58th Annual Parade Welcomes Community to Celebrate America's Workforce

Trenton, NJ - Marking the importance of New Jersey's highly educated workforce to the state's prosperity, Lt. Governor Kim Guadagno today joined local officials and the South Plainfield community for the borough's 58th annual Labor Day Parade, "Celebrating Our Heritage."

"It's great to see so many families and members of the community joining together to celebrate this holiday weekend," said Lt. Governor Guadagno. "Today we honor New Jersey's hardworking and highly educated residents, whose contributions as members of our nation's workforce cannot be overstated."

Labor Day, celebrated annually on the first Monday in September, is dedicated to the social and economic achievements of American workers. The first Labor Day holiday was celebrated on Tuesday, September 5, 1882, in New York City. New Jersey was among the first five states to enact the Labor Day holiday through legislation in 1887.
