SCHOOL REPORT.

To the State Board of Education:

I submit herewith my annual report of the School of Industrial Arts of the City of Trenton. Previous reports (especially that of June 28, 1913) have stated the purposes and the scope of the School.

The year just closed has been the most successful in the history of the School. Manufacturers have shown a constantly increasing interest in and appreciation of our work.

NEWARK TECHNICAL SCHOOL.

CHARLES A. COLTON, Director.

The Newark Technical School has always been ready to recognize any reasonable demands which the industries of the locality might make upon its facilities, and when the Manufacturing Jewelers Association, of Newark, asked to have an evening course in Assaying established, giving instruction in the assaying of bullion and jeweler's sweeps, the trustees granted the request immediately, and it was one of the new features during the past year.

Another evening course added during the year was Surveying. The instruction in this course comprises office work, such as draughting and calculation of surveys, which is done in the evening, and field work which is done Saturday afternoons when the weather is favorable, in the public parks of the county.

A course in Machine Design will be organized for evening students next year which will include the study of materials to be used in the design of machines for special work, the strength of parts, the forms and types best adapted to the machine under consideration from the stand-point of service, appearance and economic production, means of transmitting power and motion, stresses in machine frames and the determination of suitable sections for such frames. The subject of thermodynamics will not be a part of this course.

Owing to the difficulty in getting students for the various courses who are properly prepared in Arithmetic and Algebra, it has become necessary for the Technical School to open evening classes in August, giving instruction in those subjects for about six weeks previous to the opening of the evening school year in October.

That the School has advanced considerably is evident from the fact that the attendance has been unusually large, and the graduating class, numbering thirty-three, was the largest in the school's history.

A pleasant feature to be noticed in connection with the organization of the course in Assaying is that the Manufacturing Jewelers Association of Newark paid nearly half the cost of its installation.

The financial statement for the year ending April 30, 1914, is as follows:
