ANNUAL REPORT.

Hon. John Franklin Fort, Governor of New Jersey:

DEAR SIR—The New Jersey Public Library Commission respectfully submits the following report for the year ending October 31st, 1909, in compliance with the act to promote the establishment and efficiency of free public libraries.

In July the Commission lost the services of Miss Askew, who was appointed as Reference Librarian in the State Library. In her place Miss Edna B. Pratt, of Asbury Park, was engaged, she having obtained the highest average in an examination conducted by the New Jersey Civil Service Commission. Miss Askew will continue to supervise the traveling libraries, and aid in the selection of books and in other ways helping the small libraries.

With the $500 appropriated last year under the act of 1906 providing for the placing of traveling libraries in the correctional institutions of the State, 599 books were purchased, at an average cost of 83½ cents, and from the regular appropriation for the year 2,010 books, at a cost of $1,636.54, or an average of a little less than 81½ cents. It cost $471.98 for transporting the books, and $204 for postage. There was received in fees the sum of $196, which was paid into the State treasury as required by law.

At the date of the last report there were 173 of the regular traveling libraries in operation. There have been added during the year forty-three, making a total of 216, not including the thirty-one special libraries sent to the various State and county institutions. In 1904, when the Traveling Library work was transferred to this Commission, there were but twelve of the libraries in operation. While the increase in number has been rapid, averaging more than forty for each of the five years, there are many small, out-of-the-way communities that are still unserved, and which the Commission has made little effort to reach because of its inability to meet the existing demand. There are traveling library stations in every county. Burlington has twenty-six and Monmouth eighteen; Hudson has but two and Cape May three.

For every new station established a first expenditure of about $60 is required—$9 for the library and shipping cases, and the remainder for books. There are but 156 cases for the 216 traveling libraries now in use, and it was only possible to meet the requests for books by utilizing packing boxes for the shipment of sixty of the libraries. If the work is to be continued of supplying books to the towns that are too small to warrant the establishing of public libraries, an appropriation will be needed for additional cases, and there should be available $2,000 a year for the purchase of new books. There are now on file with the Commission requests for traveling libraries for more than twenty different places. Instead of complying with these requests, the libraries must be withdrawn from a number now using them, unless the collection of books can be soon increased. A supplemental appropriation of $1,000 will provide both books and cases for immediate use. This the Commission respectfully asks for, and also that the regular appropriation be increased to $5,500.

The 216 libraries have been circulated 857 times during the year, or an average of nearly four times for each library. The total circulation of 102,396 books makes an average of a little more than nine times for each of the 11,166 books in the working collection. On an estimate that one-half of the time of the Commission's employes is given to the traveling library work, and that one-half of the postage was for the same work, the cost of circulating the books was about $1\frac{1}{2}$ cents for each. The average cost of circulating books in free public libraries is estimated at 7 cents. Of the books circulated, about 49 per cent. was fiction, and about 43 per cent. of the whole number were "juveniles."

Besides the 2,010 books added to the traveling libraries by purchase, 559 were received by gift; 883 were discarded, leaving a net gain of 1,686. The total number accessioned since the traveling libraries were established is 14,068, from which there have been discarded 2,902 volumes that were too much worn to make them available for further circulation, leaving a working collection of 11,166 at this date. During the last five years but four books have been lost and not accounted for; 143 were lost and replaced.

With the books now on hand it is impossible to make up additional libraries. Many of the volumes that have been in almost constant use since 1899 are so worn as to be unfit for further circulation, and some of the popular books acquired more recently are in the same condition. Many have been repaired by the Commission and others were discarded, or rather distributed among the State and county institutions or in localities where they might be of a little more use. In making this distribution the Commission was assisted by Dr. Alma Williston, of Phillipsburg; Miss J. H. Morris, of Bordentown; Miss Maud C. Westbrooke, of Eatontown; Mrs. A. V. Jennings, of Shrewsbury; A. J. Morris, of Pemberton; William Watson, of Elmer, and H. H. Prentice, of Chrome. These books were sent to Phillipsburg for the use of the canal missionary; Pemberton, for distribution in the "Pines" section; Wading River, Atsion, Caldwell, Beach Haven, Dover, Elmer, Bordentown, Shrewsbury, Eatontown, New Market, Vincentown, Oceanport, Ocean City, New Egypt, North Caldwell, Minotola, Dover, Branchville, Beemerville and Chrome.

That the traveling library books are being placed in the hands of residents of the small towns and rural sections is shown by the fact that 110 of the 216 libraries are in the hands of granges of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, where, under the rules adopted by the Commission, the books are made accessible to all residents of the neighborhoods. A great deal of the success of the work is due to the interest manifested by the granges, through the agency of which study clubs have been organized, reading courses started, lecture courses established and reading rooms opened in sections which could otherwise have been reached with great difficulty and expense. There are in the libraries more than six hundred books relating to agriculture, horticulture and subjects interesting to the farmers, and it is seldom that more than a dozen of these books are on the shelves.

Through the agency of these libraries thirty-four reading courses and twenty-seven clubs have been started during the year, some in places far away from a railroad and others at considerable distances from a post-office.

An important feature of the Commission's work has been the loaning to residents of smaller municipalities of books on special subjects. During the year 723 of these books were sent out. Most of them were borrowed by the Commission from the larger libraries, and covered many subjects—from guinea pigs to Dvorak's music. In some cases the borrowers could have secured the use of the books in no other way. Bulletins, pictures and exhibits of cotton and silk in various stages of manufacture from the crude material to the finished product, were also sent out to traveling library stations, libraries and schools. Some of these were also borrowed by the Commission, which is under obligations to the Trenton and Newark Free Public Libraries, and the libraries of Pratt Institute, Brooklyn and Drexel Institute, Philadelphia. Many reference questions have been answered by letter from material found in the State Library.

There was available this year for the purchase of books a larger sum than can usually be spent from the regular appropriation. This was due to the temporary abandonment of the Summer School in Library Training. There seemed to be a more urgent need for the money in other directions. During the three years of the school's operation it was an unqualified success. Eighty-eight pupils were given instruction, in addition to thirty-eight others who took a course through correspondence, a total of 126. The number of libraries in the State is 194, and it was felt that the Summer School had rather thoroughly covered the field by giving to the custodians of the smaller libraries such training as would enable them to administer their libraries economically and intelligently. It was for this purpose that the school was established, and not for the creation of a permanent Summer Library School like those at Albany and Chautauqua that receive all who apply that are in library work and fit them for positions. The sessions at Asbury Park will be resumed as soon as the conditions, in the judgment of the Commission, warrant the reopening of the school. In the meantime wherever a new library is established a librarian is trained to take care of it, and this is in addition to the regular school and correspondence work.

The usual correspondence course has been maintained during the year for the benefit of those engaged in library work. Six young ladies, some of whom had made application for admission to the Summer School, took the course. Nine library institutes were held, mainly at points so far distant as to make it inconvenient for the librarians to attend the regular State meetings. The total attendance at these meetings was seventy-two, and the time was given up to the discussion of problems and giving instruction in bookmending and other practical branches of library work. In two cities "open house" was held, at which about forty libraries of the State were represented by more than one hundred persons.

The total number of books in the "special" collection is 3,037. There are thirty-one of the special libraries now in operation, the probation school at Hoboken having been added during the year. The thirty-one libraries have been circulated sixty-eight times, all but one having been exchanged at least once during the year. Four different libraries were sent to the New Jersey Home for Girls and the Matron of the institution has expressed her gratification at the good the books are doing. In the county institutions, where the population is constantly changing, there is less need for frequent exchanges, the chief demand being for larger collections. The books, which are as a rule written for boys and girls, have been carefully selected after visits to the institutions and conferences with those in charge. Those suitable for the Home for Girls will not do for a county penitentiary or jail, nor can those sent to the jails be used in a probation school. In making the selections, the Matron of the Philadelphia House of Refuge was also consulted, and in reciprocation the Organizer of the New Jersey Commission visited the Philadelphia institution and delivered addresses to the girls.

So far as can be determined, the books in the special collections have been circulated on an average three times each. Accurate records cannot be kept. The wardens agree that the libraries are doing good, and the Commission finds evidence of their popularity in the telephone calls and letters received when there happens to be a slight delay in making an exchange.

The Commission has been greatly aided during the year by friends of the library movement, who have contributed many books and magazines. Some of the books were unsuitable for use in the traveling libraries, and others were duplicates. These were exchanged, with the permission of the contributors, for other books. The magazines were used for filling sets for some of the smaller public libraries, distributed among the traveling library stations, or exchanged. The New Jersey Federation of Women's Clubs, through the Library Committee and individual clubs, sent in fourteen boxes of magazines and books for traveling library use, and liberal contributions were made by Mrs. John D. Prince, of Ringwood, N. J.; Miss Lucy Riis, of New York City; Mrs. C.

E. Synnott, of Woodbury, N. J., and the Free Public Library of East Orange.

Assistance has been given by the Federation of Women's Clubs in other directions, also. It has paid the expenses of a librarian to regularly visit six traveling library stations in out-of-the-way places, and, by keeping up its interest in the lace-making industry, made possible the starting of a new centre.

The work of aiding the libraries in improving their methods has gone steadily forward. In doing this work the Commission does not step in and do the actual work. This would be of little use as the library would soon lapse into its former condition. Instead the librarian is taught how to do the work and assisted in doing it, so that the library may steadily improve, instead of being put into a perfect condition and then allowed to revert to a condition of confusion. During the year five libraries have been entirely reorganized; four have been classified; in eight modern charging systems have been established; seven have been accessioned—that is, an account of stock has been taken and listed, so that at any time the value of the library and the size of the collection may be determined. It is most pleasing, after the work has been done, to see the deep appreciation of those benefited and to note the actual saving in time and money effected. Seven libraries have been advised as to arrangement of rooms to the best advantage for administration. Eleven have been assisted in buying furniture. In the cases of six that were not able to buy new furniture, specifications and plans were furnished and the work was done by local carpenters satisfactorily and at a great saving. Conferences were held with the boards of trustees of five libraries regarding library buildings, and a number of approved plans were furnished as guides. This work is important as the requirements of libraries are becoming more and more specialized, and the first impulse of a board is to build from a standpoint of beauty and not utility and the tendency is for the architect to exploit his skill in everything but adapting the building to practical use. One-fourth of the running expenses could be saved by many libraries were they better adapted to their work.

If the work of a library commission was limited to the establishing of free public libraries and the reorganization on a new basis of those already established, every library commission could, when created, almost foretell the time when its work would be done, and the better the work done by a library commission the shorter would be its existence. But, while these are the two first duties of a library commission, they are by no means all; there is a much larger field toward which modern commission work is trending. That is, the library aid work—aiding the small libraries in various ways to accomplish economically and efficiently the work for which they are established—to act as a central bureau for giving help and advice. In this way every library is enabled to do the best work and get the most possible for its money. This does not apply, of course, to the large libraries, but to the small ones, many of which are remote from the trade centers and must spend to the very best advantage the little money they have. The work hereafter described is for the purpose of helping them do this. Many excellent book lists are issued, but these perhaps on one page necessitate the spending of more money than the library will have to spend in six months. The prices given are publishers' prices. The Commission checks these lists for the small libraries in order to show books adapted especially to their work and within their means; indicates those to be bought at once; makes notes as to price and edition. These lists are not mimeographed, but each is especially made out to fit a library's need. This work has been done from month to month during the past year for seventy-one small libraries, and after the lists were made out and approved the orders were placed for the books, so that they were bought at the most advantageous prices. The sending out of these buying lists makes every dollar spent of value, and every book bought of use. The placing of the order effects a saving of at least 15 per cent., as has been repeatedly proved by comparisons of prices. Besides the seventy-one libraries on the monthly list, many small libraries and schools have applied for advice, and we have in the past year made out forty-one special lists for them. Besides this personal assistance, printed lists and aids to book selection have been sent out at intervals.

In sixteen libraries the Organizer has conducted a story hour for the children, and she has spoken in eleven schools in the interest of the local library. There are now thirty-seven libraries on the list which are sending their books for binding and repair through the Commission. These books are sent to one firm and the small libraries receive in this way the same price as the large.

In two towns representatives of the Commission, with committees of the citizens, have appeared before the town council to consider the library question. Conferences on various subjects have been held with the boards of trustees of thirty-two libraries. Many reference questions have been received from libraries and individuals, to be answered by mail. Lists of periodicals for purchase have been prepared for thirty-three libraries. From the magazines donated, five New Jersey libraries have been aided in completing their sets. The magazines have also been freely distributed among the small libraries and the country districts. Bulletins for exhibitions have been loaned to eleven libraries, and the cotton and silk exhibits have been sent to fifteen different places, where they proved very popular. Three township committees have been induced to give the libraries room in the town hall.

Fourteen requests for books for the blind have been referred to the Philadelphia Free Library. It is hoped that some arrangement will be made for supplying the blind people of New Jersey with books, as the decision of the Philadelphia library not to send out of the city books in the Braille type will seriously affect the blind people in New Jersey.

In seven towns meetings have been conducted and talks given to keep up the interest in the libraries. In fourteen towns talks have been made to arouse interest in establishing a library, and in nine of these libraries were organized. Schools have been visited in twelve places that are without libraries, and talks made to the children and teachers on books and school libraries. A lecture was given at the Cape May Summer School for teachers, and at five teachers' institutes on the use of libraries in the schools. The Commission was represented at both meetings of the Federation of Women's Clubs where the library question was discussed, and at the two meetings of the New Jersey Library Association. Seventeen clubs have been addressed in the interest of libraries and thirty-five programs prepared for different clubs.

There have been established during the year eleven new libraries—at Ocean City, Oceanport, Mickleton, Roseland, Little Falls, Minotola, Laurel Springs, Meyersville, Weehawken, Harrison and Hightstown. The library at Fanwood has been added to the record. The two libraries in Haddonfield have united under municipal control, and Princeton has established a municipal library to absorb the Free Lending and Ivy Hall libraries. The Board of Trade have taken over the Bordentown library and started it on a new basis.

The Women's League of the Unitarian Church has generously contributed books to libraries, having given over 1,500 in all to different libraries. The Commission now has on record 194 libraries, of which 139 are free. The public school libraries included in the list are doing regular library work.

The year's work, summarized, is: 857 regular traveling libraries have been sent out, with a total circulation of 102,396. The thirty-one special libraries have been circulated sixty-eight times; eleven new libraries are on record; fifty-six libraries have been aided in improving their methods; 139 have been directly aided in other lines; 291 purchasing lists were distributed; several hundred volumes have been repaired; six persons were given a measure of library training; thirty-five addresses were made, besides many informal talks; 2,609 books have been bought for the regular and special libraries, and 3,168 prepared for circulation; fifteen grange meetings were attended and twelve of them addressed; over 2,500 magazines have been distributed and 723 special books loaned. In accomplishing this work 164 visits have been made to libraries, fifty-one to traveling library stations, and nineteen to towns without libraries. Besides this a very large amount of work has been done by correspondence.

During the last six months forty-three librarians or members of boards of trustees have called at the office of the Commission to discuss library problems. This is encouraging, as it shows their deep interest and brings them more closely in touch with the work.

The statistical table given herewith and reports sent in, show that in the 194 libraries listed there are 1,196,297 books. These, with the books in the traveling libraries, make a total of 1,807,463 volumes in circulation in the State. The circulation, so far as can be computed from the reports received, was 7,120,362 and with the circulation of the regular traveling libraries makes a total of 7,222,760. The population of the State according to the State census of 1905 was 2,144,134. This gives an average of nearly four (3.8) volumes to every inhabitant in the State.
