, the backup data and the progress reports evinced a failure to perform her duties and insubordination to her supervisors and administrators.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that respondent Jill Kubicki be DISMISSED and REMOVED from her tenured employment with the Lawrence Township Board of Education.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

In these consolidated cases, Petitioners H&S Construction & Mechanical (H&S) and Tekton Development Corporation (Tekton) sought to prohibit the Board from entering into a contract with Stone Creek, Inc., the lowest bidder on two proposed projects in the District. Both petitioners contended that Stone Creek's bid was defective as it included a food service equipment subcontractor, Singer Food Service Company (Singer), which had an expired Certification of Prequalification from the School Development Authority (SDA). H&S argued that both Stone Creek and Tekton had submitted non-responsive bids since both companies listed Singer as a subcontractor; therefore H&S sought award of the contract as the lowest responsible bidder. Tekton contended that it can substitute for Singer as it is properly classified to do the food service work, and also sought the award as the lowest-responsible bidder. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: Stone Creek's submission of Singer's expired prequalification document constituted a material defect that could not be waived; although Tekton is classified to do the work it planned to subcontract to Singer, Tekton may not now substitute itself; case law holds that contractors cannot substitute subcontractors after the bid has been awarded, and the bid instructions required bidders to identify their subcontractors and certify that they would use them. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that H&S is the lowest responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should be awarded the contract as a matter of law.

Upon full review and consideration of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by Stone Creek, Inc. (Stone Creek) and Tekton Development Corp. (Tekton).

In its exceptions, Stone Creek contends that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) did not apply the appropriate standard of review when he determined that the Board should have rejected Stone Creek's bid proposal and awarded the contract to H&S Construction & Mechanical, Inc. (H&S Construction). Stone Creek takes exception to the ALJ's application of a de novo standard of review, arguing that the ALJ failed to utilize the appropriate abuse of discretion standard of review. Moreover, Stone Creek maintains that the ALJ should have analyzed whether the Board acted arbitrarily and capriciously when it determined that Stone Creek's bid contained a waivable defect.

Stone Creek also takes exception to the ALJ's determination that subcontractors must be prequalified on the date of the bid. Stone Creek contends that N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18 only requires subcontractors to be prequalified prior to entering into the subcontract. Additionally, Stone Creek asserts that there is no legal basis for the assumption that the requirement in the bid specifications that bidders be prequalified on the date of the bid likewise requires subcontractors to be prequalified on the date of the bid. Therefore, Stone Creek argues that since the subcontractors do not have to be prequalified on the date of the bid, Stone Creek's bid was in fact responsive and the material defect analysis was not necessary.

In the alternative, Stone Creek maintains that even if the material defect analysis was required, the fact that its food services subcontractor, Singer Food Service Company (Singer), was not prequalified by the School Development Authority (SDA) on the bid date is a non-material defect that was waivable by the Board. With respect to the first prong of the analysis enumerated in Township of River Vale v. R.J. Longo Constr. Co., 127 N.J. Super. 207, 215-16 (Law Div. 1974), Stone Creek argues that the Board had obtained assurances that Singer's work would be performed and guaranteed well in advance of the award of the prime contract. Further, Stone Creek argues that the Initial Decision contains no reference to the assurance, performance or guarantee language contained in River Vale. Stone Creek also argues that the ALJ misapplied the second prong of River Vale and relied on presumptions and inapplicable case law to conclude that Stone creek's submission of Singer's expired SDA prequalification adversely affected competitive bidding. In support of its argument, Stone Creek emphasizes that 11 out of 15 bidders used Singer as their food service subcontractor. Therefore, Stone Creek argues that it is the lowest responsive bidder, and that it should be awarded the contract.

Tekton, who also listed Singer as its food services subcontractor in its bid proposal, takes exception to the ALJ's determination that Tekton cannot substitute itself for Singer. Tekton maintains that it is properly classified to do the food services work, and that there are no restrictions in the applicable regulations that prevent Tekton from identifying an unclassified subcontractor to perform work which is subsumed within Tekton's classification rating. Therefore, Tekton argues that it is the lowest responsible bidder and that it should be awarded the contract.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that H&S Construction is entitled to summary decision and shall be awarded the construction contract. Specifically, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's determination that the bid specifications required bidders to submit an SDA prequalification for their food services subcontractor. Additionally, the Commissioner agrees that the submittal of an expired SDA prequalification is a deviation of the bid specifications. Finally, the Commissioner finds that Stone Creek's failure to include a food services subcontractor that was SDA prequalified at the time of the bid was a material deviation that cannot be waived; as a result the Board was required to reject Stone Creek's bid. See, Meadowbrook Carting Co. v. Borough of Island Heights, 138 N.J. 307, 313-315 (1994); River Vale, supra, 127 N.J. Super. at 215-16.

In its exceptions, Stone Creek argues that the ALJ did not apply the appropriate standard of review in this case. It is important to recognize that the Board did not have any discretion to waive the material defect in Stone Creek's bid proposal. When a defect in a bid is material, "the public entity to which it has been submitted is without discretion in dealing with it ... [and] the bid must be rejected." Serenity Contracting Group, Inc. v. The Borough of Fort Lee and C. Raimondo & Sons Construction, 306 N.J. Super. 151, 156 (App. Div. 1997). In this case, Stone Creek's failure to provide a valid SDA prequalification for Singer was a material defect that cannot be waived, and as a result the Board was required to reject the bid. On the other hand if Stone Creek's bid contained a defect that was not material, the Board would have had discretion to determine whether it should waive the defect, and under those circumstances a court's review of that decision would be subject to an abuse of discretion standard of review. Id. at 156-157; In the Matter of the Protest of the Award of the On-Line Games Production and Operation Services Contract, Bid No. 95-X-20175, 279 N.J. Super. 566, 595 (App. Div. 1995) (citations omitted).

The Commissioner also finds Stone Creek's remaining exceptions to be unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments previously raised before the ALJ that were taken into consideration and addressed in the Initial Decision. The Commissioner is similarly not persuaded by the exceptions filed by Tekton. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter. H&S Construction shall be awarded the contract.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

H&S did not include Singer Food Service Company in its bid as its food-service equipment subcontractor because one of Singer's prequalification documents had expired. But when Stone Creek submitted the expired document, Woodland Park waived the requirement. Was this expired document a material defect that could not be waived? Yes. Under the test of materiality, a defect is material if waiver would undermine the standards of competition.

Tekton also included Singer in its bid as its food-service equipment subcontractor. Tekton, however, is also classified to do that work. Can Tekton substitute itself for Singer? No. Caselaw holds that contractors cannot substitute subcontractors after the bid has been awarded. Moreover, the bid instructions required bidders to identify their subcontractors and certify that they would use them.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Before January 26, 2011, a bid was advertised for the renovation and construction of a new cafeteria at Memorial Middle School and for the renovation and addition of a new kindergarten at Charles Olbon Elementary School in Woodland Park, New Jersey.

In the Instructions to Bidders, the project was referred to as "Renovations and New Cafeteria for the Memorial Middle School and Renovations and New Kindergarten Addition for the Charles Oblon Elementary School."

On January 26, 2011, the bids were opened. Stone Creek submitted the lowest bid ($2,385,800); Tekton submitted the second-lowest bid ($2,442,500); and H&S submitted the third-lowest bid ($2,453,900). As a result, the contract was awarded to Stone Creek on February 7, 2011.

On February 11, 2011, H&S filed a motion for emergency relief with the Department of Education to stop Woodland Park from entering into the contract with Stone Creek. According to H&S, both Stone Creek and Tekton had submitted non-responsive bids because both Stone Creek and Tekton had listed Singer as their food-service equipment contractor when Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the School Development Authority (SDA) had already expired. Ultimately, H&S seeks the award of the contract for the project as the lowest-responsible bidder.

On February 11, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15, and the act establishing the office, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23, for a hearing under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6, and the rules of procedure established by the Department of Education to hear and decide controversies and disputes arising under school laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 to -1.17. Jurisdiction is conferred under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.

On February 14, 2011, the OAL received the transmittal.

On that date, Tekton also filed a motion for emergency relief to stop Woodland Park from entering into the contract with Stone Creek because Singer's Certification of Prequalification the SDA had expired. Tekton, however, argues that it can substitute for Singer. As a result, Tekton also seeks the award as the lowest-responsible bidder.

On February 16, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted this second case to the OAL and I consolidated it with the first.

On February 28, 2011, the parties appeared at the OAL for oral argument.

On March 8, 2011, I issued my order granting H&S's and Tekton's applications for emergency relief and enjoining Woodland Park from entering into the contract with Stone Creek for this project until a final decision could be ordered on the whole contested case.

On March 23, 2011, the Commissioner of Education adopted my order.

The parties then moved for summary decision. H&S moved for summary decision that it was the lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and that Woodland Park award it the contract for the project. Similarly, Tekton moved for summary decision that it was the lowest-responsible bidder but that Woodland Park award it the contract for the project.

Meanwhile, Stone Creek cross-moved for summary decision that it was the lowest-responsible bidder and that Woodland Park award it the contract for the project. Although Woodland Park joined in Stone Creek's cross-motion for summary decision, Woodland Park advised that it would rescind its prior award to Stone Creek, that it would reject the bids by Stone Creek and Tekton as unresponsive, and that it would award the contract to H&S. But Woodland Park also advised that that it would not enter into the contract with H&S until this decision was issued.

Finally, the parties waived any oral argument and relied upon the papers they had submitted in support of and in opposition to the applications for emergency relief.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon the certifications submitted in support of an in opposition to the applications for emergency relief, I FIND the following as fact:

The Instructions to Bidders

On pages five and six of the bid instructions, bidders and their subcontractors in the five-major branches of work were required to be prequalified by the SDA and classified by the Division of Property Management and Construction (DPMC) under N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-33. The bid instructions identified the five-major branches of work as "general construction, plumbing and gas fitting work, heating and ventilating systems and equipment, electrical work, and structural steel and ornamental iron work." In addition, bidders and their subcontracts in the five-major branches of work were required to submit "an Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA, a Notice of Classification and a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts (DPMC Form 701) from the Division of Property Management and Construction." More significantly, the bid instructions required bidders to submit this documentation for the specialty trades as well:

> A. For all School Facilities Projects, irrespective of project cost, all bidders and those subcontractors in the five (5) major branches of work (general construction, plumbing and gas fitting work, heating and ventilating systems and equipment, electrical work, and structural steel and ornamental iron work), must be prequalified by the SDA and classified by the DPMC pursuant to under N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-33 et seq. as to trade or work classification and aggregate rating limit, on which they must submit bids. The bidder shall submit as to the bidder and each of the subcontractors for the five (5) major branches of work and for all specialty trades for which classification is required, an Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA, a Notice of Classification and a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts (DPMC Form 701) from the Division of Property Management and Construction.
> [(Ex. B to Certif. of Brendan T. Murray, pp. 5-6 (February 11, 2011).)]

On pages eleven and twelve of the bid instructions, bidders were reminded that they had to comply with these instructions and submit these documents. To be clear, the bid instructions enumerated the forms the bidders had to complete and the documents they had to submit. Once again, bidders were instructed to submit the Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with the Certification of

Prequalification from the SDA, the Notice of Classification from the DPMC, and the Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts from the DPMC:

> Preparation of Bids
> B. All bidders much use and complete the following bid forms in full:
> 7. Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change together with following attachments as to the bidder and the subcontractors in the five (5) major branches of work and all specialty trades for which classification is required:
> a. NOTICE OF CLASSIFICATION from DPMC, as issued by the State of New Jersey, Department of Treasury, Division of Property Management and Construction (DPMC).
> b. Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts, DPMC Form 701.
> c. The New Jersey Schools Development Authority, Certificate of Prequalification, required for school facilities projects issued by the State of New Jersey Schools Development Authority (SDA).
> [(Ex. B to Certif. of Brendan T. Murray, pp. 11-12 (February 11, 2011).)]

The Form of Bid Proposal

On pages four and five of the bid proposal form, bidders were again reminded that they and their subcontractors had to be classified by the DPMC. In addition, bidders had to identify their subcontractors and certify that they would use them. Moreover, bidders were again reminded that they had to submit the same prequalification documents for their subcontractors as they had to submit for themselves. In particular, bidders had to submit their Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificates as well as the Business Registration Certificates:

> SUBCONTRACTORS
> Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-26, in order to be eligible to submit a bid for the Project, the Bidder and its Subcontractors shall be classified by the New Jersey

> Department of Treasury, Division of Property Management and Construction in the following disciplines.
> Identify the Subcontractors for the major trades and specialty trades listed below. By indicating the Subcontractors, the Bidder certifies that if it is awarded the bid, the named Subcontractors will be awarded the subcontracts, provided the Subcontractors are approved by the Architect. All pre-qualification documentation required for the Bidder shall also be submitted for the Major Trade and Specialty Trade Subcontractors.
>
> All Subcontractors (irrespective of trade) must be registered by the State of New Jersey under the Public Works Contractor Act, N.J.S.A. 34:11-56.48 et seq., to work on school construction projects. The bid shall include the Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate and a Business Registration Certificate under P.L. 2004 c. 57.
> [(Ex. 1 to Certif. of Jeffrey R. Merlino (February 16, 2011).)]

On page five of the bid proposal form, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, had the space to identify their subcontractors. More specifically, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C008 also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C030, Plumbing; trade C039, HVAC; trade C047, Electrical; and trade C043, Control Systems. If they were not deemed classified by the DPMC in any of those trades, then they had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

Similarly, on pages five and six of the bid proposal form, bidders who were classified by the DPMC in trade C009, General Construction/Alterations & Additions, had the space to identify their subcontractors. For those bidders, they also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C030, Plumbing; trade C039, HVAC; trade C047, Electrical; and trade C043, Control Systems. But they also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C104, Food Service Equipment. If they were not deemed classified by the DPMC in any of those trades, then they too had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

Before January 26, 2011, Woodland Park revised its bid proposal form. In Addendum #3, bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, also had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C029, Structural Steel, and trade C104, Food Service Equipment; otherwise, they had to engage properly classified subcontractors:

Given this addendum, bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C008, General Construction, or bidders classified by the DPMC in trade C009, General Construction/Alterations & Additions, both had to be deemed classified by the DPMC in trade C104, Food Service Equipment, or engage properly classified subcontractors.

The Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA

Both Tekton and H&S are classified by the DPMC in Trade C008 General Construction while Stone Creek is classified by the DPMC in Trade C009 General Construction/Alterations & Additions. Only contractors classified by the DPMC in Trade C008 General Construction, however, are also deemed by the DPMC to be classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment. Therefore, only Stone Creek had to engage a properly classified food-service equipment subcontractor—and it chose Singer.

But so did Tekton. Even though Tekton did not have to engage a properly classified food-service equipment subcontractor, it too chose Singer. As a result, both Stone Creek and Tekton listed Singer as their food-service equipment subcontractor and submitted a Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer in their bids.

Singer's certificate, however, had already expired. According to the SDA, Singer's Certificate of Prequalification had expired on December 7, 2010, and was not renewed until February 2, 2011. Although it was renewed retroactive to December 7, 2010, the certificate was still expired when Stone Creek and Tekton submitted their bids. In other words, Singer was not prequalified by the SDA when Woodland Park opened their bids on January 26, 2011.

Moreover, H&S had considered engaging Singer as its food-service equipment subcontractor but had decided against it because Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA had expired.

Incidentally, the parties stipulated that this project is not an SDA project.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

I.

Standard for Summary Decision

Where a party seeks an order of an administrative law judge, the party shall apply by motion. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.1(a). In such proceedings, no technical forms of motion are required—the party shall simply state the grounds upon which the motion is made and the relief or order being sought. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.1(a)(1).

In motions for summary decision, a party may move upon any or all of the substantive issues and a judge may render a decision if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5.

In this case, all of the parties moved for summary decision upon the substantive issue of who was the lowest-responsible bidder. In doing so, all of the parties relied upon the papers they had submitted in support of and in opposition to the applications for emergency relief. Since there is no genuine issue of material fact, I CONCLUDE that H&S is entitled to prevail as a matter of law for the following reasons.

II.

Public Schools Contract Law

Under the Public Schools Contract Law, every contract for the performance of any service shall be awarded only by resolution of the board of education to the "lowest responsible bidder" after public advertising for bids. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a).

The "lowest responsible bidder" means the bidder who offers the "lowest price," is "responsive" to the bid, and is "responsible." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(t).

According to the statute, the "lowest price" means "the least possible amount that meets all requirements of the request," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(s); "responsible" means "able to complete the contract in accordance with its requirements," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(x); and "responsive" means "conforming in all material respects to the terms and conditions, specifications, legal requirements, and other provisions of the request," N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2(y).

This means that the contract must be awarded to the lowest bidder who complies with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications and that any material departure invalidates the non-conforming bid as well as any contract based on it. Meadowbrook Carting Co. v. Borough of Island Heights and Consol. Waste Serv., 138 N.J. 307, 313-14 (1994).

The Test of Materiality

These requirements notwithstanding, minor discrepancies and technical omissions can be waived. Id. at 314. The test is one of materiality. Originally set forth by Judge Pressler in River Vale v. R.J. Longo Construction Company, 127 N.J. Super. 207, 216 (Law Div. 1974), it was later adopted by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Meadowbrook, supra, 138 N.J. at 315: (1) whether waiver would deprive the municipality of its assurance that the contract will be entered into, performed, and guaranteed according to its requirements; and (2) whether waiver would adversely affect competitive bidding by giving an advantage to one bidder over the other or by undermining the common standards of competition.

III.

SDA versus Non-SDA Projects

Both Woodland Park and Stone Creek argue that Stone Creek is the lowest-responsible bidder who complied with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications because the bid did not require bidders to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors. In support of their argument, Woodland Park and Stone Creek rely on page four of the bid proposal. According to Woodland Park and Stone Creek, the bid proposal only required bidders to submit: (1) a Notice of Classification; (2) a Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts; (3) a Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate; and (4) a Business Registration Certificate. Since Stone Creek submitted these forms and offered the lowest price, Woodland Park and Stone Creek conclude that Stone Creek was the lowest-responsible bidder.

Woodland Park and Stone Creek, however, overlook the obligatory language in the bid instructions. More specifically, on pages four to five of the bid instructions, and then again on pages eleven to twelve, Woodland Park required bidders to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors. By its own terms and conditions, Woodland Park required bidders to submit this certification in addition to the Notice of Classification, the Total Amount of Uncompleted Contracts, the Public Works Contractor Registration Act Certificate, and the Business Registration Certificate. Although Woodland Park argues that this requirement is only for SDA projects, the bid documents do not make this distinction. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that this distinction does not apply and that bidders were required to submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors.

Mandatory versus Non-Mandatory Requirements

In the alternative, Stone Creek argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder who complied with the substantive and procedural requirements set forth in the specifications because the requirement that it submit a Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of their subcontractors is a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. According to Stone Creek, the requirement of prequalification or classification only applies to contractors or subcontractors in the five-major branches of work set forth in the statute.

In further support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon N.J.A.C. 19:38A-2.1(d). According to Stone Creek, this requirement of prequalification only applies to contractors when they submit their bids and only applies to subcontractors when they enter into their contracts. In other words, it does not apply to subcontractors at the time of bid.

The Appellate Division, however, rejected a similar argument in P & A Construction v. Woodbridge, 365 N.J. Super. 164 (App. Div. 2004). In that case, the governing body waived a financial statement because it was not one of the five-statutorily mandated items under the Local Public Contracts Law, N.J.S.A. 40A:11-1 et seq. Although the financial statement was not one of the five-statutorily mandated items, the Appellate Division reasoned that the protections of that law would be substantially weakened if the local contacting agency could waive any other item. Id. at 176. Finding no legislative direction, the Appellate Division held that waiver of any other bid defect must be considered under the test of materiality set forth in River Vale. P & A Construction, supra, 365 N.J. Super. at 177.

In this case, Singer is not a contractor or subcontractor in one of the five-statutorily mandated branches of work set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. And the Certificate of Prequalification from the SDA is not one of the statutorily mandated items set forth in the Public Schools Contract Law either. But given the Appellate Division's reasoning and holding in P & A Construction, I CONCLUDE that waiver of the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA must be considered under the same test of materiality set forth in River Vale.

Parenthetically, H&S and Tekton argue that the Appellate Division's decision in Begraft v. Franklin Board of Education, 133 N.J. Super. 415 (App. Div. 1975), is dispositive. In that case, the board of education disqualified a bidder which submitted its statutorily mandated qualifications after the date the bids were received but before the date the contract was awarded. Id. at 417. In affirming that decision, the Appellate Division explained that the board of education was without authority to accept the bid because the bid defect could not be waived. As a result, the Appellate Division held that qualification after the date for submission of the bid does not satisfy the requirements of the statute or the bid. Ibid.

Although this case concerns the submission of qualifications after the date the bids were received but before the date the contract was awarded, it still does not concern the submission of statutorily mandated qualifications. Again, such statutorily mandated qualifications cannot be waived. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Begraft does not apply and waiver of the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA must still be considered under the test of materiality set forth in River Vale.

The First Prong of the Test: Assurance of Performance

In considering this test of materiality, Stone Creek argues that its submission of an expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer was a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived because it did not deprive Woodland Park of its assurance that the contract would be entered into, performed, and guaranteed according to its specifications. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies on N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31. According to Stone Creek, the statute requires boards of education to give bidders the opportunity to cure any minor discrepancy or technical omission.

Stone Creek, however, overstates its reach. Under the statute, boards of education must give bidders the opportunity to present additional information to substantiate their qualifications or classifications. But boards of education must only do so after bidders have first established those qualifications or classifications:

> Where there have been developments subsequent to the qualification and classification of a bidder which in the opinion of the board of education would affect the responsibility of the bidder, information to that effect shall forthwith be transmitted to the department for its review and reconsideration of the classification. Before taking final action on any such bid, the board of education concerned shall notify the bidder and give him an opportunity to present to the department any additional information which might tend to substantiate the existing classification.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31.]

In this case, Stone Creek did not first establish Singer's qualifications. Thus, there was no obligation for Woodland Park to notify Stone Creek and provide it with an opportunity to explain why Singer was still qualified. Had Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA expired after Stone Creek submitted its bid, then Woodland Park would have been obligated to provide Stone Creek with the opportunity to submit the renewal before taking final action on the award. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-31 does not apply.

The Second Prong of the Test: Standards of Competition

Stone Creek also argues that its submission of an expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA on behalf of Singer was a minor discrepancy or technical omission that can be waived because it did not adversely affect competitive bidding by giving an advantage to one bidder over the other or by undermining the common standards of competition. In support of its argument, Stone Creek relies upon Tec Electric v. Franklin Lakes Board of Education, 284 N.J. Super. 480 (Law Div. 1995). According to Stone Creek, the case held that prequalification documents are immaterial defects that can be waived.

That case, however, is different. In that case, the prequalification document at issue was the Affidavit of No Material Adverse Change and it only had the potential to affect the classification by the DPMC. More significantly, it did not have the potential to affect the competitive-bidding process:

> With regard to the second criterion of the River Vale materiality test, the failure to submit a Prequalification Affidavit offered Tec no opportunity adversely to affect competitive bidding. The information contained in the Prequalification Affidavit concerns the bidder's current DBC classification rating, which in turn denotes a contractor's financial capacity, as well as availability of equipment and personnel, to do the job. It does not and could not influence the amount of plaintiff's or any other contractor's bid.
> [Tec Electric, supra, 284 N.J. Super. at 487.]

In this case, the submission of the expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA did affect the competitive-bidding process because it did affect a bid. As H&S represented, it had considered engaging Singer as its food-service equipment subcontractor but chose not to because Singer's Certification of Prequalification from the SDA had expired. Whether or not other bidders listed Singer as their food-service equipment subcontractor does not change the fact that it affected H&S's bid.

It also lessened the pool of subcontractors. In a persuasive decision, the Appellate Division noted that to waive such conditions for some affords them an unfair-bidding advantage over others because it opens the pool of subcontractors for some while lessening the pool for others:

> As to the second prong of the River Vale analysis, we are in complete agreement with the trial court's findings:

> [B]oth [d]efendants were afforded an unfair bidding advantage insofar as they were not required to submit the subcontractor documentation in their initial bid submissions. Whether or not the burden of doing so is considered to be laborious, the requirement of obtaining Certificates and supporting documents from all subcontractors must surely lessen the pool of subcontractor candidates from which a bidding contractor can choose in preparing the final bid submission. I therefore find it indisputable that a general contractor who is not required to obtain these documents prior to bid submission is placed in a position over its competitors.
> [Vanas Construction Co. v. Jersey City, A-1649-10, 2010 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 3087 (App. Div. Dec. 23, 2010).]

Finally, the waiver of the Certification of Prequalification from the SDA created the perception of favoritism—a perception that our laws seek to avoid. See Bil Jim Construction Co. v. Manchester Twp. Bd. of Educ., 236 N.J. Super. 603 (Law Div. 1989) (where the court vacated the award and rejected all bids because the specifications failed to designate which classification was required for the contract and left the board with unbridled discretion after the bids were opened to determine which classification was required).

Although the specifications in this case designated the classifications, they also designated the qualifications. Indeed, both were required for the contract. To leave the board with the discretion after the bids were opened to waive those qualifications, then, could create the perception of favoritism. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Tec Electric does not apply.

And given my discussion of the test of materiality and its application to this case, I CONCLUDE that the submission of the expired Certification of Prequalification from the SDA by a bidder on behalf of Singer is a material defect that cannot be waived.

Therefore, I also CONCLUDE that Stone Creek is not the lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should not be awarded the contract for this project.

IV.

Meanwhile, Tekton argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder because it is deemed classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment and can substitute for Singer. Both H&S and Stone Creek, however, argue that it cannot. In support of their argument, H&S and Stone Creek rely upon O'Shea v. New Jersey Schools Construction Corporation, 388 N.J. Super. 312 (App. Div. 2006).

In that case, the Appellate Division held that a general contractor may not substitute a major-trade subcontractor after a bid has been awarded because it is contrary to public-bidding laws and their underlying policies. Id. at 314.

In doing so, the Appellate Division reiterated that public-bidding statutes exist for the benefit of the taxpayers, that the underlying purpose of those statutes is to secure the benefits of public competition, and that the public-bidding statutes are to be strictly construed to achieve those ends. Id. at 319.

More specifically, the Appellate Division noted that the need to furnish the names of subcontractors along with the bid of a general contractor is also found in the public-bidding statutes of State government, State agencies, State colleges, county colleges, and the New Jersey Building Authority. Id. at 323. In particular, the court referenced boards of education and N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-18. O'Shea, supra, 388 N.J. Super. at 323. According to the Appellate Division, inconsistent treatment by the various State agencies would lead to uncertainty in the contracting community, open the door to mischief, and undermine competition in the processes. Ibid.

Although this case does not concern the substitution of a major-trade contractor, the same reasoning applies. Moreover, the bid instructions required bidders to identify their subcontractors and certify that they will use them—without making a distinction between major-trade subcontractors and specialty-trade subcontractors. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Tekton cannot substitute for Singer.

As such, I also CONCLUDE that Tekton is not the lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should not be awarded the contract for this project.

Incidentally, Tekton also relies on the unpublished Appellate Division decision, Contract for Science Wing Addition and Alterations v. Dobco, A-5395-07, 2010 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 443 (App. Div. March 4, 2010), in support of its argument. In that case, the Appellate Division distinguished O'Shea and held that the contractor could substitute one of its subcontractors because the subcontractor became unavailable after the award of the contract. In short, the court reasoned that the bidding statutes do not suggest a legislative intent to prevent a contractor from doing so:

> Contractors can make changes to the subcontractors listed in their bids for performance reasons, especially when protecting the public interest. In O'Shea v. N.J. Schools Constr. Corp., 388 N.J. Super. 312, 315 n. 1 (App. Div. 2006), where we overturned a policy allowing substitution after the award of bids, we stated that our "opinion [did] not affect a general contractor's remedies if a subcontractor breaches after a contract between the general contractor and the subcontractor has been signed." In [Stano v. Soldo Constr. Co., 187 N.J. Super. 524, 534 n.3 (1983)], we refused to hold that invalidation of a contract would follow in all instances "where a proposed subcontractor named in the bidding papers becomes unavailable for some reason after the award[.]" Finally, in Serenity Contracting Group v. Borough of Fort Lee, 306 N.J. Super. 151, 157 (App. Div. 1997), certif. denied, 153 N.J. 214 (1998), we declared that there were no bidding statutes that "suggest[] a legislative design to supplant all exercises of principled business judgment by the contracting public entity that conform with the express provisions of the Law and its underlying policies."
> [Science Wing, supra, A-5395-07 at 31-32.]

This case, however, is different. Indeed, the distinction is the difference. In this case, there were no performance reasons or contractual breaches which would have necessitated substitution. More pointedly, Singer could not become unavailable after the award of the contract because it was already unavailable at the time of the bid. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that Science Wing is unpersuasive and does not apply.

V.

Finally, H&S argues that it is the lowest-responsible bidder because it is classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment, named itself as the food-service equipment contractor, and does not need to substitute for Singer.

Since none of the parties challenge that H&S is classified in Trade C104 Food Service Equipment, named itself as the food-service equipment contractor, and does not need to substitute for Singer—and since none of the parties challenge any of the other substantive or procedural requirements set forth in the specifications or the bids—I CONCLUDE that H&S is lowest-responsible bidder under N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4(a) and should be awarded the contract for this project as a matter of law, unless Woodland Park rejects the bid for any of the reasons set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-22.

ORDER

Given my findings of fact and conclusions of law, I ORDER that H&S's motion for summary decision be GRANTED and that all of the other motions for summary decision be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

JILLIAN ALLEN,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

On December 29, 2010, the petitioner – a non-tenured social studies teacher – filed an appeal charging that the respondent Board improperly terminated her employment contract for the 2010-2011 school year. She contends, inter alia, that because the Board never voted to terminate the contract, it is still operative – notwithstanding the fact that respondent's director of human resources informed her by letter on August 14, 2010 that she had received the contract in error. Petitioner further argues that the Board's action followed her July 2010 request for maternity leave and Family Medical Leave effective shortly after the school year would have begun – a request that was denied by the director of human resources. The Board filed a motion to dismiss the matter, asserting that the petition was not timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

The ALJ found that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; petitioner was employed by respondent Board for one year and four months; petitioner's contract was renewed on or about June 24, 2010; on August 14, 2010, petitioner received a letter from the director of human resources informing her that she had received a contract for the 2010-2011 school year in error and that she should have been non-renewed as a result of the Board's budgetary reduction in force; petitioner filed her appeal on December 29, 2010, well in excess of ninety-days after the receipt of the August 14, 2010 letter notifying her that she had received the contract for the 2010-2011 year in error. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the petition should be dismissed for failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and granted the Board's motion to dismiss the appeal.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition.

JILLIAN ALLEN,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law, and petitioner's exceptions have been reviewed. For the reasons articulated by the Administrative Law Judge, the Commissioner is constrained to dismiss the petition.

Petitioner relies heavily on the fact that on or about June 29, 2010, the respondent Board offered – and petitioner accepted – a contract to teach from September 1, 2010 to June 30, 2011. She argues that since the respondent Board never voted to terminate the contract, it is still operative, notwithstanding that respondent's Director of Human Resources, Karen Murray, did not allow petitioner to commence work on the starting date of the 2010-2011 school year. Petitioner further contends that as long as the contract has not been terminated by Board action, the Department of Education's regulation limiting the time to file administrative appeals – N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) – is not triggered.

The relief that petitioner demands is specific performance of a contract – a remedy that is generally sought in Superior Court. Petitioner, however, opted to prosecute an administrative action. Consequently, she is subject to the applicable administrative rules, including the requirement in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) that a claimant file an appeal within ninety days of "notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency." (Emphasis added.)

The alleged improper action in this case was the barring of petitioner from a position for which she had previously been given a contract. If the alleged violation is viewed as an ultra vires action by Board employee Murray, petitioner was obliged to file her appeal within ninety days of August 14, 2010, the date upon which petitioner acknowledges receiving a letter from Murray purporting to rescind petitioner's employment contract. In the alternative, the alleged violation could be viewed as a breach of contract by the respondent board, which Board neither corrected Murray's action nor paid petitioner the remuneration memorialized in the June 29, 2010 contract. The deadline for filing an appeal under this theory would have been November 30, 2010, ninety days after the 2010-1011 school year commenced – without petitioner.

The instant appeal was filed on or about December 29, 2010, substantially past the filing deadlines under either of the above scenarios. Accordingly, the petition was untimely and is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE JESSE H. STRAUSS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On December 29, 2010, Jillian Allen filed with the Commissioner an application for emergent relief and appeal of the Elizabeth Board of Education's (Board) failure to honor Allen's contract for the 2010-11 school year.

Allen, a non-tenured social studies teacher, contends that, although the Board renewed her contract for the 2010-11 school year on June 24, 2010, she was informed by the Board's Executive Director for Human Resources Karen Murray on August 14, 2010, that she had received the contract in error and that, "[s]ince you had not earned tenure, you should not have been renewed for the 2010-2011 year, as a result of the Board's budgetary reduction in force." Allen argues that the action by Murray was improper because there was no Board action deeming Allen's contract as non-renewed. Allen further contends that Murray's letter followed her July 2010 request for maternity leave and Family Medical Leave effective September 5, 2010, several days after the commencement of the school year, a request which Murray denied.

On January 4, 2011, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted an emergent relief application and petition of appeal to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, for determination as a contested case. The Board filed a Motion to Dismiss on January 13, 2011, contending that the petition should be dismissed as time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) and for failure to comply with the required format for a petition in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4.

I denied the application for emergent relief on January 18, 2011, but declined to rule on the Motion to Dismiss at that time. I further ordered that the parties submit supplemental briefs supporting or opposing the Board's Motion to Dismiss.[1] The Acting Commissioner of Education, on February 18, 2011, adopted my recommended Order denying Allen's application for emergent relief. I received briefs from the parties on March 2, 2011.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For the purpose of this Motion the following FACTS from Allen's Certification and attachments are deemed as true. The Board employed Allen for one year and four months. On or about June 24, 2010, Allen's contract for 2010-11 was renewed as evidenced by an Employment Contract signed by Board President Carlos M. Trujillo,

[1] The Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 et seq., does provide specifically for the filing of a Motion to Dismiss. The Board's Motion will be treated as a Motion for Summary Decision in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5.

Business Administrator/Board Secretary Harold E. Kennedy, Jr. and Allen. In July 2010, Allen filed a request for maternity leave effective September 5, 2010, and requested Family Medical Leave documents. On or about August 6, 2010, Allen met with Executive Director of Human Resources Karen Murray, who informed her that she would not approve the leave of absence. The following week Allen received a telephone call from Murray indicating that her contract had been provided in error and that she should not have received a contract in June.

On August 14, 2010, Allen received the following letter from Murray:

> Please be advised that you received a contract for the 2010-2011 year in error. Since you had not earned tenure, you should have been non-renewed for the 2010-2011 year, as a result of the Board's budgetary reduction in force.

The letter indicates that it was copied to Kennedy, Assistant Superintendent for Teaching and Learning Olga Hugelmeyer and Supervisor of Payroll Isolina Oyola. Allen's counsel, Jessica Swenson, wrote to Kirk Nelson of the Elizabeth Public Schools Law Department on October 19, 2010, in response to Murray's letter arguing that only action by the Board could properly deem Allen's contract non-renewed. She advised that, if Allen's contract is non-renewed, " . . . we will challenge the non-renewal with the Commission [sic] of Education . . . ." On November 5, 2010, Swenson again wrote to Nelson indicating that she had failed to receive any communication from him in response to her October 19 letter. She further advised that, if no response were received by November 12, 2010, " . . . we will be forced to proceed to litigation."

Neither party has submitted proof that the Board took formal action deeming Allen's contract as non-renewed.

On December 29, 2009, the Acting Commissioner received an appeal from Allen dated December 22, 2010.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This language is substantially similar to the guidelines for summary judgment under R. 4:46-2(c) which provides in part that the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law.

In order to defeat a summary decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing." Use of the summary procedure is aimed at "the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial." Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citations omitted).

I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing regarding the issue of whether the appeal was timely filed, and the Board is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

The Commissioner has specifically addressed the time in which a petitioner must initiate a contested case for the Commissioner's determination of a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) requires that:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

Such a rule represents a fair and reasonably necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws and falls within the scope of authority granted to the Commissioner. Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley Twp., 131 N.J. 572, 582 (1993). The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Ibid. Its purposes are to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend and to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose by giving security and stability to human affairs. Id. at 587.

The ninety-day requirement is to be strictly construed and is mandatory. Wise v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, EDU 160-00, Comm'r (September 11, 2000), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (January 3, 2001), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. A petitioner must file a petition within ninety days from a notice of adverse action and not within ninety days of her exhaustion of other avenues and mechanisms she might have employed in seeking renewal of employment. Ibid. Informal attempts to resolve a dispute do not serve to toll the statute of limitations. See Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 588. Also, the ninety-day period for filing a petition of appeal commences when a petitioner learns of facts that would enable her to file a timely claim. Id. at 587. "Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Ibid. (citation omitted).

The time by which Allen filed her petition on December 29, 2010, was well in excess of ninety-days from her receipt on August 14, 2010, of the letter from the Board's Executive Director of Human Resources, Karen Murray, notifying her that she had received the contract for the 2010-2011 year in error. Allen cannot defend her failure to file a petition within this ninety-day period based on her contention that the statute of limitations would not begin to run until the Board officially non-renewed her. If that were so, and if the Board never acted formally, the statute of limitations would still yet to have run. Regardless of whether or not the Board had acted properly, Allen knew by August 14 that her request for a leave of absence was being denied and that she had no teaching position at the commencement of the 2010-11 school year from which to take a leave. Aside from whether Murray had the actual authority to notify Allen as she did without a formal Board action, Allen was so notified by someone (Murray) acting in her official capacity as an agent to the Board. Notice sufficient to trigger the statute of limitations can exist prior to formal Board action. H.H. and E.H. o/b/o Bd. of Educ. of Twp. of Wall, EDU 07602-09, Initial Decision (January 6, 2010), adopted, Comm'r (February 23, 2010), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. As instructed by Kaprow, the ninety days begins to run when notified of an adverse action regardless of whether the action is proper and when the petitioner learns of facts that would enable her to file a timely claim. Both elements existed upon the receipt of the Murray letter.

It is perfectly clear by Allen's conduct, through her counsel, after August 14, 2010, that she knew of an adverse action against her and had learned of sufficient facts that would enable her to file a timely claim. By letters of her counsel of October 19 and November 5, 2010, she acknowledged the adverse action against her by protesting what she considered to be an improper decision to non-renew her contract. Moreover, these attempts to resolve the dispute informally do not toll the statute of limitations.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Allen's petition of appeal should be dismissed for failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-11.3(i).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the Board's motion for summary decision be GRANTED and the petition of appeal DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

STEVEN E. TOMLIN , JR., AND DIANE HOGAN,	:
PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE LOWER CAPE MAY REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, CAPE MAY COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners challenged the respondent Board's determination that he had not satisfied requirements for graduation, and therefore could not march in the processional or otherwise participate in high school graduation ceremonies in June 2009. The Board had based its determination on the fact that Steven had received a failing final grade in eleventh grade English. Subsequently, Steven completed and passed all of his courses at the Cape May County Technical School District's Adult High School and otherwise satisfied the requirements for graduation and receipt of a diploma set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.2(a) and (b)1.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue here, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; the petitioner Steven Tomlin has now completed and passed all of his courses at the Cape May County Technical School District's Adult High School, and has received a high school diploma; petitioner had the option of returning to Lower Cape May County High School and completing requirements to earn a diploma from that school, but decided to remain at the Adult High School to complete his coursework and has now graduated. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the matter is now moot, and dismissed the petition.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons comprehensively detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition as moot.

BEFORE ISRAEL D. DUBIN, ALJ:

On June 12, 2009, Steven E. Tomlin, Jr., and his mother, Diane Hogan, filed a Petition of Appeal and Request for Emergent Relief contesting the Lower Cape May [1] Given the passage of time, it would not be unreasonable to assume that Steven is now eighteen or nineteen years old, an age at which he has attained "the basic civil and contractual rights and obligations heretofore applicable only to persons 21 years of age or older, including the right to contract, sue, be sued and defend civil actions . . .." N.J.S.A. 9:17B-1a. However, there is no mention, much less proof, of his age in the record. Therefore, Diane Hogan, who has assisted her son throughout these proceedings, has been permitted to continue participating in that capacity.

Regional School District Board of Education's determination that he had not satisfied the requirements for graduation and therefore could not march in the processional or otherwise participate in the high school's graduation ceremonies. The Board based its determination on the fact that Steven had received a failing final grade in eleventh grade English, which he had been re-taking his senior year.[2] This failing grade not only left him approximately five credits shy of the 140 credits needed for graduation, but also resulted in his failure to complete four years of high school English, as required by the State Department of Education's core curriculum standards.

Steven and his mother contested the Board's determination on the grounds that it had been based on false information, unsupported facts, and certain misleading statements made by his eleventh grade English teacher, Sean Murphy. Among other things, they claimed that Mr. Murphy had given Steven zeroes on certain tests he claimed Steven hadn't taken because he'd been absent, when Steven actually had been in school, attended class, taken the tests, and passed. They also claimed they'd been denied the opportunity to review his homework assignments and test papers because, they'd been told, his class folder was "missing." Finally, Steven claimed that Mr. Murphy had broken his promise that he'd give Steven a passing grade if he completed his assignments, did not receive any more zeroes and passed the final exam.

Nevertheless, the Board took the position that unlike a 67 or 68, his final grade of 57 had been far too low to give Steven the benefit of the doubt and allow him to pass with a final grade of 70. In fact, it claimed that even if the missing folder turned up and revealed that he'd received 100s on the tests and homework assignments for which he'd received zeroes, he still would have received a failing final grade. The Board also asserted that Steven and his mother had accessed "Power School," the school-run website that listed homework, quiz, quarterly and final grades, on numerous occasions, including two in May and seven in June, and therefore had been well aware that he was in danger of failing the course.

[2] Steven received a passing grade of 70 (D-) in twelfth grade English, which he had been allowed to take even though he had not passed eleventh grade English.

Following oral argument on June 15, 2009, I granted Steven's petition for emergent relief and directed the Board to allow Steven to participate in graduation exercises including the processional, even if he was only to receive an empty envelope.[3] Still, there remained the question of whether Steven had passed eleventh grade English, earned a sufficient number of credits, and successfully completed the requisite four years of high school English to graduate and receive his high school diploma. Therefore, a plenary hearing was scheduled for August 12, 2009, in order to determine, among other things, the circumstances surrounding the loss of the missing folder; the dates on which the eleventh grade English quizzes and tests had been given and the attendance records for those dates; and the dates Steven and his mother had accessed "Power School," along with the information that had been displayed on those dates. Given the amount of time it was likely going to take for the case to be heard and decided, as well as the difficulties he and his mother would have proceeding as pro se litigants, I encouraged Steven to take eleventh grade English in summer school.

On August 7, 2009, the Board requested an adjournment of the hearing because Steven had reportedly enrolled at Atlantic County Community College and the English course for which he'd registered was going to satisfy both his high school and first year of college English requirements. At that time, the Board also indicated that it would consider reimbursing him for the approximately $350 cost of the course if he passed. Consequently, a status conference was scheduled for January 15, 2010, a date by which Steven would have received his final grade in that course.

Following an additional adjournment, the telephone conference was held on January 20, 2010, at which time Steven's newly-retained attorney requested additional time to conduct discovery and explore an amicable resolution of the matter. Status conferences were subsequently conducted on March 3, 2010; April 1, 2010; and then July 13, 2010, when counsel advised me that the case had become moot because Steven had passed a summer school English course and graduated, albeit not from Lower Cape May Regional. Counsel also advised me that I would be provided with a settlement agreement or letter of withdrawal by August 13, 2010.

When August 13, 2010, came and went without an agreement or withdrawal, a status conference was scheduled for September 15, 2010. At that time, counsel for the Board stated that Steven apparently had not attended Atlantic County Community College or the school district's summer program. Instead, he had applied for admission to the Cape May County Technical School District's high school program and the Board had been waiting for a transcript of his grades before deciding whether to give him a diploma. A final status conference was held on November 4, 2010, at which time counsel for the Board advised that he would be filing a motion for summary decision. The motion was filed on December 13, 2010, and Diane Hogan, who was no longer represented by counsel,[4] filed her response on January 24, 2011.

The material facts are undisputed and may be summarized as follows. Steven Tomlin was enrolled as a senior at the Lower Cape May Regional High School throughout the 2008-2009 school year. During that year he took not only twelfth grade English, but also eleventh grade English for which he had not received credit the previous year.[5] As the end of the school year approached, he was notified that he would not be passing eleventh grade English because his grade of 57 was well below the 70 he required to receive credit for the course. He was also notified that his failure to receive credit for the course meant that he would not be graduating that June.

As mentioned earlier, Steven and his mother filed a petition for emergent relief, and following oral argument on June 15, 2009, an order was issued directing the Board to allow him to participate in the high school's graduation exercises. The matter was also set down for a hearing on the issue of whether Steven had actually earned a passing grade in eleventh grade English. At the conclusion of the proceedings, the Board advised Steven that he would be entitled to a diploma if he took and passed eleventh grade English in summer school. Since the hearing was some two months away, and it appeared as though he and his mother were going to proceed without [4] Again, because there is no evidence of Steven's present age, Diane Hogan has been permitted to assist Steven with the prosecution of this case. Had such evidence been presented and established that Steven was eighteen years old or older, the caption of the case would have been changed and Ms. Hogan would not have been permitted to assist or submit responding papers on behalf of her son.

[5] The record does not disclose whether Steven failed the course or could not complete it because of attendance issues.

counsel, making their task that much more difficult, I encouraged Steven to take eleventh grade English in summer school.

By letter dated August 5, 2009, Joseph A. Catelluci, principal of the Lower Cape May Regional High School, notified Diane Hogan that the English 1203, British Literature I, course that Steven was reportedly going to be taking at Atlantic County Community College that fall would fulfill his eleventh grade English requirement for a high school diploma. He also advised her that he would issue Steven's diploma upon his receipt of a transcript demonstrating that Steven had successfully completed the course. Castelucci Letter, Exhibit P-A.[6]

Steven enrolled at the college but was unable to take English 1203 because it reportedly "interfered with his work and he would have lost his job. [He] also lost his grant money from the college and was removed from this course due to not having his High School Diploma." See Diane Hogan's responsive papers. However, in September 2009, Steven did submit an application to attend the Cape May County Technical School District's Adult High School. Elston Memo, Exhibit P-D. During a meeting with Laura Elston, the District's supervisor of adult and post-secondary education, Steven signed a copy of his "Working Transcript," which indicated the Lower Cape May Regional High School courses for which he would be receiving credit. He also received a class schedule for the two courses he had to take in order to receive a diploma through the Adult High School. Ibid.

At that time, Steven questioned why he needed to take two courses—not just English 11. Ms. Elston advised him that it was the school district's policy, and taking both courses was the only way for him to receive an Adult High School diploma. She also told him that he was still free to complete his required courses—English 11 and physical education—at the Lower Cape May Regional High School. However, after discussing his options, Steven told her "he would rather just stay in Adult High School to complete the coursework." Ibid.

[6] All exhibits were pre-marked, so I am using the parties' letter designations.

On April 11, 2010, Steven signed a graduation information record indicating how he wanted his name to appear on the Adult High School diploma and in the graduation program. He also completed the cap and gown reservation form. Ibid.

The verification dates for having taken and passed English 11 and Family Living were June 3 and June 14, 2010, respectively. Thereafter, Steven was contacted several times concerning the high school's graduation meeting and processional rehearsal date. However, he did not show up for rehearsal and later advised Ms. Elston that he "probably would not be able to make graduation as he would be away." Ibid. Steven did not attend graduation.

Sometime in September 2010, Diane Hogan went to the Adult High School and picked up Steven's diploma and copies of the Verification of Course Completion forms. In early November 2010, Jack Pfizenmayer, Superintendent of the Lower Cape May Regional School District, called Robert W. Matthies, his counterpart at the Cape May County Technical School District, to find out if Steven had, in fact, taken and passed his courses at the Adult High School. Pfizenmayer Affidavit, Exhibit R-1. In a letter dated November 2, 2010, Exhibit R-1A Mr. Matthies enclosed a copy of Laura Elston's memo of same date, Exhibit R-1B. Mr. Matthies subsequently sent Mr. Pfizenmayer a copy of Steven's diploma from the Cape May County Technical High School. Exhibit R-1C.

The facts material to the motion for summary decision, culled not only from the Pfizenmayer Affidavit, but also Diane Hogan's response and supporting exhibits, are not in dispute. Therefore, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:12.5(b) and Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), I find that there are no genuine issues of material fact and that this matter is appropriate for summary decision.

Ordinarily, an issue is moot when a decision that is being sought in a particular matter will, when rendered, have no practical effect on the existing controversy. In re Conroy, 109 N.J. Super. 453, 458 (App. Div. 1983). In such cases, the issues that have become moot or academic prior to judicial scrutiny" are generally considered to be . . . improper subject[s] for judicial review." Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch.

Div. 1976). Therefore, when there has been a change in circumstances that raises doubt concerning the immediacy of the controversy, courts will ordinarily dismiss cases as moot, regardless of the stage to which the litigation has progressed. Ibid.

In the present matter, Steven Tomlin has completed and passed all of his courses at the Cape May County Technical School District's Adult High School and otherwise satisfied the requirements for graduation and receipt of a diploma set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.2(a) and (b)1. Moreover, as set forth in the Elston memorandum appended to the Pfizenmeyer Affidavit and Diane Hogan's responsive papers, Ms. Elston advised Steven that he had the option of returning to Lower Cape May County High School, taking eleventh grade English and a physical education course, and receiving his diploma from that school. However, Steven "said he would rather just stay in Adult High School to complete the coursework." Elston Memo, supra. In fact, he submitted and signed a graduation information record on April 15, 2010, indicating how he wanted his name to appear on his diploma and in the graduation program, and completed a cap and gown reservation form.

Notably, Steven has not submitted an affidavit or any responding papers in his own behalf. Still, based on the record before me, I find that he consciously chose to complete his required high school courses and receive his diploma from Cape May County Technical High School. Ms. Hogan's assertion that her "son wants his diploma to read the high school that he attended with his friends, the school that he participated at in sports," is not supported in, and is clearly contradicted by, the evidence. In any event, the seminal fact in this matter is that Steven has graduated and received a high school diploma.

Based upon the foregoing, I conclude that any decision I might render will have no practical effect on the existing controversy and the matter should be dismissed as moot. It is so ordered.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release is made by and between the Elizabeth Board of Education (the "Board") whose administrative offices are located at 500 North Broad Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey 07208 and the law offices of CARUSO POPE SMITH EDELL PICINI, whose offices are located at 60 Route 46 East, Fairfield, NJ 07004 for the New Jersey Education Association ("NJEA"), which incurred legal expenses on behalf of its member Wendy Cominsky ("Cominsky"). In consideration of mutual promises and undertakings contained in this Settlement Agreement and General Release and for good and valuable consideration the receipt of which is hereby acknowledged, and the undersigned parties state:

WHEREAS, on January 12, 2007, Cominsky was employed as a Librarian by the Board; and

WHEREAS, on that date, a Citizen Complaint was issued for certain acts alleged to have occurred while Cominsky was in the employ of the Board. A copy of the Elizabeth Complaint No. 2007-001349-2004 is attached hereto, (Exhibit 1); and

WHEREAS, on October 29, 2008, the Elizabeth Municipal Court dismissed the above-referenced Complaint against Cominsky. A copy of the disposition reflecting said dismissal is attached hereto, (Exhibit 2).

WHEREAS, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1, Cominsky's defense counsel sought reimbursement from the Board's for attorney's fees and costs associated with her legal defense relative to the Elizabeth Complaint No. 2007-001349-2004; and

WHEREAS, the parties have determined that it is in their respective best interests to enter into this Settlement Agreement and General Release in order to avoid the need for further litigation; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of mutual promises and covenants, the parties agree as follows:

1. The Board will pay to the NJEA the sum of Nine Thousand Nine Hundred Thirty Dollars and Ninety Eight Cents ($9,930.98). The aforementioned amount represents full and complete indemnification of the attorney's fees and costs incurred by Cominsky in relation to Elizabeth Complaint No. 2007-001349-2004. A check for this amount shall be drawn to CARUSO POPE SMITH EDELL PICINI, and sent to their office at 60 Route 46 East, Fairfield, NJ 07004.

2. For and in consideration of the Indemnification set forth in paragraph One (1) above, Cominsky and her heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns, hereby forever release and discharge the Elizabeth Board of Education, its members, successors and assigns and all of its or their past or future members, offices, agents, employees, administrators, attorneys, fiduciaries, successors and assigns (whether acting as agents for the Board, its affiliates or its related entities or in their individual capacities) from any and all claims, demands, causes of action, fees and liabilities of any kind whatsoever (upon any legal or equitable theory, whether contractual, common-law, statutory, federal, state, local, or otherwise), whether known or unknown, which Cominsky ever had, now has or hereafter may have against the Board by reason of any actual or alleged act, omission, transaction, practice, conduct, occurrence or other matter relating to any and all allegations contained in Elizabeth Complaint No. 2007-001349-2004.

3. For and in consideration of the Indemnification set forth in Paragraph One (1) above, Cominsky shall withdraw her petition of Appeal, Agency Dkt. No. 549-9/10, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 11162-2010N.

4. The parties agree that if any of the provisions, terms, clauses, waivers and releases of claims and rights contained in this Settlement Agreement and General Release are declared illegal, unenforceable, or ineffective in a legal forum of competent jurisdiction, such provisions, terms, clauses, waivers and releases of claims or rights shall be modified, if possible, in order to achieve, to the extent possible, the intentions of the parties. If any such provisions, terms, clauses, waivers and releases of claims and rights contained in this Settlement and General Release cannot be modified, the remaining provisions, terms, clauses, waivers and releases of claims and rights contained in this Agreement shall remain in full force and effect.

5. This Settlement Agreement and General Release set forth the entire terms between the parties and fully supersede any and all prior Agreements or understanding between them pertaining to the subject matter thereof.

6. Nothing contained in this Settlement Agreement and General Release constitutes an admission of any wrongdoing by either party and neither party shall be considered a prevailing party in this matter.

7. All terms of this Settlement Agreement and General Release are deemed material. The parties agree that this Settlement Agreement and General Release may not be altered, amended, modified, superseded, cancelled or terminated except by an express written Agreement duly executed by all the parties or their attorneys on their behalf, which makes specific reference to this Settlement Agreement and General Release.

8. Cominsky agrees that she has been fully and fairly represented by legal counsel throughout this proceeding.

9. This Settlement Agreement and Release contains the entire Agreement between the parties, and no other representations, whether verbal or in writing shall be binding upon them.

10. This Settlement Agreement and General Release is an Agreement that shall be construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

11. All parties hereby agree that the terms of this Settlement Agreement and General Release are binding upon all parties, their heirs and their assigns.

PAM WILSON,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF MOUNT OLIVE, MORRIS COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a tenured special education teacher, challenged a performance evaluation which gave her a rating of "marginal" under the category of "Professional Characteristics." Petitioner sought a finding that the respondent Board's action was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and modification of the evaluation to reflect a rating of "effective" rather than "marginal." The Board contended that it is within its authority and responsibility to evaluate teachers and indicate areas of teaching performance that may need improvement, and petitioner's excessive absences during the 2008-2009 school year needed to be addressed in order to appropriately serve the needs of special education students.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a teacher's performance evaluation by a principal or supervisor must be distinguished from a disciplinary proceeding based on conduct or attendance problems; petitioner's contention that an attendance policy that allows for discipline of a teacher – without regard to the basis for the absences – is not permissible is ill-founded, as it was not contended in this case that discipline is warranted; intermittent absences which cumulatively exceed sick-leave and personal-day allotments are not of benefit to special education students, and cannot be disregarded in teacher evaluations; and receiving a rating of "marginal" as opposed to "effective" when a teacher exceeds the number of sick and personal days allotted is a subjective judgment that cannot be characterized as arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that attendance is a factor to be considered in a performance evaluation and dismissed the petition.

Upon careful and independent review, the Deputy Commissioner – to whom this matter has been delegated to the pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 – adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, and the Board's reply thereto.[1]

The petitioner's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of her post-hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously found that the Board's decision to give the petitioner a marginal rating was not arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The petitioner contends that the Board's application of its attendance policy was arbitrary and capricious because the Board failed to take into account the reasons for the petitioner's absences and the impact of the absences on the continuity of education.

In reply, the Board urges the adoption of the Initial Decision asserting that the petitioner's exceptions do not raise any new arguments but instead merely restated the arguments made by the petitioner below that were fully considered by the ALJ. The Board again stresses in reply that the issuance of a marginal rating on the petitioner's evaluation was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board's decision to give the petitioner a marginal rating in the professional characteristics section of her evaluation was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

BEFORE JEFFREY A. GERSON, ALJ:

Pam Wilson, a tenured special education teacher, challenges a performance evaluation which under the category of "Professional Characteristics" gave her a rating of "marginal."

The Mount Olive Board of Education (Board) contends that it is within their authority and responsibility to evaluate teaching staff members and depict areas of teachers' performance that may need improvement.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about July 23, 2009, Pam Wilson filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education contending that the district administration wrongly assigned her a rating of "marginal" in the "Professional Characteristics" section of her 2008/2009 Annual Evaluation Report. Relief sought by Wilson was a finding that the Board's action was "arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable" and asked that the evaluation be modified to reflect a rating of "effective" rather than "marginal." The Board filed an answer on September 22, 2009, and the matter was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law. An initial scheduling date of May 5, 2010, was adjourned by the assigned Administrative Law Judge and the matter was subsequently reassigned to me and was heard on September 24, 2010.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The FACTS in this matter are not in dispute.

During the 2008/2009 school year, Wilson was absent for 18.5 days. She used up her annual allotment of 10 sick days in addition to 4 personal days and was not paid for the additional 4.5 days of her absences.

The Board does not contest the fact that the reason for Wilson's absences were either for personal days utilized by her to care for her son after her mother, who was the child's care provider, became ill, or days when either she or her son were ill. Thus, it was not the legitimacy of these dates of absences that were questioned, but rather the number of absences alone.

Mount Olive Middle School Principal Tracy Severns testified that it was her responsibility to prepare Wilson's evaluations, which are based, for the most part, on observations by supervisors and/or principals and conferences resulting from those observations. Principal Severns testified that the question of Wilson's attendance problems first arose in January 2009 at which time she discussed with Wilson her need to improve her attendance. In May 2009, an evaluation report prepared by Principal Severns gave Wilson a rating of "effective" in three of four categories which included planning, instruction, and classroom management. In the fourth category however, that being professional characteristics, Principal Severns noted the following:

> Ms. Wilson's attendance is a significant area of concern. During the 2008/2009 school year, she was absent a total of 18 days. In order to fulfill her contractual obligations and to provide students with the level of instructional continuity that they require, Ms. Wilson must immediately address her absences."

Principal Severns did not recommend any form of discipline for Wilson. Tenure charges were not filed, no suggestion of withholding an increment was made, nor was there a letter of reprimand issued. No disciplinary action whatsoever was taken against Wilson with regard to her attendance record.

Although Principal Severns was aware of the medical and health issues confronting Wilson and her family, she still indicated that regardless of the reasons for the absences, Wilson's attendance still needed to be addressed—for she considered it an important component of the needs of a special education child.

DISCUSSION

A Performance Evaluation by a principal/supervisor of a teacher must be differentiated from a disciplinary proceeding based on either conduct or attendance problems.

The attendance policy of the Board is introduced by way of preamble in two paragraphs which state as follows:

> The regular and prompt attendance of teaching staff members is an essential element in the efficient operation of the school district and the effective conduct of the education program. Because absenteeism exacts a high cost in the depletion of district resources and in the disruption of the educational program, the Board of Education is vitally interested in the attendance of each employee and considers conscientious attendance an important criterion of satisfactory job performance.
> The privilege of district employment imposes on each teaching staff member the responsibility to be on the job on time every scheduled working day. This responsibility requires that the employee maintain good health standards, take intelligent precautions against accidents, both on and off the job, and manage his or her personal affairs to avoid conflict with district responsibilities.

Paragraph 3 of the policy addresses failures by teachers such as misuse of sick leave or excessive number of absences without good cause. It is not contended in this matter that discipline was warranted, for if that had been the case the issue of good cause would have become relevant. But it was not discipline that was the target of Principal Severns's performance evaluation of Wilson. Wilson contends that an attendance policy which allows for discipline of a teacher without regard to the basis of absences is prohibited. See Kuehn v. Bd. of Educ. of the Town of Teaneck, 1981 S.L.D. 1290, rev'd, Comm'r 1981 S.L.D. 1299, rev'd, State Bd. of Educ. (Feb. 1, 1983). Also cited by Wilson is Montville Township Education Association v. Board of Education, 1984 S.L.D. 550, reversed, State Board of Education, 1984 S.L.D. 559, reversed, Sup. Ct. App. Div., 1985 S.L.D. 1972, certification denied, 103 N.J. 500 (1986), decision on remand, State Board of Education, 1986 S.L.D. 3113. In Montville, the policy ignored " . . . legitimate extended illness or home confinement at home . . . ." In this matter, it is not extended illness or confinement that is in question, but rather intermittent absences of short-term nature. In fact, in the Commissioner of Education's decision, it was said:

> This Order, however, is not to be construed in any manner to prohibit the Board from ever determining an unsatisfactory rating when medically excused absences are provided. Notwithstanding Kuehn, supra, high absenteeism has been

Intermittent absences which cumulatively exceed sick-leave and personal-day allotments cannot be said to be a benefit to regular education students and certainly not for special education students. Short-term emergency absences, even based on medical excuses, provide additional burden to the school to seek substitutes and/or provide coverage for classes that the absent teacher cannot attend. But, these factors are more pertinent in a disciplinary matter than they are in an evaluatory manner. Attendance cannot simply be disregarded in a teacher evaluation. It is a function of professional characteristics: to receive a rating of "marginal" as opposed to "effective" when a teacher exceeds the sick days and personal days that are allotted is a subjective judgment that cannot be characterized as arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

CONCLUSION

Principal Severns's professional evaluation of Pam Wilson resulting in a "marginal" rating in the professional characteristics was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. I CONCLUDE that attendance is a factor to be considered in a performance evaluation.

ORDER

I therefore ORDER Pam Wilson's petition to reform her rating of "marginal" to "effective" is DENIED and the petition is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Petitioner Heather Meehan alleged that, as a tenured teacher with seniority rights, she was entitled to a position with the respondent Glassboro School District (Glassboro) after a reduction in force. The Board denied that petitioner had obtained tenure and was entitled to a position. During a prehearing conference, a hearing was scheduled for December 9 and 13, 2010. However, because other Glassboro employees whose positions in Glassboro may be affected by the case had the right to intervene and had not yet been notified, those dates were adjourned. The hearing was rescheduled for April 1 and 11, 2011. Prior to the hearing, counsel advised me that they had settled the case. I received the settlement agreement and Board resolution on March 30, 2011.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is being entered into between Petitioner, Heather M.. Adams f/k/a Heather M.. Meehan ("Ms. Adams"), and Respondent, Glassboro Board of Education ("Board"), with regard to Heather M.. Meehan v. Glassboro Board of Education, OAL Dkt. No. EDU-4776-2010S, Agency Ref. No. 108-5/10, having agreed to amicably resolve their differences, it is hereby stipulated and agreed that this matter shall be settled upon the following terms:

1. The Board voluntarily recognizes Ms. Adams as a tenured elementary school teacher, with 3.01 years seniority as to instruction within her instructional certificate and her elementary school teacher and reading specialist endorsements.

2. The Board will place Ms. Adams on the recall list for next available permanent position within the scope of her certificate and endorsements. Ms. Adams recognizes that in the event of future reductions in force, as of the date of this Agreement her seniority is set at 3.01 years and there may be more senior teaching staff with greater seniority.

3. The consideration described in Paragraphs 1 and 2 above shall constitute the entire monetary settlement of the matters encompassed by this Agreement.

4. In exchange for the promises and undertakings of the Respondent Glassboro Board of Education, as set forth in Paragraphs 1 and 2 above, Petitioner:

A. Waives the right to bump any of the four putative intervenors, Lisa Rencher, Sheree Butari, Diane Villone and Jennifer Howells.

B. Waives the right to back pay.

C. Agrees to withdraw her petition of appeal with prejudice and without costs as to either party and authorizes attorney to file a Stipulation of Dismissal with

2011 APR -4 A 11:00

Prejudice with respect to her claims and causes of action with the Commissioner of Education in this action.

D. Agrees to execute a General Release and Waiver ("General Release") to the Respondent in the form annexed. Petitioner expressly acknowledges that this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver are intended to extinguish and waive all claims which she may have against any person or entity identified as a releasee in the General Release and Waiver resulting from anything which has happened up to the date of the execution of the General Release and Waiver and which were or could have been asserted, including those claims unknown to her and claims for attorneys fees and costs. Petitioner hereby acknowledges that the execution of this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver which accompanies it shall absolutely bar any such claim, action or suit against any releasee identified in the General Release and Waiver. This release specifically excludes any workers compensation or pension claims. Ms. Adams is unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

5. All documents and information obtained during discovery in this case shall be deemed "confidential." The parties agree that no such documents or information shall be provided or disclosed to or shared with any third party for any purpose whatsoever. This provision shall not apply to third parties and to documents previously filed with the Office of Administrative Law or the Commissioner of Education, but this shall not permit Petitioner to provide copies of such documents to third parties. Petitioner further agrees that she will not use or permit to be used in any other action or matter any information about the Respondents in this action which she obtained as a result of, during the course of or in connection with her involvement in this action. Petitioner shall not voluntarily assist third parties in pursuit of litigation against Respondent.

6. The parties agree that any breach of any obligation under this Agreement will constitute a breach of this Agreement. In the event of a breach of this Agreement by one of the parties hereto, the breaching party shall pay a penalty to the non-breaching party to be established in the discretion of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Gloucester County, for said breach of any term of this Agreement. In the event that either party is required to commence an action in law or equity to enforce its rights under this Agreement and prevails, the party against whom the action is brought shall be required to pay the prevailing party reasonable attorneys fees and costs in addition to any damages which may be recoverable.

7. It is understood that neither the execution of this Agreement nor any other action taken by the Respondent in connection with this settlement constitutes an admission by the Respondent or, any other person or entity identified in the General Release and Waiver as a releasee, of any violation of any law, duty or obligation, or that any decision or action with respect to the employment of Petitioner was unwarranted, unjustified, retaliatory, discriminatory or otherwise unlawful. The Respondent specifically disclaims any liability to Petitioner or any other person. The parties have entered into this Agreement solely to compromise disputed claims. No findings of any kind have been made or issued by the Commissioner on the merits of the claims in this action and neither party purports to be the prevailing party in this action.

8. The parties to the within petition of appeal agree not to make disparaging statements concerning each other or to defame each other in any manner to any person or entity. The parties also agree not to authorize any person or entity to make any disparaging statements about each other to any person or entity.

9. All parties to this Agreement and their counsel participated in the negotiation and drafting of this Agreement as equals. No particular party shall be deemed the drafter or provider of this Agreement, and the parties agree that the Agreement shall not be construed against any particular party.

10. This Agreement and the General Release and Waiver referred to herein set forth the entire agreement between Petitioner and the Respondents. This Agreement supersedes all prior agreements or understandings, if any, between the parties regarding the subject matter of this Agreement.

11. Petitioner acknowledges that she has consulted with her attorney regarding this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver that accompanies it prior to executing it; that the terms of this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver have been explained to her by her attorney; and that she has represented to her attorney that she has read this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver and fully understands them and agrees to be bound by them. Petitioner has also acknowledged that she has been given a reasonable period of time within which to consider this settlement and the terms of this Agreement and General Release and Waiver prior to executing them.

12. Any notice or other communication under this Agreement shall be in writing and shall be considered given when mailed by regular mail or delivered personally, to the parties at the following addresses:

To Petitioner:

Keith Waldman, Esq.
Sclikoff & Cohen
700 East Gate Drive
Mount Laurel, New Jersey 08054

To Respondents:

Parker McCay PA
P.O. Box 974, 3 Greentree Center
7001 Lincoln Drive West
Marlton, New Jersey 08053

or at such other address as a party may specify by notice to the other.

13. Nothing contained herein or in the Release shall be intended to bar either party from initiating such action as may be necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

14. Conditioned upon the entry of an initial decision by the Administrative Law Judge and the Commissioner's approval of this Agreement without modification, the parties will submit a stipulation of dismissal with prejudice and without costs.

15. The Board's representative certifies that he or she has been duly authorized to sign this agreement by a motion adopted by the Board at a duly-noticed open public meeting. A true copy of the Board's minutes (or of a resolution) adopting the settlement memorialized by this Agreement are (is) attached as Exhibit A.

16. The parties agree that this Agreement may be signed in counterparts and facsimile signatures may be acceptable in lieu of originals.

The foregoing terms and provisions are hereby agreed to and accepted:

Petitioner's position as a tenured teacher of health and physical education was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF) in May 2010, and petitioner was consequently not employed for the 2010-2011 school year. Petitioner holds an instructional certificate with an endorsement for Teacher of Health and Physical Education, was continuously employed by the respondent Board from September 2004 through the end of the 2009-2010 school year, and his entire tenured service was at the elementary school level. Petitioner contended that less senior teachers were retained by the Board in violation of his tenure and seniority rights. The Board argued that the staff members retained by the district were in separate seniority categories and therefore petitioner suffered no violation of his tenure and seniority rights.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a tenured teacher who was subjected to a RIF has seniority rights over a non-tenured applicant only for positions that fall under the same certificate to which the teacher has earned tenure; seniority accrues in the subject areas in which a person actually works, and in the category – elementary or secondary – in which the person is employed; at issue in this case is whether petitioner could claim tenure and seniority rights over a retained teacher who taught in a departmentalized grade 6 school; there is no provision in the seniority regulations for departmentalized grade 6, and therefore previous case law must provide guidance in this area; based on previous cases, a departmentalized grade 6 school falls into the secondary category; petitioner in the instant matter had six years of seniority in elementary health and physical education; petitioner was the least senior health and physical education teacher in the elementary category, and was not entitled to a position outside the scope of his tenure and seniority rights. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that petitioner's tenure rights were not violated, and denied petitioner's appeal.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner.

The petitioner's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of his post-hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously found that the Board did not violate the petitioner's seniority rights. In his exceptions, the petitioner maintains that his seniority in the elementary category entitled him to a physical education teaching position at the Edison school once his position at the elementary school was eliminated as a result of a reduction in force. The petitioner argues that the Edison school, which is a stand-alone Grade 6 school with departmentalized instruction, should be within the elementary category for seniority purposes because the regulations make no reference to Grade 6 in the secondary category. The petitioner also contends that the cases that expand the definition of secondary to cover a departmentalized Grade 6 involved combined Grade 6 and 7 settings or 6, 7 and 8 organizations.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the teaching positions at the Edison school were within the secondary category for seniority purposes. The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ's determination that the petitioner was not entitled to the physical education teaching position at the Edison school because it was outside the scope of his tenure and seniority rights. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WEST ORANGE, ESSEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Stephen J. Christiano, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: February 28, 2011 Decided: April 15, 2011

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Franco Cozzolino was formerly employed by respondent West Orange Board of Education as a teacher of health and physical education from September 2004 through June 2010. Petitioner holds an instructional certificate with an endorsement for Teacher of Health and Physical Education and was tenured in this position. On or about May 4, 2010, respondent abolished a teaching position in its health and physical education program. As a result of this reduction in force (RIF), petitioner was terminated and not reappointed for the 2010-2011 school year.

The petitioner's entire service was at the elementary-school level and thus has six years' seniority as a health and physical education teacher at the time of the RIF. There are eight other health and physical education teachers having less or equal seniority to that of the petitioner: two of those teachers worked at West Orange High School; three worked at Roosevelt Middle School (grades 7 and 8); two worked at Liberty Middle School (grades 7 and 8); and one worked at Edison Middle School (grade 6). There was one elementary teacher on the list, Ryan Patscher, who was hired after the petitioner, but has more seniority than petitioner by reason of his years of military service.

FACTS

The parties stipulated to the following facts:

1. Petitioner, Franco Cozzolino (petitioner), was initially employed on a full-time basis by the respondent, West Orange Board of Education (respondent) effective September 1, 2004.

2. Petitioner was reemployed by the respondent on a full-time basis for the 2005-2006 school year.

3. Petitioner was reemployed by the respondent on a full-time basis for the 2006-2007 school year.

4. Petitioner was reemployed by the respondent on a full-time basis for the 2007-2008 school year.

5. Petitioner was reemployed by the respondent on a full-time basis for the 2008-2009 school year.

6. Petitioner was reemployed by the respondent on a full-time basis for the 2009-2010 school year.

7. Throughout his employment with the respondent, petitioner was assigned to teach health and physical education to students at the district's Redwood School. This school is comprised of students in grades kindergarten to five.

8. Petitioner holds a standard instructional certificate with an endorsement as Teacher of Health and Physical Education. It was issued in June 2002.

9. By letter dated May 4, 2010, petitioner was notified that his position of employment had been eliminated and he would not be reappointed for the 2010-2011 school year.

10. Respondent operates the following schools listed on the above-mentioned seniority list:

West Orange High School (grades 9-12)
Liberty (grades 7 and 8) – Departmentalized
Roosevelt (grades 7 and 8) – Departmentalized
Edison (grade 6) – Departmentalized
Gregory (grades K-5)
Pleasantdale (grades K-5)
Washington (grades K-5)

LEGAL DISCUSSION

I. Tenure and Certification Requirements

The New Jersey State Board of Education (State Board) has established a certificate system requiring that "any person employed as a teaching staff member by a district board of education shall hold a valid and appropriate certificate." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-

5.1(a); N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2. The Board has provided for three distinct types of certificates—Instructional, Educational Services, and Administrative. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1; N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.2. An educator may hold more than one of these certificate types. A "teaching staff member" is not limited to educators (i.e. teachers) but includes any > member of the professional staff of any district or regional board of education, or any board of education of a county vocational school, holding office, position or employment of such character that the qualifications, for such office, position or employment, require him to hold a valid and effective standard, provisional or emergency certificate, appropriate to his office, position or employment, issued by the State Board of Examiners and includes a school nurse and a school athletic trainer.

Therefore a teaching staff member is anyone employed by a board of education whose job description requires them to hold an instructional, service, or administrative certificate.

Educational personnel are tenured in New Jersey under the Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to -18. The tenure statute prevents school boards from abusing their superior bargaining power over teachers in contract negotiations and protects teachers from dismissal for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 71 (1982) (citations omitted); Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65, 71 (1962), cert. denied, 371 U.S. 956, 83 S. Ct. 508, 9 L. Ed. 2d 502 (1963). The Tenure Act should be applied liberally to further its purpose of shielding teaching staff who qualify for its protection. Id. at 74. An employee of a board of education is entitled to tenure if (1) she/he works in a position for which a teaching certificate is required (i.e., she/he is a teaching staff member)[1]; (2) she/he holds the appropriate certificate; and (3) she/he has served the requisite period of time. Ibid.; N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

[1] Certain positions that are not generally considered "teaching staff members" and do not require certificates, including secretaries, assistant secretaries, and business managers, can acquire tenure simply by being employed for more than three years. N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2.

One way in which a tenured teacher can be terminated is through a reduction in force (RIF). N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9. Under this section, boards of education have the authority to eliminate a position, even when held by a tenured staff member, "for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article." Ibid. Teachers can be protected from being "riffed" on the basis of seniority, where the employee with the least amount of service in the district would be the first subjected to the RIF. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-11; N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1. Seniority "provides a mechanism for ranking all tenured teaching staff members so that reductions in force and reemployment can be effected in an equitable fashion and in accord with sound educational policies." Litchman v. Bd. of Educ. Village of Ridgewood, 93 N.J. 362, n. 4 (1983). When a staff member is "riffed," they are placed on a preferred eligibility list which entitles them to future open positions within the district under which they have accrued seniority. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1; N.J.S.A.

[2] Endorsements under the administrative certificate such as supervisor and principal, as well as the school nurse endorsement under the educational-services certificate, do not allow for transferability of tenure between positions.

18A:28-12. However, seniority only accrues for the job title (typically the endorsement) served by the employee. Ibid. Specifically, the courts have held that "a teacher seeking reinstatement within the endorsements on his or her certificate is entitled to preference in a RIF as against a non-tenured applicant within a same certification." Ellicott, supra, 251 N.J. Super. at 349 (citing Capodilupo v. Bd. of Educ. West Orange, 218 N.J. Super. 510, 515 (App. Div. 1987) (emphasis in original)). Again, the priority rights of tenured teachers over non-tenure teachers to be reinstated apply only "in a position within the certificate of a dismissed tenure teacher." Ibid. (citing Bednar v. Westwood Bd. of Educ., 221 N.J. Super. 239, 242 (App. Div. 1987) (emphasis in original). Accordingly, the only priority or seniority rights that a tenured teacher that was subjected to a RIF has over a non-tenured applicant are for positions that fall under the same certificate to which the teacher has earned her tenure.

II. Was the Reduction In Force Properly Implemented with Respect to the Seniority Rights of the Staff Members Involved?

According to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-10, all dismissals based upon a reduction in force must be made on the basis of seniority. Seniority is the determining factor only for tenured personnel and has meaning only when a reduction in force is necessary. Brueck v. Fairview Bd. of Educ., 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 283, 285 (citing Howley v. Ewing Twp. of Educ., 1982 S.L.D. 1328, aff'd, 1983 S.L.D. 1954).

A tenured individual has the burden of demonstrating his or her seniority rights were violated. Parker v. Bd. of Educ., Matawan-Aberdeen Reg. School Dist., 1990 S.L.D. 1778; Brueck, supra, 97 N.J.A.R.2d at 285.

Seniority is calculated as listed in N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1. Seniority accrues in the subject areas in which a person actually works and is further delineated into elementary and secondary categories. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(1). Sternberg v. Bd. of Educ., Borough of Highland Park, 1986 S.L.D. 2774, 2779; Geiling-Hurley v. Bd. of Educ., Twp. of Edison, 1986 S.L.D. 964 (State Board of Education), aff'd, A-1959-86TS (App. Div.

October 5, 1987). Petitioner served his entire teaching career in respondent's district at an elementary school (Redwood School).

> Any person employed at the elementary level in a position requiring an educational services certificate or a special subject field endorsement shall acquire seniority only in the educational category and only for the period of actual service under such educational services certificate or special subject field endorsement.

The elementary seniority category consists of service in grades kindergarten through 6, and grades 7 and 8, if those grades are not departmentalized in the school district in question. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(1)(18) (definition of "elementary"). The secondary category consists of grades 9 through 12, plus grades 7 and 8 if those grades are departmentalized in the school district from which the analysis arises or in junior high schools or middle schools. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(1)(17) (definition of "secondary").

In Cozzolino's employment, he was assigned to a school with grades kindergarten to grade five. Thus, petitioner had six (6) years of seniority in the elementary category, limited to health and physical education. Azzato began his employment in the year after Cozzolino began. For the year 2010-2011, Azzato was assigned to teach health/physical education in the Edison School. The Edison School is a grade-6-only school and thus the classes are departmentalized.

Seniority regulations for the State of New Jersey make no reference to the categorization of the departmentalized grade 6 for seniority purposes. Departmentalized grades 7 and 8 are in the secondary category. Sternberg, supra, 1986 S.L.D. at 2779 Geiling-Hurley, supra, 1986 S.L.D. 964.

The question for purposes of this cases boils down to whether a departmentalized grade 6 Class is in the elementary or secondary category. Since a departmentalized grade 6 is not provided for in the seniority regulations, other decisions must be looked to for guidance in this area.

In Unterberger v. Metuchen Board of Education, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 59, it states:

> Because the elementary category precludes departmentalization and given that the secondary category includes two elementary grades that are departmentalized, i.e., grades 7 and 8 and based upon the fact that the Board admits that grade 6 classes at Edgar School are departmentalized, the Commissioner finds and determines that the instruction provided therein falls under the secondary category for seniority purposes.

Unterberger was followed by McGlynn v. Sea Girt Board of Education, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (Vol. 4A) 438, 445 (Comm'r July 2, 1992), where the Commissioner held that a social studies teacher "in a departmentalized organization, with assignments in grades six, seven and eight" accrued seniority in the secondary, rather than elementary category. In support of this outcome, the Commissioner emphasized that "petitioner never served in a self-contained classroom." McGlynn, supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d at 445. Similarly, the Commissioner held that a science teacher, who had "served exclusively in a departmentalized setting for grades six, seven and eight also acquired tenure in the secondary category." "Although the three grades are lumped together, the case suggests that a departmentalized sixth grade falls into the secondary category." Ressler v. Saddle Brook Twp. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 581.

From the stipulated facts, Azzato had accrued a longer period of seniority in the secondary setting in teaching health and physical education than that of Cozzolino, even though Cozzolino was teaching longer in the district. See Small v. Schadt, 1987 S.L.D. 2706 (State Bd. Aug. 5, 1987) (where a physical education teacher has greater seniority in the secondary category than another physical education teacher with more years of service in the elementary category).

CONCLUSION

Since Edison was and is a departmentalized secondary school, Azzato's seniority was credited to the secondary category and Cozzolino was the least-senior physical education/health teacher in the elementary category. As such, Cozzolino was properly reduced in force and Azzato was properly retained due to the fact that his seniority accrued in a separate category from that of Cozzolino. Petitioner is not entitled to the position as it is outside the scope of his tenure and seniority rights. Accordingly, a finding in favor of the respondent is entered.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's tenure rights have not been violated. Therefore, petitioner's request for reinstatement is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF MARGATE, ATLANTIC COUNTY,

PETITIONER,

V.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY,

RESPONDENT.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SYNOPSIS

The Board of Education of the City of Margate filed an appeal with the Commissioner which sought an order determining that it did not have any obligation to pay the Atlantic City Board of Education $175,000, representing a tuition payment reached during a settlement for a unilateral placement related to a special education student from Margate. Atlantic City and Margate participate in a sending/receiving agreement for the purpose of educating Margate's high school students in grades 9 through 12; further, Margate contracts with Atlantic City to provide educational services for its high school special education students, and the contract states that any under-billed special education tuition costs will be charged to the sending district. On December 15, 2009, Atlantic City reached a settlement with F.M., the parent of K.C., wherein Atlantic City agreed to pay $175,000 towards K.C.'s tuition for various out-of-district special education placements. Margate was not a party to the former litigation or settlement but, on December 18, 2009, received request from Atlantic City to remit the $175,000 tuition payment as soon as possible. Margate denied responsibility for the tuition. Thereafter, the parties sought assistance from the Executive County Superintendent (ECS) to resolve this controversy, but were advised on February 3, 2010 that the ECS did not have jurisdiction and that the matter needed to be decided by the Commissioner. Margate filed its appeal with the Commissioner on October 7, 2010. Atlantic City filed a motion to dismiss the petition pursuant to the 90-day limitation period set forth at N.J.A.C. 64:3-1.1(a)(i).

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: Margate should have been aware in December 2009 that one of its residents was in need of, and approved for, $175,000 of extraordinary special education services; Margate's argument that the date from which the 90 days must be calculated is July 19, 2010 – the date when Atlantic City actually billed Margate for extraordinary special education services – is unpersuasive; and Margate is the legal, natural and logical district to bear the cost associated with the needs of its residents, and was obligated by contract to remit extraordinary special education costs to Atlantic City. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the petition as untimely.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter; the petition was dismissed as untimely.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 590-10/10

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF MARGATE, ATLANTIC COUNTY, PETITIONER, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF ATLANTIC CITY, ATLANTIC COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Margate Board of Education (Margate) and the Atlantic City Board of Education's (Atlantic City) reply thereto.

Margate takes exception to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination that the 90-day statute of limitation period began to run in December 2009 when Margate received notice of the Settlement Agreement that Atlantic City entered into involving special education services for one of Margate's residents. In its exceptions, Margate contends that the ALJ erred by applying a standard for adequate notice used in school employment cases, without factually distinguishing the circumstances in this matter. Margate claims that the cases relied upon by the ALJ did not involve an "extraordinary service" for a special education student and the direct billing for that service. Based on the circumstances in this case, Margate argues that its petition was timely filed on October 9, 2010 because the 90-day time period did not begin to run until Margate received Atlantic City's July 19, 2010 bill for payment. Finally, Margate maintains that the ALJ made a number of findings regarding the nature of the parties send/receive relationship that are not relevant to the narrow limitations issue.

In reply, Atlantic City urges the adoption of the Initial Decision dismissing Margate's petition as untimely. Atlantic City contends that the ALJ properly determined that the cause of action accrued in December 2009 when Margate had sufficient notice of the Settlement Agreement, and that Atlantic City determined Margate was responsible for making the settlement payments because the settlement involved special education services for one of Margate's residents. Atlantic City argues that – since Margate failed to make the payments required under the Settlement Agreement – it was forced to make the payments, and then seek reimbursement from Margate – the circumstances of which did not change Atlantic City's position that Margate was responsible for the payments. Finally, Atlantic City maintains that the ALJ properly applied the case law regarding the standard for receipt of adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), emphasizing that the same 90-day limitations period is applied to all cases involving actions of school boards of education.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination that Margate's October 9, 2010 petition was not timely filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), a petition must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." It is undisputed that in December 2009, Margate received notice of the executed Settlement Agreement, which is the subject of the case, along with notice of Atlantic City's position that Margate was responsible for making the settlement payments pursuant to the parties send/receive relationship. The Commissioner is not persuaded by the exceptions filed by Margate in which it argues that despite having notice of the Settlement Agreement in December 2009, it was the actual July 19, 2010 bill that it received from Atlantic City for reimbursement of the settlement payments that triggered the 90-day limitations period.

In addition to receiving notice of the Settlement Agreement in December 2009, the dispute for responsibility of the payments due under the Settlement Agreement was brought to the attention of the Executive County Superintendent in February 2010, at which time Margate denied any responsibility for the settlement payments. The Executive County Superintendent informed the parties in February 2010 that he did not have jurisdiction to resolve the dispute and that if they could not reach an agreement on the issue, a petition should be filed with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes. Even assuming, arguendo, that the 90-day limitation period did not begin to run until after the Executive County Superintendent informed the parties that the Commissioner had jurisdiction over the matter, Margate's October 2010 petition is still untimely. Accordingly, the petition of appeal is dismissed.

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On October 7, 2010, the Margate City Board of Education (Margate) filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking an order that it has no obligation to pay Atlantic City Board of Education (Atlantic City) $175,000. The $175,000 represents tuition payment reached during a settlement for a unilateral placement related to a special education student from Margate. On December 15, 2009, Atlantic City reached settlement with F.M., the parent of K.C., wherein Atlantic City agreed to pay $175,000 towards K.C.'s tuition. Margate was not a party to the former litigation or settlement.

On October 28, 2010, Atlantic City filed a counterclaim seeking referral of this dispute to the Executive County Superintendent (ECS). Atlantic City then filed a motion arguing that Margate had not exhausted its administrative remedies. Atlantic City's motion was denied. I determined the dispute was not required to be submitted to the ECS. The Superintendent himself stated that he did not have the authority to decide the matter. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 8). Therefore the substance of the counterclaim was disposed of in my Order dated February 8, 2011. On February 11, 2011, Margate moved to dismiss Atlantic City's counterclaim based upon my prior ruling. (See Margate's Notice of Motion dated February 11, 2011, Exhibit A).

In this motion, Atlantic City moves to dismiss Margate's petition due to the 90-day limitation set forth at N.J.A.C. 64:3-1.3(a)(i). For the reasons discussed below, Atlantic City's motion to dismiss Margate's petition is GRANTED. Likewise, Atlantic City's counterclaim is DISMISSED as moot for the reasons expressed in my February 8, 2011, Order.

SUMMARY OF RELEVANT FACTS

Atlantic City and Margate have a send-receive agreement for purposes of educating Margate's high-school age students (grades 9-12). (C-1). F.M. is a Margate resident and her child, K.C., is eligible to attend Atlantic City High School. K.C. is classified and eligible for special education services.

K.C.'s Background

K.C.'s background with Atlantic City gives context to the dispute at hand. K.C. graduated the Margate school system's eighth grade program during the school year 2003-2004. Rather than attend Atlantic City in 2004-2005, K.C. was unilaterally placed in an unapproved private school in Massachusetts. The placement was made without notice and approval of Atlantic City.

For the 2005-2006 school year, K.C. was again placed in a private out-of-district school in Pennsylvania without notice to or consent of Atlantic City. In March of that same school year, K.C. enrolled in Atlantic City. He was later disenrolled in April 2006. He was then placed in a psychiatric hospital until July 2006. Thereafter, he was placed in another psychiatric hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

For the 2006-2007 school year, K.C. was unilaterally placed at an unapproved private out-of-state school in Colorado. He was discharged from the school in Colorado in October 2006 after exhibiting paranoia and psychiatric symptoms. He was then placed in a psychiatric hospital in Colorado. In November 2006 he was placed at the Summit Hospital in Summit, New Jersey with homicidal and suicidal ideations.

In January 2007, K.C. was brought back to the Atlantic City school system. Placement was attempted in Atlantic City, but Atlantic City did not receive cooperation from K.C. or his mother. In February 2007, K.C. was again placed in a hospital in Summit, New Jersey. This unilateral placement was changed to the school in Belle Mead, New Jersey without notice to or consent from Atlantic City.

The 2007-2008 school year continued with the same pattern. Atlantic City attempted contact with K.C., to no avail. During the school year, K.C. was placed in psychiatric hospitals in New York.

K.C. enrolled in Atlantic City in September 2008 for the 2008-2009 school year. IEP meetings were scheduled and various evaluations were planned. During the planning period, K.C. was at the Carrier Clinic in Belle Mead, New Jersey. In October 2008, K.C. was discharged from the Carrier Clinic and placed in an unapproved, unaccredited, private, out-of-state school in Vermont. In January 2009, K.C. was placed in or admitted to the Vermont State Hospital. Atlantic City attempted to conduct evaluations while K.C. was in the hospital, to no avail. The hospital refused the evaluators access to its patient.

F.M. filed a due process petition exclusively against Atlantic City seeking, inter alia, tuition reimbursement for the out-of-district placements mentioned above. Margate was not a party to the action, did not intervene and was not interpleaded. N.J.A.C. 1:1-16.1. On December 15, 2009, the case between F.M. and Atlantic City was settled for $175,000. Atlantic City believed that it minimized its exposure to by resolving the case for this amount. F.M.'s claim, if successful, could have required funding her child's education until the age of twenty-one. Since K.C. was diagnosed with severe psychological problems, the better course of action was to fund a fixed amount for past, present, and future high school educational needs to be handled by outside institutions of the family's choosing.

Relevant Timeline

On December 16, 2009, Atlantic City forwarded by e-mail the settlement agreement and the Atlantic City Board's Resolution No. 09 12A 68 to Margate. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 2). The e-mail did not specifically mention Margate's obligation to pay the settlement amount. But Margate was aware of its June 25, 2010, special education contract with Atlantic City. Margate contracted with Atlantic City to provided educational services for its high school special education students. The contract states that any under-billed special education tuition costs will be charged to the sending district. (C-1; ¶ 4d.).

On December 17, 2009, Atlantic City forwarded an e-mail from its attorney to Margate explaining "please make the necessary arrangements to forward the approved Settlement on to Margate and request payment be made as soon as possible". (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 3).

On December 18, 2009, counsel for F.M. also sent Margate a letter demanding payment of the settlement. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 4).

On January 21, 2010, Margate responded by stating that "the claims in that litigation related to special education responsibilities of Atlantic City toward K.C. and that Margate was not obligated to make the settlement payments called for by the settlement agreement entered into between Atlantic City and K.C." (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 5).

On January 29, 2010, the dispute was filed with Thomas J. Dowd, Executive County Superintendent by counsel for Atlantic City. The dispute was presented as a request to settle a tuition controversy. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 6).

On February 1, 2010, Margate responded to the ECS and denied any responsibility for the tuition related to K.C. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 7).

On February 3, 2010, the ECS responded that after discussions with the DOE "it appears that an interpretation of the existing law would be required in order to resolve the issue at hand. That being so, I do not have authority to make such a determination." The ECS further suggested that the matter be referred to Department of Education's Office Controversies and Disputes. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 8).

Atlantic City paid the $175,000 settlement amount in two installments of $105,000 and $70,000.

On July 19, 2010, the Atlantic City School Business Administrator submitted the $175,000 bill to Margate pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23A17.1(e)(5)viii under the category of extraordinary services provided to special education students for which the board of education may bill directly.

On October 7, 2010, Margate filed its petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education.

Send-Receive Agreement

The parties' rights and responsibilities are contractual. The send-receive agreement provides in part:

> NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the covenants herein contained, the parties agree as follows:
> 1. The SENDING DISTRICT agrees to purchase educational services form the RECEIVING DISTRICT. The RECEIVING DISTRICT agrees to provide educational services to the SENDING DISTRICT in accordance with the applicable New Jersey statutes and the rules and regulations of the State Board of Education. The specific educational services to be purchased and provided are described in 1a below.
>
> 4d. In the event that it is later determined that the tentative tuition charge was less than the "actual cost per pupil" as certified by the commissioner multiplied by the actual average daily enrollment received, the RECEIVING DISTRICT will charge the SENDING DISTRICT no later than the end of the third school year following the contract year of the amount owed as follows:
>
>
> {X} All of the amount owed. { } None of the amount owed. { } Part of the amount owed as indicated in this space.
>
> The SENDING DISTRICT will pay any amount owed to the RECEIVING DISTRICT in accordance with the following payment schedule: DUE ON THE 1ST OF EACH MONTH BEGINNING SEPTEMBER 2010 ENDING JUNE OF 2011 AT THE ENTIRE AMOUNT INDICATED ABOVE.

> 5. The RECEIVING DISTRICT agrees to provide the SENDING DISTRICT with a monthly tuition bill and a monthly report showing pupil enrollment and attendance.
> 6. In the event any dispute arises out of this AGREEMENT the parties will seek to resolve the dispute as expeditiously as possible. Except as may be set forth herein, the interests of the pupil(s) shall be the foremost concern in resolving such disputes.
> [C-1; Emphasis added in bold and underlined]

The Special Education contract also states that the interest of the student shall be the foremost concern. Thus, Atlantic City paid the full amount of the settlement rather than seek an immediate payment from Margate. Failure of Atlantic City to pay the settlement would result in a breach of the settlement agreement and more costly ligation. Therefore, Atlantic City paid the settlement in full under the assumption that Margate would ultimately be the responsible party.

The settlement amount of $175,000 was eventually submitted to Margate for tuition reimbursement under the send-receive agreement. Margate filed the present action asserting that Atlantic City violated K.C.'s right to a free and appropriate public education (FAPE) and therefore Margate has no obligation to pay the tuition settlement. The claims advanced by Margate suggest negligence or breach of contract as a cause of action. (See, for example, ¶¶ 12-24 of Margate's compliant). This is supported by Margate's submission to ECS on February 1, 2010, wherein it states, "[w]hat Atlantic City is attempting to do is require Margate to pay $175,000 to resolve claims that Atlantic City breached its obligation to K.C." (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 7)

To assert a claim under the school law, a petition must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The 90-day time period for filing a petition is to be strictly construed and claims that are not timely filed are precluded from review. Raymond v. Bd. of Educ. of River Edge, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 203. The Commissioner of Education has held that a petitioner's failure to comply with N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 will result in a dismissal of the appeal. Baley v. Board of Ed. of Mansfield, OAL DKT. EDU 4997-79 (Feb. 6, 1980) rejected by Commissioner of Ed. (June 19, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (Feb. 4, 1981); Kallimanis v. Board of Ed. of Carlstadt, OAL Dkt. EDU 868-80 (August 8, 1980), adopted Commissioner of Ed. (September 26, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (March 4, 1981); Stolte v. Board of Ed. of Willingboro, OAL Dkt. EDU 2261-79 (Jan. 30, 1980), rejected by Commissioner of Ed. (March 17, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (July 2, 1980). Moreover, this time limit has been strictly construed to mean that the 90-day period runs from the time the initial cause of action accrued. See, Watchung Hillls Regional Ed. Association v. Board of Ed. of Watchung Hills, 1980 S.L.D. 356. The proper time for filing a petition with the Commissioner is immediately after notification of board action, and not the completion of some other process such as arbitration. See State Board of Ed. of Bernards Township v. Bernards Township Education Association, 79 N.J. 311 (1979); Riely v. Board of Education of Hunterdon Central High School, 173 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1980); Wright and Sobanko v. Board of Ed. Of Belleville, OAL DKE. EDU 5299-80 (Dec. 5, 1980), aff'd by Commissioner of Ed. (Jan. 23, 1981). Prompt filing of actions before the Commissioner serves to preserve the immediacy of the record and to stabilize existing relationships, thereby avoiding disruption of the educational process. Le Mee v. Bd. of Educ. of Village of Ridgewood, 1990 S.L.D. 663, 668.

For example, when a teaching staff member is notified that they are being non-renewed on or before April 30, and they are subsequently terminated at the end of the school year, it is the first notification date that triggers the 90-day limitation. The cause of action accrues on the date of notice, not the date of action. Nissman v. Bd. of Ed. of Twp. of Long Branch Island, 272 N.J. Super. 373, 381 (App. Div. 1994). Therefore, if a board notifies a non-tenured teacher on April 27, 2000, that their contract will not be renewed, and subsequently sends a termination letter at the end of the school year on August 31, 2000, the 90-days will run from April 27, 2000. Id.; Kaprow v. Board of Educ. of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572 (1993); Lygate v. Bd. of Ed. of Carteret, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2660-07, 2008 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 254. So long as the aggrieved party has clear and unambiguous notice of the intended final action, the claim can be time barred. Kaprow at 579. The intended final action is to be treated like an anticipatory breach and suit can be filed immediately. Nissman at 382.

The timeline in the matter at bar is undisputed. Therefore, summary disposition is appropriate. Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954); N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The trigger date for counting the 90-days is the date Margate was on notice that it was going to be responsible for the payment of the $175,000 connected with special education costs associated with one of its residents. This date was culminated on December 18, 2009, when Atlantic City forwarded the settlement agreement by e-mail along with Atlantic City Board Resolution No. 09 12A 68. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibits 1-4). The settlement contained sufficient information to alert Margate that one of its residents was in need of, and approved for, $175,000 of extraordinary special education services. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A17.1(e)(5)viii. The e-mail was followed by demand for payment from F.M.'s attorney to Margate and an e-mail from Atlantic City's counsel placing Margate on notice it was expected to pay this amount. The December dates could be tolled due to the request for assistance by the ECS. But on February 3, 2010, the ECS advised that he did not have authority to decide questions of interpretation of law and referred the parties to the Commissioner. (Atlantic City's submission dated February 25, 2011, Exhibit 8). Even if measured from the point in time after which the ECS took action, Margate still waited 155 days to file its petition with the Commissioner. Indeed on February 3, 2010, the ECS urged the parties to file an action with the Commissioner. But no action was taken until October 7, 2010.

Margate argues that the trigger date for calculating the 90-day statute of limitations occurred on July 19, 2010. This is the date that Atlantic City actually billed Margate for the special education settlement. Margate suggests that when the case was settled in December 2010, Atlantic City sought to compel Margate to pay the bill as part of a litigation settlement. Margate aggressively defended against such action and submitted a detailed brief to the ECS. As indicated above, the ECS refused to take action for lack of authority. Interestingly, Margate now claims that Atlantic City substantively recast its claim as "tuition bill" rather that a "litigation settlement". On July 19, 2010, Atlantic City submitted the bill directly to Margate pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-17.1(e)(5)viii (as extraordinary special education services). It is substantively different than seeking reimbursement for a litigation settlement back in December 2009. Hence, Margate argues the clock was reset on July 19, 2010. Therefore, Margate's filing of its petition on October 7, 2010, was well within the 90-day statute of limitations.

Margate's argument, while creative, does not fall within the body of law on this issue. The time for Margate to take action commenced when Atlantic City notified Margate that it would be seeking payment or reimbursement for tuition. That occurred on December 18, 2009. During this timeframe, Atlantic City forwarded a Resolution approving the settlement with F.M. for $175,000, indicated that $175,000 was for a Margate special needs resident who falls within the send-receive agreement, and that Atlantic City expected Margate to make payment arrangements. The case law is clear that the limitation period begins when the aggrieved party learns of the existence of facts that would enable him or her to file a timely claim. Kaprow, supra, at 588-89.

It would be naive of Margate to conclude that Atlantic City was not going to bill it for extraordinary special education expenses for one of its residents. Margate contracted away its obligation to provide special education services for its high school aged students. Atlantic City was Margate's authorized agent. Atlantic City cannot charge its taxpayers for extraordinary special education services rendered to a resident from a sending district. Moreover, the send-receive agreement states that any "under billed" services can be billed for up to three years by the receiving district to the sending district. While the litigation settlement does not clearly fall within the tentative tuition analysis, the agreement does state the "under billed" amounts (actual cost per pupil) not included in the initial tuition calculation can be billed to a sending district. Finally, Margate is the legal, natural and logical district to bear the cost associated with the needs of its residents, absent any breach of contract or act of negligence by Atlantic City.

If Margate wants to alter the send-receive arrangement as it relates to extraordinary costs associated with special needs students, then it must do so in future agreements. It cannot shift the cost to Atlantic City in this instance. There is no common law, regulation or contract term that permits this action at the moment.

Finally Margate's petition is an action cloaked as a negligence or breach of contract claim against Atlantic City. Margate suggests that Atlantic City failed to provide a FAPE to K.C. It is, therefore, Atlantic City's failure to meet K.C.'s FAPE requirements that justifies Atlantic City bearing the cost of the settlement. Atlantic City must pay for its mistakes (i.e. negligence), according to Margate. When Margate's cause of action is viewed through this lens, it is clear that the trigger date has to be when the tort or breach occurred not when the bill was submitted. And this date was December 18, 2009.

In sum, Margate's obligation to pay tuition for its own residents is well established. Margate assigned its obligation to provide special education services for its 9-12 grade students to Atlantic City. Atlantic City is required by contract and regulation to submit tuition bills to Margate for special education related expenses for Margate residents. If Atlantic City was negligent in carrying out its contractual or regulatory obligations to Margate, a cause of action accrued on or about December 18, 2009. This was the time frame that Margate was adequately informed about Atlantic City's settlement with F.M. and that Margate would be exposed to liability for the settlement. Even if the time was tolled until after the ECS addressed the issue on February 3, 2010, Margate still missed the 90-day limitation by 155 days. Atlantic City's submission of the tuition invoice on July 19, 2010, did not alter the date the action accrued. Finally there was no basis relax the limitation period. The claim does not involve a significant public policy question, a constitutional claim or other reason to enlarge the filing period. Domenick Malinconico v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, No. A-4015-09T3 (App. Div. December 10, 2010) (slip op. at 4). My ruling herein satisfies the intent[1] and purpose of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

[1] The limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between the teachers and the administration. Because education disputes frequently involve conflicting claims to one teaching position, the remedy is to award the prevailing party the position with back pay. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Moreover, because local school boards operate on a cash basis, claims must be filed promptly so that the local board can anticipate any back-pay requirements. Certainly, for

For the reasons stated above, I CONCLUDE that Margate's petition was filed untimely pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

IN THE MATTER OF CHRISTINA OZTAN,	:
GREATER BRUNSWICK CHARTER SCHOOL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
MIDDLESEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

On November 23, 2010, the School Ethics Commission (Commission) recommended that respondent be reprimanded for failure to attend a training session in finance during the third year of her term as a charter school trustee – purportedl y in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commissioner of Education concurred with the Commission and issued a decision imposing the recommended penalty. In the Matter of Christina Oztan, Greater Brunswick Charter School, Middlesex County, Commissioner Decision No. 23-11SEC (January10, 2011).

In March 2011, pursuant to an inquiry concerning the applicability of the 2007 revisions to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 to respondent Oztan, the Commission revisited its recommendation that respondent be reprimanded. The Commission determined that Oztan had completed her first term as a trustee prior to the 2007 revision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, which revision required for the first time that board members and charter trustees take training courses in the second and third years of their term. Finding nothing in the language or history of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 which indicated that the 2007 revision was meant to be retroactive, the Commission concluded that respondent Oztan was not subject to the expanded training requirements of same, and vacated its prior decision.

Accordingly, given that the finding of violation upon which it was based has now been vacated by the Commission, the Commissioner's decision of January 10, 2011 is concomitantly VACATED and shall be deemed of no force and effect.

This matter arises from a decision issued by the School Ethics Commission on November 23, 2010, in the above-captioned matter, finding that Christina Oztan violated the School Ethics Act ("Act") by failing to attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's enforcement was based on information the New Jersey School Boards Association ("NJSBA") provided in its required report of those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate of the Act, issued to the Commission pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c). The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Christina Oztan failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled "Finance," which is required in a trustee's third year of service on the Board.

In July, 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Charter School Administrator and provided Ms. Oztan with a copy of the same, notifying both that the NJSBA identified the trustee as having failed to complete the Finance training program within the required training period. On September 22, 2010, the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6 to Ms. Oztan asserting that she failed to complete the mandated training. Ms. Oztan responded that she was a trustee in her third term and that she had not realized that she was required to take the training until she received a formal notice. She intended to take the training before the issuance of the Order to Show Cause but had been unable to attend training because of severe flood conditions. Ms. Oztan completed the training on October 19, 2010.

By decision dated November 23, 2010, the Commission determined that Christina Oztan failed to comply with the training mandate and therefore was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, but that respondent's completion of the training program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause served to mitigate the penalty in this matter. The Commission recommended the penalty of reprimand to the Commissioner of Education. The Commissioner of Education concurred with the Commission's recommended sanction by decision dated January 10, 2011. I/M/O Christina Oztan, Board of Trustees of the Greater Brunswick Charter School, Middlesex County, T32-10/2(November 23, 2010), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 23-11SEC, decided January 10, 2011.

In February 2011, a charter school trustee inquired about the applicability of the training requirements to a trustee who had completed the first term of service prior to the enactment of the expanded training requirements in March 2007. The Commission determined that, at its meeting on March 22, 2011, it would review the application and enforcement of the training requirement to board members or trustees whose first term of service was completed prior to March 2007. In furtherance of its review, the Commission sent a request to Ms. Oztan for specific documentation of her tenure as a trustee at the Greater Brunswick Charter School. Ms. Oztan provided documentation to the Commission that she served the Charter School continuously from 2003 through 2011 and that she completed her first term as trustee in 2006.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the NJSBA. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term. (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d)). In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c.53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33a. As noted above, the 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Ms. Oztan failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled Finance within the required time period.

Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required Finance training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, documentation forwarded by Ms. Oztan reveals that she served on the board of trustees of the Greater Brunswick Charter School since 2001, and had completed her first term of service in 2006, prior to the effective date of the amendment on March 15, 2007. Finding nothing in the plain language of the statute that would permit the retroactive application of the third-year training requirement, the Commission determines that Ms. Oztan was not subject to the expanded training requirements that became effective on March 15, 2007.

DECISION

At its meeting on March 22, 2011, the Commission voted to vacate its prior decision and find that Ms. Oztan did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for action as he deems necessary.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE ATLANTIC COUNTY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, ATLANTIC COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

In May 2010, petitioner received written notification that his position as a teacher of diesel mechanics would be eliminated as of June 30, 2010 as part of a Reduction in Force (RIF). On October 22, 2010, petitioner filed this appeal contending that the respondent Board deprived him of his position teaching diesel mechanics, notwithstanding that he possessed superior seniority and should therefore have been entitled to teach the second year of this course. Petitioner sought reinstatement to his former position, which would compel the Board to reinstate the diesel technology program – a program that has experienced declining enrollment. The Board filed a motion for summary judgment.

The ALJ found that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; petitioner was provided written notice of the Board's decision to eliminate his position on May 5, 2010, but did not file his petition until October 22, 2010; therefore, petitioner failed to comply with the 90 day requirement of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); further, petitioner does not have seniority rights to teach the second year of the diesel class or the general auto mechanics class. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the petition should be dismissed for failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and granted the Board's motion to dismiss the appeal.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petition was not timely filed and must be dismissed on that basis. Accordingly, petitioner's seniority claim was not reached.

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

On October 22, 2010, petitioner filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education contending the Atlantic County Vocational School District (hereinafter referred to as ACIT) deprived him of his position teaching diesel mechanics, notwithstanding that he possesses superior seniority and is, therefore, entitled to teach the second year of this course. Respondent sought dismissal of the petition due to it being filed untimely and also moved for summary decision of the merits of the seniority claim. For the reasons discussed below respondent's motion of summary decision on both the timeliness of the petition and the merits of the claim of seniority is GRANTED.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law on December 2, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13.

On November 19, 2010, respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss in Lieu of a Response. On February 1, 2011, a telephone prehearing conference was held. The parties discussed the pending motion. An additional thirty day period of discovery was requested by petitioner prior to any ruling upon the Motion to Dismiss. This request was granted. On March 14, 2011, a supplemental submission was received from respondent. No further submissions were received from petitioner. The motion record closed on April 18, 2010.

FACTUAL SUMMARY

On May 3, 2010, a Reduction in Force (RIF) was approved by the ACIT Board of Education (See Certification of Dr. Philip J. Guenther, Ed.D, hereinafter referred to as "Guenther Cert."). Because of lack of enrollment, diesel technology would no longer be offered as a stand alone program. (Guenther Cert., ¶ 3).

The diesel technology position was previously reduced from full to part time in the 2009-2010 school year and consisted of six students (Petition, ¶ 4). For the 2010-2011 school year, the ACIT Board, in an effort to maintain fiscal responsibility, decided to eliminate the independent designated diesel technology program and combine it into the more encompassing auto technology course.

On or about May 5, 2010, petitioner Berghof received written notification that his position was being eliminated as of June 30, 2010 (Guenther Cert., Exhibit "B"). The Atlantic County Vocational Teachers Education Association (ACVTEA) did not formally oppose the reduction in force plan, and Mr. Berghof did not appear before the ACIT Board of Education, as was his right under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (Guenther Cert., ¶¶ 6-7).

Curtis Silver holds an endorsement to teach both auto technology (endorsement dated 1993) and diesel technology (endorsement dated 2002) (Guenther Cert., ¶ 10). The six students formerly in the diesel technology class were transferred into Curtis Silver's auto technology class for the 2010-2011 school year (Guenther Cert. ¶ 9). The six aforementioned students will receive a joint auto/diesel technology certificate upon successful completion of the program (Guenther Cert, ¶ 11). The auto technology program, which is the only surviving program, has maintained enrollment to justify a full time teacher.

On or about May 12, 2010, Berghof filed a grievance challenging whether Curtis Silver, another teaching staff member, could teach diesel mechanics within the auto mechanics curriculum (Guenther Cert., Exhibit "C"). The grievance was denied. (Guenther Cert., Exhibit "C").

Petitioner seeks reinstatement, which would compel the Board to reinstate the diesel technology program, a program that has experienced declining enrollment (six students).

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Timeliness of the Petition

The Board has the power to initiate a reduction in force (RIF). N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 states:

> Nothing in this title or any other law relating to tenure of service shall be held to limit the right of any board of education to reduce the number of teaching staff members, employed in the district whenever, in the judgment of the board, it is advisable to abolish any such positions for reasons of economy or because of reduction in the number of pupils or of change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district or for other good cause upon compliance with the provisions of this article.

If petitioner intended to challenge the RIF decision, he had ninety days to initiate the challenge. To assert a claim under the school law, a petition must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The ninety day time period for filing a petition is to be strictly construed and claims that are not timely filed are precluded from review. Raymond v. Bd. of Educ. of River Edge, 94 N.J.A.R. 2d. (EDU) 203. The Commissioner of Education has held that a petitioner's failure to comply with N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 will result in a dismissal of the appeal. Baley v. Board of Ed. of Mansfield, OAL DKT. EDU 4997-79 (Feb. 6, 1980) rejected by Commissioner of Ed. (June 19, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (Feb. 4, 1981); Kallimanis v. Board of Ed. of Carlstadt, OAL Dkt. EDU 868-80 (August 8, 1980), adopted Commissioner of Ed. (September 26, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (March 4, 1981); Stolte v. Board of Ed. of Willingboro, OAL Dkt. EDU 2261-79 (Jan. 30, 1980), rejected by Commissioner of Ed. (March 17, 1980), aff'd State Bd. of Ed. (July 2, 1980). Moreover, this time limit has been strictly construed to mean that the 90-day period runs from the time the initial cause of action accrued. See, Watchung Hillls Regional Ed. Association v. Board of Ed. of Watchung Hills, 1980 S.L.D. 356. The proper time for filing a petition with the Commissioner is immediately after notification of board action, and not the completion of some other process such as arbitration. See State Board of Ed. of Bernards Township v. Bernards Township Education Association, 79 N.J. 311 (1979); Riely v. Board of Education of Hunterdon Central High School, 173 N.J. Super. 109 (App. Div. 1980); Wright and Sobanko v. Board of Ed. Of Belleville, OAL DKT. EDU 5299-80 (Dec. 5, 1980), aff'd by Commissioner of Ed. (Jan. 23, 1981). Prompt filing of actions before the Commissioner serves to preserve the immediacy of the record and to stabilize existing relationships, thereby avoiding disruption of the educational process. Le Mee v. Bd. of Educ. of Village of Ridgewood, 1990 S.L.D. 663, 668.

For example, when a teaching staff member is notified that they are being non-renewed on or before April 30, and they are subsequently terminated at the end of the school year, it is the first notification date that triggers the ninety day limitation. The cause of action accrues on the date of notice, not the date of action. Nissman v. Bd. of Ed. of Twp. of Long Branch Island, 272 N.J. Super. 373, 381 (App. Div. 1994). Therefore, if a board notifies a non-tenured teacher on April 27, 2000, that their contract will not be renewed, and subsequently sends a termination letter at the end of the school year on August 31, 2000, the ninety days will run from April 27, 2000. Id.; Kaprow v. Board of Educ. of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572 (1993); Lygate v. Bd. of Ed. of Carteret, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2660-07, 2008 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 254. So long as the aggrieved party has clear and unambiguous notice of the intended final action, the claim can be time barred. Kaprow at 579. The intended final action is to be treated like an anticipatory breach and suit can be filed immediately. Nissman at 382.

On May 3, 2010, the Board approved a resolution wherein it RIF'd petitioner. On May 5, 2010, notice of the Board's decision was provided to petitioner. On October 22, 2010, petitioner filed his appeal of the Board's May 3, 2010 determination. Petitioner waited 170 days. These facts are undisputed. Therefore, summary disposition is appropriate. Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954); N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5.

The claim does not involve a significant public policy question, a constitutional claim or other reason to enlarge the filing period. Domenick Malinconico v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, No. A-4015-09T3 (App. Div. December 10, 2010) (slip op. at 4). My ruling herein satisfies the intent[1] and purpose of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

[1] The limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between the teachers and the administration. Because education disputes frequently involve conflicting claims to one teaching position, the remedy is to award the prevailing party the position with back pay. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot

I CONCLUDE that petitioner's appeal was filed untimely in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

Petitioner's Seniority Claim

Assuming it is determined that petitioner's appeal was filed timely the analysis below resolves the seniority claim.

	Petitioner/Berghof	Curtis Silver
Tenure acquired[2]	Yes	Yes
Diesel Mechanic Endorsement	Acquired August, 2000	Acquired May, 2002
Auto Mechanic Endorsement	After 1993[3]	1993

Here, petitioner concedes that Silver has more seniority or total years of service in the district. (Petition, ¶¶ 3, 7). Silver was employed at ACIT since 1991. Petitioner started teaching diesel mechanics with the ACIT in 2000. The only question in this case is whether petitioner holds an endorsement to teach general auto mechanics (a/k/a Auto technology) and whether it predates Silver's endorsement. Specifically, petitioner states in his pleadings:

> 7. While Curtis Silver holds an automotive certificate which gives him seniority over the petitioner, the petitioner clearly has seniority in the teaching of diesel mechanics over Curtis Sliver since the petitioner's diesel mechanics certificate was issued in the year 2000, whereas the diesel mechanics certificate of Curtis Silver was issued in the year 2002.

be challenged after ninety days. Moreover, because local school boards operate on a cash basis, claims must be filed promptly so that the local board can anticipate any back-pay requirements. Certainly, for the Commissioner to find that the efficient administration of a school system requires the stability offered by the ninety-day limitation period is reasonable. Kaprow, supra. at 582.

[2] For purposes of this Motion, it is assumed that both individuals (Berghof and Silver) have attained tenure as no issues as to tenure was raised by either party.

[3] Exact date unknown, but petitioner admits Silver acquired his auto mechanic endorsement prior to his (Berghof's) auto mechanic endorsement. See paragraph 7 of petition filed herein.

[Emphasis added.]

Here, ACIT instituted a curriculum change based upon low enrollment in the diesel mechanics course. The curriculum change cannot be confused with the requirement to possess applicable endorsements. The students in the diesel mechanics class were subsumed into the general auto mechanics curriculum. As long as Silver possesses an endorsement that is appropriate for teaching general auto mechanics and that endorsement predates petitioner's general auto mechanics endorsement (if any), then Silver has seniority.

Petitioner argues that Silver cannot include instruction on diesel mechanics within his general auto mechanics curriculum, particularly for the six students who were in his diesel class. I DISAGREE. This is a curriculum determination, not an issue to be determined by endorsements, tenure or seniority. Management can alter its staffing level to meet its curriculum demands through the RIF mechanism. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9; See also, Parsippany-Troy Hill Ed. Ass'n. v. Parsippany-Troy Hills Bd. of Ed., 188 N.J. Super. 161, 166 (App. Div. 1983) (holding that boards have broad autonomy to determine curriculum and are free to implement or eliminate programs or parts of programs).

Silver is not teaching diesel mechanics. Rather Silver is teaching general auto mechanics (auto technology) within which are a few hours of instruction on diesel engines. Silver has not usurped the diesel class requiring a diesel endorsement. The six students previously enrolled in the diesel class will receive a combined diesel/auto technology designation upon graduation, reflecting their prior instruction in diesel. In effect, petitioner wants to be reinstated to teach just the diesel portion of Silver's general auto mechanic class. This, of course, would undermine the purpose and intent of the RIF statute.

I CONCLUDE that Silver's auto mechanic (or technology) endorsement from 1993 predates any similar endorsement held by petitioner. The diesel mechanic class has been abolished. Thus it is petitioner that must hold an endorsement for the general auto mechanics class and not Silver who must hold a diesel endorsement. Consequently, Silver has seniority to teach general auto mechanics, even if the class includes some of petitioner's former students.

ORDER

Based upon the forgoing, respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED. It is ORDERED that petition is DISMISSED as untimely. It is further ORDERED that in the event it is determined that petitioner's appeal was filed timely, petitioner does not have seniority rights to teach the second year of the diesel class or the general auto mechanics class.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF ANN ROSARIO,	:
JERSEY CITY COMMUNITY	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CHARTER SCHOOL, CAMDEN COUNTY.	:	DECISION

On January 10, 2010, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) rendered a decision concurring with the November 23, 2010 recommendation of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) that the respondent charter school trustee – who had failed to attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – be suspended as a trustee until completing such program and, if the program was not completed by January 8, 2011, respondent be removed from office. Subsequently, as respondent did not complete the training by January 8, 2011, the Commission adopted a Resolution of Removal at its meeting on January 25, 2011.

Subsequently, by letter dated April 27, 2011, the Executive Director of the School Ethics Commission advised respondent – and the Commissioner – that the Commission had voted on March 22, 2011 to vacate its prior decision finding respondent in violation of the School Ethics Act. In its April 26, 2011 decision so vacating, the Commission noted:

> N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the [New Jersey School Boards Association]. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term....In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c. 53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term."...
> Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the [New Board Member Orientation] training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, Ms. Rosario has now forwarded information confirming that she served on the board of trustees of the Jersey City Community Charter School since 1997, which was the time period when the Commission had issued [a] public advisory opinion [which apparently exempted charter school trustees from the requirement in the Act that they attend new board member training within the first year of their first term on the board] and prior to the adoption of regulations specifically holding charter school trustees to the first year training requirement [adopted in 2000]. Consequently, the Commission determined that Ms. Rosario should not be subject to the training requirements. (Commission's April 26, 2011 Decision at 2)

Accordingly, given that the finding of violation upon which it was based has now been vacated by the Commission, the Commissioner's decision of January 10, 2011 is concomitantly VACATED and shall be deemed of no force and effect.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a decision issued by the School Ethics Commission on November 23, 2010, in the above-captioned matter, finding that Ann Rosario violated the School Ethics Act ("Act") by failing to attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's enforcement was based on information the New Jersey School Boards Association ("NJSBA") provided in its required report of those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate of the Act, issued to the Commission pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c). The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Ms. Rosario failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled New Board Member Orientation ("NBMO") which is required in a trustee's first year of service on the Board.

In July, 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Charter School Administrator and provided Ms. Rosario with a copy of the same, notifying both that the NJSBA identified the trustee as having failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required training period. On September 22, 2010, the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6 to Ms. Rosario asserting that she failed to complete the mandated training. Ms. Rosario failed to respond to the Order to Show Cause. By decision dated November 23, 2010, the Commission found that Ms. Rosario failed to comply with the training mandate and therefore was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision recommended that Ms. Rosario be suspended as a trustee until demonstrating completion of the required program. If Ms. Rosario did not complete the training program by January 8, 2011, the Commission recommended removal.

Ms. Rosario did not complete the training. The Commissioner of Education concurred with the Commission's recommended sanction by decision dated January 10, 2011. I/M/O Ann Rosario, Jersey City Community Charter School, Hudson County, T09-10NB (November 23, 2010), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 22-11SEC, decided January 10, 2011. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12(d), the Commission adopted a Resolution of Removal at its meeting on January 25, 2011.

During 2010 enforcement proceedings of the School Ethics Act training requirements, a charter school trustee whose service dated back to the inception of the charter school successfully asserted reliance upon a public advisory opinion issued by the School Ethics Commission in 1998 as a defense to his failure to attend new board member training. [1] At its meeting on March 22, 2011, the Commission

[1] Advisory Opinion A14-98 issued on July 31, 1998 appears to include language exempting charter school trustees from the requirement in the Act that they attend new board member training within the first year of their first term on the board. However, because the Commission notes that regulations adopted by the State Board of Education in 2000 include the requirement that charter school trustees must complete new board member training during the first determined that it would review the application and enforcement of the new board member training requirement to trustees who may have relied upon this advisory opinion. In furtherance of its review, the Commission sent a request to Ms. Rosario for specific documentation of her tenure as trustee at the Jersey City Community Charter School. Ms. Rosario replied that she has served as a trustee since the opening of the Jersey City Community Charter School in 1997 but is no longer available to continue to serve as trustee.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the NJSBA. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term. (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d)). In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c.53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33a. As noted above, the 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Ms. Rosario failed to complete the NBMO training program within the required time period.

Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the NBMO training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, Ms. Rosario has now forwarded information confirming that she served on the board of trustees of the Jersey City Community Charter School since 1997, which was the time period when the Commission had issued the public advisory opinion referenced herein, and prior to the adoption of regulations specifically holding charter school trustees to the first year training requirement. Consequently, the Commission determined that Ms. Rosario should not be subject to the training requirements.

DECISION

At its meeting on March 22, 2011, the Commission voted to vacate its prior decision and find that Ms. Rosario did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for action as he deems necessary.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 679-11/10

IN THE MATTER OF GREG COLLINS,	:
MARION P. THOMAS CHARTER	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	DECISION

On January 10, 2011, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) rendered a decision concurring with the November 23, 2010 recommendation of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) that the respondent charter school trustee be censured for failure to timely attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33.

Subsequently, by letter dated April 27, 2011, the Executive Director of the School Ethics Commission advised the Commissioner that the Commission had voted on March 22, 2011 to vacate its prior decision finding respondent in violation of the School Ethics Act. Based on additional information submitted to the Commission by the respondent, the Commission re-examined the record and determined that the respondent had served on the board of trustees of the Marion P. Thomas Charter School since 1998; therefore, the Commission found that Mr. Collins was not subject to the expanded training requirements that became effective on March 15, 2007.

Accordingly, given that the finding of violation upon which it was based has now been vacated by the Commission, the Commissioner's decision of January 10, 2011 is concomitantly VACATED and shall be deemed of no force and effect.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a decision issued by the School Ethics Commission on November 23, 2010, in the above-captioned matter, finding that Greg Collins violated the School Ethics Act ("Act") by failing to attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's enforcement was based on information the New Jersey School Boards Association ("NJSBA") provided in its required report of those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate of the Act, issued to the Commission pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c). The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Greg Collins failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled "NJQSAC," which is required in a trustee's second year of service on the Board.

In July, 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the appellant's Charter School Administrator and provided Mr. Collins with a copy of the same, notifying both that the NJSBA identified the trustee as having failed to complete the NJQSAC training program within the required training period. On September 22, 2010, the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6 to Mr. Collins asserting that he failed to complete the mandated training. Mr. Collins responded that he had been unable to take the training because of illness, travel and technical problems. Mr. Collins further stated that he did not believe that the expanded training requirements applied to him because he had been a trustee since 1998.

By decision dated November 23, 2010, the Commission found that Mr. Collins failed to comply with the training mandate and, therefore, was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's decision recommended that Mr. Collins be suspended as a trustee until demonstrating completion of the required program. If Mr. Collins did not complete the training program by December 15, 2010, the Commission recommended removal. If Mr. Collins completed the training program by December 15, 2010, the Commission recommended a penalty of censure.

Mr. Collins completed the training prior to December 15, 2010. The Commissioner of Education concurred with the Commission's recommended sanction by decision dated January 10, 2011. I/M/O Greg Collins, Board of Trustees of the Marion P. Thomas Charter School, Essex County, T19-10/2 (November 23, 2010), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 11-11SEC, decided January 10, 2011. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.12(d), the Commission adopted a Resolution of Censure at its meeting on January 25, 2011.

On February 24, 2011, counsel for Mr. Collins filed a Motion for Stay of the Commissioner's decision ordering a censure, pending appeal of the Commissioner's decision with the Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division. Upon receipt and review of Greg Collins' certification and arguments filed before the Appellate Division, the Commission determined to reconsider its prior decision at its March 22, 2011 meeting and so notified the appellant and the Commissioner of Education. On February 28, 2011, pursuant to the authority delegated by N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33, the Assistant Commissioner of Education granted the appellant's request for stay of the Commissioner's decision ordering a censure.

ANALYSIS

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the NJSBA. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term. (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d)). In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c.53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33a. As noted above, the 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Mr. Collins failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled NJQSAC within the required time period.

Upon appellant's filing of the Motion for Stay, at its meeting of March 22, 2011, the Commission re-examined the record and reconsidered its prior decision, based on Mr. Collins' submissions before the Appellate Division. Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required NJQSAC training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, the record and appellant's certification reveal that he had served on the board of trustees of the Marion P. Thomas Charter School since 1998, and had, therefore, completed his first term of service prior to the effective date of the amendment on March 15, 2007. Finding nothing in the plain language of the statute that would permit the retroactive application of the second-year training requirement, the Commission determines that Mr. Collins was not subject to the expanded training requirements that became effective on March 15, 2007.

At its meeting on March 22, 2011, the Commission voted to vacate its prior decision and find that Mr. Collins did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for action as he deems necessary.

The record of this matter, the parties' revised settlement agreement, and the Initial Decision on Remand of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1. On March 28, 2011, the Commissioner remanded this matter to the OAL based upon a determination that the prior settlement agreement recommended for adoption by the Administrative Law Judge did not include the requisite Board of Education approval.

Upon review of the revised agreement and the record on remand, the Commissioner finds that the deficiency identified in the prior agreement has been corrected. The Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The case is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

Petitioner, a bus driver employed by respondent Board, sought restoration of sick time for injuries sustained in 2002 in the course of employment, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. The matter was placed on the inactive list pending settlement of the Worker's Compensation case. On February 13, 2009, counsel for petitioner advised that the workers' compensation matter had been resolved, but requested that the matter remain on inactive status.

Subsequently, after repeated and unanswered attempts by the ALJ and counsel for respondent to obtain a status update from petitioner's counsel, a peremptory hearing date was scheduled for April 26, 2011; counsel for petitioner was directed to confirm no later than April 15, 2011 that she would appear for the April 26 hearing, or the matter would be dismissed. No confirmation was received from petitioner's counsel.

Accordingly, the ALJ found that the matter should be dismissed with prejudice.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

Record Closed: April 15, 2011 Decided: April 21, 2011

BEFORE LESLIE Z. CELENTANO, ALJ:

Petitioner alleges that respondent's action in charging her sick days for work-related injury/illness violated N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on August 12, 2003, and assigned OAL Docket No. EDU 07552-03.

It was determined that the claim asserted was dependent upon the outcome of a companion workers' compensation petition, and the matter was therefore placed on inactive status until March 16, 2004, by then ALAJ Thomas E. Clancy. The matter was continued on inactive status pursuant to ALJ Clancy's January 23, 2004, Letter Order, and remained on inactive status pursuant to ALJ Clancy's September 22, 2006, Letter. The matter was reassigned to the undersigned following ALJ Clancy's retirement on October 1, 2006.

On February 13, 2009, counsel for petitioner advised that the workers' compensation matter had been resolved, but requested that the matter remain on inactive status. On April 15, 2009, a conference call was held, at the conclusion of which the parties agreed to exchange information and then schedule another conference call.

On October 25, November 24, and December 1, 2010, telephone messages were left for petitioner's counsel inquiring as to the status of this matter. No return calls were received. Respondent's counsel represented that she too has been trying to reach petitioner's counsel, for a period of six months, to no avail. Accordingly, a peremptory hearing date was scheduled for April 26, 2011, and counsel were advised that if the hearing did not go forward on that date the matter would be dismissed. Thereafter, respondent's counsel advised that, as a school district, respondent would incur costs and expenses to prepare for a full hearing, possibly unnecessarily. As such, respondent's counsel requested that petitioner's counsel confirm no later than April 15, 2011, at 3:00 p.m. that she intended to and would appear for the full hearing on April 26, 2011, and that if that confirmation was not received, the matter be dismissed. In view of the history of this matter and in the interests of fairness and economy, this request was granted.

Accordingly, as there has been no communication whatsoever from petitioner for more than two years, I FIND that this matter should be and is hereby DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

NORTH STAR ACADEMY CHARTER	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

On January 10, 2011, the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) rendered a decision concurring with the November 23, 2010 recommendation of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) that the respondent charter school trustee be reprimanded for failure to attend school board member training – in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 – until after the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause.

Subsequently, by letter dated April 27, 2011, the Executive Director of the School Ethics Commission advised respondent – and the Commissioner – that the Commission had voted on March 22, 2011 to vacate its prior decision finding respondent in violation of the School Ethics Act. In its April 26, 2011 decision so vacating, the Commission noted:

> N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the [New Jersey School Boards Association]. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term....In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c. 53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term."...
> Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required NJQSAC training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, documentation forwarded by the Charter's Lead Person reveals that Mr. Lytle served on the board of trustees of the North Star Academy Charter School since 2001, and had completed his first term of service in 2002, prior to the effective date of the amendment, March 15, 2007. Finding nothing in the plain language of the statute that would permit the retroactive application of the second-year training requirement, the Commission determines that Mr. Lytle was not subject to the expanded training requirements that became effective on March 15, 2007. (Commission's April 26, 2011 Decision at 2)

Accordingly, given that the finding of violation upon which it was based has now been vacated by the Commission, the Commissioner's decision of January 10, 2011 is concomitantly VACATED and shall be deemed of no force and effect.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a decision issued by the School Ethics Commission on November 23,2010, in the above-captioned matter, finding that Michael Lytle violated the School Ethics Act ("Act") by failing to attend school board member training in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. The Commission's enforcement was based on information the New Jersey School Boards Association ("NJSBA") provided in its required report of those board members and trustees who have not fulfilled the training mandate of the Act, issued to the Commission pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.2(c). The 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Michael Lytle failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled "NJQSAC," which is required in a trustee's second year of service on the Board.

In July, 2010, the School Ethics Commission issued a Notice of Enforcement to the respondent's Charter School Administrator and provided Mr. Lytle with a copy of the same, notifying both that the NJSBA identified the trustee as having failed to complete the NJQSAC training program within the required training period. On September 22, 2010, the Commission issued an Order to Show Cause pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-1.6 to Mr. Lytle asserting that he failed to complete the mandated training. Mr. Lytle responded that he had received the show cause notice and was scheduled to attend training on October 19, 2010. Mr. Lytle completed the training on October 19, 2010.

By decision dated November 23, 2010, the Commission determined that Michael Lytle failed to comply with the training mandate and therefore was in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33, but that respondent's completion of the training program after receipt of the Order to Show Cause served to mitigate the penalty in this matter. The Commission recommended the penalty of reprimand to the Commissioner of Education. The Commissioner of Education concurred with the Commission's recommended sanction by decision dated January 10, 2011. I/M/O Michael Lytle, Board of Trustees of the North Star Academy Charter School, Essex County, T23-10/2 (November 23, 2010), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 13-11SEC, decided January 10, 2011.

In February 2011, a charter school trustee inquired about the applicability of the training requirements to a trustee who had completed the first term of service prior to the enactment of the expanded training requirements in March 2007. The Commission determined that, at its meeting on March 22, 2011, it would review the application and enforcement of the training requirement to board members or trustees whose first term of service was completed prior to March 2007. In furtherance of its review, the Commission sent a request to Mr. Lytle for specific documentation of his tenure as a trustee at the North Star Academy Charter School. Mr. Michael Ambriz, Lead Person of the North Star Academy Charter School provided documentation to the Commission that Mr. Lytle has served the Academy continuously from 2001 through 2011 and that he completed his first term as trustee in 2002.

The School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq., was enacted by the New Jersey State Legislature to ensure and preserve public confidence in school board members and school administrators. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33 requires each board member and charter school trustee to complete training offered by the NJSBA. Specifically, all board members and charter school trustees must complete a training program during the first year of their first term. (N.J.A.C. 6A:28-4.1(a) and (N.J.A.C. 6A:11-3.1(d)). In 2007, the training requirement was amended by the School District Accountability Act, P.L. 2007, c.53, to include the requirement that each board member "shall complete a training program on school district governance in each of the subsequent two years of the board member's first term." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33a. As noted above, the 2010 report from the NJSBA indicated that Mr. Lytle failed to complete the school district governance training program entitled NJQSAC within the required time period.

Although there is no dispute that the respondent did not complete the required NJQSAC training program prior to the issuance of the Commission's show cause order, documentation forwarded by the Charter's Lead Person reveals that Mr. Lytle served on the board of trustees of the North Star Academy Charter School since 2001, and had completed his first term of service in 2002, prior to the effective date of the amendment, March 15, 2007. Finding nothing in the plain language of the statute that would permit the retroactive application of the second-year training requirement, the Commission determines that Mr. Lytle was not subject to the expanded training requirements that became effective on March 15, 2007.

At its meeting on March 22, 2011, the Commission voted to vacate its prior decision and find that Mr. Lytle did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-33. A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for action as he deems necessary.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DR. GLORIA GRANTHAM, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PLEASANTVILLE, ATLANTIC COUNTY.

Raymond L. Hamlin, Esq., for petitioner, Pleasantville Board of Education (Hunt, Hamlin & Ridley, attorneys)

Andrew Babiak, Esq., for respondent, Gloria Grantham

Record Closed: April 13, 2011 Decided: April 26, 2011

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on January 27, 2011, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures, and as placed on the record on April 5, 2011.

2. The settlement is in compliance with the standards set forth in In Re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842 (1990). In reaching this conclusion, I afford substantial weight to the opinions espoused by James Riehman, State Monitor for the Pleasantville Board of Education. Mr. Riehman concluded that respondent's return to the position of Superintendent would have a negative effect upon the District, and that it was in the best interest of the school district that the present administration remain in place.

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DR. GLORIA GRANTHAM, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PLEASANTVILLE, ATLANTIC COUNTY	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY AGENCY REF. NO.: 8-1/11 OAL DKT. NO.: EDU 00808-2011S

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville ("Board of Education or "District") certified and filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education against the Superintendant of Schools, Gloria Grantham, Ph.D ("Dr. Grantham") on or about January 6, 2011, a copy of which charges and Certification of Determination are attached hereto;

WHEREAS, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the tenure charges to the Office of Administrative Law and the case was assigned to the Honorable Bruce Gorman, A.L.J.; and

WHEREAS, Dr. Grantham filed a Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges in Lieu of an Answer; and

WHEREAS, the parties, through their respective counsel, participated in settlement discussion and negotiations on April 5, 2011; and

WHEREAS, hearings are scheduled to begin in June 2011 and extensive discovery will be required; and

WHEREAS, the Board has had a full opportunity to investigate this matter, and based upon that investigation, has determined that this Stipulation of Settlement is fair and just, and causes the least disruption to the School District in that witnesses will not be taken away from their normal responsibilities, that the settlement avoids the uncertainty of litigation and a lengthy and expensive hearing process and possible appeals, and that Dr. Grantham has raised defenses and objections to the manner in which the Board proffered the charges which may be meritorious and that there is good cause which warrants this Stipulation of Settlement; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Education has determined that it is in the best interests of the Pleasantville School District, and the public at large to resolve the dispute existing between the Board of Education and Dr. Grantham in that the long term costs to the District may far exceed the costs of settling the matter in the near term, and a settlement provides stability in terms of certainty in leadership of the District; and

WHEREAS, Dr. Grantham has filed a civil action against the Board of Education in the Superior Court of Atlantic County in connection with her employment with the Board under docket number: ATL-L-2297-11; and

WHEREAS, the parties have determined it to be in their respective best interests to resolve the case and come to an agreement with respect to the issues presented in this matter; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Education has determined that it is in the best interest of the Pleasantville School District, and the public at large to retain the present leadership to provide stability and certainty of leadership and order within the District now and in the future and to avoid a disruption of the administration which would clearly have an adverse impact upon the children of the District; and

WHEREAS, the Board of Education believes that the prosecution of the tenure charges will divert substantial sums of money, time and key staff resources from the true mission of the Pleasantville School District, the parties have agreed to resolve this matter under and subject to the terms outlined in this Stipulation of Settlement:

AGREEMENT

The parties to this Agreement, intending to be legally bound, agree as follows:

1. Upon the execution and approval of this Stipulation of Settlement, the Board of Education hereby withdraws the tenure charges with prejudice, and Dr. Grantham agrees to the dismissal of same.
2. By executing this Stipulation of Settlement, Dr. Grantham hereby resigns from her position with the Board of Education to be effective April 12, 2011. It is understood and agreed that Dr. Grantham's resignation is conditioned upon the Board of Education's fulfillment of the terms hereof and upon the Commissioner of Education's approval hereof. In the event the Commissioner of Education rejects this Agreement the Board shall reinstate Dr. Grantham to the District's payroll retroactive to April 12, 2011, and shall reinstate her salary effective May 7, 2011. Dr. Grantham shall submit, in writing, her letter of resignation to the Board of Education, subject to the terms hereof, on or before April 12, 2011. The rejection if any by the Commissioner of Education shall result in the continuation of the status quo as it relates to the pending tenure charge case.
3. The Board of Education shall pay Dr. Grantham the sum of Three Hundred and Thirty-Five Thousand Dollars ($335,000.00) as follows:

(a) The Board shall pay Dr. Grantham her salary retroactively from January 7, 2011 through April 12, 2011 upon the Commissioner of Education's approval of this Agreement;

(b) The Board shall pay Dr. Grantham the difference between the gross retroactive salary payment in (a) and $167,500.00 upon the Commissioner of Education's approval of this Agreement but no later than ten (10) days thereof; and

(c) The Board shall pay Dr. Grantham $167,500.00 on or before January 15, 2012. With respect to the payments in (a) and (b) above, the Board, through its business office, shall provide Dr. Grantham an accounting of the payouts. The Board shall make all necessary payroll deductions and/or withholdings from the foregoing amounts for federal and state taxes and for pension contributions.

4. In accordance with Executive Order 11, in response to requests for information about Dr. Grantham's employment, the Board of Education shall indicate the dates of her employment and the fact that she resigned in good standing from the Pleasantville School District. Nothing herein shall prevent Dr. Grantham from obtaining letters of reference from former and/or current members of the Board of Education. The Board of Education agrees that it shall not make any disparaging statements in public about Dr. Grantham's character or performance as Superintendent and Dr. Grantham shall not make any disparaging comments about the Board of Education.

5. The Board of Education and Dr. Grantham agree to release each other from any and all claims which they have now, or may have in the future against each other relating to Dr. Grantham's employment with the Board. Excepted from this release is the case Dr. Grantham has against the Board of Education in connection with her annual evaluation pursuant to Agency Ref. No. 268-8/10 and OAL Docket No. EDU-09835-2010 S. Nothing in this paragraph shall waive any rights Dr. Grantham may have to COBRA benefits in accordance with Federal Law, and/or any rights she has under the Teachers Pension and Annuity Fund Act.

6. The parties understand that this Stipulation of Settlement is contingent upon the approval of the Honorable Bruce Gorman, A.L.J and the Commissioner of Education. It is understood and agreed that in the event such approval is not granted then this Agreement shall be null and void except to the extent that Dr. Grantham shall be reinstated to the District's payroll in accordance with paragraph 2 hereof, and that the parties shall retain all rights they had prior to their execution of this agreement.
7. The parties warrant that they have entered into this Stipulation of Settlement voluntarily, without any duress or undue influence and that by entering into this agreement, each party waives their right to a hearing and disposition on the merits of the tenure charges.
8. The State Monitor assigned to the District also has approved the terms of this Stipulation of Settlement.
9. Dr. Grantham shall cause the pending case in the Superior Court, Atlantic County to be dismissed under Docket number ATL-L-2297-11 with prejudice.
10. The Board agrees that it shall not bring any additional tenure charges against Dr. Grantham.
11. Dr. Grantham understands and agrees that the Commissioner of Education may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible action against her certificate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF SYLVIA ALEMAN	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF UNION CITY,	:	DECISION
HUDSON COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of excessive absenteeism and other just cause against respondent, a tenured custodian, and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner and dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in the district as of the date of this decision.

AGENCY DKT NO. 106-5/11

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF SYLVIA ALEMAN	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF UNION CITY,	:	DECISION
HUDSON COUNTY.	:

For the District, Elsie DiNardo, Esq., Office of Susanne Lavelle, Esq.

No appearance by or on behalf of Sylvia Aleman

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on May 6, 2011 through the certification of tenure charges of excessive absenteeism and other just cause by the School District of Union City against Sylvia Aleman, a tenured custodian in the District.

By notice dated May 6, 2011, the Commissioner directed respondent, via both certified and regular mail – the certified copy having been signed for on May 11, 2011 – to file an Answer to the tenure charges against her. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would, absent granting of an extension for good cause shown, result in the charges being deemed admitted by the charged employee. Because no reply has been received from respondent – or any attorney on her behalf – in response to the District's charges, each count of the charges against respondent is deemed to be admitted.

The Commissioner has reviewed the tenure charges certified against respondent by the District, i.e., excessive absenteeism and other just cause (insubordination, disobedience, job abandonment and unsatisfactory job performance), and the statement of evidence in support of those charges.

Deeming such charges to be admitted, and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the allegations against her, the Commissioner finds that the District has demonstrated that respondent is guilty of excessive absenteeism and other just cause, warranting dismissal from her tenured position.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the District, and respondent Sylvia Aleman is dismissed from her tenured custodian position in the District's employ as of the date of this decision.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION ON MOTION

The record of this matter – including the audio recording of the April 28, 2011 hearing[1] – and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) recommending denial of the instant motion for emergent relief have been reviewed.[2] For the reasons thoroughly articulated by the Administrative Law Judge, the Commissioner denies the motion and remands this case to the OAL for a hearing on the merits.

The controversy appears to have been precipitated by concerns expressed by administrative personnel about respondent's conduct, including his behavior towards his colleagues and supervisors. In response to the expressed concerns, the petitioning Board looked into the matter and determined that respondent should be suspended pending the results of a psychiatric evaluation. Although respondent did meet with a psychiatrist provided by petitioner

[1] Those portions of the record consisting of respondent's medical and/or psychiatric records, or documents describing same, shall be sealed.

[2] The exceptions and replies thereto submitted by the parties have not been considered, as there is no provision in the applicable regulations for exceptions to decisions on emergent relief motions.

– Dr. Kenneth J. Rubin – he was allegedly defensive and reluctant to divulge information, preventing Dr. Rubin from fully evaluating his mental status.

Pursuant to Dr. Rubin's request, and in an effort to obtain more information upon which to assess respondent's mental status, petitioner demanded that respondent sign a release (Respondent's Exhibit R-1) allowing Dr. Rubin to review his medical history. No limitations of any kind were noted on the release form, and the letter transmitting the release demanded that respondent furnish "the names and addresses of all of the medical and mental health physicians that you have been treated by or with since [sic] January 1, 2009 to the present." (Petitioner's Exhibit P-O) Further, the release form stated that "I understand that any disclosure of information may be subject to re-disclosure by the recipient and may no longer be protected by federal or state law."

Petitioner asserts that the release is essential to a determination as to whether respondent is fit to teach in its district, and that emergent relief is necessary to spare petitioner the expense of paying respondent's salary while the administrative litigation proceeds. Respondent contends that: the breadth and terms of the release in question jeopardize his privacy rights; the law does not support petitioner's sweeping request for his medical and psychiatric history; and same is not necessary to a psychiatric evaluation. Consequently, respondent concludes that the balance of equities favor the respondent, the law is settled against petitioner, petitioner is not likely to prevail, and the standards for emergent relief are not met.

The ALJ carefully applied the standards – set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3- 1.6 – for granting emergent relief, and the Commissioner agrees with his conclusions. First, without further fact finding it is not clear that the requested release is necessary to accomplish petitioner's objective. Thus, a finding of irreparable harm is not indicated. Second, the law does not clearly support the type and breadth of disclosure that petitioner demands. Third, petitioner has not shown a likelihood of success, and fourth, the record as it stands does not definitively support the Board's contention that a balancing of the equities favors it.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision denying petitioner's motion for emergent relief is adopted.

Respondent.

Robert C. Shea, Esq., for petitioner (Shea & Associates, attorneys)

Keith Waldman, Esq., for respondent (Selikoff & Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 28, 2011 Decided: May 2, 2011

BEFORE ROBERT BINGHAM II, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Board of Education of the Vocational School in the County of Ocean (the Board), applies for emergent relief, seeking an order compelling the respondent,

J.O., to provide authorization to obtain his past medical history in order for the Board's physician to complete a psychiatric examination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. The Board contends that the right of a school district to require that one of its employees undergo psychiatric examination commands that J.O. furnish a general authorization for release of medical records for that purpose. J.O. contends that the Board may not require an employee to release his or her entire medical history in order to facilitate such a psychiatric examination.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 15, 2011, the Board filed a petition to compel J.O. to provide medical records. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the case, as an emergent matter, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on April 25, 2011. On April 28, 2011, an emergent hearing was held and concluded.[1]

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The material facts are undisputed. Accordingly, I FIND AS FACT the following.

J.O. is a tenured culinary instructor employed by the Ocean County Vocational School. During the months of October through December 2010, school personnel developed concerns regarding his purported behavior. On or about December 8, 2010, he was suspended with pay. By letter dated December 17, 2010 (Exhibit P-3),[2] the Board, through counsel, notified him of continued suspension with pay until further notice, and requested that he undergo a psychiatric evaluation by a Board-designated physician. Although J.O. initially requested a hearing regarding the psychiatric evaluation (Exhibit P-4), he subsequently waived his right to the hearing and agreed to undergo the examination (Exhibits P-11, P-12).

[1] This Order is being filed at the earliest possible time in light of the undersigned ALJ's assigned responsibilities on April 29, 2011.

[2] For the purpose of convenience, petitioner's exhibits A through R are designated as P-1 through P-18, respectively; AA through DD are designated as P-19 through P-22, respectively. Respondents exhibits A through C are designated as R-1 through R-3, respectively.

In that regard, on March 4, 2011, the Board requested that J.O. provide a release for medical records to facilitate the required psychiatric examination. The release form (Exhibit R-1) was general; it contained no restriction regarding either the type or the time frame of medical records sought. On March 11, 2011, through counsel, J.O. refused to provide the authorization for his medical records (Exhibit P-16). Nonetheless, on March 16, 2011, he underwent the psychiatric examination which was given by Dr. Kenneth J. Rubin.

On or about March 28, 2011, the Board received Dr. Rubin's report dated March 16, 2011 (Exhibit P-17a). Although he interviewed J.O. and reviewed school records, Dr. Rubin was unable to render a final diagnosis or opinion due to J.O.'s nondisclosure of his medical history. In pertinent part, the report stated:

> As he presents today in this examination, there is no overt concern about being a risk to himself or others, but as above, without getting adequate or sufficient history or not entering necessary and appropriate questions, I am not able to give a proper diagnosis and recommendations.
> Because of his defensiveness, not willing to divulge information, I believe one of the ways it may be able to elicit some of that would be if he would have neuropsychological testing, specifically including protective tests by a forensic psychiatrist, including malingering scales, and other tests of their nature to get an understanding of the kind of personality or other psychopathology that might be present.
>
> I would gladly review the psychological testings as that will help give an opinion. Also . . . it would be very helpful to have his medical records, and mental health records from anybody he has treated with, a psychologist or a psychiatrist, because the patient does have a psychiatric history, did have a medical problem last year, and the details of that would be helpful to know. Also the possibility that even > some of the medication he was taking during this period of time or now could contribute to his behavior but without knowing what the medications are, one cannot give that opinion. Therefore, without all pertinent and relevant facts and information a final opinion about any psychiatric disorder or his capability or ability to teach, be around students or other teachers cannot be made.

On April 15, 2011, the Board filed a petition to compel J.O. to provide medical records. At some point, J.O. provided to Dr. Rubin, for his review, the report of another psychiatrist that had evaluated J.O.[3] By note dated April 27, 2011 (Exhibit P-17b), Dr. Rubin indicated that after reviewing that report, he maintained his opinion and recommendation as indicated in his report dated March 16, 2011, namely, that he would "like to review all previous medical [and] mental health records." Ibid.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

A school board may require an employee to undergo a psychiatric examination when, in its judgment, an employee "shows evidence of deviation from normal, physical or mental health." N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2(a). If required by the Board, such an examination may include laboratory tests or fluoroscopic or x-ray procedures for the purpose of obtaining additional diagnostic data. Ibid. The statute provides for the development of guidelines by the Department of Education, in consultation with the Department of Health, for school boards electing to require testing. The statute has been upheld as constitutional with respect to issues of an employee's rights of association, expression and privacy. Kochman v. Keansburg Board of Education, 124 N.J. Super. 203 (Ch. Div. 1973). See also, Gish v. Board of Education, 145 N.J. Super. 96 (App. Div. 1976) (teacher's free speech and due process rights were not implicated by the board's ability to require a teacher to undergo psychiatric testing).

[3] Neither party submitted that report as evidence in this matter.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3, which sets forth requirements for physical examinations, a required examination for any candidate for employment or newly employed staff may include a health history. The regulation makes no such provision for inclusion of a health history with regard to an experienced employee.

> Any examinations or assurances required or permitted by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2(a) or this subchapter shall be limited to those assessments or information necessary to determine the individual's physical and mental fitness to perform with reasonable accommodation in the position which he or she seeks or currently holds, and to detect any health risks to students and other employees.

With regard to specific instances when an employee is required to undergo a psychiatric examination, the "employee may, without reprisal, refuse to waive his or her right to protect the confidentiality of medical information, in accordance with P.L. 104-191, Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA)." N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3(e)(3). The Commissioner of Education recognized that right of refusal when, in the fashioning of a penalty against a tenured teacher, it was noted, "Nothing herein is intended to foreclose the Board from subsequently directing that respondent be examined pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:16-2 if, in its judgment, respondent shows evidence of deviation from normal health, provided, however, that such directive must be effectuated in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3(e) or such other rule as may be applicable at that time." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Adelphia Poston, School District of the City of Orange, EDU 3876-05, Final Decision, (October 19, 2006), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/search.shtml> (emphasis in original).

HIPAA requires that medical disclosures be limited to the minimum necessary information to accomplish the intended purpose. 45 CFR §164.502 (b). Additionally, the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA), which prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability, limits the field of inquiry into a current employee's disability and medical history. 42 U.S.C. § 12112 (d)(4).

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. Subparagraph (f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible.

The foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982). These legal principles may be summarized as follows:

1. Emergency relief should not issue except when necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief. Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected.

2. Emergency relief should be withheld when the legal right underlying the claim of the requesting party is unsettled.

3. Emergency relief should not issue where all material facts are controverted. Thus, to prevail on an application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. That requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo. The point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began.

4. The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. The relief granted should be no broader than necessary to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits.

The application of the above standard to the facts to this case yields the conclusion that petitioner has not met, as it must, all of the above criteria for emergent relief.

Irreparable Harm

The Board argues that it will suffer irreparable harm if relief is not granted because it would have to continue to pay J.O.'s salary during his suspension without any means by which to recoup those funds.[4] J.O. correctly argues that under Crowe, "harm is generally irreparable in equity, if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. Crowe v. DeGioia, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. Further, the Board apparently has other options, including: specifically and narrowly tailoring the authorization for release of medical records; immediately requiring the neuropsychological testing referenced by Dr. Rubin; or, should the Board deem appropriate, certifying tenure charges, under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, and suspending J.O. without pay. I therefore CONCLUDE that petitioner has not shown immediate harm that would constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief.

[4] The Board would include the salary of the substitute replacement for J.O. for purposes of this analysis; however, there is no evidence in the record to establish that fact.

Right to Underlying Claim Must be Settled

As to the requirement that the right underlying the claim of a requesting party must be settled, it is clear that the Board may require that an employee undergo a psychiatric examination when, in the Board's judgment, he or she displays evidence of deviant physical or mental health. It is also clear that such an examination may include laboratory tests or fluoroscopic or x-ray procedures for the purpose of obtaining additional diagnostic data.

It is unclear, however, whether the scope of any required psychiatric examination must include an involuntary authorization for a general release of unlimited medical records in light of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3, HIPAA and ADA. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not shown that the Board has an absolute right to require that a current employee undergoing a psychiatric examination execute or waive an authorization for general release of his medical records.

Reasonable Probability of Prevailing on the Merits

The Board argues that there is a reasonable likelihood of success on the merits because of its indisputable right to have J.O. undergo a psychiatric examination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2(a). J.O. asserts that, in light of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3, HIPAA and ADA, the probability of success is in his favor. As indicated above, there exists the unsettled question of whether the Board may require an employee to release his or her medical history, without limitation, pursuant to a psychiatric examination under N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not shown that the Board has a reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits.

Relative Hardship to the Parties

The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief in order to preserve the status quo

pending a full hearing on the merits. The Board argues that it would suffer the greater hardship because it would have to continue paying J.O.'s salary while being left without any options. It could not complete the psychiatric examination, thereby safeguarding its duty to protect the public, and it absolutely would not return J.O. to his position otherwise. J.O. asserts that any release of his medical history to the Board and Dr. Rubin is "irreversible," and that his privacy rights "will irretrievably be compromised."

The flaw in the Board's argument is that Dr. Rubin indicated "one of the ways it may be able to elicit some of that [information] would be if he would have neuropsychological testing, specifically including protective tests by a forensic psychiatrist." Dr. Rubin further expressed his willingness to review such testing to help in rendering his opinion. Thus, there apparently does exist an option whereby Dr. Rubin could complete his evaluation with additional testing that would not require unfettered release of limitless private medical information. The flaw in J.O.'s argument is that the pertinent regulation does provide for the security, separate maintenance and limited access to an employee's medical file. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-6.3(f).

On balance, and especially in light of the additional option for completion of Dr. Rubin's evaluation, I agree that the greater harm would be to respondent, notwithstanding the protections afforded by the regulation. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not shown that the Board would suffer a greater hardship if relief were denied pending a plenary hearing.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I FIND that for purposes of deciding this application for emergency relief, petitioner has failed to establish: (1) the existence of irreparable harm, (2) that its claim is based upon a settled right, (3) that there is a likelihood of prevailing on the merits, and (4) that, on balance, it would suffer a greater relative hardship pending a full hearing on the merits.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's request for emergency relief seeking an order compelling the respondent, J.O., to provide authorization to obtain his past medical history, in order for the Board's physician to complete a psychiatric examination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-2, should be and hereby is DENIED.

It is so ORDERED.

It is further ORDERED that, except for the purpose of any review of this Order, any and all medical or psychiatric reports or records in this matter be and hereby are SEALED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

On January 28, 2011, the petitioner – a tenured secretary formerly employed by the Board – filed an appeal charging, inter alia, that the respondent Board's abolishment – by resolution dated October 4, 2010 – of petitioner's position for reasons of economy and efficiency violated the law, and that petitioner was entitled to a full-time secretarial/clerical position held by non-tenured and/or less senior tenured employees. The Board filed a motion for summary decision, and sought dismissal of the petition for failure to comply with the 90-day requirement of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

The ALJ found that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; the 90-day period for filing an appeal begins once notice of the final order or ruling is given, which in this case occurred on October 4, 2010; petitioner's argument that the 90-day rule should be relaxed is unconvincing, and she has presented no evidence to show that extraordinary relief is warranted in this case. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision to the respondent Board, and dismissed the petition.

Upon full consideration of the record and Initial Decision of the OAL – and finding the petitioner's exceptions without merit – the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition.

BELGICA POLANCO-GOMEZ,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner's exceptions do not dispute the fact that she failed to file the instant petition within the 90-days mandated by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). Rather, she again argues, as she did below, that the exigent circumstances existing in this matter – which included the need to find a new position in order to provide medical insurance coverage for her ill child and the lack of any immediate assistance to locate an attorney who could pursue this matter on her behalf – fully justify the Commissioner's relaxation of the 90-day rule in this case. She, therefore, seeks such relaxation and a remand of this matter for a decision on the merits of her claim. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1-8)

In reply, the Board points out that petitioner was in no imminent danger of losing health benefits as she was fully aware that she was entitled to remain on the Board's health care plan through COBRA for at least eighteen months following her termination. Moreover, the Board attaches to its reply exceptions – as it had done to its reply brief in support of its Motion to Dismiss below – a copy of the November 23, 2010 Meeting Minutes of the East Rutherford Board of Education (petitioner's current employer). These minutes show that on that date the East Rutherford Board voted to hire petitioner as a full-time employee at a salary considerably higher than what she earned in Englewood Cliffs. Consequently, notwithstanding petitioner's urging that her search for employment prevented her from seeking an attorney and filing a timely appeal in this matter, as of November 23, 2010, with thirty-five days remaining to appeal her termination, petitioner had already secured new employment with health benefits. (Board's Reply Exceptions at 1-2)

Upon his considered review – and finding petitioner's exceptions without merit – the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the instant petition is appropriately dismissed because it was filed outside the 90-day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Commissioner, likewise, fully agrees – for the reasons discussed by the ALJ on pages 6-7 of her decision – that petitioner has failed to set forth a bona fide legal or factual basis for waiving the timely filing requirement.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted for the reasons stated therein. Summary decision is granted to the Board and the instant Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

BEFORE CAROL I. COHEN, ALJ:

On July 23, 2010, Belgica Polanco-Gomez (petitioner) was sent an e-mail advising her that the Superintendent of the Board of Education of the Borough of Englewood Cliffs (respondent) was in the process of reviewing the role and responsibilities of her position. (Respondent's Exhibit A.) On August 5, 2010, the Superintendent e-mailed the petitioner advising her that he would be making recommendations regarding her position. (Respondent's Exhibit B.) On October 4, 2010, the Board adopted a Resolution abolishing petitioner's position for reasons of economy and efficiency. (Respondent's Exhibit C.) The Superintendent informed the petitioner on October 4, 2010, that her position had been abolished. On October 12, 2010, the Superintendent sent a letter to the petitioner, which enclosed a copy of the Board's October 4, 2010, Resolution and confirmed their conversation of October 4, 2010, wherein the petitioner had been informed that her position was abolished. (Respondent's Exhibit D.)

On January 28, 2011, the petitioner sent a Petition of Appeal to the Commissioner of Education[1] seeking a determination that respondent's summary termination of petitioner's employment violated the law; that petitioner, when her position was abolished, was entitled to a full-time secretarial/clerical position held by non-tenured and/or less senior tenured employees of the respondent; that petitioner should be returned to her position of employment together with all lost salary and other emoluments of employment; and that respondent should pay pre- and post-judgment interest. On February 23, 2011, the respondent filed its answer to the petition, in which it asked for the dismissal of the petition in its entirety, attorney's fees, costs and expenses. The matter was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on February 28, 2011. The case was assigned to the undersigned on March 3, 2011, and a telephone pre-hearing conference was held on March 14, 2011. A hearing was scheduled for June 2, 2011. However, the respondent notified the judge at the pre-hearing conference that it would be filing a motion for summary decision. The motion was filed with the OAL on March 18, 2011. The petitioner's brief was due on April 4, 2011. On April 6, 2011, the petitioner asked for an extension to file her brief until April 18, 2011. She was granted an extension to April 11, 2011. Ms. Polanco-Gomez's brief was filed on April 11, 2011.

[1] The petition was stamped received by the Department of Education on February 2, 2011.

ISSUES

1. Whether Ms. Polanco-Gomez's petition for relief is time-barred under the 90-day rule?

2. Whether the matter can be decided on summary decision?

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

The petitioner has argued as follows:

> The situation in this case is quite different from the situation faced by the Petitioners in Kaprow and Nissman. Here, the Petitioner did not unduly delay filing her Petition. Petitioner filed within a few weeks after the ninety day time period expired, not many months after as was the case in Kaprow and Nissman. Further, unlike the Petitioner in Nissman, who was represented by counsel prior to her termination, Petitioner in this matter was not represented by counsel until several months later, and counsel shortly thereafter filed a Petition on her behalf.

In addition, the petitioner asserted that as a "confidential" employee, who was not in a bargaining unit, she did not have a union to turn to for aid in finding counsel. Faced with the need to find a job quickly to obtain medical coverage for her sick child, she concentrated her efforts on a job search and did not think about seeking legal advice until after she had procured new employment.

The respondent argued that N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) requires the petitioner to file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final ruling by the district board of education. The petitioner received notice of the ruling on October 4, 2010, and received a copy of the ruling on October 12, 2010. Ms. Polanco-

Gomez did not file her petition until January 28, 2011, which was 116 days after learning of the Board's final decision.[2]

LEGAL ANALYSIS

1. 90-Day Rule

The initial issue to be determined is whether Ms. Polanco-Gomez's Petition of Appeal is time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The regulation states:

> The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

The New Jersey Supreme Court reaffirmed the validity of the 90-day limitation period in the case of Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J. 572 (1993). The Supreme Court concluded that the rule "falls within the scope of statutory authority granted to the Commissioner and the State Board" and "represents a fair and reasonably-necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws." Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 582. In explaining the underlying purpose of the rule, the Court said:

> The limitations period provides a measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws. It stabilizes the relationship between the teachers and the administration. Because education disputes frequently involve conflicting claims to one teaching position, the remedy is to award the prevailing party the position with back pay. The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Moreover, because local school boards

[2] Based on representations that the respondent said the petitioner made at a status conference, the District argued that the date of notice of termination, not the date of actual termination, was the date to be used in counting the 90-day period. The petitioner appears to have abandoned this position, since she did not argue the point in her brief. However, as pointed out by the respondent, this position has been struck down in a number of court cases, including Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J. 572 (1993), and H.H. and E.H. ex rel P.H. v. Board of Education of Wall, No. A-3638-09T3 (App. Div. February 15, 2011) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/search.html>.

> operate on a cash basis, claims must be filed promptly so that the local board can anticipate any back-pay requirements.

The 90-day period for filing an appeal with the Commissioner is triggered at the point in time that the affected individual has received "adequate notice" of the "final order, ruling or other action" which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing. Although the regulation does not specify what constitutes adequate notice, the decisional law provides guidance. The Supreme Court has instructed that "[a]dequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 587. It must also be sufficient to further the purpose of the 90-day limitation period, which is twofold. The rule is intended "to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims," and "'to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose' by giving security and stability to human affairs." Ibid. (citation omitted). In recognition of these dual considerations, the Supreme Court held that "the notice requirement should effectuate concerns for individual justice by not triggering the limitations period until the tenured teachers have been alerted to the existence of facts that may equate in law with a . . . cause of action" and, "[a]t the same time, it should further considerations of repose by establishing an objective event to trigger the limitations period in order 'to enable the proper and efficient administration of the affairs of government.'" Ibid. (citation omitted). In Kaprow, the Court concluded that a letter from the secretary of the local board, which informed the petitioner that the board had created and filled two positions in which the petitioner claimed a tenure right, while "unofficial and informal, was sufficient to trigger the ninety-day limitations period." Id. at 588.

The 90-day period begins once notice of the final order, ruling or other action is given, and not when the injury is felt by the petitioner. See Nissman v. Bd. of Educ. of Long Beach Island, 272 N.J. Super. 373, 379–81 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 137 N.J. 315 (1994). In Nissman, the Appellate Division held that a principal, who was informed in April 1990 that the board had adopted a resolution not to offer her a contract and not to grant her tenure, was required to file a challenge within 90 days of that notice, even though it was not until the last day of her contract on August 31, 1990, that the petitioner claimed she acquired tenure rights.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16 confers on the Commissioner the authority to relax the procedural rules in his discretion "where a strict adherence thereto may be deemed inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice." The decisional law makes clear, however, that the 90-day rule is to be strictly applied. Gordon v. Passaic Twp. Bd. of Educ., 1985 S.L.D. 1929, 1931, aff'd, No. A-3294-84T7 (App. Div. May 27, 1986) (unreported), certif. denied, 105 N.J. 534 (1986); Am. Fed'n of Teachers, Local 3417 v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley Heights, EDU 5355-97, Initial Decision (October 13, 1998), adopted, Comm'r (November 30, 1998) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Bd. of Educ. of Elmwood Park v. Farrell, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 375, 377. Although the Commissioner has the authority to relax the 90-day rule, such authority is rarely invoked. DeMaio v. New Providence Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 449, 453. Relaxation or waiver of the rule is reserved for cases presenting compelling reasons or exceptional circumstances such that strict adherence would be inappropriate or unnecessary or may result in injustice. Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 590–91; Gordon, supra, 1985 S.L.D. at 1931–32; DeMaio, supra, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) at 453; American Fed'n of Teachers, supra, EDU 5355-97, Initial Decision (October 13, 1998), adopted, Comm'r (November 30, 1998) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. As articulated in Bogart v. Board of Education of East Orange, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 6245-82 (January 26, 1983), adopted, Comm'r (March 14, 1983), the 90-day rule will be relaxed "only where there is some compelling reason for the same, such as the presence of a substantial constitutional or other issue of fundamental public interest beyond that of concern only to the parties themselves."

The petitioner's argument that the 90-day rule should be relaxed does not meet the standard for relaxation enunciated in Kaprow and the line of cases that followed. Those cases talk about conditions that go beyond the individual circumstances of the parties. It is only in those instances that strict adherence to the rule is relaxed. While the Commissioner has the discretion to relax the rule, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.16, this extraordinary relief has been reserved for only those situations where a substantial constitutional issue is presented or where a matter of significant public interest is involved, beyond that of concern only to the parties. Portee v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 381, 384; Wise v. Bd. of Educ. of Trenton, EDU 160-00, Final Decision (September 11, 2000) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. The petitioner has not presented evidence to that effect. While it is understandable that Ms. Polanco-Gomez would concentrate her efforts to look for new employment, this did not preclude her from pursuing her claim against the District. In addition, the petitioner knew in August 2010 that her position was in jeopardy, but she took no action to find out what her legal rights might be until sometime in January 2011.

2. Summary Decision

The rules governing practice in the Office of Administrative Law provide that a motion for summary decision may be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. This provision mirrors the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits that may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving, party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact that can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary decision:

> the determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party . . . , are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

In this case there are no disputed facts. The matter rests entirely on the interpretation of the law. Therefore, the case can be decided by summary decision.

CONCLUSIONS

Based on the arguments presented by the parties, I CONCLUDE that there are no issues of material fact that prevent this matter from being decided by summary decision.

Further, I CONCLUDE that the respondent's motion for summary decision should be granted because the petitioner failed to file her petition within the 90-day period required by the statute, and there are not sufficient grounds to waive the 90-day rule.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

A.M. and M.S. on behalf of minor children, A.S. and L.S.,	:
PETITIONERS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF DOVER, MORRIS COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners appealed the respondent Board's determination that their homeless status had expired and that their children, A.S. and L.S., no longer meet the homelessness criteria to attend Dover schools free of charge. Petitioners maintained that – although they have resided in the same motel in Mine Hill Township since 2006 – they are still homeless, and that until they find a permanent residence, it is in the best interest of the children to continue their enrollment in the Dover school district, which has an obligation to educate the children as their district of origin prior to becoming homeless. Respondent Board contends that since petitioners have resided in Mine Hill for more than five years and have no immediate plans to return to Dover, they no longer meet the statutory criteria for homelessness under N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12(c). Accordingly, the Board argues that as a resident of Mine Hill, A.S. – a seventh grader – is permitted to attend Dover schools under the district's send/receive relationship with Mine Hill, but L.S. – a sixth grader – must attend school in Mine Hill, and that petitioners must reimburse Dover for the cost of L.S.'s tuition for the number of days the child has attended school in the district during the 2010-2011 school year.

The ALJ identified the issue in this case to be whether petitioners have maintained a homeless status since 2006, thus entitling the children to continue enrollment in the Dover school district as the district of origin pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12(c). The ALJ found that: the petitioners bear the burden of proof to establish domicile in Dover; the evidence presented by petitioners was unpersuasive, demonstrated no effort by petitioners to reestablish domicile in Dover, and offered no mitigating factors to justify entitlement to continued enrollment in Dover schools. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioners have not demonstrated a continued state of homelessness to meet the criteria for their children to attend Dover schools at the public expense, and that the school district is entitled to tuition for the sixth grade education of L.S. in the amount of $10,773 for the 2010-2011 school year.

Upon full and careful consideration, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision and determined that petitioners' children shall remain enrolled in respondent's school district and that petitioners are not liable for tuition and transportation costs. In so deciding, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: children who live in hotels/motels are classified as homeless pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)(1)(i); a goal of the regulations pertaining to homeless children is that continuity be maintained in their educational program; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d), homeless persons who reside within a school district for one year or longer shall be deemed to be domiciled within that district, and financial responsibility for the education of their children transfers to the new school district; the Mine Hill School District is liable for L.S.'s sixth grade tuition, and would also be responsible for the send/receive tuition for A.S. should respondent Board seek payment for same.

A.M. and M.S. on behalf of minor children, A.S. and L.S.,	:
PETITIONERS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF DOVER, MORRIS COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

This controversy requires the assignment of fiscal responsibility for the education of petitioners' children, A.S. and L.S. The Commissioner has reviewed the record[1] and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL);[2] for the reasons which follow, the Initial Decision is rejected.

Petitioners and their children lived in Dover from 2004 to 2006, at which time they became homeless and moved to the Bounty Motel in the Township of Mine Hill, where they still reside. The parties do not appear to dispute the fact that when petitioners became homeless, Dover became the children's "School District of Origin." N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.2. Under the regulations pertaining to homeless children – N.J.A.C. 6A:17-1.1 et. seq. (the Regulations) – the School District of Origin decides where the children will attend school, pays tuition for the children if they attend school in another district and provides transportation. N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.4.

[1] No transcripts of the March 4, 2011 hearing were provided to the Commissioner. Consequently, the record is sparse, particularly regarding the details of petitioners' living arrangements.

[2] No exceptions to the Initial Decision were filed by either party.

The record indicates that after they became homeless and moved to the Bounty Motel, A.S. and L.S. continued to attend school in Dover – without objection from respondent – for four years. This is consonant with N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.6(a)(1) and (2), which direct that – to the extent practicable – the children should be enrolled in the school district of origin and/or the last district of attendance, barring objections from the parents or guardians. A stated goal of the Regulations is that continuity be maintained in the educational programs of homeless children. See, e.g., N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.6(b)(2).

In August 2010, however, respondent wrote to petitioners stating that the children were no longer eligible to attend school in Dover. Respondent reasoned that in light of petitioners' five years of residence in Mine Hill, their homeless status had expired and, with it, respondent's responsibility to educate petitioners' children. It now demands tuition reimbursement for L.S.'s attendance in its district during the 2010-2011 school year, reasoning that it had put petitioners on notice of their change in status. Petitioners argue that their residence in a motel constitutes homelessness, requiring respondent's district – as the school district of origin – to continue to provide their children with a free public education. Petitioners also maintain that it is in the best interests of their children to remain in respondent's school system.

Petitioners are correct in contending that their children are homeless. Children who live in hotels/motels are indeed classified as homeless pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:17-2.3(a)(1)(i). However, for purposes of assigning fiscal responsibility for the education of A.S. and L.S., the relevant inquiry is not whether petitioners are homeless, but rather whether they have resided in Mine Hill long enough for N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) to attach. More specifically, school law imposes a limit upon how long a former district of domicile is financially responsible for the education of homeless children. That limit may be found in N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d), which states:

> Any person whose parent or guardian, even though not domiciled within the district, is residing temporarily therein, but any person who has had or shall have his all-year-round dwelling place within the district for one year or longer, shall be deemed to be domiciled within the district for purposes of this section.

Thus, after one year of the family's residency in the Bounty Motel, it became the Mine Hill Township Board of Education's financial responsibility to educate petitioners' children. See, also, Board of Education of the Township of Egg Harbor, Atlantic County v. Board of Education of the Mainland Regional High School District, Atlantic County and New Jersey Department of Education, Department of Finance, Commissioner Decision No. 555-10 (December 30, 2010).

However, the reassignment of financial responsibility for the children's education from respondent to the Mine Hill school district did not inexorably require that the children change schools. As mentioned above, continuity of educational program is an objective of the Regulations. Stated differently, respondent erred in concluding that its release from financial responsibility for the children equated to the removal of the children from its schools.

The record reveals that the Mine Hill and Dover school districts have a send-receive relationship. Mine Hill students in grades seven through twelve attend school in the Dover school district at Mine Hill's expense. A.S., who has been in seventh grade during the 2010-2011 school year, is attending school in Dover. Respondent does not now appear to demand tuition for A.S., but if it did make such a demand, it would be Mine Hill – deemed the district of domicile under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(d) – that would be obligated to pay same.

L.S. has been in sixth grade during the 2010-2011 school year. Although students residing in Mine Hill normally attend sixth grade in Mine Hill, L.S. has been attending school in Dover for more than six years. Once again, the Regulations disfavor disruptions in the continuity of a child's educational program. In the present case, to require L.S., who attended school in Dover from Kindergarten through fifth grade, to switch to Mine Hill for sixth grade – only to return to Dover in seventh grade, pursuant to the above-referenced send-receive relationship – would offend an underlying principle of the Regulations.

In light of the foregoing, the Mine Hill School District – not petitioners – is liable for L.S.'s sixth grade tuition in the amount of the daily rate, $59.85, times the number of days of attendance. The record as presented to the Commissioner, however, lacks any proofs to support the latter number.[3] Should respondent seek send-receive tuition for A.S., the responsible party would also be the Mine Hill School District.

While the Mine Hill School District apparently received correspondence relating to the instant litigation, it was not joined as a party. Accordingly, no order against Mine Hill will be issued in the context of this case. However, the relief requested by petitioners is hereby granted. A.S. and L.S. shall remain enrolled in respondent's school district and petitioners will not be liable for tuition and transportation costs.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

[3] The Commissioner notes that the present school year is almost at an end, and L.S. will likely be progressing to seventh grade. Thus, if petitioners' living situation remains the same in the coming school year, both children will attend school in Dover pursuant to the above referenced send-receive relationship.

A.M. AND M.S., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILDREN, A.S. AND L.S., Petitioners,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF DOVER, MORRIS COUNTY,
Respondent.

A.M. and M.S., parents of A.S. and L.S., pro se

Derlys Maria Gutierrez, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: April 18, 2011 Decided: May 9, 2011

BEFORE MUMTAZ BARI-BROWN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The Dover School District (District) determined the homeless status of petitioners A.M. and M.S. expired. Therefore, for purposes of school enrollment petitioners' children L.S. and A.S. were no longer eligible to attend the Dover Schools. Based on the address where the the family has lived since October 2006, the District further determined the children are domiciled in the Roxbury School District. Petitioners appealed the District's determination that their homeless status has expired. They maintain that their children are entitled to continue enrollment in Dover School District, the district of origin.

On September 15, 2010, the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On March 4, 2011, a hearing was held. On April 18, 2011, the undersigned held a telephone conference regarding the parties posthearing briefs and to clarify the sending-receiving relationship referenced at the hearing. The record closed on April 18, 2011.

STIPULATION OF FACTS

Based on the stipulated facts (J-1) and relevant evidence I FIND as FACT:

1. A.M. and M.S. are the parents of L.S. and A.S.

2. L.S. attends sixth grade at East Dover Elementary School, Dover School District.

3. A.S. attends seventh grade at Dover Middle School, Dover School District.

4. Since kindergarten, the children have been enrolled in Dover Public Schools.

5. From 2004 to 2006, the family resided in Dover, NJ.

6. In 2006, the family was homeless and moved into the Boundary Motel located in Mine Hill.

7. From 2006 to the present, the family has resided at the Boundary Motel, room 101, which is located in Mine Hill.[1].

8. By letter dated August 23, 2010, the District informed the parents that they no longer met the criteria for homeless and that the children could not continue to attend the Dover Public Schools.

9. On or about 9/8/10, the parents filed a petitioner of appeal on residency.

10. By letter dated 9/10/10, Morris County Executive Superintendent of Schools determined that the proper district of residence is Mine Hill and Dover based on the fact that the parents and children are currently living in the Boundary Motel, Room 101, in Mine Hill.

ISSUE

The issue is whether petitioners have maintained a homeless status from 2006 to present and thus the children are entitled to continue enrollment in Dover School District, the district of origin.

Petitioners have the burden of proof to establish domicile in Dover.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Petitioners maintain that their displacement from Dover Township and homeless situation continues to the present. Petitioners further claim that they did not willingly move the children to another school district. Rather, they are residing in Mine Hill due to their homelessness. Until they locate a permanent residence it is in the children's best interests to continue enrollment in the Dover School District.

[1] The parties stipulated that address for Boundary Motel is Roxbury Township, however, the actual address of the hotel is – Rt. 46, Mill Hill, NJ.

The District acknowledged petitioners homelessness in October 2006, and the family's relocation from Dover to Mine Hill. Due to the homeless status the children were permitted to continue enrollment in the Dover School District. The District argues however, since petitioners have resided in Mine Hill for more than five years with no immediate plans to return to Dover. Consequently, on August 13, 2010, the Dover School District determined that petitioners could no longer meet the statutory criteria for 'homelessness' under N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12(c) which provides that the district of residence for children whose parent temporarily moves from one school district to another as the result of being homeless shall be the district in which the parent last resided prior to becoming homeless. The statute further provides that "homeless" shall mean an individual who temporarily lacks a fixed, regular and adequate residence. Ibid.

The District presented John Gannaio, Director of Special Services. The county superintendent determined that the family resides in Mine Hill. Therefore, the older child, A.S. is permitted to attend Dover Middle School under the Districts sending-receiving relationship. The younger child, L.S. a sixth grade student of Mine Hill should attend school in that district. Gannaio further testified that annual tuition at Dover for grades six to eight for 2010-2011 is $10,773.00 at a daily rate of $59.85.

I have considered the positions of the parties. The evidence presented by petitioners us unpersuasive. A.M. testified that the family has resided at the Boundary Motel since 2006 due to their homelessness. However, petitioners presented no evidence of his attempt or likelihood to obtain housing in Dover within the reasonable future. Moreover, petitioners presented no mitigating evidence to justify entitlement to continue enrollment in Dover public schools.

The State of New Jersey provides, "Public schools shall be free to . . . [a]ny [child] who is domiciled within the school district." N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). The domicile of a child follows that of his parents. The New Jersey Supreme Court noted that "[s]ince the concept of domicile[e] involves the concurrence of physical presence in a particular [place], and an intention to make that [place] one's home, determination of a disputed issue on the subject requires an evaluation of all the facts and circumstances of the case." Lyon v. Glaser, 60 N.J. 259, 264-65 (1972). N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1) explains that "[a] home is permanent when the parent or guardian intends to return to it when absent and has no present intent of moving from it, notwithstanding the existence of homes or residences elsewhere." The courts have consistently held that "[d]omicil[e] is very much a matter of the mind—of intention." Lyon, supra, 60 N.J. at 264. A person may have multiple residences, but he may have only one domicile at any given time. State v. Benny, 20 N.J. 238 (1955). "A home is permanent when the parent or guardian intends to return to it when absent and has no present intent of moving from it." N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a).

Based on the whole of the record, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not demonstrated a continued state of homelessness to meet the criteria for their children to attend the Dover School District at public expense.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the Dover School District is entitled to tuition for school year 2010-2011 for $10,773.00.

It is so ORDERED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF GLOUCESTER, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	APPLICTION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter – which included a digital recording of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 14, 2011 – along with the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Acting Deputy Commissioner – to whom this mater has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 – concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

In so concurring, however, the Deputy Commissioner is compelled to clarify that petitioner has met the threshold standard of irreparable harm, notwithstanding that participation in graduation exercises is a privilege rather than a right – since the opportunity to participate in such an event cannot be regained once lost, and dismissal of an emergent application on this criteria alone would effectively insulate a school district's actions in matters of this type from any meaningful review.[1]

[1] The Deputy Commissioner is fully aware of the well-established principle that a prohibition from attending events of this type does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed as a totality, as they are by the ALJ herein; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that applications of this kind typically fail. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of the North Warren Regional School District, Warren County, decided by the State Board April 17, 1966; L.J., on behalf of minor child, S.J. and David Wickham v.

This said, however, the fact remains that petitioners seeking emergent relief must additionally demonstrate that the legal right underlying their claim is well settled, that they have a likelihood of success on the merits of their underlying appeal, and that the balance of interest and equities under the circumstances rests in their favor. In each of these respects, the Deputy Commissioner agrees with the ALJ – for the reasons clearly presented in his decision – that petitioner has not met the requisite burden, necessitating that his application must be denied.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted. This matter shall proceed at the OAL for whatever may be required to bring it to conclusion.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF GLOUCESTER, CAMDEN COUNTY,

Respondent.

Christopher M. Manganello, Esq., for petitioner

Frank P. Cavallo, Jr., Esq., for respondent (Parker McCay, attorneys)

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

N.B. (petitioner) filed an application for emergent relief seeking to graduate and to participate in graduation ceremonies scheduled for Thursday, June 16, 2007. The Gloucester City Board of Education (Board) asserts that the petitioner failed to attain a 92% attendance rate for the 2009-2010 school year and is therefore not eligible to graduate and participate in graduation ceremonies.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 11, 2011, petitioner filed an application for emergent relief with the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Special Education Programs. On June 13, 2011, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for an oral argument on the requested emergent relief on June 14, 2011, at 9:00 A.M. On that date, the case was heard in the OAL, Trenton (Hamilton Township), and the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Some of the facts are undisputed. The petitioner is eighteen years of age and is enrolled in the Gloucester City School District. In 2009, he was placed in an alternative at risk placement at the Highland Park Program for Success located in Highland Park.

The petitioner's individualized program plan specifies that the petitioner attend school 92% of the time (R-1). The Highland Park School Handbook states that all students must meet all attendance goals for graduation requirements, and that "any student who does not meet his/her attendance goal will not receive credit for that school year" (R-2, page 8 and 24). The petitioner signed a student contract in which he agreed to attend school "in order to reach my stated goal as noted in my Individualized Program Plan (P-3).

The parties agree that the petitioner had nineteen absences during the 2009-2010 school year, which is an attendance rate of 89.5%. Petitioner argues that eight of the absences were excused and should not count as absences, which would raise his attendance rate above the requirement to 94%.

Petitioner asserts that his family was not aware that he was having significant problems with his grades until the April 2010 progress report, and a meeting was requested. The meeting never took place.

No further communication was received from the school until July 7, 2010 when the petitioner was informed that the petitioner would not be receiving any credit for the academic year. On July 14, 2010, the parents of the petitioner wrote to the District about this situation and stated they would be open to an administrative meeting (P-1). On August 20, 2010, the attorney for the petitioner wrote to the District's attorney to discuss this situation (P-2). The District asserts that the petitioner never filed a petition in this matter and are barred by the ninety-day limitations set forth in N.J.A.C. 6a:3-1.3(i).

The District further asserts that the petitioner is not eligible to graduate because he did not receive any credits for the 2009-2010 school year due to his attendance. Petitioner asserts that he passed al but one course, and therefore would have had enough credits to graduate.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

A party seeking emergent relief must satisfy the standards in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), which requires the movant to establish:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The petitioner must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe test.

The Commissioner has consistently found that denial of attendance at graduation exercises does not constitute irreparable harm. The case law is remarkably consistent that attendance at graduation ceremonies is a privilege, not a right. That privilege may be withheld in the interest of maintaining an orderly and efficient school system. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of the North Warren Regional School District, Warren County, State Board of Education decision, dated April 17, 1996, citing Camden City Board of Education v. NJSLAA, Docket #A-2802-91T2 (App. Div. 1992); Burnside et al. v. NJSIAA, 1984 S.L.D. 1695 (App. Div. 1984), cert. denied 101 N.J. 236 (1985). The determination of whether or not they may attend is within the sole discretion of the board of education. The denial of a privilege, as opposed to denial of a right, creates no irreparable harm. Denial of attendance at graduation exercises is, therefore, not irreparable harm.

The issue of whether the denial of petitioner graduating is a more difficult issue. Significant harm can result as to the failure to graduate, but it is not irreparable. The petitioner can make up the necessary credits and still obtain a high school degree.

Therefore, I FIND that the petitioner has not proven he will suffer irreparable harm.

Local boards of education have been expressly charged with protecting the health, safety, and welfare of its students, and ensuring the orderly conduct of the academic process. The actions of boards of education have a presumption of validity, and petitioners must show that respondent acted arbitrarily and not within the scope of its authority in order to prevail. Thomas v. Bd. of Ed. of Morris Tp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965); Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960).

This case involves the enforcement by the school district and a school of clear educational policies. The action of a board of education which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis, or induced by improper motives. Kopera v. West Orange Bd. of Ed., supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 294.

Petitioner argues that the excused absences should not be counted which would result in him satisfying the attendance goal. I do not agree. The policy does not limit unexcused absences, but sets an attendance rate.

Although no case could be found on point, there are a number of cases involving absenteeism with a teacher. In those cases, a distinction was drawn between a long-term illness and intermediate absences, such as exist in this case, for medical or family reasons. A number of cases have held that high absenteeism has been deemed sufficient grounds for disciplinary action even with the existence of legitimate medical excuse. Trautwein v. Bound Brook Bd. of Educ., 1978 S.L.D. 445, aff'd with modification, State Bd. of Educ., 1979 S.L.D. 876, rev'd, Sup. Ct. App. Div., 1980 S.L.D. 1539, certif. denied, 84 N.J. 469 (1980); Kulick v. Bd. of Educ. of the Town of Montclair, 1983 S.L.D. 1059; Angelucci v. Bd. of Educ. of the Town of West Orange, 1980 S.L.D. 1066, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. 1980 S.L.D. 1077. Wilson v. Board Of Education, Of The Township Of Mount Olive, Morris County , 2011 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 200 (N.J. AGEN 2011).

I FIND there is substantial evidence to conclude that N.B. violated the attendance policy. As a result, I FIND that the Board's actions in applying its policy to prohibit N.B. from graduating and attending and participating in graduation ceremonies due to his conduct, no matter how regrettable and unfortunate this may be for him, cannot be disturbed. Consequently, I further FIND it unlikely that the petitioner would have prevailed on the merits.

As stated above, the actions of boards of education have a presumption of validity. A specific policy and punishment was established by the Board with respect to absences and are enumerated in the School Handbook. Based on these factors, I FIND that the petitioner did not meet his burden of proof that there is a legal right underlying the claim.

Clearly, the petitioner has a substantial interest in graduating and attending and marching in the processional at graduation. He has worked extremely hard to pass all his classes and be in a position to graduate. The Board also has a substantial interest in ensuring that its disciplinary policies are applied as to excessive lateness and absences. If it did not enforce its disciplinary policies, or if it did treat N.B. differently than other students in the school, the Board would be sending the wrong kind of message and possibly establishing a dangerous precedent. Although petitioner has worked so hard and diligently, I FIND that the Board would suffer greater harm than petitioner, if the requested relief was not granted.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) requires that a petition shall be filed no later than ninety days from the date of receipt of notice of final order, ruling, or other action by the District Board of Education, individual party, or agency. In July 2010, the petitioner was notified of this decision as evidenced by his parents' letter dated July 11, 2010. On June 11, 2011, the emergent application and petition were filed. The petitioner filed the appeal eleven months later, well over the ninety-day time period.

The ninety-day rule has been strictly followed, and applied almost without exception. For example, in Dreher v. Jersey City Bd. of Educ., EDU 2777-87, Initial Decision (December 18, 1987), adopted Comm'r (February 2, 1988), aff'd St. Bd. of Educ. (July 8, 1988) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, petitioner filed his petition two days out of time, and the matter was dismissed as untimely. Regardless of whether the board complies with statutory or administrative requirements, the petitioner is required to file the petition no later than ninety days after receipt of notice. Portee v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 94 N.J. Admin. 2d 381, 383.

The instant petition was filed well outside the ninety-day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), and the record provides no reason whatsoever for relaxation of this rule.

DECISION AND ORDER

Since N.J.A.C. 6A:14-2.7(m)(1) and N.J.A.C. 1:6A-12.1 are written in the conjunctive and the petitioner has failed to satisfy all four requirements, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner has failed to establish grounds for the granting of emergency relief. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that the petition of N.B. for emergent relief is DENIED without prejudice.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to *Crowe v. BEFORE RONALD W. REBA, ALJ:

In this case, petitioner D.C., an eighteen-year-old high school senior, seeks emergent relief to allow him to attend and participate in the high school graduation ceremony of Mainland Regional High School scheduled for June 20, 2011, at 6 p.m. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for hearing as a contested case on June 15, 2011, on petitioner's application for emergency relief. The matter was scheduled for oral argument at 9:00 a.m. on June 17, 2011. On that date, testimony and oral argument was presented. At the conclusion of the hearing, the parties advised me that no other issue remained once the emergent relief matter is resolved.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For purposes of deciding the application for emergent relief, the following facts are determined to be undisputed.

According to the testimony of Mark Marrone, vice principal of Mainland Regional High School, and Dr. Thomas Baruffi, superintendent of Mainland Regional School District, and upon a review of the certification of Dr. Robert Blake, principal of Mainland Regional High School, who submitted a certification marked as R-1, D.C., on June 10, 2011, while on school property and prior to the start of the school day, was with a group of students throwing water balloons at other students and at motor vehicles. A parent who was driving his child to school became upset and complained to the vice principal, who was on the scene at the time. D.C., along with the other students involved in the water-balloon-throwing incident, were gathered and brought into the school auditorium, where they were spoken to by the vice principal and the principal. When the group was informed that the discipline for the act would be an out-of-school suspension for four school days, plus exclusion from the graduation ceremony, D.C. became verbally abusive toward the administrators, and in the presence of the other students and the administrators asserted that the administrators "were stupid and nothing but a bunch of idiots." This comment by D.C. resulted in his receiving an additional two days of out-of-school suspension, for a total of six days, as well as the discipline of not being able to walk with his class during the graduation ceremony set for Monday, June 20, 2011. The students' parents, including petitioner's parents, were informed of this fact, and the petitioner, along with his father, D.R.C., appeared to discuss the matter with Mr. Marrone, as well as another vice principal, a Ms. O'Neal. While at this meeting, petitioner again became argumentative with the school authorities, which prompted Mr. Marrone to request that petitioner leave the room because of his actions. Thereafter, D.R.C. continued the meeting with Mr. Marrone and Ms. O'Neal.

On Monday, June 13, 2011, petitioner and his father met with Dr. Baruffi and one of the vice principals regarding D.R.C.'s request that D.C. be allowed to walk at graduation. The superintendent declined this request, but allowed D.C. and his family to appeal his decision to the Mainland Regional School District Board of Education, which was meeting that evening. D.C. and his parents appeared at the school board meeting and presented an appeal of the superintendent's decision to the board. The board, by unanimous vote (9-0), rejected petitioner's request to be allowed to graduate with his class. Dr. Baruffi testified that his recommendation was influenced by the decision of the principal, Dr. Blake, not to allow the petitioner to walk with his class at graduation due to the inflammatory and disrespectful tone of his language to the school administrators and the students who were present at the time in the auditorium, plus a review of his prior disciplinary actions.

D.C.'s disciplinary history was submitted as an attachment to Dr. Blake's petition. In addition, respondent's counsel introduced as R-2 a page from the student handbook, which Mr. Marrone testified was distributed to every student. In this handbook it is specifically stated that graduation is a privilege, not a right, and that serious and/or numerous disciplinary actions will prevent a student from being allowed to participate in the graduation ceremony. Dr. Baruffi testified that the petitioner's attitude, as described to him by Dr. Blake, along with his history of disciplinary actions resulted in Dr. Baruffi recommending to the school board that the petitioner not be allowed to graduate with his class.

D.R.C. introduced a one-page letter dated June 16, 2011, from Dr. Joseph R. Mosley, Ph.D., who is treating the petitioner for anger-management problems. (P-2.) This letter implies that the removal of the petitioner from his graduating class will result in an emotional setback for the petitioner in his treatment process. The letter was shown to Mr. Marrone and to Dr. Baruffi, who, although sympathetic, maintained that their actions were justified because of the petitioner's extremely disrespectful conduct. Both witnesses testified that they would not have made a different decision had they reviewed this letter prior to any action being taken by the principal or the Board of Education.

Petitioner did not make an appearance to explain his actions or testify on his own behalf, and his appeal was limited to the arguments of his father, as well as the letter from Dr. Mosley. The petitioner bases his application on several factors. He argues that the actions of the superintendent and the Mainland Regional High School Board of Education are arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, in that the students who were with the petitioner will all be allowed to graduate with their class on June 20. He is the only student in that group being prevented from walking with his class at graduation. He also argues that other students, whom he could not name, also had prior histories of discipline, but that Dr. Blake basically gave them a "pass." D.R.C. argued that D.C. is being singled out because of his erratic remarks. Although his remarks were not polite, they were not so egregious as to be a violation under the student handbook policy. In response to D.C.'s argument, Dr. Baruffi testified that the school authorities were quite upset by the actions of D.C., which were in the presence of other students and which could only lead to a further erosion of authority if sanctions were not imposed. Respondent's counsel argued that if this episode is allowed to pass without any penalty, it would lead to a growing disrespect of the authority of the school administration, which cannot be tolerated. The other individuals were allowed to graduate at the discretion of the principal, who allowed the petitioner's appeal to go directly to the superintendent and to the School Board. He also asserted that it was the unanimous decision of the School Board to uphold the decision of the principal and superintendent in this matter, because of the petitioner's language, disrespect and prior discipline history.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Petitioner's application claims that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, that petitioner is entitled to the presumption that he is innocent until he is proven guilty, and that the punishment is too harsh in relation to the offense. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible.

The foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982). These legal principles may be summarized as follows:

1. Emergency relief should not issue except when necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief. Pecuniary damages may be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected.

2. Emergency relief should be withheld when the legal right underlying the claim of the requesting party is unsettled.

3. Emergency relief should not issue where all material facts are controverted. Thus, to prevail on an application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. That requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo. The point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began.

4. The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. The relief granted should be no broader than necessary to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits.

As to the first requirement, there are a significant number of cases holding that a prohibition from attending a graduation ceremony or other similar events does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant the extraordinary remedy being requested. Nevertheless, the Commissioner has recently pointed out that there is no adequate after-the-fact remedy that can adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over.

The real issue in a case such as this is whether the petitioner is entitled to participate in the graduation ceremony. It is only where the petitioner can show such entitlement and is being prevented from participation that he is being irreparably harmed. Therefore, the key issue is whether he can show a likelihood of success on the merits. In the absence of a showing of a likelihood of success on the merits, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to establish irreparable harm in this case.

As to the requirement that the right underlying the claim of a requesting party must be settled, it is clear that each school district is obligated to provide a thorough and efficient system of education to all children residing in its school district. N.J. Const. (1947), art. VIII, ¶ 1; N.J.S.A. 18A:33-1. To carry out this policy, local boards of education have been granted discretionary authority at N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1(c) and (d) to adopt rules for the management of the public schools of the district, and to perform all acts and do all things necessary for the lawful and proper conduct of the public schools of the district.

In the present matter, the testimony of the witnesses for the respondent indicates that if the acts in question had been committed a month before graduation, D.C. would have served the suspension period as a penalty and most likely would have been allowed to graduate after a period of calmness. In this case, because the actions of the petitioner occurred on the last day of school, and graduation was imminent, the decision to implement this particular penalty was necessary. No other action could have been taken that would have had the desired effect.

Local boards of education are responsible for protecting the health, safety and welfare of their students and ensuring the orderly conduct of the academic process. Goss v. Lopez, 419 U.S. 565, 95 S. Ct. 729, 42 L. Ed. 2d 725 (1975). To accomplish this, such boards are empowered to establish rules of conduct and impose discipline to enforce such rules. It is established law that the actions of a board of education which lie within the area of discretionary powers, especially as it relates to matters of student discipline, cannot be upset unless there is a showing that the discipline imposed was arbitrary, capricious, without a rational basis, or induced by improper motives. J.M. vs. Hunterdon Cent. Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 415, 419 (citing Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288 (App. Div. 1960)).

Based on the evidence submitted, I cannot conclude that the actions of the school district in imposing discipline upon D.C. were arbitrary, without a rational basis, or induced by improper motives. All that is contained in the record before me in support of D.C. is the argument that it would be upsetting for him and his family if he is not allowed to attend graduation, along with the letter from Dr. Mosley indicating his treatment of D.C. There is simply not enough objective evidence in the record before me upon which I can base a conclusion that petitioner would be successful in prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim that he is not guilty of the disciplinary infractions in question.

There is no question that graduation is a privilege, and that under the clearly enunciated policies of the school district, failure to comply with the disciplinary requirements of the school district will result in a student's exclusion from the graduation ceremony.

Finally, I CONCLUDE that D.C. has failed to show that when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, D.C. will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted. While D.C. and his family have a personal stake in seeing D.C. participate in the graduation ceremony, the school district also has an important interest in seeing that its disciplinary policies are enforced. If those policies are disregarded without clear justification, it will send a message to the students of the school district that they may disregard those policies and avoid the consequences. Such a message will clearly damage the efforts of the school district to ensure the orderly conduct of the academic process.

I have reviewed the case law introduced by D.R.C., along with other cases submitted to me, and I find that they are not helpful, in that these opinions involve out-of-school activities during out-of-school periods of time, which are unconditionally protected by federal law, and are not on point with the immediate facts of this case.

In general, a board of education's actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where board actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Bd. of Educ. of Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of N. Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962)). The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of board actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as having no rational basis. Piccoli v. Bd. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Reg'l Sch. Dist., EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Prot., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd, 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974)), adopted, Comm'r (March 10, 1999) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of the board of education. Massaro v. Bd. of Educ. of Bergenfield, 1965 S.L.D. 84, 85. In Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 294, the Appellate Division noted "the well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives."

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE there is a rational basis for the respondent's action and that the right underlying petitioner's claim is settled against the petitioner's position. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to establish the right to relief in the absence of a full evidentiary hearing showing that the action of respondent is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief is hereby DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days, this recommended decision shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

RESPONDENTS.	:

Petitioner challenged a one-day suspension imposed upon his minor child by the Jamesburg Board of Education (Board). After the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the parties proposed a settlement which the Administrative Law Judge sent to the Commissioner of Education with a recommendation for approval. Upon review of the terms of the proposed Settlement Agreement (Agreement) the Commissioner rejects same because the Board does not have the authority to agree to one of the provisions contained in the Agreement.

Paragraph 1 of the Agreement states:

> The letter dated October 22, 2010 to the parents indicating the one day suspension of October 25, 2010 shall remain in the student file in Jamesburg until June 30, 2011 but will not be transmitted by Jamesburg as part of his separate discipline file to Monroe Township High School or any high school that the student attends.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.8(b), a board of education is permitted to destroy student records which are no longer educationally relevant while the student is still enrolled in a district. However, upon graduation or permanent departure from the school district, under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.8(c)(2), student records may only be disposed of in accordance with the Destruction of Public Records Law, N.J.S.A. 47:3-15 et seq. [1]

Students who successfully complete eighth grade in the Jamesburg school district are sent to the Monroe Township school district for their secondary education because Jamesburg does not have a high school. On June 30, 2011, A.C. will no longer be enrolled in the Jamesburg school district as a result of his graduation from eighth grade. Therefore, since A.C. will no longer be enrolled in the Jamesburg school district, the Board is not authorized to remove the October 22, 2010 letter from A.C.'s disciplinary file on June 30, 2011.[2] Further, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.10, the Board is required to provide A.C.'s disciplinary records to the Monroe Township school district or to any other high school that he may attend.

Accordingly, this matter is remanded to the OAL for revision of the settlement or for further proceedings.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning teachers in these two consolidated cases challenged their transfer from respondent Board's high school to its middle school effective September 1, 2009, alleging violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:25-1 and failure to comply with the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)(8), by not providing notice of the Board meeting so that the affected employees could exercise their right to request in writing a public discussion of the matter. Petitioners contend that if the Board failed to provide this "Rice" notice, the Board violated the law in transferring them, and therefore acted outside its general authority to transfer by roll call vote.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the matter was ripe for summary judgment as there are no issues of material fact in dispute; petitioner Bilse suffered no alteration in pay as a result of her transfer and was transferred back to the high school for the 2010-2011 school year; petitioner Ingram's transfer was approved as part of a public roll call vote of the Board on June 11, 2009, in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:25-1; the meeting during which the Board voted on the transfer was advertised and conducted in compliance with N.J.S.A. 10:4-12(b)(8); and the courts have held that a transfer without loss of salary and without impacting tenure rights is not an adverse action warranting a "Rice" notice. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the appeal of petitioner Bilse as moot since the relief sought has occurred, and dismissed the appeal of petitioner Ingram with prejudice.

Upon careful and independent review, the Acting Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein.

The petitioning teachers challenged their transfer from respondent's high school to its middle school. As petitioner Bilse has been transferred back to the high school and has suffered no monetary loss, her appeal is dismissed as moot.

The Commissioner has reviewed the record and Initial Decision for petitioner Ingram's appeal and finds it to be without merit. First, at its regular public meeting on June 11, 2009, respondent implemented the required roll-call vote approving the transfer. Second, as the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found, a transfer of teaching assignment from one school to another within a district – without loss of salary or impact on tenure rights – is not an adverse action warranting a Rice notice. See, e.g., Carpenito v. Bd. of Educ.of Borough of Rumson, Monmouth County, 322 N.J. Super. 522, 529-530 (App. Div. 1999); Guy Ciarcia v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, Commissioner Decision 155-91 (September 3, 1991), at 2.[1]

Accordingly, petitioner Ingram's appeal is also dismissed.

Record Closed: April 26, 2011 Decided: May 10, 2011

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, ACTING CHIEF ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On August 19, 2009, Gail Bilse, a teacher employed by the Franklin Township Board of Education (the Board) filed an appeal with the Commissioner of Education of the Board's decision to transfer her from the high school to the middle school effective September 1, 2009. The Commissioner transmitted the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on August 31, 2009. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On August 17, 2009, Maxine Ingram, a teacher also employed by the Board, filed an appeal with the Commission of the Board's decision to transfer her from the high school to the middle school effective September 1, 2009. The Commissioner transmitted the contested case to the OAL, where it was filed on September 14, 2009. Both petitioners alleged violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:25-1.

Since that time, the dispute has focused on whether the Board failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:4-12(b)(8) by not providing notice of the Board meeting so that the affected employees could exercise their right to request in writing a public discussion of the matter. Petitioners contend that if the Board failed to provide that notice, the Board violated the law in transferring them, and therefore acted outside its general authority to transfer by roll call vote.

An order consolidating the two matters was entered by Administrative law Judge Israel D. Dubin on April 21, 2010. The parties agreed to proceed by summary decision, and a briefing schedule was ordered. By letter dated September 1, 2010, the schedule was extended, and on October 7, 2010, an additional brief was received. In response to a letter from ALJ Dubin a Board resolution was provided in supplement on February 8, 2011. On March 8, 2011, counsel were notified that the consolidated matter had been transferred to the undersigned pending ALJ Dubin's retirement, and counsel were asked to submit answers to a list of questions. Although a response from respondent's counsel was received on March 22, 2011, repeated calls and letters to petitioner's counsel produced no response at all. Petitioner's counsel was advised by letter that continued silence would be deemed as a waiver of the opportunity to respond, and when that silence continued, the record closed on April 26, 2011.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Through briefs, exhibits, and certifications, the parties have established the following as undisputed fact.

Gail Bilse

Since Bilse suffered no alteration in pay as a result of the transfer from the high school to the middle school, the only relief sought by Bilse was a return to the high school. Respondent's brief of March 22, 2011, a personnel report approved at the Board's May 6, 2010, meeting, which transferred Bilse back to the high school for the 2010-2011 school year.

Maxine Ingram

At the time of the 2009 transfer, Ingram had been employed by the Board for more than thirty-three years and held an instructional certificate with a comprehensive science endorsement. On May 18, 2009, Dr. John Roberts, the Board's Director of Science, informed Ingram that she had been transferred effective September 1, 2009, from the high school to the middle school. Dr. Roberts never stated to Ingram that the Board would be meeting on June 11, 2009, to approve the transfers, and originally, the petition alleged that this action was taken in the absence of a roll call majority vote. The first time the petitioners were supplied with notice of the Board's action was the answers to the petitions some months later. But, in fact, the transfer was approved as part of a roll call vote of the Board on June 11, 2009. (See Certification of Rita F. Barone dated March 22, 2011, and attached Exhibit B.)

With regard to notice of the Board meeting, the Board on April 28, 2009, voted on an Annual Notice of Public Meetings which covered the period from May 7, 2009, through April 27, 2010. (Exhibit A to Certification of John Calvano.) Agendas for meetings are published by the Board on its website on either the Friday or Saturday morning before the meeting, but the agendas do not list names of teaching staff members or school employees. The June 11, 2009, agenda listed a consideration of "P-4, Personnel Report No. 32, dated June 11, 2009 for Professional Staff." Personnel reports on which the Board will be voting are disseminated to the public prior to the start of the meeting. At the June 11, 2009, Board meeting, the Board did not discuss the transfer of either Bilse or Ingram and any aspect of their employment, either in public or in private. Typically, the Board does not discuss transfers in public session. The Board did conduct a public roll call vote approving the list of transfers in public session. The Petitioner's brief contends that Ingram did not receive notice of the Board's vote until the Board filed its official answers to the petition on August 27, 2009. The Board contends it did so by correspondence dated August 14, 2009. (See respondent's brief of October 5, 2010.) With regard to whether prior notice was given, the approximately two-week difference is not material.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

For purposes of determining whether a matter is appropriate for summary decision, an adjudicator should deny a summary judgment motion only where the party opposing the motion has come forward with evidence that creates a "genuine issue as to any material fact challenged," Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995). On a motion for summary judgment the court must grant all the favorable inferences to the non-movant, Id. at 536. The inquiry is "'whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to [a fact finder] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Liberty Surplus Insurance Corp., Inc. v. Nowell Amoroso, P.A., 189 N.J. 436 (2007), Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 536 (1995).

Here, there are no material disputes of fact; the disagreements are entirely a matter of law, and thus the matter is appropriate for summary decision.

The Petitioner's core argument is that she was entitled to a Rice notice[1] before the Board took its action, and that the lack of such notice rendered the action illegal, and therefore outside the Board's general plenary authority to transfer personnel. Carpenito v. Bd. Of Ed. of the Borough of Rumson, 322 N.J.Super. 522 (1999). The materials provided by the Board indicate that the meeting was generally within the parameters of the Open Public Meetings Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:4-12(b)(8), and petitioner has raised no claim of violation of the general tenets of the Act.

In Rice, the Appellate Division noted that the Open Public Meetings Act allows a public body to exclude the public "only from that portion of the meeting at which the public body discusses: . . . (8) Any matter involving the employment, appointment, termination of employment, terms and conditions of employment, evaluation of the performance of . . . any specific . . . employee . . . unless all the individual employees or appointees whose rights could be adversely affected request in writing that such matter or matters be discussed at a public meeting." N.J.S.A. 10:4-12b. The Appellate Court held that the right to request a public discussion of a personnel matter presupposes notice to an employee who may be adversely affected and that the right to privacy is personal and cannot be waived except by the employee himself. One critical aspect of the statement is the right to be heard before adverse action. In general, courts have held that a transfer without loss of salary and without impacting tenure rights is not an adverse action. "A tenured teacher may be involuntarily transferred to another position within his or her certification where no loss of salary or other reduction in employment is suffered and the teacher is not singled out for the transfer on a prohibited basis." Carpentito, quoting Greenaway v. Board of Educ. City of Camden, 129 N.J.L. 46, aff'd 129 N.J.L. 461 (1943) and Williams v. Plainfield Bd. Of Educ., 176 N.J.Super. 154, 162-64 (App. Div. 1980), certif. denied, 87 N.J. 306, (1981) "A transfer is not a demotion or a dismissal under these circumstances." Ibid.

The Commissioner of Education in Guy Ciarcia v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Oal Docket No. EDU 7639-90 (July 15, 2001) cited Ridgefield Park

[1] The notice required pursuant to Rice v. Union Cty. Reg. High School Bd. Of Ed., 155 N.J.Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977).

Education Association v. Ridgefield Park Board of Education, 78 N.J. 144, 156 (1978) for the proposition that, "The selection of the school in which a teacher works or the grade and subjects which he teaches undoubtedly have an appreciable effect on his welfare. However, even assuming that this effect could be considered direct and intimate, we find that this aspect of the transfer decision is insignificant in comparison to its relationship to the Board's managerial duty to deploy personnel in the manner which it considers most likely to promote the overall goal of providing all students with a thorough and efficient education."

However, the statute also addresses "any matter involving . . . terms and conditions of employment." The physical location to which one must report every day would fall within the rubric of a condition of employment, and therefore is potentially implicated here. However, as indicated by the certifications, this Board does not have a practice of discussing the transfers of particular individuals in private session, and as a matter of fact, did not discuss transfers at all – either privately or publicly – before the public vote.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that the requirement of a Rice notice was not triggered both because there was no adverse action within the meaning of the statutes and case law and because the Board had no intent to debate the merits of individual transfers and did not in fact discuss any at all at this meeting, privately or publicly.

ORDER

The appeal of Gail Bilse is DISMISSED as MOOT since the relief sought – transfer back to the high school – has occurred. The appeal of Maxine Ingram is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." BEFORE BARRY E. MOSCOWITZ, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on April 14, 2011, for resolution as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13.

The attached Settlement Agreement and Resolution were submitted indicating the terms of agreement which are incorporated herein by reference.

Having reviewed the record and the settlement terms, I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures and/or the signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore, ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Boards appeal a decision by the Executive County Superintendent (ECS) for Sussex County that Sparta and Kittatinny were obligated to purchase heating fuel oil from Petroleum Traders Corporation (PTC) during the 2008-2009 school year under an alleged joint purchasing agreement between the respondent Board and five other boards of education. Petitioners contend, inter alia, that respondent Board failed to register and obtain approval of a joint purchasing program from the Director of the Division of Local Government Services (DLGS) as required by N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(a), rendering Byrum's agreement with PTC unenforceable against petitioners; further, the ECS did not have the authority to enforce the agreement between Byrum and PTC on petitioners since no joint purchasing agreement exists between petitioners and respondent.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the matter was ripe for summary judgment as there are no issues of material fact in dispute; boards of education that pursue joint purchasing on behalf of other school districts may do so only with the approval of the DLGS and in compliance with the Public School Contracts Law (PSCL) N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-1 et seq. and the Cooperative Purchasing rules set forth in *N.J.A.C.*5:34-7.1 et seq.; in the instant matter, the requirements for a joint purchasing system and a joint purchasing agreement under the PSCL and CP regulations were not met; since no joint purchasing agreement existed between the parties, the ECS did not possess the jurisdiction to resolve the parties' dispute and impose purchasing obligations on petitioners; and respondent's legal and equitable claims must be decided in Superior Court as they do not implicate interpretation of the school laws. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision in favor of petitioners and reversed the decision of the ECS.

Upon careful and independent review, the Acting Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Byram Township Board of Education (Byram) and the replies thereto submitted by the Sparta Township Board of Education (Sparta) and the Kittatinny Regional School District (Kittatinny).

Byram takes exception to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination that the Executive County Superintendent did not have jurisdiction to decide the dispute between the parties. Byram maintains that the ALJ's interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14 was too strict. In its exceptions, Byram argues that there is nothing in the statutory authority indicating that an Executive County Superintendent must first find that a joint purchasing agreement was properly formed in accordance with the statutory and regulatory requirements before determining disputes related to joint purchasing agreements or alleged agreements. Therefore, Byram contends that the Executive County Superintendent properly exercised her jurisdiction over this matter, and that her substantive findings should be upheld.

In reply, both Sparta and Kittatinny urged the Commissioner to adopt the Initial Decision, reiterating the fact that Byram failed to legally create a joint purchasing agreement under the applicable statutory and regulatory provisions, and that the Executive County Superintendent's highly circumscribed jurisdiction is limited to controversies involving valid joint purchasing agreements. Finally, Sparta and Kittatinny both maintain that to the extent Bryam is seeking relief related to this matter, the issues are properly brought before the New Jersey Superior Court.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination that a valid joint purchasing agreement was not established and, therefore, the Executive County Superintendent did not have jurisdiction to resolve the parties' dispute or the authority to impose purchasing obligations on Sparta and Kittatinny. Additionally, the Commissioner agrees that any dispute between the parties concerning whether Sparta and Kittatinny breached an agreement or the potential application of equitable doctrines should be pursued in New Jersey Superior Court. Accordingly, for the reasons thoroughly expressed therein, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter.

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This consolidated matter arises out of an alleged joint purchasing arrangement between respondent Board of Education of the Township of Byram (Byram) and five other boards of education, including petitioners Board of Education of the Township of Sparta (Sparta) and Board of Education of Kittatinny Regional School District (Kittatinny), to purchase heating fuel oil from Petroleum Traders Corporation (PTC) during the 2008–2009 school year. More particularly, Sparta and Kittatinny appeal a decision by the Executive County Superintendent (ECS) for Sussex County that Sparta and Kittatinny are obligated to purchase 185,599 and 38,654 gallons of fuel oil, respectively, from PTC.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On September 24, 2009, Sparta filed a Verified Petition with the Commissioner of Education requesting that an order be issued declaring that the ECS lacked jurisdiction to decide the subject dispute; declaring that the ECS's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable; reversing the ECS's determination that Sparta is obligated to purchase 185,599 gallons of fuel oil at the price of $3.4484 per gallon pursuant to an agreement between Byram and PTC (the Byram-PTC Agreement); and declaring that Sparta is not obligated to purchase fuel oil from PTC. In this regard, Sparta alleges that Byram failed to register and obtain approval of a joint purchasing program from the Director of the Division of Local Government Services (DLGS) as required by N.J.A.C.

5:34-7.5(a) and that, since a joint purchasing program was not registered, approved and legally created, the Byram-PTC Agreement is unenforceable against Sparta and the ECS did not have the authority to enforce an agreement between Byram and PTC and apply its terms to Sparta. (Count I.) Sparta further alleges that Byram failed to comply with N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.4, by failing to enter into a joint purchasing agreement with Sparta for the purchase of fuel oil that sets forth the clear and specific assignments of responsibilities, duties and rights of Sparta and Byram; Sparta did not approve the agreement between Byram and PTC; Sparta did not agree to be bound by its provisions as part of a joint purchasing agreement; and since no joint purchasing agreement exists between Byram and Sparta, the ECS did not have the authority to enforce an agreement between Byram and PTC and apply its terms to Sparta. (Count II.) Sparta asserts that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.20, Byram was required to determine prior to the solicitation of bids for a joint purchasing program, whether the estimates submitted by duly registered members of the joint purchasing program were considered firm and binding or whether a member may withdraw its estimates after Byram had awarded a contract to a vendor; the Byram-PTC Agreement provided that the estimates set forth in the specifications were not guaranteed quantities for purchase and that Sparta need only purchase fuel oil from PTC on an "as-needed basis"; the only quantity requirement in the Byram-PTC Agreement was the requirement of a minimum delivery of 3,000 gallons of fuel oil to each school building; and the Byram-PTC Agreement did not commit Sparta to purchase a specific quantity of fuel oil from PTC, it did not provide clear specific assignments of responsibilities, duties and rights of Byram and Sparta, and it did not create a legal obligation on the part of Sparta to purchase a specific quantity of fuel oil from PTC or Byram. (Count III.) Sparta further avers that the ECS's decision is in direct conflict with N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(h), which prohibits Sparta from purchasing fuel oil at a price that exceeds prices available elsewhere in the market since it forces Sparta to purchase fuel oil at a price of $3.4484 per gallon when fuel oil was available to Sparta from other sources at a lower price (Count IV), and that the Byram-PTC Agreement is an "open-end" contract, which is unenforceable against Sparta. (Count V.) Finally, Sparta alleges that the ECS did not set forth in her decision any legal or factual basis for her conclusion that Sparta is obligated to purchase 185,599 gallons of fuel oil from PTC; no basis in law or fact for the ECS's decision exists; and the ECS's determination is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. (Count VI.)

On September 23, 2009, Kittatinny filed a Petition of Appeal, and later filed an Amended Petition, which asserted claims similar to those advanced by Sparta. Kittatinny alleges that the ECS's decision is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable for various reasons (Count 1); that the ECS lacked jurisdiction or authority to render her determination because there was no joint purchasing or cooperative pricing agreement in effect pertaining to the purchase of fuel oil (Count 2); that if Kittatinny was contractually obligated to purchase heating fuel oil from PTC, Kittatinny satisfied that obligation by purchasing 3,013 gallons of fuel oil from PTC (Count 3); and that, in the absence of approval from the Director of the DLGS of a joint purchasing system, the ECS lacked jurisdiction and was otherwise incorrect, arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable in rendering her determination that Kittatinny was required to purchase 38,654 gallons of fuel oil from PTC.

Byram filed Answers with affirmative defenses to the Petitions, and the Department of Education transmitted the matters to the Office of Administrative Law, where they were filed under EDU 12573-09 (as to Sparta) and EDU 12574-09 (as to Kittatinny) for determination as contested cases. On January 28, 2010, I issued an Order consolidating the matters and scheduling the hearing for September 13, 17, and 20, 2010. Prior to the hearing, Byram filed a motion requesting that the consolidated matter be placed on the inactive list due to a pending action instituted by PTC against Byram in the New Jersey Superior Court in which Byram filed a third-party complaint against Sparta and Kittatinny seeking indemnification and/or contribution to the extent that Byram was held liable to PTC. Sparta and Kittatinny opposed the motion, which I denied by Order dated June 10, 2010. Subsequently, the hearing was adjourned to provide petitioners the opportunity to file motions for summary decision. Sparta and Kittatinny filed motions for summary decision, and Byram filed documentation in opposition to the motions. I entertained oral argument on the motions, after which the parties filed supplemental submissions in support of their respective positions. The record closed upon receipt of the last submission.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

In support of their motions, Kittatinny and Sparta submitted certifications of counsel (Kraemer Cert. and Hara Cert., respectively). Sparta also submitted certifications of Warren S. Ceurvels, Sparta's Assistant Superintendent for Business/Board Secretary (Ceurvels Cert.), and Keith Gourlay, Sparta's Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds (Gourlay Cert.). In opposition, Byram submitted certifications of Byram's former Business Administrator, William Bauer (Bauer Cert.), and Byram's current Business Administrator, Theresa Linskey (Linskey Cert.), along with an Affidavit of the Business Administrator for Sussex Tech Vocational School, Robert Clark (Clark Affid.).[1] A summary of this documentation follows.

In or around May 2008, William Bauer (Bauer), the then Business Administrator for Byram, attended a county roundtable meeting sponsored by the New Jersey Association of School Business Officials (ASBO). Warren Ceurvels (Ceurvels), the Assistant Superintendent for Business/Board Secretary for Sparta, and other school business officials throughout Sussex County also attended the meeting. (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶2; see Bauer Cert. at ¶2.) At the meeting, Bauer discussed with the school business administrators his past experience in advertising for bids for the joint purchase of fuel oil with another school district, and indicated that the school officials should notify him if they had any interest in purchasing fuel oil through joint purchasing with Byram. (See Ceurvels Cert. at ¶3; Hara Cert. at Exhibit A, transcript of Bauer's deposition (Bauer Transcript) at 19–27, 56–57.) Bauer informed the school officials that he would secure a fixed price for fuel oil through the bidding process. (Bauer Transcript at 24; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶3.) Bauer described in his certification that at the May 2008 meeting he invited the other school districts to join him in "a fuel oil consortium"; that "[t]he idea was that if we pooled our resources, and agreed to purchase a volume of fuel jointly, we could achieve favorable pricing"; and that at the meeting he indicated that whoever was interested should provide him with information regarding their district's fuel oil requirements. (Bauer Cert. at ¶2, ¶3.)

[1] After oral argument, Byram also submitted copies of transcripts of the depositions taken in connection with the Superior Court action of William Bauer, Warren Ceurvels, and Kittatinny's Business Administrator (Margaret Conroy) and Superintendent (Craig Hutcheson). In addition, in response to my request for clarification regarding certain documentation submitted, counsel for Sparta submitted additional documents under letter dated April 18, 2011, and counsel for Byram clarified in a letter dated May 4, 2011, that he did not submit a certification of counsel as referenced in Byram's brief.

At the time of the ASBO meeting, Sparta was a member of the Morris County Cooperative Pricing Council (MCCPC). The MCCPC is a cooperative pricing system duly registered with and approved by the Director of the DLGS. It was established in 1974, and is administered by the Township of Randolph, which serves as the MCCPC's lead agency, for the purpose of effectuating cost savings for school districts and other municipal entities through joint purchasing of a wide range of goods, including fuel oil. Sparta had renewed its membership with the MCCPC on or about August 24, 2006, and the MCCPC was renewed for an additional five-year period with the DLGS beginning October 1, 2006, and ending September 30, 2011. As a member of the MCCPC, Sparta purchased fuel oil from the Finch Fuel Oil Company (Finch Fuel) at a price equal to the prevailing market price at the time of fuel oil delivery. As a member of the MCCPC and under the MCCPC Agreement with Finch Fuel, Sparta was not required to purchase a specific quantity or all of its fuel oil needs from Finch Fuel, but had the option to purchase as little or as much fuel oil as it wanted from Finch Fuel. (See Ceurvels Cert. at ¶4–¶7; Gourlay Cert. at ¶2–¶4 and Exhibits A, B and C.)

Subsequent to the ASBO meeting, representatives of Sparta and Kittatinny forwarded e-mails to Bauer regarding the bidding for fuel oil. On May 15, 2008, Margaret Conroy (Conroy), the Business Administrator for Kittatinny, informed Bauer by e-mail that Kittatinny "would love to join your fuel oil bid," and that she would forward information regarding the size and location of its tanks. (Linskey Cert. at Exhibit B.) In a later e-mail that day, Conroy advised Bauer that Kittatinny had one 15,000-gallon tank and used approximately 60,000 gallons in the 2007–2008 school year. (Id. at Exhibit C.) On May 16, 2008, Sparta's Assistant School Business Administrator informed Bauer by e-mail that Sparta's Supervisor of Buildings and Grounds, Keith Gourlay (Gourlay), was interested in the possibility of bidding with Byram for the purchase of fuel oil for the 2008–2009 school year. (Gourlay Cert. at ¶6 and Exhibit D.)

By e-mail dated June 3, 2008, Bauer informed Conroy, Ceurvels and other school officials that "[a]s of now we have 6 members of our heating oil consortium," and requested that information be furnished regarding "estimated district gallonage for the year," along with the addresses of the schools involved for delivery and the contact person for ordering and delivery purposes. (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶9 and Exhibit A; Bauer Cert. at ¶5 and Exhibit A.) He further indicated in the e-mail his intent to put the bid out on July 7, 2008.

Conroy advised Bauer by e-mail dated June 4, 2008, that Kittatinny had one 15,000-gallon tank and used approximately 60,000 gallons in 2007–2008, along with information regarding the location of its school and its contact person. (Linskey Cert. at Exhibit F.) By e-mail dated July 2, 2008, Gourlay provided information to Bauer regarding the gallon capacity of each of Sparta's tanks, the location of the schools and the approximate gallons that each school used for the 2007–2008 school year, which totaled approximately 120,000 gallons. (Gourlay Cert. at ¶9 and Exhibit E.)

After receiving information regarding estimated fuel oil usage, Bauer sent the school officials an e-mail dated July 7, 2008, stating that he would advertise for bids that week and attaching the proposed bid document that would be advertised. The bid opening was scheduled for August 6, 2008. Bauer also stated in the e-mail: "Make sure you do the resolutions you need for this event to take place." (See Bauer Cert. at ¶6 and Exhibit B; Gourlay Cert. at ¶11; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶14.)

Bauer sent Gourlay the bid package that would be advertised, which Byram prepared. (See Gourlay Cert. at ¶11; Bauer Transcript at 30, 37.) The "Invitation to Bid and Specifications" stated in pertinent part:

> Sealed proposals for fuel oil will be received by the Byram Township Board of Education . . . at 10:00 a.m. prevailing time, on Wednesday, August 6, 2008. The Board of Education reserves the right to reject any and all bids.
>
> The unit price per gallon based on 525,000 gallons of #2 fuel oil will be used for comparison of bids. Note the number of gallons is for price comparison and is not a guarantee of quantity to be supplied . . . .
> . . . .

> Bid price shall be a fixed sum per gallon from July 1, 2008 through June 30, 2009 with minimum deliveries of 3,000 gallons for each school . . . .
> [See attachment to letter of Rodney Hara, Esq., dated April 18, 2011 (emphasis added)]

The bid specifications also listed the location of the "eleven (11) Board of Education/Consortium buildings" to which deliveries shall be made, including the number and size of fuel oil storage tanks at each location, and indicated, in pertinent part, that Sparta had eight tanks with a total gallon tank capacity of 71,000 gallons and Kittatinny had one 15,000-gallon tank.

By e-mail dated August 6, 2008, Bauer informed the school officials that he had opened the bid packets; provided the identity and amount of the "[b]est acceptable bid"; and requested that they have their boards approve the bid at their next meeting. (Bauer Cert. at ¶8; Linskey Cert. at Exhibit H.) Bauer subsequently e-mailed the school officials on August 12, 2008, advising that a bidder was making a protest to the bid package, the matter would be rebid and the new bid would be opened on August 26, 2008.[2] (Bauer Cert. at ¶9 and Exhibit D; see Gourlay Cert. at ¶15 and Exhibit G.) According to the certifications of Ceurvels and Gourlay, Bauer did not provide them with a copy of any of the bids Byram received or the second bid package advertised by Byram. (Gourlay Cert. at ¶15, ¶16; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶17.)

After advertising and receiving bids for a second time, Byram adopted a resolution at its meeting on August 27, 2008, rejecting the bids "on the basis that they each contained conditional language as to the price, contrary to the bid specification's request for a firm price," and authorizing "the Business Administrator, on behalf of the Board, to negotiate and execute the Fuel Oil Contract for the best possible price in accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5, which shall be presented to the Board of Ratification at its next Board meeting." (Hara Cert. at Exhibit G.) By e-mail dated August 28, 2008, Bauer informed the school officials that the second bid had been opened on August 27, and that the bids were rejected due to material changes by the bidders. He further stated that, on legal recommendation, the Byram Board had given him the right to negotiate directly with the bidders without going out to bid; he would negotiate the "best pricing possible"; the "current fixed pricing" was approximately $3.57 per gallon; and any official who needed to speak with him should contact him on Tuesday. (Bauer Cert. at ¶10 and Exhibit E; see Ceurvels Cert. at ¶18.) According to the certifications of Ceurvels and Gourlay, they were not provided with a copy of any of the bids Byram received. (Gourlay Cert. at ¶17; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶18.)

By e-mail dated September 3, 2008, Bauer informed the school officials that he had obtained a price of $3.4484 per gallon and was waiting for a second bidder to provide a quote. (Bauer Cert. at ¶11 and Exhibit F.) He further indicated in the e-mail that, "[i]f we use more than the contract gallonage of 450,000 gals. we will then pay .0744 over the market price"; he was not sure whether the next company would provide a better price; and he would decide by noon. In an e-mail sent later that day, Bauer stated, "the Consortium has awarded a fuel bid to [PTC] as follows: 450,000 gallons at a fixed rate of $3.4484, and gallons needed over the 450,000 will be priced at +$.0744 over the OPIS/Newark/Daily/Avg." (Bauer Cert. at ¶12 and Exhibit G.) Bauer further indicated that he would provide details as to whom to call for deliveries. According to Bauer's certification, he thereafter repeated his request that the other boards pass resolutions memorializing their agreement to be part of the consortium and to purchase from PTC and, after receiving resolutions passed by each of the boards, through assistance of counsel, an agreement was prepared with PTC which he executed on behalf of the consortium. (Bauer Cert. at ¶13–¶14.)

The minutes of the Kittatinny Board's meeting on September 18, 2008, reflect that the Board passed a motion "to approve membership with a consortium of Sussex County schools . . . with Byram being the LEA for the purpose of bidding #2 fuel oil for the 2008–09 school year." It also passed a motion to "accept the award of the bid of #2 fuel oil by the consortium LEA, Byram . . . , to [PTC] at a fixed cost of $3.4484 for the first 450,000 gallons purchased with an increase fee of $.0744 over the OPIS/Newark/Daily Average for gallons over 450,000 for the 2008–09 school year." (Linskey Cert. at Exhibits M and N.)

The minutes of the Byram Board's meeting on September 24, 2008, reflect that Byram adopted a resolution to "ratify the award of a contract for the supply of Fuel Oil #2 to [PTC] for the agreed upon price of $3.4484 per gallon for the first 450,000 gallons and an agreed upon price of +.0774 over the OPIS/Newark/Daily/AVG for any gallons over 450,000 that the school district may need." (See attachment to letter of Rodney Hara, Esq., dated April 18, 2011.) On September 24, 2008, representatives of Byram executed the Byram-PTC Agreement. (Ceurvels Cert. at Exhibit D.)

At its meeting on September 24, 2008, Sparta adopted a resolution approving "participation in a joint fuel oil purchasing program with Byram . . . as the host district." (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶20 and Exhibit B; Gourlay Cert. at ¶19.) The resolution further provides that "[t]he fuel oil bid was awarded at $3.45 per gallon plus $0.07 for each gallon over the districts' fuel allotment." The minutes of that meeting state in pertinent part: "In an effort to keep fuel costs to a minimum, Sparta has joined with Byram Twp. BOE to purchase fuel. SBOE [Sparta Board of Education] still retains the option of purchasing fuel through Morris county co-op . . . ." (Ceurvels Cert. at Exhibit C at 4.)

After Sparta adopted the resolution, Byram sent an executed copy of the Byram-PTC Agreement and accompanying bid specifications to Ceurvels under letter dated September 29, 2008, which Ceurvels received on or around October 8, 2008. According to the certifications of Ceurvels and Gourlay, prior to receiving this correspondence they had never seen the Byram-PTC Agreement and were not aware of its terms. (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶22 and Exhibit D; Gourlay Cert. at ¶20.)

The Byram-PTC Agreement is signed by representatives of Byram and PTC. (See Ceurvels Cert. at Exhibit D.) Pursuant to the Byram-PTC Agreement, "[t]he Services will include the delivery of Fuel Oil #2 to the Consortium buildings," and the first delivery shall be made no later than October 15, 2008, and "[a]ll deliveries thereafter shall be made upon notice from the Board [Byram] to the Contractor [PTC] on an as needed basis." (Article 2.1.) The Byram-PTC Agreement states that "[t]he price to be paid by the Board [Byram] to the Contractor [PTC] for the Services performed . . . , known as the Contract Sum," and for which "[t]he Board [Byram] shall be liable," shall be as follows: "450,000 gallons of Fuel Oil #2 at $3.4484 per gallon for a total Contract Sum of $1,551,780. Additionally, any gallons ordered and delivered over 450,000 gallons will be priced at +.0744 over the OPIS/Newark/Daily/AVG." (Articles 4.1 and 4.2.) The Byram-PTC Agreement does not specifically address the amount of fuel oil that would be purchased by Sparta or Kittatinny.

It is undisputed that Byram did not prepare or enter into a written agreement with Sparta or Kittatinny that sets forth the parties' rights and obligations for the purchase of fuel oil for the 2008–2009 school year, including any written agreement to purchase a specific quantity and/or all of their fuel oil needs for the 2008–2009 school year from the successful bidder. It is further undisputed that, although Bauer referred to a "heating oil consortium" in his June 3, 2008, e-mail and the formation of a "fuel oil consortium" in his certification, Byram did not formally create a joint purchasing program or cooperative pricing system; it did not register a joint purchasing program or cooperative pricing system for the purchase of fuel oil from PTC with the Director of DLGS; it did not obtain approval from the Director of DLGS of any such program or system; and the DLGS Director did not approve Sparta's and Kittatinny's membership in the fuel oil "consortium" or the Byram-PTC Agreement. (See Bauer Transcript at 39–41, 45–49, 56; Gourlay Cert. at ¶22; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶35; Hara Cert. at Exhibits B and C, response to request for admission Nos. 3–7, 11.)

Gourlay and Ceurvels describe in their certifications that the price of fuel oil available through the MCCPC had steadily and dramatically increased during the 2007–2008 school year. Specifically, the price of fuel oil available through the MCCPC rose from $2.74 per gallon on November 13, 2007, to $3.89 per gallon on June 26, 2008, for Sparta's High School and Mohawk Avenue School, to $4.02 per gallon on June 27, 2008, for the Middle School, and to $3.95 per gallon on June 25, 2008, for Sparta's Helen Morgan Elementary School. (Gourlay Cert. at ¶5; Ceurvels Cert. at ¶8.)

According to Gourlay and Ceurvels, Sparta pursued the joint purchasing of fuel oil with Byram, and they agreed to participate in the alleged consortium with Byram, in order to secure for Sparta a fixed ceiling price for fuel oil in the event the price of fuel oil available through the MCCPC continued to rise through the 2008–2009 school year and in the event that Sparta could not purchase fuel oil at a lower price elsewhere. Gourlay and Ceurvels certify that at no time did Bauer or any other representative from Byram notify them that the 120,000-gallon estimate that Sparta provided was a firm and binding purchasing commitment that Sparta must undertake in order to participate in the alleged consortium and whether the estimate could be withdrawn after Byram awarded a contract for fuel oil. Additionally, according to the certifications, neither Bauer nor any other Byram representative solicited a commitment from them on behalf of Sparta to purchase a specific quantity or all of Sparta's fuel oil needs for the 2008–2009 school year through the alleged consortium or from PTC; they did not communicate to any Byram representative that Sparta would purchase a specific quantity of fuel oil or all of Sparta's fuel oil needs through the alleged consortium; and Sparta never entered into a written joint purchasing agreement with Byram that sets forth the parties' rights and obligations for the purchase of fuel oil from PTC and/or a joint purchasing agreement with Byram, or a contract with PTC, for the purchase a specific quantity or all of its fuel oil needs for the 2008–2009 school year. The certifications further state that neither Bauer nor any other Byram representative determined and notified Gourlay or Ceurvels of the quantity of fuel oil that Byram should contract to purchase on behalf of Sparta for the 2008–2009 school year; they were not notified that Byram sought to undertake a commitment to purchase a fixed amount of fuel oil for the 2008–2009 school year; and Sparta would not have agreed to participate in the alleged consortium with Byram if doing so required Sparta to purchase a specific quantity or all of its fuel oil needs through the consortium. Rather, Sparta's singular purpose in participating in the alleged consortium with Byram was to secure a ceiling price for the purchase of fuel oil and save the taxpayers of Sparta money in the event the market price for fuel oil available through the MCCPC continued to rise during the 2008–2009 school year, and Sparta agreed to participate in the consortium to enable it to purchase fuel oil from PTC if fuel oil could not be purchased at a lower price elsewhere. In this regard, the certifications of Ceurvels and Gourlay describe that at or around the time the Byram-PTC Agreement was executed, the price of fuel oil available through the MCCPC began to fall. After Sparta adopted the September 24, 2008, resolution, the price of fuel oil available to Sparta through the MCCPC steadily declined from $3.15 per gallon on September 26, 2008, to $1.48 per gallon on February 27, 2009, or approximately $2.00 less per gallon than the $3.4484 price for purchasing fuel oil from PTC. As a result of the dramatic decrease in the price of fuel oil during the 2008–2009 school year, Sparta decided to purchase fuel oil through the MCCPC and saved the taxpayers of Sparta significant sums of money by doing so. (See Ceurvels Cert. at ¶8, ¶11–¶13, ¶16 ¶25, ¶27–¶28, ¶35; Gourlay Cert. at ¶6–¶8 ¶10; ¶14, ¶21–¶26.)

In opposition to the motion, Byram cites to various excerpts from Ceurvels' deposition testimony. During the deposition, Ceurvels testified that when he received the Byram-PTC Agreement, he understood that Sparta would be bound "[o]nly to the price" in the agreement. He explained that "annexed as part of the contract were the bid specifications" that "stated that the gallonage is only an estimate of fuel oil and not to bind any of the participants to that amount," which "reaffirmed . . . that this was the maximum ceiling amount that we were going to pay if we purchased through this consortium." Ceurvels noted that Sparta did not sign the Byram-PTC Agreement, the Sparta Board did not approve the agreement, and the Board only approved the $3.44-per-gallon price to purchase fuel oil from PTC. Ceurvels described his understanding that "if we were going to buy fuel from [PTC] it would be at [the] price" of $3.44 per gallon and PTC would be bound by this price. He further expressed the view that if Sparta had chosen to purchase fuel oil from PTC, Sparta would have the right to insist on the $3.44-per-gallon price and PTC would be bound to sell Sparta fuel at this price even though Sparta did not sign the Byram-PTC Agreement and no joint purchasing agreement had been signed. In response to questioning regarding why Ceurvels had this belief if no valid consortium was formed and Sparta was not a signatory to the contract, Ceurvels stated, "[b]ecause Mr. Bauer was able to obtain through his negotiations of [PTC] a purchase price of $3.45 rounded off," "[a]cting on behalf of all the districts," including Sparta. He further testified that Sparta "never enforced the [Byram-PTC] agreement." (See Transcript of Ceurvels' deposition at 42–46, 93–96.)

With regard to Kittatinny, Conroy described that since she commenced employment with Kittatinny in 2005 and up to the present, Kittatinny purchased its fuel oil through the New Jersey State contract from vendors approved by the State. According to Conroy, no joint purchasing, cooperative pricing or "consortium" arrangement that she has ever participated in on behalf of a public entity has ever required a minimum quantity of goods/services that must be purchased, and neither

Bauer nor anyone else advised Conroy that by joining the "consortium" Kittatinny was required to purchase a minimum number of gallons of fuel oil. Conroy described that her objective in deciding to participate in the "consortium" was to secure a fixed ceiling price for fuel oil in the event that the prices under the State contract rose to a high level during the ensuing school year, and that the contract between Byram and PTC was not furnished to Kittatinny until after Kittatinny had adopted a resolution to join the "consortium." Conroy further testified that at all relevant times, Kittatinny believed that it could purchase its fuel oil requirements from any supplier offering the lowest price, and was not required to purchase from PTC. (See Kraemer Cert., Exhibit A, transcript of Conroy deposition at 15–17, 25–26, 31–32, 37–39, 65, 67, 72, 78–79, 83, 85, 96.)

Byram also submitted the deposition transcript of Kittatinny's Superintendent, Craig Hutcheson. Hutcheson described that he was told by Conroy that as part of the consortium, Kittatinny was not obligated to purchase fuel oil from one supplier. Hutcheson noted that this was also not mentioned in the proposed contract, which he reviewed before it was signed, and that he brought the matter to the Board in September 2008. Hutcheson testified that Kittatinny was "looking at purchasing this oil at a maximum price in case we got caught in a bind where oil prices went up," and stated his understanding that the 450,000 gallons in section 4.1 of the Byram-PTC Agreement referred to the gallons of fuel oil that would be available for the schools. In response to whether it was Hutcheson's "understanding that although Kittatinny was not a party to this agreement, in other words, wasn't listed as a party to the agreement, . . . Kittatinny was nonetheless bound by the terms of the agreement as part of the consortium," he stated, "I would say we were bound to the terms guaranteeing a ceiling price for oil, that was our understanding, for that particular school year. It was a maximum price we would be exposed to." (See Transcript of Hutcheson's deposition at 9–17.)

Byram further submitted a certification of its current Business Administrator, Theresa Linskey. According to that certification, on or about February 11, 2009, Linskey received a telephone call from Conroy, who identified herself as the Business Administrator for Kittatinny, and indicated that Kittatinny was one of a "group" to purchase fuel oil at $3.34 per gallon. Linskey further relayed alleged advice by Conroy during that telephone conversation that the prices had dropped significantly; she did not want to spend taxpayer money on a higher price for fuel oil; Kittatinny went elsewhere to purchase fuel oil; and it was "unethical" for Kittatinny to back out of the consortium, but Kittatinny was doing so for cost-saving purposes. (Id. at ¶2–¶4 and Exhibit A.)

By letter dated June 17, 2009, Ceurvels received an invoice from PTC in the amount of $250,013.42, as of June 17, 2009, for its "portion of the unused heating oil gallons" from the Byram-PTC Agreement. (Ceurvels Cert. ¶29 and Exhibit E.)

On June 19, 2009, the ECS e-mailed Ceurvels, along with Sparta's Superintendent of Schools and other superintendents and business officials of the school districts involved, requesting their attendance at a meeting at the ECS's office on June 24, 2009, regarding their "respective obligations under the agreement between Byram Township as the LEA and [PTC] for your districts to obtain fuel oil for the 2008–2009 school year." (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶30 and Exhibit F.) In the e-mail, the ECS stated that "[a]s per [N.J.S.A.] 18A:18A-11, Boards of Education may enter into joint purchasing agreements for their respective districts"; "per [N.J.S.A.] 18A:18-12 (sic) such agreements shall be entered into by resolution adopted by each participating board of education"; "[t]he county office has copies of the Board resolutions passed by both Sparta and Kittatinny, yet to date no fuel has been purchased and no monies have been paid by either district toward the agreed upon fuel purchase"; and "[a]s of June 17, 2009 Sparta is delinquent by $250,013.42 and Kittatinny is delinquent by $52,068.84." The ECS further advised that "[i]n the case of any controversy or dispute with these joint agreements, as per [N.J.S.A.] 18A:18A-14, the same shall be referred to the county superintendent and his/her determination shall be binding, subject to appeal to the Commissioner and the State Board."

Ceurvels attended the June 24, 2009, meeting conducted by the ECS. According to his certification, during the meeting Ceurvels set forth the position that Byram did not create a valid joint purchasing program, that Sparta did not enter into a joint purchasing agreement with Byram, and that Sparta was not legally obligated to purchase a specific quantity of fuel oil from PTC. The ECS distributed a chart at the meeting that purported to set forth the purchasing obligations of each of the six districts under the Byram-PTC Agreement and listed, in pertinent part, a balance of 38,654 gallons for Kittatinny and 185,599 gallons for Sparta. (Ceurvels Cert. at ¶31–¶32 and Exhibit G.) The chart stated that the "# [of] Gallons [is] based on number of tanks and capacity of those tanks for each district."[3]

Subsequent to the June 24, 2009, meeting, the ECS issued a letter dated July 1, 2009, which states: "After reviewing all of the issues involved in this situation, I have made the determination that the six districts are responsible to purchase the percentage allocation allotted to their district, and not . . . only 3,000 gallons," and that the districts "need to purchase from [PTC] the . . . number of gallons remaining as per the agreement" pursuant to the chart distributed at the meeting. (Ceurvels Cert. at Exhibit H.) The ECS determined that Sparta is obligated to purchase 185,599 gallons, representing a cost of $640,019.59, and Kittatinny is obligated to purchase 38,654 gallons, representing a cost of 133,294.45.

Counsel for Sparta requested that the ECS reconsider her decision by letter dated July 31, 2009. (Hara Cert. at Exhibit D.) In connection therewith, counsel asserted, among other claims, that Byram did not create a legally constituted joint purchasing program; Byram did not register and obtain approval of a joint purchasing program from the DLGS Director as required by the regulations; Sparta did not enter into a formal joint purchasing agreement with Byram; Sparta did not inform Byram that it would purchase a specific quantity or all of its fuel oil from PTC; no factual basis existed for concluding that Sparta had agreed to purchase 185,599 gallons of fuel oil from PTC, which exceeded the estimate that Sparta had furnished to Byram; and since there was not a legally constituted joint purchasing program, the ECS did not have jurisdiction to resolve the dispute pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14. In response to these legal arguments, the ECS issued a letter dated August 11, 2009, stating: "As far as my office is concerned, the spirit of the agreement appears not to have been upheld by Sparta. Had the price of fuel oil not dropped, I am fairly certain that questions about the legality of the initial agreement would not be surfacing." (Hara Cert. at Exhibit E.)

[3]The parties do not dispute that the ECS appears to have relied on the following criteria and calculations in arriving at these balances: The ECS added up the total number of gallons for each fuel oil tank listed in the bid specifications and reached a total of 162,000 gallons. The ECS then took the amount of fuel oil storage capacity listed for each district's tanks in the bid specifications, and divided the same by 162,000 gallons to arrive at a percentage figure of total storage capacity. The ECS multiplied that percentage by the 450,000 gallons of fuel oil stated in the Byram-PTC Agreement to reach a total gallons of fuel oil that each district was obligated to purchase from PTC. The ECS then subtracted from this total the amount of fuel oil the district actually purchased from PTC during the 2008–2009 school year to arrive at the balance figures.

Bauer states in his certification his understanding that, with the exception of Sparta and Kittatinny, the other four members of the consortium satisfied their purchase obligations with PTC. Bauer further states that "it was clear to everyone that the agreement to join the consortium meant that the consortium members were required to purchase their allotted amount of fuel from [PTC]"; "[i]t was made clear to the other members all along that they had an obligation, not an 'option' to purchase from [PTC]"; and "[a]t no time during the process did the representatives of Kittatinny or Byram[4] ever express any 'lack of understanding,' nor did they ask any substantive questions with regard to their obligations." (Bauer Cert. at ¶15–¶18.)

Byram also submitted an Affidavit of the Business Administrator for Sussex Tech Vocational School, Robert Clark. Clark indicated that he attended an ASBO meeting in or about April 2008, during which Bauer gave a presentation concerning a proposed fuel oil consortium that he was attempting to form, and Clark attended another meeting in or about May 2008, where Bauer continued the presentation concerning the proposed fuel oil consortium. According to Clark, Bauer conveyed that the boards that were interested in joining the consortium would have to provide their fuel oil requirements so that Bauer could determine how much fuel oil would be necessary to be purchased in accordance with the bid and the contract process, and Bauer indicated, "if you are in, you are in," or words to that effect. Clark further described that Bauer indicated that the boards which were joining the consortium would be required to purchase the fuel that was to be contracted for in accordance with the consortium; at no time did Bauer ever say that the purchase of fuel oil would be "optional" or that boards would not be required to purchase fuel oil; and Bauer specifically stated that those participating members would "have to" purchase the fuel oil from the selected supplier. (Clark Affid. at ¶2–¶5.)

[4] It appears that Bauer inadvertently referred to Byram rather than Sparta.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), summary decision "may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This rule is substantially similar to the summary judgment rule embodied in the New Jersey Court Rules. See Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954). In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995), the New Jersey Supreme Court addressed the appropriate test to be employed in deciding the motion:

In evaluating the merits of the motion, all inferences of doubt are drawn against the movant and in favor of the party against whom the motion is directed. Judson, supra, 17 N.J. at 75. However, "[w]hen a motion for summary decision is made and supported, an adverse party in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). Summary decision should be denied "only where the party opposing the motion has come forward with evidence that creates a 'genuine issue as to any material fact challenged.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 529 (citation omitted). The New Jersey Supreme Court has cautioned that, "if the opposing party offers no affidavits or matter in opposition, or only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, '[f]anciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment, taking as true the statement of uncontradicted facts in the papers relied upon by the moving party, such papers themselves not otherwise showing the existence of an issue of material fact." Judson, supra, 17 N.J. at 75 (citations omitted). A "non-moving party cannot defeat a motion for summary judgment merely by pointing to any fact in dispute." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 529. Disputed issues of fact that are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature will not suffice. Ibid.

The principle argument advanced by Sparta and Kittatinny during oral argument is that the ECS lacked the jurisdiction or authority to determine the controversy between the parties because no legally created joint purchasing system and joint purchasing agreement pursuant to the Public School Contracts Law and the corresponding regulations existed. Accordingly, it is urged that the ECS's decision determining that Sparta and Kittatinny are obligated to purchase 185,599 and 38,654 gallons of fuel oil, respectively, from PTC should be reversed and the contractual dispute vis-à-vis the parties' obligations under the Byram-PTC Agreement must be resolved in the Superior Court.

The Public School Contracts Law (PSCL), N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-1 et seq., provides the statutory framework with regard to the expenditure of public funds on behalf of a board of education. Oceanside Charter Sch. v. New Jersey State Dep't of Educ., Office of Compliance Investigation, 418 N.J. Super. 1, 10 (App. Div. 2011). Article 3 of the PSCL governs "joint purchasing agreements." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-11 to -14.4. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-11, "boards of education of two or more districts may provide jointly by agreement for the provision and performance of goods and services for their respective districts." The school laws dictate the terms that must be included in joint purchasing agreements. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12, entitled "contents of agreement," instructs that "[s]uch agreements shall be entered into by resolution adopted by each participating board of education . . . and shall set forth" the following information: (1) "the categories of goods or services to be provided or performed," (2) "the manner of advertising for bids and of awarding of contracts," (3) "the method of payment by each participating board of education," and (4) "other matters deemed necessary to carry out the purposes of the agreement." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12(a) (emphasis added). Subsection (b) of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12 further directs that "[e]ach participant's share of expenditures for purchases under any such agreement shall be appropriated and paid in the manner set forth in the agreement and in the same manner as for other expenses of the participant." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-13 makes clear that "[s]uch purchases and all contracts pertaining thereto shall be subject to all provisions of law and the applicable rules and regulations of the State board." The next section of the statutory scheme provides that, "[i]n the event that any controversy or dispute shall arise among the parties . . . to any such contract, the same shall be referred to the county superintendent of the county in which the districts are situated for determination and his determination thereon shall be binding, subject to appeal to the commissioner and the State board pursuant to law." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14 (emphasis added).

The New Jersey Legislature has delegated to the Director of DLGS within the Department of Community Affairs the authority, after consultation with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner), to adopt rules implementing the provisions of the PSCL. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-49.2. The DLGS has promulgated detailed and comprehensive regulations prescribing the procedures that boards of education must follow when pursuing joint purchasing. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.1 et seq. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-21.5 directs that "[a] district board of education . . . may by resolution establish joint purchasing systems," provided that "[s]uch joint purchasing system is effective only upon approval of the Director of the [DLGS]" (emphasis added). Similarly, the DLGS regulations instruct that "[b]oards of education . . . that pursue joint purchasing as described in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-11 shall be subject to the rules set forth" in that subchapter, known as the Cooperative Purchasing Rules (the CP regulations). N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.1(a) and (f) (emphasis added); see also N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.32(a). Accordingly, boards of education that pursue joint purchasing on behalf of other school districts may only do so with the approval of the DLGS Director and in compliance with the PSCL and the CP regulations.

In pertinent part, the CP regulations define a "cooperative purchasing system" as "a cooperative pricing system [or] joint purchasing system . . . which has been approved and registered pursuant to this subchapter." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.2. A "joint purchasing system" is defined as follows:

> "Joint purchasing system" means a cooperative purchasing system in which the lead agency serves as the purchasing agent for the membership of the system with all of the duties and responsibilities attendant thereto. The lead agency advertises for bids and awards a single contract to a vendor providing for the payment to the contractor for its own needs and for the needs of the participating registered members of the system. The only contractual relationship is between the lead agency and the vendor.

In turn, a "lead agency" is defined as "the contracting unit which is responsible for the management of the cooperative purchasing system," and a "contracting unit" is defined as including a board of education. Ibid. Although the regulations do not define the phrase "cooperative pricing system," the difference between this type of system and a joint purchasing system has been explained as follows:

> In a joint purchasing system, two or more local government agencies contractually agree that one of them will serve as the lead agency or purchasing agent for the group, at least with respect to certain specified categories of purchases. The lead agency, in its capacity of purchasing agent, does the buying for the group. It prepares the formal bid specifications; advertises for and receives bids, and executes a contract with the lowest responsible bidder for the full amount of the commodities or services needed by all participants.
> A cooperative pricing system differs from a joint purchasing system in that separate contracts or purchase orders are executed between each participating government agency and the vendor. The local governmental unit serving as the lead agency essentially is providing the members of the cooperative pricing system the availability of prices for specified items based upon its having carried out the advertising and bid procedures required by the Local Public Contracts Law.
> [27 N.J.R. 3259(a), 3260 (September 5, 1995).]

In accordance with the CP regulations, "[t]wo or more contracting units may join together to form a cooperative pricing system or a joint purchasing system for the provision and performance of goods and services." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.3(a). If this course is taken, the contracting unit designated as the lead agency is required to authorize the creation of the system by resolution, and identify in its authorizing resolution whether the system is either a joint purchasing system or a cooperative pricing system. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.3(b).

In addition, the cooperative pricing or joint purchasing system must be registered with and approved by the DLGS Director. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(a). The lead agency of the proposed system is charged with the obligation to apply to the DLGS Director on behalf of the system's participating contracting units for approval of that system. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(b). The application must include the action requested; the name of the cooperative purchasing system; the name of the contact, address and telephone number of the lead agency; the name of the participating contracting units affected by the request; and "certification of compliance with N.J.S.A. 40A:11-1 et seq. and 18A:18A-1 et seq., as appropriate." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(c); N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.2. Following the submission of the application, the DLGS Director must review the application utilizing the following criteria:

> 1. Provision for maintaining adequate records and orderly procedures to facilitate audit and efficient administration;
> 2. Adequacy of public disclosure of such actions as are taken by the participants;
>
> 3. Adequacy of procedures to facilitate compliance with all provisions of the Local Public Contracts Law, Public School Contracts Law and corresponding rules; and
>
> 4. Clarity of provisions to assure that the responsibilities of the respective parties are understood.
> [N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(e) (emphasis added).]

If the application is approved, the "[a]pproval shall be for a period not to exceed five years, and shall be limited to the terms, participants and scope of services presented for approval." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(f). After the system is approved by the DLGS Director, any subsequent changes shall be submitted to the Director on the form designated in the regulations. Ibid. Additionally, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(a), upon approval of a system registration and annually thereafter the lead agency must publish in an official newspaper a notice similar in content to the notice set forth in that regulation.

Beyond the above registration and approval requirements, a lead agency has an obligation to enter into joint purchasing agreements with each of the system's members. As previously noted, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12 addresses the "contents of agreement" and delineates basic information that must be included. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14.3 further directs that "[a] contract . . . entered into pursuant to this act shall set forth the charge for all services provided, or in the case of a joint undertaking the proportion of the cost each party thereto shall assume and specify all the details of the management of the joint undertaking, and any other matters that may be deemed necessary." Similarly, the CP regulations provide that "[a] contracting unit may apply for membership in an approved cooperative purchasing system by passage of a resolution and executing a formal agreement with the lead agency." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.6(a). The regulations mandate that all cooperative pricing or joint purchasing systems "shall be based on a formal agreement entered into between the lead agency and each contracting unit," and "[e]ach agreement shall be authorized by resolution." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.4(a) (emphasis added). The formal agreement must, "[a]t a minimum," include the following information:

1. Reference to the authorizing statute;

2. Identification of the type of purchasing system;

3. Description of the items of the goods and services to be purchased;

4. The manner of advertising for bids and of awarding contracts;

5. Clear and specific assignment of responsibilities, duties and rights of all contracting units;

6. Provision for any sharing of administrative costs and/or payment for goods and services purchased, together with any necessary standards of performance;

7. Length of the agreement, not to exceed 5 years . . . ;

8. The name of the lead agency for the system; and . . .

9. A requirement that the system identifier shall appear on all documentation related to purchases made through the system, including bidding documents, purchase orders, vouchers, contracts and records.

[N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.4(b) (emphasis added).]

The CP regulations further impose affirmative obligations on the lead agency with respect to the advertising and preparation of bid specifications for joint purchasing. In the case of a joint purchasing system, "[b]efore seeking bids, the lead agency shall obtain from the registered members . . . the exact quantity of goods to be provided or services to be performed that the lead agency shall purchase for the registered members." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(c) (emphasis added). In situations involving a cooperative pricing system, "[b]efore seeking bids, the lead agency shall obtain from the registered members . . . the estimated quantities that each registered member proposes to contract for during the life of the master contract." Ibid. (emphasis added). In addition, for a joint purchasing system, the lead agency "shall disclose in the specifications, the quantities and details of delivery required." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(d). For a cooperative pricing system, the lead agency "shall include in the specifications lead agency requirements, stated in definite quantities; and registered member requirements, stated as individual estimated needs," and "shall list the registered members who have submitted estimates, their delivery address, their estimated maximum quantities and other relevant information to permit the bidder to understand what is potentially involved." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(e). Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.10(a), for either type of system, the request for bids must contain language requiring uniform bid price(s) for both the lead agency and registered members, and include a provision with respect to the registered members substantially in the form set forth in that regulation.

The CP regulations also address terms and conditions with regard to the "master contract" in a cooperative pricing system between the lead agency and the vendor. The master contract "shall" provide for "[t]he quantities ordered for the lead agency's own needs" and "[t]he estimated aggregate quantities to be ordered by the registered members who submitted estimates, subject to the specifications and prices set forth in the master contract." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.11(b). The lead agency shall supply the registered members of the cooperative pricing system who have submitted estimates, the name of the successful bidder, prices awarded and the contract identification number, and each registered member who submitted estimates may then order directly from the vendor. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.11(c). Registered members of a cooperative pricing system "who submit estimates shall not issue orders and contractors shall not make deliveries that deviate from the specifications or price as set forth in the master contract." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.11(d).

With regard to either type of system, "[n]o contract shall be made by any registered member for a price which exceeds any other price available to the registered member." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(h). The regulations governing a cooperative pricing or joint purchasing system further mandate that the lead agency "shall determine prior to the solicitation of bids whether the estimates submitted by a duly registered member of the system shall be considered firm and binding or a member may withdraw its estimate even after a supplier has been selected." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.20.

In short, the requirements governing a joint purchasing arrangement between school boards reveal a statutory and regulatory framework designed to ensure that all boards of educations are put on notice of their rights, responsibilities and duties in pursuing joint purchasing. They require that the lead agency create by resolution a cooperative purchasing system and identify in its resolution whether the system is a joint purchasing system or a cooperative pricing system. They require that after such a system is created and identified, the lead agency must apply to the DLGS Director on behalf of the system's participating contracting units for approval of that system. They require that the lead agency and each of the system's members enter into a joint purchasing agreement that satisfies the statutory and regulatory requirements, including, "[c]lear and specific assignment of responsibilities, duties and rights of all contracting units." They require the lead agency to solicit from the member districts before seeking bids either "the exact quantity of goods to be provided or services to be performed that the lead agency shall purchase for the registered members" (if a joint purchasing system) or "the estimated quantities that each registered member proposes to contract for during the life of the master contract" (if a cooperative pricing system). And, in either case, the regulations require that the lead agency determine prior to the solicitation of bids whether the estimates submitted by a duly registered member of the system are considered firm and binding or whether a member may withdraw its estimate even after a supplier has been selected.

Against this backdrop, the within matter involves Sparta's and Kittatinny's appeals from the ECS's determination that they are obligated to purchase 185,599 and 38,654 gallons of fuel oil, respectively, from PTC. Petitioners urge, among other claims, that the ECS lacked the jurisdiction or authority to resolve the subject dispute because no valid joint purchasing system or joint purchasing agreement existed stemming from Byram's failure to adhere to the requirements of the PSCL and CP regulations.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, the Commissioner possesses the jurisdiction to decide "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." Plainly, the Commissioner has the authority to determine whether a valid joint purchasing system was legally created and whether a joint purchasing agreement between Byram and Sparta or Byram and Kittatinny was in place in accordance with the PSCL and the corresponding regulations. Further, inasmuch as N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14 explicitly provides for an appeal to the Commissioner from a determination made by the county superintendent, the Commissioner unquestionably has the authority to determine whether the ECS properly invoked or exercised the statutory authority to determine a controversy or dispute between local boards of education arising out of a joint purchasing agreement.

I CONCLUDE that there is no genuine issue of material fact in dispute regarding Byram's failure to comply with the requirements set forth in the PSCL and the CP regulations governing joint purchasing by a board of education.

The undisputed evidence establishes that Byram, as a lead agency seeking to pursue joint purchasing on behalf of other school districts, failed to create and register a cooperative purchasing system for approval by the DLGS Director. Succinctly stated, I agree with petitioners' stance that the "heating oil consortium" referred to in Byram's e-mail correspondence was neither a joint purchasing system nor a cooperative pricing system as envisioned by the governing statutes and regulations. Byram's failure to register the "consortium" for approval by the DLGS Director was not an inconsequential omission. Rather, N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-21.5 unambiguously directs that a "joint purchasing system is effective only upon approval of the Director of the [DLGS]." Emphasis added; see also N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.1. Indeed, had Byram registered a cooperative purchasing system, the DLGS Director would have reviewed the application to ascertain whether the purchasing system had clear provisions in place "to assure that the responsibilities of the respective parties are understood," whether the system had adequate procedures "to facilitate compliance" with the PSCL and the corresponding rules, and whether "public disclosure" of the participants' actions was adequate. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.5(e). In other words, had Byram registered the "consortium" as a joint purchasing system or a cooperative pricing system, critical information concerning the parties' intent in joining the "consortium" would have been revealed, such as Sparta's and Kittatinny's asserted intent to secure a ceiling price for fuel oil in the event that the cost of their alternative sources of oil continued to rise and Byram's asserted intent to secure a commitment from them to purchase a specific quantity or all of their fuel oil needs for the 2008–2009 school year. In turn, this would have forced the parties to come to a clear understanding of what purchasing commitments they were or were not willing to undertake. Apart from this, Byram's failure to register a cooperative purchasing system with the DLGS Director deprived the Director of the opportunity to review the proposed system, including its impact on member districts, and to determine whether Byram complied with the PSCL and applicable regulations.

It is further undisputed that Byram did not prepare and enter into a written joint purchasing agreement with either Sparta or Kittatinny in accordance with the statutory and regulatory requirements. Byram did not prepare and enter into a "formal agreement" with Sparta or Kittatinny setting forth the "[c]lear and specific assignment of responsibilities, duties and rights" of the school boards with respect to the "consortium," or the manner in which administrative costs and/or payment for goods and services purchased would be shared. N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.4(b). Similarly lacking is any written formal agreement that expressly addressed "the method of payment by each participating board of education," "the proportion of the cost each party [to a joint undertaking] . . . shall assume" or "the details of the management of the joint undertaking." N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12(a); N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14.3. The record is further bereft of any written formal agreement between Byram and Sparta or Byram and Kittatinny that expressly addressed the specific nature of the purchasing commitment being undertaken, including any obligation to purchase a specific quantity or all of their fuel oil needs for the 2008–2009 school year through the "consortium." The resolutions adopted by Sparta and Kittatinny do not address these matters. Indeed, at least as to Sparta, it apparently adopted its resolution before it received the Byram-PTC Agreement and, according to the minutes of the meeting, apparently proceeded to take the action it did believing that it retained the option to purchase fuel oil through the MCCPC.

Further absent from the record is written correspondence demonstrating that prior to seeking bids Byram obtained information from Sparta and Kittatinny pertaining to the "exact quantity" of fuel oil that Byram should purchase on their behalf (as required for a joint purchasing system) or the "estimated quantities" that they proposed "to contract for during the life of the master contract" (as required for a cooperative pricing system), and that Byram determined "whether the estimates submitted by a duly registered member of the system shall be considered firm and binding or a member may withdraw its estimate even after a supplier has been selected." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9; N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.20. If a cooperative pricing system was intended, the specifications also should have included "the lead agency requirements; stated in definite quantities, and registered member requirements, stated as individual estimated needs," and the master contract with the vendor must provide for [t]he quantities ordered for the lead agency's own needs" and "[t]he estimated aggregate quantities to be ordered by the registered members who submitted estimates." N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.9(e); N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.11(b). In the within matter, the Byram-PTC Agreement does not set forth the quantity of fuel oil that Sparta or Kittatinny would order for the 2008–2009 school year, and the bid specifications do not set forth minimum quantities that Sparta and Kittatinny may purchase but, instead, list the size and number of their fuel oil tanks.

Byram's opposition to the petitioners' motions does not raise a genuine issue of fact concerning Byram's non-compliance with the PSCL and CP regulations. Indeed, Byram candidly acknowledged in its submissions that "these formalities [under the PSCL and CP regulations] were not followed" and that "all of the legal requirements were not satisfied" under the PSCL and CP regulations. I do not embrace Byram's position that its obligations under the PSCL and CP regulations are "technical" requirements or "formalities" that may be overlooked. Rather, the statutes and regulations unambiguously instruct that the requirements are mandatory and applicable to all boards of education that pursue joint purchasing of goods or services on behalf of other boards of education. See N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-13; N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-21.5; N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.1; N.J.A.C. 5:34-7.32.

The issue of whether a joint purchasing agreement within the intendment of the statutes and regulations was in existence among the parties to this action is pertinent in view of the narrowly drawn jurisdiction and adjudicatory power conferred upon the county superintendent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14. The statute grants to the county superintendent limited jurisdiction and adjudicatory authority over certain disputes among boards of education. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14 confers jurisdiction upon the ECS to determine a "controversy or dispute . . . among the parties . . . to any such contract." Emphasis added.

In contrast to the Commissioner's general jurisdiction to determine controversies and disputes arising under the school laws, the Legislature has assigned to the county superintendent the narrow function of making an initial decision in a dispute among parties to a joint purchasing agreement. Plainly, the reference to "such contract" in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14 must be read in context with the other provisions in Article 3, which address the mandatory contents of, and procedures governing, "joint purchasing agreements." In other words, "such contract" means a joint purchasing agreement that was created under the PSCL and complies with the basic requirements as to content (see N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-12), and with all applicable rules and regulations of the State board (N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-13). Stated differently, the Legislature has granted to the county superintendent limited jurisdiction and the authority to resolve a dispute between or among parties to a joint purchasing agreement that meets the requirements of the statutes and regulations, including the requirements governing the DLGS's approval of the purchasing system and the clear delineation in the agreement of the parties' responsibilities, duties, rights and share of expenditures. The plain language of the statute does not evidence a legislative design to grant to the county superintendent broad and general powers to resolve disputes among boards of education stemming from issues arising outside of a joint purchasing agreement that complies with the applicable statutes and regulations.

I agree with petitioners' position that the jurisdiction conferred upon the county superintendent to entertain the dispute and the authority to require performance can only be invoked where there is a valid joint purchasing agreement to be interpreted. Had Byram complied with the statutory and regulatory provisions, the county superintendent would have been clothed with the authority to act under the narrowly drawn jurisdiction granted by the Legislature in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-14. The county superintendent would have had an approved joint purchasing system and a formal joint purchasing agreement before her to review, including an agreement containing explicit provisions that addressed the boards' responsibilities, duties and rights, method of payment and the manner of apportioning to each board its share of the expenditures for goods and services furnished by the contractor.

I CONCLUDE that the requirements for a joint purchasing system and a joint purchasing agreement under the PSCL and CP regulations were not met. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that since no joint purchasing agreement within the intendment of the PSCL and CP regulations existed between the parties, the ECS did not possess the jurisdiction or authority to resolve the parties' dispute and to impose purchasing obligations on Sparta and Kittatinny.

The crux of Byram's position is that Sparta and Kittatinny should be bound based on contract law, and should also be held liable under equitable principles of estoppel, waiver and/or ratification. Byram argues that issues of fact exist as to whether Sparta and Kittatinny breached their agreement with Byram, whether the petitioner school districts should be equitably estopped from denying that they have an obligation to purchase fuel oil from PTC, whether they waived the requirements under the PSCL and CP regulations by virtue of their conduct, and/or whether their resolutions amount to a ratification of their agreement to be part of the consortium and/or the Byram-PTC Agreement. In short, Byram asserts that the documentary evidence and deposition testimony demonstrate that Sparta and Kittatinny knew of their legal obligations, and they acknowledged joining the consortium along with their belief that they would have the right to enforce the Byram-PTC Agreement against PTC.

The Commissioner's jurisdiction is defined by statute, and is limited to "controversies and disputes arising under the school laws." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. Our courts have held that "[w]here the controversy does not arise under the school laws, it is outside the Commissioner's jurisdiction even though it may pertain to school personnel." Bd. of Educ. of E. Brunswick v. Twp. Council of E. Brunswick, 48 N.J. 94, 102 (1966). It is recognized that "the sweep of the Department's interest and the Commissioner's jurisdiction does not extend to all matters involving boards of education." Archway Programs, Inc. v. Pemberton Twp Bd. of Educ., 352 N.J. Super. 420, 424–25 (App. Div. 2002). In determining the scope of the Commissioner's jurisdiction under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9, the Appellate Division has held that "contract claims against boards [of education] do not arise under the school laws but rather from statutory or common law," and such claims are appropriately adjudicated by the Superior Court. Id. at 425; see Picogna v. Bd. of Educ. of Cherry Hill, 249 N.J. Super. 332, 335 (App. Div. 1991) (holding that the "contract claim of a nontenured school employee does not arise under the school laws simply because its outcome may later enable him to attain tenure under the school laws," and "[w]hether petitioner's employment was wrongfully terminated under the contract and under the CEP Act is for the court, not the Commissioner, to decide"); S. Orange-Maplewood Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ. of the Sch. Dist. of S. Orange and Maplewood, 146 N.J. Super. 457, 463 (App. Div. 1977) (holding that the Commissioner did not have jurisdiction over a dispute involving the interpretation of a sabbatical leave provision set forth in a collective negotiations agreement between the board of education and the education association). Indeed, in its motion requesting that this proceeding be placed on the inactive list due to the pending Superior Court action, Byram urged that contract claims against boards of education do not arise under the school laws, but rather statutory or common law, and only the Superior Court had jurisdiction to render legal rulings with regard to the parties' obligations under the terms of the contract and jurisdiction to determine what obligation is owed to PTC under the terms of the Byram-PTC Agreement.

I CONCLUDE that the issues raised by Byram are insufficient to defeat petitioners' motions for summary decision. I CONCLUDE that the legal and equitable claims raised by Byram do not invoke the Commissioner's jurisdiction, as such claims do not implicate or require an interpretation of the school laws, requiring the expertise of the Commissioner. Any dispute between the parties concerning whether Sparta or Kittatinny breached an agreement with Byram and/or the Byram-PTC Agreement, or whether equitable doctrines should be applied as a result of their conduct and/or admissions, are questions of law that should be decided in the Superior Court.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that summary decision should be granted in favor of Sparta and Kittatinny and that the ECS's decision should be reversed on the basis that the ECS lacked the jurisdiction or authority to resolve the dispute between the parties. In so ruling, I do not express any opinion as to the existence or meaning of any agreement between the parties, the proper interpretation or enforceability of the Byram-PTC Agreement against petitioners, and/or the impact (if any) of the parties' conduct in this matter, issues that should be decided in the Superior Court, as in the case of any other contractual dispute.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that petitioners' motions for summary decision be and hereby are GRANTED, and that the ECS's decision dated July 1, 2009, be and hereby is REVERSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 37-2/11

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ARLENE DOBY, BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, SOMERSET COUNTY.

Nicholas Celso, III, Esq., for petitioner (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein and Celso, attorneys)

Keith Waldman, Esq., for respondent (Selikoff and Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 21, 2011 Decided: May 13, 2011

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on February 22, 2011, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Stipulation of Settlement and Release indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement is in compliance with the standards set forth in In Re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842 (1990).

3. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

4. The tenure charges involve issues of absenteeism.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

EDU 01857-2011 S ADMINISTRATIVE ACTION STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT AND RELEASE

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional School District ("the Board") is a body politic and corporate, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which is encusted with maintaining and conducting the public schools of the said School District; and

WHEREAS, Arlene Doby is a tenured secretary employed by the Board; and

WHEREAS, on or about January 14, 2011, Dr. J. Michael Schilder, Superintendent of Schools, filed sworn tenure charges (Ex. A, annexed hereto) against Respondent, together with a sworn statement of evidence in support of the charges, with Peter Stamz, School Business Administrator/Board Secretary; and

WHEREAS, on or about January 28, 2011, Arlene Doby filed a Statement of Position with the Board pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(3) (Ex. B, annexed hereto); and

WHEREAS, on February 8, 2011, the Board determined to certify the charges to the Commissioner of Education for a hearing, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq.; and simultaneously to continue Respondent's suspension without pay, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14; and

WHEREAS, on or about February 11, 2011, the sworn tenure charges, together with a certificate of determination and certificate of service, were filed by the Board with the Commissioner of Education, and Respondent was simultaneously served with the sworn tenure charges, sworn statement of evidence, certificate of determination and certificate of service, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 et seq.; (Ex. C, annexed hereto); and

WHEREAS, on or about February 16, 2011, Arlene Doby filed an Answer to the tenure charges pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a) (Ex. D, annexed hereto); and

WHEREAS, on or about February 22, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case, where it was assigned to Administrative Law Judge, Hon. Donald J. Stein; and

WHEREAS, in or around December of 2010, Ms. Doby submitted an application to the Public Employees Retirement System (PERS) for disability retirement; and

WHEREAS, on or about March 18, 2011 Ms. Doby was notified by PERS that her application for disability retirement has been approved, effective March 1, 2011; and

WHEREAS, in view of the foregoing approval by PERS Ms. Doby is willing to resign for purposes of retirement and the Board is willing to withdraw the tenure charges, subject to approval by the Office of Administrative Law and Commissioner of Education without modification, and in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises contained herein, the legal sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, the parties agree to a tentative settlement of the matter in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and the following terms and conditions:

1 Tenure Charges to be Moot/No Further Board Action

The Board agrees that upon approval of the within Settlement Agreement and Release ("this Agreement" or "this Settlement") by the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner without modification that the subject tenure charges shall be moot and shall be deemed to be withdrawn by the Board, and that no further action shall be initiated by the Board regarding the underlying charges. However, both parties agree that in the event that this Agreement is not approved by the Commissioner of Education that they fully reserve their rights to proceed with the subject litigation (including all claims and defenses) and/or any other cause of action that they might have related to same and that their obligations under this agreement shall be null and

2 Resignation

Respondent has tendered her irrevocable resignation (copy annexed hereto as Ex. E) from all employment with the Board of Education, subject to fulfillment of the terms and conditions set forth in this Settlement and, said resignation to be effective as of the close of business on the date of approval of the within Settlement by the Commissioner without modification.

3. Payment

In full and final satisfaction of all claims by respondent, as more fully detailed below, the Board shall pay respondent as follows:

Salary, less all normal payroll deductions for 8.3 unused vacation days.

4. No Further Compensation/Benefits

Respondent shall be entitled to no further compensation, emolument of employment or fringe benefit of any kind and specifically waives her right to same, with the exception of any benefits to which she may be lawfully entitled under the Workers' Compensation Act or COBRA.

5. Release

In exchange for the above consideration, Respondent, and her heirs and assigns hereby irrevocably and unconditionally waive, release and forever discharge any claims or rights, whether known or unknown, which they have or may have against the Board, personally and officially, individually and collectively; its past and present Board members, officers, administrators, agents, employees, attorneys, and their successors, heirs and assigns, including, but not limited to any claims for attorneys fees, back pay or front pay, any claims for emotional distress or pain and suffering, any claims involving tax liability emanating from this settlement, and any claims arising under any federal, state or local ordinance, regulation or law including, but not limited to, the New Jersey and Federal Constitutions, Title VII of the Civil Rights Acts of 1871 and 1991, the Americans with Disabilities Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, the Federal Family and Medical Leave Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Equal Pay Act, the Workers' Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the New Jersey Family Leave Act, the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law, the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law, the Employer-Employee Relations Act, any collective negotiations agreement, any common law claim and any other claims for harassment, discrimination or retaliation of any kind, breach of promise, misrepresentation, negligence, fraud, estoppel, defamation, violation of public policy, wrongful or constructive discharge, [illegible] claims.

This release specifically excludes claims, if any: (a) arising under any pension, earnings or tax sheltered annuity plan in which Arlene Doby is a participant; (b) arising under the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Act or (c) arising from the breach of this Stipulation of Settlement and Release. Arlene Doby is unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

6. No Admissions

Nothing contained in this Agreement shall be deemed to constitute an admission of wrongdoing or liability by either party.

7. Non-Disparagement

Both parties agree not to make or solicit any comments, statements, or the like to the media or to others that may be considered to be derogatory or detrimental in nature.

8. Surrender of Board Property

Respondent shall forthwith surrender all school keys and property in her possession to the below named legal counsel who, in turn shall forward same to the Board's counsel.

9. Public Interest

This Settlement will serve the public interest in that the a lengthy and expensive tenure dismissal litigation will be avoided with the result of a voluntary agreement removing respondent from her tenured position. If the tenure case were to have litigated to conclusion, this is the most favorable outcome that the Board could have achieved if the litigation were to continue and the Board were to succeed.

10. Board Approval

The Board President has been duly authorized by Board Resolution (Ex. F) to execute this Agreement on behalf of the Board of Education.

11. Assent to Terms

Respondent hereby acknowledges that she enters into this Agreement with a full understanding of her rights and that she was fully informed of the implications of this Agreement by her legal counsel. Respondent also enters into same without duress and of her own free will and volition.

Respondent acknowledges that she was given the opportunity to fully consider this Agreement for a period of up to twenty-one (21) days and seven (7) days from the execution of this document to revoke this Agreement by delivering written notification to Mr. Bobby Zahn, Esq., at Whippany Road, Suite 210, P.O. Box 2355, Morristown, New Jersey 07962. It is understood that if this Agreement is revoked, it will not be effective or enforceable and Plaintiff will be entitled to none of the consideration described herein.

12. Entire Agreement

This Agreement represents the entire understanding of the parties and may be modified only in a subsequent written instrument, duly executed by the parties. No other representations of any kind shall be binding upon the parties.

13. Materiality and Severability

The Parties agree that each paragraph of this agreement is material. In the event that any portion of this Agreement is determined to be illegal, the Parties agree, in advance, to reform the Agreement in good faith to provide each Party with the full benefit of the settlement memorialized by this Agreement to the extent permitted by law. In the event that a court or agency of competent jurisdiction shall deem any part of this Agreement to be contrary to law and should such reformation prove impossible, then the remaining portions of the Agreement shall remain in full force and effect.

14. Governing Law

This Agreement and all provisions hereof shall be governed by and construed under the laws of the State of New Jersey.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the signatures and/or seals of the parties or their duly authorized representatives have been set forth on the dates indicated below:

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE CHARGES AGAINST ARLENE DOBY,	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
BY THE BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL BOARD OF EDUCATION, SOMERSET COUNTY, NEW JERSEY	SWORN TENURE CHARGES AGAINST ARLENE DOBY

STATE OF NEW JERSEY} SS:
COUNTY OF SOMERSET}

I, J. Michael Schilder, Ed.D., of full age and capacity, having been duly sworn by the undersigned authority, depose and say as follows:

I am employed by the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional Board of Education (the "Board") as Superintendent of Schools. The Board maintains administrative offices at 836 Newmans Lane, Bridgewater, New Jersey 08807. Arlene Doby has been a secretary in the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional School District (the "District") since August 11, 1997. I am fully familiar with the facts and circumstances regarding the Sworn Tenure Charges against Ms. Doby. I hereby charge Ms. Doby with chronic absenteeism, neglect, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal and reduction in salary, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, as follows:

CHARGE I

Ms. Doby was hired by the Board in or about August of 1997 as a Payroll/Bookkeeping Secretary in the office of the Business Administrator/Board Secretary and subsequently attained tenure in her position. Ms. Doby has been chronically absent from her position since she began her employment with the District. Assuming that Ms. Doby continues her employment with the Board until at least February 23, 2011, since the commencement of her employment, Ms. Doby will have missed 623 days of employment. Her absenteeism continues to have a detrimental impact upon the Board's operations. Over the previous 13 or so years that Ms. Doby has been employed by the Board she has been absent an average of approximately 41.5 days per year. Ms. Doby's deficiencies in this regard are set forth fully below in each of the following Counts. This conduct constitutes chronic absenteeism and/or other just cause warranting dismissal, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

Count 1:

During the 1997-98 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on nine and a half (9.5) separate occasions, including but not limited to two and a half (2.5) sick days and two (2) personal days.

Count 2:

During the 1998-99 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 19 separate occasions, including but not limited to nine (9) sick days and one and a half (1.5) personal days.

Count 3:

During the 1999-00 school year, despite admonitions concerning her need to improve attendance, Ms. Doby was absent on 43.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 24 sick days, two (2) personal days and four and a half (4.5) days of approved leave.

Count 4:

During the 2000-01 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 45.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 19.5 sick days, seven (7) sick days without pay, two (2) personal days, and three (3) days of approved leave.

Count 5:

During the 2001-02 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 28 separate occasions, including but not limited to seven and a half (7.5) sick days, two (2) personal days and four (4) days of approved leave.

Count 6:

During the 2002-03 school year, Ms. Doby took was absent on 39.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 19 sick days, one (1) personal day and three and a half (3.5) days of approved leave.

Count 7:

During the 2003-04 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 110.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 17 sick days, three (3) personal days and 70 days of approved leave.

Count 8:

During the 2004-05 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 33.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 13.5 sick days, two (2) personal days and one (1) day of approved leave.

Count 9:

During the 2005-06 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 43.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 14.5 sick days, two (2) personal days and one and a half (1.5) days of approved leave.

Count 10:

During the 2006-07 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 55.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 14 sick days, seven (7) sick days without pay, two (2) personal days, and six and a half (6.5) days of approved leave.

Count 11:

During the 2007-08 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 33.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 14 sick days, two (2) personal days and a half (0.5) day of approved leave.

Count 12:

During the 2008-09 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 35.5 separate occasions, including but not limited to 12.5 sick days, two (2) personal days and one (1) day of approved leave.

Count 13:

During the 2009-10 school year, Ms. Doby was absent on 42 separate occasions, including but not limited to 15.5 sick days, two (2) personal days and one (1) day of approved leave.

Count 14:

During the 2010-11 school year, assuming that Ms. Doby continues her employment with the Board until at least February 23, 2011, Ms. Doby will have been absent on 93 separate occasions as of February 23, 2011, including but not limited to 14 sick days, 54 family leave days and two (2) personal days.

CHARGE II

Ms. Doby has demonstrated poor judgment, failed to follow directions, policies and procedures; and has engaged in otherwise improper conduct, as specifically set forth below in each of the following counts. This misconduct constitutes neglect, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

Count 1:

In her capacity as a secretary in the Board's payroll department during the 2003-2004 school year, Ms. Doby input payroll-related data for herself, resulting in overpayments. She continued to so on at least one other occasion in 2009, despite having been explicitly directed in writing not to do so.

Count 2:

Ms. Doby has failed to properly follow policy and procedures upon requesting vacation time on at least two (2) occasions including, but not necessarily limited to her failure to receive prior approval before taking vacation days in 2007 and 2010.

Count 3:

Ms. Doby has demonstrated significant lapses in judgment and unacceptable conduct including, but not necessarily limited to: 1) an incident in 2005 during which she informed a candidate for the position of executive secretary that she must not have received the job; and 2) an incident in 2010 when she was observed not picking up the phone when it repeatedly rang despite her responsibility to do so.

Re: In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Arlene Doby, Bridgewater-Raritan Regional School District
Statement of Position
Our File No. 5840

Dear Mr. Starrs:

This firm represents Arlene Doby in connection with the above-referenced matter. In accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, please consider the following as Ms. Doby's statement of position to the tenure charges filed against her. The tenure charges dated January 14, 2011, were received by Ms. Doby on January 17, 2011.

As to Charge I, to the extent that chronic absenteeism can be proven, the charge is deficient inasmuch as the charge fails to consider the reasons for the absences as is required by Montville and other Education Law. Also the charge fails to account for whether any of the absences were and are eligible for leave under the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993, as amended, or the New Jersey Family Leave Act or qualify as leaves of definite duration which are a recognized form of disability accommodation under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination and the Americans with Disabilities Act. Ms. Doby contends that the Board had and has a duty to extend leaves and to reasonably accommodate her known disability and the absenteeism charge could have been avoided if the Board had provided her the leaves and reasonable accommodations.

In the alternative, even if the Commissioner were to ultimately find that the Board's administrators could not accommodate Ms. Doby, to the extent that the alleged absenteeism was caused by a known disability, instead of bringing a charge of "excessive absenteeism," the administrators should have more appropriately brought a charge of incapacity and/or made an application for involuntary disability pension. Instead, the administrators chose to brand the disability-based absences as "chronic absenteeism" and have impeded her pending application for an ordinary disability pension. Ms. Doby reserves the right to bring such action as may be appropriate under the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, contending that the mis-reporting of the disability-based absences as a disciplinary matter for chronic unexcused absenteeism violates her rights under the anti-discrimination laws and is unjustifiably interfering with her ability to apply for a disability-based pension. Ms. Doby urges the Board to require its administrators to amend the charges to state a sole charge of incapacity, to direct its administrators to clarify to the Division of Pensions that it has brought the charges based upon allegations of chronic disability-based absenteeism which it contends cannot be accommodated and direct its administrators to cross-file for an involuntary disability pension based upon incapacity.

As to Charge II, Ms. Doby denies the allegations of this charge and leaves the Board to its proofs, noting that the charge appears to be a "make weight" effort to re-catagorize the attendance-based charges and payment for days absent as a form of neglect, insubordination and/or other just cause. Ms. Doby denies the allegations and also notes that the alleged conduct, even if proven, does not arise to a level that would justify her removal as an employee.

Should the charges be certified, on Ms. Doby's behalf, we assert the following preliminary objections:

(a) the charges, as received, are not supported by a statement of evidence as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. The certification that accompanies the charges is, in many respects, not made upon personal knowledge contrary to Patrolman's Benevolent Ass'n. v. Montclair, 70 N.J. 130, 134 n. 1 (1976) and Wang v. Allstate Ins. Co., 125 N.J. 2, 16 (1991) (affidavits must be made upon personal knowledge). To the extent that the charges are based upon unsworn hearsay statements by third parties, they do not satisfy the requirements of the residuum rule. Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 51 (1972). As a result, the charges and supporting materials fail to provide Ms. Doby with adequate notice of the charges against her and, therefore, deprive her of a meaningful opportunity to meet and rebut the charges with a formal statement of position. This is improper as a matter of constitutional and administrative due process. See, e.g., Town of West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500 (1962); Nicoletta v. North Jersey Dist. Water Supply Comm'n, 77 N.J. 145 (1978); Dolan v. City of East Orange, 287 N.J. Super. 136 (App. Div. 1996).

(b) the filing of the charges constitutes an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable action and a failure to accommodate.

Without waiving these objections, Ms. Doby denies the allegations set forth in the charges. It is Ms. Doby's position that the charges made against her are either untrue or are distorted and cast to present her in a false light. Additionally, there is a lack of substantial, credible evidence supporting the charges, and the proposed penalty is excessive. In view of the foregoing, probable cause does not exist to support the charges, nor is there sufficient basis to warrant the dismissal of Ms. Doby from her tenured position or a reduction of her salary. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.

Again, we urge the Board, in the strongest terms possible, to amend the charges to state a single charge of incapacity, to update its response to the Division of Pensions accordingly and to cross-file for an involuntary disability pension. If the Board does so, Ms. Doby may be able to file a non-contesting answer to the charge and all parties could be spared tens of thousands of dollars in unnecessary litigation costs.

Very truly yours,

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE CHARGES AGAINST ARLENE DOBY,	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION
BY THE BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL BOARD OF EDUCATION, SOMERSET COUNTY, NEW JERSEY	CERTIFICATE OF DETERMINATION FOR FILING OF TENURE CHARGES AGAINST ARLENE DOBY PURSUANT TO N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 AND N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1

I, Peter F. Starrs, being of full age, do hereby certify:

1. I am the Board Secretary/Business Administrator for the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional Board of Education (hereinafter "Board of Education") and am fully familiar with the instant matter.

2. On January 14, 2011, Sworn Tenure Charges Against Arlene Doby, a tenured secretary employed by the Board of Education, together with a Sworn Statement of Evidence and Exhibits, were filed with the undersigned, by Dr. J. Michael Schilder, Superintendent of Schools of the Board of Education.

3. On January 14, 2011, the Sworn Tenure Charges and accompanying Sworn Statement of Evidence and exhibits were transmitted to Arlene Doby, advising her, inter alia, of his right to submit a written Statement of Position and a written Statement of Evidence, under oath, within 15 days of receipt thereof.

4. After consideration of the Sworn Tenure Charges and Statement of Evidence against Arlene Doby, together with the response thereto filed by her attorney on behalf of Mr. Dudley, the Board of Education determined at a duly convened meeting held on February 8, 2011 at 7 p.m. at 836 Newmans Lane, Bridgewater, New Jersey 08807, during the closed executive session portion of the meeting, that there was probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges and that the Sworn Tenure Charges are sufficient, if credited, to warrant dismissal and/or reduction of salary of Arlene Doby.

5. Accordingly, the Board further determined to proceed to certify the Sworn Tenure Charges to the Commissioner of Education for a hearing pursuant to law.

6. The determination to certify the said Sworn Tenure Charges to the Commissioner of Education was authorized by a majority vote of the full membership of the nine (9) member Board which vote was:

8 ayes 0 nays 1 abstentions and 0 absent.

7. Additionally, at the same meeting, the Board resolved to suspend Arlene Doby without pay, in accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-14. This action was authorized by a majority vote of the full membership of the nine (9) member Board which vote was:

8 ayes 0 nays 1 abstentions and 0 absent.

I hereby certify that the foregoing statements made by me are true to the best of my knowledge and belief and that if same are willfully false, I am subject to punishment under law.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ARLENE DOBY, BRIDGEWATER-RARITAN REGIONAL BOARD OF EDUCATION, SOMERSET COUNTY

BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY

DOCKET NO. 267-9/08

ANSWER TO TENURE CHARGES

Respondent, Arlene Doby ("Ms. Doby" or "Respondent"), residing at 4 W. Somerset Street, Raritan, New Jersey 08869, by way of answer to the Statement of Charges certified to the Commissioner of Education, says:

CHARGE NO. 1

As to the allegations set forth in the first unnumbered paragraph and subsequent Counts 1 - 14, Respondent admits that she had absences, but denies she is chronically absent without cause. As the Bridgewater-Raritan Regional Board of Education ("Board" or "Petitioner") is aware, Ms. Doby is capable of performing her assignments even though she suffers from a disability. Some, if not all, of her absences qualify under the Family Medical Leave Act of 1993, as amended, and/or the New Jersey Family Leave Act and/or the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination and/or the Americans with Disabilities Act. On many occasions, Ms. Doby gave the Board actual notice that her absences were due to her disability. On other occasions, Ms. Doby gave the Board constructive, if not actual, notice that her absences were due to her disability.

In the alternative, if it is proven that Ms. Doby's disability makes it impossible for her to perform her assignments, the charges should more properly be framed as charges of incapacity and the Board should cross-file for an involuntary disability pension. In fact, if it is determined that Ms. Doby is incapable of performing her assignments, the Commissioner should render a decision of incapacity as opposed to conduct unbecoming and notify the Division of Pensions of this determination.

CHARGE NO. 2

As to the allegations set forth in the first unnumbered paragraph of this charge, and subsequent Counts 1 - 3, denied as stated. Charge No. 2 is a thinly veiled attempt to add weight to Charge No. 1 by claiming Ms. Doby is insubordinate and has acted negligently. By the Board's own admission, Ms. Doby has been employed by the Board for thirteen years and has less than a handful of minor infractions. None of the infractions rise to the level of insubordination or neglect and none warrant the penalty of termination of employment.

SEPARATE DEFENSES

FIRST SEPARATE DEFENSE

Petitioner has failed to comply with the procedural requirements of the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et. seq.

SECOND SEPARATE DEFENSE

A rational nexus between the allegations made by Petitioner, even if true, and Respondent's fitness to work, does not exist.

THIRD SEPARATE DEFENSE

Petitioner's allegations, if true, would demonstrate that Respondent has a disability which required reasonable accommodation within the meaning of New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1 et seq. and the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C. §701 et seq., as opposed to requiring punishment under the Tenure Employees' Hearing Law.

FOURTH SEPARATE DEFENSE

The charge of insubordination is unmerited as, on its face, the charge fails to refer to any deliberate and wilful refusal to comply with and disobedience of a legitimate order or directive.

WHEREFORE, Respondent requests that the Commissioner of Education issue an order dismissing the instant charges.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:	DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured special education teacher, employed by respondent since 1975 – appealed the district's withholding of her salary increment for the 2010-2011 school year. Petitioner contended that the Board's withholding of her increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The Board contends that it acted appropriately pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which authorizes local boards to withhold salary increments for inefficiency or other good cause.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: an individual contesting a salary increment withholding has the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable; for the 2009-2010 school year, petitioner was re-assigned as an inclusion teacher in kindergarten; petitioner was observed and evaluated by her principal and the special education supervisor, both of whom had extensive training and experience in special education; petitioner received "unsatisfactory" ratings in the categories of Students and Learning, Instruction, and Classroom Environment, and a "needs improvement" rating in Planning and Preparation; both administrators were in agreement that petitioner failed to perform up to their level of expectation; and petitioner failed to meet her burden to prove that respondent's action in withholding her increment was arbitrary, capricious, unlawful, or induced by improper motive. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed petitioner's appeal with prejudice.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter for the reasons expressed therein. The petition was dismissed.

Record Closed: March 31, 2011 Decided: May 13, 2011

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

Petitioner Adele Stapleton appeals the denial of a salary increment for the 2010-2011 school year. On September 20, 2010, petitioner appealed to the Department of Education, asserting that respondent's decision to withhold her salary increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. On September 28, 2010, respondent Jersey City School District (the District or Jersey City) filed its answer asserting that it had acted appropriately pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. The matter was then transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where on October 6, 2010, it was filed as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing was held on March 4, 2011. The record closed following receipt of the parties' post-hearing briefs on March 31, 2011.

The issue in dispute is whether respondent's withholding of petitioner's increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

TESTIMONY

Jorge Fernandez

Jorge Fernandez (Fernandez) is the principal of Public School 20 in the Jersey City Public School System. He has worked for Jersey City Public Schools for thirty-two years and worked as the principal for P.S. 20 for twelve years. Fernandez worked as an elementary teacher, a high school teacher, a supervisor, an assistant principal and a principal. Fernandez received extensive training and professional development in special education. Part of his duties as principal in P.S. 20 was the evaluation of the teachers in that school. Fernandez testified that petitioner began teaching at P.S. 20 around 1999 and he was the principal at that time. Fernandez began the evaluations of petitioner around five to six years ago.

During the evaluation of petitioner, Fernandez would go over the blank evaluation forms and then provide petitioner with the evaluation within the next twenty days. Fernandez inquired as to whether petitioner understood the evaluation (which she did); then inquired as to whether she had any questions (which she did not).

Fernandez's evaluation took place on April 12, 2010, because petitioner was not available in the beginning of the year and Fernandez wanted to provide the petitioner with a chance to settle in to her then-current position. In addition, Fernandez wanted to make sure that petitioner had ample support in order to promote success.

Fernandez reviewed petitioner's plans and found that the plans lacked details and revealed a lack of true effort by petitioner. Her plans were not clear and contained no notes. It was Fernandez's experience that the better the plans, the better the teacher—and thus the better the education provided to the students.

When Fernandez attended the petitioner's classroom, he found that the atmosphere was not conducive to learning and the adults in the classroom did not act as a team. The children's needs were not being properly addressed. Fernandez found that petitioner did not create records on the students' progress or performance. Such records are essential, especially in the case of special education students. He found that petitioner was barely covering the basics. Petitioner took a very passive role relating to the children. It appeared to Fernandez that petitioner was "barely going through the motions." Fernandez believed that a good teacher must have the ability to constantly monitor the children and adjust instruction in order to enhance learning.

Fernandez felt that petitioner's efforts to engage students were unsatisfactory. Because petitioner did not communicate clearly, the students seemed lost. Petitioner had no effective instructional strategies. Because petitioner has two assistants, Fernandez's expectations of petitioner were high. Petitioner needed to make the learning material more accessible. Few, if any, of the students were relating to what was going on in the classroom.

Fernandez found that petitioner did little to further a culture for learning. She did not follow established classroom procedures. Fernandez found that petitioner was often negative in her comments with the students. He never heard petitioner make a positive statement. Fernandez knows that children at those ages crave love and support and none of that was presented in petitioner's classroom. He found that the pace of instruction was slow and haphazard.

Fernandez did walk-throughs once a week and did not find any improvement since the time of his review. Fernandez invited petitioner to discuss how to improve instruction. Petitioner did not take advantage of that and did not ask any questions.

Petitioner did not provide any additional data to be entered into the record—as was her right—within ten days after the evaluation.

Petitioner's Professional Improvement Plan (PIP), which was based on Fernandez's meetings with petitioner, addressed moving forward in the next school year and how petitioner would improve her practices in areas of concern. Fernandez stated that an individual is to reflect on his or her evaluation and then come back with the PIP, which he rejects if it is not complete, and signs once he is satisfied with the plan.

The recommendation he made to the board to withhold her increment (P-14) is the standard Rice Letter that goes out to individuals being discussed at a board meeting. He told petitioner in advance that he would be making the recommendation to the board that her salary increment for the school year 2009-2010 be withheld.

On cross-examination, Fernandez admitted that he only completed one evaluation since it took place late in the year. Fernandez testified that petitioner provided no closure in the areas of teaching and there was no transition between the different teaching topics. Fernandez found that petitioner would talk over the children and at times would scream at the children. Fernandez found that in general, petitioner was ignoring her plans; her plans were deficient and lacked activity; and that petitioner did not keep accurate records on student progress and performance. It was petitioner's responsibility to keep those records and document student growth. Although in the cross-examination Fernandez admitted that the failures could not be blamed on the petitioner alone, it was clear to him that petitioner's methods were in dire need of improvement and were in-total unsatisfactory.

Linda Crombie-Daniels

Linda Crombie-Daniels (Daniels) has a background in special education and a Master's degree in early childhood. She was an employee in the Jersey City Public School system since 1981. In the school year 2009-2010, Daniels was the supervisor for special education. As a supervisor, her duties included providing support and guidance to the teachers, evaluate teachers and support the education of the children.

Daniels provided petitioner with support, including advising her of webinars, events, and providing materials on a regular basis. She observed petitioner on December 2, 2009. Daniels had provided petitioner with several suggestions to improve her teaching. She felt that petitioner's performance fell below expectations.

After Daniels's observation, she met with petitioner and discussed the issues which needed to be addressed. Daniels did several walk-throughs thereafter and found a "bit of improvement." In cross-examination Daniels admitted that petitioner was engaged with the students; however, she had concerns about petitioner's teaching as a result of her observation. Any improvement was not to the degree Daniels had hoped. Although Daniels had no input regarding whether petitioner should be retained as a teacher or given an increment, she did state that she recommended that petitioner should be placed in a different setting.

Adele Stapleton

Petitioner began teaching in the Jersey City Public School system in 1975. Petitioner is certified as a special education teacher and worked as same since she began working in Jersey City. In 1988 she began teaching in elementary school. She began working in P.S. 20 since February 1999. She was assigned as an inclusion teacher with special education children and general education children.

On the date that she was observed by Fernandez, petitioner was teaching a new math program and was working on shapes. This topic took up the entire assigned period in the morning. The one special needs child in her classroom exhibited emotional problems and petitioner would count down with him to assist him to stop crying. By the end of the year, petitioner reported that this child was "fine."

Petitioner recalled one official visit by Fernandez and one unofficial visit by Daniels. It was her belief that the evaluation would be the same as the year before. Petitioner did admit that she had no experience in kindergarten, but despite that, she felt as though she was doing a satisfactory job teaching. She stated that no one showed her what to do and she was provided with minimal support.

It was petitioner's belief that the three adults in the classroom acted as a cooperative unit and provided effective teaching. She testified that she followed the IEP for the handicapped student. All students made sufficient progress and graduated to first grade. Petitioner stated that there were no behavioral problems in her class and the children were responsive. She had no discussions with Fernandez and was not counseled by him on deficient areas.

On cross-examination, petitioner did admit that she received feedback from Fernandez after he reviewed her plan book, although she did not believe it was counseling. Petitioner testified that she told Fernandez that she was doing a fine job. She did state that she was unaware that she could provide a rebuttal to her evaluation and that Fernandez did not invite her to do so. She claims that she received no support from Daniels.

She could not fully recall her lessons presented to her class on the date of her evaluation. She believed, overall, that her teaching performance was satisfactory then and throughout the school year.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon the testimonial and documentary evidence presented and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and to assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

Petitioner has been employed by respondent since 1975, as a teacher of the handicapped in high school and grammar school. For the year 2009-2010, she was hired as an inclusion teacher in the kindergarten. During that school year, she was observed and evaluated by Jorge Fernandez (principal) and Linda Crombie-Daniels (special education supervisor). Both Fernandez and Daniels had extensive training and experience in special education.

Daniels observed petitioner on December 2, 2009. Overall, Daniels believed that petitioner's teaching performance was below standards and expectations. Daniels did several walk-throughs which further confirmed her opinion. Daniels provided support to petitioner in an effort to improve her teaching performance. Milagros Perrine, an inclusion specialist, provided petitioner with extensive support with cooperative structure and implementing a form of differentiated-instructional techniques.

Fernandez did a formal observation of petitioner on April 12, 2010. It was done later in the school year in order to provide petitioner with a time period to settle in to her position and to give her an opportunity to succeed. After the observation, Fernandez completed a Formative Observation Form which was signed by petitioner and Fernandez. Fernandez rated petitioner as "unsatisfactory" in the following categories: 2) Students and Learning; 3) Instruction; and 4) Classroom Environment. Fernandez rated petitioner as "needs improvement" in 1) Planning and Preparation. Daniels understood the ratings provided by Fernandez.

Although petitioner stated that she felt her teaching performance was satisfactory and she disagreed with the evaluations of Fernandez and Daniels, she never submitted a rebuttal or response to the evaluation as was her right.

Support was supplied to petitioner by other teachers and support staff in an effort to improve petitioner's performance. Despite this support, Fernandez did not see any improvement in petitioner's performance by the end of the school year.

On August 24, 2010, the Jersey City Public School District Superintendent resolved, at the recommendation of Fernandez, to withhold petitioner's 2009-2010 salary increment.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Salary increments are controlled by N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which provides:

> Any board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board of education. It shall be the duty of the board of education, within 10 days, to give written notice of such action, together with the reasons therefor, to the member concerned. The member may appeal from such action to the commissioner under rules prescribed by him. The commissioner shall consider such appeal and shall either affirm the action of the board of education or direct that the increment or increments be paid. The commissioner may designate an assistant commissioner of education to act for him in his place and with his powers on such appeals. It shall not be mandatory upon the board of education to pay any such denied increment in any future year as an adjustment increment.

An increment is not a statutory right but "a reward for meritorious service to the school district." N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. N. Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984). The statute was intended to vest local school boards "with the ability to withhold increments" from those who had "not performed well during the previous year." Probst v. Haddonfield Bd. of Educ., 127 N.J. 518, 526 (1992). A local board's exercise of its discretionary powers "may not be upset unless patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). The issues to be determined are: (1) whether the underlying facts were as those who made the evaluation claimed, and (2) whether it was unreasonable for them to conclude as they did upon those facts, bearing in mind their expertise. Id. at 296-97.

In a matter such as this, the petitioner has the burden of showing that the denial of the salary increment was arbitrary or capricious. Id. at 288. The decision to withhold an increment does not require a showing of shortcomings sufficient to justify dismissal under the Tenure Act. Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 1960-61 S.L.D. at 62. The only question for the Commissioner is whether the district "had a reasonable basis for its factual conclusion." Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 295. Indeed, it has been observed that a school district has no duty to prove by a preponderance of credible evidence that the allegations against petitioner are true. To do so would convert an increment-withholding action into a tenure case and accordingly shift the burden of proof to the board. Such is not the purpose of an appeal to the Commissioner under the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:29-24. Reilly v. Parsippany-Troy Hills Twp. Bd. of Educ., 1989 S.L.D. 1830, 1843 (citing Colavita v. Hillsborough Twp. Bd. of Educ., 1983 S.L.D. 1205).

Moreover, the decision to withhold an increment has been held to be "a matter of essential managerial prerogative which has been delegated by the legislature to the board." Ibid. (citing Bernards Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Bernards Twp. Educ. Ass'n, 79 N.J. 311, 321 (1979)). An individual contesting a salary increment withholding has the burden of proof of demonstrating that the decision was unreasonable, arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives. Kopera, supra, 60 N.J. Super. at 297.

Courts have used varying language when trying to elaborate on the "arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable" standard. Despite the variations, the common element among all of the decisions is that board of education actions are given a strong presumption of validity. See Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581 (1966) (school board decisions "entitled to a presumption of correctness"). A board of education has broad discretionary authority and its actions are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Quinlan v. N. Bergen Bd. of Educ., 73 N.J. Super. 40, 46 (App. Div. 1962). Not only are board actions entitled to a "presumption of correctness," they have a presumption that those actions "will be upheld by the Commissioner of Education, absent a showing of bad faith, illegal motive or a lack of rational basis." Raimondi v. Westwood Reg'l Bd. of Educ., EDU 5904-04, Initial Decision (Sept. 26, 2005), adopted, Comm'r (Dec. 23, 2005), aff'd, State Bd. (June 7, 2006), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In a proceeding such as this, the burden of proof by a preponderance of the competent and credible evidence is on the petitioner. In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982); Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962).

Both Daniels and Fernandez had numerous conversations with petitioner during the 2009-2010 school year about her performance wherein they conveyed to her that she was not fulfilling the expectations of a teacher in her position. Petitioner was aware that Fernandez felt her performance was deficient. While petitioner asserts she performed satisfactorily, she nevertheless failed to present credible evidence that the action in withholding her increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The respondent presented credible evidence that the action withholding the 2009-2010 salary increment was based on tangible and valid deficiencies as observed by two witnesses and relayed to the petitioner. Accordingly, such action was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Special Education Supervisor Daniels testified credibly that petitioner's performance needed improvement and that petitioner's teaching performance fell below standards and expectations. Daniels was in basic agreement with the scores provided by Fernandez in the domain set up in the teaching evaluation form.

The proclivity to assume that increments are automatic, and triggered in a vacuum without regard for the teaching and learning of children, is misplaced. Both administrators were in agreement that petitioner failed to perform up to the level expected.

Based upon all of the facts adduced and the legal principles cited above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met her burden of establishing that respondent's action was arbitrary, capricious, unlawful, or induced by improper motive. To the contrary, respondent had a reasonable basis for its action.

Based upon all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that respondent appropriately withheld petitioner's salary increment for school year 2010-2011.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the petition filed by petitioner is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the determination of the respondent Board that her child, A.J.L., was not eligible for a free public education in the Pine Hill school district during the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner asserted that she has resided in Pine Hill since 2005, and that A.J.L. is domiciled with her under a joint custody agreement issued in 2009, which granted her primary physical custody of her children. The respondent Board contended that petitioner is domiciled in Pennsylvania, and sought dismissal of the appeal and reimbursement for counsel fees and other costs "appropriate under the circumstances." Petitioner testified and presented evidence at an OAL hearing on May 2, 2011, but counsel for respondent Board failed to appear despite having received adequate notice of the proceeding. Respondent Board additionally failed to submit any explanation for its failure to appear.

The ALJ found that: based upon the credible, undisputed and corroborated evidence presented by T.L.J. at the OAL hearing, petitioner does reside in Pine Hill; under a court order issued in December 2009, petitioner has primary physical custody of her children; petitioner has clearly established that A.J.L. is domiciled in the district and is therefore entitled to a free public education in Pine Hill schools; pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(d), the petitioner is entitled to a decision on the merits based on the proofs presented at hearing since the Board failed to submit an explanation for its failure to appear. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the petitioner's residency appeal, and denied the Board's claims for financial reimbursement.

Upon a full and independent review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

Petitioner challenged respondent's determination that her son was not eligible for a free public education in its district. A review of the Initial Decision and the record of this matter reveals that petitioner appeared at the May 2, 2011 hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and presented evidence which the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found sufficient to support her assertion that she is domiciled in petitioner's district and that she has primary residential custody of her son. The ALJ further found that petitioner and her witness were credible.

Despite adequate notice, neither respondent nor its representative appeared at the OAL hearing. Nor did respondent provide – within a day of the hearing – any explanation for its absence. Thus, there was no evidence before the ALJ to rebut the proofs offered by petitioner. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(d), the ALJ issued an Initial Decision on the merits granting the relief requested in the petition. Upon independent review, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case.

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

T.L.J, mother of A.J.L. (petitioner), challenges the determination made by the Pine Hill Board of Education (District) that she did not reside in the Pine Hill School District. The District has filed a counterclaim seeking payment of tuition for the number of days A.J.L. attended school in the district.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On February 2, 2010, the District notified the petitioner that her child was being disenrolled based on non-residency. On the same day, petitioner appealed the decision. On April 6, 2010, the case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). On July 15, 2010, during a conference call, the attorney for the District advised that he would be filing a summary decision motion. No motion was filed.

On March 17, 2011, another conference call was scheduled. The attorney for the District was not available by phone, and a message was left. No attempt to contact this office was ever made to reschedule the conference or explain his unavailability. The hearing was scheduled for May 2, 2011. The attorney for the District nor any representatives appeared. The record closed on that date.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Since the District failed to appear, the following facts, subject to credibility are essentially undisputed. The petitioner is the mother of A.J.L., who is eighteen years of age and attends Overbrook High School in the Pine Hill School District. There does not appear to be any dispute that the petitioner resides at 54 Millstream Road, in Pine Hill. This was established by the testimony of petitioner, her boyfriend, Daryl J. Collins, and her direct deposit statement, her New Jersey Driver's License, her South Jersey Gas Bill (P-2), Custody documents from Philadelphia Common Pleas Court (P-3), the Rental Agreement (P-4), the address on her sample ballot (P-5) and her satellite radio bill (P-5). Additionally, correspondence from the District was sent to the Pine Hill address (P-6, P-7). Therefore, based upon the undisputed and corroborated evidence, I FIND that the petitioner resides within the Pine Hill District.

Petitioner testified that the issue raised by the District was that her son was not leaving and returning to her address. This is confirmed by the February 2, 2011 sent by the District (P-7).

She further explained that her son had lived with her for six years but in 2008 decided to live with his father in Philadelphia and attend Lincoln High School. While attending Lincoln, he was assaulted, badly beaten and hospitalized. After the incident, she and her former husband decided to have the son live with her where it would be safer. He came back to live with her in 2009 and started school in September 2009 at Overbrook.

The Custody Agreement, dated December 9, 2009, states that the petitioner shall have "primary physical custody of the children." The agreement further states that the father shall have partial physical custody every weekend starting at 6:00 p.m. until Monday morning when the father is to drop the children off at school (P-3). Both the petitioner and Daryl Collins testified that she has had custody of the children.

Petitioner also testified that she has another son who attends the John Glenn Elementary School. No questions have been raised as to his residence.

The testimony as to the custody arrangement was testified to by the petitioner and Daryl Collins and corroborated by the Custody Agreement. Therefore, I FIND that the petitioner does have physical custody of the children except for weekends.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

When a party fails to appear for a hearing or conference despite having received adequate notice of the proceedings, the appearing party may ask the administrative law judge for permission to proceed through the presentation of ex parte proofs. If, after holding the matter for one day, the judge does not receive from the absent party an explanation for the failure to appear, and the circumstances require a decision on the merits, the judge may then issue an initial decision on the merits based on the ex parte proofs presented. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c). New Jersey Real Estate Commission v. Grennor, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (REC) 29. Since the District failed to submit an explanation for their failure to appear, I CONCLUDE that the petitioner is entitled to an initial decision on the merits based on the proofs presented at hearing.

The issue in this matter is whether A.J.L. was entitled to a free education under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, which provides that public schools shall be free to persons over five and under twenty years of age who are "domiciled within the school district." See V.R. o/b/o A.R. v. Hamburg Bd. of Educ., 2 N.J.A.R. 283, 287 (Educ. 1980), aff'd, State Bd., 1981 S.L.D. 1533, rev'd on other grounds, sub nom Rabinowitz v. New Jersey State Bd. of Educ., 550 F. Supp. 481 (D.N.J. 1982) (New Jersey requires local domicile, as opposed to mere residence, in order for a student to receive a free education).

A person who meets age requirements and is domiciled within a school district may attend its public schools free of charge. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a). A person may have many residences but only one domicile. Somerville Bd. v. Manville Bd., 332 N.J. Super. 6, 12 (App. Div. 2000), aff'd, 167 N.J. 55 (2001). A child's domicile is normally that of his or her parents. Ibid. The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. Matter of Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374 (Law Div. 1991), aff'd, 311 N.J. Super. 589 (App. Div. 1998), certif. denied, 157 N.J. 541 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S.Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed.2d 518 (1999).

The acts, statements and conduct of the individual, as viewed in light of all circumstances, determine a person's true intent. Collins v. Yancey, 55 N.J. Super. 514, 521 (Law Div. 1959). The parent has the burden of proof by a preponderance of the evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)2.

Petitioners have clearly established that A.J.L. is domiciled in the school district. He lives with the petitioner except for weekends pursuant to the Custody Agreement. Therefore, I CONCLUDE that A.J.L. is entitled to a free public education in the District.

Since he is entitled to a free public education within the District, and the District has not appeared to submit any evidence as to tuition reimbursement, the District's claim for reimbursement is DENIED.

DECISION AND ORDER

It is, therefore, ORDERED that A.J.L. is entitled to a free public education within the District. It is further ORDERED that the District counterclaim for tuition reimbursement is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE :

HEARING OF JOHN SOCRATES, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP : DECISION

OF JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming against John Socrates – a tenured teacher – for alleged criminal acts on April 17, 2010. Specifically, respondent was charged with a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a), N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10(a)(4) and 39:4-49.1, and N.J.S.A. 2C:36-2. Respondent filed an answer admitting that he had been criminally charged, but denying that he engaged in any criminal activity or conduct unbecoming a teacher. Respondent was granted a stay of the tenure charges pending disposition of the criminal case against him. Subsequently, respondent pled guilty to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a), and the other charges were dismissed. By letter dated February 17, 2011, the Manager of the Department's Criminal History Unit advised the Board that respondent had received a conviction for a disqualifying offense enumerated in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, and that he is therefore permanently disqualified from employment in New Jersey public schools. The Board filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found that: there is no genuine issue as to any material fact in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 provides in pertinent part that an individual shall be permanently disqualified from employment as a teacher of children if the individual's criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for an offense set forth in Chapter 14 of Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes; there is no statutory authority for respondent's position that disqualification is not mandatory and mitigating factors may be presented; accordingly, there is no basis for a hearing or oral argument on the tenure charges. The ALJ concluded that summary decision is appropriately granted to the petitioning Board, and that respondent must be removed as a tenured teaching staff member.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 12652-10
AGENCY DKT NO. 621-10/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF JOHN SOCRATES,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP	:	DECISION
OF JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions – filed in accordance with the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in making his determination herein.

On exception, respondent presents for reconsideration his letter memorandum in opposition to the District's Motion for Summary Judgment submitted to the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. Such letter memorandum requested the ALJ to schedule a hearing or, at the very least, oral argument to determine whether there is a basis for the District's requested Order removing respondent as a tenured teaching staff member without granting him the right to present evidence on his behalf. Respondent cites to Commissioner of Education cases from 1985, 1988, 1989 and 1990 for the proposition that – even when there have been guilty pleas to criminal charges – in making a determination as to penalty in any tenure charge proceedings involving allegations of unbecoming conduct, the factors dictated by In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967), i.e., the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students, and the likelihood of such behavior reoccurring, must be taken into consideration. (Respondent's letter memorandum in opposition to the District's Motion for Summary Decision, at 1-5)

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner is in complete accord with the ALJ that a summary decision order removing respondent from his tenured teaching position with the School District of the Township of Jackson is appropriately granted to the Board. In so determining, the Commissioner categorically rejects respondent's exception arguments, as this result does not emanate as a consequence of the tenure charges filed against him but, rather, is obligatory as a matter of law. Specifically, due to the overriding need to protect New Jersey's school children from potential harm, effective June 30, 1998, the Legislature significantly amended the statutory provisions governing criminal history record checks of school employees (N.J.S.A 18A:6-7.1), making the statute stricter and removing its prior provision for demonstration of rehabilitation. This statute, in pertinent part, is clear on its face:

> ...An individual, except as provided in subsection g. of this section,[1] shall be permanently disqualified from employment or service under this act if the individual's criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for any crime of the first or second degree; or a. [a]n offense as set forth in chapter 14 of Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes, or as set forth in N.J.S. 2C:24-4 and 2C:24-7, or as set forth in R.S. 9:6-1 et seq., or as set forth in N.J.S. 2C:29-2; or...(emphasis supplied)

Here, it is uncontested that on February 16, 2011 respondent pled guilty in Wall Township Municipal Court to a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a). (See District's Motion for Summary Decision, Exhibit E & F) As evidenced above, this offense is specifically identified by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 as one for which a conviction renders the individual ineligible for employment in New Jersey's public schools. By letter dated February 17, 2011,

[1] As recognized by the ALJ, subsection g. is not applicable in the instant matter.

Carl H. Carabelli, Manager of the Department of Education's Criminal History Unit, notified the District that, as a consequence of his conviction, respondent had been notified that "he is permanently disqualified for employment with any public school or educational facility under the supervision of the Department of Education or contractor providing service to said school or institution." (See District's Motion for Summary Decision, Exhibit G). As such, the District had the obligation – as a matter of law – to terminate respondent's employment once he was disqualified from school employment and he neither requested nor obtained a stay of such disqualification pending appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL – as expounded on above – is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent John P. Socrates is removed as a tenured teaching staff member in the School District of the Township of Jackson.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 621-10/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF JOHN SOCRATES, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP JACKSON, OCEAN COUNTY.

Ben A. Montenegro, Esq., for petitioner, School District of the Township of Jackson (Montenegro, Thompson, Montenegro & Genz, attorneys)

Stephen B. Hunter, Esq., for respondent, John Socrates (Detzky & Hunter, LLC, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 9, 2011 Decided: May 16, 2011

BEFORE JOHN SCHUSTER III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On April 5, 2011, the Jackson Township Board of Education (petitioner) submitted a notice of motion for summary decision affirming the removal of John P. Socrates (respondent) as a tenured teaching staff member of the Jackson Township School District. Responsive papers were received on May 9, 2011 requesting a hearing or oral argument relating the aforesaid motion. For the reasons set forth below, I am granting summary decision in favor of petitioners and denying respondent's request to schedule a hearing or permit oral argument on the notice of motion.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

On September 20, 2010, petitioner certified tenure charges against the respondent charging unbecoming conduct as a result of committing criminal acts on April 17, 2010 at the Wall Township Garden State Parkway Rest Stop/Service Area. Specifically respondent was charged with a violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a), N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10(a)(4) and 39:4-49.1, as well as N.J.S.A. 2C:36-2. On November 9, 2010, respondent filed an answer with the New Jersey Department of Education admitting that he had been criminally charged but denying that he engaged in any criminal activity or conduct unbecoming to his position as a teacher. Subsequently the respondent requested and was granted a stay of the tenure charges proceedings pending disposition of the criminal matters set forth above. On February 16, 2011, respondent plead guilty and was found guilty of the [N.J.S.A. 2C:14-4(a)] offense. The remaining charges were dismissed. Petitioner was represented by counsel during the criminal proceedings. By letter dated February 17, 2011, the New Jersey Department of Education advised petitioner that respondent had received a conviction for a disqualifying crime or offense enumerated in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 and as such he was permanently disqualified from employment by petitioner. Petitioner then brought this notice of motion stating that as a matter of law and as a result of respondent's guilty plea; summary decision is mandated requiring the removal of petitioner as a tenured teaching staff member of the Jackson Township School District.

Respondent's submitted responsive papers setting forth the position that under these circumstances there is discretion and multiple factors have to be considered prior to removing a tenured teacher for unbecoming conduct. Therefore a hearing should be held so that respondent has an opportunity to present mitigating factors or in the alternative, oral argument should be allowed to have those mitigating factors placed on the record.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that a motion for summary decision shall be granted when the pleading submitted showed that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. An adverse party may defeat a motion for summary decision by submitting affidavits setting forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing. In essence this is the same standard as set forth in matters requesting summary judgment in the Superior Court and enumerated in Judson v. Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 73-75 (1954) and Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 528-40 (1995).

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 provides in pertinent part that an individual shall be permanently disqualified from employment as a teacher of children if the individuals criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for an offense set forth in Chapter 14 of Title 2C of the New Jersey Statutes. There is an exception pursuant to Subsection G of that statute; however, that does not apply to the respondent in this matter.

Despite respondent's assertion that disqualification is not mandatory and mitigating factors may be presented there is no statutory authority for that position. As a result I FIND there is no basis for a hearing or oral argument on petitioner's notice of motion.

In addition N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.3 provides that when disqualifying criminal charges as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 result in a conviction "the employee shall not be eligible for continued employment."

CONCLUSION

I therefore CONCLUDE that petitioner has met its burden in establishing that there is no material fact in dispute which would otherwise prevent respondent from being removed as a tenure teaching staff member of the Jackson Township School District.

ORDER

For the reasons set forth herein, I ORDER summary decision be granted in favor of the Jackson Township School District and John P. Socrates be removed as a tenured teaching staff member of that district.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." STATEMENT OF THE CASE

I.C.W., Petitioner, filed a petition for Emergency Relief contesting the Borough of Mountain Lakes Board of Education's decision to deny her son, J.W., induction into the National Honor Society.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On May 23, 2011, Petitioner filed an application for emergent relief with the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Controversies and Disputes. On the same day, this matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing on the requested emergent relief. On May 31, 2011, the application for emergent relief was heard at the OAL, 33 Washington Street, Newark, New Jersey, and the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The pertinent facts of this case are not in dispute and I FIND the following to be the FACTS of this case.

J.W. is a resident of Kennelon, New Jersey, and an eleventh grade out-of-district high school student in the Mountain Lakes School District. He has attended school in this district pursuant to an Individualized Education Program (IEP) since he was four years old. J.W. wears a cochlear implant to assist with his hearing impairment.

On or about May 6, 2009, the end of J.W.' nineth grade year, two students reported an incident involving R.W. to Stephen W. Ryan, the Assistant Principal at Mountain Lakes High School. The investigation of this incident resulted in a short-term out-of-school suspension.

In the spring of 2011, J.W. satisfied the initial academic proficiency threshold for receiving an invitation to apply for membership in the National Honor Society. J.W.'s application was considered by a five-member Local Faculty Council (LFC) which was comprised of five teachers selected by the school prinicipal.

On or about April 11, 2011, the LFC met to consider applicants for induction into the NHS and determined not to select J.W. The council concluded that his "disciplina ry record did not meet chapter selection standards."

Petitioner filed a timely motion for emergent relief, contesting the decision of the LFC, and the failure of Respondent to take any action to reverse that decision. Petitioner contends that the decision of the LFC was not supported by any facts and was arbitrary, carpricious and/or unreasonable. Further, Petitioner contends that the failure of Respondent to vote on the action of the LFC was arbitrary, caprious and/or unreasonable.

On or about May 27, 2011, Respondent held an induction ceremony for students selected for membership in the National Honor Society. A less formal induction ceremony will be held in October 2011, for eligible students not inducted during the spring ceremony.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The standards which must be met by the moving party in an application for emergent relief are embodied in Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). Emergency relief may only be granted if the judge determines that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The petitioner must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe test.

The first consideration is whether J.W. will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted. While there are multiple reasons why Petitioner will not suffer irreparable harm in this matter, I need only cite that there is no emergent need to for the relief sought. The spring ceremony has already occurred and another ceremony will be held in October. This ceremony, albeit less formal, will occur prior to the deadline for submission of college applications. As such, to the extent that Petitioner is concerned about including membership in NHS on his college admissions applications, he will be able to do so if he prevails on the merits of the case. No other evidence of "immediate harm" as contemplated in the Crowes test has been offered.

I CONCLUDE that Petitioner has not satisfied the first prong of the Crowes test. Irreparable harm will not result if J.W. is not immediately inducted in to the National Honor Society. Having failed this first test, I need not discuss the remaining elements of Crowes because it requires that all of its elements be satisfied.

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that the emergent relief requested by Petitioner must be denied. Accordingly, it is ORDERED that Petitioner's motion for emergent relief is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the Commissioner of Education who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

In October 2010, the petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of minor child E.D. On November 17, 2010, E.D. was withdrawn from respondent Board's district and transferred to Rancocas Valley Regional High School by her father, J.D. The respondent Board filed a motion to dismiss the petitioner's appeal.

Petitioner received appropriate notice of a hearing in this matter on May 11, 2011, but failed to appear and provided no explanation for his nonappearance. Having received no explanation from the petitioner for his non-appearance, the OAL returned the file to the Commissioner.

There being no explanation filed, the Commissioner dismissed the petition with prejudice.

238-11

AGENCY DKT. NO. 136-5/11

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF BEN S. SHOER, NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF CHILDREN AND FAMILIES.	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

In this tenure matter, petitioner originally charged respondent with 1) conduct unbecoming, 2) incompetency/inefficiency/failure to perform duties, and 3) other just cause. The notice of discipline specified a seven day suspension which, under N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2 (a), constitutes major discipline and falls within the purview of N.J.S.A. 18A:60-1 to 60-2 and 6-10, the law that imposes procedural and substantive preconditions to the dismissal or reduction of compensation of tenured teachers.

Subsequent to the filing of the petition, the parties fashioned a settlement agreement wherein it was proposed that two of the three original charges would be dropped, leaving the charge of unbecoming conduct. It was further proposed that the discipline be reduced to five days' unpaid suspension and two days "on the record" (for the purposes of respondent's history of progressive discipline). Such a reduction transforms the discipline to minor discipline, see N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.2(a), which is not deemed to be a reduction in compensation sufficient to implicate N.J.S.A. 18A:60 and 18A:6-10. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(a)(1).

In light of the foregoing, a tenure proceeding before the Commissioner of Education is not necessary. See, e.g. Robert Bittner v. Burlington Township, 2003 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 269 (May 12, 2003), aff'd Merit System Board, 2003 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 1463

(June 30, 2003) (a minor discipline matter is appropriate for local, not agency proceedings). However, insofar as the parties have placed a settlement before the Commissioner, and in light of the foregoing facts set forth in the record, the Commissioner has determined that the proposed settlement constitutes an acceptable disposition of this case.

Accordingly, the Commissioner approves the settlement and dismisses the petition.

AMPARO BISHOP,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF PISCATAWAY, MIDDLESEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

On September 1, 2010, the petitioner – a secretary in the Piscataway School District – filed an appeal alleging that the respondent Board improperly charged petitioner's sick leave bank for absences attributable to a work-related injury. Petitioner contends that she was injured in a work-related accident on January 10, 2002. Her worker's compensation claim in that matter was settled by an Order dated May 4, 2007.

The ALJ found that: there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary judgment; the 90-day period for filing an appeal begins once notice of the final order or ruling is given, which in this case occurred on May 4, 2007 – the date of the Order approving settlement of petitioner's worker's compensation claim; the instant petition was filed well after the 90-day period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i); and there is no cause for relaxation of the 90-day rule. Accordingly, the ALJ granted summary decision to the respondent Board, and dismissed the petition.

Upon full consideration of the record and Initial Decision of the OAL, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ for the reasons detailed in the Initial Decision, and dismissed the petition.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the instant petition is appropriately dismissed because it was filed well outside the 90-day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Commissioner, likewise concurs that petitioner has failed to set forth a bona fide legal or factual basis warranting relaxation of the timely filing requirement.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter for the reasons stated therein. Summary decision is granted to the Board and the instant Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

AMPARO BISHOP,

Petitioner,

v.

PISCATAWAY BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

William P. Mikita, Jr., Esq., for petitioner (Gill & Chamas, attorneys)

David B. Rubin, Esq., for respondent

Record Closed: May 9, 2011 Decided: May 24, 2011

BEFORE MICHAEL ANTONIEWICZ, ALJ:

On September 1, 2010, Amparo Bishop (Bishop) filed with the Commissioner of Education an application for appeal of the Piscataway Board of Education (Board) charging petitioner's sick leave bank for absences due to a work-related injury.

Bishop, a secretary in the Piscataway School District, contends that she was injured in a work-related accident that occurred on January 10, 2002. Bishop argues that she was out of work for a total of 196 days. Respondent paid petitioner's salary for three days. Bishop further contends that respondent continued to pay her for an additional 111 days at 100 percent of her salary when she should have been paid at seventy percent. Bishop stated when respondent realized its error; respondent stopped paying her under Workers' Compensation and charged her sick account for the remaining eight-two days. Accordingly, Bishop contends that she is entitled to have 48.7 days of sick leave restored to her.

On December 15, 2010, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted a petition of appeal to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, for determination as a contested case. The Board filed a Motion for Summary Decision on April 8, 2011, contending that the petition should be dismissed as time-barred pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The record closed upon receipt of the last submission.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For the purpose of this motion the following FACTS from Bishop's Certification and attachments as well as the respondent's attachments are deemed as true.

The Board employed Bishop as a secretary, who sustained an injury, which was determined to be compensable under the Workers' Compensation Act, due to an accident which occurred on January 10, 2002. An Order approving a settlement of her compensation claim was entered by the Judge of Compensation William Lake on May 4, 2007.

On August 20, 2007, a letter was forwarded to Inservco Insurance Services, the claims administrator for the Piscataway Board of Education, in which a request was made to provide the exact sick days taken and to reimburse petitioner in accordance to the Workers' Compensation statute. On October 9, 2007, the Board responded wherein it was stated that all sick days have been restored with reference to this accident.

On March 26, 2010, Bishop's counsel forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for filing an earlier petition of appeal. That petition was dismissed by the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on March 30, 2010, because it had not been properly verified by Bishop. On May 26, 2010, an amended petition was filed, which was stayed pending submission of another certification. On June 14, 2010, respondent answered the petition. On July 23, 2010, the petition was deemed withdrawn by the Department of Education. On December 6, 2010, the petition was re-filed and on December 8, 2010, the Commissioner of Education received an appeal from Bishop dated September 1, 2010.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary decision is the administrative counterpart to summary judgment in the judicial arena. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." This language is substantially similar to the guidelines for summary judgment under R. 4:46-2(c) which provides in part that the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law.

In order to defeat a summary decision motion, the adverse party must respond by affidavits setting forth "specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary hearing." Use of the summary procedure is aimed at "the swift uncovering of the merits and either their effective disposition or their advancement toward prompt resolution by trial." Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74 (1954).

The New Jersey Supreme Court has encouraged trial-level courts "not to refrain from granting summary judgment when the proper circumstances present themselves." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 541 (1995). While cautioning that a judge should not weigh the truth of the evidence or resolve factual disputes at this early stage of the proceedings, the Court clarified that "when the evidence 'is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law,' the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment." Id. at 540 (citations omitted).

I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts which require a plenary hearing regarding the issue of whether the appeal was timely filed, and the Board is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

The Commissioner has specifically addressed the time in which a petitioner must initiate a contested case for the Commissioner's determination of a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i)(1) requires that:

> Any petitioner claiming benefits under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 shall file a petition within 90 days of the date of the determination by the Division of Workers' Compensation that either finds the employee to have sustained a compensable injury or settles the compensation claim without a determination of work-related causation, unless the claim constitutes an exception to the requirement that the Commissioner refrain from exercising jurisdiction until the Division has made a determination on the underlying injury, in which case the petition shall be filed within 90 days of receipt of notice of the district board of education's action, or of the action of the district board of education's agent, which has the effect of denying such benefits.

Such a rule represents a fair and reasonably necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws and falls within the scope of authority granted to the Commissioner. Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley Twp., 131 N.J. 572, 582 (1993). The limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after ninety days. Ibid. Its purposes are to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend and to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose by giving security and stability to human affairs. Id. at 587.

The ninety-day requirement is to be strictly construed and is mandatory. Wise v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, EDU 160-00, Comm'r (September 11, 2000), aff'd, State Bd. of Educ. (January 3, 2001), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. A petitioner must file a petition within ninety days from a notice of adverse action and not within ninety days of her exhaustion of other avenues and mechanisms she might have employed in seeking renewal of employment. Ibid. Informal attempts to resolve a dispute do not serve to toll the statute of limitations. See Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 588. Also, the ninety-day period for filing a petition of appeal commences when a petitioner learns of facts that would enable her to file a timely claim. Id. at 587. "Adequate notice must be sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Ibid. (citation omitted).

The time by which Bishop filed her petition on December 6, 2010, was well in excess of ninety-days from her receipt, of the Order from the Honorable William Lake, JWC, approving a settlement of her compensation claim on May 4, 2007. Bishop cannot defend her failure to file a petition within this ninety-day period based on her contention that the statute of limitations would not begin because Judge Lake's Order approving settlement on May 4, 2007, did not include any issues regarding lost sick days. If that were so, and if the Board never acted formally, the statute of limitations would still yet to have run.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3 requires a petitioner asserting a claim under N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2.1 to > include a copy of the ruling or settlement agreement issued by the Division of Workers' Compensation with respect to the injury underlying the claim or provide reasons why the matter constitutes an exception to the requirement that the Commissioner refrain from exercising jurisdiction until the Division makes a determination of work-related injury.

Here Bishop attached to her petition the May 4, 2007, Order approving the settlement of her Workers' Compensation claim, which initiated the ninety-day statute of limitations. In that Order it was determined by Judge Lake that the employee sustained a compensable injury. Bishop did not file the petition until three-and-one-half years later.

In addition, there exists no cause for relaxation of the ninety-day rule, averring that the New Jersey Courts have stated that the ninety-day rule will only be relaxed where there is some compelling constitutional concern or other fundamental public interest beyond the parties which would warrant waiver of the rule. New Jersey Courts consistently held this rule is mandatory and that the ninety-day time period begins to run on the date that notice is received of the action taken. See Nissman v. Bd. of Educ. of Twp. of Long Beach Island, 272 N.J. Super. 373 (App. Div. 1994), certif. denied, 187 N.J. 315 (1994); Wynne v. Tillery, Camden County Superintendent of Sch., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 995; Conklin v. Old Bridge Twp. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 502; Portee v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 381. At the very latest, the petitioner became aware of the school district's action regarding her sick days when on October 9, 2007, petitioner's attorney received a letter from Director of Human Resources Peter Pitucco for the Piscataway Township Schools stating: "Please be advised that we have restored all the sick days that we are legally obligated to restore in regard to this accident (Amparo Bishop, Date of Accident 1/10/02)." Even using this later date, the petitioner's filling is still well beyond the ninety-day time limit and thus is untimely.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Bishop's petition of appeal should be dismissed for failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the Board's motion for summary decision be GRANTED and the petition of appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

OSHEA SAMUEL,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:	APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 27, 2011, and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.

Upon such review, the Acting Deputy Commissioner – to whom this matter has been delegated pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:4-33 – concurs with the ALJ that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982).

In so concurring, the Deputy Commissioner emphasizes that petitioner has met the threshold standard of irreparable harm – notwithstanding that participation in graduation exercises is a privilege rather than a right – since the opportunity to participate in such an event cannot be regained once lost, and dismissal of an emergent application on this criteria alone would effectively insulate a school district's actions in matters of this type from any meaningful review.[1]

[1] The Deputy Commissioner is fully aware of the well-established principle that a prohibition from attending events of this type does not, in and of itself, rise to the necessary level of irreparable harm so as to warrant extraordinary remedy. However, harm is "irreparable" when there can be no adequate after-the-fact remedy in law or in equity, and monetary damages cannot adequately redress the intangibles of a lost experience after the event is over. In past cases denying similar applications for emergent relief, the irreparable nature of the harm and the degree or severity of the harm have frequently been addressed as a totality; they are, however, two separate factors, and it is on the basis of the severity of the harm – which pertains to the weighing of interests – and not its irreparable nature that applications of this kind typically fail. Martin A. Domacasse v. Board of Education of the North Warren Regional School District, Warren County, decided by the State Board April 17, 1966; L.J., on behalf of minor child, S.J. and David Wickham v. Board of Education of the Township of Manchester, Ocean County, decided by the Commissioner May 2, 2003. See also D.M.S., on behalf of minor child, E.B. and Gregory Heck v. Board of Education of the Pinelands Regional School District, Ocean County, et al., decided by the Commissioner May 9, 2008.

This said, however, the fact remains that petitioners seeking emergent relief must additionally demonstrate that the legal right underlying their claim is well settled, that they have a likelihood of success on the merits of their underlying appeal, and that the balance of interest and equities under the circumstances rests in their favor. In each of these respects, the Deputy Commissioner finds that petitioner has not met the requisite burden, necessitating that her application must be denied.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted. This matter shall proceed at the OAL for whatever may be required to bring it to conclusion.

R. Scott Eveland, Esq., for respondent (assistant general counsel, Jersey City Public Schools)

Record Closed: June 27, 2011 Decided: June 27, 2011

BEFORE TAHESHA L. WAY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

By a request for emergency relief filed with the Commissioner of Education, the petitioner, O.S., seeks an order requiring respondent, Board of Education of the City of Jersey City (District) to grant her a diploma and therefore allow her to participate in the high school graduation ceremonies scheduled tonight, June 27, 2011.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) where it was filed on June 23, 2011, and oral argument was conducted on June 27, 2011.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

O.S is an eighteen year old student who is currently in the twelfth grade at Henry Snyder High School. Specifically, she was advised that she would not be eligible for graduation on the basis that her final average in her required English 4 course was 65.

O.S., however, contended that her overall grade in English 4 was above 70, and that her teacher miscalculated her grade. She also contended that in or around May 2011, she received her progress report which reflected a failing grade but that she contacted her teacher, Ms. Sosa, in an attempt to address this issue but to no avail. O.S. explained that her grade unfairly reflects alleged missing assignments and absences. Moreover, she emphasized that her absences were the result of her father's illness, and that she did turn in the work that she missed. Lastly, O.S. contended that she attempted to verify her grades via the school's online system, En-Grade, but could not access the system.

The District, however, defended its policy that a student must pass all core courses to participate in their graduation ceremonies, especially a required class like English 4. The District also contended that the 65 is an accurate representation of her English 4 final grade and that O.S had notice and the opportunity to address this issue upon the receipt of her progress report in May 2011, and by way of access to the En-Grade system. Additionally, the District claimed that O.S. was late twelve times from September 2010, through January 2011. O.S.' grades also reflect important missing and incomplete assignments, like her assignment regarding an independent novel. Furthermore, the District explained that several of her low grades were even dropped, as in the case of her Elizabeth project.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The standard for emergent relief in this matter is found at N.J.A.C. 1:6A-14.2(a):

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;

2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

It is imperative to note that these standards are written in the conjunctive. Thus, O.S. must satisfy all four (4) requirements in order to be entitled to receive the relief requested.

With respect to the first prong, O.S. will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted. While it is understood that O.S. will receive her diploma upon the successful completion of her English summer class, a high school graduation only occurs once. However, the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is well settled. That is, the applicable case law establishes beyond question that attendance at a graduation ceremony is a privilege and not a right. See I.K. v. West Windsor-Plainsboro School District, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 639; M.P. v. Hackettstown Board of Education, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDS) 210. Therefore, because O.S. has no legal right to attend the ceremony, O.S. cannot satisfy that prong of the test. Moreover, a determination of a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim is questionable and cannot be established without conducting a full hearing. There is a genuine factual dispute as to the determination of O.S.' overall English 4 grade. Finally, the District will suffer greater harm than O.S. if there is a total disregard of the policies. While O.S. will suffer harm, her interests must be balanced by the interests and responsibilities the District has for all its' students. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that O.S. has not sustained her burden of establishing the necessary elements to grant emergency relief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b).

ORDER

I ORDER that petitioner's application for emergent relief requesting an award of a diploma and participation in her graduation at Henry Snyder High School on June 27, 2011, be DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

BEFORE EDWARD J. DELANOY, JR., ALJ:

This matter having been opened on the filing of a petition for emergent relief, submitted by petitioner, Karen Borrelli, Saul J. Steinberg, Esq. appearing, and respondent, Board of Education of the Township of the City of Camden, Camden County, Louis R. Lessig, Esq. appearing, and the undersigned having considered the moving papers, Verified Petition and exhibits submitted by the petitioner, and opposition papers and exhibits submitted by respondent, and having heard the arguments of counsel, and for good cause shown, has determined from the proofs that petitioner has failed to meet the standards to grant emergent relief as set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6, pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1986), as more particularly set forth herein.

Petitioner is a tenured physical education teacher in the employ of the Camden City School Board of Education ("Board"). On March 28, 2011, the Board suspended petitioner with pay from her position for "Conduct Unbecoming." This was based upon an investigation by the Division of Youth and Family Services (DYFS) into allegations of alleged sexual misconduct with a student. The Board also alleges that it commenced its own independent investigation into those allegations. During the same time, the Board submits that it began an investigation into a fundraiser orchestrated by petitioner to raise funds with the purpose of taking students on a field trip. While petitioner argues that the principal of the school authorized the fundraiser, substantive issues remain as to the involvement and participation of the principal versus the petitioner in the fundraising activity. In any event, without direct authorization from the Board, petitioner purchased coupon books and directed her students to sell them to raise funds for the field trip. Prior to her suspension, petitioner, through her students, raised $820 from thirty-seven individuals for the field trip. Petitioner was thereafter requested to terminate the fundraiser and turn over to the Board all funds collected.

On March 29, 2011, petitioner's attorney forwarded a letter to the Board's attorney requesting clarification of the nature of the allegations, and questioning the justification for the suspension and the possibility of petitioner losing her position as teacher curriculum writer for the middle school health and physical education program. On April 1, 2011, petitioner turned over to respondent all of the proceeds of the fundraising activity. On April 6, 2011, the Board's attorney wrote to petitioner's attorney and advised that the Board had mandated a full accounting from petitioner of where the dollars came from in the fundraising activity, and demanded that petitioner produce this accounting so that the money might be returned to the individuals. On April 13, 2011, petitioner's attorney wrote the Board's attorney and advised that the DYFS investigation had been concluded, that petitioner had been absolved, requesting clarification as to what other areas were being investigated by respondent, and again advising of the possibility of petitioner losing the benefit of stipends for curriculum writing.

On or about April 20, 2011, a notice was sent to the parties that the allegations of sexual misconduct were unfounded based upon the DYFS standards of review. On April 21, 2011, counsel for the Board forwarded a letter to petitioner's counsel advising that an internal investigation of petitioner's conduct had been commenced by the Board, and requesting a copy of the list of students who would require reimbursement from the fundraiser. After some apparent confusion by the parties as to what was required, on May 12, 2011, petitioner's attorney provided a list of the first and last names of six students who raised money for the fundraiser. On May 13, 2011, the Board's attorney advised petitioner's attorney that the list was inadequate because it only provided the names of the students who sold the coupon books, and not the names of the students who purchased them. On May 18, 2011, a complete list of the names of the students who purchased the coupon books was provided to the Board's attorney.

On May 27, 2011, petitioner's attorney advised the Board's attorney that the distributor who sold the coupon books to petitioner had not been paid and was seeking payment. The Board's attorney responded back the same day requesting information as to the distributor, so that the proper investigation could be undertaken as to whether or not the Board was exposed to liability to the distributor, or whether the petitioner would be financially responsible. This request to petitioner was renewed on June 2, 2011. On June 2, 2011, the within application for emergent relief was filed by petitioner.

Petitioner asserts as a tenured teaching staff member she wants to, and has a right to be immediately returned to work. She avers that she has never been served with any written notification detailing the reasons why she was suspended, that the demands made by the Board were a sham and a pretext for continuing her unjustified suspension, and that while under suspension, she is not able to participate in curriculum writing programs for which she has been approved and for which she would receive stipends. In addition, the suspension precludes her from applying for other curriculum writing opportunities for summer activities for which she would receive compensation, and that she has been advised that she is not going to receive an increment raise. In sum, petitioner alleges that there never was, nor presently is, any valid reason for the imposition of the suspension.

The Board argues that it has an unequivocal right to conduct an investigation, and that were it not for petitioner's delays in providing requested information, the investigation could have been completed. The Board submits that petitioner has not carried its burden under applicable law to sustain this application for emergent relief.

Under Crowe v. DiGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6, emergency relief may be granted if the judge determines that:

1. the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. the legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. the petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Emergent relief is not appropriate unless all four of the above requisites are satisfied.

As for the first requirement for the granting of emergent relief, petitioner avers she will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted. In support of her application, she argues that as a result of the suspension, she is suffering irreparable harm, and that there is no way she will ever be compensated for her loss of the curriculum writing opportunities. Petitioner also claims that her reputation has suffered as a result of the improperly issued and continuing suspension, which damage cannot be compensated by money damages.

"Irreparable harm" is defined as the type of harm "that cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-33. In addition, the irreparable harm standard contemplates that the harm be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Communications, Inc. v. Day, 229 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1977). However, pecuniary damages may sometimes be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or the right affected. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. For example, in Crowe the Court determined neither an unwarranted eviction nor reduction to poverty could be compensated adequately by monetary damages awarded after a distant hearing. Ibid.

In making her argument, however, petitioner offers nothing more in her Verified Petition beyond general statements, of any immediate financial duress. She is currently on full pay status. Petitioner argues that she will be denied opportunities to engage in curriculum writing and employment opportunities which cannot be made up by money damages. However, petitioner has not provided any specific evidence or proof of approval of curriculum writing programs, or when those approvals were given. Moreover, the employment opportunities are stipend positions, and if petitioner were able to prove that she was approved for those programs and denied entry therein, she could receive monetary compensation or damages for the loss of the stipends.

As to petitioner's claim that she will suffer irreparable harm to her reputation if she is not reinstated, petitioner again offers no proof or facts as to how her reputation would be harmed if the suspension continues. Petitioner has been suspended since March 28, 2011, and therefore, harm, if any, to her reputation has already been incurred. It is unclear at best as to what effect a continuing suspension would have on her reputation. I therefore FIND that petitioner has failed to meet her burden of establishing that she will suffer irreparable harm if the relief sought is not granted.

While I have determined that no irreparable harm exists at this time, it is not necessary for me to address the remaining criteria under Crowe, supra. Nevertheless, I will address the three remaining criteria.

As for the second and third requirements for the granting of emergent relief, petitioner argues there is a clear legal right underlying her claim and that she has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim. I FIND the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is not settled; and I further FIND petitioner does not, at this time, have a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim. Although the petitioner was cleared by DYFS in its investigation, the Board continues its own investigation into those allegations, and is investigating the activities concerning the fundraiser. Petitioner was advised of this in several letters written by the attorney for the Board. Due to a misunderstanding of what the Board required for its investigation into the fundraiser, several weeks passed before petitioner forwarded the necessary information to the Board regarding what students had purchased coupon books. What role, if any, the principal played in this fundraiser, has yet to be determined. The Board is entitled to conclude its investigation. If no misconduct has occurred, petitioner will be reinstated. Further information that may be developed may show that no misconduct has occurred, but that information has not yet been produced, and it is impossible to determine at this time that petitioner is likely to succeed on the merits of the underlying claim.

As for the fourth requirement for granting emergent relief, petitioner avers when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the Board if emergent relief is not granted. She argues the greater loss and potential for loss will be suffered by her without a corresponding risk of loss by the Board. However, petitioner has been suspended with pay. She would not be working for the Board over the summer, other than potentially for the stipend. The Board has an interest in, and is entitled to complete its investigation. The Board also has an interest in completing its investigation because it is currently being harmed by paying a teacher not to work. Therefore, I FIND that the equities do not favor on balance the grant of emergent relief.

IT IS therefore on this 10th day of June, 2011,

ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergency relief is DENIED.

For the reasons set forth above, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief for reinstatement from her suspension pending final hearing is hereby DENIED. This order on application for emergency relief shall remain in effect until the issuance of the decision on the merits in this matter.

This matter is scheduled for a telephone prehearing conference on July 11, 2011, at 4:00 p.m. I am requesting that Mr. Steinberg initiate this conference.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the papers filed in connection with the Petition for Declaratory Ruling in the matter captioned Diane J. Bacher v. Board of Education of the Township of Mansfield, Burlington County, Agency Dkt. No. 155-6/11. Therein, the petitioning Superintendent of Schools seeks a declaration that she was reappointed, by operation of law, to the position of Superintendent for the period July 1, 2011 through July 1, 2015 – at her current salary of $146,192 – as a consequence of the Board's failure to give her one year's notice of non-renewal of her contract pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20.1. Please be advised that even assuming, arguendo, that petitioner's request satisfied the requirements for a Declaratory Ruling pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-2.1, I have determined not to consider this matter as one for declaratory ruling, pursuant to my discretionary authority under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-2.1(a). I find, instead, that this matter should proceed as a Petition of Appeal.

Accordingly, this matter will be transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 et seq.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioners' application for emergent relief is adopted. Record Closed: June 29, 2011 Decided: June 30, 2011

BEFORE ROBERT BINGHAM II, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners apply for emergent relief, seeking an order restraining their layoff and declaring that the respondent, New Jersey Department of Human Services, Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired (CBVI), is required to calculate tenure and seniority of its 10- and 12-Month Instructors on a combined basis and effect layoffs in reverse order of seniority. CBVI contends that its layoffs of 10-Month Instructors are proper and petitioners are not entitled to the relief sought.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 28, 2011, the petitioners filed a petition for declaratory ruling and interim relief. The Commissioner of Education transmitted the case, as an emergent matter, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on June 28, 2011. On June 29, 2011, an emergent hearing was held and concluded.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The material facts are undisputed. Accordingly, I FIND as FACT the following.

CBVI is a division of the New Jersey Department of Human Services which operates a statewide educational program servicing school-aged children through provider service agreements with local school districts. CBVI instructors provide a variety of services to blind and visually impaired children. There are two job titles for CBVI instructors: Instructor Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired - 10 months (10-Month Instructor), and Instructor Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired - 12 months (12-Month Instructor). Both positions are unclassified and have the Class Code of 22. The positions have separate job specifications and different salary ranges, although substantially similar or identical duties. While a 12-Month

Instructor works year round, a 10-Month Instructor works from September until June and is eligible for unemployment during the summer.

CBVI made a fiscal decision and determined that elimination of the 10-Month Instructor title would result in savings. The Governor's FY 2012 budget proposed the elimination of twenty-one positions. On May 10, 2011, CBVI notified all 10-Month Instructors that it was consolidating teaching positions and their jobs were being eliminated as of June 30, 2011. The 12-Month Instructors were unaffected.

Petitioners argue that the layoffs must be based upon a calculation of the tenure and seniority of all 10- and 12-Month Instructors combined. Petitioners further argue that they will suffer greater and irreparable harm if the emergent relief sought is not granted. CBVI contends that petitioners are not entitled to emergent relief, and that the layoffs of 10-Month Instructors are proper.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. Subparagraph (f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible.

The foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982). These legal principles may be summarized as follows:

1. Emergency relief should not issue except when necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages. In certain circumstances, severe personal inconvenience can constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief. Pecuniary damages may be inadequate ~~because of the nature of the injury or of the right affected~~.

2. Emergency relief should be withheld when the legal right underlying the claim of the requesting party is unsettled.

3. Emergency relief should not issue where all material facts are controverted. Thus, to prevail on an application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. That requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo. The point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began.

4. The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief. The relief granted should be no broader than necessary to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits.

The application of the above standard to the facts to this case yields the conclusion that petitioners have not met, as they must, all of the above criteria for emergent relief.

Irreparable Harm

Petitioners argue that they will suffer irreparable harm if relief is not granted because they would become unemployed and lose health and pension benefits. Under Crowe, "Harm is generally irreparable in equity, if it cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Crowe v. DeGioia, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. Here, all petitioners are not similarly situated. Petitioners Jarolmen, Rota, Sireno, Smith, O'Connor-Grubb, and Parker have now accepted 12-Month Instructor positions. Kosman has applied for a 12-Month Instructor position and a vacancy for at least one such position will be posted soon. A position as Vocational Rehabilitation Counselor 1 has been accepted by Gonzalez, and another such position has been offered to Gackowski.

On the other hand, petitioners Beckhard, Borgersen, Maltman and Indore have chronic health problems that require medical treatment that is covered through their State Health Benefits Plan. Their layoffs would result in an inability to maintain healthcare, as they cannot afford to pay for their health benefits under COBRA. Even if they were to be reinstated at a later time, the adverse impact resulting from any interim decline in health would not be compensable.

I therefore CONCLUDE that petitioners Beckhard, Borgersen, Maltman and Intorre have shown immediate harm that would constitute irreparable injury justifying issuance of injunctive relief.

Right to Underlying Claim Must be Settled

Petitioners assert that they have seniority over instructors who have retained their positions and, consequently, their seniority should be grouped with the seniority of the 12-month instructors to determine the order of individuals dismissed as a result of the reduction in force. The legal basis for this claim is their assertion that, though they are 10-month instructors and the other instructors 12-month instructors, all such instructors teach within the same category and, based on the standards for determining seniority, both types of instructors, therefore, should have been grouped together and dismissed in reverse order of their seniority. Petitioners assert that the law is settled with regard to how their seniority should be calculated based on the regulations applicable to the lay off that has occurred here.

In their briefs and oral arguments, the parties differed with regard to what regulations were applicable to petitioners' positions. Because petitioners serve as instructors for the CBVI, which is within DHS, respondent argued that regulations that impact teaching staff members serving in school districts, namely those in Title 6A Chapter 32 of the Administrative Code, were inapplicable. However, the specific regulations applied to petitioners' positions found in Title 10 Chapter 11 of the Administrative Code clarify that N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 is applicable to the determination of seniority in this particular situation. N.J.A.C. 10:11-1.9, with regard to reductions in force, specifically reads:

> Nothing contained in N.J.S.A. 18A shall be held to limit the right of the Commissioner of Human Services in the case of any educational program conducted under his or her jurisdiction, supervision or control, to reduce the number of instructional staff in any such educational program or programs when the reduction is due to natural diminution of the number of students participating in the educational program or programs, subject to N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1.
> [N.J.A.C. 10:11-1.9 (emphasis added).]

Although the regulation cites a provision of the Code no longer in effect, the regulation was last updated prior to the recodification of Title 6 to Title 6A, and the regulatory history of N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1 reveals that it was recodified to N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1. 36 N.J.R. 4050(a) (Sept. 7, 2004) at 4052 & 61; 37 N.J.R. 1982(a) (June 6, 2005) at 1985; 37 N.J.R. 3322(a).[1] Thus, N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1, entitled "Standards for Determining Seniority," is certainly applicable to the reduction in force that has occurred in this matter, regardless of the title of Chapter 32, because it is incorporated by reference in

[1] The seniority standards at N.J.A.C. 6:3-5.1 were also previously codified at N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10.

DHS' own regulations.[2] This determination was also made by the Commissioner of Education in Helm v. DHS, EDU 256-97, Final Decision, Comm'r. (July 22, 1998) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/final/edu256-97.pdf>. Nevertheless, this does not settle the issue.

N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 is a lengthy provision that in relevant part provides that:

> (i) Whenever any person's particular employment shall be abolished in a category, he or she shall be given that employment in the same category to which he or she is entitled by seniority. If he or she shall have insufficient seniority for employment in the same category, he or she shall revert to the category in which he or she held employment prior to his or her employment in the same category and shall be placed and remain upon the preferred eligible list of the category from which he or she reverted until a vacancy shall occur in such category to which his or her seniority entitles him or her.

The provision emphasizes that the calculation of seniority when a reduction of force occurs depends upon an individuals' employment in a specific category. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 specifies such categories for determining seniority. In relevant part, it states:

> (l) The following shall be deemed to be specific categories, not necessarily numbered in order of precedence:
> > 19. Additional categories of specific educational service endorsements issued by the State Board of Examiners and listed in the State Board rules dealing with teacher certification pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9, Professional Licensure and Standards.

[2] Even if N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 were inapplicable, N.J.S.A. 18A:60-3, which provides the statutory authority to effectuate the reduction in N.J.A.C. 10:11-1.9, states: "When such . . . instructors . . . under tenure are dismissed by reason of such reduction, those . . . instructors having the least years of service to their credit shall be dismissed in preference to those having longer terms of service." Calculating seniority based on the statute, therefore, would likely be more liberal than how it is performed within school districts. However, because N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 is applicable and specifies that seniority is calculated with a categorical basis, as discussed below, the answer to the question of whether petitioners here have more seniority than 12-month instructors becomes dependent on whether 10-month and 12-month instructors are within the same category.

[N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1.]

Therefore, one such category in which an individual accrues seniority would be in "Blind or visually impaired," an endorsement that "authorizes the holder to teach blind or visually impaired students." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-9.2(b)(6)(i).

In the instant matter, aside from their differences over which regulations are applicable to the reduction in force, the parties differ over whether the 10-month positions and the 12-month positions would be considered within the same category for the purpose of calculating seniority. If they fall within the same category, then petitioners' seniority would be grouped with the seniority of those instructors holding 12-month positions to determine which instructors would lose their positions as a result of the reduction in force. It is undisputed that the instructors at issue here hold the same certificates with endorsements as the 12-month instructors and that both the 10-month and 12-month positions require that those certificates be held by these instructors. Consequently, under a plain reading of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1, it is clear that the two positions would be considered within the same category.

Case law further supports this. In Helm, supra, a teacher serving in the position of Teacher I had been laid off after a reduction in force because individuals in the position of Teacher II, DHS argued, had more seniority. Helm asserted that because the descriptions for Teacher I and Teacher II described the required endorsement differently, one more specific than the other, they were separate categories. DHS argued the positions should be treated as in the same category because they essentially required the same endorsement even though the required endorsements were described differently. The Commissioner, however, determined that because the standards for determining seniority promulgated by the Department of Education were applicable to a reduction in force of instructors by DHS, the positions of Teacher I and Teacher II had "distinct certification and experience requirements" and, as such, were to be treated separately, thus holding that Helm should be returned to her position.

The holding in Helm is reflective of the way in which our Supreme Court has applied seniority as well. While the distinguishable facts in Lichtman v. Village of Ridgewood Bd. of Educ., 93 N.J. 362 (1983), as pointed out by respondent, are noted, the Supreme Court in that case nonetheless provided an interpretation of how seniority is determined based on a position's category. Lichtman was a tenured part-time librarian whose job duties were identical to those of a full-time librarian. When her part-time position was eliminated, she applied for a vacant full-time librarian position, but a non-tenured applicant was chosen instead. In reviewing whether her seniority warranted that she be hired for the full-time position, the Court, looking at the predecessor regulation of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1, N.J.A.C. 6:3-1.10(b), stated that its language and import "are to be understood as allowing a pro rata calculation of seniority based upon the total accumulated services in a specific category. In this way, actual service can be duly recognized and relevant experience and seniority of all tenured employees within a single category can be readily ascertained and compared." Id. at 368. To this it noted that "[s]eniority . . . provides the mechanism for ranking tenured teaching staff members so that reductions in force and reemployment can be effected in an equitable fashion and in accord with sound educational policies." Id. at 368 n. 4. Ultimately, the Court determined that because Lichtman's seniority accrued "from her actual service in the particular position for which she [was] certified" which was as "teacher-librarian" and the nature of the duties for a part-time and full-time librarian "were identical," she was entitled to preference over a non-tenured applicant. Id. at 369. Though the Court did not specify whether she would have had "bumping rights," for that was not the issue at hand, the Court's holding indicates that a teacher who holds a position for which she is certified and that has identical duties to another position should have her seniority ranked along with tenured teachers holding such other positions.

The Supreme Court has also emphasized that similarity of duties in different positions reflects that those positions may fall within the same category for purposes of calculating seniority. For example, in Dennery v. Passaic County Reg'l High Sch. Dist. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 626 (1993), the Court drew the distinction between a tenured employee's right to be placed in a newly created position that had substantially identical duties to the abolished position the employee held and a tenured employee's right to be placed in a newly created position that had overlapping duties but also additional duties to or different responsibilities from the previously-held position. Id. at 639-40. It emphasized that a school board would be required to extend a teacher's tenure rights to a position with substantially identical duties. Id. at 639-40 (citing Viemeister v. Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 219 (App. Div. 1949); Vogel v. Bd. of Educ., St. Bd. (June 5, 1985), slip. Op. at 5-6; Luppino v. Bd. of Educ., 1980 S.L.D. 1028, 1035-36). However, it also recognized that no such rights could be extended to a position that was not substantially similar because it required additional duties or responsibilities. Id. at 640 (citing Santasiero v. Parsippany-Troy Hills Bd. of Educ., 1984 S.L.D. 854, 879; Sandri v. Bd. of Educ., 1986 S.L.D. 1501; Rufalo v. Bd. of Educ., 1986 S.L.D. 1699.

Respondent asserts that the 10-month and 12-month positions are treated differently by the Civil Service Commission ("CSC") because they have been given different codes by the CSC. However, petitioners rightly point out that the description of the requirements and duties of these positions are identical, aside from the length of service and salary. That CSC decided to provide the positions with different codes does not appear to have any bearing on the way in which DHS is required to determine seniority according to N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1. What has bearing, however, is that both positions require the same certification and endorsement for teaching and are identical in the duties expected to be performed by the individuals that hold them.[3] Consequently, by the plain language of N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1 as well as the Supreme Court's application of seniority and tenure rights to individuals who are seeking positions that, because of their similarity in requirements and duties, are in the same category as the position they have been removed from, it is evident at this juncture that the law is settled that CBVI should have grouped the seniority of the instructors of both 10- and 12-month positions to determine the layoff sequence for its reduction in force.

[3] Respondent asserts in its brief that certain 12-month instructors can provide orientation and mobility services while all of the 10-month instructors cannot and that this supports that the positions are not identical. (Resp't's Br. 5). Upon reviewing the descriptions for both positions in P-2, it is evident that they both require instructors to hold a valid orientation and mobility instructor certificate. Hence, respondent's argument collapses on the fact that while some instructors may have these skills, others who do not are currently holding positions for which they are required to hold specific certificates in orientation and mobility instruction.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have demonstrated the right to require that layoffs be based upon a calculation of the tenure and seniority of all 10- and 12-Month Instructors combined.

Reasonable Probability of Prevailing on the Merits

Petitioners have the burden to "make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133 (citing Ideal Laundry Co. v. Gugliemone, 107 N.J.Eq. 108, 115-16 (E. & A. 1930)). With regard to this prong, the Supreme Court in Crowe, supra, stated that this "requirement is tempered by the principle that mere doubt as to the validity of the claim is not an adequate basis for refusing to maintain the status quo." Id. at 134 (citations omitted). See also 37 New Jersey Practice, Administrative Law and Practice, § 5.20, at 261 (Steven L. Lefelt, et al.) (2d ed. 2000) (stating the same). "[T]he point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition when the final decision is issued, as they were when the litigation began." Ibid. This prong is the most difficult to meet when a moving party is attempting to demonstrate it is entitled to emergent relief. R.N. v. Hazlet Twp. Bd. of Educ., EDU 8026-09, initial decision (June 24, 2009), adopted, Comm'r. (June 24, 2009) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

In the instant matter under this prong, petitioners must show that 10-month instructors will be placed in positions currently held by less senior 12-month instructors. All fourteen petitioners who held positions as 10-month instructors are asserting that they hold more seniority than persons holding 12-month instructor positions for CBVI. The assertion that more senior instructors have been laid off when less senior instructors continue to hold 12-month positions has been certified as true by each of the petitioners named in the petition. Furthermore, petitioners Intorre, Maltman, and Borgerson certify that they are 12-month instructors at the Cherry Hill office with less seniority, (Intorre Cert. ¶ 7, Maltman Cert. ¶ 7, & Borgerson Cert. ¶ 7), and Beckhard certifies that there are 12-month instructors at the Toms River office with less seniority, (Beckhard Cert. ¶ 7). Respondent has not outright contested that there are 12-month instructors with less seniority than the 10-month instructors. Nevertheless, the lack of evidence substantiating these certifications leaves more than mere doubt as to the validity of petitioners' claims. Because of the lack of proofs produced, it is not clear here that petitioners have a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits because, while it is clear that the law would require more senior 10-month instructors to "bump" less senior 12-month instructors, it is not clear that any 10-month instructors have more seniority over persons holding 12-month positions.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not shown that they have a reasonable probability of prevailing on the merits.

Relative Hardship to the Parties

The final test in considering the granting of emergency relief is the relative hardship to the parties in granting or denying relief in order to preserve the status quo pending a full hearing on the merits. CBVI argues that petitioners have not demonstrated that the private interests of employees outweigh the public's interest in "reducing staff and meeting its constitutional obligation to adjust spending to meet much depleted revenues." Petitioners argue that their loss of income, health insurance and pension contributions, as well as any psychological damage resulting from loss of a career, outweighs any potential harm to CBVI.

Petitioners' positions were abolished due to an overall fiscal policy that resulted in a combination of teaching positions. The operational needs of the agency required a reduction in force. Reversing CBVI's determination to eliminate those positions would adversely impact its ability to operate within budget and thus deliver services to the public. On balance, I agree that the greater harm would be to respondent, notwithstanding the unfortunate and harsh consequences suffered by petitioners.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not shown that they would suffer a greater hardship if relief sought were denied pending a plenary hearing.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I FIND that for purposes of deciding this application for emergent relief, petitioners other than Beckhard, Borgersen, Maltman and Intorre have failed to establish the existence of irreparable harm. I further FIND that all petitioners have failed to establish that there is a likelihood of prevailing on the merits, and that, on balance, they would suffer a greater relative hardship pending a full hearing on the merits.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioners' request for emergent relief seeking an Order restraining their layoffs on June 30, 2011, and declaring that the respondent, New Jersey Department of Human Services, Commission for the Blind and Visually Impaired (CBVI), is required to calculate tenure and seniority of its 10- and 12-Month Instructors on a combined basis and effect layoffs in reverse order of seniority, should be and hereby is DENIED.

It is so ORDERED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not ~~adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall~~ become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
HEARING OF ANTHONY COLUCCIO, JR.,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT	:	DECISION
OF CORRECTIONS, EDNA MAHON	:
CORRECTIONAL FACILITY FOR WOMEN.	:

SYNOPSIS

The New Jersey State Department of Corrections filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a public employee against respondent, a tenured teacher of cosmetology, and sought to terminate his employment at the Edna Mahon Correctional Facility for Women. The charges arose out of an improper and unauthorized relationship with an inmate in the correctional facility.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the testimony of the inmate with whom respondent allegedly had an improper relationship was articulate, credible, and supported by letters she had authored to respondent and recordings of contemporaneous telephone conversations between the inmate and her mother; respondent's testimony was articulate and coherent, but his version of events was at odds with the documentary and physical evidence presented by the Department, as well as the recorded telephone conversations with the inmate's mother; based on the credible evidence, respondent instigated and maintained a consensual, but improper, relationship with the adult inmate from October 2008 until April 2009; respondent's prior disciplinary history – and the fact that the improper relationship was with an adult student, was reciprocated, and did not directly compromise the facility's security – mitigates against the penalty of termination. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the Department of Corrections has established that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming, but determined that the appropriate penalty in this matter is a one-year suspension without pay.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct, but found that respondent's improper and unauthorized relationship with an inmate necessitates his termination from tenured employment. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as to the ALJ's finding that respondent is guilty of conduct unbecoming, and dismissed respondent from his tenured position.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
HEARING OF ANTHONY COLUCCIO, JR.,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT	:	DECISION
OF CORRECTIONS, EDNA MAHON	:
CORRECTIONAL FACILITY FOR WOMEN.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon a comprehensive review of the entire record in this matter – which included transcripts of the hearings conducted at the OAL on June 4, June 11, August 16, and October 27, 2010 – the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the Department of Corrections (Department) has established that the respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct. The Commissioner finds no basis in the record to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony.[1] Specifically, with respect to the credibility of the respondent and the inmate with whom he had the relationship, the ALJ found the following,

> A review of the entire record therefore shows Lindorff's version of the events to be the more credible one. She was direct, candid and articulate in her testimony. Further, that testimony was supported by the letters she wrote to Collucio as the relationship progressed, and importantly, by the taped telephone conversations with her > mother. Those conversations were recorded contemporaneously with many of the events. Collucio's version of events, while delivered in an articulate manner, fails in comparison to the weight of the evidence presented by the Department.

[1] It is well established that the Commissioner must defer to the credibility findings of the ALJ unless these prove to be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, or are not supported by sufficient, competent and credible evidence in the record. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(c).

The Commissioner also finds that the ALJ's fact-finding analysis and conclusions as to the truth of the Department's allegations and the characterization of respondent's behavior as unbecoming conduct to be fully supported by the record and consistent with applicable law.

Turning to the appropriate penalty to be imposed in this matter, the Commissioner is mindful that the "[f]actors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the individual's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Deborah Suitt-Green, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner October 14, 1997, slip. op. at 32, citing In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

The Commissioner recognizes that the charges in this matter are serious in nature and finds that the respondent's improper and unauthorized relationship with an inmate necessitates the termination of his tenured position. The respondent's unbecoming conduct was not the result of an isolated incident, but rather a pattern of conduct that occurred between October 2008 and May 2009, which involved multiple discussions with sexual overtones and inappropriate touching of the inmate initiated by the respondent. Although the relationship was technically consensual in nature, as a teacher in a correctional facility the respondent inherently had a degree of power over the inmate which further exacerbates the gravity of his conduct.

The record also demonstrates that respondent's responses to the charges against him range from complete denial of the alleged behavior to allegations that such behavior was inconsequential in nature and directed at a co-worker, a position that is completely inconsistent with the testimonial evidence. Additionally, the respondent conceded that he authored the sexually explicit contents of the "post-it note" as well as the "Application for a Relationship" questionnaire, although he incredibly maintained at the hearing that neither document was intended for the inmate, but instead for a co-worker with whom he had a friendly relationship. The mere fact that the respondent wrote the contents of those documents while working as a teacher at the correctional facility – and carelessly left them around his desk – demonstrates his severe lack of judgment and an astounding inability to appreciate the egregiousness of his behavior. Finally, the Commissioner considered respondent's extended employment with the Department, and nonetheless determines that the nature of the incidents proven to have occurred demonstrate that he is unfit to remain in his position.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as to the ALJ's finding that the respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct. Respondent is hereby dismissed from his tenured position with the Department.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 60-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 158-7/09

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF ANTHONY COLUCCIO, JR., NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF CORRECTIONS, EDNA MAHON CORRECTIONAL FACILITY FOR WOMEN.

Daniel Vannella, Deputy Attorney General, for New Jersey State Department of Corrections, Edna Mahan Correctional Facility for Women, petitioner (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

John M. Holliday, Esq., for Anthony Coluccio, Jr., respondent

Record Closed: January 3, 2011 Decided: May 19, 2011

BEFORE PATRICIA M. KERINS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

In this matter the Department of Corrections (Department) seeks the dismissal of Anthony Coluccio (Coluccio), a tenured teacher of cosmetology at the Edna Mahon Correctional Facility for Women (Edna Mahon). He is charged with conduct unbecoming arising out of an improper and unauthorized relationship with an inmate at that facility.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 24, 2009, the Department filed a Preliminary Notice of Disciplinary Action (PNDA) against Coluccio. On June 29, 2009, a departmental hearing was held and he was suspended without pay. On July 13, 2009, notice of tenure charges was transmitted to the Commissioner of Education. On July 25, 2009, respondent requested that the charges be held in abeyance until the disposition of a criminal investigation related to the charges. Pursuant to Ott v. Bd of Ed. of Hamilton Tp., 160 N.J. Super. 333 (App. Div.), certif. den., 78 N.J. 336 (1978), the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the Department of Education (Education) notified the parties on July 28, 2009, that the request was granted. On October 27, 2009, respondent requested a continued stay of the tenure charges due to the continued criminal investigation by the Hunterdon County Prosecutor's Office. On January 13, 2010, after the conclusion of the criminal investigation, Education deemed the charges sufficient and forwarded the matter on January 20, 2010, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

On March 5, 2010, a prehearing conference was held and a Prehearing Order regarding discovery and the conduct of the hearing was issued on March 9, 2010. On May 17, 2010, a second prehearing conference was held and an Order extending the time for discovery was issued on May 19, 2011. The first hearing dates scheduled for May 20 and 21, 2010, were adjourned at the parties' request. The hearing was held, and testimony taken on June 4 and 11, 2010, August 16, 2010, and October 27, 2010. On November 24, 2010, the parties submitted a Joint Stipulation into the record and the parties were granted thirty days for the submission of post hearing briefs. At the request of respondent's counsel, the time for submission of briefs was extended to January 3, 2011, and the record closed. The time for the filing of the Initial Decision was extended to May 19, 2011.

General Background Facts

Anthony Coluccio began working as a cosmetology teacher at Edna Mahon in 1989, after being employed by the Department since 1986. During late 2008 through mid-2009, his classroom was located in the Education Building at the facility, along with the office of its Director of Education, Cathy Morgan (Morgan). Coluccio's office was located within a classroom set up as a beauty salon to train inmates in cosmetology. While in the same building as Morgan's office, his classroom was down a hall from her office and across from the inmate's legal library.

Morgan's office provided space for the faculty's mail slots, office equipment and computers for her staff. Inmates serving as paraprofessionals made up her support staff and performed secretarial and clerical duties. One such inmate was Heather Lindorff, who was serving a six year sentence. Lindorff usually worked five days a week, and occasionally on weekends. As one of the three inmates serving as paraprofessionals for Morgan in late 2008 through spring 2009, Lindorff also performed clerical tasks for teachers at the facility as directed by Morgan. She was considered a good worker by Morgan and had no history of disciplinary infractions at Edna Mahan.

Relationship between Coluccio and Lindorff

Lindorff first encountered Coluccio in 2006, when she received a haircut at the facility. One of Coluccio's duties was supervising inmates being trained in cosmetology, who provided haircuts and manicures to the inmates. According to Lindorff, she began more than a passing acquaintance with Coluccio in October 2008. By then she was working in Morgan's office, in the same building as Coluccio. On October 23, 2008, a job fair and community awareness day was held at the facility. During the event, she and Coluccio spoke and exchanged jokes during the day. On the next teaching day, Lindorff described Coluccio approaching her in Morgan's office, telling her to "stay out of my dreams." He first mouthed the words and then whispered them to her.

The relationship as described by Lindorff continued to move from friendly talks and jokes to discussions with sexual overtones through November 2008. Lindorff also was included in a program supervised by Coluccio that made appearances at schools. Sometime in November 2008, Lindorff testified that Coluccio began to touch her physically. She recalled that one day before the holiday break while she was standing in the doorway of the inmate legal room, he placed his hands on her breast. Sometime in early December, he "rubbed her butt," something she testified he did between 7 to 9 times between late fall 2008 and Valentine's Day 2009. He also grabbed her hand and placed it on his crotch. The touching occurred in or around Morgan's office or within the education building. According to Lindorff, while the onset of the touching was unexpected, it was not unwelcome. She found Coluccio attractive and the relationship was consensual.

By December 2008, Lindorff began to write letters to Coluccio, either handwritten or on her computer. She also kept copies of the letters. At first she would give letters to him in his classroom but they agreed she would leave them in an envelope in his faculty mail slot. The letters, which ranged from the sexual and emotional parameters of the relationship, to their interests and daily activities, are remarkably detailed. According to Lindorff, Coluccio did not communicate in writing to her, except on two occasions. In early December when Lindorff questioned him about the status of the relationship in a letter (P-8), she said he responded with a handwritten response on a yellow post-it note (P-9). The note stated:

> I say we keep things going just like they are here. Then when you get home I'll come by and hang out. Then I'll go down on you and make you come till you beg me to stop. And I will. But then I will come up and fuck you till your toes curl and you scream till you can't anymore. Get rid of this."

The post-it note was given to Lindorff in the same envelope in which she had given him one of her letters. However, instead of destroying it, she forwarded the note via mail to her mother, Mildred Cullinan, for safekeeping. Lindorff regularly spoke to her mother, either in her personal visits to the facility or by telephone. She discussed her relationship with Collucio in those conversations and in a phone conversation advised her mother that she would be sending her something for safekeeping. (P-76).

The second writing from Collucio was a completed "Application for a Relationship" questionnaire that Lindorff had given him. According to LIndorff she gave him the form, which was sexually explicit, and he filled it out for her with his preferences. (P-17). Lindorff then mentions the application in letters to him later in December (P-18 and 19).[1]

According to Lindorff, the relationship with Collucio continued in the same manner until around Valentine's Day 2009. At that point, he told her to "lay low" and she assumed he was backing off the relationship. Aside from the occasional "sexual type comment" in April, 2009, Lindorff saw the intensity leave their friendship, although the two remained in contact through their interactions in the Education building. On May 12, 2009, one of Lindorff's fellow paraprofessionals, noticed a document on her computer that mentioned Collucio and reported it. As a result, Morgan contacted the facility's administration and Lindorff's computer was examined. After the discovery of her letters to Collucio, she was transferred to a maximum security unit and the investigation of their interaction commenced.[2]

In her first statements to the Department's investigators, Lindorff denied any improper relationship with Collucio and described her letters as the product of her overheated imagination. In subsequent interviews, she did admit to the relationship. As she explained her change of heart and her admission, she first chose to protect him since she genuinely cared for him and did not want him to suffer the consequences of her relationship. It was only after she learned that he had spoken of her in derogatory terms when denying the extent of their relationship that she chose to admit what had occurred. Although she was transferred to a less restrictive unit after she cooperated with investigators, she received no other benefits from her cooperation and went on to serve out the remainder of her sentence.

[1] At times, Lindorff referred to herself as "Bosh" and Collucio as either "Dylan" or "Bart", as she had discovered his middle name was Bartholomew.

[2] Around this time, a separate investigation had begun into a corrections officer in her housing unit and his improper relationships with inmates. Lindorff was questioned in that matter and admitted that she was one of the inmates with whom the officer had a relationship. In communications with her mother, she referred to that officer as "Jordan".

As testified to by Kathleen Zdonowski, a principal investigator for the Department, Lindorff's admissions were corroborated by an examination of the letters she had written to Collucio, as well as by a review of Lindorff's almost daily telephone conversations with her mother. Such calls by inmates are routinely taped and a CD compilation of these calls (P-76) revealed that Lindorff discussed her interactions with Collucio on a regular basis with her mother, using the name Dylan for Collucio. In her testimony, Zdonowski detailed the manner in which she corroborated Lindorff's account with her letters and phone calls. Additionally, the Department contacted her mother and obtained the incriminating "post-it note" that Lindorff had not destroyed but had forwarded to her mother for safekeeping. The Department's investigators also retrieved an office calendar (P-78) from Collucio's office with a mark for Lindorff's birthday, as Lindorff claimed Collucio had marked the calendar in red for her birthday while she was in his office.

The Department's final witnesses were Mildred Cullinan and Ellis Allen, a Department investigator. Cullinan testified that she received the letter with the "post-it note" from her daughter in December 2008. She also confirmed her conversations with her daughter regarding Collucio. Allen testified that he traveled to the Cullinan home and took custody of the "post-it note".

In response to the Department's case, Collucio testified on his own behalf and presented Morgan and a fellow teacher in support of his version of events. Collucio denied any relationship, other than a passing acquaintance, with Lindorff. He denied interacting with her at the October 2008 career day at the facility and denied choosing her for the outside tour program. He explained her participation in the program by explaining that it was usually the paraprofessionals who were chosen. In his testimony he denied telling her to "stay out of my dreams" or touching her in any manner. He denied receiving letters from her or ever being alone with her. As he put it, any relationship he had with Lindorff was "all in her head."

He did state that "some of the girls", meaning other inmates, mentioned to him that they noticed Lindorff "stalking" him. He then noticed her around his classroom and the inmate law library more often, and that she would stare at him from the legal room across the hall. After ignoring the situation, he went to Morgan with his concerns. Morgan advised him that she would counsel Lindorff but after a respite, he saw the behavior continue. He said he asked other inmates to remain in his classroom area with him so that Lindorff would not bother him. He did not file a report or take formal action regarding Lindorff's behavior, saying it was up to Morgan to "solve the problem".

Collucio did admit authoring the "post-it note" that Lindorff asserted was given to her. However, he denied writing it for Lindorff or giving it to her. In his version of events, he wrote it to give to Linda Fleming, a fellow teacher and a long time friend with whom he lunched. He described their relationship as friendly, joking and occasionally flirtatious. He wrote the note for Fleming but never gave it to her, feeling embarrassed and changing his mind. He assumed that he left it around his desk and that Lindorff took it to send on to her mother. It was also his testimony that he mentioned to Fleming that he had written her a note but was too embarrassed to give it to her.

Similarly, he admitted filling out the "Application for a Relationship" form. He found it in his mailbox, and thinking it was a joke from a coworker, filled it out and left it on his desk. As with the "post-it note", he assumed that Lindorff must have taken it from his desk. As for his office calendar, he had no idea how a mark for Lindorff's birthday was placed on it.

Both Linda Fleming and Kathy Morgan testified as part of Collucio's response to the tenure charges. Fleming described herself as a close friend of Collucio. While Collucio's classroom was in the Education building at the facility, Fleming's was in the maximum security complex. She would see him in the morning, for lunch every day and at the end of the work day. She said their relationship was flirtatious and they "joked around a lot". According to Fleming, she recalled a conversation with Collucio in December 2008 or January 2009, in which he said he wrote her a letter. When shown the post-it note (P-9) for the first time in an interview by the Hunterdon County Prosecutor's office, she admitted that she was not certain that it was the letter he had mentioned to her. In her testimony, she described the contents of the note as more explicit than their usual bantering. She also admitted that she received a call from Collucio just prior to her interview with the prosecutor's office regarding their investigation.

After some hesitation, she further testified that Collucio spoke with her about Lindorff's infatuation with him and that he had asked her to come down early to his classroom to make sure he would not be alone with Lindorff. She did recall Lindorff standing in the legal resource room across the hallway from Collucio's classroom, staring into it.

Kathy Morgan described the physical layout of the Education building, her office being on the short end of a "T" shaped hallway, with Collucio's classroom down the hall and around a corner, across from the legal resource room. The inmates's restroom was near his classroom as well. She has known Collucio for at least ten years, and is his direct supervisor. Lindorff was one of her paraprofessionals and Morgan confirmed that her duties placed her in the area near Collucio's classroom. Morgan recalled Collucio complaining to her sometime in the winter of 2008-09 that he felt uncomfortable with Lindorff's presence and that she was stalking him. Morgan then spoke with Lindorff counseling her to stay in her office area. She recalled speaking to her a second time and Lindorff explained that she was using the legal resource room for matters related to the custody of her children. As did Fleming, Morgan denied seeing any inappropriate conduct by Collucio. Although she found Lindorff a good worker, and never found her untruthful, Morgan stated that she felt Lindorff was lying about her relationship with Collucio. When pressed on her reasoning, she averred that it was because she was an inmate.

As part of his response to the charges, Collucio submitted the unsworn statements of several inmates. (R1-7). The transcripts resulted from interviews taken by a private investigator for Collucio and none of the inmates were produced as witnesses at the hearing. In their statements they agree that Lindorff was infatuated with Collucio, and that Collucio asked them to hang around his classroom so that he would not have to be alone with her.

Credibility Determinations and Findings of Fact

The two protagonists in this matter, Lindorff and Collucio, present opposing versions of what occurred between them from October 2008 through May 2009. Lindorff's version is supported by the letters she authored to Collucio and by the contemporaneous phone conversations with her mother, along with her mother's testimony. Her version is further buttressed by the physical and documentary evidence submitted by respondent. Collucio, in turn, is supported by the testimony of Fleming and Morgan on facts related to what occurred between him and Lindorff, as well as unsworn statements from other inmates.

Lindorff and Collucio were both articulate witnesses who presented their testimony in a direct manner. Lindorff in particular was a credible witness. She did not deny her feelings for Collucio and her evident infatuation with him. It is clear from her writings to him that for a period of time she enjoyed their relationship and hoped to continue contact with him after she left prison. Those writings provide a timeline for, and description of the relationship, including descriptions of the furtive touchings by Collucio that she described in her testimony. Both her testimony and her writings are detailed and coherent, and agree with each other on the progress of the relationship. Her version is further corroborated by the taped phone conversations with her mother, which stand as a contemporaneous record of her assertions.

While she first denied the relationship during questioning by the Department's investigators, she was candid in her explanation that she still cared for Collucio and did not wish him harm. Only after she felt he had betrayed by his speaking of her in a derogatory manner, did she admit the extent of the relationship. Given the feelings she harbored for Collucio, it was not unexpected that her initial attempt to protect him should give way under the weight of his perceived betrayal. Her explanation of her initial denials therefore rang true in her testimony.

Lindorff's descriptions of the physical area in which the relationship took place and her detail of the movements of herself and Collucio, as well as those around them, were also detailed and coherent. Her descriptions of his furtive gropings in the confined areas they inhabited each work day were plausible in time and place.

The Department's investigators also were credible witnesses. Zdonowksi, in particular, provided testimony on the correlation in time and place of the interconnected testimonial, documentary and taped evidence showing the extent of the relationship between Lindorff and Colluccio. Cullinan too was credible in how she came into possession of the incriminating "post-it note", an account that was corroborated by her taped conversation with her daughter and by Ellis' account of physically taking custody of the note at Cullinan's home.

Although Collucio presented an articulate and coherent version of events in response to the charges, that version was nevertheless at odds with the documentary and physical evidence presented by the Department, as well as by the contemporaneously recorded conversations between Lindorff and her mother. His denials of an improper relationship were accompanied by testimony from Morgan and Fleming that he had complained to both about LIndorff's infatuation with him and his attempts to forestall being alone with her. Each was credible on that score and LIndorff herself admitted that Morgan had spoken to her about remaining in a specific area. Yet such an action by Collucio could also be seen as a proactive measure to sheid himself from the unwanted attention LIndorff's infatuation was bringing to their relationship.

While Collucio's version of how and why he authored the "post-it note" was supported in part by Fleming, it was belied by the note itself, and LIndorff's successful efforts to safeguard at her mother's home. Fleming never saw the note until she was questioned about it during the investigation, and even then was clearly embarrassed by its contents, admitting it went beyond the parameters of her friendship with Collucio.

While she recalled Colluccio mentioning something in the winter about a note he chose not to send her, she appeared uncomfortable in her testimony and admitted that Collucio called her the evening prior to her interview with the prosecutor's office. Collucio and Fleming's testimony regarding the note were simply less credible than that of Lindorff, and the corroborating evidence presented in support of her version of events.

Similarly, Collucio's version of how he came to complete the "Application for a Relationship" form fails in comparison to the evidence presented in opposition. While he admitted filling out the form, he posited it as a random event, something which appeared in his mail slot. He then answered it in a sexually explicit manner, leaving it around his desk. Lindorff however, provided a more coherent explanation, detailing how she gave it to him. Her account is corroborated by her incorporation of his answers in her subsequent letters to him.

Collucio also presented opinions from Morgan and inmates at the facility as to Lindorff's credibility. While Morgan admitted Lindorff was a good worker who had never lied to her, she appeared to base her opinion solely on the fact that she was an inmate. As for the statements of the other inmates, each was unsworn and none of the inmates were produced for testimony at the hearing. Additionally, a review of the statements shows that they were rarely specific as to dates and provided little information other than the fact that Lindorff was infatuated with Collucio.

A review of the entire record therefore shows LIndorff's version of events to be the more credible one. She was direct, candid and articulate in her testimony. Further, that testimony was supported by the letters she wrote to Collucio as the relationship progressed, and importantly, by the taped telephone conversations with her mother. Those conversations were recorded contemporaneously with many of the events. Collucio's version of events, while delivered in an articulate manner, fails in comparison to the weight of the evidence presented by the Department.

Based on the record before me in this matter, I FIND that Anthony Collucio instigated and maintained an improper relationship with Heather Lindorff while she was an inmate at the Edna Mahan Correctional Facility and he was employed as a teacher at that facility. The relationship commenced in late October 2008 and continued into April 2009. During that period, Collucio touched her breasts and posterior and placed her hand on his crotch. He also authored two sexually explicit documents, a post-it note and a form questionnaire and gave them to her. While the relationship was consensual, it was nevertheless an improper one, given her status as an inmate.

Prior Disciplinary History

Respondent's prior disciplinary history, as set forth in P-68, consists of a reprimand for smoking in a prohibited area and a three-day suspension for the failure to report loss of equipment.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:60-1.2, "no tenured teacher, or other tenured certified individual serving in a teaching capacity in a State institution within the Department of Corrections, shall be dismissed or subjected to a reduction in salary except for inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher, or other just cause . . ." In this matter, the Department has charged respondent with conduct unbecoming, citing N.J.A.C. 4A:2-2.3(a)6, and the Department's Human Resources Bulletin 84-17 (as amended). (P-48). That Bulletin sets forth the Department's policy on disciplinary actions for the listed offenses. Specifically, Coluccio is charged with the following violations:

> Section C-11: Conduct unbecoming an employee.
> Offense D4: Improper or unauthorized contact with an inmate (undue familiarity with inmates, parolees, their families, or friends.
> Offense C-31: Racial and/or sexual harassment, discrimination and/or retaliation.

The Department bears the burden of proving these charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); Matter of Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). As set forth above, the Department has proven its case that Collucio carried on an improper relationship with an inmate, one that included sexually explicit communications, as well as physical touching. Such conduct fits within the charges set forth against him. His actions constituted conduct unbecoming a public employee and these actions had a level of familiarity that gave rise to improper and unauthorized conduct. Finally, his sexually explicit communications and his furtive gropings of LIndorff rose to the level of sexual harassment. While not unwanted, those attentions were given to an inmate, someone to whom he was superior in position.

The Department requests the sanction of termination for these infractions. It maintains a "zero tolerance policy" for such infractions, and given the sexually explicit nature of the relationship, it argues that termination is appropriate. In determining the sanction in this matter, it is clear that Collucio's conduct was improper and serious in nature. His relationship with, and physical touching of an imate were clear violations of Department regulations and policies. As set forth in its Disciplinary Action Policy (P-48), the penalties for Collucio's infractions range from suspensions of several days to removal. Collucio's infractions are his first offense under each charge. His disciplinary history as set forth in the record shows no serious infractions and he has not been disciplined previously for the type of behavior at issue in this matter.

Although his conduct was serious, his prior disciplinary history is a factor in his favor. Additionally, the improper relationship was with an adult student and was reciprocated. The relationship was finite in time and Collucio took steps to end it. Such factors do not excuse his conduct but are relevant to an analysis of the penalty to be imposed. Finally, Collucio worked in a minimum security area of the facility and while his duties were part of its overall operation, they were not directly related to its security. His relationship with Lindorff, while inappropriate, did not appear to directly compromise the facility's safety. Given these factors, a suspension of one year is an appropriate penalty in this matter.

ORDER

I ORDER that Collucio be suspended without pay for the period of one year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

L.R. and D.D., on behalf of minor child, A.F. PETITIONERS, V. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE LENAPE REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BURLINGTON COUNTY, RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record of this matter, the proposed settlement agreement and general release (Agreement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

The Commissioner notes that paragraph 1 of the Agreement states that part of the settlement payment is due upon the execution of the Agreement, and the remaining part is due within thirty (30) days from the execution of the Agreement. Those dates have preceded the consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves the settlement.

In light of the foregoing, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, provided that the parties have already implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory alternate date for the effectuation of the settlement payment. Assuming same, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

Record Closed: May 9, 2011 Decided: May 24, 2011

BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on October 21, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13, and a hearing was scheduled for December 14, 2010.

Prior to the hearing date, at the request of the parties, the hearing was converted to an in-person settlement. On December 10, 2010, a joint request for an adjournment was received in order that discovery could be completed. The request was granted and the matter was rescheduled for January 7, 2011, as a settlement conference. The parties appeared on January 7, 2011, and reached a tentative settlement subject to Board approval.

On May 9, 2011, the attached Settlement Agreement and General Release was received together with the Board Resolution adopting the settlement.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

3. Both the claim and counterclaim have been resolved in accordance with the executed settlement.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

LEEANNA ROMAN and DEBORAH DENNEHEY o/b/o A.F., Petitioner, v. LENAPE REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT BOARD OF EDUCATION, Respondent.	STATE OF NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION DOCKET NO: EDU 11373-2010 S AGENCY REF: 560-9/10 SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is entered into by and between the Lenape Regional High School District Board of Education (the "Board") and Leeanna Roman ("Petitioner Roman") and Deborah Dennehey ("Petitioner Dennehey") on behalf of A.F. (collectively referred to as "Petitioners"). Petitioner Roman, A.F.'s mother, resides at 3 Hopewell Avenue, Lumberton, New Jersey and Petitioner Dennehey resides at 14 Eaves Mill Road, Medford, New Jersey. The Board and the Petitioners are collectively referred to as the "Parties."

WHEREAS, on or about August 26, 2010, Petitioner Roman requested a residency waiver from the Board for A.F. to attend Shawnee High School for A.F.'s senior year. Petitioner indicated that the Medford home had been rented and consequently, A.F. will be residing at the Lumberton address "at least for the beginning of the school year;"

WHEREAS, Petitioner Roman thereafter indicated that A.F. would reside with Petitioner Dennehey at 14 Eaves Mill Road, Medford, New Jersey;

WHEREAS, on September 8, 2010, the Board received an application seeking A.F.'s enrollment as an "affidavit student" pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b) (hereinafter referred to as "Application");

WHEREAS, on September 9, 2010, the Application was denied because the Board concluded that Petitioners failed to comply with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b), and therefore A.F. would not be enrolled at Shawnee High School;

WHEREAS, on or about September 24, 2010, Petitioners filed a Residency Appeal which forms the basis of the above-captioned matter. Pursuant to law, A.F. was enrolled and attended Shawnee High School, effective September 24, 2010;

WHEREAS, on October 13, 2010, the Board filed an Answer and Counterclaim in the above seeking reimbursement of tuition and costs;

WHEREAS, A.F. turned 18 years of age on October 30, 2010;

WHEREAS, Petitioners allege that A.F. resides at 14 Eaves Mill Road, Medford, New Jersey with Petitioner Dennehey; and,

WHEREAS, the Parties enter into this Settlement Agreement to outline the Parties' agreement without alleging or admitting deficiencies in their positions on the above-captioned matter.

THE PARTIES HEREBY AGREE THAT:

1. Petitioner Roman agrees, in resolution of the Board's Counterclaim and the Amended Counterclaim sought by the Board, to pay to the Board the amount of $9,000.00, which allegedly represents reimbursement for a portion of the tuition and fees for A.F.'s attendance and enrollment at Shawnee High School during the 2009-2010 and 2010-2011 school years. Upon execution of this Agreement, Petitioner Roman shall pay $5,000.00 of the total $9,000.00 to the Board. Thereafter, within thirty (30) days of execution of this Agreement, Petitioner Roman agrees to pay to the Board an additional amount of $4,000.00, which also represents the final payment to the Board for A.F.'s tuition and fees for the 2009-

2010 and 2010-2011 school years. In agreeing to make payments, as set-forth in this paragraph, Petitioner Román is not acknowledging or agreeing that A.F. was a non-Medford resident at any or all relevant times herein, but rather, desires to come to a fair and equitable resolution of this matter.

2. All payments pursuant to paragraph one (1) above shall be made payable to "Lenape Regional High School District" and sent to following address:

Mr. James Hager, Business Administrator
Lenape Regional High School District
93 Willow Grove Road
Shamong, NJ 08008

3. In the event Petitioner Román fails to make the $4,000.00 payment within thirty (30) days of this Agreement, the Board shall be permitted to reduce the amount owed and outstanding to a judgment against Petitioner.

4. Any party that seeks enforcement of this Agreement, and is deemed a prevailing party in the enforcement action, may seek interest and counsel fees in connection with the enforcement action.

5. For the remainder of the 2010-2011 school year, A.F. shall continue to primarily reside within the Medford Township school district. The Board agrees that it will not seek to remove A.F. from the Board schools pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, et. seq. or otherwise declare A.F. a non-resident should he elect to return to Petitioner Roman's Lumberton home from the close of school each Friday until the beginning of school each Monday for the remainder of the 2010-2011 school year. In the event A.F. resides with Petitioner Roman for any additional days other than those indicated in this paragraph, the Board may seek to remove A.F. pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, and seek recovery for tuition from the date he began residing outside of Medford, New Jersey.

6. Petitioners and Board hereby dismiss, with prejudice, all claims in the above-captioned matter.

7. Petitioners, upon the execution of this Agreement, fully and completely release the Board from any and all claims they have or may have, of any kind whether contractual, common law or statutory, including but not limited to all claims for injunctive relief, for alleged discrimination in violation of Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 29 U.S.C.§ 794(a), §705(8), as well as recovery for damages, costs and attorneys fees under the Family Education Rights and Privacy Act, 20 U.S.C. §1232g, et seq., 29 U.S.C. §794(a), 42 U.S.C. §1983, 42 U.S.C. §1988, 29 U.S.C. §705(20), the Individuals with Disabilities In Education Act ("IDEA"), 20 U.S.C. §1400, et seq., the Americans with Disabiiities Act, 42 U.S.C. §12132, et seq., the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, 20 U.S.C. §7801, Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. §12132, et seq., N.J.A.C. 6A:14-1.1, et seq., N.J.A.C. 6A:14-3.7, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, 42 U.S.C. §2000, et seq., the Americans with Disabilities Act, 42 U.S.C. §621, et seq., all as amended, any statutes of New Jersey including but not limited to the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq., or any other claims which have been or could have been asserted by A.F., his Parents, or on the behalf of A.F. in any forum arising out of or connected with A.F.'s education by the Board, and from all liability whatsoever, whether known or unknown, or to the extent permitted by applicable law through the date this Agreement is executed. Nothing in this Agreement shall preclude Petitioners and A.F. from asserting any claims against the Board that may arise in the future, after the date of this Agreement.

8. The Board, upon the execution of this Agreement, fully and completely release, remises, acquits, satisfies, and forever discharges the Petitioners from any and all claims it has or may have, of any kind whether contractual, common law or statutory, including but not limited to all claims for injunctive relief, all manner of actions, causes of action, suits, covenants, contracts, agreements, promises, debts, sums of money, damages, judgments, claims or any other demands whatsoever, in law or in equity which have been or could have been asserted by the Board or on its behalf in any forum arising out of or connected with A.F.'s education by the Board, and from all liability whatsoever, whether known or unknown, or to the extent permitted by applicable law through the date this Agreement is executed. Nothing in this Agreement shall preclude the Board from asserting any claims against Petitioner's that may arise in the future, after the date of this Agreement.

9. This Agreement is dispositive of all issues in dispute between the Parties hereto, and is intended to constitute a final resolution of the dispute between the Parties. Each party shall be responsible for their own fees and costs, including physicians' and attorneys' fees and costs, incurred in connection with this dispute, to the extent applicable. Neither party shall be deemed a prevailing party in this matter.

10. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof, and supersedes all prior written or oral, as well as all contemporaneous oral agreements, understandings, and negotiations;

11. This Agreement shall be interpreted, enforced, and governed under the laws of the State of New Jersey. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall in all cases be construed as a whole, according to its fair meaning, and not strictly for or against any of the Parties.

12. This Agreement is subject to the approval of the Board, which must be obtained prior to Ms. Roman's second and final payment of $4,000.00 and reflected by the Secretary of the Board's signature and execution of this Agreement below. Failure of the Board to approve and sign this Agreement within thirty (30) days of the date of this Agreement shall constitute a rejection of this Agreement requiring the Board to return immediately Ms. Roman's initial payment of $5,000.00.

13. This Agreement may only be amended by way of a writing signed by all Parties and counsel.

14. The Parties acknowledge that they have had the opportunity to review the terms of this Agreement with counsel and are satisfied with the representation provided. The Parties enter into this Agreement knowingly, without coercion or other improper influence.

15. The terms of this Agreement shall remain confidential to the extent permitted by law.

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on November 16, 2010, as an emergent matter for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The emergent matter was withdrawn and the petition was filed as a non-emergent matter.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Agreement made on April 11, 2011 by and between the Spring Lake Board of Education (the "District") located at 411 Tuttle Avenue, Spring Lake, New Jersey 07762 and William and Megan Gepp, parents of M.G., (the "Parents") located at 540 Ludlow Avenue, Spring Lake, N.J. 07762.

WHEREAS, M.G., is a general education 8th grade student enrolled in the District; and

WHEREAS, on June 18, 2010 an incident between M.G. and another student resulted in M.G.'s suspension from school; and

WHEREAS, the District required M.G. to submit to a medical examination to determine whether he was under the influence of any substances prior to returning to school; and

WHEREAS, the District also required M.G. to submit to psychiatric evaluation to determine whether he was a danger to himself or others prior to returning to school; and

WHEREAS, the Parents disputed the right of the District to require such examinations; and

WHEREAS, prior to the commencement of the 2010-2011 school year a dispute arose between the District and the Parents regarding M.G.'s ability to return to school; and

WHEREAS, in September, 2010, the parties agreed to place M.G. on home instruction; and

WHEREAS, to date, M.G. remains on home instruction; and

WHEREAS, on or about November 17, 2010, the District filed a Petition for Emergent Relief with the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes seeking that M.G. undergo a medical examination and drug test prior to returning to school; and

WHEREAS, on or about November 29, 2010, the District filed a Petition of Appeal with the Bureau of Controversies of Dispute; and

WHEREAS, on or about December 22, 2010, the Parents filed an Answer to the District's Petition; and

WHEREAS, the parties have a desire to settle the above matter in an amicable way;

NOW THEREFORE, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The parties agree that M.G. shall remain on home instruction (10 hours per week) through June 23, 2011.
2. The parties agree that M.G. shall not be permitted to participate in any District activities, including but not limited to, the 8th grade graduation ceremony.
3. Upon successful completion of coursework provided by the home instruction, the parties agree that M.G. shall receive a District diploma at the conclusion of the 2010-2011 school year.
4. The parties have reached this compromise to avoid the expense and inconvenience of a hearing before the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes. Neither part is admitting any wrongdoing.
5. The parties agree that the terms of this Agreement shall be confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law.
6. In consideration of the settlement of this matter, the Parents shall release the District from any and all claims, rights and liability, including but not limited to any and all claims for additional attorneys fees, compensatory education, money damages, civil liability, or any other equitable or legal relief through the date of the execution of this Settlement Agreement.

7. This Agreement contains the entire Agreement and understanding between the parties and constitutes a full and final Agreement on any and all issues.
8. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.
9. If, during the term of this Agreement, a specific clause of the Agreement is determined to be illegal or in violation of any Federal or State law, the remainder of the Agreement shall not be affected by such a ruling and shall remain in full force and effect.
10. The parties have entered into this Agreement freely and voluntarily with a full understanding of their rights and the contents of this Agreement. The parties acknowledge that they had the opportunity to consult with legal counsel or a representative of their choice and that they reviewed the Agreement in detail with their counsel or representative and fully understand its requirements and limitations.
11. This Agreement may not be altered, amended or modified except by writing, signed and duly authorized by all parties.
12. This Agreement is subject to ratification by the Spring Lake Board of Education at its next regularly scheduled meeting after receipt of a signed Agreement from the Parents.

PETITIONERS,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SUSSEX COUNTY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners – both of whom were tenured secretaries employed by the respondent Board – lost their positions due to a reduction in force (RIF) in 2008. Petitioners appealed the Board's denial of their requests to "bump" into the positions of Accounts Payable Assistant and Payroll/Benefits Assistant in the school business office. The Board contends that the tenure of both petitioners extends only to the position of general secretary, and not to positions in the business office which require training and experience in accounts payable and payroll and benefits.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioners' assertion that they should have been appointed to either of the positions in the business office – Accounts Payable Assistant or Payroll/Benefits Assistant – is without merit, as petitioners' tenure rights extend only to secretarial positions; the positions to which petitioners claim entitlement are not secretarial positions in either title or function, and are not included on the secretarial salary guide; the business office positions in question have a significantly higher starting salary, are non-union positions, and are hierarchically higher positions than those in which petitioners were employed; petitioners are not entitled to "bump" into these positions, as such placement would constitute a promotion with responsibilities and duties that were not attendant in their secretarial positions; and it is well settled that tenured school employees asserting priority over non-tenured employees must be fully qualified for the positions sought. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that there has been no violation of petitioners' tenure or seniority rights, and dismissed the petition.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioners are not entitled to the positions of Payroll Benefits Assistant or Accounts Payable Assistant. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SUSSEX COUNTY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record[1] of this matter, the detailed Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and petitioners' exceptions have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the petition must be dismissed.

In this appeal, two tenured secretaries – Karen Harrington and Eve Hiller – allege that when a district reduction in force (RIF) eliminated their positions, they were entitled to transfer into the positions of Payroll Benefits Assistant to the Business Administrator[2] and Accounts Payable Assistant to the district Business Administrator,[3] respectively, which positions were held by non-tenured employees. Petitioners submitted letters to respondent on April 22, 2008, asserting alleged "bumping rights," but respondent rejected same.

[1] Transcripts of the hearing were not provided to the Commissioner.

[2] The Payroll Benefits Assistant position was filled on an unspecified date by incumbent Susan Predmore.

[3] The Accounts Payable Assistant position was filled in June 2008 by incumbent Andrew Italiano.

Petitioners do not allege that the RIF was improper. Nor do they contend that they have held any positions in the district other than the position of secretary. Rather, they argue that the positions they seek are secretarial positions and that they are qualified for same.

Included in the record are the job descriptions for the petitioners' secretarial positions, and for the accounting and payroll positions which petitioners seek. The testimony – as summarized by the ALJ and unrefuted by the parties – provides detailed descriptions of the tasks required by the payroll and accounting jobs, and performed by Susan Predmore and Andrew Italiano. These responsibilities far exceed those required in petitioners' secretarial positions. Indeed, it is undisputed that petitioners have no experience performing the majority of the duties which are central to the payroll and accounting positions.

A tenured secretary's seniority rights allow him or her to "bump" into another secretarial position held by a non-tenured employee. See, e.g. Lavine v. Board of Education of the City of Trenton, Mercer County, Commissioner's Decision No. 232-84, decided July 23, 1984, aff'd State Board of Education, December 5, 1984, aff'd App. Div., November 18, 1985. However, the ALJ correctly determined – based upon the facts in the instant record – that the payroll and accounting positions sought by petitioners both require different skill sets than petitioners' secretarial positions and are hierarchically above the secretarial positions. Thus, any "bumping rights" held by petitioners cannot extend to the positions which they seek.

Petitioners' assertion that they are entitled to the positions by virtue of the fact that they satisfy some of the minimal requirements set forth in the job descriptions is without merit – both in light of the fact that the sought positions are not secretarial and in light of the evidence that petitioners' training and experience do not provide proper foundations for the payroll and accounting positions. Also unmeritorious is petitioners' argument that they should be given the positions and afforded on-the-job instruction. In this regard they allege, for instance, that Predmore enjoyed on-the-job training. However, Predmore's experience had included years of executing payroll responsibilities in private sector and non-profit organizations. She needed to learn specific requirements applicable to public entities, but did not need the extensive schooling that Harrington would have needed for the payroll benefits assistant position. Respondent has no obligation to provide same.[4]

In summary, petitioners are not entitled to the positions of Payroll Benefits Assistant and Accounts Payable Assistant. The petition is accordingly dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

[4] Petitioners also contend that no significance should have been attached to the fact that the payroll and accounting positions were non-classified. This argument is not helpful, since union alignment was not the determinative factor in the ALJ's conclusion that the payroll and accounting positions were not secretarial in nature.

[5] This decision may be appealed to the Appellate Division of the Superior Court pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36. (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1)

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 09137-08
AGENCY DKT. NO. 186-7/08

KAREN HARRINGTON AND EVE HILLER, Petitioners,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SUSSEX COUNTY VOCATIONAL SCHOOL DISTRICT, SUSSEX COUNTY,
Respondent.

Randi Doner April, Esq., for petitioners (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Mark A. Tabakin, Esq., for respondent (Weiner Lesniak, attorneys)

Record Closed: February 24, 2010 Decided: April 11, 2011

BEFORE LESLIE Z. CELENTANO, ALJ:

Petitioners Karen Harrington and Eve Hiller were tenured secretaries who were employed by respondent Sussex County Technical School Board of Education ("Sussex County") since 1990 and 1992, respectively. In 2008, petitioners lost their jobs due to a reduction in force instituted by Sussex County. The parties do not dispute that petitioners attained tenure as secretaries with Sussex County or that the relevant reduction in force was proper. Instead, the parties disagree that petitioners are entitled to the positions of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator and/or payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator, which are currently held by non-tenured employees.

The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 23, 2008, for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The hearing was scheduled for February 23, 2009, and adjourned at petitioner's request. Respondent then moved for summary decision, alleging that no genuine issues of material fact exist in this matter. That motion was denied on February 3, 2010. The matter continued on March 12, 2010. Thereafter respondent moved for the sequestration of petitioners during the hearing, or, in the alternative, bifurcation of petitioners' claims for hearing. The motion for sequestration was granted and the motion to bifurcate the claims was denied, by Order dated June 4, 2010. The hearing continued on August 11, October 27 and November 8, 2010. At the conclusion of the hearing the parties requested time to obtain the transcripts, and to submit post-hearing briefs. The time within which to submit briefs was extended at the request of counsel for petitioners, and following receipt of the briefs the record was closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based upon consideration of the testimonial and documentary evidence presented at the hearing, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following facts:

A. Reduction in Force

1. On April 17, 2008, the Sussex County Technical School Board of Education voted to effectuate a reduction in force. As a result of the reduction in force, two secretarial positions were eliminated.

2. The secretaries whose employment would be terminated as a result of the reduction in force were determined based upon seniority as provided in the parties' collective bargaining agreement.

3. A seniority list was created and it was concluded that Hiller and Harrington had the least seniority and, therefore, would be subject to the reduction in force. At the time of the reduction in force, Hiller was working part time for the adult school. At the time of the reduction in force, Harrington was working full time as the secretary to the athletic director.

4. During its April 17, 2008, meeting, the Board also accepted the resignation of Estrella Molinet. In the beginning of February 2008, the Board posted for Ms. Molinet's position, as well as the position of payroll/benefits assistant to the business administrator.

5. After being notified that her employment would be terminated as a result of the reduction in force, Hiller inquired as to whether or not her tenure rights would allow her to "bump" into any existing positions in the District.

6. Hiller was informed by Robert Clark, the Board's business administrator, that while the Board was currently hiring for two positions in the business office, neither of the positions available were secretarial positions. Since Hiller's tenure extended only to the position of general secretary, she was advised that she was not entitled to exercise bumping rights to either position in the business office. However, Clark informed Hiller that the Board was accepting applications for those positions and that she was welcome to apply.

7. On February 27, 2008, Hiller submitted an application for the position of accounts payable assistant to the business administrator. Hiller was not interviewed for the position of accounts payable assistant because Robert Clark determined that based upon her educational and professional experience, she was not qualified for the position.

8. Harrington did not submit an application for either the position of accounts payable assistant to the business administrator or the position of payroll/benefits assistant to the business administrator.

9. On April 22, 2008, both Harrington and Hiller submitted letters to the Board asserting bumping rights to the positions of payroll/benefits assistant and accounts payable assistant. The Board denied both Harrington's and Hiller's requests to "bump" into the positions of accounts payable assistant and payroll/benefits assistant.

Karen Harrington

10. Karen Harrington was hired by the Board in September 1990 to serve as attendance/discipline office secretary.

11. Harrington's educational background included a high school education and some classes at community college.

12. Harrington had no accounts-payable experience prior to being hired by the Board.

13. Other than one year's experience as a personnel secretary for the Howmet Corporation in 1975, Harrington had no payroll/benefits administration experience prior to being hired by the Board. While serving as personnel secretary, Harrington was required to submit insurance claims and disburse checks received from insurance companies.

14. Harrington testified that the job duties as set forth in the job description for attendance/discipline office secretary accurately reflected the duties required by that position. As attendance/discipline office secretary, Harrington's duties included typing, filing, answering phones and photocopying. Prior to being hired by the Board, Harrington already knew how to file, was aware of proper phone etiquette, and possessed interpersonal skills.

15. Harrington served as attendance/discipline office secretary until 2001, when she was transferred to the position of secretary to the director of the School Based Youth Services Program, another general-secretary position. Harrington testified that the job description for secretary to the director of the School Based Youth Services Program accurately reflected the duties required by that position. The position of secretary to the director of the School Based Youth Services Program also required Harrington to type, file and answer phones.

16. In 2003, Harrington was again transferred to another general-secretary position, secretary to the athletic director and the dean of students. Harrington testified that the job description for secretary to the athletic director and the dean of students accurately reflects the duties required by that position. Harrington held the position of secretary to the athletic director and the dean of students until her position was eliminated as a result of the reduction in force in 2008.

17. During the entire course of her employment with the Board, Harrington's salary was established pursuant to the secretarial salary guide set forth in the collective bargaining agreement entered into between the Board and the Association. Harrington's placement on the secretarial salary guide did not change as a result of any reassignment.

18. Harrington's duties in each of the three positions she held during her employment with the Board remained generally the same, in that she was predominantly required to answer phones, photocopy and file.

19. Harrington's responsibilities in her former secretarial positions were not interchangeable with the responsibilities of the business office positions. Harrington does not currently possess the "rudimentary knowledge" necessary to be an accounts payable person. While employed by the District, Harrington did not perform any of the responsibilities set forth in the job description for payroll/benefits assistant to the business administrator position.

Eve Hiller

20. Eve Hiller was hired by the Board in 1991. Hiller's educational background included a high school education and several courses at Pace University and Sussex County Community College.

21. Prior to being hired by the Board, Hiller worked for United States Trust Company for nine years.

22. Hiller was hired by the Board as a receptionist, a general-secretary position. Her general duties included answering the phone, sorting mail, processing working papers, filing, typing and photocopying.

23. In 1995, Hiller was transferred to the position of principal's secretary. However, the transfer did not result in an increase in pay.

24. In 2000, Hiller was again transferred to a general-secretary position in the nurse's office.

25. In 2001, Hiller became the secretary to the adult school supervisor.

26. Hiller began working for Ilene Avery in 2003.

27. In 2008, Hiller was notified that her employment was being terminated as a result of a reduction in force. After being notified of the vacancy, on February 27, 2008, Hiller applied for the position of accounts payable assistant. Hiller was not offered the position of accounts payable assistant.

28. Hiller submitted a letter to the Board requesting that she be permitted to exercise bumping rights to the position of accounts payable assistant or the position of payroll/benefits assistant. Hiller's request was denied because the Board concluded that her tenure rights did not extend outside the position of "general secretary" and that the positions of payroll/benefits assistant and accounts payable assistant were not general-secretary positions.

29. Throughout her employment with the Board, Hiller remained a member of the union and was paid pursuant to the secretarial salary guide.

Payroll/Benefits Assistant to the Business Administrator

30. Susan Predmore currently serves in the position of payroll/benefits assistant to the business administrator. For record-keeping purposes, the position of payroll/benefits assistant is not considered a secretarial position.

31. Prior to becoming employed in the District, Predmore held various positions in which she performed payroll and accounting duties. Specifically, prior to being hired by the Board, Predmore was employed for two years as senior accounting person by the House of the Good Shepherd. Predmore's responsibilities at the House of the Good Shepherd included handling accounts receivable, billing, payroll for 130 employees, and the personal-needs accounts of all of the residents.

32. Prior to working at the House of the Good Shepherd, Predmore worked at Lancaster Associates, where she was responsible for accounting, and as an office manager in charge of bookkeeping and payroll at Community Corporation.

33. Prior to her employment with the Board, Predmore had worked with a computer-based payroll system.

34. Predmore's general job duties as payroll/benefits assistant include all aspects of processing payroll for approximately 200 employees.

35. Harrington has never run a payroll cycle, utilized Systems 3000 Payroll software, prepared a payroll transfer report, or maintained a payroll check register.

36. Hiller has never performed a payroll transfer, prepared a Posted Wage, Tax and Deduction Analysis report, or prepared a payroll check register report.

37. Predmore is required to update the agency account deposit and is required to prepare W-2 and W-3 forms.

38. Hiller has never been required to determine tax withholdings or prepare a W-2. Harrington has never prepared a W-2 or a W-3.

39. Predmore is required to file both FICA and Medicare taxes for all employees.

40. Hiller has never prepared a FICA distribution report.

41. Harrington is unfamiliar with FICA.

42. Predmore is required to file the state share and the employer's share of FICA on DOEnet. Predmore did not receive any training from the Board regarding DOEnet.

43. Harrington is unfamiliar with DOEnet.

44. Predmore is required to file reports with the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund (TPAF) and the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS). Predmore did not receive any training from the Board regarding TPAF and PERS.

45. Hiller has never enrolled or retired an employee in TPAF or PERS.

46. Predmore is required to assist employees in filing for temporary disability leave or family temporary disability leave.

47. Hiller has no experience with and is unfamiliar with family temporary disability leave.

48. Predmore is required to maintain the Unemployment Trust Fund.

49. Hiller is unfamiliar with the Unemployment Trust Fund.

50. Harrington is unaware of how to prepare deposits for the Unemployment Trust Fund.

51. Predmore is not required to retrieve the business administrator's mail, type letters, take dictation, greet visitors, keep the business administrator's calendar, answer his phone or do his filing.

52. Retrieving mail, typing letters, taking dictation, greeting visitors, keeping the business administrator's calendar, filing, and answering the business administrator's phone are tasks performed by the administrative assistant to the business administrator, a general-secretary position.

53. Documents prepared by Predmore are neither reviewed by nor signed by any other Board employee.

54. Predmore is not a member of the union, nor does she pay a union representation fee, and she is not paid in accordance with the secretarial salary guide. Predmore's salary was negotiated at the time she was hired.

Accounts Payable Assistant to the Business Administrator

55. For record-keeping purposes, the position of accounts payable assistant is not considered secretarial and is not paid pursuant to the secretarial salary guide.

56. Andrew Italiano was hired by the Board in June 2008 as the accounts payable assistant to the business administrator.

57. Italiano graduated from St. Thomas Aquinas College, where he received a degree in business administration. While at St. Thomas, Italiano completed courses in accounting and finance.

58. Italiano has also completed the New Jersey Association of School Business Officials course. This course includes training in school finance, school accounting, GAAP double-entry bookkeeping and public contracts law.

59. Prior to being hired by the Board, Italiano served as the assistant school business administrator for the Delaware Valley Regional High School from July 2005 through June 2008.

60. Italiano's general duties while at Delaware Valley included processing payroll, maintaining financial spreadsheets, performing financial analysis, processing checks for several checking accounts, and generally assisting the school business administrator with the full financial operation of the district.

61. While at Delaware Valley, Italiano also assisted in the development of the school budget.

62. As accounts payable assistant to the business administrator, Italiano is involved in processing workers' compensation claims.

63. Harrington has never processed a workers' compensation claim.

64. Italiano is also responsible for overseeing the purchase order, requisition and voucher process.

65. Harrington does not know how to prepare a quotation for the purchase of goods or services.

66. Hiller is unaware of the difference between a voucher and a purchase order.

67. Italiano is required to ensure that requisitions are in compliance with the Public Contracts Law.

68. Harrington is unfamiliar with competitive contracting.

69. Hiller is unfamiliar with the Public Contracts Law.

70. As part of his regular job duties, Italiano is required to complete 1099 forms.

71. Hiller is unaware of when a 1099 form must be issued.

72. Italiano is also required to work with Enterprise Accounts.

73. Harrington is unfamiliar with Enterprise Accounts.

74. Italiano is responsible for ensuring that all accounts in the Business Office adhere to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP).

75. Hiller is unfamiliar with GAAP.

76. Italiano's position requires him to be familiar with the Department of Education's accountability regulations regarding travel.

77. Harrington is unfamiliar with the Department of Education's accountability regulations regarding travel.

78. Hiller is not familiar with the Department of Education's Accountability Regulations on Travel Reimbursement.

79. Italiano is required to utilize the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts on a daily basis.

80. Harrington is unfamiliar with the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts.

81. Hiller is not familiar with the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts.

82. Italiano is not required to retrieve the business administrator's mail, type letters, take dictation, greet visitors, keep the business administrator's calendar, answer his phone or do his filing.

83. Italiano is not paid pursuant to the secretarial salary guide, is not a member of the union, and does not pay union dues.

TESTIMONY

Karen Harrington

Harrington testified that she was hired in September 1990 as an attendance/discipline office secretary. She worked thirty-five hours a week. Harrington is a high school graduate, and did not attend college except for taking a few classes at a community college. Her duties included typing, filing, photocopying and answering the telephones. She also coordinated transportation for spots with the busing company. In 2001 her job title changed and she became secretary to the student center director and had different duties. She now helped the director with the student center budget entries based upon a grant received from the State. She entered check requests by hand, but requisitions to the Board were done by computer. She also did typing and filing, and answered the phone. She also began scheduling teachers for teen programs and continued to coordinate busing.

In 2003 she was transferred to the athletic office, working for the supervisor of science and math, but dealt primarily with athletics, as one person held all three titles. She had one day of training on the computer for the student center program, and now at the athletic office had to handle payroll, checks, the switchboard and attendance. She also had to prepare New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) forms, and attended a one-day seminar to learn the requirements. Initially the paperwork was handwritten, but then the State developed a program, "STI." A supervisor showed her how to use the STI program, and she took care of payroll, including that for referees for games. She did that on Quicken, and was taught how to do this. She also did purchase requisitions for supplies, and that was done on the computer in "Systems 3000." She was only trained on the purchase-requisition functions for Systems 3000. Eventually, in approximately 2003 or 2004, they started using Systems 3000 for everything. Once the requisition was sent the Board office would send out checks to vendors. Harrington also testified that she kept spreadsheets for all of the officials' payments so that income-tax information could be sent to the Board office. She used Excel for this, and taught herself. Harrington could not remember the names of the tax forms that had to be issued, and indicated that the Board issued the forms. She also prepared the school calendar that went home with students; she had to ask teachers what they wanted on it, and delivered the calendar to the printer. She also scheduled buses for all games, and had to obtain coverage if a teacher was a coach and had to leave early. She also handled the checking account for the athletic department.

By 2002 the school had its own buses and so she had to coordinate with the transportation coordinator and do a weekly spreadsheet to show what buses were needed. She held this job until the reduction in force in 2008.

Harrington testified that in high school she took clerical classes in bookkeeping, accounting and typing, and took a class at community college to learn how to use a computer. She agreed that the job description for the attendance/discipline office secretary (P-1) reflected what she did in that job, but stated that she probably had not seen that job description before testifying. She also agreed that the job description for the secretary to the director of the School Based Youth Services Program reflects what she did in that job (P-2), but also indicated that she had not seen that prior to testifying. Similarly, the job description for the secretary to the athletic director and dean of students (P-3) reflects what she did in that job, but she had not seen that previously. She also stated that she did additional tasks, including reconciliation of the athletic department checking account each month, covering the switchboard if needed, and assigning substitute teachers if the secretary who usually handled that was out. Harrington testified that she has previously seen the job description for payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator (P-4), and indicated that this is one of the positions she is entitled to. Harrington testified, however, that of the responsibilities listed, she has not previously performed any of them. She stated that she had some payroll responsibilities that related to items in the job description for payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator (P-4) and also had worked with Quicken. She also testified that she is familiar with Microsoft Office and Excel.

Harrington also has seen the job description for accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator (P-5), and believes that she had some of the qualifications listed and has handled some of the responsibilities.

On cross-examination, Harrington testified that check requests came from others to her, and she then entered the requisition on the computer. She did not do the purchase order; that was prepared by the central office. Regarding the STI program, a student-based program regarding attendance and discipline, Harrington did not know what the initials "STI" stood for, but indicated that when a student was absent, for example, she would enter that into the system. She wrote checks by hand for the athletic officials and did not use Quicken to print checks. She stated that the software was on her computer, but she did not have a printer and did not ask for one. She indicated that she received two days of training on Systems 3000, but that it was a group training session and they were only trained on how to enter purchase requisitions.

When asked to describe a 1099 form, Harrington testified that it is "what someone gets when they make over a certain amount of money." She described a W-2 form as "something you fill out to declare your taxes." Harrington had no idea what a W-9 is, and indicated that individuals fill out their own W-2 forms. She testified that she sent the information to the business office and that office prepared the forms. Checks to athletic officials were handwritten and then inputted into Quicken. Harrington testified that if one of the officials earned over $600, then that person had to be sent a 1099 form.

Harrington agreed that she did not do accounts payable or process purchase orders or do a bill list. When asked about the job description for accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator, she indicated that she saw it and applied for the job in writing, as was the case for payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator, which was posted in April or May 2008. Harrington agreed that she would need training in some areas, and that she had performed some level of six out of twenty-five of the responsibilities listed.

Harrington testified that she had no experience with accounts payable, payroll or benefits, except for when she worked at Howmet Corporation for one year from 1975–1976. She has no other experience in accounts payable, benefits or payroll, but believes that the other positions are interchangeable with her secretarial position. Harrington agreed that the duties and responsibilities listed on the job description for secretary to the supervisor of the athletics department and the head of math and science (R-2) were her responsibilities in that position and are similar to those set forth in the job description for secretary to the athletic director and dean of students (P-3), and that P-3 "morphed" into R-2, and as such P-1, P-2, P-3 and R-2 reflect the total of her experiences with respondent. Harrington indicated that she took classes in high school in bookkeeping, accounting and business math, but also agreed that none of the positions she held required any of those things. When asked, Harrington could not indicate what GAP stands for,[1] and did not know what GAZBY stands for. Harrington described FICA as a federal tax paid, and said she believes that it is 6.5 percent for the employee and the employer. (P-4.) Harrington was not aware of what an NJWR-30 is, or what DOEnet is, or what TPAF is, but was aware that an NJ927W is a report and that FED 941 is a report. She also never prepared any W-2 forms and W-3 forms, but when asked what a flexible-benefits fund is, she said that she believes it is something you get paid out of if you are out sick for a long time, and that it is a percentage of your pay. Harrington did not know what a payroll budget account was, and testified that she never helped develop a budget. Harrington disagreed that all of the duties required for the two positions she had applied for were unlike anything she had done previously in any job, and rather indicated, "no, they are similar but you need training." She stated that she can be trained to do anything. Harrington agreed, however, that none of the items listed in P-4 are in any of her prior job descriptions, and agreed that she cannot do any of the duties listed in P-4 now. She also has no experience with public contract law.

[1] General Accounting Principles.

Harrington testified that she trained some teachers in how to do requisitions, but that she has never processed a requisition change to a purchase order, never processed a purchase order for payment, and never processed vouchers. She did not know who was authorized to make purchases on behalf of the Board of Education and had no idea what bid threshold is or if it ever increases, no idea what competitive contracting is, and no idea when bids are required as opposed to just a quote. She indicated that she would need training for these things.

Harrington agreed that the qualifications under item one in P-5 are qualifications she had from the courses she took prior to 1967, and agreed that she is not qualified to do what is listed in number three now. She has never prepared a quote for the purchase of goods or services and does not know what a business-registration certificate or an enterprise account is. She is not familiar with what travel expenses are permitted, and only knows how to handle requisitions on Systems 3000. Harrington was not aware of what the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts is or why it is important, or what asset management is, and has never processed workers' compensation claims.

She testified that she had a full day of training to learn the MIS system, but does not know what MIS stands for. Harrington testified that she was in the secretarial union the entire time she was employed by respondent, and received secretarial pay, and went up a step each year without regard to her position, which were all secretarial. Nothing changed with each secretarial assignment, and Harrington agreed that she performed few or none of the duties listed in P-4 in any job she has held. She has never worked in the business office and never used the Systems 3000 payroll component. She testified that she did handle payroll in a dental office that she worked at in high school in 1965. Harrington had no knowledge of a Social Security contribution sheet or a FICA report, and has never done a Social Security contribution sheet; a payroll budget spreadsheet; a direct-deposit system; a New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) dues report; a New Jersey State tax report; a MEDI report; a wage garnishment; or a credit-union report. She does not know if any of these relate to verification of payroll, and does not know how any are used in the process of handling payroll or benefits. She was never asked to do any of these forms in the position she held. Harrington has never processed a timesheet for payment and does not know how they are done. She has no knowledge of the pension process at all and no knowledge of family leave, temporary leave or temporary disability leave. Harrington also did not know what constituted taxable wages. She agreed she would need to be trained on everything listed on P-4 that she has no idea about, and agreed that the responsibilities listed on P-4 are not interchangeable with those set forth in P-1.

Harrington's official last day was June 30. She recalled the memorandum of a June 20 meeting (R-3) and agreed that she deleted thousands of files from the computer. She asserted that the school had backed up the files before she deleted them.

Harrington agreed that she had done some level of six of the responsibilities listed on P-5. She also indicated that she learned how to enter tables of names in Excel because she sat through a class at community college with her daughter, but she said she would have to refer back to the manual to do it now because she has not used it in four to five years. She agreed that she never used Excel for computation functions.

On redirect examination Harrington testified that she deleted everything from her computer that was "irrelevant." Everything she deleted was in her "P" drive, which she referred to as her "desk drawer." She indicated that she made a disc of everything that was "pertinent to the job so that whoever came in to do it would not have to go through what was obsolete." She agreed, however, that she knew it was not her computer and that she did not have the authority to delete files.

Eve Marie Hiller

Hiller testified that she is a high school graduate and had a "little bit of college." She attended Pace University for a very short time. In high school she took typing and transcription courses. She has been employed by respondent since 1991 when she became a full-time employee. Prior to that she was filling in per diem for someone who was out after being hurt. Hiller handled switchboard reception, including answering the phone, doing the mail, filing, photocopying and processing working papers for students. If she was free she would help with random typing. She testified that has always been employed as a secretary in the District, but moved around to different positions. From 1991 to 1995 she handled the switchboard, and then she became the principal's secretary, a position she held until 2000. Hiller had no responsibility for purchase orders or requisitions, but just filed them. From 2000–2001 she worked in the nurse's office and entered the students into the database and kept track of athletics. She had no responsibility for finances or money.

In 2001 Hiller went to work for Bill Leach and handled the student-activities accounts, where money raised from fundraisers would be deposited and the account reconciled. She also worked for Lisa Krause for a while and drafted letters for her. Hiller also testified that she entered purchase orders to Systems 3000, but did not make any disbursements.

In 2003 Hiller began working for Ilene Avery, and in that position she was doing more promotional things for the school and "dabbled in different programs" that she kept track of. She also spent the summer entering purchase orders. Hiller indicated she was not sure what had to go out for public bid, and she did not have to learn any new systems or programs when working for Avery or for Nancy Vargo. She also has never done payroll, but has prepared deposits, although not for payroll. Hiller also agreed that she had done very few of the tasks listed on P-4, and testified "these things are very specific" when asked which items she had done.

Hiller agreed that she had never provided a bill list for the Board and did not know what a bill list was, and she agreed she was not involved in preparing a budget. When asked to explain the difference between a purchase-order requisition and a voucher, Hiller did not remember in which order those documents were prepared and indicated that she just entered them and filed her copy. She was not familiar with public bidding; she just knew that things had to go out to bid, but she was not aware of the threshold and did not draft bid documents. She did not know what a 1099 form was or when it has to be issued, and was not familiar with the requirements for reimbursement of travel expenses. Hiller was not familiar with the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts and had no experience with asset management. Hiller had experienced contacting carriers after disability claims were filed, but she never had to follow up on any of those claims. She testified that she has always been a member of the union and has always been in secretarial positions, and her salary has never changed with any of the position changes. Regarding payroll records, Hiller was never responsible for determining what tax would be withheld and never prepared any of the forms associated with payroll, and she testified that she was not familiar with the Social Security contribution report or the FICA distribution report. She did not prepare any reports and never did any payroll on the job, and the only payroll she has handled has been timesheets tallied for substitutes. She has never enrolled anyone in the retirement system and did not handle personnel matters. Hiller was not aware of the differences between a W-2, a W-3 and a W-4, she did not know what the unemployment trust fund is, and she had no experience in the administration of health benefits. She indicated that she is not sure when the two positions she is seeking became vacant, but remembers seeing the postings. She said that she applied for one of them, but did not remember which one.

Hiller applied for an accounts payable assistant position on February 27, 2008 (R-4), and believes that she tried to "bump in" to that position, although her letter does not so indicate. Mr. Clark told her she would have to apply, and she was told that she was not qualified and was never interviewed. When she was a part-time secretary and this position opened up she did not file any due process to claim that she had bumping rights due to seniority, and did not file until after the reduction in force. Hiller agreed she had no idea what the District budget is and no idea what the District payroll is each cycle.

On redirect examination, Hiller testified that she completed her college degree in 2007 at William Paterson University and now teaches special education classes.

Andrew Italiano

Andrew Italiano has been employed by respondent as an accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator since June 2008. Prior to that he was employed by Delaware Valley Regional High School from July 2005 to June 2008 as an assistant school business administrator. His duties included processing payroll, maintaining financial spreadsheets, performing financial analysis, processing checks for several accounts, and generally assisting the administrator with the financial operations of the district. He also helped develop the school budget and sat with all the department heads to go over the prior year's budget and the goals for the coming year. Italiano has a bachelor's degree in business administration and completed several courses in accounting and finance. He completed the New Jersey Association of School Business Officials course, which included training in school finance, school accounting, GAAP, double-entry bookkeeping and public contracts law. He described those as essential skills for an assistant business administrator or an accounts payable person.

In his current position as an accounts payable assistant he processes workers' compensation claims and reconciles multiple bank accounts, balancing statements against general ledger positions for revenue and expenditures and researching and resolving any differences. He also oversees the purchase-order requisition and voucher process and ensures that requisitions are in compliance with the public contracts law. He also prepares 1099 forms and works with enterprise accounts. Italiano is also responsible for ensuring that all accounts in the business office are in accordance with GAAP standards. He knows the accountability regulations regarding travel, which he indicated he needs to know to do his job on a daily basis. He also knows the Uniform Minimum Chart of Accounts, which is part of his everyday work. Italiano also testified that he has multiple additional responsibilities, including training on general ledger accounting and refresher training for current staff. He is not on a secretarial salary guide, is not a member of the union, and does not pay any dues or fees, and his job does not include typing or greeting people or making copies other than for himself. He also does not do filing, maintain schedules, answer phones or type letters.

Susan Predmore

Predmore has been employed by respondent since 2008 as the payroll benefits person and assistant to the business administrator. Prior to that she was the senior accounting person at the House of the Good Shepherd. She handled all accounts receivable, billing, payroll for 130 employees, and the personal-needs accounts of all the residents. Prior to that she was employed at Lancaster Associates, where she handled all the accounting, and also worked at the Community Corporation handling all bookkeeping and payroll.

Her job duties in payroll and as assistant to the business administrator include processing payroll for approximately 200 employees. She is not provided the information to input, rather she has to find it. She prepares all the tax reports (federal, New Jersey and Pennsylvania) and has to verify their accuracy. She then handles the wire transfers for the federal tax, state tax, Pennsylvania tax and TPAF (pensions and PERS). She has had no training on how to actually do payroll. She files the tax reports with each agency online and has to verify all the amounts. She also is required to file the state share and the employee share of FICA on DOEnet. She also helps employees complete family-leave paperwork and disability papers and has to research their files for the information required. She also is required to know what taxable wages are; what an NJ WR-30 report is; what an NJ 927W report is; and the difference between a W-2 and a W-3. She is required to generate both of those. She also maintains the unemployment trust fund, handles flexible-spending accounts, and is responsible overall for twenty to thirty payroll accounts, which all have to be reconciled with each other.

Predmore also generates a Social Security report for every payroll (R-6); a board share of FICA distribution each cycle (R-7); a payroll transfer report every payroll (R-8); a Posted Wage, Tax and Deduction Analysis for every payroll cycle (R-10); a definition details report (R-11); a payroll check register (R-12); a rate-based definition composite details report (R-13); a payroll budget spread (R-14); a payroll direct-deposit spread (R-15); an SUI report (R-16); a Pennsylvania state tax report (R-17); a New Jersey state tax report (R-18); a check-register report (R-19); NJEA reports (R-20); Medicare reports (R-21); a garnishments report (R-22); a FICA report (R-23); a federal tax report (R-24); an Equitable AXA report (R-25); a disability-insurance report (R-26); a dental, prescription and health report (R-27); a credit union report (R-28); a TPAF pension report for the teachers (R-29); a PERS pension report (R-30); a multiple-worksite report (R-31); a 941 quarterly report (R-32); an NJ 927 quarterly report (R-33); and timesheets for hourly employees (twenty or forty each payroll period) (R-34). All the reports she prepares have to be verified with posted wage and tax and all reports then go to Robert Clark, the business administrator. She sits down with Clark after she has completed everything and they review the totals together.

She testified that Mr. Clark does not tell her when to do what, and that she does not get his mail, type his letters, greet his visitors, answer his phone or do his typing. Predmore testified that she is not a member of the union and does not pay dues, and that her position is confidential and her salary negotiated and not related to the secretarial salary guide.

On cross-examination Predmore testified that she received a four-hour review of System 3000 from Estrella Molinet, who showed her where to find things but not how to do the job. The forms she prepares for the State do not require anyone else's signature or approval, and Predmore prepares them and then sends them. No one trained her on DOEnet or on TPAF or PERS.

Robert T. Clark

Mr. Clark has been the business administrator and board secretary for respondent since June 2001. He coordinates grants, and as the business administrator is in charge of all the financial operations of the District, as well as all the transportation, food service, building properties and all insurances. Clark oversees the day-to-day operations of the business office and administers all of the grants and prepares all of the reports. The Board voted that two secretarial positions be eliminated in a reduction in force, one full time and one part time. The reduction in force was necessary because in the spring of 2007 Sussex Community College and Sussex Vocational Technical Adult Education programs were competing with each other and there was overlap. As a result, Sussex Vocational Technical reduced classes, lowered enrollment, and felt they needed only one secretary for athletics and adult education. The seniority list determined which secretary would be terminated (R-35). Petitioners were the least senior secretaries; Hiller was part time at the adult school and Harrington was the full-time secretary to the athletic director. Once the two schools reduced the scope of the night school the force was reduced, as there was less work. They posted for a payroll person and accounts payable person at the same time to cover the positions vacated by Estrella Molinet, who resigned, and another individual, who died. At the time Estrella was handling both jobs with his help, but both were full-time jobs.

Hiller was part time when those positions were posted, and he told her that they were not secretarial, but she applied for one. Neither she nor the union filed a grievance until other people were hired to fill the positions. When Hiller applied for the accounts payable position (R-4) Clark did not interview her because she was not qualified, and he was not going to interview anyone who was not qualified for the position. She did not have the education and prior experience necessary. Harrington did not apply for either position. Clark received at least 100 résumés for the openings.

Clark testified that if someone had the experience and the training to do both positions they could; however, the positions were distinctly different. Initially, two people committed to the jobs and then changed their minds. The District then hired Predmore, and after Estrella left the District interviewed and hired Italiano. Thereafter the District received letters from petitioners saying they were entitled to the positions (R-37; R-38.) A level-three grievance hearing was held, and Clark indicated that petitioners were not qualified. They were secretaries and could not perform the duties necessary. The payroll benefits assistant to the school business administrator (P-4) was required to perform all the responsibilities listed and needed to be an independent decision maker, and the position is not secretarial. The payroll benefits salary is negotiable with the individual holding the job, and salary increases are not tied to the secretarial salary guide in accordance with the collective bargaining unit. Clark testified that Hiller was not qualified for the position even if it had been secretarial. He testified that she spent most of July doing purchase orders and was very slow, and that if she took that long in the business office nothing would ever get done. Hiller did not know how to code things, and she called him all the time to ask him how to do it. She constantly had questions for him regarding the difference between the quote threshold and the bid threshold, which was simple, and yet she still did not know it. Clark testified that Harrington was similarly not qualified, and under no circumstances could she handle the work in the business office. For example, when they set up Quicken to pay athletic officials she did not feel comfortable even printing checks, and would hand-write them and then enter them manually into the Quicken program. Following an audit in 2004 (R-39) there was one recommendation from the auditors that there was a need for changes in supporting documentation. Clark testified that if there are two consecutive years of the same audit recommendation then monitoring goes into place, and at the time of the initial recommendation Harrington was the secretary to the athletic director. The following year on June 30, 2005 (R-40) the same comment was made by the auditors, indicating that the same deficiency existed in the athletic account.

Predmore had the qualifications she needed for the payroll benefits position and needed no training in "functionality." Clark testified that every new employee gets a few hours' training on Systems 3000.

The job description for the accounts payable assistant to the business administrator (P-5) lists all the requirements of that position. The accounts payable assistant is also the backup person for payroll, and the bookkeeper was out a great deal of time that summer, and Predmore and Italiano did her work in addition to their own. The accounts payable assistant is not secretarial and the pay is not on a secretarial scale. The position is confidential and not tied to the secretarial salary guide, and salary increases are also not based upon the secretarial salary guide. Clark testified that his secretary does not do anything on P-5 that the accounts payable assistant does. Clark testified that Italiano did not receive "sit down" training, and that neither Italiano nor Predmore typed, filed or answered his phone. Clark testified that after the 2004 audit recommendations he gave a very specific explanation about what needed to be done, indicating that he stated, "you need this and this to write a check."

DISCUSSION

The purpose of teaching-staff tenure laws is "to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording teaching staff members 'a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service.'" Carpenito v. Rumson Bd. of Educ., 322 N.J. Super. 522, 528–29 (App. Div. 1999) (quoting Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949)). However, "[r]eduction in force (RIF), whether of tenured or nontenured [staff], if done for reasons of economy, is entirely within the authority of the [local board of education]." Maywood Bd. of Educ. v. Maywood Educ. Ass'n, 168 N.J. Super. 45, 55 (App. Div. 1979) (citing N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9). There is no statutory or regulatory authority that "provides tenured educational secretaries with a set of clearly delineated seniority rights or procedures governing dismissal when a reduction in force is effected by employing boards." Sheridan v. Bd. of Educ. of Ridgefield Park, 1976 S.L.D. 995, 997. In the event of a reduction in force, "the entitlement of a tenured secretary to a position held by a nontenured secretary will be adjudged by the Commissioner [of Education] to be viable only if the tenured secretary possesses the skills and necessary qualifications to efficiently perform the duties of such secretarial position." Id. at 999. In such cases, "title alone is not dispositive and actual duties should control over labels." Hibo v. Bd. of Educ. of the West Essex Reg'l Sch. Dist., EDU 1226-96, Initial Decision (November 12, 1997) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, adopted, Comm'r (December 29, 1997), adopted, St. Bd. of Educ. (June 3, 1998) <http://www.nj.gov/education/legal/>.

A fact-finder needs to determine the exact duties of a position to which a tenured employee claims entitlement and whether the employee is qualified to perform those duties. In Mount v. Tinton Falls Schools Board of Education, EDU 120-00, Initial Decision (December 29, 2000), modified, Comm'r (February 7, 2001)

<http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>, Mabel Mount, a tenured secretary who worked in the Tinton Falls school board's transportation office, was terminated as part of a reduction in force. According to Mount, Tinton Falls violated her tenure rights by retaining non-tenured employees to perform duties for which she was qualified. Tinton Falls argued that Mount was not qualified for the position of clerical assistant for district services/special programs and projects, or for secretarial positions in the school board's special services office. While the written job descriptions for all of the relevant positions were placed in the record, several witnesses offered testimony at the hearing before the OAL about the actual work performed by Mount and the employees to whose jobs Mount claimed entitlement in order to assess Mount's qualifications. The witnesses who testified at hearing offered insight into the day-to-day operations of the relevant positions that was not necessarily captured by the written job descriptions maintained by the school board for hiring purposes. While ALJ Kathryn Clark found that Mount was qualified for the clerical assistant position and the secretarial positions, the Commissioner disagreed with the ALJ with respect to Mount's qualifications for the clerical assistant position. According to the Commissioner, "[Mount's] tenure in the position of Secretary [does not entitle] her to hold the position of Clerical Assistant for District Services/Special Programs and Projects, . . . since the record before [the Commissioner] supports the conclusion that this position is not, by either title or function, a secretarial one." Mount, supra, EDU 120-00, Comm'r (February 7, 2001) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Thus, after independently reviewing the written job descriptions and the testimony of several witnesses, the ALJ and the Commissioner disagreed as to Mount's qualifications for the clerical assistant position, and the Commissioner ultimately found that Mount was not entitled to that position.

Here, respondent submits that petitioners are not qualified for the positions to which they claim entitlement. To support its argument, respondent relies heavily on the written job descriptions it maintains for hiring purposes. However, petitioners rely on the same written job descriptions to support their argument that they are qualified for the jobs they seek. Petitioners assert that they are qualified for the positions of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator and/or payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator due to the similarity between their former positions and their desired positions.

Respondent also argues that petitioners were denied those positions because they may only exercise seniority bumping rights to positions within the same job category as that in which their tenure vested. Therefore, petitioners were only entitled to exercise bumping rights to general-secretary positions, and the positions they seek are not general-secretary positions. While the positions petitioners seek do not include the word "secretary" in the titles, "title alone is not dispositive and actual duties should control over labels." Hibo, supra, EDU 1226-96, Initial Decision (November 12, 1997) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Respondent argued that the positions of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator and payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator are not secretarial in nature and, for petitioners, would constitute a promotion to a hierarchically higher position, and that an employee is only entitled to assert entitlement to those positions in the District with an equal or lesser rank than the position in which they currently serve. Petitioners asserted that the jobs they seek are secretarial in nature and would not constitute a "hierarchically higher position" by submitting written job descriptions for the relevant positions that indicate that petitioners performed similar duties in their former positions.

Petitioners' assertion that they should have been appointed to the position of either accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator or payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator is without merit, as petitioners' tenure rights extend only to secretarial positions. It is clear from the relevant job descriptions and the undisputed testimony that neither the position of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator nor the position of payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator is a general-secretary position. Both petitioners served in several secretarial positions, remained members of the union, and continued to pay union dues, all while being paid in accordance with the secretarial salary guide.

Petitioners also claim that following the reduction in force, the Board wrongly denied them the ability to exercise "bumping rights" to the position of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator or the position of payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator, as these positions were occupied by nontenured employees. However, the Board properly denied this request, as the positions to which petitioners claimed entitlement through their tenure rights were not general secretarial positions.

As in Mount, an analysis of the job duties, as testified to at the hearing, clearly demonstrates the substantial differences between the two positions to which petitioners claim entitlement and a general secretary. Here, the facts provide even greater support for the conclusion that the positions to which petitioners claim entitlement are not secretarial positions in either title or function, and, therefore, are outside the realm of positions to which petitioners can assert bumping rights. Unlike in Mount, the positions of payroll/benefits assistant and accounts payable assistant are not included on the secretarial salary guide. The basis for the higher salaries is directly correlative to the significantly higher level of responsibilities, more complex tasks, and greater knowledge base and skill set required of employees serving in those positions.

A review of the job descriptions for the positions held by Hiller and Harrington as compared to those for the position of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator and payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator clearly reveals the striking differences in both qualifications and responsibilities. The exclusion of the position of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator or payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator from the characterization of general secretarial position is further evidenced by the omission of those employees from the union and the significantly higher starting salary for those positions, which has been established without regard to the secretarial salary guide.

Moreover, petitioners are not entitled to "bump" into the positions, as they are hierarchically higher positions. As such, placement in the positions would constitute a promotion, with responsibilities and duties that were not attendant to the lower position.

Ms. Hiller's and Ms. Harrington's ability to claim tenure rights to the positions is dependent upon the duties performed in their previous positions, as well as the duties required of the payroll benefits assistant and accounts payable assistant. The list of responsibilities as set forth in the relevant job descriptions, as well as those elicited through the testimony, amply distinguish the job duties required of Hiller and Harrington as general secretaries and the intricate and complex work performed by Predmore and Italiano.

It is well settled that tenured school employees asserting priority over nontenured employees must be fully qualified for the positions being sought. See Kearny Bd. of Educ. v. Horan, 11 N.J. Misc. 751 (Sup. Ct. 1933). Here, it was abundantly clear, as evidenced by their testimony, that the petitioners did not possess the necessary skills or knowledge to adequately perform the duties of the positions they sought. The job qualifications for and responsibilities of the positions to which petitioners claim entitlement are far more extensive and complex. Petitioners' own candid testimony reflects that they lack the requisite knowledge to perform the majority of the tasks and responsibilities enumerated in the job descriptions for the positions of accounts payable assistant to the school business administrator and payroll/benefits assistant to the school business administrator.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based on all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that there has been no violation of petitioners' tenure rights, seniority rights or any statutory or regulatory benefits, and it is therefore ORDERED that the petition be and hereby is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter – which included a digital recording of the hearing conducted at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 9, 2011 – along with the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed.[1]

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner is in full accord with the ALJ's determination that petitioner's application here is untimely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), necessitating its dismissal. However, even assuming, arguendo, that petitioner's application had been timely filed, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the petitioner has failed to satisfy the requirements necessary for the granting of emergent relief as set forth in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) – most notably, it has failed to demonstrate irreparable harm.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL is adopted and petitioner's requested relief is hereby denied. This matter shall proceed at the OAL for whatever action may be necessary to bring it to conclusion.

Record Closed: June 9, 2011 Decided: June 10, 2011

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Bethlehem Township Education Association, petitioner, seeks emergent relief ordering respondent Bethlehem Township Board of Education to set a start date for the 2011-2012 school year after September 1, 2011.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner filed a petition of appeal and brief with the Commissioner of Education Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on June 3, 2011 seeking emergent relief. Petitioner simultaneously filed an Unfair Practice Charge with the Public Employment Relations Commission, which is still pending. On June 6, 2011, the Bureau transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On June 8, 2011, respondent filed a brief and certification in Answer to the petition. The case was scheduled for oral argument on the emergent relief application on June 9, 2011. On that date, I heard oral argument and closed the record.

DISCUSSION

As a threshold matter, respondent argues that the petition is procedurally deficient and has been filed outside of the ninety-day limitations period within which claims may be brought before the Commissioner. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) sets forth that the "petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, . . . which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." Petitioner responds that, because it is arguing that starting the school year before September 1, 2011 is in violation of petitioner's collective bargaining agreement with the respondent, the applicable statute of limitations should be the one applicable to a recovery on a contractual claim or liability, which is six years. Lavin v. Board of Education, 90 N.J. 145 (1982).

If the present petition were solely a contractual claim, as petitioner asserts, then the Commissioner of Education would not have subject matter jurisdiction. Petitioner brought the case before the Commissioner alleging violations of the education statutes, N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1 et seq. Therefore, the limitations period that applies is the one set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

Petitioner does not dispute that the Board took action at its public meeting on September 21, 2010, to adopt the 2011-2012 school year calendar and establish the first day of school as August 24, 2011. The board agenda indicated that the calendar would be discussed under old business and made reference to Attachment 30, which showed three options for the calendar, one of which was to align the calendar with the North Hunterdon School District. (Exhibit C of Superintendent Lubarsky's Certification). The respondent Board voted to establish its first day of school to align with the first day of school of North Hunterdon School District, to which Bethlehem sends students. The decision was placed in the Board minutes and the minutes were posted on the District's website. Because the Board took the action at a public meeting, petitioner was aware as early as September 21, 2010, that the first day of school for Bethlehem students would be August 24, 2010. Ninety days from that date is December 20, 2010. Petitioner did not file the present petition until June 3, 2010, almost nine months after the petitioner had notice of the Board's action. Therefore, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), I CONCLUDE that the petition must be dismissed as out of time.

Moreover, for a request for interim relief or stay, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 requires as follows:

> (b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
>
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

After hearing the arguments of the parties and reading their submissions, I find no basis from which to conclude that respondent's decision to start the 2011-2012 school year prior to September 1, 2011, constitutes irreparable harm. The fact that the petitioner did not file its petition for almost nine months after the Board took action severely hurts its argument that its members will sustain irreparable harm if interim relief is not granted. The respondent's decision was made so long ago that it is very likely that the parents who have children at both the Bethlehem and the North Hunterdon School Districts will be the ones harmed if the calendar is changed at this late date. It is speculative that petitioner's members will sustain any harm at all.

In addition to the petition being out of time, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not established irreparable harm. Therefore, since all four standards must be established to obtain emergent relief, petitioner does not satisfy the Crowe v. DeGioia standards and the Petition for Emergent Relief must be denied.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's application for emergent relief is DENIED. Based on the limited issue that the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes transmitted for consideration by the OAL, no other issues remain for this forum once the emergent matter is resolved.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

DECISION ON MOTION

The pleadings, exhibits and motion papers having been reviewed, it appears that the parties have agreed to pursue the internal appeals process set forth in the constitution of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA). Consequently, the matter is not ripe for adjudication by the Commissioner of Education.

Accordingly, respondent's motion for summary decision is granted and the petition is dismissed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PLEASANTVILLE, ATLANTIC COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
JAMES RIEHMAN, STATE-APPOINTED MONITOR,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board alleged that respondent improperly overturned the Board's decision to reject a proposed settlement of a lawsuit filed by an employee under the Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA). The Board contended that the state-appointed monitor overstepped his authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq. – the School District Fiscal Accountability Act – which it claims limits the power of the monitor by assigning the Board the sole power to sue or be sued.

The ALJ found that: the sole question to be addressed in this matter is whether the respondent had the authority to override the Board's decision not to enter into a settlement agreement; the respondent's argument – that litigation has fiscal consequences and he is empowered by the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq. (SDFAA), to oversee all fiscal affairs of the district – is without merit, as under this construction of the SDFAA, the state monitor would have the power to overrule any non-procedural action by the board of education; this interpretation of the SDFAA renders indistinguishable the line between monitoring and the full state intervention allowed under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 et seq., which grants a State District Superintendent total authority over the operation of the school district; the respondent bases his authority to settle the lawsuit on the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-53(b)(1), which affords the state monitor the authority to make "payment of bills and claims" but does not empower him to "settle" claims; and once a matter is in litigation, authority over the case's disposition arises from the power to sue – which is specifically and exclusively granted to the Board of Education under N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a). Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the respondent overstepped his bounds when he overturned the Board's decision to reject the proposed settlement, and granted the Board's motion for summary decision.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concluded that the Monitor did not exceed his statutory authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 when he overturned the Board's decision to reject the proposed settlement. In so deciding, the Commissioner found, inter alia, that: state monitors have the authority – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5) – to override a vote of the board of education in order to achieve fiscal stability; and the ALJ's reference to the power afforded to State District Superintendents under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15 et seq. is completely unrelated to the School District Fiscal Accountability Act and the statutory authority of state monitors. Accordingly, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the OAL and affirmed the decision of the Monitor to overrule the Board's rejection of the settlement agreement at issue in this matter.

AGENCY DKT NO. 539-9/10

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF PLEASANTVILLE, ATLANTIC COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
JAMES RIEHMAN, STATE-APPOINTED MONITOR,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by James Riehman, State-Appointed Monitor ("Monitor").[1]

The Monitor submitted exceptions to support his contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously concluded that he did not have the authority to overturn the Board's decision to reject the settlement proposal in the Abdullah matter, which involved a Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA) claim by a former employee. The Monitor first argues that the ALJ erroneously relied on N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a), which provides that the authority over a case's disposition in litigation is exclusively granted to the Board. The Monitor points out that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a) in no way limits the authority of state monitors. Additionally, the ALJ failed to acknowledge that the Monitor was appointed because of the fiscal shortcomings of the district to provide direct oversight of the Board's business operations and to oversee the expenditure of school funds, which involves making decisions in litigation that could result in significant financial exposure to the Board. In his exceptions, the Monitor also contends that the ALJ improperly analogized the State Intervention Statute and the powers afforded to the State District Superintendent with the State Monitor's Authority under the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq. ("Fiscal Accountability Act"). Finally, the Monitor argues that the ALJ's legal conclusion misinterprets the governing law; frustrates the purpose of the Fiscal Accountability Act; and overlooks legal precedents upholding the authority of state monitors.

[1] The Board submitted a letter stating that it had no exceptions and was instead relying on the Initial Decision.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner finds that the Monitor did not exceed his statutory authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 when he overturned the Board's decision rejecting the settlement proposal in the Abdullah matter. Pursuant to the Fiscal Accountability Act, the Commissioner is authorized to appoint a state monitor to oversee the fiscal management and expenditures of school district funds when an independent audit reveals the existence of certain financial shortfalls that are delineated in the Act. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a) and (b). Further, in order to achieve fiscal stability, state monitors have the authority to override a vote of the board of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5).

In this case, trial counsel for the Board recommended that the Board approve a settlement in the amount of $225,000 to settle a claim filed by a former employee under the Conscientious Employee Protection Act. Under the settlement proposal, the Board would be required to pay $100,000 and its insurance carrier would pay $125,000. Trial counsel for the Board recommended the settlement based upon the issues that could compromise the Board's defense at trial, as well as the potential for a jury verdict of $500,000 or higher plus attorney's fees. Despite the trial counsel's recommendation, the Board voted to reject the settlement proposal and continue with the litigation. Based on his concern for the financial exposure to the Board if the litigation were to continue, the Monitor overruled the Board's decision and authorized the settlement proposal. The Commissioner finds that the potential exposure for a high damages award in the $500,000 range for a school district that is plagued with financial shortcomings is a valid fiscal rationale for entering into a settlement that would essentially cost the Board $100,000. Therefore, the Commissioner finds that the Monitor's decision was related to the fiscal management of school funds, and thus falls within the statutory authority of a state monitor.

Additionally, the ALJ's reference to the power afforded to State District Superintendants under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15, et seq. is completely unrelated to the Fiscal Accountability Act and the statutory authority of state monitors; further, its mere existence is irrelevant to a determination as to whether a state monitor exceeded his authority in overruling a school board decision. Moreover, despite the ALJ's suggestion to the contrary, the Commissioner's finding that the Monitor did not exceed his authority in this case does not equate to a blanket determination that state monitors have the power to overrule all non-procedural actions by the Board.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is rejected; and the Monitor's decision to overrule the Board and to approve the settlement in the Abdullah case is hereby affirmed.

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville (Board) alleges that respondent, State Monitor James Riehman (Monitor or Riehman) improperly overturned the Board's decision to reject a proposed settlement of a lawsuit filed by an employee under the "Whistleblower Act."

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The appellant requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the OAL on October 20, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The parties filed cross-motions for summary decision. Oral argument was heard on April 12, 2011, and the record closed.

SUMMARY OF THE RELEVANT FACTS

This matter comes before this tribunal on cross-motions for summary decision. The facts are not in dispute. Petitioner, Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville (Board), is a Board of Education organized under Title 18A of the New Jersey revised statutes. Respondent, James Riehman, is the State-appointed Monitor assigned to Pleasantville in accordance with the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54, et seq. (SDFAA).

On September 24, 2007, Tauheedah Abdullah filed a complaint against the Board in the Superior Court under the Conscientious Employee Protection Act (CEPA). On July 1, 2010, the Board's counsel, Lisa S. Grosskreutz, submitted a memorandum wherein she recommended that the matter be settled for the gross amount of $225,000. The Board of Education would be required to pay $100,000, and the Board's insurance carrier would pay the balance.

On July 27, 2010, the Board rejected the proposed settlement. On August 8, 2010, the Monitor issued a memorandum overturning the Board's action and approving the proposed settlement. The settlement was consummated in Superior Court and the money paid. The only question before me is the authority of the Monitor to overrule the Board's determination.

The Monitor bases his action on the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(1), which empowers him to:

> b. The State monitor shall:
>
> (1) oversee the fiscal management and expenditures of school district funds, including, but not limited to, budget reallocations and reductions, approvals of purchase orders, budget transfers, and payment of bills and claims;

The Monitor asserted that the lawsuit constituted a claim against the Board of Education. The Monitor contended that because the suit could have resulted in the imposition of a monetary judgment against the Board, he had the power to override the Board's decision to reject the proposed settlement.

It must be noted at this juncture that the wisdom of the Monitor's decision is not before me in these motions. The Board determined to ignore the advice of its counsel; the Monitor overrode that decision and accepted the advice of counsel. His decision may well have been prudent, but the question here is whether he had the authority to take that action.

In support of his interpretation, the Monitor cited two cases, Pleasantville Board of Education and Pleasantville Education Association v. State Department of Education, #A-2123-08T3 (App. Div. August 25, 2009) (Slip Op.). That case involved a reduction in force, an issue over which the Monitor clearly has oversight pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(4). Consequently, the issue in that case was substantially different from the one at bar.

The second case cited by the Monitor is Rankins v. Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville, EDU 6918-09, Initial Decision (August 3, 2010), rejected, Acting Comm'r. (Oct. 26, 2010) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. Rankins concerned the decision of the Monitor to terminate an employee over the objection of the Board of Education. Again, the issue in that case was covered by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(4), not N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(1), and therefore has no bearing on the facts of this case. It should also be noted that Rankins is on appeal to the Appellate Division.

In support of its cross-motion, the Board relies upon the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a), which states, in pertinent part, that the Board may:

> Sue or be sued by its corporate name and likewise submit to arbitration and determination disputes and controversies in the manner provided by law;

The Board argued that the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a) ascribes to the Board and only the Board the power to sue or be sued. The Board contends that the absence of the specific power to sue or be sued in the SDFAA limits the power of the Monitor and leaves to the Board and the Board alone the power to sue or be sued, and, hence, the power to resolve litigation.

The Monitor countered by arguing that the litigation had fiscal consequences, and he is empowered by the SDFAA to oversee all fiscal affairs of the district. The problem with the Monitor's argument is that nearly every action taken by a Board of Education has fiscal consequences. Aside from a motion to approve the minutes of the previous meeting, a Resolution to appoint a president and a vice-president, and a motion to adjourn a public meeting, the Monitor's counsel was unable to delineate any action by a Board of Education that did not, in some manner, have a fiscal consequence. The Monitor's counsel conceded that, either directly or indirectly, all substantive actions by a Board of Education have fiscal consequences. Therefore, under the Monitor's construction of SDFAA, he has the power to overrule any non-procedural action by the Board of Education. In short, the Monitor's power over the district is limitless, and the Board of Education is little more than a cipher.

This construction of SDFAA might be reasonable were it not for the existence of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-15, et seq. That legislation affords the Commissioner the power to engage in full state intervention. The statutory scheme empowers the State to appoint a State District Superintendent. The State's District Superintendent is granted total authority over the operation of the school district. The power of the State Monitor authorized under N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 theoretically differs from the level of authority afforded the State District Superintendent, but given that Monitor Riehman ascribes to himself power over all fiscal matters, and given Riehman's acknowledgment that all actions by a Board of Education have fiscal ramifications, if Riehman's definition of his authority is accepted, then there would appear to be no dividing line between the State District Superintendent and the Monitor. Indeed, if Riehman's position is accurate, then the line between monitoring and full state intervention becomes indistinguishable.

Such was clearly not the intent of the statutory scheme. If the legislature had intended the Monitor to have the same powers as the State District Superintendent, it would have said so. By definition, the Monitor must lack the full powers of a State District Superintendent. The Monitor's authority must have some limit.

It is also significant to note that Riehman holds only a Business Administrator's Certificate. As such, his expertise lies fundamentally in the areas of economics, accounting and finance (N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.7). He is required to have no concomitant expertise in educational leadership, an area of expertise considered essential for superintendents/chief school administrators charged with operating public schools (N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.4). Consequently, to ascribe to Riehman the powers normally held by a Superintendent of Schools directly conflicts with the administrative scheme prescribed by the legislation.

In this case, the Monitor bases his authority to settle the lawsuit on the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-53(b)(1). That statute affords the Monitor the authority to make "payment of bills and claims." The language of the statute does not authorize him to "settle" claims. Once a matter is in litigation, authority over the case's disposition arises from the power to sue. That power is specifically and exclusively granted to the Board of Education under N.J.S.A. 18A:11-2(a).

Accordingly, based upon the plain language of the statutory scheme, the Monitor overstepped his bounds when he overturned the Board's decision to reject the proposed settlement. The Board's motion for summary decision must be GRANTED, and the Monitor's motion must be DENIED. Again, it is important to emphasize that this does not address the wisdom of the Monitor's decision, but only his authority to make that decision.

ORDER

I ORDER that summary decision be GRANTED in favor of petitioner, Pleasantville Board of Education.

I ORDER that Monitor James Riehman's motion for summary decision be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SYNOPSIS

In February 2011, the petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of his minor children, T.W. and T.W., contending that the family was homeless and that the last district of residency was Pittsgrove Township. On April 5, 2011, the Salem County Executive County Superintendent issued a determination that the family is homeless as of December 2010 and that Pittsgrove Township is the district of residence pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(f) and N.J.S.A. 18A:7B-12.1(c). Subsequently, the respondent Board requested a withdrawal of its counterclaim for tuition and instructed that the matter should be dismissed as moot. Petitioner did not answer his telephone for a telephone conference scheduled for May 23, 2011. Accordingly, the OAL returned the file to the Commissioner, and the petition was dismissed with prejudice.

The record in this matter, the proposed Settlement Agreement (Settlement), a resolution by respondent authorizing the Settlement, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the following observation.

Section 4 of the Settlement references actions that may have already taken place, and have therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the petition and respondent's counter-claims are hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the settlement terms.

Anthony W. Brocco, II, Petitioner, v. Board of Education of the Township of Cherry Hill, Respondent.	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF NEW JERSEY / OFFICE OF ADMINISTRATIVE LAW Agency Ref. No. 83-4/10 OAL Docket No. EDU 04187-2010S STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT AND RELEASE

The parties in the above-captioned matter hereby agree to settle this controversy upon the following terms and conditions:

1. The respondent Board of Education will appoint petitioner to a paid extracurricular position of Assistant Football Coach at Cherry Hill High School East for the 2011-2012 school year.

2. For the 2012-2013 school year, provided that the Cherry Hill School District continues to have a varsity football program, petitioner will be considered a qualified in-District candidate for a paid extracurricular position of Assistant Football Coach at Cherry Hill High School West should he apply for same and will have priority over any out-of-District candidates for such a position, on the condition that between October 18, 2010 and the time of the District's consideration of his application for the position petitioner has not committed any misconduct which would constitute a disqualifying act or actions for appointment to the position. In the event the Board declines to appoint petitioner to the position on such ground, Petitioner shall have the right, through the Cherry Hill Education Association, to submit to binding arbitration pursuant to the collective negotiation agreement grievance procedure the question whether the particular conduct at issue constitutes just cause for the Board's refusal to so appoint petitioner. If the Cherry Hill Education Association refuses to pursue binding arbitration on Petitioner's behalf, he shall have the right to seek relief by filing an action with the Commissioner of Education. In the event that it is determined in either venue that the alleged act or actions were not disqualifying for purposes of appointment to the position, petitioner shall receive a payment equal to the assistant football coaching stipend, level 4, for the 2012-2013 school year.

3. In considering any future coaching position applications by petitioner, the School District will not consider any allegations of misconduct or poor judgment occurring prior to October 18, 2010.

4. The Board will not involuntarily transfer petitioner to a position at Cherry Hill High School East for the 2011-12 school year.

5. In the event petitioner subsequently determines that he does not wish to accept the Assistant Football Coach position at High School East for the 2011-12 school year, such decision shall be without prejudice to the terms agreed upon herein with respect to the Assistant Football Coach position at High School West for the 2012-13 school year.

6. Petitioner will consult with the Cherry Hill Education Association in January, 2011 for the purpose of having the Education Association assist in coordinating with the High School East football coaching staff for petitioner's preliminary participation in that school's football program for the period January through May, 2011.

7. Each party hereby releases the other from any and all claims, causes of action, suits, actions at law and in equity, administrative proceedings and judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings of any kind whatsoever, which have been or could have been brought, arising under or relating in any way to the issues which were raised or could have been raised in this or any action arising out of the actions giving rise to the within controversy, except as may be necessary to enforce the terms of this Stipulation.

8. This Stipulation shall not constitute an admission of wrongdoing by any party and no party shall be considered to be a prevailing party for any purpose. Each party shall be responsible for his or its own attorney fees.

9. This Stipulation of Settlement and Release contains the entire agreement between the parties, and all terms of this Stipulation are deemed material. This instrument may not be altered, amended, modified or revoked except by a new instrument executed in writing by the parties.

10. Petitioner, in consideration of this Stipulation of Settlement and Release and in full, final and complete settlement of this matter hereby agrees to a dismissal, with prejudice, of his Petition of Appeal in this matter.

11. The parties understand and agree that to the fullest extent permitted by law they will not disclose or cause to be disclosed the nature, terms, or substance of this settlement for any reason or purpose whatsoever to any person. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the parties are permitted to disclose the nature, terms, or substance of this settlement or to furnish a copy of this Stipulation: (1) where required to do so by applicable law; (2) as is necessary in the course of preparing and filing of income tax returns; (3) with the prior consent of the other party to this agreement; (4) pursuant to Court Order after reasonable prior notice is provided to the other party to this agreement; (5) as may be necessary in conjunction with potential or actual employment with another employer. The parties also shall not disparage each other in public or private communications. In the event petitioner directly breaches the confidentiality provisions of this paragraph, the Board shall have the right to decline to appoint him to the positions referenced in this Stipulation. In the event the Board declines to appoint petitioner to the position on such ground, Petitioner shall have the right, through the Cherry Hill Education Association, to submit to binding arbitration pursuant to the collective negotiation agreement grievance procedure the question whether petitioner knowingly breached the confidentiality clause of this Paragraph 11. If the Cherry Hill Education Association refuses to pursue binding arbitration on Petitioner's behalf, he shall have the right to seek relief by filing an action with the Commissioner of Education. In the event that it is determined in either venue that the petitioner did not directly breach the confidentiality provisions of this paragraph, the petitioner shall receive a payment equal to the assistant football coaching stipend at the applicable level for the school year in which he was not appointed.

12. This Agreement shall be incorporated into an Initial Decision by the Honorable Dennis Blake, ALJ, which shall be subject to approval and adoption by the Commissioner of Education.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have executed this Stipulation on the dates set forth below.

SYNOPSIS

In November 2008, the Elizabeth School District filed a petition requesting that the teaching certificate of respondent be suspended pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for failure to honor the terms of her employment agreement with the district. In December 2008, an Order to Show Cause was served upon respondent – a non-tenured teacher – requiring her to show cause why her teaching certificate should not be suspended for resigning her position as a teacher of mathematics less than 10 days before the start of the 2008-2009 school year, and less than three days before the district's new teacher orientation.

The ALJ found that: the purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is to provide notice to the school district that a member of its teaching staff will not complete the terms of his or her teaching agreement, thereby allowing the district time to arrange for a suitable replacement without adversely impacting students; at no time in this matter did the district consent to relieving respondent of her contractual duties; and, accordingly, the respondent unilaterally breached her employment contract with the district. The ALJ concluded that this action constitutes unprofessional conduct warranting a one-year suspension of respondent's teaching certificates.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the findings of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, respondent's certificate was suspended for a period of one year from the date of the filing of this decision – a copy of which was forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for the purpose of effectuating this order.

Review of the record of this matter and Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law[1] reveals that respondent failed to honor the contract into which she entered to teach mathematics in petitioner's district during the 2008-2009 school year. It was stipulated that respondent executed the contract on July 26, 2008 and that she was to report for new-teacher orientation on August 28, 2008. On August 25, 2008 respondent advised petitioner that she would not report for duty, and refused to teach for sixty days or until such time as a replacement could be secured. The parties agree that summary disposition is appropriate.

The Commissioner concurs with the determination of the Administrative Law Judge that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10, and that the circumstances warrant suspension of her teaching certificate for one year. Accordingly the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case and herewith forwards same to the State Board of Examiners for implementation of the suspension.

INITIAL DECISION
SUMMARY DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1031-09
AGENCY DKT. NO. 354-12/08

IN THE MATTER OF THE SUSPENSION OF THE TEACHING CERTIFICATE OF SABINA SIERPOWSKI, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF ELIZABETH, UNION COUNTY.

Marvin Lehman, Esq., for petitioner School District of the City of Elizabeth, Union County

Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq., for respondent Sabina Sierpowski (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 4, 2011 Decided: June 3, 2011

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 6, 2008, the Elizabeth School District filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey requesting that the teaching certificate of respondent, Sabina Sierpowski, be suspended for unprofessional conduct in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 for failure to honor the terms of her employment agreement with the district.

On December 1, 2008, the Commissioner signed an Order to Show Cause requiring respondent to show cause why an order should not be entered suspending her teaching certificate. On or about December 17, 2008, respondent filed an answer to the Order to Show Cause, contesting the matter. On or about January 14, 2009, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case. On or about February 8, 2011, at a pre-hearing conference the parties agreed to a Stipulation of Facts and agreed that the case would proceed on a summary basis.

ISSUES

Did respondent engage in unprofessional conduct within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10? If so, should respondent's teaching certificate be suspended for one year?

STIPULATED FACTS

1. At the July 17, 2008, meeting of the Elizabeth Board of Education, respondent was appointed as Teacher–Mathematics at Elizabeth High School–Halsey House, effective September 1, 2008. (Exhibit 1.)

2. On or about July 17, 2008, Superintendent Pablo Munoz sent a letter to respondent stating that respondent "was appointed as Teacher–Mathematics, Elizabeth High School–Halsey House, effective September 1, 2008, during the pleasure of the Board." (Exhibit 2.)

3. On or about July 26, 2008, respondent signed and returned the letter with the marking of an "X" next to the sentence that stated: "I accept appointment as designated above." (Exhibit 3.)

4. On or about August 25, 2008, Superintendent Munoz received two different letters from respondent. One letter states: "Unfortunately, I can not work for Elizabeth High School–Halsey House due to personal reasons." In the other letter, respondent stated: "I am requesting for you to release me from my contract with your school district." (Exhibits 4A and 4B.)

5. The Elizabeth School Board did not approve the request in her letter dated August 25, 2008. (Exhibits 4A and 4B.)

6. Respondent did not report to work on August 28, 2008, for new-teacher orientation.

7. Respondent did not report for the opening of the new school year on September 2, 2008.

8. Respondent holds two teaching certificates: a) elementary teacher with mathematics specialization; and b) teacher of mathematics.

9. On December 5, 2008, petitioner sent an Order to Show Cause and supporting certifications to the Commissioner of Education seeking to have respondent's teaching certificate suspended pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10.

LAW AND ANALYSIS

The parties have agreed to the underlying material facts, and there is an agreement that no genuine issue of material fact exists. Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). And, the parties have agreed to proceed on a summary basis. I therefore find this matter ripe for summary decision.

The applicable statute for this case is N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10, which provides in pertinent part as follows:

> Any teaching staff member employed by a board of education or an approved private school for the disabled, who shall, without the consent of the board . . . , cease to perform his duties before the expiration of the term of his > employment, shall be deemed guilty of unprofessional conduct, and the commissioner may, upon receiving notice thereof, suspend his certificate for a period not exceeding one year.

The purpose of N.J.S.A. 18A:26-10 is to provide notice to the school district that a member of its teaching staff will not complete the terms of the teaching agreement, thereby providing the district with time to arrange for a suitable replacement without adversely impacting students. The ultimate objective is to protect the students. Penns Grove-Carneys Point Bd. of Educ. v. Leinen, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 405, 407.

Here, respondent entered into an employment contract for a school term set to begin September 1, 2008. Respondent was appointed to the position on July 17, 2008, and she accepted the position on July 26, 2008. She resigned by letter dated August 25, 2008, less than ten days before the start of school and less than three days before the new-teacher orientation. And, at no time did she receive the consent of the district relieving her of her contractual duties. I FIND that respondent unilaterally breached her employment contract with the district, and I CONCLUDE that such action constitutes unprofessional conduct.

Petitioner seeks a one-year suspension of respondent's teaching certificate, and cites multiple cases in support of such action. Prior precedent can be summed up as follows: Generally, the Commissioner of Education has imposed the full one-year suspension of a teaching certificate for leaving a district without adequate notice. Only in rare circumstances has the Commissioner seen fit to lessen the suspension period. When a suspension period has been for less than one year it has been for compelling reasons, or there have been significant mitigating factors justifying a lesser suspension. Alpine Bd. of Educ. v. Yuz, EDU 1116-06, Initial Decision (July 17, 2008), adopted, Commissioner of Education (September 23, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>.

In this matter, respondent has not provided any compelling reason(s) or mitigating factors as to why her teaching certificate should not be suspended for one year. Respondent simply stated that she could not work for the Elizabeth School District due to personal reasons, and the record is devoid of any explanation of those personal reasons. Respondent's action constitutes unprofessional conduct, and I CONCLUDE that her unprofessional conduct warrants a one-year suspension.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the teaching certificate of respondent, Sabina Sierpowski, is suspended for a period of one year.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF BELVIDERE, WARREN COUNTY,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION ON
ROBERT BLUM,	:	APPLICATION FOR EMERGENT RELIEF
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the recommended Order – that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. This matter shall continue at the OAL for the fact-specific analysis required by Board of Education of the City of Sea Isle City, Cape May County v. Kennedy, 196 N.J. 1 (2008) and other such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure.

TOWN OF BELVIDERE, WARREN COUNTY,
Petitioner,
v.
ROBERT BLUM,
Respondent.

John E. Croot, Esq., for petitioner (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein & Celso, attorneys)

George M. Holland, Esq., for respondent (Lentz and Glengaro, attorneys)

BEFORE EVELYN J. MAROSE, ALJ:

In this request for Emergent Relief, petitioner, the Board of Education of the Town of Belvidere (BOE) seeks an order immediately suspending respondent, Robert Blum (Blum) from his position on the Board of Education of the Town of Belvidere pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2. Respondent asserts that the BOE has not satisfied the requirements necessary to obtain emergent relief.

On June 28, 2010, Blum and his wife filed a Request for Mediation with the New Jersey Department of Education, Office of Special Education, on behalf of their son, B.B. The Request for Mediation was converted into a Petition for Due Process. On December 16, 2010, the day scheduled for a plenary hearing, the parties entered into a Settlement Agreement, which resolved the issues raised in the Petition for Due Process with the exception of legal fees and costs. On April 11, 2011, Blum and his wife filed a complaint in the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey, seeking to recover legal fees and costs from the BOE related to the special education matter. The complaint for attorney's fees is pending.

On April 27, 2011, Blum was elected to the BOE for a three-year term. On May 3, 2011, prior to Blum being sworn into office, the attorney for the BOE notified Blum's counsel that Blum's complaint for legal fees and costs "appeared to present a conflict of interest." The BOE attorney suggested that Blum either forego membership on the BOE or dismiss the complaint. Blum declined to either forego his membership on the BOE or dismiss his complaint, but offered to excuse or recuse himself from any decisions that might affect his complaint for fees and costs, which totals approximately $14,428.

Blum was sworn into office as a member of the BOE at the organization meeting on May 4, 2011. On June 2, 2011, a Verified Complaint to disqualify Blum from serving on the BOE, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2 was filed, along with this Motion for Emergent Relief, to immediately suspend Blum from his position pending a full hearing on the merits of permanent removal.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) sets forth the standards governing motions for emergent relief. The regulation instructs in salient part:

> A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;

3. The petitioner has the likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and

4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Emergent relief should not be granted except "when necessary to prevent irreparable harm." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132. The moving party bears the burden of proving irreparable harm. More than a risk of irreparable harm must be demonstrated. "The requisite for injunctive relief requires a 'clear showing of immediate irreparable injury,' or a 'presently existing actual threat; [emergent relief] may not be used simply to eliminate a possibility of a remote future injury, or a future invasion of rights, be those rights protected by statute or by common law.'" Continental Group v. Amoco Chemicals Corp., 614 F.2d 351, 359 (D.N.J. 1980) (citations omitted).

A person may be disqualified from serving on a board of education pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, which provides:

> No member of any board of education shall be interested directly or indirectly in any contract with or claim against the board, nor, in the case of local and regional school districts, shall he hold office as mayor or as a member of the governing body of a municipality, or in the case of county special services school districts and county educational school districts, shall he hold office as a member of the governing body of a county.

In Board of Education of City of Sea Isle City v. Kennedy, 196 N.J. 1 (2008), the Court considered whether a school board member was properly removed from office because his petitions to the school board on behalf of his child constituted an impermissible interest in a claim against the board. The Court held that not all controversies and disputes that may erupt between a local school district and a parent who is also a sitting board member concerning the special education program for a member's own child should require the member's removal from office. Id. at 4. Further, not all claims against a board in which a board member has an interest constitute a "substantial conflict requiring removal from office as the sole remedy." Id. at 6.

> The line between acceptable and prohibited activities by a board member may be resolved throught the prism of a fact-specific inquiry. That inquiry should assess whether there are substantial and deeply antagonistic interests that would call into question a board member's . . . ability to perform his or her office.

When disputes arise between parents of a handicapped child and a school board, the court should consider that the board and the parents have a common interest in resolution of an appropriate education for the child. Because not all claims result in a substantial conflict, "board members who have handicapped children should not have to fear the loss of their elected office as a condition of questioning, or if necessary pursuing through the initiation of proceedings, the appropriateness of the child's education." Id. at 37. "The Commissioner should review the claim and determine whether it portends the likelihood of protracted and intractable litigation between the parties." Id. at 38. Although the Court requires that the Commissioner examine the nature of the dispute and establish a more careful and fact-specific explanation of when a conflict over a child's educational program become so substantial that removal from office is required, it [the Court] finds that when a due process claim includes "a request for a specific, significant monetary relief, a line has been crossed and a substantial conflict can be found to exist." Id. at 38-39 (emphasis added).

In this matter, after hearing the arguments of petitioner and respondent and considering all documents submitted, I FIND that the BOE has not met all four prongs necessary for emergent relief. As noted in the above cited law, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-2, a board member may be disqualified for office. However, as detailed in Kennedy, if the conflict is between a member who is a parent and the board, the Commissioner should examine the nature of the dispute and establish a more careful and fact-specific explanation of why removal from office is required. Kennedy, supra, 196 N.J. at 38-39.

While the Court found in Kennedy that if there was a request for a specific, significant monetary relief, a line had been crossed and a substantial conflict could be found to exist; only one of the cited cases relied upon by petitioner concerns a demand limited to attorneys' fees. See Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Palmyra v. Marinnie, EDU 2611-05, Initial Decision (April 26, 2005), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (the board member's nineteen-year-old son asserted that the BOE did not have the curriculum as required by New Jersey law and that this failure caused him to lack the proper prerequisite courses for NCAA eligibility. The son was seeking approximately one million dollars in damages); Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Berlin v. Lee, EDU 6050-01, Initial Decision (April 29, 2002), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (the board member and her husband filed a notice of claim on behalf of their children seeking reimbursement for medical bills which were accruing and would continue to accrue into the future, plus damages for mental anguish, mental distress, humiliation, pecuniary loss, and $25,000 in compensatory damages. The amount sought for medical had the potential to be substantial. Only six weeks after the incident that gave rise to the claim, $1,300 in medical expenses had already been incurred); Bd. of Educ. of Cedar Grove Twp. v. Tully, EDU 11663-06, Initial Decision (March 21, 2007), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (the board member himself asserted serious and permanent injures and unliquidated personal damages allegedly caused by the BOE's failure to properly maintain the seating area around the high school football field).

Only one case cited by petitioner concerns a request for attorney's fees and costs, Hogan v. Kearny Board of Education, 1982 S.L.D. 329, affirmed, 1982 S.L.D. 354. In that matter, while the Commissioner found that a request for attorney's fees could possibly lead to disqualification, a claim for attorney's fees did not automatically disqualify a person from running or sitting on the board. I FIND that the BOE did not meet the second and third prongs for emergent relief since under some circumstances a board member may sit on a BOE while being involved in a dispute regarding his child's educationl program and the BOE has not proven the likelihood that it will prevail in this matter, where the sole issue between the parties is a claim for fees and costs.

The BOE also did not present any credible evidence that it would suffer greater harm than Blum if emergent relief were granted. Blum was elected to the BOE for a three-year term this April. If removed from office immediately, with certainty, he will lose a significant part of his term. In contrast, the BOE represented no credible evidene that the BOE would be harmed if Blum were to remain on the board. While the BOE argued that if Blum were on the board, he might inhibit free exchange of information, it presented no credible evidence of an immediate, actual harm that it would suffer and no rationale as to why any action that Blum participated in would be invalidated in the future. As noted above, the possibility of a future remote injury is insufficient. Further, pending a resolution of his entitlement to serve, Blum has agreed to excuse or recuse himself from any decisions that affect his suit for attorney's fees. I therefore FIND that the BOE has also not met the first and fourth prongs for emergent relief since the BOE has not presented any credible evidence that it will suffer any irreparable harm if Blum remains on the board pending a full hearing of the request for his removal, and it has not proven that, when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Based on the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to meet the requirements set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(b) and is not entitled to emergent relief.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that the petitioner's request for an Order immediately suspending respondent from serving on the board, pending a full hearing on the merits is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

In July 2010, petitioner – employed at that time as a tenured teacher in the district – filed an appeal of the respondent Board's rescission of a previously granted discretionary extension of maternity/child care leave for the 2010-2011 school year. On August 6, 2010, respondent sent petitioner a letter requesting that she notify the Board of whether she intended to return to the district in September or resign her position. Emergent relief was denied in this matter on August 10, 2010 and on the same day, petitioner submitted a letter of resignation. Subsequently, in the course of this matter, petitioner claimed that her resignation was under duress or stressful circumstances, and therefore should be rescinded. Respondent Board sought to have petitioner's appeal dismissed because she voluntarily resigned her position.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner's resignation was not made under duress, but rather was a reasoned decision made in order to spend more time with her child and, therefore, the resignation was binding; petitioner relinquished any rights she had as a teaching staff member upon resignation, thereby rendering the instant proceedings moot; the petitioner did not have a vested right to the extended maternity leave once it was granted, as the board retained the right to reconsider this exercise of discretionary power; and petitioner has not demonstrated that the Board's discretionary exercise of power was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the appeal.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioner lost her standing to prosecute the instant appeal when she resigned from the Board's employ on August 10, 2010, and found petitioner's arguments regarding invalidation of the resignation unpersuasive. Accordingly, the Commissioner concluded that: there is no basis for rescinding petitioner's resignation; petitioner consequently has no standing to prosecute the instant appeal; and it is therefore not necessary to consider the merits of petitioner's arguments challenging the validity of respondent's rescission of its discretionary grant of extended child care leave. The petition was therefore dismissed

RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner instituted this appeal challenging respondent's rescission of a child care leave extension that had initially been granted to her. A second and overriding issue was created when petitioner resigned from her employment in respondent's district. After review of the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), petitioner's exceptions and respondent's replies thereto, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the appeal must be dismissed.

At the outset, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that petitioner lost her standing to prosecute the instant action when she resigned from employment with respondent on August 10, 2010. Petitioner's arguments urging invalidation of the resignation are unpersuasive.

Petitioner urges in her exceptions that her resignation should be deemed invalid because she resigned under duress caused by the threat of tenure charges. The ALJ, however, did not find this aspect of petitioner's testimony to be credible. (Initial Decision at 6-7) Consequently, in conducting his independent review of the record, the Commissioner took into account the established principle that he may not reject credibility findings unless they are arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or not supported by the record, see, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10C; N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6(c); D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of minor children T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004). The Commissioner concludes from his review that there is no basis to disturb the ALJ's finding that petitioner's resignation flowed not from fear of tenure charges, but from a strong preference for remaining at home with her young children for an extra year.

More specifically, the record reveals that petitioner was notified of the rescission of her extended child-care leave on May 11, 2010, three and one-half months before the date on which she was expected to report for duty. Because she wished to spend an additional year with her children, she instituted the present appeal and did not make the alternate arrangements that would have been necessary for her to return to work.

On August 6, 2010, respondent wrote to petitioner, reminding her that: 1) her extended leave had been rescinded; 2) she had been sent a contract for the 2010-11 school year, which was supposed to have been returned by July 15, 2010; 3) respondent needed a response from her in order to prepare for staffing needs; 4) her continued failure to respond could be interpreted as an abandonment of position or as insubordination; and 5) failure to respond within five business days could lead to tenure charges. (Petitioner's Exhibit P-50) It is this letter that petitioner characterizes as the threat which caused her to resign under duress.

The Commissioner declines to accept this characterization. Respondent had determined that it was in the best interest of its district not to grant extended child care leave, had so notified petitioner in mid-May 2010, and had tendered to petitioner a contract to teach during the 2010-2011 school year, which contract was supposed to have been executed and returned by mid-July. Over three months after notifying petitioner of the rescission of extended leave, and shortly before the commencement of the 2010-11 school year, respondent had not received a signed contract from petitioner and did not know whether she would report for work. As a practical matter, it was reasonable for respondent to send petitioner the August 6, 2010 letter urging her to reveal her intentions and putting her on notice of the consequences that continued inaction might engender.

When – on August 10, 2010 – petitioner's emergent application for an order allowing her leave during the pendency of this litigation was denied, it was incumbent upon her to decide whether to return to work. Since respondent was not willing to approve extended leave, a decision not to return to work meant either resignation or defiance of respondent's action to rescind the leave time. Notwithstanding the harshness of the respondent's action, it must be assumed that petitioner understood that failure to report to work – in lieu of resignation – would likely lead to discipline. Thus, the Commissioner would characterize respondent's August 6, 2010 letter as an iteration of the realities of the situation, rather than a threat.

Petitioner's alternate argument for rescission of her resignation is that it is necessitated by the holding in Evaul v. Camden Board of Education, 35 N.J. 244 (1961). However, the record supports the ALJ's determination that the circumstances of petitioner's resignation were distinguishable from the resignation that the New Jersey Supreme Court annulled in Evaul.

In that case the Court determined that emotionally charged events and unusual timing led to the impulsive tendering and precipitous acceptance of Evaul's resignation:

> [W]e think that the peculiar circumstances of this case require the reinstatement of the appellant on equitable principles. It was an extraordinary concatenation of events which resulted in a loss to appellant of her tenure, seniority and pension rights acquired during twenty-five years of service. First, there were the disturbing incidents of March 13, 1959, which led to the submission of her > resignation. The unpleasant and emotional meeting with her department head was shortly followed by the unanticipated and tempestuous confrontation in the Principal's office. It is reasonable to suppose that the anxiety and distress engendered by these incidents reached a climax when her subsequent efforts to confer with the Principal and the President of the School Board were frustrated. It is clear to us that the submission of her resignation was an impetuous act prompted by her understandably distraught condition. The emotionally-charged words she used in her note of resignation bear this out. Second, linked to the above chain of events, was the fortuitous circumstance that a special meeting of the school board had, unknown to her, previously been scheduled for a few hours after she wrote her resignation. But for that happenstance, her attempted rescission, on March 15, 1959, would have been effective.

In contrast, the record below supports the ALJ's conclusion that petitioner's resignation was the result of a considered weighing of options and priorities – in consultation with her husband – and in the wake of the denial of her emergent application for child care leave during the pendency of this litigation.

The Commissioner therefore concludes that there is no basis for rescinding petitioner's resignation from employment in petitioner's school district. Petitioner consequently has no standing to prosecute the instant appeal. In light of petitioner's lack of standing, the merits of petitioner's arguments challenging the validity of respondent's rescission of its original grant to petitioner of extended child care leave need not be reached.

The petition is accordingly hereby dismissed.

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Jennifer DeKenipp (petitioner) appeals Wall Township Board of Education's (respondent's) rescission of a previous grant of extended maternity/child care leave.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On July 21, 2010, petitioners' petition of appeal was filed with the Office of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education, along with a request for emergency relief seeking an order compelling respondent to grant the previously granted leave. On July 26, 2010, the emergent matter alone was filed with the Office of Administrative Law for oral argument, which was held on July 30, 2010.

The undersigned denied emergent relief, as did the Commissioner of Education. On August 25, 2010, petitioner moved to amend her petition. Petitioners motion was opposed in part by respondent. An order was entered on September 3, 2010 granting petitioner leave to amend her petition of appeal. An amended Petition of Appeal and Answer were subsequently filed by the parties.

The matter was set down for a hearing on December 16, 2010. The matter was heard on that date and the record was left open for the parties to file closing arguments after transcripts of the proceedings were received. The record closed on March 4, 2011 and an order extending time in which to file an Initial Decision was entered.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Petitioner commenced employment with respondent on or about September 1, 2004 as a teacher holding a K-12 art endorsement on an instructional certificate. Petitioner began contractually provided maternity leave on or about April 24, 2009 in expectation of the birth of her second child, who was born on June 8, 2009. Pursuant to the collective bargaining agreement between respondent and petitioner's bargaining unit such leave was to conclude at the end of the 2009-2010 school year. Petitioner requested that respondent grant a discretionary extension of her unpaid leave for the duration of the 2010-2011 school year, effective September 1, 2010. Respondent granted this request on March 9, 2010, but subsequently rescinded its approval on May 11, 2010. After respondent declined to reconsider its rescission, petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education claiming petitioner held a right to the leave which vested once respondent granted its approval. Petitioner also filed a request for emergent relief compelling respondent to grant the leave pending the underlying proceeding. Emergent relief was denied.

On August 6, 2010, respondent sent petitioner a letter requesting that she resign her position or notify the Board of her intent to return to the district in September for the 2010-2011 school year. On August 10, 2010, petitioner submitted a letter of resignation.

The preceding information has not been disputed or contradicted by the parties, and is hereby FOUND as FACT.

Heather Garret-Muly

Heather Garret-Muly was formerly employed as a special education teacher with the Wall Township Board of Education. She was involved during her employment with the Wall Township Education Association as a building rep. She testified that she had been granted extended maternity leaves a number of times without problem. She described the procedure by which she requested and received extended maternity leave, and kept her principal informed of the process.

Ms. Garret-Muly requested extended maternity leave for the 2010-2011 school year as was denied. She stated she was told prior to her request that petitioner's request had been granted. She was then advised when informally told of her denial that another teacher was being denied and that petitioner's leave was being rescinded. Although the collective bargaining agreement between the parties has change during her career, she does not believe that a teacher was entitled to two full years maternity leave under any earlier iteration of the contract.

Dennis DeKenipp

Dennis DeKenipp the husband of petitioner. He is an eighth grade science teacher employed by the Ocean Port Board of Education. DeKenipp described finding out from a human resources worker that petitoner's previously granted extended leave had been rescinded. He and petitioner attended a meeting with Dr. Habel, the Superintendant of Schools. Dr. Habel had just returned from being out and asked to be brought up to speed. Dr. Habel suggested that petitioner write a letter to the personnel committee requesting a reconsideration (P-4). Habel indicated to the DeKenipps that the Board Attorney had advised the Board to follow the WTEA contract "to the 'T'".

DeKenipp further testified as to the efforts he and petitioner undertook in reliance upon the initial granting of the leave, including the arrangements for daycare, daily schedules and routines, and money deposits. When asked why petitioner had resigned her position, he said she wanted to spend time at home with the baby because, "those years you don't get back." That was the biggest reason, that he and his wife felt it was important that she be at home.

Jennifer DeKenipp

Jennifer DeKenipp is the petitioner in this matter. She testified similarly as her husband as to the phone call from human resources, the meeting with Dr. Habel and the preparations she and her husband had made in reliance upon the board's prior granting of her extended leave.

Petitioner also testified as to her understanding as to how extended maternity leave worked and how she went about requesting it. She also described people she knew who had received extended leave and also one she felt was indicative of an individual attempting to take advantage of the system by having a baby when extended leave was expiring and requesting additional leave, which she believes to be a reason for the change in practice of granting extended leaves.

Petitioner testified that she resigned because she was scared she would be brought up on tenure charges if she did not, based on the language of the letter she received from the district (P-5). She stated a fear of having her pension or her ability to return to teaching being compromised and resigned to avoid facing tenure charges.

Dr. James Habel

Dr. Habel is the Wall Township Superintendant of Schools. He was on medical leave when petitioner requested her additional leave, but he is aware of the circumstances. Petitioners request was granted in accordance with Article 9 of the WTEA allowing the agreement of granting such leave for good reason.

Habel described what he believed to be abuses of the system with regard to extended leave, citing a teacher who was selling real estate during their leave period. He indicated that each request was considered on a case by case basis. After petitioner's leave was granted, some request were made that caused the board to deliberate. The board determined to try to apply a standard of uniformity and educational continuity in considering the requests. After giving consideration the Board determined to look back to previously granted leave requests for the following year and apply those standards to them as well. Petitioners was felt to be outside of those parameters. Petitioner's leave was rescinded and other requests were denied.

Habel cited that the board be able to correct an error previously made as basis for revisiting what he deems a leave granted in error. He further discussed the interrelation between articles 7 and 9 of the WTEA agreement, which govern maternity and extended leaves, respectively. It was felt that extended maternity leaves were being considered under article 7 when they should in fact have been considered under article nine. Once that was realized, three requests were denied and petitioner's leave rescinded. He further testified that this led to a confusion due to an incorrect reading that extended leaves for child care were required under article 7, whereas in actuality such consideration was to be given under the discretionary language of article 9.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Credibility is the value that a fact finder gives to the testimony of a witness. The word contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963). The term has been defined as testimony, which must proceed from the mouth of the credible witness and must be such as our common experience, knowledge, and common observation can accept as probable under the circumstances. State v. Taylor, 38 N.J. Super. 6, 24 (App. Div. 1955); see, also, Gilson v. Gilson, 116 N.J. Eq. 556, 560 (E. & A. 1934). A fact finder is expected to base decisions on credibility on his or her common sense, intuition or experience. Barnes v. United States, 412 U.S. 837 (1973). Credibility does not depend on the number of witnesses and the finder of fact is not bound to believe the testimony of any witness. In re Perrone, 5 N.J. 514 (1950).

Having heard the testimony given and reviewed the evidence offered, I found all the witnesses before me to be largely credible in the statements provided, with one exception. Although petitioner largely appeared to be sincere and truthful in the testimony given, I do not find as credible her testimony that she resigned out of fear of being subjected to tenure charges. First, it is noted that P-5, the letter which purportedly induced this fear, merely indicated that a failure to respond "may,' result in charges. Furthermore, despite petitioner's, testimony of the fear that she alleges rendered her resignation as one under duress, petitioner's actions do not paint a picture consistent with that assertion. Petitioner waited four days and resigned her position on August 10 (which, it is noted, is also the date that the Commissioner of Education affirmed the decision on emergent relief.). As respondent notes her testimony seems to indicate that she was determined to stay home with her child and after four days she and her husband made a reasoned decision to resign her position. This is supported by the testimony of petitioner's husband, who testified at length that the desire to have petitioner remain with the child seemed paramount in their decision for her to resign, whereas he failed to raise fear of reprisal as a reason until prompted to do so. Accordingly, I FIND that petitioner's decision to resign was the result of a reasoned, deliberative result of considering the circumstances and determining, in concert with her husband, that they wanted her to continue to remain at home with the children.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

In the current matter, respondent seeks to dismiss petitioner's claim on jurisdictional grounds. Respondent asserts that petitioners claims in this matter are merely a grievance cloaked as a petition of appeal," in that the matter is at hear a discussion of application of rights under the collective bargaining agreement. Before the submission of the post hearing brief, both parties have agreed, even as early as the emergent relief proceedings, that the action under review was an exercise of the Board's discretionary powers outside of the contract. The contract discusses the provisions governing maternity leave, and the granting of extended leave was beyond the contract, the sole province of the board's discretionary powers. That petitioner claims that the Board's action is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable, and offers a history demonstrating the routine granting of such requests as support of the arbitrary nature of the rescission, does not convert or reduce the petition suddenly into a past-practices complaint to be shoehorned back into the contract. I CONCLUDE that the Commissioner does and continues to have jurisdiction over this matter.

Respondent also seeks to have petitioner's appeal dismissed because she voluntarily resigned her position on August 10, 2010. Petitioner claims that the resignation was under duress or stressful circumstances and therefore should be rescinded. Peitioner cites Evaul v. Board of Educ., City of Camden, 35 N.J. 244 (1961), as controlling in this matter and supporting the notion that petitioner's resignation should be rescinded.

In Evaul, a discreet set of extreme circumstances occurred which involved a series of heated and contentious interactions and meetings which culminated in Evaul's tendering her resignation on the same day as the events in questions, essentially sleeping on it, cooling down and changing her mind two days later, only to find that the board had already, at an intervening meeting, accepted the resignation.

In the current matter, a much less intense pace was involved. Petitioner was informed of the rescission of her leave in May of 2010. Petitioner filed her petition of appeal in July and the emergent proceedings were conducted, with petitioner seeking to remain on leave until the due process claim was completed and determined. That emergent relief request was denied by the undersigned on August 2, 2010. Respondent sent a letter on August 6 asking that petitioner either indicate in writing whether she would return to work or resign her position. Four days later, petitioner sent a letter indicating her resignation.

It is not inappropriate that the board, given the denial of emergent relief, would want to know and expect an answer as to whether petitioner intended to return to work. This is made more apparent by Dr. Habel's noting in the letter (P-5) that the district required the employment contract to be returned on or before July 15th. Additionally, that the board notified petitioner of the potential consequences that "may," (emphasis added) occur if petitioner did not respond to the request does not appear to be a threat, but a reasonable notification of steps the board may have needed or determined to take if it did not hear from petitioner and needed to make a determination regarding staffing levels. Again, it was appropriate.

Considering the prior discussion and findings of fact regarding petitioner's behavior in the aftermath of receiving the letter requesting her confirmation to return to work or her resignation, the situation at hand does not appear to be analogous to the heated situation in Evaul which were all contained in one day and resulted in an impetuous, if not hasty offering of a resignation which was rescinded two days later.

The record does not reflect that petitioner sought to rescind her resignation once she thought better of it, as was the case in Evaul. In fact the topic of rescission of the resignation did not come up until August 25, 2010, fifteen days later. And even then it was by way of motion to amend the petitioner's complaint to include a count seeking to vacate the resignation only if it is determined that "petitioner's maternity leave was wrongfully rescinded." (Proposed amended petition, P. 5). Given the timeline and order of events, it is hard not to look at this request as an attempt to have it both ways, to ensure that she got the emergent relief she was denied.

Accordingly, I CONCLUDE, that petitioner's resignation was not made under duress, but rather was at best a reasoned decision made deliberately to spend more time with her infant child, or possibly an attempt to nonetheless obtain the sought-after benefit of her denied request for emergent relief. I therefore conclude that the resignation was binding and in so offering it petitioner relinquished any rights she had as a teaching staff member and rendered the current proceedings moot.

Even had petitioner not resigned, the record does not yield new or substantive material facts which change the basic analysis from the emergent relief proceedings. Now as then, petitioner argues that once a Board of Education passes a formal resolution establishing a leave of absence, the board may not unilaterally rescind its decision, relying heavily on Oxford v. Pohatcong, 81 S.L.D. 48, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 2711-80 (November 25, 1980), aff'd, Commissioner of Education (January 16, 1981) to support this assertion.

As noted during the emergent proceedings, there are several distinctions between Oxford and the matter currently at issue. In Oxford, the respondent Board unilaterally extended the time of a teacher's return date, delaying the date by several months beyond an agreed to return date into the next year. This had the result of effectively reducing that teacher's salary, which, it was determined, implicated the petitioner's rights under the tenure statute. In the current matter, the opposite is true, as respondent is requesting that petitioner return to work sooner than anticipated, therefore not serving to reduce petitioner's salary or affect her compensation at all. The tenure statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, protects, tenured teachers from dismissal and reduction in compensation. Granting, denial or rescission of what is agreed to be a discretionary exercise of the Board's power is not a part of the tenure protections.

In Oxford, the petitioner received notice of the Board's action only one week prior to the start of the school year in question, whereas in the current matter the respondent took action nearly four months prior to the effective date of the additional leave, leaving sufficient time to plan. Finally, Oxford dealt with setting the return date for a maternity leave which was mandated and provided for in the collective bargaining agreement between the parties, and it is in that foundation where it took root as a vested right. As earlier noted, the leave requested by petitioner is not a contractual right, nor is it contemplated anywhere in the agreement between respondent and the bargaining unit. The current matter involves what all parties agree is a discretionary act of the board's authority. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner did not have a vested right to the extended maternity leave once it was granted. The board retained the right to revisit and reconsider this exercise of discretionary power even after it had passed its resolution. Petitioner's equitable claims fail similarly as the rescission occurred in May of 2010 and while petitioner was certainly entitled to challenge the decision, she was certainly free and given ample time (three months) to explore alternative arrangements for child care. Any right to rely upon the granted leave should have and did cease when the board rescinded its decision in May. To the extent that petitioner may have a claim toward reimbursement of non-refundable monies spent in reliance prior to the rescission, that is not a question for this forum, and is rendered moot by petitioner's decision to resign and maintain the arrangements that had been made.

Finally, I CONCLUDE that petitioners have not demonstrated that the discretionary exercise of power involved was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Dr. Habel's testimony, demonstrates that there was a rational basis behind the board's decision, specifically an acknowledgement that previous leave requests had been granted in mistaken belief that it was contractually required and the board's intent to correct it going forward.

DECISION AND ORDER

It is, therefore, ORDERED that petitioner's request for relief is rendered moot and barred by her voluntary resignation of her position. It is further ORDERED that, absent her resignation, petitioner's request to have her extended maternity leave reinstated after it was rescinded by the Board is DENIED. Petitioner's appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter, petitioner, the Board of Education of the City of Asbury Park, Monmouth County (hereinafter "petitioner" or the "Board") seeks emergent relief in which it challenges the March 17, 2011, order of respondent, Bruce M. Rodman, former monitor for the Asbury Park Board of Education (hereinafter "respondent" or the "Monitor"), in which he ordered the closing of a school facility, the Barack Obama School, hereinafter known as the "Obama School".

On June 15, 2011, the Office of Controversies and Disputes within the Department of Education ("Department") received a verified petition from the Board alleging that the Monitor acted beyond the scope of his statutory authority while in the position of State Fiscal Monitor for the Asbury Park School District ("District"). The Department also received a motion for emergent relief with accompanying brief from the Board for an order enjoining respondent's decision of March 17, 2011, wherein respondent ordered the Board to relocate the students attending the Obama School to three other schools in the District. The Board identified this as a decision to close the Obama School. The matter was transmitted without an answer to the Office of Administrative Law (hereinafter "OAL") on June 16, 2011. Respondent filed a brief in opposition to the Board's motion on June 27, 2011, and requested dismissal of the matter on the basis of standing. The matter was originally scheduled to be heard as an emergent relief hearing on June 28, 2011 but was adjourned in advance at the request of petitioner's attorney who was in trial in another court at the time. The matter was rescheduled for July 7, 2011, accordingly. The Board thereafter filed a reply on July 7, 2011. Oral argument, in which both parties participated, was held the next day, July 8, 2011 at 9:00 a.m. at the OAL Quakerbridge Plaza Office. Respondent Rodman also appeared. The hearing record closed for purposes of emergent relief at that time and this order is issued pursuant thereto.

RELEVANT FACTS

Based upon the facts presented by way of the emergent relief pleadings as well as the oral argument, the following constitute the relevant facts adduced in this matter. On November 20, 2010, respondent was appointed by the Acting Commissioner of Education to the position of State Fiscal Monitor to the District, after having served as the Controller of another school district for three years and a School Business Administrator of an educational services commission for nearly twenty-seven years.

(Rodman Cert. ¶¶ 2 & 3; Pet. ¶ 2.) Respondent retired from his position of State Fiscal Monitor on May 24, 2011. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 2.)

On March 16, 2011, the District Superintendent, Dr. Denise Lowe ("Dr. Lowe"), presented two recommendations to the Board. First, she recommended that the Board reconfigure the grading in the District schools so that certain class grades would be housed in different buildings than they had been. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 5; Pet. ¶ 3.) Her recommendation was offered as a solution to the underutilization of District facilities which were operating far below their capacity based on a decline in student enrollment, which had been 3,150 in 2000-2001 but fell to 2,092 in 2009-2010. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 6, Ex. A.) As an alternative to a grade reconfiguration, Dr. Lowe proposed that students in the Obama School be relocated to other District schools for the 2011-2012 school year. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 7; Pet. ¶ 3.)

It appears from the basic evidence provided that Dr. Lowe had presented the alternative plan to the Board prior to the March 16, 2011, meeting. On March 3, 2011, respondent had sent Dr. Lowe an e-mail explaining that the Board members might be less frustrated than they were the night before about the Obama School plan if they were given more information. (Rodman Cert. Ex. D.) He explained that the Board needed more information about the cost savings, financial benefits realized, enrollment trends, enrollment outlook, staff-student ratio, eliminated positions, new positions, and the outlook for getting State financing to replace the Obama School. (Ibid.) About a week later, Dr. Lowe sent a letter entitled, "Potential Closing of Obama Elementary School Explanation of Spreadsheet" to all of the Board members, explaining how the numbers in the spreadsheet "regarding the 'Potential Closing of Obama'" were derived. (Rodman Cert. Ex. C.) The letter also explained that there were "a total of 13 positions to be eliminated if the Barack Obama Elementary School closes." (Ibid.) Overall, the letter appears to be addressing cost savings that would result if the school closed. (Ibid.) The net estimated savings from doing so would be about $531,105, with a total estimated savings of $675,175. (Ibid.) The spreadsheet provided information regarding how much would be saved for each of the positions cut. (Ibid.)

Ultimately, the Board declined to accept Dr. Lowe's recommendations at its March 16, 2011, meeting. (Pet. ¶ 4.) At that meeting, respondent advised that he reserved his right to either overturn or implement corrective action as authorized in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55. (Pet. Ex. A; Rodman Cert. ¶ 27, Ex. B.)

On March 17, 2011, respondent wrote a letter to the Board ordering, among other things that, effective July 1, 2011, the Obama School students in grades kindergarten through fourth were to be relocated to the Thurgood Marshall and Bradley Elementary schools, and those in grades five through eight were to be relocated to the Asbury Park Middle School. (Pet. Ex. A; Rodman Cert. Ex. B.) He concluded that due to the Board's failure to implement Dr. Lowe's recommendations, it was in the District's best interests to do this. (Ibid.) He further concluded that this relocation was the most likely configuration to produce a thorough and efficient education and in reaching this conclusion he considered the decline of student population in excess of thirty-five percent in ten years; the age and condition of the Obama School, which was constructed in three stages from 1910 to 1950; and the significant savings of approximately $375,000 in the first year, $759,000 in the second year if the Alternative School moved to the Obama School, and $975,000 in the third year if the Administrative Office moved there. (Ibid.) He stated in the letter that he was taking action at that time because "time is of the essence" and the District was trying to finalize a budget for 2011-2012. (Ibid.) That same day, respondent e-mailed Joseph Passiment, the Acting Executive Monmouth County Superintendent, informing him of this directive and attached to the e-mail a copy of his memorandum to the Board. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 33, Ex. F.)

The Board states that "the actual and intended effect of [respondent's order] was to close the [Obama School] as an educational facility." (Pet. ¶ 7.) Respondent certifies that he did not order that the Obama School be closed and that he specifically noted that the building would remain open for educationally-relevant purposes. (Rodman Cert. ¶¶ 34-35.)

In his certification, respondent states that he examined both of Dr. Lowe's plans, found both to be acceptable, but decided that the relocation was the best choice for the District because it would result in efficient use of facilities and significant cost savings. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 8.) The relocation would allow the District to eliminate or consolidate a number of positions without reducing the number of teachers so as to preserve the same teacher-student ratio. (Id. at ¶ 10.)

Respondent points to various sources as supporting his decision. He addresses that the cost savings projected by Dr. Lowe's letter to the Board dated March 11, 2011, supported a savings of approximately $375,000 in the first year. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 11.) He also noted that the lease agreement between the Salvation Army and the District whereby the District pays $150,000 per year to lease building space for an Alternative School would not be necessary and significant costs would be saved if the Obama School became available for use for the Alternative School. (Id. at ¶¶ 12-14.) At the hearing, it was clarified by him that the Alternative School currently educates about sixty pupils. Respondent also stated that the District leases office space to house its administrative staff, and such leasing would not be necessary if the students at the Obama School were relocated and the administrative staff began to utilize the Obama School building, creating further cost savings. (Id. at ¶ 15.) He also found that the Child Study Team ("CST") offices could be relocated to the Obama School so that the District could sell the building that currently houses them to realize the income from the sale. (Id. at ¶ 16.) At the hearing, respondent averred that the CST office relocation was already underway, and that these offices would be the location where IEP meetings are held. Although petitioner's counsel then argued that such a plan was speculative at best, petitioner failed to produce any evidence to the contrary to support that challenge. When questioned by this tribunal, respondent's attorney acknowledged that the functions of the child study team at that location would be direct educational activities inasmuch as they would be conducting parent/teacher meetings, creating individualized education programs for pupils, and administering to the immediate needs of their special education population. When further questioned by this tribunal about the size of the District, the Monitor indicated that the district is one-and-one-quarter mile square and there are no busing issues for any of the regular education students. This is a standard walking school community. The only transportation concerns they have (which they have had all along) involve those of special education students who must be bused elsewhere.

Respondent further explained in his submission that, when he analyzed the fiscal status, the District had a zero balance in its capital reserve fund; therefore, it was particularly important to realize cost savings, and that he reviewed the District's Long Range Facility Plan ("LRFP") and facilities data to determine that the proposed relocation of the Obama School students was within the plan's parameters and there was sufficient capacity to house those students in the other schools. (Rodman Cert. ¶¶ 20-21.) At the hearing, respondent presented documentary support for the relocation plan in the audit performed by the Office of State Auditor wherein the State Auditor suggested the possibility of consolidating schools for a more efficient operation of the District. (R-G at 5.)

Respondent further stated that he had discussed the relocation plan with Joseph Passiment, the Acting Executive Monmouth County Superintendent, who agreed that the plan was fiscally sound but suggested that he contact Susan Kutner ("Kutner"), Director of Policy and Planning in the Department's Office of School Facilities to obtain State approval. (Rodman Cert. ¶¶ 22-23.) In an e-mail to respondent on March 14, 2011, Kutner explained that she had examined the proposed reorganization that had been posted on the District's web site and stated that both scenarios (the reconfiguration of grades and "closing Obama") could be supported by the Office of School Facilities. (Rodman Cert. Ex. E.) Attached to her e-mail was a spreadsheet containing information of the capacity, enrollment, and space within the District's schools as well as a capacity analysis showing a capacity surplus, and information regarding facilities efficiency standards compliance and educational adequacy and building conditions, which listed the Obama School as a marginal facility, although Kutner explained it was not educationally inadequate. (Ibid.) Respondent asserts that this amounts to an approval by the Department prior to the relocation plan's implementation. (Rodman Cert. ¶ 26.)

THE PARTIES' ARGUMENTS

In its brief supporting the motion for emergent relief, the Board sets forth arguments addressing each of the four prongs it is required to meet to be awarded emergent relief. First, it asserts that it would suffer irreparable harm because closing the school would cause damage that would not be adequately redressed by monetary damages.[1] Second, the Board states that because State Monitors do not have the statutory power to close a school and because the New Jersey Administrative Code requires procedural steps to be taken before a school is closed, the law is settled that respondent's failure to follow the steps required under the Code equates to an abuse of his power as a State Monitor. Third, the Board argues that the facts demonstrate that respondent failed to obtain the approval required under law prior to his decision and, as such, it is therefore likely to succeed on the merits of the underlying claim. Finally, the Board believes the harm it will suffer in physically relocating the students and conducting the administrative tasks to do so smoothly is greater than the harm respondent will suffer.[2]

In his opposition, respondent addresses each of these arguments. First, respondent asserts that the Board has not demonstrated it will suffer irreparable harm because it fails to allege any harm and because the harm inferred from the Board's argument is speculative. Second, respondent's argument regarding whether the law is settled is three-fold. Primarily, respondent argues that the Board cites law that does not relate to his actions because he did not order the closing of the Obama School, but rather ordered a "repurposing" of the school which would include instructional and administrative purposes, purposes which indicate that the school was not being closed. Alternatively, he states that even if his decision effectuates closing the Obama School, he complied with all requirements to do so. Ultimately, he states that his order was made in accordance with his statutory authority. Third, respondent asserts that the

[1] The Board begins its argument demonstrating that irreparable harm has been determined when harm cannot be redressed by monetary damages; however, it never expresses that the harm caused by respondent's order cannot be redressed. The argument stated here, rather, is inferred from the brief.
[2] The Board balances its harm against the possible lost savings suffered if respondent's plan is enjoined, savings that the Board believes have not been demonstrated by documentation or analysis.

Board has not shown that it will likely succeed on the merits because respondent followed all statutory and administrative requirements, did not order the closing of the Obama School, and his actions as a government official are entitled to deference. Fourth, respondent argues that he will suffer greater harm than the Board if emergent relief is granted because any harm caused to the Board is speculative while the cost-savings to the District will be lost.[3] In a newly raised defense, respondent further asserts that the matter should be dismissed because the Board lacks standing to bring the petition in that it has no stake or adverseness in the outcome of the matter.

In its reply brief (which, once again was submitted to the OAL one day before the rescheduled emergent relief hearing, the timeliness of which submission is, according to respondent, not appropriate since it is not allowed for under the emergent relief rules) the Board reiterates its arguments, emphasizing new points, and also addressed respondent's standing argument. The Board emphasizes the limited authority of a State Monitor (as opposed to the State Superintendent) as evidenced by the language of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5); the inconsequence of the Obama School's speculated potential use for the Alternative School, and respondent's inability to demonstrate that Rodman adhered with the steps required under the Code to close a school. With regard to standing, the Board asserts that it is charged with the providing a thorough and efficient education which inherently requires it to take steps to effectuate change in the best interests of its students.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Based upon all of the foregoing, I have considered the arguments raised and the proofs presented and make the following findings:

A. Whether the Board has Demonstrated that it is Entitled to Emergent Relief.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6 provides the standard for granting emergent relief for controversies subject to the Commissioner of Education's jurisdiction:

[3] Like the Board, respondent does not indicate what harm he will suffer if the request is granted.

> (b) A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):
>
> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
> 3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

Failure to meet all of the criteria (conjunctively) for relief mandates the denial of the application. A.F. o/b/o D.M. v. Jersey City Bd. of Educ., EDS 1807-11, (February, 28, 2011) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

1. Whether the Board Will Suffer Irreparable Harm If the Requested Relief Is Not Granted.

As stated hereinabove, petitioner argues that it will suffer irreparable harm if the injunctive relief is not granted since the District must make provisions for the assignment of personnel and the designation of students to particular schools by sometime in mid August 2011. As a result, if the Obama School is not kept open, it will deny the district the opportunity to make those determinations in a timely fashion. Respondent argues that greater harm will occur if the District is forced to forgo the significant financial savings which it has referenced in its presentation this matter. After having considered all the arguments in that regard, I FIND that the respondent's claim is more valid and realistic under the circumstances. Furthermore, its plans are not speculative to the extent argued by petitioner. Much has to be done to effectuate the plan, including reassigning new functions to the school and ending leases which takes time. Also, this is not a geographically large district, it being a mere one-and-one-quarter miles square. Thus, the adverse logistical impact upon the students and faculty by going to another school within this relatively small community is not great. Further, it is curious that the District has known since at least March of this year that the Monitor had exercised his authority to allow for the repurchasing of the Obama School. Under those circumstances, the District should have anticipated the impact of any such repurchasing and responded by way of emergent relief much sooner than it did. Thus, its argument in that regard is specious at best. Further, the Monitor has represented that the child study team (CST) program is already gearing up to move into the Obama School currently. Although petitioner suggests that this is speculative, I do not concur with that argument. Rather, the Monitor's representation in that regard must be given appropriate deference, absent any other proof to the contrary. Further, even a brief look at the location of one of the proposed three schools indicates that it is apparently only a city block away from the Obama School. Thus, the adverse logistical impact upon the students and staff and the relocation appears to be minimal. As a result, I FIND that petitioner failed to satisfy this individual prong of the standard utilized for emergent relief.

2. Whether the Legal Right Underlying the Board's Claim is Settled.

The second prong carries with it its own independent need for extended analysis. In 2006, our Legislature passed the School District Fiscal Accountability Act, L. 2006, c. 15, whereby, among other things, the Commissioner of Education was granted the power to appoint a State Monitor "as necessary, to provide direct oversight of a board of education's business operations and personnel matters." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a). A State Monitor can be appointed if "the school district receives an adverse or a disclaimer of opinion by its independent auditor in the [required] annual audit," or if "any two or more of the following circumstances apply . . . :" the school district 1) "ends the fiscal year with a deficit balance . . . ;" 2) "receives a qualified opinion by its independent auditor in the annual audit . . .;" 3) "receives an adverse, disclaimer, or qualified opinion by its independent auditor under the single audit section for State or federal awards in the annual audit . . . ;" 4) "receives any audit findings by its independent auditor identified as material weaknesses in internal controls;" 5) "fails to develop and implement a plan acceptable to the commissioner or his designee to address a potential or actual deficit balance in the general fund, special revenue fund, or capital projects fund, with the exception of a capital projects fund deficit caused by the issuance of bond anticipation notes;" 6) "fails to implement a plan from the prior year which causes any findings from the independent auditor to be repeated;" 7) "is required to return federal funds once it is determined that the school district's expenditures are not in compliance with the grant requirements;" or 8) "submits the annual audit after the submission date required pursuant to [N.J.S.A. 18A:23-1]." Ibid.

Once appointed, the State Monitor is required to report "directly to the Commissioner or his designee on a weekly basis" and "monthly to the board of education and members of the public at the regularly scheduled board of education meeting." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(c). The State Monitor is also required to, in relevant part, 1) "oversee the fiscal management and expenditures of school district funds . . . ;" 2) "oversee the operation and fiscal management of school district facilities, including the development and implementation of recommendations for redistricting and restructuring of schools;" and 3) "ensure development and implementation of an acceptable plan to address the circumstances" regarding why the State Monitor was appointed—a plan which "shall include measurable benchmarks and specific activities to address the deficiencies of the school district." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b). In addition to these duties, the State Monitor also has the "authority to override a chief school administrator's action and a vote by the board of education on any of the matters set forth in [N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)], except that all actions of the State monitor shall be subject to the education, labor, and employment laws and regulations . . . ." N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5).

Consequently, a State Monitor can override a board of education's vote not to implement a relocation of students to another school so as to utilize a school for other purposes, such as those in the present case, if it is a vote over a matter set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b). The State Monitor must, nevertheless, override the action in accordance with applicable education, labor, and employment laws and regulations.

In the instant matter, it is noted that the Board does not argue that respondent was overriding a vote unrelated to the matters listed in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b). This is appropriate to acknowledge because it provides that the override would be within respondent's authority as State Fiscal Monitor if he complied with the applicable laws. In that respondent overrode the Board's vote on how to operate and fiscally manage school district facilities, respondent had the authority to override the Board's vote, as indicated by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(2). The issue is whether he lawfully implemented it in accordance with applicable education, labor, and employment laws and regulations.

The Board argues that respondent was required to comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 because his action was essentially the closing of the Obama School. N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 requires that > (a) To receive approval for the closing of a school, the district board of education shall provide the Division[4] and the county superintendent with the following assurances:

>
> 1. The proposed closing is consistent with the school district's approved LRFP[5] because:
>
> i. The school district has demonstrated that sufficient school building capacity exists to house school district students following such closing for the succeeding five years; or
>
> ii. The school district through a feasibility study has demonstrated that the benefits of undertaking new construction outweigh those of rehabilitating the school proposed for closure.
>
> 2. The use of temporary facilities in the remaining schools does not result or increase from an overall facilities shortage caused by the school closing; and
>
> 3. The re-assignment of students to other schools in the school district does not produce, sustain nor contribute to unlawful segregation, separation or isolation of student populations on the basis of race or national origin.
>
> (b) A request for approval from the Division for the closing of a school shall include the recommendation to the county superintendent.
>
> (c) A letter of approval from the Division, based on the information in (a) above, is required before the closing of a school.
> (d) The Division shall notify the school district of its determination in writing with respect to the requested school closing, with a copy to the county superintendent.

N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 is entitled "Closing of a School Facility." Under N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2, [4] "'Division' means the Division of Finance in the Department of Education." N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2.

[5] "'Long-range facilities plan' or 'LRFP' means the plan required to be submitted to the Commissioner by a school district pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4 and N.J.A.C. 6A:26-2." N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2.

> "School facility" means and includes any structure, building or facility used wholly or in part for educational purposes by a school district or community provider, and facilities that physically support such structures, buildings and facilities, such as district wastewater treatment facilities, power generating facilities, and steam generating facilities, but shall exclude other facilities as defined in this section.

As indicated by the definition of "other facilities," "any structure, building or facility used solely for school administration" would not be considered a school facility, even though spaced used within a school facility for administrative purposes is considered "educational space." N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2. Yet, it can be best argued that the functions of the child study team program are more akin to direct educational functions than to strictly administrative actions since the CST deals directly with the educational components of special education students, thus excluding it from the strict designation of "school administration" functions.

The Board argues that respondent failed to follow the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 prior to overriding its decision, and, thus, he abused his authority. The Board's argument is not well-supported; however, because the law is not settled that N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 would apply to the action at issue since the key to this matter is that the plan intends to continue using the Obama School for both educational and, ultimately, administrative purposes, not solely for administrative purposes. At the same time, although Dr. Lowe had been identifying her plan regarding the Obama School as a "closing" and the Monitor and Kutner apparently used this to same term of "closing" in their communications, I FIND that such terminology was unfortunately misguided at best and did not reflect what was actually happening since it is evident from respondent's order of March 17, 2011, that the Obama School will continue to be used for educational purposes. The action contemplates the Obama School not only housing administrative offices eventually, but more to the point and more immediately the Alternative School, and the CST offices. Since the plan projects that the Obama School continue to be used as a school facility because it would be used for educational purposes by housing the Alternative School, it would be inappropriate to apply the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 to respondent's action.[6] In addition, as it was clarified at the hearing that the CST office relocation was currently underway, it is doubtful whether such use of the Obama School could be considered solely administrative even at the current time since, at an absolute minimum, the CST offices perform functions that might not be exclusively identifiable as administrative. Rather, they perform direct educational functions on behalf of the student population. Thus, the petitioner cannot utilize the unfortunate and perhaps inappropriate use of the word "closing" in order to succeed since the ample proofs are to the contrary. The Obama School will not close as an educational facility. And I so FIND. That represents the linchpin of respondent's defense to this emergent relief application.

Overall, the Board is alleging that respondent ultimately overstepped his authority as a State Monitor, but, based on the foregoing, the basis of such a claim cannot be made upon any law settled thus far. The authority of a State Monitor, which was granted by N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 only so far back as 2006, is both explicit and implicit at times in the statute, and it would be a stretch to say that the law is settled in favor of petitioner with regard to what a State Monitor can and cannot do, particularly in this instance. Compare Rankins v. Pleasantville Bd. of Educ., EDU 6918-09, final decision, Comm'r. (October 26, 2010) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/final/edu06918-09.pdf> (rejecting ALJ's finding that State Monitor did not have authority to overturn board's decision not to hire non-tenured custodian because State Monitor overturned it with fiscal motivation)[7] with Pleasantville Bd. of Educ. v. Riehman, EDU 11454-10, initial decision, (May 31, 2011)[8] (examining the few cases where a State Monitor's authority is determined and deciding that a State Monitor oversteps his bounds when overturning a board's decision to reject a settlement claim even if it relates to fiscal matters). It seems readily apparent at this juncture, however, that, to achieve fiscal stability, a State

[6] Respondent cites to Shuster v. Bd. of Educ., 17 N.J. Super. 357 (App. Div. 1952) for support that the new use of the Obama School should be considered school purposes, which, under Shuster, supra, undoubtedly, it would be. However, the matter in Shuster, supra, was quite different from the one at hand. There, the court was asked to construe a deed that required the property be used for "school purposes," and it recognized the very broad meaning of that phrase to find that board meetings and school elections constituted "school purposes." Id. at 361. Here, we are considering whether respondent unlawfully closed a school facility, a term that would not be so broadly interpreted as the phrase "school purposes" was in Shuster, supra, as indicated by the definitions provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2.

Monitor could override a board of education's vote so as to implement a plan to relocate students that was declined by a board, so long as the action was compliant with applicable laws. The authority to override a vote and order that the plan be implemented can be read in N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5), particularly in the plan's correlation to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(1) through (3). At the same time, and after having considered the within breath of the arguments raised by way of emergent relief, I further FIND that the law is not settled in favor of petitioner with regard to respondent's authority in the instant matter. If anything, it is directly to the contrary since N.J.S.A. 18A: 7A-55c authorizes the Monitor to oversee (1) fiscal management and expenditures, (2) the operation and fiscal management of school district facilities, including the development and implementation of recommendations for redistricting and restructuring of schools, and, (3) ensure the development of implementation of an acceptable plan to address the circumstances why the State Monitor was appointed. All of the proofs submitted by respondent amply demonstrate that the Monitor followed a conscientious, well-reasoned course, including appropriate dialogue with both County and State officials, in accordance with his statutory authority to ensure that the fiscal needs of the district were properly addressed when he identified the need, first expressed by Superintendent Lowe, to reposition the operations of the Obama School. His effort to effectuate economy in this regard having been thus met, this prong also individually fails.

3. Whether the Board Has a Likelihood of Prevailing on the Merits of the Underlying Claim.

Even though, as I find herein, respondent has adequately demonstrated his statutory authority to repurpose the needs of the Obama School, he nonetheless additionally asserts and draws upon several actions he took prior to overriding the Board's decision to support that the claim that N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 is nonetheless consistent with his actions, and that he did so in compliance with its provisions. He certifies that he conversed with the acting executive county superintendent who expressed his approval. He also attaches exhibits to his certification showing that he received an informal approval from the Director of Policy and Planning in the Department's Office of School Facilities and that the District's LRFP as well as the capacities of the school facilities were considered when implementing the plan. This evidence, if N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 was determined to be applicable, harms the Board's ability to uphold its burden in demonstrating that it has a likelihood of succeeding on the merits of its claim, and, considered alone, would be enough to deny the request for emergent relief. Nevertheless, given that N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5 does not apply to the action in light of the foregoing, the Board has additionally failed to demonstrate a likelihood of success on the merits because it has failed to provide a legal basis that would support its claim. And I so FIND.

4. Whether when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the Board will suffer greater harm than respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

After having considered the arguments advanced and after having noted the minimal adverse impact to any of the potentially affected students and personnel, I am satisfied and further FIND that the district will suffer greater harm than will the Board if an injunction is placed against the Monitor at this time since the Monitor has an overriding affirmative responsibility to maintain the fiscal integrity of the District in the face of severe and apparently long misdirected energies which have placed the district into such crisis up to this point. At best, it appears that the Board's apparent effort to dilute that affirmative responsibility by bringing this emergent relief application is highly misplaced. Rather, it should consider its appropriate role in relationship to the responsibilities vested in the Monitor for which he is charged under State law. The Monitor made strenuous efforts to redeem a level of fiscal responsibility by repurposing the Obama School operations in order to save significant monies for the District and any protracted delay in that regard will further exacerbate his ability to do so. It also makes complete sense to house all of the CST offices in one central location in order to obtain further economy and efficiency. And the inclusion of the Alternative School at the Obama School will save significantly more funds for the district, while also utilizing the remaining three schools with more complete enrollment capacity, there being no legal argument presented to demonstrate that either students or staff will suffer by any form of overcrowding or any lack of appropriate educational services at those schools as a result of that repurposing and reassignment. In doing so, the Monitor eliminated the need to keep wasting money by renting space when viable facilities at the Obama School presently exist to continue educational functions operating there and at a time when the other remaining schools can be used more effectively and efficiently by having the inclusion of all the students therein. Thus, the Monitor has acted properly in accordance with his stated mandate. And I so FIND.

By contrast, in generating this challenge, petitioner has caused greater harm than good due to the unnecessary generation of expenditures of legal fees and costs to both sides, which is especially frustrating and counterproductive in light of the enormous financial climate and burden which face all taxpayers and the State. Parenthetically, if petitioner's district had been more fiscally responsible over time, there would have been no need to have a monitor there in the first place to oversee the reconstruction of its fiscal crisis. This compelled the State to act as it did in appointing the Monitor. And since the Monitor is so vested with that affirmative responsibility to maintain the operational and fiscal integrity of the district facilities, his actions regarding the repurposing of the Obama School operations are to be considered commendable and consistent with that mandate. Thus, greater harm will occur to the district if the Monitor's actions in this regard are not upheld.

B. Whether the Board Has Standing to Bring This Claim.

This does not say however, that the Board lacked standing to bring the claim, despite the argument that the Monitor indicated that the true parties to this matter are only the students and their families as well as the affected staff. Rather, I FIND that a Board does have an affirmative responsibility to make proper challenges on behalf of its student population when a monitor exceeds his or her lawful authority, although based upon the determinations made herein, this Board was perhaps somewhat shortsighted and ill-advised in the manner in which it challenged that overriding authority in this matter. At the same time it is nonetheless noted that the Monitor did apparently respond to the Board in making his determination with reference to the repositioning of the population of the Obama School. Thus, he did not do so act in either isolation or in a vacuum. At minimum, this suggests that the Monitor recognized that the Board does have a role that process, which validates that it did have a measure of standing.

As stated hereinabove, N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a) provides for the granting of emergency relief where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case. In such circumstances, emergency relief pending a final decision may be ordered upon the application of a party. Subparagraph (f) of this section provides that temporary relief may be granted if there is a finding that immediate and irreparable harm will probably result, if there is the likelihood that the moving party will prevail, and if the relief is as limited in scope and as temporary as possible. The granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy which can only be awarded based upon a showing that irreparable harm will result if it is not granted, and a further showing that there is a likelihood of success on the merits. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6; Stroh Assoc., Inc. v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Hillsborough, Somerset County, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 235.

Once again, the foregoing regulation embodies the principles of law announced by the Supreme Court in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132 (1982).

Petitioner must meet all four criteria conjunctively to prevail on this application. See Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982. The moving party bears the burden of proving each of the elements for emergent relief "clearly and convincingly." Waste Mgmt of N.J. v. Union County Util. Auth., 399 N.J. Super. 508, 520 (App. Div. 2008).

In general, a board of education's actions (or those of the Monitor who has been assigned such authority under State law) are entitled to a presumption of lawfulness and good faith. Where such actions are challenged, the challenger bears the burden of proving that such actions were unlawful, arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Schuster v. Ed. of Educ. Montgomery Twp., 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 670, 676 (citing Schnick v. Westwood Ed. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 448 (App. Div. 1960), and Quinlan v. Bd. of Educ. of North Bergen Twp., 73 N.J. Super. 40 (App. Div. 1962)).

The "arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable" standard of review imposes a heavy burden on challengers of such actions. This standard has been defined by the New Jersey courts as follows:

> In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis. Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is no room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached . . . Moreover, the court should not substitute its judgment for that of an administrative or legislative body if there is substantial evidence to support the ruling.
> [Piccoli v. Ed. of Educ. of Ramapo Indian Hills Regional School District, OAL Dkt. EDU 1839-98 (January 22, 1999) (citing Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dent. of Envir. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).]

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of the board of education or, as I have found herein, the actions of the State-sanctioned Monitor. Massaro v. Bd. of Educ. of the Boro. of Bergenfield, 1965 S.L.D. 84, 85. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "the well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives." See also G.M. v. Roselle Park Boro. Bd. of Educ., 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 107, 109 (where the Commissioner adopted the decision of the ALJ when in a challenge to board action, the ALJ stated, "it is the management prerogative of boards of education that will not be usurped or assumed by the Commissioner of Education absent a definitive showing of bad faith or arbitrary actions taken in bad faith without a rational basis."). As long as the record reflects a rational basis for the action, as well as an absence of bad faith, an authority's action shall be upheld. In the G.M. case, supra, the ALJ, after a full hearing, found the board's decision to change geographic boundaries for kindergarten pupil placement, with a goal of evenly distributing the pupils at different schools within the district, to be a reasonable exercise of authority. In this matter, it appears even on its face that the Monitor utilized appropriate means in order to validate the need to reposition the inhabitants of the Obama School and that he reached out to county and state officials to review his proposed plan of action even if those parties, including Director Kutner, were not vested with the ultimate responsibility to determine "closure" requirements, inasmuch as I am satisfied that the proofs amply supported the notion that the Obama School was being repurposed to accommodate other educational needs and was not being closed in accordance with the closure requirements for hereinabove. As a result, it was not being closed, despite the unfortunate use of the "closure" nomenclature to the contrary which presumptively generated in this matter.

Based upon the foregoing and after having considered all the arguments advanced as well as the proofs offered by both sides, I therefore FIND that the right underlying petitioner's claim is settled against the petitioner's position. I also FIND that petitioner has failed to establish the right to relief and has failed to show that the action of respondent is arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, this having occurred after having given petitioner all due deference and a full and a complete opportunity to present such arguments at the emergent relief hearing.

The most difficult requirement for the moving party to establish or in order to show entitlement to emergency relief is the third factor. In order to prevail on one's application for emergency relief, the party requesting the relief must make a preliminary showing of a reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits. If the point of emergency relief is to maintain the parties in substantially the same condition at the final decision as when this matter began, it must be established by the moving party that it will probably win on the merits. It is with respect to this that petitioner has great difficulty. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions in this matter are arbitrary and capricious and unreasonable. Petitioner must show that respondent's actions generally exceeded his presumed authority as monitor. This it has failed to do for the reasons stated hereinabove. Once again, it is noted that the Monitor re-purposed the operations of the Obama School. A logistical and necessary first step in the process was to reassign the present school population into alternate facilities as a prelude to shifting other educational functions into it. This was consistent with the Monitor's need to address the fiscal objectives which he had targeted as part of his ongoing job responsibilities. And those efforts were endorsed by officials on both the County and State educational levels. Therefore, I also FIND that petitioner has failed to show the likelihood of prevailing on the merits. Finally, I FIND that greater harm will occur to respondent than to petitioner if the emergent relief is granted for the reasons stated hereinabove.

CONCLUSION AND ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that, for purposes of deciding this application for emergency relief, petitioner has failed to establish (1) the existence of irreparable harm, (2) that petitioner's claim is based upon a settled right, (3) that petitioner is likely to prevail on the merits, or that (4) the Board would suffer a relative hardship greater than the respondent. In view of the fact that petitioner has failed to establish any or all of the requirements for emergency relief, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's request must be DENIED. In the process it is also noted that, although the Board argues that respondent must be blocked from ordering that the relocation plan be implemented because of the closure requirements attendant to N.J.A.C. 6A:26-7.5, it nonetheless cites no other law for support for that regard, and, consequently and in accordance therewith the request for emergent relief must be further DENIED. It is also clear that the Board has not been able to demonstrate that the law is settled in its favor to show that respondent did not have the authority to do what he did in his capacity as State Monitor and, as a result, that the Board would therefore be likely to succeed on the merits of its underlying claim.

Further, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has also failed to establish its entitlement to emergent relief regarding the other two remaining prongs for the reasons stated hereinabove. At the same time, I also CONCLUDE that the Board nonetheless had standing to bring the application in the first place. I have made all these above findings and have formed all of these conclusions by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

Based upon the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that petitioner's request for emergency relief is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five (45) days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five (45) days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF WILLIAM TRACY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION ON REMAND
OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and other just cause against respondent William Tracy – a tenured principal assigned to the Board's Daylight/Twilight High School – for failure, inter alia, to enforce the Board's attendance policy. The Board sought dismissal of respondent from his tenured employment.

The Commissioner decided this matter in April 2009, adopting the Initial Decision of the OAL which found that the District had sustained the charge of unbecoming conduct against respondent for failing to properly administer the attendance policy of the District. In so deciding, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the appropriate penalty in this matter was a six-month suspension without pay, to be served prospectively.

On appeal, the Appellate Division affirmed the Commissioner's finding that respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct, but remanded the matter solely for reconsideration of the penalty imposed, finding that the Commissioner acted in an arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable manner in directing that the six-month suspension would be in addition to respondent's prior period of suspension.

Upon review of the Appellate Division's reasoning in remanding this matter, the Commissioner found that: the court was not familiar with the statutory prescriptions attendant to the bringing and prosecution of tenure charges against individuals; and the respondent's argument on appeal – that the ALJ intended that the 120-day unpaid suspension, imposed when tenure charges were certified, be credited against the recommended penalty of a six-month unpaid suspension – was without merit. Accordingly, the Commissioner concluded that a six-month suspension, to be served prospectively, is the appropriate penalty in this matter.

APPELLATE DIVISION DKT. NO. A-4569-08T3

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF WILLIAM TRACY,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY	:	DECISION ON REMAND
OF TRENTON, MERCER COUNTY	:

For the Petitioner: Rocky L. Peterson, Esq.
Hill Wallack, LLP

For the Respondent: Robert M. Schwartz, Esq.

The Commissioner decided this matter on April 8, 2009, adopting the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) Initial Decision which found that the District had sustained its charge of unbecoming conduct against respondent, principal of Daylight/Twilight High School, for failing to properly administer the attendance policy of the District. The Commissioner found, as did the ALJ, that central to the establishment of this charge were the dual issues of "authority" and "accountability". Specifically, the Commissioner was in complete accord with the ALJ that:

> In order to receive State aid, school districts are required to comply with the rules and standards for equalizing opportunity, including implementing the Core Curriculum Content Standards and providing public school facilities for at least 180 days per year. N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-9. The authority to make, amend, and repeal rules for the supervision of district schools rests with the board. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.8(a)(2) and (3) require boards of education to implement policies and procedures on attendance, including "[t]he expectations and consequences regarding attendance at school and classes," and "[a] definition of unexcused absence...that, at a minimum, shall be based on the definition of a school day...and the following considerations: i. Family illness or death; ii. Educational opportunities; iii. Written parental permission; iv. Excused religious observances..." The regulation goes on to list a detailed required process for addressing four o[r] more absences. The regulations require the average daily attendance rate for each school district to average 90 percent or higher as calculated for the three years prior to the school year being monitored. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-13.1(a). Each school with a three-year average below 90 percent is required to develop performance objectives for improving student attendance. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-13(b).

The statutes and regulations make clear that Tracy, as a school principal, had no authority to act separately with regard to attendance policy. The Board, not the school principal, is vested with the power to make policy, which is fundamental to the academic mission. Districts are barred from granting diplomas to students who do not meet core curriculum requirements and attendance policy. N.J.A.C. 6A:8-5.2(b).

The fact that Tracy was apparently operating a school without any written policy that would meet the standards of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.8(a)(2) and (3) demonstrates a dereliction of the principal's duty as primary school administrator. It is the principal's job to communicate a precise understanding of attendance through a written policy available to everyone. The lack of such a policy contributed to the misunderstanding with the Board and the lax documentation by the staff.

While it is true that N.J.A.C. 6A:32-8.3(f) states that daily roll call is taken by a teacher or other authorized person, N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.4(b) requires that "[r]ecords for each individual student shall be maintained in a central file at the school attended by the student. When records are maintained in different locations, a notation in the central file as to where such other records may be found is required." N.J.A.C. 6A:32-7.3(a)(2) states that mandated student records include a record of daily attendance. The principal is the school leader, responsible for administration and supervision of the school. N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.1(f)(1).

The absence of the school attendance documentation in the required centralized file speaks for itself. Tracy did not see to it that the school had an adequate central file, and he did nothing to ensure that teachers were moving the documentation into that file. There is also no evidence that he made any effort to ensure that > waivers were properly granted. Rather, he assumed that the lack of complaint meant that others outside the school understood what was being done inside the school and approved of it.

> This was an abrogation of the principal's duty as a school leader and primary supervisor, as was the failure to disseminate enough written information about the attendance policy to ensure that the Board, the parents, the students, and the staff all understood it. Therefore, based on the fact that 33 of 91 graduates in the 2005-2006 school year had more than the fifteen absences allowed by Trenton Board of Education policy, the fact that no centralized attendance record-keeping system existed for the Daylight/Twilight High School as a whole, the fact that the Smith Avenue location had no actual waiver documentation system, and the fact that Tracy made no effort to create or monitor a proper attendance system, I CONCLUDE that the Board has proved the charge. (Initial Decision at 22-24), (Commissioner's Decision at 8-9)

After reviewing the factors which must be considered when fashioning a penalty (In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421-22 (App. Div. 1967)), the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that respondent's termination from his position was too harsh a penalty under the circumstances and agreed with the ALJ that a six-month suspension from his position was the appropriate penalty, stressing that such suspension must be served prospectively.

On appeal, the Appellate Division, fully rejecting all of respondent's arguments to the contrary, affirmed the Commissioner's finding of respondent's guilt on the unbecoming conduct charge against him. However, it determined to remand this matter solely for reconsideration of the penalty imposed. In so doing, the Court stated: "Tracy next argues that the Commissioner did not articulate a reason for directing that his six-month suspension should be served prospectively, that is, in addition to his prior period of suspension. He urges that the Commissioner thus acted in an arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable manner. We agree." (Appellate Division Decision at 19) In making its determination, the court presented the following reasoning:

> Tracy asserts that he had already received a four-month, unpaid suspension prior to the ALJ's decision, which "he had already done at the time in which the charges were initially certified." From the record before us, we have not been able to verify the exact length or timing of the prior suspension, but Tracy was apparently first suspended in December of 2007 for an indeterminate amount of time. The record does not reflect whether that suspension was with or without pay, but the Board acknowledges that Tracy was suspended for four months without pay sometime prior to the ALJ's initial decision.
> Presuming that Tracy already served a four-month period of suspension prior to the Commissioner's imposition of the prospective six-month suspension, we cannot on the record before us say that a suspension of ten months would be shocking to our sense of fairness in light of the circumstances, although it seems harsh and we may well ourselves have concluded that a total of six months loss of salary was quite sufficient. Tracy has offered no comparison to discipline imposed on other principals in analogous situations to lead us to the conclusion that the suspension here was a sharp departure from prior practice.
>
> However, we do have difficulty with the Commissioner's imposition of a six-month suspension "prospectively" because it is not clear that she really intended to (sic) Tracy to suffer a ten-month suspension. Nothing in the Commissioner's written opinion expressly acknowledges any awareness that Tracy had already been suspended for at least four months during some unspecified period, although she noted that Tracy sought reinstatement to his principal position with back pay. The ALJ noted that Tracy was suspended in December 2007 but, in her final decision, did not indicate whether her recommended penalty of suspension was prospective or retroactive.
>
> In addition to these ambiguities, if the Commissioner intended that Tracy suffer a suspension in excess of six months, she provided no explanation for why his conduct justified a longer suspension than that imposed by the ALJ.... (Appellate Division Decision at 22, 23, 24)

[1]In reviewing the court's above-stated reasoning surrounding its remand in this matter, it is readily apparent that the court was unfamiliar with the statutory prescriptions attendant to the bringing and prosecution of tenure charges against individuals and the parties' submissions obviously did not serve to enlighten the panel in this regard. The suspension of a tenured employee without pay is governed by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 which specifies:

> Upon certification of any charge to the commissioner, the board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay, but if the determination of the charge by the Commissioner of Education is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges, excluding all delays which are granted at the request of such person, then the full salary (except for said 120 days) of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made.

Pursuant to this statute, the Board has the authority to suspend a tenured employee without pay when it certifies tenure charges against that employee, which the Board admittedly did here. Once the charges are certified, this statute allows the suspension to continue without pay for 120 calendar days after certification of the charges. The statute further mandates that resumption of the suspended employee's full salary must begin on the 121st day after the certification of charges and this payment of full salary must continue until the date of determination of the charges by the Commissioner.[2] Such is the case irrespective of the fact that the individual provides no services whatsoever to the Board during this time.[3]

Turning to respondent's argument on appeal – that the ALJ obviously intended, in recommending a six-month period of suspension for respondent, that the 120-day suspension imposed at certification of tenure charges be credited against her recommended penalty and therefore the Commissioner increased the recommended penalty without explanation, an argument which the Appellate Division inexplicably seems to have accepted – such a

[2] Upon the sustaining of tenure charges at the end of the case – unless specifically discussed or directed otherwise in the Commissioner's decision – payment for this suspension period is deemed forfeited.

[3] There is no claim here that respondent suffered any interruption of this statutorily mandated full pay status during the full course of this case.

contention finds absolutely no support in the record. The ALJ's decision offers no substantiation at all – either implicitly or explicitly – that she ever contemplated crediting respondent's statutorily-mandated suspension against her recommended penalty in this matter. To the contrary, the ALJ's recommended Order clearly states: "I further ORDER that respondent shall be suspended for six months[,]" (emphasis added) unquestionably phrased in prospective rather than retroactive language. Irrespective of the fact that the Commissioner finds no ambiguity whatsoever as to the ALJ's recommended penalty, there can be no doubt as to the Commissioner's ruling in this matter. Stating that the Commissioner did not view respondent's dereliction of his duties as a principal in connection with the charge established against him is a de minimis infraction; recognizing that such dereliction clearly had a detrimental effect on the Board in that respondent impermissibly usurped the Board's authority in the establishment of uniform standards in its schools and seriously compromised its ability to conform to its regulatory obligations with respect to the attendance component of graduation requirements at the Daylight/Twilight High School; and also, seeking to impress upon respondent the seriousness of the abdication of his responsibilities in this regard, the Commissioner imposed a six-month prospective suspension – which remains unaltered here.

Accordingly, the Acting Commissioner concludes that a penalty of a six-month suspension from respondent's position, to be served prospectively, is the appropriate penalty for the proven unbecoming conduct charge against him.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

Re: Board of Education of the Township of Burlington, Burlington County v. T.C. and R.C., on behalf of minor child, Y.C. Agency Dkt. No. 126-5/11.

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with the matter entitled Board of Education of the Township of Burlington, Burlington County v. T.C. and R.C., on behalf of minor child, Y.C., Agency Dkt. No. 126-5/11, and based upon the respondents' failure to submit an Answer to the petition, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of petitioner.

On May 19, 2011, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal claiming that Y.C. was not entitled to attend school in the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq., and requesting that it be awarded tuition in the amount of $7,527.80 for the 140 days that Y.C. attended school in the District during the 2010-2011 school year. The petitioner sent a copy of the Petition of Appeal to the respondents on May 18, 2011, via certified and regular mail.

On May 20, 2011, the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes sent the respondents an acknowledgment of filing and notice that an Answer to the petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5. Because the respondents failed to respond to the initial notice, on June 15, 2011 a second notice was sent to the respondents, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days – each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter may be decided on a summary decision basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). Although the copy sent via certified mail was returned indicating that the notice was unclaimed, the notice sent via regular delivery was not returned as undeliverable.

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of the respondents. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that Y.C. was not entitled to attend school in the District during the 2010-2011 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted by the respondents. The respondents are hereby ordered to pay the petitioner tuition for the 140 days that Y.C. attended school in the District during the 2010-2011 school year in the amount of $7,527.80.*

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the Petition of Appeal filed in connection with the matter entitled K.R., on behalf of minor children, J.W., M.R. and Y.R. v. Board of Education of the City of Orange, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 112-5/11, and based upon the Board's failure to submit an Answer to the petition, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of petitioner.

On May 11, 2011, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 et seq. claiming that J.W., M.R. and Y.R. were entitled to attend school in the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the Petition of Appeal was served upon the Board Secretary via facsimile on May 11, 2011, together with an acknowledgment of filing and notice that an Answer to the petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5.

Because the Board failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent to the Board Secretary on June 2, 2011, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days – each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter may be decided on a summary decision basis pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). The Board also failed to respond to the second notice. On June 21, 2011 a Final Notice was sent to the Board Secretary – via certified and regular mail, with a copy to counsel for the Board – again clearly indicating that, absent receipt of an Answer to the Petition of Appeal within 10 days, each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter may be decided on a summary decision basis.

New Jersey Is An Equal Opportunity Employer • Printed on Recycled and Recyclable Paper

To date, no Answer has been filed on behalf of the Board. Accordingly, petitioner's claim that J.W., M.R. and Y.R. are entitled to attend school in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted by the Board. The Board is hereby ordered to continue to admit J.W., M.R. and Y.R. into its public school system, free of charge, so long as there is no change in circumstances that would alter that entitlement.*

The record of this matter, the proposed settlement agreement and general release (Agreement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. According to the Agreement, the settlement payment was due within thirty (30) days from the March 17, 2011 Board meeting. This date has preceded the consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves the settlement.

In light of the foregoing, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, provided that the parties have already implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon a mutually satisfactory alternate date for the effectuation of the settlement payment. Assuming same, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

Re: Nicolett Wood / Elizabeth Board of Education

Dear Ms. Murray:

In furtherance of our discussions, you will present the following to the Board of Education at its meeting on March 17, 2011 to resolve the above matter.

1. Ms. Wood's salary would be adjusted retroactively for the 2007-2008 school year to $105,300.00 plus longevity in accordance with the then contract between the Board of Education and the EASC.

2. For 2008-2009 the same salary of $105,300.00 plus longevity, retroactively.

3. For 2009-2010 the same salary of $105,300.00 plus longevity, retroactively.

4. For 2010-2011 the same salary of $105,300.00 plus longevity, retroactively.

5. For 2011-2012 the same salary of $105,300.00 plus longevity.

All of the above retroactive salaries shall be made in accordance with the Division of Pensions Worksheet on retroactive salary increases and shall be paid to Ms. Wood within thirty (30) days of the March 17, 2011 meeting.

6. In addition Ms. Wood shall be paid $15,000.00 less the customary and usual deductions, in a separate check for the vacation time that she lost in going from a supervisor to a school nurse, to be paid within thirty (30) days of the March 17, 2011 meeting. The above is a one time payment and is not pensionable.

7. Ms. Wood shall waive her recall rights to any position of supervisor.

This Agreement made on MAY 23, 2011 by and between the Cranford Board of Education (the "District") located at 132 Thomas Street, Cranford, New Jersey 07016 and Linda Logue, parent of M.L., (the "Parent") located at 58 Lenhome Drive, Cranford, N.J. 07016.

WHEREAS, M.L., is a general education second grade student enrolled in the District; and

WHEREAS, in September 2009 M.L. was domiciled in Roselle and sought to attend the District as a tuition student, enrolled as a tuition student in the District; and

WHEREAS, in September 2009 the Parent agreed to pay annual tuition to the District in the amount of $10,732.00 on a monthly basis ($1,0732.20 per month) for the 2009-2010 school year; and

WHEREAS, the Parent paid the District $1,073.20 per month for the months of October 2009 through January 2010; and

WHEREAS, on or about February 18, 2011, the Parent completed an Affidavit of Residency attesting residency at 58 Lenhome Drive, Cranford, New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, on or about the same date Henry Schwartz completed an Affidavit of Landlord attesting that the Parent and M.L. resided at 58 Lenhome Drive, Cranford, New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, based on the Affidavit the District did not charge the Parent tuition monies from March through June 2010; and

WHEREAS, in or about September 2010, the District received a report indicating that the Parent and M.L. did not reside at 58 Lenhome Drive, Cranford, New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, the District questioned the Parent about the residency report and the Parent acknowledged that they did not reside in Cranford because they were renovating their property; and

WHEREAS, the District provided the Parent with written correspondence advising that M.L. was not entitled to a free public education in the District because he did not reside in Cranford, New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, a dispute arose between the District and the Parent as to whether M.L. was entitled to a free public education; and

WHEREAS, prior to the end of October 2010, the Parent and M.L. moved into the property located at 58 Lenhome Drive, Cranford, New Jersey thereby satisfying the criteria for domicile; and

WHEREAS, on or about December 22, 2010 the Cranford Board of Education provided the Parent with notice that M.L. was not domiciled within the District during the period in question, and therefore, not entitled to a free public education; and

WHEREAS, on or about January 4, 2011, the Parent filed a pro se appeal of the Cranford Board of Education's residency decision; and

WHEREAS, on or about January 21, 2011, the District filed an Answer to the Parent's appeal; and

WHEREAS, the parties have a desire to settle the above matter in an amicable way;

NOW THEREFORE, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. The Parent shall pay the District two thousand dollars ($2,000.00) in full and final settlement of the tuition monies due and owing the District.
2. The Parent shall pay the District two hundred dollars ($200.00) per month on the first day of each month.
3. If the Parent defaults in payment of the $2,000, the District reserves the right to seek enforcement of the payment provisions outlined in this Settlement Agreement in an appropriate Court of law. If the Parent defaults in payment of the $2,000, the District also reserves the right to reinstitute this matter in order to recover the full amount of past due tuition monies.
4. The parties have reached this compromise to avoid the expense and inconvenience of a hearing before the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes. Neither party is admitting any wrongdoing.
5. The parties agree that the terms of this Agreement shall be confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law.
6. In consideration of the settlement of this matter, the Parent shall release the District from any and all claims, rights and liability, including but not limited to any and all claims for additional attorneys fees, compensatory education, money damages, civil liability, or any other equitable or legal relief through the date of the execution of this Settlement Agreement.

7. This Agreement contains the entire Agreement and understanding between the parties and constitutes a full and final Agreement on any and all issues.
8. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.
9. If, during the term of this Agreement, a specific clause of the Agreement is determined to be illegal or in violation of any Federal or State law, the remainder of the Agreement shall not be affected by such a ruling and shall remain in full force and effect.
10. The parties have entered into this Agreement freely and voluntarily with a full understanding of their rights and the contents of this Agreement. The parties acknowledge that they had the opportunity to consult with legal counsel or a representative of their choice and that they reviewed the Agreement in detail with their counsel or representative and fully understand its requirements and limitations.
11. This Agreement may not be altered, amended or modified except by writing, signed and duly authorized by all parties.
12. This Agreement is subject to ratification by the Cranford Board of Education at its next regularly scheduled meeting after receipt of a signed Agreement from the Parent.

WESLEY GILMER,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:
RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
AND	:	DECISION
IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF WESLEY GILMER STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The Board certified 19 charges of inefficiency against respondent – a tenured teacher employed by the district since 1997 – for poor teaching performance, including unsatisfactory pedagogical technique, inadequate classroom management, and failure to meet professional obligations such as, inter alia, timely submission of lesson plans, management books, and report cards. Respondent contended that the tenure charges were baseless; that he is an effective, dedicated, and well-regarded teacher; and that the unfair charges resulted from a contentious relationship with the principal whom he worked under in his most recent teaching assignments. The Board sought dismissal of respondent from his tenured employment.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Board carried its burden of proving the tenure charges of inefficiency against respondent; the district repeatedly attempted to encourage professional improvement over the course of many years, did not act precipitously or prematurely in the filing of tenure charges against respondent, and provided him the support contemplated by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11; respondent had the commitment and love of children necessary to be an effective educator, but was unwilling to use those positive qualities in a professional manner within the curricular and pedagogical framework of the district; respondent countered the charges against him with denials of personal responsibility; respondent's attitude created no confidence that he would be responsive to continued district efforts to assist him in the future; and respondent has not demonstrated that the district violated his rights when it withheld his salary increment prior to the filing of tenure charges. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that respondent should be dismissed from his tenured employment and, and further affirmed the withholding of respondent's salary increment.

Upon comprehensive and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter and dismissed respondent from his tenured position. A copy of the decision was transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action as that body deems appropriate.

WESLEY GILMER,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:
RESPONDENT.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
AND	:	DECISION
IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF WESLEY GILMER STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent and the School District's (District) reply thereto.

The respondent takes exception to the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) determination that the District proved the charges of inefficiency against him, and that the District's decision to deny his increment was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The respondent maintains that the District did not provide positive assistance to help him overcome his alleged inefficiencies during the 90-day and extended improvement period[1] (Improvement Period) as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 and Rowley v. Board of Education of the Manalapan-Englishtown Regional School District, 205 N.J. Super. 65 (App. Div. 1985). The respondent argues that the District and Principal Hartsfield simply conducted evaluations during the Improvement Period without providing the required cohesive assistance and support. Additionally, the respondent contends that the findings contained in the Collaborative Assessment for Planning and Achievement Report for the Quitman School raise serious questions about Principal Hartsfield's credibility on issues related to whether cohesive support and assistance were provided to the respondent.

[1] The initial 90-day improvement period began on January 30, 2009 and was later extended by the District until June 30, 2009. The respondent went out on medical leave effective May 18, 2009, therefore the Improvement Period lasted for approximately 138 days.

In his exceptions, the respondent also argues that the District failed to adhere to its own policy for evaluating respondent's performance, which states that ten observations – including four formal and six informal – shall be conducted during the 90-day improvement period. Respondent points out that, in his case, nine informal and three formal observations were conducted by the District. Additionally, the respondent argues that after the extension of the original 90-day improvement period, the District improperly failed to provide him with an updated improvement plan that took into account his improvement and noted any additional deficiencies. The respondent also contends that the District did not give him adequate time to make improvements since it authorized his medical leave during the Improvement Period. Finally, the respondent maintains that – contrary to the ALJ's assessment – dismissal is not required because the respondent has had positive evaluations during his 13 years of service with the District, and that he should be given another opportunity to prove himself without the tension caused by the bad relationship that he had with Principal Hartsfield.

In reply, the District urges the adoption of the Initial Decision asserting that the respondent's exceptions simply reiterate the unsuccessful arguments made by the respondent throughout the proceedings. The District generally maintains that over the course of three consecutive schools years, the respondent exhibited severely deficient teaching performance which was observed by several different performance evaluators. Additionally, the District emphasizes that the record established that the respondent was afforded substantial positive assistance. In reply, the District also references certain findings made by the ALJ in the Initial Decision that directly contradict the respondent's exceptions.

Upon a comprehensive review of the entire record in this matter, which included the transcripts of the hearing dates conducted at the OAL between April 30, 2010 and February 4, 2011[2], the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons discussed on pages 31-37 of the Initial Decision – that the District has proven the inefficiency charges brought against the respondent. The Commissioner is also in accord with the ALJ's determination that the District's decision to withhold the petitioner's increment for the 2008-2009 school year was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Despite the arguments and objections presented by the respondent in his exceptions, the record overwhelmingly demonstrates that the District provided the respondent with the assistance required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, and that he was given ample opportunity to overcome his deficiencies. During the Improvement Period, the District took various steps to help the respondent cure his inefficiencies by: providing him with assistance from content coaches and resource teacher coordinators; giving him the opportunity to observe other classrooms; coordinating the observations of respondent's teaching method by a variety of outside administrators that included an opportunity for him to conference before and after the observation; and providing him with the resources available to the teachers during weekly grade level meetings. Moreover, with respect to the assistance provided by the District, the ALJ found the respondent's testimony to be incredible, noting that, "the respondent's protestations that he was unassisted during his improvement period are not credible." On the other hand, the ALJ found that the school's administration repeatedly rated the respondent's teaching performance as unsatisfactory, and she found no cause to question the credibility or sincerity of the performance evaluators. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. Insofar as her opinion on this issue is a credibility determination, the Commissioner may not disturb it unless a review of the record discloses that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10c; D.L. and Z.Y. on behalf of minor children T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004).

Turning to the appropriate penalty to be imposed in this matter, the Commissioner is mindful that the "[f]actors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, the individual's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Deborah Suitt-Green, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, decided by the Commissioner October 14, 1997, slip. op. at 32, citing In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967).

It is apparent from the record that the respondent has been unwilling or unable to improve his performance in the classroom despite the extensive efforts of the District. The respondent's defenses to the charges against him range from complete denial to allegations that the charges were drummed up because of Principal Hartsfield's alleged vendetta against him, a stance which is completely inconsistent with the testimonial and documentary evidence.

Remarkably, during the course of the protracted proceedings the common theme advanced by the respondent consisted of a litany of excuses as to why the District was not doing enough to make him a better teacher, despite the fact that the evidence showed that the District provided the respondent with the requisite support and assistance during the Improvement Period, and even well before it was implemented. It is troubling that the respondent has been completely incapable of recognizing that at some point a struggling teacher has to take responsibility for his own actions and shortcomings, and should be able to at least demonstrate that he is capable of grasping fundamental teaching principles. As a result, the Commissioner does not find that the record before him provides any indication that the respondent will improve his unsatisfactory teaching performance. Finally, the Commissioner considered respondent's 13 years of employment with the District, and nonetheless determines that the extensive record illustrates that he is unfit to remain in his position.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent is hereby dismissed from his tenured position with the State-Operated School District of Newark. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

Wesley Gilmer is employed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (the District) as a teacher under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. On or about January 26, 2009, inefficiency tenure charges were filed against Gilmer by Jacquelynn Hartsfield, principal of Quitman Street Community School (Quitman). On July 23, 2009, Gilmer was notified that the alleged inefficiencies had not been corrected during the ninety-day statutory period prescribed by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. On September 11, 2009, Gilmer filed a response to the charges. He asserted that the charges of inefficiency were baseless, and that he is an effective, dedicated, and well-regarded teacher.

On October 23, 2009, the Regional Superintendent of Schools and the District Superintendent considered the charges and supporting evidence and determined that probable cause existed to credit the evidence in support of the charges, and that the charges, if so credited, were sufficient to warrant Gilmer's dismissal. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-39 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, Gilmer was suspended without pay effective October 26, 2009.

The tenure charges and supporting documents were filed with the Commissioner of Education on November 6, 2009, and an answer filed by Gilmer on November 20, 2009. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on November 30, 2009. Via order dated January 8, 2010, the tenure matter was consolidated with a pending challenge to an increment withholding, which arose from the same facts.[1]

On April 12, 2010, the District filed a motion in limine, seeking to exclude the testimony of Gilmer's proposed expert witness. The motion further sought to exclude a December 2007 New Jersey Department of Education Collaborative Assessment for Planning and Achievement (CAPA) report completed after a visit to Quitman by the CAPA team. Gilmer filed a brief in opposition to the motion on April 30, 2010, and the District replied to the opposition on May 21, 2010. Via order dated June 21, 2010, I granted the District's motion as to the testimony of the expert witness, but denied the motion as to the CAPA report.

[1] Gilmer's increment was withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 on or about July 31, 2008. A petition was filed challenging the action of the School District on October 31, 2008. The School District filed its answer and the matter was transmitted to the OAL as a contested case on December 5, 2008.

The hearing commenced on March 9, 2010, and continued for twenty-two additional days.[2] The record closed on March 28, 2011, with the filing of post-hearing submissions.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS OF FACT

Background Facts

The charges against Gilmer arise from his teaching performance as a fifth-grade and first-grade teacher at Quitman. Newark is struggling school district, and Quitman is a struggling school. The CAPA team visited Quitman from December 10-13, 2007. Quitman had been designated as a school "in need of improvement," and under No Child Left Behind (NCLB), 20 U.S.C. § 6301 et seq., the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) was required to provide intensive and sustained support to Quitman. The CAPA review process supports schools like Quitman by assigning "teams of skillful and experienced individuals to provide . . . practical, applicable, and helpful assistance, increasing the opportunity for all students to meet the state's Core Curriculum Content Standards." (R-24.)

Christine Rennie led the CAPA team and testified that the purpose of CAPA review is to provide an outsider's view of the school and its climate and culture. She stressed that her team's report is not an "evaluative instrument," but rather was intended to offer constructive criticism and suggestions to all levels of the school's professional community, and to teachers and administrators alike. The report highlighted serious deficiencies both in instruction and in supervision. But as evidence in this proceeding, the report is most helpful where it shares actual classroom observations by the CAPA team. These reflect that in 2007 the students at Quitman received uneven instruction, and that sound pedagogical practices were not uniformly in place.

[2] The hearing dates are listed in the appendix.

Rennie testified that as part of the review process close to twenty teachers were interviewed. She found that faculty members were not entirely satisfied with the assistance and leadership received from administration. But I can afford this aspect of the CAPA report little weight. These findings are based on hearsay interviews by unnamed staff members who could not be cross-examined at hearing. At hearing, several Newark administrators described a variety of programs available to assist struggling teachers. Accordingly, to fully appreciate the dissatisfaction of these individual interviewees, it would be necessary to understand their own personal pedagogical strengths and limitations; know more about how their performance was evaluated and remediated by administration; and perhaps most importantly, learn whether these staff members embraced any assistance offered.[3]

The CAPA report does confirm, however, and I FIND that Quitman was a troubled educational environment that, at least in 2007, appeared to be shortchanging many of its students in a manner inconsistent with State and federal law. As to why Quitman found itself in this condition, suffice it to say that there appeared to be blame to go all around.

Gilmer's testimony provided insight into his background and motivation to enter the field of teaching. It is uncontroverted and I FIND that Gilmer is a native of Newark, a 1976 graduate of the Newark Public Schools, and a veteran of the United States Marine Corps. Gilmer is one of nine siblings, only two of whom attended college. Gilmer grew up impoverished, and he is devoted to bettering his community. Gilmer organized a tenant's association, and worked to patrol his neighborhood in an effort to free it from violence and drugs. He opened a local recreation center that would provide a safe haven for local children. Gilmer testified with passion and credibility that he wished to make Newark a better and safer place.

Gilmer began his career as an educator in 1994 at Sacred Heart School in Newark, teaching fifth grade. He taught "struggling students," and testified proudly

[3] The report questions the availability and effectiveness of the instructional support available, but again, these findings are based on comments by interviewees. For example, relative to mathematics instruction the report states, "teachers . . . continue to request 'hands on' training, modeling, and non-threatening observation and supervision in this area." (P-24 at p. 9.)

regarding the inroads he made to better them as people and students. Gilmer remained at Sacred Heart until November 1997, when he was hired by the Newark Public Schools to replace a fifth-grade teacher at Miller Street School. Two months later Gilmer was reassigned to Morton Street School, where he taught seventh-grade language arts. His Morton Street seventh graders came from poor homes, and lacked the discipline and focus needed to grow academically. Gilmer stated, and it was uncontroverted, that he worked long hours, purchased materials for his students with his own funds, and tutored them during after-school hours and on weekends free of charge. Gilmer shared letters and testimony from former students and parents lauding his efforts on their behalf.[4]

A June 1998 Annual Evaluation Report signed by Carolyn Allen rated Gilmer as satisfactory overall. But the report was not without recommendations for improvement, and noted that "[t]here is a need to restructure the instructional program by providing the students with innovative and interactive learning experiences." Allen indicated as well that attention needed to be paid to "classroom management and developing methods of reaching students who were not achieving mastery." (R-1.)

During the 1999-2000 school year, Gilmer was assigned to sixth grade at Morton, and was observed and evaluated by Principal Carl Gregory. An October 26, 1999, evaluation report likewise rated Gilmer as satisfactory but included recommendations for pedagogical growth. Particularly noteworthy was the recommendation that Gilmer use test results to drive instruction, and align instruction with Core Curriculum Content Standards. A January 31, 2000, observation was similarly complimentary, and indeed, included several "outstanding" ratings. By November 2000, Gregory had rated Gilmer as "outstanding" overall, complimenting the print-rich environment in his classroom. A February 5, 2001, evaluation also rated Gilmer's work as "outstanding." Gilmer testified that during this year he won a "Best Practices Award," which he described as an honor that recognized his efforts to ensure the educational success of his students.

An April 23, 2001, evaluation rated Gilmer as "outstanding" overall. The evaluation noted that Gilmer had been selected to be the America's Choice [4] These accolades came from former students and parents at each of the schools at which Gilmer taught, including Quitman.

Demonstration classroom for the 2001-2002 school year. Gilmer testified with much pride that America's Choice was a reading and writing program that had been selected for use at Morton. Teachers would be invited to watch Gilmer demonstrate a lesson, so that they could take his practices back to their own classrooms. A May 17, 2001, observation again rated Gilmer's work as "outstanding," although the "areas in need of improvement" section of the evaluation form noted a need for better progress by students per the Progressive Data Analysis (PDA) approach utilized by the District. The summative evaluation for the 2000-2001 school year was glowing overall, but did note areas where student performance was troublingly poor, pointing to a decrease in students reaching benchmarks in certain language-arts skills. The evaluation stated, "It is imperative to implement [sic] for you the above areas in need of improvement." (R-8.) It was during this school year that Gilmer earned tenure.

In June 2002, Gilmer was evaluated by the vice principal at Morton Street School, Hakimah Abdul-Ghani. The evaluation was "satisfactory" overall, and noted excellent classroom management. But a December 2002 evaluation, although also "satisfactory," began to reflect shortcomings in Gilmer's performance, with several areas rated as needing improvement. Abdul-Ghani found that Gilmer's instructional technique did not incorporate the Whole School Reform (WSR) model used by the District. She furthermore found that Gilmer needed to improve his displays of student work and needed to employ better procedures for care and use of materials and equipment. The narrative portion of the evaluation presages some of the concerns that would plague Gilmer's performance evaluations once he transferred to Quitman. Abdul-Ghani wrote that, "[a]s the model America's Choice classroom for the school, there should be more charts displayed of the lessons that have been presented." (R-11.) Abdul-Ghani noted that "[s]ome components of America's Choice are not evident, i.e. the writer's workshop stations . . . the 25 Book Campaign roster and the Principal's Book of the Month . . . ." (R-11.)

The evaluation was critical of the lack of student work displayed in the classroom and hallway. Concerns were expressed that students were not prepared with proper materials, such as a reading-response journal, and that their writing folders were not up to date. Abdul-Ghani also criticized Gilmer for omitting certain mandated instructional approaches, stating, "CM/CD artifacts are displayed, but no implementation was evident. CM/CD does work for middle school students, even the go-around cup. Ms. Fischman has been instructed to assist you with implementation. CM/CD is not an option!"[5] (R-11.)

An evaluation at the conclusion of the 2002-2003 school year, again signed by Abdul-Ghani, once more rated Gilmer as "satisfactory" overall, but now contained increasingly serious performance concerns. These concerns would surface again once Gilmer transferred to Quitman; and included unsatisfactory attendance and failure to timely submit writing samples, lesson plans, and substitute plans. Gilmer's selection as the America's Choice model classroom notwithstanding, Abdul-Ghani noted that "implementation of America's Choice Program was sporadically done." (R-13.) Her concerns about the quality of instruction appeared to be consistent with evidence of poor student performance, and she stated in the evaluation that "Fall writing samples went from 16 being proficient to only 7 in the Spring." (R-13.)

Gilmer returned to the sixth grade at Morton for the 2003-2004 school year. At the conclusion of that year he was once again evaluated by Gregory. While "communicating with parents" and "reflecting on teaching" were noted to be areas of strength, Gregory wrote that Gilmer did not adhere to school submission timelines for lesson plans and writing tasks. The evaluation stated that Gilmer "[n]eeds to assume more responsibility for and participate in school-wide projects and be more diligent in completing them." (Emphasis in original.) His performance received a rating of only "basic" in such areas as "demonstrating professionalism," "contributing to the school and district," and "maintaining accurate records."[6] (R-14.)

At the conclusion of the 2003-2004 school year, Gilmer was transferred to Quitman. According to Gilmer, the entire Morton fifth-grade class was transferred as well, and he had been asked to be one of the staff members who accompanied the students to their new school. Despite the fact that his evaluations at Morton were no longer uniformly positive, Gilmer urged that his relationship with Gregory and the other evaluators there was excellent, and he took advantage of the opportunity to move to Quitman because it would present a new challenge. Gilmer reiterated throughout his testimony that any difficulties in his relationship with School District administration were nonexistent until he arrived at Quitman.

[5] Gilmer could not entirely explain what CM/CD referred to, stating that to the best of his recollection it was a classroom-management/disciplinary approach no longer utilized by the District.

[6] At this point the District evaluation instrument contained four rankings, "unsatisfactory, basic, proficient and distinguished."

Yet, Gilmer's version of the events surrounding his transfer did not ring true, and it felt odd that he would be chosen to follow the fifth grade to Quitman when this was a grade he had never taught at Morton. Indeed, on cross-examination it was revealed, and I FIND that Gilmer asked to be transferred from Morton. His request had not been for a transfer to an elementary school such as Quitman, but rather to a middle school setting, per a May 5, 2005, letter to Hartsfield. (P-177.) It thus appears that as his evaluations began to contain criticisms, Gilmer sought to change schools, a pattern he would soon repeat at Quitman.

Gilmer's Fifth-Grade Performance at Quitman

In September 2004, Gilmer began to teach fifth grade at Quitman. At the time of his transfer he was a tenured teacher with ten years of experience in the classroom—including close to seven years of experience in the Newark Public Schools. He was not a novice teacher.

Hartsfield was the principal of Quitman throughout Gilmer's tenure there. She had protocols in place that she insisted upon with her staff. These were fully explained to the faculty at the start of each school year, and memorialized in voluminous opening day packets. The packets included sample forms and directions designed to assist teachers in understanding and complying with building protocols. Topics such as communicating with parents, planning instruction, classroom management, instructional objectives, grades, best practices for a literacy classroom, and differentiated instruction were addressed. Literacy and mathematics curriculum guides were provided to teachers. Student scores on standardized tests were shared with the faculty; this data was intended to drive instruction.

Hartsfield required that teachers maintain a classroom-management book. The management book contained reminders about other paperwork related responsibilities, and provided guidance regarding benchmarks for observational surveys. It was a vehicle for teachers to document student attendance, contacts with parents, homework assignments and professional development efforts. Hartsfield testified that the management book was distributed to teachers and the requirement that it be completed and submitted monthly to administration was explained each school year. Additionally, the management book itself states under "Monthly Responsibilities" that "Management Books are due on the first Tuesday of each month." Professional expectations for teachers at Quitman were reinforced through periodic staff announcements. For example, a September 15, 2008, announcement reminded teachers that "[l]esson plans should have been completed for Wednesday, September 10th" and that "[a]ll bulletin boards should reflect current student work." Hartsfield's testimony left the impression that she encouraged her faculty to succeed in meeting extensive, but nonetheless necessary, paperwork obligations.

The testimony further reflected that teachers and administration engage in a regular and rigorous evaluation process. Tenured teachers are observed annually. A pre-observation conference is conducted between teacher and administrator to review the substance of the lesson to be observed. A post-observation conference gives the teacher an opportunity to discuss the lesson, and review administration's suggestions for improvement at length. Teachers are evaluated across four "domains," which assess their planning, pedagogy, classroom environment, and compliance with professional obligations. At year end, a written summative evaluation reviews the teacher's performance for the year, and an evaluative conference is conducted. A professional improvement plan (PIP) is developed collaboratively to set goals for professional growth during the next academic year. Weekly grade-level meetings provide an opportunity for faculty to discuss instruction and share questions and concerns.

Support is available for struggling teachers. Literacy and Mathematics Coaches, and Resource Teacher Coordinators (RTC), are former teachers who provide input and assistance to instructional staff. A building principal, such as Hartsfield, may refer a struggling teacher to these coaches and coordinators for guidance and help. The District offers a Teacher Assistance Program (TAP) to help teachers with performance shortcomings. The Newark Teachers' Union Collective Bargaining Agreement provides that a teacher who receives an unsatisfactory evaluation may request a demonstration lesson. (R-76.)

Gilmer felt that he had a good start at Quitman. His evaluations during his first year rated his work as "satisfactory," but nonetheless contained serious criticisms. An evaluation dated January 3, 2005, noted a need for an improved approach in questioning students, suggesting to Gilmer that he did not utilize techniques that encouraged critical thinking. Hartsfield likewise suggested that Gilmer provide more effective feedback to students. A June 27, 2005, evaluation addressed the "professional responsibilities" aspect of the evaluative process, denoted on the evaluation instrument as "domain four." Gilmer's attendance was determined to be unsatisfactory, and Hartsfield advised that he had failed to timely submit his management book, class newsletter and samples of student work. Hartsfield directed that Gilmer "maintain a system for keeping and recording student records and submit these documents in a timely fashion." (P-5.)

Gilmer's summative evaluation for his first year at Quitman rated him as "proficient." But the evaluation was uneven, and several aspects of Gilmer's instructional technique were rated "basic." He was rated as "unsatisfactory" relative to his professional responsibilities and Hartsfield wrote that "[h]is system for maintaining accurate records is unsatisfactory." Hartsfield further stated that "Mr. Gilmer's participation in professional development activities was limited. His attendance is not consistent with district policy standards." (P-6.) Gilmer and Hartsfield signed off on a PIP which strived for excellence in recordkeeping, in student proficiency in meeting core curriculum requirements, and in utilizing questioning techniques with students. Gilmer urged that he was happy at Quitman during the 2004-2005 school year, and that he was satisfied with his evaluations. The record certainly did not reflect an openly contentious relationship between Gilmer and Hartsfield, although it is plain that from the start she saw shortcomings in Gilmer's pedagogical technique and in his ability to comply with his professional obligations. In his May 5, 2005, letter to Hartsfield, Gilmer highly complimented her management style and the school in general, but nonetheless sought a transfer to a middle school.

That transfer was denied, and according to Gilmer, the relationship between the parties deteriorated. Gilmer focused intensely on a parking incident in the fall of 2005, citing this as the pivotal event that changed his relationship with Hartsfield, and led her, in his words, to begin to "paper him." According to Gilmer, and the school custodian, Ashton Berkeley, who testified on his behalf, there was no designated parking spot for the Quitman principal. Berkeley took it upon himself to create one by placing a cone in the street. It was common knowledge in the Quitman community that this area on the public street belonged to Hartsfield, who according to Berkeley, was experiencing difficulty parking in the morning.

Although only several months earlier Gilmer had referred to Hartsfield in his May 5, 2005, letter as a "hands-on, knowledgeable and caring administrator," he testified that he found her actions in reserving a parking space quite inappropriate. Gilmer testified that teachers would drive around the block seeking a place to park, while the principal he described as "hands-on" was chronically absent from the building, and the parking spot, which was directly in front of the school, remained vacant. Accordingly, Gilmer arrived early one morning, well in advance of the rest of the faculty, at 6:50 a.m. He parked in Hartsfield's spot. Gilmer testified that at about 8:00 a.m., prior to the arrival of the students, Hartsfield called him to the office and asked why he had parked there. Gilmer urged that he very politely advised Hartsfield that it was public street. He testified that she became enraged, and insisted that he move his car. He refused to do so, she became even angrier, and advised in a threatening tone, "I am going to get you."

Gilmer offered the testimony of Rose Hines, a former security guard at Quitman, to buttress his contention that Hartsfield was extremely territorial about the parking spot, and that she responded vindictively when staff members did not respect her exclusive right to park there. According to Hines, she too parked there, and was told by Hartsfield she was defiant in doing so. Hines claimed that she was transferred as a result, asserting that there could be no other reason for her transfer, as she had worked at Quitman for ten years, and there had never been a complaint about her. She specifically and adamantly denied that any complaints had been lodged regarding her lack of courtesy to school visitors.

Hines's testimony, and Gilmer's, were at odds with Hartsfield's version of the events. Hartsfield was surprised that Gilmer had parked in her designated area, and inquired why he chose to do so, in passing, in the hall. She was unequivocal that while she was a bit incredulous, she was not truly angry, and certainly not angry enough to embark upon a vendetta that would result, years later, in the filing of tenure charges. Hartsfield testified that Gilmer advised that he had parked there because he had heard that doing so was a good way to get transferred. Hartsfield stated that she scolded Gilmer for making this comment, and then forgot the incident.

A credibility determination requires an overall assessment of the witness's story in light of its rationality, internal consistency and the manner in which it "hangs together" with the other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F.2d 718, 749 (9th Cir. 1963). In making a credibility determination, it is appropriate to consider contradictory testimony, or testimony impeaching the witness's truth and veracity. After carefully considering the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to listen to the testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I did not deem either Gilmer's or Hines's testimony to be credible.

Gilmer's version of the events does not "hang together." He urged that he parked in Hartsfield's spot because he was trying to prove a point on behalf of the faculty, but no other witness from the Quitman community attested to a problem with parking.[7] He had no personal need to park there, as he arrived very early, when parking spots were plentiful. Gilmer stated that Hartsfield demanded he move his car, but she testified, credibly, that she was able to pull in right behind him. Seeking to anger Hartsfield in the hope of provoking a transfer thus becomes the most logical explanation for Gilmer's action, since he had unsuccessfully sought a transfer only months earlier, and appeared to be under the impression that similar conduct by Hines had resulted in her transfer from Quitman. Hartsfield offered the most believable version of the events. She testified with credibility. Her tone and manner was understated and professional. Hartsfield believably denied threatening Gilmer and believably denied focusing years of administrative effort on a scheme to undermine him solely because he usurped her parking spot.

Moreover, Hartsfield testified that Hines was transferred because she was repeatedly the subject of complaints by visitors to the school, who found her rude and argumentative, and not because she parked in the reserved spot. Another witness for Gilmer, Lynette Hillman-Loyd, confirmed that Hines did quarrel with school visitors, and that at least on one occasion that visitor was Hillman-Loyd's husband. According to Hillman-Loyd, Hines verbally assaulted her husband because she felt he had parked improperly, and quite nastily and aggressively demanded that Hillman-Loyd's husband immediately move his car. Hartsfield was forced to intervene. Undoubtedly, this incident informed Hartsfield's impression that Hines was rude to school visitors. Thus, I FIND that no credible evidence was presented that Hartsfield transferred employees or harassed them because they parked in her designated spot in front of the school.

Gilmer unpersuasively asserted that only after the parking spot incident did Hartsfield begin to fill his personnel file with criticisms, and that these criticisms had no basis in fact. Indeed, the record reflects that during the 2005-2006 school year, Hartsfield did more extensively document Gilmer's failure to comply with the paperwork and other demands of his position as a fifth-grade teacher. While Gilmer correctly observed that his file now contained "more paper," substantively the concerns expressed by Hartsfield were not new, however. I FIND that the administrative evaluations and reprimands that came during the 2005-2006 school year, and thereafter, were not part of a scheme to retaliate for Gilmer's refusal to move his car, but rather, were efforts by administration to document performance shortcomings that dated back to Gilmer's assignment at Morton.

Hartsfield utilized a notification form entitled "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement," to alert teachers when required paperwork was not timely submitted. During the 2005-2006 school year, Gilmer received about thirteen such forms, which advised him that the management book, writing samples, scholarship books, lesson plans, and newsletters were not timely submitted to administration. He was advised that bulletin boards were not up to date with student work. Each notice afforded Gilmer an opportunity to redirect his efforts so that he became compliant with the demands of his position, and had remedied any deficiencies prior to receiving his final evaluation for the year. Each notice afforded Gilmer an opportunity to seek to confer with Hartsfield in the event he did not understand the basis for her concern. The record does not reflect that he used these notifications to improve his teaching performance, or even simply to attempt to please Hartsfield by complying with her rules.

Gilmer's testimony regarding the management books is indicative of his reaction to the "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" notifications from Hartsfield. He urged that her criticism was unfair, because he never received a management book, and thus was unable to submit one monthly. Since Hartsfield testified that every teacher received a book and was advised about its importance during orientation activities, it strains credibility that Gilmer did not receive one as well. Furthermore, he first received notice that he had not submitted the book in November 2005. If Gilmer did not receive a management book as he contended, he apparently never followed up and requested one. Indeed, Gilmer continued to receive monthly notices that the management book had not been submitted until May 2006.

Gilmer's summative evaluation in June 2006 rated his performance as "unsatisfactory" overall. (P-25.) The evaluation expressed concerns about the quality of instruction, and rated Gilmer as "basic" in several areas, including a marginal understanding of the use of PDAs, and a failure to use differentiated instruction in planning for instruction. He received a "basic" in the area of "designing coherent instruction." A domain four evaluation dated June 19, 2006, rated Gilmer as "unsatisfactory" in meeting his professional obligations, and this document summarized the concerns which Gilmer had been continuously alerted about during the academic year. It was reiterated that Gilmer had failed to provide lesson plans, newsletters, management books, and compete PDAs.

Gilmer's summative evaluation for the 2005-2006 school year noted that he failed to create "an environment of respect and rapport," rating him as "unsatisfactory." Hartsfield attested to several parental complaints regarding Gilmer's interactions with their children. One such complaint was memorialized in an incident report dated May 30, 2006. The parent of a female student, M.S., had complained to Gilmer that her daughter felt that he looked at her inappropriately, and since lodging that complaint the child reported that she felt "singled out." M.S. reiterated to Hartsfield that she felt Gilmer "looked at her like he is a pervert." The matter was referred to DYFS, which determined not to investigate. M.S. was transferred to another classroom, and apart from noting a concern in his summative evaluation, no further action was taken during the 2005-2006 school year relative to this issue.

Gilmer's Transfer to First Grade

Effective September 2006, Gilmer was transferred to the first grade at Quitman. The aforementioned complaints by parents, in part, drove Hartsfield's decision to make this transfer. But this was not the exclusive reason for her decision. According to Hartsfield, when a teacher is floundering a change can be reinvigorating. Hartsfield urged that, in her experience, simply finding the right age match could be all that was needed for a teacher to experience success. She chose first grade for Gilmer precisely because he seemed to have difficulties interacting successfully with fifth graders. The record reflected that Gilmer was not the only Quitman teacher who was reassigned across grade levels.

Gilmer contended that he was given little or no support when forced to make the transition to first grade, and he presented the testimony of several colleagues who were likewise transferred by Hartsfield, and who likewise felt unsupported in their new class-level assignments. The testimony of these colleagues was of limited credibility, however, as on cross-examination it was revealed that each had contentious relationships with Hartsfield. Several were themselves the subject of tenure charges, including Lynette Hillman-Loyd, Annette Alston and Teresa Potts. While the CAPA report and the testimony of these witnesses surely gave the impression that Hartsfield was not a uniformly well-liked principal, neither credibly supported Gilmer's contention that he was unsupported in his transfer to first grade.

Hartsfield described the support offered Gilmer. She met with him the previous June to inform him about the grade-level transfer. She alerted Gilmer to the availability of summer workshops in "every day math" and literacy. The literacy coach was instructed to support Gilmer by providing model lessons, and by assisting in understanding the literacy curriculum content. At weekly grade-level meetings the instructional process was addressed with all first-grade teachers. Materials were provided to Gilmer that outlined core curriculum requirements at the first-grade level.

Hartsfield's testimony was buttressed by the testimony of Literacy Coach Jacqueline DeRosa Tomczyk who indicated that Hartsfield specifically asked her to help Gilmer because he was new to first grade. Tomczyk provided assistance with guided-reading techniques, interactive writing, the morning message and classroom environment and organization. Tomczyk noted that she even made herself available to reply to inquiries from Gilmer via email on nights and weekends. She stated that while at first Gilmer appeared amenable to her assistance, the support faded eventually, because, in her view, he appeared "disinterested." Similarly, the RTC, Cheryl Simeonidis, confirmed that she assisted Gilmer by visiting his classroom and taking him to another school to view a model lesson.[8] After their observation of the model lesson, Simeonidis asked Gilmer to select two observed practices to implement the next day in his own classroom, and to email his selections to her that evening. Simeonidis had intended to support Gilmer in the implementation of these choices, but he never followed through as she had requested.

Importantly, by the time Gilmer had been transferred he had been teaching for close to twelve years. Although the move to first grade required learning a new curriculum, and applying some different pedagogical approaches, Gilmer did not come to the task bereft of any classroom experience to draw upon. As Hartsfield convincingly asserted, Gilmer was qualified to teach all elementary grades, and fundamentally, teaching is teaching.

During the 2006-2007 school year, Vice Principal Ginamarie Mignone was Gilmer's primary evaluator. New that year to Quitman, Mignone testified convincingly that she was assigned certain grade levels to supervise by Hartsfield, who offered no substantive comments about the performance of the teachers Mignone was about to observe and evaluate. Thus, Mignone came to the task of evaluating Gilmer with no predisposed notions about his competency. Mignone observed Gilmer in late November 2006. She rated several aspects of his performance as "unsatisfactory." The narrative portion of the evaluation describes a disorganized classroom environment that did not promote effective learning. Relative to management of classroom procedures, Mignone found:

> Classroom routines and procedures are ineffective and result in excessive loss of instructional time. Students waited while Mr. Gilmer taped index card to the board, conversed with teacher's aide about different types of dogs and distributed materials to students in centers. Activities were not clear to students prior to them moving to centers. Materials were not at each center and as a result students sat unattended and with no task before them while waiting for Mr. Gilmer. Instructional time was loss [sic]. Activities were not grade appropriate and did not correspond with the instructional objective . . . .

Mignone found that Gilmer failed to differentiate instruction, did not utilize effective questioning and discussion techniques, and as a result did not effectively engage his students in learning. She testified that he never asked his students "why?"; a fundamental questioning technique that encourages critical thinking. His performance was ranked as "basic" in several other areas, such as providing feedback to students and communicating clearly and accurately. Mignone testified that to her observation, when students would not understand a concept, Gilmer would simply repeat his explanation, as opposed to creatively changing his approach in an effort to achieve understanding. Mignone's observation was followed by a conference with Gilmer at which she elaborated on her concerns, and at which Gilmer had an opportunity to work with Mignone to explore strategies to improve his teaching performance.

During the 2006-2007 school year Gilmer continued to be unable to meet his paperwork obligations in a timely fashion. He received numerous "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" notifications from Mignone. These notifications alerted Gilmer that he had failed to timely hand in lesson plan books; failed to pick up his students in a timely fashion after lunch; failed to submit required class newsletters; failed to submit a complete classroom management book; failed to submit writing samples; failed to update bulletin boards; failed to display student work in the classroom; and failed to timely submit report cards. Several of these shortcomings were the subject of repeated "needs improvement" notifications. Mignone likewise sent several lengthy memoranda to Gilmer during the 2006-2007 school year in which she elaborated on her concerns. A January 23, 2007, handwritten note to Gilmer alerted him that the bulletin board outside his classroom is not grade appropriate, and in detail explained what Mignone felt was missing and would bring the hallway display up to par. A March 2, 2007, memorandum outlined in detail concerns about Gilmer's inability to properly complete paperwork, and Mignone wrote:

> [y]ou have professional obligations Mr. Gilmer. Your total disregard for procedure demonstrates a pattern of insubordination. These procedures, that you habitually neglect, are in place in order for us to work together as a team to move our students forward. Please take time to reflect and re-evaluate your actions. I trust that after some self reflection you will be more cooperative and more responsible in managing your time as to meet your professional obligations.

Mignone formally observed Gilmer again on June 13, 2007. Her overall rating of his performance was "unsatisfactory." She expressed serious concerns about his pedagogy. Mignone noted that Gilmer had not submitted lesson plans in advance as required, and when she asked for them at the time of her visit, what she received was inadequate. The lesson lacked focus, and a specific reading or writing strategy or skill was not emphasized. Mignone testified that the children were not properly grouped for reading, and differentiated instruction was not evident. Instruction began late, minimal student work was displayed and Gilmer had not placed the objective of the lesson on the board as required. Mignone noted on the evaluation instrument that Gilmer refused to participate in a follow-up conference to discuss her evaluation of his performance.

Mignone's final evaluation for the 2006-2007 school year, dated June 20, 2007, rated Gilmer's overall performance as "unsatisfactory." She found that he did not meet minimal performance expectations in several critical areas, including planning and preparation, managing classroom procedures, engaging students in learning, and demonstrating flexibility and responsiveness in his instructional approach. Relative to Gilmer's professional responsibilities, the evaluation indicated that he made no effort to become involved in school projects, did not keep accurate records or participate in the professional development activities required by his Professional Improvement Plan (PIP). A separate domain four evaluation, dated June 21, 2007, outlined with even greater specificity the shortcomings in this area, and listed school events and in-service training that Gilmer had not attended. (P-163.) Mignone recommended that Gilmer's increment be withheld, but the record reflects that the District did not act immediately to do so.

Gilmer urged that, like Hartsfield, Mignone did not like him and sought to harass him. Gilmer described an incident in which she yelled at him in the cafeteria, "pointed her finger" in his face, and publicly humiliated him. (R-120.) Gilmer offered this incident as evidence that Mignone did not fairly and honestly evaluate him, and that she was "out to get him." But the record lends no support to this contention. Mignone testified with professionalism and credibility that she neither liked nor disliked Gilmer, and cared only about the children and their educational progress. She denied harassing or humiliating Gilmer, and I believed her.

Evaluations completed during the 2007-2008 school year reflected ongoing administration concerns about Gilmer's performance. He was rated as "basic" overall in an observation by Hartsfield dated November 28, 2007. (P-63.) The evaluation described serious shortcomings in knowledge of content and pedagogy and in differentiating instruction for his students. These areas were rated "unsatisfactory." The evaluation noted that students were not engaged in learning "as evidenced by inappropriate activities and/or materials, poor representation of content, lack of lesson structure, and/or inappropriate student grouping." The lengthy narrative portion of the evaluation offered concrete suggestions for improved instruction in Gilmer's classroom. These concerns and recommendations were discussed with Gilmer at a December 21, 2007, post-observation conference.

Gilmer's continued inability to comply with the paperwork demands of his position was likewise ongoing during the 2007-2008 school year. His personnel file contained in excess of fifteen "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" memoranda, which alerted him to repeated failures to timely submit lesson plans, substitute plans, management books, PDAs, and math and writing samples. Errors in his report cards and scholarship books were likewise noted. Gilmer urged in his testimony that by this school year, his relationship with Hartsfield had deteriorated rapidly, the implication being that she was picking on him and that there was no factual basis for her criticisms. It is clear that the two were at odds. A February 5, 2008, memorandum chastised Gilmer in strong terms for his conduct at a grade-level meeting. (P-68.) He apparently came to the meeting unprepared, had not completed his PDAs and suggested that the meeting time be used for this purpose. He informed Hartsfield in front of his colleagues that her meetings were not properly conducted.

Gilmer and Hartsfield's relationship became confrontational yet again during a May 28, 2008, P.T.A. meeting. Hartsfield felt Gilmer inappropriately criticized her during a discussion about a sixth-grade social studies assignment. In a stern May 29, 2008, memorandum she advised "[i]t was clear to all present at this meeting and throughout the school year that your goal has been not to assist me in changing the culture in this building but to continually try to undermine my authority." (P-81.) Gilmer urged that his comments at each meeting were justified and that Hartsfield's reaction was vindictive. During this time period, Gilmer became active in his local teachers union, and he urged that his union activism also angered Hartsfield and caused her to unfairly criticize his performance.

His testimony lacked credibility. Our courts have held that "credibility findings . . . are often influenced by matters such as observations of the character and demeanor of witnesses . . . that are not transmitted by the record." State v. Lourito, 157 N.J. 463, 474 (1998). Gilmer spent several days testifying both on direct and cross-examination, and I had ample opportunity to assess his demeanor. On the one hand, he projected as a likeable, earnest and sensitive individual. But questioning on cross-examination easily provoked a sharp temper, and a clear inability to gracefully accept or react to criticism. At one point, Gilmer's reaction to counsel's questioning on cross-examination started to include personal invectives, and I was forced to intervene. I thus FIND that Gilmer was rude and combative at the two meetings in question. Hartsfield's memoranda simply address that rudeness, and are not further evidence of a vendetta against him.

Hartsfield was not alone in her criticism of Gilmer's classroom performance. On February 25, 2008, he was observed by Barbara Irvin, a principal at another District school. Irvin rated Gilmer's lesson as "unsatisfactory," and expressed concerns about his instructional technique and the "culture for learning" in his classroom. She was disappointed in his reading instruction, stating, "[d]uring the guided reading portion of the lesson, he did not conduct a guided reading group . . . ." (P-172.) Irvin informed Gilmer that "[g]uided reading has a very specific series of research based strategies that teachers are to have students complete." These strategies were not evident in Gilmer's instruction. Irvin observed as follows:

> Mr. Gilmer's classroom does not reflect the implementation of district initiatives in literacy. Student journals had fewer than six entries from September to the end of February. Writing folders also had very little student work and the progressive writing wall had papers dated October, December and/or January, with not [sic] February dates.

She offered concrete suggestions for improvement, including the suggestion that Gilmer study District protocols for best practices, and observe a model literacy block.

But by the end of the 2007-2008 school year, Gilmer was so angered by administration's criticisms that he was entirely uncooperative with the evaluative process and was unwilling or unable to accept any suggestions for improved-teaching techniques offered by his supervisors. Indeed, Irvin testified that Gilmer declined to meet with her for a post-observation conference. An observation by Hartsfield dated June 16, 2008, addressed Gilmer's ongoing inability to meet his paperwork obligations, and he was rated "unsatisfactory." The evaluation confirmed again that he had failed to submit lesson plans, PDA data, management books, writing and math samples and monthly newsletters. Hartsfield noted that Gilmer refused to meet and discuss the observation report. Hartsfield's June 16, 2008, summative evaluation likewise rated Gilmer as "unsatisfactory," noting concerns about pedagogical technique such as questioning of students, engaging students in discussion, and differentiation of instruction. He insisted on union representation at the conference to discuss the evaluation, but that meeting was apparently never arranged, and Hartsfield noted on the evaluation that although two meetings were scheduled, "union representation did not respond." (P-85.)

Throughout this time it is clear that administration sought to assist Gilmer. A June 2008 PIP set forth in detail where improvement was expected, and offered detailed suggestions. For example, to achieve the professional goal of fostering a classroom environment that reflects high expectations for student learning, Gilmer was urged to "display rubrics, display class rules, display objectives." (P-85a.) He refused to meet to discuss the PIP. Throughout the 2007-2008 school year, numerous grade-level meetings were conducted, which were designed to assist in sharing ideas about instructional technique and classroom performance. Likewise, support personnel such as RTCs and mentors were available to assist Gilmer. A January 26, 2008, email belies Gilmer's protestations to the contrary; he confirms that he has been invited to visit model classrooms, and that grade-level meetings can be useful, describing a presentation at one such meeting on differentiated instruction as "brilliant and intellectually delivered." (P-178.)

Gilmer's salary increment was withheld at the close of the 2007-2008 school year in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. A letter dated July 31, 2008, was forwarded to

Gilmer by Acting State District Superintendent Kevin West, in which he outlined the rationale for this action. West pointed to shortcomings in Gilmer's planning and preparation, including failures to appropriately select instructional goals and objectives, failure to assess student learning, and failure to demonstrate a knowledge of his students and their unique learning styles. The letter further indicated that Gilmer's classroom environment failed to establish a culture for learning, and that his instructional technique was lacking. Finally, the letter reiterated historic concerns about Gilmer's failure to meet his paperwork responsibilities.

Via letter dated August 13, 2008, Gilmer unsuccessfully sought a transfer from Quitman. In September 2008, he began his third year as a first-grade teacher, and his fifth year as a teacher under Hartsfield's leadership. Yet the record reflects that he remained unable to meet even the most fundamental of her professional expectations. An October 15, 2008, "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" memorandum again advised that the management book had not been timely submitted. In November, two additional memoranda advised that lesson plans were incomplete or late. In December 2008 Gilmer was advised in writing that a math-problem-solving task had not been submitted on time, nor had writing samples. He was advised on December 18, 2008, that he had not submitted a management book for the months of September through November 2008.

The Tenure Charges and the Performance Improvement Period

These tenure charges followed in January 2009. Nineteen individual charges of inefficiency were filed against Gilmer. The charges renewed the instructional, planning and pedagogical concerns that had plagued Gilmer's performance since his days at Morton. The charges additionally asserted that Gilmer failed to contribute to the school community, and failed to communicate effectively with parents and families. He was charged with failing to meet District-paperwork obligations, and with not meeting minimum-District-attendance requirements. At this point, Gilmer was so angry and discouraged that he cooperated not at all with administrative efforts to assist him. A theme in Gilmer's presentation at hearing was that he was provided no assistance or encouragement during his ninety-day improvement period. I FIND that, to the contrary, the District embarked on comprehensive plan to support and assist him, but that inexplicably, Gilmer was wholly unable or unwilling to avail himself of the help being offered.

A ninety-day PIP was presented to Gilmer in late January 2009, but he declined to meet and discuss it with Hartsfield. The PIP offered concrete and comprehensive advice to improve the shortcomings in Gilmer's instructional technique. For example, to assist him in improving his pedagogy, the PIP suggested:

> Incorporate the following Balanced Literacy Practices:
>
> - Modeled/interactive writing/writing workshop
> - Flexible grouping during guided reading
> - Strategy based teaching
> - Daily purposeful read alouds/shared reading/guided reading
> - Daily purposeful message time
>
> Use results of observational surveys, running records, theme assessment, fluency test and math unit test to inform instruction[.]

The improvement period was later extended until June 26, 2009.[9] (P-98.) The ninety-day PIP was placed on a new form used by the District in April 2009, but a review of the new document reflects that it sought to encourage growth in the very same areas pinpointed in the January 2009 PIP. The modified PIP was signed by Gilmer, who completed a section in which he was asked to reflect on his job performance and job expectations. The tone and content of his comments are quite revealing, and are consistent with my observation that he bridles under criticism, and becomes unable to use that criticism to effectuate positive change. When asked to list notable obstacles to performing his job, Gilmer wrote, "Your 'gotcha' mentality is a notable obstacle that has impeded my performance of my job . . . ." When asked if he had any questions about what is expected of him in his job, he stated, "Are you ever going to treat me with the [9] On or about May 18, 2009, Gilmer became ill and was absent for the remainder of the year. His leave was approved by school administration. Accordingly, he was given approximately four and a half months to correct the inefficiencies noted in the charges, or about a month and half more than the ninety-day minimum required by the statute.

respect other professionals receive here . . . ?" He continued, "Am I ever going to receive a fair and impartial evaluation of my practice, followed up by meaningful coaching?"

During the second half of the 2008-2009 school year, and while aware that he was working under the threat of tenure charges, Gilmer nonetheless continued to fail to submit needed paperwork. On January 30, 2009, he was advised that his lesson plans had been submitted late. On February 10, 2009, he was advised that his student report cards contained numerous errors, and that he had failed "to duplicate 10 report cards for students who neglected to return after cycle 1." (P-102.) On February 17, 2009, he was again informed that his lesson plans were late. In March 2009 Gilmer was informed via an "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" memorandum that he had failed to submit math-problem-solving tasks and writing samples. Likewise, twice in March, he was advised that he failed to submit lesson plans. Gilmer was informed in April 2009 that he had not timely submitted his management book, math, or writing samples, or a "running record binder." Gilmer continued to receive "Areas Needing Attention/Improvement" memoranda into May 2009; these again documented missing management books and other paperwork obligations.

Gilmer offered a somewhat curious defense to the evidence of his consistent failure to timely submit required paperwork. He suggested that his administrators wholly fabricated this accusation against him. Gilmer repeatedly advised that evidence of their fabrications would be coming later in his presentation at hearing, but such evidence was never presented. Kimberly Malone testified that Gilmer submitted lesson plans that Hartsfield later claimed were not submitted. But Malone works as an office clerk at Quitman, and thus could not testify as to the whether the plans were complete, or filed in accordance with Hartsfield's timelines. Moreover, Malone spoke only to one incident, hence her testimony offered little solace to Gilmer, as his file was replete with countless memoranda reminding him of his paperwork obligations. Likewise, Gilmer's documentary submissions purported to include some of the allegedly missing documents. But he in no way accounted for the many missed deadlines documented in his personnel file annually.

I FIND that during the statutory improvement period, Gilmer was offered assistance from RTCs, subject-content coaches and various District administrators. He was enrolled in the TAP workshops designed to assist struggling teachers. He was invited to attend a training on Managing Antisocial Behaviors. He was afforded an opportunity to view a model lesson. He was repeatedly evaluated by a number of administrators, several of whom were from other District schools. Each of these evaluations came with opportunities to conference his performance and discuss improvement. Throughout the remainder of the 2008-2009 school year, Gilmer was likewise present for discussions about student progress and pedagogy that took place at weekly grade-level meetings.

Gilmer's repeated assertions that he received no assistance whatsoever during his improvement period ignore the testimony and the documentary record. The rebuttal testimony of Naga Philkhana, a former District math coach, now an RTC, was a staggering blow to Gilmer's credibility. Gilmer had subpoenaed Philkhana's testimony. When she appeared the next day at the OAL pursuant to Gilmer's subpoena, he elected not to call her as a witness. Gilmer was asked on cross-examination if he had confronted Philkhana regarding her testimony prior to the hearing date. Gilmer firmly denied doing so. Philkhana was then called as a rebuttal witness by the District. In troubling testimony, she stated that the day before she was scheduled to testify, Gilmer appeared at Quitman, although he was still on suspension. He asked Philkhana to be certain to testify that she had provided him with no assistance. She replied to Gilmer that she would not lie. Philkhana was a sincere, soft-spoken, professional and highly credible witness. Accordingly, Gilmer's protestations that he was unassisted during his improvement period are not credible.

The District has developed guidelines for evaluating a teacher during the ninety-day improvement period. (R-74.) The guidelines provide that ten observations must be completed, including six informal and four formal evaluations. It is recommended that a variety of administrators conduct these evaluations. Matthew Brewster is employed by the District as Director of Instructional Staff Development, and he clarified the intent of these regulations. Brewster's testimony made it plain that the number of evaluations was not a mandate, but rather offered as guidance, and to emphasize that observations should be intensive during the ninety-day period. He stated that the goal of the guidelines is support for the struggling teacher, and that this support "is probably more important than the sheer number" of evaluations.

During Gilmer's improvement period, which was extended beyond ninety days, he was observed formally four times. He was informally observed nine times. In addition to Hartsfield, Gilmer was evaluated by several administrators who were not employed at Quitman, who he could not contend disliked him, but who nonetheless found his instruction sorely lacking. He was rated "unsatisfactory" by Maria Merlo on February 17, 2009. Merlo found student behavior in Gilmer's class to be poor, and that classroom routines and procedures were non-existent, resulting in loss of instructional time. She noted that children were not engaged in learning, observing:

> You opened up the lesson with a lengthy explanation of what the students were going to be doing in their groups, who they were going to partner with, what words they were going to be making and how the words needed to be place in their work folders . . . . While you were going through the procedures, I observed children talking, eating breakfast, distracted, walking around the room and simply not interested in what you were saying.

Karen Gray, another District administrator, observed Gilmer on May 8, 2009, and rated his performance as "unsatisfactory." She noted that Gilmer was ill at ease with the subject matter he taught, relating that "Mr. Gilmer held a sheet of paper and referred to it throughout the lesson." Gray advised that "[h]e should become more familiar with the literacy content so that he does not need to refer to the lesson plan or teacher's edition throughout the lesson." Gray stated that although Gilmer had been trained in a District instructional approach, the Children's Literacy Initiative (CLI), "there were several engaging components of CLI lacking." Gray related that the classroom environment lacked organization, with little student work displayed. She observed that the classroom was not "print rich." (P-175.)

These outside observers echoed Hartsfield's continued concerns during the improvement period. A February 6, 2009, observation found that the lesson was aligned to the instructional objective, but that Gilmer continued to fail to use questioning techniques that encouraged higher-ordered thinking, failed to differentiate instruction, failed to utilize District content initiatives, and failed to provide appropriate feedback to students. Hartsfield made similar observations on February 24, 2009. A March 13, 2009, observation revealed a continued failure to differentiate instruction, no evidence of "pre-assessment" to guide instruction, a lack of alignment with District curriculum and New Jersey Core Curriculum standards in the instruction, and a failure to implement strategies received from content coaches and RTCs. Hartsfield found that the classroom was not orderly or well managed and that student work was not displayed. Hallway displays likewise did not contain current work. Character-education goals were not reinforced by Gilmer during his instruction.

A March 20, 2009, evaluation continued to reflect little improvement by Gilmer. Differentiation continued to be lacking, and varied assessments of student learning were not imbedded in the lesson. Hartsfield found that Gilmer continued not to establish a culture for learning. She noted specifically that student work was not posted, "content-based word walls" were not "interactive and progressive," the library area was not properly organized, and classroom resources were not easily accessible. (P-110.) Hartsfield critiqued Gilmer's use of his classroom space, noting that pathways were cluttered, and the furniture arrangement in the classroom did not support learning activities. She expressed analogous concerns after March 27, 2009, and April 3, 2009, observations. An April 22, 2009, observation including the foregoing concerns, but also noted that students were not engaged in learning, and that Gilmer was not effectively using time on task.

On May 14, 2009, Hartsfield observed a classroom lacking small-group instruction, teacher-modeled activities, or small-group instruction. The objective for the lesson was not posted, as required. Student progress was not being assessed throughout the lesson. The classroom was not orderly, and several protocols were not in place, such as a bathroom log, hall passes, computer and library logs. Concerns about the utilization of the classroom's physical space were ongoing. Students were not effectively engaged in learning.

Based on the evidence presented, I FIND that during his tenure as teacher in the Newark Public Schools, classroom observations revealed the following shortcomings in Gilmer's instructional technique and classroom management, shortcomings which were not remedied during the ninety-day improvement period:

- Failure to demonstrate knowledge and content of pedagogy
- Failure to differentiate instruction
- Failure to properly prepare lesson plans
- Failure to assess learning
- Failure to manage classroom procedures
- Failure to engage students, and create a culture for learning
- Failure to use flexible and responsive teaching techniques to reach students
- Failure to use appropriate questioning techniques
- Failure to maintain and submit records properly, including lesson plans
- Failure to grow and develop professionally
- Failure to create an appropriate learning environment in his classroom
- Failure to properly order the physical space in his classroom
- Failure to comply with District policies, such as the requirement that a management book be maintained
- Failure to reflect on teaching by implementing suggestions for improvement

Several of the tenure charges necessitate further brief discussion. It is alleged that Gilmer did not contribute to school and District. He urged strenuously at hearing that he is active in his teacher's union and the PTA and that he uses both organizations as vehicles to better Quitman Street School. Gilmer offered the example of attempts made by him to better the physical environment at Quitman. But Gilmer misapprehends the concern expressed here by the District. His evaluations note failures by him to contribute to and participate in such events as math and science fair projects. The evaluations find that he failed to implement District initiatives or to implement strategies received via the support of coaches and RTCs. This charge is furthermore directed at the negativity evidenced by his reaction to the constructive criticism of his professional technique and his demeanor at grade-level meetings and PTA meetings. The negative exchanges with Hartsfield at these meetings reflect a lack of support for the overall mission of Quitman's administration and I FIND constitute a failure to contribute to the school and District.

Gilmer testified credibly that he spends personal time assisting his students, and several parent witnesses confirmed that Gilmer tutored their children free of charge during his spare time. He offered numerous written exchanges with parents into evidence, including correspondence about absences, homework and other classroom issues. But the District presented evidence of repeated failures by Gilmer to submit required newsletters, evidence of report cards not being timely filed, and an ongoing failure by Gilmer to document communication with parents in his management book.[10] It was this sort of communication that the District felt was lacking, and I FIND that the testimonial and documentary evidence supports the District's concerns in this regard.

Finally, on several occasions, Hartsfield sent notifications to Gilmer that indicated that his attendance poor, and that his occasional absences exceeded District expectations. Gilmer continued to receive such notifications during the improvement period, including one dated February 25, 2009, which advised that as of that date his record reflected twelve occasional absences during that academic year. No evidence was presented which suggested that these absences did not take place, and I FIND that the evidence supports the District's charge that Gilmer's attendance, at times, was poor.

[10] Gilmer shared newsletters and the testimony of a colleague who stated that she would compete with him to see who could create the better newsletter. But this testimony only proved that Gilmer sometimes created newsletters, not that he did so with the regularity required by administration.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, a tenured teaching staff member cannot be "dismissed or reduced in compensation, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." The statutory status of a tenured employee may not be lightly removed. Tenure protects teachers from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). It is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949).

The District bears the burden of proving the charges against Gilmer by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962); In re Polk, 90 N.J. 550 (1982). The evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958). Preponderance is the greater weight of credible evidence in the case; that is, the evidence having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). After giving careful consideration to the competent credible evidence, I CONCLUDE that the District has met its burden of proof relative to the charges it has filed against Gilmer.

The District did not act precipitously or prematurely in filing these tenure charges. To the contrary, it exercised considerable restraint by repeatedly, and over the course of many years, identifying areas of Gilmer's performance that were unacceptable or in need of improvement. Administration repeatedly attempted to encourage professional improvement and more efficient performance by Gilmer. The District employed progressive discipline by reprimanding Gilmer and withholding his increment prior to filing tenure charges. The record reflects that Gilmer clearly has the passion, commitment, and love of children that are vital for an excellent educator. But he is unwilling to use those positive qualities within the bureaucratic, curricular and pedagogical framework needed to create a successful public school classroom. Administration has repeatedly rated Gilmer's teaching performance as unsatisfactory. Having found no cause to question the credibility or sincerity of these performance evaluations, I CONCLUDE that the District has proven its charges of inefficiency against Gilmer.

A charge of inefficiency constitutes an allegation that while a teacher has the capacity to perform ably, he nonetheless failed to do so. As the Commissioner and State Board of Education have indicated:

> The charge of incompetence, as distinguished from the charge of inefficiency, presumes that the proofs in support of the charge will demonstrate that respondent is so lacking in competency to perform the responsibilities of classroom teacher that the requirements of the 90-day improvement period, required for a charge of inefficiency . . . would be a useless exercise . . . . Incompetence requires proof that the affected person regardless of the assistance offered by certified supervisors, does not have the ability or capacity to be an effective teacher.

Thus, the district is required to inform the employee with specificity where his performance is inefficient, and further inform him that, unless the inefficiencies are corrected within a minimal ninety-day period, it intends to certify those charges of inefficiency with the Commissioner. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 provides as follows:

> [I]f the charge is inefficiency, prior to making its determination as to certification, the board shall provide the employee with written notice of the alleged inefficiency, specifying the nature thereto, and allow at least 90 days in which to correct and overcome the inefficiency.

See also N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(1) and (3). The District must also provide a modification of the individual PIP at the commencement of the ninety-day probation period and assure that the plan addresses the specific charges of inefficiency. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(4).

It is well established that the district is required to "make reasonable efforts to provide assistance to the teaching staff member to overcome the specific inefficiencies."

Rowley v. Bd. of Educ. of the Manalapan-Englishtown Reg'l Sch. Dist., 205 N.J. Super. 65, 72 (App. Div. 1985). If a school district chooses to file tenure charges of inefficiency against a teacher, "the administration bears the heavy responsibility to render positive assistance to the teacher in an effort to overcome his inefficiencies." Ibid. The rationale underlying this requirement is that the teacher be afforded an opportunity to demonstrate that he is capable of effective teaching. He can only do so if offered specific criticisms and constructive advice. In re Johnson, 1981 S.L.D. 239.

The analysis in Green Brook School District v. Fodor, 1984 S.L.D. 269, 284, affirmed, State Board, 1984 S.L.D. 297, regarding a school district's obligations during the ninety-day period is instructive, holding as follows:

> No particular pattern or scheme of assistance or approach by a school board is required during the 90 day period. Each case must, therefore, be judged on its own merits. A determination must be made concerning whether the 90 day period was reasonably implemented so that the teacher had a fair opportunity to improve.

Gilmer strenuously argues that the District failed to meet its obligations to him. He asserts that model lessons and other assistance should have come directly from Hartsfield. His arguments are unavailing. I CONCLUDE that nowhere does the law require that the school principal herself directly provide the support and assistance needed. Gilmer was assisted by content coaches and the RTC. He was invited to observe other classrooms, and to attend the TAP program. He was observed by a variety of outside administrators; all of these observations included an opportunity to conference the lesson both before and after the observation, and to derive input from different evaluators, all of whom brought a new perspective and outlook to bear. These interventions took place during the improvement period, and in the years that preceded it. Gilmer argues that outside evaluators did not provide proper support because they observed him without being aware that he was under ninety-day review. But elsewhere he suggests that Hartsfield conspired with these outside evaluators in a vindictive effort to undermine him, referring to them in his post-hearing submission as Hartsfield's

"friends."[11] He cannot have it both ways. I CONCLUDE that the District provided the support contemplated by N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-11, and the Rowley decision.

In Fodor a long period of corrective action preceded the ninety-day period. Specific suggestions to overcome the teacher's inefficiencies had been made to him before and during the improvement period. Likewise here, efforts to improve Gilmer's performance were not made for the first time after the inefficiency charges were served. The charges came in the aftermath of years of effort to encourage Gilmer to improve. Gilmer misconstrues the sort of assistance required. It is clear that the law does not envision the ninety-day period as a time to simply document a case against the teacher, and to thus undermine any chance that he could use this time to remedy his inefficiencies. But conversely, I CONCLUDE that it is unreasonable to blame the District because it could not undo years of unresponsiveness by Gilmer to administrative advice and admonitions. Gilmer argues that he begged repeatedly for help and that it was not forthcoming. His arguments ignore the factual record—and his own obligation after more than ten years of teaching experience—to have progressed further in his pedagogical technique and in his attentiveness to the paperwork demands of his position.

Likewise unpersuasive is Gilmer's argument that the District violated his rights by extending the improvement period beyond ninety days. The improvement period began on January 30, 2009, and was to have expired ninety days later. It was later extended by the District until June 30, 2009. However, Gilmer became ill, and left the District for an approved medical leave effective May 18, 2009. His improvement period thus lasted approximately 138 days. Gilmer's argument that this somehow violated his rights is a bit hard to follow, but apparently he contends that since the District intended to extend the improvement period for an additional ninety days, the charges should be dismissed because the Gilmer was in school for only forty-eight of those additional days.

The statute makes it plain that the ninety-day period is a minimum, stating that the employee must be afforded "at least" ninety days to attempt to remedy his [11] The record reflects that the relationship between Hartsfield and these other administrators was professional, and nothing more.

inefficiencies. N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-11. It is thus readily apparent that Gilmer was given more time than the statute requires to remedy his inefficiencies. I CONCLUDE that there is no basis in fact or law to penalize the District for extending this period beyond what was required, notwithstanding the fact that the extension did not last as long as originally anticipated due to Gilmer's illness. The civil service case law cited by Gilmer pertains to an employee's probationary period, and is inapposite. See, e.g., In re Bernal, CSV 3154-07, Initial Decision (September 12, 2008), adopted, Comm'r (November 7, 2008), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

Nor did the District violate its own policies during the improvement period, as Gilmer contends. It thoroughly evaluated him in a manner consistent with the spirit and intent of its internal policy on the processing of inefficiency charges, per the testimony of Matthew Brewster. Gilmer urges that once the review period was extended, an entirely new PIP should have been developed. He cites no authority for this proposition, and I know of none. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the processing of these tenure charges was procedurally sound.

The School District urges that Gilmer's record of inefficient performance warrants his dismissal from his tenured position of employment. I agree. Some of the concerns raised in the charges, if standing alone, might not warrant dismissal. For example, while at times his absences were excessive, poor attendance is not a pervasive feature in his employment profile. Likewise, although Gilmer did not meet District expectations relative to communication with parents, I am convinced that Gilmer cared about his students, and was available to them and their families after school hours, thus balancing out any concerns about formal communication shortcomings. Although he sometimes did not attend workshops or science fairs, this likewise was not presented as a chronic issue.

But the Newark schools have employed Gilmer for more than ten years, have placed him in a variety of schools and grade levels, and he has continuously performed below District expectations. In arguing that he can be "salvaged," Gilmer again deflects blame from himself and urges at length that it is Hartsfield's leadership, as pinpointed in the CAPA report, that is the cause of his professional shortcomings. In a troubling statement, he states in his post-hearing submission that the CAPA report "focused on where the problem lies – and that is with Principal Hartsfield." (Respt's br. at p. 180.)

Hartsfield's performance is not at issue here, and Gilmer's repeated efforts to make her the focus of this proceeding emphasizes his ongoing unwillingness to look inward and work earnestly to become a quality teacher. Precisely because Newark is a troubled school district, its students must have optimal instruction. A theme in Gilmer's defense is that the leadership at Quitman is inadequate, the school culture and environment is unsupportive, and the student body is poorly prepared and not uniformly available for learning. Gilmer offered the CAPA report as evidence that since Quitman is a struggling school his performance shortcomings should somehow be excused. But I started my factual discussion with the CAPA report precisely because I took away a different message from its critique of Quitman; that is, that Quitman and its students deserve the best and most able teachers available.

Factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstance of the incidents or charges, the teacher's prior record and present attitude and any harm or injurious effect that the conduct at issue will have on the proper administration of the schools. In re MacDowell, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 644; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404-12 (App. Div. 1967). Here, administration has counseled, transferred, and reprimanded Gilmer repeatedly, yet he appears unable to bring his classroom performance to acceptable levels. He has responded to the charges against him with denials of personal responsibility, and his attitude creates no confidence that he would be responsive to District efforts to assist him in the future. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Gilmer should be dismissed from his tenured position of employment.

Finally, I CONCLUDE that Gilmer has not demonstrated that the District acted in violation of his rights when it withheld his salary increment. His increment was withheld pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, which states that, "[a]ny board of education may withhold for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board." It is well established that an increment is not a statutory right but "a reward for meritorious service to the school district." N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n V. N. Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593-94 (1984). In challenging the withholding of an increment, the teacher has the burden of demonstrating that the action of the school district was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). Based on the record developed here, it is clear and I CONCLUDE that the action of the School District was neither arbitrary, capricious nor unreasonable.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that Gilmer be DISMISSED from his tenured position of employment with the Newark Public Schools.

I further ORDER the action of the School District in withholding Gilmer's salary increment is AFFIRMED and the petition of appeal filed by Gilmer challenging his increment withholding is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her children in November 2010. The respondent filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer, asserting that the appeal was not timely filed, that petitioner lacks standing as she does not have primary custody of the children, and additionally does not reside in the district. A hearing at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) was scheduled for June 7, 2011, but petitioner failed to appear despite having received appropriate notice and provided no explanation for her nonappearance. Having received no explanation from petitioner for her failure to appear, the OAL returned the file to the Commissioner.

There being no explanation filed, the Commissioner dismissed the petition with prejudice. The Commissioner additionally noted that the record included an unresolved claim for tuition reimbursement from the Board, and remanded the matter to the OAL for supplementation of the record regarding the amount of tuition sought, and an appropriate recommended initial decision regarding payment of same.

The Commissioner has reviewed the record of this residency matter and advisement of failure to appear transmitted by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4, along with a copy of the notification sent to the petitioner by the OAL on June 20, 2011, providing her thirteen days to submit an explanation for such nonappearance. There being no explanation filed by petitioner, the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed with prejudice due to petitioner's failure to appear at hearing or provide an explanation for her nonappearance.[1]

Notwithstanding the dismissal of the petition, the Commissioner notes that the Board's Answer in this residency matter contained a counterclaim for tuition which was left unresolved by the Administrative Law Judge. Although the record returned to the Commissioner by the OAL contains an affidavit of the Board's Business Administrator attesting to the amount of tuition claimed by the Board for the period of September 17, 2010 through June 7, 2011 as a consequence of the ineligible attendance of petitioner's children in its schools, it is unclear from

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ANTHONY SCHAIBLE AND BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MONMOUTH REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner sought a determination that her minor child, S.R. was not appropriately identified as an eighth grade student for placement as a freshman into the respondents' Advanced Placement Academy (Academy) at Monmouth Regional High School. Petitioner asserted that respondents did not use the required multiple measures as outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:8-3.1 when determining S.R.'s eligibility for admittance into the Academy, but rather relied solely on the result of an outdated standardized test score. Petitioner seeks to enroll S.R. in the Academy as a junior for the 2011-2012 school year.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: boards of education are granted discretionary authority under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes to adopt policies and rules for the management of public schools; appropriate deference must be given to professionals in a school district when assessing the appropriate placement of a student; in the instant matter, the district created a standard for admission to the Academy – specifically that a student must score a combined total of 500 in language and math on a standardized test given during the spring of the seventh grade year; S.R. failed to meet this criteria, and was therefore not admitted to the Academy; petitioner has not proven that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in determining that S.R. was not qualified for placement in the Academy; and the Board did not violate N.J.A.C. 6A:8-3.1, as the District does have a gifted and talented program in place which is separate and apart from the optional Academy program. Accordingly, the ALJ denied petitioner's application for relief, and dismissed the petition.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that petitioner has failed to establish either that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner or in violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:8-3.1 when it determined that S.R. was not qualified for placement in its Advanced Placement Academy.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter – for the reasons clearly presented therein – and the instant Petition of Appeal is hereby dismissed.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 7006-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 121-6/10

D.R., ON BEHALF OF MINOR CHILD, S.R., Petitioner,
v.
ANTHONY SCHAIBLE AND BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE MONMOUTH REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, MONMOUTH COUNTY,
Respondents.

D.R., petitioner, pro se

Martin M. Barger, Esq., for respondents (Reussille Law Firm, attorneys)

Record Closed: May 12, 2011 Decided: June 22, 2011

BEFORE EDWARD J. DELANOY, JR., ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner seeks a determination that her minor child, S.R., was not appropriately identified as an eighth grade student for placement as a freshman into the respondents' Advanced Placement Academy ("Academy") at Monmouth Regional High School.

Petitioner argues that respondents did not use the required multiple measures as outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:8-3.1 when determining S.R.'s admittance into the Academy, but instead relied solely on the result of an outdated standardized test score. Petitioner requests that S.R. be enrolled in the Academy as a junior for the 2011-2012 school year.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about June 15, 2010, petitioner filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of the Department of Education. The Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education transmitted the matter on June 21, 2010, to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to –15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13, for determination as a contested case. The case was filed at the OAL on July 1, 2010. The hearing was held on May 12, 2011, and the record closed on that date.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Testimony

Witnesses for Respondent

Charles R. Ford

Charles R. Ford is in his second year as superintendent of the Monmouth Regional School District ("District"). When he began his employment, he became part of the Academy planning committee ("Committee"). The Academy was created to counter magnet schools from luring talented students away from the District. The Academy would be a separate program from the gifted and talented (GT) program already in place in the District. While the GT program would offer honors and advanced placement (AP) courses, the Academy would increase the competitiveness and difficulties of the course offerings. During planning in 2009 for the first year of the Academy, the Committee agreed that the criteria needed for invitation to the Academy was a combined total of 500 in language and math on the New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge Test ("Test"). The Test is a standardized review of a student's ability given during the spring of the child's seventh grade year. Because the results of the Test are not printed until August, the District cannot use the eighth grade score as it is reported immediately preceding the high school year, and there is insufficient time to determine the Academy rosters for the following school year. S.R. scored lower than the required 500 on her Test. As a result, S.R. was not given an invitation to the Academy.

Subsequent to the first year of the Academy, the Committee modified the criteria necessary for invitation. The modification was based on a finding that students were leaving the Academy because of an inability to compete, and the District determined that more stringent requirements were necessary to determine the best candidates. Additional requirements for an entrance exam, as well as feedback from intermediate school teachers, became part of the invitation process. The Committee also made the determination that if a child left the Academy, his or her spot would remain unfulfilled. This provision was based upon the difficulty a new child would have in catching up with the Academy workload and curriculum.

The Academy would take a small group of children and place them in a predetermined group of classes during their freshman and sophomore years. The Academy would allow students to pursue more individualized studies during their junior and senior years. During their junior and senior years, non-Academy children could attend the same AP classes as Academy children. S.R. is scheduled to take three AP courses and two honors courses during her 2011-2012 junior year.

Jennifer Mitchell

Jennifer Mitchell has been employed by the District for the last fifteen years as a freshman English teacher. She is involved with the Academy and teaches an Academy English course, as well as four non-Academy honors classes.

In 2009, the Committee made a decision to use the seventh grade Test results as the basis for determining its initial September 2009 Academy class. This was necessary to allow for class scheduling in February 2009, and because scheduling difficulties made it impossible for the District to wait for the eighth grade test results released in August 2009.

Mitchell had formerly taught S.R. She found S.R. to be a very good honors student. However, in a letter to Ford, Mitchell was of the opinion that S.R. should remain in honors English, rather than AP Academy English, during S.R.'s sophomore year. (R-1.) Mitchell believed that since the Academy courses were taught in progression, it would not be a good idea to substitute a child into the Academy at a late date. This would create an unnecessary burden for that child. In addition, Mitchell believed that substituting S.R. into the Academy would be unfair to the approximate ten students who ranked higher than S.R.in ability, skill level and grades.

Joseph Nappi

Joseph Nappi is in his seventh year of employment by the District as a history teacher. Nappi had formerly taught S.R., and knew her to be a very good student. He recommended S.R. for the Academy, subject to other well qualified children also being given the chance to attend the Academy. Nappi believed that three to four other children were more qualified for the Academy than S.R.

Gail Fitzmaier

Gail Fitzmaier has been employed by the District as the director of guidance for the last four years, and is the spokesperson for the Academy. The purpose of the Academy was to ensure that the District would not lose talented children to the magnet schools, which magnet schools would then later take credit for highly proficient SAT scores. For the first year of the Academy in 2009, sixty-three children were invited, and forty-one joined. S.R. was not one of the invited children based on her Test score of below 500. Currently, twenty-eight students remain enrolled in the Academy, with thirteen dropping out in grades nine and ten.

As a result of not being a part of the Academy, S.R. will miss a Capstone project, and the opportunity to travel abroad to Costa Rica. S.R. will, however, be entitled to enroll in similar AP courses as Academy children during her junior and senior years.

The District is in full compliance with the New Jersey GT regulations for individualized instruction. The GT program does not require a formal application, and children are identified for the program based upon the eighth grade teacher recommendations. Fitzmaier agreed that S.R. performed extremely well on her New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge Test given during S.R.'s eighth grade, scoring as advanced proficient in mathematics, and well above 500 overall. (P-1 at 1.)

Witness for Petitioner

D.R.

D.R. is the mother of S.R., currently a sophomore at Monmouth Regional High School. S.R. was hoping to attend the Academy beginning in September 2009. However, D.R. believes that S.R. was not appropriately identified, and that the District incorrectly used the seventh grade Test scores to determine the admission to the Academy, rather than the eighth grade New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge test scores, which would have been a more accurate reflection of a student's ability. S.R. is a conscientious student, and D.R. believed she would successfully complete the rigors of the Academy workload. D.R.'s confidence was based upon the recommendations of Nicole Kenny, Sharon Finan, and Trish Rodenberg, all teachers of S.R. in the eighth grade. (P-1 at 3 to 5.)

D.R. also believed that while the GT program may have complied with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A: 8- 3.1, the Academy program did not, because the only item considered for admission to the Academy was the result of the seventh grade Test. D.R. agreed that S.R. had applied to the Communication High School magnet school, but was rejected. D.R. was disappointed that S.R. would not be entitled to participate in the Capstone project, the opportunity to travel abroad to Costa Rica, and the ability to graduate with distinction with other students from the Academy. D.R. believed the District acted in an arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable manner by not considering various aspects of S.R.'s qualifications as required by N.J.A.C. 6A: 8- 3.1, and by using a seventh grade Test result to determine admission to a ninth grade academic program.

FINDINGS OF FACT

After carefully considering the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to listen to testimony and observe the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND the following to be the relevant and credible FACTS in this matter: The Academy was created by the District to counter magnet schools from luring talented students away from the District high school. The Academy was to be a separate program from the GT program already in place at the District high school. While the GT program would offer honors and AP courses, the Academy would increase the competitiveness and difficulties of the course offerings. The first year of the Academy was the 2009-2010 school year. During planning in 2009 for the first year of the Academy, the Committee agreed that the criteria needed for invitation to the Academy was a combined total of 500 in language and math on the Test. The Test is a standardized review of a student's ability given during the spring of the child's seventh grade year. Because the results of the Test are not printed until August, the District cannot use the eighth grade score as it is reported immediately preceding the first high school year, and there is insufficient time to determine the Academy rosters for the following school year. S.R. scored lower than the required 500 on her Test, and as a result, was not given an invitation to the Academy. S.R. performed extremely well on her New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge Test given during her eighth grade year, scoring as advanced proficient in mathematics, and well above 500 overall.

The Academy was to take a small group of children and place them in a predetermined group of classes during their freshman and sophomore years. During the junior and senior years, the Academy would allow their students to pursue more individualized studies. During the junior and senior years, non- Academy children could attend the same AP classes as Academy children. S.R. is scheduled to take three AP courses and two honors courses during her 2011-2012 junior year.

Subsequent to the first year of the Academy, the Committee modified the criteria necessary for invitation. The modification was based on a finding that students were leaving the Academy because of an inability to compete, and the District determined that more stringent requirements were necessary to determine the best candidates. Additional requirements for an entrance exam, as well as feedback from intermediate school teachers, became part of the invitation process. The Committee had also determined that if a child left the Academy, his or her spot would remain unfulfilled. This provision was based upon the difficulty a new child would have in catching up with the Academy workload and curriculum.

S.R. is currently a sophomore, and is a conscientious honors student. As a result of not being a part of the Academy, S.R. will miss a Capstone project, the opportunity to travel abroad to Costa Rica, and the ability to graduate with distinction with other students from the Academy. S.R. will however, be entitled to enroll in similar AP courses as Academy children during her junior and senior years.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

In the absence of a clear showing of abuse of discretion, the Commissioner of Education will not substitute his or her own judgment for that of a board of education. In Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of West Orange, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960), the Appellate Division stated, "The well established rule that action of the local board [of education] which lies within the area of its discretionary powers may not be upset unless patently without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Board policies are entitled to a presumption of correctness, and will not be upset by the courts unless there is an affirmative showing that such decision is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Thomas v. Bd. of Educ. of Morris Twp., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), affirmed, 46 N.J. 581 (1966). In order to fulfill its obligation to provide students with a thorough and efficient education, boards of education have been granted discretionary authority under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes to adopt policies and rules for the management of the public schools. Appropriate deference must be given to the professionals in a school district when assessing the appropriate placement of a student.

Petitioner contends that the District acted in an arbitrary, capricious, and unreasonable manner by not considering various aspects of S.R.'s qualifications as required by N.J.A.C. 6A: 8-3.1, and by using a seventh grade Test result to determine admission to a ninth grade academic program. Taking petitioner's proofs in their best light, there is no showing that the Board's action in denying S.R. access to the Academy was arbitrary and capricious, or was without rational basis or induced by improper motives. It is the position of the Board that S.R.'s performance on the Test was a sufficient and critical part in its decision to place S.R. in the Academy. The Commissioner has consistently held that local boards of education may place students in public school grade levels according to their own rules and regulations. Shenkler v. Ho-Ho-Kus Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 772, aff'd 1975 S.L.D. 1157; Boulogne v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Jamesburg, 1964 S.L.D. 107; Wilcox v Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Oceanport, 154-55 S.L.D. 75. Such deference to local boards should be no less when determining placement in a particular class within a grade level, or when determining qualification for admission to an advanced learning Academy. The District created a standard for admission to the Academy in 2009. That standard was a 500 score on the Test, and that requirement was not arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. N.J.A.C. 6A: 8-3.1 governs the responsibility of a District to identify gifted and talented students and provide them with appropriate instructional adaptations and services. It is undisputed that the District had a gifted and talented program in place, and therefore did not violate N.J.A.C. 6A: 8-3.1. The creation of the Academy was an optional program created by the District, and its standards for admission into such an optional program did not run afoul of N.J.A.C. 6A: 8-3.1.

After careful consideration of all of the arguments, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not proven that the Board acted in an arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner in determining that S.R. was not qualified for placement in the Academy, nor did the Board violate N.J.A.C. 6A: 8-3.1. Petitioner's request for relief must be denied, and S.R. will not be enrolled in the Academy for the 2011-2012 school year.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that petitioner's application for relief be DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." SYNOPSIS

The petitioner, Brookfield Schools (Brookfield), is a private school for the handicapped (PSH) which has been approved by the New Jersey Department of Education (Department) to receive public school special education students on a tuition basis. Brookfield challenged the Department's determination to restrict its 2008-2009 tuition rate to a 10% increase over its tentative per diem rate. Brookfield had certified a tuition rate that represented a 17.39% increase, based on the escalation of its costs per pupil resulting from an unexpected drop in enrollment of 25 percent in the fall of 2008. The Department contended that its action was warranted by Brookfield's failure to comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), which requires PSHs to timely notify sending districts when proposed tuition increases will exceed 10%. Brookfield asserted that it complied with the letter and spirit of the regulation. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue, and the case is ripe for summary decision; the clear intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:46-21 is that the tuition charged by PSHs be fair and related to the educational services actually provided by the PSH, and regulations were promulgated by the Department to implement this statutory intent; the intent of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) is to ensure that sending districts are promptly advised about proposed tuition adjustments, that such adjustments be linked to properly developed financial data, that these financial reports be approved by the PSHs' governing body, and that such approval is a prerequisite to Department approval of the final tuition rate; and Brookfield acted in concert with these regulatory requirements when it notified sending districts in November 2008 of the proposed tuition adjustments. The ALJ determined that N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) does not expressly require formal approval of a PSHs' financial report prior to proposing a rate increase, and concluded that Brookfield substantially complied with the regulatory requirements. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered summary decision in favor of petitioner.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that summary decision is appropriately granted to the petitioner. The Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and Brookfield's request for a tuition increase of 17.39% for 2008-2009 was granted.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent's exceptions and petitioner's reply thereto – submitted in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

Respondent's exceptions essentially recast and reiterate its arguments advanced before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. In that the Commissioner finds that such arguments were fully considered and addressed in the Initial Decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in her decision – that summary decision is appropriately granted to petitioner.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent's determination limiting the tuition increase allowably charged by Brookfield Schools for the 2008-09 school year to 10 percent is reversed.

Brookfield Schools' request for a tuition increase of 17.39 percent for the 2008-09 school year is hereby granted.

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Brookfield Schools (Brookfield), is a private school for the disabled, which has been approved by the State of New Jersey, Department of Education (the Department), to receive public school special education students on a tuition basis.

Brookfield challenges the Department's determination to restrict its 2008–2009 tuition rate to a 10 percent increase over its tentative per diem rate. The Department contends that its action was warranted by Brookfield's failure to comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), which requires private schools for the disabled to timely notify sending districts when proposed tuition increases will exceed 10 percent. Specifically, the Department asserts that Brookfield's notice to its sending districts was based on financial data that had not yet been approved by its Board of Trustees. Brookfield urges that it complied with the letter and spirit of the regulation.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Brookfield filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) on September 24, 2010. An answer was filed on October 13, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 14, 2010. I conferred with counsel via telephone, who advised that they believed that this matter could be resolved on cross-motions for summary decision. Via letter order dated January 5, 2011, I set down a discovery and briefing schedule, which was later extended by consent of the parties. Cross-motions and supporting briefs were filed on April 28, 2011. Simultaneous replies were filed on May 31, 2011, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts are not in dispute, and I FIND as follows:

Brookfield is a private school for the disabled, and is approved by the Department to receive special needs students from local public school districts. In accordance with Department regulations, Brookfield established a tentative per diem tuition rate of $184 at the commencement of the 2008–2009 school year. In September and October 2008 Brookfield experienced an unexpected drop in enrollment, and lost 25 percent of its students. As a result, its costs per pupil escalated dramatically. Financial reports were presented to the Brookfield Board of Trustees at its November 24, 2008, meeting, reflecting that the final per diem tuition rate would increase by more than 10 percent of the tentative rate charged. Via formal resolution the Board of Trustees approved these financial reports.

Just prior to that meeting, Brookfield business manager Mary Anne McStravick communicated with her counterparts at the sending public school districts. Her November 21, 2008, letter advised as follows:

> In reviewing our records we have discovered that due to an unexpected decrease in enrollment the actual cost per pupil at Brookfield Academy–Transition to College for the 2008–2009 school year may be in excess of ten percent of the tentative tuition rate charged of $184. In accordance with the New Jersey State Department of Education [sic] we are required to notify each sending district as well as the Assistant Commissioner of finance [sic] that such an increase will be charged and the reason for the charge.

This letter was mailed to the local business administrators on November 21, 2008, as confirmed in certified answers to Requests for Admissions signed by McStravick on January 25, 2011.[1]

Audited financial statements were thereafter forwarded by Brookfield to the Department for review. These documents certified a per diem rate of $216, an increase of 17.39 percent above the tentative rate. Via letter dated April 29, 2010, Jim Verner, a section supervisor for the Office of Fiscal Policy and Planning, disallowed a tuition charge increase in excess of 10 percent of the tentative rate because the financial report for the quarter ending September 30, 2008, did not substantiate this significant an increase. Brookfield appealed Verner's decision to Acting Assistant Commissioner Yut'se Thomas via letter dated June 1, 2010.

McStravick urged in her letter of appeal that the September first quarterly report did not demonstrate a need for a greater than 10 percent increase because the drop in enrollment that necessitated this increase did not take place until October. Although the regulation requires quarterly financial reports, McStravick noted that she "goes above that requirement and reports on a monthly basis." Based on the data available to her, it was clear that notification that tuition would need to increase was warranted in November. McStravick wrote, "[o]ur goal is to be responsible stewards of our sending districts' funds. As such, we felt it appropriate and responsible to send the notification as soon as it was apparent that we would be in excess of 10%, rather than waiting for the second quarter reports to indicate that."

Thomas replied via letter dated July 28, 2010. She agreed that Verner's basis for denying the increase was incorrect, as the November notification was not a notification for the first quarter. But she nonetheless again denied the requested tuition increase. Thomas found that Brookfield did not comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), and, more specifically, N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)(11), because it notified the sending districts that it proposed an increase prior to the review and acceptance of the November 2008 financial report by the Board of Trustees. Accordingly, the Department restricted Brookfield to a 10 percent increase, allowing a tuition adjustment from the tentative rate of $186 to $202.40 per diem.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The parties have cross-moved for relief under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, which provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "[t]he judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'Fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (citing Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (citing Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 213 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 251–52, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214.

It is clear from the submissions of the parties that they do not disagree as to the facts, only as to how those facts should affect Brookfield's ability to increase its tuition rate under the regulatory scheme. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision.

Brookfield is approved to receive public school special needs students pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-15, and, as such, must comply with complex statutory and regulatory provisions which govern the tuition it may charge. N.J.S.A. 18A:46-21 states that Brookfield may determine a tuition rate to be paid by its sending boards of education, "but in no case shall the tuition rate exceed the actual cost per pupil as determined under rules prescribed by the commissioner and approved by the State Board of Education." The statute recognizes that tuition is paid to schools like Brookfield with public funds, and that these funds are utilized to educate public school students with multifaceted needs that cannot be met within their home school districts. Council of Private Sch. for Children with Special Needs, Inc. v. Cooperman, 205 N.J. Super. 544 (App. Div. 1985). Accordingly, the clear intent of the statute is that the tuition charged be fair and reasonably related to the educational services actually provided by the private school. Regulations promulgated by the Department are designed to implement this statutory intent. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.1 to -18.16.

The private school and a sending district typically establish an initial agreement for the provision of services based upon a tentative tuition rate. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(h). In order to establish a final tuition rate that is based on the certified actual cost per pupil, the private school must prepare quarterly financial reports in a format approved by the Department. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)(11). These reports must be submitted to the private school's governing body for approval, and the acceptance of the report must be documented in the governing body's minutes. Once a final rate is established an adjustment is made. Thus, if the tentative rate does not adequately reflect the actual cost per pupil, the private school may bill its sending public districts for "all or part of the difference owed." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(m).

Consistent with the goal of ensuring the proper and orderly expenditure of public funds, the regulations expressly direct private schools for the disabled to give timely notice of anticipated tuition adjustments, as follows:

> 2. If the approved private school for students with disabilities proposes to charge a final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative tuition rate charges, the private school shall notify each sending district board of education and the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance that such an increase will be charged and the reason for the increase on or before the following dates: December 15th for the first quarter, March 15th for the second quarter, June 15th for the third quarter and September 15th for the fourth quarter, or the next business day when applicable. The determination of a final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative tuition rate charged shall be based on the completion of the required quarterly financial report in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)11.

> i. If the sending district board of education and the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance are not notified on or before the dates noted in (a)2 above, the approved private school for students with disabilities shall charge an increase not to exceed 10 percent of the tentative tuition rate charged.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) (emphasis supplied).]

The Department does not contend that Brookfield failed to give timely notice of its proposed tuition increase to its sending public school districts. There is no contention that its November 2008 financial report was not completed in a format approved by the Commissioner. Nor does the Department assert that the requested tuition increase was not justified by the financial data presented. Rather, the Department denied the requested tuition adjustment only because McStravick's notification letter predated formal approval of her financial report by her Board of Trustees by three days.[2] The Department urges that the local districts were notified of a tuition increase before "completion of the required quarterly financial report," and thus before Brookfield could have properly determined a final tuition rate under the process required by the regulation. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) (emphasis supplied).

Brookfield bears the burden of demonstrating that the Department's determination was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Titusville Acad., Inc. v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., EDU 00651-06, Initial Decision (May 21, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (July 6, 2007) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Catholic Family and Cmty. Servs. v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., EDU 01051-01, Initial Decision (January 14, 2003), adopted, Comm'r (March 3, 2003), adopted, State Bd. (July 2, 2003) <http://www.nj.gov/education/legal/>. I CONCLUDE that Brookfield has met its burden. Brookfield asserts that it has substantially, if not fully, complied with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) and N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)(11) and that the decision of the Department denying a tuition increase in excess of 10 percent should be reversed. I agree. It is well established that an administrative regulation is subject to the same canons of construction as a statute. In re N.J.A.C. 14A:20-1.1, 216 N.J. Super. 297,

[2] Review of a 2008 calendar reveals that the letter was dated only one business day prior to the board meeting at which the report was approved. November 21, 2008, was a Friday, and November 24, 2008, was the following Monday.

306 (App. Div. 1987). When interpreting a statute or regulation, our courts assume that the framers intended to ascribe to words their ordinary meaning. Jablonowska v. Suther, 195 N.J. 91, 105 (2008). The intent of a statute or regulation should be gleaned from a view of the whole and of every part of the statute, with the real intention prevailing over the literal sense of its terms. Schierstead v. City of Brigantine, 29 N.J. 220 (1959).

It is clear from the language of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) that the regulation's real intent is that sending districts be promptly advised about proposed tuition adjustments, and that such adjustments be linked to properly developed financial data. It is also clear that financial reports must be approved by the private school's governing body, and that such approval would be a prerequisite to Department approval of the final tuition rate. I concur with Brookfield that it acted in concert with these regulatory requirements. It based its November 21, 2008, notification to its sending districts on hard data developed by its financial professionals. It ensured that the sending local public districts had this critical financial information as promptly as possible, indeed, sooner than contemplated by the regulation.[3] McStravick presented her financial report to Brookfield's Board of Trustees, and secured its approval prior to finalizing Brookfield's final tuition rate for 2008–2009.

I CONCLUDE that Brookfield has been penalized for failing to comply with an apparent agency requirement that is not clearly and explicitly expressed in regulatory language. Neither regulation relied upon by the Department definitively demands that a financial report be formally approved prior to notifying sending districts that tuition may increase. Indeed, under N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) notification to sending districts is required when a private school "proposes" a change in the tuition rate.[4] Conversely, it is the "determination of a final rate" that must be based on a "completed" financial report. Similarly, N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)(11) contains no language requiring that a "proposed" change in tuition postdate formal approval of the private school's financial

[3] Under the regulation, Brookfield should have notified its sending districts that tuition would be adjusted upwards in excess of 10 percent no later than December 15, but did so several weeks earlier, in late November.

[4] The word "propose" does not suggest a final decision. The website "dictionary.com" defines "propose" as "to offer or suggest . . . for consideration, acceptance or action."

data. This latter regulation requires only that a financial report be prepared quarterly using a prescribed format, and be submitted to the school's governing body for approval.

The Department correctly stresses that an agency's interpretation of its own regulations is entitled to deference. Matturi v. Bd. of Tr. of the Judicial Ret. Sys., 173 N.J. 368, 381 (2002). But under the guise of due deference, the agency cannot read a requirement into a regulation that would not be plainly apparent to its readers. Regulations must be clear enough to enable the regulated community to understand what standard it will be required to meet. Youth Consultation Serv., Inc. v. Dep't of Educ., EDU 7893-03, Initial Decision (September 2, 2004), aff'd, Comm'r (October 13, 2004) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. If the Department requires that private schools notify sending districts about proposed tuition increases only after their financials are approved by their governing bodies, it needed to have said so, in unambiguous regulatory language adopted in accordance with the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 (the Act).

Indeed, it is well established that when an agency requirement constitutes a rule, it must comply with the rulemaking procedures contained in the Act. It is clear that the Department has penalized Brookfield for violating what the agency perceives to be a rule of general application, and one that "is intended to be applied generally and uniformly to all similarly situated persons." N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(e); Metromedia v. Div. of Taxation, 97 N.J. 313, 331 (1984). Our Supreme Court has recognized that "[W]ithout published rules of procedure and substantive criteria for [the taking of the proposed action, affected parties] have been denied any meaningful opportunity for informal response to the proposed action." Metromedia, supra, 97 N.J. at 330 (1984) (citation omitted); see also Coal. for Quality Health Care v. Dep't of Banking and Ins., 348 N.J. Super. 272, 294–95 (App. Div. 2002).

The Department argues strenuously that its regulatory interpretation is grounded in the goal of "ensuring better budgeting and tracking of expenditures because it provides an additional level of accountability and assurance that the figures used to determine a tuition increase are accurate." (Department's Brief at 11.) But the regulations also promote an equally, if not more important, goal, that is, the academic success of our state's special needs students. Indeed, our courts have recognized that these regulations "reflect the State Board's determination that the quality of education provided by private schools receiving handicapped pupils is directly related to the amount of tuition that the schools spend on approved educational costs." Council of Private Sch., supra, 205 N.J. Super. at 547. Under the facts presented here, Brookfield's students are best served by allowing Brookfield to charge the tuition needed to adequately meet their educational needs.

For this reason, even if I were persuaded that N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) expressly required formal approval of the financial report prior to proposing a rate increase, I would CONCLUDE that the overarching goals of the regulation are best served by a determination that Brookfield substantially complied with the regulation's requirements. Bernstein v. Bd. of Tr., 151 N.J. Super. 71, 76–77 (App. Div. 1977). Brookfield certainly comported itself in a fashion consistent with the regulation's goals. Its actions did not prejudice the Department or the sending school districts, which all received timely notice of the proposed rate increase. Its proposed increase was based on sound financial data, which was approved by the Board of Trustees only one business day after the controverted letter was sent. Id. at 77. It is clear that Brookfield substantially complied with the regulatory requirements contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2).

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, the action of the Department of Education limiting the tuition increase for the 2008–2009 school year for the Brookfield Schools to 10 percent is REVERSED. It is ORDERED that summary decision is granted in favor of Brookfield, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 17.39 percent for the 2008–2009 school year. The Department's motion for summary decision is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

OF JEFFERSON, MORRIS COUNTY.	:

The record, settlement agreement (Settlement Agreement), and Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner observes that the Settlement Agreement contains several handwritten modifications, including the addition of an entire handwritten paragraph, that have not been initialed by the parties. Since the modifications have not been initialed, it is not clear whether the changes were made before or after the document was executed and/or approved by the parties. Therefore, the Commissioner cannot approve the within settlement agreement in its present form.

Accordingly, the Commissioner hereby remands this matter to the OAL for revision of the Settlement Agreement consistent with the concerns set forth above. SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Agreement is made by and between the Jefferson Township Board of Education (hereinafter "Board"), having its principal offices at 28 Bowling Green Parkway, Lake Hopatcong, New Jersey, and Kirsten Smith (hereinafter referred to as "Smith"), residing at 3 North Glen Circle, Oak Ridge, New Jersey, in an effort to resolve the Tenure Charges pending before the Commissioner of Education, for hearing at the Office of Administrative law, and the Superior Court litigation bearing Docket Number MRS-L-001391 10, and to resolve all remaining issues between the parties.

WHEREAS, the parties have determined that resolution of this matter without proceeding further in the pending tenure dismissal hearing pursuant to the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq., and the pending Superior Court action, is in the interests of the public and consistent with furthering the public good, since the Petitioner District will obtain its goal of no longer employing Respondent as a tenured teacher, without having to resort to a lengthy hearing to address twenty-three tenure charges, the anticipated number of witnesses to be produced (which may include student and former student witnesses), the anticipated time and expense of the hearing, the loss of services of three top District administrators during the course of the preparation and hearing, as well as the uncertainty of completing the case in the five hearing dates currently scheduled; and

WHEREAS, the parties agree to fully and finally settle and/or release all claims between them arising out of Smith's employment and separation from employment with District;

The parties do hereby agree as follows:

1. The foregoing recitals are incorporated herein.

2. Smith has executed and supplied an irrevocable letter of resignation, which is attached to this Agreement, which will be accepted at the next public Board meeting and which resignation will become effective on Feb. 29, 2012 or the date that this Agreement is approved by the Commissioner of Education, whichever is later.

3. Until the ~~effective~~ date ~~of the resignation or~~ approval of this Agreement by the Commissioner, Smith will continue on ~~paid~~ suspension. Smith will begin to receive compensation upon approval by the Commission of this Settlement Agreement.

4. During the term of said suspension, and in perpetuity following the approval of this Agreement by the Commissioner, Smith will not volunteer for, be a participant in, or attend any program, event, or activity which is at all related to the Jefferson Township Public Schools, which shall include, but not be limited to, any program, event or activity which is sponsored by the Jefferson Township Public Schools, any co-curricular or extra curricular program, event or activity involving the students of the Jefferson Township Public Schools (regardless of location), any program, event or

Said Compensation to be eight (8) months of salary. In addition she will receive payment for health coverage (COBRA) between the date of her resignation and June 30 2012 activity which operates with or uses Jefferson Township Public Schools monies or funding, or any program, event or activity which is located in or on any Jefferson Township Public Schools property (whether owned or leased). This shall not include Smith's participation in or attendance at any program related to her children during such time as they attend District schools.

5. In consideration of the foregoing, the Board will not prosecute the tenure changes against Smith.

6. In consideration of the foregoing, Smith hereby releases and forever discharges the Board and its present and former affiliates, subsidiaries, officers, directors, agents, employees, and their successors and assigns, from any and all actions, causes of action, suits, claims, charges or complaints which Smith may have or may have had, or may claim to have or have had, in the past, currently, ~~or in the future~~, against any of them, except as may be necessary to enforce this Agreement. Smith acknowledges that this general release specifically waives and releases all claims including. but not limited to, claims arising under federal, State, and local laws prohibiting employment discrimination, claims arising under the State education laws, N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1, et seq., including but not limited to the "Tenure" laws set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1, et seq., and the "Tenure Employees Hearing Law," set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, et seq., as well as any and all claims or rights arising under the Civil Rights Acts of 1964 and 1991, 42. U.S.C. 2000(e), et seq., the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, N.J.S.A. 10:5-1, et seq., Title VII of the Federal Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended 42 U.S.C. § 2000 (3), et seq., the Conscientious Employee Protection Act, N.J.S.A. 34:19-1, et seq. claims arising under State, federal or common law for breach of contract, or claims growing or any claims arising out of or in any way related to the State Family Leave Act or the Federal Family and Medical Leave Act out of any legal restrictions on the Board's rights with regard to employment of individuals, or claims arising out of or related to any State workers compensation laws, Smith hereby agrees to voluntarily dismiss, with prejudice, her suit against all the Defendant Board bearing Docket Number MRS-L-001391 10, New Jersey Superior Court, Morris County.

7. This Agreement does not constitute an admission by either party of any wrongful action or violation of any federal or State statute, or common law rights, including those relating to the provisions of any law or statute concerning employment actions, or of any other possible or claimed violation of law or rights.

7A. See attached.

8. The terms of this Agreement shall be kept confidential to the extent permitted by law. Smith agrees not to disclose the fact, terms or amount thereof by any means of communication or media to any person other than Smith's immediate family, accountant, attorney, income tax preparer or similar professional, or taxing authorities, and to NJEA Representative unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction. Smith further agrees that she will not engage in, or encourage others to engage in, communications regarding her employment or the actions of the Board or Administration, and the like, via social media. The District agrees not to disclose the fact, terms or amount thereof to any person other than its Board of Education members, administrators and necessary clerical staff, accountants, auditors, attorneys, tax preparers, or other persons on a need-to-know basis, or unless otherwise ordered by a court of competent jurisdiction or required by a government agency.

9. This Agreement shall be binding upon and inure to the benefit of Smith, the Board, and any of their respective heirs, legal or personal representatives, employees, officers, directors, successors or assigns.

10. This Agreement sets forth the entire Agreement between the parties and supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings between the parties. Smith represents and acknowledges that she does not rely, and has not relied upon, any representation or statement not set forth in this Agreement made by the Board or its counsel with regard to the subject matter, basis, or effect of this Agreement or otherwise.

11. This Agreement shall be construed in accordance with, and all disputes hereunder shall be governed by, the laws of the State of New Jersey.

12. Smith acknowledges that she has carefully read and fully understands all of the terms of this Agreement, and has fully discussed the terms hereof, including the general release contained herein, with her attorney, Sanford Oxfeld, Esq., that she has had a reasonable period of time to consider the terms hereof, and that she enters into this Agreement voluntarily and with the advice of counsel.

13. In the event of a breach of this Agreement, either party may seek relief, including but not limited to damages, restitution and injunctive relief, at law or in equity, in a court of competent jurisdiction and/or tenure dismissal before the Department of Education and the Office of Administrative Law.

14. The parties agree that this Agreement will be incorporated into an Initial Decision by the Honorable Carol I. Cohen, the administrative law judge assigned to preside over the pending tenure dismissal action bearing OAL DKT. NO. EDU 03151-11 and AGENCY REF NO. 51-2/11.

15. The parties recognize that if this Agreement is not approved by the Commissioner of Education, the tenure dismissal proceeding will resume before Judge Cohen until completion.

16. The terms of this Agreement are subject to approval by the Jefferson Township Board of Education and will be voted upon at its next meeting

BEFORE TAHESHA L. WAY, ALJ:

The Department of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law where it was filed on September 9, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Subsequently, the parties reached an amicable agreement, and the attached Stipulation of Settlement indicating the terms of the agreement (J-1), and certified Board Resolution approving the Settlement (J-2) were provided.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

PLAINFIELD BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement is made by and between Lois Davis-Posey, individually ("Petitioner"), whose address is 5 Grace Way, Morristown, New Jersey 07960, and the Plainfield Board of Education ("Respondent District"), with administrative offices located at 1200 Myrtle Avenue, Plainfield, New Jersey 07063, and on the date or dates indicated below.

WHEREAS, on May 24, 2007, Petitioner Lois Davis-Posey was employed by the Board as teacher staff member; and

WHEREAS, Petitioner Lois Davis-Posey was charged with a criminal action for certain acts alleged to have occurred on or about May 27, 2007, while she was in the employ of the Board; and

WHEREAS, on October 6, 2009, the criminal complaint against Petitioner Lois Davis-Posey was dismissed in her favor; and

WHEREAS, on or about August 18, 2010, Petitioner commenced this proceeding against

J-1

Petitioner by way of Petition filed with the Commissioner of Education, the Department of Education for the State of New Jersey, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, entitled Lois Davis-Posey vs. Plainfield Board of Education, OAL EDU-09680-2010N (the "Petition").

WHEREAS, Petitioner seeks indemnification and reimbursement for any and all attorneys fees and costs from the Respondent associated with the legal defense of the criminal action against her pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:16-6.1; and

WHEREAS, the parties have determined that it is their respective best interests to enter into this Settlement Agreement to avoid expensive litigation;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises and covenants exchanged herein and for other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and sufficiency of which are acknowledged, Petitioner and Respondent hereby memorialize their agreement as follows:

1. Settlement of Claim – The Petitioner District and the Respondent agree to settle this Action as follows:

a. The Board, through its insurance carrier, will pay to Lois Davis-Posey the sum of Twenty Thousand and Two Hundred Forty-One Dollars ($20,241.00) in full and complete satisfaction of the amount Lois Davis-Posey is claiming to be due and owing to her from the board for her attorneys' fees, costs and other expenses.

b. This settlement amount will be paid directly to the trust account of Lois Davis-Posey's legal counsel, Caruso, Pope, Smith, Edell, Picini, P.C., (formerly Timothy R. Smith & Associates, LLC), 60 Route 46 East, Fairfield, New Jersey, 07004, following the approval of this Stipulation and Settlement and Release by the Board.

2. Withdrawal of Petition before the Commissioner Of Education – Petitioner shall cause her Petition in this proceeding to be withdrawn by advising the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education of her intention and desire to withdraw her claim in this proceeding.

3. Confidentiality - No party shall issue or cause to be issued any statement regarding the Action which contradicts the terms of the settlement herein.

4. No Admission - It is specifically acknowledged and understood by the parties that this Agreement is not an indication or admission of any violation of any law, statute or regulation or a breach of any duty by Respondent. It is further acknowledged that the payments referenced herein or made hereunder are not indicative of any action or inaction taken by Petitioner District and/or Respondent, their past and present Board members, administrators, agents, employees or attorneys, with respect to the filed and approved tenure charges in this proceeding. It is understood and agreed by the parties that the settlement is being made solely to alleviate the necessary time and expense of a hearing, preparation therefore and/or further proceedings and continued payment of any salary entitlements to Respondent. This Agreement and compliance with this Agreement shall not be construed as an admission by any party of any liability or improper filing of tenure charges whatsoever with respect to any matter in this proceeding. This Agreement may not be introduced into evidence or used in any other way in any other legal or administrative proceeding other than a proceeding seeking enforcement of the terms of this Agreement.

5. Mutual Releases – The Petitioner District and the Respondent herein, by mutual agreement and consideration, hereby release each other from any and all obligations in the matter styled, Lois Davis-Posey vs. Plainfield Board of Education, OAL EDU-09680-2010N. Whereas, Respondent District and Petitioner have accepted the terms of the settlement in the aforementioned administrative proceeding as set forth herein; and Respondent District and the Petitioner agree, by further mutual agreement and consideration, to release and discharge each other, their representatives, attorneys, successors and assigns and employees, if any, from any and all actions, causes of action of any kind, suits, charges and obligations, debts, dues, sums of money, accounts, reckonings, bonds, bills, specialties, covenants, contracts, sales and purchases, deed of conveyance(s), title deficiencies, controversies, agreements, promises, variances, trespasses, damages, judgments, extents, executions, claims, and demands whatsoever, in law, admiralty or equity, which against their heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns ever had, now have or hereafter can, shall or may have for, upon, or by reason of any matter, cause or thing whatsoever from the beginning of time to the date of this release and agreement.

6. Representation and Negotiation by Counsel - The parties acknowledge that this Agreement is the result of arms length negotiations between the parties, all of whom are represented by counsel. The parties have consulted with their attorneys throughout the negotiations and have been fully advised of all of the ramifications of this Agreement, including the claims and rights they are waiving herein and the affirmative obligations they are agreeing to undertake. The parties are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this Agreement and all other aspects of this case and they enter into this Agreement knowingly, willingly and without any coercion or improper inducements.

7. Entire Agreement - This Agreement represents the entire agreement and understanding between the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof. This Agreement may not be modified unless same is in writing, authorized, approved and signed by all parties. Each party agrees to execute such further and additional documents, instruments and writings as may be reasonably necessary, proper, required, desirable or convenient for the purpose of fully effectuating the terms and provisions of this Agreement.

8. Severability - If any provision of this Agreement or the application thereof is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect any other provisions or applications and, to this end, the provisions of this Agreement are declared to be severable.

9. Law Governing - This Agreement and all of its terms and conditions shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey. The Commissioner of Education, the Department of Education of the State of New Jersey, shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any and all actions or assignments related to or arising out of this Agreement since the Petition herein was filed under the administrative jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education.

10. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts, each of which shall constitute an original, but all of which shall constitute one and the same agreement.

11. This Agreement is for the benefit of the parties hereto and their successors and assigns.

12. This Agreement constitutes the entire Agreement among the parties hereto, and supersedes any prior understandings, agreements or representations by or between the parties, written or oral, which may have related to the subject matter hereof.

13. This Agreement cannot be amended or waived except in writing signed by all of the parties hereto. No waiver of any provision hereunder or any breach or default shall extend to or affect in any way any other provision of this Agreement or any prior or subsequent breach or default.

14. This Agreement shall be binding on any successor or assignee of the parties hereto.

15. The parties' agreement to the settlement contained herein and their execution of this Agreement shall not be deemed an admission of liability or wrongdoing.

16. Petitioner acknowledges that she has reviewed this Settlement Agreement with her own independent legal counsel and that she enters into it without duress, and for her own free will and volition. She further acknowledges that she fully understands the terms of this Settlement Agreement and the duties and obligations enumerated herein.

17. This Stipulation of Settlement and Release is conditioned upon approval of the Board.

18. The Board's President is authorized to execute this Stipulation of Settlement and Release on behalf of the Board.

19. Execution - This Agreement may be signed in several counterparts, all of which when taken together shall constitute a single document.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties and/or their representative(s) hereto have duly executed this Agreement as of the date first written above.

These matters were consolidated via order dated October 8, 2009. They were transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on April 27, 2004, April 3, 2006 and July 7, 2009, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures on the attached settlement agreement. The State Operated School District of the City of Newark has approved the settlement, as evidenced by the signature of the State District Superintendent.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

The parties in this appeal have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following settlement that fully disposes of all issues in controversy between Petitioner Jacqueline Hinkson ("Petitioner" or "Hinkson") and Respondent State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("Respondent" or the "District") involving the above-captioned matters:

1. Petitioner agrees to withdraw, with prejudice, her appeals and requests for hearings filed under OAL Dkt. Nos. EDUOR-003804-04, EDUOR-003772-06 and EDUOR 007537-09.
2. In exchange, Respondent agrees to credit Petitioner's sick day bank with thirty one (31) days that were originally charged to Petitioner.
3. Petitioner will not receive any back pay as part of this settlement.
4. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other employees.

5. The terms of this agreement shall not be construed as an admission of guilt or wrongdoing by either party and will not be utilized by either party in any subsequent matters that may arise in the future.

6. By entering into this Settlement Agreement, Petitioner releases and discharges the District, its directors, officers and employees with respect to all claims or rights in any court that she may have against the District with the exception of workers' compensation claims and only the claims contained in Petitioner's previously docketed case EDUOR 05466-2010 which is currently still pending before the Court. Except for workers' compensation claims and EDUOR 05466-2010, this release and discharge generally includes without limitation, any and all other actions, claims and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Petitioner's employment with the District or separation from the District to date. It specifically includes, without limitation, all claims which Petitioner may have regarding tenure, withholding of increment, discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker

7. The parties respectively acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Settlement Agreement and that each is signing this Agreement freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion or pressure from the other party.

8. This Agreement is subject to the approval of the State District Superintendant of the State-operated School District of the City of Newark and will only become effective upon the approval of the State District Superintendent. Any disapproval by the Superintendent shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter further.

TAEA CROSS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF ELMWOOD PARK, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, a bus driver/utility worker, contended that the Board improperly terminated her employment in December 2010, in violation of her tenure rights. The Board asserted that the petitioner's bus driver position is not entitled to tenure protection, and her services as a utility worker do not meet the full-time criteria for tenure as a custodian. The parties agreed to proceed on a summary basis as the essential facts in the matter were not in dispute.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner does not qualify for tenure as a bus driver; petitioner was employed under a fixed-term contract, and her fixed-term, part-time employment as a utility worker does not meet the criteria for janitorial tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioner did not have tenure in her former position and therefore no tenure rights were violated. The ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that 1) petitioner could not earn tenure as a bus driver, and 2) as a part-time utility worker with fixed term appointments, she qualified neither for tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 nor the tenure benefit provided in the applicable collective bargaining agreement. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

TAEA CROSS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF ELMWOOD PARK, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner challenges her dismissal from employment as a bus driver/utility worker in respondent's district. The petition was filed in February 2011 with an application for emergent relief. The Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) recites that the parties agreed – on February 15, 2011 – to a summary proceeding, and submitted their respective papers by April 6, 2011.

On June 21, 2011, the Initial Decision was transmitted to the Commissioner.[1] It included a finding that petitioner had not earned tenure in respondent's district, and a conclusion that respondent had not violated petitioner's rights when it dismissed her on December 15, 2010.

Review of the record, initial decision and exceptions leads to the conclusion that the ALJ did not err in recommending dismissal of the petition. As noted by the ALJ, bus drivers – in contrast to teaching staff members and janitorial employees – enjoy no statutory right to tenure. See, e.g., Albert v. Bd. of Educ. of the Freehold Reg'l High School Dist., 1977 S.L.D. 594, at 601. Nor does petitioner allege that the applicable collective bargaining agreement (CBA) bestows tenure upon bus drivers, per se. Rather, petitioner appears to rely on the fact that her position involved "utility" duties, which she characterizes as janitorial.

However, neither N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 – the statute setting forth the conditions for tenure of janitorial employees – nor the provisions of the applicable CBA support petitioner's position. The provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 exclude from tenure those janitorial employees who are appointed for fixed terms. The exhibits annexed to the March 11, 2011 supplemental certification of respondent's Business Administrator/Board Secretary, William Moffitt, indicate that petitioner's employment was renewed annually for a fixed term – via board resolution. Such annual renewal for a fixed term precludes tenure under N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 unless the CBA includes provisions to the contrary.

While the record transmitted to the Commissioner does not include a copy of the applicable CBA, the parties appear to agree that Article VI of the CBA provides that tenure rights shall be acquired after three years of satisfactory services for full-time custodial and maintenance personnel. Relying on such authority as Wright and East Orange Personnel Ass'n v. East Orange Bd. of Educ., 99 NJ 112 (1985), petitioner argues that Article VI entitled her to tenure in 2007, after she had completed three years of service in respondent's district.

In Wright, the validity of a contractual provision similar to Article VI was at issue. The New Jersey Supreme Court held that "inasmuch as N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 does not preempt a school board's power to grant tenure to custodial employees after three years of satisfactory performance [whether or not the employee's appointment terms were fixed], and inasmuch as a negotiated provision to that effect advances the primary purpose of the statute without significantly interfering with educational policy," the provision was valid. Wright, supra at 123. However, respondent maintains – and petitioner does not appear to deny – that Article VI bestows tenure rights after three years of satisfactory service for full-time custodial and maintenance personnel. As a part-time utility worker, petitioner did not qualify for the tenure benefit provided by Article VI.

As petitioner did not introduce any evidence to refute the allegations of fact – set forth in the Certification dated February 16, 2011 of Richard D. Tomko, respondent's Superintendent – concerning the incidents which led to petitioner's suspension and subsequent dismissal, the determination that petitioner did not acquire tenure constitutes a full disposition of the claims in the petition. Further, pursuant to the "entire controversy doctrine," this matter may not be refiled to adjudicate facts and/or claims which were known or should have been known during the prosecution of this case.[2]

Finally, the Commissioner notes that petitioner's arguments regarding respondent's treatment of another employee are unhelpful to the disposition of this case. The achievement of tenure is dictated by statute. Spiewak v. Board of Education of the City of Plainfield, 90 N.J. 63 (1982). If, as here, the facts reveal that petitioner did not meet the statutory criteria for tenure, she is foreclosed from claiming the benefits of same.

Accordingly, petitioner's dismissal is upheld and the petition is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

[2] The entire controversy doctrine holds that the adjudication of a legal controversy should occur in one litigation in only one court and that, accordingly, all parties involved in a litigation should at the very least present in that proceeding all of their claims and defenses that are related to the underlying controversy. Cogdell v. Hospital Center, 116 N.J. 7, 15 (1989). The entire controversy doctrine is applicable to administrative hearings. City of Hackensack v. Winner, 82 N.J. 1, 31-32 (1980).

Record Closed: April 11, 2011 Decided: June 20, 2011

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Taea Cross claims that the Elmwood Park Board of Education improperly terminated her employment as a bus driver/utility worker on December 15, 2010, in violation of her tenure rights.

Petitioner filed her petition seeking Interim Emergent Relief with the Commissioner of Education on or about February 8, 2011. On February 11, 2011, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a determination as a contested case. On February 15, 2011, the parties appeared at the OAL where the parties agreed to proceed on a summary basis since the essential facts were not in dispute. The record closed on April 11, 2011, upon receipt of written arguments.

ISSUE

Should petitioner's emergent request be granted? Does petitioner have tenure? And, if she does have tenure, was her termination proper?

STATEMENT OF THE FACTS

The pertinent facts pertaining to petitioner's employment are essentially not in dispute. Those FACTS are:

Petitioner was hired by the respondent Board of Education of the Borough of Elmwood Park in 2004 as a bus driver/utility worker. Her responsibilities as a bus driver included the transporting of students to and from school, school sponsored activities and field trips, inspecting the buses, reviewing the bus at the conclusion of each trip, cleaning the bus and fixing the bus. As a utility worker she was responsible for transporting the mail throughout the district, she cleans about the school, moves and delivers supplies/packages throughout the district and trash removal.

On or about November 2, 2010, petitioner was suspended with pay.

On or about December 15, 2010, respondent Board terminated petitioner's employment with the district.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The granting of emergent relief is an extraordinary remedy which can only be awarded based upon a showing that irreparable harm will result if it is not granted, and a further showing that there is a likelihood of success on the merits. See N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6. The New Jersey Supreme Court has set forth a four-prong test for determining whether an applicant is entitled to emergent relief. Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-134 (1982). Those four prongs are:

> 1. The relief should not be granted unless it is necessary to prevent irreparable harm. Harm is generally considered irreparable if it cannot be adequately redressed by monetary damages.
>
> 2. Such relief should not be granted when the legal rights underlying the claim are unsettled.
>
> 3. In order to prevail on the application for temporary relief, a party must make a preliminary showing of reasonable probability of ultimate success on the merits.
>
> 4. On balance, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

A petitioner seeking emergent relief must meet all four prongs in order to prevail.

The basis of petitioner's claim for emergent relief lies on the fact that she has been terminated and is not receiving a paycheck and her medical benefits have been terminated. "Irreparable harm" is defined as the type of harm "that cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-33. In addition, the irreparable standard contemplates that the harm be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Commc'n v. Day, 229 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1977). Petitioner in her arguments does not offer anything indicating she would incur an irreparable harm. In her certifications, petitioner asserts that she is a single mother of two children, ages twelve and four, that she is unemployed and has no health insurance. I FIND that petitioner has not shown irreparable harm; and, if there is harm, it can be repaired monetarily.

On the issue of does petitioner have tenure, the Board argues that she does not have tenure because the tenure law does not afford tenure protection to school bus drivers and that—at best—she was a part-time utility employee. Secondly, the Board presents that, in accordance to N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3, a utility worker must be appointed to an indefinite term in order to qualify for tenure as a utility employee.

Petitioner argues that she does have tenure because: 1) she had dual duties as a bus driver/utility worker and tenure is provided to utility/maintenance workers, 2) the district does not apportion the time petitioner conducts bus-driving and utility duties, 3) it has been the Board's practice to give tenure to bus driver/utility workers and, 4) the Board's records indicate petitioner was to attain tenure on November 1, 2007. See Exhibit-A of respondent's business administrator's certification.

School janitors (utility workers) are given tenure rights under a specific New Jersey statute. [N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3.]

> Every public school janitor of a school district shall, unless he is appointed for a fixed term, hold his office, position or employment under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and shall not be dismissed or suspended or reduced in compensation, except as the result of the reduction of the number of janitors in the district made in accordance with the provisions of this title or except for neglect, misbehavior or other offense and only in the manner prescribed by subarticle B of article 2 chapter 6 of this title. [Emphasis supplied.]

Based on the oral and written arguments of counsel along with a review of the relevant documentation submitted by the parties, I FIND that petitioner does not have tenure.

According to the documentation provided, namely, the attachments to the supplemental certification of the Board's Business Administrator/Board Secretary William Moffitt, petitioner was given a fixed-term contract from April 24, 2007, to April 27, 2011. According to the exhibits provided the Board gave petitioner her first contract on April 24, 2007, seven months short of her alleged and proposed date for attaining tenure. (See Moffitt Certif. with attachments, Exhibit A.)

N.J.S.A. 18A:17-3 does not require tenure for utility workers/janitors. Instead, the Legislature allows boards of education discretion to deny tenure by appointing janitors for a fixed term, it permits boards and utility workers to negotiate terms of employment, and allows boards to determine which utility worker, if any, shall receive tenure. Wright and E. Orange Personnel Ass'n v. E. Orange Bd. of Educ., 99 N.J. 112, 118-19. A claimant of tenure in situations such as this one bears the burden of presenting sufficient competent and credible evidence of facts essential to his or her claim. Here, petitioner must prove by a preponderance of competent and credible evidence that the respondent employed her without a "fixed term" in order for her claim for tenure to succeed. Wright, supra, 99 N.J. at 119.

Based on the foregoing facts and applicable law, I CONCLUDE that petitioner was employed with a fixed-term contract and she therefore does not have tenure.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that the petitioner's appeal is DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF DEBORAH J. PAONE, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF NEW HANOVER, BURLINGTON COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

The record in this matter, the proposed "Separation Agreement with Release and Waiver" (Settlement), a resolution by respondent authorizing the Settlement, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the following observation.

Sections 1.1, 1.2, 2.6, 4.1 of the Settlement reference actions that may have already taken place, and have therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms, or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the petition is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the settlement terms.

IT IS SO ORDERED.

Record Closed: June 14, 2011 Decided: June 17, 2011

BEFORE DONALD J. STEIN, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on January 10, 2011, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement with Release and Waiver, together with a Board Resolution, indicating the terms thereof, which are attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SEPARATION AGREEMENT with RELEASE and WAIVER between Board of Education of New Hanover Township and Deborah J. Paone

2011 FEB -8 A 10:57

WHEREAS the Board of Education of New Hanover Township (Burlington County) (hereinafter the "Board") and Deborah J. Paone agree that it would be in the best interest of both parties to this Agreement to have Deborah J. Paone's employment terminate; and

WHEREAS Deborah J. Paone has agreed to resign effective at the end of the day on January 5, 2011; and

WHEREAS the parties desire to sever the employment relationship; now therefore the parties

RESOLVE and agree to the following terms.

1. Resignation.

1.1. Deborah J. Paone hereby submits (and attaches hereto as Exhibit A) her signed letter of resignation, terminating all employment with the New Hanover Township Board of Education, effective at the end of the day on January 5, 2011.

1.2. Ms. Paone resigns her tenured position of Business Administrator/Board Secretary effective January 5, 2011.

1.3. Both parties by the terms of this Separation Agreement and General Release wish to end the tenured employment of Ms. Paone.

1.4. The tenure charges which were certified against Ms. Paone by the Board of Education have been submitted to the State Department of Education for withdrawal

1.5. As soon as possible after receipt of this executed Agreement and the signed letter of resignation, the Board will act at a public meeting to approve the Agreement and accept the letter of resignation.

1.6. Following acceptance by the Board, the resignation cannot be modified or withdrawn, unless Ms. Paone revokes this entire Agreement. (The sole method of revoking this Agreement, and the effect of doing so, are described in section 8 of this Agreement.) If Ms. Paone does not revoke this Agreement in accordance with section 8 of this Agreement, the resignation shall be final and binding, and cannot be rescinded or withdrawn.

2. Mutual releases and waiver of right to sue.

2.1. By entering into this Agreement each party releases the other with respect to all claims and rights that either party may have against or involving the other at the present time. This release includes a release of all claims Ms. Paone may have or wish to pursue against the Board and all claims against all agents of the Board. (For purposes of this Agreement, the term "agent of the Board" includes all members of the Board of Education and all employees of the Board.)

2.2. The parties agree that neither party will bring any action or file any suit or claim against the other or against any agent of the Board. Any matters, claims, suits or charges which may be pending at any level shall be withdrawn as soon as this Agreement is signed by the Parties.

2.3. This release includes a waiver of all rights to sue or bring a claim for any reason, including rights secured by Board policy, contract, employment laws, civil rights laws and all other state and federal laws. It is further understood that either party may refer any potential criminal matter to the appropriate legal authorities at any time.

2.4. Ms. Paone also specifically waives the right to sue for any and all claims under the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which protects workers over age 40 from discrimination in the workplace based on age. This waiver applies to events and circumstances which arose prior to the effective date of this Agreement.

2.5. The releases and waivers provided by each of the parties, as described in this section of the Agreement, apply only to facts known by that party on the date of this Agreement.

2.6. Ms. Paone further agrees that her signature on this Agreement constitutes an acknowledgment that she is relinquishing all tenure rights and any other present and future rights to employment and re-employment with the Board as of the close of business on January 5, 2011.

3. The Department of Education Office of Fiscal Accountability and Compliance (OFAC)

3.1 On November 30, 2010 OFAC issued a report entitled the New Hanover Township School District Business Administrator Performance Failure.

3.2 The report was referred to the NJDOE Office of Licensure and Credentials and the Attorney General, Division of Criminal Justice for review by both respective offices.

3.3 The Board will not act on its own initiative to bring about any action. However, Ms. Paone understands that the Board will have an obligation to cooperate in the event of any proceeding against her. Ms. Paone reserves all of her rights to assert that no action should be taken against her.

4. Health benefits after separation.

4.1. Ms. Paone will be eligible for standard COBRA rights for the continuation of health benefits, after her separation from employment. The Board will reimburse Ms. Paone for (3) three-months' payments of COBRA benefits in a lump sum at her separation from employment and upon the execution and implementation of this agreement. Any additional COBRA rights will be at Ms. Paone's expense.

5. Inquiries.

5.1. All inquiries regarding Ms. Paone's employment will be referred to the Superintendent, who will provide (either verbally or in writing, as requested): the position(s) held by Ms. Paone, her most recent annual salary, her dates of service in the District, and her reason for separation from employment (i.e., resignation) only. The District will not release copies of documents from Ms. Paone's personnel file without written authorization from Ms. Paone and payment of such copying fees as may be required.

6. Time for review and consideration of this Agreement.

6.1. Ms. Paone has a period of 21 calendar days during which she can review this Agreement prior to signing it. This review period will run from the date it is received by Ms. Paone. Ms. Paone may sign this Agreement at any time during the 21 day review period and up to 5 days thereafter. This Agreement will then be signed by the Board President, following approval by the Board. This Agreement will become final on the eighth day after signing by both parties, unless revoked by Ms. Paone in accordance with section 11 of this Agreement.

6.2. If Ms. Paone does not sign this agreement before the end of the review period described in the preceding section, the offer of settlement will be automatically withdrawn by the Board and this Agreement will have no force or effect.

7. Right to revoke.

7.1. For a period of seven calendar days after this Agreement is signed by both parties, Ms. Paone will have an opportunity to revoke this Agreement by providing the Board written notice of her decision to revoke.

7.2. The written notice of the decision to revoke must be provided to the Superintendent.

7.3. In order to be effective, the written notice of the decision to revoke must be received by the Superintendent on or before the seventh day following the signing of this Agreement. If the parties have signed on different days, the seven day period will begin following the date of the later signature.

7.4. If this Agreement is revoked during this period, this Agreement will have no effect and the parties will not be bound to any of its terms. This means that Ms. Paone's resignation will be automatically withdrawn and neither party will have any obligation to carry out the settlement terms established by this Agreement.

7.5. If Ms. Paone does not revoke this Agreement, both parties will become bound by the terms of this Agreement on the eighth day following signing by both parties. After the eighth day this Agreement will be irrevocable.

7.6. In addition to the right to revoke delineated in 7.1 through 7.5, Ms. Paone can revoke this Agreement if the Commissioner of Education or the Administrative Law Judge refuse to accept the withdrawal of the tenure charges filed on behalf of the New Hanover Board of Education. Such revocation of this Agreement will become effective by written notice to the Board by Ms. Paone within seven days after she receives notice that the withdrawal of tenure charges has been rejected.

8. Attorney consultation. The Board hereby specifically advises Ms. Paone to consult with an attorney prior to signing this Agreement, and recognizes that she has done so.

9. Opportunity to consult attorney; voluntariness. The parties acknowledge that each has had ample opportunity to seek independent legal counsel, financial or other advice regarding this Agreement. The parties further acknowledge that each party fully understands the terms of this Agreement, and that each party is signing this Agreement freely and voluntarily, without any coercion, duress or pressure from the other party.

10. Circumstances Justifying Settlement (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6)

    10.1. The nature of all charges would require many days of hearing to present the charges, and to defend against them, resulting in significant loss of administrative time and an expenditure of considerable funds for legal fees by the Board.

    10.2. This settlement serves the public interest by achieving finality and certainty with a responsible outcome.

11. Entire agreement. This document contains the entire agreement of the parties and may not be altered, amended or modified except by instrument in writing signed by the parties.

Please read this Agreement carefully before signing.

Re: Resignation

Dear Mr. McBride:

Please be advised that I hereby resign from my employment in the District, effective at the end of the day on January 5, 2011. Please provide this letter to the Board of Education for its approval.

Note, however, that this resignation is void if the Administrative Law Judge or the Commissioner of Education refuse to accept the Board's withdrawal of the tenure charges filed against me.

Thank you for your attention.

Very truly yours,

NEW HANOVER TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION
RESOLUTION

WHEREAS, this Board of Education has received sworn charges dated November 30, 2010 filed in writing with the Board Secretary against Deborah J. Paone, Business Administrator/Board Secretary in the employ of this Board of Education, together with a supporting statement of evidence also executed under oath; and

WHEREAS, said documents were transmitted to the said Deborah J. Paone within seventy-two hours of the date upon which they were filed and the said Deborah J. Paone having filed response, dated December 13, 2010, to the said written statements of charges and supporting statements of evidence; and

WHEREAS, this Board of Education met on Thursday, December 16, 2010 at 7:00 p.m. at the New Hanover Township School Library, and has carefully considered said charges, the supporting statement of evidence, and the sworn answer thereto submitted by Deborah J. Paone.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by this Board of Education as follows:

1. There is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of said charges.

2. The said charges, if credited, are sufficient to warrant dismissal pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11.

And, NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that the Board Secretary, as the agent of the Board of Education, is herewith directed to notify Deborah

J. Paone of this determination of the Board by certified mail directed to her last known address and that the Board Secretary further forward such written charges together with the responses of Deborah J. IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF CHRISTINE GILLESPIE, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

In 2003, petitioning Board filed tenure charges of incapacity and excessive absenteeism against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate her employment with the district. This matter has been prosecuted parallel to a workers' compensation case, the resolution of which respondent contends is a necessary prerequisite to the disposition of the instant tenure charges.

On or about June 20, 2011, the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) forwarded a notice to the Commissioner, stating that respondent had not appeared at a hearing scheduled for June 10, 2011.

After review of the record and recent correspondence from respondent and petitioner, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for further proceedings. In so doing, the Commissioner directed the parties to establish a protocol for communications, and found that the facts surrounding respondent's absence at the June 10, 2011 hearing do not support the severe result of summary disposition by default.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 3399-03
AGENCY DKT. NO. 67-2/03

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF CHRISTINE GILLESPIE, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

This tenure matter – which dates back to 2003 – has been prosecuted parallel to a workers' compensation case, the resolution of which respondent contends is a necessary prerequisite to disposition of the instant tenure charges. Most recently, on April 27, 2011, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in charge of the case denied cross motions, i.e., petitioner's motion for summary disposition and respondent's motion to dismiss the tenure charges.

On or about June 20, 2011, the Commissioner received a notice from the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) stating that respondent had not appeared at a hearing that had been scheduled for June 10, 2011. On June 30, 2011, the Commissioner received a letter from respondent advising 1) that she had received only nine days' notice for said hearing, 2) that she had written both to the ALJ assigned to the case and to the OAL chief ALJ explaining that nine days' notice was insufficient time for her to subpoena witnesses and prepare for the hearing, and 3) that she had contacted the chief ALJ's clerk, who had advised her that hearing notices are generally dispatched several weeks prior to the hearing dates. [1] Respondent further stated that the OAL did not respond to her letters, that she interpreted the silence as agreement to her implied request for a new hearing date, and that the OAL should "correct its report that [she] failed to appear at a scheduled hearing on June 10, 2011."

[1] In the record, there is also a letter dated May, 16, 2011, in which respondent advised the OAL that she had received an empty envelope from it.

Annexed to respondent's June 30, 2011 letter to the Commissioner was a letter addressed to the ALJs referring to her prior correspondence about insufficient notice and, inter alia, challenging the OAL's action in processing the case as a "Failure to Appear." Both the letter to the Commissioner and the letter to the ALJs were copied to opposing counsel.

Petitioner answered respondent's filing by way of a letter, dated and received by the Commissioner on July 8, 2011. In the letter, petitioner reported that it had received notice of the June 10, 2011 hearing on May 3, 2011 – four weeks before the notice was received by respondent. When petitioner's counsel received respondent's correspondence revealing that she had not received the hearing notice until June 1, 2011, counsel asked the OAL for direction. It was counsel's understanding that the OAL would contact respondent by phone to set up a teleconference. It appears, however, that no teleconference occurred because the OAL's efforts to reach respondent by telephone were unsuccessful.

In its July 8, 2011 letter, petitioner's counsel also recited procedural history – which the Commissioner does not view as germane to the resolution of the instant issue – and urged that the Commissioner issue a decision on the tenure charges based only upon the record to date. The Commissioner declines.

Respondent submitted another letter to the Commissioner, filed on July 14, 2011, disputing petitioner's characterization of the procedural history in this matter and, inter alia, stating that the reason the OAL could not reach her by telephone was that it erroneously dialed her fax number. On July 22, 2011, she filed another letter advising that her workers compensation claim had been reinstated, and asking for back wages.

Taking all of the foregoing into consideration, the Commissioner is constrained to remand this case to the OAL. At the outset, the Commissioner perceives a need for the ALJ and the parties to establish a protocol for communications. Respondent shall provide the OAL and petitioner with specific contact information within 10 days of the mailing of this order, the OAL and petitioner shall use only that contact information to communicate with respondent, and respondent will not be excused if she fails to reply to notices, pleadings and communications sent to the phone numbers and addresses that she provides.

As regards the progress of this tenure controversy, the Commissioner does not find that the facts surrounding respondent's absence at the June 10, 2011 hearing support the severe result of summary disposition by default. While the procedural history in the present matter has generally been protracted and perhaps arduous, the Commissioner nonetheless finds that respondent's June 3, 2011 letter, together with the May 16, 2011 letter advising that she had received an empty envelope from the OAL, warranted an express response. When attempts to reach respondent by telephone were unsuccessful, written correspondence should have preceded the abandonment of the case.

The matter is thus remanded to the OAL for further proceedings.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 22, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Stipulation of Settlement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

This order may be reviewed by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION either upon interlocutory review pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 or at the end of the contested case, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.6.

CHARLES JACKSON and JANICE WILLIAMS, Petitioners, vs. CITY OF TRENTON, BOARD OF EDUCATION, MERCER COUNTY and GREG GRANT, Respondents.	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION, STATE OF NEW JERSEY OAL DOCKET NO.: EDU 13861-2010 S AGENCY REF. NO.: 714-12/10 STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the City of Trenton ("the Board") is a body politic and corporate, organized and existing by virtue of the laws of the State of New Jersey, N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1, which is entrusted with maintaining and conducting the public schools of the Trenton Public School District; and

WHEREAS, Charles Jackson and Janice Williams are current employees of the Board; and

WHEREAS, Greg Grant was employed by the Board as Head Varsity Boys' Basketball Coach for the 2010-2011 basketball season; and

WHEREAS, Petitioners filed an administrative Petition of Appeal with the Department of Education in December 2010, alleging that Greg Grant was wrongfully employed in the position of Head Varsity Boys' Basketball Coach at Trenton Central High School instead of Charles Jackson; and

WHEREAS, Petitioners filed an application for emergent relief, which after extensive briefing by the parties, was ultimately denied by Administrative Law Judge James-Beavers; and

WHEREAS, Respondents filed an Answer to the Petition of Appeal in January 2011, generally denying the allegations and setting forth factual bases for their position; and

WHEREAS, this Stipulation has been approved by the State-appointed Fiscal Monitor currently assigned to the Board; and

WHEREAS, the parties wishing to resolve the within matter amicably without the need for further, protracted litigation, while achieving the goals of both parties and the public interest, hereby stipulate to settle same, subject to the terms and conditions set forth herein, upon approval by the Commissioner of Education;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises contained herein, the legal sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged by the parties, they agree as follows:

1. Dismissal of All Claims

This Stipulation is expressly contingent upon and subject to approval by the Commissioner of Education of New Jersey. The parties agree and consent that upon approval of this Stipulation of Settlement by the Commissioner, all claims by and between the parties are to be dismissed. Petitioners further waive any right to any additional compensation or position with the Board that was the subject of this settlement. Upon final approval of this Stipulation, the Board shall forward a settlement check representing the Board's Head Varsity Boys' Basketball Coach stipend for the 2010-2011 school year, minus regular payroll deductions, to Petitioner Charles Jackson. The parties agree, however, that in the event this Stipulation is not approved by the Commissioner of Education, they fully reserve their rights to proceed with this litigation and/or any other cause of action that they might have against one another and that their obligations under this agreement shall be null and void. In entering into this Stipulation, neither party admits any wrongdoing, nor to the merits of any party's position in this matter.

2. Public Interest

Settlement of this matter is in the public interest as it avoids the financial, legal and administrative burden which will result from protracted litigation where all parties agree to these terms of settlement. The parties are in agreement that it is in the best interests of all parties and the Trenton public schools for this matter to be resolved in this manner. Therefore, the parties agree to move forward with a prompt settlement and avoid further unnecessary litigation.

3. Release

In exchange for the mutual promises and consideration set forth in this Stipulation, each party and its successors, heirs and assigns hereby irrevocably and unconditionally waives, releases and forever discharges any claims or rights, whether known or unknown, which either party has or may have against the other, specifically for claims which could have been raised in the within matter. Petitioners specifically acknowledge that this settlement agreement does not entitle Petitioner Jackson to appointment to the position of Boys' Head Varsity Basketball Coach for the 2010-2011 school year, nor to any other current or future coaching position with the Board, provided further that entrance into this settlement agreement does not preclude Petitioner

Jackson from applying for any other coaching position, nor does it preclude the Board from appointing him to any such position in the future.

4. Board Approval

The Board President has been duly authorized by the Board at its Executive Session on June 13, 2011 to execute this Stipulation on behalf of the Board of Education. The Board will execute a Resolution adopting the terms of settlement, which shall be attached to this Stipulation and forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law for review, approval and transmittal to the Commissioner of Education for final approval.

5. Assent to Terms

All parties hereby acknowledge having entered into this Stipulation with a full understanding of their rights and that they were fully informed of the implications of this Stipulation by legal counsel. No party enters into this Stipulation under duress. All parties enter this Stipulation by their free will and volition. All parties were given the opportunity to fully consider the terms and conditions of this settlement.

6. Entire Agreement

This Stipulation of Settlement represents the entire understanding of the parties as to the settlement and may be modified only in a subsequent written instrument, duly executed by the parties. No other representations of any kind shall be binding upon the parties.

7. Severability

In the event that a court or agency of competent jurisdiction shall deem any part of this Stipulation of Settlement to be contrary to law, the remaining portions of the agreement shall remain in full force and effect.

8. Governing Law

This Stipulation of Settlement and all provisions hereof shall be governed by and construed under the laws of the State of New Jersey.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties have knowingly and voluntarily executed and delivered this Stipulation of Settlement on the dates set forth below.

BEFORE MARGARET M. MONACO, ALJ:

On or about May 14, 2010, petitioner Patricia Belin filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education contesting her termination of employment by respondent Board of Education of the City of Plainfield (the Board). The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on June 7, 2010, for determination as a contested case. The hearing was scheduled for January 10 and 12, 2011, which was adjourned at respondent's request (as to January 10) and the parties' joint request (as to January 12). Subsequently, the parties reached an amicable resolution of the matter. Under letter dated June 29, 2011, counsel for respondent forwarded the attached Settlement Agreement and the attached Resolution of the Board approving the terms of the settlement agreement.

Having reviewed the record and the terms of the settlement I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or the signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that settlement should be approved. Accordingly, I approve the settlement ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement (the "Agreement") is made by and between the Plainfield Board of Education ("Respondent District") and Patricia Belin, individually, ("Petitioner") on the date or dates indicated below.

WHEREAS, on or about June 7, 2010, Petitioner commenced proceedings against Respondent District by way of Petition filed with the Commissioner of Education, the Department of Education for the State of New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, Respondent has denied, and continue to deny, the material claims filed against it by the Petitioner in the Action, except those claims admitted in paragraph one below; and

WHEREAS, Respondent District and Petitioner desire to avoid the expense and disruption of further litigation with respect to the subject matter of the Action; and

WHEREAS, Petitioner was employed by the Respondent District as a secretary from December 8, 2006 through March 10, 2010; and

WHEREAS, the parties acknowledge that Ms. Belin earned tenure as a secretary on or about December 9, 2009; and

WHEREAS on March 10, 2010, the Respondent District notified Petitioner that she would be terminated from her employment with the Respondent District effective March 10, 2010 due to budgetary reasons; and

WHEREAS, the Respondent District paid Petitioner full salary and benefits through May 15, 2010; and

WHEREAS, after March 10, 2010 and through to the present, the Respondent District has continued to employ non-tenured staff in secretarial positions; and

WHEREAS, the employment of non-tenured secretaries is in violation of Petitioner's tenure rights in the Respondent District; and

WHEREAS, Petitioner acquired alternative employment effective September 1, 2010 at a salary rate roughly equivalent to her prior earnings with Respondent; and

WHEREAS, Respondent District and Petitioner, upon consultation with their respective counsel, have independently concluded that it is in their respective best interests to settle and resolve any and all disputes and controversies which have been, or could have been, raised between them, with each party to bear their own counsel fees, costs and disbursements; and

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises exchanged herein and for other good and valuable consideration, the receipt and sufficiency of which are acknowledged, Respondent District and Petitioner hereby memorialize their agreement as follows:

1. Settlement of Claim – The Respondent District and the Petitioner agree to settle this Action as follows:

   a. Respondent District shall reinstate Petitioner as soon as practicable in her former position of secretary with the District.
   b. Respondent District hereby acknowledges that Petitioner earned tenure as a secretary on December 9, 2009 and she is entitled to full seniority credit from her date of hire, December 8, 2006 through the date upon which she returns to employment with the Respondent.
   c. In lieu of full back pay and in the interest of resolving this matter amicably, the Respondent District agrees to provide Petitioner with a one-time $5, 000.00 payment (and any required pension payments on the payment) which is W-2 income to Petitioner covering the period from May 15, 2010 to August 15, 2010.
   d. All proceedings in this matter will remain confidential as required by the applicable statute and law and subject to the Open Public Records Act; and

2. Approval of Settlement By Commissioner Of Education – Respondent District and Petitioner shall cause the Petition in the Action to be dismissed as to Respondent District with prejudice and without costs and both parties understand that the dismissal of the proceedings and settlement herein are subject to the approval of the Commissioner of Education.

3. Confidentiality - No party shall issue or cause to be issued any statement regarding the Action which contradicts the terms of the settlement herein.

4. No Admission - It is specifically acknowledged and understood by the parties that this Agreement is not an indication or admission of any violation of any law, statute or regulation or a breach of any duty by Respondent District, except those admissions set forth in paragraph one above. It is further acknowledged that the payments referenced herein or made hereunder are not indicative of any action or inaction taken by Respondent District, its past and present Board members, administrators, agents, employees or attorneys, with respect to this proceeding. It is understood and agreed by the parties that the settlement is being made solely to alleviate the necessary time and expense of a hearing, preparation therefore and/or further proceedings and continued payment of any salary entitlements to Petitioner. This Agreement and compliance with this Agreement shall not be construed as an admission by any party of any liability whatsoever with respect to any matter in this proceeding. This Agreement may not be introduced into evidence or used in any other way in any other legal or administrative proceeding other than a proceeding seeking enforcement of the terms of this Agreement.

5. Mutual Releases – The Respondent District and the Petitioner herein, by mutual agreement and consideration, hereby release each other from any and all obligations in the matter styled, Patricia Belin vs. Plainfield Board of Education, Docket Nos. OAL EDU-05704-20010N. Whereas, Respondent District and the Petitioner have accepted the terms of the settlement in the aforementioned administrative proceeding as set forth herein; and Whereas, Respondent District and the Petitioner agree, by further mutual agreement and consideration, to release and discharge each other, their representatives, attorneys, successors and assigns and employees, if any, from any and all actions, causes of action of any kind, suits, charges and obligations, debts, sums of money, accounts, controversies, agreements, promises, damages, judgments, extents, executions, claims, and demands whatsoever, flowing from the matter styled, Patricia Belin vs. Plainfield Board of Education, Docket Nos. OAL EDU-05704-20010N., which against their heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns ever had, now have or hereafter can, shall or may have for, upon, or by reason of any matter, cause or thing whatsoever from the beginning of the aforementioned administrative proceeding to the date of this release and agreement .

6. Representation and Negotiation by Counsel - The parties acknowledge that this Agreement is the result of arms length negotiations between the parties, all of whom are represented by counsel. The parties have consulted with their attorneys throughout the negotiations and have been fully advised of all of the ramifications of this Agreement, including the claims and rights they are waiving herein and the affirmative obligations they are agreeing to undertake. The parties are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this Agreement and all other aspects of this case and they enter into this Agreement knowingly, willingly and without any coercion or improper inducements.

7. Entire Agreement - This Agreement represents the entire agreement and understanding between the parties with respect to the subject matter hereof.

This Agreement may not be modified unless same is in writing, authorized, approved and signed by all parties.

Each party agrees to execute such further and additional documents, instruments and writings as may be reasonably necessary, proper, required, desirable or convenient for the purpose of fully effectuating the terms and provisions of this Agreement.

8. Severability - If any provision of this Agreement or the application thereof is held invalid, such invalidity shall not affect any other provisions or applications and, to this end, the provisions of this Agreement are declared to be severable.

9. Law Governing - This Agreement and all of its terms and conditions shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey. The Commissioner of Education and the Department of Education of the State of New Jersey shall have exclusive jurisdiction only over any and all actions or assignments related to or arising out of this Agreement flowing from the administrative proceeding in the matter styled, Patricia Belin vs. Plainfield Board of Education, Docket Nos. OAL EDU-05704-20010N.

10. This Agreement may be executed in counterparts, each of which shall constitute an original, but all of which shall constitute one and the same agreement.

11. This Agreement is for the benefit of the parties hereto and their successors and assigns.

12. This Agreement constitutes the entire Agreement among the parties hereto, and supersedes any prior understandings, agreements or representations by or between the parties, written or oral, which may have related to the subject matter hereof.

13. This Agreement cannot be amended or waived except in writing signed by all of the parties hereto. No waiver of any provision hereunder or any breach or default shall extend to or affect in any way any other provision of this Agreement or any prior or subsequent breach or default.

14. This Agreement shall be binding on any successor or assignee of the parties hereto.

15. The parties' agreement to the settlement contained herein and their execution of this Agreement shall not be deemed an admission of liability or wrongdoing except to those admissions set forth in paragraph 1 above.

16. Execution - This Agreement may be signed in several counterparts, all of which when taken together shall constitute a single document.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties and/or their representative(s) hereto have duly executed this Agreement as of the date first written above.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF RANDI TRUE, SCHOOL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF	:	DECISION
WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board certified tenure charges of excessive and chronic absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and other just cause against respondent – a special education teacher employed by the district – for behavior that included excessive tardiness and leaving early, using demeaning language with her students, leaving students unattended in the hallway, pushing one of her students, and disobeying a directive from the superintendent. The Board sought removal of respondent from her tenured position.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that – based on the evidence and testimony presented at hearing – the Board met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that respondent is guilty of: chronic and excessive absenteeism and tardiness, use of name-calling and other demeaning language toward her students, failure to properly supervise the students in her charge; and willfully refusing to comply with an explicit directive from the superintendent. The ALJ dismissed the charge relating to pushing a student for lack of competent and credible evidence. The ALJ concluded that respondent's behavior constituted incapacity, unbecoming conduct, insubordination or other just cause warranting dismissal and, accordingly, ordered respondent dismissed from her tenured employment.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. Respondent was dismissed from her tenured employment, and a copy of this decision was forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for action against her certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 0812-10
AGENCY DKT NO. 44-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF RANDI TRUE, SCHOOL	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF	:	DECISION
WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent and the Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

In her exceptions, the respondent contends that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously found respondent guilty of unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and other just cause warranting the dismissal of her employment. The respondent argues that the ALJ erred in finding that she was excessively tardy because the documented evidence did not support such a finding. With respect to the Board's charge of excessive absenteeism, the respondent maintains that the ALJ wrongfully determined that the Board satisfied the three prongs required by In re Tenure Hearing of White, 92 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 157, 161 in order to terminate an employee for excessive absenteeism. Specifically, the respondent argues that the Board did not satisfy the third element of the White, supra, test because it did not give the respondent the requisite warning that her absences were a concern to the administration.

Additionally, the respondent takes exception to the ALJ's finding that the Board proved that the respondent's use of inappropriate language with her students constituted unbecoming conduct. The respondent argues that the testimony of the three staff members who testified to the inappropriate language used by the respondent was not credible and that the context of her use of certain words and phrases were explained by the respondent during her testimony. In connection with the charge of failing to supervise her students, the respondent maintains that even if it were determined that she failed to supervise her students on one occasion, that behavior did not rise to the level of conduct that would require removal of her tenure. Finally, the respondent argues that the ALJ erroneously found that the respondent was insubordinate when she sent a text message to another staff member despite the interim superintendent's directive that she was not to contact anyone at the school once she was told of her transfer. The respondent emphasizes that she did not believe that the sending of a text message was part of the directive.

In its reply, the Board urges the adoption of the Initial Decision asserting that the respondent's exceptions are without merit and should be given no weight. The Board contends that the respondent's claim that she only received one written warning regarding her excessive absenteeism is unsupported by the record and overlooks the numerous written and verbal warnings that the respondent received over an extended period of time. The Board also argues that the respondent's exceptions side-step the troubling aspect of the respondent's excessive tardiness, including the fact that she misstated arrival times and left the premises without permission, as well as the negative impact of her numerous late arrivals.

Additionally, the Board notes that the respondent's exceptions challenge the ALJ's credibility determinations in connection with his finding that the respondent used inappropriate language with her students. The Board stresses that the testimony of the other staff members supports the ALJ's findings and it is well settled that the Commissioner may not reject or modify the credibility findings of the ALJ unless they are arbitrary, capricious, unreasonable or unsupported by the record. Finally, the Board maintains that the respondent's failure to supervise her special needs students coupled with her uncaring attitude justifies her removal.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, which included the transcripts of the hearings conducted at the OAL on October 5, October 26, and November 9, 2010, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons discussed on pages 28-43 of the Initial Decision – that the Board has proved that the respondent is guilty of chronic absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, and insubordination warranting the termination of her employment.

The record demonstrates that the respondent has been chronically absent throughout her employment as a special education teacher in the district, and despite the argument presented by the respondent in her exceptions, she was given several warnings from the administration concerning the impact of her continued absence. The record also illustrates that the respondent has been tardy on numerous occasions, and in fact the respondent generally did not provide any rationale for her lateness nor did she dispute the testimonial evidence except her challenge to one specific occasion where the Board alleged that the respondent arrived late and wrote an earlier time on the sign-in sheet.

With respect to the other charges – including: the respondent's use of inappropriate language with her special needs students; her failure to properly supervise her students; and the charge of insubordination – the Commissioner also finds respondent's exceptions unpersuasive, largely reflecting arguments and objections previously raised before the ALJ and clearly taken into account by him in weighing the testimony and evidence, and in concluding that the record overall supported the Board's charges. Although the respondent either denied the use of certain phrases or attempted to explain the context of others, the ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before him and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. Moreover, the respondent did not deny the fact that she remained in her classroom while two of her special needs students were fighting in the hallway and had to be stopped by other staff members, or that she sent a text message to her co-worker despite the interim superintendent's directive; rather, respondent simply provided spurious excuses for her conduct. Insofar as the ALJ's opinion on these issues is a credibility determination, the Commissioner may not disturb it unless a review of the record discloses that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10c; D.L. and Z.Y., on behalf of minor children, T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004).

The Commissioner fully concurs with the ALJ's assessment of respondent's conduct in light of applicable law and prior decisional precedent, and agrees that the conduct proven in this proceeding amply warrants respondent's dismissal from her tenured employment. Accordingly, for the reasons expressed therein, the Initial Decision of the OAL – directing removal of respondent from her position of tenured employment – is adopted as the final decision in this matter. A copy of this decision will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 812-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 44-3/10

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF RANDI TRUE, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WILLINGBORO, BURLINGTON COUNTY.

Nicholas Celso, II, Esq., for petitioner Randi True (Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein & Celso, LLC, attorneys)

Arnold M. Mellk, Esq., for respondent (Wills, O'Neill & Mellk, attorneys)

Record Closed: March 25, 2011 Decided: June 29, 2011

BEFORE ISRAEL D. DUBIN, ALJ:

On March 8, 2010, the Willingboro Board of Education certified tenure charges against Randi True, a tenured special education teacher, alleging that she engaged in conduct constituting chronic absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and other just cause warranting dismissal. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. True filed her answer to the statement of tenure charges on March 19, 2010, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed for hearing as a contested case on March 25, 2010. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

A pre-hearing conference was held on April 8, 2010, at which time the Board requested a remote hearing date because it had decided to retain a different law firm to serve as its counsel. Therefore, with True's consent, the hearing was scheduled to begin on July 26, 2010. At the request of the parties, the hearing was adjourned due to counsels' unforeseen scheduling conflicts. The hearing was subsequently held on October 5, October 26, November 9 and November 16, 2010.[1] At the conclusion of the hearing, the parties requested and were granted the opportunity to submit post-hearing briefs, the last of which was filed on March 25, 2011, and the record was closed on that date.

The allegations set forth in the tenure charges may be summarized as follows: Charge I, comprising eleven counts, alleges chronic absenteeism; Charge II, comprising three counts, alleges excessive tardiness and leaving early; Charge III, comprising six counts, alleges that she instructed her students in an inappropriate, demeaning and unprofessional manner, left her students unattended in the hallway, and pushed one of her students; and Charge IV, alleges that she disobeyed the superintendent's explicit directive that she not contact students and staff at Twin Hills Elementary School after her transfer. The Board alleges that these charges establish conduct constituting chronic absenteeism, unbecoming conduct, insubordination, and other just cause warranting dismissal.

At the beginning of the hearing, the parties stipulated that Randi True received her Bachelor of Arts Degree from Glassboro College, now Rowan University, in May 1989. She holds an instructional certification with an endorsement for elementary education that was issued by the New Jersey State Board of Examiners in June 1989, and an endorsement for teacher of the handicapped that was issued in December 1994. She began her employment as a special education teacher in the Willingboro School District in or about September 1997 and was assigned to the Hawthorne Elementary School, where she taught for three years before being transferred to the Twin Hills Elementary School. She is currently a tenured teacher assigned to Twin Hills Elementary School.[2] Stipulation of Facts, Exhibit J-1.

Testifying on behalf of the Board, Terrell Everett stated that as of the date of the hearing, he had been employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as the director of human resources (HR) for "three years, three months, and five days." His primary responsibility has been overseeing the operations of the HR office, including, among other things, recruitment, benefits, and the maintenance of various records such as attendance records, requests for leaves of absence, transfer forms, evaluation forms, and the like. He was therefore able to identify the following documents:[3]

Classroom Observation Report dated March 17, 1999 (Exhibit P-1).
With two exceptions, True received 3s, performing "at expected level," in all categories using a rating scale of 1 to 3.[4] The first exception was Section III, Classroom Management, for which she received a 2, with the comment, "Consistency with classroom rules still requires strengthening. Continue to strive to improve this area." Ibid. The second exception was Section V, Attendance and Punctuality, for which she also received a 2, with the following comments:

> You are frequently late in the morning and leave early in the afternoon. Plan to arrange you're (sic) A.M. and P.M. activities so you will be able to arrive on time and not frequently call in later or sign [in] at a different time from your actual arrival time. Refrain from taking your students to the bus area before the appropriate time. If the students loose (sic) three to five minutes each day, it can add up to a large amount of time missed.

[2] On January 19, 2010, True was transferred to Memorial School as an inclusion teacher.
[3] Unless otherwise expressly attributed to Mr. Everett, the information in the summaries of these documents was taken directly from the documents themselves.
[4] The rating scale included "1) Unsatisfactory 2) Efforts Need to Be Expanded 3) At Expected Level [and] N/A—Not Applicable."

Everett testified that this document was generated by HR with input at the building level. Days taken are categorized as "P" – Personal; "S" – Sick/Illness; "H" – Half Day; and "X" – Professional. The document indicates that True was charged for 10.5 sick days and 1 personal day during the 1999-2000 school year.

Attendance Record 07/01/00 – 06/30/01 (Exhibit P-3)
This document indicates that True was charged with 8 sick days and 1 personal day, and granted 2 professional days during the 2000-2001 school year. In fact, all of these absences were during the second half of the school year.

Attendance Record 07/01/01 – 06/30/02 (Exhibit P-4).
According to Everett, True was charged for 20.5 sick days and 3 personal days.

Attendance Record 07/01/02 – 06/30/03 (Exhibit P-5).
This document indicates that True was absent a total of 117 times. Of these, 3 days were charged as personal days, 24 full and 4 half-days were charged to her sick bank, and 86 days were designated "SICK ILLNESS . . . N—NO ACTION/NOT CH."

Attendance Record 07/01/04 – 06/30/05[5] (Exhibit P-6).
This document indicates that True was charged with 11.5 sick days and 2.5 personal days.

Attendance Notice 07/01/05 – 06/30/06 (Exhibit P-7).
According to Everett, the difference in the appearance of this attendance report was due to a change in software, which had no effect on the procedures used to input information. This document indicates that True was charged with 8 full sick days, 2 one-half sick days, and 2.5 personal days.

Attendance Calendar 2006-2007 School Year (Exhibit P-8).
Everett testified that just as the format of the Attendance Notice was different from that of its predecessor, the Attendance Record, due to a change in software, the format of the 10 Month Employees' Attendance Calendar was different from that of the Attendance Notice for the same reason. He explained that with this format, the total number of days charged as sick or personal time in the upper right-hand column entitled "Out Date—Charge—Amt—Reason, should reconcile with the number of days "Used" in the bottom box entitled "Charge to Codes." As indicated, True was charged with 9 full sick days, 4 half sick days and 2 half personal days during this school year.

[5] The Board acknowledged that it did not have a copy of the Attendance Record or any other documentation for the 2003-2004 school year.

Attendance Calendar 2007-2008 School Year (Exhibit P-9).
This document indicates that True was charged with 12 full sick days, 4 half sick days, and 4 half personal days.

Attendance Calendar 2008-2009 School Year (Exhibit P-10).
Everett testified that in addition to the 18 full sick days, 4 half sick days, 3 personal days and 1 unpaid day she was absent, True also took, but was not charged for, 7 days for a death or deaths in the family. Regarding the latter, he believed that the number of bereavement days provided for in the teachers' contract was dependent upon the teacher's relationship with the deceased. Although he wasn't certain, he believed it may have been five days for a spouse, four for a child, and one for other relatives.

Attendance Calendar 2009-2010 School Year (Exhibit P-11).
This document indicates that True was charged with 4 sick days and 1 personal day. She was not charged for the 2 professional days she took.

According to Everett, Barbara Doneghy, the principal of Twin Hills Elementary School, had expressed a number of concerns regarding True's performance to him during the 2008-2009 school year and, at the end of the year, formally requested that True's increment for the 2009-2010 school year be withheld. Among other things, Doneghy based her request on True's "excessive lateness." Increment Withholding Letter, Exhibit P-14. Doneghy's request was submitted to and approved by the Board of Education at its Special Meeting on June 30, 2009. Shortly thereafter,[6] Everett sent her the letter advising her of the Board's action.

Francis Turner has served as the Willingboro Board of Education's payroll and pensions administrator since 1997. As the payroll administrator, it is his responsibility to ensure that all of the Board's employees are paid "correctly and accurately" on a timely basis. In carrying out this duty, he relies on the information in the attendance records, which have been generated by three different computer programs since he's been in his position.

According to Turner, the first system was the manual system; the second was EMAPS, a computerized system that was used from the 1999-2000 school year to the 2006-2007 school year; and the third was Systems 3000. The EMAPS and System 3000 reports to which he has had access have been produced in the HR office. In the normal course of events, he'll pull up "[his] side of the Payroll side and monitor it . . . to make sure everything is straight." And in the event something isn't straight, he'll "be up HR's butt" and tell them it needs to be corrected.

Upon examining the attendance records that were produced using EMAPS, Turner explained that "N-NO ACTION/NOT CH" meant that a teacher had not been charged as absent on a day she'd attended a professional workshop or training session and there had been no deduction of any kind. Instead, the system indicated that she had taken a professional day, with pay.

Turner also examined the attendance calendars produced using Systems 3000 and stated that they differed from the EMAPS attendance reports. Normally, if the absence was charged as a sick day or personal day, the school made the entry. However, an extended leave of absence had to be requested and, if approved by the Board as an item on the agenda, entered into the system by HR. It was ultimately up to him to authorize or deny payment.

[6] The date of the letter appears to have been covered over by the certified mail receipt, which was dated July 31, 2009.

Turner also stated that under Systems 3000, absences due to a death in the family were coded as "O — OTHER," and were not charged. However, there were limits to the number of days a teacher could take. For example, under the contract with the Willingboro Education Association, a teacher would get five days for the death of a member of her immediate family, one day for an uncle, and so on. These absences could be entered at the school level or by HR.

On the other hand, extended leaves of absence with or without pay had to be approved by the Board. In this particular case, the Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of September 23, 2002, Exhibit P-30, disclose that the Board ratified True's leave of absence with pay for medical reasons effective September 4, 2002 to September 17, 2002. Similarly, the Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of February 25, 2003, Exhibit P-31, disclose that the Board ratified True's leave of absence with pay for "medical/maternity" effective January 24, 2003 through January 28, 2003.

An additional extended leave was addressed in the Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of February 25, 2003, Exhibit P-32, which disclose that the Board ratified True's leave of absence, this time without pay, for "maternity/family leave" effective January 29, 2003 through June 30, 2003. That extended leave was modified in the Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of April 28, 2003, Exhibit P-33. According to Turner, the Board had a policy that enabled teachers, who had been with the District for a certain period of time and had exhausted their allotted number of sick days, to receive their salary, less the amount paid to a substitute.[7] In this instance, her illness began on January 24, 2003, and, based on her salary of $44,359, the first twenty days were paid at a rate of $221.80 per day, or $4,436, less the substitute's pay of $70 per day or $1400, for a total of $3,036.

The Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of August 11, 2003, Exhibit P-34(a), disclose that the Board also ratified True's leave of absence without pay for "family leave" effective July 1, 2003 through February 1, 2004. Attached to the minutes is a letter dated January 28, 2004, from the executive director of human resources and administrative services, Marvin Hopkins, to True, asking her if she intended to return to work on February 2, 2004, and to advise him of her intentions. Hopkins Letter Dated January 8, 2004, Exhibit P-34(b).

[7] See N.J.S.A. 18A:30-6, which provides that when a teacher requests sick leave, but has exhausted her accumulated sick leave, the Board may pay the teacher's salary less the pay of a substitute. Under this statute, there is no cap on the number of days for which the teacher may be paid. However, the Board's policy imposed a cap of twenty days.

The Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of January 29, 2004, Exhibit P-35, disclose that the Board next ratified an additional leave of absence without pay for "family leave" effective February 22, 2004 through June 30, 2004. According to Turner, this leave was subsequently continued for the balance of the calendar year, although the Minutes of the Board's Regular Meeting of October 25, 2004, Exhibit P-36, disclose that the extended leave was effective September 1, 2004 through October 31, 2004.

Keith Ellerbe is currently employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as a Director of Curriculum and Instruction. Before accepting this position, he also served at various times as principal of Memorial Upper Elementary School, J.C. Stewart Elementary School and the Garfield East Elementary School. True was one of his teachers at J.C. Stewart during the 2004-2005 and 2005-2006 school years.

Ellerbe testified that he'd had concerns about True's chronic tardiness and seeming inability to get to work on time beginning with the 2004-2005 school year. There were times when he'd be doing his morning walk and run into her in the hall, and other times when he'd notice she was not in her assigned classroom when she should have been. It was not unusual for her to come in after the students were already in home room.

Ellerbe explained that he employed several means of getting her attention. Among other things, the names of teachers who signed in late were highlighted in the sign in book that was located in the main office of the school. He also raised the issue of her tardiness in her Classroom Observation Report Dated March 1, 2005, Exhibit P-15(b). Specifically, in Section V, Attendance and Punctuality, he gave her a 2 (efforts need to be expanded) with the comment, "Mrs. True needs to improve on punctuality and attendance." Ibid. Simply put, "she [was] attending below standard, the norm." This assessment was based on her attendance record as set forth in her Annual Performance Report 2004-2005, Exhibit 15(c), which indicated that she'd been absent 11 times due to illness and 2.5 days for personal reasons.

Ellerbe stated that he also conducted a post-observation conference with her during which he stressed that attendance and punctuality were areas that she needed to "improve on in reference to becoming an exemplary teacher." As he recalled, she did not disagree with or otherwise challenge the accuracy of his assessment. Instead, she just explained that her tardiness had been due to "family matters," to which he responded that "while those situations do arise, we are responsible for the children here . . . educating the children here at Willingboro public schools."

When the problem persisted the following year, he sent her a letter on November 29, 2005, reminding her that the working hours for teachers were 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and that it was her responsibility to render service between those times as set forth in the Willingboro Education Association agreement. He also told her, "This is my first notice concerning these matters and I seriously hope it would [sic] be my last." Ellerbe Letter Dated November 29, 2005, Exhibit P-15(a). To the best of his recollection, True did not respond either orally or in writing. And although the problem didn't go away, Ellerbe allowed that it "kind of got better."

Nadine Tribbett, who is currently the K-12 Curriculum Director in the Willingboro School District, served as the principal of Hawthorne Elementary School during the 2006-2007 school year. Tribbett testified that as principal, it was her responsibility to provide instruction and direction, implement professional development training, and ensure that "our team was supporting our students in terms of providing an academic environment that was conducive to learning." It was also her responsibility to conduct the teachers' performance observations and evaluations.

On April 27, 2007, Tribbett completed the Annual Performance Report 2006-2007, Exhibit P-12(a), for Randi True, who was, at the time, a pull out resource teacher. True's Professional Improvement Plan, Exhibit 12(b), was appended to the report. In completing the performance report, Tribbett culled information from the evaluations, both formal and informal, that she'd performed that year, as well as the attendance records she'd received from the building secretary. Regarding the latter, the report indicated that True had been absent 1 personal day and 5.5 sick days, and been tardy 16 times.

To the best of Tribbett's recollection, a teacher is entitled to take 3 personal days and, while she couldn't be certain, 13 sick days each school year. She was unaware of any policies on tardiness "formalized in black and white." However, when it "showed itself," she would have a conversation with the teacher and ask if there was a reason for it, "because it directly impacts the classroom."

Tribbett also testified that insofar as the classroom observations were concerned, in the normal course of events she would provide teachers with copies of their Annual Performance Reports prior to conducting the post-observation conferences. Then she would sit down with them, go over what she'd found, and discuss the things they did not agree with. Since she was responsible for evaluating all of the teachers in the school, some of these conferences were more formal than others. In any event, both she and the teacher she was evaluating would sign off. In True's case, she couldn't specifically recall their conference because it had been held four years before, but allowed that "nothing sticks out."

Barbara Doneghy testified that she has been employed by the Willingboro Board of Education since September 1971, and has served as principal of the Twin Hills Elementary School since 2002. She first met Randi True in September 2008, when True was assigned to Twin Hills, and supervised her until January 2010, when True was transferred. During that period of time she conducted "many" classroom observations of, and wrote evaluations concerning, True's performance as a special education teacher.

According to Doneghy, on March 27, 2009, she observed True teaching the subject of writing in language arts literacy for approximately one hour and fifteen minutes. Following that observation, she completed a Classroom Observation Report, Exhibit P-13, which served as True's annual formative evaluation. This report enabled her to rate True's performance using a scale of 1 to 3, with 1-unsatisfactory; 2- efforts need to be expanded; and 3-at expected level. At the time of the observation, True had 9.5 absences and 8 tardies, which Doneghy noted in Section VI, Professional Responsibilities, with the comment, "Ms. True is often late arriving at school."[8] Ibid.

Doneghy subsequently conducted a post-observation meeting,[9] during which she discussed True's overall evaluation and pointed out certain things that she needed her to work on. In particular, Doneghy stressed that True had to improve her attendance and lateness. She had to be in the building by 8:30 a.m. and was not to leave before 3:30 p.m.

Doneghy testified that as the principal, she was responsible for overseeing attendance in the school and ensuring that staff members signed in and out on time. Therefore, she was "always" near the front door whenever staff, parents, and students were entering or leaving the building. She also had access to the sign in sheets. Insofar as the early departures were concerned, she could recall having paged True on several occasions and not gotten a response. As she put it, True's late arrivals and early departures continued "almost daily."

"Not even a month later, it had to have been early April," True's supervisors told her she needed to start documenting the late arrivals and early departures and, based on their complaints, she started doing so whenever she "felt it was necessary, but it was almost daily." For example, by Memo Dated April 3, 2009, Exhibit P-16, she asked True and her union representative to meet with her at 2:30 p.m. that same day to discuss, among other things, her early departure without permission on April 2, 2009, failure to sign out, and failure to sign in the following morning, April 3, 2009.

[8] Section V of the report indicates that Doneghy rated True's attendance and punctuality a three, "at expected level."

[9] The report notes that the conference was held on March 9, 2009, some eighteen days before the observation was conducted. Given the dates and contexts of subsequent events and documents, it is likely that the conference took place on March 29, 2009.

The meeting took place as scheduled, with True accompanied by her union representative, Patsy Marino. As she had during the post-observation meeting, Doneghy stressed the requirement of arriving at or before 8:30 a.m., signing in with the correct time upon arrival, not leaving before 3:30 p.m., and otherwise adhering to contractual work hours. Since this hadn't been the first time they'd talked about these issues, and had, in fact, discussed them during the post-observation conference, the early departure on April 2 and late arrival on April 3, 2009, without corresponding entries in the sign in book, "should not have happened." True's attendance issues "had gone to a level beyond just talking and writing." Consequently, Doneghy told her that she would be making a recommendation that the Board withhold her increment. Neither True nor Marino disputed the allegations she'd made at that time.

Doneghy stated that True responded in writing the following day, which was "a modus operandi of hers." When she did, she usually responded in an "apologetic" tone, refuting Doneghy's claims "in her own way." For example, she would say something like, "I left, but I don't think that you saw me come back." However, she never sent in any proof that she had in fact returned to the building.

In her Memo Dated April 6, 2009, Exhibit P-17, Doneghy summarized the subjects they'd discussed during their meeting of April 3, 2009. In item number 3, Doneghy indicated that True "was warned about not signing in as on 4/3/09; she was again told to arrive on or before 8:30am [sic]; the requirement to sign in upon arrival with the correct time was stressed as well as adhering to contractual work hours. Ms. True left the premises on 4/2/09 at 2:55pm [sic] without permission and without signing out." Ibid. In item number 4, Doneghy also reiterated that she'd be recommending a withholding of True's increment.

By Memo Dated May 29, 2009, Exhibit P-18(a), Doneghy notified various administrators including Acting Superintendent David Hespe that True had signed in that morning at 8:37 a.m., even though she had not actually arrived until 8:47 a.m. Doneghy testified that she'd initially been waiting for True in the front foyer, which provided a view of all three wings, because she wanted to talk to her about having left early the day before. Then she moved to True's room at 8:33 a.m. and, seeing that the two paraprofessionals were eating in the room, asked them to go finish their breakfasts in the teachers' room. A few minutes later, she asked the Spanish teacher to cover True's classroom so she could continue waiting for True in the foyer by the door.

When True arrived at 8:47 a.m., yet signed in as arriving at 8:37 a.m., Doneghy wrote down the correct time, circled it, and initialed it. Sign In Sheet for Week of 5/25/09, Exhibit 18(b). According to Doneghy, subsequent examination of the sign in sheet disclosed that True had not signed in or out on Tuesday, May 26, or Wednesday, May 27, 2009.[10] On Thursday morning, May 28, 2009, she'd signed in as arriving at 8:32 a.m. even though it had actually been 8:37 a.m., and while Doneghy initialed the time, she couldn't be certain that she'd changed it. In any event, after watching her for a period of time, it was obvious to her that True was getting in around the same time every day, but always putting down a time earlier than the actual time and that it "had become a pattern."

True failed to sign out Thursday afternoon and Doneghy decided to call her into her office for a meeting the following morning. After watching True sign in as arriving earlier than the actual time that morning, she confronted her and told her that she wanted to meet with her, and that her union representative was already waiting in her office. However, True refused and said she was going to "take a half day; was going to get a lawyer." Memo Dated May 29, 2009, supra. With that, True started walking down the hallway toward her classroom and Doneghy followed behind her, directing her to come back. True failed to comply with her request, walked out the side door, and left. This required Doneghy to pull a special education teacher from an inclusion class to cover True's class for the day. As Doneghy recalled, she told Patsy Marino, "See, I did everything to try to talk to her," and Marino agreed with her.

Doneghy stated that on January 19, 2010, following a "pattern of repeated performance and evaluative deficiencies," Hespe Affidavit, Exhibit P-27, True was transferred to Memorial School as an inclusion instructor. At that time, Acting [10] Schools were closed Monday, May 25, 2009, for the observance of Memorial Day. See Sign In Sheet, supra.

Superintendent Hespe arranged for True to be escorted by her immediate supervisor, Mrs. Marcellus, to Twin Hills for retrieval of her personal belongings. Hespe also directed True "not to have any contact with Twin Hills Elementary School staff or students and was to cease and desist from contacting any of her former colleagues at Twin Hills." Ibid. A similar directive was sent to the staff at Twin Hills, instructing them not to contact True.

Doneghy testified that later that same day, Carlin Gonzalez, one of the aides in True's class, first showed and then sent her a copy of a text message she'd received from True that afternoon. In that message, True told Gonzalez, "Cant believe u two church going women lied 2 my face. 12 years i knew mrs f and wow im blown away. Good luck 2 u both hope it's a great rest of the year." True Text Message, Exhibit P-28. Doneghy, in turn, forwarded copies of the text message to True's immediate supervisors[11] and Superintendent Hespe.

Mary Margaret Theresa Grassie, who has been employed by the Willingboro Board of Education for the past nineteen years, is currently a first grade teacher at Twin Hills Elementary School. She testified that she knew Randi True because they'd both been teachers at Twin Hills, and her classroom had been next to True's during the 2009-2010 school year.

Grassie stated that her students normally left school on an earlier bus than True's students. On the afternoon of January 7, 2010, at about 3:15 or 3:20 p.m., after bringing her students outside, Grassie returned to the hallway where her classroom was located. True's students, who ranged in grade from Kindergarten to second grade—five to seven years of age—and were classified as eligible for special education and related services, had a later dismissal time and were still in their classroom.

As she was standing in the hallway talking to two of her colleagues, Mrs. Boltniew and Ms. Boyle, Mrs. Boltniew suddenly said something like "Oh no" or "Oh my gosh" and started running down the hallway. When she turned in that direction to see where Boltniew was going, she observed that one of True's students was on top of another of True's students who was lying on the ground. The student on top had straddled him and was hitting or punching him on the back. When Boltniew approached, the student on top got off of the other. But until Boltniew arrived, both boys had been unattended.

After the boys separated, Grassie, Boltniew and Boyle followed them back into True's classroom to join their classmates. When they entered, True was standing by what they call the "wardrobe," which is a wooden closet. At that point, one of the other teachers told True what had happened and True replied that the boys had been told not to leave the classroom and "shouldn't have left." Grassie stated that one of True's aides, Carlin Gonzalez, later told her that True had been on her cell phone, even though the use of cell phones is prohibited during working hours, "when you're on duty."

Grassie stated that True's reply really bothered her because after an incident like this, where a child could have been seriously hurt, a more appropriate response would have been, at the very least, "Is he okay? What happened?" It shouldn't have been "Well, I told them not to leave the room." Additionally, she could not recall True checking either child to see if there had been any injuries. In her opinion, this showed that True didn't really care what had happened. On January 11, 2010, at Mrs. Doneghy's request, Grassie submitted a written statement, Grassie Incident Statement, Exhibit P-19(a), concerning the matter.

On another occasion, Grassie heard a lot of yelling going on in True's adjacent classroom. Among other things, she heard True yelling, "You're animals," or "You're animals, you're nothing but animals, [and] I am not a zoo-keeper" and, at counsel's request, repeated these statements, yelling in the same loud voice she'd heard coming from the other room. She also recalled True calling her students "stupid." However, upon further questioning, Grassie allowed that she did not immediately report what she had heard. It wasn't until later, when she recalled prior incidents and "things started to add up," that she told Doneghy what she'd heard. She also signed an affidavit, Grassie Affidavit, Exhibit P-20, memorializing what she'd told her.

Among the incidents that led her to report True was one where she "went running out of her room, down the end of the hall, and out the side door." When Grassie went out to see what the commotion was, True's aides said that she'd left and they didn't know where she'd gone. And there was another occasion when she observed True bringing a television down to her room. Since True had recently been in trouble for something else, she asked her, "Are you crazy? Is showing a movie in your lesson plan?" She asked because the school has a policy that movies can't be shown unless they're in a teacher's lesson plan. Nevertheless, True told her that she was showing the movie because she needed the time to do progress reports, even though progress reports are not supposed to be written when students are in the room. True "didn't care."

Tamera Boltniew is currently a second grade teacher at Twin Hills Elementary School, a position she has held for the last three years. During the 2009-2010 school year, her classroom was located approximately twenty-five steps to the right and across the hall from that of Randi True.

Boltniew testified that on the afternoon of January 7, 2010, she was standing outside her room, talking to Ms. Boyle and Ms. Grassie. True was still in her classroom with her students, as usual, because their bus was frequently late. As they were talking, some of True's students came out into the hallway and one of the boys sat on top of another boy who was lying on his stomach, and started punching him on his back. After watching it for a second or two, she started walking towards True's classroom, yelled at the boy who was doing the punching, and both of them got up off the floor.

When she reached True's classroom, Boltniew walked in, saw True behind one of the open doors of the almost floor to ceiling closet, and said, "you know, they were punching each other, beating each other up." Although she couldn't remember True's exact words, she believed True said "something to the effect of, 'I told them not to and this is what happens,' and that was it." At that point she left the room because she'd only gone there in the first place to make sure there was an adult present. As she explained, whether or not the instructional part of the day is over, a teacher has a responsibility to supervise and remain with her students until they leave.

Boltniew testified that she did not report the incident to Ms. Doneghy because Grassie had told her she was going to be doing that. In fact, Grassie had asked her if she could add her name to the report, and she'd said, "Yes."

Heather Boyle is currently employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as a pre-school disabled teacher at the W.R. James School. Prior to this assignment, she served as a special education inclusion teacher for five years, including the 2009-2010 school year, during which she worked with Randi True at Twin Hills Elementary School.

Boyle testified that on the afternoon of January 7, 2010, at approximately 3:30 p.m., she was having a conversation with Mrs. Boltniew and Mrs. Grassie in the hallway outside her classroom. At that time, two of True's students came out into the hallway and one boy sat on top of the other, hitting him in the back of the head. Almost immediately, Boltniew turned in their direction, said "Oh no" or "Hey," and started walking towards them. She followed Boltniew and, as they got closer, both of the boys got up and returned to their classroom. They then followed the boys to the classroom and she stood in the doorway. When neither True nor her aide, Carlin Gonzalez, said anything to her, she walked away.

Carlin Gonzalez has been employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as a paraprofessional at Twin Hills Elementary School for approximately seven years. During the 2009-2010 school year she was assigned to Randi True's classroom and worked as a one-to-one. In that capacity, she was required to stay with one of True's behaviorally disabled students, A.L., at all times including lunch, and "if True had a lesson," she was to help him with it. More specifically, she would work with A.L. "on a different level," explaining the lesson and making it easier for him to understand.

Gonzalez testified that although student dismissal time was normally 3:10 p.m., some of True's students routinely remained in the classroom until approximately 3:20 p.m. because they had a later bus. Since her working hours were 8:40 a.m. to 3:40 p.m., she was normally in the classroom when they left.

Recalling the incident of January 7, 2010, Gonzalez stated that she had clocked out early at 3:10 p.m. and had been helping her son with his homework since she and Mrs. Francis had already taken their students to their bus. True was responsible for the remaining children. However, three of them were in the hallway "hitting each other, on top of each other, beating each other up . . . like they were in a [professional] wrestling match." Then two of them started jumping up and down on the third, "giggling and laughing" as they did so. When she heard the student on the bottom scream, "Stop, get off of me," she looked up and noticed that True was texting on her cell phone, so she got up to try and stop the fight herself.

Since the children were very strong and "we're not supposed to put our hands on them," all she could do was tell them to stop, but they didn't listen to her. It was not until Mrs. Boltniew and Mrs. Grassie came down the hallway and told them to stop that they finally stopped and returned to the classroom. At that time, True took them to their bus, and she "grabbed" her son and left.

Later that day, at Ms. Doneghy's request, she submitted a written statement about True calling the students offensive names. Gonzalez Statement, Exhibit P-21. Gonzalez wrote that on several occasions True had called them "devils," "stupid," and "crybabies," and told them that her children were smarter than they were. She had also told one student that he was going to end up in jail before he was ten years old, which "upset the child." When she heard this, she shook her head and looked at the other paraprofessional in class, Mrs. Francis, who was also shaking her head.

According to Gonzalez, one of True's "outbursts" occurred in December 2009, when True was giving a lesson and one of Mrs. Francis's students "didn't get it." True "just came out and said, 'Well, stop being stupid.'" Hearing this, she looked up and said "Oh, my goodness." She also recalled several other occasions when the children, who ranged in grade from kindergarten to second grade, had been at the work station and True had been trying to give them a lesson. True handed them worksheets and tried to explain how to do the work, but the children "didn't get it because they didn't know the lesson. The lesson wasn't taught to them." When they cried, True responded by calling them "crybabies."

Gonzalez also testified that after the January 7 incident took place, her supervisor, Mrs. Marcellus, told her that True had been transferred to another school and that she would be coming in to retrieve her things. Marcellus also told her that True was not supposed to have any contact with students or staff members. However, True sent her a text message, in which she said, "Cant believe u two church going women lied 2 my face. 12 years i knew mrs f and wow im blown away. Good luck 2 u both hope it's a great rest of the year." True Text Message, Exhibit 29(a); see also Exhibit P-28, supra. Gonzalez took the text message directly to Doneghy upon receiving it.

Sheila Francis, who has been employed as a paraprofessional by the Willingboro Board of Education for approximately twenty-one years, was assigned to Randi True's class in November 2009. She was also one of True's paraprofessionals the first two or three years True was in the school district, and otherwise talked with her over the years.

Francis testified that she became concerned about what she was seeing and hearing in True's classroom beginning in November 2009. Specifically, during "group lessons," when True taught the class as a whole, if it "didn't go right" or the kids got on her nerves, True would get upset, raise her voice and call them names such as "crybabies." When the kids didn't do their work, "she'[d] holler at them and tell them to do it, and then they'[d] holler back, and then she'[d] holler back and then she['d] just bloat[] out whatever she wanted to bloat out." On a few occasions she told them, "my children are smarter than you." And one time she told one of the children, "Well, you're going to wind up in jail with that behavior that you have."

According to Francis, True generally yelled more at [T.] than the other students because he did whatever he wanted to do and "kind of ran that classroom. He ran the classroom." True would yell at him all the time and he'd yell back, telling her things like

"You're crazy." Then "she'd get angry and she'd tell him to sit down and be quiet in her high voice." At those times she [Francis] would intervene and tell [T.], "That's enough. You have to have respect in the classroom." As she explained, she wouldn't allow the children to disrespect anyone. On the other hand, True "never spoke up to the children when they were out of order . . . I did."

Francis added that she'd been asked to provide a written statement about True's behavior in the classroom. She decided instead to sign the one Gonzalez had already written, even though she hadn't heard True say everything Gonzalez had heard. However, she was quick to add, "If I had known it was going to go this far, I'd have written my own."

Also called as witnesses were three of the students in Ms. True's class during the 2009-2010 school year. All three stated that they knew the difference between telling the truth and a lie; described what would happen to them if they told a lie; said they were not afraid to answer questions; and stated that they would answer the questions truthfully.

T.W. testified that he was seven years old and had been in True's class the previous school year. He said that he didn't like some of the things True had said to him, but couldn't remember what any of them were. Similarly, he didn't like some of the things she had said to his friends, but again, couldn't remember what any of them were. Finally, he could not recall being asked any questions by a Mr. Sullivan.

T.K. testified that he was eight years old and that True had been his teacher last year. He said that True hadn't called him or his friends names or talked to them in a way he didn't like. He also said that True hadn't pushed him.

A.L., who can best be described as a very precocious, high-spirited and entertaining little boy, testified that he was "one, two, three, four, five, six, seven years old," and that he had "like three birthdays at one time.[12] When I be [sic] good, I get older, old by the minute, but I think that's all my birthdays, but I think I'll get one more." A.L. also stated that he doesn't lie to anybody "but sometimes I do." However, he assured me that if he did lie, he would tell me.

A.L. went on to say that True was "my old teacher 'til I got here, when I was [gesturing] this size" and sometimes she would talk to him "when I be [sic] bad or good. Sometimes she talk [sic] to me twice. I don't want her to scream at me like this [A.L. screamed very loudly]. Sometimes when I be [sic] bad she screams; my ears get hurt by that." However, she didn't say things he didn't like about himself or his friends, and had no recollection of talking to Mr. Sullivan.

As of the date of the hearing, David C. Hespe, former Commissioner of Education for the New Jersey Department of Education, had been employed by the Willingboro Board of Education as the Interim Superintendent of Schools since January 2010. Prior to assuming this position, he'd served as a consultant to the Board two days a week from February 2009 through June 2009, and as the Assistant Superintendent from July 2009 through December 2009.

Dr. Hespe testified that in or about November 2009, he'd asked Thomas Sullivan, the then-Director of Special Services, to interview some of the students in Randi True's class in order to determine if certain allegations made by staff members of True engaging in name calling and making other verbally abusive statements were true. Following these interviews, which were conducted on February 1, 2010, Sullivan gave him the question and answer forms he'd used and told him that he'd "written down exactly what the students said." Appended to each of these questionnaires was an affidavit of Sullivan in which he attested that he'd written the students' answers down verbatim.

The first student interviewed was T.K., who told Sullivan that "She said im [sic] stupid[,] she won't work with me[,] she push [sic] me in my chair[,] she said Im [sic] not a good student. T.K. Interview Questionnaire, Exhibit P-22. The second student, T.W., told him, "She hate [sic] me. She said I [sic] stupid. . . . T.K. is stupid." T.W. Interview

Questionnaire, Exhibit P-23. The third, A.L., told him, "Everybody shut up. She yelled at us real loud to do our work. She called [the other students] stupid." A.L. Interview Questionnaire, Exhibit P-24.[13] And a fourth, J.L., told him, "She yelled at us very loud. Ms. True pushed [A.] into a chair and a piece broke off." J.L. Interview Questionnaire, Exhibit P-26.

Hespe stated that he and others in the district had been concerned about True's performance as a teacher for quite some time and that they had been discussing what steps they needed to take. Then, in January 2010, he received the reports of misconduct from her fellow teachers and co-workers at Twin Hills. Based on this information, he decided to move True to a classroom that was "much more contained . . . a classroom with another teacher in it and it would be a classroom with older students in it at Memorial, the Grade 5/6 school."

Additionally, since the reports of misconduct had come from her fellow staff members at Twin Hills, Hespe wanted to ensure that there was "no opportunity for any vindictive conduct, any disruptive conduct." Therefore, he advised True that she would be escorted to her classroom at Twin Hills to pack up her things and then escorted out of the building. He also expressly directed her not to have any contact whatsoever with any of her colleagues or the staff at Twin Hills.

On January 19, 2010, he received an e-mail from Mrs. Doneghy, Doneghy E-Mail, Exhibit P-28(a), concerning a text message True had sent to her paraprofessionals, Carlin Gonzalez and Sheila Francis, containing what he believed to be threatening language. He deemed True's sending of the text message an act of direct insubordination, particularly because Gonzalez and Francis were both involved in the investigation.

Addressing the issue of True's attendance, Hespe stated his belief that as an educator, a teacher makes a commitment to her classroom, and that commitment is that she will be there—she won't be absent and she won't be late. He added that research has confirmed that if a teacher is absent, student achievement will be hurt. And this is true regardless of the reasons for her absences. "It doesn't make a difference" why she is out.

Hespe further opined that "the fact that the teacher is not in the classroom, in my mind, is sufficient to demonstrate that they're not living up to their professional commitment to their students." That is why attendance is taken into consideration in classroom observation reports and the evaluation process used in the school district. Once a teacher has more than three absences during the course of a school year, and they need not be consecutive absences, there is a problem that needs to be addressed by the building level administrators. And the same is true of tardiness. "If a teacher is not in the classroom teaching, it's a problem that needs to be addressed."

Testifying in her own behalf, Randi True stated that she was employed by the Willingboro School District as a Special Education teacher and, during the 2009-2010 school year, had been assigned to teach students with behavioral disabilities. The class was comprised of seven students, three aides, one of which was A.L.'s one-to-one aide, and herself.

True admitted that she was occasionally late for work and added that when she was, Doneghy wouldn't allow her to sign in. As she put it, Doneghy "wanted to be in control" and would write down the time and sign it, claiming that she, True, had written down the wrong time. "I know I was late, but I would not sign in the book, she would not allow me to if I were late." In fact, Doneghy wouldn't let her "even touch the book or go near it."

True also admitted that she'd had a significant number of absences, as documented in the attendance records. However, she stated that she'd taken a substantial amount of time off as "Family Leave," and still more as maternity leave, and that all of these leaves had been approved by the Board of Education. She had never been told that taking these leaves might have a negative impact on her employment.

Nor had she ever been told that taking family bereavement days could have an impact on her employment.

Recalling the events of January 7, 2010, and, more specifically, the testimony of Carlin Gonzalez concerning them, True stated that every day at 3:00 p.m., Gonzalez and Sheila Francis took their students to the bus and then clocked out, while she stayed in the classroom with the four remaining students. The aides would then either go home or stay in the building—she "guess[ed] they stay[ed] in the building, but they never came back to the room." In any event, she didn't believe that Gonzalez and her son had been in the room at the time of the incident.

While acknowledging that two of her students had, in fact, run out of the room, she explained that she hadn't followed after them because she'd been helping another student pack up and get ready to go home. She also denied having been on her cell phone at the time. Instead, she stated that she'd gone into the closet where the intercom was in order to call the office and get the principal or someone else to go into the hallway and stop them. She acknowledged that, despite the proximity of the closet to the classroom door, she did not go to the door to see where the boys had gone because she "didn't know how far or where the other students were."

According to True, she thought that if she could hurry, pack up the other students, and bring them out with their things, she'd then be able to get the ones who'd left without leaving any of the remaining children unwatched. However, the boys "just came back in." They were followed by Tammy Boltniew and Heather Boyle, who "came down to see if there was a grownup in the room or just to see if I needed anything and if everything was okay and why were these students running out in the hall and to let me know that they were fighting in the hallway."

True stated that she did not examine the boys because they appeared to be fine and were "laughing and giggling" when they came back into the room. However, she did ask them, "Ms. Boltniew told me that the two of you were fighting; did either of you get hurt?" and both boys said no. She did not ask them why they'd been fighting because "they constantly fight every day. One minute they're best friends, the next minute they're enemies."

According to True, incidents such as fighting have to be reported on an "incident report" that must be submitted to the office. Copies of the report are then sent to the teacher so that they can be placed in the students' files. However, she herself did not submit a report because Doneghy's policy was that only the teachers who saw the fight had to report it and, since she hadn't seen it, she was "forbidden" from doing so. She also stated that she never received copies of any reports that may have been written by Boltniew, Boyle, Grassie, Gonzalez or Francis. And while she had a policy of calling the parents of students who'd been fighting, she could not remember if she had in this instance.

Describing her classroom, True stated that the students had their own desks and that there were large sliding windows looking out onto the yard, "where anybody could actually get in and out of the window if it's not locked." In fact, T.W. frequently opened a window and ran out of the classroom, and she would have to run out, "but not through the window," after him. Sometimes she was able to catch him, and other times he'd come back in through the window. She also stated that she'd wanted to keep the classroom door closed, not only because she knew her class was loud, rambunctious, and noisy, but also because she didn't want the kids to run out the door. However, "Ms. Doneghy always said that the door had to stay open; she worked on an open-door policy."

True denied calling any of her students a "crybaby," "devil," or "stupid." To the contrary, T.K. and T.W. were always calling themselves "stupid," and she'd tried to build up their self-esteem by telling them, "You are not stupid. You're very smart and you shouldn't call yourselves 'stupid.'" And while she acknowledged telling one of them, "you will end up in jail," she explained that T.K. had been a very angry child who would act out by throwing furniture, pencils, crayons, and anything else he could get his hands on. In fact, he once took another student's desk and pushed it against the wall while the student was sitting in it, pinning the student against the wall. She was shocked when she witnessed this and told him, "That behavior, throwing furniture, destroying property and hurting a child could cause you to go to jail." Still, True insisted that she never threatened him with jail.

True denied calling the students "animals" and telling them that she was not a "zookeeper." She also denied telling the students that her children were smarter than they were, adding that she had seven-and-a-half-year-old boy and girl twins who were in their own special education programs. Additionally, although the students in her class were eligible for special education under the category of behaviorally disabled, some of them were "extremely intelligent," and two of them were reading above their grade level. In this regard, she was initially "very surprised" that they were in a special education class because they did "such a great job with academics;" that is, until she saw their behaviors. Still, she could not recall any of them ever becoming frustrated over their lessons.

True stated that she'd known Sheila Francis for twelve years, and had met her when she was hired to replace a special education teacher who was out on maternity leave. Francis was her teacher assistant and they became very good friends. Three years later, when True was transferred to Stewart Elementary School, they agreed they were going to remain friends. "It didn't matter that we couldn't work together; we had already established a friendship."

As True explained, Francis was approximately ten to fifteen years older than she was, "so at times I felt like one of her daughters, she was like a mother to me." Francis attended her son's bris and her daughter's baby naming, and they often celebrated holidays together. And when True began having difficulty with her behaviorally disabled class, she specifically requested that Francis be reassigned to her class. Consequently, she was "shocked" when Francis co-signed Gonzalez's written statement. She couldn't understand why Francis would lie.

True said she met Carlin Gonzalez for the first time when Gonzalez was assigned to her class as A.L.'s one-to-one. Gonzalez was very helpful in the classroom, trustworthy, and did a good job assisting A.L. They never had any major disagreements, got along well, and she never had cause to complain about her. She also believed Gonzalez had been mistaken about being in the classroom at the time of the incident for two reasons. First, there had been so many incidents, and in one of them involving three students fighting in the hallway, Gonzalez had had to get help to stop them. Second, had Gonzalez been in the classroom, she wouldn't have needed to buzz the office for help. She would have been able to leave her there, run after the boys, and take care of the problem herself.

True stated that she could not recall exactly when Dr. Hespe told her he was going to transfer her, but said that he allowed her to return to Twin Hills to get her things while her students were at lunch because he didn't want her to talk to them. He also told her that he didn't want her talking to any of the staff members. It was "just get my things and go." He never told her why she was being transferred, and it was only later that day that someone showed her the letters that Grassie, Gonzalez and Frances had written.

She was surprised by the allegations they'd made because they'd never said anything to her about their concerns prior to January 7, 2010. She'd always told them, "I'm very open. If you ever have any problems, come to me and talk to me. If I have any problems I want to be able to talk to you." In fact, at the end of a day, everybody would say, "Okay. Well, we can try to do this better, but everything seemed to be fine, you're doing the best you can with the behaviors of these students that you have."

Finally, True stated that the text message she'd sent to Gonzalez had actually been intended for Gonzalez and Francis, and would have been sent to Francis but for the fact that Francis didn't know how to text. She also stated that she'd sent the text message to let them know she'd been told she couldn't talk to them, even if she didn't say so in the message itself. She assumed they'd understand that was what she meant when she texted, "Hope it's a great rest of the year."

True also explained that her use of the phrase, "u two church going women," referred to the fact that both of them were very into their church. Francis had "even tried to convert me in some way with her spiritual words from God and everything even though she knew I was Jewish . . . they were both these heavy church people." Yet, both of these "God-fearing" women told her that they had no idea why she'd been summoned to the administration building when they both knew exactly why she had. This was her way of telling them "I was still okay."

Finally, when asked how sending the text message had not been in direct contravention of Superintendent Hespe's directive to her, True replied that Hespe had told her she couldn't talk to anybody when she went to the school. She "understood it to be that I could not have any contact or talk to them when I went to get my things, I was just to go in there quietly and get my things so I wouldn't disturb anybody and that I couldn't talk to them." She didn't consider texting to be talking.

Tenure is designed to aid in the establishment of "a competent and efficient school system" by affording teachers a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service. Viemeister v. Prospect Park Bd. of Educ., 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949). It protects teachers from arbitrary dismissal for "unfounded, flimsy or political reasons." Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). Toward that end, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 provides that no tenured teacher shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause."

The Board of Education bears the burden of establishing the truth of the charges against a teacher by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143 (1962). Preponderance may be described as the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power. State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47 (1975). Proof "need not have the attribute of certainty, but it must be well founded in reason and logic." Lesniewski v. W.B. Furze Corp., 308 N.J. Super. 270 (App. Div. 1998) (citation omitted).

In other words, the evidence must be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to a given conclusion. Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263 (1958).

In Charge I the Board alleges that True has been chronically absent from, and in Charge 2 tardy arriving for, work as a Teacher of the Handicapped since she began her employment with the District in September 1997. In this regard, it is well settled law that excessive absenteeism constitutes valid grounds for the dismissal of a tenured teacher, even where the absences have been excused or caused by legitimate medical or health-related reasons. State Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267, 269-70. Even if a teacher's performance in the classroom is sufficient and the absences have been approved leave or taken as sick days to which the teacher was entitled, the absences may nevertheless be considered material to the issue and can justify removal of the teacher. In re Sheets, 1979 S.L.D. 790, 798, adopted, State Bd. of Ed., 1980 S.L.D. 1536. The mere fact that the absences may have been excused does not obviate the possibility that the teacher may be dismissed for excessive absenteeism.

The underlying rationale for this seemingly harsh penalty was explained by the Commissioner in In re Green, 1991 S.L.D. 1103, a case in which many of the teacher's absences had been approved as sick leave. In affirming the removal, the Commissioner pointed out that while "a school district has a responsibility to teachers who are plagued with illness and have medical problems . . . the overarching responsibility of the Commissioner and the local Board of Education is to the children." Id. at 1117. More specifically, repeated and excessive absenteeism of regular teachers poses a threat to the integrity of the educational process with which the board is primarily concerned in that it "disrupt[s] the required continuity of instruction necessary to provide the opportunity for a pupil's maximum educational progress." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jerome Kacprowicz, 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 147, 153, affd., State Board of Educ., 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 604, aff'd., 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 105 (App. Div.). As the Commissioner more fully explained in In re Reilly, 1977 S.L.D. 403,

> The benefit of regular classroom instruction is lost and cannot be entirely regained, even by extra effort, when the > regular teacher returns to the classroom. Consequently, many pupils who do not have the benefit of their regular classroom teacher frequently experience great difficulty in achieving the maximum benefit of schooling. . . . The entire process of education requires a regular continuity of instruction with a teacher directing the classroom activities and learning experiences in order to reach the goal of maximum educational benefit for each individual pupil. The regular contact of the pupils with their assigned teacher is vital to this process.

Common sense dictates that the impact of a teacher's continued absences is even more pronounced in a case such as this, where the students have been classified as eligible for special education and require consistency in instruction and discipline even more than their typically developing peers.

The same analysis may be applied to a teacher's chronic tardiness and propensity for leaving early. The schedule of a school day is very precise, with timed periods and specific responsibilities of staff to direct, control, protect and supervise students. The importance of punctuality cannot be overemphasized in this environment. If a teacher is late in arriving or in assuming control of her students, the students are either left unsupervised or another staff member must abandon his or her duties to cover for the tardy staff member. Accordingly, chronic tardiness undermines a positive school environment. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Claudia Ashe-Gilkes, School District of the City of East Orange, OAL Docket No. 7135-08. And while an occasional late arrival is unanticipated, unavoidable and usually beyond one's control, persistent tardiness is inexcusable and reflects irresponsibility on the part of the teacher. Ibid.

The points at which absenteeism and tardiness are judged to be excessive fall within the reasonable judgment and discretion of the local school district. Trautwein v. Bd. of Educ. of Bound Brook, 1980 S.L.D. 1539, certif. denied, 84 N.J. 469 (1980). When that judgment has been made, the teacher's conduct may constitute both "unbecoming conduct" and "incapacity" such as to amount to "just cause" warranting the suspension or termination of the teacher. In re Kacprowicz, supra, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d at 151. See also West New York v. Bock, 38 N.J. 500, 522 (1962) ("[j]ust cause for dismissal can be found in habitual tardiness or similar chronic conduct.").

In the present case, True has not disputed the accuracy of the Board's attendance records and, having completed my own independent review of these documents, I find that she was absent from the classroom for a full day or half-day the following number of times:

School Year	Sick Days	Personal Days	Professional Days	Other
1998-1999	34 full days[14]	-	-	-
1999-2000	10 full days 1 half-day	1 full day	1 full day	-
2000-2001	8 full days	1 full day	2 full days	-

[14] The 34 days are listed in Section V, Attendance and Punctuality, of the Classroom Observation Report Dated March 17, 1999. However, the narrative concerns only True's late arrivals and early departures, so it is possible some of the 34 days may be days she arrived late or left early. Since there was no testimony on this point and True did not dispute it, I will treat the days as absences, as pled in Charge I, Count 1, of the Sworn Tenure Charges.

In total, True was absent for a full or half day on 302 occasions, an average of 27.5 times per year.[15]

The focus, however, is not merely on the number of absences. In order for a board of education to terminate a tenured teacher for excessive absenteeism, it must demonstrate (1) that it considered both the number of days and the particular circumstances of the absences; (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred; and (3) that the teacher received some warning that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the teacher's absences. In re the Tenure Hearing of White, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 157, 161 (citing Kelsey v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, EDU 5773-88, Comm'r (May 11, 1989)).

Although the first prong of the test requires the Board to consider not only the total number of days, but also the particular circumstances surrounding the absences, the legitimacy of the absences bears little relationship to whether a termination for chronic or excessive absenteeism will be sustained. As the Commissioner has repeatedly held, "excessive absenteeism constitutes valid grounds for dismissal of a tenured teacher even if the absences are excused or caused by legitimate reasons of personal illness or were approved leave or sick days to which the teacher was entitled, even if the teacher's classroom performance is sufficient." State Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d at 269-70; Orange Board of Education [15] Since the Board could not produce any attendance records for the 2003-2004 school year, and the attendance records for 2009-2010 school year were current only as of March 8, 2010, the day the tenure charges were certified, the actual number of days True was absent during the tenure of her employment is unknown.

v. Grace Folger, OAL Dkt. No. 7379-99 (March 20, 2000), aff'd by Comm'r (May 15, 2000).[16]

Still, the record discloses that the Board was well aware of True's medical conditions, having taken them into consideration in granting her leaves of absence. For example, the minutes of the Board's regular meeting on September 23, 2002, disclose that it approved a leave of absence for "medical" reasons. Similarly, the minutes of its regular meeting on February 25, 2003, disclose that it approved a leave of absence for "medical/maternity." And the minutes of its regular meetings of August 11, 2003, January 29, 2004, and October 25, 2004, disclose that it granted her requests for "family leave," which, by definition, is "a period of leave [granted] upon the birth or placement for adoption of a child or serious health condition of a family member." N.J.S.A. 34:11B-2. It was only when her absences reached a level that it considered to be excessive that the Board had no alternative but to seek her dismissal.

The second prong of the test requires the Board to demonstrate the negative impact "that the absences have had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time in which the absences occur." In re the Tenure Hearing of White, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d at 161. However, that does not mean the Board must point to specific instances or examples supporting its contention; rather, it need only demonstrate the likely result of the absences. See, e.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jerome Kacprowicz, supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d at 152 (common sense dictates that a teacher's continued absences will necessarily disrupt the required continuity of instruction students need to make maximum educational progress); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Ronald Richardson, State Operated District of the City of Paterson, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 5560-97 (July 15, 1998) (student detriment may be found in a lack of continuity in student instruction); Board of Education of the School District of the City of Camden v. Florence Turner Rucker, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 190 (detrimental impact may be found simply in the sheer number of absences that a teaching staff member has during a given period of time).

[16] All case citations using OAL Docket Nos. may be found at http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html.

In Orange Board of Education v. Grace Folger, supra, OAL Dkt. No. 7379-99, a case remarkably similar to the present matter, Folger, who, like True, taught special needs children in a self-contained classroom, was absent over 334 times in a five year period. Given that fact, the Commissioner held that a detrimental effect may be inferred when special education students are continually taught by substitute teachers instead of a special education teacher with years of experience. As the Commissioner reasoned, the students would never be able to make up that amount of lost instruction time and would need a great deal of remedial work. "From the students' point of view, it does not matter [why a teacher is absent]. The bottom line is whether the regularly scheduled teacher is present to teach or whether he/she is absent a majority of the time." Ibid. In the present matter, True's absences were particularly detrimental in that children with behavioral disorders require consistent discipline.

Finally, the third prong of the test in White requires the board to establish that it gave the teacher notice regarding his or her absences prior to the filing of the tenure charges. Specifically, the board must show "that there be some warning given to the employee that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of absences." Elizabeth Board of Education v. Celese Segall, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 1077-00 (February 25, 2000), aff'd by the Comm'r (April 17, 2000). The nature and sufficiency of the notice may vary widely, depending on the circumstances surrounding the particular absences.

In State Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d 267, the Commissioner found that Pellechio had been provided with ample notice prior to the filing of tenure charges since he had been apprised in letters from his principal in June 1984, March 1985, and December 1985 that his absences were affecting the continuity of instruction to his students and that his increment might be withheld. See also Kochman v. Board of Education of the Borough of Keansburg, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 154, aff'd, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 212 (App. Div. 1995) (staff member's superiors must specifically convey their concerns that excessive absenteeism is having a negative impact on the continuity of instruction before the staff member's increment may be withheld).

However, the Commissioner has also held that warnings or conveyances of concern need not expressly state that the teacher's absenteeism has had or may have a negative impact on the continuity of instruction; rather, they must simply warn the teacher that his or her repeated absences are a matter of concern to the administration. For example, in In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jerome Kacprowicz, supra, 93 N.J.A.R.2d 147, the court held that a notation in the teacher's annual performance report that he needed to improve his attendance was sufficient. In fact, in Board of Education of the School District of the City of Camden v. Florence Turner Rucker, supra, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 190, the court held that warnings are not even necessary when the absences are for legitimate medical reasons because neither sanctions nor warnings can be expected to produce an improvement in the teacher's attendance.

Although warnings were not necessary in the present matter, given the number of absences and the fact that they were for legitimate medical reasons, True knew or certainly should have known that they were a source of concern for the administration. For example, in Section V, Attendance and Punctuality, of her Classroom Observation Report Dated March 1, 2005, Keith Ellerbe gave her a 2 with the comment, "Mrs. True needs to improve on punctuality and attendance." Or, as he put it during his post-observation conference, "she [was] attending below standard, the norm."

The correlation between regular teacher attendance and student progress was also included in Section V, Attendance and Punctuality, of the Classroom Observation Report Dated March 27, 2009,[17] that True received. More specifically, the Board addressed the importance of attendance as follows:

> The Willingboro Board of Education has the responsibility to encourage daily staff attendance. The Willingboro BOE also recognizes that a direct relationship exists between a teacher's daily attendance and a student's academic performance. Therefore, when 3 or more occasional absences occur, meet with that staff member to discuss the reason(s) for their absences.

[17] Prior to 2009, the standard Classroom Observation Report instructed that if a teacher's "Cumulative Absences or Latenesses are Equal to or Below the Following Guidelines, Rating is a '3.' 1. September 1-October 31, 4 days; November 1-January 15, 7 days; January 16-March 15, 10 days; 4. March 16-June 30, 13 days."

[Ibid.]

True's principals—Keith Ellerbe, Nadine Tribbett and Barbara Doneghy—all testified that they had such meetings with her at one time or another.

Of even greater concern to the administration was True's chronic and excessive tardiness throughout the tenure of her employment. As early as March 17, 1999, True was cautioned by Alma Singleton about her frequent late arrivals and early departures. A few years later, on March 1, 2005, Keith Ellerbe told her she had to improve both her punctuality and attendance. When it continued unabated, Ellerbe sent her a letter dated November 29, 2005, "as another means of bringing your attention to what I hope will not be a continuing problem of tardiness."

Although the problem got "somewhat" better for the remainder of the 2005-2006 school year, as of April 27, 2007, True had been tardy 16 times during the 2006-2007 school year. And as of March 27, 2009, she'd been tardy 8 times during the 2008-2009 school year. Shortly thereafter, the problem became so pronounced that Barbara Doneghy sent her a memo asking her to attend a meeting with her union representative to discuss, among other things, an unauthorized early departure and failure to sign out on April 2, 2009, and a failure to sign in the following morning on April 3, 2009. The meeting was held, as scheduled, on April 3, and Doneghy sent her a memo on April 6, 2009, summarizing their discussion. Among other things, she was "again told to arrive on or before 8:30 [a.m.]," to sign in with the correct time, and otherwise adhere to her contractual working hours by not leaving early. Doneghy also told her that she would be recommending that True's increment be withheld.

Still, True's chronic late arrivals and early departures remained unabated until they ultimately reached critical mass on May 28, 2009, when she left early without permission and without signing out. On the following morning, May 29, she arrived at 8:47 a.m., yet signed in as arriving at 8:37 a.m. What is more, she refused to attend a second meeting with Doneghy and her union representative at that time.

Given every opportunity to offer an explanation for her seeming inability or refusal to comply with her contractual working hours, True said little and did not help herself. Although she admitted to having been "occasionally late," she did not elaborate and, instead of taking responsibility for her actions, attempted to place the blame on Doneghy, who "wouldn't let [her] sign in." Similarly, while she admitted to having been absent for a significant amount of time when she took a maternity leave and subsequent family leave, she again tried to "reverse the charges," by placing the blame on the administration for failing to tell her the leaves of absence could have an adverse impact on her employment. If anything, her flat affect and failure to exhibit any emotion, even when it might have been expected and appropriate, gave one the impression that she either did not care about these proceedings, or was resigned to what she believed would be the probable outcome.

Based on the foregoing, I conclude that the Board has met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that True's chronic and excessive absenteeism and tardiness constituted incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause warranting dismissal from her position of teacher in the Willingboro School District.

In Charge III, Counts 2 – 5, the Board alleges that True addressed her students in an inappropriate, demeaning and unprofessional manner by calling them names; left some of her students unattended in a hallway during classroom instructional time; and pushed her students, thereby engaging in conduct constituting unbecoming conduct, insubordination and/or other just cause warranting dismissal.

"Unbecoming conduct" is a broadly defined, elastic term, encompassing any conduct that has a tendency to destroy public respect for government employees and confidence in the operation of public services. Karins v. Atl. City, 152 N.J. 532 (1998). A finding of unbecoming conduct does not require a violation of any specific rule or regulation, but rather may be based on an implicit standard of good behavior, "which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct." In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960). The school district's legitimate expectation that its employees conduct themselves in a manner that will instill public confidence becomes heightened where, as here, the staff member is employed as a special education teacher. In that capacity, she is a public employee

> . . . to whom the people have entrusted the care and custody of . . . school children with the hope that this trust will result in the maximum educational growth and development of each individual child. This heavy duty requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior rarely requisite to other types of employment. . . . Those who teach do so by choice, and in this respect the teaching profession is more than a simple job; it is a calling.

> [In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of William Thomas, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 5908-07, (quoting In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jacque L. Sammons, School Dist. of Black Horse Pike Reg., Camden County, 1972 S.L.D. 302).]

As the Hon. Joseph Martone, A.L.J. stated in School Dist. of Parsippany-Troy Hills, Morris County v. Carl A. Hess, III, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 34, "the Commissioner of Education has often stressed '. . . that those persons who enter the teaching profession exercise a significant influence upon those they teach and must exercise a high degree of exemplary behavior.'" Id. at 51 (citing In re Tyler, 12 N.J.A.R. 297).

It should be axiomatic that a teacher may not, under any circumstances, engage in name-calling or the use of other derogatory language towards his or her students. In an analogous case, In the Matter of George Zofchak, School District of the City of Trenton, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 146-02, a tenured teacher was dismissed for, among other things, calling his students "monkeys," "gorillas," "fing pigs" and "fing animals," which was deemed to constitute unbecoming conduct.

Similarly, in the present matter, the Board has alleged that True was overheard telling her students, "You're animals," or "You're animals, you're nothing but animals, [and] I am not a zoo-keeper." She was also overheard calling her students "stupid" and "crybabies;" telling them that her children were smarter than they were; and telling one student that he was going to end up in jail before he was ten years old.

The Board's proofs included question and answer forms completed by then-Director of Special Services Thomas Sullivan following his interviews of four of True's students. However, Sullivan did not testify and was not, therefore, subject to cross-examination. Instead, there is only Hespe's vague recollection of discussions he had with Sullivan before and after the interviews were conducted. Since there is no other evidence concerning the events that gave rise to the interviews, much less the manner in which they were conducted, the statements recorded in these forms are unreliable hearsay.

The Board's proofs also included testimony by three of the students who were interviewed by Sullivan. In evaluating the testimony of these student witnesses, I am guided by the Commissioner's observation as to the caution that should be employed:

> * * * It is the opinion of the Commissioner that testimony of children, especially of those ten years of age, against a teacher, whose duty it is to discipline them, must be examined with extreme care. It is dangerous to use such testimony against a teacher; it is likewise dangerous not to use it. The necessities of the situation sometimes make it necessary to use the testimony of school children. If such testimony were not admissible, the children would be at a teacher's mercy because there is no way to prove certain charges except by the testimony of children.
> [In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Joseph N. Cortese, 1972 S.L.D. 109, 118-119 (quoting Palmer v. Board of Education of Audubon, 1939-49 S.L.D. 183, 188)]

Ironically, with the possible exception of A.L., who testified that True sometimes screamed at him so loudly that it hurt his ears, the three student witnesses proved to be of little help to the Board. Be that as is may, all three were under the age of ten and, with the possible exception of A.L., who saw the witness stand as his stage, seemed to be overwhelmed by the entire experience—looking down at the floor and speaking haltingly in a very quiet voice. The first didn't like some of the things True called his friends, but couldn't remember what they were. The second couldn't recall hearing True say anything he didn't like. And then there was A.L., who admitted to getting into screaming matches with True, but couldn't remember her saying anything bad to or about his friends. Therefore, at the end of the day, a canvas of their testimony as a whole casts doubt on their ability to accurately remember and relate how True interacted with the students in the class.

On the other hand, Mary Grassie, Sheila Francis, and Carlin Gonzalez had very specific recollections of True's name-calling and use of other demeaning language. Moreover, True herself testified that she did not know whether or why any of them would have had a reason to lie. This was particularly true in the case of Sheila Francis, with whom she enjoyed a very close, mother-daughter-like relationship. And the fact that these witnesses could not name the specific students to whom any one comment or name may have been directed is of no moment—that she was heard using such language in her classroom is enough.

> Teachers hold a sacred position in our society. The teacher provides his students not only book knowledge, but also social and moral values . . . Thus, teachers must be held to a high standard of conduct because they have direct conduct with molding habits and nurturing young minds. Suffice it to say, children mimic what they see and they learn by example.
> [In re Tenure Hearing of Tally, 94 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 395]

Based on the foregoing, I conclude that the Board has met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that True's use of name-calling and other demeaning language toward her students constituted conduct unbecoming or other just cause warranting dismissal from her position of teacher in the Willingboro School District.

In Charge III, Count 1, the Board alleges that on January 7, 2010, two of True's students who were left unattended engaged in a physical altercation in the hallway outside of her classroom, while she remained in the classroom "oblivious" to the fight. True does not deny that she was still in her classroom when the two boys were in the hallway fighting, as testified to by Mary Grassie, Tamera Boltniew, and Heather Boyle.

Rather, she insists that she could not take any action to stop the fight because to do so would have meant leaving her remaining students in the room unattended. Therefore, she went into the "wardrobe" in order to call the office on the intercom and get the principal or someone else to go into the hallway and stop the fight.

A careful review of her testimony suggests that her explanation was made out of "whole cloth." Although she stated that she went into the wardrobe and called the office for help, she later testified that she thought if only she could hurriedly pack up the other students and bring them out with their things, she'd then be able to get the ones who'd left without leaving any of the remaining children unwatched. However, in the short amount of time that reportedly elapsed, she had only enough time to do one or the other, not both. She did not say that she first called the office and then hurriedly packed up the other children so she could take them with her.

What is more, True was unable to identify the person with whom she spoke on the intercom. And, assuming arguendo, that she did, in fact, call the office, it stands to reason that someone, be it Doneghy or someone else, would have responded to the hallway or at least called her back to see if she still needed assistance. However, there is no evidence that anyone other than Grassie, Boltniew, Boyle, and possibly Gonzalez, was present, and True did not mention getting a return call from the office.

Finally, despite the proximity of the wardrobe to the classroom door, True stated that she did not go to the door to see where the boys had gone because she "didn't know how far or where the other students were." Yet, given the tumult that, to all accounts, was right outside her door, and certainly sufficient to attract Grassie's attention some twenty-five feet away, it is hard to believe she had no idea where they were or, even worse, any interest in trying to find out. Fortunately, no one was hurt.

Based on the foregoing, I conclude that the Board has met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that True's failure to properly supervise the students in her charge constituted unbecoming conduct or other just cause warranting dismissal from her position of teacher in the Willingboro School District.

In Charge III, Count 6, the Board alleges that during the course of the 2009-2010 school year, True "made inappropriate physical contact with students by pushing them." However, other than the children's accounts in the aforementioned question and answer forms completed by Thomas Sullivan, the Board has not introduced any competent credible evidence establishing that True engaged in such conduct. Accordingly, I conclude that Count 6 should be and is hereby dismissed.

Finally, in Charge IV, the Board alleges that True disobeyed an explicit directive she received from Interim Superintendent Hespe that, upon her transfer to Memorial School, she refrain from further contact with the staff and students at Twin Hills Elementary School. Specifically, the Board alleges that True sent a text message to Carlin Gonzalez and Sheila Francis accusing them of lying.

It is well settled law that willful disobedience of a substantive nature by a tenured teacher towards a supervisor constitutes insubordination. In the Matter of Tenure Hearing of Ingram, OAL Dkt. No. 9068-01, aff'd Comm'r (June 27, 02); Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Edgewater v. Scarpignato, 1983 S.L.D. 311, 317, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., 1983 S.L.D. 338, aff'd, App. Div., 1984 S.L.D. 2013. See also In re Bradley, 1990 S.L.D. 790, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., 1991 S.L.D. 2521 (failure to follow an administrative directive can constitute insubordination and unbecoming conduct by a teacher).

In the present matter, there is more than ample proof that True willfully refused to comply with the directive she received from Hespe, as the text message speaks for itself. Adding insult to injury, her explanation or excuse was that she "understood [Hespe's directive] to be that I could not have any contact or talk to them when I went to get my things. I was just to go in there quietly and get my things so I wouldn't disturb anybody and that I couldn't talk to them. . . . I didn't consider texting to be talking." While I do not for a moment accept that explanation, as texting is but another way of communicating with an individual, even if it were so, there can be no argument that texting is contacting another person.

Moreover, lest there be any doubt about her intent, the incident of May 29, 2010, speaks volumes. True not only refused to attend a meeting with Doneghy and her union representative, but also turned her back on Doneghy and started walking away. Then, when Doneghy followed her and directed her to come back, she failed to comply with her request, walked out the side door, and left. Although not charged, this incident certainly could have been added as a second count to Charge IV.

Based on the foregoing, I conclude that the Board has met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that True's failure to comply with Interim Superintendent Hespe's directive constituted insubordination, unbecoming conduct or other just cause warranting dismissal from her position of teacher in the Willingboro School District.

Accordingly, I conclude that Charge 1, Counts 1 through 11; Charge II, Counts 1 through 3; Charge III, Counts 1 through 5; and Charge IV should be and are hereby sustained. Charge III, Count 6 is dismissed. It is therefore ordered that Randi True be dismissed as a teacher in the Willingboro School District.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BEFORE JOHN SCHUSTER III, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

In this matter the City of Asbury Park Board of Education (petitioner) challenges the decision of Dr. Lester W. Richens, State Monitor, (respondent) which overrode the petitioner's decision not to award a renewal contract for the 2011-2012 school year to Ms. Corey Lowell, the District's Business Administrator and Board Secretary. On June 22, 2011, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal requesting emergent relief. The emergent relief application was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on June 27, 2011 as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 14F-1 to -13. Ms. Lowell submitted a Notice of Motion requesting the right to intervene. The motion was granted. Hereafter all reference to the positions and arguments of Dr. Richens or respondent include the additional positions and arguments of intervener. Oral argument was held on the emergent relief application on July 6, 2011 and at the conclusion of oral argument the record on that application was closed.

DISCUSSION

The authority to grant emergent relief is governed by the seminal case of Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). That case sets forth the standard by which emergency relief can be granted. In order to do so, the petitioner must demonstrate all of the following: (1) the petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted; (2) the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled; (3) the petitioner has the likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and (4) when the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

At issue in this case is the renewal of the contract of Ms. Corey Lowell to serve as Business Administrative and Board Secretary in the 2011-2012 school year. It is noted that Ms. Lowell will receive tenure status in her position on August 26, 2011 if her employment contract is renewed. The Board chose not to renew her contract under circumstances set forth below and Dr. Richens overrode that decision and retained Ms. Lowell in her position for the upcoming year.

Petitioner claims it will suffer irreparable harm if Dr. Richens action remains in effect. It argues that irreparable harm, is any harm that cannot be redressed with monetary damages and is substantial and immediate. Since Ms. Lowell will acquire tenure on August 26, 2011, if continued in her position, then she will only be able to be dismissed for neglect, misbehavior or other offense. Petitioner also argues that Ms. Lowell's performance is currently less than adequate as demonstrated by the fact that the current state audit has some continuant negatives and the State Monitor is still assigned to monitor district activities. Dr. Richens argues that any harm claimed by petitioner is speculative and therefore not irreparable. In addition, he states that before tenure sets in, a final decision will be made by the Commissioner of Education on this issue and therefore there is no immediate harm to the petitioner. Finally, it argues, that there is no demonstration of fact set forth by the petitioner of the allegation that Ms. Lowell's performance is less than adequate. Dr. Richens argues that he has found just the opposite in that the district has made substantial fiscal improvements since Ms. Lowell has taken over as Business Administrator and should therefore continue implementing the programs she initiated to alleviate the remainder of the fiscal deficiencies she inherited. The intervenor joined in the argument of Dr. Richens and affirms that Ms. Lowell is performing her duties exceptionally well and the tenure laws provide the District with adequate relief should that not occur in the future.

Petitioner next argues that the legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled in that N.J.S.A. 18A:11-1 indicates that the Board has the right to oversee the operations of the district whereas Dr. Richens, the State Monitor, is limited only to dealing with fiscal deficiencies. Since this is a non-fiscal matter, Dr. Richens exceeded his authority. It states that the basis for Dr. Richens' position, is that the petitioner cannot override a superintendent's recommendation to renew Ms. Lowell's contract and the Board did not follow the statutory requirements by complying with the May 15, 2011 notice requirements as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 and 11. In addition, petitioner argues that the Open Public Meetings Act was violated and the May 11, 2011, meeting where Ms. Lowell was reappointed was illegal because it was not a regular meeting as is required by applicable statute. Dr. Richens argues first that Ms. Lowell has a potential claim through litigation if her contract was not renewed because of the irregular procedures followed by the Board in its May 4, 11 and 25 meetings. The reorganization meeting was held on May 4, 2011 and issues of personnel were continued to May 11, 2011. On that date, Ms. Lowell was reappointed to her position as Business Administrator for the 2011-2012 school year and as Board Secretary for thirty days. Subsequently on May 25, 2011, another meeting was held wherein the petitioner rescinded Ms. Lowell's appointment as Business Administrator, claiming that the Board was disorganized and not fully aware of what it was doing when the renewal was voted upon. Respondent says Ms. Lowell's appointment and then retraction of that action creates a potential for successful litigation by Ms. Lowell against the district as it is not clear as to whether or not her appointment was valid, invalid or subject to a reversal by the Board. It follows therefore, that if Ms. Lowell is terminated from her position and is successful in her potential litigation, there would be substantial monetary award granted to her which would adversely affect the district's financial condition and could potentially include a reinstatement of her position along with accumulated benefits. This situation Dr. Richens argues is remarkably analogous to the Commission of Education's decision in Rankins v. Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville, http://lawlibrary.reutgers.edu/oal/html/initial/edu6918-09_1-html, which held on October 26, 2010 that "the exposure to potential legal liability for a school district that is plagued with financial shortcomings is a valid fiscal rationale for making a personnel decision regarding a non-tenured staff member. Therefore, the Commission finds that the Monitor's decision was related to the fiscal management of school funds, and thus falls within the statutory authority of the State Monitor." The respondent also argues the procedural deficiencies alleged are a red herring and not the issue in this matter which is whether or not the State Monitor acted properly. The respondent adds that any violation of the Open Public Meetings Act does not create a void activity but rather one that is voidable by aggrieved party and the irregularities in the May meetings were self-created and cannot be used by the petitioner to accomplish its agenda. Rather, the only person that can claim that the procedures were improper is Ms. Lowell who would have been the aggrieved party based on the failure to properly advertise the May 11, 2011 meeting.

As to the requirement that the petitioner must demonstrate it has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits on the underlying claim petitioner argues the fiscal monitor cannot interfere with matters that do not have a direct or substantial fiscal consequence. It continues that the monitor's position is based on a flawed analysis of the authority to override the superintendent's recommendation in personnel matters as well as a misinterpretation of the requirements concerning the May 15, 2011 notice procedure as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10, 11 and 12. It continues that only the Board of Education has the power to terminate non-tenured staff pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1. Dr. Richens counters that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(a), the State Monitor has direct oversight of districts' business operation and personnel matters. He also cites the Assembly Appropriation Statement that says the "State Monitor is appointed to provide direct oversight of the Board of Education's business operations and personnel matters." Respondent goes on to say that N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b) gives the monitor the authority to (1) oversee fiscal management and expenditures of a school district including payment of the district's bills and claims which Ms. Lowell may have as a result of successful litigation. He also has the power to (4) oversee all district staffing, including the ability to hire, promote and terminate employees as well as (5) override the Board of Education on any matter set forth in this subsection. Based on those sections, Dr. Richens argues that he has total authority to deal with personnel matters and petitioner is incorrect when it says that his decisions are limited to those that have direct or substantial fiscal consequences. He argues there is nothing in the enabling statute which enumerates his authority to limit personnel matters to those with direct or substantial fiscal consequences. In addition he says that putting aside the claim of a flawed legal analysis as to procedures involved in the potential litigation, he did a thorough investigation of Ms. Lowell's performance prior to making his decision. He states he met with the District's superintendent who recommended Ms. Lowell's renewal of employment, Mr. Glenn Forney, Acting Director, New Jersey Department of Education, Division of Finance and former State Monitor, Bruce Rodman, who both concurred that Ms. Lowell should be continued in her position. In addition, Dr. Richens reviewed the various audits that have been conducted both before and during Ms. Lowell's employment and her evaluations and he confirmed her exceptional performance as business administrator. He argues that in order for petitioner to be successful it would have to show that his conduct in renewing Ms. Lowell's contract would constitute an arbitrary and capricious act and based on her performance that cannot be done. He also argues that maintaining continuity in the position of business administrator by one who is performing admirably is a decision concerning fiscal management and one that is clearly within his authority as it directly concerns the Board of Education's business operations. In addition, he argues the Commissioner of Education's decision in Rankins v. Board of Education of the City of Pleasantville, supra, states "there is no doubt that the State Monitors have the power to make personnel decisions for non-tenured staff members when those decisions are necessary to solve the district's fiscal and audit deficiencies. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55. Further, in order to achieve fiscal stability state monitors have the authority to override the vote of the Board of Education. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55(b)(5)." Finally, Dr. Richens argues that his basis for maintaining Ms. Lowell in her position was based on a review of her performance which demonstrated an effective effort in dealing with the district's financial condition and therefore his actions were not arbitrary and capricious but rather a demonstration of appropriate motives. Finally, petitioner argues that when the equities and interest of the parties are balanced, it will suffer a greater harm than Dr. Richens. It argues that respondent rushed to a decision without consultation with the Board nor decisions regarding Ms. Lowell's appointment. As such, it claims to be "disenfranchised" with regard to Dr. Richens' decision. Respondent counters that the pertinent statutes regarding the state monitor do not require any effort to collaborate with the Board nor have discussions or negotiate with the Board for a common understanding. Boards of education sometime make decisions for other than fiscally efficient reasons and if they did not do so there would be no need for a state fiscal monitor to be appointed. Dr. Richens argues that as to the equities involved, it is a monitor's obligation to primarily consider the fiscally responsive consequences of its actions and sometimes disenfranchisement is a collateral affect of making those proper decisions. Therefore, Dr. Richens concludes that granting petitioner its relief could cause him to suffer a greater harm because the action could result in another fiscal deficiency which he is charged with preventing.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

The issue in this matter is whether the Asbury Park Board of Education is entitled to emergent relief reversing the decision of its State appointed monitor rejecting the non-renewal of the contract of the district's business administrator by that Board. For petitioner to be successful, it must meet all four (4) prongs of the Crowe v. Degioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982) test.

1. Irreparable harm

Petitioner claims it will suffer irreparable harm because the consequence of Ms. Lowell's renewal will grant her tenure status and therefore it will be forced to retain an employee it believes to be performing in a less than adequate fashion. Because a business administrator only holds its position under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and can be dismissed for neglect, misbehavior or other offense, I CONCLUDE the Board has a means to address its concerns. Therefore, the harm it is claiming by tolerating the monitor's choice of business administrator for the upcoming year is only temporary, and consequently not irreparable should Ms. Lowell not perform efficiently or neglectful in the future.

2. Petitioner's legal right is settled

Petitioner claims, under the circumstances in this case, it has the right to non-renew Ms. Lowell's contract as business administrator/board secretary. Had a monitor not been appointed by the state to oversee the District's operations I would agree. However, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-55 b.(5) and (4) give the monitor the power to overturn a Board's decision and renew a contract of employment. There is an open question as to whether a monitor's personnel decisions as set forth in subsection (4) above have to be related to fiscal issues and if so the extent of that relationship. However I CONCLUDE that such a relationship exists because of the potential litigation that might have arisen by the Board's action (See Rankins v. Board of Education of City of Pleasantville, supra.) envisioned by Dr. Richens as well as his finding that Ms. Lowell was performing quite well in her position. In addition a fiscal relationship exists because a monitor must oversee the fiscal management of a district and must have confidence with its business administrator whose charge is to implement the fiscal affairs. Therefore, under these circumstances petitioner's rights to not exceed the authority of the monitor.

3. Likelihood of success on the merits

See number 2 above for the reasons I CONCLUDE the monitor did not exceed his authority and therefore petitioner has not met its burden of showing an eventual likelihood of success on the merits.

4. Weighing of interests

I CONCLUDE the monitor has a greater interest in deciding whether the current business administrator should continue to be part of his financial management team then the petitioner. Dr. Richens, after a thorough review, determined Ms. Lowell was performing her duties admirably. He clearly has confidence in her. The petitioner has not demonstrated how it might suffer a greater harm than Dr. Richens if his decision is overturned.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons set forth above, I CONCLUDE petitioner has not met the burden of demonstrating its entitlement to emergent relief.

ORDER

I ORDER petitioner emergent relief application be DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, whose position as a substance awareness counselor (SAC) was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF) at the end of the 2009-2010 school year, asserts that the respondent Board improperly terminated his employment in violation of his tenure rights by failing to re-employ him in one of two school psychologist positions held by non-tenured staff members. At the time of his hire in September 2006, petitioner held a Certificate of Eligibility (CE) which allowed him to seek provisional employment as a SAC. He served for four years under that provisional certification. Petitioner had also earned an educational services certificate with a standard endorsement as a School Psychologist, but had not served in that capacity in respondent's district. The Board contends that petitioner never earned tenure in its district.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the threshold issue in this case is whether the petitioner earned tenure as a teaching staff member in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5; to earn tenure, an employee must work for at least three consecutive years and hold a "proper certificate in full force and effect"; petitioner worked for more than three years as a SAC, but held only a provisional certificate, which is not a "proper certificate" for the position; petitioner's failure to earn a standard certificate as a SAC is fatal to his tenure claims; accordingly, the petitioner was not employed under tenure at the time of his reduction in force; and it is not necessary to reach petitioner's remaining argument that his rights extend to all endorsements on his educational services certificate and that he is entitled to the positions held by non-tenured school psychologists by virtue of his tenure status. The ALJ denied petitioner's appeal and dismissed the case.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for factual findings concerning whether or not petitioner satisfied the conditions of provisional certification and the requirements for standard certification. More specifically, the Commissioner found that although prior case law – i.e., Anson v. Bridgeton Bd. of Ed., 1972 S.L.D. 638 – held that service under provisional certification might count toward tenure, such tenure was contingent upon the employee's satisfaction of the conditional requirements of that provisional certification. As regards that issue, the record before the Commissioner was inconclusive.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF FORT LEE, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This controversy requires an examination of whether petitioner has achieved tenure in respondent's district, which tenure would give him the right to positions held by non-tenured district employees. After review of the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and the record,[1] the Commissioner remands the case to the OAL for further factual findings as discussed infra.

Petitioner possesses a standard Educational Services certificate with a School Psychologist endorsement. (Joint Exhibit J-10) Having also been issued a Certificate of Eligibility (CE) to seek employment as a Substance Awareness Coordinator (SAC), Joint Exhibit J-5,[2] petitioner applied for and was accepted to fill such a position in respondent's district,

[1] It was determined by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) and parties on January 10, 2011 that this matter was appropriate for summary decision in lieu of a plenary hearing.

[2] The CE states that "[t]he Provisional Certificate will be issued contingent upon evidence of employment in a district that agrees to provide an approved induction program, including required job support, performance evaluation and professional coursework." (J-5.)

effective September 1, 2006. (The credential for Substance Awareness Coordinator is also an endorsement on the educational services certificate.)[3]

In June of 2007, respondent and petitioner executed a New Jersey Department of Education (Department) form entitled "Substance Awareness Coordinator Residency Agreement" (Residency Agreement) wherein respondent consented to provide petitioner with supervised professional experiences and professional guidance and evaluation for six months. (Joint Exhibit J-6) In consideration of this commitment by respondent, the Department agreed, inter alia, to issue petitioner a provisional license valid for one year – beginning September 1, 2006. (Ibid.)[4]

The Commissioner assumes that the Residency Agreement was, belatedly, executed in connection with N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.2(e). That regulation mandates that a district which hires an individual with a certificate of eligibility for a SAC endorsement must 1) apply for a provisional certificate for that employee and 2) see to it that he or she receives instruction, mentoring and evaluations via a State-approved training or residency program. The Commissioner notes, however, that Joint Exhibit J-6 does not contain the required "State Approval Signature." Nor is there any evidence in the record that a provisional certificate was actually secured for petitioner during the 2006-2007 school year. Joint Exhibits J-8 and J-9 indicate that the original issue date for petitioner's provisional certificate was August 2007 – at which time petitioner had already worked in the SAC position for a year.

Notwithstanding the absence of the signature of a Department representative on the Residency Agreement, the record suggests that respondent provided petitioner with a residency program. The individual assigned to supervise the program submitted a favorable evaluation of petitioner on October 9, 2007. The evaluation included 1) an express statement that petitioner's residency program had been completed and 2) a recommendation that petitioner be issued a license. (Joint Exhibit J-7) The Commissioner notes that the date of October 9, 2007 is less than six months after the date of the parties' signatures on the Residency Agreement (Joint Exhibit J-6), suggesting that the residency program may have begun before the date of the partially executed Residency Agreement.

[3] Petitioner's employment in the SAC position continued through the 2009-2010 school year. (Joint Exhibits J-1, J- 2, J-3 and J-4)

[4] It would appear that the form used for Joint Exhibit J-6 may have been out-of-date. More specifically, beginning in 2004, provisional certificates were issued for two-year terms.

It appears that the Department did not accept respondent's October 2007 recommendation for petitioner's licensure as a SAC. Joint Exhibit J-8 denotes that in December of 2009 respondent applied for a renewal of petitioner's provisional certificate, and Joint Exhibit J-9 confirms that such a renewal was issued in August 2009, with expiration in July 2011. Insofar as provisional certificates may only be renewed for one two-year term, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-6.2, it appears that petitioner's provisional certification in respondent's district has now expired.[5]

The instant petition was filed in the wake of respondent's April 28, 2010 notice to petitioner that due to a reduction in force he would not be rehired for the 2010-2011 school year. Petitioner asserts that in consequence of his four years of service under a provisional certificate in the SAC position he earned tenure in respondent's district. He further maintains that, pursuant to Dennery v. Board of Education of the Passaic County Regional High School District #1, 131 N.J. 626 (1993), his tenure rights extend to the standard endorsement for school psychologist that he holds on his educational services certificate. Relying on his contention that he holds such extended tenure rights, he reasons that in 2010 he was entitled to one of two school psychologist positions in respondent's district that had been held – for one year and one and one half years, respectively – by non-tenured employees Reina Sandouk and Pamela Rothman.[6]

[5] The Commissioner takes official notice that in 2010 petitioner applied to the New Jersey State Board of Examiners for a standard SAC certificate, but was denied same due to a coursework deficit. In the Matter of the Application of Raymond Ruiz, State Board of Examiners (June 10, 2010).

In its answer to the petition respondent admitted that petitioner held provisional certification as a SAC during his employment in respondent's district, Respondent's Answer, Para. 2, but maintained that petitioner did not achieve tenure because provisional certification is not "proper" for purposes of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In its summary decision brief and reply exceptions respondent inexplicably changed its position, claiming that petitioner held provisional certification only during his fourth year of service, that during the first three years of petitioner's employment he held only a certificate of eligibility, that a certificate of eligibility is a substandard credential, and that petitioner consequently did not achieve tenure. In the alternative, respondent argued that the required amount of time served under provisional certification cannot accomplish tenure unless the employee subsequently attains standard certification in the same position. For this proposition, respondent relies on N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(e), a regulatory provision outlining standards for seniority, which provision primarily addresses holders of emergency certificates but also states:

> Upon acquisition of a standard certificate, any periods of service under a provisional certificate shall also be counted toward seniority. (Emphasis added.)

At the outset, the Commissioner reminds respondent that the responsibility for securing provisional certification for a novice professional lies with the school district that hires the staff member. The teaching staff member has some responsibility for ensuring that he is properly certificated, but he or she may not obtain provisional certification for him or herself. In this matter, it appears that the district was delinquent in its duty to apply for petitioner's provisional certificate. More specifically, the district's application for same is dated June 6, 2007, requesting an effective date of September 2006. Consequently, respondent is estopped from arguing that petitioner's time teaching under a provisional certificate was less than that required by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. Petitioner is deemed to have worked under a provisional certificate for the four years during which he served respondent in the SAC position.

[6] An order allowing Reina Sandouk, the holder of one of the school psychologist positions, to intervene in this matter was issued on November 23, 2010.

Second, the Commissioner cannot, without more, rely on N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(e) – a regulatory provision outlining standards for seniority – in determining whether petitioner achieved tenure.

Third, as petitioner points out, there is language in some past decisions that suggests that the "proper certificate" which N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 requires a teacher to hold when claiming tenure may be either a standard certificate or a provisional certificate. See, e.g., Breitweiser v. State Operated School Dist. of City of Jersey City, Hudson County, 286 N.J. Super. 633, 639-40 (App. Div. 1996); Anson, et al., v. Bridgeton Bd. of Ed., 1972 S.L.D. 638.[7]

Thus, the central question in this controversy is whether petitioner earned tenure in the district under his provisional certificate. The Commissioner is constrained to conclude that the answer to that question cannot be definitively ascertained from the record at hand.

Of the cases cited by the parties, only one, Anson, et al., v. Bridgeton Board of Education, supra, provides a holding – as opposed to dictum – that tenure can be achieved by service under a provisional certificate for the period of time set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. In Anson, the Commissioner found that one of the petitioners, John L. Henderson – who had taught in the respondent's district for over three consecutive years under provisional certificates – had achieved tenure. This finding, however, was based upon the Commissioner's determination that Henderson had satisfied the conditional requirements of his provisional certificate:

[7] Respondent urges that the holding in Anson should be discounted because it was issued before certain reforms to licensure requirements in the 1980's. Insofar as respondent has not identified specific changes that might be germane to the present controversy, the Commissioner declines to regard Anson's holding as obsolete or in any way superceded.

> The holder of a provisional teaching certificate accepts a conditional requirement of earning four academic credits per year, and the validity of a provisional certificate cannot be questioned as it relates to tenure, so long as this requirement is met.
> Anson, supra, at 638. (Emphasis added.)

This determination is in keeping with N.J.A.C. 6A:9-6.1, which instructs that a standard certificate – the only permanent certificate – is issued only to candidates who have met all requirements for state certification. And as the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) noted below, revision of the laws concerning provisional certification has, if anything, imposed more requirements upon novice teachers, resulting in even less certainty that a candidate with provisional certification will earn a standard SAC endorsement.

With this framework in mind, the present record leaves unresolved the question of whether petitioner satisfied all of the conditional requirements of his provisional certification. The determination of the New Jersey State Board of Examiners in In the Matter of the Application of Raymond Ruiz, supra, suggests that one or more requirements may not, in fact, have been met.

Further, in considering whether the record supports the conclusion that petitioner earned tenure in respondent's district, the Commissioner found the discussions in Breitweiser v. State Operated School Dist. of City of Jersey City, supra, and Emily Kubas v. Board of Education of the City of Linden, 1980 S.L.D. 172 (Comm'r of Ed.) to be of some value. In Kubas v. Board of Education of the City of Linden, supra, a cosmetology teacher was dismissed after three and one half years of service under an emergency certificate. It was not until after her dismissal that she received standard certification. In determining that three-and-one half years of teaching under an emergency certificate did not meet the requirements for tenure, the Commissioner reasoned:

> [H]olders of emergency certificates have not satisfied the educational prerequisites for standard certification, nor are they entitled to automatic renewal of the privilege to teach accorded them by the emergency certification process. Because of the uncertainty surrounding continued eligibility to teach, the protection of the tenure laws was not intended to extend to holders of substandard certificates and has not been so extended. Id. at 179.

In Breitweiser v. State Operated School Dist. of City of Jersey City, supra, the petitioner claimed tenure based upon years of service under a standard certificate, supplemented by time previously served under an emergency certificate. The Appellate Division ultimately rejected petitioner's tenure claim, stating:

> [S]ervice under an emergency certificate may be counted towards the service needed for tenure only when that service is followed by the teacher ultimately obtaining a permanent certificate in the same field as the emergency certificate. Id. at 644.

The Appellate Panel's explanation for this rule was articulated as follows:

> The rule we derive from Delli Santi and the K'Burg cases is quite logical. During service under an emergency certificate, there is no way to be sure that a person will be rehired the next year, let alone receive standard certification in the field. Id. at 645.

And further:

> A district may hope that an emergency teacher proves to be qualified rather than merely legally employable. The district may even expect or bank on the likelihood that an emergency teacher will become qualified. An emergency teacher's failure to earn the standard certificate in the emergency discipline, however, indicates that the teacher never became qualified to teach in that area and that the district's hope or expectation of the teacher's progress was not fulfilled. Under such circumstances we consider it consistent with a fair-minded construction of the teacher-tenure law to > conclude that such a teacher's emergency service was not under an "appropriate certificate" for purposes of the tenure statute.

>
> . . . .
> By contrast, ... [a] teacher's acquisition of a standard certificate in the field of emergency service vindicates to a large extent whatever expectation the district had about the emergency teacher's progress towards certification. Id. at 646-47.

The Commissioner is mindful that Breitweiser and Kubas taught under emergency certificates, as opposed to the provisional certification for which petitioner Ruiz was eligible. However, the analysis of the issues set forth in those cases is consonant with the holding in Anson that Henderson's tenure was conditioned not just upon his years of service under provisional certification, but also upon his timely completion of the academic and professional requirements for standard certification. In the Commissioner's view, that analysis is appropriately applied here.

While holding provisional certification, petitioner appears to have completed some of the regulatory requirements, but it is uncertain whether he satisfied all. As the Appellate Division noted in Breitweiser, under such circumstances there is no way to be sure that such a candidate will ultimately receive standard certification in the field. Id. at 645. And the ALJ, in her Initial Decision, similarly observed that

> [t]he provisional certificate held by Ruiz is analogous to the emergency certificate held by Breitwieser because it has no permanency; carries with it uncertainty surrounding continued eligibility to serve in a professional capacity in a public school; and its holder has not fully satisfied current requirements for standard certification. (Initial Decision at 8.)

Indeed, in the present case it appears that petitioner never received standard SAC certification, suggesting – in concert with the above-cited Board of Examiners decision – that he may not have undertaken all of the program elements that are required of provisional employees. Under such circumstances the Appellate Division considered it "consistent with a fair-minded construction of the teacher-tenure law" to conclude that such service should not beget tenure. Breitweiser, supra, at 646.

It is clear from the statutory and decisional authority discussed supra that the purpose of provisional certification is to provide a novice professional with a reasonable amount of time to complete the requirements for standard certification. The Commissioner cannot find, on the record before him, that petitioner utilized his provisional period to accomplish that goal. Thus, it cannot be concluded that petitioner met the standard for tenure that was set forth in Anson, the case most apposite to the instant matter. Until such findings and conclusions are made, the question of whether petitioner earned tenure in respondent's district – and had rights superior to the untenured school psychologists identified in his petition – cannot be answered.

This case is therefore remanded to the OAL for factual findings concerning petitioner's satisfaction, vel non, of the conditions of provisional certification and the requirements for standard certification.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF FORT LEE, BERGEN COUNTY,

Yaacov Brisman, Esq., for respondent, Board of Education of the Borough of Fort Lee (Cleary, Giacobbe, Alfieri, Jacobs, attorneys)

Gail Kanef Oxfeld, Esq., for intervenor, Reina Sandouk (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

Record Closed: April 7, 2011 Decided: May 19, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Raymond Ruiz, a substance awareness coordinator (SAC) employed by respondent, the Board of Education of the Borough of Fort Lee (the Board), asserts that the Board improperly terminated his employment due to a Reduction in Force (RIF), effective June 30, 2010. Ruiz contends that the Board acted in violation of his tenure rights by failing to re-employ him in professional positions he held under tenure, and that are presently held by non-tenured staff members.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Ruiz filed his appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on July 15, 2010. An answer was filed on behalf of the Board and the matter transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on July 29, 2010. A prehearing order dated September 22, 2010, directed counsel for the Board to advise any employees who may be adversely affected by the outcome of this proceeding of their right to intervene under N.J.A.C. 1:1-16.4. Via letter dated November 2, 2010, Reina Sandouk, a non-tenured school psychologist, advised through counsel that she wished to do so. An order permitting Sandouk to intervene was entered on November 23, 2010.

There was no disagreement as to the underlying facts, and the parties filed a Joint Stipulation on February 5, 2011. Briefs were filed on March 14, 2011. Counsel for Ruiz filed a reply on April 7, 2011, at which time the record closed.

ISSUES PRESENTED

The threshold issue for determination is whether Ruiz earned tenure as a teaching staff member during his employment with the Board, in accordance with the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. Only if this issue is resolved in Ruiz's favor, will it be necessary to determine whether the scope of his tenure protection extended to the positions held by non-tenured school psychologists such as the intervenor, and, if so, whether Ruiz is entitled to reinstatement, together with back pay and any other benefits and emoluments of employment, retroactive to the date of his termination.

FINDINGS OF FACT

I FIND as follows:

1. Ruiz was initially hired by the Board as a SAC, at the start of the 2006-2007 school year, via contact dated September 20, 2006. (J-1.)
2. At the time of his initial appointment, Ruiz held a certificate of eligibility (CE) for the SAC position, which had been issued by the New Jersey State Board of Examiners in April 2002. The CE states that "[t]he Provisional Certificate will be issued contingent upon evidence of employment in a district that agrees to provide an approved induction program, including required job support, performance evaluation and professional coursework." (J-5.)
3. Ruiz was enrolled in a SAC Residency program in June 2007, through which the Department of Education agreed to issue a provisional certificate to him for one year, effective September 1, 2006, and the school district agreed to provide Ruiz with "appropriate professional experiences" and supervise his employment.[1] (J-6.)
4. In accordance with the terms of Ruiz's enrollment in the SAC Residency Program, his performance was evaluated by the district using a Department of Education, Office of Licensing and Credentials, form dated October 9, 2007. (J-7.)
5. The documents offered into evidence by the parties, reflect that a provisional certificate as a SAC was actually issued to Ruiz in August 2007. (J-8.)
6. Ruiz was reappointed by the Board for the 2007-2008 school year, as a SAC, via contract dated April 30, 2007. (J-2.)
7. The Board again reappointed Ruiz as a SAC for the 2008-2009 and 2009-2010 school years. (J-3, J-4.)

[1] The residency agreement was filed a year into Ruiz's employment with the Board, but notes that the issuance of the provisional certificate is retroactive to the date of his initial employment.

8. Based upon his re-employment by the Board for the 2008-2009 school year, the Board filed a Renewal of Emergency or Provisional Certificate form dated December 16, 2009, on Ruiz's behalf.[2] (J-8.)
9. The renewal provisional certificate was issued in August 2009. (J-9.)
10. By letter dated April 28, 2010, Ruiz was advised that the he would not be reappointed for the 2010-2011 school year.
11. Reina Sandouk has been employed by the Board as a school psychologist since September 1, 2009.
12. Pamela Rothman has been employed by the Board as a school psychologist since January 5, 2009.
13. Both Sandouk and Rothman hold standard educational services certificates with the school psychologist endorsement.
14. Throughout his employment with the Board, Ruiz likewise held a standard educational services certificate with the school psychologist endorsement, which had been issued by the State Board of Examiners in March 2003. (J-10.)

The parties moved the job descriptions for the SAC and school psychologist positions into evidence. (J-11, J-12.) It is uncontroverted, and I FIND, that the functions of these two positions were entirely dissimilar. The psychologist serves as a member of the Child Study Team (CST), and the focus of his or her job responsibilities is on the evaluation and testing of students referred to the CST. The SAC is responsible for providing drug-prevention leadership and assistance through intervention, referral, and curriculum development. However, I FIND that both positions require an educational services certificate, although with differing endorsements to that certificate (school psychologist and substance awareness coordinator). It is uncontroverted that Ruiz was never employed in Fort Lee as a school psychologist.

I further FIND, and it is uncontroverted, that at no time during his employment with the Board did Ruiz obtain or hold a standard educational services certificate with the SAC endorsement. The positions to which Ruiz claims an entitlement are those held by Rothman and Sandouk.

[2] It appears that the form had previously been filled out in November 2008 but was not finalized. (J-9.)

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Tenure is a legislative status, is earned by operation of law, and upon meeting the precise requirements of the tenure statute. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63 (1982); Zimmerman v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 38 N.J. 65 (1962). Ruiz's claims spring from N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, which provides in pertinent part:

> The services of all teaching staff members . . . in positions which require them to hold appropriate certificates issued by the board of examiners, serving in any school district or under any board of education, excepting those who are not the holders of proper certificates in full force and effect . . . shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency . . . after employment in such district or by such board for:
>
> (a) Three consecutive calendar years, or any shorter period which may be fixed by the employing board for such purpose; or
>
> (b) Three consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year; or
> (c) The equivalent of more than three academic years within a period of any four consecutive academic years.

By the express terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, an employee of a local board of education may earn tenure only if he works for the requisite period of time in a position for which a certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners is required, and he is the holder of a "proper certificate in full force and effect." Spiewak, supra, 90 N.J. at 74.

It is uncontroverted that Ruiz was employed in a position that required an educational services certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners, and further it is undisputed that he served in Fort Lee for more than three years and a day. But Ruiz is unable to meet the final requirement of the tenure statute because he never earned a standard educational services certificate with a SAC endorsement while employed by the Board. I CONCLUDE that a provisional certificate is not the "proper certificate" contemplated by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, and that accordingly, Ruiz was not employed by the Board under tenure at the time of his RIF.

A provisional certificate is a temporary two-year certificate issued to newly employed instructional, administrative, and educational services staff "who have met requirements for initial employment as part of a State-approved school district training program or residency leading to standard certification." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-6.2; N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1. Under the regulatory scheme, a novice educational professional is initially employed under a CE, which has been defined as "a certificate with lifetime validity issued by the State Board of Examiners to candidates who meet degree, academic, and applicable test requirements for teacher certification." N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4a(a). The CE permits its holder to secure employment, but the employing board is then obligated to "immediately register the employment with the Department of Education and request issuance of a provisional certificate." N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2a(b).[3]

To acquire standard certification as a SAC, the candidate must complete a six-month State-approved school residency while employed full time under a provisional educational services certificate with a SAC endorsement. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.2(e)(3). The process for obtaining full certification is rigorous, and the residency program in which the candidate participates must "[o]perate in accordance with a residency agreement issued by the Department and entered into by the Department, the employing school, the candidate and the State-approved residency supervisor," and must include professional experiences. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.2(e)(3)(i). The novice SAC must be provided with appropriate training and support. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.2(e)(3)(f).

The provisional certificate thus is part of the intensive training process that leads to full certification. Only the standard certificate is "a permanent certificate" and it is "issued only to candidates who have met all requirements for State certification." N.J.A.C. 6A: 9-6.1 (emphasis supplied). It is not a foregone conclusion that a standard certificate will be awarded to a teaching staff member at the end of the provisional employment process. Indeed, the regulations provide for an appeals process when a candidate for standard certification receives a recommendation of "disapproved" or "insufficient" at the conclusion of the provisional program. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.18(a).

[3] The CE and provisional certificate are part of a comprehensive "standards-based" licensure system "that continuously serves to improve the quality of instruction for New Jersey's children so that they are equipped to work and succeed in an ever-changing and increasingly complex global economy." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-1.2.

Ruiz was hired under a CE, and the Board took the necessary action, albeit somewhat slowly, to obtain a provisional certificate for him. It executed the necessary documents confirming that it would mentor and evaluate Ruiz, as required by regulation. The statute indicates that once the provisional certificate is issued, its "effective date for all purposes shall be the date on which the novice teacher began employment with the board of education." N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2a(b). Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that Ruiz held a provisional certificate throughout his employment by the Board, effective as of the date he was hired in September 2006.

But without earning standard certification while still employed in Fort Lee, Ruiz could not earn tenure. Neither counsel's research nor mine revealed any precedent squarely addressing the tenure entitlements of the holder of a provisional certificate under the present system for teaching staff certification. Case law addressing the rights of the holder of an emergency certificate is instructive, however. At issue in Breitwieser v. State-Operated School District of the City of Jersey City, 286 N.J. Super. 633 (App. Div. 1996), was "whether a teaching staff member can acquire tenure for service under a permanent certificate combined with a prior period of service under an emergency certificate in a different field." Id. at 639. Breitwieser initially was employed as a teacher of the handicapped under an emergency certificate. She then transferred to an elementary education position. Breitwieser held a standard elementary education endorsement on her instructional certificate, but did not work under that certificate for the requisite three years and a day prior to her reduction in force. The court determined that her service under the emergency certificate endorsed as a teacher of the handicapped could not be "tacked on" to her service under the standard certificate, because the emergency certificate was in a different field.

Ruiz cites the following dicta in Breitwieser in support of the proposition that the provisional certificate is "not defined as a substandard certificate" and thus is the "proper certificate" contemplated by the tenure statute: "[a]s the district reminds us, the 'proper certificate' which N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 requires a teacher to hold when claiming tenure must be either a standard certificate or a provisional certificate." Breitwieser, supra, 286 N.J. Super. at 639. But Breitwieser is more helpful in resolving the issue presented here by looking past its dicta to its rationale for denying tenure to the petitioner there. The court concluded that a teacher may not acquire tenure solely based upon service under an emergency certificate no matter how long he or she serves because:

> [The holders of emergency certificates] have not fully satisfied the educational prerequisites for standard certification, . . . nor are they entitled to automatic renewal of the privilege to teach accorded them by the emergency certification process. Because of the uncertainty surrounding continued eligibility to teach, the protection of the tenure laws was not intended to extend to holders of substandard certificates and has not been so extended.

The Breitwieser court astutely noted that "[i]f service under any 'valid' certificate, whether standard or substandard, was counted towards tenure, the exception clause in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 would be rendered superfluous, confusing the kind of certificate needed for legal employment as a teacher (merely 'valid') with the kind needed to earn tenure credit ('proper')." Id. at 644. It clearly was not the legislative intent that a staff member with less than permanent credentials be guaranteed permanent employment.

The provisional certificate held by Ruiz is analogous to the emergency certificate held by Breitwieser because it has no permanency; carries with it uncertainty surrounding continued eligibility to serve in a professional capacity in a public school; and its holder has not fully satisfied current requirements for standard certification. Ruiz cites the decision in Anson v. Bridgeton Bd. of Educ., 1972 S.L.D. 638, in support of his contention that tenure may be earned through service exclusively under a provisional certificate. The Commissioner determined that one of the petitioners there was employed under "an appropriate provisional certificate issued by the State Board of Examiners . . ." and thus had earned tenure. Id. at 639. But as Ruiz readily admits in his brief, the provisional certificate when Anson was decided came with far different standards and requirements. The certificate then was issued for one year to applicants for a standard certificate who were short academic credits. The holder was assured continued eligibility for employment so long as the needed credits were earned. Id. at 638 (citing N.J.A.C. 6:11-4.2).

In the ensuing years, the certification process underwent sweeping changes. In 1984, major reforms were enacted to eliminate the practice of emergency licensure from academic teaching fields, and in 1988-89, further amendments required candidates for licensure to serve a provisional year of employment under the guidance of a mentor, and as a condition of earning permanent licensure. 28 N.J.R. 5128(a) (December 16, 1996). I CONCLUDE that the provisional certificate as it is issued today is a substandard certificate that allows its holder to pursue the required mentoring and experience needed to qualify for standard certification. Only standard certification is the "proper certification in full force and effect" contemplated by the tenure law. N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

Ruiz's failure to earn a standard certificate as a SAC prior to his RIF is thus fatal to his tenure claims. It is well established that a teacher may earn tenure when he or she commenced employment under an emergency certificate, but later earned a standard certificate with the same endorsement. See K'burg v. Lower Alloways Creek Bd. of Educ., 1973 S.L.D. 636; Givens v. Newark Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 906; Smith v. Sayreville Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 1095. In each of these cases it was clear, however, that tenure could not be earned until the employee acquired a standard certificate. Indeed, where a staff member employed under an emergency certificate was RIF'd prior to acquiring a standard certificate, he was held to have earned no tenure or seniority. Sefcik v. Red Bank Reg'l High Sch. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 141.

Ruiz correctly stresses that the tenure laws must be liberally construed, so as to effectuate their intended purpose, which is to provide a measure of security to employees who have faithfully served for the requisite period of time. Viemeister v. Bd. of Educ. of Prospect Park, 5 N.J. Super. 215 (App. Div. 1949). But N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 cannot be read so liberally that a staff member who has not met the precise requirements of the statute is awarded tenure. Zimmerman, supra, 38 N.J. at 72. I CONCLUDE that Ruiz was not employed under tenure at the time of his reduction in force.

In light of my conclusion that Ruiz did not earn tenure, it is unnecessary to reach his remaining argument that his rights extend to all endorsements on his educational services certificate and that he is entitled to the positions held by non-tenured school psychologists by virtue of his tenure status. Dennery v. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 626 (1993); Ellicott v. Franklin Twp. Bd. of Educ., 251 N.J. Super. 342 (App. Div. 1991).

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a former custodian in a New Jersey charter school – challenged respondent's determination, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, that he is permanently disqualified from school employment as a result of his convictions on multiple drug offenses. Petitioner contended that recent statutory amendments exclude him from the reach of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, and that he has been rehabilitated and should be allowed to continue as a school employee. Respondent asserted that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 mandates petitioner's permanent disqualification from school employment based on his criminal record.

The ALJ found that: N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 is clear in its requirement that a school cannot employ a staff member if that individual has a disqualifying criminal history record; petitioner's criminal history record check revealed at least nine convictions for crimes which are permanently disqualifying for employment in schools; the statute applies prospectively, and contains no waiver or appeal process to determine whether an individual is rehabilitated. Accordingly, the ALJ affirmed the respondent's action to disqualify petitioner from school employment, and dismissed the petition.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petitioner's appeal must be dismissed, finding that petitioner clearly violated, inter alia, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1(b), and the statute contains no provisions for allowing mitigation for alleged rehabilitation. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

Review of the record, Initial Decision and respondent's exceptions reveals that petitioner – a former custodian in a charter school – has been convicted of multiple drug offenses. When a June 18, 2010 fingerprinting exposed this fact, petitioner was notified by respondent that – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 – he was permanently disqualified from school employment.[1]

The Commissioner regards as meritless petitioner's arguments 1) that recent statutory amendments exclude him from the reach of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, and 2) that his alleged rehabilitation allows the Commissioner the discretion to save him from the penalty for breach of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1. Petitioner clearly violated, inter alia, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1(b), and the statute contains no provisions allowing mitigation for alleged rehabilitation. The petition is accordingly dismissed.

Billy Perry, petitioner pro se

Joyce D. Williams, Deputy Attorney General, for respondent (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: June 3, 2011 Decided: July 6, 2011

BEFORE SANDRA ANN ROBINSON, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Billy Perry, petitioner, was employed as a custodian in a charter school located in Newark, New Jersey. On June 18, 2010, he was required to undergo a criminal-background check that included fingerprinting. The test results revealed that petitioner has multiple criminal convictions of the first and second degree that cause him to be disqualified from working as a school custodian. Petitioner argues that he should not have been disqualified from employment because New Jersey Assembly Bill Number 3665 amends N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-4.13, the disqualifying statutes, and he should not be disqualified because he is rehabilitated. N.J.S.A.18A:6- 4.13, extends the disqualification criteria to charter schools. Respondent, New Jersey State Department of Education, Office of Criminal Review Unit, maintains that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 does not offer a waiver or an appeal process; a petitioner can only challenge the accuracy of the criminal history record and if that does not exist petitioner is permanently disqualified. Respondent also maintains that rehabilitation claims do not exist under the amended version of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On August 9, 2010, petitioner filed a verified petition with the New Jersey Department of Education (Department), dated August 5, 2010. The Department transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on October 12, 2010, for hearing as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On November 8, 2010, hearing dates were scheduled for June 2 and 3, 2011. On April 27, 2011, respondent filed a Notice of Motion to Dismiss the Matter on Appeal for Failure to Provide Discovery. The Motion was denied. Testimony was completed on June 2, 2011. Respondent submitted a summary of the disqualifying offenses on June 3, 2011, and on the same date the record was closed.

ISSUES

Was petitioner was rightly disqualified from employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-4.13, the disqualification statutes? Can petitioner affirmatively demonstrate rehabilitation in order to continue his employment as a charter school custodian?

SUMMARY OF TESTIMONY

Michael Lazur has been a special investigator with the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE) since August 2008. Previously he was employed with the New Jersey State Police and served twenty-one years as a detective. His current job responsibilities with the DOE include completing background checks for persons seeking employment with or in the school system. He also investigates all employees who are in the school system. Lazur's investigations and reports are based on the content of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1, et seq. entitled Criminal Record Check in Public School Employment, Volunteer Service. Lazur said, > Appeals of a disqualification are only on the accuracy of the criminal record. I reviewed the entirety of respondent's exhibit R-1 the Federal Bureau of Investigation III Criminal History and New Jersey National Fingerprint Criminal History File Search, dated June 18, 2010. The search revealed petitioner's convictions for possession of fire weapons, carrying prohibited weapons, possession of a hand gun, drug possession, drug possession on school property, etc.

Billy Perry the petitioner, testified,

> I do not dispute my convictions, they are there. However, I have changed and no longer handle or take drugs. Getting myself together should stand for something. I have been straight for some time. I want my job as a custodian. I am a new person.
>
> When I read Chapter 116, Laws of 1986 there was no specific charges mentioned about drugs and I had not been involved with or convicted of any of the crimes listed under C.18A: 6-7.1 criminal record check.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the testimonial and documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and to assess credibility, I make the following FINDINGS of FACT:

1. Petitioner was employed as a custodian in a charter school in Newark, New Jersey;

2. On June 18, 2010, petitioner underwent fingerprinting as a segment of a criminal history background check. His background check revealed the following convictions:

   (1) Felony conviction drug offense, in violation of NJ 2421-21; offense date 12/9/1981; disposition date 11/16/1984;
   (2) Felony conviction cocaine-possession, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10A 1; offense date 4/24/1990; disposition date 10/25/1990;
   (3) Felony conviction for cocaine, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-5B3; offense date 4/24/1990; disposition date 10/25/1990;
   (4) Felony conviction for Licensing-Registration, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-3B; offense date 4/24/1990; disposition date 10/25/1990;
   (5) Felony conviction for carrying prohibited weapons, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-3B; offense date 4/24/1990; disposition date 10/25/1990;
   (6) Felony conviction for possession of CDS or analog, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-10A(1); offense date 4/27/2000; disposition date 12/08/2000;
   (7) Felony conviction for CDS on school property, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:35-7; offense date 3/23/2002; disposition date 10/28/2003;
   (8) Felony conviction for possession of a handgun, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:39-5B; offense date offense date 3/23/2002; disposition date 10/28/2003;

3. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 prevents individuals who have a criminal history record of first- and second-degree convictions to obtain or maintain employment in or with the school system. N.J.S.A. 18A:6- 4.13, extends the disqualification criteria to charter-schools;

4. Petitioner has convictions of the first and second degree.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 reads, in pertinent part,

> A facility, center, school, or school system under the supervision of the Department of Education and board of education, which cares for, or is involved in the education of children under the age of 18 shall not employ for pay or contract for the paid services of any teaching staff member . . . unless the employer has first determined consistent with the requirements and standards of this act, that no criminal history record information exists on file in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Identification Division, or the State Bureau of Identification, which would disqualify that individual from being employed or utilized in such a capacity or position . . . .
>
> An individual, except as provided in subsection g. of this section, shall be permanently disqualified from employment or service under this act if the individual's criminal history record check reveals a record of conviction for any crime of the first or second degree; or
>
>
> b. An offense involving the manufacture, transportation, sale, possession, distribution or habitual use of a "controlled dangerous substance" as defined in the "Comprehensive Drug Reform Act of 1987," N.J.S.2C:35-1 et al. or "drug paraphernalia" as defined pursuant to N.J.S. 2C:36-1 et seq.;
>
> . . .
>
> g. This section shall first apply to criminal history record checks conducted on or after the effective date of P.L.1998, c. 31 (C: 18A:6-7.1c et al.) . . . .
>
> [Emphasis added.]

The courts in New Jersey favor a prospective application of statutes rather than a retroactive application. The New Jersey Supreme Court recently held:

> We "have long followed a general rule of statutory construction that favors prospective application of statutes."

> This preference is based on our long-held notions of fairness and due process.
>
> Although the rule favoring prospectivity is, "a sound rule of statutory interpretation," "if the Legislature expresses an intent that the statute is to be applied retroactively, the statute should be so applied." As we have recently commented, the Legislature may express its intent explicitly or by implication "in that 'retroactive application may be necessary to make the statute workable or to give it the most sensible interpretation.'"
>
> Consequently, the preference for prospective application is not applied mechanistically to every case. To be sure, retroactivity is appropriate, in general, when it is expressed, when an amendment is curative, or when the expectations of the parties so warrant. Only if one of these grounds is present, will we give a statute retroactive effect.
>

The felony conviction drug offense for which petitioner was convicted in 1984 was not specifically listed in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.1 as a disqualifying offense. However, more specifically described felony offenses—including the offenses causing for petitioner's 1984, 1990, 2000, 2002, and 2003 convictions were added to the statute in 1989. Petitioner's criminal history record check revealed at least nine disqualifying convictions for crimes specifically listed or referred to by title number as being permanently disqualifying crimes for employment in schools, namely offenses involving controlled dangerous substances, drug paraphernalia, in violation of N.J.S.A. 2C:36-1 et seq. and crimes set forth in N.J.S.A. 2C: 3902 et seq.

Respondent contends that the language contained in subsection g. of the statute is prospective, not retroactive. The provision explicitly states that the section will apply only to "criminal record checks conducted on or after the effective date . . . ." The criminal record check in this matter was conducted in 2010, approximately twelve years after the statute became effective (P.L. 1998, c. 31). Therefore, according to respondent, the statute is clear on its face and is not being applied retroactively.

Relevant case law dictates that the determining factor in similar cases is the date the criminal background check is conducted. The version of the statute in effect at the time the criminal record check is conducted generally applies; therefore, the statute applies prospectively. In Cidoni v. Board of Education of the City of Camden and Department of Education, Office of Criminal History, EDU 6088-03, Initial Decision (December 22, 2005), adopted, Commissioner (February 27, 2006), http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html, the administrative law judge (ALJ) found that the statute was clear on its face and that the petitioner was properly disqualified after a criminal record check was performed and uncovered a conviction, which was not disqualifying at the time the petitioner was originally hired. The ALJ and the Commissioner both held that it was the date that the criminal record check is conducted which is important, not whether or not the prior conviction was a disqualifying offense at the time petitioner was hired. If the prior conviction is a disqualifying offense at the time the criminal record check is conducted, the teacher is disqualified. See Cidoni, supra, EDU 6088-03 (Final Decision); see also, Nunez v. Dep't of Educ., EDU 3689-02, Initial Decision (June 9, 2006), http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html (The ALJ and Commissioner both held that the date that the criminal record check is conducted is determinative).

Petitioner also argues that he can demonstrate rehabilitation and urges respondent to take into consideration that he is a changed man. Respondent explains that the 1989 amendment to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-7.1 does not offer a waiver or an appeal process to determine whether an individual is rehabilitated. Persons convicted of a crime of the first and second degree are permanently disqualified from employment or service under N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-7.1.

CONCLUSION

Based on the above, I CONCLUDE that petitioner's prior convictions for crimes of the first and second degree were disqualifying offenses at the time the criminal record check was conducted, and therefore petitioner should be disqualified. I also CONCLUDE that N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-7.1, does not provide for rehabilitation, and therefore respondent can not take into consideration petitioner's second issue.

ORDER

I ORDER that the determination by respondent New Jersey Department of Education Office of Criminal History Review Unit to disqualify petitioner based on his felony convictions in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-7.1, is AFFIRMED.

I also ORDER that the relief sought by Billy Perry, petitioner, for consideration of rehabilitation, is DENIED, due to unavailability of such relief. I finally ORDER that this case be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

GENERAL RELEASE AND WAIVER

In consideration for the promises and undertakings described in the Settlement Agreement dated July 7th, 2011. I hereby release, waive and discharge the City of Estell Manor Board of Education, its successors and assigns, and all affiliated and related entities and their present and former board members, officers, employees and representatives, and their estates and/or heirs thereof from any and all claims which I, my estate and/or heirs may have against any of them. This releases and waives all claims, known and unknown. resulting from anything which has happened up to now, including claims for attorneys' fees.

Without limiting the scope of the foregoing provision in any way, I specifically release all claims which were or could have been asserted by me in the action entitled Sarah L. Sharpe v. Estell Manor Board of Education, Atlantic County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU-11441-2010S, Agency Ref. No. 548-9/10. I also release and waive all claims relating to or arising out of any aspect of my employment with the City of Estell Manor Board of Education, including but not limited to, all claims under Title VII of The Civil Rights Act, The Civil Rights Act of 1991 and the laws amended thereby; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Age Discrimination in Employment Act of 1967, the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act of 1993: the New Jersey Family Leave Act, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Act, any related federal, state or local law claims, and any claims of discrimination based on race, age, sex, religion, color, creed, handicap or disability, citizenship, national origin and any other factor prohibited by any federal, state or local law, rule, regulation or guideline; any claim for wrongful discharge; any contract of employment, express or implied; any provision of the Constitution of the United States or the State of New Jersey; and any other law, common or statutory, of the United States, the State of New Jersey or any other state; any claims for the negligent and/or intentional infliction of emotional distress or specific intent to harm; any claims for attorneys' fees, costs and/or expenses; any claims for unpaid or withheld wages, severance pay, benefits, bonuses, deferred compensation, stock option awards, restricted stock awards, commissions and/or other compensation of any kind; and/or any other federal, state or local human rights, civil rights, wage and hour, wage payment, pension or labor laws, rules and/or regulations, and all claims growing out of any legal restrictions on City of Estell Manor Board of Education right to hire and/or terminate its employees, including all claims that were asserted and/or that could have been asserted by the me in this cause of action.

I also promise not to sue and I waive all claims against the City of Estell Manor Board of Education its successors and assigns, or any related and/or affiliated entities, based upon my claims covered by the Settlement Agreement, this General Release and Waiver.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, this release specifically excludes any pension-based or workers compensation claims. I am unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

I acknowledge that I was advised to consult with attorneys and have, in fact, consulted with my attorney, Keith Waldman, Esq., regarding this General Release and Waiver; that the terms of this General Release and Waiver have been explained to me by my attorneys; and that I have represented to my attorneys that I have read this General Release and Waiver and fully understands it and agree to be bound by it. I also acknowledge that I have been given a reasonable period of time within which to consider this settlement and the terms of this General Release and Waiver prior to executing it.

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I HAVE CAREFULLY READ AND FULLY UNDERSTAND THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF THIS RELEASE AND WAIVER. I ACKNOWLEDGE THAT I HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO REVIEW THIS RELEASE AND WAIVER WITH MY ATTORNEY, KEITH WALDMAN, ESQ, AND/OR ANYONE ELSE OF MY CHOOSING, AND TO DISCUSS WITH SUCH PERSONS THE TERMS AND CONDITIONS OF THIS RELEASE AND WAIVER AND MY RIGHTS UPON EXECUTION. I AGREE AND ACKNOWLEDGE THAT NO REPRESENTATIONS CONCERNING THE TERMS OR EFFECT OF THIS RELEASE WERE MADE BY CITY OF ESTELL MANOR BOARD OF EDUCATION OR THEIR ATTORNEYS OTHER THAN AS SET FORTH IN THE DOCUMENT AND THAT I HAVE VOLUNTARILY SIGNED THIS RELEASE AND WAIVER AS MY OWN FREE ACT WITH FULL KNOWLEDGE OF ITS TERMS AND CONDITIONS. MY COMMISSION EXPIRES APR. 28, 2012

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is being entered into between Petitioner, Sarah L. Sharpe ("Ms. Sharpe"), and Respondent, Estell Manor Board of Education ("Board"), with regard to Sarah L. Sharpe v. Estell Manor Board of Education, Atlantic County, OAL Dkt. No. EDU-11441-2010S, Agency Ref. No. 548-9/10, having agreed to amicably resolve their differences, it is hereby stipulated and agreed that this matter shall be settled upon the following terms:

1. The Board voluntarily recognizes Ms. Sharpe's tenure rights. Specifically, the Board recognizes that at all times during her employment, Ms. Sharpe has possessed an instructional certificate with: (a) teacher of health and physical education and (b) and as of July 2010, an elementary school grades K-5 endorsement." True copies of Ms. Sharpe's teaching certificates and endorsements are attached to this agreement as Exhibits A and B, respectively. The Board voluntarily recognizes that Ms. Sharpe has tenure in both categories of: (a) teacher of health and physical education and (b) elementary school grades K-5.

2. The Board voluntarily recognizes Ms. Sharpe's seniority rights. Specifically, the Board recognizes that as of the conclusion of the 2010-2011 school year, barring any unanticipated leave of absence this school year, Ms. Sharpe will have worked the following school years within the scope of her teacher of health and physical education endorsement:

January 1, 2005 to June 30, 2005	0 year(s)	6 month(s) 0 day(s)
July 1, 2005 to June 30, 2006	1 year(s)	0 month(s) 0 day(s)
July 1, 2006 to June 30, 2007	1 year(s)	0 month(s) 0 day(s)
July 1, 2007 to June 30, 2008	1 year(s)	0 month(s) 0 day(s)
July 1, 2008 to June 30, 2009	1 year(s)	0 month(s) 0 day(s)
July 1, 2009 to June 30, 2010	0 year(s)	7 month(s) 20 day(s)
(FMLA/Sick leave taken from November 30, 2009 through January 30, 2010)
July 1, 2010 to June 30, 2011	1 year(s)	0 month(s) 0 day(s)

As such, as of June 30, 2011, the parties recognize and agree that Ms. Sharpe has six (6) years, four (4) months zero (0) days of seniority as a full-time teacher within the scope of her teacher of health and physical education endorsement and that, with the exception of the FMLA/Sick leave taken from November 30, 2009 through January 30, 2010, her service was and will be considered as seamless for all purposes. The Board further recognizes that as of the start of the 2010-2011 school year, as a tenured teacher with a K-5 endorsement, Ms. Sharpe should have been retained on a 2-1/2 day per week basis in a position within the scope of her K-5 endorsement and should have bumped Aime DiGerolamo who was, at the time, a non-tenured teacher. Under the circumstances, the Board recognizes that with credit for this service and under the tack on principle established by N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(h) as of the conclusion of the 2010-2011 school year, Ms. Sharpe will have ten (10) months days seniority (pro-rated for 2-1/2 days per week) within the scope of her K-5 endorsement, with seniority continuing to tack on in succeeding school years under the tack on principle

3. The Board hereby rescinds its action to reduce Ms. Sharpe's employment from full-time to part-time, which reduction had been effective from July 26, 2010 to October 3, 2010, and which Ms. Sharpe had contended in the above-referenced petition was in derogation of her tenure and seniority rights.

4. The consideration described in Paragraphs 1 and 2 above shall constitute the entire monetary settlement of the matters encompassed by this Agreement.

5. In exchange for the promises and undertakings of the Respondent Estell Manor Board of Education, as set forth in Paragraphs 1and 2 above, Petitioner:

A. Waives the right to back pay for the period of time from July 26, 2010 to October 3, 2010.

B. Agrees to withdraw her petition of appeal with prejudice and without costs as to either party and authorizes attorney to file a Stipulation of Dismissal with Prejudice with respect to her claims and causes of action with the Commissioner of Education in this action.

C. Agrees to execute a General Release and Waiver ("General Release") to the Respondent in the form annexed. Petitioner expressly acknowledges that this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver are intended to extinguish and waive all claims which she may have against any person or entity identified as a releasee in the General Release and Waiver resulting from anything which has happened up to the date of the execution of the General Release and Waiver and which were or could have been asserted, including those claims unknown to her and claims for attorneys fees and costs. Petitioner hereby acknowledges that the execution of this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver which accompanies it shall absolutely bar any such claim, action or suit against any releasee identified in the General Release and Waiver. This release specifically excludes any workers compensation or pension claims. Ms. Sharpe is unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

6. All documents and information obtained during discovery in this case shall be deemed "confidential." The parties agree that no such documents or information shall be provided or disclosed to or shared with any third party for any purpose whatsoever. This provision shall not apply to third parties and to documents previously filed with the Office of Administrative Law or the Commissioner of Education, but this shall not permit Petitioner to provide copies of such documents to third parties. Petitioner further agrees that she will not use or permit to be used in any other action or matter any information about the Respondents in this action which she obtained as a result of, during the course of or in connection with her involvement in this action. Petitioner shall not voluntarily assist third parties in pursuit of litigation against Respondent.

7. The parties agree that any breach of any obligation under this Agreement will constitute a breach of this Agreement. In the event of a breach of this Agreement by one of the parties hereto, the breaching party shall pay a penalty to the non-breaching party to be established in the discretion of the Superior Court of New Jersey, Atlantic County, for said breach of any term of this Agreement. In the event that either party is required to commence an action in law or equity to enforce its rights under this Agreement and prevails, the party against whom the action is brought shall be required to pay the prevailing party reasonable attorneys fees and costs in addition to any damages which may be recoverable.

8. It is understood that neither the execution of this Agreement nor any other action taken by the Respondent in connection with this settlement constitutes an admission by the Respondent or, any other person or entity identified in the General Release and Waiver as a releasee, of any violation of any law, duty or obligation, or that any decision or action with respect to the employment of Petitioner was unwarranted, unjustified, retaliatory, discriminatory or otherwise unlawful. The Respondent specifically disclaims any liability to Petitioner or any other person. The parties have entered into this Agreement solely to compromise disputed claims. No findings of any kind have been made or issued by the Commissioner on the merits of the claims in this action and neither party purports to be the prevailing party in this action.

9. The parties to the within petition of appeal agree not to make disparaging statements concerning each other or to defame each other in any manner to any person or entity. The parties also agree not to authorize any person or entity to make any disparaging statements about each other to any person or entity.

10. All parties to this Agreement and their counsel participated in the negotiation and drafting of this Agreement as equals. No particular party shall be deemed the drafter or provider of this Agreement, and the parties agree that the Agreement shall not be construed against any particular party.

11. This Agreement and the General Release and Waiver referred to herein set forth the entire agreement between Petitioner and the Respondents. This Agreement supersedes all prior agreements or understandings, if any, between the parties regarding the subject matter of this Agreement.

12. Petitioner acknowledges that she has consulted with her attorney regarding this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver that accompanies it prior to executing it; that the terms of this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver have been explained to her by her attorney; and that she has represented to her attorney that she has read this Agreement and the General Release and Waiver and fully understands them and agrees to be bound by them. Petitioner has also acknowledged that she has been given a reasonable period of time within which to consider this settlement and the terms of this Agreement and General Release and Waiver prior to executing them.

13. Any notice or other communication under this Agreement shall be in writing and shall be considered given when mailed by regular mail or delivered personally, to the parties at the following addresses:

To Petitioner:

Keith Waldman, Esq.
Selikoff & Cohen
700 East Gate Drive
Mount Laurel, New Jersey 08054

To Respondents:

Parker McCay PA
P.O. Box 974, 3 Greentree Center
7001 Lincoln Drive West
Marlton, New Jersey 08053

or at such other address as a party may specify by notice to the other.

14. Nothing contained herein or in the Release shall be intended to bar either party from initiating such action as may be necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement.

15. Conditioned upon the entry of an initial decision by the Administrative Law Judge and the Commissioner's approval of this Agreement without modification, the parties will submit a stipulation of dismissal with prejudice and without costs.

16. The Board's representative certifies that he or she has been duly authorized to sign this agreement by a motion adopted by the Board at a duly-noticed open public meeting. A true copy of the Board's minutes (or of a resolution) adopting the settlement memorialized by this Agreement are (is) attached as Exhibit C.

17. The parties agree that this Agreement may be signed in counterparts and facsimile signatures may be acceptable in lieu of originals.

The foregoing terms and provisions are hereby agreed to and accepted:

JOSEPH WONSETLER,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF WOODBURY, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – formerly a custodian employed in respondent's district under a series of one year contracts – challenged the Board's termination of his employment in the middle of his annual contract. Petitioner contended that following his termination he was denied a written statement of reasons and an appearance before the Board, contrary to his right to such an appearance pursuant to Donaldson v. Board of Education of North Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236 (1974). The Board argued that petitioner had failed to state a claim upon which relief can be granted, as no such right to an appearance before the Board exists. The matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case, and both parties filed motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the essential facts in the matter were not in dispute, and the matter was ripe for summary decision; resolution of this matter lies in the application of the statutory provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (a) and (b); the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (a) applies to matters involving a Board decision to remove an employee who has no tenure protection, and includes no requirement for any notification of the recommendation to remove, nor does it contain any language incorporating a right to a written statement of reasons for termination or an informal appearance before the Board; these rights are included in the language of subsection (b) of the above, which deals specifically with non-renewal determinations; and accordingly, there is no support for applying the principles of Donaldson, supra, in cases involving removals or terminations. The ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that petitioner's rights were not violated when the Board terminated his employment pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (a), without providing him with a written statement of reasons or a Donaldson hearing. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 4504-11
AGENCY DKT. NO. 54-3/11

JOSEPH WONSETLER,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF WOODBURY, GLOUCESTER COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner's exceptions and the Board's reply thereto – filed in accordance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 – were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

Petitioner challenges the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) conclusion – on page 7 of his decision – that "[w]hile there may be much to say for the inclusion of Donaldson[1] rights in removal/terminations..., in the face of [N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1] (a) and (b) by the Legislature, there is no support for applying Donaldson to this sort of termination." In so concluding, petitioner charges, the ALJ failed to recognize the legislative history which resulted in the adoption of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 in 1995. (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1)

Petitioner advances that in 1974, Donaldson, supra, set forth the guiding principle that an employee who is not retained should have an opportunity for an informal appearance before the Board. Such right, petitioner maintains, exists independent of any statutory enactment. He charges that what happened in 1994 and 1995 is no more than a legal red herring in this matter.

[1] Donaldson v. North Wildwood Bd. of Ed., 65 N.J. 236 (1974)

Specifically, he avers, in 1994 the Appellate Division overturned the State Board of Education and ruled that a local school board had the authority to employ a teacher who had not been recommended by the chief school administrator.[2] In 1995 the Legislature reacted, petitioner maintains, by adopting N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1, which – according to the sponsor's statement to the legislation – was to correct the law as a consequence of this Appellate Division decision. Therefore, petitioner contends – notwithstanding that this later legislative enactment in some measure "parrots the rights set forth by the New Jersey Supreme Court in Donaldson" – the enactment of N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 did not serve to abrogate Donaldson, but was only intended to clarify the Appellate Division in Rotondo. Because Donaldson did not interpret a right granted by statute, petitioner argues, the Legislature – through the enactment of this statute – did not or could not abrogate the right conferred by Donaldson. (Id. at 2)

In reply, the Board proposes that – irrespective of the petitioner's reliance on Donaldson – N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 embodies all the protection a terminated or non-renewed school employee is entitled to. Citing the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision in Leang v. Jersey City Bd. of Educ., 198 N.J. 557, 578-79 (2009) – wherein the Court stated:

> Those statutory rights (pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 and N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1) are the embodiment of the process created by the Legislature through which plaintiff could seek to challenge and to be heard about the Board's non-renewal decision…

– the Board posits that it is clear that school employees who are transferred or removed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 (a) are entitled to only those rights enunciated by the statute, which does not include a hearing for a terminated employee. The Board argues that, significantly, the Donaldson Court did not contemplate encroaching on the role of the Legislature, as evidenced when it stated:

> It must be borne in mind that our Legislature has not at any time said that no reasons need be given when a nontenured teacher is not rehired. Bills bearing generally on the subject have been introduced periodically but thus far no pertinent legislation has been enacted; in the circumstances it is clear that no controlling inference as to intent may be drawn from the legislative silence. (65 N.J. at 240, emphasis added)

[2] Rotondo v. Carlstadt-East Rutherford Regional High School District, 276 N.J. Super. 36 (App. Div. 1994).

Rather, the Board proposes, it is obvious that the Court intended its holding to be a gap-filler for law that had been considered by the Legislature but not yet enacted. Subsequently, it points out, the Legislature broke its silence and closed the gap by enacting a statutory provision which addresses separately the termination of an employee and the non-renewal of an employee, according different procedural rights to each. (Board's Reply Exceptions at 1-2, quotation at 2)

Wholly irrelevant, the Board argues, is petitioner's allegation that the sponsor's statement to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 indicates that this provision was designed to correct the law as a consequence of the Appellate Division's decision in Rotondo, supra. The plain language of this statute, it avers, is abundantly clear:

> [s]ubsection (b) of [this provision] addresses the renewal or nonrenewal of employees and describes the rights of employees subject to nonrenewal: notice, a written statement of reasons, and a formal appearance before the Board. Subsection (a), which addresses the removal or termination of employees, does not articulate the same procedural rights as those articulated in subsection (b). The plain language of the statute "occupies the field" previously addressed by Donaldson, compelling the conclusion that the petitioner, as a terminated employee, is not entitled to a hearing before the Board. (Id. at 2-4, quotation at 4)

Finally, the Board advances – even assuming, arguendo, that the Commissioner were to determine that petitioner was entitled to a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 – petitioner would not be entitled to the relief he seeks here, i.e., back pay and attorney's fees. It cites to Roseann E. Brown v. Board of Education of the City of Camden, Camden County and Annette D. Knox, Superintendent, Commissioner Decision #262-05, decided July 22, 2005, which in turn cited to Dore v. Bd. of Educ. Of Bedminster Twp., Somerset County, 185 N.J. Super. 447, 455 (App. Div. 1982), for the proposition that "[a] school board's lack of strict compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 is not sufficient reason to order the board to provide the employee with a financial reward." (Id. at 6) Moreover, it points out, even though N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b) sets forth a procedure to be utilized when non-renewing employees, it nonetheless does not provide any penalty should a board fail to follow these procedures. The Board, therefore, urges that because the Legislature has conferred no power to impose a penalty for non-compliance with this statute, the Commissioner does not have independent authority to either reinstate or impose a financial penalty on the Board. Consequently, it proffers, even if petitioner were to prevail in this matter, he would be entitled to no greater relief than the award of a hearing. (Id. at 6-7)

Upon full review and consideration, the Commissioner – finding petitioner's exception arguments without merit – concurs with the Administrative Law Judge, for the reasons clearly presented in his decision, that petitioner's rights were not violated when the Board terminated his employment, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(a), effective December 8, 2010, without providing him with a written statement of reasons or a Donaldson[3], supra, hearing.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

INITIAL DECISION

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 04504-11

AGENCY DKT. NO. 54-3/11

JOSEPH WONSETLER,

Petitioner,

v.

WOODBURY CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

Mark Cimino, Esq., for petitioner

Jennifer M. Herrmann, Esq., for respondent (Methfessel & Werbel, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 21, 2011 Decided: July 8, 2011

BEFORE JEFF S. MASIN, ALJ:

Joseph Wonsetler was employed by the Woodbury City Board of Education as a custodian. He worked under a series of one year contracts, the last of which became effective on July 1, 2010, and was to expire on June 30, 2011. On December 22, 2010, the Board of Education voted to ratify and affirm his termination, effective December 8, 2010. On December 29, 2010, Mr. Wonsetler's attorney advised the Board that he believed that the termination had been effectuated in derogation of Wonsetler's rights under Rice v. Union County Regional High School Bd. of Ed., 155 N.J. Super. 64 (App. Div. 1977)(Rice), and that he was also requesting an informal appearance before the Board pursuant to Donaldson v. North Wildwood Bd. of Ed., 65 N.J. 236

(1974)(Donaldson). The Board did not accord him such an appearance and he filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education, alleging that his legal rights had been violated and seeking an order that the Board permit Wonsetler to appear before it to address his removal, that he receive back pay from the date of his termination to the date of such appearance, interest and attorney's fees. The Board moved to dismiss the Petition, arguing that Wonsetler had failed to state a claim as no such right to an appearance as he claimed existed and that his claims for back pay and attorney's fees sought relief that the Commissioner was not empowered to grant, even if the right to an appearance were found to exist. Wonsetler then moved for summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. The Commissioner transferred the contested case to the Office of Administrative Law, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The parties filed briefs and replies, each asserting that the legal issue in the case could be resolved without the necessity for a testimonial hearing. The record closed for purposes of the motion on June 21, 2011.

Prior to discussing the matter, it will be helpful to review N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(a) and (b).

> Notwithstanding the provisions of any law, rule or regulation to the contrary, > a. A board of education shall appoint, transfer or remove a certificated or non-certificated officer or employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator and by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board. The board shall not withhold its approval for arbitrary and capricious reasons.
> b. A board of education shall renew the employment contract of a certificated or non-certificated officer or employee only upon the recommendation of the chief school administrator and by a recorded roll call majority vote of the full membership of the board. The board shall not withhold its approval for arbitrary and capricious reasons. A nontenured officer or employee who is not recommended for renewal by the chief school administrator shall be deemed nonrenewed. Prior to notifying the officer or employee of the nonrenewal, the chief school administrator shall notify the board of the recommendation not to renew the officer's or employee's contract and the reasons for the recommendation. An officer or employee whose employment contract is not renewed shall have the right to a > written statement of reasons for nonrenewal pursuant to section 2 of P.L.1975, c.132 (C.18A:27-3.2) and to an informal appearance before the board. The purpose of the appearance shall be to permit the staff member to convince the members of the board to offer reemployment. The chief school administrator shall notify the officer or employee of the nonrenewal pursuant, where applicable, to the provisions of section 1 of P.L.1971, c.436 (C.18A:27-10).

> c. The provisions of this section shall not apply to the appointment, transfer, removal, renewal or nonrenewal of a person who is a treasurer of school moneys, election officer, board auditor, board attorney or board secretary, except a board secretary who performs business administration functions.
> [N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(a) and (b)]

The petitioner argues that this case should be decided in accordance with the Donaldson principal, which the Legislature adopted when it enacted subsection (b) above. Donaldson was decided in 1974, N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b) was enacted in 1995. Each accords to the non-tenured employee a right to a notice and to request an informal hearing. The rationale for this was set out by Justice Jacobs, speaking for the Donaldson majority,

> It appears evident to us that on balance the arguments supporting the teacher's request for a statement of reasons overwhelm any arguments to the contrary. The teacher is a professional who has spent years in the course of attaining the necessary education and training. When he is engaged as a teacher he is fully aware that he is serving a probationary period and may or may not ultimately attain tenure. If he is not reengaged and tenure is thus precluded he is surely interested in knowing why and every human consideration along with all thoughts of elemental fairness and justice suggest that, when he asks, he be told why. Perhaps the statement of reasons will disclose correctible deficiencies and be of service in guiding his future conduct; perhaps it will disclose that the nonretention was due to factors unrelated to his professional or classroom performance and its availability may aid him in obtaining future teaching employment; perhaps it will serve other purposes fairly helpful to him as suggested in Drown (435 F. 2d at 1184-1185); and perhaps the very requirement that reasons be stated would, as suggested in Monks (58 N.J. at 249), serve as a significant discipline on the board itself > against arbitrary or abusive exercise of its broad discretionary powers.

> [Donaldson v. Bd. of Ed. of the City of North Wildwood, 65 N.J. 236 (1974) at 245]

In response, the Board notes that subsection (b) and Donaldson deal with an employee whose contract the board of education does not contemplate renewing, whereas in the current matter the Board instead decided to terminate petitioner's contract in December, far in advance of the date upon which the one-year contract was due to expire. And whereas subsection (b) clearly incorporates the Rice and Donaldson concepts of notice and informal appearance, the Legislature, in adopting subsection (a), which addresses instances of "appoint[ment], transfer or remov[al]," conspicuously did not address the requirements for such notice and appearance set out in detail in (b). Given that the Legislature did not mimic the (b) language incorporating these principles in (a), it must be that the Legislature did not deem these applicable and thus Wontsetler's petition must therefore be dismissed.

In reply, the petitioner cites the decision issued in Lachenauer v. State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, EDU 11820-08, Initial Decision, (February 3, 2009), adopted in part, Comm'r. (March 18, 2009)<http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. In Lachenauer, a non-tenured teacher had a contract that ran from September 1, 2007, until June 30, 2008. The principal of East Side High School recommended that the contract not be renewed for the forthcoming year. On April 25, 2008, the District notified Lachenauer that it intended to exercise its right, as set forth in the employment contract, to terminate the contract on thirty days notice. Upon receipt of the letter, Lachenauer wrote to the State District Superintendent, requesting a written notice of the reasons for non-reemployment and advising of an intention to request an informal appearance. The Board responded that as this was a termination of employment, the regulation incorporating a right to an informal appearance did not apply. On summary decision, the administrative law judge determined that the fact that Lachenauer's case involved a termination rather that a non-renewal did not affect his right to the Donaldson appearance, citing Justice Jacob's discussion quoted above, and N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1(b). However, as the Board had correctly challenged the timeliness of Lachenauer's Petition, the judge concluded that despite his view on the appearance question, Lachenauer's claim had to be dismissed. On review, the Commissioner of Education agreed that the Petition was untimely and dismissal was the proper disposition of the case. Addressing the judge's discussion of the Donaldson issue, the Commission wrote

> The Commissioner does not, however, adopt that portion of the Initial Decision that suggests that, in general, the principles set forth in Donaldson – pertaining to non-renewals, i.e., employment actions taken outside the four corners of the employment contract – must necessarily be applied to actions taken pursuant to a mutual contract termination provision.
> Most importantly, there was no need, in this case, to address those principles. It is axiomatic that, in most cases, issues not essential to the disposition of a controversy should not be adjudicated and do not create precedent. See, e.g. Emma Wendt v. Bergen Savings Bank, et al., 133 N.J. Eq. 34, 35-36 (1943), in which the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals referred to a portion of the decision of the lower court:
>
> > We do not think that a determination of this point was necessary for the disposition of the case, and we pass over that question here, neither approving nor disapproving of any application to the instant case the court below may have intended to make by citing cases on this point.

Respondent contends that the Commissioner did not agree with the judge's conclusion that the Donaldson principle was "imported" into "actions taken pursuant to a mutual contract termination provision." Ibid.

Summary decision is an appropriate means of resolving disputed issues where the parties do not disagree as to the material facts. Brill v. The Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, et al., 142 N.J. 520 (1995). In this case the parties each assert that there is no genuine dispute as to the material facts and on review of the submissions, I FIND that there is no such dispute. As such, the matter can be resolved by summary decision. The issue is one in which the resolution lies in the application of the statutory provisions that the parties rely upon to these undisputed facts.

The plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:27.4.1(a) applies to matters involving a Board decision to remove an employee who has no tenure protection. The provision includes no requirement for any notification of the recommendation not to renew nor does it contain any language incorporating a right to a written statement of reasons for the termination or for an informal appearance before the Board. These rights are conspicuously included in subsection (b) which deals with non-renewal determinations. The Donaldson case itself was a non-renewal action, not a removal or termination. It is always necessary, when considering the language of a statute, to first look at the words themselves and accord them their ordinary meaning, and where statutory clauses are compared, to consider any differing language.

> It is well settled that statutes should be interpreted in accordance with their plain meaning. Fisch v. Bellshot, 135 N.J. 374, 383 (1994); Phillips v. Curiale, 128 N.J. 608, 617-18 (1992); State Dep't of Law & Pub. Safety v. Bigham, 119 N.J. 646, 651 (1990). Where a statute is clear and unambiguous, a court may not impose an interpretation other than the statute's ordinary meaning. Ocean Pines, Ltd. v. Borough of Point Pleasant, 112 N.J. 1, 7 (1988); State v. Butler, 89 N.J. 220, 226 (1982); In re Jamesburg High School, 83 N.J. 540, 547 (1980).
> [Jose Munoz v. New Jersey Automobile Full Insurance Underwriting Association, 145 N.J. 377, 384-85 (1996).]

The Legislature is presumed to know the law as it exists, including the decisions of the Judiciary as they may affect any subject of legislative concern, and it is presumed that legislative choices in the language used in any legislation have meaning.

> It is a "well-established canon of statutory interpretation" that the Legislature is presumed to know the judicial construction of its enactments. Johnson v. Scaccetti, 192 N.J. 256, 276 (2007) (citing DiProspero, supra, 183 N.J. at 494). We "cannot 'write in an additional qualification which the Legislature pointedly omitted in drafting its own > enactment.'" DiProspero, supra, 183 N.J. at 492 (quoting Craster v. Bd. of Comm'rs of Newark, 9 N.J. 225, 230 (1952)). Nor may we "'engage in conjecture or surmise which will circumvent the plain meaning of the act.'" Ibid. (quoting In re Closing of Jamesburg High Sch., 83 N.J. 540, 548 (1980)). Therefore, if the meaning of those words is clear, the analysis is complete, and we need look no further. Mason, supra, 196 N.J. at 68.

> [Return of Weapons in the Matter of R.B., (App. Div. 2010), 2010 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 2659, cert. denied, In re R. B., 205 N.J. 520 (N.J. 2011)]

Thus, one cannot ignore that the Legislature was surely aware of the Rice and Donaldson principles when it adopted (b) and also when it chose, in the words used in (a), to not include therein that same language. The initial decision in Lachenauer did not make any mention of subsection (a). While the Commissioner cannot be read to have decided the Donaldson issue in Lachenauer, as he made quite clear that there was no reason to do so due to the untimely nature of the petition and cannot be understood to have both denied the need to decide the issue and decided it at the same time, it is fair to say that the issue of the applicability of Donaldson to removal/termination matters under (a) has not been decided by either the Commissioner or, in any initial decision that has been cited. While there may be much to say for the inclusion of Donaldson rights in removal/ terminations and the rationale of Justice Jacob's comments for the Court may be seen as properly applied to such situations as faced by Lachenauer and Wonsetler, in the face of the later adoption of the varying language of (a) and (b) by the Legislature, there is no support for applying Donaldson to this sort of termination. As such, the petition must be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

JANET CARLSON GIARDINA,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WINSLOW, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, formerly the Director of Guidance and Counseling for the respondent Board's school district, alleged that the Board violated her tenure rights when it created the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services, approved a job description for the position that required a "Principal Certificate," and subsequently eliminated petitioner's position and reduced her salary. At a prehearing conference, the parties agreed that no genuine issues of fact existed, and filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no genuine issues of material fact and the matter can be decided by summary decision; the Board acted arbitrarily in creating the new position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services (PPS), which is not a recognized title in the regulations, was not approved by the County superintendent, and required a "Principal Certificate" – a certificate which does not exist in regulations; pursuant to regulations, the Board should have required an Administrative Certificate with an appropriate endorsement for the new position, which includes in its duties district-wide oversight of the administration of special education; neither tenure nor seniority applies across certificates; and accordingly, the petitioner was not entitled to hold the position of Director of PPS as it currently exists. The ALJ ordered that: the respondent Board is required to conform the job description for the Director of PPS pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7; the unrecognized title be submitted to the County superintendent for approval; and petitioner's motion for summary decision is denied and respondent's motion is granted.

Upon a thorough and independent review of the record, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter, with clarification.

JANET CARLSON GIARDINA,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WINSLOW, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Petitioner sought and was granted a significant extension of time within which to file exceptions to the Initial Decision.[1] However, ultimately, no exceptions were filed by petitioner.

Upon his full consideration, the Commissioner initially concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) as to the first issue in this matter, i.e., that the Board acted arbitrarily in creating the new position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services in that 1) it created a position with an unrecognized title which was not approved by the County Superintendent and 2) such position had inappropriate certification requirements for the duties set forth in its job description. As to 1), when the Board approved the creation of the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services, it created an unrecognized title. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.5, a board of education is required either to assign position titles that are recognized in the regulations or – if it chooses to assign an alternative position title – it must request approval from the county superintendent for this unrecognized title, which admittedly was not done here. As to 2), the Commissioner notes that this position, as it currently exists, entails district-wide responsibility for special education, guidance and health services and, as such, requires dual certification. Those duties in the job description of this particular position which call for district-wide oversight of guidance and counseling require that the incumbent possess an Educational Services Certificate with a Director of School Counseling Services endorsement (N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7). Those duties under this position which require district-wide oversight of the administration of special education require that the incumbent possess an Administrative Certificate with an endorsement or certificate of eligibility as a School Administrator (N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.3(a).[2] [3]

[1] It is noted that the extended due date for petitioner's exceptions was two days before the Commissioner's decision in this case was due. Because subsequent to the filing of petitioner's exceptions the Board is accorded a regulatory period of time to file a reply, the Commissioner was required to seek an extension for the issuance of his decision.

As to the second issue in this case, whether petitioner's tenure rights were violated by the Board's not placing her in the newly created position, the Commissioner again agrees with the ALJ that they were not. Notwithstanding that petitioner had tenure status under her Educational Services Certificate, she cannot claim entitlement to a position which, as part of its stated duties, oversees the administration of special education because she does not have an Administrative Certificate. As correctly recognized by the ALJ, "[s]ince neither tenure nor

[2] Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.3(a), a School Administrator endorsement is required for any position that involves services as a district-level administrative officer. (Such positions include Director-titled positions.) Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.3(b), a Principal's endorsement is required for any position that involves service as an administrative officer of a school or other comparable unit within a school district. (Such positions include Director- titled positions.)

[3] The Commissioner is compelled to clarify that the Director of Pupil Personnel Services is not one of the separately tenurable positions enumerated in N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, as stated by the ALJ on page 10 of her decision.

seniority applies across certificates...petitioner was not entitled to hold the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services as it currently exists." [4] (Initial Decision at 11)

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL – as expounded upon above – is adopted as the final decision in this matter. It is hereby ordered that the Board conform the job description for the Director of Pupil Personnel Services to reflect the certification requirements stated above and that this unrecognized title be submitted to the County Superintendent for approval. The instant petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[5]

[4] Additionally, it is also evident that this position – which effectively combines the duties of two positions – is not substantially similar to petitioner's Director of Guidance and Counseling position so as to provide her any entitlement claim.

JANET CARLSON GIARDINA,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF WINSLOW, CAMDEN COUNTY,
Respondent.

David Nash, Esq., for petitioner

Record Closed: April 28, 2011 Decided: June 13, 2011

BEFORE LISA JAMES-BEAVERS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner, Janet Carlson Giardina, filed a Petition of Appeal before the Commissioner of Education on or about January 14, 2009, alleging that the respondent, Winslow Township Board of Education (Board), violated her tenure rights when it created the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services and approved a job description for the position that, among other things, requires possession of a "Principal Certificate," and subsequently eliminated petitioner's position as a Director of Guidance and Counseling.

The Board filed its Answer on January 30, 2009, denying the allegations set forth in the petition. The case was forwarded to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on March 3, 2009, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A pre-hearing telephone conference was held, and at that time the relevant issues in the case were set forth and a discovery schedule was developed. The parties represented at the pre-hearing conference that they would be filing cross-motions for summary decision. The petitioner filed her motion for summary decision on November 2, 2009. The respondent filed its motion for summary decision on November 12, 2009. Petitioner filed her reply brief on December 24, 2009. The Board filed a reply brief on December 31, 2009.

On September 14, 2010, when the case was scheduled for oral argument on the motion, the parties advised that they had reached a settlement in the case. However, the settlement required approval of disability retirement by the Bureau of Pensions. Knowing that it would take a great deal of time before Pensions made a ruling on petitioner's application, I did not schedule the case for review again until December 14, 2010. At that time, the parties advised that the settlement would not be facilitated by petitioner's ability to obtain disability retirement and, therefore, they were going to proceed with the motions. On January 28, 2011, I heard oral argument on the motions. The parties were given an opportunity to submit additional arguments. Inadvertently, I did not close the record until April 28, 2011.

STIPULATION OF FACTS

The petitioner and the respondent have stipulated to the following facts:

1. Respondent hired petitioner Janet Carlson Giardina as Director of Guidance and Counseling effective September 1, 2005. See copy of Job Description: Director of Guidance and Counseling attached as Exhibit A.

2. Petitioner holds an Educational Services Certificate with an endorsement as Director of Student Personnel Services that was issued by the State of New Jersey in January of 1999. See Petitioner's Resume attached as Exhibit B.

3. The Educational Services Certificate with endorsement as Director of Student Personnel Services meets the qualifications as set forth in the job description for Director of Guidance and Counseling.

4. Petitioner obtained tenure in the position of Director of Guidance and Counseling on September 1, 2008.

5. On November 19, 2008, the Winslow Township Board of Education approved the job description Director of Pupil Personnel Services. See Board Minutes of November 19, 2008 attached as Exhibit C and Job Description: Director of Pupil Personnel Services attached as Exhibit D.

6. On December 17, 2008, the Winslow Township Board of Education approved the abolishment of the position of Director of Guidance and Counseling, effective January 12, 2009, and the abolishment of the position of Supervisor of Student Support Services, effective December 31, 2008. See Board Minutes of December 17, 2008 attached as Exhibit E.

7. The job description approved by the Winslow Township Board of Education requires a principal certificate for the Director of Pupil Personnel Services. See Exhibit D.

8. Petitioner does not possess a principal certificate.

9. Respondent reduced petitioner's annual salary effective on January 11, 2009 from $97,099.00 to $78,300.00.

LEGAL ISSUES

1. Can this matter be decided by summary decision?

2. Did the Board act arbitrarily in creating the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services?

3. Was the petitioner, who was tenured in the position of Director of Guidance and Counseling, entitled to the newly created position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services when her position was abolished?

LEGAL DISCUSSION

1. Can this matter can be decided by summary decision?

The rules governing practice in the Office of Administrative Law provide that a motion for summary decision may be granted if there is no genuine issue of material fact challenged and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. This provision mirrors the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented, as well as any affidavits that may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse party, i.e., the non-moving party, to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary judgment:

> [T]he determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party . . . , are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

If the non-moving party's evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, summary judgment should not be denied. See Bowles v. City of Camden, 993 F. Supp. 255, 261 (D.N.J. 1998).

The parties have stipulated to all of the relevant facts in the case. Therefore, based on the briefs and affidavits presented by the parties, I FIND that there is no genuine issue of material fact and the matter can be decided by summary decision.

2. Did the Board act arbitrarily in creating the new position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services?

Petitioner argues in her summary decision motion that respondent created an unrecognized title with improper qualifications when it created the position Director of Pupil Personnel Services. Further, she argues that the proper certification requirement for a position with responsibility for district-wide oversight of guidance and counseling services is the Educational Services Certificate with either the Director of School Counseling endorsement, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7, or the prior Director of Pupil Personnel Services endorsement, pursuant to the prior regulation, N.J.A.C. 6:11-11.11. Last, she argues that her tenure rights were violated when the Board eliminated her position and created a new one with district-wide responsibility for guidance and counseling and failed to place petitioner in the newly created position. Her last argument is a separate issue that will be addressed below.

The Board argues that petitioner's prior position focused exclusively on guidance services, whereas the newly created position focuses on guidance plus special education services, administration of health and medical services, substance abuse intervention and supervision of instructional staff. For these responsibilities, the Board argues, the qualified applicant must have an Administrative Certificate.

The New Jersey State Board of Education (State Board) has established a certificate system requiring that "any person employed as a teaching staff member by a district board of education shall hold a valid and appropriate certificate." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1(a). The Board has provided for three distinct types of certificates—Instructional, Educational Services, and Administrative. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-2.1; N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.2. In addition to the different types of certificates, the State Board has also provided for special endorsements, which are affixed to a specific certificate. These endorsements "coincide with the educational subjects or positions that share common attributes and thus are grouped under a particular certificate." Dennery v. Bd. of Educ., 131 N.J. 626, 633 (1993).[1] Accordingly, a person is qualified to teach in a particular area or work in the particular field based upon the endorsement(s) enumerated on the certificate.

Again, there are two separate issues. First, whether the position was properly created, and second, whether petitioner's tenure rights were violated by not placing her in the newly created title. When the Board approved the creation of the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services, it created an unrecognized title. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.5 requires that a board of education assign position titles that are recognized in the regulations, and if a board wishes to assign an alternate position title it shall request approval from the county superintendent for an unrecognized title. It is undisputed that the new title Director of Pupil Personnel Services is not a recognized title and it is not disputed that the title was not approved by the County superintendent. Had the Board sought approval, the County superintendent could have clarified and approved the appropriate certification to require for the title.

[1] Endorsements for Instructional Certificates typically range from subject areas (Art, English, Math, etc.) to specific grade-level specialization (Elementary Education, etc.). Endorsements for an Educational Services Certificate include fields such as School Psychologist, Social Worker, Speech Therapist, etc. Administrative Certificate endorsements cover positions such as Principal, Supervisor, etc.

In Perri v. Board of Education of Belleville, EDU 1395-07, Comm'r (September 10, 2008) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>, the Commissioner held that the Belleville School District had to eliminate its unrecognized directorship and either reform the duties of the Supervisor of Student Personnel Services/Guidance position to be consistent with lesser levels of responsibility, or appropriately title and staff the new position embodying the higher-level duties previously assigned the petitioning former Director of Student Services. Perri applies to the present case because it sets forth that the duties of the position of Supervisor of Student Personnel Services/Guidance continue to fall substantially within the scope of the Director of School Counseling Services endorsement and cannot be performed by staff without the requisite certification. The endorsements petitioner Perri had for a School Administrator or Principal on the Administrative Certificate were not enough. Thus, as in Perri, the appropriate recognized title that should have been used for a position with district-wide responsibility for oversight of guidance and counseling was "Director of Student Personnel Services/Guidance" and the appropriate certificate to be required for the position is the Educational Services Certificate with the Director of School Counseling Services endorsement. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7. In the present case, the Board provided in the job description that the position required possession of a "Principal Certificate/School Administrator Certificate." As there is no such thing as a "Principal Certificate," this was also in error. The Board should have required an Administrative Certificate with a Principal endorsement. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.2; N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.3. However, because a person with an Administrative Certificate cannot hold district-wide responsibility for oversight of guidance and counseling under Perri, the creation of the position with an unrecognized title, unapproved by the County superintendent, with inappropriate certification requirements for the duties set forth, was an arbitrary action by the Board. I therefore CONCLUDE that the Board acted arbitrarily in creating the new position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services.

3. Was the petitioner, who was tenured in the position of Director of Guidance and Counseling, entitled to the newly created position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services when her position was abolished?

Respondent Board argues that the petitioner does not meet the qualifications of the newly created position and did not perform any duties in the areas of special education and health services. The newly created position requires an Administrative Certificate with a Principal endorsement and entails district-wide responsibility for special education, in addition to guidance and health services. Petitioner argues that as long as the new position has district-wide responsibility for guidance and counseling, her tenure rights were violated when the respondent failed to place her in the newly created position.

Educational personnel are tenured in New Jersey under the Tenure Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-1 to -18. The tenure statute prevents school boards from abusing their superior bargaining power over teachers in contract negotiations and protects teachers from dismissal for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons. Spiewak v. Rutherford Bd. of Educ., 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982) (citations omitted). An employee of a board of education is entitled to tenure if (1) she works in a position for which a teaching certificate is required; (2) she holds the appropriate certificate; and (3) she has served the requisite period of time. Id. at 74; N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

"[T]enure is achieved in a specific 'position,' and the scope of the tenured position is initially limited by the 'certificate' the teaching staff member must hold to satisfy the prerequisite of qualifications for his or her employment." Nelson v. Bd. of Educ., 148 N.J. 358, 366 (1997) (citing Ellicott v. Bd. of Educ., 251 N.J. Super. 342, 348 (App. Div. 1991)). The Court in Nelson reaffirmed the opinion that, except for those positions specifically enumerated in the corresponding statute and regulations, "an educator who has attained tenure by virtue of the requisite service in a specific position will have tenure with respect to all positions under the particular certificate." Nelson, supra, 148 N.J. at 366 (citing Dennery, supra, 131 N.J. at 634). Although transfer of tenure is authorized between endorsements, tenure is not transferable between certificates. See Dennery, supra, 131 N.J. at 635–36, which reversed the Appellate Division's holding that the transfer of tenure between certificates is analogous to transferring tenure between endorsements, stating that such a holding would render meaningless the requirement "that there be actual service in a position under a certificate to gain tenure under that certificate."

A school district may not avoid an individual's tenure rights by creating a new position that, while it may have a different name or include additional requirements, is substantially similar to the prior position. Dennery, supra, 131 N.J. at 639. A mere overlap of responsibilities does not mean that two positions are equivalent for tenure purposes. McGriff v. Bd. of Educ. of Montclair, EDU 10927-04, Comm'r (July 13, 2006) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.shtml>. If a newly created position is similar to a tenure holder's abolished position, but also requires additional duties, the newly-created position is not considered to be substantially similar to the former position. Ibid. The facts of the present case appear to be more like those of McGriff.

The job description sets forth that the Director of Pupil Personnel Services "coordinates the planning, development of guidance programs, health services and special education programs and services." The qualifications set forth in the description include, "Demonstrate an understanding of the regulations regarding the operation of special education programs, including those outlined in N.J.A.C. Title 6, Chapters 26 and 28, . . . and Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973." However, the performance responsibilities include, "Administer guidance programs and services." This includes, to paraphrase, district-wide oversight of guidance and counseling. All of the counselors report to this new director, who is to "develop program proposals, action plans, budget details and evaluative reports as required." (Exhibit D of Stipulations of Fact). In eliminating the more narrowly focused positions of Director of Guidance and Counseling and Supervisor of Student Support Services, the Board consolidated them into the one position with greater responsibility. However, in so doing, the Board combined duties for which two different certificates are required.

N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.3(a) sets forth that the School Administrator endorsement is required for any position that involves services as a district-level administrative officer. Such positions shall include superintendent, assistant superintendent, and director. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7 sets forth that an Educational Services Certificate is required for a position that involves district-wide responsibility for guidance and counseling services.

Petitioner acquired tenure in the District as a result of her employment as Director of Guidance and Counseling. Petitioner was qualified for that service by virtue of her Educational Services Certificate and Director of Student Personnel Services endorsement. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7. Petitioner never served in the position of Supervisor of Student Support Services for the District or in any other position that required a Principal endorsement. Further, petitioner did not possess any experience in special education; thus, petitioner was not qualified to hold a position requiring oversight of special education. Pursuant to the express terms of N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, petitioner cannot transfer the tenure she acquired as a Director of Guidance and Counseling to the separately tenurable position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services, the duties for which she accrued no work experience and require a different certificate and endorsement.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that the title of Director of Pupil Personnel Services was unrecognized and therefore must be approved by the County superintendent. I further CONCLUDE that when the duties of a position require district-wide oversight of guidance and counseling, the appropriate certificate to be required is the Educational Services Certificate with a Director of School Counseling Services endorsement. However, I also CONCLUDE that when the duties of a position require district-wide oversight of the administration of special education, the appropriate certificate to be required is an Administrative Certificate. I therefore CONCLUDE that the respondent's motion for summary decision must be granted and petitioner's motion for summary decision denied on the basis that, despite petitioner's tenure status under the Educational Services Certificate, she does not have rights to a position that oversees special education because she does not have an Administrative Certificate with a Principal endorsement. Since neither tenure nor seniority applies across certificates, the petitioner was not entitled to hold the position of Director of Pupil Personnel Services as it currently exists.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that respondent be required to conform the job description for Director of Pupil Personnel Services to reflect the requirement that the applicant hold an Educational Services Certificate with a Director of School Counseling Services endorsement pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7, and that the unrecognized title be submitted to the County superintendent for approval. It is further ORDERED that petitioner's motion for summary decision be DENIED and respondent's motion for summary decision be GRANTED because the positions are not substantially similar and petitioner's tenure is under a different certificate than the Director of Pupil Personnel Services position requires.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey

A.T., on behalf of minor child, S.T.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF RUTHERFORD, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged the December 2010 determination of the respondent Board to remove his minor child, S.T., from the first grade and enroll him in a split-day kindergarten/first grade program. The petitioner requested that S.T. be promoted to second grade in September 2011, and sought tutoring to compensate for the time missed since S.T. was transferred from a full-time first grade classroom. The Board asserted that its placement determination was made correctly and in good faith, based upon the professional judgment of teachers and administrators who felt that S.T. was not thriving in a full-day first grade classroom. The Board's enrollment policy for first grade requires that a student must be six years old on or before October 1, or be six years old by December 31 and have a transfer card that reflects successful completion of a private kindergarten program. Students meeting this second enrollment criterion are closely monitored to ensure that their placement is developmentally appropriate. S.T. turned six on October 6, 2010, and had completed a private kindergarten program.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: boards of education are granted discretionary authority under N.J.S.A. 18A:4-24 to adopt policies and rules for grade promotion; appropriate deference must be given to professionals in a school district when assessing the appropriate placement of a student; the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the board of education unless the board's action is shown to be arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives; in the instant matter, S.T.'s class placement was based on the advice of experienced education professionals who were motivated only by genuine concern for the child's happiness and educational growth; and, accordingly, petitioner has not met his burden of proving arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable Board action. The ALJ denied petitioner's application for relief, and dismissed the petition.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. [1] The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge that the Board's decision to move S.T. into a kindergarten/first grade split program during the 2010-2011 school year and to place S.T. in first grade for the 2011-2012 school year was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

A.T. ON BEHALF OF S.T.,

Petitioner,

v.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF RUTHERFORD, BERGEN COUNTY,

Respondent.

A.T., appearing pro se

Rodney T. Hara, Esq., for respondent (Fogarty and Hara, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 24, 2011 Decided: July 13, 2011

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, A.T., is the father of S.T., a student enrolled in the Rutherford Public Schools. Petitioner challenges the determination of the Rutherford Board of Education (the Board), through its administration, to remove his son from the first grade, effective December 2010, and enroll him in a split-day kindergarten/first grade program. Petitioner asks that S.T. be promoted to second grade in September 2011. Additionally,

A.T. seeks tutoring to compensate for the time missed since his son's transfer from a full-time first grade classroom.

The Board asserts that its determination regarding grade placement was made correctly and in good faith, based on the professional judgment of teachers and administrators who felt that S.T. was not thriving in first grade last year.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A petition of appeal with accompanying application for emergent relief pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 was filed by petitioner with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on April 4, 2011, and was immediately transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). The Board filed a brief and certification in opposition to the emergent relief application on April 8, 2011, and filed an answer to the underlying petition on April 11, 2011.

Oral argument was heard and the emergent application was denied via order dated April 11, 2011. The emergent order was affirmed by the Commissioner in a decision dated April 28, 2011. A plenary hearing was conducted on June 10 and June 24, 2011, at which time the record closed.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The background facts are essentially uncontroverted and I FIND as follows:

S.T. is a six-year-old student, who completed kindergarten at a non-public school, and was enrolled in the Rutherford Public Schools as a first grader in September 2010. The Board's enrollment policy provides that a student seeking to enroll in the first grade must be six years old on or before October 1, 2010, or be six years old by December 31, 2010, and have a transfer card that reflects successful completion of kindergarten. Lincoln School Principal Jeanna Velechko clarified that students who miss the cut-off, but enroll as first graders because they have attended a private kindergarten, are closely monitored to ensure that their placement is educationally appropriate. In the past, students have been returned to kindergarten if they appear developmentally unready for the first-grade curriculum.

S.T. turned six years of age on October 6, 2010. His parents felt that S.T. had a successful kindergarten experience, and he was initially enrolled in a first grade classroom in Rutherford. At the hearing they shared a report card and note from his kindergarten teacher at Saint Joseph School, Joyce Gardner, who advised that "[S.] worked up to kindergarten level and was able to stay on task and produce what was expected of him." (P-10.) Consistent with Velechko's description of district policy and practice, S.T.'s adjustment to and progress in first grade was closely monitored.

As early as October, 2010, S.T.'s classroom teacher began to document concerns about his academic performance, including an inability to remain on task, follow instructions, work well with the class group, hand in assignments on time, and participate appropriately in class discussions. Student progress reports were forwarded to his parents noting these concerns on October 26, 2010, and again on November 8, 2010. (R-2, R-3.)

By November 12, 2010, S.T.'s case had been brought to the attention of the district Intervention Referral Services Committee (IRSC) due to concerns about S.T.'s academic and social functioning in the classroom. The IRSC is a multi-disciplinary team of school professionals that includes a reading specialist, social worker and psychologist. S.T.'s teacher reported failing grades and an inability to work independently to the IRSC. Socially, he appeared to be unhappy, sad and lonely, and he lacked peer relationships.

The IRSC met on November 30, 2010, and determined that it was in S.T.'s best interest to either return to kindergarten, or be enrolled in a split-day program where he would attend both kindergarten and first grade.[1] He was determined not to be developmentally ready for first grade, and accordingly, under either plan would be registered in kindergarten. The Committee stated that its preference was the split-day program, and S.T.'s parents were given until December 6, 2010, to make a choice. To ensure that the view of the IRSC was the correct one, Velechko arranged for additional testing of S.T., and she carefully reviewed his academic performance. She confirmed that he was performing below average, and was struggling at the first-grade level.

A.T. advised that he did not wish his son to be returned to kindergarten, and desired that he remain in the first grade. The change to a split-day program was made over A.T.'s objection. This petition followed.

The Parents' View

A.T. presented his case on his son's behalf with passion and tenacity. He firmly believes that his son is best served by attending second grade next year, and that he was unfairly transferred. Petitioner argued that there is no precedent for a split-grade assignment in either local policy or State law, and that since kindergarten is not a mandatory grade, the transfer of his son back to kindergarten was improper and illegal. He asserted that his son was not given the chance to succeed in first grade, noting that S.T. began the school year ill and exhausted, having just returned from a trip to India. A.T. urged that school personnel unreasonably denied his requests for a transfer to another first grade class, suggesting that S.T.'s original first grade teacher, Elizabeth Reenstra, lacked sufficient experience to properly address S.T.'s needs.

A.T. advised that other neighborhood children are moving to second grade this fall, that S.T. feels badly that he will not be joining them, and that the whole family has been upset by the district's actions. Somewhat surprisingly, A.T. described the day that S.T. was returned to kindergarten as his "personal September 11th." He was advised about the social and academic difficulties that S.T. experienced at the start of the school year, and heard the testimony of school personnel. Nonetheless, A.T. remained adamant that the school professionals who felt S.T. was properly returned to kindergarten were simply parroting a party line; were more concerned about overall district test scores than individual children; and did not have his son's best interest at heart. A.T. shared copies of S.T.'s class work, and graphically presented his son's school tests and seat-work grades in an effort to demonstrate that S.T. performed well in the first grade. (P-7, P-8.)

But the real cornerstone of A.T.'s presentation, and what clearly motivated his unwavering insistence that S.T. should be placed in the second grade, was the results of independent testing conducted by Mae Balaban and Associates in January and May 2011. Two reports were admitted into evidence in accordance with the generally accepted notion that hearsay is admissible in administrative proceedings. These reports were not supported by the testimony of their author, thus affording neither me nor opposing counsel the opportunity to delve deeper into the impressions of the evaluator or to fully understand the relevance of the test scores to the specific academic issue presented here; that is, grade-level placement. The January 1, 2011, report reflects that Learning Consultant Deborah Ann Weyland administered two assessments at her offices in January in response to a parental request for an "independent appraisal of [S.T.'s] language arts literacy skills." (P-12.) She determined, based on these test results, that S.T.'s overall oral language and reading functioning was within or above first-grade level.

Weyland tested S.T. again in May 2011. (P-1.) This assessment was conducted "in order to obtain an independent appraisal of [S.T.'s] academic levels of achievement within the areas of Reading and Mathematics," and to assist with educational planning for the 2011-2012 school year. She again assessed S.T. solely on the basis of two testing instruments, and concluded that S.T.'s "achievement scores reflect functioning that is average to superior relative to peers in first grade." Weyland stated in her report that "he has the ability to meet the demands of a second grade class for the 2011-2012 school year." Based on this report, petitioner argues that there can be no basis whatsoever for the district's contrary view as to his son's abilities.

The District Rationale for the Change to Kindergarten and for a First Grade Placement in 2011-2012

But the district urged, persuasively, that S.T. is more complex than his performance on tests administered in an office setting might suggest. In making the decision to place S.T. in a split-day program last year, and enroll him in first grade next year, the district relied on test performance but also an analysis of his actual functioning in the classroom. The district offered the testimony of several members of its professional staff to explain why S.T.'s educational needs were best served by the mid-school year transfer to kindergarten, and by placement for the upcoming school year as a first grade student. These included his teachers, the building principal and a district learning consultant. Each of these educators testified with professionalism and credibility that their decisions regarding grade placement for S.T. were motivated exclusively by a desire to see him happy and successful in school. Velechko put it best when she emphasized that the easy thing would have been to accede to his parents' wishes, but that this would not have been the right thing educationally for S.T.

Reenstra was S.T.'s first grade teacher at the start of the 2010-2011 school year, and immediately perceived that he was making a poor adjustment to the first grade class both academically and socially. I FIND that upon entering first grade S.T. was tense and quiet, and resisted any overtures by his classmates to join in their conversation or play. An Early Literacy Assessment conducted by Reenstra reflected that S.T. lacked the reading skills needed to successfully meet the demands of the first grade curriculum. She offered the example of "tracking the print," a reading strategy employed by most entering first grade students, but not one yet mastered by S.T. Reenstra noted that S.T. seemed unable to comply with classroom routines, and she became concerned that he was not developmentally ready for first grade.

Reenstra brought her concerns to his parents' attention. His mother requested that S.T. be given some more time to acclimate to the classroom, and Reenstra agreed and continued to monitor his progress closely. But Reenstra testified that as the year progressed S.T. continued to seem very immature compared to his peers. Reenstra described two situations where other children claimed S.T. had taken supplies from their desks. Although this testimony angered A.T., who clearly perceived that his son was being accused of being a thief, this was not Reenstra's point. She noted that S.T. was not a "bad" boy, but rather seemed too young to fully understand classroom etiquette or the consequences of his conduct.

A Developmental Reading Assessment (DRA) reflected that S.T. was in the lower quadrant for reading.[2] Reenstra noted that in November the average class score on the DRA was a 12, while S.T.'s score was a 4. Likewise, S.T. seemed unready to meet the demands of the first-grade math curriculum. Although math was a relative strength for him, he experienced difficulty working independently on math problems and required constant redirection. His test scores were poor. Reenstra ultimately shared her observations with the IRSC. According to Reenstra, S.T. was failing the first grade. As the months progressed, S.T. fell further and further behind, exacerbating his sadness and frustration. Reestra informed the IRSC that in her classroom S.T. presented as a discouraged, withdrawn and sad child. In her professional opinion, a change in grade placement was in S.T.'s overall best interest.

Velechko echoed Reenstra's concerns about S.T.'s start to the 2010-2011 school year. As building principal she listened carefully to his parents' input, factoring their concerns into her ultimate professional judgment that S.T. was ill-served by continuing in the first grade. Indeed, to ensure that his teacher was correctly advising a return to kindergarten, Velechko observed S.T. herself and tested him in November 2010. The Gesell Developmental Observation reflected that developmentally S.T. was squarely at his chronological age, and Velechko reiterated that his birth date placed him in kindergarten under Board policy. The Qualitative Reading Inventory confirmed that S.T. was not functioning at a first grade level. (R-13.)

Velechko testified that it was the opinion of the IRSC educational professionals that S.T. was an "over placed" child that was not a good match for first grade. The team did note some academic strengths—particularly in his math performance—and thus proposed the kindergarten/first grade-split program as a way to individualize S.T.'s program to meet his unique needs. After the change in placement, which took place in December, Velechko continued to monitor S.T.'s progress, and asked the school psychologist to do so as well. She noted that, to her observation, S.T. made a good adjustment to kindergarten. He interacted with the other children, participated in class and seemed happy. Velechko felt he "blossomed" in kindergarten.

[2] Reenstra and the other school district witnesses testified that the DRA is an excellent indicator of reading levels, including the comprehension skills that are key to a successful educational experience. The DRA allows the teacher to diagnose strengths, weaknesses and patterns of performance, and is more reliable than a standardized multiple-choice test in understanding reading ability.

S.T. was enrolled in Lorraine DeCaprio's kindergarten class in the morning and Paula Risoli's first grade class in the afternoon. The testimony of these two highly experienced educators confirmed that the IRSC had correctly recommended a change in placement for S.T., and that as Velechko had stated, he was now "blossoming." DeCaprio has thirty-four years of classroom experience. She observed that S.T. was shy at first, but quickly acclimated to the classroom and its routines. S.T. engaged well in all classroom activities and was socially well-adjusted. According to DeCaprio, he made friends, and was happy. His social interactions were those of a typical kindergarten student. Academically, S.T. was in the top third of DeCaprio's class, and he successfully met the academic goals in her classroom. But DeCaprio noted some ongoing deficits in reading comprehension and stated that her recommendation was for placement next year in first grade. She did not feel that S.T. was academically ready for second grade.

DeCaprio's testimony was echoed by that of Risoli, a teacher with fourteen years experience. She recounted S.T.'s performance in her classroom both at the start of his enrollment and as the year progressed. Risoli immediately recognized that it was difficult for S.T. to keep up with his first grade peers. He had difficulty doing his math work independently and continued to count using his fingers; a strategy typically abandoned by children in first grade. He required frequent prompts to keep up with the class. S.T. likewise did not meet grade-level expectations in language arts. S.T.'s reading comprehension skills were weak, even though he read with fluency. Risoli noted deficits in S.T.'s ability to infer facts or make predictions based on what he had read, both indicators of higher-level reasoning skills that typically develop in first grade. Risoli noted that the DRA score for a rising second grader should be a level 20, and at the end of the 2010-2011 school year S.T. scored at a level 8. Math continued to be a strength but S.T. nonetheless lagged behind his peers.

In terms of S.T.'s behavioral and social skills, Risoli observed immaturity and a lack of independence. She offered such examples as failing to blow his nose independently, or tie his shoes, or problem-solve real-life situations in the classroom. When asked to join a table that lacked enough chairs, Risoli pointed out that an average first grader would typically know to pull a chair from another table, but that S.T. lacked the maturity to problem solve in this fashion. S.T. remained very quiet in her class, rarely participating in class discussions and lacking confidence. His overall affect was sad, and he did not engage his peers in cooperative play during unscheduled time. Overall, even at the end of his time in Risoli's classroom, S.T. functioned like an entering first grade student. Risoli strongly felt that S.T. was properly placed for the 2011-2012 school year in the first grade.

Thus, the testimony of three teachers who taught S.T., and the testimony of a building principal who also closely monitored his performance, unequivocally supported the soundness of the decision not to promote S.T. to the second grade. Additionally, the testimony of district learning consultant Kathleen Gonzales clarified why the district did not feel that it could agree to a second-grade placement for the coming year despite the independent testing results offered by S.T.'s parents. Gonzales is an educator with thirty-five years experience, formerly as an elementary classroom teacher, and for the past eight years as a learning consultant in Rutherford.

Gonzales emphasized that testing completed by Weyland consisted of portions of the Woodcock-Johnson, a test that she was quite familiar with, but that is typically used to diagnose learning disabilities and determine special education eligibility. Gonzales felt this assessment was not the best tool for determining grade placement, and instead favored the DRA, which, she noted, more authentically reflects actual classroom performance. She indicated that she reviewed S.T.'s seatwork and test scores and spoke with his teachers about his functional performance. Gonzales joined with her colleagues in opining that S.T. was correctly returned to kindergarten, and that he is best served next year by a placement in the first grade.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Commissioner has consistently held that local boards of education may promote or place students in public school grade levels according to their own rules and regulations. Shenkler v. Ho-Ho-Kus Bd. of Educ., 1974 S.L.D. 772, aff'd, 1975 S.L.D. 1157; Boulogne v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Jamesburg, 1964 S.L.D. 107; Wilcox v. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Oceanport, 154-55 S.L.D. 75; see also N.J.S.A. 18A:4-24, which provides that while the Commissioner may inquire into whether a local district is providing a thorough and efficient education, "nothing in this section shall affect the right of each district to prescribe its own rules for promotion." Thus, generally, the Commissioner will defer to local board discretion in the area of grade-level placement.

The Commissioner's view is consistent with the generally accepted notion that he will not overturn the decision of a local board in the absence of a finding that the action below was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html> (citing Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581(1966)). The Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the board of education, whose exercise of its discretion may not be disturbed unless shown to be "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). Our courts have held that "[w]here there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Prot., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd, 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974). Thus, in order to prevail, A.T. must demonstrate that the Board acted in bad faith, or in utter disregard of the circumstances before it. T.B.M. v. Moorestown, supra, EDU 2780-07.

I CONCLUDE that A.T. has not met his burden of proving arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable Board action. This record presents no evidence that Rutherford school personnel were motivated by anything other than S.T.'s educational best interest in making the determination that he was not developmentally ready for first grade and that he should return to kindergarten. The district's decision was based on the advice of experienced educational professionals, who conferred as a committee and reviewed both informal observational data and testing data. The determination that S.T. should remain in first grade for the 2011-2012 year likewise was based on the judgment of knowledgeable classroom teachers, and the building principal.

A.T. clearly is a devoted father, who was motivated only by love and concern for his child in bringing this petition. But the law does not permit me to second guess the decision of seasoned educational professionals, particularly not when they too were clearly motivated only by genuine concern for S.T.'s happiness and educational growth.

For the reasons expressed in this decision, I CONCLUDE that the request for tutoring should likewise be DENIED.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

WHEREAS, I.J. is ninth grade student attending Columbia High School in Maplewood and residing in Newark; and

WHEREAS, the South Orange–Maplewood School District, on the recommendation of the County Superintendent of Schools, filed a petition for a determination concerning the domicile of I.J. for the purpose of attending public school in the State of New Jersey; and

WHEREAS, I.J.'s Parents and the Board of Education wish to avoid a continuing dispute concerning the domicile of I.J.

The parents and Board agree to resolve their disagreements as follows:

1. This Settlement Agreement (hereinafter referred to as the "Agreement") shall cover the period of time beginning September 2010 through June 2011.

2. Simultaneously with the signing of this agreement, the parents shall execute a withdrawal form withdrawing I.J. from the South Orange–Maplewood School District effective June 27, 2011

3. I.J. shall be permitted to complete the 2010-2011 school year at Columbia High School.

4. Should I.J.'s parents fail to sign the withdrawal form, I.J. will, nonetheless, be dropped from the roles of the South–Orange Maplewood School district effective June 27, 2011.

5. Provided the parents execute the withdrawal form, no payment for tuition shall be due on behalf of I.J.

6. The district shall transmit all student records for I.J. to the Newark School District upon request from that district for same.

7. Should the parents, in the future, re-establish residence in the South Orange–Maplewood School District, they will be required to establish proof of such residence before I.J. will be permitted to be enrolled in the district.

6. It is agreed that this Agreement and all of its terms are and will remain confidential to the maximum extent permitted by Law. The Parents are expressly allowed to share this agreement with any school district in which they may become domiciled.

9. This Agreement represents the entire Agreement between the Parties, and will not be modified in whole or in part except by a mutual subsequent written and signed Agreement. It is acknowledged that this Agreement has been entered into freely, willingly and voluntarily, without duress or coercion, and with the opportunity to consult with counsel of their choosing and option. The Parents did consult with a representative and acknowledge that they understand the contents of this Settlement Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties have hereunto set their hands and seals.

BEFORE KELLY J. KIRK, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Concord Engineering Group, Inc., alleges that the Livingston Board of Education's award of an Independent Commissioning Services contract to Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc., was in violation of the New Jersey Public Schools Contract Law.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Concord Engineering Group, Inc., (Concord) and Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc., (CDM) each submitted proposals in response to a Request for Proposal for Independent Commissioning Services from the Livingston Board of Education (Board). On June 6, 2011, a unanimous resolution was passed by the Board, awarding the commissioning services contract to CDM.

On July 19, 2011, Concord filed a motion for emergency relief and stay with the Department of Education to enjoin the Board from entering into a contract with CDM for independent commissioning services and to enjoin CDM from performing any such services as set forth in its proposal. According to Concord, the Board's award of the contract to CDM was in violation of the New Jersey Public Schools Contract Law.

On July 21, 2011, the Department of Education transmitted the case to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) under the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15, and the act establishing the office, N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -23, for a hearing under the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6, and the rules of procedure established by the Department of Education to hear and decide controversies and disputes arising under school laws, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.1 to -1.17. Jurisdiction is conferred under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9. The case was filed at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 21, 2011. Oral argument was heard on July 27, 2011.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Board has contracted for renovations to existing schools in the Township of Livingston (District), and sought proposals for independent commissioning services for the Livingston Renovation Project to ensure that all systems are complete and functioning properly upon occupancy and that the staff has adequate system documentation and training. To that end, a written Request for Proposal for Independent Commissioning Services (RFP) was prepared by the Board. The RFP seeks the services of a qualified commissioning provider (CP) for a construction project estimated to cost $38 million. The RFP sets forth the background, objectives, scope of work, including construction phase and warranty period, systems to be commissioned, desired qualifications, proposal requirements, selection process and other requirements and exhibits. Upon recommendation of the Board's architect, the RFP was provided to three professional engineering firms. The Board received proposals only from Concord and CDM.

According to the RFP, the CP is not responsible for construction management. The systems to be commissioned are mechanical systems, conveyance systems and electrical systems. A bachelor's degree in mechanical or electrical engineer is strongly preferred and a professional engineer certification is required. Exhibits to the RFP reflect extensive commissioning facilitation review.

The selection process set forth in the RFP is as follows:

> Owner shall review all proposals and select and rank the most qualified Consultants. The selection and ranking shall be based on the following criteria:
>
> - Proposed approach to the project.
> - Past experience in performing similar projects.
> - Expertise of the team in performing the services required by the Project.
> - Fee proposal.
>
> The Owner will negotiate/interview with the highest ranked Consultant on the tasks, staffing, schedule and fee proposal. Negotiations may be formally terminated if they fail to result in a contract within a reasonable time period. Negotiations will then ensure with the second ranked Consultant, and if necessary, the third ranked Consultant. If the second and third round of negotiations fail to result in a contract within a reasonable time period, the solicitation may be formally terminated.

The proposals were reviewed by a committee consisting of the Superintendent of Schools, the project architect, the project construction manager, and the District Business Administrator. On June 6, 2011, the Board unanimously approved a resolution as follows:

3.17 Award of Contract – Commission Services

Whereas, the Livingston Board of Education ("Board") is currently engaged in a construction project involving facility upgrades to a number of the Board's schools ("Project"); and

Whereas, the Project entails upgrades to a number of the systems at the various schools, including, but not limited to HVAC, lighting, and elevators; and

Whereas, the Board has determined that it is in the best interests to retain a professional engineering firm to provide professional commissioning services ("Services") in order to ensure that all of the systems affected by the Project have been completed and are fully operational within the requirements of the Project Specifications; and

Whereas, the Board solicited proposals from multiple professional engineering firms to provide the Services; and

Whereas, the Board received two (2) proposals in response to its solicitation; and

Whereas, the Board has determined that the proposal submitted by Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc, Philadelphia, PA, is responsive to the Board's solicitation, is the most advantageous to the Board, and that Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc. has the appropriate expertise to provide the Services; and

Whereas, N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5 permits the board of education to negotiate and award a contract for professional services without public advertising and bidding [therefor]; and

Whereas, the Services constitute professional services as defined by the Statute.

> Now, Therefore, Be It Resolved, that in accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A :18A-1 et. seq., the Board hereby awards a contract for the Services to Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc. in an amount not to exceed Three Hundred Forty Four Thousand Seven Hundred Dollars ($344,700.00); and
>
> Be It Further Resolved, that the Board hereby authorizes the Business Administrator, with the assistance of the Board's Special Counsel for Construction to negotiate and prepare the contract for the Services with Camp Dresser & McKee, Inc.; and
>
> Be It Further Resolved, that in accordance with the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5, that the Business Administrator cause to be printed once, in an official newspaper, a brief notices stating the nature, duration, service and amount of the contract, and that the resolution and contract are on file and available for public inspection at the Board's offices.

On June 9, 2011, a public notice of the award of contract for commissioning services was printed. No other public notices relative to the RFP were printed. The Board did not pass a resolution authorizing the use of competitive contracting. The Board did not publish a notice regarding the availability of the RFP in a newspaper.

LEGAL STANDARDS

Standards for Emergency Relief

Where authorized by law and where irreparable harm will result without an expedited decision granting or prohibiting some action or relief connected with a contested case, emergency relief pending a final decision on the whole contested case may be ordered upon the application of a party. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6(a).

Where the subject matter of the controversy is a particular course of action by a district board of education or any other party subject to the jurisdiction of the Commissioner, the petitioner may include with the petition of appeal, a separate motion for emergent relief or a stay of that action pending the Commissioner's final decision in the contested case. N.J.S.A. 6A:3-1.6(a). A motion for a stay or emergent relief shall be accompanied by a letter memorandum or brief which shall address the following standards to be met for granting such relief pursuant to Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982):

> 1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the requested relief is not granted;
>
> 2. The legal right underlying petitioner's claim is settled;
>
> 3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
>
> 4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.
>
> N.J.S.A. 6A:3-1.6(b)

Public Schools Contract Law

N.J.S.A. 18A:18A:4.1 authorizes boards of education to use competitive contracting in lieu of public bidding as follows:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of any law, rule or regulation to the contrary, competitive contracting may be used by boards of education in lieu of public bidding for procurement of specialized goods and services the price of which exceeds the bid threshold, for the following purposes:
>
> a. The purchase or licensing of proprietary computer software designed for board of education purposes, which may include hardware intended for use with the proprietary software. This subsection shall not be utilized for the purpose of acquiring general purpose computer hardware or software;
>
> b. The hiring of a for-profit entity or a not-for-profit entity incorporated under Title 15A of the New Jersey Statutes for the purpose of:
>
> (1) the operation, management or administration of recreation or social service facilities or programs; or

(2) the operation, management or administration of data processing services;

c. Services performed by an organization engaged in providing energy conservation education and training services to train employees of a board of education to reduce consumption of energy;

d. Telecommunications transmission or switching services that are not part of a tariff or schedule of charges filed with the Board of Public Utilities;

e. The purchase of specialized machinery or equipment of a technical nature, or servicing thereof, which will not reasonably permit the drawing of specifications;

f. Food services provided by food service management companies when not part of programs administered by the New Jersey Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Child Nutrition Programs;

g. Driver education courses provided by licensed driver education schools;

h. At the option of the board of education, any good or service that is exempt from bidding pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5;

i. Laboratory testing services;

j. Concessions;

k. The operation, management or administration of other services, with the approval of the Division of Local Government Services in the Department of Community Affairs.

Any purpose included herein shall not be considered by a board of education as an extraordinary unspecifiable service pursuant to paragraph (2) of subsection a. of N.J.S.A.18A:18A-5.

N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5 sets forth multiple exceptions to the requirement for advertising, including that "[a]ny contract, the amount of which exceeds the bid threshold, shall be negotiated and awarded by the board of education by resolution at a public meeting without public advertising for bids and bidding therefor if the subject matter thereof consists of professional services. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5(a). The board of education must in such instance state supporting reasons for its action in the resolution awarding each contract and shall forthwith cause to be printed once, in an official newspaper, a brief notice stating the nature, duration, service and amount of the contract, and that the resolution and contract are on file and available for public inspection in the office of the board of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5(a)(1).

The local public and public school contracts laws at N.J.A.C. 5:34-1.1 et. seq. apply to all boards of education unless specifically stated to the contrary. Both N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-2 and N.J.A.C. 5:34-1.2 define "professional services" as services rendered or performed by a person authorized by law to practice a recognized profession, whose practice is regulated by law, and the performance of which services requires knowledge of an advanced type in a field of learning acquired by a prolonged formal course of specialized instruction and study as distinguished from general academic instruction or apprenticeship and training. Professional services may also mean services rendered in the provision or performance of goods or services that are original and creative in character in a recognized field of artistic endeavor. Id.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The RFP specifically states that a "bachelor's degree in mechanical or electrical engineering is strongly preferred" and that "P.E. certification is required."

> Engineering is an important and learned profession. There are over 750,000 graduate engineers in the United States, of whom about 325,000 are registered as professional engineers. Registration requirements vary from State to State, but usually require the applicant to be a graduate engineer with at least four years of practical experience and to pass a written examination. About half of those who are registered engage in consulting engineering on a fee basis. They perform services in connection with the study, design, and construction of all types of improvements to real property -- bridges, office buildings, airports, and factories are examples.
> National Soc. of Professional Engineers v. United States, 435 U.S. 679, 681-682 (U.S. 1978)

Accordingly, there can be little dispute that the request for proposal sought "professional services." As such, the contract would have been excepted from the advertising requirement because N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5 would be the operative statute. However, at the option of the board of education, competitive contracting may be used by boards of education in lieu of public bidding for procurement for any good or service that is exempt from bidding pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5. N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.1(h).

In the present case, Concord argues that N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.1 et. seq. is applicable to the contract, because even if it was not applicable on its face, the conduct of the Board triggered competitive contracting.

In order to initiate competitive contracting, the board of education must pass a resolution authorizing the use of competitive contracting each time specialized goods or services enumerated in N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.1 are desired to be contracted. N.J.S.A. 18A:18-4.3(a). The competitive contracting process must utilize request for proposal documentation in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.4, and N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.5 sets for the manner by which competitive contracting proposals must be submitted, including that "[u]nder no circumstances shall the provisions of a proposal be subject to negotiation by the board of education."

Review of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.1 reveals that "professional services" does not fall within the various enumerated purposes for which competitive contracting may be used, unless used at the option of the Board, and Concord's argument that the Board utilized competitive contracting is overborne by evidence in the record that the Board did not utilize competitive contracting. Concord relies upon the RFP itself, which does meet some of the criteria for a competitive contracting requests for proposals set forth at N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.4. However, the resolution twice referenced N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-5, and in accordance therewith, the Board caused a brief notice of the award of the contact to be printed in an official newspaper. Although Petitioner argues that the resolution was passed after the fact, and should not be evidence that the Board intended to utilize the professional services statute rather than the competitive contracting statute, there is no dispute that the Board did not comply with and/or violated numerous requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.1 et. seq. The Board did not pass a resolution authorizing the use of competitive contracting as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.3 and the RFP did not comport with certain provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.5, including that it did not cause a notice of availability of request for proposal documentation to be published in a newspaper at least twenty days prior to the date established for submission of proposals. Instead, the RFP was provided only to three entities specifically named by the architect on the Livingston Renovation Project. Further, the RFP reflects that the contract would be negotiated, which is expressly prohibited in competitive contracting by N.J.S.A. 18A:18A-4.5(b).

In light of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that Concord has failed to establish a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim.

In order to prevail on an application for emergent relief, Petitioner must meet all four conjunctive prongs set forth in Crowe. Inasmuch as petitioner has failed to establish a likelihood of success on the merits of the underlying claim, the other Crowe criteria are not addressed.

ORDER

It is hereby ORDERED that Concord's application for emergency relief is DENIED.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified, or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who is authorized by law to make the final decision in this case. The final decision shall be issued without delay but no later than forty-five days from the entry of this order. If the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION does not adopt, modify, or reject this order within those forty-five days, this recommended order shall become the final decision on the issue of emergency relief under N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SYNOPSIS

In 2009, petitioners challenged the Board's adoption and implementation of Regulation 6145, entitled "Extracurricular Activities," which set forth requirements related to students' conduct both on and off school grounds and specifies consequences for failure to comply therewith. Consequences of violating the requirements of the regulation include the temporary revocation of participation in extracurricular activities. Petitioners contended that Regulation 6145 was unconstitutional, overbroad, and in violation of their constitutional rights. The case was heard in the OAL and the Commissioner subsequently issued a final decision finding that Regulation 6145 was unlawful and directing the Board to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. In October 2010, the Board adopted a revised version of Regulation 6145. The instant appeal was filed in November 2010, in which petitioners allege that the revised regulation is unlawful and does not comply with the Commissioner's final decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts in dispute and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the Board's argument that the petitioners' appeal should be dismissed because their claims are barred by the doctrine of res judicata is without merit; Regulation 6145 as revised is still unlawful, as it is not in compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, and is unconstitutional and overreaches a school board's authority. The ALJ granted the petitioners' motion for summary decision and directed the Board to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with the regulation.

Upon consideration and review, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the ALJ and dismissed the petition. The Commissioner determined that Regulation 6145 as revised does comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, finding, inter alia, that the key inquiry relating to the suspension from extracurricular activities based on off-school-grounds conduct is not whether the conduct was unlawful or whether the student was arrested, but rather whether the suspension is reasonably necessary to protect the well-being of the student, other students or the school staff, and whether the conduct interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of a school.

V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE RAMAPO INDIAN HILLS REGIONAL, HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the Board of Education. This case involves the interpretation of the Board's revised version of Regulation 6145, which contains a provision that enables the Board to deny participation in extracurricular activities based on student conduct away from school grounds.[1]

The Board takes exception to the Administrative Law Judge's ("ALJ") determination that the revised version of Regulation 6145 still does not comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. The Board argues that Regulation 6145 was revised to fully comply with governing regulations, and the exact language contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a) is included in Regulation 6145. In its exceptions, the Board stresses that Regulation 6145 no longer enables the Board to suspend a student from extracurricular activities without a finding that the out-of-school conduct relates to and affects the management of the school and its efficiency.

[1] On September 13, 2010, the Commissioner issued a decision finding that the original version of Regulation 6145 was unlawful and ordered the Board to revise Regulation 6145 to bring it into compliance with the governing regulatory provisions.

Additionally, the Board takes exception to the ALJ's interpretation of a "consequence" under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). The Board contends that once an alleged violation of the District's Code of Conduct occurs, the school administrator holds a conference with the student, his or her parents and the appropriate personnel in order for the administration to determine if a student should be suspended from extracurricular activities as a result of the out-of-school conduct. The Board argues that it is not the holding of the conference that amounts to a consequence contemplated by the Administrative Code, but rather the consequence is the suspension from extracurricular activities. Finally, the Board takes exception to the ALJ's finding that Regulation 6145 is unconstitutional.

After consideration and review, the Commissioner finds that the revised version of Regulation 6145 complies with the requirements outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6 relating to the Board's authority to discipline students for conduct that occurs away from school grounds. The New Jersey Administrative Code contains provisions that establish the parameters by which all boards of education are bound in the establishment of student conduct codes. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 provides, in pertinent part:

> Each district board of education shall develop, adopt and implement a code of conduct which establishes standards, policies and procedures for positive student development and student behavioral expectations on school grounds, including on school buses or at school sponsored functions, and as appropriate, for conduct away from school grounds, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.2 through 7.5, 7.8 and 7.9. [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(a)].

Further, "[a] district board of education may deny participation in extracurricular activities, school functions, sports or graduation exercises as disciplinary sanctions, where such measures are designed to maintain the order and integrity of the school environment." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(e). Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, a board also has the authority to "impose a consequence on a student for conduct away from school grounds ... that is consistent with the district board of education's code of student conduct." The board, however, can only exercise that authority when:

> 1. "it is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2 and 18A:37-2" [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)1] and
> 2. "the conduct which is the subject of the proposed consequence materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school." [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)2.]

Based on the Commissioner's September 13, 2010 decision, the Board revised the original version of Regulation 6145 by incorporating the exact language contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). Specifically, Regulation 6145 expressly states that "no consequence shall be imposed upon a student for conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, unless the administrative personnel" determine that the requirements contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a), have been met.[2] Therefore, with the addition of those safeguards, the Board has brought Regulation 6145 into compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a), and significantly, the Board has not afforded itself more authority than was contemplated by the adoption of the regulatory provisions.

Additionally, the Commissioner finds that the administration's holding of a conference as provided for in Regulation 6145 does not amount to a consequence as envisioned by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). The consequence for the student's off-school-grounds conduct is the suspension from extracurricular activities, not the administration's meeting to discuss the nature and extent of the conduct. The petitioners' argument that N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a) prohibits the administration from even holding a conference until the link between the conduct and the school environment is established is too restrictive a reading of the regulation. Certainly, it is not unreasonable for the Board to hold a conference to gather information before determining whether the off-school-grounds conduct should result in a suspension from extracurricular activities based on the requirements contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). In fact, the information obtained during the conference may be an essential component in the administration's mission to appropriately ascertain whether the necessary link exists. Moreover, the absence of such fact-finding would almost certainly result in complaints from parents that disciplinary decisions were being haphazardly made without the administrators incorporating the requisite analysis.

The petitioners also contend that Regulation 6145 is unconstitutional based on the fact that an arrest for conduct away from school grounds triggers a conference with the student, which the petitioners argue is really an unlawful hearing on the criminal guilt or innocence of the student.[3] The petitioners maintain that the holding of the conference violates the student's First Amendment right against self-incrimination, compelled speech and the right to privacy. As the Board points out, however, the conference is not mandatory for the student nor is it an interrogation as the petitioners argue, but instead is an opportunity for the student to present his or her side of the story before the administration determines whether a suspension from extracurricular activities is warranted. Further, the student is not required to speak at the conference or to incriminate him or herself in any way. As such, the conference is simply part of the process whereby the administration determines whether the student should be suspended from extracurricular activities in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a), and the inclusion of the provision directing the administrators to hold a conference does not violate the student's constitutional rights.

[3] According to Regulation 6145, "[w]ith respect to conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, an alleged violation of the above conduct requirements shall occur if a student is formally charged and/or arrested by law enforcement for an alleged violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions". To the extent that this language is not clear, the Commissioner emphasizes that the arrest or charge is not a violation of the Student Code of Conduct but merely a trigger for a conference to enable the administration to determine whether the student's out-of-school conduct should result in a suspension from extracurricular activities. In addition, the Commissioner contemplates that there will be instances where it is so clear that there is no nexus between the alleged conduct and the school environment, no conference will be required.

It is important to recognize that the key inquiry relating to the suspension from extracurricular activities based on off-school-grounds conduct is not whether the conduct was unlawful or whether the student was arrested, but rather whether the suspension is reasonably necessary to protect the well-being of the student, other students or the school staff, and whether the conduct materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school. N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(1) and (2). Regardless of the role that the student plays in connection with the conference, the Board is still obligated to meet the requirements enumerated in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a) – and duplicated in Regulation 6145 – before a student can be suspended from extracurricular activities based on out-of-school conduct.

Accordingly, the revised version of Regulation 6145 is lawful and in compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6; therefore, the recommended decision of the ALJ is rejected, and the petition of appeal is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

BEFORE CARIDAD F. RIGO, ALJ:

BACKGROUND AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On June 22, 2009, respondent, Ramapo Indian Hills Regional High School District Board of Education (the Board) adopted Regulation 6145, entitled "Extracurricular Activities," which sets forth requirements related to students' conduct—both on and off school grounds—and specifies consequences for failure to comply therewith. In pertinent part, Regulation 6145 provides:

> 1. General Behavioral Expectations:
>
> a. Students are expected to comply with all of the Board's policies and regulations at all times . . . and the District's Code of Student Conduct.
>
> b. Students are required to conform to reasonable standards of acceptable behavior, to respect the rights, person and property of others, to preserve the degree of order necessary for the conduct of the educational program, and to obey those in authority.
>
> c. Students shall not engage in activities that constitute criminal offenses or juvenile delinquency as defined by law.
>
> 2. Use of Alcoholic Beverages and/or Drugs:
>
> a. Expectations: All student participants in Board-sponsored extracurricular activities must refrain from the use, possession or distribution of any alcoholic beverage or other drugs (unless prescribed by a physician) both on and off school grounds, during the season or activity in which the student wishes to participate in the extracurricular activity.
>
> . . .
>
> Consequences for Violations of Conduct Requirements:
>
> 1. Alleged violations of the above behavioral expectations occurring on school grounds and/or at school sponsored events will be reported by supervising staff member to the building administrator. With respect to conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, an alleged violation of the above conduct requirements shall occur if a student is formally charged and/or arrested by law enforcement for an alleged violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions.
> 2. Following notification of a student's alleged violation, the building administrator shall conduct a conference with the student and his/her parents, which shall include the student assistance counselor ("SAC") and other district personnel, as appropriate, at which time the student shall be provided the opportunity to address the alleged violation.

3. At the conclusion of the conference, the administrative personnel shall determine whether or not a violation of this Policy and Regulation has occurred.

4. If a violation has occurred, appropriate consequences under this Policy and Regulation shall be determined following consideration of all the facts and circumstances of a particular situation, but shall include as a minimum the following a. First Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for seven (7) school days, and/or, at the discretion of the administrator, through and including the next scheduled competitive game and/or event.

b. Second Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for ninety (90) school days.

c. Third Violation: The student may not participate in any extracurricular activities for one-hundred eighty (180) school days.

Challenge to Regulation 6145

On September 2, 2009, G.D.M. and T.A.M., together with their then-minor-daughter B.M.M., brought an action challenging Regulation 6145 on the grounds that the policy was unconstitutional, overbroad, and ultra vires, in violation of their constitutional rights.

On June 11, 2010, Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Richard McGill held that the Board's policy was overbroad and its link between conduct away from school grounds and participation in extracurricular activities constituted a violation of constitutional principles concerning parental rights. See G.D.M. and T.A.M. o/b/o B.M.M. v. Ramapo Indian Hills Reg'l Sch. Dist. BOE (B.M.M. I), EDU 11597-09, Initial Decision (June 11, 2010), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.

In his decision, ALJ McGill noted that provisions of the United States Constitution and New Jersey statutes and regulations "indicate that the authority of a district board of education over students is subject to limitations." Ibid. He explained:

> The powers of a district board of education are no greater than the authority conferred by statute. With limited exceptions, the authority of the board of education applies to student conduct on school grounds and at various school-sponsored functions. The right to impose a consequence for conduct away from school grounds is specifically limited to situations where the exercise of that authority is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds.
> [Ibid. (Emphasis added).]

Consequently, he determined the Board disregarded the limitations on its authority over conduct of students away from school grounds by purporting in Regulation 6145 to require students to refrain from use, possession or distribution of any alcoholic beverage or other drugs both on or off school grounds; while the regulation additionally applies to violations of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice and/or applicable municipal code or ordinance provisions. Ibid. He found the Board has no authority whatsoever to enforce, determine guilt, or otherwise impose a consequence for alleged violations (or violations) of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinance provisions and held the adoption of Regulation 6145 was ultra vires and unlawful. Ibid.

ALJ McGill also determined that Regulation 6145 was "grossly overbroad" and that it "disregarded parental rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution." Ibid. He further explained:

> dealing with charges against a teenager unrelated to school is the proper function of the parents without interference from school authorities. This is particularly true where the student's alleged misconduct occurred in the parent's home.

On September 13, 2010, the Acting Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) issued a Final Decision in which she adopted ALJ McGill's decision with respect to his finding that Regulation 6145 is unlawful. See G.D.M. and T.A.M. o/b/o B.M.M. v. Ramapo Indian Hills Reg'l Sch. Dist. BOE (B.M.M. II), EDU 11597-09, Final Decision (September 13, 2010), <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>. The Commissioner explained there was no need to explore the constitutional arguments presented by the parties as discussed by ALJ McGill, as the case could be decided by evaluating whether Regulation 6145 is consistent with the Administrative Code sections, N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, which govern the Board's authority to deny participation in extracurricular activities for conduct that occurs off school grounds that is unrelated to a school event.

In sum, the Commissioner concluded and adopted ALJ McGill's Initial Decision that Regulation 6145 was unlawful and directed the Board to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. B.M.M. II, supra, EDU 11597-09.

Both parties have filed Notices of Appeal to the Superior Court, Appellate Division and that matter is pending.

On October 11, 2010, the Board adopted a revised version of Regulation 6145 (Revised Regulation). The Revised Regulation is identical to the original Regulation 6145, except for the insertion of an additional paragraph, labeled as "5," which provides:

> 5. Notwithstanding any provision of this or any other Board Policy or Regulation to the contrary, no consequence shall be imposed upon a student for conduct occurring away from school grounds/events, unless the administrative personnel finding a violation of the Policy and Regulation as set forth above, also determines that:
> > a. the imposition of consequences, as set forth above, is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security, and well-being, or for reasons relating to the safety, security, and well-being of other students, staff, or school grounds; and

> b. the conduct which is the subject of the proposed consequence materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school.

Paragraph 2 of the Revised Regulation (Use of Alcoholic Beverages and/or Drugs) still contains the same language ("both on and off school grounds") as the original version of Regulation 6145.

Challenge to Revised Regulation's Compliance

On November 1, 2010, G.D.M. and T.A.M., together with their minor son, G.D.M., (petitioners) filed the instant petition, in which they allege that the Revised Regulation is unlawful and does not comply with the Commissioner's Final Decision. On November 19, 2010, the Board filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. On December 9, 2010, petitioners filed a brief in opposition to respondent's motion to dismiss and in support of their respective motion for summary decision. On January 11, 2011, the Board filed a substitution of attorney. Consequently, on January 31, 2011, the superseding attorney filed a letter brief in support of the Board's motion for summary decision and in opposition to the petitioners' motion for summary decision. Respondent Board claims petitioner is barred by the doctrine of res judicata in that there is no genuine issue of material fact to dispute that the revised policy complies with the Acting Commissioner's Final Decision. On February 7, 2011, petitioners filed a reply brief in opposition to respondent's motion to dismiss and in support of their respective motion for summary decision.

The motions are now ripe for resolution.

SUMMARY DECISION

Under the New Jersey Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules, N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.1 to -21.6, summary decision may be rendered if:

> [T]he papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. When a motion for summary decision is made and supported, an adverse party in order to prevail must by responding affidavit set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. If the adverse party does not so respond, a summary decision, if appropriate, shall be entered.
>
> [N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b) (emphasis added).]

The summary judgment procedure is:

> [D]esigned to provide a prompt, businesslike and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause which a discriminating search of the merits in the pleadings, depositions and admissions on file, together with the affidavits submitted on the motion clearly shows not to present any genuine issue of material fact requiring disposition at a trial.
>
> [Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67, 74.]

As explained by the court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, 142 N.J. 520 (1995):

> [A] determination whether there exists a genuine issue of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial. Credibility determinations will continue to be made by a jury and not the judge. If there exists a single, unavoidable resolution of the alleged disputed issue of fact, that issue should be considered insufficient to constitute a genuine issue of material fact for purposes of Rule 4:46-2. The import of our holding is that when the evidence is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law, . . . the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment.

[Id. at 540 (citations omitted).]

Since the underlying facts are not in dispute, this matter is ripe for summary decision concerning: (1) whether the doctrine of res judicata bars petitioners' present action and (2) whether the Revised Regulation complies with the Commissioner's Final Decision.

Is Petitioner's Action Barred by the Doctrine of Res Judicata?

At the outset, the Board argues petitioners' petition should be dismissed because their claims are barred by the doctrine of res judicata. The Board contends all the elements of the doctrine have been met and that claim preclusion applies not only to matters actually determined, but also to all relevant matters that could have been determined. Specifically, the Board avers the petitioners' primary contention in this matter is that a conference with school district personnel after a student has been arrested or charged by law enforcement constitutes a "consequence," which must meet the dual standards of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6 before it can be held. The Board argues the petitioners chose not to raise this issue in their prior litigation; but instead they focused on the issue of whether suspension from extracurricular activities was a consequence invoking the regulatory standards. It avers the petitioners' failure to raise this issue in the prior matter precludes them from raising it in the instant matter.

Petitioners, on the other hand, argue their claim should not be barred by the doctrine of res judicata. They contend the Revised Regulation has never been reviewed to determine whether it is legal or consistent with the Commissioner's Final Decision and claim if it was barred by res judicata, it would violate their due process rights, leave them without adequate remedy, and leave the Board free to disregard the Commissioner's directive outlined in the Final Decision. Petitioners also rebut the Board's claim that they failed to raise the issue concerning the mandatory attendance at a conference portion of the original and the Revised Regulation concerning the mandatory attendance at a conference previously.

The doctrine of res judicata or claim preclusion provides "that a cause of action between parties that has been finally determined on the merits by a tribunal having jurisdiction cannot be relitigated by those parties or their privies in a new proceeding." Velasquez v. Franz, 123 N.J. 498, 505 (1991). "Where the second action is no more than a repetition of the first, the first lawsuit stands as a barrier to the second. The rule precludes parties from relitigating substantially the same cause of action." Culver v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 115 N.J. 451, 460 (1991). Res judicata requires three basic elements: (1) the judgment in the prior action must be valid, final and on the merits; (2) the parties in the later action must be identical to or in privity with those in the prior action; and (3) the claims in the second action must arise from the same transaction or occurrence as the claims in the first one. Velasquez, supra, 123 N.J. at 505-06. Res judicata applies not only to all matters litigated and determined by such judgment but also as to all relevant issues which could have been presented, but were not. Culver, supra, 115 N.J. at 463. To determine whether two claims or causes of action are the same for res judicata purposes, a court must consider: (1) whether the acts complained of and the demand for relief are the same; (2) whether the theory of recovery is the same; (3) whether the witnesses and documents necessary at trial are the same; and (4) whether the material facts alleged are the same. Id. at 461-62.

The Board's argument that petitioners' petition should be dismissed because their claims are barred by the doctrine of res judicata is without merit. The Board's res judicata argument ignores the fact that the petitioners are not challenging the same conduct policy that was the subject of their prior action. They are challenging the Revised Regulation adopted by the Board after the original Regulation 6145 was found to be unlawful. The application of the res judicata doctrine "requires substantially similar or identical causes of action and issues, parties, and relief sought." Id. at 460. Because the issue in this matter (whether the Revised Regulation complies with the Commissioner's Final decision) differs from their previous application, res judicata does not apply. The Board's attempt to fashion a res judicata argument around its contention that the petitioners' instant application is barred due to their failure to raise their current arguments in their previous application fails to recognize the petitioners' distinct and separate challenges to each of the versions of Regulation 6145. That is, does the Revised Regulation comply with the requirements rendered in the Commissioner's Final Decision? See B.M.M. II, supra, EDU 11597-09.

DISCUSSION OF THE LAW AND ANALYSIS

The Board argues that petitioners' petition should be dismissed because the Revised Regulation does comply with the Commissioner's Final Decision. The Board claims that the language inserted in the Revised Regulation (Paragraph 5, outlined above) mirrors the language of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(1) and (a)(2) and brings it into compliance with the requirements delineated in the Commissioner's Final Decision. B.M.M. II, supra, EDU 11597-09. In addition, it claims the revised policy does not infringe on either the parents' or students' constitutional rights. Ibid.

Petitioners, on the other hand, contend the Revised Regulation does not comply with the Commissioner's Final Decision. They claim it is still overbroad, ultra vires, and in violation of constitutional principles. Specifically, they argue the Revised Regulation still requires that all students charged with the violation of any law or municipal ordinance, no matter when or where occurring, be brought before a school committee for a hearing prior to the Board determining whether or not the student's alleged conduct has any nexus to the school. They claim that this hearing amounts to an "interrogation" that infringes on parental, as well as, student rights. They further contend extracurricular activities are a right rather than a privilege and support their contention by emphasizing the importance the Board has placed on extracurricular activities in its district as well as the importance that colleges place on student participation in these activities when making admission decisions. In addition, they cite New Jersey Supreme Court decisions and State Legislature enactments they contend emphasize the importance of extracurricular activities.

At the outset, it should be noted that the Commissioner's pronouncement in reviewing the original version of Regulation 6145 that, although there were constitutional arguments presented by the parties, the case could be decided by evaluating whether the policy is consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6 (the regulations governing the Board's authority to deny participation in extracurricular activities for conduct that occurs off school grounds that is unrelated to a school event) is equally apropos here. See B.M.M. II, supra, EDU 11597-09. As the Commissioner stated, "[i]t is against this backdrop that Regulation 6145 must be evaluated." Ibid.

N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 provides in pertinent part,

> Each district board of education shall develop, adopt and implement a code of conduct which establishes standards, policies and procedures for positive student development and student behavioral expectations on school grounds, including on school buses or at school sponsored functions, and as appropriate, for conduct away from school grounds, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.2 through 7.5, 7.8 and 7.9.
>
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(a).]

N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 further provides, "[a] district board of education may deny participation in extracurricular activities, school functions, sports or graduation exercises as disciplinary sanctions, where such measures are designed to maintain the order and integrity of the school environment." N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1(e).

Therefore, while it is undisputed that the Board has an obligation to establish a code of conduct for students, and the Board's desire to limit drug and alcohol abuse is reasonable, the New Jersey Administrative Code establishes parameters by which all boards of education are bound in the establishment of student conduct codes.

Under N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, a board has the authority to "impose a consequence on a student for conduct away from school grounds . . . that is consistent with the district board of education's code of student conduct." The board, however, can only exercise that authority when:

> 1. it is reasonably necessary for the student's physical or emotional safety, security and well-being or for reasons relating to the safety, security and well-being of other students, staff or school grounds pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:25-2 and 18A:37-2 and

> 2. the conduct which is the subject of the proposed consequence materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(1) and (2).]

Therefore, while there is no doubt that under certain circumstances a board may deny participation in extracurricular activities, there are limits on a board's authority to deny participation in extracurricular activities for conduct that occurs off school grounds that is unrelated to a school event.

In reviewing the original version of Regulation 6145, the Commissioner determined the Board's policy did not meet the elements contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a). The Commissioner found the plain language of Regulation 6145 "encompasses too many potential violations that would not meet the elements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)." B.M.M. II, supra, EDU 11597-09. She explained her holding as follows:

> Although the purpose behind Regulation 6145 is the deterrent of drug and alcohol abuse, the Regulation can also be violated if a student is merely charged with any "violation of the New Jersey Code of Criminal Justice, and/or applicable municipal codes or ordinances." It is too much of a stretch to find that all off-school-grounds conduct that may result in one of those violations would automatically make it necessary for the Board to suspend or revoke a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities in order to protect the well-being of the student, other students or the school staff. Further, the requirement in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(2) that authorizes a board to revoke a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities when the student's off-school-grounds conduct "materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school" emphasizes the notion that there must be some link between the conduct and the school environment. See also R.R. v. Bd. of Educ., Shore Reg'l High Sch., 109 N.J. Super. 337, 343-44 (Ch. Div. 1970).
> Finally, the Commissioner is mindful that Regulation 6145 contains a due process provision that gives the student an opportunity to be heard once a charge is reported to the Board. However, Regulation 6145 does not require the > Board to take into consideration the mandates contained in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a) before the Board suspends or revokes participation in extracurricular activities. Regulation 6145 equates to a blanket authorization permitting the Board to suspend participation in extracurricular activities based on off-school-grounds conduct without the requirements imposed by N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a).

The Board claims that the language inserted in Paragraph 5 of the Revised Regulation, specifically "mirrors the exact language" of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(1) and (a)(2) and brings it into compliance with the requirements delineated in the Commissioner's Final Decision. The petitioners, on the other hand, say the way the Revised Regulation is drafted still provides the Board with greater authority than that conferred by the governing administrative code provisions. They argue N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(1) and (a)(2) does not grant the Board the authority to conduct a hearing on a student's conduct that occurs off campus that does not have a material and substantial impact upon the operation of the school.

In evaluating the Revised Regulation against the backdrop of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6, it is clear, to me, that the Revised Regulation suffers from the same infirmity as the original policy. The requirements in N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6(a)(2) that authorize a board to review a student's ability to participate in extracurricular activities for a student's off-school grounds conduct limits the school's authority over off-school grounds conduct to conduct that materially and substantially interferes with the requirements of appropriate discipline in the operation of the school. There must be some link between the conduct and the school environment. The Board argues the conference from which the administrative personnel determines whether or not a violation of the policy has occurred is not a form of discipline in and of itself; but is instead merely a layer of due process built into the policy to afford students the opportunity to be heard. However, the Board's argument fails to recognize that the scope of the school's authority pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6 over out-of-school conduct is limited to conduct which directly relates to and affects the management of the school and its efficiency. Because the Revised Regulation, as it is written, still includes conduct that does not directly relate to and affect the management of the school and its efficiency, the Revised Regulation continues to give the Board more authority than is authorized by the New Jersey Administrative Code.

I FIND and CONCLUDE that the Revised Regulation is unlawful and the Board should be directed to revise its policy to bring it into compliance with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.1 and N.J.A.C. 6A:16-7.6. I further CONCLUDE that respondent's Revised Regulation 6145 is unconstitutional and overreaches a school board's authority.

ORDER

Based upon the above, it is herein ORDERED that petitioner's current motion for Summary Decision is GRANTED and respondent's motion for Summary Decision is DENIED. Respondent's Revised Regulation 6145 is null and void.

It is further ORDERED that respondent shall refrain from enforcing or applying Revised Regulation 6145.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five (45) days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen (13) days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, DIVISION OF FINANCE	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners in this consolidated case are five private schools for the handicapped (PSH) which have been approved by the New Jersey Department of Education (Department) to receive public school special education students on a tuition basis. Petitioners challenged the Department's determination to restrict its 2008-2009 tuition rate to a 10% increase over its tentative per diem rate. Each school had established a tentative per diem tuition rate at the beginning of the 2008-2009 school year, but their costs per pupil escalated during the course of the year, resulting in final certified tuition rates that exceeded their tentative rates by more than 10 percent. The Department contends that its action in restricting the tuition rate was warranted by the failure of these private schools to timely comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), which requires PSHs to notify sending districts in a timely manner when proposed tuition increases will exceed 10%. The petitioners contend that the Department has imposed requirements that are not clearly expressed in the regulatory language, and that they have complied with the letter and spirit of the regulation. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue, and the case is ripe for summary decision; petitioners have met their burden of demonstrating that the Department's determination to restrict their tuition rates was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable as there is nothing in N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) that advises that private schools must notify sending districts quarterly that year-to-date rates have increased by more than 10%; rather, the petitioners' actions in waiting to "propose" a tuition increase until later in the school year were consistent with both the express requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) and the goals of the regulation; such goals are not achieved when notice to the public schools of a "proposed" increase in the final tuition rate is based on premature or artificially inflated information; the Department has penalized the petitioning schools for violating what it perceives to be a rule of general application, and if it requires that these schools notify sending districts when year-to-date figures exceed 10% of the tentative rate, rather than only when they intend to actually "propose" a tuition increase, it needed to say so in clear and unambiguous language. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered summary decision in favor of petitioners.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in her decision – that summary decision is appropriately granted to the petitioners. The Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and respondent's determination limiting the tuition increases allowably charged by the respective petitioners to 10% was reversed. Petitioners' respective requests for tuition increases of between 11.61 and 29.43% for the 2008-2009 school year were granted.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed. Respondent sought and was granted an extension of time within which to file exceptions to the decision, and such exceptions were received in accordance with the extended timeline. These and petitioners' reply exceptions were fully considered by the Commissioner in reaching his determination herein.

Respondent's exceptions merely re-advance its arguments presented before the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) below. As it is determined that all of these were fully considered and addressed by the ALJ in her decision, they will not be revisited here.

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons comprehensively presented in her decision – that summary decision is appropriately granted to petitioners.

Accordingly, the recommended decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter. Respondent's determination limiting the tuition increases allowably charged by the respective petitioners for the 2008-09 school year to 10 percent is reversed. Rather, Celebrate the Children's request for a tuition increase of 24.65 percent; Innovative Education's request for a tuition increase of 11.61 percent for its Saybrook program and 29.43 percent for its Krumbiegel program; Creative Achievement Academy's request for a tuition increase of 15.81 percent;

Willowglen Academy's request for a tuition increase of 12.93 and Children's Therapy Center's request for a tuition increase of 15.27 percent – all for the 2008-09 school year – are hereby granted.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners are private schools for the disabled, which have been approved by the New Jersey Department of Education (the Department) to receive public school students on a tuition basis. The schools challenge the Department's determination to restrict their 2008–2009 tuition to a 10 percent increase over their tentative per diem rate. The Department contends that its action was warranted by the failure of these private schools to timely comply with the notice provisions contained at N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2). The petitioning schools contend that the Department has imposed requirements that are not clearly expressed in the regulatory language, and that they have complied with the letter and spirit of the regulation.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter commenced with the filing of five separate petitions of appeal. Celebrate the Children filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on June 24, 2010. An answer was filed on July 8, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on July 8, 2010. Innovative Education Programs filed its petition of appeal with the Commissioner on September 2, 2010. An answer was filed on September 21, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the OAL on September 29, 2010. Creative Achievement filed a petition with the Commissioner on September 3, 2010. An answer was filed on September 21, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the OAL on September 22, 2010.

The Department asserted that two of the petitions were untimely. The Children's Therapy Center filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner on September 29, 2010. The Department filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer on October 20, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the OAL on October 21, 2010. Willowglen Academy filed its petition on October 15, 2010. The Department filed a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer on October 18, 2010, and the contested case was transmitted to the OAL on October 21, 2010.

The Department's motions to dismiss were denied via letter order dated December 15, 2010. The five petitions of appeal were consolidated via order dated December 20, 2010. Cross-motions for summary decision were filed by the Department and Celebrate the Children, Innovative Education Programs, Creative Achievement and the Children's Therapy Center on April 29, 2011. Simultaneous replies were filed on June 3, 2011. Via letter dated April 29, 2011, Willowglen joined in the motion filed by the remaining private schools for the disabled.

On June 20, 2011, I conferred with counsel to obtain clarification regarding several of the submissions filed in support of the cross-motions. Counsel for Innovative Education Programs filed a letter and accompanying certified answers to interrogatories on June 23, 2011, at which time the record closed.[1]

FINDINGS OF FACT

The relevant facts are uncontroverted and I FIND as follows:

The five petitioning schools are private schools for the disabled, and are approved by the Department to receive special needs students from local public school districts. As such, they are required to comply with Department regulations governing tuition and bookkeeping. Among these requirements is the obligation to timely notify sending public school districts that tuition may increase. During the 2008–2009 and 2009–2010 school years, the Department issued guidance to approved private schools in the form of a document entitled "Financial Accounting for New Jersey Private Schools for Students with Disabilities—The Audit Program." In both years, the document, at page 68, addressed the notice requirements contained at N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)(2),[2] and the requirement that private schools notify sending public districts when they

[1] Exhibit E to the Department's brief, a Request for Admissions, gave the false impression that Innovative Education Programs admitted that it had failed to comply with regulatory notice provisions. Counsel's June 22, 2011, letter clarified that discovery as a whole reflects that the answer in the Request for Admissions was an error. His letter also clarified a discrepancy regarding the tuition figures certified by Innovative Education Programs.

[2] Now recodified as N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2).

propose to charge a final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative rate, stating:

> [the school] shall notify each sending district board of education and the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance that such an increase will be charged and the reason for the increase on or before the following dates: December 15th for the first quarter, March 15th for the second quarter, June 15th for the third quarter and September 15th for the fourth quarter.
>
> [Petitioners' Brief, Exhibit H.]

In August 2010 the Department issued a revised document which contained the following, significant addition to the instructions on page 68:

> If a school's YTD Per Diem Tuition Rate is in excess of 10 percent of the Tentative Per Diem Tuition Rate Charged, the notification must be filed by the date indicated in the regulations. The directions indicate the following on page 5, item #7K, "If the YTD Per Diem Tuition Rate is greater than 10% of the Tentative Per Diem Tuition Rate Charged, the private school must comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)2 in order to charge a Final Tuition Rate in excess of 10% of the Tentative Tuition Rate Charged." . . . Therefore, when a school's YTD Per Diem Rate is in excess of 10 percent of the Tentative Tuition Rate Charged, it triggers the requirement that the [school] make the required notification to the parties in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)2 (now N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)2). The timing of the notification is not at management's discretion.

> [Petitioner's Brief, Exhibit I.]

A Department document entitled "Prescribed Financial Report for Private Schools for Students with Disabilities," issued in June 2008, likewise states that "[i]f the YTD Per Diem Tuition Rate is greater than 10% of the Tentative Per Diem Tuition Rate Charged, the private school must comply with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)2 in order to charge a Final Tuition Rate in excess of 10% of the Tentative Rate Charged." (Department's Brief, Exhibit V.)

In accordance with Department regulations, each of the petitioning schools established a tentative per diem tuition rate at the commencement of the 2008–2009 school year. Their costs per pupil escalated during the course of the year, resulting in final certified tuition rates that exceeded their tentative rates by more than 10 percent. The specifics relative to each school, its tuition and the notice it supplied to sending districts are as follows:

Celebrate the Children

At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, Celebrate the Children established a tentative per diem tuition rate of $275.20. Its quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, reflected a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $502.77, an increase of greater than 10 percent. Celebrate the Children's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $343.05, an increase of 24.65 percent. Via letter dated February 23, 2009, Celebrate the Children corresponded with the business officials for its sending districts, advising that due to increased costs and expenses, its tuition rate was anticipated to increase by more than 10 percent.

Via letter dated April 28, 2010, Jim Verner, section supervisor of the Office of Fiscal Policy and Planning for the Department, wrote to Monica Osgood, executive director for Celebrate the Children. He advised that the school was being restricted to a 10 percent increase in tuition, or $302.72 per diem. Verner found that Celebrate the Children had failed to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)(2) (now N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), stating:

> Based upon the information provided to the Department, the school's quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008 indicated a year-to-date tuition rate of $502.77 and a tentative per diem rate charged of $275.20 an increase in excess of 10 percent which would require notification to the required parties by December 15, 2008. However, the school did not make the required notification in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:23-4.2(a)2 until February 23, 2009.

On May 27, 2010, Celebrate the Children, through counsel, wrote to Yut'se Thomas, acting assistant commissioner, Division of Finance, and appealed Verner's determination. Via letter dated June 17, 2010, Thomas upheld Verner's findings, reiterating that "[s]ince the school's YTD Per Diem Tuition Rate was in excess of 10 percent of the Tentative Per Diem Tuition Rate Charged in the quarter ending September 30, 2008, the notification should have been filed by December 15, 2008. The school is considered to be in non-compliance." (Department's Brief, Exhibit Q.)

Celebrate the Children asserts that it has traditionally based its notification to sending districts on data from two quarters. It explains that it runs a 180-day-a-year program, but still incurs personnel, rent, insurance and other costs during the summer months. Since in September 2008 school was in session for only 19 days, the per-pupil cost was skewed upward because "three months' expenses were applied to a low average daily enrollment." (Petitioners' Brief at page 4, citing certified answers to interrogatories.) For this reason it relies on data from two quarters before proposing a tuition adjustment. Celebrate the Children states that the action of the Department in disallowing its requested increase resulted in a tuition loss of approximately $600,000.

Innovative Education Programs

Two programs operated by Innovative Education Programs are at issue. At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, Hillside School for Students with Disabilities—Saybrook established a tentative tuition rate of $185.36.[3] Its quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, reflected a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $214.27, an increase in excess of 10 percent over the tentative rate. Saybrook's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $201.83, an increase of 11.61 percent.

At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, Hillside School for Students with Disabilities—Krumbiegel established a tentative tuition rate of $180.83. Its quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, indicated a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $375.27, an increase in excess of 10 percent over the tentative rate. Krumbiegel's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $234.05, an increase of 29.43 percent. Via letter dated February 13, 2009, both Saybrook and Krumbiegel corresponded with the business officials for their sending districts, advising that due to increased costs and expenses, their tuition rates were anticipated to increase by more than 10 percent.

[3] Counsel for Innovative Education Programs clarified in a letter dated June 22, 2011, that the figures in the request for admissions served by the Department were slightly off—in a telephone conference with counsel it was confirmed that the figures in counsel's letter were correct. Hence, these are the figures incorporated in this decision.

Via letters dated April 28, 2010, Verner wrote to Dr. Melanie North, principal of the Saybrook and Krumbiegel programs. He advised that each program was being restricted to a 10 percent increase in tuition, or $198.91 and $306.38 per diem respectively. An appeal was unsuccessfully filed with Thomas. Deputy Commissioner Andrew Smarick replied on her behalf, and upheld Verner's determination via letter dated August 20, 2010. He too reiterated that if the year-to-date cost per pupil is 10 percent higher than the tentative rate, notification to sending districts must issue on or before December 15. Smarick thus concurred with Verner that Innovative Education Programs was in noncompliance with the regulation.

Like Celebrate the Children, Innovative Education Programs urges that notifying its sending districts during the first quarter that it might propose a tuition increase would present artificially inflated data to these public schools. It contends that the Department's action cost it approximately $54,000 in tuition. Both schools assert that they have historically waited to notify sending districts until the end of the second quarter, with no objection by the Department.

Creative Achievement Academy

At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, Creative Achievement Academy established a tentative tuition rate of $197.94. The school's quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, reflected a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $383.57, an increase in excess of 10 percent over the tentative rate. Creative Achievement Academy's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $229.24, an increase of 15.81 percent. Via letter dated April 3, 2009, Creative Achievement Academy corresponded with the business officials for its sending districts, advising that due to increased costs and expenses, its tuition rate was anticipated to increase by more than 10 percent.

Via letter dated April 28, 2010, Verner corresponded with Sharon Bruno, director of Creative Achievement Academy, and advised that the school was being restricted to a 10 percent increase over its tentative per diem rate, or $217.73. He cited a failure to comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2). An appeal was filed with Thomas, who upheld Verner's determination via letter dated June 9, 2010, again stressing the Department view that "if a school's YTD Per Diem Tuition Rate is in excess of 10 percent of the Tentative Per Diem Tuition Rate Charged, the notification must be filed by the date indicated in the regulation." (Department's Brief, Exhibit R.)

Creative Achievement asserts that historically its financial data early in the school year has reflected an increase in costs that exceeds 10 percent, but that it never charged sending districts for these increases because third-quarter enrollment always increased enough to adjust the final certified rate downward to within 10 percent of the tentative rate. The 2008–2009 school year was the first time that the anticipated third-quarter rise in enrollment failed to materialize. Upon so realizing in April 2009, Creative Achievement notified its sending districts that tuition would rise.

Willowglen Academy

At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, Willowglen Academy established a tentative tuition rate of $251.38. The school's quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, indicated a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $314.43, an increase in excess of 10 percent over the tentative rate. Willowglen's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $283.88, an increase of 12.93 percent. Via letter dated February 16, 2009, Willowglen corresponded with the business officials for its sending districts, advising that due to increased costs and expenses, its tuition rate was anticipated to increase by more than 10 percent.

Via letter dated April 28, 2010, Verner wrote to Susan Hackett, director of Willowglen, and advised that its final tuition rate would be restricted to a 10 percent increase over the tentative rate, or $276.52, again citing noncompliance with the regulatory notice requirements. An appeal was filed with Thomas, who upheld Verner's determination via letter dated June 8, 2010.

Cerebral Palsy Center of Bergen County (d/b/a The Children's Therapy Center)

At the start of the 2008–2009 school year, the Children's Therapy Center established a tentative tuition rate of $278.53. The school's quarterly financial report for September 30, 2008, indicated a year-to-date per diem tuition rate of $351.75, which is an increase in excess of 10 percent over the tentative rate. The Children's Therapy Center's audited financial statements for June 30, 2009, certified a final per diem rate of $321.06, an increase of 15.27 percent. Via letter dated March 1, 2009, the Children's Therapy Center corresponded with the Department and the business officials for its sending districts, advising that due to increased costs and expenses, its tuition rate was anticipated to increase by more than 10 percent.

Via letter dated April 28, 2010, Verner wrote to Marvin Leiken, executive director of Children's Therapy Center, and advised that its final tuition rate would be restricted to a 10 percent increase over the tentative rate, or $306.38, citing noncompliance with the regulatory notice requirements. An appeal was filed with Thomas, who upheld Verner's determination via letter dated June 8, 2010.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The parties have cross-moved for relief under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5, which provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "[t]he judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'Fanciful, frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (citing Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "'judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 251–52, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214.

It is clear from the submissions of the parties that they do not disagree as to the facts, only as to how those facts should affect the ability of the five petitioning private schools to increase their tuition rates under the regulatory scheme. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision.

The petitioning private schools are approved to receive public school special needs students pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-15, and, as such, must comply with complex statutory and regulatory provisions that govern the tuition they may charge. N.J.S.A. 18A:46-21 states that these schools may determine a tuition rate to be paid by their sending boards of education, "but in no case shall the tuition rate exceed the actual cost per pupil as determined under rules prescribed by the commissioner and approved by the State Board of Education." The statute recognizes that tuition is paid to approved schools for the disabled with public funds, and that these funds are utilized to educate public school students with multifaceted needs that cannot be met within their home school districts. Council of Private Sch. for Children with Special Needs, Inc. v. Cooperman, 205 N.J. Super. 544 (App. Div. 1985). Accordingly, the clear intent of the statute is that the tuition charged be reasonably related to the educational services actually provided by the private school. Regulations promulgated by the Department are designed to implement this statutory intent. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.1 to -18.16.

A private school and a sending district typically establish an initial agreement for the provision of services based upon a tentative tuition rate. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(h). In order to establish a final tuition rate that is based on the certified actual cost per pupil, the private school must prepare quarterly financial reports in a format approved by the Department. N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)(11). These reports must be submitted to the private school's governing body for approval, and the acceptance of the report must be documented in the governing body's minutes. Once a final rate is established an adjustment is made. Thus, if the tentative rate does not adequately reflect the actual cost per pupil, the private school may bill its sending public districts for "all or part of the difference owed." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(m).

Consistent with the goal of ensuring the proper and orderly expenditure of public funds, the regulations expressly direct private schools for the disabled to give timely notice of anticipated tuition adjustments, as follows:

> 2. If the approved private school for students with disabilities proposes to charge a final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative tuition rate charged, the private school shall notify each sending district board of education and the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance that such an increase will be charged and the reason for the increase on or before the following dates: December 15th for the first quarter, March 15th for the > second quarter, June 15th for the third quarter and September 15th for the fourth quarter, or the next business day when applicable. The determination of a final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative tuition rate charged shall be based on the completion of the required quarterly financial report in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.4(a)11.

>
> > i. If the sending district board of education and the Assistant Commissioner, Division of Finance are not notified on or before the dates noted in (a)2 above, the approved private school for students with disabilities shall charge an increase not to exceed 10 percent of the tentative tuition rate charged.
> [N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2).]

Petitioners bear the burden of demonstrating that the Department's determination to restrict their tuition rates was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Titusville Acad., Inc. v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., EDU 00651-06, Initial Decision (May 21, 2007), adopted, Comm'r (July 6, 2007) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>; Catholic Family and Cmty. Servs. v. N.J. Dep't of Educ., EDU 01051-01, Initial Decision (January 14, 2003), adopted, Comm'r (March 3, 2003), adopted, State Bd. (July 2, 2003) <http://www.nj.gov/education/legal/>. I CONCLUDE that petitioners have met their burden. It is well established that an administrative regulation is subject to the same canons of construction as a statute. In re N.J.A.C. 14A:20-1.1, 216 N.J. Super. 297, 306 (App. Div. 1987). When interpreting a statute or regulation, our courts assume that the framers intended to ascribe to words their ordinary meaning. Jablonowska v. Suther, 195 N.J. 91, 105 (2008). The intent of a statute or regulation should be gleaned from a view of the whole and of every part of the statute, with the real intention prevailing over the literal sense of its terms. Schierstead v. City of Brigantine, 29 N.J. 220 (1959).

It is clear from the correspondence forwarded to petitioners by Verner, Thomas and Smarick that they have interpreted N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) to require that once the year-to-date tuition rate exceeds the tentative rate by more than 10 percent, the notification requirement is triggered. But the year-to-date per diem rate is nowhere mentioned in the regulation. The only express requirement is that private schools notify sending districts when they "propose" to charge a "final tuition rate in excess of 10 percent above the tentative tuition rate charged." N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) (emphasis supplied). Petitioners persuasively argue that they assumed that "no notice was necessary until and unless they actually 'propose[d]' a [final] tuition increase above the 10 percent threshold." (Petitioners' Brief at page 9.) Their assumption was understandable. That is, after all, precisely what the regulation says. If the agency felt that an increase in the year-to-date per diem rate warranted notification to sending public schools, I am hard pressed to understand why the regulation could not have simply stated as follows:

> The private school will notify its sending districts if, during any quarter of the school year, the year-to-date per diem rate exceeds the tentative tuition rate by more than 10 percent. Notification shall be made by the following dates: December 15th for the first quarter, March 15th for the second quarter, June 15th for the third quarter and September 15th for the fourth quarter, or the next business day when applicable.

The regulation as written does not set an objective event as the trigger for notification, but rather requires notification based on the private school's subjective decision to "propose" an increase in its final rate.[4] I CONCLUDE that petitioners' actions in waiting to "propose" a tuition increase until later in the school year were consistent with both the express requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2), and the goals of the regulation.

Indeed, it is noteworthy that for each of the petitioning schools, the final certified tuition rate for the 2008–2009 school year was well less than the year-to-date rate for the first quarter. Celebrate the Children presents perhaps the most dramatic example. While it proposed a tentative rate of $275.20, by September 30, 2008, its costs had nearly doubled, escalating the rate to $502.77. But by the time it was ready to certify a final per diem rate, that rate was only $343.05. The facts presented by Creative [4] The inclusion of quarterly dates in the regulation in no way advises the reader of the regulation that private schools must notify sending districts quarterly that year-to-date rates have increased by more than 10 percent.

Achievement are also instructive. Historically, Creative Achievement held back on a tuition-increase proposal, and rightly so, as in the end no increase was warranted.

The Department urges that N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) was enacted to encourage private schools to track expenditures and provide timely notice of tuition adjustments that may result in back billing and that the actions of these schools showed a disregard for these regulatory goals. But the overarching purpose of the regulation is the educational success of our special needs students, and N.J.A.C. 6A:23A-18.2(a)(2) recognizes that "the quality of education provided by private schools receiving handicapped pupils is directly related to the amount of tuition that the schools spend on approved educational costs." Council of Private Sch. for Children with Special Needs, Inc. v. Cooperman, supra, 205 N.J. Super. at 547.

With the fiscal constraints all schools face today, at a per diem rate of $502.77 a public school that is successfully sending a student to Celebrate the Children might be forced to consider withdrawing him, and sending him elsewhere. The potential for disruption to the student's program is obvious. The potential for conflict, including litigation, with the student's parents is likewise obvious. I CONCLUDE that the goals of the regulation are not achieved when notice to the public schools of a "proposed" increase in the final tuition rate is based on premature or artificially inflated information.

The Department correctly stresses that an agency's interpretation of its own regulations is entitled to deference. Matturri v. Bd. of Tr. of the Judicial Ret. Sys., 173 N.J. 368, 381 (2002). But under the guise of due deference, the agency cannot read a requirement into a regulation that would not be plainly apparent to its readers. Regulations must be clear enough to enable the regulated community to understand what standard it will be required to meet. Youth Consultation Serv., Inc. v. Dep't of Educ., EDU 7893-03, Initial Decision (September 2, 2004), aff'd, Comm'r (October 13, 2004) <http://lawlibrary.rutgers.edu/oal/search.html>.[5] It is well established that when an agency requirement constitutes a rule, it must comply with the rulemaking

[5] The administrative law judge in Youth Consultation noted that changes to the regulation that post-dated the filing of the petition before him now made the regulatory intent more clear. But the present dispute, which concerns five separate private schools, makes it readily apparent that many private schools for the disabled rightly remain unable to discern what is expected of them by the agency.

procedures contained in the Act. I CONCLUDE that the Department has penalized these schools for violating what it perceives to be a rule of general application, and one that "is intended to be applied generally and uniformly to all similarly situated persons." N.J.S.A. 52:14B-2(e); Metromedia v. Div. of Taxation, 97 N.J. 313, 331 (1984). If the Department requires that private schools notify sending districts when year-to-date figures exceed 10 percent of the tentative rate, rather than only when they intend to actually "propose" a tuition increase, it needed to have said so, in unambiguous regulatory language adopted in accordance with the requirements of the Administrative Procedure Act, N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15.[6]

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, the action of the Department of Education limiting the tuition increase for the 2008–2009 school year for the five petitioning private schools to 10 percent is REVERSED. It is ORDERED that summary decision is granted as follows:

1. In favor of Celebrate the Children, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 24.65 percent for the 2008–2009 school year.

2. In favor of Innovative Education Programs, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 11.61 percent for the 2008–2009 school year for its Saybrook program and 29.43 percent for its Krumbiegel program.

3. In favor of Creative Achievement Academy, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 15.81 percent for the 2008–2009 school year.

4. In favor of Willowglen Academy, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 12.93 percent for the 2008–2009 school year.

[6] The Department had clarified the notice requirements as early as June 2008 in written guidance to private schools, but obviously realized that its interpretation of the regulation remained unclear. It thus added the language cited by petitioners in the Financial Accounting clarification document issued in August 2010. In any event, none of these informal agency rule clarifications have the authority of a binding regulation.

5. In favor of The Children's Therapy Center, approving its request for an increase in tuition of 15.27 percent for the 2008–2009 school year.

The Department's motion for summary decision is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. SYNOPSIS

In March 2011, the petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her minor child, I.N., contending that the family did in fact live in Lakehurst. A hearing in the matter was scheduled for July 8, 2011 at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL). Petitioner received appropriate notice of the hearing, but failed to appear and provided no explanation for her nonappearance. Having received no explanation from the petitioner for her non-appearance, the OAL returned the file to the Commissioner.

There being no explanation filed, the Commissioner ordered I.N. disenrolled from respondent's school district and dismissed the petition.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The notice from the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), memorializing the petitioner's failure to appear at the July 8, 2011 OAL hearing, and the record of this matter – including a copy of the notification sent to the parties by the OAL on May 18, 2011, informing them that the hearing in this matter would be held on July 8, 2011 – have been reviewed. It is noted that the OAL hearing notice was sent to the address petitioner entered on her petition.

The above referenced July 14, 2011 notice from the OAL to the parties 1) recited that petitioner had failed to appear at the July 8, 2011 hearing, 2) explained that the matter would be transmitted back to the Department of Education, and 3) advised petitioner that if she desired to offer an explanation for her failure to appear, it would be necessary to submit same in writing to the Commissioner within thirteen days.

The thirteen day period has expired and petitioner has offered no explanation for her nonappearance on July 8, 2011. Accordingly, the petition is dismissed and petitioner's minor child is disenrolled from respondent's school district. As respondent filed no counterclaim, no tuition is due.

The record of this matter, the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, a document executed by petitioners – entitled "Release" – and a June 28, 2011 resolution of the respondent board of education approving a settlement of the instant matter have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the settlement terms with the following comment. Correspondence in the record indicates that certain actions referenced in the Release may have already taken place, and have therefore preceded consideration of the settlement by the Commissioner of Education. The parties are reminded that a settlement of litigation before the Commissioner is not binding until the Commissioner approves same.

Accordingly, the Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, providing that the parties have either successfully implemented the settlement terms or have agreed upon mutually satisfactory alternate dates for the effectuation of same. Assuming the foregoing, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the settlement.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioners demanded monetary compensation for transportation costs for a period of time which the respondent district did not provide busing. The case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") from the New Jersey State

[1] Michelle Schott was initially assigned to this matter.

Department of Education on May 28, 2010, for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to –13. Hearings were scheduled for September 15 and November 16, 2010. Prior to the November hearing date respondent's former counsel Michelle Schott and the petitioner submitted a joint request for an adjournment. A telephone status conference was scheduled for December 9, 2010. During the pendency of the conference the parties reached a tentative settlement subject to Board approval. The next Board meeting was to be held on or about December 14, 2010. On December 16, 2010 the undersigned scheduled a status conference for January 12, 2011. On that date my secretary was advised that Mrs. Schott was no longer with the firm. My secretary inquired on several occasions regarding the Board's approval of the settlement to no avail.

May 20, 2011 a paralegal from respondent's firm contacted the OAL to provide two phone numbers for petitioners. A detailed message was left on petitioner's voicemail. No one responded. The matter was scheduled for hearing on June 29, 2011 which was adjourned to allow counsel time to submit a copy of the Board Resolution. The hearing was rescheduled for July 15, 2011. On July 14, 2011 respondent's counsel submitted a copy of the Board Resolution, which is attached hereto for reference.

I CONCLUDE that this matter is no longer a contested case before the Office of Administrative Law. It is ORDERED that this matter be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

SYNOPSIS

Pro-se petitioner – formerly a Teacher of the Handicapped, whose teaching certificate was revoked by consent in 2007 after the New Jersey State Board of Examiners (Board of Examiners) issued an Order to Show Cause following petitioner's failure of two drug tests in which he tested positive for cocaine – appealed the revocation of his certificate. Respondent agreed in 2009 to allow petitioner, who had presented evidence of rehabilitation related to his drug problem, to apply for certification after revocation on condition that he meet current certification requirements at the time of his application. Subsequently, petitioner filed the instant petition which sought to overturn the 2007 revocation because in order to be reinstated under the present regulatory scheme, he would need to return to school to meet the current the requirements for certification as a teacher of students with disabilities.

The ALJ found that petitioner's appeal was not timely filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.20(a), which requires that a motion to reconsider a Board of Examiner's decision must be filed no later than 15 days from the mailing date of the decision, which in this case was in June 2007. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board of Examiner's motion for summary decision and dismissed the petition.

The Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the OAL as the final decision in this matter, finding that the time within which petitioner could have applied for reconsideration of the 2007 revocation has expired, and that petitioner may not be recertified unless he satisfies the current requirements for a teacher of students with disabilities endorsement. Accordingly, the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

Petitioner,
v.
NEW JERSEY STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,
Respondent.

Diana Sierotowicz, Deputy Attorney General (Paula T. Dow, Attorney General of New Jersey, attorney)

Record Closed: July 19, 2011 Decided: July 22, 2011

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner appealed respondent's action accepting his voluntary surrender of his Teacher of the Handicapped certificate.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was transmitted to the OAL and filed January 25, 2011, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. The respondent filed a Motion for Summary Decision on June 29, 2011. Petitioner's response was received on July 19, 2011, and the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Petitioner was issued a Teacher of the Handicapped (TOH) certificate in October 1993. In October 2004, the Examiners issued an Order to Show Cause why petitioner's TOH certificate should not be suspended or revoked after he failed two drug tests on June 1, 2004, testing positive for cocaine.

Ultimately, petitioner signed an affidavit and consent order stating he would surrender his TOH certificate, that he consented to its revocation, and that he used cocaine which produced positive drug test results. He was represented by counsel at the time.

On May 3, 2007, the Examiners voted to accept petitioner's voluntary surrender of his TOH certificate. The Order stated that the voluntary surrender had the force and effect of a revocation.

Subsequently, after completing a drug program, petitioner wrote a letter to the Commissioner requesting reinstatement of his TOH certificate. By letter dated September 8, 2008, the Commissioner responded, explaining that current regulations did not permit reinstatement of a certificate after its revocation, but that petitioner could file an application for certification after revocation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.10. The Commissioner's letter also reminded petitioner that he must meet all criteria for the issuance of a certificate in effect at the time of his application.

Petitioner then filed an application for certification after revocation, which was granted by the Examiners at its meeting on September 17, 2009. The Examiners voted to allow petitioner to apply for certification after revocation because he presented evidence of rehabilitation related to his drug problem.

Thereafter, petitioner continued to send letters to the Examiners objecting to the condition that he had to reapply for certification and meet current requirements, because the requirements differed from when he received his standard TOH certificate in 1993. The Examiners considered the petitioner's motion for reconsideration at its April 29, 2010, meeting, but ruled that the regulations require an applicant to meet current certification requirements at the time of application after revocation.

On June 10, 2010, the Examiners issued a written decision denying petitioner's motion for reconsideration, stating "the Board has no authority to waive its regulations" and therefore, petitioner "must satisfy all criteria in effect at the time of [his] new application."

Following the Examiners' denial of his motion for reconsideration, petitioner filed a Petition of Appeal on July 14, 2010, and an Amended Petition of Appeal on September 22, 2010. The petition of appeal challenges the 2007 revocation of his Teacher of the Handicapped certificate.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Summary decision in the Office of Administrative Law is controlled by the provisions of N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), which states, in pertinent part:

> (b) The motion for summary decision shall be served with briefs and with or without supporting affidavits. The decision sought may be rendered if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law.

This case is complicated by the fact that petitioner has filed his petition pro se; as a result, the petition is not artfully drawn. But a careful reading of the petition demonstrates that its purpose is to challenge the Board of Examiners' June 12, 2007, Order accepting his voluntary surrender of his TOH certificate. Petitioner seeks to overturn the revocation because in order to be reinstated under the present regulatory scheme, he will have to meet the requirements necessary to obtain a new certification as a teacher of students with disabilities, a certification that did not exist when he was initially certified in 1993. According to petitioner's numerous submissions, in order to obtain that certificate, he will have to return to school for a period in excess of two years. At age fifty-four, he wishes to avoid this lengthy and arduous process, and has therefore moved to set aside his voluntary surrender.

The problem with petitioner's argument is that his opportunity to seek reversal of the Board of Examiners' action has long since passed. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.20(a) provides as follows:

> (a) Any party may file with the Board of Examiners and serve on all other parties a motion to reconsider the Board of Examiners' decision. The party shall file the motion no later than 15 days from the mailing date of the decision.

Pursuant to the regulation, petitioner had until June 27, 2007, to file his petition. He missed that deadline by in excess of three years. He is well out of time to move for reconsideration and, accordingly, the petition must be DISMISSED. The Board's motion for summary decision must be GRANTED.

ORDER

I ORDER that the Board of Examiners' motion for summary decision be GRANTED.

I ORDER that the petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Petitioner's Response to Respondent's Motion for Summary Decision

JAMIE RUDD,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – formerly a non-tenured social worker in respondent's district – received notice on May 13, 2010 that she would be terminated from her employment as part of a reduction in force (RIF) at the end of the 2009-2010 school year. She challenged the Board's determination not to reemploy her when she responded to a job posting for two social worker positions in July 2010. Petitioner was interviewed for these vacancies, but was notified during a meeting with the district superintendent on August 12, 2010 that she would not be offered reemployment because of concerns about her performance. At no point did petitioner request a written statement of reasons for her termination pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 or an informal appearance before the Board as authorized under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.6. She filed her petition of appeal on October 14, 2010. The respondent Board contended that the petition must be dismissed as untimely.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the petitioner was not fully aware of the information forming the basis of her appeal at the time of the May 13, 2010 notification letter, because the letter did not mention any substantive cause for her non-renewal; consequently, petitioner could not have known that her non-renewal was performance-based until she was told so by the superintendent on August 12, 2010, and therefore her appeal was timely; petitioner, however, failed to seek a written statement of reasons clarifying the basis for her non-renewal and did not seek an informal appearance before the Board, but rather filed her appeal solely based upon the statements of the superintendent during her meeting on August 12, 2010 – which statements cannot be considered the reasons for the Board's action, since the superintendent is not synonymous with the board of education; accordingly, since petitioner cannot establish the reason for the Board's action, she cannot prove that the action was arbitrary and capricious. The ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petition should be dismissed, but noted that there were two different employment decisions made by the Board, constituting two separate Board actions; the instant petition was timely pursuant to the second Board action, but must fail because petitioner did not allege any violation of constitutional or legislatively-conferred rights and the Board was well within its rights to decline to rehire petitioner based upon performance concerns. Accordingly, the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 597-10/10

JAMIE RUDD,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Board's reply thereto.

The petitioner's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of her submissions at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously found that the petition should be dismissed. The petitioner contends that her petition of appeal was timely filed and that she has set forth a valid cause of action. The petitioner maintains that her performance was the real reason that the Board did not renew her, and as a result the Board acted in bad faith when it issued the non-renewal letter. Additionally, the petitioner points out that she had no reason to request a statement of reasons or a Donaldson hearing because she relied on the representations made in the May 13, 2010 non-renewal letter. Petitioner also takes exception to the ALJ's determination that she should have requested a statement of reasons in August 2010, following her meeting with the superintendant. Finally, the petitioner takes exception to the ALJ's determination that the superintendent and the Board of Education are not synonymous.

In reply, the Board urges the adoption of the Initial Decision asserting that the ALJ properly determined that the petition should be dismissed. The Board's exceptions are generally a replication of its motion for summary decision and other papers filed below in which it argued that the Board's decision not to renew the petitioner was based on a valid reduction in force, and the Board's decision not to re-employ the petitioner was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. In its exceptions, the Board emphasizes that when challenging a non-reemployment decision, a non-tenured staff member must plead that the adverse action is in violation of a constitutional or some legislatively created right in order to avoid dismissal, which petitioner has not done in this case.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's determination that the instant petition of appeal should be dismissed. The Commissioner further finds, however, that the ALJ failed to properly articulate the distinction between the two different employment decisions made by the Board. In order to adequately evaluate the timeliness of the petition and whether the petitioner's claims should survive summary decision, it is important to recognize that the Board's decision not to renew the petitioner for the 2010-2011 school year was the first employment decision, and the Board's subsequent decision not to rehire the petitioner was a separate Board action.

It is undisputed that on May 13, 2010, petitioner – a non-tenured social worker – was notified that she would not be renewed for the 2010-2011 school year. [1] The notification letter was the general non-renewal letter that was sent to over 200 employees stating that the non-tenured professional staff members would not be renewed for the 2010-2011 school year due to reasons of economy and budgetary considerations. After the petitioner received the letter she did not request a statement of reasons pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 or a Donaldson hearing under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1.

[1] The facts related to the timeline of events are not in dispute.

In July 2010, petitioner discovered that the Board posted positions for social workers, and she informed the Board that she was ready to assume one of those positions. On August 9, 2010, the petitioner met with the Director of Special Education and other supervisors about the available social worker positions. On August 12, 2010, the petitioner attended a meeting with the superintendent during which she was informed that she would not be re-employed based on certain performance issues, and her failure to demonstrate significant improvement during her three years with the district.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), a petition must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." With respect to petitioner's non-renewal, the Commissioner finds that the 90-day statute of limitation period began to run on May 13, 2010 when the petitioner received notice that she would not be renewed for the 2010-2011 school year. See, Middletown Education Assoc. on Behalf of Meredith McGee and Nicole Sansone v. Board of Educ. of the Township of Middletown, Monmouth County, Commissioner Decision No. 328-07, decided August 16, 2007. The Commissioner is not persuaded by the exceptions filed by the petitioner in which she argues that despite having notice of the non-renewal in May 2010, it was the meeting in August 2010 with the superintendant that triggered the 90-day limitations period because that is when she learned that the Board believed she had performance issues. After the petitioner received the May 13, 2010 non-renewal letter, she did not avail herself of her statutory right to request a statement of reasons pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 or a Donaldson hearing before the Board under N.J.S.A. 18A:27-4.1 – during which she could have challenged the validity of the reduction in force or the budgetary considerations, and she could have attempted to convince the members of the board to offer her reemployment. Instead, the petitioner waited until October 14, 2010 to file the instant petition of appeal challenging the validity of her non-renewal. Therefore, because the challenge to her non-renewal was filed outside the 90-day limitation period set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), the Commissioner finds that the petitioner's claim is time barred.

To the extent the petition of appeal challenges the Board's decision not to rehire the petitioner, that claim is not untimely under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) because the petitioner did not receive notice of the Board's decision until she met with the superintendent on August 12, 2010. Notwithstanding the timeliness of that challenge, the Commissioner fully recognizes that a district board has virtually unlimited discretion in terminating or reemploying non-tenured staff members. Dore v. Bedminster Twp. Bd. of Ed., 185 N.J. Super. 447 (App. Div. 1982) "[A]bsent constitutional constraints or legislation affecting the tenure rights of teachers, local boards of education have an almost complete right to terminate the services of a teacher who has no tenure and is regarded as undesirable by the local board." Id. at 456. As such, where a non-tenured teacher challenges a district board's decision to terminate her employment on the grounds that the reasons provided by the board are not supported by the facts, she is entitled to litigate that question only if the facts she alleges, if true, would constitute a violation of constitutional or legislatively-conferred rights. Guerriero v. Board of Education of the Borough of Glen Rock, decided by the State Board of Education February 5, 1986, aff'd. Docket #A-3316-85T6 (App. Div. 1986).

In this case, the petitioner has not alleged a constitutional or legislatively-conferred right, but rather she purely argues that the Board did not rehire her for one of the available social worker positions based upon alleged performance issues. The Board was well within its rights to decline to rehire the petitioner based upon performance concerns, and as such – in the absence of the existence of any constitutional or legislatively-conferred right – the Board's decision was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the Board is entitled to summary decision and the petition is dismissed.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 12796-10
AGENCY DKT. NO. 597-10/10

JAMIE RUDD,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF VINELAND, CUMBERLAND COUNTY.

William F. Koy, Esq., for petitioner

Jennifer M. Herrmann, Esq., for respondent (Methfessel & Werbel, attorneys)

Record Closed: July 6, 2011 Decided: July 19, 2011

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Respondent moves for Summary Decision seeking dismissal of the petition.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the OAL on November 23, 2010, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to 15 and 14F-1 to 13. Respondent filed a Motion for Summary Decision seeking dismissal of petitioner's complaint. Oral argument was held on May 26, 2011, and the record remained open until July 6, 2011, for submission of final briefs.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

For purposes of respondent's Motion for Summary Decision, the following facts are undisputed. Petitioner was employed as a Social Worker with the Vineland Public School Child Study Team from September 1, 2007, through June 30, 2010. On May 13, 2010, respondent's Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Maryann Banks, forwarded to petitioner a letter which stated as follows:

> I regret to inform you that in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:27-10 and formal action taken by the Board of Education meeting on May 12, 2010, you as a non-tenured professional staff member will not be offered employment for the 2010-2011 school year. This action is based upon the projected return of tenured teachers from leave of absence, reduction in number of pupils, reasons of economy, budgetary considerations, change in the administrative or supervisory organization of the district, restructuring of program components, current limited contract and/or other good cause. This action is not based upon your performance. In the event any or all of these factors change, including but not limited to budgetary considerations, the Board of Education may then, but is not obligated to offer you employment for the 2010-2011 school year. Please be advised that you will continue to keep your benefits through August 31, 2010. On behalf of the Vineland Board of Education, I would like to thank you for your services to the children and hope, but cannot guarantee, that you will be re-employed with us at some future time.

This letter was one of many sent out by the Superintendent as part of a proposed reduction in force.

On July 1, 2010, petitioner saw a job posting stating that two social work positions with the Board of Education were available. Petitioner promptly advised respondent that she was ready, will and able to assume one of those positions.

On August 9, 2010, petitioner met with the Director of Special Education, Ruth Ann Polof, and three other special education supervisors about the social worker position. Petitioner was surprised to learn that this meeting was considered to be an "interview."

On August 12, 2010, petitioner met with Superintendent Banks. At that time, Banks advised petitioner that, "You are an excellent social worker but a lousy (child study) team member." Dr. Banks advised that Polof told her petitioner had not made significant improvement over three years. She then declined to rehire petitioner.

At no time did petitioner seek a statement of reasons pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 or an informal appearance before the Board of Education as authorized under N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.6. Instead, on October 14, 2010, she forwarded a petition of appeal to the Commissioner. Respondent now asserts that said petition is time barred.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The Board based its motion on the provisions of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). That regulation states:

> (i) The petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.

The case turns upon which of two dates triggered the 90-day appeal period. The first date is May 13, 2010, the date petitioner was notified she would not be renewed because of an anticipated reduction in force. The second date is August 12, 2010, the date of petitioner's meeting with Superintendent Banks, when she learned that her non-renewal was performance based.

The commencement of the 90-day appeal period is controlled by two cases. The first case is Eisenberg v. Board of Education of the Borough of Fort Lee, State Board of Education, November 5, 2003. In that case, the petitioner received notice of non-renewal on April 3, 2001. He requested a statement of reasons and was afforded an informal appearance before the Board of Education on July 2, 2001. Several days after the July 2 meeting, petitioner received additional information which caused him to believe that the statement of reasons provided to him had been fallacious. Petitioner then filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner on September 29, 2001.

Eisenberg's petition was referred to the Office of Administrative Law for hearing. The Board moved before the ALJ to dismiss based upon the 90-day limitation set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3. The ALJ denied the motion. The Commissioner reversed, finding that the April 3 notice triggered the 90-day period.

The State Board of Education reversed the Commissioner's decision, citing Kaprow v. Board of Educ. of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572 (1993), the State Board held that:

> The 90-day period for filing a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education commences when a petitioner learns of facts that would enable him to file a timely claim. Kaprow v. Board of Educ. Of Berkeley Tp., 131 N.J. 572 (1993). In Burd v. New Jersey Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291 (1988), cited by the Court in Kaprow, the Court reiterated that the limitations period for commencing an action begins to run when "plaintiff learns, or reasonably should learn, the existence of that state of facts which may equate in law with a cause of action." As the Court explained in Kaprow, supra, at 587:
>
> > A limitations period has two purposes. The first is to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims. Ochs. V. Federal Ins. Co., 90 N.J. 108, 112, 447 A.2d 163 (1982). The second purpose is "to penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose'" by giving security and > stability to human affairs. Ibid. (quoting Farrell v. Votator Div., 62 N.J. 111, 115, 299 A.2d 394 (1973)).

> > When a plaintiff knows or has reason to know that he has a cause of action against an identifiable defendant and voluntarily sleeps on his rights so long as to permit the customary period of limitations to expire, the pertinent considerations of individual justice as well as the broader considerations of repose, coincide to bar his action. [Farrell, supra, 62 N.J. at 115, 299 A.2d 394.]
>
> Adequate notice under N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2 should accommodate both parties. That is, the notice requirement should effectuate concerns for individual justice by not triggering the limitations period until the tenured teachers have been alerted to the existence of facts that may equate in law with a post-RIF cause of action. See Burd v. New Jersey Tel. Co., 76 N.J. 284, 291, 386 A.2d 1310 (1978). At the same time, it should further considerations of repose by establishing an objective event to trigger the limitations period in order "to enable the proper and efficient administration of the affairs of government." Borough of Park Ridge v. Salimone, 21 N.J. 28, 48 120 A.2d 721 (1956).

Therefore, Eisenberg stands for the proposition that the 90-day filing period commences when the petitioner learned of facts that would enable her to file a timely claim.

The holding in Eisenberg was refined in Charapova v. Board of Education of the Township of Edison, Middle County, EDU 6722-2005 WL 4794046 (N.J. Admin. 2007). On April 18, 2005, the Edison Board of Education adopted a resolution non-renewing the contracts of 177 non-tenured teachers. As occurred in the case at bar, the Board issued a blanket notice to each teacher advising of the non-renewal. Charapova received her notice on April 19, 2005.

Subsequent to the passage of the new budget in May 2005, Charapova learned that the Board of Education had begun rehiring some of the riffed personnel. When she was not rehired, Charapova concluded that the failure of the Board to re-employ her must have been the result of discrimination. Consequently, on August 5, 2005, she filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner.

The State Board distinguished Charapova, stating:

> In Eisenberg, the information which alerted the petitioner to the existence of an allegation of intentional wrongdoing on the part of the Board in effectuating his non-renewal – i.e., his positive performance evaluations were missing from his personnel file, and the school's former principal had told another teacher that he had received instructions from the superintendent to make sure that he "papered" the petitioner's personnel file to justify the decision not to renew his employment – was not known by him until several months after he received his nonrenewal letter. In concluding that the petitioner had filed his position in a timely manner, the State Board found that he could not have made the same allegations prior to his becoming aware of such information.
>
> In the matter now before us, the petitioner challenges the fact that "[her] contract ha[d] not been renewed," Petition of Appeal, at 2, and she received notice of such action by the Board in the April 19, 2005 letter. The record reveals that the petitioner was fully aware of information which she believed demonstrated age and national origin discrimination at the time she received that letter.
>
> [Emphasis added.]

Therefore, the dividing line between Eisenberg and Charapova is established. If the petitioner was fully aware of the information forming the basis of her appeal at the time of the initial notification, then that letter triggers the 90-day period. Conversely, if the petitioner was not fully aware of the information forming the basis of appeal at the time of initial notification, then 90-day appeal period is tolled.

In the present case, the Board cannot argue that petitioner was aware of the substantive cause for her non-renewal. The May 13, 2010, notification letter specifically states: "his action is not based upon your performance."(Emphasis added.)

Consequently, petitioner could not have known that her non-renewal was performance based until she was told so by Superintendent Banks on August 12, 2010. Therefore, the 90-day period of appeal must be deemed tolled until August 12, 2010, and the petitioner's appeal is therefore timely. The Board cannot profit from its own misstatement.

But the analysis cannot end there. The gravamen of petitioner's appeal is that, "The actions of the respondent are arbitrary and capricious in its termination of petitioner. That assertion necessarily connotes that the reason or reasons for respondent's action are known.

The petition bases its assertion of arbitrary and capricious conduct upon the statements of Superintendent Banks during the August 12, 2010, interview. The problem with petitioner's argument is that Superintendent Banks is not the respondent in this action. The respondent designated in the caption is the Vineland Board of Education. It is well settled that the Superintendent and the Board of Education are not synonymous. To the contrary, the Superintendent of Schools is an employee of the Board of Education. See N.J.S.A. 18A:17-15.

The statutory/regulatory scheme sets forth a specific procedure for ascertaining the reasons why a Board of Education terminates a teaching staff member. N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2 states:

> Any teaching staff member receiving notice that a teaching contract for the succeeding school year will not be offered may, within 15 days thereafter, request in writing a statement of the reasons for such nonemployment which > shall be given to the teaching staff member in writing within 30 days after the receipt of such request.

Once a non-tenured teaching staff member has received the written statement of reasons, N.J.A.C. 6A:32-4.6 provides her with a specified procedure to appear before the Board of Education to dispute those reasons. At the conclusion of that appearance, the Board is required to take action as follows:

> (i) Within three days following the informal appearance, the district board of education shall notify the affected teaching staff member, in writing, of its final determination. The board may delegate such notification to its chief school administrator or board secretary.

If the Board declines to rehire the teacher, that final determination constitutes a ratification of the statement of reasons. In short, at that point in time, the statement of reasons can be formally attributed to the Board. If the non-tenured teaching staff member believes the reasons to be arbitrary and capricious, she can appeal to the Commissioner.

In this case, it is undisputed that after she learned that her non-renewal was performance based on August 12, 2010, petitioner failed to seek a written statement of reasons clarifying the basis for her non-renewal, an action she was required to take within fifteen days, a time limit that expired on August 27, 2010. She likewise failed to seek an informal appearance before the Board of Education. She filed her petitioner solely in reliance upon the statements of Superintendent Banks.

As stated above, Superintendent Banks and the Board of Education are not synonymous. The petitioner cannot now assert that the action of the Board was arbitrary and capricious because she has no basis to establish the reasons for the Board's action. Since she cannot establish the reason for the Board's action, she cannot prove that the Board's action was arbitrary and capricious.

Consequently, petitioner's appeal fails because she has failed to set forth a cause of action upon which relief can be granted.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:27-3.2, petitioner had fifteen days to request a written statement of reasons. That fifteen day period commenced on August 12, 2010, when she learned that the reason set forth in the May 13, 2010, notice were inaccurate. Consequently, her time period to establish those reasons is now time barred. Since petitioner cannot establish reasons for the Board's actions, she cannot demonstrate that those reaons were arbitrary and capricious. Consequently, her petitioner must be DISMISSED for failure to set forth a cause of action upon which relief can be granted.

ORDER

I ORDER that respondent's Motion for summary decision be GRANTED.

I ORDER that the petition of appeal be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Anthony Coluccio, New Jersey State Department of Corrections, Edna Mahon Correctional Facility for Women, Agency Dkt. No. 158-7/09.

Dear Counsel,

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with Anthony Coluccio's Motion for Reconsideration of the Acting Commissioner's July 5, 2011 decision finding Mr. Coluccio guilty of unbecoming conduct and dismissing him from his tenured position with the Department of Corrections, along with Mr. Coluccio's exceptions to the Initial Decision and the Department's reply thereto.[1]

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2., a motion for reconsideration shall be considered based upon the following:

i. claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute "mistake" for purposes of this section;

[1] Mr. Coluccio was afforded an opportunity to file exceptions to the Initial Decision after the Acting Commissioner's July 5, 2011 decision was issued in this matter because Mr. Coluccio's counsel at the time claimed that he never received a copy of the Initial Decision and as a result was not given an opportunity to timely file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

ii. newly discovered evidence likely to alter the outcome of a matter, where such evidence could not have been previously discovered by due diligence;
iii. newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party, where such misrepresentation could not have been previously known; or
iv. reversal of a prior judgment on which the present matter is based.

Upon full review and consideration of the parties' submissions, I find that Mr. Coluccio has failed to satisfy any of the requisites for granting such relief specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2. Further, despite Mr. Coluccio's contentions to the contrary, I find no basis in the record – which includes transcripts of four days of hearing – to reject either the ALJ's recitations of testimony or her determinations of witness credibility. The ALJ had the opportunity to assess the credibility of the various witnesses who appeared before her and made findings of fact based upon their testimony. Insofar as his opinion on these issues is a credibility determination, the Commissioner may not disturb it unless a review of the record discloses that it is arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10c; D.L. and Z.Y., on behalf of minor children, T.L. and K.L. v. Board of Education of the Princeton Regional School District, 366 N.J. Super. 269, 273 (App. Div. 2004). I also find that the ALJ's fact-finding analysis and conclusions as to the truth of the Department's allegations and the characterization of Mr. Coluccio's behavior and unbecoming conduct to be fully supported by the record and consistent with applicable law.

Accordingly, the Motion for Reconsideration is hereby DENIED.[2]

Christopher D. Cerf

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
OF EDITH CRAFT, SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF THE TOWNSHIP OF FRANKLIN,	:	DECISION
SOMERSET COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning Board filed tenure charges of conduct unbecoming and other just cause against respondent, a tenured special education teacher who has been employed in the district since 2004. The charges were based upon a single incident in November 2010 during which respondent slapped a handicapped student across his face with an open hand. Respondent contends that the slap was a reflexive action which occurred after the student slapped her, that she was remorseful and felt that she did not handle the situation correctly, and that her teaching record prior to this single incident was unblemished. The petitioning Board sought revocation of respondent's tenure and termination of her employment.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: on November 1, 2010, a special education student in respondent's class was agitated and acting out throughout the morning, kicking and hitting at another student and at respondent despite efforts to redirect him; the child finally slapped respondent in the face; respondent then struck the student after he struck her; respondent's action was reflexive after she was hit in the face; respondent was not punishing the child for any misbehavior and was immediately remorseful for her conduct; while respondent's conduct was not acceptable behavior for a teacher, there was evidence of provocation in the form of repeated slaps from the student; respondent did not inflict corporal punishment on the student, and he was not injured or visibly upset by the incident. However, the evidence supports the charges against respondent, and she did engage in conduct unbecoming a teacher. Accordingly, the ALJ determined that under the circumstances, dismissal from employment would be excessive and the appropriate penalty for respondent's unbecoming conduct is the loss of employment and adjustment increases for one year as well as the forfeiture of the 120 days of pay withheld following the certification of tenure charges. The ALJ ordered the Board to reinstate petitioner to her tenured position.

Upon independent review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct, but modified the penalty to impress upon respondent the seriousness of her errors in judgment displayed in this matter. Accordingly, respondent was reinstated, but will be suspended for an additional four months without pay in addition to the penalty recommended by the ALJ.

OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1751-11
AGENCY DKT NO. 24-2/11

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
OF EDITH CRAFT, SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
OF THE TOWNSHIP OF FRANKLIN,	:	DECISION
SOMERSET COUNTY.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the respondent and the Board of Education (Board).

This case involves tenure charges brought by the Board against the respondent Edith Craft, a special education teacher in the Franklin Township School District. The Board charged the respondent with unbecoming conduct based on one incident during which the respondent slapped a third-grade student in the face. The Administrative Law Judge ("ALJ") found that the respondent was guilty of unbecoming conduct, and recommended that the respondent receive a 120 day suspension without pay and lose one year's salary increment.

The respondent takes exception to the ALJ's determination that the appropriate penalty is the loss of one year's increment, and the loss of 120 days' salary. Respondent maintains that the penalty recommended by the ALJ is excessive and that a lesser penalty is appropriate in light of the relevant case law. In her exceptions, respondent cites cases where she believes the teacher's conduct was more egregious yet they suffered lesser penalties. The respondent also contends that her penalty should be modified to take into account the reflexive nature of her action, the student's provocation, the fact that the student was not harmed, the respondent's remorse, and her unblemished teaching record.

In its exceptions, the Board urges the Commissioner to adopt the ALJ's determination that the respondent engaged in conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member, but takes exception to the penalty recommended by the ALJ. The Board maintains that the respondent's unbecoming conduct warrants the dismissal of respondent from her tenured teaching position. The Board takes exception to the ALJ's determination that the respondent's act of slapping the student was "reflexive" after the student had slapped her, pointing out the testimony of Ms. Wilson, a staff member who observed the conduct. Mr. Wilson testified that after the respondent slapped the student, she stated to him "Now you know how that feels," which the Board contends suggests more than an unthinking reaction.

The Board also argues that the ALJ erroneously based her recommendation on the fact that there was provocation by the student. In its exceptions, the Board stresses that the testimonial and documentary evidence established that although the student had repeatedly slapped the respondent from the start of the school day, there was a cooling off period where the student was behaving before he again slapped the respondent – at which time she slapped him back. As a result, the Board argues that the recommended penalty should be modified to provide for termination of respondent's employment with the Franklin Township School District.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, which included the transcript of the hearing conducted at the OAL on May 9, 2011, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ that the Board has established that respondent is guilty of unbecoming conduct. The Commissioner finds the ALJ's conclusions as to the truth of the Board's allegations and the characterization of respondent's behavior as unbecoming conduct to be fully supported by the record and consistent with applicable law. Certainly under circumstances where a teacher slaps a student in the face, when force was not necessary under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1(1)-(4)[1], there is very little scrutiny required to conclude that the teacher's inexcusable behavior amounts to unbecoming conduct.

The more complex aspect of this case includes the analysis required to determine the appropriate penalty to be imposed on the respondent. The Commissioner is mindful that factors to be taken into account in making a penalty determination include the nature and circumstances of the incidents or charges, any evidence as to provocation, the teacher's prior record and present attitude, the effect of such conduct on the maintenance of discipline among the students and staff, and the likelihood of such behavior recurring. In re Hearing of Ostergren, Franklin School District, 1966 S.L.D. 185; In re Hearing of Kittell, Little Silver School District, 1972 S.L.D. 535, 541; In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967). It is also well recognized that by virtue of the unique position they occupy, educators must be held to an enhanced standard of behavior.

The Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ that based on all of the circumstances and considerations existing in this matter, removal of respondent from her tenured position is an unduly harsh penalty. Notably, there is no indication that her conduct was "premeditated, cruel or vicious, or done with the intent to punish." See, In re Fulcomer, supra, 93 N.J. Super. at 421. Additional mitigating factors that go against dismissal include the fact that this was a single isolated incident; there is no evidence that the respondent has ever been the subject of any discipline during her seven years with the district; the evidence presented established that the student first hit the respondent and she reacted to that action; and the student was not injured. Further, despite her lapse in judgment, the evidence does not establish that the respondent is unfit to discharge the duties and functions of her position as a teacher. The respondent has acknowledged that she did not handle the situation properly and is remorseful for her behavior.

[1] Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, reasonable force may only be used when "necessary: (1) to quell a disturbance, threatening physical injury to others; (2) to obtain possession of weapons or other dangerous objects upon the person or within the control of a pupil; (3) for the purpose of self-defense; and (4) for the protection or persons or property.

Although dismissal in this case is not warranted for the reasons discussed above, the Commissioner recognizes that the charges in this matter are serious in nature, and finds that the penalty recommended by the ALJ must be modified to reflect the fact that the inexcusable use of physical force in the school environment will not be tolerated. [2] Moreover, the Commissioner finds the respondent's behavior particularly troubling under the circumstances in this case because her actions essentially communicated to an eight-year-old special education student – with documented behavioral problems – that hitting is an appropriate response to frustration. It is without question "that teachers carry a heavy responsibility by their actions and comments in setting examples for the pupils with whom they have contact." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Blasko, School District of the Township of Cherry Hill, 1980 S.L.D. 987, 1003. Respondent's intolerable conduct and unprofessional behavior validated the very impulses and violence that the student has difficulty controlling. That type of negative reinforcement can serve to thwart any progress made by the teaching staff in their ongoing effort to help the student conquer the behavior difficulties that he struggles with on a daily basis.

Therefore, the Commissioner finds and concludes that the loss of respondent's employment and adjustment increments for 2011-2012 and the 120 days salary withheld

[2] There are a series of cases which are routinely cited by litigants involving incidents of physical contact between a teacher and a student. Although the penalties given in those cases can offer some insight into appropriate penalties to be imposed in future matters, it is important to recognize that cases involving physical force are extremely fact sensitive and require a case-by-case analysis. Moreover, conduct on the part of teaching staff members that occurred several decades ago may not be consistent with the type of behavior that will be tolerated in this day and age. The adherence to precedents in administrative proceedings is "subject to the basic notion that experience is a teacher and not a jailer." In re Masiello, 25 N.J. 590, 598-599 (1958) (citations omitted).

pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 following the certification of tenure charges, plus an additional four months suspension without pay is a sufficient penalty to impress upon respondent the seriousness of her errors in judgment displayed in this matter. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL – as modified with respect to the penalty – is adopted as final decision in this matter.

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 1751-11
AGENCY DKT. NO. 24-2/11

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF EDITH CRAFT, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF FRANKLIN, SOMERSET COUNTY.

John E. Collins, Esq., for petitioner Franklin Township School District (Parker McCay, attorneys)

Arnold M. Mellk, Esq., for respondent Edith Craft (Wills, O'Neill and Mellk, attorneys)

Record Closed: June 8, 2011 Decided: July 21, 2011

BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

Respondent Edith Craft was employed by petitioner school district Franklin Township Board of Education (Board) as a special education teacher under tenure, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. On January 25, 2011, the Board certified charges of unbecoming conduct and other just cause against respondent to the Commissioner of Education (Commissioner) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 6-11. Respondent filed an answer denying the allegations on February 15, 2011. On February 16, 2011, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on February 17, 2011. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The hearing was held on May 9, 2011. At the request of counsel, the record remained open for the receipt of briefs by May 27, 2011, and for reply briefs by June 8, 2011, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Karen Wilson, an occupational therapist (OT) with thirty years' experience, was employed through a contractor by the Franklin Township school district for three years. She worked three days per week at the Conerly Road Elementary School (CRS). An OT provided services to optimize the learning environment. She had worked for one year with D.S., age eight, a third-grade student in a self-contained classroom.

On November 1, 2010, Wilson was going to D.S.'s classroom to pick up another student and was waiting for that student to finish his activity at his desk. She could see the front of the classroom. As she was waiting for her student, D.S. and the respondent were having a verbal exchange. She could see they were both agitated, but could not hear the words. D.S. was speaking, but he does not speak clearly. They were in close proximity, facing each other. D.S.'s hands "were going," and Wilson saw respondent hit him in the cheek area of his face. Respondent was upset and said, "Now you know how that feels." D.S. then went and sat down in his seat.

Although it did not appear to be a defensive action to Wilson, she thought the hit was in retaliation for D.S. hitting respondent. She noted that D.S. did not act any differently from how he usually was, but he was no longer agitated, and sat in his seat and sucked his thumb as he usually did. He was not crying. He looked fine and did not appear injured.

Wilson then provided services to her student for an hour and a half. When she returned she saw D.S. still in class. Wilson asked the respondent if she wanted to take the afternoon off and respondent said no. Wilson thought respondent might need this time because she had lost control and maybe needed to remove herself from the situation.

Wilson reported the incident to her supervisor and then went and spoke with Theresa Seaman, the case manager for the students, about an hour later. Ms. Seaman went to the principal and wrote a brief report. Wilson also met with the principal, who wrote a summary of that interview, which was accurate except that the time sequence was a little off.

When a student did well in the classroom, "high fives" were sometimes given. It was a way of saying that the student did a good job. Wilson did not observe respondent give a high five to D.S.; nothing had occurred that warranted a high five.

On cross-examination, Wilson said she saw D.S. at least once per week on an individual basis, and in a group session every Friday. She wrote her first report and typed it after seeing the principal. The principal did not mention other witnesses. Although it was hard to remember everything, her statement of November 1 was accurate. In her statement Wilson said she saw respondent strike D.S. on his face after being struck by him. In her testimony, Wilson did not recall that she had seen D.S. strike the respondent.

Wilson did not know what actions respondent was engaged in with D.S., as they were in the front of the classroom where there is a computer. The computer was used as a reward for D.S.—if he did not do anything wrong, he was given computer time as a reward. Wilson was aware that D.S. would hit or strike other students and teachers, and that it was not unusual for him to do this.

She spoke with Karen Duffy after the event but not on the day it occurred, and she did not recall what Duffy said.

Karen Duffy had worked in the school district as a paraprofessional aide for more than fifteen years. She assisted children in the classroom and helped them with their schoolwork.

On November 1, 2010, she was assigned to help a new student. She knew D.S. from before this date and would see D.S. running out of the classroom or with other aides chasing him. The school used a timer with D.S. For every five minutes he followed the directions of an instructor or aide, he would receive a sticker. Once D.S. had fifteen stickers he would be rewarded with a walk, the use of the computer, or extra recess.

On that morning, Duffy was assigned to D.S. and was trying to get him to follow instructions. D.S. was going round and round the classroom. She followed him and then D.S. went to the blackboard. Respondent was busy trying to do the attendance on the computer and D.S. was pushing the monitor buttons. At about 9:45 a.m. he was at the board with respondent. Duffy was by D.S.'s desk, about ten feet away, and respondent was writing on the board.
