EAGLETON INSTITUTE OF POLITICS

Presentation to the Clean Elections Commission on the Proposed Work of the NJ Clean Elections Academic Study Group

June 17, 2005

by

Ingrid W. Reed

Director, Eagleton NJ Project

Background

On April 8, 2005, a group of faculty members from various institutions of higher education whose work includes a focus on New Jersey politics met at the Eagleton Institute for the purpose of discussing whether there were ways they might be useful to the recently-formed Clean Elections Commission which is charged to evaluate the pilot project providing public funding for two legislative districts in the 2005 election.

The focus of the meeting was on the purposes set out in New Jersey law creating the Clean Elections pilot project:

-Address the fact that residents of the State believe large contributions to campaigns have undue influence, and

-That the political process is dominated by those who can afford to spend large amounts of money on campaigns, and

-The result is an erosion of public confidence in the democratic process.

-Also, that the pilot project would provide equal resources to candidates, reverse the escalating cost and free candidates from the chore of raising money, (based on the laws currently in effect in Maine and Arizona), as well as strengthen public confidence in the democratic process.

The group also examined the charge to the Clean Elections Commission to:

- examine the positive and negative aspects of the experience
- review and recommend criteria for selecting districts and setting the seed money and qualifying contribution amounts
- establishing support for primary races in 2007
- consider feasibility of applying to all races
- means to finance clean elections and other matters.

This informal group agreed to consider activities, which if undertaken independently from the Commission, would be useful to the Commission in evaluating the pilot project.

Proposed Program

On May 10, the informal group of academics met again at the Eagleton Institute of Politics and agreed to be known as the New Jersey Clean Elections Academic Study Group. The purpose of the Group is to support the Clean Elections Pilot Project by conducting research during the Pilot Project in the fall of 2005, analyze the information and data collected after the elections, and make this analysis available to the Clean Elections Commissions for their use in the evaluation required by the Clean Election law.

The following are the components of the study that the Group considers essential and will attempt to fulfill:

A- Follow the conduct of the four campaigns in the two Clean Elections districts and in two to four other "control" districts with similar characteristics but possibly a contrast in geography, media coverage and political balance. David Rebovich has provided a preliminary protocol for monitoring the campaign activity, including newspaper coverage, which will serve as a basis for a sub-committee to design detailed guidance. Faculty interested in supervising a campaign or a district include Rebovich, Reed, Segers, Kern, Marbach. Others will be contacted. The Group will meet at the end of June after the Pilot districts have been designated to select the control districts and refine the protocol.

B- Monitor media coverage and ads on television. Matt Hale, a co-director of the Annenberg/U. of Wisconsin 2002 and 2004 study of political campaign coverage on television news programs has agreed to organize a study of the media coverage in pilot and control districts using the U. of Wisconsin research design and team. It is proposed to conduct the study 30 days before the election and include 11 outlets – 8 network affiliates (four in Philadelphia and four in New York), 2 cable systems and New Jersey Network focusing on the nightly news program. It is estimated that the cost would be around $12,000 or $1,000 per outlet and miscellaneous expenses. Hale would donate his time. Additional information would be collected about special programming and debates. Television and radio ads would be requested from the campaigns after they have been aired.

C- Conduct surveys to assess voter attitudes about issues of influence of money in election campaigns to determine if the Pilot Project influenced voter opinion as stated in the goals of the Clean Election Law. Peter Woolley of the Fairleigh-Dickinson Public Mind Poll and Jeffrey Levine of the Eagleton Center for Public Interest Polling will collaborate in conducting two statewide polls, one in early September and another before election day as well as two polls designed to focus on the districts in the study to assess awareness of the clean election project. It is estimated that the direct cost for conducting the surveys will be about $20,000 if the survey questions are included in polls that are already planned.

The agenda could include other research items such as an historical study of the 2001 Assembly races in the pilot project district to provide a comparison to 2005, a review of evaluations conducted of the Arizona and Maine clean elections for useful ideas and contrasts, and consultations with the Brennan Center for their ideas on the study based on their extensive work on clean elections.

While faculty time would be contributed, support for the direct cost of the media monitoring and the surveys will be sought from interested funders. Suggestions are welcome.

It was agreed that the report of the work of the Group will be submitted to the interested faculty collaborators for their review and comment before the presentation to the Clean Elections Commission.
