It has changed my life during the March of COVID-19 pandemic because I was in a bad situation with my grandma and college course term at the same time because there were a lot of fights and not getting along with each other every day. The problem after I landed in the hospital emergency room for mental health and with a bunch of medical issues at all once together. Also with College, I was very stressed out when it didn't work out and all of the chaos went on especially when I went crazy and did not know what to do with the state of mind with all of the lockdown. Honestly, it was just too much going on in the beginning. But after that, I felt like it was time to be myself when I had to leave her on August 28, 2020, during the COVID-19 pandemic because of the grandma issues that I had to deal with her problem and work each second of my life when I was with her. Although I honestly cared about my grandma at the same time, I just hate to be mean and strict with people over here.

The challenge of Covid-19 for me is that I feel it is hard to travel anywhere to explore around the world. Especially I want to go visit Massachusetts or California for now but I will wait after when the pandemic is over with the virus. I just want to get some good support systems from my friend and live somewhere nice like out of state!

To be honest with you, I feel like New Jersey could have done better when it comes to people wearing masks when it comes to going outside in public and in the store in the right way because some people do not the right way but it is just my opinion that what I am seeing some time.
