The worth of the Guard

By Maj. Gen. Glenn K. Rieth, The Adjutant General - New Jersey

New Jersey has a long military history. From the Revolutionary War to present day, the state of New Jersey and its Citizen-Soldiers have supported our state and nation's military efforts.

During the Revolutionary War, New Jersey played a pivotal role. Numerous battles were fought in all 21 counties and Gen. George Washington spent more time in New Jersey than anywhere else during the war. New Jersey's strategic location, between New York City and Philadelphia, made it a center of Revolutionary War activity.

In World War II, New Jersey citizens contributed mightily to the war effort, providing critical materials and manpower as more than a half-million New Jersey citizens enlisted. More than 13,000 made the ultimate sacrifice.

As a result of our long military history, New Jersey is home to more than 465,000 veterans representing all components and branches of service.

The heirs of our proud military history can be found in the men and women who comprise our New Jersey

Army and Air National Guard. You stand ready to leave the comforts of your home to help fellow New Jerseyans, and to defend our nation's interests, bringing peace and hope to people throughout the world.

The Guard is no longer a strategic reserve, but an operational force directly integrated into active duty deployments and missions. The role of the New Jersey Army and Air National Guard is to meet the needs of the future force, giving us an enhanced capability to respond to any state and federal mission.

Despite our operational tempo, we continue to remain at more than 100 percent strength. This demonstrates your commitment and understanding of the significant contributions and sacrifices made by you and your families. Each one of you and your families are a valuable asset to current and future military operations.

From our inception as a recognized organized militia in 1668 to present, Citizen-Soldiers of the New Jersey Army and Air National Guard continue to have a positive impact on our state and nation. From the beginning, our ranks were filled by volunteers who relied on their communities for support. Today, nothing has changed. We continue to rely on volunteers and community support. Make no mistake, our volunteers and communities are our greatest strength and the source of our obligation to duty.

By teaming with professionals, civic leaders and our communities, our organization has been expertly assisting our Soldiers and Airmen transition back to civilian life after deployment cycles. The entire organization continues to work tirelessly to improve the lives of the men and women willing to sacrifice everything for our state and nation. I will continue ensuring that each Soldier, Airmen, and their families receive the support they deserve with the same respect and honor in which it was earned.

Reflecting on this past year, I would like to thank you and your families for playing vital roles in the New Jersey National Guard. Your collective efforts are directly linked to the accomplishments and successes of this great organization. Moving forward, I'm eager to continue our partnership as we begin the New Year.

Three generations of former and present service members joined together with family and loved ones on Dec. 18, 2010 at Rowan University's Wilson Hall for the Salute to the Troops program recognizing 67 New Jersey Army National Guard soldiers of the 119th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion who will be heading to Afghanistan.

William Ray Miller, a Vietnam War Navy veteran and grandfather from Turnersville, looked down several aisles of auditorium seats and pointed to his son-in-law, Staff Sgt. Jeff Johnson, from there, he pointed to the stage where his grandson, Spc. Jeffrey Johnson, was sitting. He will be going to Joint Base Lewis-McChord, Wash., for training and then to Afghanistan.

"The military is a good honorable profession. I did not particularly care for what they threw at us in Vietnam, so I hope they throw nothing at my grandson. I have six people in the family now serving in the military. Right now I am looking at a very faithful grandson who I am sure will do well with his missions," Miller said.

Maj. Gen. Glenn K. Rieth, The Adjutant General, told the Soldiers to make the most of their training and to look out for each other when they land in the combat area.

"Be responsible for your 30 days of training. Be responsible in Afghanistan," he said.

Staff Sgt. Jeff Johnson is a recruiter. When he looked at the 119th's formation, he could spot six Soldiers he enlisted into the Jersey Guard, including his son, Jeffrey.

"I'm proud of him. He is willing to step up and take care of us and our nation," the recruiter said. "He is also setting the example for his brother, Timothy, who is coming home from Army Advance Individual Training tomorrow."

For Master Sgt. Daniel McCracken, of Little Egg Harbor Township, the event marks the fourth time he will serve on active duty. After serving on a homeland defense mission, he deployed to Iraq from 2004 to 2005, when it was known as the 119th Support Battalion. He spent three years as a mobilization trainer at Fort Dix, before deploying to Iraq with the 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team from 2008 to 2009.

"You cannot look at a subordinate soldier in the eye and ask them to do something that you don't have the experience of doing yourself," he said.

Lt. Col. Walter R. Nall, Commander, 119th CSSB, and Sgt. Maj. John H. Humphreys, received an American Flag from congressional leaders Rep. Robert E. Andrews and Congressman-elect Jon Runyan. A state flag was also presented to the unit leadership by state Sen. Stephen M. Sweeney. 🇺🇸

Soldiers of the 119th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion spent three weeks – from the end of November through December at the National Guard Training Center at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Of the numerous Soldier skills the 119th received schooling on while at FIG, none would compare to the intensity of the urban operations training at the NGTC's Military Operations on Urban Terrain site.

At the MOUT site, the 119th Soldiers learned everything from how UO is integrated into the overall campaign to kicking down doors, capturing the bad guys and securing buildings.

UO operations are prime examples of the asymmetrical battlefeld and encompass all mission aspects ranging from offensive, defensive to civil support.

Former Marine Corps Commandant General Charles C. Krulak described urban operations as "The Three Block War."

"In one moment in time, our service members will be feeding and clothing displaced refugees—providing humanitarian assistance. In the next moment, they will be holding two warring tribes apart—conducting peacekeeping operations—and, finally, they will be fighting a highly lethal mid-intensity battle—all on the same day...all within three city blocks."

The 119th troops spent their days at the MOUT site interacting with role-players and while in the background the Muslim call to prayer and other sounds associated with villages in Afghanistan were broadcasted over speakers.

This immersion training not only gave the Soldiers a sense of what to expect but more importantly, how to stay alive. 🦋

The Kupplers

BROTHERS IN ARMS

By Sgt. Wayne Woolley, Department of Military and Veterans Affairs Public Affairs

Sgt. Andrew Kuppler began his New Jersey Army National Guard career a step behind his younger brother, Spc. Eric Kuppler.

The younger brother enlisted first and had already begun Advanced Individual Training as an MP before the older brother finished basic training.

But in the years since, the brothers have been side-by-side when it mattered most, on deployment into a combat theater. It's already happened once, Iraq 2008 with the 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team and now, Afghanistan with the 119th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion.

On Jan. 4, the brothers were among the 67 Soldiers from the unit who boarded a plane bound for Joint Base Lewis-McChord, Wash., where the Cherry Hill-based troops will train for 30 days before shipping out.

As the Kuppler brothers made the final checks of their gear before boarding, they reflected about what it means to be able to serve together.

"Deployments are lot easier with him along," Andrew Kuppler, 27, said, nodding toward his brother.

"And a lot easier on our families, they worry less because they know we're taking care of each other," Eric Kuppler said.

Both were wearing a second set of Survival Bracelets made by their family.

The brothers wore their first bracelets on their year in Iraq as members of the 328th Military Police Company. Although they worked opposite shifts in detainee operations, they saw each other every shift change and spent most of the few hours both had off together.

This time, it's unclear where exactly in Afghanistan they'll end up, although they expect they may remain in close proximity because they both do the same job.

"We'll have each others' backs," Andrew Kuppler said.

GUARD KEY TO OPERATION'S SUCCESS

By Sgt. Wayne Woolley, Department of Military and Veterans Affairs Public Affairs

The New Jersey National Guard Counter Drug Task Force was a key player in a recent U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency operation to collect and dispose of more than seven tons of unused, unwanted and expired medication to prevent the drugs from changing hands and being abused.

Operation Take Back New Jersey allowed state residents to rid their homes of drugs they no longer need as a way of ensuring they weren't diverted and abused or sold by young people with access to the medicine cabinet.

Over a four-hour span on Sept. 25, people turned in drugs, including widely abused narcotics such as Vicodin and Oxycodone, to collection points operated by 365 of New Jersey's law enforcement agencies.

Members of the National Guard's Counter Drug Task Force transported the drugs for safekeeping at a DEA office in South Jersey and then on to an incinerator several days later.

"The National Guard was among the agencies that were instrumental in making this operation such a success," said John G. McCabe Jr., the acting Special Agent in Charge of the DEA's New Jersey Division.

Master Sgt. Joseph Prieto and 1st Lt. Alex Ramirez of the Counter Drug Task Force were on hand for McCabe's announcement.

DEA officials say the most important aspect of the drug collection program is to raise public awareness of the dangers of prescription drug misuse. Officials cited statistics compiled by the University of Michigan's Monitoring the Future, which found a 111 percent increase in emergency room visits associated with the non-medical use of narcotic painkillers between 2004 and 2008.

"The majority of young people who abuse (prescription) drugs get it from a family member, a friend and the home medicine cabinet," he said. "With this program, we are trying to eliminate the home medicine cabinet as a potential source of abuse for our youth." 🇺🇸

JT2DC gets new MRAP Trainer

A new Mine Resistant Ambush Protected Vehicle Egress Trainer (MET) has been brought to benefit service members training through a collaborative cost-saving effort by the Joint Training and Training Development Center and the training and mobilization site.

Staging the MET at the New Jersey National Guard's JT2DC offers many benefits to the service members who use the trainer and is a cost-effective alternative for training and mobilization missions.

"I need to get the best training available for my Soldiers and to get the Soldiers to know their training will save their lives and their friends," said Master Sgt. Rene Sales, a Senior Trainer at the JT2DC.

Besides the great training environment, JT2DC offers it's also a cost-effective and green solution to the escalating cost of training the nation's war fighter.

The MET itself offers a realistic simulation to develop the proper skills and confidence in all service members' ability to safely egress from an overturned vehicle and survive on a battlefield. The MET's ability to spin 360 degrees allows personnel to familiarize themselves with the 29 degree tipping point and the 34 degree definite flip point of a real tactical vehicle.

The training center offers a unique training environment for the MET and service members, because of its convoy layout with other Humvee Egress Assistance Trainers (HEAT). This combination allows trainers to practice advance egress scenarios and incorporate battle drills and medical evacuation training by mixing up which vehicle will flip.

"This is where they get to touch the equipment before they go to a theater of operation and have to learn it there," said Sales.

The MET has provided realistic and hands-on training to about 100 Soldiers in the last training year and more than 900 service members are now scheduled to receive the training that increases the survivability rate on the ground in such places as Afghanistan and Iraq.

NEW JERSEY PARTICIPATES IN ULCHI FREEDOM GUARDIAN '10

By Staff Sgt. Nicholas Young, Joint Training and Training Development Center, Visual Information

Thirty-five New Jersey Army National Guard Soldiers led by Lt. Col. Mark Pitterski participated in the joint warfighter simulation Ulchi Freedom Guardian '10 at Camp Courtney, Okinawa, Japan from Aug. 16 – 26, 2010.

The New Jersey team consisted of 21 Soldiers from the Joint Training and Training Development Center and 14 Soldiers from the 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team and the Joint Force Headquarters – New Jersey. This team was assigned an Infantry Brigade Combat Team mission task organized to support the III Marine Expeditionary Force during UFG '10.

UFG is a CFC-led warfighting exercise. It provides the opportunity to evaluate, train, and improves combined and joint coordination, procedures, plans, and systems necessary for the conduct of contingency operations by the Republic of Korea and U.S. forces.

While in Japan, Pvt. Teresa Jara of the Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 50th IBCB and Pfc. Christopher Caamano of the 102nd Cavalry, were promoted by Pitterski and the III Marine Expeditionary Force Chief of Staff, Col. Craig Timberlake. The two Soldiers served as intelligence analysts, and received accolades from all levels of the intelligence community that were involved in the exercise.

"The team was successful in its operations due to the robust intelligence section with bright, energetic and focused analysts like Spc. Caamano and Pfc. Jara," said Pitterski.

This year marked the exercise's 34th anniversary. In July 1976, ROK forces combined Exercise Ulchi with the United Nations Command and its U.S. allied forces Exercise Focus Lens. Exercise Ulchi-Focus Lens, as it was called until its name was changed in 2008, was designed to enhance ROK-U.S. interoperability by training both countries' commanders and staff in wartime planning, command and control operations, intelligence, logistics and personnel procedures required for defending the Republic of Korea.

Jersey Guard responds to storm

Daybreak was hours away and the state remained paralyzed by the post-Christmas blizzard of 2010 when Jessica Furlani left home for her 12-hour shift at Monmouth Medical Center in Long Branch. For a labor and delivery nurse, there are no snow days, only babies to deliver.

She only made it half of the way to work before she found herself among a half-dozen other motorists who got stranded in mountainous snow drifts along an unplowed section of Route 18 in Tinton Falls. It was 5 a.m. Dec. 27.

Hours passed. Cars ran out of gas and motorists doubled up in cars. By the 12-hour mark, Furlani had given out most of her food and water. By 23 hours, Furlani and two people who had migrated to her car were desperate.

"Out of nowhere, we see these guys in Army uniforms coming to rescue us. It was amazing," Furlani recalled. "I'm not sure what would have happened if they hadn't gotten there soon."

The guys in uniforms turned out to be New Jersey Army National Guard Soldiers -- Spc. Andy DeLeon and Pfc. Brian Francione. The 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team Soldiers had volunteered for snow duty and spent several uneventful hours in Hamilton before getting in a Humvee to respond to reports of stranded motorists.

"When we got out there, it was crazy. The snow was waist high even in the road and there were cars everywhere," said Francione, a combat engineer assigned to Alpha Company of the 50th Special Troops Battalion. "Some had been out there for a day ... the nurse, an EMT, even a plow driver."

Spc. Andy DeLeon, left, and Pfc. Brian Francione

The Soldiers transported Furlani and the two other people waiting in her car to the Tinton Falls police station and then returned for two other people.

"It was amazing how all these people kept going that long. I'm sure that was something they didn't expect," said DeLeon said.

DeLeon, a Signal specialist assigned to the Brigade Headquarters Company, said his duty during the storm was the most gratifying he's had in his two years in uniform.

"It was an experience I won't forget. I'm glad I went ahead and took the duty," he said. "It was a good feeling to help people. You could see the joy on people's faces when we got to them."

Upon arrival, Airmen and students were issued candy canes and holiday greeting cards, assigned to groups and sent out to spread cheer to the residents. # GUARD SWEEPS SEA GIRT'S BEACH

Pvt. Jan Hanna Huelgas joined the Army National Guard to protect her state and nation. She never expected to spruce up her favorite vacation destination.

The Soldier from Passaic was among 22 Recruit Sustainment Program members who spent Oct. 23, 2010 cleaning the beach at Sea Girt as part of a widespread effort to clean up the coastal waters of the Garden State.

"New Jersey is known for the shore. To keep it clean, and keep the community clean – with so many people coming here from other states – it makes us look good," Huelgas said as she sifted through the sand.

She had plenty of company. In all, more than 75 other volunteers including the Boy Scouts and members of community and environmental groups pitched in to help clean up the beach in Sea Girt.

In all, the volunteers collected more than 100 pounds of trash and recyclables – enough to fill 60 trash bags.

The beach sweep was one of dozens held up and down the Jersey Shore by the environmental group Clean Ocean Action (COA), a nonprofit organization that has conducted beach clean ups for a quarter century.

The recruits were there as part of Guard the Environment; a grass roots movement within the recruiting and retention community. Guard the Environment is a chance to showcase National Guard members participating in environmentally friendly activities and giving back to their local communities.

"The National Guard presence was most appreciated. What a great way to connect with the local community," said Tammy Schwier, a local realtor and beach sweep captain for COA.

Pfc. Dylan Averack, a recruit from West Windsor said he was proud to be a part of the beach sweep.

"It's great, we're cleaning up a beach that needs to be cleaned and we're helping out the local people," he said. "When I come out here fishing I'll see a clean beach and know that I was a part of that," he said. 🐟

Stand Down 2010

Maj. Wendy L. Cordrey, Chief Nurse with the 177th Fighter Wing Medical Group collects information from a homeless veteran during Stand Down 2010. The event, which was held on Sept. 25, 2010 at the National Guard Armory in Cherry Hill, was co-hosted by the New Jersey Department of Military and Veterans Affairs and the Stand Down of South Jersey Committee, Inc. Stand Downs provide homeless veterans with access to health-care, mental health screening, substance abuse counseling, social services (food stamps and unemployment), legal services, religious counseling, a hot meal, a haircut and winter clothing. Since 1996, the South Jersey Stand Down has served as a catalyst that enables homeless veterans to re-enter mainstream society. # EIB - NOT FOR EVERYONE

After high intensity training under the Fort Indiantown Gap sun, and nights spent trekking through the woods and hills of central Pennsylvania, New Jersey has awarded eight soldiers the Expert Infantry Badge, one of the highest honors an infantryman can earn.

On day one of the competition, 40 Soldiers from all over New Jersey had eyes on the badge. However, as each event came to an end, so did the hopes of some candidates.

"It's called the Expert Infantry Badge for a reason," said 1st Sgt. Brian Townsend, the president of the committee that organized EIB 21. "The thing that knocked most people out was the small details. It's not the Everybody Infantry Badge. It's the Expert Infantry Badge."

This particular expert infantry competition returns to New Jersey with a brand new feel. In previous competitions, candidates displayed their competence in a round-robin fashion, with each of the 40 events being timed.

In EIB 21, there are fewer events to complete; however, it is now done in a combat setting, adding a completely new element to the process.

"When the blood got pumping and the adrenaline was flowing, it made it more difficult to execute the tasks that you're sure you know how to do," said 1st Lt. Andrew Stevens, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 1/114th Infantry. "With the amount of preparation I put in to this, it was all muscle memory, but the combat element made it a bit more difficult."

Though difficult, it did not stop Stevens from enjoying the tasks.

"The lanes were my favorite part," he said. "Once we got passed the preparation, I had a really good time."

Preparation was a huge part of EIB 21.

When the day was over and all of the competitors gathered for dinner, normal chow chatter was nowhere to be found. Instead, tips for the next day's event feverishly bounced off the walls. Terms like left and right limit, call for fire, SALUTE report, check for shock and SPORTS filled the dining facility, leaving little room to discuss anything else. It sounded like these Soldiers just stepped off of the battlefield.

That is what the planning committee intended.

Sgt. Mark Recinos, right, Headquarters and Headquarters Company, 2-113th Infantry Battalion, on the homestretch for the Expert Infantry Badge.

"In the old style, you didn't get as much battlefield experience, but it was a little harder," Townsend said. "But the EIB 21 adds the element of combat stress to make it more challenging."

That new level of stress was felt prior to each event.

"Everyone was nervous before the lanes," said Capt. Timothy Sorrentino, Commander, HHC, 1/114th Infantry and EIB recipient. "Doing all of the tasks over and over again prior to the competition was easy. But, executing them under the pressure situation was different."

Sgt. Thomas Fisk, EIB 21 staff and trainer, said this is how Soldiers of today should be learning.

"It's good that they see a scenario and it's battle focused," he said. "They know what they are supposed to do with their training and can immediately incorporate it with their mission."

Fisk enjoyed this opportunity to teach Soldiers the skills needed to earn the prestigious badge that he received several years prior.

"I like to teach younger guys, any of the Soldiers coming up,” Fisk said. “That way, when they get to be sergeants, they can teach the guys coming up. That way we can have a better Army for the future.”

The future is something that Townsend is also looking toward.

“We wanted something to build from since this is the first time we are running EIB 21,” he said. “We mirrored a lot of what was going on at Fort Benning. What I wanted to do was give the state something to build off of, so we can make this competition something great for the state.”

Sorrentino expects a number of his Soldiers to take part in next year’s event.

“It’s something that every infantryman should have,” the commander said, a sentiment that all infantrymen competing at FIG echoed.

The closest Gunnar Larson ever came to the cockpit of an UH-60 Blackhawk Helicopter was an Xbox game. That got the Freehold Intermediate School 7th grader thinking some day he might want to fly one.

Then Larson sat in the Blackhawk’s cockpit and any doubt went away -- now he’s a kid with a dream.

“These National Guard (pilots) told me how to do it,” Larson said. How?

“Stay in school, study hard, keep out of trouble and stay away from drugs,” Larson said.

And that was the message the New Jersey National Guard Counter-Drug Task Force, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency and officials of CentraState Healthcare System hopes was received by the 150 middle school students who took part in the DEA’s Red Ribbon Campaign event in Freehold last week.

For most of the students, the highlight of the event was the two Blackhawks, a Humvee and a Counter-Drug display that allows the students to try on goggles that create the same vision impairment as alcohol intoxication.

The students weren’t the only ones impressed.

“Having the Soldiers and equipment here and having the students absorb the whole positive message about the dangers of drugs helps me do my job,” said Nelson Ribon, the principal at Freehold Intermediate School. “The whole message they can give the students just reinforces everything we try to teach in the classroom. It’s great stuff.”

The inside is big enough to play a professional football game and its maintenance bays are crammed with enough gleaming new equipment to keep the New Jersey National Guard's massive fleet of vehicles ready to roll in a moment's notice.

But Lt. Gov. Kim Guadagno said the National Guard's $58 million Combined Logistics Training Facility on Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst is far more than an impressive new structure that was 12 years in the making.

"This building was built with blood, sweat and tears and the hope that all of America will be safer because of the work that will go on here," Guadagno said on Dec. 1, 2010.

The first phase of the project, which includes 16 maintenance bays and more than 110,000 square feet of work space opened with a ribbon cutting ceremony.

chanics across the New Jersey National Guard. The facility will consolidate operations from two smaller, aging facilities. A second phase of construction will add an additional 56,000 square feet of work space. Combined, the projects are one of the largest military construction projects in New Jersey in the last 15 years.

Sgt. Lauano Bell said he couldn't wait to start work at his new duty station.

"I was there when they first started planning this building, and they really had the technicians in mind," Bell said. "Looking at the finished product, they really got it right."

Maj. Gen. Glenn K. Rieth, The Adjutant General said Soldiers like Bell will have no shortage of work.

"Over the past five years, we have received 565 new, state-of-the-art military vehicles," Rieth said. "This building is going to allow us to maintain those vehicles to the highest standard." 🇺🇸

Soldiers go through Reconstitution

It was a small group of Soldiers, but they illustrated the vast reach of the New Jersey Army National Guard.

On Wednesday, nearly two dozen Soldiers returning from deployments to Afghanistan, Iraq and Djibouti underwent a reconstitution at Joint Forces Headquarters at Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst.

Although the Soldiers normally serve with units across the New Jersey National Guard, they served overseas with a variety of units. The largest group, 50 Soldiers, spent their yearlong deployment in Afghanistan with the 86th Infantry Brigade Combat Team of the Vermont Army National Guard. Others had returned from a year as an eight-man detachment that flew fixed wing aircraft missions for U.S. AFRICOM in across eastern Africa. The remaining Soldiers were among five New Jerseyans who served in Iraq with The Louisiana Army National Guard's 256th Brigade Combat Team.

Even the group that served in Afghanistan found itself spread across the vast country, with its Soldiers running missions ranging from humanitarian assistance, to hunting Taliban fighters to training the Afghan army and police forces.

"All of us were out there doing something different," said Col. Dennis Devery, who spent the tour overseeing the training of Afghan army and police forces from the NATO Headquarters in Kabul. Devery said the forces are making substantial progress, but that the country as a whole is still plagued by a lack of infrastructure and abject poverty.

Spc. Jesse Violante, 23, spent his time serving with an infantry line company in the restive region near the border with Pakistan. He and the other three New Jersey Soldiers with that company were awarded Combat Infantry Badges on the tour.

"We did the full spectrum of combat operations and we had our fair share of action," Violante said. "I think the Afghan people are coming around. They know what we're trying to do for them."

The pilots who went to Djibouti ended up flying missions to more than a half dozen eastern African countries. Most flights involved transport of high-ranking U.S. AFRICOM staff.

"We got a chance to see a lot of the continent," said Chief Warrant Officer 3 Brett Berlinger.

The pilots also supported missions to vaccinate livestock and to help the local people develop sanitary water wells.

108th CE to get new complex

Story by: Staff Sgt. Armando Vasquez, 108th Wing Public Affairs

With white hard hats and silver shovels, the 108th Wing held a groundbreaking ceremony Dec. 21, 2010 to begin the construction of the 108th Wing Base Civil Engineer Complex on Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst, N.J.

In attendance for the event was Army Maj. Gen. Glenn K. Rieth, the Adjutant General of New Jersey; Air Force Maj. Gen. Maria Falca-Dodson, the Commander of the New Jersey Air National Guard; Air Force Brig. Gen. Michael L. Cuniff, the Commander of the 108th Wing; Air Force Col. Gina Grosso, Commander of the 87th Air Base Wing; delegates from Senator Robert Menendez' office, Ms. Scarlett Rajske and Mr. Richard Locklear, and other distinguished visitors.

After thanking everyone in attendance, both Rieth and Cuniff told all in attendance that this was a long and overdue project and a most deserved one for the 108th Civil Engineer Squadron.

Lt. Col. Paul E. Novello, Commander of the 108th CES, also thanked everyone attending the ceremony and stated how he has been waiting for this new complex since his enlistment into the 108th Wing back in the '80s.

After having won the Major General Robert H. Curtin Award for the Air Force Outstanding Civil Engineer Unit Award in 2008 and then deploying to the Middle East from December 2009 through June 2010, there is no more deserving group of Airmen, said Novello about the new complex.

The $5.9 million project will replace the 108th CES' current facilities, which include four World War II temporary wood frame structures.

The 108th Wing Base CEC will support daily activities associated with maintaining/repairing base infrastructure and facilities for the 108th Wing, as well as the 108th CES' mobility and readiness requirements.

The contract for this project was awarded to Puente Construction Enterprises Inc., which is located in Woodbury, N.J., and is expected to take approximately 18 months for completion and be operational by April 30, 2012.

Imagine laying the legal foundation for a country.

That is the case for Lt. Col. Daniel Mitola, 177th Fighter Wing Judge Advocate General, who is currently serving in the Republic of Liberia as the Senior Legal Mentor in support of Operation Onward Liberty.

"There are about 50 of us here helping to guide a brand new Armed Forces of Liberia as the country attempts to rebuild after many years of civil war," said Mitola. "We are assisting the first law clerks and legal officers ever appointed to the AFL in administering a military justice system very similar to ours."

The list of the team's accomplishments is broad: They assisted in drafting a plan for providing logistical support for the national elections, they also helped in drafting military police standard operating procedures, and creating officer and enlisted leadership courses, which included courses on ethical decision making. They helped draft the AFL's Standing Rules of Engagement, which are the basis for their emergency response plan to aid civilian authorities during natural or man-made disasters. The team has also helped guide the Liberians through several major investigations.

tice and Mitola's team helped train the first ever legal officer and legal clerks in administering military justice.

"Prior to implementing the military justice program, punishment and incarcerations were imposed in an arbitrary fashion, adversely affecting good order and discipline," said Mitola.

In his time-off, Mitola and his team visits a local orphanage to help out.

"There are about 50 children there from infants to teenagers," said Mitola. "We helped them with rebuilding their roof, but mostly bring candy and play with the children." 🍬

NGB recognizes 108th Airman

Around the 108th Wing, when one hears the name Master Sgt. Lisel White, the first thought that often pops into mind is, "singer of the national anthem." But she has a job in the 108th that touches every Airman and was recently given an award by the National Guard Bureau for her contributions.

White was the recipient of the Equal Opportunity Professional of the Year Award that was presented at the 2010 NGB Equal Opportunity training workshop held in California on Sept. 2. This prestigious award is given to the Equal Opportunity Officer or non-commissioned officer who has distinguished themselves through human relations and equal opportunity in the Air Guard.

A graduate of the Defense Equal Opportunity Management Institute, White has returned to the schoolhouse on a number of occasions to be an adjunct instructor for the reserve component course. The intense coursework focuses on many topics that make the students look at themselves and recognize their own personal issues and prejudices.

She said that it is exciting to see students get the "Ah Ha" moment – when they finally understand social issues from another student's perspective. "At that point, I feel like I have done my job," she said.

White says she was always one who looked out for people who had been mistreated; she believes in god and fair for all people.

"I got into a career field that I strongly believe in," she said. "I have a passion for it."

When being presented with the award, White's mother, who flew in from Georgia for the special occasion and her sister and brother-in-law, who live in California, joined her on the stage.

When she isn't busy singing at Wing events or working in the EO office, White is actively involved in the music ministry at her church, Living Faith Christian Center in Pennsauken. She is also the mother to three grown children, Elise, and twins, Salina and Steven. Steven is a master sergeant in the Air Force stationed at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio. 🇺🇸

AIRMEN PARTICIPATE IN FAM 10

By Master Sgt. Mark C. Olsen, 177th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Iraq, Kuwait or even Afghanistan – these are names we in the military associate when we talk about the desert.

One that doesn't come as quickly to mind is the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan, which is where Col. Robert C. Bolton and Master Sgt. Andrew J. Moseley deployed in support of Falcon Air Meet 2010, or FAM 10, from October through November.

Bolton served as the commander of the U.S. Air Force forces - the first New Jersey wing commander to do so and only the second Air Guard commander in the exercise's history. The unit he commanded was comprised of more than 340 Guard and active duty Airmen, including Moseley who served as a videographer with the Colorado Air National Guard Public Affairs video production team that covered the event.

"FAM 10 provided realistic combat training scenarios for air force pilots and maintainers from Jordan, Pakistan, the United Arab Emirates and the United States of America," said Bolton.

The two-week exercise, which was held at the Royal Jordanian Air Base in Azraq, began on Oct. 19 and brought together the various teams from the region to share doctrine and procedures, strengthen relationships and improve regional security. Jordan is located directly east of Israel, south of Syria and west of Saudi Arabia.

A friendly competition is also the highlight of the exercise that provides unique training experiences. The event previously focused more on the F-16 competition, but has evolved into an exercise, concentrating on tactics and close-air support operations. The event has been judged by the 140th Wing Colorado Air National Guard for the past five years due to their strong friendship with Jordan and their State Partnership Program.

"The Public Affairs team worked day and night to videotape and photograph the event," said Moseley. "We also produced a video, which captures the essence of the event and serves to foster interest and participation from other countries." The video can be seen on YouTube.

The grand finale included a special forces' hostage rescue demonstration and bombing competition featuring jets from all involved countries and two B-52s from the U.S. Air Force.

FAM 10 culminated with a series of closing ceremonies where each of the team commanders spoke.

"I videotaped the closing ceremonies and listened to Col. Bolton's closing remarks, where he suggested that the Falcon Air Meet be renamed the Brothers for Life Exercise," said Moseley.

"I would also like to echo the (Air Force commander's) remarks," said Prince Faisal bin Al Hussein of Jordan. "This meet is all about relationships. It has been a fantastically successful exercise because it is all about getting together, learning to work together, getting to know one another."

ESGR visits CSSB at FIG

By Sgt. Wayne Woolley, Department of Military and Veterans Affairs Public Affairs

The four-member bicycle patrol unit of the Gloucester Township Police Department will be short one officer for the next year.

Officer Lisa Hatcher will become Staff Sgt. Lisa Hatcher and will be serving in Afghanistan with the New Jersey Army National Guard's 119th Combat Sustainment Support Battalion.

Her absence will leave a noticeable gap in the 99-member department.

"She is a great officer who has a real strong presence on the street," said her boss, Capt. Jeffrey Weiserth. "We'll just pull together when she's gone. Everyone knows what she's going off to do."

Weiserth took the opportunity on Dec. 8 to see exactly what his officer will do as a Soldier when she arrives in Afghanistan in February. He was among 19 New Jersey employers who traveled to Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa. on New Jersey Army National Guard helicopters for a trip sponsored by the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve.

The federally-funded organization works to strengthen the bonds between employers and military reservists and organizes trips known as "Boss Lifts" to get employers to training sites where National Guard and other reserve units are making final preparations for combat deployments.

Lt. Gov. Christine Guadagno and Maj. Gen. Glenn K. Rieth, The Adjutant General, were on the trip along with state Sens. Diane Allen and David Norcross and Assemblyman Gilbert Wilson.

Rieth, the commander of the 8,300-member New Jersey National Guard, told the employers and lawmakers that Boss Lifts are a critical part of the effort to raise awareness among community leaders about the sacrifices made by Citizen Soldiers and Airmen.

"We are an all-volunteer force in a conflict that has lasted nearly 10 years and will likely continue in some form for the rest of our lives," Rieth said. "In order to be able to serve, our Soldiers and Airmen need the support of their employers. It's critical."

Hatcher has the support of her entire department.

"They've been great," said Hatcher, who has been on the force in Gloucester Township for three years.

It will be her second deployment to a combat zone. A logistic specialist, she spent 2004 in Iraq.

"This will be a whole different environment with new challenges," Hatcher said. "But we're doing the kind of training we need to do to get ready."

At one point during the training, as her civilian boss, Weiserth watched, Hatcher led a squad of her fellow Soldiers at full sprint into an urban warfare training structure to practice techniques for how to enter a building filled with suspected insurgents.

"That's how she is on the street, no-nonsense," Weiserth said, after watching his officer bark orders and kick in a door to enter the building. "To see the training she and all these other Soldiers do to get ready, it's impressive." 🇺🇸

AIR GUARD VISITS ALBANIA

Story and photos by Master Sgt. Mark C. Olsen, 177th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Through the State Partnership Program, New Jersey's Citizen Airmen and Soldiers have travelled to the Republic of Albania to train their counterparts. In turn, Albania has sent Soldiers and Airmen to New Jersey to receive specialized training.

Lt. Col. Richard Reitberger and State Command Chief Master Sgt. Michael Francis, Joint Force Headquarters – Air and Master Sgt. Anthony Boccelli, a Fire Chief with the 177th Fighter Wing, visited Albania in September 19-23, 2010.

"The State Partnership Program is an exchange of ideas among equals and will continue to be a benefit for both Albania and New Jersey," said Reitberger.

The mission's focus was on joint Air Guard – Albanian Armed Forces training, combined officer/NCO training and wildfire prevention – an issue important to arid Albania.

The Air Guard team met with Col. Arqile Kokedhima and Lt. Col. Halil Kucama, commanders of the Training and Doctrine Command and the Noncommissioned Officer Academy respectively. Providing the Albanian input on overall NCO training was Albanian Armed Forces Command Sgt. Maj. Proletar Panxha.

Discussion centered on education, the possibility of New Jersey sending over instructors and combined training for officers and NCOs at the schoolhouse. The Air Guard contingent toured the schoolhouse during which, Reitberger addressed a classroom of newly minted NCOs.

Driving to Tirana International Airport, the team met with Rinas Air Base commander Col. Raqi Qarri whom Boccelli presented a binder of materials that he had prepared based on his experiences preventing and combating wildfires.

The Jersey Guardsmen then drove to Farke Air Base, where they met with base commander Col. Frederik Beltoja who proudly showed off the newly completed control tower and fire station, as well as the new construction at the base.

The next day Reitberger and Boccelli attended wildfire meetings at the Interior Ministry while Francis traveled with Panxha to Kucova Air Base to meet with the base commander Col. Flamur Hoxha who spoke about his wildfire concerns and how they could impact the base's mission.

While some of the equipment at the base was not as modern as that found in New Jersey, the runway easily rivaled its American counterparts in length and size.

Despite the visit's short duration, the team was able to identify numerous potential unit and individual training missions, as well as other needs that the Office of Defense Cooperation and possibly New Jersey might be able to address.

A 108th Wing Airman took the Air Force's top education award at the Noncommissioned Officer Academy on Nov. 11, 2010.

The highest honor went to Tech. Sgt. Carmine Giangeruso who received the John L. Levitow Honor Graduate Award, which is named after Medal of Honor recipient Airman 1st Class John L. Levitow and is presented to the top professional military education graduate from Air Force Airman Leadership Schools.

New Jersey pulled in three additional awards: Tech. Sgts. Shane A. Clark and John P. Asure of the 108th and Tech. Sgt. John A. Salayda Jr., of the 177th Fighter Wing each claimed a Distinguished Graduate Award, which is presented to the top ten percent students in the class. It is based on objective and performance evaluations, demonstrated leadership and performance as a team player.

Graduation from the NCO Academy, which is located at I.G. Brown Air National Guard Training and Education Center, McGhee Tyson Air National Guard Base, located near Knoxville, Tenn., is required in order to get promoted to master sergeant.

The New Jersey contingent was comprised of 177th Fighter Wing Tech. Sgts. Melissa P. Blackledge, Lauren A. Humphrey, Kenneth D. Johnson, Joann Jones, Suzanne M. Knight, Brian G. McDevitt, John A. ## New GI Bill Carries Different Eligibility, Benefits

Sgt. 1st Class Kryn P. Westhoven, Joint Force Headquarters Public Affairs

Recently, about two dozen Soldiers filled the conference room at Joint Forces Headquarters eager to hear how their recent deployment could mobilize their education opportunities through state and federal education programs.

The overview of the federal Veterans Administration latest GI Bill was provided by Capt. Ben Stoner of the New Jersey Army National Guard's Education Office. Stoner called Chapter 1607, the new Post 9-11 program, transformational and how it is the biggest change in the funding of post-secondary learning since the original GI after World War II.

Unlike Montgomery GI bill programs, Chapter 1607 provides three separate types of benefit payments to those who have at least 90 days of aggregate active service after Sept. 10, 2001.

The VA will directly pay schools for tuition and fees equal to what each state's most expensive state-run school charges for in-state, undergraduate study.

Students who are attending school more than halftime, seven credits or more, and are physically in a classroom setting at least for one course per semester are entitled to a monthly basic housing allowance for an E-5 with dependents for the zip code the school is located.

The third benefit is a stipend of up to $1,000 a year for books and supplies.

Service members with 36 or more months of active duty will receive 100 percent of the three payments and those with less than three-years will receive a prorated amount. For example, the majority of the 50th Infantry Brigade Combat Team Soldiers would be at the 60 percent level for the 12 plus-month deployment.

For more information contact the state Education Office at 1-888-859-5999 or 609-562-0711 or visit them on the web at www.nj.gov/military/education/index.html.

FRC increases grants

The New Jersey National Guard State Family Readiness Council has increased the amounts of family and business grants up to $5,000 and $10,000, respectively. Both grants are known as TIER I grants.

TIER II family grants are also available to New Jersey Army and Air National Guard non-deployed servicemembers who served on State Active Duty or State Missions (e.g., hurricanes, floods, border missions) for more than 20 consecutive days. Servicemembers meeting these criteria are eligible to apply for a financial hardship grant up to $1,500.

Applications are available at all New Jersey Army and Air National Guard Family Assistance Centers.

Vested interest

Sgt. 1st Class Marcus Baker, front, packs bulletproof vests while Staff Sgt. Toby Tirrito, back, both with Joint Force Headquarters - New Jersey Homeland Security Center for Excellence, removes donated vests from their boxes on Oct. 14, 2010. The vests, all of which have expired, were donated by the New Jersey State Police; part of a larger vests donation of approximately 2,000 vests from various state and local agencies under the Department of Justice's International Criminal Investigative Training and Assistance Program. These vests despite having past their expiration dates are still useable and will be shipped to the Republic of Albania under the civilian to civilian portion the State Partnership Program. The vests have been sent by container ship to Albania and are due to arrive there mid-January. New Jersey and the Republic of Albania have been partners in the State Partnership Program for 17 years with New Jersey providing Albania critical assistance to help it join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) on April 1, 2009. ## Community Covenant signed by key Army and civilian leaders

Logistics and Training Facility, Joint Base McGuire-Dix-Lakehurst on Nov. 9, 2010. The Community Covenant program is designed to foster and sustain effective state and community partnerships with the Army to improve the quality of life for Soldiers and their Families. While the Community Covenant is an Army program, it extends to the other Military Services as well, recognizing that many community efforts support all Service Members and their Families regardless of the uniform they wear. ## Honored company
