Dear Counsel:

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF AMY LEUTH, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF IRVINGTON, ESSEX COUNTY, AGENCY DKT. NO. 294-10/14

I have reviewed the tenure charges filed in the above-captioned matter on October 2, 2014, and respondent's answer filed on October 17, 2014. Respondent's answer asserts that the tenure charges are procedurally defective in that respondent was not given 15 days from receipt of the charges to submit a response for consideration by the Board prior to its vote on certification of the charges, in violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(3); further, respondent asserts that neither she nor her representative was given notice of the Board's vote to certify the charges within 3 business days, in violation of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(5). The Board has now requested that it be permitted to withdraw the charges, without prejudice, because of possible procedural deficiencies.

Under the circumstances, I approve the withdrawal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6. The matter is hereby dismissed without prejudice.

Sincerely,

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE	:
HEARING OF FEDERICO CRUZ,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
CAMDEN STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL	:	DECISION
DISTRICT, CAMDEN COUNTY.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of chronic and excessive absenteeism and conduct unbecoming, and inefficiency against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate his employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on his behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(h), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from his tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from his tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

AGENCY DKT. NO. 343-11/14

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF FEDERICO CRUZ, CAMDEN STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT, CAMDEN COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

For the Petitioner, Louis R. Lessig, Esq.
No pleading by or on behalf of Respondent.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on November 24, 2014, through certification by the State Superintendent of the Camden school district (petitioner) of tenure charges of chronic and excessive absenteeism, unbecoming conduct and inefficiency against Federico Cruz (respondent), a tenured teacher in petitioner's employ. Following his review of the charges as filed, together with the supporting evidence,[1] the State Superintendent certified the charges to the Commissioner on November 21st and provided respondent with written notice of the certified charges on the same date.

On November 26, 2014 the Department directed respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the date such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner." It further advised that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent the granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. Neither the copy of the Department's notice which was sent by regular mail nor the certified copy has been returned to the Commissioner as undeliverable. To date, no answer to the tenure charges has been received from or on behalf of respondent.

The charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by petitioner indicate that in recent years respondent has received unsatisfactory ratings in meeting curriculum objectives, managing classes, implementing instructional techniques, creating and submitting lesson plans, and responding to the guidance and support of his supervisors. Respondent's absences have also been excessive. Deeming these allegations to be admitted – due to respondent's failure to respond to same – the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charges have been proven, and that they warrant respondent's dismissal from tenured employment.

Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to petitioner, and respondent is dismissed from his tenured teaching staff position as of the filing date of this decision. A copy of this decision shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as it deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

NATURE OF DISPUTE

In accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b), on November 7, 2014, the New Milford Board of Education ("Board") filed with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies & Disputes tenure charges against Lawrence Henchey ("Henchey") seeking to dismiss him from employment as a certificated Language Arts teacher based on five (5) Charges:

Charge No. 1 alleges that Henchey has consistently demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in his teaching skills throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-14 school years and as a result of the significant negative impact that his poor teaching performance has upon the quality of education that his students receive, Henchey must be dismissed from his position.

Charge No. 2 alleges that Henchey has consistently demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in his teaching skills throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years despite intensive and comprehensive assistance that has been continuously offered to him by the District Administration and his colleagues, and through multiple corrective action plans designed to address and improve his teaching deficiencies, which demonstrates either an inability or an unwillingness to improve, and which inability or unwillingness to improve constitutes inefficiency warranting dismissal from his position.

Charge No. 3 alleges that as a result of Henchey's consistent failure to, among other things, implement District initiatives; implement a more interactive method of instruction; integrate core content in lesson plans and classroom instructional practices;

use effective teaching strategies; implement consistent grading practices; and meet the professional expectancies set forth in the New Jersey Professional Standards for Teachers, Board Policies and his job description, Henchey's increments were withheld by the Board for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, and which ongoing inefficiencies and ineffectiveness warrant dismissal from his position.

Charge No. 4 alleges that in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to demonstrate effective and efficient teaching performance during the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, Henchey has failed, since 2002, to remediate certain deficiencies and demonstrate improvement in areas of specific concern, including but not limited to, the use of varied instructional techniques/student-centered activities and the provision of adequate lesson closure, and which inability or unwillingness to improve, and the resulting impact on the education received by his students, constitutes inefficiency warranting dismissal.

Charge No. 5 alleges that, in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to implement effective and efficient teaching strategies, and in addition to his unwillingness or inability to improve upon the same, Henchey has also demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years which has included a lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him, and which unprofessionalism constitutes incapacity and conduct warranting dismissal.

On November 21, 2014, within the applicable 15-day timeline (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)), Henchey filed with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies & Disputes, an Answer and Affirmative Defenses to the Tenure Charges. However, Henchey did not file a Motion to Dismiss in lieu of an Answer within the same applicable 15-day timeline. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)1.

On December 1, 2014, Kathleen Duncan, Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes notified the parties' respective representatives (1) that the Tenure Charges have been reviewed and deemed sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary and (2) that the dispute was referred to the undersigned Arbitrator for resolution in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. On December 8, 2014, during a telephone conference, Counsel for Mr. Henchey notified Board Counsel and the undersigned of his intent to file a "Motion to Dismiss" the tenure charges. Ground rules governing the motion and hearing dates were discussed and set. The undersigned memorialized the results of the telephone conference in writing on the same day:

> In addition, Mr. Pincus has notified Mr. LaPira and I of his intent to file a motion to dismiss the certified tenure charges. Since an Answer has been filed, I regard the motion as one for summary judgment and I agree, in an exercise of discretion only, to decide that portion of the motion that is not subject to a genuine dispute of material fact. The motion schedule is as follows: December 10 (motion papers due via email and in MS Word format); December 19 (opposition papers due via email and in MS Word format); and December 26, 2014 (reply papers, if any, due via email and in MS Word format). The motion will be decided in advance of the first day of hearing. I have set down five days of hearing as follows: January 8, 12, 13, 14 & 15, 2015. All hearing days shall begin at 9:30 a.m. and conclude by 5:00 p.m. The hearing will be held at the administrative offices of the New Milford Board of Education. Testimony should be very limited with respect to past incidents, events, etc. that are a matter of record and that were not contemporaneously contested. Finally, the hearing will be governed by the Labor Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1c.

The parties' representatives complied with the briefing schedule. In addition, the undersigned asked the parties to address, by no later than January 2, 2015, Arbitrator Walt De Treaux's Opinion and Award in State Operated School District of the City of Camden and Leon Mashore, et. al. Agency Docket Nos. 303-10/14; 290-9/14; 300-10/14; and 291-9/14. The parties' representatives each submitted a written position statement in response.

THE POSITION OF LAWRENCE HENCHEY

Henchey first posits that Charges Nos. 1-4 must be dismissed due to non-compliance with Section 25 of the Act. Section 25 mandates the filing of an inefficiency charge by the Superintendent in instances where a teacher is "rated ineffective or partially ineffective in an annual summative evaluation" for at least two years. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(1) and (2). It is not disputed that the first two years of the TEACHNJ evaluation process under Section 25 encompass 2013-14 and 2014-15. Henchey observes that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e) provides that "[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district. Results of evaluations shall be used to identify and provide professional development to teaching staff members. Results of evaluations shall be provided to the commissioner, as requested on a regular basis."

Henchey further submits that the State Board of Education adopted and made effective comprehensive evaluation regulations entitled "Components of Teacher Evaluation" effective October 7, 2013 (45 N.J.R. 2211 (a)). These regulations required that teaching staff members be observed at least three times per school year but not less than once a semester; with at least one of the observations being announced, including a pre-observation conference; with the remaining two observations announced or unannounced. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4. Moreover, teaching staff members with corrective action plans, like Henchey, must receive a fourth observation in addition to the observations required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4 (See, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(j)(1), as well as a mid-year evaluation by the School Improvement Panel, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1).

According to Henchey, the Board did not comply with the 2013-14 legal requirements. More specifically, in the 2013-14 school year, the District completed three of the four observations required by the regulations then in effect, and it did not perform a mid-year evaluation required from and by the School Improvement Panel ("SIP") (Charge No. 1, ¶¶19, 21, 23). Only a year-end evaluation was afforded Henchey (Charge No. 1 ¶26). Henchey points out, in response to Interrogatory No. 24, the Board admits that it did not conduct and/or provide him with a mid-year evaluation in 2013-2014 (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶6). While the Board counters that the Building Principal met weekly with Henchey to address progress on his corrective action plan, Henchey retorts that the Building Principal does not constitute the SIP contemplated and required to perform the mid-year evaluation. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1(a), the SIP consists not only of the Building Principal, but a Vice-Principal, and a teacher who is chosen in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1(b) in consultation with the majority representative. Henchey maintains that because of these omissions, both legal and procedural, it is clear that the Tenure Charges should be dismissed as a matter of law with respect to Henchey's 2013-2014 evaluations and observations.

Henchey further argues that the Charges must be dismissed with respect to the Board's reliance on Henchey's 2012-2013 (and prior) observations and summative evaluations. According to Henchey, because the full implementation of TEACHNJ did not go into effect until the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year, the Board's reliance on the evaluations that it conducted in 2012-2013 (and prior) are expressly prohibited and premature: "The regulations implementing TEACHNJ, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et. seq.; the provisions governing the content of evaluation and components, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.1; the procedures and components on rubric approval by the Commissioner, N.J.A.C. 6A:5.1; the procedures concerning the timing, form, and nature of teacher evaluations, observations, and corrective action plans, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4 and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5; as well as other components of the subchapter sections demand the conclusion that neither the Legislature in enacting TEACHNJ in August 2012 nor the Commissioner in establishing the regulatory scheme adopted in October 2013 intended that the Act be implemented or that teachers become subject to evaluation before the commencement of the 2013-2014 school year." (Henchey's Brief, at page 10).

Further, Henchey acknowledges that TEACHNJ allowed for the adoption of evaluation rubrics by December 31, 2012, however, it is clear that those rubrics which the Board used that year were different from those used in 2013-2014 and had not been approved by the Commissioner of Education. Even if they were the same (which they were not), the utilization of any preliminary evaluation rubrics (by no later than January 31, 2013) were seen by Legislature to be no more than a "pilot program" to test and refine those rubrics. They were not to be used to fully implement the Act. Indeed that is why N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e) provides that the implementation does not occur until the 2013-2014 school year. It thus states that "[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district."

Henchey further observes that the District did not have a SIP in place until the 2013-2014 school year:

> Conspicuously absent from the minutia filled 46 pages of tenure charges is any reference to the SIP being in place for 2012-2013. The undisputed fact is that the District did not have a SIP in place until September 2013 (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶8, Exhibit C). Inasmuch as both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1 both require that each school within a district establish a SIP that conducts evaluations and oversees the mentoring program, the establishment of the SIP sometime in 2013-2014 precludes it from being seen or determined to be functioning during 2012-2013.

According to Henchey, the clear intent of the newly enacted evaluation and observation statutory scheme was to afford teachers and administrators/evaluators to become familiar with and, through trial and error, practice the new system and its requirements during the 2012-2013 school year with formal implementation commencing the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year. The purpose was to train certified teaching staff members and evaluators on the evaluation instruments and procedures and for the Department of Education to prepare and finalize its regulation, which later became known as ACHIEVENJ and which did not become effective until October 2013.

In further support of Henchey's position, Henchey relies upon NJDOE regulatory guidance for tenure charge cases implicating the 2013-2014 school year (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶10, Exhibit E). Thus, on page 4 of that guidance, it was specifically asked:

> Q. Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-2013) toward tenure decisions?
> A. No – the only item "on the clock" is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-2013 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-2014 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when the summative rating "clock" (i.e. teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

Since Henchey's 2012-2013 annual summative evaluation (if not also those occurring in prior school years) is precluded from consideration by the Commissioner or an arbitrator, according to Henchey, the Board lacks the required two consecutive deficient performance evaluations necessary to bring tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, as non-compliance bars consideration of the charges. Indeed, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) states:

> [n]otwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear > the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed. (Emphasis supplied).

Under the above-quoted language, either the Commissioner or the Arbitrator must dismiss tenure charges alleging inefficiency if it is determined that a school district did not comply with these uniform observation and evaluation procedures, guidelines and processes.

In support of Henchey's statutory and regulatory analysis, Henchey directs the Arbitrator's attention to analogous TEACHNJ arbitrations. In IMO the Tenure Charge Hearing of Inefficiency of Sandra Cheatham and the School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 226-8/14, Arbitrator Stephen M. Bluth dismissed procedurally defective charges of inefficiency and ordered the respondent reinstated with full back pay and benefits. He held that "[s]imply put, the passage of TEACHNJ superseded any evaluation procedures that had been in place prior to its enactment. Thus, in my view, the "clock" began with the 2013-2014 school year." See, http://www.state.nj.us/education/ legal/teachnj/2014/oct/420-14.pdf (slip op at 11) (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶11, Exhibit F). Arbitrator Bluth further opined that the Department of Education's guides (cited above), make it clear that the no evaluation in the 2012-2013 school year would impact tenure decisions (slip op at 13). Finally, according to Henchey, Arbitrator Bluth rejected the contention that, if a teacher is exonerated under Section 25 of the Act, a district may advance a Section 8 claim of inefficiency by which a teacher may be dismissed under the conditions that are delineated under that section.

Mr. Henchey further relies upon In the Matter of the Tenure Charge of Inefficiency against Neil Thomas and the School District of Newark, (Agency Dkt. No. 244-9/14). Arbitrator Robert Simmelkjaer there held: (a) as designee of the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(5), he could "examine the charge" to determine whether the procedural requirements necessary to file an inefficiency charge under Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act had been met (slip op. at 33); (b) given that TEACHNJ and its implementing NJDOE regulations had not been enacted when the district conducted its pilot program, the district could not rely on its 2012-2013 evaluations to charge the teacher with inefficiency absent adherence to each of the substantive evaluation standards of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 (slip op. at 40); (c) having filed tenure charges pursuant to Section 25 of TEACHNJ, ostensibly based upon two consecutive years of "partially effective" ratings, the district was obligated to use only those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the Commissioner pursuant to P.L. 2012, c. 26.(slip op at 44); and (d) that the district could not proceed under Section 8 of TEACHNJ (slip op at 46).

Based on the foregoing statutory and regulatory interpretations, Henchey asks the Arbitrator in this case to dismiss Charges Nos. 1-4 for the District's non-compliance with Section 25 and implementing regulations.

Lastly, Henchey seeks dismissal of Charge No. 5 based on principles of double jeopardy. Charge No. 5 alleges that in addition to being inefficient, Henchey has demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school year, which has included a complete lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him. Incorporated by reference from Charges Nos. 1-4 are the facts that Henchey's salary and adjustment increments were withheld by the Board upon the recommendation of the Superintendent of Schools for the school years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014. (See, e.g., Charge No. 1 ¶¶ 16 and 28. See, Board Doc. No. 56 (h) – Letter and Board Resolution from Board Secretary Michael Sawicz to Henchey dated July 16, 2013; Board Doc. No.57 (p) – Letter from Superintendent Polizzi to Henchey dated June 5, 2014; and, Board Doc. No. 57 (r) – Letter and Board Resolution from Board Secretary Michael Sawicz to Henchey dated June 24, 2014).

According to Henchey, any reasonable and rational reading of those letters, the statement of reasons given in support of the withholdings, and these tenure charges make it evident that the allegations of Charge No. 5 are subsumed in, and made part of, the reasons underlying the withholdings. It is also clear that, in exercising its discretion to withhold the salary and adjustment increments, the Board at no time reserved any rights or gave any indication that tenure charges might follow for the same conduct. As such, the Board made a conscious and deliberate determination that that was the penalty it had elected to exact from Henchey for the conduct alleged. It gave no notice, required by its own policies, that the conduct might further give rise to the filing of tenure charges. (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶12, Exhibit G).

In support of this last argument, Henchey relies upon longstanding arbitral decisions in the private sector (citations omitted), the application of double jeopardy in public sector disciplinary proceedings and, moreover, the application the principle of double jeopardy by TEACHNJ arbitrators, including the undersigned. See, e.g., In the Matter of Ricky Porter (MSB, decided March 16, 2007) (considering reprimand letter previously issued to be penalty and rejecting attempt to impose further punishment); In the Matter of Victor Onwuzuruike (MSB, decided August 9, 2006) (reversing the removal of an employee, finding he had previously been disciplined for the incidents at issue, via official written reprimands that were placed in his personnel file by his supervisor; the Board, thus, rejected appointing authority's attempt to impose double punishment for the same offense and its attempt to revive a stale charge to impose a greater penalty); and I/M/O Jill Buglovsky (Decided December 21, 2012).

Based on the foregoing, Henchey argues: "It necessarily follows that these double jeopardy principles find particular applicability to the facts of this case. The doctrine must be considered not only in determining whether the Board stated a cause of action on which charges could be predicated (See, Answer to Tenure Charges, First Affirmative Defense), but further in considering whether any increased penalty may be imposed should it be determined that the Board could have legitimately proceeded" (Henchey Brief at page 20).

THE BOARD'S OPPOSITION

The Board does not necessarily deny the foregoing Section 25 deficits. Rather, the Board notes that it could not have complied with Section 25 prior to the conclusion of the 2015-16 school year. The Board reasons that it filed tenure charges against Mr. Henchey pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10-16 (Section 8) and that it complied with the procedural prerequisites to dismissing Henchey that apply to a Section 8 dismissal. The Board refers to Section 25 as a "streamlined process", noting the comparatively more expeditious timeframes (up to 45 days in the aggregate) and the elimination of the need for a Board of Education to file a comprehensive Statement of Evidence (See, pages 5 and 6 of Board's Opposition Brief). The Board argues that Section 25 was never intended to negate (nor did it negate) the authority of a board of education to file tenure charges for, inter alia, inefficiency under Section 8.

In addition to the distinction of timelines for inefficiency charges filed under Section 25 and Section 8, the Board observes that the statutory language of TEACHNJ leaves no doubt that there are two distinct means by which tenure charges alleging inefficiency may be filed:

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 set forth considerations for the arbitrator when considering inefficiency charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and addresses whether the matter "...before the arbitrator pursuant to Section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to Section 25 of this act..." (emphasis added). This language leaves no doubt that Section 25 is one way of pursuing inefficiency charges, otherwise there would be no reason to include the qualifying phrase "pursuant to Section 25 of this act."

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(a) states, "Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 or any other section of law..." (emphasis added). Clearly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 contemplates inefficiency charges brought under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq.; if it did not, those quoted provisions would have no meaning.

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) also recognizes the provisions of filing inefficiency charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 in its phrase, "[n]otwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law..."

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(d) states that only rubric evaluations may be used to determine inefficiency charges "for purposes of this Section." If rubric evaluations were the only means by which inefficiency charges could go forth, there would have been no Legislative purpose in stating, "for purposes of this Section."

- Finally, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b) sets forth the timelines for filing charges "for reasons of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3." By specifying that this section applies only to inefficiency charges filed under Section 25, the Commissioner is acknowledging that inefficiency charges may indeed be filed through alternate statutory provisions.

According to the Board, all of the phrases cited above would be meaningless if boards of education could only file tenure charges that included claims of inefficiency under Section 25. The Board relies upon the well-recognized rule of statutory construction that an interpretation that would render any part of a statute inoperative, superfluous or meaningless is to be avoided. See, e.g., Hoffman v. Hock, 8. N.J. 397, 406-07 (1952). As such, there is no basis for Henchey's claim that tenure charges for inefficiency can only be brought pursuant to Section 25. The Board submits that Henchey's position must be rejected as contrary to the intent of the legislature: the concept that inefficiency tenure charges can only be brought at the conclusion of the 2014-15 school year, meaning that a district would have to suffer through at least a third year of inefficiency for any teacher deemed inefficient in the prior two years, is an absurd result that could not have been intended by the Legislature. See, Schwartz v. Dover Public Schools, 180 N.J. Super. 210, 226-27 (App. Div. 1981)("Reason is said to be the 'soul of the law' and the sense of a statute should control over its literal terms. Interpretations which lead to absurd or unreasonable results should be avoided").

The Board, most notably, asserts that it did not plead Section 25 as the basis for the tenure charges. Cf. State Operated School District for the City of Newark [Brady,

Thomas and Cheatham cases]. Accordingly, the Board contends that the core rationale for dismissal of the tenure charges in the aforementioned Newark line of cases does not support Henchey's position. On the contrary, the arbitrators in the Newark matters did not ring Section 8's death knell, but rather, acknowledged the existence of Section 8 as a means of filing tenure charges for inefficiency that was unfortunately bypassed in the District's pleadings. The Board insists that there is not one shred of evidence that the instant charges were filed under Section 25 (as alleged by Henchey). Although the Board acknowledges that Henchey did not have two years' worth of ineffective or partially effective evaluations under an approved rubric when it filed the charges in October 2014, which is why the charges were filed under Section 8, nonetheless, the grounds for dismissing Henchey pursuant to Section 8 are abundant in nature.[1]

The Board further observes that other arbitrators have upheld tenure dismissals under Section 8 in closely analogous circumstances. The Board refers to In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jose Martinez and the School District of the Township of Mahwah, Bergen County, Agency Dkt. No. 167-7/14 (De Treux)(reviewing observations commencing with the 2007-08 school year and continuing through 2013-14, including the withholding of salary increments for the latter three consecutive years of Martinez's career); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Dr. Audrey Cuff and Cumberland

[1] The Board notes that Henchey has accumulated at least two years' worth of poor evaluations, as evidenced by not only his 2012-13 and 2013-14 evaluations, but also the Corrective Action Plans in place for 2012-13 and 2013-14 (each pertaining to concerns about to his teaching performance for the prior school year), and the withholding of his employment and adjustment salary increments, for reasons relating to his teaching performance, for the 2013-14 school year. Moreover, the Board asks the Arbitrator to observe that the McRel evaluation rubric, which the Board adopted on December 17, 2012, has been specifically approved by the Department of Education as complying with the law's requirements. See http://www.state.nj.us/education/AchieveNJ/teacher/approvedlist.pdf.

Regional School District Board of Education, Agency Dkt. No. 71-3/14 (Gerber)(sustaining charges of, among other things, inefficiency based on charges filed in March of 2014, notwithstanding non-compliance with Section 25); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Edgar Chavez, State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 269-9/12 (Brown)(dismissal of Chavez upheld on inefficiency grounds pursuant to Section 8); and In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Felicia Pugliese, State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Dkt. No. 272-9/12 (Brent)(dismissal of Pugliese on inefficiency grounds after two years of unacceptable ratings and argument that tenure charges were premature was rejected – no compelling evidence to support Henchey's arguments that TEACHNJ's passage created a state-wide hiatus of at least two years in preferring tenure charges for inefficiency).

The Board further asserts that it would have been impossible to file Section 25 tenure charges under the existing set of facts, as the tenure charges also allege unbecoming conduct as well as Henchey's inability or unwillingness to improve his teaching performance (i.e., incapacity or insubordination constituting other just cause). Here, reasons the Board, the tenure charges against Henchey are factually quite similar to those in Martinez and Cuff, where the arbitrators found that those teachers' inefficient teaching continued regardless of the assistance offered by the school districts. According to the Board, those are essentially tenure charges for gross incompetency, or incapacity, reasons that have led to dismissal of teachers in the past. In the present matter, the Board specifically charged that Henchey has either an "...inability or an unwillingness to improve..." his teaching in various places,[2] and that theme is consistent throughout the tenure charges (emphasis added). The Board maintains that Henchey is not charged with inefficiency alone, but with incompetency and incapacity: "There can be no question, then, that the Charges 1 through 4 are not limited solely to inefficiency, but include incompetency as well. For that reason, the Board submits that it properly proceeded under Section 8 (Boards' Opposition Brief at page 18). The Board emphatically states that the legislature could not have intended to require a school district to file two separate tenure charge proceedings – one for inefficiency pursuant to the streamlined Section 25 process and one for all other grounds pursuant to the ordinary Section 8 procedures.

Based on the foregoing, the Board urges the Arbitrator to reject Henchey's Motion for Summary Decision regarding Charge Nos. 1-4.

Lastly, the Board insists that the concept of double jeopardy does not properly apply to a tenure dismissal proceeding or, alternatively, even if it does, the Board's action of salary increment withholding followed by the certification of tenure dismissal charges does not constitute double punishment. The Board first reasons that double jeopardy is a doctrine applicable solely in the context of a criminal proceeding. See, e.g., In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Richard Graffanino, Agency Dkt. No. 223-9/13 (January 31, 2014); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Desly Getty, OAL Dkt. No. EDU-08750-08 (June 4, 2009)(Comm. Ed. July 17, 2009); see also Martinez, supra (school district withheld Martinez's increment and successfully pursued tenure charges resulting in his dismissal). In Getty, a tenured teacher alleged that since she had already been reprimanded for the conduct that was the subject of the tenure charges, double jeopardy should attach and the charges should be dismissed. Id. The ALJ rejected the argument, stating that "tenure hearings are not quasi-criminal in nature and are not primarily directed at imposing punishment upon teachers, but are instead vehicles to determine a teacher's fitness to teach and to set examples for impressionable students." Id., citing In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of R. Scott McIntyre, 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d (EDU) 726 (App. Div. 1996).

Similarly, in McIntyre, a teacher that was arrested for possession of marijuana and had the complaint subsequently dismissed due to an illegal search unsuccessfully sought to have his dismissal from his teaching position, based on that conduct, overturned under the theory of double jeopardy. 96 *N.J.A.R.*2d at 726-27. The Appellate Division declined to overturn the tenure dismissal, since tenure charges are not instituted with the purpose of punishing a teacher. Id. at 727. Rather, tenure charges embrace a teacher's "fitness for school teaching and example setting for impressionable students who are entrusted by society to the teaching profession." Id.

Finally, in Graffanino,[3] the arbitrator directly and succinctly disposed of the very same arguments being made here:

> Although the District's tactic in withholding the salary increment and filing tenure charges is uncommon, I find that it does not constitute "double

[3] The Board notes that Henchey's failure to cite to the Graffanino decision unfortunately reflects a lack of candor towards this tribunal, as the arbitrator there specifically rejected the very same arguments made here, and Henchey cannot claim ignorance of this matter, because his attorney was the same attorney who represented Graffanino, made the very same argument, and lost. This matter should be treated no differently.

> jeopardy." Double jeopardy, of course, applies only in criminal cases; but Respondent is arguing duplicative punishments, two separate disciplinary actions for the same offenses. The District's approach was not an attempt to duplicate punishment; but rather, it was an attempt to fill a gap caused by the timing of the tenure charges. In the interval before tenure charges were filed and again before an arbitration decision would issue, the District wanted to ensure that Graffanino's salary was not increased. It may have been an unnecessary move because the gaps in time were so limited, but it was not inflicting a double penalty on Respondent.
> [Id. at 26 (emphasis added).]

According to the Board, this matter is distinguishable from In the Matter of the Certified Tenure Charges Between the Randolph Board of Education and Jill S. Buglovsky, Docket No. 265-9/12 (December 21, 2012), where this arbitrator found that Randolph "cannot now retry Ms. Buglovsky based on conduct transpiring over three years ago, which did not involve harm or realistic potential harm to students, and was resolved at that time by an official reprimand." Buglovsky, Slip Op. at 54 (emphasis added).[4] In other words, it was an attempt to mete out duplicative punishment for the same conduct. The Board reasons that in this case, it was necessary to withhold Henchey's increment due to the timing of the tenure charges. Even more compelling than Graffanino, where the gap in time was relatively brief, the Board argues that the Superintendent did not serve the tenure charges until October 2014,[5] and the Board did not consider them until November 2014. The Board reasons that if it declined to certify the tenure charges, that would have meant that Henchey would effectively have received a raise—and thus no consequences—despite his substandard teaching performance in the 2013-14 school year. In sum, the Board maintains that it was acting prudently to ensure that Henchey did not receive a pay raise for his performance and conduct while the tenure charges were being finalized, and pending a decision on the tenure charges the Board, and ultimately, by an arbitrator. That is wholly permissible, and supported by the applicable case law and arbitration decisions (Board Opposition Brief at page 19).

[4] Also, in Buglovsky, reasons the Board, the teacher there was generally lauded as a good teacher with favorable evaluations, which mitigated the penalty of dismissal to a suspension and increment withholding. That is a stark difference from the facts in the instant matter, where Henchey has multiple years of poor evaluations, and no basis to conclude that the latest increment withholding will do anything to change his behavior, since he failed to fulfill his prior two corrective action plans (one of which came after his increments were withheld).

[5] Henchey was suspended before the beginning of the school year, and when the parties were unable to amicably resolve their issues, the Superintendent filed the instant tenure charges.

For all these reasons, the Board asks the Arbitrator to reject dismissal of the Charges based on Henchey's double jeopardy argument.

HENCHEY'S REPLY

Here, Henchey maintains that Section 8, as amended, does not mention or include the term "inefficiency." According to Henchey, even more telling, N.J.S.A. 18A:16-11, as amended, deleted all reference to inefficiency charges and eliminated the 90-day notice and opportunity to correct allegations of inefficiency, which was a prerequisite to the certification of charges of inefficiency that had existed under the old legislation.

Henchey buttresses his contention with Arbitrator Simmelkjaer's conclusion in Thomas, To Wit: "In the absence of statutory language permitting the alternate and/or simultaneous filing of inefficiency charges under Section 8 and Section 25, the District, given the deficiencies found in its Section 25 filing, can file either Section 25 commencing with the 2013-2014 school year or Section 8 inefficiency charges based on one year." Henchey reasons that Arbitrator Simmelkjaer was referring to the 2011-2012 school year only.

In light of the foregoing, Henchey insists that Section 8's scope or useful lifespan is limited to those performance evaluations predating the 2013-14 school year. That is, Section 8, as a vehicle for facilitating tenure charges based on inefficiency, came to an end after the conclusion of the last group of inefficiency cases pending before the passage of TEACHNJ on August 6, 2012; citing, State Operated School District of the City of Newark and Darrin Hawthorne, Agency Docket No. 266-9/12 (charges filed in July of 2012); State Operated School District of the City of Newark and Edgar Chavez, Agency Docket No. 269-9/12 (charges filed March 26, 2012); and State Operated School District of the City of Newark and Felicia Pugliese, Agency Docket No. 272-9/12 (filing of charges preceded the 2012-13 school year).

Henchey specifically observes that, in Chavez, Arbitrator Brown reasoned – based on a March 26, 2012 filing date – that Section 18 of the Act afforded him jurisdiction to determine the case under the law "as read prior to the effective date of" the Act. Most importantly, Henchey points out that Arbitrator Brown further reasoned: "Importantly, the legislative did not similarly provide for such application of the old law for post-enactment charges of inefficiency that do not meet the prerequisite for consideration under Section 23" (Henchey Reply at page 3).

In application to the present matter, Henchey reasons that the Charges were filed on October 17, 2014 (over two years after August 6, 2012). As such, reasons Henchey, the "Board does not have the ability or the option to rely on Section 8 and the Arbitrator does not have jurisdiction to determine charges of inefficiency except under Section 25 of the Act" (Henchey Reply at page 4). Henchey characterizes the Board's Section 8 position as running "against the entire intent of the legislation... The legislative plan was designed to establish only one system for filing and deciding inefficiency cases, the Section 25 proceedings... No employer would proceed under Section 25 if it could avoid its requirements and still proceed with inefficiency cases" (Henchey Reply at pages 5-6).

Finally, Henchey asks the Arbitrator to note additional support for its double jeopardy argument and for dismissal of Charge 5 by way of reference to In the Matter of Arbitration of John Carlomango, School District of the Township of Hillside, Agency Dkt. No. 450-13 (Melissa Biren).[6]

DISCUSSION AND OPINION

Jurisdiction

Initially, I have decided to address the motion in an exercise of discretion under TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117, et. seq., effective August 6, 2012 (P.L.2012, Ch. 26). The instant motion is treated as one for summary decision because an Answer, as opposed to a Motion to Dismiss, was filed by Henchey and because evidence has been introduced in the form of the Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus with attached Exhibits. Compare, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a) and 5.3(a)1. Additionally, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 allows for a motion for summary decision – filed with the Commissioner -- to be transmitted to an arbitrator or to be decided by the Commissioner. In this matter, Henchey did not meet the prerequisite filing with the Commissioner, but instead filed the motion after [6] In addition, the undersigned asked the parties to address, by no later than January 2, 2015, Arbitrator Walt De Treaux's Opinion and Award in State Operated School District of the City of Camden and Leon Mashore, et. al. Agency Docket Nos. 303-10/14; 290-9/14; 300-10/14; and 291-9/14. The parties' representatives each submitted a written position statement in response. I have carefully considered the Mashore position statements and incorporate both into my decision.

transmittal of the case to the undersigned. Thus, the Labor Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association, which otherwise governs this dispute, do not provide a party to an arbitration with the right to file a dispositive motion. Lastly, in light of the relatively stringent restrictions imposed on arbitrators under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1 b., it is evident that an arbitrator must cautiously exercise discretion in deciding whether to address any motion filed after transmittal of the case from the Commissioner of Education to the arbitrator. In this case, I have elected to exercise discretion in favor of deciding the motion given the importance and relative novelty of the legal principles involved.

Summary Decision Standard

Summary decision may be granted if the pleadings, discovery and affidavits show "that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.S.A. 1:1-12.5. Contini v. Bd. of Educ., 286 N.J. Super. 106 (App. Div. 1995). In ruling on summary-decision motions, administrative agencies follow substantially the same standard as the standard governing motions for summary judgment in civil litigation. The essence of the inquiry is whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require submission to the trier-of-fact or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail. Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of America, 142 N.J. 520, 536 (1995). I have carefully considered Henchey's moving papers, the opposition filed by the Board, Henchey's reply letter brief and both parties' position statements in response to my request following Arbitrator Walt De Treux's decision in Mashore. Because the parties' respective positions do not raise a genuine issue of material fact, I am satisfied that summary decision is appropriate.

Synopsis

The failure of the District to comply with the uniform evaluation rules in place under TEACHNJ for 2013-2014 must be deemed fatal to the sufficiency of Tenure Charges Nos. 1-4 (and 5, in part) with respect to the 2013-2014 school year. I am not convinced, however, that there was a moratorium on filing a Section 8 tenure charge alleging inefficiency insofar as the 2012-2013 school year is concerned. However, since the Board has clearly addressed Henchey's 2012-2013 shortcomings by way of an increment withholding action under N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14 unrelated to the filing of tenure charges shortly thereafter, I must dismiss the Board's Charges with respect to Henchey's teaching performance during the 2012-2013 school year based on the principles elaborated upon in IMO Randolph Board of Education and Jill S. Buglovsky, Docket No. 265-9/12 (December 21, 2012), confirmed, Buglovsky v. The Randolph Township Board of Education, Morris County, Docket No.: C13-13 (P.J. Ch. Stephan C. Hansbury)[7]; see, also, In the Matter of Arbitration of John Carlomango, School District of the Township of Hillside, Agency Dkt. No. 450-13 (Melissa Biren). With respect to Henchey's 2011-2012 performance, this record contains no indicia that the Board sought to contemporaneously discipline Henchey for his teaching performance during that year. To the contrary, Henchey received an acceptable year end evaluation and was placed on a non-disciplinary Corrective Action Plan. Thus, I will dismiss the Board's tenure charges with respect to Henchey's teaching performance during the 2011-2012 school year. Finally, this matter will proceed to a hearing based solely on Charge No. 5, on a limited basis, as more fully discussed herein.

Dismissal of Charges Nos. 1-4 (2011-12, 12-13 and 13-14 School Years)

In its most basic sense, the TEACHNJ Act represents the byproduct of two years of bipartisanship legislative efforts. The interests of school boards and teachers in bringing about meaningful tenure reform leaps from the pages of the legislation and legislative history. In the recent case of IMO State Operated School District for the City of Newark and Elena Brady, Agency Docket No. 270-9/14, Arbitrator Joyce Klein cogently described the legislative covenant that was embodied by the final legislation on August 6, 2012:

> TEACHNJ adopted new performance requirements for teaching staff and streamlined the process for revoking tenure from those teachers who do not meet the new performance requirements. In exchange for these requirements, the legislature adopted requirements for teachers receiving ineffective and partially effective summative ratings including required corrective action plans pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-128(b) and School Improvement Panels pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-120 (slip op. at 19-20).

Arbitrator Klein's analysis is firmly grounded in the Legislature's declaration of purpose at N.J.S.A. 18A:6-118:

> The Legislature finds and declares that:
> a. The goal of this legislation is to raise student achievement by improving instruction through the adoption of evaluations that provide specific feedback to educators, inform the provision of aligned professional development, and inform personnel decisions;

> b. The New Jersey Supreme Court has found that a multitude of factors play a vital role in the quality of a child's education, including effectiveness in teaching methods and evaluations. Changing the current evaluation system to focus on improved student outcomes, including objective measures of student growth, is critical to improving teacher effectiveness, raising student achievement, and meeting the objectives of the federal "No Child Left Behind Act of 2001".

In State Operated School District of the City of Camden And Leon Mashore, et. al. Agency Docket Nos. 303-10/14; 290-9/14; 300-10/14; and 291-9/14, Arbitrator Walt De Treaux recently stated that TEACHNJ "dramatically revised teacher evaluations in a way that the new criteria allowed for more effective removal of ineffective teachers." The trade off, of course, is that a school district must afford teachers with the tools necessary to improve upon their performance, commencing with the 2013-2014 school year and that teachers will not be dismissed for inefficiency if they meet the new standards.

As to the substantive law that must be applied in a tenure revocation case, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.5, entitled, "Governing law for tenure charge determination" provides:

> Any tenure charge transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.S.18A:6-16 prior to the effective date of P.L.2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.) shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of subarticle B of Article 2 of chapter 6 of Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes, N.J.S.18A:6-10 et seq., as the same read prior to the effective date of P.L.2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

The instant charges were filed on November 7, 2014 – well after the passage of the Act on August 6, 2012. The applicable statutory provisions serving as vehicles for processing tenure charges post August 6, 2012 include N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 (Section 8) and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 (Section 25).

Importantly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 remained unaffected by the TEACHNJ Act. The recognized causes of action for bringing tenure charges against a certificated teacher continue to be inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, encompassed by Section 8, states:

> 18A:6-11. Written charges; written statement of evidence; filing; statement of position by employee; certification of determination; notice
> Any charge made against any employee of a board of education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the board in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the board. The board of education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, a copy of the statement of the evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary. The board of education shall forthwith notify the employee against whom the charge has been made of its determination, personally or by certified mail directed to his last known address. In the event the board finds that such probable cause exists and that the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary, then it shall forward such written charge to the commissioner for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S. 18A:6-16, together with a certificate of such determination. The consideration and actions of the board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting.

Of note, the following language was removed from N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 by way of the new legislation: [Provided, however, that if the charge is inefficiency, prior to making its determination as to certification, the board shall provide the employee with written notice of the alleged inefficiency, specifying the nature thereto, and allow at least 90 days in which to correct and overcome the inefficiency].[8]

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 "Proceedings before commissioner; hearing" (Section 8) was amended to make relatively minor changes in the preexisting timelines and, most significantly, to supplant the Office of Administrative Law with a panel of arbitrators:

> Upon receipt of such a charge and certification (referring to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11), or of a charge lawfully made to the commissioner, the commissioner or the person appointed to act in the commissioner's behalf in the proceedings shall examine the charges and certification. The individual against whom the charges are certified shall have 15 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. Upon a showing of good cause, the commissioner may grant an extension of time. The commissioner shall render a determination on the sufficiency of charges as set forth below within 10 days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges.
> If, following receipt of the written response to the charges, the commissioner is of the opinion that they are not sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, he shall dismiss the same and notify said person accordingly. If, however, he shall determine that such charge is sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, he shall refer the case to an arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of P.L.2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-17.1) for further proceedings, except that when a motion for summary decision has been made prior to that time, the commissioner may retain the matter for purposes of deciding the motion.

In contrast to the removal of the old inefficiency language from Section 8, Section 25 specifically addresses the subject of inefficiency charges under the new law. Section 25 mandates the filing of an inefficiency charge by the Superintendent in instances where a teacher is "rated ineffective or partially ineffective in an annual summative evaluation" for at least two years. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(1) and (2). N.J.S.A. 18A:17.3 (Section 25) provides in full:

[8] N.J.S.A.18A:6-13 was similarly modified (pertaining to the dismissal of a tenure charge in the case where a board of education does not act on the submission of a tenure charge by school administration).

> a. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-11 or any other section of law to the contrary, in the case of a teacher, principal, assistant principal, and vice-principal:
> (1) the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency whenever the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated ineffective in the annual summative evaluation;
> (2) if the employee is rated partially effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations or is rated ineffective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated partially effective in the annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency, except that the superintendent upon a written finding of exceptional circumstances may defer the filing of tenure charges until after the next annual summative evaluation. If the employee is not rated effective or highly effective on this annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file a charge of inefficiency.
> b. Within 30 days of the filing, the board of education shall forward a written charge to the commissioner, unless the board determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.
> c. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.
> d. The only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

As noted in Henchey's moving papers, the substantive evaluation standards are set forth under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117, et. seq. and under the regulations implementing the new law, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.1, et. seq.

In response to the foregoing, I observe that both parties made reasonable arguments in support of their competing positions. Henchey reads the above language as reflecting a legislative shift in the processing of all charges of inefficiency from Section 8 to Section 25 and imposing, by implication, a moratorium on discipline for inefficiency until after the completion of the 2014-15 school year and then only pursuant to Section 25. The Board, on the other hand, reasonably argues that no such moratorium was expressed and Section 8 remains a viable procedure with its own requirements for prosecuting a charge of inefficiency:

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 set forth considerations for the arbitrator when considering inefficiency charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and addresses whether the matter "...before the arbitrator pursuant to Section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to Section 25 of this act..." (emphasis added). This language leaves no doubt that Section 25 is one way of pursuing inefficiency charges, otherwise there would be no reason to include the qualifying phrase "pursuant to Section 25 of this act."

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(a) states, "Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 or any other section of law..." (emphasis added). Clearly, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 contemplates inefficiency charges brought under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq.; if it did not, those quoted provisions would have no meaning.

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) also recognizes the provisions of filing inefficiency charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 in its phrase, "[n]otwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law..."

- N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(d) states that only rubric evaluations may be used to determine inefficiency charges "for purposes of this Section." If rubric evaluations were the only means by which inefficiency charges could go forth, there would have been no Legislative purpose in stating, "for purposes of this Section."

- Finally, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b) sets forth the timelines for filing charges "for reasons of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3." By specifying that this section applies only to inefficiency charges filed under Section 25, the Commissioner is acknowledging that inefficiency charges may indeed be filed through alternate statutory provisions.

Since the plain language of TEACHNJ can be reasonably debated with respect to the viability of a Section 8 tenure proceeding for inefficiency, I did evaluate the legislative history as contained in the New Jersey State Law Library with an eye toward ascertaining the intent of the legislation. I can conclude with confidence that the legislature obviously sought to overhaul evaluation criteria, to train teachers on the new criteria and to make it easier to remove teachers who, despite the required training, cannot meet the expected standards in two consecutive years. It also can be detected that the legislature was disturbed by the inordinate time and costs associated with bringing all tenure charges to conclusion under Section 8, and that they were particularly disturbed by the ninety (90) day window of correction that a school district was obligated to provide to a teacher charged with inefficiency before tenure charges could be firmly prosecuted.[9] Having said this, however, since both Sections 8 and 25 matters are now both relatively expedited and less costly as compared to the status quo ante, I am not convinced either that the legislature would be shocked if an inefficiency case was prosecuted pursuant to Section 8 where Section 25 was not applicable.[10]

More importantly, even if Section 8 has some life left in it for processing a tenure charge based on inefficiency, I am convinced that Section 25 was intended to supersede Section 8 in the case of a conflict. For example, if a teacher meets the TEACHNJ evaluation criteria and, thus, cannot be removed from his or her position under Section 25, it would seem anomalous to conclude that he or she may be removed from employment pursuant to Section 8. By the same token, if a teacher fails to meet the new substantive evaluation criteria, then he or she may, or shall be, brought up on tenure charges for inefficiency under Section 25 and, in that scenario, Section 8 is of no import. Elevating substance over procedure, I find that all teachers were entitled to the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years to see if they could pass muster under Section 25. As such, I agree with Henchey's analysis that allowing a Section 8 proceeding for inefficiency to encompass 2013-2014 would defeat the purpose underlying Section 25. Thus, because I believe that a Section 8 tenure proceeding for inefficiency cannot interfere with the more specific tenets of Section 25 concerning TEACHNJ evaluations commencing with the 2013-14 school year, I conclude that any Section 8 proceeding necessarily must be limited to school years 2012-2013 and prior.

In light of the foregoing, I find that, to the extent that Section 8 remains a potential procedural vehicle to bring tenure charges alleging inefficiency after August 6, 2012, it does so only for the 2012-2013 school year. Here, I agree with Arbitrator Simmelkjaer's conclusion in Thomas: "In the absence of statutory language permitting the alternate and/or simultaneous filing of inefficiency charges under Section 8 and Section 25, the District, given the deficiencies found in its current Section 25 filing, can file either Section 25 commencing with the 2013-14 school year or Section 8 inefficiency charges based on one year" (referring to 2012-2013) (slip op at 47). Thus, whereas Section 8 may be available for tenure charges predicated on evaluations not encompassed by TEACHNJ (or where both efficiency and conduct charges are alleged after the 2014-15 school year), most importantly, Section 8 is not available as a means to address evaluation deficiencies encompassing the 2013-2014 school year. At the very least, even if Section 8 is still intact, certainly, a Section 8 proceeding cannot be based on a legally flawed 2013-2014 school year evaluation.

[10] The preference for arbitrators in lieu of administrative law judges came about in a Senate Committee Substitute for Senate No. 1455 on June 18, 2012 (more than four (4) months after introduction by Senator Ruiz and less than two (2) months before Governor Christie's signing of the Bill).

In further support of this conclusion, I observe that the DOE adopted and made effective comprehensive evaluation regulations entitled: "Components of Teacher Evaluation" effective October 7, 2013 (45 N.J.R. 2211 (a)). These regulations required that teaching staff members be observed at least three times per school year but not less than once a semester; with at least one of the observations being announced, including a pre-observation conference; with the remaining two observations announced or unannounced. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4. Moreover, teaching staff members with corrective action plans, like Henchey, must receive a fourth observation in addition to the observations required by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4 (See, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.5(j)(1), as well as a mid-year evaluation by the School Improvement Panel, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1). All of these requirements were effective during the 2013-14 school year.

In review of the record before me, I agree with Henchey that the Board did not comply with the 2013-2014 legal requirements and, thus, cannot use Section 8 as a basis to bring tenure charges. More specifically, in the 2013-2014 school year, the District completed three of the four observations required by the regulations then in effect, and it did not perform a mid-year evaluation required from and by the School Improvement Panel ("SIP") (Charge No. 1, ¶¶19, 21, 23). Only a year-end evaluation was afforded Henchey (Charge No. 1 ¶26). Henchey points out, in response to Interrogatory No. 24, the Board admits that it did not conduct and/or provide him with a mid-year evaluation in 2013-2014 (Certification of Sheldon H. Pincus ¶6). While the Board counters that the Building Principal met weekly with Henchey to address progress on his corrective action plan, I credit Henchey's retort that the Building Principal does not constitute the SIP contemplated and required to perform the mid-year evaluation. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1(a), the SIP consists not only of the Building Principal, but a Vice-Principal, and a teacher who is chosen in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1(b) in consultation with the majority representative. Although I recognize that a Section 25 proceeding was not yet ripe, once again, the substantive law governing mandatory evaluation criteria was in effect and the Board was obliged to follow it with respect to all of its teaching personnel, Section 8 notwithstanding.

Indeed, as of July 1, 2013, it was illegal for a school board and education association to agree upon an evaluation system that differed from the Act. See, N.J.S.A.

18A:6-126. By the same token, a school board would have no license to unilaterally implement an evaluation system than did not meet the letter of the substantive evaluation requirements of the new law. Therefore, the Board, in my opinion, cannot seek dismissal of Henchey for inefficiency during the 2013-2014 school year because the Board itself has failed to adhere to the mandatory evaluation procedures that were uniformly in place under TEACHNJ for that year.[11]

Based on the foregoing, I find that the Board cannot rely upon Henchey's 2013-2014 summative evaluation/teaching performance as a basis for Charges Nos. 1-4 (and Charge No. 5, to the extent the Board seeks a finding of incapacity or conduct unbecoming based solely on Henchey's teaching performance during the 2013-2014 school year).

Next, while I also dismiss Charges Nos. 1-4 with respect to the 2012-13 and 2011-12 school years, I do so for different reasons. On the one hand, I agree with the notion that 2012-2013 was a pilot year for the purpose of Section 25. School administrators were charged with implementing a rubric approved by the Commissioner of Education by December 31, 2012, to "test and refine the evaluation rubric" by January 31, 2013, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(d), to train teachers and administrators on the approved rubric, to set up a SIP, to comply with the requisite observations and evaluations, to establish corrective action plans, etc. IMO State Operated School District for the City of Newark and Elena Brady, Agency Docket No. 270-9/14(Klein)("Thus, both the statute and rules suggest that the 2012-2013 school year, which was the first year that TEACHNJ was in effect, was to be a developmental year for preparing to fully implement the newly adopted requirements for evaluation rubrics to be used for both the acquisition of tenure and the revocation of tenure for inefficiency beginning in the 2013-2014 school year", slip op at 13); and, see also, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e)("beginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district.").

[11] Perhaps recognizing its flaw, the Board may have invoked Section 8 in order to avoid resetting the two year clock under Section 25 to the 2014-2015 and 2015-2016 school years. While the Board's growing dissatisfaction with Henchey's performance after the passage of TEACHNJ may be understandable, the Board could have removed Henchey from employment after the 2014-2015 school year under Section 25 if it had simply complied with TEACHNJ's mandatory evaluation criteria during the 2013-14 school year.

Having said this, however, TEACHNJ evaluation criteria were not in place during 2012-13. In addition, the legislation does not reflect an express recognition that teaching personnel were immunized from disciplinary consequences flowing from poor teaching performance or misconduct pending the first year of TEACHNJ evaluations. cf. N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-45(c)("notwithstanding any other provision of "law and contract" while the State district superintendent could file tenure charges against a principal or vice principal for incapacity or unbecoming conduct at any time after the state takeover, he or she could not do so for inefficiency reasons or other just cause until "after the completion of an assessment cycle of not less than 12 months"). Consistent with Arbitrator Simmelkjaer's finding in SOSD City of Newark and Neil Thomas, and in light of my dismissal of the 2013-14 Charges, I am satisfied that the Board could otherwise proceed under Section 8 with respect to Henchey's evaluation relative to the 2012-2013 school year. Having said this, however, I must ultimately dismiss, sua sponte, Charges Nos. 1-4 with respect to the 2012-13 school year based on the doctrine of double jeopardy or double punishment.

Here, I fully incorporate by reference my rationale set forth in IMO Randolph Board of Education and Jill S. Buglovsky, Docket No. 265-9/12 (December 21, 2012), confirmed, Buglovsky v. The Randolph Township Board of Education, Morris County, Docket No.: C13-13 (P.J. Ch. Stephan C. Hansbury); see, also, In the Matter of Arbitration of John Carlomango, School District of the Township of Hillside, Agency Dkt. No. 450-13 (Melissa Biren). In rejecting the rationale opposing the doctrine's applicability to the education context, I direct the parties to both my Opinion in Buglovsky and the Opinion of Judge Hansbury confirming that Award. I add that arbitrators addressing whether there is just cause for discipline or discharge have for years incorporated constitutional-like protections into the analysis -- fully aware that they were not proceeding over a "criminal case" -- for example, "disparate treatment" (or equal protection under the law); double jeopardy (borrowed from the Fifth Amendment); the right to cross-examination (borrowed from the confrontation clause of the Sixth Amendment); and the right of the grievant not to testify in a disciplinary hearing (borrowed from the Fifth Amendment), etc. See, Elkouri and Elkouri, How Arbitration Works, 6th Edition, Chapter 15, Section F ("Factors in Evaluating Disciplinary Penalties"), pages 964-1000. Thus, no mistake has been made concerning the applicability of the concept of double jeopardy to the arbitration context.

Additionally, as an arbitrator empowered to exclusively determine tenured teacher dismissal cases under Section 22 of the Act, I note that we may accept or reject prior decisions in the education context just as we may accept or reject the decisions and rationales of other arbitrators. Here, I find no reason to depart from the traditional arbitral approach to determining just cause, notwithstanding the ALJ's rationale in Getty that was fully addressed and reconciled appropriately by Judge Hansbury in confirming Buglovsky. Suffice it to say that the provisions of Title 18A addressing reprimands, increment withholdings and tenure dismissal are disciplinary actions, with the exception of those increment withholdings not deemed levied predominantly for disciplinary purposes. See, N.J.S.A. 34:13A-26; Randolph Tp. Bd. of Educ. v. Randolph Educ. Ass'n, 306 N.J. Super. 207 (App. Div. 1997), certif. den. 153 N.J. 214 (1998). As such, since N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 expressly refers to the "just cause" standard in all tenure dismissal cases seeking a reduction in compensation or dismissal, I see no reason to depart from the traditional arbitration approach in deciding the instant dismissal case under a just cause standard.

In the present case, since the Board has clearly addressed Henchey's 2012-2013 shortcomings by way of an increment withholding for 2013-14 -- not leading to the filing of tenure charges shortly thereafter (See, Statement of Evidence, Tab 56 (g)), I will dismiss the Board's tenure charges with respect to Henchey's teaching performance during the 2012-2013 school year. With respect to 2011-2012, this record contains no indicia that the Board sought to contemporaneously discipline Henchey for his teaching performance during that year. To the contrary, Henchey received an acceptable year end evaluation and was placed on a non-disciplinary, Corrective Action Plan. Thus, I will dismiss the Charges with respect to Henchey's teaching performance during the 2011-2012 school year as well.

Based on the foregoing, I grant Henchey's motion for summary decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 in their entirety.

Limitations of Charge No. 5 (Incapacity and Conduct Unbecoming)

Charge No. 5 alleges that, in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to implement effective and efficient teaching strategies, and in addition to his unwillingness or inability to improve upon the same, Henchey has also demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years which has included a lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him, and which unprofessionalism constitutes incapacity and conduct warranting dismissal.

Here, although I do not see a significant difference between "double jeopardy" as that terminology has been commonly understood by arbitrators in discharge and discipline cases under a just cause analysis for more than a century and "double punishment", I concur with the underscored portion of Arbitrator De Treaux's rationale in IMO River Dell Regional School District and Richard Graffanino, Agency Dkt. No. 223-9/13, distinguishing the doctrine based on the timing of events in the case of an increment withholding followed by the issuance of tenure charges:

> Although the District's tactic in withholding the salary increment and filing tenure charges is uncommon, I find that it does not constitute "double jeopardy." Double jeopardy, of course, applies only in criminal cases; but Respondent is arguing duplicative punishments, two separate disciplinary actions for the same offenses. The District's approach was not an attempt to duplicate punishment; but rather, it was an attempt to fill a gap caused by the timing of the tenure charges. In the interval before tenure charges were filed and again before an arbitration decision would issue, the District wanted to ensure that Graffanino's salary was not increased. It may have been an unnecessary move because the gaps in time were so limited, but it was not inflicting a double penalty on Respondent. [Id. at 26 (emphasis added).][12]

As such, the Board may present evidence demonstrating Henchey's alleged continued "incapacity" and "conduct unbecoming" during the 2013-14 school year while all prior years must be deemed satisfied or res judicata by virtue of the Board's July 16, 2013 increment withholding and any other prior discipline that exists in the record. Thus, this means that Mr. Henchey enters the hearing process with a major disciplinary record in the form of an increment withholding under Title 18A for incapacity and related conduct unbecoming. The allegations set forth under Charge No. 5 that antecede the 2013-14 school year will not be re-litigated or recycled. Instead, the focus of the hearing will now shift to whether Henchey should be dismissed from his teaching position based on his alleged continued incapacity and related conduct unbecoming, as specifically set forth by Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19.[13]

Case Management Order

Lastly, in order to expeditiously manage this matter scheduled to commence on January 8, 2015, I direct the parties as follows.

1. The hearing is now limited to the following issue: Did the Board have just cause to dismiss Lawrence Henchey from his teaching position based [12] Indeed, the failure to withhold an increment may be cited by a teacher as evidence that the ensuing tenure charges were not justified based on the implicit recognition that increments are not withheld in the case of satisfactory teaching performance in a given school year.

[13] As to the distinction between inefficiency and incapacity and related misconduct, the latter offenses involve, among other things, a teacher's chronic failure to meet professional expectations, and unprofessional and hostile reactions to supervision by district personnel. See, IMO School District of the Borough of Butler, Morris County, 2010 WL 5624390; Board of Education of the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Greg Molinaro, 96 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 268, 1995 WL 863033 (1995); Bd. of Ed. Lawrence Twp. v. Lester Helmus, 2 N.J.A.R. 334 (1980).

on his alleged continued incapacity and related conduct unbecoming as specifically set forth by Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19?;

2. All documents relevant to the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming (including rebuttal letters, if any) prior to the 2013-2014 school year shall be admitted without testimony;

3. The parties may simply refer to the Statement of Evidence identifying markers without the need to separately introduce the same documents as exhibits; documents obtained in discovery that are not contained in the Statement of Evidence must be introduced in exhibit format; and

4. Testimony shall be limited to the events of the 2013-14 school year, although the "decision-maker" may testify in summary fashion as to how, if at all, he or she factored in Henchey's overall work record (as reflected in the Statement of Evidence) in connection with the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming and the recommendation for dismissal. Mr. Henchey, of course, may refer to those portions of his prior work record that he deems supportive of his continued employment in the District.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons more fully set forth herein, I grant Mr. Hencheys's Motion for Summary Decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 of the November 7, 2014 Tenure Charges. I deny the motion with respect to Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19. Lastly, I direct the parties to observe the case management order set forth on pages 40 and 41.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph Ficata

SUPERIOR COURT OF NEW JERSEY

See attached statement of reasons

BUGLOVSKY v. THE RANDOLPH TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION c/w RANDOLPH TOWNSHIP BOARD OF EDUCATION v. BUGLOVSKY
Docket No. MRS-C-13-13

STATEMENT OF REASONS

Plaintiff, Jill S. Buglovsky ("Ms. Buglovsky"), applied for an order to show cause as to why the Court should not confirm the arbitration award issued by Arbitrator Joseph Licata ("Mr. Licata"). Defendant, the Randolph Township Board of Education (the "Board") subsequently applied for an order to show cause as to why the Court should not vacate the same award. This Court ordered consolidation of the Board's case into Ms. Buglovsky's case on May 6, 2013.

Ms. Buglovsky has been a Health and Physical Education Teacher for grades K-5 in Randolph Township since 2002 and has consistently received positive performance evaluations. However, during the 2008-2009 school year, Ms. Buglovsky used her school email account[1] to correspond with another person known as "J.C." Many of the roughly 2,000 e-mail messages between Ms. Buglovsky and J.C. contained graphic sexual language, and at least one thread of correspondence discussed drug use.[2] One e-mail reads as though Ms. Buglovsky invited J.C. to her office for a sexual liaison.[3] In April 2009, the Board reprimanded Ms. Buglovksy and warned her that she would be dismissed if she did not cease this conduct. After this, Ms. Buglovsky continued to correspond with J.C. via e-mail on the school network, but used her personal e-mail accounts and communicated using discrete language. The Board alleges, however, that Ms. Buglovsky attempted to thwart the Board's monitoring of her conduct by sending these subsequent communications from a colleague's computer and by using her own personal e-mail accounts rather than her school account. During the 2011-2012 school year Ms. Buglovsky evidently continued to use the District computer network for personal use[4] during the school day, including during times when she was scheduled to be teaching.

Ultimately, the Board, under new administration, filed tenure charges against Ms. Buglovsky and sought to remove her from her teaching position. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, the Commission of Education reviewed the charges and concluded that, if proven, the charges would be sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction of salary. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1, Joseph Licata was chosen as the arbitrator from the list maintained by the Commissioner. Mr. Licata reviewed the charges, as well as evidence submitted on behalf of both parties, and issued a 69-page decision wherein he sustained several of the charges, but opined that termination was an excessive remedy. Mr. Licata disposed of the charges as follows:

[1] Mr. Licata found that a number of these e-mails were sent from Ms. Buglovsky's home computer while she was on maternity leave.

[2] Ms. Buglovsky alleges that there is no evidence that she actually used drugs during her employment as a teacher, and that she cannot drink or use drugs due to her bipolar disorder.

[3] A subsequent investigation revealed that J.C. was in Virginia when the e-mail was sent and that Ms. Buglovsky was aware of his location. Accordingly, the e-mail can be read to have been based in fantasy.

[4] This alleged personal use was not of a sexual nature.

- Charge One, pertaining to the sexually explicit e-mails, was dismissed as attenuated due to the passage of time, and because Ms. Buglovsky had already been formally reprimanded for the conduct and had subsequently ceased to engage in the conduct;

- Charge Two, pertaining to more discrete e-mails sent in 2009-2010 was sustained with respect to a few implicitly sexual communications, but was dismissed as to non-sexual personal e-mails because Ms. Buglovsky was not disciplined previously for that type of e-mail and received a positive performance evaluation for the year;

- Charge Three, alleging that Ms. Buglovsky used a co-worker's computer and log-in as an "alias" to communicate with J.C. via personal e-mail between September 2009 and November 2009 was sustained in part and dismissed in part. The dismissal resulted from Mr. Licata's finding that the charge was attenuated due to the passage of time and Ms. Buglovsky's subsequent similar communications using her own identity;

- Charge Four, alleging non-sexual use of personal e-mail on the school network during the 2010-2011 school year, was dismissed because Ms. Buglovsky was not disciplined previously for that type of e-mail and received a positive performance evaluation for the year;

- Charge Five, alleging one personal, non-sexual communication with J.C. during the 2011-2012 school year was dismissed for the reasons stated with respect to charges Two and Four, and because it exemplified her significantly improved behavior;

- Charge Six, alleging Internet browsing during instructional time was sustained;

- Charge Seven was dismissed as setting forth no new or additional factual allegations;

- Charge Eight regarded a picture of Ms. Buglovsky using her iPod, allegedly during instructional time, which was sent via e-mail from another individual to Ms. Buglovsky with a caption stating "My Baby at Work." Ms. Buglovsky apparently replied to the e-mail and said, "I was drawing you at that time!" This was apparently the incident that influenced the Board to file the tenure charges, but the Board withdrew the charge at the arbitration hearing;

- Charge Nine, alleging a pattern of misconduct, was dismissed because no disciplinary action was taken for the same behavior following the 2009-2010 and 2010-2011 school years, and as a result of Ms. Buglovsky's history of improving her behavior after being reprimanded.

Instead, Mr. Licata determined that a 120-day unpaid suspension and loss of a salary increment were an appropriate consequence for Ms. Buglovsky's conduct. Pursuant to Mr. Licata's decision, the Board was supposed to reinstate Ms. Buglovsky following the end of the December holiday break. However, the Board did not and has not yet reinstated Ms. Buglovsky. The instant orders to show cause address Ms. Buglovsky's application to confirm Mr. Licata's award and the Board's application to vacate same.

This Court grants Ms. Buglovsky's application to confirm the arbitration award and denies the Board's application to vacate the award.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. § 18A:6-16, when tenure charges are filed with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner"), and the Commissioner determines that the charges warrant either dismissal or a reduction in salary, the Commissioner must refer the dispute to an arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S.A. § 18A:6-17.1. See N.J.S.A. § 18A:6-16. As set forth in N.J.S.A. § 18A:17.1(e), "the arbitrator's determination shall be final and binding . . . [and] the determination shall be subject to judicial review and enforcement as provided pursuant to [N.J.S.A. §] 2A:24-7 through [N.J.S.A. §] 2A:24-10." N.J.S.A. § 18A:17.1(e). N.J.S.A. § 2A:24-8 provides that the Court "shall vacate an arbitration award in any of the following cases:

> a. Where the award was procured by corruption, fraud or undue means; b. Where there was either evident partiality or corruption in the arbitrators, or any thereof; c. Where the arbitrators were guilty of misconduct in refusing to postpone the hearing, upon sufficient cause being shown therefor, or in refusing to hear evidence, pertinent and material to the controversy, or of any other misbehaviors prejudicial to the rights of any party; d. Where the arbitrators exceeded or so imperfectly executed their powers that a mutual, final and definite award upon the subject matter submitted was not made.

[N.J.S.A. § 2A:24-8.] The New Jersey Supreme Court has interpreted "undue means" (a) to encompass decisions that are contrary to applicable law or public policy. See Grover v. Universal Underwriters Ins. Co., 80 N.J. 221, 230-31 (1979).

In interpreting N.J.S.A. § 2A:24-8 and the rest of the Arbitration Act, New Jersey Courts have afforded a presumption of validity to decisions issued by arbitrators. See Township of Wyckoff v. PBA Local 261, 409 N.J. Super. 344, 354 (App. Div. 2009). This reflects the underlying policy of promoting a sense of finality. See Linden Bd. of Ed. v. Linden Ed. Ass'n. ex rel Mizichko, 202 N.J. 268, 266 (2010). In keeping with this policy, courts must confirm an arbitrator's award "so long as it is reasonably debatable" and "a reviewing court may not substitute its own judgment for that of the arbitrator, regardless of the court's view of the correctness of the arbitrator's interpretation." Id. at 276-277 (internal citations omitted). Accordingly, it is the burden of the party challenging the award to rebut the presumption of validity and establish that the award must be vacated.

I. Whether Mr. Licata's Decision Misapplied or Is Contrary to the Law

New Jersey's Tenure Employees Hearing Law mandates that no tenured public employee shall be dismissed from his or her position, or shall be subject to a reduction in compensation "except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause . . ." following a hearing by the commissioner or a person appointed by the commissioner. See N.J.S.A. § 18A:6-10. Where parties do not define "just cause" for termination in an agreement between them, the Appellate Division has upheld an arbitrator's endeavor to define "just cause" based on the totality of the circumstances. See Linden Bd. of Ed., supra, at 277-278; see also In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967). In Linden Bd. of Ed., the Court also upheld the arbitrator's consideration of "progressive/corrective discipline" as part of the "just cause" concept, and recognized the arbitrator's authority to fashion an appropriate remedy where the arbitrator found that there was not "just cause" to support terminating the employee. Id. at 277.[5]

The New Jersey Courts' definition of "unbecoming conduct" originated in the context of law enforcement, but was cited in the education context in In re Donahue, No. A-1636-06T1, 2008 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 1429 (App. Div. Mar. 3, 2008). There, the Court noted, "the phrase 'unbecoming conduct' has been described as 'elastic' and 'defined as any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency' of the public entity or 'which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services.'" Id. at *21. (internal quotations omitted). "[A] finding of misconduct need not 'be predicated upon the violation of any particular rule or regulation, but may be based merely upon the violation of the implicit standard of good behavior which devolves upon one who stands in the public eye as an upholder of that which is morally and legally correct.'" Id. at *22 (internal citations omitted). "Unfitness to remain as a teacher may be demonstrated by a single incident if it is sufficiently flagrant, although in less serious matters progressive disciplinary measures may be more appropriate." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Desly Getty, OAL 08750-08S, 2009 N.J. Agen. LEXIS 319 (June 4, 2009) (citing In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 404 (App. Div. 1967)). "The determination of what constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee is primarily a question of law." Donahue, supra at *21 (internal citation omitted).

a. Double Jeopardy

The Office of Administrative Law (OAL) has stated that the Constitutional protection of "double jeopardy" which generally protects criminal or quasi-criminal defendants from being punished more than once for the same crime, does not apply in the context of a tenure hearing. See Getty, supra, at 34-35. This is because tenure hearings "are not primarily directed at imposing punishment upon teachers, but are instead vehicles to determine a teacher's fitness to teach and to set examples for impressionable students." Id. However, in Getty, the OAL ultimately recognized that "reason and fairness must play a role in determining the sanction to which one who fails in one instance should be exposed" and reached the conclusion that "while Ms. Getty's actions do warrant some additional response, neither the students nor the general public will be best served by removing Ms. Getty's tenure." Id.

In the instant case, it is clear that Mr. Licata looked to the totality of the circumstances to evaluate whether Ms. Buglovsky had engaged in conduct unbecoming a teacher, and whether the Board had "just cause" to terminate her from her teaching position. In so doing, Mr. Licata recognized that Ms. Buglovsky had been disciplined for sending the sexually explicit e-mails in April 2009, and that she generally ceased that conduct, but for a few discrete and far less offensive exceptions, following the April 2009 discipline. Accordingly, Mr. Licata decided that the sexually explicit e-mails could not support a finding of "just cause" to terminate Ms. Buglovsky. The Court finds that this was not an impermissible application of the constitutional protection of "double jeopardy" which is afforded only in criminal, or quasi-criminal proceedings, but a proper application of the principles of reason and fairness that the OAL applied in Getty, or a proper consideration of progressive/corrective discipline that the Appellate Division held to be within the authority of the arbitrator in Linden Bd. of Ed, supra. She was disciplined at that time in the manner the Board felt was appropriate and corrected her behavior.

Although these principles may borrow from the "double jeopardy" protection, Mr. Licata never acted as though he was bound to apply such a protection. To the contrary, he recognized that the protection itself did not apply, but that its underlying principles were relevant. See Opinion & Award at pg. 54. Accordingly, this Court finds that Mr. Licata's dismissal of Charge One, reflecting a finding that Ms. Buglovsky had already been adequately disciplined for sending the sexually explicit e-mails and had corrected her behavior, was not a misapplication of the Constitutional protection of double jeopardy, but a determination as to reasonableness and fairness and a consideration of progressive or corrective discipline, made properly, within Mr. Licata's discretion as an arbitrator and based on the totality of the circumstances before him. See Opinion & Award at pg. 57.[6]

b. Laches

"Laches is 'an equitable defense that may be interposed in the absence of the statute of limitations,' and has been defined as an 'inexcusable delay in asserting a right.'" Northwest Covenant Med. Ctr. V. Fishman, 167 N.J. 123, 140 (2001) (internal citations omitted). "'[L]aches involves more than mere delay, mere lapse of time. There must be delay for a length of time which, unexplained and unexcused, is unreasonable under the circumstances and has been prejudicial to the other party.'" Id. (internal citations omitted). "Factors considered in determining whether to apply laches include '[t]he length of delay, reasons for delay, and changing conditions of either or both parties during the delay.'" Id. (internal citations omitted).

The Board asserts that the doctrine of laches cannot apply in the context of a tenure hearing, but the precedent the Board cites on this issue does not stand for the proposition asserted. Specifically, the ALJ in I/M/O Tenure Hearing of David Clark did not decline to apply the doctrine of laches. See I/M/O Tenure Hearing of David Clark, 95 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 164, *133-134 (N.J. Admin. 1995). Rather, the ALJ noted that it was unnecessary to reach the issue of whether laches barred the charges because it was appropriate to dismiss the charges on the merits.[7] Similarly, in I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Morton, the ALJ declined to apply laches to bar charges, based on a finding that the two year delay in filing the charges did not prejudice the employee. See I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Morton, 96 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 236, *32 (N.J. Admin. 1995). This reflects an understanding that laches may apply in the context of a tenure hearing under appropriate circumstances, rather than a precedent that laches is inapplicable to tenure hearings as a matter of law. It should be noted that laches might actually be an appropriate doctrine to apply in this context, as there is no statute of limitations. See Fishman, supra.

[6] Notably, Mr. Licata properly qualified the dismissal of Charge One by stating that the reprimand issued in 2009 could still be used as "prior discipline" for purposes of determining a disciplinary penalty and to evaluate the credibility of Ms. Buglovsky's stated understanding that she was verbally warned not to use the district network to access her private e-mail to read or send sexually explicit messages. See Opinion & Award at pg. 58.

[7] There is significant discussion in I/M/O Tenure Hearing of David Clark of whether the doctrine of laches applies in the context of a tenure hearing, but this discussion appears in the section of the opinion that simply summarizes the position of the parties. It is clear from a full reading of the opinion that the ALJ did not decide this issue.

In the instant case, Mr. Licata did not expressly apply the doctrine of laches, but did dismiss certain allegations as "stale" due to the passage of time and to Ms. Buglovsky's subsequent good behavior. See Opinion & Award at pg. 61. The Board presents no law to suggest that this decision exceeded Mr. Licata's authority.

c. Application of Civil Service Precedent and Failure to Apply Prior Education Law Decisions

The Board alleges that Mr. Licata reached an impermissible conclusion by applying cases regarding civil service employees as opposed to cases regarding educators. However, the Board fails to articulate a distinction between civil service law and education law that is sufficient to demonstrate that reliance on civil service precedent led to an improper conclusion. Notably, decisions in the context of tenured educators have borrowed from civil service decisions in defining "unbecoming conduct" and otherwise. See Donahue, supra.

Moreover, the primary education law cases cited by the Board wherein dismissal was held to be an appropriate remedy are factually distinct from the instant case. For example, in In re Voza, the educator referenced students in his explicit e-mails. See In re the Revocation of Richard Voza, 2011 N.J. Agen. LEXIS 545 (N.J. Admin. 2011). Ms. Buglovsky's e-mails are completely devoid of references to students. In In re Howarth and In re Donahue, the educators used school equipment to search and view pornography. See In re Revocation of Certificates of Dean Howarth, 2009 N.J. Agen. LEXIS 506 (N.J. Admin. 2010); see also In re Revocation of Certificates of Darlene Donahue, 2006 N.J. Agen. LEXIS 658 (N.J. Admin. 2006). The conduct of viewing and searching for pornography on a school computer goes a step further than sending explicit e-mail communications to one individual, and presents a greater risk that students might see the explicit materials.

It is clear from Mr. Licata's decision that he looked to the totality of the circumstances in evaluating whether students would be better served by the retention or removal of Ms. Buglovsky. In so doing, he considered not only her inappropriate conduct, but her response to prior discipline, the decreasingly offensive nature of the alleged conduct, her display of remorse and participation in therapy, and her consistently positive performance evaluations. It follows that this Court finds that Mr. Licata's decision not to order dismissal was reasonable and not inconsistent with established education law.

II. Whether Mr. Licata's Decision Is Contrary to Public Policy

Under rare circumstances, a court may vacate an arbitration award that violates public policy, but the policy must be a "clear mandate" and must be embodied in "statute, regulation, or legal precedent." See New Jersey Turnpike Authority v. Local 196, 190 N.J. 283, 287-288 (2006). Importantly, the inquiry is whether the award itself, as opposed to the conduct giving rise to the award, violated the policy. Id.

In the instant case, the Board cites precedent to establish a public policy that teachers are held to a higher moral standard. However, such precedent is insufficiently "clear" to establish that suspending rather than dismissing a teacher who engages in unbecoming conduct contravenes this policy. The Board cites no other relevant precedent, statute, or regulation on this issue. Accordingly, this Court finds that Mr. Licata's decision did not contradict public policy and cannot, therefore, be vacated on that ground.

III. Whether Mr. Licata Gave Sufficient Weight to the Evidence Presented

In advocating for the vacation of Mr. Licata's award, the Board also asserts that Mr. Licata failed to give appropriate weight to certain evidence including a USB drive containing explicit communications, Ms. Buglovky's use of a colleague's online log-in information to access Ms. Buglovsky's personal e-mail, and Ms. Buglovsky's browsing of the Internet during instructional time.

The Board alleges that since Mr. Licata did not explicitly mention the USB drive containing 22,000 screen shots of Ms. Buglovsky's Internet communications (Ex. J4), he must not have properly considered that evidence. However, it is clear from Mr. Licata's decision that he adequately considered both the content and volume of Ms. Buglovsky's inappropriate Internet activities and reached a reasonable decision that suspension was an appropriate consequence. Considering the totality of the circumstances and Mr. Licata's ultimate conclusion, there is nothing in the record to suggest that Mr. Licata failed to give sufficient weight to this evidence.

The Board also raises the issue that from September 2009 through November 2009, Ms. Buglovsky sometimes used a colleague's computer, under this colleague's log-in in violation of Board policy, to access her own personal e-mail. The Board asserts that this evidence suggests that Ms. Buglovsky intentionally attempted to evade monitoring by using her own school-issued computer and log-in to send work-related communications via school e-mail, but switching immediately thereafter to her colleague's computer and log-in to access her personal e-mail for personal reasons. It is undisputed that the e-mails sent during this time period were not explicitly sexual in nature. Mr. Licata reviewed this evidence and found that "to the extent there is any attempt to 'cover her tracks,' I find that such activity is limited to the period September through November of 2009, almost three years prior to the filing of tenure charges." See Opinion & Award, at pg. 42. Mr. Licata further found that Ms. Buglovsky used her own log-in to access her personal e-mail for the remainder of the 2009-2010 school year, and made no sexually explicit communications during that time. Accordingly, Mr. Licata found, "the record does not sufficiently evidence intent on the part of Ms. Buglovsky to evade review of her e-mail communications after December of 2009." See Opinion & Award, at pg. 43.

Mr. Licata cited several reasons in support of his decision that Ms. Buglovsky's 2009-2010 computer usage did not warrant dismissal. First, Mr. Licata credited Ms. Buglovsky's testimony that accessing of personal e-mail is prevalent among staff members during non-instructional time and that she genuinely believed that she was not prohibited from sending non-sexual personal e-mails. See id. at pg. 43-44. Mr. Licata further found that "Ms. Buglovsky's network usage was under individualized scrutiny" as a result of the explicitly sexual Spring 2009 communications. Id. at pg. 44. Importantly, Mr. Licata noted that no disciplinary action was taken against Ms. Buglovsky and that Ms. Buglovsky received a positive evaluation for the 2009-2010 school year. Id. at pg. 44. Mr. Licata ultimately noted that the only improper conduct in 2009-2010 was Ms. Buglovsky's use of Mr. Patrick's log-in, but that this violation, which ceased in November 2009 and was never addressed by the Board, was attenuated due to the passage of time.

With respect to the 2010-2011 school year, Mr. Licata found that Ms. Buglovsky only exchanged a handful of e-mails with J.C. See id. at pg. 44-45. However, Mr. Licata also found that within a seven-week period, Ms. Buglovsky accessed the Internet for personal reasons on five occasions when she was supposed to be teaching. See id. at pg. 49. Ultimately, Mr. Licata found that this was "conduct unbecoming a teacher," warranting disciplinary action but not dismissal. In support of his finding that suspension and an increment loss were more appropriate remedies than dismissal, Mr. Licata cited the fact that at least one of the incidents occurred on "Take Your Child to Work Day" and the access of a "My Little Pony" website during instructional time indicated that it was Ms. Buglovsky's daughter who had been using the computer while Ms. Buglovsky was teaching. See Opinion & Award, at pg. 50. Additionally, Mr. Licata found that, again, Ms. Buglovsky had not been disciplined and had received a positive evaluation for the 2010-2011 school year. See id. at pg. 58. Mr. Licata inferred that Ms. Buglovsky's improved behavior following her 2009 reprimand indicated that Ms. Buglovsky would likely have ceased sending personal e-mails and using the Internet during instructional time if the violations were brought to her attention. Mr. Licata therefore concluded that it would be "fundamentally unfair" to dismiss Ms. Buglovsky for this conduct. Id. Mr. Licata also declined to find that the web-browsing was part of a pattern of unbecoming conduct, as a consequence of the prior improvements in Ms. Buglovsky's behavior. Id. at pg. 64.

It follows that this Court finds that Mr. Licata gave sufficient weight to all of the evidence presented. Mr. Licata's divergence with the Board's position can be attributed to his decision to give substantial weight to Ms. Buglovsky's improved behavior and positive performance evaluations. The Court finds that Mr. Licata acted within his discretion in considering the totality of the circumstances and weighing the evidence as he did.

Whether Mr. Licata Properly Interpreted the Board's Policies

Mr. Licata's Arbitration Opinion and Award outlines the bases for his conclusions with respect to the charges asserted by the Board against Ms. Buglovsky. Mr. Licata based his decision on the assertion that a lesser punishment would address Ms. Buglovsky's conduct more effectively than dismissal would, given the circumstances surrounding her initial punishment, her subsequent interactions with the Board including positive performance evaluations, her improved conduct, and her understanding of what was expected of her thereafter.

Although the Board's policies prohibit certain behavior in which Ms. Buglovsky undisputedly engaged, the Board's policies do not mandate dismissal as a consequence. Additionally, the Court finds that Mr. Licata properly credited Ms. Buglovsky's testimony that she did not understand the Board's policy to mean that she was prohibited from sending personal e-mails of an appropriate nature, and that she understood that other teachers frequently used the computers for personal reasons during non-instructional time. In considering whether Ms.

Buglovsky had proper notice regarding the impropriety of her conduct, Mr. Licata also found that the Board's policy was worded in a manner that incorporates both legal and non-legal jargon, making it "unduly complex." Mr. Licata also referenced the April 2009 letter of reprimand, which referenced e-mails of a sexual nature.

This Court finds that this was not an attempt on the part of Mr. Licata to "re-write" the Board's policy. Instead, this Court finds that Mr. Licata properly interpreted Ms. Buglovsky's understanding of the Board's computer usage policy in the context of other communications and circumstances that may have influenced Ms. Buglovksy's perception of the Board's expectations for her conduct. Thus, this Court finds that Mr. Licata did not misinterpret or fail to give sufficient weight to the Board's policy. It should also be noted that the Policy does not carry the weight of a collective bargaining agreement, so reference to public service precedent that binds an arbitrator to give deference to a collective bargaining agreement does not apply here.

NATURE OF DISPUTE

On January 3, 2015, I filed with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes Summary Decision and Case Management Order. In summation, I granted Mr. Henchey's Motion for Summary Decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 of the November 7, 2014 Tenure Charges. I denied the motion with respect to Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19. Lastly, I directed the parties to observe the following case management order set forth on pages 40 and 41 in anticipation of the hearing set to commence on Thursday, January 8, 2015:

> 1. The hearing is now limited to the following issue: Did the Board have just cause to dismiss Lawrence Henchey from his teaching position based on his alleged continued incapacity and related conduct unbecoming as specifically set forth by Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19?;
> 2. All documents relevant to the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming (including rebuttal letters, if any) prior to the 2013-2014 school year shall be admitted without testimony;
>
> 3. The parties may simply refer to the Statement of Evidence identifying markers without the need to separately introduce the same documents as exhibits; documents obtained in discovery that are not contained in the Statement of Evidence must be introduced in exhibit format; and
> 4. Testimony shall be limited to the events of the 2013-14 school year, although the "decision-maker" may testify in summary fashion as to how, if at all, he or she factored in Henchey's overall work record (as reflected in the Statement of Evidence) in connection with the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming and the recommendation for dismissal. Mr. Henchey, of course, may refer to those portions of his prior work record that he deems supportive of his continued employment in the District.

On Sunday, January 4, 2015, the Board filed a letter brief/motion for reconsideration. The Board takes issue with that portion of my Summary Decision holding that the Board failed to comply with the mandatory evaluation procedures of TEACHNJ for the 2013-14 school year, because it did not conduct a mid-year evaluation of Mr. Henchey. Perhaps correctly, the Board observes that the new law does not require a mid-year evaluation unless a teacher has been rated partially effective in his most recent annual summative evaluation – which could not take place under Section 25 until after the 2013-14 school year. The Board requests that it be permitted to utilize the 2013-14 evaluation in the instant tenure charge proceedings to demonstrate inefficiency, incapacity, and conduct unbecoming.

On January 5, 2014, Mr. Henchey filed a letter in opposition to the Board's request for reconsideration. Henchey accuses the Board of backpedaling from its previous admission that it did not comply with Section 25. Apart from the mid-year evaluation issue, Henchey observes that the Board failed to submit in discovery any proof that its evaluation rubric (McRel) was submitted to or approved by the Commissioner. Mr. Henchey opines: "In this case the Board shot its gun prematurely and the lack of a mid-year evaluation is but one of the errors it committed in seeking to bring inefficiency charges against Henchey." Mr. Henchey urges the Arbitrator to decline reconsideration for trial reasons as well: "To allow the Board to use those observations to demonstrate inefficiency, incapacity and conduct unbecoming would simply open a Pandora's box, because inevitably each party would then feel compelled to refer to prior observations/evaluation to refute and/or allow for consideration of the totality of the circumstances."

After reviewing the Board's motion, I must deny same. The undersigned's twofold rationale for rejecting the Board's Section 8 position with respect to the 2013-2014 school year was articulated in the alternative. The primary thrust of the rationale, as set forth at pages 32 to 33, is that the legislature intended teachers to have the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years to see "if they could pass muster under Section 25." Thus, I agreed with Henchey's argument that a Section 8 proceeding for inefficiency cannot be advanced with respect to the 2013-14 school year. As such, I concluded "that any Section 8 proceeding necessarily must be limited to school years 2012-2013 and prior." In the alternative, I reasoned: "At the very least, even if Section 8 is still intact, certainly, a Section 8 proceeding cannot be based on a legally flawed 2013-2014 school year evaluation." I then analyzed the Board's evaluation of Henchey during the 2013-2014 school year under Section 25 and held that the Board failed to comply with the new law by omitting a mid-year evaluation performed by the School Improvement Panel (pages 33-35).

In considering the Board's argument on reconsideration, I must reaffirm my grant of Summary Decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 regarding the 2013-14 school year based on the first of two alternative rationales set forth above, i.e., the inapplicability of Section 8 to interfere with the first two operative years of Section 25 (2013-14 and 2014-15). While I realize that Arbitrator De Treaux allowed such Section 8 evidence of inefficiency in Martinez, as Henchey aptly notes, the issue was not raised by Mr. Martinez who, for some reason, represented himself and, thus, "had a fool for a client." To the extent that Arbitrator Gerber reached a contrary conclusion in Audrey Cuff, I note the support for the undersigned's conclusion based on the several arbitration decisions noted by Henchey in his reply brief dated December 23, 2014.

I add that what is clear is that the future of tenure disputes involving efficiency was intended to lie within Section 25 and not Section 8; the first year the Section 25 clock began running was 2013-14; and all teachers, as part of the comprehensive legislative covenant reached, were provided with an opportunity to prove their efficiency during the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school year based on a rubric approved by the Commissioner of Education. While this may have resulted in some teachers avoiding "justice" for their poor performance in years leading up to the 2013-14 school year, I observe, boards of education still had the ability to take action prior to the commencement of the 2013-14 school year for inefficiency under Section 8 and Section 25 did not preempt Section 8 cases involving incapacity, conduct unbecoming and other just cause. I leave off with the thought that the new legislation – which addressed a plethora of tenure-related matters – understandably may not have been perfectly drawn with respect to each and every contingency subsequently arising. Thus, for all these reasons, even if I retract my alternative rationale for granting Summary Decision, i.e., the Board's failure to conduct a mid-year evaluation, such action would not change the outcome of my January 3, 2015 Summary Decision, but only eliminate the second of two alternative rationales in support of my ultimate finding and order. In so concluding, I comment that, unless this matter is remanded, I need not address Mr. Henchey's point that the Board failed to comply with other aspects of TEACHNJ, e.g., failure to demonstrate that it timely secured the approval of the McRel rubric by the Commissioner of Education and, thus, could not rely on the 2013-14 evaluation, even if the lack of a mid-year evaluation in 2013-14 was appropriate.

In light of the foregoing, and for the reasons contained in my January 3, 2015 Summary Decision, I reiterate, the heart of the dispute remaining is whether the Board had just cause to dismiss Mr. Henchey for continued incapacity and conduct unbecoming based on the 2013-14 allegations set forth at Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19. As to the distinction between inefficiency and incapacity, the latter offenses involve, among other things, a teacher's chronic failure to meet professional expectations, and unprofessional and hostile reactions to supervision by district personnel. See, IMO School District of the Borough of Butler, Morris County, 2010 WL 5624390; Board of Education of the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Greg Molinaro, 96 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 268, 1995 WL 863033 (1995); Bd. of Ed. Lawrence Twp. v. Lester Helmus, 2 N.J.A.R. 334 (1980). The Board may introduce any and all evidence originating during the 2013-14 school year in support of Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19 to prove Henchey's alleged incapacity and conduct unbecoming. Such evidence may include evidence of the assistance and/or constructive criticism provided to (or reiterated to) Mr. Henchey during the 2013-14 school year, no matter what the form – not to demonstrate inefficiency – but to serve as a predicate for the allegation that Henchey's incapacity and conduct unbecoming continued as demonstrated by the manner of his responses, or lack thereof, to such assistance and/or constructive criticisms.

Finally, both parties may refer to Mr. Henchey's overall work record (as contained in the Statement of Evidence) culminating with the 2012-2013 school year increment withholding in support of their respective positions concerning the appropriate disciplinary penalty, if proof of continuing incapacity and conduct unbecoming is demonstrated based on Henchey's actions and/or or inactions during the 2013-14 school year.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing, I must deny the Board's request for reconsideration, but I issue this decision for clarification and guidance given the fast-approaching commencement of the hearing. The parties are referred to the Case Management Order set forth above and within my original Decision.

Respectfully submitted,

Joseph Licata

BACKGROUND

On or about August 27, 2014, tenure charges of Inefficiency were filed against Ursula Whitehurst, Respondent, by John B. Weinstein, Principal of Bard High School Early College pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1. By letter dated September 25, 2014, this matter was subsequently transmitted to David C. Hespe, Acting Commissioner of Education at the New Jersey Department of Education, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) to an arbitrator for a hearing.

The tenure charge of inefficiency was filed by the State District Superintendent , Ms. Cami Anderson ("District") pursuant to Section 25 of the Teachers Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. This section provides for the filing of such charges based upon ratings of ineffective or partially ineffective during two consecutive annual summative evaluations. In the case of Ms. Whitehurst, the District's Statement of Evidence includes evaluations from the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years "as well as numerous memoranda, emails and correspondence regarding the Respondent's performance as a tenured teacher." In the Respondent's Annual Evaluation Summary Form dated June 20, 2013, she received an "Ineffective" rating for 2012-2013. In the Respondent's Annual Evaluation Summary Form dated May 23, 2014, she received a "Partially Effective" rating.

The District maintains that it "complied with all requirements set forth in the 'Tenure Employees Hearing Law' N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. when it served the Respondent with the tenure charge. Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, "a tenured teacher shall not be dismissed from his or her position or reduced in compensation 'except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct or other just cause.'"

The District maintains that "the tenure charges against the Respondent in this matter are based on inefficiency under both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and TEACHNJ. The District properly adhered to statutory requirements in place in the 2012-2013 school year and the subsequent regulations promulgated in the 2013-2014 school year. Thus, Respondent's 2012-2013 evaluations satisfied the requirements in effect in 2012-2013. Respondent was rated ineffective/partially effective in two consecutive years and therefore, her dismissal is warranted."

By letter dated October 3, 2014, the law firm of Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum & Friedman, P.C., on behalf of the Respondent, filed a Notice of Motion to Dismiss and Stay Proceedings.

The Respondent referred to "the authority of the Commissioner to decide this Motion as set forth in Section 25 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3" (and the implementing regulations), which provide, in relevant part, as follows:

> [u]pon receipt of a charge . . . the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed. (Emphasis added).

Since the law requires that the Commissioner not refer this matter to an arbitrator in the event the evaluation process was not followed by the District, the Respondent notes that "the charges are based upon Ms. Whitehurst's evaluations for the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years" and "as a matter of law, the 2012-13 evaluations cannot be used as one of the school years for measuring Ms. Whitehurst's performance under TEACHNJ."

Accordingly, the Respondent moved to dismiss the charges pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and requested that "the Commissioner hold the charge in abeyance pending a determination on this application by the Commissioner under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5." The regulation cited reads, in pertinent part, as follows:

> Except as specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c), within 10 days of receipt of the charged party's answer or expiration of the time for its filing, the Commissioner shall determine whether such charge(s) are sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. If the charges are determined insufficient, they shall be dismissed and the parties shall be notified accordingly... (Emphasis added).

By letter dated September 25, 2014, the law firm of Scarinci Hollenbeck, LLC, on behalf of Ms. Cami Anderson, State District Superintendent, transmitted the Notice of Inefficiency charges against Ms. Ursula Whitehurst, Respondent, to David C. Hespe, Acting Commissioner of Education. By letter dated October 3, 2014, the law firm of Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum & Friedman, P.C. filed a Motion to Dismiss the Inefficiency charge on behalf of the Respondent. On November 7, 2014, the District/Petitioner submitted its Opposition to Respondent's Motion to Dismiss and Stay of the Proceedings. On November 20, 2014, the Respondent submitted a Reply Brief to the Opposition Brief filed by the Newark Public Schools ("District") as well as to its October 31, 2014 correspondence regarding Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the Tenure Charge alleging inefficiency, specifically correspondence sent to Ms. Charlotte Hitchcock, General Counsel of the District from Mr. Peter Shulman, Assistant Commissioner of the NJDOE. On December 5, 2014, the District submitted a sur-reply to the Respondent's Reply Brief. On December 16, 2014, the Respondent submitted a sur-sur. reply brief

By letter dated October 14, 2014, the undersigned was appointed as the arbitrator in the instant case by M. Kathleen Duncan, Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, Department of Education, State of New Jersey pursuant to P.L. 2012, C. 26 signed into by law by Governor Christie on August 6, 2012. The letter reads as follows:

> Please be advised that, following receipt of respondent's answer on October 6, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3e; upon review the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer as required by the statute.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

Ms. Ursula Whitehurst ("Whitehurst") is a tenured teacher and has been employed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark for over twenty-four (24) years.

The tenure charge of inefficiency filed against the Respondent is based upon the annual summative evaluation ratings she received for the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 or Section 25 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. Section 25 mandates the filing of an inefficiency charge by the Superintendent in instances where a teacher is "rated ineffective or partially ineffective in an annual summative evaluation" for at least two years. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(1) and (2). Section 25 further precludes any discretion in the matter by mandating that an inefficiency charge be filed. Section 25 further provides, however, that "[t]he only evaluations that may be used for the purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L. 2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.)." See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(d).

During the 2012-2013 school year, the Statement of Evidence indicates that Respondent received the following evaluations from her administrators:

- Formal Observation Form dated February 21, 2013;
- Formal Observation Form, dated June 13, 2013;
- Annual Evaluation Summary Form dated June 20, 2013 (Respondent received an Ineffective rating).

Neither of the formal observations was announced or involved a pre-observation conference.

During the 2013-2014 school year, the Statement of Evidence indicates that the Respondent received the following evaluations:

- Corrective Action Plan dated October 15, 2013;
- Long Observation Summary Form dated December 23, 2013;
- Annual Evaluation Summary Form dated May 23, 2014 (Respondent received a partially Effective rating);
- Long Observation Summary Form, dated May 23, 2014;
- Short Observation Summary Form dated May 28, 2014.

CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES

Respondent Position

The crux of the Respondent's position is that "Ms. Whitehurst's Annual Summative Evaluation pertaining to the 2012-13 school year may not be considered in connection with tenure charges brought pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3." According to the Respondent, since the applicable regulations establishing guidelines and procedures for the timing and conduct of teacher evaluations pursuant to both TEACHNJ and Achieve NJ did not go into effect until the beginning of the 2013-14 school year, specifically in October 2013, "the District has not alleged viable tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

"Those regulations include, but are not limited to, provisions governing the content of evaluation rubrics and components, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.1, procedures on rubric approval by the Commissioner, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-5.1, and procedures concerning the timing, form, nature and number of Teacher evaluations and observations, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4." (Resp. brief @ 4).

The law, according to the Respondent, "clearly provides that the utilization of the preliminary evaluation rubrics by no later than January 31, 2013 was merely a 'pilot program' to test and refine those evaluation rubrics, not the full implementation of them." See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123. It states:

> "[b]eginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program to test and refine the evaluation rubric. (Emphasis added)."

Furthermore, Respondent asserts, in reference to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e), that the actual implementation of the approved rubrics following the pilot program was not scheduled to commence until the 2013-14 school year.

> "[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district."

In addition to the fact that the teacher evaluation and observation guidelines were not established by the Commissioner until October 2013, after the commencement of the 2013-14 school year, Respondent notes that "contrary to the applicable regulatory and statutory requirements, the District did not have a School Improvement Panel ('Panel') in place at Respondent's school during the 2012-13 school year." Both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1 require that each school within a District establish a Panel to conduct evaluations and oversee the mentoring program as follows:

> [t]he panel shall oversee the mentoring of teachers and conduct evaluations of teachers, including an annual summative evaluation, provided that the teacher on the school improvement panel shall not be included in the evaluation process, except in those instances in which the majority representative has agreed to the contrary. (Emphasis added). (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-120

Given the foregoing statutory and regulatory requirements, the Respondent contends that "the District's failure and/or inability to meet the standards of the regulatory scheme during the 2012-13 school year renders formal judgment on teacher's performance for that year through tenure removal proceedings inappropriate and unlawful."

Alluding to the Department of Education's own guidance entitled "Summary of Legal Requirements for Evaluation and Tenure cases," the Respondent cites the following excerpt:

> The TEACHNJ Act outlines a new process for filing inefficiency charges under the new evaluation system (AchieveNJ). This guide outlines the actions required in law before bringing an inefficiency tenure charge based on the new tenure revocation process. (Emphasis added).

"Among the 'actions required in law' required to comply with the regulatory scheme established by the Commissioner – and not adopted until October 2013 – are minimum observation requirements for tenured teachers, a mandatory summative evaluation process, minimum Corrective Action Plan requirements and the existence of a School Improvement Panel." Since these mandatory requirements were not satisfied by the District in 2012-13 and the NJDOE's own statutory and regulatory guidance for tenure cases precludes consideration of evaluations conducted prior to full implementation of both TEACHNJ and AchieveNJ, which occurred in the 2013-14 school year, not the 2012-13 school year, the Respondent argues that the charges are legally and procedurally defective.

As further evidence that the 2012-13 summative evaluation cannot be considered, the Respondent cites the regulatory guidance published by NJDOE providing that the 2012-13 evaluations conducted as part of a pilot program cannot be considered in conjunction with inefficiency charges. The particular FAQ addressing this issue reads:

> Q: Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-13) toward tenure decisions?

> A: No – the only item "on the clock" is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (i.e.: teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

In accord with the FAQ is the Evaluation Committee Final Report prepared by the Commissioner, in which the 2012-13 year is described as a "capacity building year" in anticipation of TEACHNJ and AchieveNJ scheduled to be implemented in 2013-14.

After reviewing Paterson Police PBA Local 1 v. City of Paterson, 433 N.J. Super 416 (App. Div. 2013), wherein the agency guidance was given substantial deference, the Respondent concludes that "the tenure charges filed against the Respondent conflict with the regulatory guidance issued by the Department of Education." Since 2012-13 "does not count," the District's Tenure Charge based on only one (1) year (2013-14) is "facially insufficient to sustain an inefficiency charge," which under N.J.S.A. requires two years of deficient performance.

The Respondent further maintains that dismissal of the charge is warranted because the District failed to provide Ms. Whitehurst with the observations mandated by N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4. Referring to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c), specifically, "[t]he Commissioner shall examine the charge...and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed," the Respondent argues that "the Commissioner is statutorily prohibited from forwarding (these) tenure charges to an arbitrator for resolution, and must dismiss the charges instead...Mere referral of this motion for arbitral consideration would create an undue risk of inconsistent legal rulings which would ultimately cast doubt on the validity of any resulting rulings on an application to vacate an arbitration award and/or a subsequent appeal to the Appellate Division. As such, a stay of this proceeding and consideration of this application by the Commissioner, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5, is warranted."

To the extent the District argues that it was not bound by the regulatory requirements for observations and evaluation rubrics that were not in place in 2012-13, the Respondent responds that the applicable law and its implementing regulations were part of a comprehensive statutory scheme, including the provision of "well-defined, transparent and uniform observation and evaluation guidelines and procedures," in exchange for more the expeditious removal of deficient teachers, with more limited defenses available to them. As such, the Respondent contends that the District should not be allowed to benefit from some statutory requirements while omitting or circumventing others.

District Position

The District, in "Petitioner's Brief in Opposition to Respondent's Motion to Dismiss and Stay of the Proceedings," initially states that "the Commissioner of Education has sole authority to determine if the 'evaluation process' was followed properly by the District when it served its tenure charges" pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and once the matter is referred to the arbitrator, the arbitrator is obligated to review the case on the merits and determine whether or not:

> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;

(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;

(3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or

(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

In the absence of a finding validating any of the foregoing deficiencies in the evaluation, the District maintains that the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss must be denied.

After reviewing the undisputed facts, including the requirements of TEACHNJ that all public school districts develop "evaluation rubrics" to assess the performance of their teachers, and to obtain approval for their "rubrics" from NJDOE by December 31, 2012, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(c), the District notes that it "adopted an evaluation rubric as part of the evaluation system known as the Newark Public Schools Framework for Effective Teaching ('Framework') to be implemented in the 2012-13 school year. The Framework described, inter alia, the new levels of performance for teachers, namely, "highly effective, effective, partially effective, and ineffective."

The District further notes that in October 2012, the District and the Newark Teachers Union ("NTU") entered into a Memorandum of Agreement ("MOA") for a successor CBA wherein a new evaluation process was incorporated into contract language. Specifically, the MOA states:

> NPS will implement a new evaluation system beginning SY 2012-13. In accordance with the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq., teachers will receive an annual > summative evaluation rating that designates them as highly effective, effective, partially effective or ineffective. [Emphasis added.]

Moreover, Section II of the MOA, which pertains to compensation and benefits, stated that "NPS shall implement a new educator evaluation system with four rating criteria beginning in school year 2012-2013. The agreed-upon compensation system would be based on teacher performance as measured by the new evaluation framework."

Prior to the negotiated settlement of the MOA, seven (7) schools in the District in 2011-2012 had participated in a "pilot" of a new teacher evaluation system. The NJDOE approved the District's participation in the Pilot and "allowed the District to begin using a new framework" and the four prong rating system in the 2011-2012 school year. This framework and rating system was continued during the 2012-13 school year "following the passage of the MOA and TEACHNJ."

With respect to clarifying the NJDOE's intent set forth in its "Guide to the TEACHNJ Act" as well as the status of the District's evaluation rubric during the 2012-13 school year, on October 24, 2014, Assistant Commissioner Shulman, on behalf of the NJDOE, provided the following "clarification" of the agency's intent:

> [S]ince August 2012, the Department has published many resources meant to support school districts in the implementation of the Act. One such document was a response to questions regarding TEACHNJ's new requirement that teachers must demonstrate four years of teaching within a school district, with a rating of effective or highly effective in two annual summative evaluations within the first three year of employment . . . [many non-tenured teachers requested] the District to clarify how the law applied to their tenure acquisition and the Department responded accordingly:

> No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where [sic] the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" . . . will start.
> [S]uch clarifications did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions, such as the decision to renew or non-renew a nontenured teacher or the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher . . . In fact, the Department issued multiple publications notifying pilot school districts that any personnel consequences connected with evaluations were a matter of local decision and applicable State law . . . The Department did not perceive any limitations to the use of evaluation rubrics in the 2012-2013 school year for personnel decisions as no such limitation is mentioned in the TEACHNJ Act . . . (Id.) (Emphasis added).

Pursuant to its legal argument that the District's evaluation of the Respondent for the 2012-2013 school year is valid as TEACHNJ was in effect and in full force in the 2012-2013 school year, the District acknowledges that TEACHNJ was enacted by the New Jersey Legislature ("Legislature") on August 6, 2012 and each statute thereafter established the procedure for adjudicating tenure charges, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.5 From this chronology of statutory enactments, the District concludes that "there is no question that the evaluations in the 2012-2013 school year were to be used toward determining if tenure charges were warranted."

The District, in addressing the Respondent's reliance on the NJDOE web page entitled "Educator Frequently Asked Questions," argues that "by its terms, this statement is irrelevant to any tenure charge, because it refers to only the acquisition of tenure by non-tenured teachers rather than the evaluation or dismissal of tenured teachers as follows:

Q. Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-13) toward tenure decisions?

A. No – only the item "on the clock" is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (i.e.: teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

From the "clarification" of the FAQ it received from Assistant Commissioner Shulman, the District asserts that "it has been unequivocally established that the term 'tenure decisions' does not refer to the determination to file tenure charges, rather it refers to the decision of whether to retain a teaching staff member past the date on which he or she will acquire tenure."

The District further argues that "even if the Department had intended its FAQ to serve as guidance on whether 2012-2013 evaluations should "count" for purposes of inefficiency charges against tenured teachers, such guidance would have no regulatory force. In that case, the FAQ would constitute invalid de facto rulemaking. Where an agency issues guidance without utilizing formal rulemaking procedures, the guidance may be disregarded as invalid 'de facto rulemaking' if it meets the test set forth in Metro Media, Inc. v. Director, Division of Taxation, 97 N.J. 313 (1984)." The District cites the Appellate Division decision in Besler & Co., Inc. v. Bradley, 361 N.J. Super @ 171, where the Metromedia six factors are weighed to determine whether the APA rulemaking process should have been utilized.

Reviewing the chronology of requirements set forth in TEACHNJ, among which were that school districts "institute pilot programs to test their new evaluation rubrics by, January 31, 2013 at the latest, implement their evaluation rubrics by the beginning of the 2013-14 school year at the latest, and '[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved adopted evaluation rubric...' (emphasis added), the District discerns nothing in TEACHNJ or its regulations that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014 for the purpose of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

In its second point, the District argues that the District followed the evaluation process in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 because the Commissioner, who is solely authorized to determine if the District properly followed the evaluation process, referred the matter to the undersigned Arbitrator for further proceeding. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) provides the following:

> c. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed. (Emphasis added).

Since N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 similarly provides that the Commissioner has the authority to determine the sufficiency of a tenure charge "to warrant dismissal or reduction in the salary of the person charged" and is "only prohibited from referring a matter to an arbitrator 'when a motion for a summary decision has been made prior to that time,' the Commissioner may retain the matter for purposes of deciding the motion." The Commissioner's transmission of the inefficiency charge to the arbitrator is deemed evidence of its procedural validity.

As illustrative of the process, the District cites I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Edgard Chavez, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, DKT, No. 269-9/12 (February 6, 2013) where ("An arbitrator recognized the Commissioner statutory authority and provided that '[b]ecause the charges have been deemed sufficient by the Commissioner, I find I need not determine whether or not the District complied with claimed controlling procedures and process, or whether the District was required to comply with a tiered evaluation system or other issue...'"). In the Chavez case, the Commissioner exercised his authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) when he issued his October 8, 2014 correspondence to the parties and Arbitrator Joyce M. Klein as follows:

> Please be advised that following receipt of respondent's answer on October 1, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; upon review the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Joyce M. Klein as required by the Statute. (Emphasis added).

By denying the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss and transmitting the matter to an arbitrator, the District argues that the Commissioner issued his Final Administrative Decision, necessitating that the matter proceed to a hearing on the merits. After reviewing the standard for a Motion to Dismiss before the Commissioner set forth in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.10, the Commissioner's decision to refer the charges to the undersigned Arbitrator as opposed to dismissing the pleadings is deemed tantamount to establishing that the Respondent failed to prove that the "District's tenure charge fails to advance a cause of action, lack jurisdiction, failure to prosecute or other good reason."

The District argues that "the Arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide this matter for inefficiency under either N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 of the TEACHNJ Act." The Arbitrator refers to the decision of the Arbitrator in Chavez supra, as follows:

> TEACHNJ provides more broad authority for arbitrator review of tenure charges than that narrowly provided in Section 23 [Now N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16]. Section 22 of the Act [Now N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1] provides, among other things, for the establishment of an arbitrator panel, rules for exchange of information by the parties, timelines for arbitration, use of the American Arbitration Association labor arbitration rules, and, importantly the issue of authority granted arbitrators by the statute, that; 'The Commissioner of Education shall maintain a panel of 25 permanent arbitrators to hear matters pursuant to N.J.S. 18A:6-16.' The plain meaning of such language supports a conclusion that the Act grants authority to arbitrators to consider all types of tenure charges, including efficiency charges beyond merely those governed by Section 23."

The District cites I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Dr. Andrew Cuff, Cumberland Regional School District, DKT. No. 71-3/14 (June 26, 2014) for its finding that inefficiency charges initiated before the new procedures of TEACHNJ had been fully implemented "must be decided upon the old standard."

The District maintains that the instant inefficiency charges have been plead under both sections pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, which provides for mandatory charges brought on the basis of two consecutive annual ratings of ineffective or partially effective, and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, which provides for the adjudication of inefficiency charges on other non-mandatory grounds such as insubordination. "This matter was plead under both sections." (See Miller Cert. Exhibit A).

The District distinguishes the decision of Arbitrator Bluth, I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Sandra Cheatham, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Dkt. No. 420-14 (October 16, 2014). "There the Arbitrator over-stepped his authority in making a decision as to the appropriateness of the District's evaluation process, a matter expressly left to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 17.3." Finally, the District argues as follows:

> Accordingly, even if the arbitrator here concludes, notwithstanding the facts and argument presented herein, that the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 have not been met, the charge against Respondent should not be dismissed. Instead, the charge must be evaluated under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, and, thus, the case should proceed to hearing.

Respondent's Reply to the District's Opposition to the Motion to Dismiss

The Respondent, in her Reply, asserts that the District has "turn[ed] a blind eye to the clear mandate of the law and the recent decision on the exact same issues presented herein rendered by Arbitrator Bluth in I/M/O Cheatham and the Newark Public Schools," supra.

Notwithstanding the Shulman letter, Respondent contends "the law is clear that the 2012-13 school year was deemed by law, regulation, and the Department of Education's own advisory committees, and the Department of Education itself to be a 'pilot' year. An arbitrator, in considering this precise issue has so ruled recently, and did so persuasively, as discussed in detail infra." (Resp. Reply brief @ 3).

Insofar as the District's reliance on its MOA with the NTU is concerned, the Respondent notes that tenure is a statutory right unaffected by any reference to the new evaluation rating system scheduled to begin in 2012-13 in the parties' MOA and therefore any claim that the parties and Respondent were "bound to the implementation of a law that did not even exist in 2012-13 must be rejected."

The Respondent further notes: "In the first place, the MOA does not mention tenure at all. Second, in order to waive a statutory right, a waiver must be clear and explicit. Third, the TEACH NJ Act has a preemptive effect, and that statutory mandate cannot be waived." Fourth, the Respondent takes issue with the District's contention that transmittal of the charges and the motion to dismiss to the arbitrator was tantamount to a Commissioner "determination that the District complied with the many strict standards imposed by the evaluation process pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 because the Commissioner expressly directed the Arbitrator to decide the motion."

The Respondent further rejects the District's assertion that the Arbitrator can "transform the charges brought under one specific section of the law into a different type of charge altogether." Moreover, it dismisses the District's reliance on inefficiency charges brought prior to the effective date of TEACHNJ "in support of the general proposition that it cannot be foreclosed from proceeding against Respondent..."

The Respondent argues that the District's attempt to rely on evaluations it conducted in 2012-13 because it conducted its own pilot program in 2011-12 "completely ignores the TEACHNJ Act, its implementing regulations, the voluminous Department of Education issued guidance, as well fundamental principles governing waiver of statutory rights, and the Department's multiple and consistent statements explaining how TEACH NJ was to be implemented."

The Respondent notes that the District's attempt to buttress its position that because the law was adopted in August 2012, in the 2012-13 school year, "it automatically applied during the 2012-13 school year. Since the 2012-13 school year represents a date that precedes the full effective implementation date of the revised Tenure Act...the charge of inefficiency brought against Respondent based on evaluations issued in 2012-13 and 2013-14 are fatally flawed and are ripe for dismissal under the statute."

The Respondent considers the Cheatham decision to be "sound and consistent with the TEACHNJ Act" and entitled to "substantially greater weight than the District's recent attempts at including a document obtained on an ex parte basis as a result of its dissatisfaction with Mr. Bluth's decision."

Referring to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(d) and (e), the Respondent notes that although the Act was adopted on August 6, 2012, "it provides for different implementation dates – a common practice." In the Respondent's view, the effect of the implementation dates was to convey the intent that the 2012-13 school year "was to serve as a test run year for purposes of all tenure related issues – not only criteria for attaining tenure, but also for completing evaluations and observations under the new evaluation procedures and rubrics, and revocation of tenure." The Respondent deems "inconsequential" the fact that the District "opted into a pilot program in the prior year (2011-12)." Whereas

"N.J.S.A. 18A:123 provides that a District will implement a pilot program to 'test and refine the evaluation rubric' by no later than January 2013 – approximately 5 months into the 2012-13 school year -- [i]t was not until the start of the 2013-14 school year that implementation of the evaluation rubrics was mandated...This begs the question how the District could comply in 2012-13 with regulations that did not exist until 3/4 of the way through the 2012-13 school year and not implemented until 2013-14?"

Notwithstanding the Shulman letter, the Respondent alludes to voluminous publications issued by NJDOE, as well as various Committee Reports issued in anticipation of the Act, "including an FAQ published by the Department, which cites in multiple parts, that 2013-14 was the first 'live' year for purposes of making tenure decisions of all kinds." With respect to the Shulman letter, Respondent writes:

> Respectfully, Mr. Shulman's letter represents little more than an admission that the District possesses absolutely no legal support for its claim that evaluation outcomes from the "pilot" 2012-13 school year count for purposes of tenure decisions, including tenure revocation. The letter, which entirely ignores all other references to the intent of the legislature, and communications from the Department of Education, claims that the FAQ that speaks to the "pilot year" was not intended to address tenure revocation timing, but, rather, timing for tenure acquisition. After posting the FAQ to the public for approximately two (2) years, and to now try to clarify that which is already clear to most everyone but the District, and just days after the Cheatham decision was issued, is circumspect at best. And for this reason alone, the letter should not be considered.

In its review of the sequence of events which culminated in the Shulman letter, the timing of which the Respondent deems "telling and suspicious to put it mildly," specifically its issuance a week after the Cheatham decision dated October 16, 2014, the Respondent asserts that the District "coordinated with the Commissioner's office a belated attempt at a desperate get-out-of-jail free card concerning the meaning of the FAQ in question." Prior to the Shulman letter "that section of the FAQ in question makes no reference to acquisition or revocation but rather to tenure decisions..." That the Commissioner's office, having determined that the tenure charges should be decided by an arbitrator, would provide any comment in this matter, and then revise one section of a 15-page comprehensive document, including the FAQ that had been available to the public for at least the past two years, is considered problematic.

"Additionally, Mr. Shulman ignores the remainder of the very same comprehensive and authoritative FAQ, which unequivocally supports Respondent's position, on multiple pages, that 2012-13 was a capacity building year of development and that the teacher evaluation system would be implemented in 2013-14 and no sooner. Thus, not only is the letter not appropriate for consideration, the contrast between it and all of the prior communications from the Commissioner's office requires the conclusion that it is bogus." (Resp. brief @ 15).

Further evidence that 2013-14 was the first year in which the new evaluation system would count is provided in a memo dated January 7, 2014 to all Chief School Administrators et al. by NJDOE Assistant Commissioner and Chief Performance Officer Shulman as follows:

> "As districts implement AchieveNJ for the first time in 2013-2014, NJ SMART is preparing for a modified data collection to capture the multiple measures of educator practice and student growth that are aligned to AchieveNJ. In July 2014, we will conduct a separate > Staff Evaluation Submission through NJ SMART and subsequently will sunset the evaluation data elements that are part of other NJ SMART submissions. In the first year of this collection, coordination will be necessary between each district's data management, personnel and administrators in charge of evaluation. Today, we are sharing information about the submission to provide districts with ample time to prepare to submit in July."

Until the Shulman letter, the Respondent contends that "Shulman himself" had announced to all Chief School Administrators, including Ms. Cami Anderson, that 2013-14 would be the first year for full implementation of the new teacher evaluation section as follows: "We have designated 2012-13 as a planning and capacity-building year. During this time, districts must engage in one of two options: participate in a second cohort of our pilot program, or build capacity through a defined series of steps for implementing the new system in 2013-14."

Also in his July 30, 2012 Memorandum, Shulman announced:

> "[a]s we prepare for statewide rollout of an improve educator evaluation system in 2013-14, all districts will conduct capacity-building activities detailed in previous memos and explained in our FAQs. The first of these requirements is to form a District Evaluation Advisory Committee (DEAC) to ensure stakeholder engagement in evaluation reform. We strongly advise these committees be formed as soon as possible, as they will help to drive decision making for all other parts of the process. To that end, we have provided an overview of the required membership of the DEAC (Appendix B) and a sample communications plan that DEACs may use to guide their initial meetings and plans for the 2012-13 school year (Appendix C). We will continue to provide information and resources for next year's capacity building activities as they become available." (Emphasis added).

The Respondent further argues that "[i]n the now infamous FAQ issued by the Department of Education, entitled 'Excellent Educators for New Jersey" (See Certification of Counsel dated November 20, 2014, Exhibit 4*), the Department explicitly sets forth the 2011-12 pilots in which the District participated, the 2012-13 statewide pilots and the then anticipated implementation of both TEACH NJ and its implementing regulations for the 2013-14 school year."

In summation, the Respondent maintains that "[t]hese FAQs, guidelines, summaries and reports are entitled to and must be given due diligence" as per Paterson, supra.

The Respondent disputes the District's contention that if it failed to comply with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, it may nonetheless proceed under the inefficiency alternative set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. However, "their charge cites no alternate basis for proceeding against this Respondent" unless "the District wishes to pursue tenure charges against Respondent, based on only one (1) year of deficient performance during that time, then they are required to reinstate the Respondent and go back to the proverbial drawing board and in accordance with the applicable statutory and regulatory procedure."

"Although the District now seeks to proceed under Section 8 of TEACH NJ, the charges are grounded specifically on alleged inefficiency pursuant to Section 25 of the TEACH NJ Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, and can only be based upon that provision. Further, and pursuant to Section 25, the District must abide by the statutory and regulatory requirements set forth therein – namely that they undergo a specific review procedure for procedural compliance, and that if this review process reveals non-compliance, the charges cannot move forward in the filing process. Nor can they proceed to arbitration. These laws constitute a statutory (and regulatory) imposed prerequisite to tenure charges, and, permitting the District to proceed under another section based on a year that the statute and administrative guidance deemed experimental and not to be used in pursuing tenure charges would render the requirements of Section 25 meaningless."

* For example, this FAQ indicates that the new teacher and principal evaluation system will be implemented in 2013-14 (p. 1); that summative ratings would not count until 2013-14 (p. 4); that certain milestones had to be met to "prepare to implement new teacher and principal evaluations in 2013-14." (p. 6); that "the pilot would use the information for full implementation in 2013-14." (p. 8, 9); that "beginning in 2013-14, growth data for all qualifying teachers...will be a part of educator evaluations." (p. 14).

If the Legislature had intended for "deficient" inefficiency charges to proceed to arbitration via Section 8 of the Act, it would have so stated. Instead, it specifically imposed an obligation for each deciding entity, or its "designee" in the case of the Commissioner, to review the charges for procedural compliance. In the absence of procedural compliance, the Legislature chose to prohibit such charges from proceeding to an arbitration hearing as a matter of law. And lest there be any doubt that this was the intention of the Legislature, the Department of Education explicitly advised districts that at a minimum, "[d]istricts must ensure the following evaluation procedures are followed (at minimum) prior to filing an inefficiency tenure charge" and that "[f]ailure to adhere to these requirements can result in the tenure charge being dismissed." See Certification of Counsel, Exhibit 10, p. 1.

The District reiterates its position that by transmitting the case to the arbitrator for determination, "the Commissioner did not make any decision, findings, factual or legal."

The Respondent argues that "the parties' MOA does not and cannot authorize the District to file tenure charges based on the 2012-2013 evaluations." Despite the District's adoption of the four summative ratings, and the evaluation rubric developed by the Board in its MOA, "the MOA does not mention tenure at all. The parties' MOA makes absolutely no reference to the substantive processions of tenure charges for the 2012-13 school year, nor did the parties agree to any such terms in the MOA."

Moreover, the Respondent cites State v. State Supervisor Employees Assn., 78 N.J. 54, 80-81 (1978) and its progeny for the proposition that "where, as here, a statute or regulation establishes a term and conclusion of employment, the statute preempts the negotiated term." Insofar as the waiver of a statutory mandate or right is concerned, "it must be plain and unambiguous." Red Bank Regional Ed. Assn. v. Red Bank Regional High School District, 78 N.J. 122, 140 (1978).

In the Respondent's view, "if the District wishes to proceed against Respondent on statutory grounds other than 'inefficiency' such as 'incapacity,' 'unbecoming conduct,' or 'other just cause,' it is free to do so by filing such charges against Respondent in accordance with the requirements of Section 8 of the Act. What it cannot do is file (obviously) deficient inefficiency charges pursuant to Section 25 of the Act, and when they are rightfully judged to be deficient and subject to dismissal, attempt to argue in the alternative that they are not 'really' inefficiency charges and therefore should proceed to arbitration in accordance with Section 8 of the Act."

Finally, the Respondent contends that the District's interpretation of the law finds no support in the arbitration awards it has relied upon. The tenure charges at issue in both I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Lawrence E. Hawkins and I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Gerald Carter are distinguishable in that they allege unbecoming conduct and/or insubordination in addition to inefficiency, pursuant to Section 8 of the Act. "The charges in instant matter only allege inefficiency, which must proceed, if at all, in accordance with Section 25 of the Act."

In addition, the cases of Pugliese and Chavez are distinguishable as they were filed after the effective date of the TEACHNJ Act but prior to the implementation of its substantive provisions in 2012-13. Given the filing of these charges in the interim period between August 6, 2012 and September 2012, an issue arose as to "what substantive law to apply." TEACHNJ provided that its substantive provisions did not take effect until the 2013-2014 school year.

District's Sur-Reply

The District denies that any ex parte communication took place between Assistant Commissioner Shulman and Charlotte Hitchcock, its General Counsel, "that violated the Respondent's rights in this matter...The correspondence from Ms. Hitchcock specifically related to the Cheatham matter. The teacher in the Cheatham [case] was not a party to this separate Tenure charge."

The District notes that it is a "State-Operated School District under full intervention of the State, principally, the District is an arm of the State. To allege that it improperly communicated with or sought clarification from the State is clearly wrong."

The District objects to the Respondent's inclusion of twelve (12) new documents. The District asserts that "it is undisputed that TEACHNJ went into effect prior to the beginning of the 2012-13 school year and its enactment occurred on August 6, 2012. The District finds nothing in the Respondent's additional documents that "explicitly say that the 2012-13 school year does not count toward in efficiency."

With respect to the implementation of evaluation rubrics, the District notes that "[t]he cited provisions provided the latest dates by which districts were required to test and implement their new rubrics; they did not prohibit implementation of approved rubrics earlier than the stated deadline. Nothing in TEACHNJ or its regulations provides that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014, for purposes of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3."

According to the District, "the Respondent improperly relied on the Department of Education's Answer as a means to defer the tenure charge to the 2013-14 school year." It reiterates portions of the Shulman Clarification letter, emphasizing:

> Through this guidance, the department sought to clarify when summative ratings would count towards earning tenure. As mentioned above, such clarification did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions, such as the decision to renew or non-renew a nontenured teacher or the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher.

The District maintains that the Respondent's reliance on the Cheatham and Thomas cases is misplaced. "These issues are controlled by statute, not regulations." It distinguishes Thomas from the instant case since "this matter was initially plead under both sections." (See Exhibit A of Miller Cert.). Moreover, the District notes that neither Cheatham nor Thomas is precedential in this Tenure Charge." It cites the case of I/M/O Tenure Charge Against Edward Newton, Dkt. No. 286-9/14 where the District sought to terminate Newton based on an Inefficiency Charge pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and the Commissioner, once Newton failed to timely respond, upheld his termination.

Respondent's Sur-sur Reply

The Respondent reiterates that 2012-13 was a pilot year and that once the TEACHNJ was enacted the evaluation criteria and procedures "dramatically changed."

The Respondent relies again on the Cheatham decision, supplemented by the Thomas decision. "Additionally, the Arbitrator found that the District, in filing tenure inefficiency charges, failed to follow the requisite evaluation process set forth in N.J.A.C. 18A:10-4.4, and presented no evidence that it was somehow exonerated from the Act."

The Respondent maintains that neither Assistant Commissioner Shulman nor NJDOE is the arbiter of the tenure charges. It disputes the District's contention that the District is the "arm of the State, and the two entities are ostensibly one, and may therefore communicate ex parte." This "completely ignores the simple fact that this is a contested legal action, in which both parties are represented by counsel, and any dialogue between the government agency and the District during ongoing litigation – especially the nature of Mr. Shulman's and Ms. Hitchcock's communique – are entirely improper. And, notably, the law is well settled that a State Operated School District, such as Newark, remains a separate entity while under State control. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-37. To accept the District's position, the District and Commissioner's office could communicate for any reason at any time, ex parte. The procedure for processing tenure charges simply does not contemplate this proposition. Indeed, if the District's position is accepted, in cases where the Commissioner decided to act himself, the District could communicate ex parte with the Commissioner without the Respondent's knowledge or input."

It further disputes the District's conclusion that the Motion to Dismiss is entirely reliant on the FAQ but rather "based upon the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123."

The Respondent takes issue with the District's claim that Cheatham and Thomas are "anomalies," absent access to other tenure case decisions in the State.

The Respondent argues that "the District never filed under Section 8 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, but under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, the latter of which provides generally that a tenured teacher 'shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation.' It also distinguishes the Newton and Pulliam-Newell cases where the Respondents failed to respond to the charges and the charges were therefore deemed admitted." In addition to Cheatham and

Thomas, the Respondent cites the recent I/M/O Tenure Charges Against Elena Brady, State-Operated School District for the City of Newark for its clarification of the distinction between Section 25 and Section 8 inefficiency charges.

DISCUSSION

A. Arbitrator's Authority re: Procedural Issues

In its filing of the Notice of Inefficiency charges pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:17.3, N.J.S.A.18A:6-10, N.J.S.A.18A:6-11 and N.J.S.A.6A:3-5.1, the District has argued that since the Commissioner of Education has "the sole authority to determine if the 'evaluation process' was followed," the referral of those charges to the undersigned arbitrator was tantamount to a determination by the Commissioner that the District had complied with the requirements of the "evaluation process" and "[a]s such, the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss must be denied and the Arbitrator must render a decision on the merits as prescribed by statute."

Notwithstanding the contention of the District, it is clear that from the appointment of the Arbitrator, while the Commissioner of Education had the authority to decide the Motion to Dismiss, he was "unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed and accordingly on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer as required by statute." Following the Commissioner's review of the case pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3e, and N.J.S.A.6-17.3(c), with the latter provision stating that "the Commissioner shall examine the charge," the statute states that the Commissioner "shall...refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines the evaluation process has not been followed."

Given the Commissioner's referral of the Inefficiency Charge to the Arbitrator, without ruling on whether the District complied with the evaluation process, the Arbitrator maintains that as the "designee" of the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(5) he, as arbitrator, "shall examine the charge" and ascertain whether the charges constitute "a charge of Inefficiency," pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3 aka Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act.

The District's assertion that the only authority vested in the Arbitrator is limited under N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3 to determining whether or not one of four evaluative criteria were met is misplaced. These criteria, such as "the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process including but not limited to providing a correction act plan" pertain only after a hearing on the merits has been conducted. As such, any reference to these criteria by the District is premature pending the Arbitrator's ruling on the Motion to Dismiss. The language cited by the District is contained in Section 23 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.2, namely, "materially affected the outcome of the evaluation in the relevant school year" under the Section entitled "considerations of the Arbitrator in rendering decision." Inasmuch as the criteria pertain to the post-hearing phase of an inefficiency charge, they have no bearing on the pre-hearing procedural issues set forth in the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss.

In the Arbitrator's opinion, the legal prerequisite to the arbitration of the Inefficiency charges pursuant to Section 25 of TEACHNJ is compliance with the evaluation procedures. The Commissioner's ruling on the sufficiency of the charge was supplanted by his referral of the inefficiency charge to the Arbitrator to decide the Motion to Dismiss, including the Respondent's procedural claims. The appointment of an arbitrator does not constitute a substantive decision on the merits. As Respondent correctly notes, for a decision of the Commissioner to be valid, it must be included in a written decision that sets forth findings of fact and conclusions of law sufficient for a reviewing court to understand the basis for the decision.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(a) provides further authority for the Commissioner to delegate the Motion to Dismiss to the Arbitrator. This referral is consistent with the Commissioner's authority to appoint a "designee" to examine the charge as provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(5).

N.J.S.A.18A:6-16, which provides the Commissioner with the discretion to refer a summary judgment motion to arbitrator, can be equated with the Commissioner's authority "when a motion for summary decision has been made prior to that time, the Commissioner may retain that matter for the purposes of deciding the motion." (Emphasis added).

Finally, on this point, were the parties required to engage in extensive litigation up to the point of the Commissioner's decision, or during a motion for summary judgment pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-16 prior to referring the matter to an arbitrator, the expeditious resolution of Inefficiency charges under TEACHNJ would be undermined.

B. NPS/NTU Memorandum of Agreement

The District has relied on a MOA with the Newark Teachers Union ("NTU) that the parties negotiated in October 2012 as a basis for included the 2102-2013 school year in its inefficiency charges. The MOA refers to the implementation of "a new evaluation system beginning SY 2012-13." It further states that "teachers will receive an annual summative evaluation rating that designates them as highly effective, effective, partially effective or ineffective." In addition, the District notes that Section 11 of the MOA links teacher compensation to teacher performance based as measured by the new evaluation framework.

Although the District adopted an evaluation rubric as part of the evaluation system known as the "Framework" and utilized the four-tier rating system in accordance with its MOA, the MOA did not address the issue of tenure, let alone the removal of a tenured teacher on efficiency grounds. Assuming arguendo that the MOA had addressed this subject, it would have been preempted by the TEACHNJ statute enacted on August 6, 2012. With respect to "Conflicts with collective bargaining agreements," N.J.S.A.18A:6-126 states: "21. No collective bargaining agreement or other contract entered into by a school after July 1, 2013 shall conflict with the educator evaluation system established pursuant to P.L. 2012 c.36 (C. 18A: 6-17 et al.)." Despite the fact the parties' MOA was negotiated before the effective date of the above provision, the Arbitrator maintains that the principle contained in this language should apply to the NPS/NTU MOA.

As the Respondent correctly notes, in reference to the District's pilot program, "[i]t is fundamental that where, as here, a statute or regulation establishes a term and condition of employment, that statute preempts the negotiated term. See, State v. Supervisory Employee Assn., 78 N.J. 54, 80-81 (1978).

Assuming arguendo that the NTU could waive an individual statutory benefit on behalf of a Union member, it is well-established that such wavier must be clear, unmistakable and unambiguous. The U.S. Supreme Court held in 14 Penn Plaza LLC v. Pyett, 556 U.S. 247 (2009), that "an arbitration clause contained in a CBA, freely negotiated by a union and an employer, which clearly and unmistakable waived the Union members' right to a judicial forum for their statutory discrimination claims was enforceable." See also, Wright v. Universal Maritime Serv. Corp., 525 U.S. 70 (1998).

New Jersey law on the waiver of statutory rights is in accord. In Red Bank Regional Ed. Assn. vs. Red Bank Regional High School District, 78 N.J. 122, 140 (1978), the Court held that "when a specific statute sets a term or condition of public employment, a negotiated agreement in contravention of that statute is not authorized by the Employer-Employee Relations Act."

In the instant case, the Arbitrator discerns no indication that the NTU in agreeing to adopt the four summative ratings that an employee could receive consistent with the Act and in accepting the District's evaluation rubric ipso facto waived teacher's rights and protections under TEACHNJ. In the absence of any specific reference in the MOA to the "substantive processing of tenure inefficiency charges for the 2012-13 school year" or even a general reference to tenure acquisition or revocation, the District's reliance on the language in its MOA to file inefficiency charges against the Respondent including 2012-13 lacks legal sanction. It constitutes a quantum leap on the District's part to equate the movement of teachers on the salary scale based on its new evaluation system as tantamount to the Respondent's waiver of her statutory rights under TEACHNJ. The fact that the terms of the MOA to which the District contends the Respondent is bound contains no language addressing tenure inefficiency charges or tenure removal reinforces its inapplicability.

In conclusion, the Arbitrator finds that the parties' MOA neither authorized the District to include the Respondent's 2012-13 evaluations to support the District's tenure efficiency charges nor did it waive the Respondent's tenure rights under the TEACHNJ statute. The Arbitrator discerns no basis to deviate from his decision regarding the MOA in I/M/O Neil Thomas, supra, or the preceding decision of Arbitrator Bluth in Cheatham, supra.

C. The 2012-2013 Evaluation of the Respondent

The District has argued, inter alia, that the enactment of TEACHNJ on August 6, 2012 made it effective during the 2012-2013 school year. Although the District acknowledges that the "pilot" program of its proposed new evaluation system, which began in the 2011-2012 school year, did not "count" for official purposes, the District maintains that "the experience of that pilot program informed the development of the teacher evaluation process adopted, approved and implemented in 2012-2013."

According to the District, the Legislature, by purposefully adopting and approving TEACHNJ on "August 6, 2012 in the 2012-2013 school year" intended that there be "no question that the evaluations in the 2012-2013 school year were to be used towards determining if tenure charges were warranted."

The District further contends that statutory language in TEACHNJ requiring school districts to institute pilot programs to test their evaluation rubrics by January 31, 2013, at the latest. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(d) ("Beginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program...") and requiring school districts to implement their evaluation rubrics by the beginning of the 2013-14 school year at the latest. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e) ("[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric..."), "did not require school districts to treat 2012-13, and only 2012-2013 as a 'pilot' year. Nothing in TEACHNJ or its regulations provides that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014, for purposes of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

In the Arbitrator's opinion, the District's utilization of 2011-2012 as a pilot year in seven NPS schools did not transform 2012-13 into a year where the evaluation rubrics and related procedures could be used to file inefficiency tenure charges. Whereas the District clearly benefitted from its 2011-12 pilot program, the fact that the evaluation procedures remained incomplete in 2012-13, particularly their utilization for the purpose of filing inefficiency charges, negates 2012-13 as a year where the Respondent's evaluation could count.

A reasonable interpretation of the TEACHNJ language persuades the Arbitrator that the 2012-13 school year, irrespective of the enactment of the statute on August 6, 2012, was intended as a test year in preparation for the 2013-14 school year wherein all tenure related issues, including the establishment of the criteria for completing evaluations and observations under the new evaluation procedures and its teacher practice rubrics would be implemented.

Given the fact that the instant inefficiency charge is based on one count of inefficiency, encompassing the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years, the statutory language indicates that it was not until the start of the 2013-14 school year that the implementation of the evaluation rubrics was mandated, namely "[b]eginning with the 2013-14 school year a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric..." Also, the first set of regulations implementing TEACHNJ became effective on March 4, 2013, including, inter alia, the establishment of a School Improvement Panel ("Panel") in each school. Moreover, it was not until October 2013 that the NJDOE promulgated a second set of regulations, including the requirement that all tenured teachers be observed at least three times per school year and that teachers with a Corrective Action Plan such as the Respondent receive one additional observation, and that at least one observation for a teacher with a CAP be announced, with a pre-observation conference.

As Respondent correctly notes, the foregoing statutory provisions are reinforced by regulations that "include, but are not limited to provisions governing the content of evaluation rubrics and components, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.1, procedures on rubric approval by the Commissioner, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-5.1, and procedures concerning the timing, form, nature and number of Teacher evaluations and observations, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4." (Resp. brief @ 4).

Evidence in the Statement of Evidence that indicates that the District relied on two formal observations conducted in Respondent's class in February and June 2013, during the 2012-13 school year, before the second set of regulations in October 2013 were announced by NJDOE, including the requirement that at least one observation for a teacher with a CAP (which Whitehurst did not receive until October 2013) be announced, with a pre-observation conference. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.4. This deficiency combined with the unavailability of a Panel in Respondent's school during the 2012-13 school year, convinces the Arbitrator that the District could not and did not meet the standards set forth in TEACHNJ for rendering formal judgment on the Respondent's performance for that year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

A plain reading of the statutory scheme set forth in TEACHNJ reflects the Legislature's intent that, although the statute was enacted on August 6, 2012, an evolving set of standards would be developed during 2012-13 with deadlines, delineated and reinforced by NJDOE regulations, in anticipation of implementation in 2013-14. The fact that rubrics were not required until no later than December 31, 2012 and pilot programs were not required to be adopted until January 31, 2013 – both in the midst of the 2012-13 school year – persuades the Arbitrator of the Legislature's unequivocal intent to treat 2012-13 as a work in progress. These 2012-13 interim "at the latest" deadlines are distinguishable from the mandatory statutory language providing that '[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric..."

Considering the "actions required in law before bringing an inefficiency tenure charge based on the new tenure revocation process" under TEACHNJ, the District's inability to satisfy these requirements during the 2012-13 school year – a year that preceded the intended full implementation in 2013-14 – renders the inefficiency charge brought against the Respondent encompassing her annual summative evaluation for the 2012-13 school year violative of both TEACHNJ and Achieve NJ as well as legally and procedurally defective.

D. Section 25 of TEACHNJ/Shulman Letter

It is undisputed that the Tenure Charge of Inefficiency against Ms. Whitehurst was filed pursuant to Section 25 of the statute. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. The District's claim that it alternatively filed under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 will be addressed infra. Section 25 mandates the filing of Inefficiency charges if a teacher has been rated ineffective or partially ineffective during two consecutive annual summative evaluations. The District's Statement of Evidence relies on the summative evaluations for 2012-13 and 2013-14, inter alia, to file the Inefficiency Charge and declare that Respondent's "dismissal is warranted."

A pivotal issue in the instant case as well as similarly situated Respondents in Brady and Thomas has been the District's reliance on a letter from Assistant Commissioner Peter Shulman dated October 24, 2014 "clarifying" the intent of NJDOE regarding a Department publication entitled "Excellent Educators for New Jersey: Educator Evaluation Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs)." To buttress its contention that not only was TEACHNJ in full force and effect during the 2012-13 school year, but additionally "there is no question that the evaluations in the 2012-2013 school year were to be used toward determining if tenure charges were warranted," the District sought "clarification" of the contested FAQ with respect to the Agency's intent. The excerpt cited by Arbitrator Bluth in the Cheatham decision dated October 16, 2014, and relied upon by the Respondent herein reads:

Q. Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-13) toward tenure decisions?

A. No – only the item "on the clock" in the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (i.e.: teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

The "clarification" provided by Assistant Commissioner Peter Shulman dated October 24, 2014 reads as follows:

> Dear Ms. Hitchcock:
> "Pursuant to your request, the Department of Education (Department) is providing clarification on factual issues arising in the context of a recent arbitration decision. Specifically, the Department hopes to clarify its intent in the "Guide to the TEACHNJ Act," as well as the status of the Newark Public Schools (Newark) evaluation rubric during the 2012-2013 school year.

I. "Guide to TEACHNJ Act"

The Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey (TEACHNJ) Act was approved and effective on August 6, 2012. This Act established a new educator evaluation system, and revised the process for the acquisition and revocation of tenure. As such, since August 2012, the Department has published many resources meant to support school districts in the implementation of the Act. One such document was a Frequently Asked Questions (FAQs) regarding TEACHNJ (noted in the above-referenced decision as the "Guide to TEACHNJ Act")[1]. Included within this FAQ document was a response to questions regarding TEACHNJ's new requirement that teachers must demonstrate four years of teaching within a school district, with a rating of effective or highly effective in two annual summative evaluations within the first three years of employment. Understandably, many nontenured teachers from school districts throughout the State reached out to the Department to clarify how the law applied to their tenure acquisition and the Department responded accordingly.

> No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where [sic] the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (i.e.: teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

Through this guidance, the Department sought to clarify when summative ratings would count towards earning tenure. As mentioned above, such clarifications did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions, such as the decision to renew or non-renew a nontenured teacher or the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher...

II. Status of Newark's Evaluation Rubric for the 2012-2013 school year

In regards to the status of Newark's evaluation rubrics during the 2012-2013 school year, please note that, on October 26, 2012, members of the Department met with Newark representatives to review and discuss the Newark Evaluation Rubric and the associated policies that would be put into place for the 2012-13 school year. At that time, the Commissioner's representatives found that the Evaluation Rubric met the intent of the recently > adopted TEACHNJ Act and were directionally aligned with the proposed regulations, which would be effective in March of 2013.

> I trust that this response has clarified the Department's positions in regard to these two issues. Please let me know if you have any additional questions."

Given Mr. Shulman's "clarification," the District argues that the FAQ at issue "by its terms...is irrelevant to any tenure charge because it refers only to the acquisition of tenure by non-tenured teachers rather than the evaluation or dismissal of tenured teachers...Thus it has been unequivocally established that the term 'tenure decisions' does not refer to the determination of whether to retain a teaching staff member past the date on which he or she will acquire tenure."

The Arbitrator, given the problematic timing of the Schulman letter and multiple references in the FAQ at issue, including communication from Shulman himself, that the new teacher evaluation system was scheduled to be implemented in 2013-14, is disinclined to accord the "clarification" any evidentiary weight. That Mr. Schulman would issue his October 24, 2014 "clarification" after the Cheatham decision on October 16, 2014 while several Inefficiency cases involving the Newark School District were pending and pursuant to an ex parte communication with Ms. Hitchcock, the NPS General Counsel, lends credence to the Respondent's assertion that letter lacks probative value.

In this regard, the Respondent raises several valid points that in the aggregate diminish the letter's consideration in the instant case. First, the letter was apparently written in response to a request by the Office of the Newark School District's General Counsel after the Cheatham decision was issued. The letter has the ostensible intent of clarifying the FAQ upon which Arbitrator Bluth relied, in part, to rule in favor of the Respondent. The fact that the NJDOE, having appointed arbitrators to adjudicate several Inefficiency cases involving the NPS, would selectively clarify one FAQ within a comprehensive document permits an inference of inappropriate communication.

Notwithstanding the District's claim that as an "arm" of the State the District and NJDOE are inseparable entities, given the role of the Department in administering the statute and that of the Newark School District in bringing inefficiency charges pursuant to the statute, in the Arbitrator's opinion, for the purposes of the instant case, they are legally separate and distinct. Clearly, the District, in order to avoid the claim that it has engaged in "collusion" with the Office of the Commissioner, should have disclosed its interactions vis-à-vis the Commissioner's Office to the Respondent as she is entitled to an arm's length relationship between the charging party and the adjudicative entity – namely the Commissioner's Office -- which delegated the decision to the undersigned. The Arbitrator concurs with the Respondent in her assertion that as parties to an ongoing litigation, "the nature of Mr. Shulman's and Ms. Hitchcock's communique – are entirely improper."

Second, the Shulman letter is contradicted not only by other information contained in the FAQ but also by memoranda authorized by Mr. Shulman regarding the same subject matter. For example, the same FAQ indicates that "the new teacher and principal evaluation systems will be implemented in 2013"

(p. 1), "that summative ratings would not count until 2013-14" (p. 4), and "that the pilot would use the information for full implementation in 2013-14."

Moreover, on January 7, 2014, in a memo to all Chief State School Administrators, District Web User Administrators et al., Shulman advised that "As districts implement Achieve NJ for the first time in 2013-14, NJ SMART is preparing for modified data collection..." Previously, in his March 2012 Memo, Shulman announced to all Chief State Administrators, including Ms. Cami Anderson, Newark Superintendent, that "we have designated 2012-13 as a planning and capacity building year...through a defined series of steps for implementing the new system in 2013-14." In addition, in his July 30, 2012 Memorandum, Shulman announced that "[a]s we prepare for statewide rollout of an improved educator evaluation system in 2013-14, all districts will conduct capacity-building activities detailed in previous memos and explained in our FAQs."

Third, the distinctions made between tenure acquisition and tenure revocation in the Shulman letter, strictly limiting summative ratings to tenure acquisition, is inconsistent with the NJDOE's "Guide to the TEACHNJ Act," which addresses tenure decisions holistically, while indicating that the 2012-13 school year evaluations "do not count" for tenure revocation purposes. As the Respondent reasonably inquires, "if the 2012-13 evaluations were a work in progress or not reliable enough to form the basis for tenure acquisition, how could they reasonably be relied upon for tenure revocation purposes?" In fact, the summative evaluations are relied upon for both purposes. The Arbitrator is compelled to conclude that the Shulman letter, addressing one FAQ out of an extensive document with several FAQs, shortly after the Cheatham decision, without notice to Respondent, is indicative of a concerted effort to impact decision making in the instant case and similarly situated cases.. As the Respondent argues, the FAQ publication, which was available to the public for two years until recently removed from the NJDOE website "lacks transparency and objectivity between the District and Commissioner's Office..."

On balance, the Arbitrator discerns no basis to credit the Shulman letter as dispositive evidence regarding whether the 2012-13 annual summative evaluation of the Respondent could be used by the District to support Inefficiency charges. The weight of the documentary evidence submitted by the parties persuades the Arbitrator that 2012-13 did not count for tenure revocation purposes, despite the belated and problematic Shulman letter.

E. Section 25 versus Section 8 of TEACHNJ

The District undoubtedly filed Inefficiency charges against the Respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(6). The District has maintained that "[t]he tenure charges against the Respondent in this matter are based on inefficiency under both N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and TEACHNJ." In serving the Respondent with the Notice of Inefficiency and Statement of Evidence on or about August 29, 2014, the District provided Whitehurst with her annual summative evaluations for 2012-13 and 2013-14 as well as related documentation, including formal observations. (See, Miller Cert.).

While the District has correctly noted that the Commissioner has impaneled 25 permanent arbitrators "to hear matters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as well as Section 25 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the Arbitrator, other than acknowledging that both sections of the statute were cited in the Notice of Inefficiency, discerns no evidence that the charges were pleaded in the alternative. The Arbitrator is not convinced that, having dismissed the Inefficiency charge against Ms. Whitehurst based on the District's non-compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, through its utilization of the Respondent's annual summative evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year, he can now proceed to a hearing under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.

The Arbitrator cannot concur with the District that the charge of Inefficiency it filed under Section 25, which has been found non-compliant with the requisite evaluation procedures that are a prerequisite to an arbitration hearing on the merits and warrant dismissal "if the charges are determined insufficient" [N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(a)], should now proceed to arbitration pursuant to Section 8 of TEACHNJ.

Since the one charge of Inefficiency filed with the Commissioner alleges that over a two year period "from September 2012 to the present..." encompasses the two consecutive years of ineffective or partially effective annual summative ratings under Section 25 and the Statement of Evidence reinforces the charge, the District is bound by the procedural requirements of Section 25.

The District has cited no Legislative deliberations or statutory language that support an intent for "deficient" inefficiency charges filed under Section 25, as in the instant case, to proceed to a Section 8 hearing tantamount to a default position. The NJDOE, as Respondent notes, has explicitly advised Districts that "[d]istricts must ensure the following evaluation procedures are followed (at minimum) prior to filing an inefficiency tenure charge" and that "[f]ailure to adhere to these requirements can result in the tenure charge being dismissed." (See, Sokolowski Cert. @10).

Absent statutory support in the TEACHNJ Legislation for resort to Section 8 in the event Section 25 Inefficiency Charges are deemed insufficient, the District may not "write in an additional qualification which the Legislature has pointedly omitted in drafting its own enactment or 'engage in conjecture or surmise which will circumvent the plain meaning of the act.'" Id. (quoting Cratser v. 3d. of Comm'rs of Newark, 9 N.J. 225, 230 (1952) and In re Closing of Jamesburg High School, 83 N.J. 540, 548 (1980)). (Resp. brief @ 33).

The Arbitrator further maintains that assuming arguendo the District intended to file Section 8 tenure charges or other grounds such as incapacity, conduct unbecoming and/or insubordination, it did not allege such charges ab initio. Since the sole charge is inefficiency and TEACHNJ "dictates that all inefficiency charges must be filed, if at all, pursuant to the requirements set forth in Section 25," the Arbitrator cannot sustain the District's unsupported construction of the statutory language.

It is undisputed that the District may proceed against the Respondent on statutory grounds other than inefficiency by filing such charges in accordance with the requirements of Section 8. However, the District cannot file inefficiency charges on alternative grounds or once its filing under Section 25 has been found deficient rehabilitate these insufficient charges under Section 8 and then proceed to arbitration on this basis. Clearly, had the Legislature in enacting TEACHNJ intended this outcome, it would have written the appropriate language.

In the Arbitrator's opinion, the evaluation procedures set forth in Section 25 of TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, pursuant to the filing of an inefficiency charge where the Respondent teacher has been rated "partially effective" and "ineffective" in two (2) consecutive years, have not been satisfied in the instant case. The statutory language, along with the implementing regulations, which were not in full force and effect during the 2012-13 year (See, N.J.A.C. 6A:10-1.1 et seq.), notwithstanding the District's assertions regarding its compliance with the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under Section 25, convince the Arbitrator that the charge is "insufficient" and should be dismissed.

In the Arbitrator's opinion, had the Legislature intended that a teacher charged with inefficiency for two consecutive years, with ineffective or partially ineffective ratings on their annual summative ratings, be evaluated utilizing two different and asymmetric evaluation procedures – one consistent with Section 25 of TEACHNJ and the other consistent with Section 8, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 – it had the wherewithal to provide the appropriate statutory language. In the absence of such language, the Arbitrator is compelled to dismiss the charge.

The arbitration awards cited by the District in support of its Section 8 alternative are of no avail. In proposing that the inefficiency charge be considered on alternative grounds, the District has cited several arbitration awards where the standard of proof was "whether the evidence in the record supported the charge" by a preponderance of the evidence.

In contrast to the Cheatham decision of Arbitrator Bluth, which the District has challenged on the ground that the Arbitrator "overstepped his authority," the District deems relevant to the instant case several arbitration awards filed under Section 8, including I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Lawrence E. Hawkins, Agency Dkt. No. 243-10/13 (March 10, 2014) and I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Gerald Carter (Agency Dkt. No. 269-12/12 (July 18, 2013). Since the charges in these cases were filed pursuant to Section 8, as opposed to Section 25, the Arbitrator concludes they have no bearing on the instant case. As the Arbitrator in Carter, I note that the Respondent was terminated for inefficiency, specifically grounded in conduct unbecoming as well as insubordination.

The District has further cited I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Felicia Pugliese, Agency Dkt. No. 272 9/12 (February 15, 2013) and I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Chavez, Agency Dkt. No. 269-9/12 (February 6, 2013) as providing an alternative basis to proceed with Section 8 inefficiency charges in the instant case should the Section 25 filing be deemed deficient. However, as the Respondent has correctly pointed out, both of these cases are similarly distinguishable. "The charges in these cases were filed after the effective date of the TEACHNJ Act, but prior to the commencement of the 2012-2013 school year." Given the filing of these charges in the interim period between August 6, 2012 and September 2012, an issue arose with respect to "what substantive law should apply." Since the District's filing of inefficiency charges against Ms. Whitehurst occurred on or about August 29, 2014, well after the commencement of the 2012-2013 school year, this fact renders comparison between Pugliese and Chavez unnecessary.

The District has also cited I/M/O Tenure Charge Against Edward Newton, Agency Dkt. No. 276-9/14, I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Renee Pulliam-Newell, Agency Dkt. No. 296-10/14 and I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Dr. Audrey Cuff, Cumberland Regional School District Board of Education, Agency Dkt. No. 71-3/14 as supportive of its position. In both Newton and Pulliam-Newell, the Respondents failed to respond to the charges and therefore the charges were deemed admitted. Although the inefficiency charge of inefficiency alleged against Pulliam-Newell, for example, included the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years and two consecutive "partially ineffective/ineffective" annual summative ratings, the summary decision granted to the District sheds no light on whether the inefficiency charge would have been dismissed on other procedural grounds or would have proceeded to a hearing on the merits.

Finally, the Cuff case is distinguishable because, unlike the instant case where the District filed an inefficiency charge under Section 25, Arbitrator Gerber found in Cuff that arbitrators have authority "to hear matters pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16" and that "inefficiency cases must be decided upon the old standard." Clearly, if inefficiency had been alleged on grounds other than two consecutive years of ineffective and/or partially ineffective ratings, or filed prior to the effective date of TEACHNJ, Section 25, the old Section 8 standard could have been applicable. This was not the case for Ms. Whitehurst. The distinction between Section 25 and Section 8 has been addressed by Arbitrator Klein in I/M/O Tenure Charges Against Elena Brady, State-Operated School District for the City of Newark, Dkt. No. 270-9/14 as follows:

> The notice of "charges based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A.18A: 6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3: 5.1" against the Respondent charge her with inefficiency under Section 25 N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17 rather than under Section 8 N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 which covers tenure charges other than those of inefficiency under the provisions of TEACHNJ. The District's efforts to proceed under Section 8 are limited by the charges themselves, which include N.J.S.A. 18A:6 17.3 and not N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 at this juncture. As there is no basis for proceeding under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, I do not address whether such a proceeding would be warranted based upon the record in this case.
> The Arbitrator dismissed the charges and reinstated Ms. Brady.

Conclusion

The Arbitrator finds that the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the Inefficiency Charges is properly before me as the Commissioner's "designee." Considering the submissions of the parties, the Arbitrator further finds that the weight and probative value of the documentation provided by the Respondent is sufficient to sustain the Motion to Dismiss the tenure inefficiency charges against her.. Accordingly, the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the tenure inefficiency charges filed against Ms. Ursula Whitehurst by the State-Operated School District of Newark under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 is granted. The District improperly relied on the Respondent's 2012-13 annual summative evaluation for the purpose of tenure revocation. The District's Charge of Inefficiency does not include a basis for considering the tenure inefficiency charge under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Based on the foregoing, I hereby issue the following:

AWARD

The Tenure Inefficiency Charge brought against the Respondent, Ms. Ursula Whitehurst, is dismissed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c), and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c). The Arbitrator, in finding that "the evaluation process has not been followed," orders the dismissal of the instant charge. Respondent shall be reinstated, effective immediately, to her teaching position with the State-Operated School District of Newark with full back pay, benefits and seniority, and any other benefits commensurate with her employment.

Introduction and Statement of Relevant Facts

Respondent Gregory Short has been employed as a Health and Physical Education teacher for the City of Elizabeth School District since January 2006. In observations and evaluations through the years, administrators and supervisors have rated Short as a consistently proficient teacher with one glaring problem – absenteeism. In 8 years, Short has been absent 131 days. He received numerous attendance memorandums stressing the importance of regular attendance from March 2009 through March 2014. After the 2009-10 and 2011-12 school years, the Board of Education voted to withhold Short's salary increment based on his attendance record. Short grieved the Board's action both times, and the grievances were resolved.

After the 2013-14 school year, Carlos Lucio, Principal of Dr. Antonia Pantoja School No. 27, again recommended increment withholding for the next school year.

Instead, in September 2014, the Board filed tenure charges against Short, alleging chronic absenteeism and incapacity. On October 9, 2014, the Commissioner deemed the charges "sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary" and appointed the undersigned as Arbitrator.

On November 20 and December 4, 2014, hearings were held at the School District offices in Elizabeth, New Jersey, during which time both parties had a full and fair hearing to present documentary and other evidence, examine and cross-examine witnesses, and offer argument in support of their respective positions. Both parties filed post-hearing briefs, and the matter was submitted to the Arbitrator for a decision.

Issue

Has the City of Elizabeth School District established the allegations of chronic absenteeism and incapacity against Gregory Short as set forth in the tenure charges? If so, do those charges warrant dismissal? To what remedies are the parties entitled?

Analysis and Decision

Respondent Short's absences are a matter of record. In 2006-07, he was absent 13.50 days, six of which were attributable to an accident on duty. In 2007-08, he was absent 10 days, including one professional day (an excused absence). In 2008-09, he missed 14.5 days, including a professional day. In 2009-10, he missed 14 days, including a professional day. In 2010-11, Short was absent 23 days, nine of which were attributable to an accident on duty and one for a funeral (also an excused absence). In 2011-12, Short missed 18 days; and in 2012-13, he was absent 15.5 days. In his final year, 2013-14, Short was absent 25.75 days, including a ½-day professional day and one funeral day. Excluding the excused absences and including the absences attributable to an accident on duty, Short missed 128.75 days in his eight years as a teacher in the City of Elizabeth School District.

If a teacher is absent more than six times, it is District policy to notify the teacher that his/her attendance is being monitored and to stress the importance of regular attendance. Principal Lucio issued attendance memorandums to Short on 13 occasions between March 2009 and March 2014.

In addition, Short's 2008-09 Annual Improvement Plan noted his attendance as an area of weakness and encouraged him to adhere to the District's attendance policy. His 2010-11 Annual Professional Performance Report again urged him to follow the District attendance policy and noted no improvement in attendance from the previous year. The 2011-12 Annual Professional Performance Report discussed his poor attendance with no improvement and set a goal "[t]o attend work every day and attain 95% attendance." The same goal was included in a March 2012 Instructional Action Plan. A follow-up November 2012 Instructional Action Plan noted that he had met that goal and directed him "to be mindful of the importance of your punctuality."

Despite the short-term improvement, Short's attendance continued to be poor. On January 24, 2014, Principal Lucio directed that Short meet with the Superintendent regarding his attendance problems. Apparently, that conference never took place.

As previously noted, the Board withheld Short's salary increment for the 2010-11 and 2012-13 school years; but the withholding was grieved, and the grievances resolved. Principal Lucio recommended withholding again for the 2014-15 school year before the Board filed tenure charges.

Cases abound in which school district employees have been dismissed for chronic absenteeism, even when the absences were for legitimate reasons. This Arbitrator authored one such recent opinion. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lenore Francis, Jersey City Board of Education, Agency Docket #285-9/12 (January 10, 2013). Very generally, those cases examine whether the teacher's repeated absences render the teacher ineffective and/or negatively impact his/her students by interrupting the continuity of education.

Although they reach different conclusions, both parties cite to Tenure Hearing of White, 92 NJAR 2nd (EDU) 157 for the elements of proof required for termination in an absenteeism case. The District must demonstrate,

> "there was consideration of (1) the particular circumstances of the absences and not merely the number of absences, (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred, not merely after the fact, and (3) that there be some warning given to the employee that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of absences." At 161.

Without question, the District has established the third element outlined in the White case. Short received 13 attendance memorandums in a 6-year period, several improvement plans and performance reports focused on his attendance problems, and Principal Lucio made three recommendations for salary increment withholdings. Short clearly was aware that the District was dissatisfied with his pattern of absences.

Whether Short's absences have impacted the continuity of instruction for his students raises an interesting question and highlights the dilemma Short presents as a teacher. Vice-Principal Jennifer Campbel described Short as "an average to above average" teacher who "engaged with the students." Observations, evaluations, and annual performance reports consistently rated Short as a "proficient" teacher. Observers and evaluators noted "a positive, encouraging and enthusiastic attitude," "the active participation" of his students, and the effective communication of his expectations for his students. Even his final evaluation in 2013-14 found him to be "effective." In short, the District conceded that Short was a good teacher – when he was present. The question is whether his absences impacted that effectiveness.

District witnesses talked generally of the impact of a physical education teacher's absences on students. Districts have to provide 90-minutes per week (2-45 minutes sessions) of physical education for K-5 students and 180-minutes per week (4-45 minute sessions) for students in grades 6th through 8th. A teacher's absence threatens the District's ability to meet that state requirement. In addition, the District often has to find substitutes to cover the teacher's absence. When another regular teacher or a substitute without subject matter knowledge is used, students may go to study hall rather than to the gym. Substitutes, of course, cost the District additional money (in the present case, more than $17,000 to cover Short's absences). The District also expects teachers to model good attendance for students, who are expected to have less than 9 absences per year.

The District's testimony on the impact of a physical education teacher's absence is well noted. Respondent cannot seriously argue against the importance of regular attendance by a teacher. Respondent notes that the District did not offer much in the way of specific evidence on the impact of Short's absences. Short suggested that many times the District simply combines gym classes when one of the three physical education teacher is absent. But Respondent walks a fine line when he argues that his absences don't affect the continuity of education. Such an argument diminishes the importance of Short's employment. If he does not need to be present on a regular basis, what value does he bring to the District?

Although Short is considered a good teacher, he can only be effective if he is present on a regular basis. I find that the District has sufficiently demonstrated that Short's absences impacted the continuity of education for his students.

Neither the District nor the Respondent focused on the circumstances of Short's absences prior to the 2013-14 school year. Fifteen days of his absences were attributable to a work-related injury. In some cases, it would not be appropriate to hold absences related to an accident on duty against the employee; but in this case, the missed time due to work-related injury is relatively small (less than 12% of his absences). Even if they are excluded from consideration, Short still missed significant time over the course of his employment.

In the 2013-14 school year, Short testified that his newborn son suffered from chronic ear infections, a situation known to Principal Lucio and other administrators. Since Short's wife holds a part-time job and does not get paid sick leave, Short took time off to care for his son and take him to doctor's appointments. The infant had tubes placed in his ears in May 2014, which has apparently resolved his frequent illnesses.

It was the absences in the 2013-14 school year, added to the many absences in the previous years, which led the District to seek dismissal through tenure charges. The particular circumstances of those absences are significant because they are, at least in part, a predictor of whether Short's attendance will improve in the future. The District did not distinguish between Short's prior absences and his absences in 2013-14. Short's unrefuted testimony regarding his son's illness and subsequent medical resolution suggests the possibility that Short can improve his attendance in the future.

Further, although not an overriding factor, it must be noted that Short's absences were covered by paid leave time. Many of the cases in which arbitrators, ALJs, and the courts have upheld dismissals for chronic absenteeism involve teachers whose absences exceeded the amount of paid leave time granted. While the District has a right and an obligation to stress the importance of regular attendance, it is more difficult for the District to demonstrate cause for dismissal when an employee's absences are within the limits of his/her paid leave time.

As noted, Short is considered "an average to above average" teacher who engages his students. His proficiency in the classroom holds the promise that he can be a very high-performing teacher if he could remedy his attendance problems. He has not done that yet, but the 2013-14 school year is not a fair gauge of his willingness to improve because of his son's illness and his family responsibilities. That illness is resolved, and there is no reason Short, if he so chooses, can meet the attendance goals set by the District.

Because of the circumstances of his absences in 2013-14, I find that although the District has established the allegations of chronic absenteeism and incapacity, the charges are not sufficient to warrant dismissal. Principal Lucio did recommend salary increment withholding, which the Board did not address since it moved for termination. Increment withholding for 2014-15 is an appropriate sanction for Short's attendance issues. It should provide a necessary incentive for him to remedy his attendance problems to avoid more severe disciplinary action.

Award and Remedy

The School District of the City of Elizabeth has established its allegations of chronic absenteeism against Respondent Gregory Short. However, the charges are not sufficient to warrant termination.

As a remedy, the District is ordered to immediately reinstate Short to his tenured position with no loss of seniority. It is further ordered to make Short whole for back pay and all other benefits lost for the time period of his suspension without pay through the date of his reinstatement. In lieu of termination, Short shall be subject to salary increment withholding for the 2014-15 school year.

The Arbitrator shall retain jurisdiction of the case for the sole purpose of resolving any dispute over the implementation of the remedy.

APPEARANCES:

FOR THE RESPONDENT:

OXFELD COHEN, P.C.

BACKGROUND

The School District of the City of Elizabeth, Union County, New Jersey (Petitioner or District) preferred charges against Respondent, Leslie Ann Ramos (Respondent), a teacher previously assigned within the District, which charges were filed with the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(6). The undersigned was designated to be the Arbitrator for this matter, by the State of New Jersey Department of Education, by letter dated October 10, 2014. (Joint Exhibit 1).

Hearings were held at the Offices of the School District's Counsel, Whippany, New Jersey, on November 10, 2014, and November 14, 2014. Written closings were received and the record was closed on December 10, 2014. No stenographic record of either the hearing or the teleconferences was taken. All matters, while not necessarily cited in this Opinion and Award, have been considered.

Ms. Leslie Ann Ramos was a teacher in the City of Elizabeth School District, in Union County, New Jersey. In or about August 11, 2014, the City of Elizabeth Board of Education determined to certify charges against Ms. Ramos to the Commissioner of Education.

Charge Number 1 charges Ms. Ramos with Chronic Absenteeism, in that she has been absent approximately 490.75 days between July 1, 2007 and June 30, 2014.

Charge Number 2 charges Ms. Ramos with Incapacity, alleging that, by virtue of the absences and the conditions which led to them, Ms. Ramos has been rendered incapable of performing her assigned duties and, therefore, should be immediately terminated from her position

SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES

CHARGE I
(CHRONIC ABSENTEEISM)

The foregoing background information and the facts alleged therein, are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. Leslie Ann Ramos has displayed chronically poor attendance during the last seven (7) years of her employment with the Elizabeth Public Schools District, and has been absent approximately 490.75 days, which has adversely affected the proper operation of the school, despite repeated warnings, and shows no sign of abating. These acts and omissions, more specifically set forth below, constitute just cause for immediate dismissal due to chronic absenteeism:

During the time period from July 1, 2007 through June 30, 2008, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some twenty-two and one-half (22.5) occasions: 1 family illness; 1 funeral; 2 "other;" 2 personal; and 16.5 sick, not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

Count 2

During the time period from July 1, 2008 through June 30, 2009, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some forty-seven (47) occasions: 1 family illness; 1 funeral; 18 "other" (leave of absence); 2 personal; and 25 sick, not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

Count 3

During the time period from July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some sixty-seven (67) occasions: 1 family illness; 2 personal; 12 sick; and, 52 "other" (sick no pay and leave of absence), not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

Count 4

During the time period from July 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some fifty-eight and one-half (58.5) occasions: 1 family illness, 1 funeral; 2 personal; 12 sick; and 42.50 "other" (sick no pay and leave of absence), not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

During the 2011-2012 school year, administrators repeatedly admonished Respondent for her ever-worsening attendance record, referred her to the District's attendance policies, and warned her of the potential adverse consequences of continuing excessive absences, including absence without pay and disciplinary action. By way of example, without limitation:

- On October 20, 2011, Principal Jennifer Campel ("Principal Campel") admonished Respondent, in an attendance memorandum, for her fifth (5th) intermittent absence, and advised Respondent that her "attendance is essential in contributing to the success of our District's Mission" and further, that the "absence of any Elizabeth Public School employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedules of all District operations," and referred Respondent to a copy of District Policy 4151/4251, the Staff Attendance Improvement Plan.
- On November 7, 2011, Principal Campel, in an attendance memorandum, cited Ms. Ramos for her ninth (9th) intermittent absence, again admonished Respondent that her attendance is essential and that her absence adversely affects instruction and disrupts District operations, and referred Respondent to a copy of District Policy 4151/4251.
- On November 29, 2011, Principal Campel, in an attendance memorandum, cited Ms. Ramos for her twelfth (12th) intermittent absence, similarly admonished Respondent and again referred her to the District's Attendance Policy, and further warned Respondent that as of November 30, 2011, she would be "on deduction" if she took further sick days.

- On December 6, 2011 Principal Campel, following a conference with Respondent after her seventeenth (17th) intermittent absence, authored a Staff Attendance Improvement Plan which recommended to the Superintendent of Schools a review of Respondent's current and past absence record, noting Respondent "had the same type of attendance pattern as last year," and further noting Principal Campel had spoken to Respondent "numerous times" about her attendance record.
- On January 2, 2012, Principal Sulisnet Jimenez ("Principal Jimenez"), in an attendance memorandum, cited Ms. Ramos for absences totaling some nine (9) sick days, admonished Respondent that her attendance is essential to the success of the District's mission, and referred Respondent to the District Attendance Policy.
- On January 18, 2012, Principal Campel, following a conference with Respondent after her twenty-second and one-half (22-½) intermittent absence, issued a "Second Notice" Staff Attendance Improvement Plan, again recommending a review of Respondent's current and past absence record, and further recommending an immediate withholding of Respondent's increment.

- On February 7, 2012, Principal Campel, in an attendance memorandum, cited Ms. Ramos for her twenty-sixth (26th) intermittent absence, again admonished Respondent that her attendance is essential and that her absences adversely affect instruction and disrupt District operations, and again referred Respondent to District Policy 4151/4251.

Despite having received the foregoing numerous and repeated admonitions and warnings, during the time period from July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2012, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some ninety-nine and one-fourth (99.25) occasions: 1 family illness; 2 personal; 12 sick; and 84.25 "other" (sick no pay and leave of absence), not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

Despite Respondent's prior excessive absences having resulted in her increment being withheld by the Board for the 2012-2013 school year, during that year Respondent continued to amass an excessive number of absences, notwithstanding the warnings and admonitions of the administration. By way of example without limitation:

- On February 8, 2013, in an attendance memorandum, Principal Jimenez cited Ms. Ramos for absences totaling thirteen (13) sick days, admonished Respondent that her attendance is essential, and again referred Respondent to the District Attendance Policy.

- On June 14, 2013, in an Annual Evaluation, Principal Jimenez, rated Respondent unsatisfactory in all evaluated categories of performance, and unsatisfactory overall; and further encouraged Respondent to improve her attendance, repeatedly noting she had been absent 86.5 days as of June 14, 2013, and repeatedly emphasizing, "SHE HAS NOT INSTRUCTED AT LEAST 60% OF THE REQUIRED INSTRUCTIONAL TIME" (capitalization in original), as a result of which, Principal Sulisnet noted, Respondent was not in attendance enough for her performance strengths (if any) to be determined.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, during the time period from July 1, 2012 through June 30, 2013, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some ninety-four and one-half (94.5) occasions: 1 family illness; 2 personal; 12 sick; 1 sick additional; 1 non-accumulated; 1 personal additional; and, 76.50 "other" (sick no pay, leave of absence and funeral-family), not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, during the time period from July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014, Ms. Ramos was absent from her post on some one hundred and two (102) occasions: 1 family illness; 1 funeral; 2 personal; 12 sick; 2 sick additional; 2 personal additional; and 82 "other" (sick no pay and leave of absence), not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation.

The foregoing acts and omissions by Leslie Ann Ramos, individually and cumulatively, constitute just cause based on chronic absenteeism warranting dismissal. In total, over the last seven (7) school years, Ms. Ramos has been absent some 490.75 days, not counting any leave taken pursuant to military service, jury duty, on-the-job injury, or vacation. Ms. Ramos' ongoing failure to fulfill her assigned duties on those days has adversely affected the operation of the District and shows no signs of abating. The Board, a public employer charged with providing a thorough and efficient education without discontinuity and disruption of services, should no longer have to be burdened by such misfeasance. Immediate dismissal is fully warranted.

CHARGE II
(INCAPACITY)

The foregoing background information, Charge, specific Counts and the facts alleged therein, are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. The acts and omissions set forth therein, in addition to chronic absenteeism, constitute incapacity. By virtue of the condition or conditions causing and/or associated with Respondent's chronic and excessive absences, she has been effectively rendered incapable of performing her assigned duties, therefore requiring immediate termination from her tenured position. There is simply no meaningful accommodation to be made for an employee who persistently is unable to report to work over a protracted period of time. Immediate dismissal is the only meaningful remedy and is fully warranted here.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

The District:

The District argues that "...(t)his case is a clear one. ...Notwithstanding the seeming validity of some of her absences or the fact Respondent presented for the most part as a satisfactory teacher, Respondent failed to perform her primary function, to be at work fulfilling her responsibilities as a teacher. Despite repeated verbal and written warnings, spanning many years, an increment withholding, and based upon legal precedent, Respondent was chronically absent. ...It is beyond dispute that excessive absenteeism may constitute either incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or just cause sufficient to warrant dismissal, even when legitimate medical reasons caused some of the absences, and accordingly, Respondent should be dismissed from her tenured position." (District Post Hearing Brief, pp. 16, 25).

The District cited New Jersey statutes regarding the burden of proof in a tenured teacher case and the demand for dismissal. The District reviewed the case law regarding dismissal, absenteeism, excessive absenteeism, and focused on White, 92 N.J.A.R.2nd (EDU)(191), specifically on the need to demonstrate that it had "(1) the particular circumstances of the absences and not merely the number of absences, (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred, not merely after the fact; and (3) that there be some warning given to the employee that his or her supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of absences." (Id., p. 18, quoting White). By way of comparison, the District also examined the 2011 case of True and the 2012 case of Dugan, both of which involved chronic absences of a teacher.

Turning to the instant case, the District avers that "(t)he District has satisfied its burden. The Board has considered the circumstances of Respondent's absences. ...The Board has given Respondent numerous opportunities to improve her attendance over the course of her employment. Despite the same, Respondent's attendance has not improved. ...In fact, the record vividly illustrates that Respondent's attendance record has worsened. ...Respondent has been given several warnings about her lack of attendance, which resulted in the denial of a salary increment for the 2012-2013 school year. Notwithstanding these warnings, Respondent continued to exhibit the same behavior. Therefore, it is reasonable for the Board to conclude that this conduct is likely to continue in the future." (Id., pp. 21-22).

As to the question of negative impact, the District acknowledged that, although it did not point to specific instances regarding impact on students, it did rely on the testimony of Principal Sulisnet Jimenez and the documentation of Principal Jennifer Campel, as well as the emails received. It also relied on the testimony of Ms. Ramos, herself, in which she acknowledged that her absences would have had a negative impact on her students. Finally, the District notes that Ms. Ramos was warned about her behavior; Ms. Ramos acknowledged as much. "Respondent does not dispute the accuracy of the Board's contention that she was absent 490.75 days. Moreover, Respondent admits that she was aware of the detrimental effect her absence had on her students educational progress. In addition, Respondent admits to receiving multiple warnings meetings with supervisors, and having her increment withheld. Notwithstanding these warnings, the record is clear that Respondent continued to exhibit the same behavior. For these reasons, the record in this matter clearly demonstrates that the Board has met its burden of establishing by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondent is guilty of chronic absenteeism and/or other just cause, including, but not limited to incapacity, warranting respondent's (sic) dismissal from her tenured position of teacher in the Elizabeth School District." (Id., p. 24).

Therefore, the District demands that Ms. Ramos be dismissed.

The Respondent:

The Respondent highlights that "(t)his matter is unusual in that there is no dispute regarding the days that Ms. Ramos has been absent over the course of her tenure with the Board. There is no dispute as to the reasons why she has been absent. The Board has not argued that Ms. Ramos failed to provide proper documentation for her sick days, funeral days or leaves of absence. The Board has not disputed the reasons for the leaves of absences taken by Ms. Ramos. Ms. Ramos admitted that she received memoranda regarding her absences. Sadly, Ms. Ramos went through an extraordinarily (sic) run of bad health due to two extremely dangerous pregnancies and gall bladder surgery." (Respondent Brief, p. 7).

Respondent focuses on the burden placed on a District to terminate a teacher in absenteeism cases. It avers that, while it is true that Ms. Ramos may have been absent a great deal, and while those absences may be viewed under the microscope of In re the Tenure Hearing of White, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 76, it is still incumbent upon the district and the Arbitrator to examine the circumstances that led to the absences. Moreover, Respondent notes that Ms. Ramos always complied with District rules and policies regarding her absences, requests for leaves of absence, the furnishing of doctor's notes and whatever else might have been necessary to gain permission for her absences. And, it queries how the District could argue any adverse impact that Ms. Ramos's absences had on the educational system, in light of the fact that there was no testimony regarding adverse impact. In fact, it points out that the only testimony of the only witness, Ms. Sulisnet Jimenez, was based on one school year, was inconsistent, and proved nothing regarding adverse impact. And, the emails that were admitted, from another principal, are inconclusive and do not prove or even imply that Ms. Ramos was made aware of the complaints contained within them. "Thus, for the one school year that The Board provided testimony, there was not a shred of evidence that the educational process was hindered. Surely, if the Board had any evidence that Ms. Ramos' absence led to any educational issues it would have so offered it. By failing to do so, it must be accepted that there is no such evidence." (Id., p. 9, citations omitted).

As to notice of her obligations and responsibilities, Ms. Ramos acknowledged receipt of the Board's policies, but contended that they were provided to her at times when she was having serious health issues. Additionally, although the District did withhold her increment one year, it did not provide documentation or explanation to her as to why that was done.

"...Ms. Ramos' issue of absenteeism is in the past. She testified that she is health (sic) and eager to return to work. The particular medical reasons that caused her absenteeism no longer exist. Her teaching ability was never an issue.... The Board in this matter has the burden of proof and must prove by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the allegations are not only true but the penalty of dismissal is just. ...While there may be agreement regarding the sheer number of days that Ms. Ramos was absent, the penalty of dismissal is not fair or just in this case." (Id., pp. 9-10, citations omitted).

Therefore, Respondent pleads for dismissal of the charges or, in the alternative, a penalty that does not include discharge, but that is deemed necessary by the Arbitrator.

OPINION

The facts are not in dispute, based on the documentary evidence. Ms. Ramos's attendance calendars show the absences alleged, and she acknowledged as much. Rather, Ms. Ramos asks that her acknowledgement of the issue be accepted hand-in-hand with her acknowledgement of her culpability, and then asks that she be given one more chance to prove that she will be present and able to teach. That opportunity will be given.

Through review of the testimony and the joint exhibits, it is clear that Ms. Ramos was, indeed, absent for all the days that the District noted within its charges. (Joint Exhibit #1). It is clear that Ms. Ramos received numerous attendance memoranda from her principals. (Joint Exhibit #s 2-6, 8). Additionally, Ms. Ramos did have an increment withheld for the 2012-2013 school year; however, it is not clear that Ms. Ramos was ever made aware of the exact reason for the withholding (although it should have been something about which she could draw a logical conclusion). (Joint Exhibit #7; District Exhibit #7).

The question now changes. Even if Ms. Ramos is culpable of charges preferred against her, is the appropriate penalty termination. Termination is not the appropriate penalty, in this instance. While it is true that a District has the right to expect its employees to be available to work each and every day, and while it is true that even legitimate illnesses and absences may result in termination, there may be circumstances that mitigate the result of termination. One example of that circumstance can be found the commentary by Principal Campel in her formal observation of Ms. Ramos in January 2012. Ms. Campel states that "Mrs. Ramos has the ability to plan and write lesson plans. ...She can take them (her students) to great places." (Joint Exhibit #10). In a February 2013 observation, Vice Principal Joan Tomek said that Ms. Ramos's "...kindergarten plans and methods of instruction are carefully implemented to ensure student progress and growth." (Joint Exhibit #11). And, in an April 2014 observation, Dora Kunitz told Ms. Ramos that she "...could be a master teacher if (her) attendance were to improve." (Joint Exhibit #12). Notwithstanding all her absences, it is clear that when Ms. Ramos was in the classroom, she had the ability to be an effective teacher, one from whom a kindergartener would benefit. It is important for a district to have a teacher on whom it may rely. Ms. Ramos has not been present sufficiently to be that teacher, but she appears to have the qualifications and talent to be that teacher, if she, indeed, corrects her attendance issue. I found Ms. Ramos to be a credible witness. She testified honestly and sincerely, not denying or making excuses for her absences, but, rather, acknowledging her past health issues and maintaining that they are behind her. She asserted that she would be more than capable of working, as required, when required, and would relish the opportunity to do so.

If Ms. Ramos shows the District that she is that teacher, that she can be present to teach her students, then it would be a positive event for the District and a positive event for Ms. Ramos. If, however, it becomes clear that Ms. Ramos is not capable of being at work, ready to work, as she should be, then she will have wasted this opportunity and the District would certainly be able to seek to dismiss her.

In conclusion, I am persuaded that, if given the chance, Respondent would render competent service. However, I am compelled to remind Ms. Ramos that she is being given this opportunity, in part, because she has the potential to be a wonderful addition to the District, if she teaches in the manner in which she is capable and if she is not absent, except as permitted. Ms. Ramos is cautioned that future instances of excessive absenteeism will be juxtaposed with this opportunity and will likely not result in a similar opportunity being given. In lieu of removal, it will be directed that Ms. Ramos be suspended for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year, that her increment be withheld upon her return, in the 2015-2016 school year, and that she not receive any payment for any time lost.

Therefore, based on the above, I render the following

AWARD

1. I find Respondent Leslie Ann Ramos culpable of the charge of Chronic Absenteeism, as preferred against her in Charge I.

2. I do not find Respondent Leslie Ann Ramos culpable of the charge of Incapacity, as preferred against her in Charge II.

3. Ms. Ramos shall remain on suspension for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year, returning to work in the District at the appropriate time for teachers to return to work for the 2015-2016 school year. There shall be no back pay for any time during which Ms. Ramos was out of work.

4. Ms. Ramos is reminded that she is expected to be at work, ready to work, and that she is entitled to a very specific number of absences within the bounds of the collective bargaining agreement that covers her.

CITY ASSOCIATION OF SUPERVISORS AND ADMINISTRATORS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner, the City Association of Supervisors and Administrators (Association), asserted that the respondent District violated the rights of seven Association members by transferring them to positions at the District's central office. The Association sought the reinstatement of its members to positions as building principals, together with reimbursement for lost benefits and emoluments of employment. The respondent contended that the positions to which these principals were transferred are within the scope of their certifications and that, accordingly, their tenure rights were not violated.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the Association's claims spring from their members' tenure status under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, which protects them from dismissal or reduction in compensation without just cause; the Association members whose transfer is at issued herein held their positions as principal under tenure; although it is well-established that a school board has the right to deploy staff as it sees fit, the right to make involuntary transfers is not entirely without limitations; under the principles set forth in Philip Howley and Dewey Bookholdt v. Ewing Township Board of Educ., 1982 S.L.D. 1328, 1340, aff'd. 1983 S.L.D. 1554, a person tenured in a specific position may not be transferred from that position without his or her consent, but may be involuntarily transferred to another assignment within the same position where there is no loss of salary or other reduction in employment; although the Association members were transferred by the District as part of a larger effort to revitalize Newark schools, it is uncontroverted that they were transferred to entirely new positions and are no longer performing the work of building principals; there was, however, no loss of compensation nor emoluments as a result of the transfers. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that the involuntary transfer of these Association members was in violation of their tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, and ordered the District to restore them to positions as building principals in accordance with their tenure entitlements.

Upon full consideration of the record, the respondent District's exceptions and the Association's reply thereto, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for further development of the record and recommendations regarding to the District's position with respect to the authority granted to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-6(b)(2) and N.J.A.C. 6A:33-1.1(b)2.

CITY ASSOCIATION OF SUPERVISORS AND ADMINISTRATORS,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the State-Operated School District of Newark (District) and the reply thereto from petitioner, the City Association of Supervisors and Administrators (Association). In this matter, the Association claims that the District's decision to transfer seven of its building principals to positions at the central office violated the members' tenure rights because they were given responsibilities not in line with their tenured positions or certifications. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) determined that the aggrieved members were reassigned to positions that had little or no relation to the role of building principal, and therefore the involuntary transfer of these building principals to positions in the central office violated their tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. As a result, the ALJ recommended that the District reassign the members to building principal positions in accordance with their tenure entitlement.

The District's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of its post hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the ALJ erroneously determined that the transfer of the building principals to positions in the central office violated their tenure rights. The District maintains that the ALJ took an overly narrow view of the definition of "principal" and erroneously ruled for the purposes of determining tenure rights that being a principal necessarily entails an assignment to a school-based position. The District also contends that the claims of one Association member, Donna Marable, were barred by the 90-day rule.

In its exceptions, the District points out that the ALJ correctly acknowledged that a school board has a right to deploy staff as it sees fit including the right to make involuntary transfers. However, in concluding that the District violated the members' tenure rights, the ALJ failed to follow the relevant case law, i.e. Bigart v. Board of Educ. of the Borough of Paramus, Bergen County, 1979 S.L.D. 123 and Jeannette Williams v. Board of Educ. of the City of Plainfield, Union County, 1980 S.L.D. 1552, aff'd, 176 N.J. Super. 154 (App Div. 1980). In Bigart, supra, the Commissioner stressed that "[t]eaching duties are not restricted to classroom instruction", and that statement is equally applicable to principals because their duties are not restricted to administering a school. Therefore, the ALJ's overly narrow reading of the definition of "principal" based on the failure to see the parallels between Bigart, supra, and the instant case was incorrect and should be rejected by the Commissioner.

The District also argues that the ALJ failed to apply the balancing test established by the State Board of Education in Williams, supra, for determining whether a reassignment to a position of comparable rank is in violation of the tenure laws. Under the Williams, supra, balancing test, the interests of the District clearly outweigh the members' interest in job and financial security, which have not been threatened because the salaries have not been reduced. Additionally, the District contends that the ALJ failed to recognize that the school improvement measures were mandated by federal law. The District argues that the reassignment of the principals was a necessary consequence of an educational policy determination as to how to address schools that are chronically "in need of improvement", which is a feature of the No Child Left Behind Act, 20 U.S.C. §§6301 et seq.

Finally, the District takes exception to the ALJ's reliance on N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-11.3 as additional support for her determination because the regulation has no applicability to the issue in this case, and it was not relied upon by the Association during the proceedings. N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-11.3 is in the certification section of the Administrative Code and it simply lists the positions for which the principal endorsement is required. The regulation does not define the position of principal or limit the scope or describe the duties of a principal. Thus, the District urges the Commissioner to reject the Initial Decision in its entirety.

In reply, the Association argues that the ALJ rendered a correct decision on all of the issues in this matter and that the District's exceptions are without merit. With respect to Ms. Marable's claims, the Association asserts that the ALJ properly found that her claims were exempt from the 90-day rule because there was a continuing statutory violation. The Association also maintains that the Initial Decision was consistent with the relevant case law, and that the ALJ effectively distinguished Bigart, supra, from this matter. Additionally, the Association argued that the balancing test established by the State Board of Education in Williams, supra, was not applicable to the facts of this case and does not support the District's contention that the transfers to positions in the central office were valid exercises of the District's discretion. Finally, the Association stresses that the No Child Left Behind Act, 20 U.S.C. §§6301 et seq., does not abrogate tenure protections because in order to do so, there must be express statutory authority.

Although the majority of the arguments advanced by the District in its exceptions were fully considered by the ALJ and thoroughly discussed in the Initial Decision, the Commissioner is not persuaded that the district's position with respect to the authority granted to him pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-6(b)(2) and N.J.A.C. 6A:33-1.1(b)2 was fully explored and considered. Accordingly, he hereby remands this matter to the OAL for further development of the record and recommendations with respect to the arguments raised by the District in section C of its October 3, 2014 exceptions.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, the City Association of Supervisors and Administrators (CASA), asserts that the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (the District) violated the rights of seven CASA members by transferring them to positions at central office. CASA seeks the reinstatement of its members to positions as building principals, together with reimbursement for lost benefits and emoluments of employment. The District replies that the positions to which these principals have been transferred are within the scope of their certifications, and that accordingly, their tenure rights have not been violated and the petition of appeal should be dismissed.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

CASA filed its appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on November 2, 2012. An answer was filed on behalf of the District on January 16, 2013, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on January 17, 2013. After several unsuccessful settlement conferences, hearings were conducted on March 26, 2014, April 30, 2014, and May 15, 2014. At the close of petitioner's case, the District made several motions to dismiss. A motion to dismiss the petition in its entirety was denied on the record. I reserved decision on a motion to dismiss the petition as to Donna Marable on timeliness grounds, and invited counsel to more fully brief this issue post-hearing. A motion to dismiss the petition as to Lavonne Pack was granted on the record, as she has retired from the district, did not appear at the hearing, or present any proofs in support of her claims.

Post-hearing briefs were filed on July 14, 2014, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Stipulated Facts

The following facts are uncontroverted and I FIND:

1. In August 2012 the District reassigned Zakiyya Abdul Razzaq from Cleveland Street School to the Office of Academic Services, located in the District's central office.

2. In August 2012 the District reassigned Joann Gilmore from Sussex Avenue School to the Office of Planning, Research and Assessment, located in the District's central office.

3. In August 2012 the District reassigned Gerald Samuels from Speedway Street School to the Office of Title I/Federal Programs, located in the District's central office.

4. In August 2012 the District reassigned James Carlo from Newton Street School to the Purchasing Department, located in the District's central office.

5. In August 2012 the District reassigned Roy T. Wilson to the Office of Student Information Services, located in the District's central office.

6. In August 2011 the District reassigned Donna Marable to the Office of the Chief Financial Officer, located in the District's central office.

7. Razzaq, Gilmore, Samuels, Carlo, Wilson, and Marable each held tenure as a principal at the time of their reassignment.

8. Each of the principals served in the assignments noted above for the entire 2012-2013 school year. Marable also served in the Office of the Chief Financial Officer for the entire 2011-2012 school year, and was reassigned within that office for the 2012-2013 school year.

The petitioning principals lost no salary or benefits as a result of the transfers at issue, with the arguable exception of free parking, which will be discussed in greater detail below. They all hold administrative certificates with the principal endorsement.

The Testimony

Roger Leon has been an assistant superintendent in Newark for the past eight years, and he explained the genesis of the controverted transfers. He comes to his position with a long history of service to the public schools, beginning as a classroom teacher, and continuing through the ranks with service as a principal and supervisor. Leon reports directly to the Superintendent of Schools, and during the 2012-2013 school year supervised the petitioning principals. His commitment to the Newark school system and its students resonated in his testimony, and he was a compelling and credible witness.

The reassignment of the CASA members came in the aftermath of an extensive initiative by District administration to reorganize failing schools; the unfortunate reality is that there remain many such schools in Newark. The neediest schools were designated as "renew schools," where a concerted effort would be made to create an optimal teaching environment by having a great leader; great teachers; a renewed vision for the school; improved technology; and a longer school day. Eight buildings were converted to "renew schools"; as a result Razzaq, Carlo, and Gilmore were displaced. Additionally, eight school buildings were closed. Wilson had been previously assigned to one such school. Marable had already been assigned to central office, effective with the 2011-2012 school year. An executive decision was made to change principals at the school to which Samuels had been previously assigned.

As part of the "renew" process, a thorough interview system was developed to ensure that candidates selected to serve as building principals would be a "great leaders." This process included an on-line application followed by a phone interview, and then a seven hour group interview. A candidate who successfully completed these steps would be invited to a panel interview that included the Superintendent of Schools. Leon stressed that it was an intentionally rigorous process. Only Gilmore went through the entire interview process, but was not assigned to a "renew school." Wilson and Carlo applied for principal positions, but their candidacy ended at the group-interview stage. Marable contended that she also applied for a principal position, but without success.[1] Samuel and Razzaq did not apply. Leon noted that at the conclusion of the 2012-2013 school year, the petitioning principals could have again applied for principal openings in the District, but that none did so.[2]

In or about June of 2012 the petitioning principals were reassigned to central office, the work site for approximately 125 professionals, including some 80 certificated administrators.[3] Central office personnel support the instructional, student service, and operational functions of the District. Principals have been previously assigned to central office; thus, the assignments at issue here were not novel. Leon noted the "us and them" mentality that is often prevalent in a school district; he urged that placing building level administrators in central office was an attempt to create a "we."

Leon met with the reassigned principals as a group four times to collaboratively develop job descriptions for their roles at central office. Leon likewise worked collaboratively with them to secure positions in departments within central office that would best suit their skills, talents, and interests. In Leon's view, the reassigned principals did well in their new positions, used their skills as administrators, and brought value to the District. While he conceded that there were some initial bumps in the road as he and the principals alike needed to adjust to their new roles, he was quite adamant that it was not his intent, nor that of the District, that these individuals waste time or make work. Leon stressed that the duties that were actually performed by each individual were as set forth in their job descriptions, and as described in their year-end evaluations.

But it is uncontroverted, and I FIND, that upon reassignment, the principals were no longer required to administer a school; to routinely evaluate teaching staff; to supervise and discipline students; to interact regularly with parents and other members of a school community; or to review and formulate school building budgets or schedules. Leon shared postings for job vacancies for principal positions at the secondary and elementary level. (R-15, R-16, R-17). These documents were offered to demonstrate that there were openings available for 2013-2014 school year for which the petitioning principals could have applied. But these documents are more useful for what they share about the role and responsibility of a building principal.

[1] Leon had no record of her application; Marable shared documentary evidence that she did apply through an on-line program, Talent Match. (P-24.)

[2] Leon explained that it was a long-standing practice in the District to require tenured administrators who desired a change in building or assignment to apply for the positions they sought.

The postings clearly indicate that a principal coordinates all school programs; ensures implementation of the school's operational budget; reviews test data and plans instructional direction to ensure student achievement; supervises and evaluates staff members; performs classroom observations and provides feedback to instructional staff; organizes and participates in parent conferences; plans faculty meetings; develops a Professional Improvement Plan that provides training for faculty; and interviews and recommends the appointment of teachers and other staff members for the school. I FIND that the displaced CASA members did not perform these functions while at central office.

The displaced principals testified at hearing. Uniformly, their focal point was that their new assignments involved work that was inconsistent with their rank as principal; could have been completed by an administrative assistant; or worse yet, for extended periods involved absolutely no work at all. But all conceded that their job descriptions had been collaboratively developed and that their year-end evaluations were authored by them and accurately described their professional accomplishments. These documents support Leon's assertion that he intended to give actual work to the displaced principals. Nonetheless, an analysis of the work each completed buttresses their contention that the work assigned was not that of a building principal.

Zakiyya Abdul Razzaq

Upon her reassignment from a school building, Razzaq worked at central office in Intervention and Referral Services (I&RS). She offered a log of her daily responsibilities. For the period from October 2012 through January 2013, she noted that "No specific job duties [were] assigned." Elsewhere, the log recorded ostensibly trivial responsibilities, such as "[typing] an excel spreadsheet," and "[inserting] names of I&RS Coordinators and phone numbers on to [sic] excel spreadsheet." (P-13.) While the log purports to memorialize all that Razzaq did during that year, many work days are omitted altogether.

In contrast, the job description for her new assignment indicates that Razzaq will be responsible for "[creating] rigorous learning goals for students with I&RS coordinator"; will "[use] multiple forms of student-level data to drive the instructional Intervention Strategies"; will "[develop] concrete plans with effective solutions to address the new regulations related to the 504 process"; and "strategically [develop] clear and appropriate communication with community and outside referral agencies to support students with additional resources for interventions." (R-1.) Razzaq's evaluation of her performance during the 2012-2013 school year likewise describes an administrator with responsibility for driving school district academic performance. It reflects that Razzaq "maintain[ed] consistent rapport and collaboration amongst colleagues to turnkey research-based strategies and current educational trends," and "collaborat[ed] with district I&RS Coordinator to identify referral process trends, problems and solutions." The evaluation states that Razzaq "provid[ed] effective, relevant feedback to improve quality of I&RS services."[4]

Gerald Samuels

Samuels was reassigned to the Office of Title I/Federal Programs. He likewise kept a log of his daily activities during the 2012-2013 school year. (P-17.) That log reflected no work assignments for days on end. But his job description indicates that he would be required to "[assist] in the evaluation of nonpublic school instructional programs and [make] recommendations to instructional staff to support increased student achievement," as well as "[provide] technical assistance via principal perspective to Title I administrative team in planning, developing and implementing parent programmatic support to Title I Schools." He was required to assist "with in-service training for Title I teachers"; "solve practical problems and deal with concrete variables in situations where limited standardization may exist"; and "collect, interpret, identify data trends, and generate tools to enhance district, department and office initiatives." (R-7.)

[4] Razzaq's evaluation, and that of her colleagues, stated that they were not conceding that their job functions were consistent with their title as principal.

Samuels confirmed that he drafted his evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year. In contrast to his daily log, Samuels wrote that he served as a "liaison to the principals of schools that received Title I funds and reminded them of time sensitive dates for submission"; responded to principal inquiries about proper usage of Title I funds; attended workshops and turnkeyed the information gathered; and assisted in "helping to create staff development opportunities [for] the non-public teachers who provided services for the Title I office." (P-18.) Samuels claimed to have "exemplary communication skills with Title I staff and non-public school teachers," this despite the fact that he also claimed that upon reassignment he was isolated, given no duties, and thus, one would presume, communicated with no one.

Donna Marable

Marable was reassigned from a building principal position effective with the 2011-2012 school year. Her first assignment was to the "call center," a hotline intended to field community phone calls and inquiries. She remained there until January 30, 2012, when she was reassigned to central office. According to Marable, for about a month she sat in the human resources office with no duties; in April she began working with various District departments in revising the e-procurement process. As of August 2012, her position was as Principal on Special Assignment to the Grants Development and Implementation Office.

Marable's job description indicates that she will be responsible for cultivating student academic progress by reviewing and recommending requests for proposals that promote student achievement; by analyzing grant budgets and expenditures in conjunction with the senior accountant; and by continuing her efforts to achieve departmental efficiency through the e-procurement process. (R-13.) Notwithstanding her job description, Marable authored a daily log that described few duties during the period from August 2011 through June 2013. (P-22.)

But on June 21, 2013, Marable authored a self-evaluation. (R-14.) She wrote that she "[l]ed, coordinated and supported cross-divisional and departmental efforts among team members to review and revise procurement system for a 2 billion dollar budget servicing 73 schools, 39,000 students and 3,500 staff members." Marable wrote that she "[c]reated high level documents to inform all stakeholders on progress on e-Procurement, NJSmart and grant Development and Implementation Projects." She "[i]nterfaced with local grant recipients to facilitate use of funds and minimize errors and return of funding." Marable "[u]sed strong team leadership building skills to clearly define roles and responsibilities, strategically leveraging strengths of department leaders to gather data for district initiatives." (R-14.) Although she contended that she had no real responsibilities, Marable's evaluation notes that she "[d]emonstrated a dedication to responsibilities."

Roy Wilson

Wilson was transferred to the office of Student Information Services, where he was tasked with identifying duplicate student records, and otherwise updating the District's data-management system. He noted that this sort of database maintenance had not been completed for years. An assignment log completed by Wilson memorialized his responsibilities that year. (P-26.) He began the year by collecting data regarding available seats in the schools, and assisted school personnel in allocating available seats. In February 2013, Wilson was assigned to establish and maintain contact with charter, religious, and other out-of-district schools to ensure compliance with applicable deadlines for the Non-Newark Public School Application, the process through which students not currently enrolled in the public schools apply to attend District high schools.

Wilson gave the impression in his testimony that these were menial tasks, not warranting his credentials or experience to properly complete. The job description for his position described a responsible position, however, noting that Wilson would be required to "[l]ead the district's Available Seats in Schools process," and "[a]ct as liaison between Student Information Services and the Office of Attendance," so that he could "identify policies and practices that should be changed." (R-11.) Like his colleagues, Wilson self-evaluated his work for the 2012-2013 school year. Wilson's managerial achievements and contributions to the District during the 2012-2013 school year, included "provid[ing] oversight to ensure that timelines are met and stakeholders receive complete and unambiguous documents and materials," and "meet[ing] with stakeholders and provid[ing] oral and written explanations of the Student Information Services departments' vision and strategic plan and how they support the school system's vision and strategic plan." (P-27.) Wilson "communicat[ed] and collaborate[d] with other offices, programs, and schools to support the school system's strategic plan and vision for success for all students." He "[recognized] the evolving needs of the school system and work[ed] with other school system staff to plan to address these needs"; and he "[served] as a liaison between the school system and stakeholder groups.

James Carlo

Upon reassignment, Carlo initially was asked to assist with developing District policies and procedures relative to Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying. He was transferred to the purchasing department in or about October 2012. Like his colleagues, he completed a daily log of his activities. (P-30.) It reflects minimal job duties and responsibilities, often noting periods of time where there was "no assignment." But it makes no pretense of being comprehensive, memorializing only activities in October 2012. In his testimony, Carlo stressed that his job required no real critical thinking or other skills commensurate with his title and certification. Yet his job description required that he participate in the "development and design of procurement initiatives designed to optimize efficiency in delivering goods and services to schools [sic] instructional programming"; "identify and solicit community partners with ongoing programs for collaboration"; and provide consulting assistance for the development of "new and revised procurement manuals." (R-9.)

Carlo drafted his evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year. Under the heading "Ability to Manage," he noted that during the past year he had "collaborated with Purchasing Department staff to revise Policy and Procedure Guide for procurement";

"participated in the evaluation of RFP proposals"; and "collaborated with Purchasing Department staff in the development of PeopleSoft e-Supplier vendor integrated system." Carlo "provided one-to-one training for school-based administrators requiring support beyond normal Purchasing Department training workshops." Notwithstanding his contention that his work could be done by a support person, Carlo noted in his evaluation that he brought a "'school based' mindset into decision making regarding proposals received from vendors responding to various RFPs and Pre-Qualification Solicitations." According to his evaluation, Carlo was called upon to "effectively [function] as a member of various work groups." He clearly had projects to complete, because the evaluation notes that he did so "consistently . . . before scheduled deadlines." (R-10.)

JoAnn Gilmore

Gilmore was assigned to the Office of Policy, Planning and Assessment. Gilmore's testimony downplayed her contributions, asserting her role was limited to ministerial duties related to test security. Yet her job description provides that she "strategically liaises with school administrators on alignment with testing protocols"; "advises on potential strategies to engage principals in the interpretation of achievement trends and implications for practice"; and "develops, under the guidance of the District Test Coordinator and in partnership with principals and school test coordination teams, innovative, concrete solutions to root causes of school level departures from testing guidelines." (R-5.)

Like her peers, Gilmore completed a self-evaluation. Gilmore wrote that she "proactively [participated] and [supported] all departmental activities, such as local and district test security/testing protocol meetings, state assessment distribution and collection, and independent monitoring of individual testing sites to determine if immediate readjustments [were] necessary." Gilmore "proactively [shared] professional and technical knowledge with school administrators on the interpretation of achievement trends and implications for individual school practice . . . ." (R-6.) Gilmore assisted the department supervisor with professional development sessions; and supported building administrators needing assistance with testing and testing data issues. Gilmore states in her evaluation that she "[infused] trust and respect during constructive conversations with school administrators . . . and staff in regards to the improvement of student progress."

The Transfer in November 2013

In November 2013, the principals were reassigned yet again to one of six "networks," each of which is lead by an assistant superintendent who supervises one aspect of the public schools. The record revealed that no formal job descriptions were created in the aftermath of these reassignments, nor were job evaluations offered in evidence that described the duties and accomplishments of the reassigned principals.

Leon explained what these most recent reassignments entailed, noting that the work for the displaced principals would continue to evolve because there had been a lot of downsizing at the central office. His testimony was essentially consistent with that of the CASA members, except, unsurprisingly, they attempted to denigrate their responsibilities while Leon urged that these responsibilities were valuable to the overall goals of the District. Upon reassignment to a network the petitioning principals reviewed and critiqued strategic and safety plans for the schools in their network. Additionally, the principals were asked to review and critique videoed instruction, as part of a process of "norming" evaluations. The process was designed to ensure that building principals are rating teachers correctly.

Professional Development

It is uncontroverted and I FIND that, upon their transfers to central office, the petitioning principals were no longer invited to a professional development opportunity known as the Principal's Learning Institute (PLI). These are monthly informational and professional development workshops led by central office administration, and are intended to guide and inform the work of building principals. They likewise have been excluded from receipt of other inter-office emails and memoranda typically directed to principals, such as an informational update entitled "Principal Points."

Leon took pains to point out and I FIND, however, that the reassigned CASA members continued to have professional development opportunities that focused on their current role and responsibilities in the District. The District maintains a Professional Improvement Fund, through which staff can register for pertinent in-service trainings and workshops and receive reimbursement. Leon stressed that no offense was intended by excluding the petitioners from PLI's. Nonetheless, the principals felt quite affronted. Samuels clearly spoke for all of his colleagues when he testified that his nonparticipation in the PLI's left him feeling "ostracized" and as if he had done something "heinous and unacceptable."

But Leon also urged and I further FIND that central office administration viewed it as unnecessary for the displaced CASA members to attend PLI's or receive other updates directed to building principals precisely because the information offered was pertinent only to school building administration. This assertion further buttressed the CASA contention that its members were working as something other than as principals.

Parking

CASA urges that as result of the move to central office, its members now have to pay for costly parking, whereas in the past, parking adjacent to their school buildings was free. Leon explained that parking in Newark indeed can be problematic, and that free parking is simply fortuitous. Leon took exception to the notion that assignment to a school building "came with" free parking. He urged that available free parking varied by school, with some principals able to park on school property; some who were able to find street parking; and some who were required to pay for parking. I FIND that Leon's explanation of the principals' prior access to parking was credible and made sense; and indeed, the petitioning principals pointed to no writing that guaranteed any form of reimbursement for parking while assigned to a school building.

It is uncontroverted and I FIND that for administrators assigned to central office, their entitlement to parking is as governed by the District collective bargaining agreement with CASA. Twelve-month directors receive a free parking pass; per the agreement. Supervisors receive two free months of parking on a rotational basis.

According to Leon, the CASA agreement was silent as to the parking entitlements of principals assigned to central office, so it was agreed between the parties that they would have access to the two-month rotational pass. This agreement is likewise not in dispute, and indeed all of the principals were aware that they could access limited free parking on a rotational basis, although not all availed themselves of this benefit, and several professed ignorance as to the origins of this benefit.

All of the principals confirmed that when they did pay for parking, the cost was $95 per month during the 2012-2013 school year and $100 per month during the 2013-2014 school year. Razzaq did not avail herself of the rotational two months free parking. Wilson and Carlo received free parking during both academic years. Samuels received free parking for two months during both years, but declined to use it during the 2012-2013 school year. Gilmore only received free parking once, for two months during the 2012-2013 school year, although she applied through the lottery during both years. Marable received free parking during the 2011-2012 school year. She received two months of free parking during both the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, although she did not use the parking during the latter year because she was absent from her duties due to illness.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The Motion to Dismiss as to Donna Marable

The time for filing a petition of appeal before the Commissioner is clearly set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), which provides that a petition must be filed "no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education . . . which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing." The "notice of a final order, ruling or other action" of the District contemplated by the rule has been defined as notice "sufficient to inform an individual of some fact that he or she has a right to know and that the communicating party has a duty to communicate." Kaprow v. Bd. of Educ. of Berkeley, 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993). Marable unequivocally knew that she would not be reassigned to a building at the very latest in September 2011 when she reported to central office, as directed. Thus, the District urges that Marable's challenge to her reassignment should have been filed within ninety days of her first day of employment in September 2011; that is, sometime in December 2011. Her claims were not filed until November 2, 2012, and accordingly, the District asks that they be dismissed.

But the District ignores the fact that the tenure rights Marable asserts have been violated are guaranteed her by N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5. Our Supreme Court has recognized the inapplicability of the statute of limitations contained at N.J.A.C. 6A: 3-1.3(i), where the claimed violation of rights is grounded in statute. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Alpha v. Alpha Educ. Ass'n, 190 N.J. 34, 46-47 (2006) (citing N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. N. Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587 (1984)). Moreover, each day that Marable's work assignment was not within the scope of her certification her tenure rights were violated anew. Our courts have recognized the inappropriateness of strictly applying a statute of limitations to a continuing violation. Bd. of Educ. of the Borough of Alpha, supra, 190 N.J. at 45-46. I CONCLUDE that Marable's claims are not barred by application of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i).

In Alpha, a labor arbitrator had determined that contractual timelines were no bar to his consideration of the case before him because the grievant's claims constituted a continuing violation. But he likewise determined that the local school board should not be prejudiced by the grievant's delay in asserting her rights, and thus ordered only prospective relief. Id. at 41. As in Alpha, the District should not be prejudiced by Marable's failure to more promptly assert her rights. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that any entitlement she might have to relief would be prospective only.

The Transfer to Central Office

CASA's claims spring from their members' tenure status under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5, which protects them from dismissal or reduction in compensation without just cause. It is well-established that teaching staff members earn tenure not just in a district as a whole, but also in specific positions of employment. See Howley v. Ewing Bd. of Educ., 1982 S.L.D. 1328, 1339, aff'd, 1983 S.L.D. 1554. The "position" in which a teaching staff member achieves tenure is either one of the specifically designated positions in N.J.S.A.

18A:28-5 or other employment for which an appropriate certificate is required. Ellicott v. Frankford Twp. Bd. of Educ., 251 N.J. Super. 342, 347 (App. Div. 1991); see Howley, supra, 1982 S.L.D. at 1337. Insofar as the position of principal is specifically enumerated in the tenure statute, our courts have held that this position is "separately tenurable." Nelson v. Old Bridge Bd. of Educ., 148 N.J. 358, 366 (1997). It is uncontroverted that the CASA members whose transfer is at issue here held their positions as principal under tenure.

It is moreover well-established that a school board has the right to deploy staff as it sees fit, including the right to make involuntary transfers. Carpenito v. Rumson Bd. of Educ., 322 N.J. Super. 522, 529 (App. Div. 1999). But the right to make such transfers is not entirely without limitations, as clarified in the seminal discussion of tenure and seniority rights contained in Howley, supra. at 1339-40:

> The power of a board of education to transfer teachers is limited only to the extent provided by the Tenure law . . . . The word "transfer" is most often used in tenure related cases in the context of the proposition that teaching staff members may be transferred within the scope of their certificates. As a blanket statement, this is not entirely correct . . . . Under the tenure statutes it is clear that a person tenured in a "position" may not be transferred from that position without his or consent . . . . Transfer without such consent constitutes a dismissal from the position and cannot be accomplished without compliance with the tenure hearing law.

But tenured teaching staff members may be involuntarily transferred to another assignment within his or her position, "where no loss of salary or other reduction in employment is suffered and the [teaching staff member] is not singled out for the transfer on a prohibited basis." Id. at 1340; Williams v Plainfield Bd. of Educ., 176 N.J. Super. 154 (App. Div. 1980). Such a transfer does not rise to a violation of that teaching staff member's tenure rights. See also Sheffield v New Jersey State Dep't of Human Serv., 93 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 26. Thus, an individual employed as a building principal can be transferred to principal positions other than the one currently held, provided there is no loss in rank or compensation. Indeed, in Williams, supra, the Court upheld the transfer of a high school principal to an elementary school principalship, this notwithstanding that there would be a diminution in her earning potential as a result of the transfer.

Leon testified with passion and credibility that the transfer of these principals was part of a larger effort to revitalize the struggling Newark Schools, and that he sincerely thought that their presence in central office would add value to Newark's educational programs. The factual record corroborates Leon's testimony that their new positions of employment entailed real duties; that they were not assigned to central office with the intent that they do nothing. But it is incontrovertible that the CASA members are no longer doing the same work they did when assigned to a building. The factual record makes it equally clear that they are not doing the work of a building principal. For this reason, I am compelled to CONCLUDE that the involuntary transfer of these CASA members to central office violated their rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

This conclusion finds further support in the language of N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-11.3(b) which defines the scope of the principal endorsement to the administrative certificate as follows:

> The principal endorsement is required for any position that involves service as an administrative officer of a school or other comparable unit within a school or school district. Such positions shall include assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction, principal, assistant principal, vice principal, and director. The holder of a standard principal endorsement is also authorized to serve in the position of supervisor. Holders of this endorsement are authorized to provide educational leadership by directing the formulation of goals, plans, policies, budgets, and personnel actions of the school or other comparable unit, and recommending them to the chief district administrator, and by directing their implementation in the school or other comparable unit. Holders of this endorsement also are authorized to direct and supervise all school operations and programs, to evaluate school staff, including teaching staff members, and to direct the activities of school-level supervisors.

The regulation makes it clear that the principal endorsement is intended to authorize its holder to perform school building level administrative functions. Indeed, the petitioning principals took pains to note repeatedly that they are no longer evaluating or supervising building-level staff or otherwise providing "educational leadership by directing the formulation of goals, plans, policies, budgets, and personnel actions" of a school building. While the evidence did not bear out their contention that they are doing nothing at all, or that the projects to which they were assigned were inconsequential or menial, the record nonetheless incontrovertibly revealed that they are no longer at the helm of a school building, and per N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-11.3, this is the role of a principal.

The language of N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-11.3(a) makes this even more apparent. This code provision speaks to the school administrator endorsement, and provides that the holder of this endorsement is responsible for administrative tasks at the central office or district-wide level, stating that "the school administrator endorsement is required for any position that involves services as a district-level administrative officer." This regulatory language compels me to query whether these petitioning principals were even qualified via certification to hold central office administrative positions.[5]

The District's reliance on Bigart v Paramus Board of Education, 1979 S.L.D. 123, is misplaced. There, the Commissioner held that the transfer of a classroom teacher to a position as an "unassigned teacher," was a valid exercise of the local board's discretionary authority, where the board had offered legitimate managerial reasons for the assignment, and had provided convincing evidence that the assignment would enhance the delivery of educational services to district students. But importantly, the petitioning teacher was still employed to offer instructional support, both in departmental centers as a resource for students, and to cover teachers who were called away from their classrooms. Hence, the transfer at issue was not outside the scope of her tenure protection. Conversely here, the aggrieved CASA members were reassigned to positions that had little or no relation to the role of a building

[5] Indeed, if they were performing central office administrative tasks these principals were improperly certificated, except for those who held the school administrator endorsement. If they were not doing administrative tasks, then the work they were performing was clearly not commensurate with their rank. Either way, their transfer and reassignment was improper.

principal, and thus I CONCLUDE that their transfers were to an altogether new position, in violation of their tenure rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

The District correctly distinguishes Ruby v Board of Education of the Hudson Area Vocational-Technical Schools, 1983 S.L.D. 941, which reversed the transfer of a principal to a position with no duties or responsibilities. Unlike the reassignment there, I have no doubt that these transfers were intended to promote the overall betterment of school district operations, by allowing the District the leeway to hand-select what its central office administration felt was the best leadership for its "renew schools." I moreover believe that a sincere attempt was made to assign appropriate tasks to the displaced principals. But while their reassignments were neither a sham nor a fraud, the District has nonetheless impermissibly transferred these principals to positions that are "principalship[s] in name only." Ruby, supra, 1983 S.L.D. at 949. For this reason, and notwithstanding the inapplicability of the Ruby holding, CASA has successfully asserted on its members' behalf that this transfer is violative of their rights under the tenure laws.

The District's arguments that the No Child Left Behind Act (NCLB), 20 U.S.C. §§ 6301 et seq., mandates a different result are unavailing. The District points out that the United States Department of Education has viewed changes in leadership as a "vital tool" in turning around academic achievement. 74 Fed. Reg. 59776 (Nov. 18, 2009). According to the District, consistent with Federal mandates, recent New Jersey regulations include "staff retraining or reassignment" among the appropriate responses if school improvement efforts fail. See N.J.A.C. 6A:33-2.5(b)(2)(ii). But that option is clearly a regulatory "last resort," intended to come after a district has developed a School Improvement Plan (SIP) with the support of a Regional Achievement Center (RAC) designed to improve instruction in a priority or focus school. N.J.A.C. 6A:33-2.4. Only if a priority or focus school "fails to implement the SIP either in whole or in part, or if the SIP does not lead to an adequate increase in student performance outcomes," may the Commissioner take the drastic step of directing staff reassignment. N.J.A.C. 6A:33-2.5(b). I heard no evidence that a SIP was developed; that there was a failure to implement it; or inadequate improvement thereafter, relative to the schools previously led by the aggrieved principals. This is unsurprising, because these regulations post-date the reassignments at issue here. But by like measure, the District cannot now rely on these same regulations to justify its actions.[6]

Nor did the District convince me that N.J.A.C. 6A:33-2.5(b)(2)(ii) intended to abrogate statutory tenure protections; nor could it have done so without express statutory authority. I have reviewed the regulation's enabling statute, N.J.S.A. 18A:7F-6(b), and while it grants the Commissioner the authority to direct staff reassignments in failing schools, I see no language that would permit such reassignments to violate employee tenure rights. The District points to comments offered during the regulatory adoption process that question if a local district would be compelled to file tenure charges against the principal of a failing school. The District notes that the Department of Education assured the public that tenure charges would not be needed because nothing in the rule requires the dismissal of a principal, rather than reassignment. See 45 N.J.R. 1637(a), comment 19 and response. But a review of that agency response nonetheless reveals no intent to abrogate staff tenure rights, as it indicates, quite clearly that, "the Commissioner has the flexibility to reassign the removed principal to another position within the school district, consistent with applicable State law and regulation." Ibid. (emphasis supplied).

The parties have agreed that there has been no loss of compensation as a result of the transfers, and accordingly I CONCLUDE that there is no entitlement to back pay or other compensation, notwithstanding the violation of the CASA members' tenure rights. Relative to parking, I CONCLUDE that; per Leon's credible and essentially uncontroverted testimony, the free parking previously enjoyed by these principals was merely fortuitous, and was neither a contractual entitlement nor a benefit uniformly provided to principals via District policy. Accordingly, the request to be reimbursed for parking expenses incurred subsequent to the controverted transfers is DENIED.

[6] It is noteworthy that three of the displaced principals were not previously at the helm of "renew schools," to include Wilson, Marable, and Samuels.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the District restore the petitioning CASA members to positions as building principals in accordance with their tenure entitlements.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

EDUCATION LAW CENTER ON BEHALF OF ABBOTT V. BURKE PLAINTIFF SCHOOL CHILDREN,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
PETITIONER,	:	DECISION
V.	:
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF SCHOOL FACILITIES,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner, on behalf of the "Abbott v. Burke" school children of New Jersey, alleged that the respondent Office of School Facilities (OSF) failed to ensure the timely submission and approval of updated long range facilities plans (LRFP) for New Jersey's low income school districts (SDA districts) as required by the Educational Facilities Construction and Financing Act (EFCFA), N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(a). The OSF asserted that it has substantially complied with its statutory and regulatory obligations; that the failure to timely update LRFPs has not been detrimental to the SDA districts or their students; and that accordingly, the petition should be dismissed. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue, and the case is ripe for summary decision; in November 2013, the Education Law Center (ELC) notified the Commissioner and the OSF Director that updated LRFPs were more than five years overdue in all 31 SDA districts; the within petition of appeal was filed after the ELC received no response to its notification letter; analysis of whether the OSF has complied with the requirements of the EFCFA, N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2 et seq., and its implementing regulations relative to the timely updating of LRFPs in the SDA districts leads to the conclusion that the OSF is not in compliance with its obligations under the law; OSF's argument that there is no harm caused by its failure to compel SDA districts to timely file updated LRFPs is unavailing, as the laws are clear that facilities projects cannot be undertaken unless they are consistent with the LRFP. The ALJ concluded that the OSF is noncompliant with N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2 et seq., and ordered that the OSF direct those SDA districts without up-to-date LRFP to submit same within 60 days of the date of the order. Further, the ALJ ordered the OSF to adhere to specific timelines for development of needs assessments and educational priority rankings in order to ensure that students in the SDA districts "...are educated in physical facilities that are safe, healthy and conducive to learning." N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2(a).

Upon full consideration, the Commissioner, inter alia, concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision with modification to the timelines for completion of the LRFP approval process. The SDA districts were directed to file up-to-date LRFPs within 90 days of the date of this final decision; after submission of the LRFPs, the OSF was directed to comply with the timeframes outlined in N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(i).

EDUCATION LAW CENTER ON BEHALF OF ABBOTT V. BURKE PLAINTIFF SCHOOL CHILDREN,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
PETITIONER,	:	DECISION
V.	:
NEW JERSEY STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, OFFICE OF SCHOOL FACILITIES,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

In this matter the petitioner, the Education Law Center (ELC) on behalf of the "Abbott v. Burke" school children of New Jersey, alleges that the respondent Office of School Facilities of the Department of Education (OSF) has failed to ensure the timely submission and approval of updated long range facilities plans (LRFP) for New Jersey's low income school districts (SDA districts), as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(a). The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that OSF was not in compliance with the Educational Facilities Construction and Financing Act (EFCFA), N.J.S.A. 18A: 7G-1 et seq., and with the regulations relative to the approval of LPFPs for the SDA districts. The ALJ granted the petitioner's motion for summary decision and ordered time frames for the completion of the LRFP approval process.

In its exceptions, OSF maintains that the Initial Decision should be rejected because the ALJ failed to recognize that OSF has taken substantial steps to ensure the submission and approval of amended LRFPs by the SDA districts. The OSF also takes exception to the timeline that the ALJ recommended for the completion of the approval process. First, OSF maintains that the strict 60-day timeline set by the ALJ for the SDA districts to amend their LRFPs is not feasible because the amount of time required to complete an LRFP amendment varies depending upon the size of the district, the degree of change from existing conditions and the previously approved LRFP, required field survey work, and the amount of consensus-building needed for board of education endorsement. The OSF asserts that such a truncated timeline could result in many of the submissions being incomplete or inaccurate. The OSF also argues that the ALJ's directive that the OSF not only review the submitted LRFP amendments, but approve the LRFPs within 90 days is improper as there can be no guarantee that the submitted LRFP amendments will warrant approval by the OSF. The OSF points out that the direction to "review and approve" the LRFPs is contrary to the applicable procedures contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(i). Finally, the OSF contends that the ALJ failed to recognize that the Educational Facilities Needs Assessment and Educational Priority Ranking (Needs Assessment) is up to date. The OSF notes that the Needs Assessment was last completed in 2013, based upon then-current information and within the timeframes established by the EFCFA. Therefore, the OSF requests that the Initial Decision be rejected and that summary decision be granted in its favor.

In reply, the petitioner urges the Commissioner to reject the OSF's exceptions and to adopt the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. With respect to the OSF's challenge to the timelines recommended by the ALJ, the petitioner stresses that the OSF simply contends the timeline recommended by the ALJ for the submission of the LRFPs is not feasible, yet the OSF offered no alternative timeline for the competition of the LRFP amendment process. The petitioner argues that the establishment of a 90 day time limit for the approval of all the LRFPs is well within the Commissioner's equitable authority to remediate the violation that has occurred. Additionally, the petitioner contends that the EFCFA requires that the Needs Assessment occur only after the approval of an SDA district's long range facilities plan and – as a result – once the submitted LRFPs are approved by the OSF, the Needs Assessment will not be up to date. Therefore, petitioners argue that the ALJ's order requiring the completion of an updated Needs Assessment and priority ranking must be affirmed.

The Commissioner recognizes that OSF has made substantial efforts toward approving amended LRFPs for the SDA districts. Nevertheless, after consideration of the record, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's determination – for the reasons stated in the Initial Decision – that the OSF has not yet fully complied with the EFCFA in this regard. The Commissioner notes, however, that the ALJ recommended that the OSF order the SDA districts to file an up-to-date LRFP within 60 days of the date of the October 16, 2014 Initial Decision. This date has preceded the consideration of the Initial Decision by the Commissioner and shall be modified as follows.

The SDA districts are directed to file an up-to-date LRFP within 90 days from the date of the final decision. The 90 day timeframe for the approval of the LRFPs recommended by the ALJ is inconsistent with the procedures contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(i), and is therefore rejected. After the submission of the LRFPs, the OSF shall comply with the timeframes outlined in N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(i) in connection with the review and approval of LRFPs. Additionally, to the extent that the Needs Assessment must be updated following the approval of an SDA district's LRFP, OSF shall do so in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-5m(2).

Accordingly, the Initial Decision in this matter is adopted as the final decision as modified with respect to the timelines for the completion of the LRFP approval process.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

BEFORE ELLEN S. BASS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Education Law Center (ELC), alleges, on behalf of the Abbott v. Burke school children, that respondent, New Jersey Department of Education, Office of School Facilities (the OSF), has failed to ensure the timely submission and approval of updated long range facilities plans (LRFP) for New Jersey's low income school districts, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(a). The OSF replies that it has substantially complied with its statutory and regulatory obligations; that the failure to timely update LRFPs has not been detrimental to the subject school districts or their students; and that accordingly, the petition of appeal should be dismissed.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

ELC filed its petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on February 7, 2014. OSF filed an answer and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on April 15, 2014. ELC filed a motion for summary decision and accompanying brief and certification on July 25, 2014. The OSF filed a cross-motion for summary decision with accompanying brief and certification on August 26, 2014. ELC replied via letter memorandum filed on September 8, 2014, at which time the record closed.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The material facts are not in dispute. I FIND that ELC is a non-profit organization that, since 1981, has served as counsel in the Abbott v. Burke cases for the class of children who attend school in thirty-one poor or urban school districts. OSF is the office within the Department of Education (DOE) responsible for reviewing and approving school facility projects, under the Educational Facilities Construction and Financing Act (EFCFA). N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-1 et seq. In 2007, amendments to the EFCFA created the School Development Authority (SDA), which provides financing and direct construction of school facilities projects in low-income districts, now denoted as "SDA districts." N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-3.

Under the EFCFA, districts are required to file LRFPs that detail their school facilities needs and their plans to address those needs for the ensuing five years. N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(a). After submission of an initial LRFP, SDA districts must revise their plans every five years by updating enrollment projections, building capacities, and health and safety conditions; these plans must be submitted to the DOE for review and approval. The EFCFA limits DOE approval of individual school facilities projects to those contained in an approved LRFP or in an approved amendment to the plan. N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(b) and (c). As required by the EFCFA, the DOE has adopted rules governing the submission, review and approval of facilities plans and projects. N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.1 et seq. Via letter dated January 29, 2010, the OSF Director Bernard Piaia reminded the SDA districts of their obligation to update their LRFPs "at least" every five years. But on or about November 25, 2013, ELC notified the Commissioner and Piaia that updated LRFPs were overdue in all 31 of the SDA districts. At the writing of that letter, it had been well over five years since the 31 SDA districts had last had an LRFP approved; for two-thirds of the districts their last LRFP approval was more than six years old. ELC received no response to its letter, and this petition of appeal followed.

The OSF Director of Policy and Planning Susan Kutner does not dispute that the SDA districts are required to amend their LRFPs every five years; or that as of the date of her certification, only eight of the 31 SDA districts have up-to-date approved plans.[1] Kutner described the process through which LRFPs are approved by her office. Much of her certification reads like an apologia for the failure of the SDA districts and her office to meet statutory and regulatory timelines. Indeed, Kutner emphasizes that amending the LRFP is work intensive. A district must prepare enrollment projections; determine the functional capacity of each school facility; take an inventory of district-owned land; prepare a listing of any proposed new sites for school facilities; determine the scope of work for any proposed projects for the ensuing five years; determine plans for new construction; prepare a preliminary estimate of the costs attached to each proposed facilities project; and obtain local school board approval of submission of the LRFP amendment.

In developing a viable facilities plan for a district, consensus must be obtained among school administrators, the local school board, and the public. Community input is encouraged, particularly if a facilities plan will reconfigure school zones, as this is often controversial. Kutner explained that "[t]he exploration of different scenarios and their presentation to various stakeholders can add considerable but necessary time to the planning process." Some districts retain consultants to assist them, but such consultancy services are costly. Accordingly, completion of an amended LRFP is an arduous and complex task; both Kutner's office and the local districts essentially do the best they can. Kutner noted that she works closely with districts to avoid the problems encountered during the 2005 approval process, when her department needed to address many deficient applications. Kutner clarified that she now provides a preliminary review of select LRFP amendment elements rather than wait for a complete submission to avoid these difficulties. This process may delay the filing of a complete submission, but in Kutner's view, significantly improves review, revision and approval time.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:26-2.1(a), the LRFP must be amended on software made available by the DOE via a web-based system. To complete amendments to its LRFP, a district must first request that the department's system be unlocked. After inputting any updated information, the district can formally submit the LRFP amendment; once it is submitted no further changes can be made. The DOE will be updating to a new web-based reporting system by the end of 2014. This change is needed to coordinate with a new project application component that will be available in early 2015. Districts have been advised via memorandum dated August 12, 2014, about the changes in the web-based system, and the memorandum directs districts to immediately begin planning for an amendment submission using the new system if prior LRFP approval was not issued with the last five years. The OSF has also posted Preliminary LRFP Guidelines for the new system on its website.

Facilities projects in the SDA districts flow from approval of the LRFP; it is correctly described by ELC as a "crucial first step" in the process of securing approval for needed improvements to school facilities. Once the plan is approved, the Commissioner must develop a facilities needs assessment for each SDA district, to be used to initiate facilities projects. N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-5(m)(1). An educational priority ranking of all school facilities projects in the SDA districts must be established based on a determination by the Commissioner of "critical need." N.J.S.A. 18A: 7G-5(m)(2). The Commissioner is then required to transmit that ranking to the SDA for use in establishing a statewide strategic plan for sequencing the construction of school facilities projects in all of the SDA districts. N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-5(m)(3). Accordingly, in ELC's view, if the LRFPs are out-of-date and do not reflect the actual and changing needs of each SDA district, all downstream decisions and actions taken by the DOE based on these LRFPs likewise will be out-of-date and inaccurate.

But Kutner stresses in her certification that the Educational Facilities Needs Assessments for each SDA district and the Educational Priority Rankings for all school facilities projects state-wide are neither out-of-date nor based on inaccurate information. The first Educational Facilities Needs Assessments and Educational Priority Rankings were completed by the Department in 2008, based on data provided in the 2005 LRFPs. Both were updated in 2010 and again in 2013. Kutner explained that since the EFCFA no longer requires LRFPs to be revised at the same time, the data from the 2008 assessment has been updated independent of the LRFPs in order to utilize the most current information.[2] The update includes existing enrollments as reported on the Application for School Aid; a review of active district schools using the Department's County District information system; and an updating of inventory for funded and completed projects. In many cases, districts are contacted to verify inventory changes that may have occurred from the last assessment, or to explain capacity shortages or surpluses based on a comparison of updated enrollments and inventory data. The needs assessment thus is not tied to LRFPs, and does not consider the projected enrollments or specific proposed projects found in the LRFP.

There has been some progress in the submission and approval of LRFPs for the SDA districts since the petition of appeal was filed. Kutner has advised as follows:

1. Asbury Park, Monmouth County: An LRFP was last approved on April 10, 2008, over six years ago. The district requested password access to the LRFP on-line system in June 2014.

2. Bridgeton, Cumberland County: An LRFP was last approved on June 20, 2007, over seven years ago. The district has submitted enrollment projections, updated school grade alignments, and scopes of work. It is anticipated that an amended plan will be completed in late Fall 2014.

3. Burlington City, Burlington County: An LRFP was last approved on February 11, 2008, over six years ago. The district submitted an amendment request form in July 2013 and contacted the OSF on August 14, 2014, for assistance in completing the amendment.

4. Camden City, Camden County: An LRFP was last approved on January 15, 2008, over six years ago. Although an amendment request form was submitted by the district in February 2013, OSF does not anticipate final submission of an amended LRFP until December 2014.

5. City of Orange, Essex County: An LRFP was last approved on March 25, 2008, over six years ago. Updated district enrollment projections were approved by the Department on May 1, 2014. The district is currently assessing potential project scopes for inclusion in an amended plan.

6. East Orange, Essex County: An LRFP was last approved on December 14, 2007, close to seven years ago. The district submitted an amended LRFP in August 2013, which was determined to be deficient. OSF last heard from the district's consultant in August 2014, and a revised submission is anticipated by November 2014.

7. Elizabeth, Union County: An LRFP was approved on May 14, 2013.

8. Garfield, Bergen County: An LRFP was last approved on May 9, 2008, over six years ago. The district submitted an LRFP Amendment Request Form in June 2012 and is currently assessing potential projects for inclusion in an amended LRFP.

9. Gloucester City, Camden County: An LRFP was approved on August 12, 2014.

10. Harrison, Hudson County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. An amended LRFP submitted in August 2013 was found to be deficient. A revised LRFP has yet to be submitted by the district.

11. Hoboken, Hudson County: An LRFP was last approved on March 25, 2008, over six years ago. The district submitted an enrollment projection on April 30, 2014, has retained a consultant, and is currently assessing potential projects for inclusion in an amended plan.

12. Irvington Township, Essex County: An LRFP was approved on November 13, 2011.

13. Jersey City, Hudson County: An LRFP was last approved on November 13, 2007, close to seven years ago. According to Kutner, the district is actively working on an amended LRFP, which she anticipates receiving by November 2014.

14. Keansburg, Monmouth County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district submitted an amendment request in August 2012 and has submitted enrollment projections, updated school grade alignments, and scopes of work. It will be unable to finalize a proposed amended LRFP until proposed room inventories and capacities are finalized.

15. Long Branch, Monmouth County: An LRFP was last approved on October 16, 2007, exactly seven years ago. An Amendment Request Form was submitted in May 2013, but completion of the LRFP is pending a determination regarding disposition of an "old high school building."

16. Millville City, Cumberland County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. District enrollment projects were reviewed by the DOE on July 2, 2014, and the district continues to explore high school building options, which is its major facilities concern. An amendment will be submitted "once a course of action has been decided."

17. Neptune Township, Monmouth County: An LRFP was approved on December 16, 2013.

18. New Brunswick, Middlesex County: An LRFP was approved on May 14, 2013.

19. Newark, Essex County: An LRFP was approved on June 23, 2014.

20. Passaic City, Passaic County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district is currently assessing capacities and building scopes for three major projects, after which it will be in a position to amend its plan.

21. Paterson, Passaic County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district submitted a LRFP Amendment Request Form in August 2013, and Kutner believes it is in the process of retaining a consultant.

22. Pemberton Township, Burlington County: An LRFP was last approved on June 18, 2007, over seven years ago. The district submitted an amendment request, is currently assessing building options, and "will amend its plan once a consensus is reached."

23. Perth Amboy, Middlesex County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. Enrollment projections have been completed and the "district's LRFP amendment is pending a determination of project scopes."

24. Phillipsburg, Warren County: An LRFP was approved on June 30, 2014.

25. Plainfield, Union County: An LRFP was last approved on January 22, 2008, over six years ago. The district submitted updated enrollment projections in May 2014 and its LRFP amendment is "pending a determination of project scopes."

26. Pleasantville, Atlantic County: An LRFP was approved on October 8, 2013.

27. Salem City, Salem County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district submitted an LRFP Amendment Request Form in September 2013 and submitted enrollment projections in April 2014.

28. Trenton, Mercer County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district is in the process of retaining a consultant.

29. Union City, Hudson County: An LRFP was last approved on March 25, 2008, over six years ago. The district has submitted an amendment request and is actively working on amending its LRFP with a consultant.

30. Vineland City, Cumberland County: An LRFP was last approved on December 3, 2007, close to seven years ago. The district submitted an Amendment Request Form in January 2013 and is working on finalizing middle school building options.

31. West New York, Hudson County: An LRFP was last approved on September 12, 2007, over seven years ago. The district has submitted an amendment request and is actively working on amending its LRFP with the help of a consultant.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5 provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "the judgment or order sought shall be rendered if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla, 'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995) (citing Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (citing Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214. I CONCLUDE that this matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material disputed facts, and ELC is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

The claims raised by ELC demand an analysis of whether the OSF has complied with the requirements of the EFCFA, N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2, et seq., and its implementing regulations relative to the timely updating of LRFPs in the SDA districts. N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.1 et seq. The constitutional mandate that New Jersey school children receive a thorough and efficient free public education includes the assurance "that students are educated in physical facilities that are safe, healthy, and conducive to learning." N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2(a). Although seeking to address the adequacy of school facilities statewide, the legislature acknowledged that "[e]ducational infrastructure inadequacies are greatest in the SDA districts where maintenance has been deferred and new construction has not been initiated due to concerns about cost." N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-2(c). Thus, the EFCFA requires that:

> To remedy the facilities inadequacies of the SDA districts, the State must promptly engage in a facilities needs assessment and fund the entire cost of repairing, renovating, and constructing the new school facilities determined by the Commissioner of Education to be required to meet the school facilities efficiency standards in the SDA districts.

The EFCFA, and its accompanying regulations, were enacted in response to a school funding process that was deemed constitutionally infirm, in part, because facilities in poor and urban districts were "crumbling and obsolescent and . . . this grave state of disrepair not only prevents children from receiving a through and efficient education, but also threatens their health and safety." Abbott v. Burke, 153 N.J. 480, 519 (1998). The LRFPs that are the focal point of this litigation are part of the statutory scheme intended to expedite the repair of these crumbling and obsolescent schools. Indeed, N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.2 defines an "approved LRFP" as "an LRFP that conforms to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:26-2 and that has been determined by a Commissioner's final determination to ensure the school facilities are educationally adequate to support over the next five years the achievement of the Core Curriculum Content Standards."

It requires little discussion or analysis to CONCLUDE that the OSF is noncompliant with the EFCFA and with agency regulations relative to the approval of updated LRFPs. N.J.S.A. 18A: 7G-4(a) is unequivocal, speaks in the imperative and provides:

> Following the approval of the 2005 long-range facilities plan, each district shall amend its long-range facilities plan at least once every five years to update enrollment projections, building capacities, and health and safety conditions. The long-range facilities plan shall incorporate the facilities efficiency standards and shall be filed with the Commissioner for approval in accordance with those standards. (Emphasis supplied)

The statute moreover states, consistent with ELC's contention that an up-to-date plan is a prerequisite to any facilities project, as follows:

> Notwithstanding any other law or regulation to the contrary, an application for a school facilities project pursuant to section 5 of P.L.2000. c. 72(C.18A:7G-5) shall not be approved unless the district has filed a long-range facilities plan that is consistent with the application and the plan has been approved by the commissioner.

The accompanying regulations likewise make the SDA districts responsible for submission of an amended LRFP "at least once every five years." N.J.A.C. 6A:26-2.1(a). Both statute and regulation are a response to the Supreme Court directive that the Commissioner ensure that such plans are completed. See: N.J.A.C. 6A:26-1.1. The Court stated:

> Before any new classrooms are built, however, each district is expected to complete an enrollment projection and a Five-Year Facilities Management Plan (Plan). This Plan will enable the State and the district to work together to determine how to make the "best use" of existing space...The Commissioner is directed to ensure that the Plans are completed and that the deadlines are met.
> [Abbott v. Burke, supra, 153 N.J. at 521 (1998)]

Through Kutner's certification, the OSF has offered what I have no doubt is a sincere and compelling description of the logistical and technical complexities that delay the finalization of updated LRFPs for the SDA districts. But the agency is required to comply with its own regulations. Our courts have recognized that "[b]ecause administrative regulations that apply to the regulated public have the force and effect of statutory law, an administrative agency ordinarily must enforce and adhere to, and may not disregard, the regulations it has promulgated." Cnty of Hudson v. Dept. of Corrections, 152 N.J. 60, 70 (1997). An agency may amend its regulations, but "so long as they are in force the agency is bound by them." Id. at 71. Moreover, any doubt that the OSF has the authority and obligation to compel the local districts to meet their obligations to timely update their LRFPs is assuaged by reference to N.J.A.C. 6A: 26-14.1(a), which authorizes the Commissioner to withhold state aid from any district that fails to obey "the law, or the rules or directions of the State Board or the Commissioner."

The OSF's argument that there is no harm caused by its failure to compel the SDA districts to timely file updated LRFPs is unavailing. The statute and regulations are clear that facilities projects cannot be undertaken unless they are consistent with the LRFP. See: N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-4(b); N.J.A.C. 6A:26-2.3(c). ELC compellingly urges that all facilities construction in the SDA districts flows from the finalization of the LRFP, including the prioritization of projects that must be later undertaken in conjunction with the SDA. N.J.S.A. 18A:7G-5(m)(3). While Kutner's assertion that the OSF keeps facilities priorities up-to-date notwithstanding the failure of the SDA districts to timely update their LRFPs is somewhat reassuring, the steps she describes nonetheless do not constitute compliance with the agency's clear statutory obligations. Under the plain language of the EFCFA, prioritizations of school facilities projects state-wide "[follow] the approval of an SDA district's long-range facilities plan or of an amendment to that plan..." N.J.S.A. 18:7G-5(m)(2). Thus, to the extent that OSF is prioritizing projects without reference to timely LRFPs, it is doing so in a manner that is noncompliant with the law.

The OSF urges that strict enforcement of the regulatory requirements through a withholding of state aid would serve only to harm the SDA districts and their students, who our courts have described as the "the most disadvantaged school children in the state." Abbott v Burke, supra, 153 N.J. at 528. I agree. But there must be some mechanism at the agency's disposal to ensure that these plans are quickly completed, whether it is via redirecting more funds, time or personnel to ensuring that the agency's legal obligations are met. In any event, the statute and regulations as they now read leave me no option but to CONCLUDE that the OSF is in noncompliance with its obligations under law, and that the relief sought by ELC should be granted.

I am likewise compelled to direct that this work be completed under the timeline proposed by ELC in its pleading. The OSF has replied to that timeline only with vague promises that the needed work will be done. These assurances do not pass statutory or constitutional muster.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the OSF direct those SDA districts that have yet to file an up-to-date LRFP to do so within 60 days of the date of this order. Upon receipt of the updated LRFPs, the OSF is ORDERED within 90 days to review and approve the LRFPs, and to thereafter take the steps required under the relevant statutes and regulations to develop a needs assessment and create priority rankings. The needs assessment must be completed within 60 days from the date of approval of the updated LRFP; an educational priority rating must be transmitted to the SDA within 30 days thereafter.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Before MELISSA H. BIREN, Esq., Impartial Arbitrator

ORDER APPROVING SETTLEMENT OF TENURE CHARGES

The State District Superintendent of the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County (the "District") certified tenure charges against Thomas Williams ("Respondent" or "Williams"), a tenured teacher in the District. The District's counsel, Adams Gutierrez & Lattiboudere, LLC, filed the tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey on August 29, 2014. The charges allege conduct unbecoming, insubordination and other just cause for termination. Respondent, by his counsel, Stuart Ball, Esq., Stuart Ball, LLC, filed an answer with the Commissioner, received on September 10, 2014, denying the allegations and asserting various defenses. These charges were referred to the undersigned Arbitrator on September 22, 2014 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. A timely request for an extension of time to conclude the hearing and submit a decision was granted.

Counsel for the District and the Respondent advised that the parties reached a mutually acceptable settlement of the tenure charges against Respondent. On December 30, 2014, a Stipulation of Settlement ("Stipulation") was forwarded to the arbitrator for review and approval. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, the settlement of the tenure charges pursuant to the terms of the Stipulation is hereby approved; the standards for settlement have been satisfied as set forth below.

1. A copy of the Tenure Charges and the Answer are annexed to this Order.
2. The settlement of the tenure charges is warranted as it resolves the charges without the need for multiple hearing dates with numerous witnesses, including two young students. Settlement of the charges without a hearing removes the uncertainty of litigation for both the District and the Respondent. It avoids disruption to the District that would have to devote resources and time to the hearing; school personnel may now devote their attention to their usual duties and responsibilities and not to preparation and participation in the hearing. It also allows Respondent to avoid the stress of proceeding with a hearing on these charges and puts him in the position to move on with his life.

3. Both the charged and charging parties have consented to the settlement terms. Both parties were represented by counsel in the negotiation of the settlement and the preparation of the Stipulation. Williams signed the Stipulation indicating his voluntary agreement to its terms on December 12, 2014. The State District Superintendent signed the Stipulation indicating her voluntary agreement to its terms on December 29, 2014. In addition, counsel for the District, Adam Herman, Esq., Adams Gutierrez & Lattiboudere LLC, signed a Certification of Consent to Settlement Terms Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(b) on December 30, 2014.
4. Respondent entered into the Stipulation with a full understanding of his rights. Competent counsel provided advice and counsel to the Respondent throughout the settlement process. In addition, the Stipulation contains detailed terms to which Respondent indicated his consent.
5. The settlement is in the public interest. Pursuant to the settlement, Respondent resigns from his position as a tenured teacher in the District. Further, as discussed above, by the settlement, the District (an Abbott District with stringent budget limitations) avoid the uncertainty of the outcome of the arbitration, the time and expense associated with litigation and any disruption to the District resulting from school personnel's participation in multiple hearing days.
6. The Stipulation clearly and expressly indicates that the Respondent has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners. Further, as discussed above, Respondent was advised and represented by counsel throughout the settlement process.

By reason of the foregoing, the settlement of the tenure charges against the Respondent, Thomas Williams, pursuant to the terms set forth in the Stipulation, is approved.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

In the Matter of the Tenure Charges of

CARLY OLIVIER

and

THE STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT

OF THE CITY OF NEWARK

Agency Reference No.: 302-10/14

Hearings in the above-entitled matter were held on December 11, 2014 and December 23, 2014 at the New Jersey State Board of Mediation in Newark, New Jersey, before Daniel F. Brent, duly designated by letter dated November 17, 2014 as Impartial Arbitrator pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act, for the purpose of adjudicating the tenure charges filed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark against Carly Olivier, a tenured teacher, based on inefficiency and conduct unbecoming for failure to report as scheduled for his teaching assignment during a protracted period. The District introduced documentary evidence and testimony by the custodian of official school records setting forth in detail the basis for these charges. On December 23, 2014, during the course of the second hearing, the parties advised the Arbitrator that they had been able to resolve their dispute amicably.

The terms and conditions of their settlement were memorialized in a Stipulation of Settlement agreement that was executed by both parties after Respondent Olivier consulted with his attorney. The Stipulation of Settlement resolves an issue of inefficiency and performance based on attendance-related conduct, and is hereby incorporated by reference. The Arbitrator inquired of Respondent to be sure that he understood the terms of the agreement, was satisfied by the representation afforded him by his counsel, and that he had no questions regarding the Stipulation of Settlement before he executed the document setting forth the parties' entire agreement. The Arbitrator witnessed the execution of the Stipulation of Settlement.

AWARD OF ARBITRATOR

Daniel F. Brent, having been duly designated as Impartial Arbitrator pursuant to NJSA 18A:6—16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26, AWARDS as follows:

After duly considering the nature of the tenure charges brought by the State-Operated School District of Newark against Respondent Carly Olivier, the Respondent's record of service to the School District of the City of Newark, the absence of harm to any student for the whom the Respondent was responsible, and the advantages and factors cited by the parties as a basis underlying their Stipulation of Settlement, I hereby find that the terms and conditions contained in the Stipulation of Settlement dated December 23, 2014 as agreed upon by the Respondent and the School District, each of whom has been advised by counsel, are reasonable and in the best interest of both the parties and the public.

Based on the facts elicited by the evidentiary record in the instant matter, and given the defenses asserted by Respondent Carly Olivier, and having examined the terms of the Stipulation of Settlement, I find that the terms and conditions set forth in the parties' Stipulation of Settlement dated December 23, 2014 appear to me to be reasonable, to be consistent with the terms and intent of the TEACHNJ Statute and applicable regulations, and to reflect that Respondent has not committed any conduct unbecoming a tenured teacher. I hereby endorse and approve the parties' Stipulation of Settlement as appropriate under the circumstances and as satisfying the requirements of the TEACHNJ statute.

Consequently, I hereby issue a Consent Award incorporating the terms of the settlement agreement executed by the parties, which will be effective as of December 23, 2014.

STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK	STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

The State-Operated School District of the City of Newark (the "District"), whose principal office is located at 2 Cedar Street, Newark, New Jersey 07102, and its successors, assigns, officers, employees, agents and representatives (collectively, "School District"), and Carly Olivier, residing at 420 Pacific Avenue, Jersey City, NJ 07304 ("Respondent") (collectively, the "Parties") have voluntarily resolved all disputed matters and enter into the following Stipulation of Settlement, which fully disposes of all issues in controversy between them in full and complete settlement of all outstanding issues as detailed below.

WHEREAS Respondent is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the District as a teacher; and

WHEREAS the State District Superintendent of the School District ("Superintendent") certified tenure charges of conduct unbecoming to the Commissioner of Education of the State of New Jersey, captioned In the Matter of Tenure Charges Against Carly Olivier, State-Operated

School District of the City of Newark, Essex County ("Tenure Charges"), primarily based upon allegations that Respondent had engaged in chronic and excessive absenteeism and had been absent without leave from his position, and such charges were assigned Docket No. 302-10/14; and Respondent filed an answer opposing the charges; and the Commissioner of Education, having reviewed the charges and Respondent's answer, determined that the charges were sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in compensation, and accordingly referred the matter to Arbitrator Daniel Brent ("Arbitrator") for a hearing; and

WHEREAS, the District is an Abbot District, with stringent budget limitations and due to the uncertainty of the outcome of arbitration as well as the expenditure of resources due to multiple days of hearings with numerous witnesses, and the concern that school personnel will be removed from their educational duties and responsibilities during that time, the Parties wish to resolve this matter in accordance with the terms set forth herein rather than proceed with arbitration; and

WHEREAS the proposed Stipulation of Settlement is in the best interest of the Parties and the public because Respondent resigns from his employment without further litigation and it avoids an uncertain conclusion after protracted and costly proceedings at the expense of the public;

NOW, THEREFORE, subject to approval by the Arbitrator, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Concurrent with the execution of this Stipulation, Respondent shall submit an irrevocable letter of resignation to the District, which shall provide for his permanent resignation from his tenured position with the District effective January 1, 2015, ("Effective Date"). (See Exhibit A to the Stipulation, a copy of Respondent's signed letter of resignation).

2. Upon final approval of the signed Stipulation by the District, and its receipt and acceptance of the Respondent's irrevocable letter of resignation, the District shall and hereby does withdraw the instant Tenure Charges. The District agrees to not pursue the subject Tenure Charges against Respondent as long as this Stipulation remains in effect and is not voided by any court or administrative agency of competent jurisdiction. In the event the Stipulation is voided, the District retains the right to file and consider for certification, tenure charges against Respondent, including those tenure charges which have been previously filed against him by the District, and Respondent reserves the right to defend same

3. Upon final approval by the arbitrator of the signed Stipulation by the District and Respondent's irrevocable letter of resignation, Respondent will be restored to paid administrative leave effective September 2, 2014. Respondent will be paid all salary and benefits from September 2, 2014 through the Effective Date of December 31, 2014, which shall include payment for the period of unpaid suspension (a maximum of 120 days' salary), minus all applicable taxes, withholdings and deductions.

4. This Stipulation is based upon the understanding that Respondent's separation from employment with the District, effective January 1, 2015, will be deemed a voluntary resignation in good standing. Upon inquiry from any third party to authorized employees or representatives of the District, those employees or representatives will provide no information other than to confirm Respondent's employment, position, salary and dates of employment, and state that the reason for his separation from employment was his voluntary resignation.

5. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.4, et seq., Respondent has been advised that the District must refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners and that pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 this matter may be referred by the Commissioner to the State Board of Examiners. Respondent has also been advised that the District is legally required to participate in any proceedings therefrom and cooperate with the State Board of Examiners.

6. As of the Effective Date, all of Respondent's rights of employment with the District, including but not limited to accrued salary, benefits, tenure and seniority, will permanently end. This paragraph will not affect, limit or preclude the Respondent from seeking or receiving any accrued salary and/or pension benefits to which she is entitled or becomes entitled by the Effective Date.

7. Respondent will not apply for reemployment with the District at any time. If Employee does apply for reemployment with the District and is approved for employment, the terms of this Agreement shall control and shall be grounds for termination of Respondent's employment.

8. Except as noted above, Respondent waives all claims of any nature against the District with regard to his employment with and/or separation from the District including fees, or other monetary relief, with the exception of workers' compensation claims.

9. In exchange for the consideration set forth in paragraph 3 above, the sufficiency of which is hereby acknowledged, Respondent hereby waives, releases and discharges any and all claims or rights that he has or may have against the District, the State District Superintendent, its Advisory Board of Education and its Advisory Board members, and any and all other District officers, employees, representatives, agents, successors and assigns (collectively, the "Released Parties") including any claim for attorneys' fees, costs or other monetary relief. This waiver, release and discharge includes, without limitation, any and all actions, claims, and liabilities of whatsoever kind or character, in law or in equity, now known or unknown, suspected or unsuspected, directly or indirectly related to Respondent's employment with the District or separation from employment with the District. It specifically includes, without limitation, all claims which Respondent may have regarding tenure, withholding of increment, discrimination on any basis, any federal or state civil rights law, any alleged violation of the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Worker Benefits Protection Act; Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Civil Rights Act of 1991; the Equal Pay Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Rehabilitation Act; the Family and Medical Leave Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, as amended; the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act; the National Labor Relations Act; the Fair Credit Reporting Act; the Occupational Safety and Health Act; the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Act; the Employee Polygraph Protection Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the retaliation provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002; the False Claims Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Wage and Hour Law; the New Jersey Equal Pay Law; the New Jersey Occupational Safety and Health Law; the New Jersey Smokers' Rights Law; the New Jersey Genetic Privacy Act; the New Jersey Fair Credit Reporting Act; New Jersey Wages and Hours Law, unemployment compensations laws, disability benefits laws, retaliation provisions of the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Law; the United States Constitution, the New Jersey Constitution; and/or any other alleged violation of any federal, state or local law, regulation or ordinance; any claim based on contract, implied contract, collective bargaining agreement, tort law, personal injury, or public policy, having any bearing whatsoever on her employment by and/or termination of her employment with the District, including but not limited to any claim for wrongful discharge, back pay, vacation pay, sick pay, wages, attorneys' fees, costs, and/or future wage loss, except for workers compensation claims.

10. Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph 9 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that the parties are not prohibited from communicating with or participating in any administrative proceeding before the United States Department of Labor, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commissioner, or any other federal, state or local law agency. However, should any entity, agency commission or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Paragraph 9, Respondent agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever.

11. Notwithstanding the terms of paragraph 9 of this Stipulation, Respondent does not hereby waive any right he may have to workers compensation benefits or pension benefits.

12. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act, if applicable, this Stipulation of Settlement advises Respondent of the legal requirements of the Act and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Stipulation of Settlement. Accordingly, by executing this Stipulation, Respondent acknowledges that he: (i) fully understands the terms and conditions of this Stipulation of Settlement; (ii) has consulted with an attorney to review the Stipulation of Settlement; (iii) specifically waives his right to pursue any current claims he may have under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act; (iv) has been given sufficient time within which to consider this Stipulation of Settlement; and (v) has 7 days from the date of the execution of this Stipulation of Settlement to revoke it. Respondent understands that he may rescind this Agreement within 7 calendar days of signing it, and such rescission must be in writing and delivered to counsel for the District either by hand or by certified mail within the 7 day period.

13. This agreement shall not constitute a precedent in any matters involving other District employees.

14. This Stipulation, and all of its terms, are and will remain confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law. Respondent is expressly forbidden from discussing this Stipulation with any person, other than his accountant, tax advisor and attorney ("permitted disclosures") and any other individual or entity as necessary to implement the Stipulation or to which it is legally obligated to respond ("legally-required disclosures"). In making any permitted disclosure, Respondent agrees that it will inform the person to whom it is making the permitted disclosure that the existence and substance of this Stipulation, the settlement giving rise to this Stipulation and the sum of money paid pursuant to this Stipulation are to be held strictly confidential to the fullest extent permitted by law. Respondent specifically agrees not to discuss the nature, terms, conditions of this Stipulation with others, any representative of the media, or any past, present, or prospective employee of the District, or its agents or attorneys. Respondent understands that this provision is not a simple recital but is an important, integral part of this Stipulation. The District agrees that it will keep this Stipulation confidential to the extent permitted by law.

15. The Parties each acknowledge that counsel has advised them regarding this Stipulation and that each is signing this Stipulation freely and voluntarily, without duress, coercion or pressure from the other party, with full understanding of its terms and conditions and consents to the terms contained herein.

16. Each signatory to this Stipulation understands, acknowledges and agrees that this Stipulation constitutes the full agreement of the parties and may not be altered, amended, modified, or otherwise changed in any respect whatsoever except by a duly executed writing signed on behalf of both Parties.

17. This Stipulation shall be construed and enforced in accordance with New Jersey law. The Commissioner of Education and/or federal and state courts of the State of New Jersey, as applicable in accordance with such law, shall have exclusive jurisdiction over any dispute arising from, in connection with, or related to this Stipulation.

18. This Stipulation may be executed in counterparts with the same effect as if the signatures hereto and thereto were upon the same instrument. Each counterpart will be deemed an original, which taken together shall constitute a single instrument. Facsimile signatures or signatures in electronic Portable Document Format ("PDF") shall be construed and have the same force and effect as original signatures.

19. This Stipulation or any uncertainty or ambiguity therein shall not be construed against any party, but shall be construed as if both Parties to this Stipulation jointly prepared this Agreement.

20. Each party acknowledges that this is the entire agreement of the Parties concerning the subject matter of the foregoing paragraphs, and that there are no written or oral representations, understandings or agreements directly or indirectly connected with this Stipulation.

21. If any provision of this Stipulation is held by a court of competent jurisdiction or determined under applicable law to be invalid, void, or unenforceable, the remaining provisions will continue and remain in full force and effect.

22. This Stipulation of Settlement will be construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

23. This Stipulation of Settlement is subject to the final approval of the State District Superintendent of the State-operated School District of the City of Newark and will only become effective upon the final approval of the Superintendent. Any disapproval by the Superintendent shall not interfere with the rights of either party to pursue the matter.

24. Additionally, this Stipulation is subject to approval by the Arbitrator pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(c), and will become effective only upon approval by the Arbitrator. Counsel for the Parties shall jointly request the Arbitrator's approval of this Agreement and each shall take any and all necessary steps to effectuate dismissal of the Tenure Charges.

THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN

INTERIM AWARD OF ARBITRATOR

The undersigned Arbitrator, having been designated in accordance with the arbitration agreement entered into by the above-named parties, and having been duly sworn, and having duly heard the proofs and allegations of the parties, AWARDS as follows:

For the reasons set forth in the accompanying Opinion, the more prudent and more legally defensible procedure regarding tenure charges brought against the three Respondents by the School District of Linden, is to conduct a single consolidated proceeding throughout which the Respondents and their counsel may participate. The sequestration of non-party witnesses remains available as of right.

STATE OF NEW JERSEY
DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

In the Matter of the Tenure Charges Against

ANTOINETTE MODRAK, EDWARD J. MACK, and PHYLLIS MACK

THE SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF LINDEN

The undersigned was duly appointed by the Commissioner of Education as Arbitrator to adjudicate three separate tenure charge cases brought by the Board of Education of Linden against three employees of the School District of the City of Linden. The District requested that these three cases be heard by one arbitrator in order to minimize the possibility of inconsistent results. Each Respondent retained counsel, and did not initially oppose the District's request that each of their cases be heard by the same arbitrator. The Board thereafter requested that each case be conducted as a separate proceeding in order that the Respondents not observe the testimony of the other two Respondents.

The Board also contended that, if its motion to conduct three separate proceedings before the same arbitrator were denied, each Respondent be sequestered during the testimony of the other Respondents.

Respondents' counsel disputed the right of the Commissioner of Education, or the Commissioner's designee, to determine unilaterally that the same arbitrator would be appointed in all three cases, and the Commissioner's assumption that an arbitrator appointed by the Commissioner of Education could determine whether to consolidate three tenure charge proceedings into a single proceeding. Counsel for Respondents predicated their willingness to submit their cases to the same arbitrator on the granting of their Motion of Consolidation of the three matters into a single proceeding, provided that each Respondent could be present to hear the testimony of the other two Respondents, as well as testimony by all of the Board's witnesses.

After a lengthy pre-hearing conference call with the Arbitrator, the parties prepared and executed an agreement, acquiescing to the Arbitrator the initial exercise of his authority to determine the issues of consolidation and sequestration raised by the parties. The terms of this agreement are set forth below.

charged by the District with colluding with Mr. Mack to fabricate an evaluation purportedly giving the Grievant a satisfactory evaluation and with enlisting the aid of Respondent Antoinette Modrak, who is the Principal of Linden High School and a long time friend of Miss Mack, to sign and falsely date the evaluation for the purpose of submitting the evaluation as evidence in the grievance and arbitration proceeding concerning the denial of the annual increment to Mr. Mack. The Linden Board of Education certified tenure charges, alleging conduct unbecoming each Respondent in their respective roles as employees of the School District.

Although the request for appointing a single arbitrator was made by the District and processed by the Commissioner of Education's office, the parties were not in agreement as to whether the matters would be consolidated into a single proceeding. Thus, the Respondents' failure immediately to object to the same arbitrator hearing the case should not be construed as precluding from the Respondents from arguing that their consent to the single arbitrator is predicated on their being a consolidation into a single proceeding.

Respondents and the District recognized the advantage in having one arbitrator weigh the charges against the three Respondents, each of whom belong to a different bargaining unit, performs a different function for the School District of Linden, and arguably may have different levels of responsibility for the events at issue in the instant case. Where the parties disagree is whether the Respondents can be precluded from hearing testimony of the other Respondents that are made to the decision maker who will adjudicate these tenure charges. The parties' positions have been set forth at great length in the documents they submitted. The parties' arguments and case citations are hereby incorporated by reference.

Stated succinctly, the Board contended that the potential advantage to tailor testimony that would accrue to the Respondents if they could be present for the testimony of other Respondents would significantly handicap the District's ability to meet its burden of persuasion in a tenure charge hearing. The District asserted that permitting the Respondents to be present for the testimony of other Respondents in a consolidated proceeding would so taint the ability of the Arbitrator to determine the credibility of witnesses, including the Respondents, as to impair the conduct of a fair hearing and materially affect the outcome of the instant proceeding.

Respondents asserted that sequestering Respondents would unfairly exclude them from hearing all of the testimony on which the tenure charges brought against them would be evaluated, and thus deprive them of an essential procedural right and eliminate a fundamental element of due process. Respondents further contended that there is no valid legal basis for excluding them from a consolidated proceeding by exercise of the practice of sequestration as applicable to non-party witnesses. Respondents further asserted that the Arbitrator should either recuse himself from two of the three cases, or declare a consolidated proceeding in the interest of fairness and justice.

MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING

It is hereby agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. The threshold issue of whether these three procedural matters shall be consolidated into a single proceeding will be decided by Arbitrator Daniel Brent;
2. For purpose of these three cases only, each party hereby respectively agrees that Arbitrator Brent will have jurisdiction to decide the issue of consolidation and not the Commissioner of Education and shall not challenge the authority/jurisdiction of the Arbitrator to make this determination in any subsequent Appeal;
3. Each party specifically reserves the right and does not waive the right to Appeal or challenge any other issues or rulings made relative to the arbitration(s) hearings being conducted, including but not limited to, the right to challenge the merits of Arbitrator Brent's ruling(s) on the issue of consolidation. This includes possible interlocutory appeals.

Signatories to this Memorandum have been authorized y his/her client to execute this Memorandum. This Memorandum may be executed in counterparts.

DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The instant matter apparently presents a case of first impression under the new TeachNJ statute, which provides that arbitrators appointed to adjudicate tenure charge proceedings shall conduct such hearings using the Labor Arbitration Rules established by the American Arbitration Association. Rule 27 in the most recent version of the AAA Labor Arbitration Rules, amended and effective as of July, 2013, provides that:

> The parties may offer such evidence as is relevant and material to the dispute, and produce such evidence as the arbitrator may deem necessary to an understanding and determination of the dispute. An arbitrator or other person authorized by law to subpoena witnesses and documents may do so independently or upon the request of any party. The arbitrator shall determine the admissibility, the relevance, and materiality of the evidence offered and may exclude evidence deemed by the arbitrator to be cumulative or irrelevant and conforming to legal rules of evidence shall not be necessary. All evidence shall be taken in the presence of all the arbitrators and all of the parties, except for any of the parties' absent, in default or has waived the right to be present.

AAA Labor Arbitration Rule 47 provides that:

> The arbitrator shall interpret and apply these rules insofar as they relate to the arbitrator's powers and duties...all other rules shall be interpreted and applied by the AAA."

Rule 21 provides that:

> The arbitrator and the AAA shall maintain the privacy of the hearing unless the law provides to the contrary. Any person having a direct interest in the arbitration is entitled to attend hearings. The arbitrator shall otherwise have the power to require the exclusion of any witness, other than a party, during the testimony of other witnesses. It shall be discretionary with the arbitrator to determine the propriety of the attendance of any other person other than a party and its representatives.

The four parties to this dispute, the School District of Linden and the three Respondents, have affirmatively indicated their understanding, and conditional acceptance, of the benefits of having the three sets of tenure charges adjudicated by the same arbitrator. These charges arose from allegations of misconduct that, according to the charges, appears to be inextricably interrelated and would require overlapping proofs if tried in separate proceedings.

If these matters had arisen in an employment relationship governed by a collective bargaining agreement, the usual custom and practice for applying the AAA Labor Arbitration Rules would mandate that a decision to join or consolidate multiple grievances be predicated on the consent of both parties, who are usually the employer and the union representing the aggrieved employee, as it is well settled practice in this Arbitrator's thirty-five years of experience that a party in a dispute arising under a collective bargaining agreement may decline to consent to join multiple grievances into a single proceeding unless the parties have specifically provided otherwise in their collective bargaining agreement. However, the three instant tenure charge cases did not arise under a collective bargaining agreement, but occurred under a statutory framework for determining whether the status of tenure conferred by an employer by operation of law can be rescinded and the employees subject to the instant tenure charges may be dismissed.

Although there is merit to the District's contention that separate proceedings would create more equitable opportunities for the District to present its case by avoiding having Respondents listen to other testimony, from both parties' perspective, adjudicating these three sets of tenure charges in three entirely separate cases before three different arbitrators would create greater risk not only for inconsistent results, but also for erroneous results, as each arbitrator would only have access to a limited portion of the evidence addressing less than the totality of facts and circumstances underlying the allegedly interrelated conduct of the three Respondents. Neither party will benefit from a disparity of testimony or credibility determinations resulting from hearings dealing with the same conduct that are conducted independently of each other. .

Consequently, the Linden Board of Education did not fail timely to produce required documents and information in violation of any clear or unambiguous standard established by the TEACHNJ statute.

Neither did the Board's premature, and thus erroneous, submission of a demand for production of documents create any legal or equitable basis to foreclose further administration or litigation of these tenure charges. Respondents could simply refuse to comply with the Board's demand for the production of documents until after the procedural posture of the three sets of tenure charges had been clarified and the matters were ready for referral for adjudication to either one, two, or three arbitrators, either as independently conducted cases or as one consolidated matter.

Respondents cited an award by Arbitrator Edmund Gerber in the Cuff case. However, the Cuff decision is not on point, as it deals with the exclusion of evidence that was not provided within the statutorily determined ten-day time frame after the matter has been properly referred to arbitration. If the Linden Board of Education had failed to comply with the applicable time requirement after receiving the Interim Award on December 15, 2014, then the principles espoused in the Cuff decision might properly be cited as a basis for excluding additional evidence, other than for the purposes of impeachment, as specifically provided by the TEACHNJ statute.

The Linden Board of Education's brief opposing Respondents' Motions to Dismiss raised and analyzed several grounds for denying the motion, including laches, unclean hands, public policy, and absence of prejudice. Each of these arguments has been considered thoroughly in reaching the Arbitrator's determination regarding Respondents' Motions to Dismiss. Significant weight was, however, afforded to the absence of any explicit definition of 'referral' in the body of the statute. Based on the analysis set forth above, such referral could not reasonably be deemed to have occurred before the issuance of the Interim Award on December 12, if not the receipt of the Award on or about December 15, 2014 because the preliminary procedural issues raised by both parties precluded identification not only of which arbitrator would hear each case, but also whether the Board had to present one integrated case in a consolidated proceeding or three separate cases. Thus, the Board could not determine with reasonable specificity what materials should be provided to whom until the issues of consolidation and sequestration had been definitively determined.

Furthermore, the District reasonably relied on the representations made among counsel at the preliminary conference regarding the authority of the Arbitrator to determine the procedural posture of the tenure charges, including consolidation and sequestration, and thus properly deferred providing the information required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1(b)(3) until the Arbitrator's determination of the dispute regarding consolidation and sequestration and my assertion of jurisdiction over all three cases was finalized by the issuance of the Interim Award.

For all these reasons, the Respondents' Motions to Dismiss are hereby denied. The matter shall proceed to hearing as previously scheduled on February 5 and 6, 2015.

The Arbitrator hereby retains jurisdiction for the purpose of resolving any disputes regarding the tenure charges filed by the Board of Education of Linden Public Schools against Antoinette Modrak, Edward Mack and Phyllis Mack.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF HACKENSACK, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioner – who is employed as a non-tenured instructional aide in respondent Board's school district – contended that the Board violated his rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 when it suspended him without pay from June 5, 2014 until the conclusion of the 2013-2014 school year, for a total of thirteen work days. The Board asserted that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 does not prohibit the disciplinary action it took against petitioner, which came in the aftermath of a finding that he had engaged in unbecoming conduct. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: the issue to be determined was whether N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 prohibits the Board from placing petitioner on unpaid status until after he has exhausted all available appeals of the Board's determination; there are no material facts in dispute, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 prohibits the Board from suspending the pay of an employee during the pendency of the contractual grievance process and any appeals therefrom; and the statute makes it clear that a suspension must be with pay until an investigation is completed, or the employee is indicted or served with formal tenure charges; accordingly, that an unpaid suspension of thirteen days may only be imposed on the petitioner after his appeals of the discipline imposed upon him have been exhausted. The ALJ concluded that the Board violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 when it suspended the petitioner without pay for thirteen days in June 2014, and ordered the Board to reimburse petitioner for all lost salary, benefits and emoluments of employment during that period.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

DAVID SIMS,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF HACKENSACK, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Before the Commissioner is a demand from petitioner, David Sims, for reimbursement of salary which was withheld by respondent Hackensack Board of Education during a thirteen-day suspension imposed upon petitioner for alleged unbecoming conduct. Petitioner contends that the suspension without pay violated his rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3. After review of the record and Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the Commissioner agrees.

As was found by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) in an Initial Decision dated December 5, 2014, petitioner is employed by respondent as an instructional aide. As a result of a May 1, 2014 police report describing remarks allegedly made by petitioner to a police officer, respondent's Superintendent of Schools, Karen Lewis, suspended petitioner with pay pending an investigation into the alleged unbecoming conduct. A disciplinary hearing took place before Superintendent Lewis on June 5, 2014, at which she found that petitioner had engaged in unbecoming conduct. Lewis suspended petitioner without pay for the balance of the school year, i.e., thirteen days, and directed petitioner to participate in sensitivity training. The suspension without pay precipitated the instant petition to the Commissioner on June 13, 2014.

Thereafter, petitioner was granted a third-step grievance hearing before the respondent board to appeal the discipline imposed by Lewis – in accordance with the grievance procedures contained in the collective bargaining agreement (CBA) between respondent and the Hackensack Education Association. At the conclusion of the July 29, 2014 hearing, the respondent board upheld Superintendent Lewis' findings, as well as the thirteen-day suspension without pay. Petitioner appealed respondent's decision and, pursuant to the CBA, said appeal is scheduled to be heard by an arbitrator on January 21, 2015.

During the same time period, petitioner's appeal to the Commissioner progressed in the OAL via cross motions for summary disposition. The ALJ closed the record on November 24, 2014 and issued the above-referenced Initial Decision on December 5, 2014. The decision granted summary disposition to petitioner, ordering respondent to reimburse petitioner "for all lost salary, benefits, and emoluments of employment during the period of his thirteen-day suspension in June 2014." (Initial Decision at 6)

Having first determined that the matter was appropriate for summary decision, the ALJ studied the wording of – and intent behind – N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3, which provides that:

> [a]ny employee or officer of a board of education in this State who is suspended from his employment, office or position, other than by reason of indictment, pending any investigation, hearing or trial or any appeal therefrom, shall receive his full pay or salary during such period of suspension, except that in the event of charges against such employee or officer brought before the board of education or the Commissioner of education pursuant to law, such suspension may be with or without pay or salary as provided in chapter 6 of which this section is a supplement.

She concluded that since the statute applies to all employees of public school boards, it barred respondent from withholding petitioner's pay until all proceedings regarding petitioner's alleged unbecoming conduct, including any appeal therefrom, came to a conclusion. (Initial Decision at 5) Noting that an arbitration concerning the allegations of unbecoming conduct was still pending, the ALJ found that petitioner's salary had been prematurely withheld. (Ibid.) The ALJ also reviewed the collective bargaining agreement between respondent and the Hackensack Education Association, and found that it contained no provisions that would allow respondent to impose discipline upon petitioner before the proceedings regarding his behavior – including his appeal – were resolved. (Id. at 5-6)

Respondent filed exceptions to the Initial Decision on December 19, 2014. They are, on the whole, without merit. However, the Commissioner will address respondent's contention that it was not required to pay petitioner a salary during his suspension – by virtue of the provision in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 that allows boards of education to impose unpaid suspensions where "charges" against the employees have been "brought before the board of education or the Commissioner of Education."

As mentioned above, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 protects a suspended board of education employee from the deprivation of his salary while – as in this case – an investigation, hearing and/or appeal process progresses, unless one or both of the following two exceptions are present: 1) an indictment has been brought against him, or 2) charges against him have been brought before the board of education or Commissioner – in which case the board may issue a suspension with or without pay. Respondent does not assert that petitioner has been the subject of an indictment. Rather, it contends that "charges" against petitioner were brought before the board of education, thereby implicating the above-identified second exception in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3.

Respondent's analysis begins with the premise that because district superintendents are described, in N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20(a), as members of boards of educations, the transmission to respondent's Superintendent Lewis of information about alleged infractions by petitioner somehow constituted the institution of 'charges' before the board of education. Relying on this premise, respondent urges that Lewis's consideration of the report of petitioner's alleged unbecoming conduct falls into the above-articulated second category of exceptions to the general rule that suspended employees must be paid salary pending investigations, hearings or trials. (Respondent's Exceptions at 2.) The Commissioner cannot agree.

At the outset, "charges" are generally understood to be formal accusations against tenured employees, not instructional aides such as petitioner – who are not tenure eligible. The imposition of discipline against instructional aides proceeds pursuant to the parameters of the relevant collective bargaining agreement. It is undisputed that 1) such contractual proceedings were held for petitioner – before Superintendent Lewis and before the respondent board, 2) petitioner appealed the resulting suspension, and 3) that an arbitration has been scheduled – pursuant to the procedures set forth in the collective bargaining contract.

Second, discipline of tenured employees is meted out solely by voting members of boards of education:

> After consideration of the charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary.
> N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. [Emphasis added.]

> [A] district board of education shall determine by a majority vote of its full membership . . . whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the [tenure] charges and whether such charges are sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary."
> N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b)(4) [Emphasis added.]

In light of the clear directive of N.J.S.A. 18A:17-20(a) that a superintendent of schools "shall have no vote" as to educational matters at board meetings, superintendents are not board members for purposes of the prosecution of "charges." Thus, the fact that the allegations against petitioner were brought to Superintendent Lewis, and adjudicated by her at the first step, signifies that the matter was governed by contractual disciplinary and grievance procedures – not by the statutory requirements governing the adjudication of "charges."

In summary, the transmission to Lewis of a May 1, 2014 report of petitioner's remarks to a police officer was not a "charge," and her investigation and hearing of the matter did not constitute a proceeding "before the board of education." The second exception in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 may therefore not be invoked by respondent.

Accordingly, summary disposition is granted in favor of petitioner and respondent's cross-motion for summary disposition is denied. The Initial Decision is adopted, and respondent will reimburse petitioner for all lost salary, benefits, and emoluments of employment during the period of his thirteen-day suspension in June 2014.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, David Sims (Sims), an employee of the Hackensack Board of Education (the Board), contends that the Board violated his rights under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 when it suspended him without pay from June 5, 2014, until the conclusion of the 2013-2014 school year, for a total of thirteen work days. The Board replies that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 does not prohibit the disciplinary action it has taken against Sims, which came in the aftermath of a finding that he engaged in unbecoming conduct.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Sims filed a petition of appeal with the Commissioner of Education (the Commissioner) on June 13, 2014. The Board filed an answer on June 27, 2014, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case on June 30, 2014. Sims filed a motion for summary decision on September 25, 2014. The Board replied via cross-motion on October 30, 2014. Sims responded to the cross-motion via letter memorandum filed on November 6, 2014.

After reviewing the submissions of the parties, via letter dated November 12, 2014, I asked counsel to supply a copy of the Collective Bargaining Agreement (CBA) between the Board and the Hackensack Education Association, and invited supplemental briefs on the applicability of N.J.S.A. 34:13A-24(a). Sims's counsel replied via letter dated November 21, 2014, and enclosed a copy of the CBA. I received a supplemental brief and additional copy of the CBA from counsel for the Board and closed the record on November 24, 2014.

ISSUE PRESENTED

The Board determined that Sims, a non-tenured staff member, engaged in unbecoming conduct. It imposed discipline in the form of an unpaid suspension. Does N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 prohibit the Board from placing Sims on unpaid status until after he has exhausted available appeals of the Board's determination?

FINDINGS OF FACT

The salient facts are uncontroverted, and I FIND:

Sims is employed by the Board as an instructional aide. Via letter dated May 19, 2014, Superintendent of Schools Karen Lewis advised Sims that he was being suspended with pay pending an investigation into alleged unbecoming conduct. Sims requested a hearing before the Superintendent, which took place on June 5, 2014. Via letter dated June 18, 2014, Lewis found that Sims had engaged in unbecoming conduct and imposed a suspension without pay for the balance of the school year, or thirteen days. She moreover directed that Sims participate in sensitivity training.

Thereafter, Sims requested and was granted a hearing before the Board in accordance with the grievance procedures contained in the CBA between the Board and the Hackensack Education Association. The hearing took place on July 29, 2014. Via letter dated July 31, 2014, the Board upheld the thirteen-day suspension imposed by Lewis. Sims appealed the Board's decision, which is scheduled to be reviewed at an arbitration proceeding on January 21, 2015.

The parties' motions are filed in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), which permits the filing of a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. The rule provides that summary decision should be rendered "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." Our regulation mirrors R. 4:46-2(c), which provides that "[t]he judgment or order sought shall be rendered forthwith if the pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories and admissions on file, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to a judgment or order as a matter of law."

A determination whether a genuine issue of material fact exists that precludes summary decision requires the judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational fact finder to resolve the allegedly disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. Our courts have long held that "if the opposing party . . . offers . . . only facts which are immaterial or of an insubstantial nature, a mere scintilla,

'fanciful frivolous, gauzy or merely suspicious,' he will not be heard to complain if the court grants summary judgment." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 529 (1995) (quoting Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co., 17 N.J. 67, 75 (1954)).

The "'judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial.'" Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 540 (quoting Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986)). When the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214. This matter is ripe for summary decision. There are no material facts in dispute and I CONCLUDE that Sims is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Sims's claims spring from N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-8.3, which provides that

When interpreting a statute or regulation, our courts assume that the framers intended to ascribe to words their ordinary meaning. Jablonowska v. Suther, 195 N.J. 91, 105 (2008); In re N.J.A.C. 14A:20-1.1, 216 N.J. Super. 297, 306 (App. Div. 1987). The intent of a statute or regulation should be gleaned from a view of the whole and of every part of the statute, with the real intention prevailing over the literal sense of its terms. Schierstead v. City of Brigantine, 29 N.J. 220 (1959). Sims asserts that the plain language of this statute prohibits the Board from suspending his pay during the pendency of the contractual grievance process, and any appeals therefrom. I agree.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 addresses the rights of a Board "employee" who is suspended from his position of employment while the Board and/or its administration investigate alleged misconduct. Insofar as N.J.S.A. 18A:1-1 defines "employee" as "the holder of any position or employment," the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 clearly apply to Sims, as they are in no way limited only to tenured or tenure eligible school staff. The statute makes it clear that a suspension must be with pay until an investigation is completed; or the employee is indicted or served with formal tenure charges. While the facts presented here do not concern the investigation of misconduct, but rather, a challenge to the imposition of discipline after a finding of misconduct, the statute likewise proscribes unpaid leaves of absence during any "hearing or trial or any appeal therefrom." (Emphasis supplied.) Sims thus correctly contends that N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-8.3 prohibits the imposition of an unpaid suspension while his appeals of his disciplinary sanction are pending.

N.J.S.A. 34:13A-24(a) provides for the imposition of minor discipline in the public employment setting, and at first blush would appear to supersede the statute relied upon by Sims and compel a determination in the Board's favor. The statute reads:

> Notwithstanding any other law to the contrary, and if negotiated with the majority representative of the employees in the appropriate collective bargaining unit, an employer shall have the authority to impose minor discipline on employees. Nothing contained herein shall limit the authority of the employer to impose, in the absence of a negotiated agreement regarding minor discipline, any disciplinary sanction which is authorized and not prohibited by law.

But a review of the CBA between the Board and the Hackensack Education Association reveals no negotiated provision for minor discipline. The "notwithstanding" language in N.J.S.A. 34:13A-24(a) would provide solace to the Board if, and only if, its agreement with the Association referenced such minor discipline. Absent such negotiated language, the Board may impose only "any disciplinary sanction which is authorized and not prohibited by law." N.J.S.A. 34:13A-24(a). In light of the prohibitions contained in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3, an unpaid suspension of thirteen days may be imposed on Sims only after his appeals of the discipline imposed against him are exhausted. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the Board violated the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-8.3 when it suspended Sims without pay for thirteen days.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is hereby ORDERED that the relief sought by the petition of appeal is GRANTED. The Board is directed to reimburse Sims for all lost salary, benefits, and emoluments of employment during the period of his thirteen-day suspension in June 2014. I make no ruling in regard to the Board's ultimate right to impose the controverted unpaid suspension, as this is not the issue before me.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Agreement

THIS AGREEMENT made on this 23 day of October, 2014, between the Jamesburg Board of Education in the County of Middlesex in the State of New Jersey (hereinafter referred to as "Jamesburg") and the Monroe Township Board of Education in the County of Middlesex in the State of New Jersey (hereinafter referred to as "Monroe");

WHEREAS, Jamesburg sends its students to the high school of Monroe ("Monroe Township High School" or "High School"); and

WHEREAS, the parties have executed an Agreement made as of March 2011 regarding tuition due from Jamesburg to Monroe; and

WHEREAS, Monroe's certified tuition calculation includes an allocation of general fund expenditures as well as an allocation of annual interest charges on the bond indebtedness relating to the construction of the Monroe Township High School; and

WHEREAS, Jamesburg has alleged that it is unable to pay the arrearages in tuition it owes to Monroe and has disputed this amount; and

WHEREAS, Monroe has filed a Petition of Appeal with the Commissioner of Education, Agency Ref. No. 9-1/13, OAL Dkt. No. EDU02793-2013N, alleging that Jamesburg owes past due tuition to Monroe; and

WHEREAS, the matter is pending in the Office of Administrative Law; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire to amicably resolve the dispute.

W I T N E S S E T H:

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the agreements, covenants and conditions herein contained, the parties agree as follows:

1. The parties acknowledge that the certified tuition rate used by Monroe for calculating the actual tuition rate and the "Current Indebtedness" includes an allocation of general fund expenditures as well as an allocation of annual interest charges on the bond indebtedness relating to the construction of the Monroe Township High School.

2. Jamesburg acknowledges that: (1) it owes past due tuition to Monroe for the years 2011-12 and 2012-13, $615,213.00 and $333,898.00, due in the 2013-14 and 2014-15 school years respectively; and (2) it may owe additional tuition for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years (collectively the "Current Indebtedness"). If the tuition amount due from Jamesburg continues to decrease as shown in the trend from the 2011-12 and 2012-13 school years, the parties anticipate that the certified tuition for the 2013-14 school year could decrease from the 2012-2013 school year and Monroe may eventually owe Jamesburg a credit in which case Monroe may apply any such credit against the Current Indebtedness.

3. Jamesburg acknowledges that it has received a school warrant demand from Monroe for payment of the Indebtedness.

4. Jamesburg agrees to pay the Current Indebtedness owed to Monroe upon the terms set forth in this Agreement.

5. The parties anticipate that the High School tuition rate will decrease in future school years, because the High School costs are anticipated to increase slightly and enrollment is anticipated to steadily increase, thus driving the tuition rate per pupil down. The parties acknowledge and agree that in the event the change in the High School tuition rate does not result in Jamesburg's ability to pay the Current Indebtedness in a seven (7) year timeframe, Monroe may re-file its Petition of Appeal in accordance with Paragraph 9 below.

6. The State Certified Tuition and the NJ Department of Education budget tuition figures for the High School are set forth as follows:

YEAR	STATE CERTIFIED TUITION	DOE BUDGET TUITION (This DOE software calculation does not include bond interest cost)
2007-08	$ 15,990.00	$ 13,704.00
2008-09	$ 17,957.00	$ 13,893.00
2009-10	$ 17,965.00	$ 14,126.00
2010-11	$ 17,363.00	$ 14,691.00
2011-12	$ 16,564.00	$ 16,107.00
2012-13	$ 15,900.00	$ 15,264.00
2013-14	N/A	$ 14,685.00
2014-15	N/A	$ 14,291.00

7. Jamesburg agrees to budget and pay to Monroe the Current Indebtedness on the terms as set forth in this Agreement until the Current Indebtedness is satisfied. Jamesburg shall pay $14,291.00 per student for 267 students for a total payment of $3,815,697 each school year even if Monroe's estimated tuition rate and/or Jamesburg's estimated number of students attending the High School in any school year is projected at a lesser amount. Monroe shall apply any difference between the $3,815,697 and the actual total tuition amount owed by Jamesburg to Monroe, as certified by the state from the A4-1/A4-2 tuition calculation, to the Current Indebtedness. In the event the estimated per pupil tuition rate is higher than $14,291.00 in any school year and/or in the event the estimated number of students attending the High School in any school year is higher than 267 students, the total amount that Jamesburg shall pay to Monroe as estimated tuition for that school year shall be calculated based upon these higher figures.

8. As acknowledged that Monroe continues to expand its housing capacity and continues to grow its population and Jamesburg does not have the capacity for development and that Jamesburg's enrollment has remained constant other than for normal fluctuations in household size, Monroe shall not charge Jamesburg and Jamesburg shall not be responsible for any further debt services associated with the construction of a new high school, or additions or renovations to the existing High School.

9. In consideration of Jamesburg's approval and execution of this Agreement, Monroe will voluntarily dismiss its Petition of Appeal without costs against any party but Monroe may re-file its Petition of Appeal without regard to any Statute of Limitations or time limitations under any rules or regulations or otherwise and no defense will be raised by Jamesburg that the reassertion of the claim is untimely for any of the years in which tuition is past due now or in the future.

10. This Agreement shall not become effective and enforceable until: (1) Jamesburg and Monroe approve this Agreement by resolution; and (2) the Agreement is signed by both parties. Once effective, the Agreement shall continue in full force and effect until Jamesburg pays the total Current Indebtedness to Monroe, at which time the Agreement shall expire.

11. This Agreement shall be made part of an Order of the Commissioner of Education dismissing the Petition of Appeal and Counterclaim.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Parties, by their duly authorized representatives, have executed this Agreement on the date shown by their signatures below.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF WEST LONG BRANCH, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

This matter arose out of a decision by the respondent Board to reassign petitioner from her title of school counselor and substance awareness coordinator to the title of health and physical education teacher. Shortly after the reassignment, the school district filed tenure charges against petitioner, and she was ultimately dismissed. In the instant case, petitioner asserted that her reassignment prior to the filing of tenure charges was improper, and that – her subsequent dismissal notwithstanding – the Commissioner must correct the district's error because of its public importance and because it is a mistake that is "capable of repetition yet might evade review" (Brady v. Department of Personnel, 149 N.J. 244 [1997]). The Board filed a motion for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner was hired by the Board in 1997 and holds an instructional certificate with endorsement as a teacher of health and physical education, and an educational services certificate with endorsements as a substance awareness coordinator and school counselor; petitioner acquired tenure in both titles; in September 2012, petitioner was reassigned from her post as school counselor and substance awareness coordinator to the position of health and physical education teacher – a position she previously held; tenure charges of unbecoming conduct were filed in November 2012 and subsequently sustained; petitioner's reliance on Brady, supra, for her assertion that the Board's decision to reassign her was improper and must be reviewed is inapposite; tenure and seniority questions tend to be fact-sensitive; the transfer between titles in this case was associated with the subsequent filing of tenure charges; and with petitioner's removal following the sustainment of tenure charges, further exploration of the issues is moot. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the case.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ 's determination that the issues raised by the petitioner are moot. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this case, and the petition was dismissed.

RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

In her exceptions, the petitioner reiterates the arguments that were made below contending that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously determined that the petition should be dismissed as moot. The petitioner asserts that in reaching his decision, the ALJ confuses tenure-seniority issues that involve movement within a certificate with transfers of personnel between different certificates. The petitioner stresses that the Commissioner should decide this matter, despite the fact that the petitioner lost her tenure and was dismissed after the culmination of tenure charges, because the issue raised by the petitioner is of extreme importance and will arise again if it is not properly addressed.

Upon the review of the record, the Commissioner is in accord with the ALJ's conclusion – for the reasons set forth in the Initial Decision – that the issues raised by the petitioner are moot. Despite the petitioner's assertion to the contrary, the arguments made by the petitioner were thoroughly considered and discussed by the ALJ in rendering the specific determinations outlined in the Initial Decision. Accordingly, the petition is hereby dismissed as moot.

Record Closed: October 30, 2014 Decided: December 9, 2014

BEFORE SOLOMON A. METZGER, ALJ t/a:

This matter arises out of a decision by the Board of Education of West Long Branch to reassign petitioner from her title of school counselor and substance awareness coordinator to the title of health and physical education teacher. Soon thereafter tenure charges were filed and petitioner was ultimately dismissed. Petitioner asserts that her reassignment was improper and the subsequent removal notwithstanding, the Commissioner of Education must correct the error. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. The district has now filed a motion for summary decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5; Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Amer., 142 N.J. 520 (1995).

The substantive facts are undisputed. Petitioner commenced employment with the district in September 1987. She holds an instructional certificate with an endorsement as a teacher of health and physical education and an educational services certificate with endorsements as a substance awareness coordinator and a school counselor. Petitioner acquired tenure in each of these titles. By majority vote of the Board of Education effective in September 2012, petitioner was reassigned from her position of school counselor and substance awareness coordinator to the position of health and physical education teacher, a position she previously held. Compensation remained the same. In November 2012, tenure charges were filed against petitioner alleging conduct unbecoming a public employee. The charges were sustained in July 2013 following an arbitration proceeding. An appeal to the Law Division failed and no further appeals have been filed. This is the substance of the record.

Petitioner maintains that the decision to reassign her to a title outside of her educational services certificate was improper and must be reviewed because of its public importance and because it is a wrong "capable of repetition yet may evade review," relying primarily on Brady v. Dep't of Personnel, 149 N.J. 244 (1997); Finkel v. Twp. of Hopewell, 434 N.J. Super. 303 (App. Div. 2013). These precedents are inapposite.

A final resolution having been achieved concerning petitioner's removal, further exploration of issues would generally be foreclosed as moot. The decisions cited by petitioner reflect exceptions in which the instructive value of a ruling outweighs policy considerations, such as judicial economy, that underlay mootness doctrine. Brady involved access to civil-service testing materials by a police officer questioning the results of a promotional exam. The desired records were produced before the issue reached the Supreme Court, but the Court reasoned that enunciating principles by which to measure the levels of access due would assist the Department of Personnel as it evaluated such questions in the future. Finkel involved a non-binding referendum that had already been held. The Court reached the underlying issues to explain statutory ambiguities that might continue to trouble the process. Our own matter raises no broad policy question. Petitioner believes that the Commissioner must make a ruling because her circumstance is not resolved by the decision in Carpenito v. Board of Education of Rumson, 322 N.J. Super. 522 (App. Div. 1999). There the court held that managerial prerogative allowed for the transfer of a tenured teacher to other endorsements within an instructional certificate. The instant matter involves movement across certificates.

Of course, districts may in the future assign staff members between educational services and instructional certificates and then assign them back before the matters can be adjudicated. This is a nuance and nothing in the record suggests it as an ongoing problem. Moreover, tenure and seniority questions tend to be fact-sensitive. The instant transfer did not arise in a vacuum; it is associated with the tenure charges that followed. Finally, it strains to suggest as petitioner does, that the issue may recur for her, as she might be rehired, attain tenure and again face reassignment. The standard is not whether some benefit may be achieved by exploring untreated questions in moot cases. Rather, there must be some reasonable likelihood that the benefit will eclipse the important interests of repose.

Based on the foregoing, the district's summary-decision motion is granted and this matter is dismissed.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." The City of Elizabeth ["Board" or "Petitioner"], pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq., certified tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education against Respondent Carson Steltz. The Board charged the Respondent with "incapacity and/or other just cause, including, but not limited to, chronic absenteeism, constituting cause for dismissal and/or reduction in salary...." The Respondent filed an Answer in response to the charges.

On October 17, 2014, I received notice from M. Kathleen Duncan, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, New Jersey Department of Education, that this matter was referred to me pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. Hearing dates were scheduled for November 12 and 18, 2014. On November 12, 2014, the hearing officially commenced. Mr. Geppert was present on behalf of the Petitioner. Attorneys Nicholas Poberezhsky and Timothy Smith from the law offices of Caruso, Smith, and Picini were present on behalf of the Respondent. Although the hearing officially commenced, the parties held settlement discussions in lieu of proceeding on the record. The parties requested that the first day of hearing be adjourned in order to permit them to continue with their settlement discussions.

On November 17, 2014, the parties' attorneys informed me that a settlement agreement had been drafted, but remained unsigned. They requested, and I granted, a postponement of the November 18th hearing. On November 18, 2014, I conducted a telephone conference with Counsel to confirm that the parties were still attempting to reach a settlement. On November 25, 2014, Mr. Geppert informed me that the settlement agreement remained unsigned. Mr. Poberezhsky did not object to scheduling a hearing date in December in the event that the parties were unable to execute a settlement agreement.

On December 1, 2014, I inquired into the status of the parties' settlement discussions. On December 2, 2014, I conducted a telephone conference with Mr. Geppert and Mr. Poberezhsky who agreed to schedule the hearing for Wednesday, December 17, 2014, 10:00 a.m. at Mr. Geppert's office in Whippany. On December 2, 2014, with the consent of the parties' attorneys, I requested an extension of time due to the fact that the parties had yet to execute a settlement agreement. Director Duncan granted my request later that day.

On December 4, 2014, Mr. Geppert wrote the following e-mail to me, a copy of which was sent to Mr. Poberezhsky and Mr. Smith:

> In the event Mr. Steltz does not attend the trial on December 17, we may need to proceed simply as an ex parte hearing by the District.

I requested Mr. Poberezhsky to respond to Mr. Geppert's e-mail.

On December 9, 2014, Mr. Poberezhsky informed me of the following: (1) he has been unable to make contact with the Respondent; (2) he does not know whether the Respondent is aware that the hearing has been rescheduled for December 17th; and (3) his office is in the process of withdrawing its representation of the Respondent. That day, I provided an update on this matter to Director Duncan. The letter expressly indicated that the hearing remained scheduled for Wednesday, December 17, 2014, 10:00 a.m. at the law offices of Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein and Celso located at 100 South Jefferson Road, Suite 200, in Whippany, New Jersey. A copy of the letter was sent to the parties attorneys. In addition, a copy was sent to Mr. Steltz's last known address via first-class and certified mail. The U.S. Post Office attempted to deliver the certified mail on December 12, 17, and 27, 2014, but an authorized recipient was not available to accept service. The post office left a notice at the address. The Post Office returned the certified letter to me as "unclaimed". To date, the letter that I sent to Mr. Steltz via first-class mail has not been returned to me as undeliverable.

On December 11, 2014, Mr. Poberezhsky wrote the following letter to me:

> Please accept the instant correspondence as a request to withdraw as counsel of record, representing Respondent Carson Steltz, in the above-captioned matter. This request is made on the basis of Mr. Steltz's lack of communication and cooperation with our office. Despite our best efforts, we have not been able to reach him since we > appeared for the hearing on November 12, 2014. His lack of cooperation has simply made it impossible for us to effectively represent him in this proceeding.

> For the record, I advised Mr. Steltz, through notice issued to him by certified mail, that the hearing was rescheduled for December 17, 2014, at 10:00 a.m. at the law office of Schwartz, Simon, Edelstein & Celso, LLP. I notified him that if he fails to appear at the hearing, Petitioner intends, and is entitled to, conduct the hearing ex parte. I also advised him of the potential ramifications in the event that the tenure charges are sustained.
> Please provide our office with a response to this request at your earliest convenience. Thank you for your time and consideration in this regard.

I granted Mr. Poberezhsky's request based upon the representations he made in his letter.

The hearing continued on December 17, 2014. A stenographic recording of the proceedings was taken. The Petitioner appeared with Counsel. The Respondent did not appear.

Tenure hearings are subject to the American Arbitration Association's Labor Arbitration Rules. Rule 26 provides:

> Unless the law provides to the contrary, the arbitration may proceed in the absence of any party or representative who, after due notice, fails to be present or fails to obtain a postponement. An award shall not be made solely on the default of a party. The arbitrator shall require the other party to submit such evidence as may be required for the making of an award.

During the proceedings, the parties were given the opportunity to argue orally, examine and cross-examine witnesses and submit documentary evidence into the record. Sworn testimony was received from Bartolomeo Candelino – Principal at Joseph Battin School No. 4; Belinda Abruzzese – Principal at Madison Monroe School No. 16; and Arlene Frances Campbell – Principal at Ronald Reagan Academy School. The Petitioner submitted a post-hearing brief on December 23, 2014. Director Duncan granted an extension of time until February 2, 2015 to issue this Decision.

RELEVANT PROVISIONS OF THE NEW JERSEY STATUTES

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Dismissal and reduction in compensation of persons under tenure in public school system

No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation,

(a) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state, or

(b) if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency as a supervisor, teacher or in any other teaching capacity in the Marie H. Katzenbach school for the deaf, or in any other educational institution conducted under the supervision of the commissioner;

except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to this subarticle, by the commissioner, or a person appointed by him to act in his behalf, after a written charge or charges, of the cause or causes of complaint, shall have been preferred against such person, signed by the person or persons making the same, who may or may not be a member or members of a board of education, and filed and proceeded upon as in this subarticle provided.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the reduction of the number of any such persons holding such offices, positions or employments under the conditions and with the effect provided by law.

BACKGROUND

The Board filed tenure charges against the Respondent. The written charges were sworn to under oath by School Superintendent Olga Hugelmeyer on July 28, 2014:

> I, Olga Hugelmeyer, of full age and capacity, having been duly sworn by the undersigned authority, depose and say as follows:
>
> I am employed by the Elizabeth Board of Education (the "Board") as its Superintendent. The Board maintains administrative offices at 500 North Broad Street, Elizabeth, New Jersey 07028. I am charged with the general oversight of the school district and all employees serving therein. During all times relevant herein, Carson Steltz ("Mr. Steltz" or "Respondent") has been employed by the Board as a teacher. Mr. Steltz is currently tenured pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.
> I am fully familiar with all of the facts and circumstances regarding the Sworn Tenure Charges against Mr. Steltz. I have personally reviewed the accompanying Sworn Statement of Evidence. I hereby charge Carson Steltz with incapacity and/or other just cause, including, but not limited to, chronic absenteeism, constituting cause for dismissal and/or reduction in salary, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 and 18A:6-10 et seq., as follows:

BACKGROUND INFORMATION COMMON TO ALL CHARGES

> Mr. Steltz was hired by the Board on September 10, 2004 as a teacher. Mr. Steltz subsequently attained tenured in his position.

During the ensuing years, Mr. Steltz has received numerous warnings about his poor attendance and the potential consequences:

On March 19, 2010, George Washington School Principal Belinda Abruzzese recommended that Mr. Steltz's increment and salary adjustment be withheld for the 2010-2011 school year due to poor attendance.

On March 23, 2011, Ronald Reagan Academy School Principal Arlene Campbell wrote to Mr. Steltz informing him that he had exhausted his sick day allotment for the year and any further absence would be subject to payroll deduction.

On February 29, 2012, Battin School Principal Ben Candelino wrote to Mr. Steltz reminding him that he had already been absent for 23 days during that school year and urging Steltz to improve his attendance.

On June 28, 2012, the Board of Education passed a Resolution to withhold Mr. Steltz's increment and salary adjustment for the 2012-2013 school year for reasons of poor attendance.

On October 2, 2012, then Assistant Superintendent, Olga Hugelmeyer, wrote to Mr. Steltz confirming that his increment and salary adjustment would be withheld for the 2012-2013 school year due to poopr attendance.

In each year of his employment, through the present date, Mr. Steltz entered contracts of employment with the District by which, among other things, he ageed to "faithfully do and perform (his/her) duties . . . and to observe and enforce the rules prescribed for governance of the schools by the Elizabeth Board of Education."

Elizabeth Board of Education Policy No. 4151/4251, Attendance Patterns, expressly states, among other things, "that the regular presence of assigned certified and non-certified personnel is vital to the success of the district's educational program. Consistent absenteeism or tardiness is subject to disciplinary action."

Elizabeth Board of Education Regulation No. 4151/4251, Staff Attendance Improvement Plan, expressly states, among other things, "Daily attendance is essential in contributing to the success of our District's Mission Statement. . . . The absence of any Elizabeth Public School employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedules of all District operations."

Elizabeth Board of Education Policy No. 4119.3, Duties, expressly states, among other things, "Each employee shall comply with all requirements of the law, and shall perform all duties commonly performed in his/her position." Elizabeth Board of Education Regulation No. 4119.3, Duties, expressly states, among other things, "All teachers shall be in their classrooms and prepared for work at the start of the work day."

The job description for Respondent's position, Teacher, expressly states, among other things, "the teacher is responsible for the effective performance" of her assigned duties and responsibilities (emphasis supplied).

CHARGE I
(CHRONIC ABSENTEEISM)

Carson Steltz has displayed chronically poor attendance during the past seven (7) years of his employment and has been absent 560.55 days, which has adversely affected the proper operation of the school. These acts and omissions, more specifically set forth below, constitute just cause for immediate dismissal due to chronic absenteeism:

During the time period from July 1, 2007 through June 30, 2008, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 28 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral and 24-sick, not including vacation days.

Count 2

During the time period from July 1, 2008 through June 30, 2009, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 11.5 days: 1-personal; and 10.5-sick, not including vacation days.

Count 3

During the time period from July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 34.05 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1 funeral, 29.25-sick; 0.5-other and 0.3 tardy, not including vacation days.

Count 4

During the time period from July 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 33 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral; 12.25-sick and 16.75-other, not including vacation days.

Count 5

During the time period from July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2012, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 85 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral 12-sick; and 69-other, not including vacation days.

Count 6

During the time period from July 1, 2012 through June 30, 2013, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 186 days: 186-other, not including vacation days.

During the time period from July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014, Mr. Steltz was absent from his post on at least 183 days: 183-other, not including vacation days.

The foregoing acts and omissions by Carson Steltz, individually and cumulatively, constitute chronic absenteeism. Over the last seven (7) years, Mr. Steltz has been absent from his post for a total of 560.55 days; not including any bereavement or vacation days. His ongoing failure to fulfill his assigned duties on these days has adversely affected the operation of the school district, and shows no signs of abating. The Board, as a public employer charged with serving the community should no longer have to be burdened by such misfeasance. Immediate dismissal is fully warranted.

(INCAPACITY)

> The foregoing Background Information, Charge, specific counts and the facts alleged therein are incorporated by reference as if fully set forth herein. The acts and omissions set forth therein, constitute incapacity. By virtue of the condition or conditions causing and/or associated with Respondent's absences, he has been effectively rendered incapable of performing his assigned duties, therefore requiring immediate termination from his tenured position. There is simply no meaningful accommodation to be made for an employee who persistently is unable to report to work over a protracted period of time. Immediate dismissal is the only meaningful remedy and is fully warranted here.

On September 18, 2014, the Board determined by a unanimous vote during "that there was probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charges and that the Sworn Tenure Charges are sufficient, if credited, to warrant dismissal and/or reduction of salary of Carson Steltz." The Board served the information upon the Respondent.

On September 22, 2014, the Board filed with the Commissioner of the Department of Education the written tenure charges and supporting evidence against the Respondent. On October 7, 2014, the Respondent, through his attorney, submitted an Answer to the charges.

On November 5, 2012, the matter was referred to me pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012, c. 26. The arbitration proceedings ensued.

The Board established the following facts during the arbitration proceedings.[1]

The Respondent is a tenured employee of the Petitioner. The Respondent has been continuously employed by Petitioner since the 2004-2005 school year. His most recent assignment was as a Math teacher at the Joseph Battin School No. 4 during the 2011-2012 school year. The Respondent did not report for duty for the entirety of the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years; and has not reported for duty up through the current date during the 2014-2015 school year.

The Board has established policies and procedures in place that require specific competencies and behaviors of teachers with respect to attendance:

1. Board Policy No. 4119.3, Duties, expressly states, among other things, "Each employee shall comply with all requirements of the law, and shall perform all duties commonly performed in his/her position." Elizabeth Board of Education Regulation No. 4119.3, Duties, expressly states, among other things, "All teachers shall be in their classrooms and prepared for work at the start of the work day." [Exs. P-16 & 17].

2. Board Policy No. 4151/4251, Attendance Patterns, expressly states, among other things, "that the regular presence of assigned certified and non-certified personnel is vital to the success of the district's educational program. Consistent absenteeism or tardiness is subject to disciplinary action." [Ex. P.14].

[1] The Petitioner submitted proposed findings of fact as part of its post-hearing brief. I have adopted the proposed findings as modified herein.

3. Board Regulation No. 4151/4251, Staff Attendance Improvement Plan, expressly states, among other things, "Daily attendance is essential in contributing to the success of our District's Mission Statement. . . . The absence of any Elizabeth Public School employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedules of all District operations." [Ex. P-15].

The collective bargaining agreement between the Board and the Elizabeth Education Association, the agreement that governs the relationship between Respondent and the Board, provides, in pertinent part, that the absence of any employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedule of all District operations. [Ex. P-19].

Each year the Board and Respondent entered into an Employment Contract, which was in effect from September 1st through June 30th for each school year. In each employment contract, Respondent agreed to "faithfully do and perform (his/her) duties...and to observe and enforce the rules prescribed for governance of the schools by the Elizabeth Board of Education." [Ex. P-21].

The Respondent has been absent from his teaching duties for 560.55 days since the 2007-2008 school year:

1. From July 1, 2007 through June 30, 2008, the Respondent was absent from his post for 28 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral and 24-sick, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-1].

2. From July 1, 2008 through June 30, 2009, the Respondent was absent for 11.5 days: 1-personal; and 10.5-sick, not including vacation days. [Ex. P- 2].

3. From July 1, 2009 through June 30, 2010, the Respondent was absent 34.05 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1 funeral, 29.25-sick; 0.5-other and 0.3 tardy, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-3].

4. During the time period from July 1, 2010 through June 30, 2011, the Respondent was absent 33 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral; 12.25-sick and 16.75-other, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-4].

5. During the time period from July 1, 2011 through June 30, 2012, the Respondent was absent 85 days: 1-family illness; 2-personal; 1-funeral 12-sick; and 69-other, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-5].

6. During the time period from July 1, 2012 through June 30, 2013, the Respondent was absent 186 days: 186-other, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-6].

7. During the time period from July 1, 2013 through June 30, 2014 the Respondent was absent 183 days: 183-other, not including vacation days. [Ex. P-7].

The Board progressively disciplined the Respondent as a result of his absences. The Respondent received multiple written warnings regarding his excessive absenteeism. These included, but were not limited to:

1. A March 19, 2010 memorandum from Belinda Abruzzese, Principal of George Washington School No. 1. [Ex. P-8].

2. A March 23, 2011 memorandum from Arlene Campbell, Principal of Ronald Reagan Academy School No. 30 (Respondent was specifically advised that he had used his full allotment of sick days and would be subject to payroll deduction.) [Ex. P-9].

During the 2011-2012 school year, Bartolomeo Candelino, then-Principal of the Joseph Battin School No. 4, advised the Respondent that, as of February 29, 2012, he had been absent for twenty three (23) days and that "Joseph Battin School #4 relies on all faculty/staff members to come to work each day in order to provide/support meaningful learning experiences that our students deserve. While we can hire substitutes or utilize teacher coverage, in your absence, your particular contributions are missed by ours students." [Ex. P-10]. Despite said warning, the Respondent was subsequently absent for sixty-two (62) days during that school year.

As a result of the Respondent's absences, both Principal Abbruzese and Principal Candelino recommended that the Respondent be subject to an increment withholding. [Exs. P-8 & P-9]. On June 28, 2012, the Board voted in favor of withholding the Respondent's increment and salary adjustment for the 2012-2013 school year. [Ex. P-12].

Sworn testimony was received from Bartolomeo Candelino – Principal at Joseph Battin School No. 4; Belinda Abruzzese – Principal at Madison Monroe School No. 16; and Arlene Frances Campbell – Principal at Ronald Reagan Academy School.[2] These individuals testified to the Respondent's absences at the time that the Respondent taught at their respective school buildings. They testified to the progressive discipline described above. They also testified that the Respondent's excessive absences had a negative impact upon the continuity of instruction, the Board's budget due to the cost of hiring substitutes at $119 per diem, the overall running of the schools, and the morale of the other teachers who must cover the Respondent's classes when substitutes cannot be obtained. [T:20-21, 25-27, 37-40, 42, 47-48]. Candelino testified that the Respondent's absences since the 2007-2008 school year has cost the Board approximately $67,000 for substitute teachers. [Ex. P-20]. He indicated that based upon the Respondent's attendance records that he has "never seen anything as poor or showing a lack of respect for himself and for the people he works for, and the students." [T:33].

[2] Candelino's testimony is located from T.12-35. Abruzzese's from T.35-40 and Campbell's from T.40-48

The Board's Position

The Board provides the following legal arguments in its post-hearing brief:

THE BOARD HAS PROVEN BY THE PREPONDERANCE OF CREDIBLE EVIDENCE THAT RESPONDENT IS GUILTY OF CHRONIC ABSENTEEISM, INCAPACITY AND/OR OTHER JUST CAUSE WARRANTING HIS DISMISSAL FROM HIS TENURED POSITION

This case is a clear one: it is clear that Respondent was absent for 560.55 days over the last seven school years. The record confirms that the Board has proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Respondent's attendance, or lack thereof; constitutes sufficient cause for dismissal. The relevant statute states:

> No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation . . .if he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state . . . except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

Despite multiple written warnings, spanning three school years, and clearly established procedures, Respondent was chronically/excessively absent.

Burden of Proof

In tenure proceedings, the Board has the burden of establishing the allegations supporting the charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence. See In re Polk License Revocation, 90 N.J. 550, 560 (1982); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Marrero, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 104, 106 (1996); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Graceffo, 2000 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 365, *5 (2000), aff'd and modified 2001 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 805 (St. Bd.). "Preponderance is the greater weight of credible evidence in the case, not necessarily dependent on the number of witnesses, but having the greater convincing power." Id. at *35 citing State v. Lewis, 67 N.J. 47, 49 (1975).

The New Jersey Model Civil Jury Charge 1.12I states, "To sustain the burden, the evidence supporting the claim must weigh heavier and be more persuasive...than the contrary evidence. It makes no difference if the heavier weight is small in amount." In other words, if the evidence in support of and against the charges is equally balanced on the scales of justice, where the Board adds so much as the weight of a feather to its proofs, the Board has carried its burden by a preponderance of the evidence. Proof "need not have the attribute of certainty, but it must be well founded in reason and logic..." Lesniewski v. W.B. Furze Corp., 308 N.J.Super. 270, 279 (App.Div. 1998) quoting Lister v. J.B. Eurell Co., 234 N.J.Super. 64, 72 (App. Div. 1989). An agency's finding of fact will be accepted if supported by substantial credible evidence. See Quinlan v. Bd. of Ed. of No. Bergen Twp., 73 N.J.Super. 40, 46-47 (App. Div. 1962); Lesniewski v. W.B. Furze Corp., supra, 308 N.J.Super. at 279. Thus, findings are "considered binding on appeal when supported by adequate, substantial and credible evidence." Rova Farms Resort v. Investors Ins. Co., 65 N.J. 474, 484 (1974).

General Legal Precedent on Excessive Absenteeism

In his Answer to the Tenure Charges, Respondent avers that his absenteeism has been due to chronic medical issues, particularly, several surgeries on his left knee. A review of the medical records confirms that Respondent did indeed suffer some maladies. Respondent essentially asks the tribunal to ignore the absences because of their alleged "legitimacy". However, the weight of legal precedent militates against such an outcome.

Chronic or excessive absenteeism may warrant removal even when the absences have been excused or caused by legitimate medical reasons such as long-term poor health, or work related injuries. See State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Pellechio, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 267 (1992). This may be the case even when legitimate reasons, such as long-term health issues, caused the absences. Ibid. (Much like the Respondent herein, Pellechio received multiple warnings about his attendance over several years, including a threat to have his increment withheld, yet his attendance did not improve.) Also see I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Marsden, OAL Docket No. EDU 1188-84, Initial Decision (1985), adopted Comm'r (October 10, 1985); Kelsey v. Bd. of Educ. of the City of Trenton, 1989 S.L.D. 1622; State-Operated School District of Newark v. Gillespie, OAL Docket No. EDU 3399-03 (2011)(stating "[c]learly, the mere fact that the absences were excused does not obviate the possibility that the teacher may be dismissed for excessive absenteeism"); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Castro, 2012 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXIS 923, *13 (App. Div. 2012); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Randi True, Willingboro Board of Education, 2011 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 839 (Commissioner's Decision). Randi True, like the Respondent herein, was granted multiple leaves of absence for extended periods of time. Yet, both an Administrative Law Judge and the Commissioner sustained tenure charges for chronic absenteeism, among other infractions.

The point at which absenteeism is so chronic as to warrant dismissal falls within the prerogative and discretionary authority of the local board of education. See I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Sheets, 1980 S.L.D. 1536, rev'g 1979 S.L.D. 790; Pellechio, supra.

The underlying rationale for the dismissal of teachers for absenteeism is that teachers must be in the classroom for purposes of instructional continuity, even in the face of medical problems:

> The benefit of regular classroom instruction is lost and cannot be entirely regained, even by extra effort, when the regular teacher returns to the classroom. Consequently, many pupils who do not have the benefit of their regular classroom teacher frequently experience great difficulty in achieving the maximum benefit of schooling. . . . The entire process of education requires a regular continuity of instruction with a teacher directing the classroom activities and learning experiences in order to reach the goal of maximum educational benefit for each individual pupil. The regular contact of the pupils with their assigned teacher is vital to this process.

Respondent has cited his teacher observation reports, in an effort to establish that satisfactory performance outweighs excessive absenteeism, and therefore he should retain his position. (P-28, P-30, P-31) However, legal precedent clearly establishes that "[E]ven if a teacher's performance in the classroom is sufficient . . . the absences may nevertheless be considered as material to the issue and can justify removal of the teacher." In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jeanne Cook, Old Bridge Board of Education, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 8568-02 AGENCY DKT. NO. 374 11/02; citing Trautwein v. Bd. of Educ. of Bound Brook, 1980 S.L.D. 1539, certif. denied, 84 N.J. 469 (1980); In Re the Tenure Hearing of Sheets, supra.

Arbitration Decisions

Arbitrators have repeatedly taken the same position as Administrative Law Judges and the Commissioner that excessive absenteeism is actionable even if the absences are "justified." As stated by Elkouri and Elkouri: "The right to terminate employees for excessive absences, even where they are caused by illness, is generally recognized by arbitrators." How Arbitration Works, 822 (6th Ed.). That is because:

> [a]t some point the employer must be able to terminate the services of an employee who is unable to work more than part time, for whatever reason. Efficiency and the ability to compete can hardly be maintained if employees cannot be depended upon to report for work with reasonable regularity. Numerous other arbitrators have also upheld terminations involving frequent and extended absences due to illness.

Thus, "if an employee has demonstrated over a long period of time an inability due to chronic bad health or proneness to injury to maintain an acceptable attendance record, an employer is justified in terminating the relationship.

particularly where it has sought through counseling and warnings to obtain an improvement in attendance." Elkouri at 823 citing Louisville Water Co., 77 LA 1049 (Volz, 1981).

Based upon this well-established precedent, Respondent should be dismissed from his position.

Substantive Standards of Proof

In order to terminate a tenured employee for chronic absenteeism, the Board must demonstrate that there was consideration of:

> (1) the particular circumstances of the absences and not merely the number of the absences;
> (2) the impact that the absences had on the continuity of instruction during the period of time the absences occurred, not merely after the fact; and
> (3) that there be some warning given to the employee that his or supervisors were dissatisfied with the pattern of absences.

I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Velez, School District of Hudson County Schools of Technology, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3255-05 (2006), aff'd C.D. (April 27, 2006); In Re White, 92 NJAR 2d (EDU) 157, 161. A review of these factors based upon the numerous documents presented at trial reveals that the Board has satisfied its burden in this regard.

1. The Board has considered the circumstances of Respondent's absences.

The Respondent was issued a memorandum on March 23, 2011 from Ronald Reagan Academy Principal Arlene Campbell in which Respondent was notified that he had exceeded his annual allotment of sick days and would be subject to payroll deduction. (P-9). In that Memorandum, Campbell specifically reminded Respondent that she understood that all of Respondent's absences "may be due to injury or sickness."

The Respondent was issued a memorandum on February 29, 2012 in which Joseph Battin School Principal Ben

Candelino warned Respondent about his poor attendance. Candelino, like Campbell before him, understood that all of Respondent's absences "may be due to injury or sickness." Moreover, Candelino expressed his optimism that Respondent would improve his attendance. (P-10)

As was the case in Randi True, supra, the Petitioner herein repeatedly granted several leaves of absence in an effort to accommodate the Respondent as he attended to his medical problems. (P-25)

A tenured employee may be dismissed when the underlying reasons for the absenteeism indicate there is a likelihood that the conduct will continue in the future. See Velez, supra, citing State-Operated School District of Jersey City v. Pellecchio, supra. Given that Respondent's attendance has not improved over the course of his employment (i.e., the last seven school years), despite repeated warnings and an increment withholding, it is reasonable for the Board to conclude that this conduct is likely to continue in the future.

2. The Board has considered the impact of Respondent's absences.

Respondent's absences have had a negative impact on the efficiency and effectiveness of the operation of those schools to which he has been assigned. Since the commencement of the 2007-2008 school year through the end of the 2013-2014 school year, the Petitioner has been compelled to repeatedly hire substitutes, at a total cost of $67,056.50. (P-20) Moreover, Respondent's frequent absences prevent the satisfactory performance of the duties of his position. Board Regulation 4119.3 (Duties) specifically states that "All teachers shall be in their classrooms and prepared for work at the start of the work day." (P-16) In the same vein, Board Regulation 4151 (Staff Attendance Improvement Plan), clearly states "The absence of any Elizabeth Public School employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedules of all District operations." (P-15)

In I/M/O/ Randi True, supra, the ALJ noted that the petitioning board need not "point to specific instances or examples supporting its contention; rather, it need only demonstrate the likely result of the absences." Also, I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Alicia Dugan, Jersey City School District, OAL DKT. No. EDU 12243-11N (2012) (affirmed by Commissioner, June 14, 2012); the mere fact that a teacher was absent for 197 days over a six-year period was sufficient to infer a negative impact on students.

In testimony before the arbitrator, George Washington School Principal Belinda Abruzzese specifically noted the inherent difficulties of hiring substitutes and the negative impact on instructional continuity; and that Respondent should be dismissed.

Also in testimony before the arbitrator, Ronald Reagan Elementary School Principal Arlene Campbell noted the manner in which chronic absenteeism among teaching staff is "academically disruptive" to students; and that Respondent should be dismissed.

Finally, in testimony before the arbitrator, Joseph Battin School Principal Bartolomeo Candelino noted that not only was the Respondent unavailable for observation, but the frequent absenteeism negatively impacted the "continuity of instruction" for students. According to Candelino, the morale of the remaining staff was affected because they had to sacrifice their own preparation periods to cover Respondent's classes. Moreover, Respondent's absenteeism showed a lack of respect for the students; and that Respondent should be dismissed.

3. Respondent has been repeatedly warned, in writing, of his unacceptable attendance and potential consequences.

As noted earlier, Respondent has been subject to three written warnings for attendance, the last of which resulted in an increment withholding by the Board of Education for the 2012-2013 school year. (P-8 through P-10) Nonetheless, Respondent has not demonstrated any effort to improve his chronic absenteeism; instead the absenteeism worsened as it reached two entire school years (2012-2013 and 2013-2014).

As a member of the Elizabeth Education Association, Respondent is subject to the terms and conditions of a collective bargaining agreement between the Petitioner and the Association. The Agreement clearly warns Respondent, and all other members of the bargaining unit, that poor attendance may subject an employee to disciplinary action. (P-19)

> The absence of any Elizabeth Public School employee adversely affects the sequence of instruction, as well as disrupts the daily work schedules of all District operations.

Respondent works under a Job Description that includes the following responsibilities:

> Meets and instructs assigned classes in locations and at times designated.
>
> Continues the educational process by being available to students and parents for education-related purposes.
>
> Performs all other assigned duties deemed necessary and essential by the Superintendent of Schools or his designee. (P-22)
> Respondent is subject to Board Policy 4117.52 (Dismissal/Suspension), which grants Petitioner the authority to challenge the continued employment of any employee who is "incapable of performing" his or her duties. (P-18)

Finally, Board Policy 4151/4251 Attendance Patterns, governs all employees and clearly states "Consistent absenteeism or tardiness is unacceptable and subject to disciplinary action." See also, I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Alicia Dugan, supra, where employee was given several warnings regarding where attendance, but continued to exhibit the same behavior.

In the present case, Respondent's more than 500 absences over the course of a 7-year period is far more egregious. Moreover, Respondent has been given numerous warnings concerning his chronic absences, yet has failed to rectify his pattern of poor attendance. These facts warrant his dismissal.

Incapacity

It is well settled that chronic and excessive absenteeism constitutes not only unbecoming conduct and other just cause, but also incapacity, such as to amount to just cause for removal. In re Tenure Hearing of Kacprowicz, 93 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 147, 151 (citing Trenton Bd. of Educ. v. Williamson, OAL Dkt. EDU 7335-85 (Apr. 14, 1986), aff'd, Comm'r (May 28, 1986); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Frances Metallo, Union City School District, Commissioner, May 12, 2003. (Teacher absent for 650 days in a six year period); Camden City Board of Education v. Florence Rucker, 94 N.J.AR. 2d (EDU) 190, affirmed by State Board of Education, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 350 (Teacher absent for 263 days in four-year period.)

Respondent suggested in his Answer that the charge of incapacity is inappropriate because he has established that his absenteeism is justified for medical reasons. However, "[i]ncapacity" as identified in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 relates to the inability to perform a position, irrespective of the cause of the inability to work. (at 498). In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Phyllis Stanley, Freehold Regional Board of Education, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 495, 498.

More recently, arbitrators have had occasion to consider incapacity for chronic absenteeism under the new arbitration system implemented pursuant to the New Jersey TEACH Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117, et. seq. Though the process of adjudication has changed, the end results (dismissal of the employee) are the same. In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Jason Levine, Jersey City School District, (Agency No. 286-9/12; Lowitt, 2012), the teacher had chronic medical issues, yet the arbitrator found that a teacher "has a duty to be in the classroom, ready to teach. . .Mr. Levine is culpable of Incapacity, since he was not in the classroom, ready to teach, on even a semi-regular basis."

A similar result was found In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lenore Francis, Jersey City Board of Education, (Agency No. 285-9/12; DeTreux, 2013), where a teacher had been absent for approximately 350 days in a 10-year period. After reciting the litany of problems faced by Francis, the arbitrator (who ultimately sustained the charge of incapacity) framed the issue thusly:

> "The issue is not whether Francis experienced personal injuries and events that forced her to miss work. The issue is whether the District must continue to employ a teacher who misses significant amounts of work throughout the school year."

See also, In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Lakhisha Wheeler, (Agency No. 18-1/14, Lowitt, 2014), for the proposition that "extreme health conditions as well as personal tragedies" will not excuse chronic absenteeism, and dismissal of the employee will still we warranted.

In the instant case, the Petitioner has set a clear standard for its teachers, as expressed in the aforementioned Job Description, Collective Bargaining Agreement and Board Policies. By no measure has Respondent shown that he is capable of performing his duties and responsibilities, particularly when he has not entered a classroom since March 2012, a total of 423 days. As was stated by the ALJ in Rucker, supra:

> ". . . when absences are as numerous as respondent's herein, the principle of res ipsa loquitir applies. It is unnecessary to provide testimony of an administrator that the absences have adversely impacted the students. The conclusion is obvious; the situation speaks for itself."

VI. CONCLUSION

Based upon all of the foregoing, it is beyond dispute that Respondent should be dismissed from his tenured position. In this case, Respondent's attendance record was terrible, including 560.55 absences in a seven-year period. Consequently, Respondent received numerous warnings and had his increment and salary adjustment withheld. Despite such progressive discipline, Respondent "has evidenced no growth . . . [and t]here is minimal likelihood that he would do things differently if he were returned to" his position. I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Levine, supra. Over time, the absenteeism worsened, to the point of Respondent missing two full school years in 2012-2013 and 2013-2014. Accordingly, based upon abundant legal precedent, Petitioner respectfully requests the dismissayl of Respondent from his employment as a tenured teacher with the Elizabeth Board of Education. [Board Brief, pp. 8-19].

DISCUSSION

I have carefully reviewed the entire record of this proceeding. The Board must prove the basis for the tenure charges against the Respondent by a preponderance of the credible evidence. If it meets this burden, it must also demonstrate that dismissal is the appropriate penalty.

The record contains undisputed evidence of the Respondent's 560.55 days of absence from his teaching duties since the 2007-2008 school year. It also includes the progressive discipline imposed upon the Respondent during his employment with the Board. Principals Candelino, Abruzzese and Campbell provided unrefuted testimony concerning the negative impact that the Respondent's absences had upon the school, students and teachers. The Respondent did not appear for the December 17, 2014 hearing, but his Answer cites multiple surgeries and medical difficulties as the basis for his absences. The Respondent emphasized that he "always provided the District with appropriate documentation as to his medical conditions, operations, treatments, and absences." He also indicates that his doctor indicated that he "should be able to make a full recovery in the near future as a result of the knee replacement."

I have considered all of the foregoing facts and the applicable law that the Board cited in-depth in its post-hearing brief. The case law cited by the Board is on point and need not be recited. The Board considered the circumstances surrounding the Respondent's absences, and the impact they had on the school, students and teachers. The Board imposed progressive discipline upon the Respondent prior to the filing of tenure charges. The Respondent's absences show that he has not been in the classroom, even semi-regularly. I conclude that the Board has sustained its tenure charges of "incapacity and/or other just cause, including, but not limited to, chronic absenteeism, constituting cause for dismissal and/or reduction in salary...." I also conclude that the penalty of dismissal was not arbitrary or excessive and instead was justifiable and reasonable under all of the relevant circumstances. The fact that a portion of the Respondent's absences were excused does not preclude a finding of the Board's charges conduct nor does it require a modification of the penalty imposed under the circumstances presented.

DECISION

The Board has sustained its tenure charges of "incapacity and/or other just cause, including, but not limited to, chronic absenteeism, constituting cause for dismissal and/or reduction in salary...." against Respondent Carson Steltz. The Respondent is dismissed from his tenured teaching position with the City of Elizabeth School District.

OXFELD COHEN, P.C.

FOR THE DISTRICT: EUGENE LISS, ESQ.
SHANA DON, ESQ.
RAMON E. RIVERA, ESQ.

POSITION OF RESPONDENT ON MOTION TO DISMISS

Ms. Nancy I. Oxfeld, Esq. argued in relevant part on behalf of Respondent, that the instant motion to dismiss the charges of inefficiency herein against Ms. Ratiba Ahmed, who is a tenured elementary education teacher in the Newark public schools, are premature and must be dismissed. It pointed out that "...the arbitrator's area of review is statutorily limited." And shall only be considered whether or not:

(1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including but not limited to providing a corrective action plan:

(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation:

(3) the charges would not have been brought but for consideration of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by state or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by state or federal law: or

(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a.

The arbitrator's review is limited to the four factors above and,

> The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2c.

Respondent further argued that the Cheatham and Thomas decisions support the herein claim that the tenure charges against Rabita Ahmed are premature and must be dismissed it "cannot be converted into something else." Ms. Oxfeld pointed out that each arbitrator deciding the tenure charges in the School District of the city of Newark decided that the charges were premature and cannot begin until after the start of the 2014-2015 school year. Additionally, each arbitrator also provided a make whole remedy.

As a result, the tenure charges against respondent Ratiba Ahmed should be dismissed for having been filed in violation of TEACHNJ.

THE POSITION OF THE STATE OPERATED SHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF NEWARK NEW JERSEY. (DISTRICT)

The District argued in relevant part that on October 24, 2014 the District received a letter of clarification from the Department of Education ("DOE") to General Counsel Charlotte Hitchcock. It essentially confirms that the 2012-2013 evaluation can be used to support a tenure charge for inefficiency against a tenured teacher in Newark, NJ. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123b.

This Department of Education's clarification was intended to provide additional guidance as to the purpose of the language set forth in the FAQs regarding TEACHNJ that the respondent relied upon in her brief.

"At the time the Commissioners representatives found that the Evaluation Rubric met in the intent of the recently adopted TEACHNJ Act and were directionally aligned with the proposed regulations, which would be effective in March of 2013. "

DISCUSSION AND OPINION

Having recently decided the issue herein in my decision involving respondent Sandra Brienza of the same District, I cannot ignore the argument herein of MS. Oxfeld, regarding the prior decisions with identical issues. She convincingly points out that, the results of the prior arbitrators with essentially identical issues rises to a "collateral estoppel" or "res judicata".

I am reminded that the tenure issues before me herein of Ratiba Ahmed, is relatively identical to the recently decided Sandra Brienza case decided by me on December 30, 2014, as well as a number of prior decisions in the same District.

Courts "have also recognized that the doctrine of res judicata may apply to arbitrations with strict factual identities."

In considering the recent awards by the above distinguished panel members, I also agree with Arbitrator Gregory where he correctly quotes that "....the precedential value of a prior award between the parties is to be determined by the subsequent arbitrator" (Elkouri and Elkouri, How Arbitration Works (6th Edition) (at 598.

I have previously observed in the Brienza Award that, in a March 28, 2012 letter, from Chief Talent Officer Peter Shulman, he updated resources for 2012-13 school year, as a "planning and capacity-building year" and prepare for the implementation of the new system in the 2013-14 school year. He further advised that from January 2013 through August 2013, districts should test and refine implementation of the observation instruments and rubrics and prepare for full implementation in the 2013-14 school year. Also, he advised that "By June 2013, thoroughly train teachers on the teacher practice instruments;"

> "we have designated 2012-13 as a planning and capacity-building year During this time, districts must engage in one of two options: participate in a second cohort of our pilot program, or build capacity through a defined series of steps for implementing the new system in 2013-14

I have previously decided that the tenure charges within the same District of Newark were premature and are therefore contrary to the TEACHNJ statute providing for a specific beginning in the school year 2014 and having found that herein also the District prematurely invoked the new inefficiency evaluations prior to the legislated "beginning", I therefore hereby grant the Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges against teacher Ratiba Ahmed Of the State Operated School District of the City of Newark Essex County and I make the following Award.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The State-Operated School District of the City of Newark ("NPS" or "District") served Respondent Leslie Johnson ("Respondent" or "Johnson") a Notice of Inefficiency on or about August 25, 2014. Gemar Mills, Principal at the District's Malcolm X Shabazz High School ("Shabazz") filed the Notice of Tenure Charges - a charge of inefficiency pursuant to the Teacher

Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey ("TEACHNJ") Act, P.L. 2012, c.26, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq., seeking Mr. Johnson's dismissal. Respondent was rated partially effective in his 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 annual summative evaluations. On September 18, 2014, State District Superintendent Cami Anderson determined, inter alia:

> "1. The School District has complied with the required evaluation process in all respects with respect to the Employee's evaluation in the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years;"

Respondent was suspended without pay, effective September 19, 2014 when the charges were certified to the Commissioner of Education. On October 9, 2014, M. Kathleen Duncan, Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes of the Department of Education ("DOE") advised the parties, upon review of the charges and Respondent's answer, "The Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed," referring the matter to the undersigned as Arbitrator.

After communications with the parties, on November 1, 2014, Respondent filed a Brief and exhibits in support of his Motion to Dismiss tenure charges for alleged "inefficiency." On November 10, 2014, the District filed its Brief in opposition to the Motion to Dismiss, along with Certifications and attachments. On November 28, 2014, Respondent's Reply Brief with exhibits was submitted.

Moreover, upon request of the undersigned, the District proposed and Respondent executed, on December 10, 2014, a Statement of Facts reflecting the employment history of Leslie Johnson with the District.

In early December 2014, a flurry of correspondence and emails were forwarded wherein, inter alia, suppression of the Motion and discovery issues were raised. By letter on December 15, 2014, the undersigned provided the parties an additional opportunity to orally argue or proffer a written submission, no later than noon on December 17, 2014 regarding, inter alia, the December 7, 2014, Decision in The Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Elena Brady, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Docket 270-914, ("Brady")[1] Therein, the record on the instant Motion closed.

UNDISPUTED FACTS

Upon review of this record in its entirety, including the Stipulation of Facts, Certifications of Larisa Shambaugh, Executive Director of Strategic Initiative in the Talent Office of NPS and Certifications of Gemar Mills, Principal at Shabazz, I find the following undisputed facts relevant to this Motion:

Respondent, Leslie Johnson received Provisional and Standard

[1]On October 16, 2014, Arbitrator Stephen Bluth issued a Decision on a similar Motion in the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Sandra Cheatham, State-operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Dkt No. 420-14, ("Cheatham"). On November 19, 2014 Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer issued a Decision on a similar Motion in the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Neil Thomas, in the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Dkt No. 244-9/14, ("Thomas".The parties' arguments herein referenced these decisions and awards issued.

Certificates as a "Teacher of Technical Occupations: Television Production Technology." He commenced employment with the District on or about October 25, 2004 under the title "Video Teacher." He was assigned to Malcolm X Shabazz High School upon his hire and remained at Shabazz until the end of the 2013-2014 school year. Mr. Robinson obtained tenure in 2007. Respondent's title changed from "Video Teacher" to "Teacher Video" on or about September 1, 2012. This was Respondent's sole title change from his date of hire until the end of the 2013-14 school year. The only courses taught by Respondent were "Video Production" levels, I, II and III.

Gemar Mills became Principal of Shabazz in August 2011. During the school year 2011-2012, seven NPS schools participated in the new Teacher Evaluation System, Department of Education's Excellent Educators for New Jersey - a teacher evaluation pilot in which eleven (11) school districts participated. Shabazz was not one of the seven NPS schools participating in this program.

During the 2012-2013 school year, Mr. Robinson was evaluated solely by the Department Chair, Michael A. Van Allen, as follows:

1. Formative observation dated November 15, 2012: effective (12 points earned).

2. 2012-13 Mid-Year Summative Evaluation dated February 22, 2013: partially effective (10 points earned).

3. Formative observation dated March 22, 2013: partially effective (9 points earned).

4. Formative observation dated May 9, 2014: partially effective (8 points earned).

5. 2012-13 Annual Summative Evaluation dated June 11, 2013: partially effective (10 points earned).

Respondent's 2012-2013 year Annual Evaluation, ten points earned, is the highest point level of "partially effective." An "effective" teacher is evaluated earning 11 to 14 points.

On March 4, 2013, the State Board of Education adopted administrative code regulations containing, inter alia, amendments to evaluations to N.J.A.C. 6A:10-2.3 Evaluation of Tenure Teaching Staff Members. In October 2013, the State Board of Education adopted additional required specifications in the evaluation procedures for teaching staff members under TEACHNJ. The evaluation process and evaluations of Respondent in the 2012-13 school year did not comply with the regulations effective in March 2013 or October 2013.

ARGUMENTS OF THE PARTIES

The parties presented extensive, comprehensive arguments; the essence of each is as follows:

Initial Brief

A. Respondent

Johnson avers the 2012-2013 annual summative evaluation cannot be considered in connection with tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. The applicable regulations establishing guidelines and procedures regarding teacher evaluations and observations pursuant to TEACHNJ and ACHIEVENJ did not go into effect until October 2013.

Moreover, Respondent maintains the Shabazz school did not have a School Improvement Panel as required by N.J.S.A. 18:A:6-120 in the 2012-2013 school year. It meet for the "first time" on May 23, 2014. Clearly, during the 2012-2013 school year, evaluation procedures were being piloted - not implemented. Accordingly, Respondent maintains the charge is legally deficient and should be dismissed.

B. District

The District avers it has met all applicable requirements for evaluating Respondent's performance during the 2012-2013 school year. The 2011-2012 school year was the "pilot" year. Pursuant to TEACHNJ, the NPS obtained approval for its evaluation rubric from the DOE prior to December 2012. Moreover, the District and Newark Teachers Union entered into a Memorandum of Agreement on October 18, 2012, providing, in pertinent part:

> NPS will implement a new evaluation system beginning SY 2012-13. In accordance with the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq., teachers will receive an annual summative evaluation rating that designated them as highly effective, partially effective or ineffective."

And, after the October 20, 2013 adopted regulations, the District updated its guidebook. Counsel contends,

> "Thus, in 2012-2013 and in 2013-14, different legal requirements were in effect with respect to the required number of teacher observations and with respect to whether > those observations were required to be announced or unannounced and accompanied by pre- or post-observation conferences. However, while these procedural requirements changed from 2012-13 to 2013-14, the same Department-approved teacher performance evaluation rubric was in effect and implemented in both school years. And, both of those school years followed the District's "pilot" year, 2011-12." (Opposition Brief at page 7)

In support of this position, Petitioner relied upon the October 24, 2014 clarification requested by NPS following the Cheatham decision. Therein, Assistant Commissioner Peter Shulman deviated from the DOE's earlier guidance articulating prior comments on evaluation outcomes in the 2012-2013 school year would impact only earning tenure, finding no prohibition against utilizing the 2012-2013 evaluation data "to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher."

Referencing the 2012-2013 school year evaluation rubric, Assistant Commissioner Shulman clarified the Department's position,

> "In regards to the status of Newark's evaluation rubrics during the 2012-2013 school year, please note that, on October 26, 2012, members of the Department met with Newark representatives to review and discuss the Newark Evaluation Rubric and the associated policies that would be put into place for the 2012-2013 school year. At that time, the Commissioner's representatives found that the Evaluation Rubric met the intent of the recently adopted TEACHNJ Act and were directionally aligned with the proposed regulations, which would be effective in March of 2013."

School Improvement Panel

Petitioner maintains a School Improvement Panel ("SIP") was in place at Shabazz during the 2012-2013 school year. Informal meetings were conducted, and Mr. Johnson benefitted from the SIP.

The District does concede, however, the SIP in existence in the 2012-2013 school year, was informal. Counsel reasons,

> "Even assuming, without admitting, that the statute had not been fully complied with in 2012-13 due to the informal nature of the phase one SIP, this fact alone certainly would be insufficient to warrant dismissal of the tenure charge against Respondent. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(a)(1). In order to dismiss a tenure charge on the basis of such a procedural error, the arbitrator would be required to determine that the error "materially affected the outcome of the evaluation" in the relevant school year. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(b). That determination cannot be made without considering all evidence presented at the hearing. Given the voluminous evidence of Respondent's inefficiency, the supposed "error" of an informal SIP's holding its first formal meeting at a later date cannot, in itself, support dismissal of the charge prior to hearing." (Opposition Brief at pages 11-12)

Finally, the District suggests in the event the requirements of TEACHNJ Section 25 have not been met, the charge should still proceed to hearing under Inefficiency in non-mandatory Section 8 cases. To do otherwise, would give a poor performing teacher a free ride during the full implementation of the DOE's procedural requirements adopted for TEACHNJ.

Respondent's Reply Brief

Johnson maintains the arguments presented by NPS were likely presented to the Arbitrators in the Cheatham and Thomas matters. In both those cases, the inefficiency charges were found to be without adequate foundation and dismissed. Respondent seeks due deference and adoption of these decisions as precedent in the instant matter.

Johnson asserts whatever the actions of NPS in 2011-2012 school year did not transform the 2012-2013 school year into the first official year of the requisite two consecutive years to support formal charges, as found in Thomas.

Respondent also views Assistant Commissioner Shulman's October 24, 2014 clarification in response to a request by NPS General Counsel as "extraordinarily suspicious." Mr. Johnson does not question the rubric. Rather, he argues the specific requirements for implementation of the actual observation/evaluation regulatory process was not available for the 2012-2013 school year. Counsel concludes,

> "Mr. Shulman's letter appears, on its face, to be the result of improper collusion with the District written in a desperate effort to invent some rationale for the District's blatant disregard of the legal requirements of TEACHNJ and AchieveNJ. It stands as an attempt to throw a life preserver to a drowning party that, alas, does not float. It cannot stand above the law, the regulations, or his own Department's previous administrative guidance."

Moreover, Petitioner maintains the District cannot now, after failing to proffer the evaluations in compliance with Section 25 of the TEACHNJ Act, pursue the case under Section 8, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Finally, Petitioner observes that as the SIP was not in place in the 2012-2013 school year, Mr. Johnson could not have received this critical benefit.

December 2014 Brady Decision

On December 7, 2014, Arbitrator Joyce Klein issued the third decision regarding the State-Operated School District for the City of Newark's referral of a tenure case for arbitration relying upon evaluations conducted in the 2012-2013 school year. Both Respondent and the District raised arguments similar to those presented before the undersigned.

Upon review of the record before her, Arbitrator Klein determined, inter alia, the statute provided authority for an arbitrator to determine a motion prior to a hearing and the District's participation in a "pilot" program during the 2011-2012 school year did not obviate the District's obligation to implement the full panoply of procedures required by the statute for 2012-2013 school year. Arbitrator Klein reasoned, > "Because the implementing regulations were not effective until March of 2013, the District could not and did not fully implement the evaluation rubric and procedures required for the 2012-2013 school year. Accordingly, Respondent's 2012-2013 summative evaluation cannot properly be considered in support of the District's tenure charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3...

> In order to consider tenure revocation under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the procedures for providing the requisite observations, corrective action plans and School Improvement Panels must be in place to allow the teacher full opportunity for improvement prior to tenure charges. Since neither the rules nor the procedures pursuant to those rules governing observations, corrective action plans and School Improvement Plans were in place, teachers cannot be charged under N.J.S.A 18A:6-17.3 based upon their 2012-2013 school year summative evaluations." (Decision at Page 20)

And, consistent with the decision in Cheatham, Arbitrator Klein determined the charges, based upon inefficiency under TEACHNJ, Section 25, cannot be evaluated under Section 8.

Position of Respondent Leslie Johnson

Respondent contends the issues presented in Cheatham, Thomas and Brady were identical to the issues before the undersigned. As the arbitrators therein determined the District could not rely upon the evaluations as a matter of law from 2012-2013 school year, the formal charges of inefficiency herein should likewise be dismissed. As the Brady decision considered each and every argument raised by the District and rejected them, Respondent "urges" the undersigned to follow the analysis in the three previous decisions and grant Mr. Johnson's Motion to Dismiss.

Position of the NPS

The District argues TEACHNJ arbitration decisions have no precedential value; the doctrine of collateral estoppel is inapplicable. The "short answer" argues NPS is that the Brady decision was decided incorrectly and the undersigned should decline to follow it.

The District maintains an arbitrator is required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17(2)(b) to determine whether an asserted procedural defense "materially affected the outcome" of the Respondent's evaluation - Brady was devoid this analysis.

Counsel reasons this arbitrator's authority is limited,

> "When Respondent's motion here is considered in these terms - in accordance with the arbitrator's statutory authority - it is clear that the motion cannot be granted. The Motion seeks dismissal on the ground, essentially, that Respondent's 2012-2013 summative evaluation somehow did not "count" because the School District supposedly was required to conduct a "pilot" program in that school year. To decide whether to dismiss the charge on this basis, the arbitrator must determine not only whether a "pilot" in that year was required, but whether the lack thereof - and the School District's implementation of a "pilot" the year before, instead - "materially affected the outcome of the evaluation," pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2.b. As this issue cannot be decided without considering the evidence in the record, the arbitrator must conduct a hearing. In short, in order to perform the duty required of her by TEACHNJ, she must deny the motion." (Brief at 8)

Counsel concludes,

"In sum, the Brady decision is significant only as an example of what the arbitrator here should not do. The arbitrator should not re-decide the referral to arbitration or consider its adequacy. She should not shirk her duty to analyze the defenses provided in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(a), and render a determination of whether any of those defenses, if proven, materially affected the respondent's evaluation. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(b). And she should not ignore the plain language of the Act, or the Department of Education's recent interpretation of the Act, to rule that the 2012-2013 school year must be treated as a "pilot" year for the School District's evaluation rubric, or that TEACHNJ went into effect on a different date than provided by the Legislature. In short, the arbitrator should adopt a straightforward interpretation of TEACHNJ, and proceed to a hearing to consider the voluminous evidence of Respondent's inefficiency."

ANALYSIS

Upon review of this record including the charges referred, the parties' arguments and exhibits, review of TEACHNJ, Administrative Code Provisions and guidance from the Department of Education, I find the District's position that prior TEACHNJ decisions on Motions are not precedent to be persuasive. Each Motion decision must be based upon review of the evidence submitted to the Commissioner upon "referral" "by the employing board of education." N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.1(b)(3)

TEACHNJ and administrative code rules found in Chapter 10. Educator Effectiveness allow for review, upon motion, of the referral to arbitration to determine whether the minimum requirements to ensure compliance with the evaluation procedures have been met.

TEACHNJ, Administrative Code Provisions and Department of Education guidance.

Prior to the enactment of TEACHNJ, tenure revocation proceedings were often lengthy and costly for all concerned. In the early 1990s, this arbitrator had the privilege of serving as an Administrative Law Judge, Temporarily Assigned and witnessed the effect of the lengthy process on a District, the teacher, and their representatives. TEACHNJ limits the evidence the Board of Education and Respondent can present at hearing, establishes specific time lines, and dictates what the arbitrator can consider when reviewing the record evidence to render her decision. The statute does maintain important due process protections for teaching staff members.

In March 2014, the Department of Education issued the initial Summary of Legal Requirements for Evaluation and Tenure Cases ("Summary") to assist districts in complying with the new statute and administrative code provisions. The DOE also provides a Guide to the TEACHNJ Act, which is consistent with the Summary.

Introducing the Summary, the DOE explains,

"The TEACHNJ ACT outlines a new process for filing inefficiency charges under the new evaluation system (AchieveNJ). This guide outlines the actions required in law before bringing an inefficiency tenure charge based on the new tenure revocation process, including the following elements:

A. Minimum Requirements to Ensure Complaince with Evaluation Procedures

I. Observation Requirements
II. Student Achievement Requirements
III. Summative Evaluation Requirements
IV. Corrective Action Plan (CAP) Requirements
V. Additional Requirements"

The DOE, under "V. Additional Requirements", identifies the School Improvement Panel as follows:

> "☐ School Improvement Panel (ScIP)(N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3):
>
> *Must be established by August 31 of each year
> * The precise way in which the ScIP supports teacher mentoring, evaluation and professional development may vary among schools, but the district must ensure the minimum membership requirements and procedures for forming the ScIP as described in N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3 are followed."

Following two years of rating that trigger a charge of inefficiency, the tenure revocation process time line is compressed.

At the conclusion of the Summary, the DOE cautions districts in bold letters,

> "At all levels of review, the deciding entity must determine whether the district followed the proper procedural requirements as established by the district, the TEACHNJ Act, and subsequent regulations."

In light of the statute, Administrative Code, and guidance of the Department of Education, I find a panel arbitrator has authority to review inefficiency charges referred for arbitration, upon motion, to determine whether the minimal requirements to ensure compliance with the evaluation procedures have been met.

Failure to met the minimum procedural requirements materially affects the evaluation process

NPS's contention, even assuming its failure to meet the minimum requirements to ensure compliance with evaluation procedures, that this arbitrator is not permitted to evaluate the referral, that she would "shirk her duty" if she did not allow an evidentiary hearing to determine if the district's failure materially affected the outcome, is inconsistent with statutory and regulatory provisions of TEACHNJ.

N.J.A.C. 18A:6-17.1(b)(3) addresses the referral of the case for arbitration by a district as follows,

> "(3) Upon referral of the case for arbitration, the employing board of education shall provide all evidence including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employee or the employee's representative. The employing board of education shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses."

In the instant matter, the referral consists of the Certification of Determination to certify tenure charges against Leslie Johnson along with the Statement of Charges, Statement of Evidence, Appendix of Exhibits and supporting documentation as provided by the District on September 19, 2014 to the Commissioner of Education, David C. Hespe.

An Arbitrator is not permitted to allow depositions. Discovery is limited to twenty-five (25) interrogatories without sub-parts. Thus, a Respondent would be denied procedural due process if s/he were required to utilize limited discovery to ascertain additional evidence a district would provide at hearing.

Consistent with precluding a district from presenting additional evidence, the statute continues,

> "At least 10 days prior to the hearing, the employee shall provide all evidence upon which he will rely including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employing board of education or its representative. The employee shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses."

The preclusion of evidence is supported by the time line required to be "strictly followed" by an arbitrator.

Moreover, the issues raised by Respondent in the instant motion involve statute and code provisions that do not permit arbitrator discretion. The School Improvement Panel provisions, at issue herein, utilize the word "shall". N.J.S.A 18A:6-120 School improvement panel; N.J.A.C.6A:10-3.1 School Improvement Panel membership; N.J.A.C.6A:10-3.2 School Improvement Panel responsibilities. Likewise, N.J.A.C.6A:10-4.4 Teacher observations mandates observation requirements for tenured teachers utilizing the word "shall".

Teacher observations and the School Improvement Panel must meet the minimum requirements. To interpret the statute requiring the hearing to proceed, even if the evidentiary submission at referral does not meet the Minimum Requirements to Ensure Complaince with Evaluation Procedures, as outlined in the DOE Summary, would negatively affect the rationale for implementing TEACHNJ. Tenure cases could again be lengthy and costly to all parties. Allowing arbitrator's discretion to change the mandates of "shall" into "may" with respect to statute and administrative code provisions would assure divergent findings and invite Appellate review.

Moreover, the strict time line required of panel arbitrators by TEACHNJ envisioned the tenure revocation proceeding (including pre-hearing discussions, discovery issues, motion review, evidentiary hearing and issuing the decision), to be completed in no more than six (6) days. N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.1(b)(2)

Finally, as the instant Notice of Tenure Charges was based upon inefficiency filed under Section 25, N.J.S.A.18A:6-17 it can not proceed under Section 8, N.J.S.A.18A:6-16.

Accordingly, TEACHNJ grants a panel arbitrator the authority to review, upon motion, whether the referral evidence meets minimum requirements to ensure compliance with evaluation procedures. Upon determination the referral does not, the motion to dismiss should be granted.

Review of Tenure Charge: Inefficiency

On September 19, 2014, NPS referred the tenure charge of inefficiency based upon Leslie Johnson's 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 annual summative evaluations ratings of partially effective. While the statute provides a Superintendent with discretion to file the charge of inefficiency, if the consecutive summative ratings are "partially effective", this record review revealed NPS filed the instant charge with knowledge that the minimal requirements to ensure compliance with evaluation procedures were not met.

2012-2013 School Year

The Statement of Evidence was submitted by Principal Mills. The Teacher observations of Leslie Johnson in the 2012-2013 school year did not comply with the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A10-4.4. (Exhibits 2, 4, 5, 6, 8) Indeed, NPS admitted the required number of teacher observations, the required notification, and pre/post observation conferences, mandated by Administrative Code, were not complied with by the District in the 2012-2013 school year.

Assistant Commissioner Shulman's October 24, 2014 clarification expressed the evaluation rubric utilized by the District in the 2012-2013 school year was "directionally aligned" with the proposed March 2013 regulations. This clarification did not grant NPS a waiver from complying with all administrative code regulations in Chapter 10. Education Effectiveness.

School Improvement Panel

With Exhibit 45, NPS acknowledged the School Improvement Panel at Shabazz was not established during the 2012-2013 year pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1. The first meeting of the Shabazz School Improvement Panel, compliant with administrative code, was not conducted until May 23, 2014.

Clearly, the SIP could not have performed the functions and responsibilities, outlined in N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.2., in either the 2012-2013 or the 2013-2014 school year. [2]

In light of the above review, I find the District's referral for arbitration did not meet the minimum requirements to ensure compliance with evaluation procedures mandated by TEACHNJ and administrative code, Chapter 10. Educators Effectiveness. Respondent Leslie Johnson's Motion to dismiss the tenure charge for alleged "inefficiency" filed by the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark is, hereby, granted. Accordingly, I issue the attached Award.

[2] N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.2(a)(3) requires the School Improvement Panel to conduct a mid-year evaluation for teachers on a corrective action plan. Shabazz did not have a functioning SIP at the time Mr. Robinson's 2013-2014 mid-year evaluation was conducted.(Exhibit 12)

PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

On August 27, 2014, Lynn Irby-Jackson, Principal of Arts High School, in the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, filed a Notice of Inefficiency, (tenure charges) against the Respondent. That Notice of Inefficiency included twenty-one (21) separate counts of an inability of the Respondent to "completely and responsibly execute her duties as a teacher" for the period of August 12, 201 to the present. Those charges were filed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1. On August 29, 2014, the above charges were served on the Respondent.

On September 16, 2014, the Respondent filed an answer to the Notice of Inefficiency Charges. On September 23, 2014, Cami Anderson, Superintendent of the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, filed a Certification of Determination in support of the Tenure Charges filed by Principal Lynn Irby-Jackson. That Certification was filed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11. Superintendent Anderson also determined that, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-39 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14, the Respondent is to be suspended without pay for one hundred-twenty (120) days effective September 26, 2014.

On September 25, 2014, Ramon Rivera, counsel for the Petitioner, filed the tenure charges with David Hespe, then Acting Commissioner of Education. That filing included Notice of Charges, Statement of Evidence in Support of Charges, Supporting Documents, Certification of Determination and Proof of Service.

On October 6, 2014, the Respondent filed an answer to the tenure charges. On October, 14, 2014, M. Kathleen Duncan, Director of New Jersey Department of Education's Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, sent a letter to Mr. Rivera and Ms.

Oxfeld in which she indicated that the tenure charges and Respondent's answer were reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, and upon review "the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Gerard G. Restaino as required by statute"

On November 24, 2014, a preliminary hearing was held to establish a briefing schedule. On December 3, 2014, Respondent, with supporting letter memoranda, submitted a motion to the arbitrator seeking to have the tenure charges dismissed because they were brought prematurely. Additionally, under separate cover Ms. Oxfeld was sending to the undersigned copies of the following TEACHNJ, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, arbitration decisions:

Agency Docket	Respondent	Arbitrator
272-9/12	Felicia Pugliese	Daniel Brent
269-9/12	Edgard Chavez	Timothy Brown
243-10/13	Lawrence Hawkins	Carol Laskin

The Carter award is for the City of Camden:

369-12/12	Gerald Carter	Robert Simmelkjaer

On December 18, 2014, the Petitioner submitted a thirty-four (34) page brief in Opposition to the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss accompanied with one hundred seventy-nine (179) pages of supporting exhibits.

Respondent requested an extension until January 9, 2015, to submit a response to the Petitioner's brief. The extension was granted. On January 9, 2015, Respondent sent a letter to the arbitrator indicating that all of her arguments were "thoroughly addressed in the brief to Dismiss as well as the arbitration decisions provided".

Therefore, Respondent will not submit a reply to the Petitioner's brief.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

For the Petitioner

Petitioner argues that the Commissioner of Education has determined that the District followed the evaluation process in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, and the arbitrator has no statutory authority to consider Respondent's motion to dismiss.

Furthermore, Petitioner asserts that "the role of an arbitrator in a tenure proceeding is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1." The practical imperative of the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss is that to take such an action the arbitrator is required to hear evidence and then determine if the evaluation procedure was properly implemented or if it was flawed.

Most importantly, Respondent's Motion to Dismiss fails to cite any authority under which it was made. Moreover, the Respondent did not file the Motion to Dismiss in lieu of an answer. Petitioner also contends the evaluations of Respondent for the 2012-10213 school year are valid as TEACHNJ was in effect and in full force in the 2012-2013 school year, and the collateral estoppel doctrine does not bar the arbitrator from considering Petitioner's arguments in this regard. In fact, collateral estoppel is inapplicable in the matter at bar because there has been no final judgment on the following State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, arbitration decisions:

Agency Docket	Respondent	Arbitrator
226-8/14	Sandra Cheatham	Stephen Bluth
244-9/14	Neil Thomas	Robert Simmelkjaer

The Petitioner strongly argues that arbitration decisions are not binding and the Respondent's reliance on the Cheatham and Thomas awards is misplaced,

In support of that argument the Petitioner contends that the time has not yet passed for it to appeal the Cheatham and Thomas awards. If those decisions are appealed, there exists the possibility that the awards will be vacated on one (1) of more of the bases set forth in N.J.S.A. 2A:24-8.

Finally, the Petitioner contends that "even if the arbitrator here concludes, notwithstanding the facts and arguments presented herein, that the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 have not been met, the inefficiency charges against Respondent should not be dismissed. Instead, the charge must be evaluated under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, and the case should proceed to hearing."

For the Respondent

The Respondent strenuously argues that the tenure charges are premature and must be dismissed. Moreover, the "issue of whether tenure charges of inefficiency brought pursuant to TEACHNJ can be brought after the conclusion of the 2013-2014 school year has already been decided against the State-Operated school District of the City of Newark by two arbitrators.[1]"

The Cheatham and Thomas awards establish that "tenure charges of inefficiency brought pursuant to the provisions of TEACHNJ cannot be brought until after the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year." Each arbitrator dismissed the tenure charge and ordered the Respondent reinstated with all lost pay and benefits.

[1] Since receipt of Respondent's brief, there have been at least four (4) arbitration awards in the State-Operated School district, City of Newark, support of Cheatham and Thomas.

The Respondent contends that the Cheatham and Thomas decisions support its position that the tenure charges against her are premature and must be dismissed.

Furthermore, the Respondent argues that the tenure charges cannot be converted into something else. The decisions in "Pugliese and Chavaz deal with charges that were filed after the effective date of TEACHNJ, but prior to the commencement of the 2012-2013 school year" Arbitrator Simmelkjaer determined that those two (2) awards have no applicability in Thomas, because the tenure charges in Thomas were filed at the start of the 2014-2015 school year. The Respondent contends the same must apply here.

Additionally, the Respondent asserts that the decisions in Hawkins and Carter "make it clear that the charges of inefficiency can be brought against a teaching staff member prior to the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year by bringing those charges under the tenure statute, without specifying that they are inefficiency as set forth in N.J.S.A. 18a:6-17.2."

Also in Thomas, Arbitrator Simmelkjaer determined that the State-Operated School District, City of Newark, could not "pursue two (2) types of inefficiency charges at the same time." Moreover, he determined that the New Jersey Legislature did not provide the appropriate statutory language to allow the District the authority to file charges under Section 8 and, if not successful, file those same charges under Section 25.

Most importantly, the respondent contends that collateral estoppel is controlling in the matter at bar and the "Petitioner has to accept the Cheatham and Thomas awards, or in the alternative, file a motion in court to have those awards set aside." The Respondent asks that the Motion to Dismiss be upheld and she be returned to work with full back pay and benefits.

DISCUSSION AND OPINION

As previously indicated, since the submission of the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss, there have been four (4) more TEACHNJ awards in the State-Operated School District, City of Newark as set forth below:

Agency Docket	Respondent	Arbitrator
270-9/14	Elena Brady	Joyce Klein
255-9/14	Lorraine Williams	David Gregory
268-9/14	Leonard Yarborough	Edmund Gerber
235-8/14	Sandra Brienza	Ernest Weiss

Arbitrators Greggory, Gerber and Weiss sustained the Respondent's position and returned them to work with full back pay and benefits. Their decisions were based upon the Cheatham, Thomas and Brady determinations.

Nothing has been presented to me that would require me to set aside those decisions. Collateral estoppel is alive and controlling in the matter before me and as such must be given its full weight and authority. Olivieri v. Y.M.F.Carpet, Inc., 186, N.J. 511, 521, 897 A.2d 1003 (2006)

There is no question that the issues before me have already been addressed, and I might add quite extensively, by arbitrators Simmelkjaer and Klein.

Having reviewed all of the voluminous documents submitted in post hearing briefs, as well as the TEACHNJ awards referenced previously, I Award the following:

AWARD

The Respondent's Motion to Dismiss the tenure charges in their entirety is granted in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 (c) and N.J.A.C. 6a:3-5.1(c). The Respondent, Toni Lenz, shall be reinstated to her teaching position with full back pay and benefits.

SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWNSHIP OF IRVINGTON, Petitioner v. BETH GREEN, Respondent.	STATE OF NEW JERSEY DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION Agency Ref. No.: 295-10/14 STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

Petitioner School District of the Township of Irvington (hereinafter "Petitioner") and Respondent Beth Green (hereinafter "Respondent") (collectively referred to as the "Parties") in the above-captioned matter hereby agree to resolve all outstanding issues with respect to the Tenure Charges filed by Petitioner against Respondent pursuant to the following terms:

1. As a resolution of all issues relative to the instant tenure proceeding, the Parties hereby agree as follows:

   A. Petitioner agrees to withdraw the tenure charges filed against Respondent and to reinstate her to active teaching status, with full pay and benefits, effective December 11, 2014;

   B. Upon reinstatement, Respondent agrees to a transfer to a teaching position at Chancellor Avenue Elementary School;

   C. Petitioner agrees to reimburse Respondent for one-third (1/3) of the back-pay it withheld from her since certifying the instant tenure charges, in an amount equivalent to two (2) regular salary payments (out of six (6) payments withheld from her), minus any unemployment benefits received by Respondent during the corresponding two (2) pay periods, which she will be receiving during the month of January, 2015;

D. Respondent agrees to reimburse Petitioner for medical insurance coverage afforded to her from September 28, 2014, through December 11, 2014, via deductions from her bi-weekly salary payments, in equal installments, from January 15, 2015, through June 30, 2015;

E. Petitioner will place a written memorandum drafted by Superintendent Dr. Nealy Hackett, enclosed herewith as Exhibit A, in her employee personnel file and Respondent agrees to waive all appeals or challenges to the memorandum, which shall serve as documentation as to the nature of the charges, as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a)1;

F. Respondent agrees to participate in an accredited developmental or counseling program as directed by and at the expense of Petitioner, for a reasonable period of time.

2. It is agreed that no further disciplinary action, beyond what is specified in the foregoing, will be taken by Petitioner against Respondent regarding the underlying incident(s) which formed the basis of the instant tenure charges.

3. It is agreed and understood that Respondent expressly waives any claim for back pay and/or benefits withheld from her during her suspension without pay, except as explicitly provided in this Stipulation of Settlement.

4. The Parties agree that the terms of this Stipulation of Settlement were made in the best interests of both the Parties and the public. This Stipulation of Settlement represents an acknowledgment of the seriousness of the instant tenure charges. However, it does not constitute an admission of wrongdoing by either of the Parties. Respondent agrees to accept responsibility for any conduct that was improper on her part, and, in return, Petitioner agrees to permit her to continue her employment as a teacher for the School District of the Township of Irvington. Finally, the Parties agree that this Stipulation of Settlement was entered into with the understanding that it will help save both sides considerable costs and time required to fully adjudicate this matter.

5. The Parties hereby agree that they have entered into this Stipulation of Settlement voluntarily and willingly, and without being under any duress. The Parties agree that they fully understand the terms of this Stipulation of Settlement. They further aver that they had the opportunity to consult with their respective attorneys regarding the terms and provisions of this Stipulation of Settlement, and they acknowledge by their signatures below that they are satisfied with the representation provided to them by their attorneys.

6. In accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a)6, Respondent acknowledges that she was advised of the Commissioner of Education's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of teaching certificate(s).

OAK DOCKET NO. EDU-12808-2014 S

This Settlement Agreement ("Agreement") is entered into by and between John McCord and Colleen McCord on behalf of Chase McCord (collectively referred to as "Petitioners") and the Hainesport Township Board of Education ("Board") to resolve and settle all outstanding issues involved in this matter between Petitioners and the Board (the "Parties").

WHEREAS, the Hainesport Township Board of Education ("Board") is a local public school board of education organized under Title 18A of the New Jersey Statutes with its principal offices located at 211 Broad Street, Hainesport, New Jersey 08036 in Burlington County; and

WHEREAS, Chase McCord was born on August 31, 2007 and resides at 34 Lenox Drive, Hainesport, New Jersey 08036 in Hainesport Township, Burlington County; and

WHEREAS, Chase McCord's parents are John McCord and Colleen McCord; and

WHEREAS, on or about June 10, 2014, the Board determined that Chase had committed an act of harassment, intimidation, and bullying ("HIB"); and

WHEREAS, on or about September 5, 2014, Petitioners filed the instant Petition of Appeal (Agency Reference No. 248-9/14, OAL Docket No. EDU-12808-2014 S) challenging the Board's finding of HIB; and

WHEREAS, on or about September 30, 2014, the Board filed an Answer to the Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, in order to resolve any and all disputes between the Parties without resorting to time-consuming and costly litigation, the Petitioners and the Board have agreed to a full and final settlement of all claims and matters asserted in the aforementioned Petition of

Appeal and any claims that could have been asserted in a state or federal court proceeding that relate directly or indirectly to the Petition of Appeal; and

WHEREAS, this Agreement, and the execution and implementation of same, shall not be construed or considered an admission of liability by the Board, its present and former Board of Education members, officers, employees, agents and servants, said liability being expressly denied.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual promises and agreements contained herein, the Petitioners and the Board AGREE AS FOLLOWS:

1. The Board agrees to rescind the finding of HIB against Chase and remove any record of same from Chase's student file. Such incident shall in no way be considered or used in the future to penalize Chase or enhance any penalty against Chase.
2. Petitioners understand that the Board's rescission set forth in Paragraph 1 does not condone Chase's behavior which led to the initial finding of HIB.
3. The Parties agree that this Agreement resolves any and all claims arising from or directly or indirectly relating to the Petition of Appeal.
4. Within five (5) days of full execution of this Agreement, Petitioners agree to submit said Agreement to the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law and/or the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes for dismissal of the Petition of Appeal.
5. Miscellaneous:
    a. The Parties agree to refrain from taking any actions or making any statements, oral or written, critical or otherwise, in any medium whatsoever, relating to or concerning this dispute, which have the purpose of injuring each others' reputations or causing any person or entity to refrain from or cease any employment or business relationship with each other.

b. The Parties hereby verify, affirm and represent that they have each had the opportunity to discuss the terms of this Agreement with counsel, that they understand its contents and are entering into this Agreement voluntarily and with a full understanding of its meaning.

c. John McCord and Colleen McCord each represent that they have the sole authority to enter into this Agreement, and that it shall be binding as if entered into by any other parent and/or guardian of Chase McCord not a party hereto.

d. The terms and conditions of this Agreement shall be kept strictly confidential and will not be disclosed to any individual that is not acting directly on behalf of any party.

e. The provisions of this Settlement Agreement are severable and, if any part is found to be unenforceable, the other portion shall remain fully valid and enforceable.

f. This Agreement shall be governed and construed under the laws of the State of New Jersey.

g. This Agreement constitutes the full and complete agreement of the Parties and may not be changed or modified absent mutual written agreement of the Parties. This Agreement is binding upon the Parties and their respective heirs, assigns or successors in interest.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING :

OF ELYSE CROMWELL, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT : DECISION

OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of unbecoming conduct against respondent – a tenured high school English teacher – and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(h), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and overwhelmingly warrant the termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
OF ELYSE CROMWELL,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

For the Petitioner, Rita F. Barone, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Elyse Cromwell

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on December 19, 2014, through tenure charges of conduct unbecoming certified by Cami Anderson, State District Superintendent of the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, together with supporting evidence against Elyse Cromwell, a tenured teacher in the petitioner's employ. The petitioner provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via Federal Express on December 18, 2014. The petitioner also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On December 29, 2014, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the day such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that respondent had sex with her 15-year-old student on multiple occasions. The charges also contend that the respondent dispensed marijuana to three of her students, and – on more than one occasion – engaged in the use of marijuana with these students. Additionally, the Department of Children and Families, Institutional Abuse Investigation Unit found that the allegations of Sexual Abuse/Sexual Penetration and Neglect/Substantial Risk of Physical Injury/Environment Injurious to Health and Welfare against the respondent were substantiated.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against her, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's charges of conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member have been proven and overwhelmingly warrant the respondent's dismissal. Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from her tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

Introduction

This matter arises from tenure charges submitted on September 26, 2014 by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark (the School District or the District) based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. N.J.S.A.18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.3 and N.J.S.A. 6A:3-5.1 against LaRhonda Ragland (Respondent) and an October 6, 2014 referral of the tenure charges to the undersigned by the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c. At the time of the referral of the tenure charges, the Commissioner also referred a Motion filed with the Commissioner by the District seeking an order that the Tenure Charges be deemed admitted pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3, that the Answer and Defenses stated in Respondent's answer be stricken from the record as being untimely, and that Respondent should be dismissed as a matter of law. By Order dated November 24, 2014 the undersigned denied the District's Motion. No further dispositive motions were filed by the deadline for such established by the undersigned[1], and the hearing in the matter was conducted on December 4 and 17, 2014 and January 13 and 14, 2015 in Newark, New Jersey. At the hearing all parties were afforded the opportunity for argument, examination and cross-examination of witnesses and the introduction of relevant exhibits. Respondent LaRhonda Ragland was present for the entire hearing and testified on her own behalf. At the close of the hearing on January 14, 2015 the parties elected to submit written closing argument, upon the receipt of which by the arbitrator on January 27, 2015 the matter was deemed submitted.

[1] The originally established date for such motions was extended by the undersigned at the request of Counsel for Respondent, however no motion was filed by Respondent by the established-and-extended deadline. Thereafter, Respondent filed a Notice of Motion to Dismiss and the undersigned informed the parties that the motion was denied as untimely but that such denial did not preclude Respondent from presenting any defense(s). Respondent's post-hearing argument includes much of the argument previously presented to support her late-filed, Motion to Dismiss.

This Award is made following my careful consideration of the entire record in the matter, including the under-sign's observations of the demeanor of all witnesses.

Issues

The issues on the merits presented in this matter may be accurately stated as follows:

> Has the District met its burden of establishing the truth of its tenure charges against Respondent, and if not, what is the appropriate remedy?

Additionally, the Respondent raises an issue as to the arbitrability of the matter, arguing that the tenure charges should be dismissed on summary basis as they are insufficient on their face.

The Tenure Charge

The tenure charges in this matter are based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. N.J.S.A.18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.3 and N.J.S.A. 6A:3-5.1 and states:

> CHARGE ONE: INEFFICIENY
> During the period from January 24, 2013 to the present, Respondent has demonstrated an inability to completely and responsibly execute her duties as a teacher in the following manner:
>
> a. The Respondent has failed to implement curricular goals and objective(s).
> b. The Respondent has failed to design coherent instruction.

c. The Respondent has failed to assess student learning.
d. The Respondent has failed to create an environment of respect and rapport.
e. The Respondent has failed to manage student behavior.
f. The Respondent has failed to establish a culture of learning.
g. The Respondent has failed to communicate clearly and accurately.
h. The Respondent has failed to use questioning and discussion techniques with flexibility and responsiveness.
i. The Respondent has failed to reflect on teaching.
j. The Respondent has failed to contribute to the school district.
k. The Respondent has failed to grow and develop professionally.
l. The Respondent has failed to demonstrate promptness and attendance.
m. The Respondent received an overall rating of Ineffective in an Annual Summative Evaluation for School Year 2012-2013.
n. The Respondent received an overall rating of Partially Effective in an Annual Summative Evaluation for School Year 2013-2014.

Respondent

Respondent is certified by the State of New Jersey to teach dance. She taught dance in the District for 9 years; initially teaching dance at the elementary level at the Dayton Street School and more recently at the Maple Avenue School. During her years as a dance teacher Respondent received annual evaluations of "proficient" for at least five years and "basic" for the 2011-2012 school year. For the 2012-2013 school year, the District's record reflect that Respondent was rated "Ineffective," however, both Respondent and the Maple Avenue School Principal (at the time) who evaluated Respondent and gave the teacher her rating testified that the rating pas "Partially Effective."

In 2013 Respondent's permanent assignment at the Maple Avenue School was eliminated for budgetary reasons and she was transferred to Arts High School in an "employee without placement" (EWP) status. As an EWP teacher at Arts High School Respondent was not given a permanent classroom teaching assignment and was required to wait in the school principal's office each morning until assigned work by the principal. During the 2013-2014 school year the only full dance class periods she taught as a lead teacher were the three for which she was subject to observation and perhaps a few others. Respondent's other assignments during the 2013-2014 school year included clerical work, attendance, housekeeping, monitoring tardy students and substitute teaching in various academic subjects, as well as a one or two week period during which she was to observe dance classes taught by other teachers.

Respondent received an annual evaluation of Partially Effective for the 2013-2014 school year.

The 2012-2013 School Year

Former Principal of the Maple Avenue School Deneen Washington testified that the Maple Avenue School was one of the schools selected to participate in the teacher evaluation pilot program established by the District pursuant to TEACHNJ. According to Washington, Respondent taught dance at the elementary school for a number of years during which Washington evaluated Respondent, including the 2012-2013 school year. Washington identified an unsigned 2012-2013 evaluation of Respondent from the District's records giving Respondent an Ineffective rating. Washington maintained that she recalled that she later changed the annual rating to "Partially Effective." Washington testified that Respondent would email her lesson plans to the principal and that although there were some grammatical errors in the emails, Washington understood the meaning of the emails.

Washington also admitted that she has a pending legal action against the District and that she is represented in that pending action by counsel for Respondent in the instant matter.

Hillary Dow was the Vice Principal of Maple Avenue School during the 2012-2013 school year. Teachers that school year, Dow testified, were evaluated based upon the District's 2012-2013 Framework for Effective Teaching which Dow understood was part of a pilot program for teacher evaluations. Dow did not personally perform any formal evaluation of Respondent but did informally observe Respondent teach on occasion throughout the year.

Dow testified that she issued written discipline to Respondent during the school year, including a write-up for conduct unbecoming dated January 1, 2013 for comments Respondent made to another teacher. According to Dow, Respondent often displayed this type of behavior with the staff and the administration often had to mediate between Respondent and other members of the staff. Dow also issued Respondent two warnings for inappropriate comments to students: one addressing Respondent's comments to a male dancer to hold his arms "like a male" and another addressing Respondent's conduct of tapping a female student to get the student's attention and then stating; "Oh, I thought you were someone I liked." In the view of Dow, such conduct by Respondent goes to the teacher's efficiency because it in the first instance relating to a coworker, the performing arts faculty is a team and Respondent's conduct could impact negatively upon the team, and the comments to students impact the students directly.

Dow explained that Respondent had issues with written communication. Respondent's writings were grammatically incorrect and had no fluency of thought, Dow asserted, and Respondent was required to have her written material reviewed before she sent them to parents. Basically, Dow testified, Respondent would have to orally tell the office clerk what she wanted to say to the parents and the clerk would do the writing.

The 2013-2014 School Year

Lynn Irby-Jackson is the Principal of Arts High School and testified that when Respondent was assigned to the High School in the autumn of 2013 Irby-Jackson was aware that Respondent had received a 2012-2013 school year performance evaluation rating of "Ineffective." According to Irby-Jackson, she recommended the instant tenure charge of inefficiency based upon what the principal and school administration observed of Respondent during the 2013-2014 school year. Respondent's 2012-2013 rating was taken into account by the High School Administration, Principal Irby-Jackson explained, for purposes of establishing a Corrective Action plan (CAP) for Respondent for the 2013-2014 school year.

The District's Evaluation Tool

Principal Irby-Jackson testified that in evaluating Respondent the school applied the 2013-2014 "Framework for Effective Teaching, Newark Public Schools Teacher Evaluation" guidebook adopted by the District. The Framework includes five "competencies" for which teachers are evaluated: (1) Lesson Design and Focus; (2) Rigor and Inclusiveness; (3) Culture of Achievement; (4) Student Progress Toward mastery and (5) Commitment to Personal and Collective Excellence. The Framework contemplates that teachers will be evaluated through evidence; evidence of three general types; (a) what can be observed, (b) what cane be seen in artifacts and (c) what can be seen in quantitative data. Teachers may receive ratings at four levels in each competency: Highly Effective, Effective, Partially Effective and Ineffective. Both administrators and teachers received significant and continuing training on the evaluation tool, according to Irby-Jackson.

The Framework provides that any teacher who received an annual evaluation rating of Partially Effective or Ineffective in the 2012-2013 school year must receive a Corrective Action Plan (or CAP) in the 2013-2014 school year. The Framework specifies that a Corrective Action Plan should be developed in the beginning of a school year through a collaborative process between the teacher and supervisor. The "Frequently Asked Questions" portions of the Framework discusses the CAP process. There, the Framework poses, among others, the following questions and provides the following answers:

> How is the CAP used throughout the year?
> The CAP is a living document and should be referenced and updated throughout the year. At each post-observation conference and the mid-year review, the teacher and principal should review the goals outlined in the CAP and assess the teacher's progress toward meeting those goals. The CAP is the main format by which the teacher and the principal collect and report evidence of the teacher's growth and improvement.
> What is the responsibility of a teacher on a CAP?
> A teacher on a CAP is responsible for the development goals outlined in his or her CAP with the principal. These development goals should be specific and time-based; the teacher should use these goals to guide his or her activities and efforts to develop. In addition to being responsible for implementing these goals and actions in order to improve, the teacher will also participate in professional growth opportunities, reflect on his/her growth areas and request additional support when needed.

What is the administrator's responsibility to support a teacher on a CAP?
An administrator with a teacher on a CAP is responsible for reviewing and co-developing the CAP with the teacher and then supporting the teacher in meeting the development goals outlined in the CAP. The CAP should explicitly articulate actions the administrator will take to directly support the teacher. The administrator is also responsible for conducting classroom observations to collect evidence of progress towards goals, ensuring the teacher has opportunities and guidance on how to access and participate in professional learning opportunities throughout the year, and for sharing clear, regular feedback with the teacher about his or her development.

Irby-Jackson testified that at the end of the summer of 2013 her school received five or six Employees Without Placement (EWP) employees, including Respondent. As a recipient of EWP teachers, her school was charged with getting those teachers into the classroom so they could be evaluated. Irby-Jackson explained that she conducted Respondent's first observation during the 2013-2014 school year. According to Irby-Jackson, prior to that observation she held a pre-observation conference with Respondent, informed Respondent ahead-of-time of the date of her observation and conducted a post observation conference with Respondent. The "Long Observation – Observation Summary Form" relating to that observation is signed by Irby-Jackson on November 15, 2013. The witness signature on the document is dated November 20, 2013. Respondent's signature does not appear on the document. The record establishes that the observation took place in or about the first week of November 2013. The form reflects that the Observation was "announced" and the grade level was "12th." In the "Lesson Summary" portion of the form, Irby-Jackson wrote:

> The objective on the lesson plan was different than what was stated in the pre observation conference which was different from the written and posted lesson plan at the time of the lesson. The teacher was ready at the start of the lesson and began by reviewing vocabulary words that were written on wrinkled Kraft paper and posted on the wall. She called on the students to read the word and then demonstrated the movement. At one point she asked a student to "parmesan" around and the student corrected her by stating the proper term was 'promenade'. The students were then directed to go to the barre to start the class at 1:30pm. By 2:00pm they had only completed 3 exercises. This was due to the teacher not having panned the combinations. The students were noticed standing in idle with no clear understanding of what to do. She did not use proper terminology when explaining the combination, Teacher articulated the next combination of dance steps and when the students questioned the order of the of the combination steps she repeated it differently numerous times. The students indicated that they were confused. The teacher was not prepared with the selection of music for each exercises and time was spent waiting while she figured it out. When the students did the exercises no verbal response was given to either correct or clarify misconceptions. This continued for the entire barre exercises. The students then moved directly to grand allegro which is out of sequence for a proper ballet class in order to prevent injury.

At this point the teacher no longer gave verbal directions but while attempting to choreograph the combinations, the students made attempts to understand what she was doing. Again the combination changed each time she showed it and when the students asked clarifying questions the teacher responded 'yes'. Each pair of students did the combination differently yet no directions were given to correct the student's mistakes before moving on to the next side.

The teacher then noticed the time and ended the class.

In her "Summary Comments" Irby-Jackson wrote:

Based on the evidence collected the teacher demonstrated not only a lack of pedagogy in her certified area but a basic knowledge of instructional best practices. The regular misuse and mispronunciation of dance terminology by the teacher in a level IV class resulted in confusion among students as they themselves questioned their prior knowledge and understanding of previously learned movement and vocabulary.

Respondent received an overall rating for the long observation of "Ineffective."

Irby–Jackson held a mid-year review with Respondent on February 14, 2014. The related Mid Year Review Summary Form completed by Irby–Jackson provides the following "Summary of Performance":

> Ms. Ragland has a limited knowledge of classical ballet and modern dance techniques which limit her ability to have a productive class. The students are constantly providing corrections to the teacher and when seeking clarity none is offered or incorrect information is given. This leads to confusion and therefore disruption in the class.

In the space on the Form reserved for teachers on a CAP, and asking "[w]hat specific actions have been taken by administrators to support the teacher in these growth areas? What actions will administrators provide for the remainder of the year?" Irby–Jackson wrote:

> The administrators have provided opportunities for classroom observations, followed by discussions with 2 high school dance educators of the existing dance classes specifically in ballet and modern. A class observation form was suggested for reflection to guide post observation discussions which are not utilized. In the discussions Ms. Ragland had no questions nor did she offer ideas as to what she observed.
> An opportunity to change or update the professional growth goals on the CAP was given to Ms. Ragland who declined. In an effort to provide additional support and opportunity for growth the following plan will be implemented: Ms. Ragland will immerse herself in the Level A classes. She will observe the teaching of these students on a daily basis for one week with an opportunity to engage in conversation with the teacher, review plans, and get to know the students. She will then write a one week unit plan with five daily lesson plans. She may consult with the teacher if she chooses. Ms.

> Ragland will then teach the Level A class for 3 class periods, during which time she will have an unannounced observation. Ms. Ragland will be provided with several articles for her review.

The record evidence does not establish whether or not the plan for Respondent to observe classes, write a one-week lesson plan and teach three class periods was implemented. In April 2014 Irby-Jackson again performed a long observation of Respondent, this time teaching an A-level 9th & 10th grade ballet class, and rated the teacher as "Partially Effective."

James Manno, Arts High School Vice-Principal for Curriculum and Instruction was assigned by Principal Irby-Jackson to be the administrator on Respondent's CAP plan. According to Manno he was not informed of the details of Respondent's former evaluations but is aware that the 2013-2014 Framework provides that teachers who received a Partially Effective or Ineffective rating for the 2012-2013 school year were required to have a CAP for the 2013-2014 school year. He recalled that he met with Respondent and went over the CAP form with her, but that Respondent never completed her portion of the form; a first such failure by a teacher in the experience of Manno. The Corrective Action Plan "Official Form" provides in its introductory statement that:

> At the beginning of the year, the teacher and supervisor sit down to reflect on last year's performance and goals for the current year. This is an opportunity to map out (1) goals and focus areas for the students; and (2) development areas and opportunities for the teacher. Once this form is completed it must be uploaded by the teacher into BloomBoard and a paper copy must be signed and added to the teacher's file.

According to Manno, he never saw Respondent's 2012-13 evaluations and there was never a complete Corrective Action Plan for Respondent to perform for the 2013-2014 school year, as the teacher did not complete the plan.

Manno testified that he also conducted a short observation of Respondent in February 2014 in which he rated Respondent Partially Effective. He did not conduct a pre-conference with Respondent as such are not required for short observations. According to Manno, the ninth grade students in the dance class taught by Respondent and observed by Manno were not new to Respondent. In this regard, Manno maintained, Respondent had observed the students in the class and had taught them for other observations. The "Summary Comments" by Manno of the short observation state:

> It is imperative that Ms. Ragland become engaged in intensive professional development in the area of modern dance specifically Graham/Horton in an effort to increase her pedagogical skill level. She also must review best practices in effective teaching methods emphasizing lesson planning and standard alignment, engagement, questioning techniques, and increasing rigor in the classroom. It is further suggested that she research national and state standards in the area of dance. It is recommended that the observation form provided to Ms. Ragland when observing classes be utilized to engage in discussions regarding lesson design, and teaching methods.

Manno testified that he did not informally observe Respondent at any time during the school year. He testified that Respondent attended three to five of the ten mandatory Dance Department monthly meetings during the 2013-2014 school year. According to Manno, based upon written communication received from Respondent, he is of the view that Respondent's poor writing abilities had a significant impact upon her ability to teach.

Respondent was given one more formal observation during the school year, her third; a long observation in April 2014 conducted by Irby-Jackson. Again, Irby-Jackson testified, she met with Respondent prior to the observation. Irby-Jackson gave Respondent a Partially Effective rating for this observation.

In addition to the two formal observations she conducted of Respondent, Irby-Jackson testified that she attempted to informally observe Respondent. In this regard, the Principal explained, several times she went to the classes the administration had given Respondent to observe the teacher and found that Respondent was not present. Irby-Jackson acknowledged that under the District's Framework for the 2013-2014 school year, teachers on a CAP were required to have four observations during the year and that Respondent was given only three. Irby-Jackson asserted that a fourth observation was not provided Respondent because, in the view of the principal, too much damage was being done each time Respondent taught and Irby-Jackson could not further subject the children of the school to the dangers of Respondent's teaching.

Respondent's Annual Evaluation and Tenure Charges

Irby-Jackson completed Respondent's Annual Evaluation dated May 12, 2014 and gave Respondent a Partially Effective rating. Irby-Jackson also testified that she recommended tenure charges against Respondent. Teachers are required to write. They must write in the classroom for students, they must write lesson plans, they must write student evaluations, they must be able to communicate with other teachers, etc. Respondent cannot write, Irby-Jackson testified, and consequently could not meet competency I; Lesson Design and Focus.

Counseling and Discipline of Respondent and Complaints by Irby-Jackson about Respondent during the 2013-14 School Year

October 7, 2013

By memorandum of October 7, 2013 Irby-Jackson notified Respondent that the teacher had been assigned as Hall Monitor for the HSPA administration held on October 1-3. 2013 and was not at her post at the assigned time. The memorandum to Respondent concludes:

> Please understand it is the expectation of Arts high School administration that when a directive is given under any circumstances it must be followed…Should this occur again, you will be written up for insubordination and further disciplinary action will follow.

October 24, 2013

By memorandum of October 24, 2013 from Irby-Jackson Respondent received a "Second Notice" providing:

> On Wednesday October 23, 2013 at approximately 8:50am you were assigned by me to report to the main office every morning and wait for your daily assignment. You were then informed that you will be stationed at the front door signing in students who were late for school. I clearly articulated to you in the presence of Vice Principal Ricardo Pedro, Vice Principal Jim Waldron, and Head security guard Nancy Johnson that you must be on that post by 8:30-9:15am, and provided you with materials and instructions on the procedure.
> Today, Thursday, October 24, 2013 you were not in the main office waiting for your daily assignment, nor did you report to your assigned post i.e., the late door at 8:30. Mr. Pedro found you in the dance studio at 9:05 where you indicated that you were only assigned the late door for the previous day.

> Since being assigned to Arts High School in September 2013, this is you second notice in writing notice (sic) of 'failure to follow directive' and 'neglect of duty'. As a result labor relations will be contacted.
> Ms. Ragland you are an EWPS teacher assigned to Arts high School for additional support, you are not an Arts High School dance teacher. Therefor you are directed NOT to go to the dance studios unless you are specifically assigned by me, and report to the main office every day and wait for an assignment. Failure to do this will result in additional disciplinary action.

November 1, 2013

Irby-Jackson asserted that based upon the written materials she read authored by Respondent, the Principal believes Respondent is a "functional illiterate." She opined such to her Assistant Superintendent of Schools, Brad Hagerty, on November 1, 2013, where she wrote:

> I know that we have spoken may times regarding my concern over the ability of assigned EWPS dance teacher [Respondent]. Not only does she not have the technical or artistic ability to teacher (sic) any of my dance classes including the middle school, but we have discovered that she is functionally illiterate. I have sent you several copies of correspondence she has had with.... To say that I am outraged that such a person has survived in the Newark Public Schools and been allowed to teach children is an understatement, but now that this atrocity has been made known to the arts world that supports Arts High School I must take additional steps to ensure that children are no longer damaged...
> I know that we have been searching for an alternative placement for her but I cannot pass her on to another school as she was passed on to me. As a former dancer, I am the only administrator who can successfully observe her in the dance studio and have the knowledge to effectively point out her deficiencies. Let me state that she does have the capacity to effectively teach Hip-Hop and Tap but that is not the discipline that is taught at Arts High School.

I have asked her to write a lesson plan for next week when I conduct a formal observation of her teaching. I must inform you that she has been written up on 3 different occasions for failure to follow a directive which today left 25 7th grade students unattended and without instruction. I must also bring to your attention that upon checking with certification she carries a Vocational certification that she received based on her professional experience as a Nets cheerleader. She does not have a college degree.

Something must be done, as I cannot allow this to continue, my children and all children of Newark Public Schools deserve better.

January 6, 2014

Irby Jackson also testified that following her first observation of Respondent in November 2013 she and NTU local president Mike Jackson met to discuss a plan to assist Respondent's development. Relating thereto Irby-Jackson issued Respondent a January 6, 2014 memorandum relating to "Insubordination." In part, the memorandum provides:

> ...Prior to the Winter break we discussed this plan for implementation beginning January 2014. You responded favorably to the plan stating: "I want and am willing to learn." Today, January 6, 2014 at approximately 8:25am, you received an administrative request to observe a dance class, and you refused to do so stating: "I do not feel comfortable doing that." I responded by stating: "you do not feel comfortable teaching a class"? To which you replied "NO". You made a verbal request to transfer you, and I replied that I do not have the authority to do so.
> ....Be advised:
> - Failure to follow an administrative directly especially those pertaining to your duties and responsibilities as a teacher constitutes insubordination. You are hereby directed to follow the attached schedule of observations and teaching schedule. Failure to comply with this directive will result in appropriate disciplinary action.
> - Your refusal to participate in this action plan agreed upon between you and your selected representation, demonstrates a lack of commitment to education and growth.
> This serves as a reminder that in the future, you are expected to adhere to and follow all directives in a timely manner. Your fullest cooperation is expected.

Respondent's Testimony

Respondent testified that she received her teaching certification through alternate route and that hers is a standard certification. Prior to being transferred to Arts High School as an EWP she taught at the elementary level and had up to eight classes a day. She recalled that her first evaluation for the 2012-2013 school year was conducted in January 2013, that her second and final evaluation for that school year was conducted in July 2013, and that she had no announced evaluations and no pre-observation conferences during that year. She testified that after her transfer as an EWP to Arts High School she had no expectation of teaching under her certification, and that the few times she taught dance class there was for purposes of observation. Contrary to Irby-Jackson, Respondent testified that she and the principal did not have a formal pre-observation meeting. Rather, Respondent asserted, the principal communicated to her by email and instructed Respondent to draft a lesson plan and that she would be observed on November 6, 2013. The November 6, 2013 observation was her first at Art High School, Respondent testified.

As for the CAP, Respondent maintained that Manno met with her and told her this was something Respondent had to do because that is what they do at Arts High School. Respondent asserted that Manno did not tell her the purpose of the CAP.

Respondent testified that Irby-Jackson wrote she was a functional illiterate not because it is a true statement but rather because the principal does not like Respondent. Respondent explained that in her experience Irby-Jackson was very distant and did not communicate directly with Respondent. Respondent testified that she felt bullied and harassed by the Principal.

Positions of the Parties

Petitioner / District

The District argues - as it has unsuccessfully in many recent cases involving motion to dismiss tenure charges of inefficiency filed by the District - that it is appropriate under TEACHNJ for it to consider Respondent's 2012-2013 evaluation as well as her 2013-2013 evaluations as they were performed pursuant to an evaluation rubric established consistently with the statute and NJ Department of Education (Department) guidance. In this regard, the District asserts, the District was one of eleven school districts approved to participate in the Department's 2011-2012 teacher evaluation pilot program. As a result, the Department of Education allowed the District to begin using a new "framework" and new rating system on a "pilot" basis to evaluate teacher performance in the 2011-2012 school year. During that school year Respondent taught at one of the eleven schools in the District participating in the pilot program and her evaluations during that year have not been proffered by the District to support its inefficiency charges. The framework and new rating system was then used throughout the entire district in the 2012-2013 school following the adoption of a related Memorandum Of Agreement (MOA) between the District and Teacher Union and passage of TEACHNJ. The District made a few minor modifications to its framework to comply with Department of Education requirements and again applied the framework to teachers in the 2013-2014 school year. As a result, Respondent was subject to evaluation under the 2011-2012 pilot, the 2012-2013 framework and the 2013-2014 framework.

Contrary to the assertion of Respondent, the District argued, it implemented its 2012-2013 evaluation rubric in a timely manner to be effective under governing law. In this regard, TEACHNJ establishes "deadlines" by which certain requirements must met. Thus, the statue required school districts to institute pilot programs to test their new evaluation rubrics by January 31, 2013, at the latest. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(d) ("Beginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program..."). (Emphasis added). Here, the District did just that; it implemented a pilot program with Department of Education approval in the 2011-2012 school year – thereby complying with the requirement that its pilot program be instituted "no later" than January 31, 2013.

Similarly, the District continued, TEACHNJ required all New Jersey public school districts to develop "evaluation rubrics" to assess the performance of their teachers, and established a deadline to obtain approval for their "rubrics" from NJDOE by December 31, 2012. The District complied with that mandate. The District adopted an evaluation rubric – a rubric approved by the Department - as part of a performance evaluation system known as the Newark Public Schools Framework for Effective Teaching to be implemented beginning in the 2012-13 school year. To inform its teachers and school administrators of the new Framework and to provide guidance on its implementation, the District conducted training and published a Guidebook to the Framework for use in 2012-2013. The Framework clearly describes the new "levels of performance" as highly effective, effective, partially effective and ineffective.

The District further argued that it complied with the deadline established by the Act that school districts implement their evaluation rubrics by the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year at the latest, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e) ("[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric"). Again, the District asserted, the District complied with the statute and implemented its framework containing the evaluation rubric for the 2012-2013 school-year; an implementation date that predated the 2013-2014 deadline set by statute. Nothing in TEACHNJ nor any regulations, the District maintained, provides that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014, for purposes of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

Considering the plain meaning of the statute's language and the guidance and actions of the Department of Education, the District argued, neither the statue nor the DOE required school districts to; (a) treat the 2012-2013 school year, and only 2012-2013, as a "pilot" year and (b) wait a year to implement their evaluation rubrics if the rubrics had been adopted and approved earlier.

Consequently, the District asserted, its efficiency charges against Respondent are appropriately considered by the arbitrator under TEACHNJ.

Respondent's attempt to have the charges dismissed on procedural grounds is inappropriate, the District maintained. In this regard, the District argued, it is the Commissioner of Education who is solely authorized to determine the sufficiency of the evaluation process and resulting tenure charges. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Thus, a dispositive motion by a teacher subject to tenure charges based upon the failure of a board of education to follow the evaluation process may only be made to the Commissioner prior to the referral to an arbitrator.

Once it is found that the tenure charges are sufficient, based upon appropriate criteria and a referral is made to an arbitrator, an arbitrator's authority is confined to a determination of the following: (a) whether or not the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process; (b) whether there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation; (c) whether the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, or discrimination, or; (d) whether the board of education's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2. Therefore, whether the District acted in compliance with law in filing charges based upon the 2012-2103 school year has been answered in the affirmative by the Commissioner of Education and is outside the scope of the arbitrator's authority.

Moreover, the District asserted, the statute does not contemplate that arbitrators will have the authority to interpret the statute or to evaluate the legislative intent of the Act. That authority is the courts.

Considering all of the evidence presented at the hearing, the District argued, it has met its burden of supporting the charge. The teacher evaluations conducted within the District in 2012-2013 were valid, effective, and "counted" for all purposes, including to support tenure charges such as those presented here, as were the evaluation conducted in the 2013-2014 school year. Respondent's contention to the contrary should be rejected.

The arbitrator's authority under TEACHNJ is limited to a determination of whether the approved evaluation system contained in the District's Framework was "substantially" adhered to when applied to Respondent. In this regard, the relevant evidence offered at hearing by the District including the total number of observations conducted each school year, and voluminous other evidence and testimony of witnesses establishes the Respondent's inefficiency as a tenured teacher to children. Even though the District did not conduct a fourth "short" observation of the Respondent during the 2013 – 2014 School Year, the Decision could not have "materially affected" the outcome of the Annual Summative Evaluation as Principal Irby-Jackson testified that performing the exercise of assigning the Respondent a class had proven futile thrice, and it was inconceivable to waste further instructional time and potentially injure students by placing her in the classroom. Ms. Dow, Ms. Washington, Ms. Irby-Jackson and Mr. Manno all evaluated the Respondent in accordance with the TEACH NJ Act and in substantial compliance with District policy. The Respondent was offered a collaborative CAP Process and extensive professional development opportunities and recommendations

Alternatively the District continued, should the rubric of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 be found not to be the appropriate criteria under which to judge the evidence in this matter, the District has met its burden under the long-established efficiency standard of the preponderance of credible evidence. That standard requires that the District offer evidence that would lead a reasonably prudent person to conclude that the Respondent is an ineffective educator. Considering the totality of the circumstances here, including the testimony of Ms. Dow, Ms. Washington, Ms. Irby-Jackson and Mr. Manno and the numerous memoranda addressing the Respondent's unbecoming conduct and neglect of duty, along with the statements of her own Union Representative and her own testimony, a reasonable person could concluded that the ineffectiveness of Respondent as an educator sufficient to revoke her tenure protections.

The tenure charges are appropriately before the arbitrator and the District has met its burden of supporting its charges and Respondent has failed to rebut the District's case by establishing that; (a) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, (b) there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation, (c) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, or discrimination or (d) that the board of education's actions were arbitrary and capricious. Under such circumstances, the District concluded, Respondent's employment as a tenured teacher within the District should be terminated.

Respondent

The tenure charges against Respondent must be dismissed, Respondent argued, as they unlawfully rely upon evaluations performed during the 2012-2013 school year. In enacting TEACHNJ the Legislature clearly intended the 2012-2013 school year to serve as a "pilot year" for all administrators and teaching staff members in assessing teaching effectiveness. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123. Under TEACH NJ, it was not until the 2013-2014 school year that the statute was deemed to be in full force and effect and was the first year that evaluations would count for purposes of tenure charges. Try as it might, Respondent maintained, the District cannot avoid that simple and obvious reality and fact. The purpose of 2012-2013 pilot-year was to train certified teaching staff members and evaluators on the District's evaluation instruments and procedures, and for the Department of Education ("DOE") to prepare and finalize its regulations, which later became known as Achieve NJ and which did not become effective until October 2013. The pilot nature of the 2012-2013 school year is further supported by the obvious fact, Respondent asserted that the implementing regulations were not even promulgated until after the 2012-2013 school year had concluded. Additionally, such a conclusion is further supported by the Department of Education's own guidance on the questions. Thus, in its "Educator Evaluation Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)" previously published on its web-site in answer to the question "Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-13) toward tenure decisions?" the Department of Education stated:

> A: No- the only item "on the clock" is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (for teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

Although the Department FAQ statements were informal in nature and may not rise to the status of regulation, the Respondent argued, the Department's statements nevertheless represent the practical interpretation of the statute by the agency charged with instructing local governmental units on how they were to comply with the new law. As such, Respondent maintained, there is judicial precedent to support Respondent's assertion that the DOE FAQ guidelines should be given substantial deference.

Respondent further argued that numerous recent decisions of arbitrators relating to motions to dismiss efficiency charges filed by the District[2] support its position that the evaluations performed by the District on Respondent during the 2012-2013 year are not appropriately considered for purposes of efficiency tenure charges. In those cases Respondent asserted, arbitrators held that the charge affecting their respective Respondent alleging inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:17.3 was insufficient and/or premature because the TEACH NJ Act was not enacted until August 2012 and not implemented until October 2013, and further because the District presented no evidence that it was somehow exonerated from the requirements of Act.

The inapplicability of the 2012-2013 evaluations to charges of inefficiency are further established by the absence of a School Improvement Panel (SIP) during the 2012-2013 school year. Again, Respondent maintained, the District must be in compliance with all requirements of TEACH NJ as established by the Commissioner of Education and/or Department of Education as a precondition for considering annual summative evaluations as a basis for filing efficiency tenure charges. As the schools in which Respondent was assigned in the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years did not have SIPs for those entire years, Respondent asserted, the District was out of compliance with TEACH NJ and, consequently, her 2012-13 and 2013-24 evaluations may not be used as a basis to file tenure charges.

Respondent argued that considering N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17-3(c) provides:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charge to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

And that where a District has filed tenure charges alleging inefficiency premised upon teacher evaluations, but has failed to follow the evaluation development process required by TEACH NJ, the Commissioner may dismiss the tenure charges or simply forward to an assigned Arbitrator for further assessment of a District's compliance with the evaluation requirements of the TEACHNJ Act. As a result, Respondent asserted, if a matter has been referred to an assigned Arbitrator, then the Arbitrator is charged with the responsibility to assess a District's compliance with the evaluation and assessment requirements of the TEACHNJ ACT. If the assigned Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner District has failed to follow the evaluation requirements or is deficient for any reason, the Arbitrator is obliged to dismiss the tenure charges. Here, it is undisputed that the District failed to abide by the evaluation process set forth in the TEACHNJ ACT and accordingly, the tenure charges against Respondent Ragland must be dismissed.

In conclusion, Respondent argued, the Petitioner School District is unable to cite any legal authority and evidence that would permit the Arbitrator to simply ignore the plain and unambiguous language of the relevant statute and regulation. The District's compliance with the portions of TEACHNJ relating to the establishment and approval of evaluation procedures is a prerequisite to proceeding with Inefficiency Charges and any finding to sustain those charges, Respondent asserted. Accordingly, Respondent's 2012-2013 summative evaluation is not properly the subject of consideration by either the Commissioner or the Arbitrator in this case. Moreover, Respondent argued, if said evaluation is not subject to consideration, then the District's tenure charges are facially deficient in that it includes only one (1) deficient summative evaluation for the 2013-2014 school year, as opposed to the two consecutive deficient annual evaluations required by TEACH NJ. Likewise the evidence is clear that (1) the Petitioner District failed to provide Respondent with the required minimum three (3) observations during the 2012-2013 school year even assuming that year was not a "pilot" year for the District and (2) that the Petitioner District failed to provide the Respondent with the required fourth observations in the 2013-2014 school year based on her CAP status. As such, the tenure charges at issue should be dismissed consistent with the procedural defects identified and with other arbitration rulings involving this Petitioner School District.

Discussion

The Referral of the Matter to the Arbitrator

By letter dated October 17, 2014 from the State of New Jersey Department of Education the parties were notified that:

> ...following receipt of Respondent's answer on October 10, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; upon review the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Timothy J Brown, Esq. as required by statute.

Respondent's Argument Relating to the Arbitrator's Authority

Respondent asserts that the arbitrator is without authority to hear and consider the instant matter and must dismiss the tenure charge against Respondent. In this regard, Respondent argues that the instant efficiency tenure charges, in the first instance, as a matter of law should not be considered by the arbitrator at all, and in the alternative should be dismissed, because the District has not complied with certain requirements of TEACH NJ relating to the promulgation, approval and implementation of the District's evaluation process; requirements including piloting/testing, approval and establishment of an evaluation rubric, teacher improvement processes and SIPs; and the application of such for a minimum of two school years - none of which school years may have occurred prior to the 2013-14 school year. As part of her argument, Respondent asserts that at least two post-2012-13 school year evaluations are a "prerequisite" for; (a) the Commissioner of Education to refer an efficiency case to an arbitrator for hearing and (b) the jurisdiction of an arbitrator to hear and consider tenure charges alleging inefficiency. In support of her argument Respondent relies upon:

(i) The language of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17-3(c),

(ii) Arbitration decisions finding that a referral of a charge by the Commissioner of Education alleging teacher inefficiency where the Commissioner has not found that an "evaluation process has not been followed" necessarily amounts to a referral of authority to determine whether the District has complied with all provisions of the statute relating to the promulgation and institution of its teacher evaluation process, and

(iii) Recent arbitral decisions in other cases involving motions to dismiss of similar inefficiency charges by the District finding either that the District did not comply with TEACHNJ in its promulgation and implementation of its evaluation process or that a determination by the arbitrator that the District has complied with all provisions of the statute relating to the promulgation and institution of its teacher evaluation process is a legal prerequisite to an arbitrator proceeding to hearing on the charges.

Sections 23 and 25 of TEACHNJ

Sections 23 of TEACHNJ, among other things, establishes the extent of the authority of arbitrators relating to their consideration of, and rendering decisions upon, charges of teacher inefficiency. In this regard, Section 23 provides:

> 23. a. In the event that the matter before the arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to section 25 of this act, in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:
> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or
> (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.
>
> b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.
>
> c. The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.
>
> d. The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.
> e. The hearing shall be held before the arbitrator within 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case. The arbitrator shall render a written decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing.

Sections 25 of TEACHNJ, concerns the responsibilities of superintendents, boards of education and the Commissioner of Education in evaluating and processing charges of inefficiency. Section 25 of the Act provides:

> C.18A:6-17.3 Evaluation process, determination of charges.
> 25. a. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-11 or any other section of law to the contrary, in the case of a teacher, principal, assistant principal, and vice-principal:

(1) the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency whenever the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated ineffective in the annual summative evaluation;
(2) if the employee is rated partially effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations or is rated ineffective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated partially effective in the annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency, except that the superintendent upon a written finding of exceptional circumstances may defer the filing of tenure charges until after the next annual summative evaluation. If the employee is not rated effective or highly effective on this annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file a charge of inefficiency.

b. Within 30 days of the filing, the board of education shall forward a written charge to the commissioner, unless the board determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

c. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

d. The only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

TEACHNJ Grants Only Narrow Authority to Arbitrators in Inefficiency Cases

Considering the above-quoted language of TEACHNJ, I am not persuaded by Respondent's argument. Section 23 of TEACHNJ establishes the authority of arbitrators in cases presenting questions of efficiency. Section 25 establishes the authority of the Commissioner of Education in cases presenting questions of efficiency. Section 25 c. (18A: 6-17-3(c), (ii)) grants the Commissioner of Education authority to make one of three determinations upon receipt of a charge of inefficiency filed under Section 25 a.; the Commissioner may (1) determine the evaluation process has been followed and refer the case to an arbitrator, (2) determine the evaluation process has not been followed and dismiss the charges, or (3) determine that based upon the submissions of the parties the Commissioner cannot conclusively determine one way or the other whether the evaluation process has been followed and consequently cannot determine that the evaluation process "has not been followed." Where the Commissioner refers a matter to an arbitrator, as the Commissioner has done here, after concluding that he cannot determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, I am of the view that the statute affirmatively directs the arbitrator to "hear the case" pursuant to Section 23 of the Act. Section 25 is focused upon the authority of superintendents, boards of education and the Commissioner and with perhaps the exception of the assignment of a case to an arbitrator to "hear the case" nothing in Section 25 grants authority to arbitrators.

Considering the specifically described authority of arbitrators contained in Section 23 of the Act and the absence of any similarly enabling language in Section 25, I am persuaded that Section 25 does not confer authority upon the arbitrator to either; (a) rule upon a motion to dismiss based upon the evidence already considered by the Commissioner and found to be insufficient basis upon which to make a determination, or (b) grant authority upon the arbitrator to step into the shoes of the Commissioner and determine whether the District has complied with statutory requirements in the promulgation and implementation of the District's evaluation process.[3]

It is widely recognized that an arbitrator's authority is defined by the mutual grant of authority by the parties or, as in this matter, by statute. In either event the authority of an arbitrator is only as broad as the authority granted. In the instant matter, I am of the view that the authority grant to me by statute as arbitrator in this matter is a very tightly fitting suit. Considering the pointed and narrow grant of authority to me in Section 23 of the ACT, the statute leaves me little, if any, wiggle room to wander into matters of legislative intent and/or District compliance with provisions of the statute governing the promulgation and establishment of evaluation rubrics, SICs, CAPs, mentorship programs, etc. The Act assigns such tasks to the Commissioner.

The Commissioner's referral of this matter to me was specifically pursuant to TEACHNJ Section 25 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c) and no other Section of the Act, and grants me the narrow authority to determine the case under the provisions of Section 23 and no other.[4]

[3] In this latter regard, I note that the reference in Section 25 d. to the portions of the Act concerned with the promulgation and establishment of evaluation rubrics, like the other portions of the section, is addressed to the activities of superintendents, boards of education and/or the Commissioner, not arbitrators.

[4] In contrast, in the case of The Tenure Hearing of Edgard Chavez, State Operated School District of The City of Newark, Essex County Agency, Docket No. 269-9/12, (February 6, 2013), the assignment of the case to the undersigned by the Department of Education was made pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2112, c. 26.

I find that the District has failed to meet its burden of establishing the truth of its efficiency tenure charges. Even setting aside the question of whether or not Respondent's 2012-13 annual evaluation may be considered under the TEACH NJ standard, the District failed to show that it met the standard for the 2013-14 school year. In this regard, I find (1) that Respondent's 2013-14 evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan, (2) that the District's actions toward Respondent throughout the 2013-14 school year were arbitrary and capricious and (3) and that such failures by the District materially affected the outcome of the Respondent's 2013-14 annual evaluation.

The District's 2013-14 Evaluation Failed to Substantially Adhere to the District's Framework – the District's Evaluation Process

The District's 2013-14 Framework for evaluating Teachers requires that a teacher, such a Respondent, who has received either an Ineffective or Partially Effective on his or her annual summative rating for the 2012-13 school year must have a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) and that such teachers must have a minimum of four observations throughout the school year with at least one observation in each semester and at least one pre-observation conference. Tenured teachers on a CAP may not have all of their observations performed by the same observer. The Framework recommends that for teachers on a CAP the pre-observation conference take place prior to a long observation and that the "most important questions to answer" in a pre-observation conference are:

-Is the teacher clear on what students should know and be able to do by the end of the class?
-Are the strategies and objective aligned to the standards?
-Are the strategies the teacher is planning to use likely to ensure mastery?
-How will the teacher know whether the students mastered the content?
-Has the teacher considered all students in the planning?
-Is there anything in particular the teacher would like feedback on as part of the observation?

Although principal Irby-Jackson testified that she held a pre-observation conference with Respondent prior to the early November 2013 long observation, she did not offer details about the conference or whether or not she attempted to address the important questions for such a conference outlined in the Framework. Respondent testified that her pre-observation conference consisted of an email notice that she would be observed on November 6 and the she should have her lesson plan submitted on "BloomBoard" by November 3, 2013.

Whether the principal and Respondent met for a pre-observation conference, I find that any such meeting that may have occurred consistent primarily of principal Irby-Jackson merely giving Respondent notice of the observation and establishing a deadline for the teacher to submit a lesson plan. I find that there was no pre-observation conference between Irby-Jackson and Respondent during which the parties engaged in a substantive exploration of the questions to be answered in such a conference as contemplated by the District's Framework. Nor was there sufficient evidence offered to establish that any other pre-observation conference offered Respondent during the 2013-14 school year. I find that the District did not satisfy the requirements of such a conference contained in the District's Framework.

The Framework also required that Respondent, as a teacher on a CAP, have at least four observations during the school year. It is undisputed that Respondent was given only three observations and I am not persuaded by the District's claim that it was excused from conducting a fourth observation because a fourth observation would have harmed students. The Framework does not provide for such exception. Rather it specifically provides that "teachers on a CAP must have one additional observation for a total of four observations." (Emphasis added). In addition to establishing that four observations are a minimum, the Framework encourages school administrators to conduct more than the minimum. The District failed to satisfy the Framework's requirements of four observations of Respondent; the District failed to do the "minimum" required in this regard.

The District also admits that there was never a complete Corrective Action Plan (CAP) established for Respondent during the 2013-14 school year, but placed the responsibility and blame for the lack of such a plan upon Respondent. It is true that Respondent did not submit some parts of the CAP. However, the District also failed to satisfy their obligation. In this regard, I find insufficient evidence to establish that the administration attempted to follow-up on the CAP with Respondent or work collaboratively with the teacher to assure that the CAP was completed. Nor did the administration of Arts High School review Respondent's 2012-13 annual evaluation as required by the Framework to develop a CAP. The Framework does not contemplate that school administrators can simply sit on their hands and shift the burden of establishing a CAP onto the struggling teacher. Rather the Framework contemplates that the CAP is a "living document;" and that the development of a CAP is an ongoing and dynamic process between the teacher and responsible administrator. Again, the Framework provides:

> An administrator with a teacher on a CAP is responsible for reviewing and co-developing the CAP with the teacher and then supporting the teacher in meeting the development goals outlined in the CAP. The CAP should explicitly articulate actions the administrator will take to directly support the teacher. The administrator is also responsible for conducting classroom observations to collect evidence of progress towards goals, ensuring the teacher has opportunities and guidance on how to access and participate in professional learning opportunities throughout the year, and for sharing clear, regular feedback with the teacher about his or her development.

I find that the District failed to satisfy the requirements relating to Respondent's CAP contained in the District's Framework.

I do not question the evaluator's determinations as to the quality of Respondent's classroom performance as reflected in the three observations made of Respondent in the 2013-14 school year. However, when the District's failures to comply with the provisions of the District's Framework are weighed in full along with the considerations I rely upon below for finding arbitrary conduct by the District, I find that Respondent's 2013-14 evaluation "failed to adhere substantially to the [District's] evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan."

The District's Actions Toward Respondent were Arbitrary and Capricious

The District's Actions toward Respondent relating to her evaluation and attempts to correct her deficiencies were arbitrary and capricious. In this regard, I find that rather than making a real effort to mentor and assist Respondent in developing and improving her teaching ability and skills during the 2013-14 school year, the administration of Arts

High School predetermined that Respondent was a lost cause, undertook a "warehousing" of Respondent and placed form over function by going through the motions of observing Respondent rather than exercising the time and energy contemplated by both TEACHNJ and the District's Framework in evaluating and helping Respondent develop. The District set Respondent up to fail and simply marked time until it could file tenure charges against the teacher. In reaching this conclusion I rely upon the following considerations:

1) It is fiction to believe that Respondent would succeed in observations of her teaching high school students at a high school devoted to the arts when Respondent had previously taught dance only at the elementary school level and had been assigned hall monitoring and substitute teaching in non-dance subjects at the arts high school.

2) On October 24, 2013, only a week or two before her first observation, Respondent was unambiguously advised in a disciplinary write-up from principal Kirby-Jackson that "...you are a EWPS teacher...you are not an Arts High School dance teacher..." (Emphasis added) Such reflects Respondent's status as an outsider at the school and the Principal's view that Respondent was not at the High School for purposes of teaching dance.

3) Four or five days prior to her first observation for which the principal rated Respondent "Ineffective," Irby-Jackson expressed her firm predisposition toward finding Respondent unable to teach when the principal wrote her assistant superintendent that Respondent is "functional illiterate," that Irby-Jackson was "outraged" that

Respondent had been allowed to teach students in the District's schools, that Irby-Jackson is the "only administrator who can successfully observe her in the dance studio and have the knowledge to effectively point out her deficiencies," and that "[s]omething must be done, I cannot allow this to continue, my children and all the children of the Newark Public Schools deserve better."

4) As discussed above, The District failed to perform even the minimum number of observations of Respondent and failed to complete Respondent's Corrective Action Plan.

5) Respondent taught only a very few days throughout the 2013-14 school year.[5] Respondent was not permitted to develop relationships with students; she was not given the opportunity to get to know students and students the opportunity to get to know her within the context of a teacher-student relationship. The three classes for which Respondent was observed were not even the same students; the first being 12th graders, the second 9th and 10th graders and the third 9th graders, and

6) Most importantly, it is arbitrary to require Respondent to be assessed as to her ability to teach effectively for an entire school year – the period of time contemplated by the District's Framework and TEACHNJ, when she was given the opportunity to teach for only a handful of class periods.

[5] The record establishes that Respondent actually taught at least three classes during the year and may have taught no more than a few more.

The District's Failure to Adhere Substantially to the Evaluation Process, and the District's Arbitrary and Capricious Conduct Toward Respondent Materially Affected the Outcome of Respondent's 2013-14 Evaluation

TEACHNJ contemplates that before he or she may be terminated from a teaching positions, to improve the performance of the struggling teacher, such a teacher will receive a real – rather than feigned – prolonged effort to provide guidance and mentorship from the most advanced and knowledgeable educators in the teacher's school; the principal and high-level administrators. Here, the District, through its administrators at Arts High School, predetermined that Respondent would never improve and could not be successfully reformed and arbitrarily withheld such efforts from Respondent.

By its actions and inactions described above, the District pursued a course of conduct that assured that rather than conduct observations of a dance teacher teaching a dance class of the teacher's students, the District could conduct observations of a substitute teacher/hall-monitor attempting to teach students for whom the teacher had no teacher-student relationship. The outcome of such observations were effectively determined before they began and, consequently, I find that the failure of the District to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, and the District's arbitrary and capricious conduct toward Respondent materially affected the outcome of Respondent's 2013-14 evaluation.

Conclusion

The 2013-14 school year annual evaluation of Respondent by the District may not be relied upon to support the termination of a tenured teacher. The District has failed to meet its burden of establishing the truth of its tenure charges against Respondent.

AWARD

The subject tenure charge against Respondent, LaRhonda Ragland is dismissed.

The District is ordered to:

1. Promptly offer Respondent reinstatement to a dance teaching position.

2. Make Respondent whole for any and all losses of pay, seniority and other benefits she may have suffered as a result of her termination from the date of her termination to the date of her reinstatement by the District.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner challenged the respondent Board's determination that her daughter, G.R., was not entitled to a free public education in the Borough of Watchung schools for the 2013-2014 school year. Petitioner asserted that she is domiciled in respondent's school district, but had not provided the district with an address for G.R. out of security and privacy concerns for herself and her daughter. Petitioner had submitted two letters from her landlord confirming that she resided in Watchung, but this documentation was rejected by the respondent Board as insufficient to prove residency. The Board contended that petitioner did not reside in the school district, and requested tuition reimbursement for the 2013-2014 school year in the amount of $13,863.

The ALJ found that, based on the documentation submitted by the petitioner and her credible testimony at hearing, K.G. resided within the Watchung Borough school district during the period at issue here. Accordingly, the ALJ concluded that petitioner's child is entitled to a free public education in the Watchung Borough schools, and that K.G. is not liable for tuition to the school district.

Upon review of the record and the Initial Decision, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed. The parties did not file exceptions to the Initial Decision.

Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) that the petitioner established that her child was entitled to attend school in the Watchung Borough District for the 2013-2014 school year. Accordingly, the recommended decision of the ALJ is adopted for the reasons expressed therein.

BEFORE JOSEPH A. ASCIONE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, K.G., the mother of the minor child G.R., appeals the determination of the Borough of Watchung (Somerset County) Board of Education (district) that G.R. did not reside within the district and is ineligible to attend Valley View School. The district alleges that the minor child G.R. was not residing within the Borough of Watchung. K.G. for personal security reasons of K.G. and G.R. did not provided the district an address for G.R. within Watchung; the district seeks repayment of tuition. At issue is whether G.R. is entitled to be enrolled in the district for purposes of receiving a thorough and efficient public education free of charge pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1. Petitioner provided two letters from her landlord confirming that she resided in the Borough of Watchung. See J-4 and J-5. A lease existed for this rental unit, however, now petitioner and her daughter reside at the location pursuant to a month to month tenancy.

On December 12, 2013, the district by correspondence (R-6) through counsel notified K.G., through her counsel, that G.R. was ineligible to continue to attend school within the district for the 2013/2014 school year. The correspondence further afforded K.G. time to appeal the decision for twenty-one days. The petitioner, through counsel, filed a notice of appeal on or about January 2, 2013. Deficiencies in the notice led petitioner to file an amended petitioner of appeal on March 3, 2014. The Department of Education accepted the amended petition of appeal. The district filed an Answer and Cross-Petition seeking reimbursement of per diem for the 2013/2014 school year on March 27, 2014. On March 27, 2014, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for determination as a contested case. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On September 19, 2014, the undersigned issued an Order to Seal the record in the within matter to protect the apartment number and street address of the petitioner. A hearing was held on September 29, 2014, and the record closed that date. On November 12, 2014, the Office of Administrative law requested an extension of time to file the Initial Decision to December 29, 2014.

TESTIMONY

K.G.

K.G. is the mother of G.R., she testified to living with G.R. K.G. testified that her address is xxx xxx xxx xxx, a residence within the Borough of Watchung. K.G. identified a lease agreement (A-3) with Avalon Bay Communities dated November 21, 2012, reflecting the above address. The lease by its terms ran from November 28, 2012 to November 27, 2013, at which time the lease expired. K.G. testified that she is now on a month to month tenancy at the same location. She identified electronic fund transfers to Avalon Access's web site (A-4). Those transfers reflect payments for the months of February, April, May, June, and September 2014. The amounts vary but exceed the monthly rental amount of the lease attached at A-3. K.G. also identified A-2 as a Google Maps© of the location of her residence, and A-1 as the Tax Map of the Borough of Watchung Tax Map, Sheet 16. K.G. further testified that since 1993, she owns property in the Borough of Watchung at 59 Brookdale Road.

This tribunal also considered the March 3, 2014, Petition of Appeal amended (J-10) executed by K.G.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The Order to Seal issued in this matter with the hope counsel could resolve the matter between themselves. The Order issued based upon representations that appellant had security and privacy concerns for herself and her daughter. This tribunal made no inquiry into the factual basis of the validity of the security concerns, however, the raising of those concerns, dictated the de minimus inconvenience to maintain the records as sealed. The sole issue to be considered is G.R.'s residency in the district.

The issue of the propriety of the district's action raised in petitioner's counsel's earlier submission and the petition is not addressed, as the decision on the merits eliminates the necessity to address that issue.

Petitioner initially submitted to the district documentation from her landlord advising that petitioner resided in the Borough of Watchung. See J-5 and J-6. The district rejected the submission as insufficient to prove the residency within the Borough of Watchung and found that the petitioner did not reside within the district. See J-2.

Petitioner submitted a tax map of the Borough of Watchung from 1939 (A-1) and a Google Maps© overview of the area in which her building is located (A-2). Comparing the maps provides some indication that property where petitioner resides lies within the border of the Borough of Watchung. I cannot conclusive find on the maps presented, that the property lies in the Borough of Watchung.

Petitioner submitted in camera the lease agreement (A-3). It reflects the rental of property with an address within the district of the Borough of Watchung. Petitioner testified that she regularly drives her daughter to school from that address. The electronic fund transfers (A-4) reflects payments of the rental obligations for various months in 2014. The payments include most of the 2012/2013 school year as well as September 2014. Petitioner also provided her testimony that she changed to a month to month tenancy at the end of the 2013 lease term but continues to live at the location in the Borough of Watchung and has paid all rents due.

A-4 reflects on-line rental payments for February, April, May, June, and September 2014. The payment amounts are nominally in excess of the rental terms of the lease. Payments consistent with petitioner's testimony of a rental increase.

In 1993, petitioner owned and did reside at property known as 59 Brookdale Road, Watchung, NJ, she still owns that property at the time of the hearing, but has not resided there for privacy and safety reasons.

The undersigned did not compute the district's cross-petition for tuition reimbursement for school year 2013/2014, based upon the initial decision in favor of petitioner. The parties did not dispute the annual amount of $13,863.

The district instituted a challenge to petitioner's domicile but did not provide any investigation, or witness to support their underlying determination that petitioner no longer resided within the district. Petitioner offered her certification to the petitioner, her testimony that she resides in Watchung, and letters from her landlord claiming she resides in Watchung.

I observed petitioner's testimony and concern over the privacy of her personal information. I found no inconsistencies in her testimony. Petitioner's testimony is accepted as credible.

FINDINGS OF FACT

Based on the agreement of the parties, the testimony presented, and the documentary evidence submitted, and having had an opportunity to observe the witness and to assess her credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

1. Petitioner, K.G., is the mother of the minor child G.R.; G.R. has attended school in the Borough of Watchung since 2007.

2. Petitioner's lease with Avalon Bay Communities, Inc., is for property within the district of the Borough of Watchung. It initially ran from November 28, 2012, to November 27, 2013.

3. Petitioner has remained in the same premises as a month to month tenant, and continues to pay rent for the property leased from Avalon Bay Communities, Inc. See A-4.

4. K.G. regularly drives her daughter to school from the residence in the Borough of Watchung.

5. The joint stipulation of procedural history and facts are incorporated herein by reference and attached to the initial decision as J-13.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

Residency

The issue in this matter is whether G.R. was entitled to a free education under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a), which provides that public schools shall be free to persons over five and under twenty years of age who are "domiciled within the school district." See V.R. ex rel A.R. v. Hamburg Bd. of Educ., 2 N.J.A.R. 283, 287 (1980), aff'd, State Bd., 1981 S.L.D. 1533, rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Rabinowitz v. N.J. State Bd. of Educ., 550 F. Supp. 481 (D.N.J. 1982) (New Jersey requires local domicile, as opposed to mere residence, in order for a student to receive a free education). A student may attend school in a district in which he is a non-resident, with or without payment of tuition, at the discretion of the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3(a); N.J.A.C. 6A:22-2.2.

The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. In re Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374–76 (Law Div. 1991), aff'd, 311 N.J. Super. 589 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 157 N.J. 541 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed.2d 518 (1999). A person may have many residences but only one domicile. Somerville Bd. of Educ. v. Manville Bd. of Educ., 332 N.J. Super. 6, 12 (App. Div. 2000), aff'd, 167 N.J. 55 (2001).

N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a) provides that a student is considered eligible to attend a school district if he or she is domiciled within the school district. A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose domicile is located within the school district.

The acts, statements and conduct of the individual, as viewed in light of all circumstances, determine a person's true intent. Collins v. Yancey, 55 N.J. Super. 514, 521 (Law Div. 1959). The parent/petitioner has the burden of proving domicile by a preponderance of the evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2). Here, petitioner rents an apartment in the Borough of Watchung and regularly drives her daughter to school from that location.

Where a person has more than one residence, the following factors are useful in determining one's domicile: the physical characteristics of each place, the time spent and the things done in each place, the other persons found there, the person's mental attitude towards each place, and whether there is or is not an intention, when absent, to return. Mercadante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39–40 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). "[A] choice of domicile by a person, irrespective of his motive, will be honored by the court, provided there are sufficient objective indicia, by way of proofs, supporting the actual existence of that domicile." In re Unanue, supra, 255 N.J. Super. at 374.

CONCLUSION

Based on all of the foregoing, I CONCLUDE that K.G. has met her burden of proof that she and G.R.'s domicile and residence is in the Borough of Watchung for the 2013/2014 school year.

ORDER

I hereby ORDER that K.G.'s petition on behalf of G.R. is GRANTED in all respects and G.R. will continue to be enrolled in the district.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RESPONDENT.	:

On September 25, 2014, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner adopted the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) approving the parties' settlement, which assessed petitioner Dorothy Lavdas tuition in the amount of $22,967.00 to compensate the respondent Burlington Township Board of Education for her child's period of ineligible attendance in the public schools of the district. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that petitioner has failed to make any payments toward said assessment, and requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the unsatisfied assessment on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. Petitioner has offered no reasons why the judgment against her should not be so docketed, although given an opportunity by this agency to do so.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Dorothy Lavdas is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $22,967.00, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the contested case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

The record of this matter, the parties' proposed Settlement Agreement and General Release, and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed. The Agreement – a term of which is respondent's resignation from employment in petitioner's district – appears to be in compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, which reiterates the standards set forth in In re Cardonick, 1990 S.L.D. 842 (1990) for the settlement of tenure cases. Although paragraph 14 of the Agreement provides for strict confidentiality, the parties are reminded that the Agreement may be subject to disclosure pursuant to the provisions of the Open Public Records Act, N.J.S.A. 47:1A-1, et seq.

Subject to the foregoing, the Commissioner approves the parties' settlement and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, which is hereby dismissed subject to compliance with the terms of the Agreement. A copy of this decision and its underlying record shall be forwarded to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

BEFORE BRUCE M. GORMAN, ALJ:

This matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law on July 27, 2010, for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 40A:14-202d.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE my initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of JOHN SAMMONS, JR., School District of City of Vineland, Cumberland County	STATE OF NEW JERSEY COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
	AGENCY DOCKET NO.: 78-4/09
	OAL DOCKET NO.: EDU 7987-10

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

The above-captioned matter having been filed with the Commissioner of Education and transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on July 27, 2010, for a hearing pursuant to NJSA 52:14B-1 et seq; relating to tenure charges filed by Petitioner, the City of Vineland Board of Education, represented by Frank DiDomenico, Esquire; against the respondent, John Sammons, Jr., being represented by William Nossen, Esquire; and the parties having agreed to the terms of an amicable settlement relating to the tenure charges as well as related litigation, the parties hereby agree as follows:

1. Respondent has been suspended without pay commencing April 23, 2009 and said suspension without pay continues to the present.

2. Respondent requested continuances of the scheduled tenure hearing asserting his Fifth Amendment privilege while awaiting disposition of criminal charges as set forth in the tenure charges.

3. The criminal trial was concluded on March 21, 2014. A Cumberland County jury returned a verdict of not guilty on all thirty-three (33) counts of the criminal indictment.

4. Respondent has made a claim for unpaid salary in the approximate amount of SIX HUNDRED THIRTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS ($613,000.00).

5. Petitioner shall withdraw and dismiss, with prejudice, the tenure charges pending before the Commissioner of Education and scheduled for hearing before the Office of Administrative Law, subject to approval by the Commissioner of Education.

6. The parties have agreed that in order to avoid the risk and expense of litigating Respondent's claim as set forth in paragraph 4 of this agreement, Petitioner has agreed to settle this claim and provide to Respondent payment in the amount of ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS ($100,000.00). By signing this Agreement, Respondent acknowledges that the consideration set forth in this paragraph is the entirety of the consideration that Petitioner will provide him to resolve his claim as set forth in paragraph 4. Petitioner's payment to Respondent shall not be deemed an admission by Petitioner that Respondent is entitled to any back pay monies, nor an admission by Respondent that the extent of his back pay is limited to the amount paid. Payment is simply a means of settling this disputed claim.

7. The $100,000.00 shall be paid in three (3) equal installments. The first installment shall be paid on the first day of the first month following the Commissioner of Education's approval of this Agreement. The second installment shall be paid on the first day of the month three (3) months thereafter. The third and final installment shall be paid on the first day of the month five (5) months after the second payment.

8. Respondent agrees to resign immediately from his employment with the Petitioner for purposes of retirement, and agrees that he will not, in the future, seek employment with the Petitioner in any capacity whatsoever, and will execute an irrevocable letter of resignation simultaneous with the execution of this agreement. The resignation shall only be effective pending approval of this agreement by the Commissioner of Education.

9. Respondent has filed various claims against the Vineland Board of Education related to the tenure charges. Respondent has filed an ethics charge against Vineland

Board of Education member, Thomas Ulrich, captioned John L. Sammons, Jr. v. Thomas Ulrich pending before the Office of Administrative Law, Docket No.: C-42-09; a petition before the New Jersey Division of Civil Rights, pending in the Office of Administrative Law, Docket No.: CRT 13809-2013S, captioned: John L. Sammons, Jr. v. Vineland Board of Education, alleging Respondent was denied a promotion to School Principal based upon his age and race and a Complaint in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Law Division, Cumberland County, Docket No.: CUM-L-748-10 captioned John Sammons v. Vineland Board of Education alleging a violation of New Jersey's Law Against Discrimination and alleging that Respondent was discharged in retaliation for engaging in protected activity and asserting a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress.

10. Respondent agrees to dismiss all of the above matters and additionally both Petitioner and Respondent agree to waive any and all other claims, in any form whatsoever, arising out of or related to this matter or Respondent's employment with Petitioner including but not limited to Respondent's suspension, reinstatement, certification of tenure charges against him and any other tenure related claim and any and all other claims arising from Respondent's employment by the Petitioner. This waiver is intended to be given the broadest possible interpretation and includes any claim which either party has, had, or could have had, against the other party, its employees, officers and agents.

11. Respondent does not dismiss his claim for counsel fees and costs relating to his criminal matter pursuant to NJSA 18A:16-6.1. The parties agree that Respondent's claim for counsel fees and costs shall be the subject of separate negotiations.

12. Respondent shall be paid an additional ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS ($100,000.00) as and for dismissal of all additional claims as set forth in the attached Settlement Agreement and General Release (Exhibit A) which is attached hereto and incorporated by reference.

13. Respondent waives any claim for compensation for any remaining accrued sick, vacation or personal days or any other emoluments he may possess as a result of his employment by the Petitioner pursuant to the terms of the Collective Negotiations Agreement between the Vineland Board of Education and the Vineland Administrators and Supervisors Association.

14. Petitioner and Respondent agree to maintain the confidentiality of this agreement as set forth more specifically at Paragraph 7 of Exhibit A.

15. The terms set forth herein and in Exhibit A constitute the parties entire agreement with regards to this matter. No other terms shall be implied or included.

16. The parties acknowledge that all terms of this agreement are subject to review and approval by the assigned Administrative Law Judge, Honorable Bruce M. Gorman, and subject to final approval by the Commissioner of Education.

17. As set forth in NJAC 6A:3-5.6, which sets forth the standards of In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decision SLD 842, 46), the parties submit and agree to the following:

a) The tenure charges allege that during Respondent's tenure as an Assistant Principal at Cunningham School, Respondent engaged in a course of criminal activity, specifically theft by knowingly billing the Vineland Board of Education and receiving payment for student tutoring which did not take place. Petitioner alleges such conduct was to the detriment of the students in need of additional educational services as well as a detriment to the Board and constituted criminal conduct and conduct unbecoming. The Respondent denied the charges as set forth.

b) A Cumberland County Grand Jury returned a thirty-three (33) count criminal indictment alleging criminal conduct by the Respondent. Following a criminal trial, a Cumberland County jury returned a verdict of not guilty on all thirty-three (33) criminal counts on March 21, 2014.

c) The parties, through counsel and with the assistance of Administrative Law Judge, Honorable William T. Miller, conducted a settlement conference which resulted in terms of settlement as set forth herein, and which will amicably resolve the matter to the benefit of both parties and will allow both parties to resolve this matter without the allocation of further time, expense and uncertainty involved in this tenure litigation.

d) Both parties have had the opportunity to review this matter and the terms of settlement with their legal counsel and consent to this agreement voluntarily and with the mutual interest of closure and resolution of all claims.

e) Respondent, in entering into this agreement, represents that he does so with the advice and consent of his legal counsel and with the full understanding of his rights and the effect and implications of all terms set forth in this agreement and that he does so having thoroughly reviewed this matter with legal counsel. The parties represent this Settlement Agreement is in the public interest as it resolves the tenure matter as well as the related claims filed by the Respondent against the Petitioner. The Petitioner considers the fact that a jury, after a lengthy trial, returned a verdict of not guilty on all thirty-three (33) criminal counts and therefore believes that further expenditure of public funds for discovery, a tenure hearing, review and possible Appellate Court appeals is not warranted.

f) Respondent, in entering into this agreement, acknowledges that he has been advised that the Commissioner of Education has a duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of Certificate.

g) Respondent further acknowledges that he has been advised that the Commissioner of Education may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for action against Respondent's Certificate as it may deem appropriate.

WHEREFORE, the parties to this matter have agreed to the above terms and have set their signatures as dated below.

JOHN SAMMONS Plaintiff V. VINELAND BOARD OF EDUCATION Defendant.	SUPERIOR COURT OF NEW JERSEY LAW DIVISION:CUMBERLAND COUNTY DOCKET NO.: CUM-L-748-10 SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND GENERAL RELEASE

RECITALS

WHEREAS, John L. Sammons (hereinafter referred to as "Sammons") is employed by Vineland Board of Education (hereinafter referred to as "Defendant") as an Assistant Principal; and

WHEREAS, on or about July 20, 2011, a Cumberland County grand jury returned a 33-count indictment (including charges of Official Misconduct, Theft By Deception, Tampering with Government Records or Information, Falsifying Government Records, Forgery, Forgery - Uttering, and Conspiracy) against Sammons, who was thereafter tried and found not guilty by a Cumberland County jury on or about March 21, 2014 (hereinafter referred to as "the Criminal Case"); and

WHEREAS, on or about January 15, 2008, Sammons filed an ethics charge with the School Ethics Commission asserting certain claims against Defendant's Board of Education member Thomas Ulrich (hereinafter referred to as "Ulrich"), entitled Sammons v. Ulrich, assigned Docket Number C-42-09 (hereinafter referred to as "the Ethics Charge"); and

WHEREAS, on or about April 22, 2009, Defendant certified tenure charges against Sammons ("the Tenure Charges") as set forth in the accompanying Settlement Agreement; and

WHEREAS, on or about July 16, 2010, Sammons filed an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission Charge of Discrimination, dual-filed with the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights, asserting certain claims against Defendant, entitled Sammons v. Vineland Board of Education, assigned Charge Number 17E 2010 00360 and thereafter investigated by the New Jersey Division on Civil Rights, which on or about August 28, 2014, per Sammons' request, transmitted the matter to the New Jersey Office of Administrative Law, which assigned the matter as Docket Number CRT 13809-2013 S (hereinafter referred to as "the Administrative Charge") and held the matter abeyance pending the resolution of the Criminal Case; and

WHEREAS, on or about July 19, 2010, Sammons filed a lawsuit in New Jersey Superior Court asserting certain claims against Defendant, entitled Sammons v. Vineland Board of Education, assigned Docket Number L748-10 (hereinafter referred to as "the Lawsuit") and held in abeyance pending the resolution of the Criminal Case; and

WHEREAS, Sammons now seeks from Defendant unpaid salary as set forth in Paragraph 4 of the accompanying Settlement Agreement; and

WHEREAS, the Ethics Charge alleged Lt. Thomas Ulrich violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(C), (D), (E), (F), (G), (I), and (J); and

WHEREAS, the Tenure Charges made allegations as set forth in Paragraph of Paragraph 17.a) of the accompanying Settlement Agreement; and

WHEREAS, the Administrative Charge alleged that Sammons was denied based on his age and race a principal position for which he was more qualified than the successful younger, Caucasian candidate; and

WHEREAS, the Lawsuit included claims for (1) violation of the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination (hereinafter referred to as "NJLAD"); (2) common law retaliatory discharge; and (3) the intentional infliction of emotional distress; and

WHEREAS, by entering into this Agreement, no party admits any liability whatsoever and specifically denies any and all allegations of wrongdoing; and

WHEREAS, it is understood and agreed by Sammons that Defendant, and its heirs, executors, administrators, officers, employees, successors, and assigns, by reason of the payment, consideration, and any other terms made on behalf of Defendant, do not admit any liability nor have they made any agreement to make any payment or to take any action not reflected in this Agreement. Further, it is understood and agreed by the parties that the allegations set forth in the Ethics Charge, the Administrative Charge, and the Lawsuit remain disputed, inconclusive, and expressly denied. Further still, it is understood and agreed by Sammons that Defendant and its insurer underwent a cost-benefit analysis and determined that it was appropriate to resolve this matter at this stage of the litigation based upon purely financial considerations; and

WHEREAS, it is understood and agreed that in releasing any and all claims he has asserted or could have asserted against Defendant, Sammons intends to release any and all claims he has asserted or could have asserted against all former and current employees, agents, and elected representatives of Defendant that exist through the date this Agreement is signed; thus, the term "Defendant" shall be understood to include all former and current employees, agents, and elected representatives of Defendant.

NOW, IN CONSIDERATION of the payment to Sammons, as provided for herein, and other good and valuable consideration, and the promises and covenants contained herein, the receipt and sufficiency of which is acknowledged, the parties do hereby agree to:

1. Fully and finally settle any and all of Sammons' claims against Defendant and Ulrich, including those not asserted in the Ethics Charge, the Administrative Charge, or the Lawsuit or those arising out of Sammons' employment by Defendant, as well as all other actions and claims which Sammons has, had, or otherwise may have against Defendant from the beginning of time, through the date on which this Agreement is executed, and

2. Fully and finally settle the Tenure Charges against Sammons, expressly incorporating by reference the accompanying Settlement Agreement;

3. Non-Admission This Agreement is not, and shall not in any way be considered or construed as an admission of liability by Defendant or Ulrich of discrimination, retaliation, tortious conduct, or of any violation of any law, common law, or federal, state, or local statute or regulation, or of any employment policy, practice, contract, or agreement, or of any alleged duty owed by Defendant, or of any unlawful or wrongful acts whatsoever by Defendant. Defendant specifically denies any wrongdoing of any kind.

Sammons declares and represents that the injuries which he has alleged to have sustained are or may be permanent and progressive and that recovery therefrom is uncertain and indefinite and in making this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that Sammons relies wholly upon his own judgment, belief, and knowledge of the nature, extent, and duration of said alleged injuries and liability therefor and he agrees to this settlement without reliance upon any statement or representation of Defendant or its representatives or by any physician or other provider it so employed.

Sammons further declares and represents that there may be unknown or unanticipated injuries resulting from his employment by Defendant and, in making this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that this Agreement is intended to settle his claims for any and all such injuries.

4. Dismissal of Charges & Lawsuit and Covenant Not to Sue

Sammons understands that the Commissioner of Education will dismiss the Ethics Charge with prejudice, the Office of Administrative Law will dismiss the Administrative Charge with prejudice, and the New Jersey Superior Court will dismiss the Lawsuit with prejudice, and he agrees not to appeal from the dismissal of, re-file, revive, or reopen the Ethics Charge, the Administrative Charge, or the Lawsuit or in any way.

Sammons further agrees that neither he, nor any person, organization, agency, or other entity acting on his behalf, will file, charge, claim or sue, or cause to be filed, charged, claimed or sued, any other lawsuit, legal proceeding, action, grievance, or claim of any nature with any court, agency, or tribunal (including any action for damages, attorneys' fees, injunction, declaratory, monetary, equitable, or other relief) against Defendant, based on any matter, fact, or event occurring prior to the effective date of this Agreement, whether now known or unknown, or involving any continuing effects of any acts or practices which may have arisen or occurred prior to the effective date of this Agreement, whether now known or unknown.

This Agreement does not, however, affect the rights and responsibilities of the EEOC and/or the National Labor Relations Board ("NLRB") and may not be used to justify interfering with the protected rights of Sammons and/or of any employee to file a charge or participate in an investigation or proceeding conducted by the EEOC and/or the NLRB. However, if such a charge is filed, Sammons agrees not to violate the confidentiality provisions of this Agreement to the extent that the confidentiality provisions do not conflict with any rule and/or regulation of either the EEOC and/or the NLRB and is otherwise lawful; and, Sammons further agrees and covenants that should he or any other person, organization, or other entity file, charge, claim, sue, cause, or permit to be filed any charge with the EEOC and/or the NLRB, civil action, suit, or legal proceeding against Defendant involving any matter concerning any incident which predates the execution of this Agreement, Sammons will not seek or accept any personal relief (including but not limited to monetary award, recovery, relief, or settlement) in such charge, civil action, suit, or proceeding.

5. Release General Release and Waiver of all of Sammons' Claims In consideration for the payment and promises described in Paragraph 8 and elsewhere in this Release, Sammons fully releases and forever discharges Defendant and Ulrich of and from any and all claims, actions, causes of action, back pay, front pay, contracts, agreements, promises, charges, judgments, grievances, obligations, rights, demands, debts, physical injury, pain, suffering, emotional distress, compensatory damages, punitive damages, attorneys' fees, expenses, costs, losses, liabilities, damages, or accountings of whatever nature, whether known or unknown, disclosed or undisclosed, asserted or unasserted, in law or equity, contract or tort or otherwise (herein collectively designated "Claims"), through the effective date of this Agreement, including, but not limited to, any and all Claims of harassment, discrimination, retaliation, and any and all tort Claims or contract Claims for general damages, and any and all Claims arising under, made, regarding, or involving: any federal, state, or local laws or under the common law; violations of any federal, state, or local fair employment practices or civil rights laws or ordinances; Claims for personal injury, defamation, wrongful conduct, or wrongful discharge; the Civil Rights Acts of 1866 and 1871, as amended, 42 U.S.C. §1981; the Civil Rights Act of 1964, as amended, including Title VII; the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, as amended; the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act; the Employee Retirement Income Security Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the National Labor Relations Act, as amended; any and all state wage payment and collection laws; the Defendant's policies, practices, collective bargaining agreements, contracts, benefits, or understandings; any Claims arising out of any relationship, including employment relationship, between or among Sammons and Defendant predating the effective date of this Agreement; and all Claims for employment, reemployment, or reinstatement of employment to Defendant; any and all grievances or demands for mediation or arbitration, or Claims or demands under Defendant's policies and procedures; and any and all Claims asserted, or which could have been asserted, in the Lawsuit referenced above, including any Claims against any current or former agents or employees of Defendant.

Sammons hereby specifically acknowledges that Defendant has made no promises or representations regarding his liability for Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund ("TPAF") contributions or his entitlement to receive retirement benefits from TPAF. It is understood and agreed that Sammons relies wholly upon his own judgment, belief, and knowledge of such liability and/or entitlement and this Agreement is made without reliance upon any statement or representation of Defendant or its representatives.

Sammons understands that, pursuant to the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, he is entitled to consult with an attorney and to have twenty-one (21) days within which to fully consider this Agreement. Sammons shall have seven (7) days following his signing of this Agreement to revoke this Agreement, which shall be done in writing.

Sammons may not waive this seven (7) day revocation period, but he may waive the twenty-one (21) period in which to consider the Agreement.

Sammons hereby specifically waives, releases, and gives up all Claims and rights, as described in the preceding paragraph, whether now known or unknown, which he has or may have against Defendant, based on any fact, act, event, or omission, whether now known or unknown, occurring before the Effective Date of this Agreement. Sammons understands that he is waiving, releasing, and giving up all Claims and rights that he knows about and all Claims and rights that he may not know about.

6. Resignation and Promise Not to Seek Reemployment Sammons and Defendant understand and agree that Sammons will resign in good standing by signing the irrevocable letter of resignation annexed hereto as "Exhibit 1," which will become effective as set forth in Paragraph 8 of the accompanying Settlement Agreement. Sammons acknowledges that Defendant has no obligation, contractual or otherwise, to hire or employ him in the future.

7. Confidentiality and Non-Disparagement Sammons agrees that the terms, conditions, facts of payments, and underlying facts of the settlement stated herein, but not the fact that the case was settled, shall be held confidential to the extent permissible by law.

The Parties to this Agreement agree to refrain from making negative or disparaging comments or remarks about the other party to this Agreement. Sammons understands that "Defendant," for these purposes, includes Defendant or any of its current or former employees, agents, and elected representatives. Sammons agrees to refrain from issuing any statement regarding Defendant or any of its current or former employees, agents, or elected representative relating to the facts alleged in the Administrative Charge, the Lawsuit, or the Ethics Charge, and related circumstances referenced therein.

8. Consideration In exchange for the terms contained in Paragraphs 1 through 7 above, the Parties agree to the following good and valuable consideration:

a. Sammons will be paid a lump sum amount of one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00). This payment shall consist of one payment of thirty thousand dollars ($30,000.00) to John L. Sammons and William Nossen, Esq. from New Jersey Schools Insurance Group, Defendant's liability insurer, and one payment of seventy thousand dollars ($70,000.00) to William Nossen, Esq. from Defendant. This consideration shall be paid within thirty (30) days of the Effective Date of the Agreement.

b. Sammons will be paid an additional one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000.00) as set forth in Paragraphs 6-7 in the accompanying Settlement Agreement.

These payments totaling two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) are on account of all equitable relief and monetary relief sought in unpaid salary, the Ethics Charge, the Administrative Charge, and the Lawsuit, or inclusive of all damages, attorneys' fees, expenses, and all other relief sought.

9. Liens and Indemnification by Sammons It is further understood that as a condition of this settlement, all claims, and/or liens, past, current, and/or future arising out of this settlement or asserted against the proceeds of this settlement are to be satisfied by Sammons and/or his Attorneys, including but not limited to any Medicare or Medicaid claims and/or liens, Worker's Compensation claims and/or liens, Social Security claims and/or liens, hospital/healthcare insurer claims and/or liens, physician or attorney claims and/or liens, or any of the statutory, equitable, common law or judgment claims and/or liens, including but not limited to claim based on subrogation or any other legal or equitable theory. Sammons therefore agrees, upon prompt presentation of any such claims and/or liens, to defend Defendant and its insurer against any such claims and/or liens, and to indemnify and hold Defendant and its insurer harmless against any judgment entered against Defendant and its insurer based on such claims and/or liens, including the payment of any fines, charges, and attorneys' fees incurred as a result of any such lien.

10. Prevailing Party Status Sammons understands and agrees that he will not be considered a prevailing party under any statute, common law, or otherwise as a result of this Agreement.

11. Neutral Job Reference Defendant agrees that all requests for references for Sammons will be directed to the attention of Dr. Joseph Rossi, and the reference will be limited to the following information, and the reference will be limited to the following information:

(a) Sammons left Defendant's employment in good standing;

(b) date of hire;

(c) date of separation;

(d) position held at time of separation; and

(e) salary at time of separation.

12. Payment Payment to Sammons is subject to Defendant's receipt of Sammons' signed and notarized Agreement, a signed irrevocable letter of resignation (Exhibit 1), a child support search report, and a Form W-9 completed by his attorney.

The payment of two hundred thousand dollars ($200,000.00) described at Paragraphs 8.a. and 8.b. will not be subject to any withholding and will be taxed in the manner of a 1099 form.

Sammons represents and warrants that neither Defendant nor its attorneys provided any advice regarding the taxability of the settlement amounts paid pursuant to this paragraph. Sammons acknowledges and agrees that he is solely responsible for payment of any and all federal, state, and local taxes which may be due from the settlement sum in the event that it is determined that any taxes are owed based on the taxation laws in effect on the date of execution of this Agreement or become due at any time in the future because of a change to the laws governing the taxation of such settlement proceeds. Sammons further acknowledges and agrees to indemnify and hold harmless Defendant and its attorneys harmless in the event that any federal, state, or local taxing authority asserts against any claim for unpaid taxes, failure to withhold taxes, or interest based upon the payment of the settlement sum to Sammons. Sammons further represents and warrants that neither Defendant nor its attorneys provided any advice regarding this Agreement's or the settlement amounts' effect on Sammons' retirement contributions to or payments from TPAF.

13. Effective Date The effective date of this Agreement shall be the day following the date upon which the signed and notarized Agreement is received by the last of Defendant's and Ulrich's attorneys Methfessel & Werbel; Frank DiDomenico, Esq.; or Lenox, Socey, Formidoni, Giordano, Cooley, Lang & Casey.

14. Applicable Law This Agreement shall be governed by and construed in accordance with the laws of New Jersey, except where federal law controls. Should any provision of this Agreement be declared or determined by any Court to be illegal or invalid, the validity of the remaining parts, terms or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal or invalid part, term, or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this Agreement or may be modified as necessary.

15. Entire Agreement This Agreement, together with the accompanying Settlement Agreement, sets forth the entire agreement between the parties and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings between the parties.

16. Signatures This Agreement may be signed in counterparts. However, this Agreement will not be binding among the parties until it has been executed and delivered by and among the Parties and subject to Defendant's receipt of Sammons' signed and notarized Agreement, a signed irrevocable letter of resignation (Exhibit 1), a child support search report, and a Form W-9 completed by his attorney.

JOHN L. SAMMONS FURTHER CERTIFIES, ACKNOWLEDGES, AND REPRESENTS THAT HE IS ABLE TO READ AND UNDERSTAND ENGLISH, THAT HE UNDERSTANDS ALL OF THE PROVISIONS HEREIN, WITH THE ADVICE AND ASSISTANCE OF HIS ATTORNEY, AND THAT HE MAKES THIS RELEASE KNOWLINGLY AND VOLUNTARILY.

JOHN L. SAMMONS ACKNOWLEDGES THAT HE HAS NO PHYSICAL OR MENTAL PROBLEM, CONDITION, OR IMPAIRMENT OF ANY KIND WHICH HAS INTERFERED WITH HIS ABILITY TO READ AND UNDERSTAND THE MEANING OF THIS RELEASE OR ITS TERMS.

Agency Docket No. 267-9/14

Ruling on Respondent's Motion to Dismiss

Tia Schneider Denenberg, Arbitrator

APPEARANCES

FOR THE PETITIONER:

Laura Miller, Scarinci Hollenbeck
Sean D. Dias, Scarinci Hollenbeck
Ramon E. Rivera, Scarinci Hollenbeck

FOR THE RESPONDENT:

Nancy Oxfeld, Oxfeld Cohen

BACKGROUND

This matter is before the Arbitrator for a decision on the motion to dismiss filed by Marie Ebert (Respondent) on November 18, 2014. The Respondent filed a letter memorandum in lieu of brief in support of the motion on November 18, 2014, and also filed a supplemental letter memorandum on November 25, 2014.

- On December 5, 2014, the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County (Petitioner) filed a brief in opposition to the Respondent's motion to dismiss.

- On December 10, 2014, the Respondent filed a letter memorandum in response to the Petitioner's brief.

• On December 12, 2014, the Petitioner filed a letter brief as a sur-reply to the Respondent's December 10, 2014 letter memorandum.[1]

• On December 22, 2014, the Respondent submitted an arbitration decision that was issued on December 20, 2014.

• On January 2, 2015, the Arbitrator requested an extension to February 19, 2015, from the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes which was granted.

• On January 3, 2015, the Respondent submitted an arbitration decision that was issued on December 29, 2014.

I. Statement of Facts

The Respondent is a teacher in the District. She received a rating of "partially effective" in her 2012-2013 annual summative evaluation and "ineffective" in her 2013-2014 annual summative evaluation.

On August 26, 2014, the District served the Respondent with a "Notice of Tenure Charges" for inefficiency and conduct unbecoming a public school teacher, along with a Statement of Evidence, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1. The Statement of Evidence included 19 exhibits, consisting of evaluations from the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, as well as memoranda, e-mails and correspondence regarding the Respondent's performance as a tenured teacher. The State-District Superintendent certified the tenure charges on September 18, 2014, and filed the charges with the New Jersey Department of Education (DOE).

By letter dated October 2, 2014, the Respondent asked the District for complete copies of any files about her that it maintained. On the same day, the Respondent filed an answer to the tenure charges, requesting that they be dismissed and raising 14 defenses.

By letter dated October 10, 2014, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes notified the parties as follows:

[1] The District objected to the submission of Respondent's supplemental brief on the ground that the Arbitrator had not granted permission for the brief. The Respondent's request to file a supplemental brief is hereby granted. Similarly, the District's request to file its sur-reply is also granted.

> Please be advised that, following receipt of respondent's answer on October 3, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; upon review, the Commissioner [of Education] is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Tia Schneider Denenberg as required by statute.

In e-mail exchanges beginning on October 7, 2014, the Arbitrator and the parties agreed that three days of hearing would be scheduled for November 20, November 21 and November 25, 2014. In a conference call with the parties on October 17, 2014, the Arbitrator directed them to take careful note of statutory deadlines. The Arbitrator encouraged the parties during those exchanges "to work out the various filing dates."

On October 22, 2014, the Respondent asked the Petitioner for the information required by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b as soon as possible. Noting that the statutory provision requires the District to supply a list of witnesses "with a complete summary of their testimony," the Respondent "remind[ed]" the District > that 'a complete summary of their testimony' is not the same as a statement of the subject upon which the individual would testify. Thus, for example, it is not sufficient to state that an individual will testify as to:

> > Ms. Ebert's performance and Ms. Ebert's compliance with her CAP [Corrective Action Plan].
> You must set forth the specific facts which will be testified to by the witness.

Also on October 22, 2014, the Respondent sent Petitioner 25 Interrogatories regarding the Petitioner's compliance with statutory procedural requirements, the Respondent's attendance record and requests for accommodation, and the allegations in the tenure charges of conduct unbecoming a teacher. On October 30, 2014, the Respondent sent revised Interrogatories; the sole revision corrected one erroneous reference to the Respondent.

On October 31, 2014, the Petitioner forwarded to the Arbitrator a letter of clarification from the DOE Assistant Commissioner, dated October 24, 2014. The letter responded to a request by the District for clarification of the DOE's intent in the "Guide to the TEACHNJ Act,"[2] as well as the status of the District's evaluation rubric during the 2012-2013 school year. The Assistant Commissioner's letter stated in relevant part:

> [S]ince August 2012, the Department has published many resources meant to support school districts in the implementation of the Act. One such document was a response to questions regarding

[2] TEACHNJ is the acronym of the "Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey" Act, which was approved on August 6, 2012.

> TEACHNJ's new requirement that teachers must demonstrate four years of teaching within a school district, with a rating of effective or highly effective in two annual summative evaluations within the first three years of employment . ... [Many non-tenured teachers requested] the District to clarify how the law applied to their tenure acquisition and the Department responded accordingly:
>
> > No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where [sic] the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when the summative rating "clock" . . . will start.
> [S]uch clarifications did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions, such as the decision to renew or non-renew a nontenured teacher or the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher . . . In fact, the Department issued multiple publications notifying pilot school districts that any personnel consequences connected with evaluations were a matter of local decision and applicable State law .... The Department did not perceive any limitations to the use of evaluation rubrics in the 2012-2013 school year for personnel decisions as no such limitation is mentioned in the TEACHNJ Act.

On November 10, 2014, the Petitioner delivered to the Respondent 1,690 pages of documents, with no directory or index, which "the District intends to rely on at the hearing." On November 13, 2014, the Petitioner gave the Respondent a list of ten potential witnesses. According to the Respondent, the list lacks the statutorily required "complete summary of [the witnesses'] testimony." Rather, it merely identifies the subjects covered by the testimony.

On November 18, 2014, the Respondent requested adjournment of the hearings that were scheduled to begin on November 20, because she would be filing a motion to dismiss the charges. The District joined in the request. On November 20 the hearing was opened during a conference call with the Arbitrator. The hearings scheduled for November 21 and November 25 were adjourned.

In a letter memorandum in support of her November 18, 2014, motion to dismiss, the Respondent asserted, among other things, that as > we have not received any of the files requested (unless they are somehow jumbled into the 1,690 pages of documents, but we have not received any indication as to whether they are or are not), we have not received complete summaries of the testimony of witnesses and we have not received a response to Interrogatories.

On December 5, 2014, the District answered the Respondent's interrogatories, which had been sent on October 22 and revised on October 30. The District also gave the Respondent that day an index to the 1,690 documents which had been provided on November 10.

II. Positions of the Parties

The parties' arguments address two distinct issues: (A) a threshold issue as to whether the Arbitrator has authority to consider the Respondent's motion to dismiss; and (B) if the Arbitrator has such authority, whether the motion to dismiss should be granted. The parties' arguments with respect to the issues are set forth and addressed below.

A. Threshold Issue: Arbitrator's Authority to Consider Motion to Dismiss

1. The District's Position

The District argues that the Arbitrator lacks the statutory authority to consider the Respondent's motion to dismiss because: (1) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the Commissioner of Education has the sole authority to determine if the District properly followed the evaluation process, and in this case the Commissioner determined that the District did follow the evaluation process; and (2) once a tenure case is referred, the arbitrator may make only factual determinations on matters confined by statute that are based on a full evidentiary hearing.

As to its first contention, the District notes that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c provides the following:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

According to the District, this provision empowers the Commissioner alone to determine whether the evaluation process was followed. In other words, that authority resides exclusively with the Commissioner and not with an arbitrator.

The District contends that its view is supported by the statute's legislative history. The Senate and Assembly Statements associated with the TEACHNJ Act describe the Commissioner's role as follows:

> If the charge is forwarded to the commissioner, the individual against whom the charges are filed will have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner, and the commissioner, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed, is required to forward the case to the arbitrator within five business days following the period provided for the response to the charges.

The description makes clear, the District believes, that the Legislature intended the Commissioner to be the sole decision-maker in the initial phase of the process.

The statute mandates, the District asserts, that a challenge to the evaluation process be brought to the Commissioner, given that the discretion to make a determination lies solely with him. Thus, a dispositive motion by a teacher alleging failure of a district to follow the evaluation process may be made only to the Commissioner prior to the referral of the charges to an arbitrator. The Commissioner's determination cannot be "punted" to an arbitrator, which is evident from the strict limitation of the scope of an arbitrator's review in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2.

Here, the Commissioner exercised his authority pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.c when he issued the October 10, 2014, correspondence to the parties. This correspondence constituted a final administrative decision. As such, the proper mechanism to contest it is a judicial appeal lodged in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1. Since the Respondent did not file her motion to dismiss with the Commissioner prior to referral to the Arbitrator, her motion must be denied.[3]

As its second point, the District argues that once a tenure case is referred, the arbitrator may only make factual determinations, on matters restricted by statute, that are based on a full evidentiary hearing.

Under TEACHNJ, once a tenure charge is transmitted to an arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1, based on an allegation that the employee was inefficient pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, the arbitrator's decision is confined to determining whether:

> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
>
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or
> (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

[3] The District asserts that its view is supported by two arbitration decisions. In its sur-reply, the District acknowledges that a third arbitration decision supports the Respondent's argument, but the district insists that the decision is incorrect.

According to the District, the language of subsection (1) predicates an arbitrator's determination of the adequacy of an individual teacher's evaluation on a previous finding of the soundness of the evaluation process itself. In other words, in order to dismiss a tenure charge on the basis of a flawed "evaluation process," the arbitrator would be required to determine that the error "materially affected the outcome of the evaluation" in the relevant school year. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2b. That determination cannot be made without considering all evidence presented at the hearing, including the results of observations and the testimony of witnesses about the inefficiency of the teacher.

2. The Respondent's Position

The Respondent disputes the District's claim that the Commissioner determined that the tenure charges in this matter meet all statutory procedural requirements, and also disputes its contention that the Arbitrator lacks authority to decide a claim that the charges do not meet statutory procedural requirements.

The Respondent relies on a growing list of arbitrators' decisions in support of her position that an arbitrator has the authority to determine whether tenure charges brought by a school district comply with all statutory procedural requirements. According to the Respondent, these decisions support her position that the arbitrator has the authority to decide this motion, and that the Commissioner did not render a decision that all procedural requirements for the tenure charges to proceed to hearing have been met.

3. Holding: Arbitrator's Authority

Consideration of the relevant statutory provisions leads to the conclusion that the Respondent's motion to dismiss is properly before the Arbitrator.[4]

It is clear from the provisions of TEACHNJ, and is undisputed by the parties, that a chief purpose of the legislation was to expedite the processing of teacher tenure cases. To this end, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 states that upon receipt of a charge of teacher inefficiency, the Commissioner shall examine the charge, and the teacher shall have 10 days to submit a written response. Within five days from the deadline for a written response, the Commissioner must refer the case to an arbitrator, unless he or she determines that the evaluation process has not been followed. Thus, the Commissioner's determination must be made within a brief period.

[4] In addressing the parties' arguments on the issues in this matter, due consideration has been given to the arbitration awards they have cited. The awards are informative, but the controlling consideration is the Legislature's intent, as evidenced in the statutory provisions. Since the TEACHNJ Act established a permanent panel of 25 arbitrators to hear tenure charges, it is to be expected that awards may reach contradictory interpretations of the legislation. The awards are subject to judicial review, which may ultimately resolve conflicts among them. Until then, the awards ought not be regarded as final for purposes of collateral estoppel.

The term "evaluation" is defined in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-119 as a process > based on the individual's job description, professional standards and Statewide evaluation criteria that incorporates analysis of multiple measures of student progress and multiple data sources. Such evaluation shall include formal observations, as well as post conferences, conducted and prepared by an individual employed in the district in a supervisory role and capacity and possessing a school administrator certificate, principal certificate, or supervisor certificate.

The Legislature also defined the factors that an arbitrator may consider in analyzing the "evaluation process." Under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a.1, the arbitrator shall consider whether "the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan." If the employee is able to demonstrate such a failure, the arbitrator must determine if it materially affected the outcome. If it did not, the arbitrator renders a decision in favor of the board, and the employee is dismissed. N.J.S.A 18A:6-17.2b.

Thus, the Legislature created distinctive roles for both the Commissioner and an arbitrator in reviewing the evaluation process. The Legislature clearly intended the Commissioner to decide within five days whether a District had taken the requisite steps for completing an evaluation,[5] whereas the arbitrator was asked to determine whether those steps were carried out correctly and in accordance with the prescribed standards. This construction of the legislation gives meaningful purpose and effect to both its language and intent.

The Respondent's motion to dismiss presents several arguments challenging the way her evaluation was conducted, which is the domain of the arbitrator. Other arguments presented by the motion call into question the production of evidence and the discovery process. Since this occurred after the charges were referred to the Arbitrator, it cannot have been a matter for the Commissioner. Consequently, both categories of arguments submitted in the motion are properly before the Arbitrator and will be addressed to the extent necessary.

[5] The Commissioner's determination that the steps leading to the teacher's evaluation were taken is an administrative decision that can be challenged only in a judicial forum.

B. Merits of the Motion to Dismiss

1. Contentions of the Respondent

The Respondent first addresses the tenure charge process, and then the reasons that the charges should be dismissed.

a. The tenure charge process

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1 removed tenure charge hearings from the Office of Administrative Law and the Commission of Education. It substituted hearings before a permanent panel of arbitrators, in part to make the hearing process simpler and speedier. To that end, the scope of arbitral review was limited to the four matters set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2a, and the arbitrator was specifically prohibited from reviewing the evaluator's judgment about the quality of an employee's classroom performance. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2c. Discovery, too, was streamlined. Upon referral of the charges to arbitration, the district was required to > provide all evidence, including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony to the employee or the employee's representative. N.J.S.A. 18A:6.17.1b3.

A district was precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses. Id.

A prudent district would not file the charges until it was ready to proceed with discovery, since the respondent had to be given all discovery documents and a complete summary of each potential witness' testimony as soon as the case is referred to the arbitrator. Thus, the district should be thoroughly prepared before the tenure charge is filed.

Tenure litigation does not assure equity in the matter of access to information. In challenging a termination for inefficiency, the employee is limited to a maximum of 25 interrogatories. Depositions are not taken. Given the rapidity of the process, the window for acquiring information to prepare a case is open only briefly.

Offsetting the disadvantages attributable to the speed of the process and the limited discovery is the teacher's entitlement to timely receipt of all evidence that might be used against her and a complete summary of witness testimony. The entitlement helps balance the equities, since a district decides when to "pull the trigger" by filing the charge. The teacher is in a reactive posture. For that reason, the burden is properly on the district to prepare the charge and the supporting material adequately before filing. In this instance, the district did not meet that burden.

b. The tenure charges must be dismissed as premature

The Respondent contends that under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123e, the 2013-2014 school year is the first year in which an individual can be evaluated under the comprehensive scheme that requires termination if an individual is rated "ineffective" and/or "partially effective" for two straight years. The central issue is whether charges of inefficiency pursuant to TEACHNJ can be brought after the conclusion of 2013-2014 school year (using evaluations for the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years), as argued by the District, or only after the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year (using evaluations for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years), as argued by the Respondent. The issue has already been decided in favor of the teacher by several arbitrators. Their decisions support the Respondent's position that the charges must be dismissed when they are based on evaluations for the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years. The doctrine of collateral estoppel precludes raising again an issue that was already decided in another arbitration case to which the District was a party. If the District believes that an arbitrator's interpretation of the statute is wrong, it can seek to have that decision vacated by a court. Until then, the District is bound by the decision. For that reason, the tenure charges against the Respondent must be dismissed as having been filed prematurely, in violation of TEACHNJ.

c. The tenure charges must be dismissed because the District failed to disclose all evidence to the Respondent when the charges were referred to arbitration

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b3 could not be more clear:

> Upon referral of the case for arbitration, the employing board of education shall provide all evidence, including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employee or the employee's representative. The employing board of education shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses.

When the Legislature enacted TEACHNJ, it sought to achieve speed without sacrificing fairness. In requiring teachers who are charged and suspended without pay to be returned to the payroll within 120 days (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11), the Legislature allowed little time for discovery. It therefore required that a district, which chooses the time of filing, prepare its case in advance, disclosing to the teacher all pertinent documentation as well as a complete summary of possible testimony. The completeness of the disclosure compensates for the relatively short time that the teacher has to respond to the charges. When a district fails to furnish full discovery at the time of the referral, as required by the Legislature, it cannot present any evidence at the hearing "except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses." N.J.S.A. 18A:16-171b3.

In the instant matter the District produced no evidence, no list of witnesses, and no complete summary of testimony until one week prior to the scheduled hearing. Production was late, despite prompting by the teacher's counsel. The District's tardiness violates TEACHNJ by hampering the teacher's ability to prepare a response. Consequently, the charges must be dismissed, since there is no evidence that the District can legally present at the hearing.

d. The charges must be dismissed, since the witness list provided by the District does not contain a complete summary of the witnesses' testimony

The law requires not merely a list of witnesses but "a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony." The list of witnesses that the Petitioner submitted one week before the scheduled start of the hearing lacks a detailed account of the facts to which the individuals will testify. It contains only a general description of the matters that would be covered. Accordingly, even if it had been produced at the time the charges were assigned to the Arbitrator, the statement would have been insufficient.

The Respondent was entitled to learn the substance of the testimony, that is, the facts that would be adduced, not just a list of the topics that would be covered. The law makes it clear that while the process must move briskly, the Respondent should not be left to guess about the information that will emerge at the hearing. The Respondent was denied her right to be informed about any documentary or testimonial evidence that could be presented at the hearing.

In short, the Respondent did not receive a list of witnesses with "a complete summary of their testimony," either when the matter was transferred to the Arbitrator, two months before the scheduled hearing, or when the list of witnesses was given to the Respondent a scant week prior to the scheduled hearing. Therefore, the tenure charges must be dismissed.

e. The tenure charges must be dismissed, since the Petitioner has not replied to the Respondent's discovery requests

The Respondent submitted interrogatories as well as a request for a copy of any files concerning her that are maintained by the District. As of November 18, 2014, she had received no answers to the interrogatories, unless they are buried somewhere among the 1,690 pages of non-indexed documents that were delivered.

Without a complete response, the Respondent is denied the opportunity to pursue her statutory defenses: that procedural requirements of TEACHNJ were not met with regard to her entire evaluation process, that the District refused to accommodate her illness, that she was retaliated against for requesting accommodation, and that the District demanded her return to work from sick leave.

The District does not have the right to deny information to the Respondent that she needs to present a defense. The District cannot just deliver 1,690 pages of unorganized documents and a generalized witness list to a respondent the week before the hearing and expect the tactic to be considered compliance with the law. The statute calls for full discovery in ample time to prepare the litigation. The charges must be dismissed, because absent full discovery, the respondent could not effectively defend herself.

f. The Arbitrator does not have jurisdiction to decide a charge of inefficiency on an alternate statutory basis

The District argues that there is an independent statutory basis for pursuing charges of inefficiency, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. However, given that this argument has been rejected in another case, the Arbitrator here should reject the claim as well.

2. Contentions of the Petitioner

a. The evaluations of the Respondent for the 2012-2013 school year are valid as TEACHNJ was in full force and effect in the 2012-2013 school year and the collateral estoppel doctrine does not bar the Arbitrator from considering the District's arguments in this regard

i. Prematurity

The Respondent argues that inefficiency charges are premature and cannot be brought against her until after the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year, pursuant to TEACHNJ.

The Respondent's argument that the 2012-2013 evaluations cannot be used as part of the two-year evaluation period under TEACHNJ is contrary to the plain text of the act. The legislation was passed on August 6, 2012, and went into effect before the beginning of the 2012-2013 school year. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 to 129 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 through 17.5., N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117.

In light of the statutory language, there is no question that evaluations in the 2012-2013 school year were to be used to determine whether tenure charges were warranted. That was the conclusion of the DOE on October 24, 2014. Although the Respondent terms the DOE's conclusion a "personal opinion" of the Assistant Commissioner, that characterization cannot detract from the import of the analysis of the act's effective date by the agency specifically tasked with implementing it.

ii. Collateral Estoppel

The Respondent's contention that collateral estoppel bars the filing of the charges rests principally on the allegedly binding effect of recent arbitration decisions. Those decisions found that the effective date of the act is the school year 2013-2014, so that an evaluation in the 2012-2013 school year could not be used as a reason to file charges. However, the Respondent failed to cite any statutory basis for finding that the effective date for taking action against a teacher was 2013-2014. The Respondent's reliance on a source other than the TEACHNJ statute should be given no weight.

Moreover, two of the conditions needed to invoke the collateral estoppel doctrine—a final judgment on the merits and no possibility of review—are not present here. The District still could seek vacation of the award relied upon by the teacher. Thus, there has been no final determination of the disputed legal issue.

Additionally, there is no judicial decision with respect to the general issue of the effective date of the act. Given that it was passed as recently as August, 2012, conflicting arbitration awards on legal issues related to the act's implementation are natural. Such conflicts will ultimately be resolved by New Jersey courts. Applying the doctrine of collateral estoppel during the act's infancy would be unjustified. Until the issue of the Act's effective date is resolved in a judicial forum, arbitrators are likely to render decisions that reflect their personal opinions.

b. The Arbitrator has jurisdiction to determine the inefficiency charge under either N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

Relying on two arbitration awards, the District contends that the Arbitrator has jurisdiction to determine the inefficiency charge under either N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A.

18A:6-17.3. Importantly, in the instant case, this matter was initially pleaded under both sections. While N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 mandates charges for two consecutive annual ratings of "ineffective" or "partially effective," N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 allows dismissal on the basis of inefficiency or other grounds specified in the statute, including conduct unbecoming a teacher. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Even if the Arbitrator concludes that the requirements for inefficiency charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 have not been met, the charge must be evaluated under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Therefore, the case should proceed to hearing.

c. The District has complied with its discovery obligations and, in any event, there is no statutory authority to dismiss this matter on the basis of a board of education's failure to provide discovery

N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3 instructs a board of education to provide its evidence and witness summaries "upon referral of the case for arbitration." There is no specific deadline by which this must be done. There are no reported cases that have analyzed the term "upon referral," but one arbitrator has rejected the Respondent's definition that "upon referral" means simultaneously with the referral.

The Respondent complains that the Petitioner did not provide its document production or witness summaries until one week before the scheduled hearing on November 20, 2014 and asserts that pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3, the tenure charges against the Respondent must be dismissed. However, during the first conference call between the parties on October 17, 2014, the Arbitrator directed them to work out discovery and motion deadlines. This fact alone removes the discovery process in this case from the strictures in N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3. A comprehensive discovery schedule was not completed, as neither party contacted the other in order to create one.

On November 7, 2014, the District advised the Respondent that its evidentiary documents and witness list would be supplied on November 10, 2014 and November 12, 2014, respectively. Since the Respondent did not object to these deadlines, either to Petitioner or to the Arbitrator, the Petitioner's discovery was produced accordingly. Indeed, the first time the Respondent has sought a remedy from the Arbitrator with respect to discovery was the instant motion to dismiss. The Respondent also failed to provide any discovery or witness lists of her own. Applying a standard of reasonableness to these circumstances requires denial of the Respondent's motion to dismiss.

Additionally, this is not, as the Respondent implies, a case where a party is forced to prepare a defense based upon a naked pleading and would be prejudiced by last minute, voluminous discovery. The Statement of Evidence furnished to Respondent with the filing of the charges on August 26, 2014, included 19 exhibits and fully explained the basis for the charges. In any event, the Petitioner's evidence was in fact provided to the Respondent 10 days before the scheduled hearing.

As the Respondent points out, a tenure proceeding should ensure a speedy resolution. Indeed, while N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3 does not set a precise deadline for a district to furnish its evidence, it does specify a deadline for the responding teacher to furnish his or her evidence, namely ten days before the hearing. The statute thus assumes that ten days is a sufficient period of time for counsel to have evidence in hand in order to prepare for a hearing.

While the Respondent complains of 1,690 documents "dumped" on her ten days before the hearing, most of those documents consist of Respondent's personnel file, which was requested by the Respondent. Much of the Respondent's personnel file is duplicative of Petitioner's Statement of Evidence and/or is irrelevant to the charges, a conclusion which can be reached by the Respondent's quick perusal of the dates of the documents themselves. The charges filed against the Respondent state that the underlying conduct began on October 19, 2012 (inefficiency) and June 7, 2013 (conduct unbecoming). In other words, the volume of the documentation does not correlate with the time needed to review it.

The Respondent points to no legal authority in support of the extraordinary remedy she seeks. Nothing in N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3 supports dismissal of tenure charges for a district's failure to provide discovery beyond that provided in its statement of evidence. The Legislature could have allowed such a remedy if it so elected, as it in fact did in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-13, which provides for dismissal of tenure charges when a district fails to make a probable cause determination within 45 days after receipt of the written charge.

Moreover, the remedy in N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3 for failing to produce witness summaries is not a dismissal of the charges but merely the preclusion of any evidence or witnesses not produced, except for impeachment purposes. The argument Respondent advances for dismissal is that "there is no evidence which [Petitioner] can legally present at the hearing". (See Page 8 of Respondent's initial brief). This is not true. The Petitioner has filed a Statement of Evidence, and the Respondent has filed an answer. The exhibits attached to the Statement of Evidence are admissible. The Respondent would not be prejudiced if a hearing were to go forward on the Statement of Evidence alone.

Additionally, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1f reads:

> Timelines set forth herein shall be strictly followed; the arbitrator or any involved party shall inform the commissioner of any timeline that is not adhered to.

At no point before the motion to dismiss did the Respondent advise the Commissioner or the Arbitrator that the District had not adhered to the discovery deadlines. The Respondent is therefore not in compliance with the statute she cites and cannot avail herself of its remedies.

III. Discussion

TEACHNJ established a new structure for processing teacher tenure charges. A keystone of the structure is referral of charges to arbitration proceedings that are intended to be expeditious yet guarantee the teacher due process. In order to accomplish these objectives, the Legislature limited the arbitrator's substantive review of teacher evaluations and mandated prompt disclosure of relevant evidence to the teacher. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b3 states:

> Upon referral of the case for arbitration, the employing board of education shall provide all evidence, including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employee or the employee's representative. The employing board of education shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses.

Thus, the Legislature made it clear that the teacher was to receive "all evidence," including the items listed in the statute, "upon referral" of a case to arbitration. This requirement serves two important interests: (1) ensuring that the teacher gains access to the district's evidence early enough to mount an effective defense; and (2) ensuring that the proceeding begins swiftly and operates under strict time constraints.

In the instant case, the Commissioner informed the parties that the tenure matter was being referred to the Arbitrator on October 10, 2014. According to the plain language of the statute, the District was required to disclose all evidence to the Respondent on that date. The Legislature could not have more lucidly articulated the District's obligation. That body might have instructed the District to send the evidence within a reasonable period after referral or within a specified number of days of referral. But it did not. Rather, consistent with its goal of assuring both rapid hearing of a charge and due process, the Legislature expressly required the District to turn over all evidence precisely when the matter was referred to arbitration. No delay was contemplated.

To read the statute as allowing the District to wait until a later time would be inconsistent with the purposes of the legislation, inasmuch as it would hinder the teacher's ability to defend herself, denying her due process. As the party that initiated the process, determined when charges would be filed, and possessed the evidence that underpinned them, the District should have been prepared to comply in a timely fashion with its statutory disclosure obligation. If the obligation is not enforced in this instance, the structure envisioned by the Legislature may collapse when the volume of cases swells.

It is readily apparent that the District did not provide the Respondent with all evidence on October 10, 2014, the date on which the matter was referred to the Arbitrator. Indeed, the District does not argue otherwise. According to the record, the District supplied the Petitioner with the following material on the dates specified:

(1) On November 10, 2014, one month after the date the matter was referred to the Arbitrator, the Petitioner delivered to the Respondent 1,690 pages of documents, with no index, that the District intends to rely on at the hearing.

(2) On November 13, 2014, the Petitioner provided the Respondent with a list of ten potential witnesses.

(3) On December 5, 2014, the Petitioner gave the Respondent an index of the 1,690 documents sent on November 10, 2014.

(4) On December 5, 2014, the Petitioner submitted answers to the Respondent's interrogatories, which were sent on October 22, 2014, and revised on October 30, 2014.

The timing of these submissions establishes that the Petitioner did not comply with its statutory obligation to provide all evidence to the Respondent upon referral of the charge to the Arbitrator.[6]

The Respondent argues that the District's failure to comply with its statutory obligation mandates the dismissal of the tenure charge. The District, on the other hand, maintains that dismissal is unwarranted because: (1) there is no statutory provision permitting dismissal for failure to provide full discovery; (2) the remedy in N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3 is not a dismissal but merely preclusion of any omitted evidence or witnesses, except for impeachment purposes; (3) a hearing can go forward on the Petitioner's Statement of Evidence and Exhibits, which was attached to the charges and which the [6] The District notes that when it advised the Respondent on November 7, 2014, that it would supply its evidentiary documents and witness list on November 10, 2014, and November 12, 2014, respectively, the Respondent did not object to these dates. The District also asserts that the first time the Respondent sought a remedy from the Arbitrator with respect to discovery issues is with the instant motion to dismiss, and further contends that the Respondent has failed to provide any discovery or witness lists of her own. The short answer to these contentions is that: (1) the District's November 7, 2014, statement could not, and did not, cure its failure to provide the documents and witness list when the tenure charge was transferred to the Arbitrator almost one month earlier; (2) the Respondent was under no obligation to object to the District's November 7, 2014, statement at that time and appropriately objected in her motion to dismiss; and (3) any alleged failure by the Respondent to provide discovery or witness lists does not excuse the District's failure to comply with its statutory obligation. In any event, the Petitioner has not at any point objected to the Respondent's alleged failure.

The District also notes that during a conference call with the parties on October 17, 2014, the Arbitrator directed the parties to work out discovery and motion deadlines. The District asserts that this fact removes the discovery process in this case from the strictures in N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1b3. However, nothing stated in that conference call in any way modified or contravened the applicability of relevant statutory provisions and, as such, does not serve to nullify their relevance here.

Respondent has answered; and (4) the Respondent is not in compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1f because, at no point before the motion to dismiss, did the Respondent advise the Commissioner or the Arbitrator that discovery deadlines had been ignored.

The absence of a statutory provision specifying a remedy for failure to provide discovery—beyond the Statement of Evidence—implies that the Legislature left to the Arbitrator the determination of an appropriate remedy under all the relevant circumstances. The District's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b3 is also unavailing. That provision does not prescribe remedies for failure to provide all evidence upon referral of the case for arbitration. Rather, it precludes a board of education from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses. Nowhere does the provision assert that preclusion is the only possible consequence of noncompliance, nor does it explicitly limit the scope of an arbitral remedy for a district's failure to effect timely discovery.

Contrary to the Petitioner's argument, holding a full evidentiary hearing is not a prerequisite to considering the motion to dismiss. Nothing in the relevant statutory provisions limits an arbitrator's ability to resolve motions before holding a hearing. Indeed, demanding a full evidentiary hearing before ruling on potentially dispositive motions could unnecessarily prolong tenure disputes, ignoring the expressed desire of the Legislature to expedite them.

Any appropriate remedy must further the statute's purposes—ensuring both due process and timeliness in the resolution of tenure charges. To permit a hearing to be held solely on the basis of the District's Statement of Evidence and Exhibits and the Petitioner's answer, as suggested by the District, would be incompatible with due process and would, in effect, reward the District for failure to comply with its statutory obligation in a full and timely manner. Such an approach allows a district to impede preparation of a teacher's defense, compromising the fairness of the process, without even explaining the cause of the delay.

Finally, the District's reliance on N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1f is misplaced. That provision requires an arbitrator or any other involved party to inform the Commissioner of a failure to adhere to a time limit. The Respondent effectively informed the Commissioner, through service of filings on the District, that timeliness was an issue. Additionally, through this ruling on the motion to dismiss, a copy of which is being served on the Commissioner, the Arbitrator will have informed the Commissioner of her determination that the District has not conformed to a statutory timeline. Further, even assuming lack of compliance with N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1f, nothing therein suggests that it was intended to affect in any way the appropriateness of a remedy for the District's failure to comply with a different provision—N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b3. As such, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.1f imposes no bar to granting the motion to dismiss.

IV. Conclusion

For the reasons set forth above, the Respondent's motion to dismiss the charges is granted on the basis of the District's substantial and unexplained failure to comply with the timeliness mandate in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b3. In light of this decision, there is no need to address the Respondent's remaining arguments for dismissal, primarily regarding whether filing of the inefficiency charge was premature and whether the charge of conduct unbecoming a teacher is properly before the Arbitrator. This ruling is premised squarely on the breach of statutory time limits. Finally, the dismissal is without prejudice to the District's right to file charges again in a manner that fully comports with applicable statutory provisions.

Ruling of Arbitrator

The undersigned arbitrator, having been appointed, pursuant to P.L 2012, c 26, to hear and decide the above-captioned matter, rules as follows:

The Respondent's motion to dismiss the charges is granted on the basis of the District's substantial and unexplained failure to meet the timeliness mandate in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b(3). Marie Ebert shall be reinstated as a teacher with full back pay and benefits. The dismissal is without prejudice to the District's right to file charges again.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF LEGISTREAN PURVIS-CHAPMAN, GLASSBORO SCHOOL DISTRICT, GLOUCESTER COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

Petitioning Board certified tenure charges of insubordination, unbecoming conduct, incapacity and inefficiency against respondent – a tenured history teacher – and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(h), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant respondent's dismissal from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF LEGISTREAN PURVIS-CHAPMAN, GLASSBORO SCHOOL DISTRICT, GLOUCESTER COUNTY.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION DECISION

For the Petitioner, Cameron R. Morgan, Esq.
No pleading by or on behalf of Respondent.

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on December 19, 2014, through certification by the Glassboro School District Board of Education (petitioner) of tenure charges of insubordination, unbecoming conduct, incapacity and inefficiency against Legistrean Purvis-Chapman (respondent), a tenured teacher in petitioner's employ. Following its review of the charges as filed, together with the supporting evidence,[1] petitioner certified the charges to the Commissioner on December 17, 2014 and provided respondent with written notice of the certified charges on December 18, 2014.

On December 29, 2014 the Department directed respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "is required to file written response to the charges within 15 days of date filed with Commissioner." It further

IN THE MATTER OF THE ARBITRATION OF THE TENURE CHARGE between STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT, CITY OF NEWARK, Petitioner, -and- LINDA KELLY-GAMBLE, Respondent	DOE DOCKET NO. 266-9/14 OPINION & AWARD ON MOTION TO DISMISS

BEFORE: MICHAEL J. PECKLERS, ESQ., ARBITRATOR

DATES OF ORAL ARGUMENT: November 6, 2014; January 5, 2015

DATE OF AWARD: January 30, 2015

APPEARANCES:

For the Petitioner:

Ramon E. Rivera, Esq., Of Counsel
Shana T. Don, Esq., (On the Motion to Dismiss Brief & 1/5/15 Oral Argument)

For the Respondent:

Robert T. Pickett, Esq., PICKETT & CRAIG, ESQS.

I. BACKGROUND CONSIDERATIONS

Linda Kelly-Gamble is a tenured and veteran instructor of 20 years with the State Operated School District City of Newark ("the Newark School District"). At all times that should be considered relevant for the purposes of this case, Ms. Kelly-Gamble taught at the Alexander Street School. On August 22, 2014, Principal Maria Ortiz executed a NOTICE OF INEFFICIENCY CHARGES against the instructor. Paragraph 2 indicated that the tenure charges were being filed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6a:3-5.1. CHARGE ONE: INEFFICIENCY thereafter submitted that "[d]uring the period from December 21, 2012 to the present, Respondent has demonstrated an inability to completely and responsibly execute her duties as a teacher in the following: a. the Respondent was rated as 'ineffective' and/or 'partially effective' in 2 consecutive annual evaluations...."

The accompanying and comprehensive STATEMENT OF EVIDENCE again identified Respondent's perceived inability to satisfactorily perform her instructional duties and responsibilities from December 21, 2012 to the point of the filing, and additionally specifically referenced in part: "¶ 3. The Formal Observation Form dated December 21, 2012, wherein Respondent was rated 'Partially Effective;' ¶ 9. An Evaluation Summary Form dated February 20, 2013 wherein Respondent was rated 'Partially Effective;' ¶ 11. The Formal Observation Form dated April 15, 2013, wherein Respondent received an 'Ineffective' rating; ¶13. An Observation Form dated April 16, 2013, wherein Respondent was rated as 'Ineffective' in Tailored Instruction; ¶ 17. An Annual Evaluation Summary Form dated June 7, 2013, wherein Respondent was rated 'Partially Effective;' ¶27. Corrective Action Plan ('CAP') prepared by Respondent in collaboration with Gamble's 2012 - 2013 summative annual evaluation is otherwise inaccurate, inadmissible and/or otherwise may not be considered by the Commissioner of Education and/or any duly assigned arbitrator for purposes of seeking her termination as a tenured teacher with the District;" THIRD AFFIRMATIVE DEFENSE, "[t]he implementation of the District's 2012 - 2013 Teacher Evaluation Guidelines and procedures related thereto were part and parcel of a 'pilot program' and, as such, summative evaluations relating to that school year may not be utilized by the District for [the] purpose of seeking or bringing tenure charges against District teachers, including respondent Kelly-Gamble."

On October 21, 2014, M. Kathleen Duncan, Director of DOE Controversies and Disputes notified the parties that following receipt of Respondent's answer on October 14, 2014, the tenure charges had been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c and that upon full review the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed and that accordingly, they had been referred to me as required by statute. A referral letter was also sent under separate cover.

On October 20, 2014, I forwarded a correspondence to counsel advising of the foregoing, and proposing potential dates for a conference call, as well as hearing(s). On October 22, 2014, Ramon E. Rivera, Esq., SCARINCI HOLLENBECK, counsel for Petitioner State Operated School District, City of Newark sent a correspondence to Director Duncan. This initially noted that on September 22, 2014, the District filed a Notice of Inefficiency Charges and

Statement of Evidence with the Commissioner and emphasized that by letter dated September 23, 2014, Ms. Duncan advised Respondent that she was required to file a written response to the charges within ten (10) days. Petitioner thereafter asserted that Respondent's "Certification of Mailing" attests to the fact that the answer was transmitted "on or about October 10, 2014, which was at least eight (8) days past the deadline to file an answer." See N.J.A.C. 6A:3-53; see also N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(5) ("Day means business day when the period specified is less than seven (7) days, and calendar day when the period specified is seven (7) days or more"). On this basis, Petitioner requested that the tenure charges be deemed admitted, with a default judgment entered per N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3.

A preliminary conference call in the case was held on October 30, 2014, with a briefing and oral argument schedule set down in order to entertain Petitioner's motion for a default judgment. This provided for Respondent filing her papers in opposition to the motion by November 5th, with Petitioner allowed the opportunity to submit a reply brief prior to the oral argument scheduled for November 6th.

The material facts cited by Petitioner were not disputed by Respondent, with counsel acknowledging he failed to file the answer on behalf of Ms. Kelly-Gamble within the ten (10) day window. Rather, Mr. Pickett cited a conversation with an unnamed source within the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes on October 1, 2014 about the filing date and deadline. Phone pen records were also attached to his CERTIFICATION, which demonstrated that a call was made to the DOE that date. In a November 24, 2014 ORDER denying Petitioner's application, I determined:

> There are a number of factors, however, which militate against the entry of the default judgment sought by the Petitioner in this instance. Initially, while the Newark District maintains that the Newton case is on all fours with the case at bar, the plain language of the same indicates that there was no answer filed at all by either respondent or his attorney, which caused the Commissioner to determine the tenure charges were admitted — '[d]eeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against him, the Commissioner finds that the District has demonstrated that respondent is guilty of inefficiency, warranting dismissal from his tenured position.' It is noteworthy that in the instant case, such action did not take place. Instead, as counsel for Kelly-Gamble has emphasized, '[t]he Petition and Answer of the Respondent was reviewed and assessed by the Director of the Division of Controversies and Disputes, the Hon. Katherine Duncan, for completeness and forwarded to the designated Arbitrator herein, Michael J. Pecklers, Esq., without any indication that the 'filed' Answer was 'defective' or 'late' in any way.'
> The case law submitted by Petitioner while admittedly standing for the proposition that tenure timelines should be strictly construed, is however inapposite as it is factually distinguishable. See generally, Kaprow v. Board of Education of Berkeley Township, 131 N.J. 572, 587 (1993) (appeal filed more than 5 months after learning of the failure to be afforded post RIF rights or 2 months after the expiration of the 90 day filing deadline); Kous v. Board of Education Township of Old Bridge, Middlesex County, Agency Docket No. 26-2/12 (March 2, 2012) (petitioner did not respond to the insubordination tenure charges either at the Board of Education or the Commissioner level, leading to the disposal of the matter in summary fashion in July 2009); I/M/O The Tenure Hearing of Cemran Biricik, School District of Jersey City, Hudson County, 2014 N.J. Super. Unpub. LEXUS 2640 (November 7, 2014) (respondent failed to respond to tenure charges or ask for an adjournment in light of accidental disability application filed with T.P.A.F. which was later denied); Portee v. Board of Education of the City of Newark, Essex County, OAL Docket No. EDU 5855-93 (April 14, 1994) (petitioner's complaint in Superior Court, within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of Education, was filed 248 days (and not within 90 days) after the notice of termination by the Board).

The record establishes that Respondent has been employed as a teacher with the Newark School District for 20 years. It is well settled that our tenure laws were originally enacted and designed to establish a competent and efficient school system, and to protect teaching and other staff members from dismissal for unfounded, flimsy or political reasons. The statutory status of a tenured individual should accordingly not be lightly removed. See generally, Viemeister v. Prospect Park Board of Education, 5 N.J. Super. 215, 218 (App. Div. 1949); Spiewak v. Rutherford Board of Education, 90 N.J. 63 (1982); see also, In re Tenure Hearing of Claudia Ashe-Gilkes, City of East Orange School District, 2009 WL 246266 (January 12, 2009), adopted by the Commissioner of Education (May 28, 2009). As such, Respondent has a significant property interest in her position, and is entitled to have the charges determined on the merits notwithstanding the intransigence of her counsel. Any other result is at odds with the fair and efficient administration of justice, as our judiciary has recognized in connection with R. 4:50 default proceedings. See, e.g. Professional Stone, Stucco & Siding Applications, Inc. v. Jim Carter, 409 N.J. Super, 64 (App. Div. 2009).

Noting that the Courts have on occasion utilized R. 4:50-1 to determine the suitability of vacating a final agency order, the Appellate Division in Biricik indicated that it was mindful that the Rule was "designed to reconcile the strong interests in finality of judgments and judicial efficiency with the equitable notion that courts should have authority to avoid an unjust result in any given case." citing, Lee v. W.S. Steel Warehousing, 205 N.J. Super. 153, (1985); U.S. Bank National Association v. Guillaume, 209 N.J. 330, 334 (1993).

The record further demonstrates that Respondent has thoroughly contested the tenure charges both at the Board and Commissioner level. On September 15, 2014, a 14 page WRITTEN RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO THE PROPOSED TENURE CHARGES was submitted to the Board of Education prior to its certification of the charges, which challenged the same on both a procedural and substantive bases. See also, CORRESPONDENCE TO BOARD COUNSEL & SUPERINTENDENT, dated September 15, 2014. The > ANSWER filed with the Commissioner likewise pleads 13 affirmative defenses and renews the contentions previously made. Particularly with respect to the utilization of evaluations from 2012 – 2013 in the subject tenure charges these appear meritorious, given recent arbitral rulings dismissing tenure charges which included the same.

> I am mindful of the fact that based upon this ruling, the Respondent will be permitted to file a MOTION TO DISMISS with respect to the fact that the District considered evaluations from the 2012-2013 School Year. Even in the event that application is denied, the Petitioner has properly argued that it will be prejudiced in prosecuting its case by the expedited time frames of the TEACHNJ ACT. For this reason, I have this date applied to M. Kathleen Duncan, the Director of Controversies and Disputes, for an extension of the initial 45 day period within which to hold a hearing until JANUARY 5, 2015. Assuming this is granted, the District will have sufficient time to prepare its case, and Respondent her defense. Based upon the totality of the foregoing findings of fact, Petitioner's motion for a default judgment pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 is DENIED. The case will accordingly proceed on the merits. In light of this ruling, Respondent's MOTION FOR EXTENSION OF TIME TO FILE AN ANSWER NUNC PRO TUNC has not been reached. IT IS SO ORDERED.

Due to the protracted nature of the motion practice, that same date a letter was sent to Ms. Duncan requesting an extension of time to hold the first hearing until January 5, 2015. This request was graciously granted in a December 1, 2014 correspondence from Ms. Duncan, transmitted to me via facsimile. Respondent's MOTION TO DISMISS was then filed on December 4, 2014, with a December 19, 2014 Reply. Petitioner for its part, submitted a brief IN OPPOSITION TO RESPONDENT'S MOTION TO DISMISS on December 12, 2014, and Sur-Reply on December 31, 2014. Oral argument on the motion proceeded as scheduled on January 5, 2015, with the instant AWARD dismissing the tenure charges subsequently issued.

II. RELEVANT STATUTORY & REGULATORY LANGUAGE

NEW JERSEY STATUTES ANNOTATED TITLE 18A

18A:6-10 Dismissal and reduction in compensation of persons under tenure in public school system. No person shall be dismissed or reduced in compensation,

(a) If he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency in the public school system of the state or

(b) If he is or shall be under tenure of office, position or employment during good behavior and efficiency as a supervisor, teacher or in any other teaching capacity in the Marie H. Katzenbach school for the deaf, or in any other educational institution conducted under the supervision of the commissioner, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to this subarticle, by the commissioner or a person appointed by him to act in his behalf, after a written charge or charges, of the cause or causes of complaint, shall have been preferred against such person, signed by the person or persons making the same, who may or may not be a member or members of a board of education, and filed and proceeded upon as in this subarticle provided.

Nothing in this section shall prevent the reduction of the number of any such persons holding such offices, positions or employments under the conditions and with the effect provided by law.

18A:6-16 Proceedings before commissioner; written response; determination

* * *

If, following receipt of the written response to the charges, the commissioner is of the opinion that they are not sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, he shall dismiss the same and notify said person accordingly. If, however, he shall determine that such charge is sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, he shall refer the case to an arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of P.L. 2012 Ch. 26 (C.18A:6-17.1) for further proceedings, except that when a motion for summary decision has been made prior to that time, the commissioner may retain the matter for purposes of deciding the motion.

18A:6-17.1 Panel of arbitrators

b. The following provisions shall apply to a hearing conducted by an arbitrator pursuant to N.J.S. 18A:6-16, except as otherwise provided pursuant to P.L. 2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.):

(1) The hearing shall be held before the arbitrator within 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case;

* * *

(3) Upon referral of the case for arbitration, the employing board of education shall provide all evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employee or the employee's representative. The employing board of education shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing, except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses. At least 10 days prior to the hearing, the employee shall provide all evidence upon which he will rely, including, but not limited to, documents, electronic evidence, statements of witnesses, and a list of witnesses with a complete summary of their testimony, to the employing board of education or its representative. The employee shall be precluded from presenting any additional evidence at the hearing except for purposes of impeachment of witnesses.

Discovery shall not include depositions, and interrogatories shall be limited to 25 without subparts.

c. The arbitrator shall determine the case under the American Arbitration Association labor arbitration rules. In the event of a conflict between the American Arbitration Association labor arbitration rules and the procedures established pursuant to this section, the procedures established pursuant to this section shall govern.

d. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S. 18A:6-25 or any other section of law to the contrary, the arbitrator shall render a written decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing.

e. The arbitrator's determination shall be final and binding and may not be appealable to the commissioner or the State Board of Education. The determination shall be subject to judicial review and enforcement as provided pursuant to N.J.S. 2A:24-7 through N.J.S. 2A:24-10.

f. Timelines set forth herein shall be strictly followed; the arbitrator or any involved party shall inform the commissioner of any timeline that is not adhered to.

g. An arbitrator may not extend the timeline of holding a hearing beyond 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case without approval from the commissioner. An arbitrator may not extend the timeline for rendering a written decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing without approval of the commissioner. Extension requests shall occur before the 41st day of the respective timelines set forth herein. The commissioner shall approve or disapprove extension requests within five days of receipt.

18A:6-17.2 Consideration for arbitrator in rendering decision. a. In the event that the matter before the arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to section 25 of this act, in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:

(1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;

(2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;

(3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law; or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law;

(4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.

(b) In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraph (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.

(c) The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.

(d) The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.

(e) The hearing shall be held before the arbitrator within 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case. The arbitrator shall render a decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing.

18A:6-17.3. Evaluation process, determination of charges. a. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S. 18A:6-11 or any other section of the law to the contrary, in the case of a teacher, principal, assistant principal, and vice principal:

(1) The superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency whenever the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated ineffective in the annual summative evaluation;

(2) If the employee is rated partially effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations or is rated ineffective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated partially effective in the annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency, except that the superintendent upon a written finding of exceptional circumstances may defer the filing of tenure charges until after the next summative evaluation. If the employee is not rated effective or highly effective on this annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file a charge of inefficiency.

b. Within 30 days of the filing, the board of education shall forward a written charge to the commissioner, unless the board determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

c. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S. 18A:6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charges to the commissioner, The commissioner shall within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed,

d. The only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C. 18A:6-117 et al.)

18A:6-120 School improvement panel. A. In order to ensure the effectiveness of its teachers, each school shall convene a school improvement panel. A panel shall include the principal, or his designee, an assistant or vice-principal, and a teacher. The principal's designee shall be an individual employed in the district in a supervisory role and capacity who possesses a school administrator certificate, principal certificate, or supervisor certificate. The teacher shall be a person with a demonstrated record of success in the classroom who shall be selected in consultation with the majority representative. An individual teacher shall not serve more than three consecutive years on any one school improvement panel, In the event that an assistant or vice-principal is not available to serve on the panel, the principal shall appoint an additional member to the panel, who is employed in the district in a supervisory role and capacity and who possesses a school administrator certificate, principal certificate, or supervisor certificate.

Nothing in this section shall prevent a district that has entered a shared services agreement for the functions of the school improvement panel from providing services under that shared services agreement.

b. The panel shall oversee the mentoring of teachers and conduct evaluations of teachers, including an annual summative evaluation, provided that the teacher on the school improvement panel shall not be included in the evaluation process except in those instances in which the majority representative has agreed to the contrary. The panel shall also identify professional development opportunities for all instructional staff members that are tailored to meet the unique needs of the students and staff of the school.

c. The panel shall conduct a mid-year evaluation of any employee in the position of teacher who is evaluated as ineffective or partially effective in his most recent annual summative evaluation, provided that the teacher on the school improvement panel shall not be included in the mid-year evaluation process, except in those instances in which the majority representative has agreed to the contrary.

d. Information related to the evaluation of a particular employee shall be maintained by the school district, shall be confidential, and shall not be accessible to the public pursuant to P.L. 1963, c.73 (C.47:1A-1 et seq.) as amended and supplemented.

* * *

18A:6-122 Annual submission of evaluation rubrics. a. A school district shall annually submit to the Commissioner of Education, for review and approval, the evaluation rubrics that the district will use to assess the effectiveness of teachers, principals, assistant principals, and vice-principals and all other teaching staff members. The board shall ensure that an approved rubric meets the minimum standards established by the State Board of Education.

b. Notwithstanding the provisions of subsection a. of this section, a school district may choose to use the model evaluation rubric established by the commissioner pursuant to subsection f. of section 17 of P.L. 2012, c.26 (C.18A:6-123) to assess the effectiveness of its teachers, principals, assistant principals, and vice-principals and all other teaching staff members. In the case in which the district fails to submit a rubric for review and approval, the model rubric shall be used by the district to assess the effectiveness of its teachers, principals, assistant principals, and vice-principals and all other teaching staff members.

18A:6-123. Review, approval of evaluation rubrics. a. The Commissioner of Education shall review and approve evaluation rubrics submitted by school districts pursuant to section 16 of P.L. 2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-122). The board of education shall adopt a rubric approved by the commissioner.

b. The State Board of Education shall promulgate regulations pursuant to the "Administrative Procedure Act," P.L. 1968, c. 410 (C.52:14B-1 et seq.) to set standards for the approval of evaluation rubrics for teachers, principals, assistant principals, and vice-principals. The standards at a minimum shall include:

c. A board of education shall adopt a rubric approved by the commissioner by December 31, 2012.

d. Beginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program to test and refine the evaluation rubric.

e. Beginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle and high schools in the district. Results of evaluations shall be used to identify and provide professional development to teaching staff members. Results of evaluations shall be provided to the commissioner, as requested, on a regular basis.

f. The commissioner shall establish a model evaluation rubric that may be utilized by a school district to assess the effectiveness of its teaching staff members.

6A:3-1.5 Filing and service of answer

* * *

(g) Nothing in this section precludes the filing of a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer to a petition, provided that such motion is filed within the time allotted for the filing of an answer. Briefing on such motions shall be in the manner and within the time fixed by the Commissioner, or by the ALJ if the motion is to be briefed following transmittal to the OAL.

6A:3-1.10 Dismissal or transfer of petition

At any time prior to transmittal of the pleadings to the OAL, in the Commissioner's discretion or upon motion to dismiss filed in lieu of answer, the Commissioner may dismiss the petition on grounds that the petitioner has advanced no cause of action even if the petitioner's factual allegations are accepted as true for lack of jurisdiction, failure to prosecute or other good reason.

6A:3-1.12 Summary decision

(a) At any time concurrent with or subsequent to the filing of an answer, but prior to transmittal of a matter to the OAL, any party may apply to the Commissioner for summary decision by way of a motion with proof of service on each other party. The Commissioner may decide the motion directly or transmit it to the OAL for disposition.

6A:3-5.1 Filing of written charges and certificate of determination

(c) If the tenure charges are charges of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3, except in the case of building principals and vice principals in school districts under full State intervention, where procedures are governed by the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-45 and such rules as may be promulgated to implement it, the following timelines and procedures shall be observed:

* * *

5. Upon receipt of the charge, the Commissioner or his designee shall examine the charge. The charge shall be served upon the employee at the same time it is forwarded to the Commissioner and proof of service shall be included with the filed charge. The individual against whom the charge is filed shall have 10 days to submit to the Commissioner a written response to the charge.

6A:3-5.3 Filing and service of answer to written charges

(a) Except as specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(5), an individual against whom tenure charges are certified shall have 15 days from the date such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges. Except as to time for filing, the answer shall conform to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(a) through (d).

1. Consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), nothing in this subsection precludes the filing of a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer to the charges, provided the motion is filed within the time frame allotted for the filing of an answer. Briefing on the motions shall be in the manner and within the time fixed by the Commissioner, or by the arbitrator if the motion is to be briefed following transmittal to an arbitrator.

6A:3-5.5 Determination of sufficiency and transmittal for hearing

(a) Except as specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (c) within 10 days of receipt of the charged party's answer or expiration of the time for its filing, the Commissioner shall determine whether such charge(s) are sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. Where the charges are determined insufficient, they shall be dismissed and the parties shall be notified accordingly. If the charges are determined sufficient, the matter shall be transmitted immediately to an arbitrator for further proceedings, unless the Commissioner retains the matter pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.12.

III. CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES[1]

Respondent Linda Kelly-Gamble

Respondent Kelly-Gamble is a tenured teacher employed by the Petitioner State Operated School District of the City of Newark ("District") for twenty (20) years. The within tenure charges of "inefficiency" were submitted by the District pursuant to Section 25 of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ" or "Act"), N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3(a)(2), to the Commissioner of Education on or about September 22, 2014. This section provides for the filing of such charges based upon ratings of "Ineffective" or "Partially Effective" during two consecutive annual evaluations. N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3(a)(2).

1/ As previously discussed, there was extensive motion practice in the case. The CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES summary includes positions advanced in the original MOTION, ANSWER, REPLY AND SURREPLY.

In the case of Respondent Kelly-Gamble, the tenure charges of "inefficiency" are based upon a "Partially Effective" rating which she received on her annual summative evaluation for the 2012 - 2013 School Year and an "Ineffective" rating she received on her annual summative evaluation for the 2013 - 2014 School Year. It is respectively submitted that these charges are legally, procedurally and factually defective, unwarranted, arbitrary and capricious and must be dismissed, as they do not comply with the standards imposed by TEACHNJ, P.L. 2012, and c.26.

The material facts necessary to resolve this application are undisputed. It is undisputed that the tenure charges filed against Respondent by the District are based solely upon summative/annual evaluation ratings she received for the 2012 - 2013 and 2013 - 2014 School Years pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3 (See Petitioner's Charge One: Inefficiency paragraph "a" and Statement of Evidence in proceeding paragraphs 17 & 49 which reflect two summary/annual evaluations which rated the Respondent "Partially Effective" for the 2012 - 2013 School Year and "Ineffective" for the 2013 - 2014 School Year.) (See Exhibit A).

As discussed below, pursuant to the applicable statutory provisions, as well as guidance from the Office of the Commissioner (See attached Guidance from the Commissioner's Office & Department of Education attached hereto as Exhibit C), the 2012 - 2013 School Year served only as a "pilot" year for purposes of allowing school districts in New Jersey, including the Petitioner District, to develop, enhance and refine their observations and evaluation forms, procedures, training, guidance and rubrics for their tenured teachers with the intention that this evaluation process would go into effect in the 2013-2014 school year.

Those statutory and regulatory provisions allowing for removal of a tenured teacher for alleged "Ineffective" and/or "Partially Effective" performance in two (2) consecutive school years were not intended to and, as a matter of law, did not go into effect until the commencement of the 2013 - 2014 School Year. See N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 (e) & N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4.1 et seq. As such, consideration of Respondent Kelly-Gamble's 2012 - 2013 annual summative/annual evaluation in connection with the instant charges, despite the defects in the assessment and evaluations that are contrary to applicable law, renders the filed tenure charges facially and legally deficient and subject to dismissal by the Commissioner or the assigned Arbitrator.

The Petitioner School District claims, without any legal support for its posture and assessment, that its participation in a "pilot program" during the 2011 - 2012 School Year somehow exempts it from the mandates of the TEACHNJ Act and its regulations. The obvious flaw in that argument is that this so-called 2011 -

2012 pilot program actually occurred prior to the passage of TEACHNJ, which was signed into law on August 6, 2012 by Governor Chris Christie. It is therefore meaningless under the law. In fact, it is obvious that the purpose of the 2011 – 2012 School Year pilot program was to assist in the development of what later became and was ultimately passed as the TEACHNJ Act. No matter how much it may protest, the Petitioner remains subject to that Act and its implementing regulations.

Instead of citing any applicable law in support of its position, the District actually throws out a series of distractions. It claims that somehow a collective bargaining agreement, memorialized as a Memorandum of Agreement ("MOA") between the Respondent's Union, the Newark Teachers Union Local 481 ("NTU") and the Petitioner District, allows it to utilize the 2012 – 2013 School Year for purposes of bringing Inefficiency Charges. Of course, the Petitioner cannot cite any language in the MOA which supports that proposition and ridiculous conclusion. Besides, even if it could, the MOA would not trump the applicable law which would preempt the terms of the MOA. See, State v. State Supervisory Employees' Assn., 78 N.J. 54, 80-81 (1978).

Although the MOA references using ratings of "Highly Effective" or "Effective" for evaluations received during the 2012 – 2013 School Year, these ratings are only used with regard to the award of performance bonuses or other salary decisions — which are properly governed by the parties collective negotiations — not with regard to the revocation of teaching staff members' statutory tenure rights. In fact, the MOA does not mention tenure at all. Accordingly, the MOA cannot possibly provide the basis to file tenure charges based upon the 2012 – 2013 School Year evaluations. See, In the Matter of Sandra Cheatham, Agency Docket No. 226-8/14 (Bluth, 2014); In the Matter of Neil Thomas, Agency Docket No. 244-9/14 (Simmelkjaer, 2014) and In the Matter of Elena Brady, Agency Docket No. 270-9/14 (Klein, 2014).

The Petitioner School District has not, and cannot cite any alternative basis for proceeding against the Respondent. If the District wishes to pursue tenure charges against a seasoned educator who, prior to the 2012 – 2013 School Year had received nothing but exemplary evaluations, based on only one (1) year of allegedly deficient performance, then it is required to reinstate Respondent and go back to the proverbial drawing board by properly noticing the Respondent of any new charges in accordance with the applicable statutory and regulatory procedure.

And contrary to the District's argument about the transmittal of the charges and the motion to the Arbitrator, this did not constitute a determination that the District complied with the many strict standards imposed by the evaluation process pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. Likewise, the District cannot now simply request that the Arbitrator magically transform the charges brought under one (1) specific section of the law into a different type of charge altogether (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16) as suggested by Petitioner District, simply because it is fearful that its house of cards will crumble using the flawed designs it chose to build it upon.

Finally, the District's reliance on arbitration decisions decided prior to the effective date of TEACHNJ, in support of the general proposition that it cannot be foreclosed from preceding against Respondent are of no significance as all of these decisions precede the implementation date of the TEACHNJ Act. Instead, as the law and the evidence reveals, the District's claims are nothing more than an attempt to obfuscate a clear statutory mandate, which demands that the matter be dismissed in its entirety.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A: 3-5.5, the Commissioner is authorized to dismiss a charge of inefficiency. The regulation provides in relevant part:

> Except as specified in N.J.A.C. 6A: 3-5 1(c), within 10 days of receipt of the charged party's answer or expiration of the time for its filing, the Commissioner shall determine whether such charge(s) are sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction of salary. If the charges are determined insufficient, they shall be dismissed and the parties shall be notified accordingly . . . . [emphasis added].

As detailed below, because the District's charges of inefficiency are woefully deficient, the Commissioner and his designated Arbitrator are authorized to and should dismiss the charges as a matter of law as permitted by the aforementioned statute as well as N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c) which authorizes the assigned Arbitrator to make that same assessment and decision.

The Arbitrator is vested with full and complete authority to rule on the instant application and to dismiss the instant tenure charges prior to hearing. The TEACHNJ Act and the regulations promulgated by the Department of Education in connection with the Act, set forth a detailed procedure for the filing of tenure revocation charges alleging inefficiency. Built into this filing procedure is a comprehensive review process to ensure that school districts filing Inefficiency Charges have complied with the evaluation procedures required by law. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (c) and N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3.

Notably, this review process requires a determination of compliance with evaluation procedures at each stage of the filing process and prevents such tenure charges from proceeding to arbitration "if the evaluation process has not been followed." See, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (c). The TEACHNJ Act contains identical language, which also provides that a board of education and/or the Commissioner shall forward the charges "unless [they] determine that the evaluation process has not been followed." N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 (b) and (c). Indeed, and as confirmed by the DOE in its regulatory guidance document: "[d]istricts must ensure the following evaluation procedures are followed (at minimum) prior to filing an inefficiency charge. Failure to adhere to these requirements can result in the tenure charge being dismissed."

The District's contention that a tenure charge cannot be dismissed absent a determination that its failure to follow the mandated evaluation process "materially affected the outcome of the evaluation in the relevant school year" finds absolutely no basis in law or reality. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1 (c) is clearly devoid of any such requirement, and dictates that any failure to abide by the evaluation procedure prohibits the movement of the tenure charges to the next stage of the filing process, including an arbitration proceeding.

The language quoted by the School District is actually derived from Section 23 of the TEACHNJ Act (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2). That section entitled "Considerations for Arbitrator in rendering decision," limits the issues that an arbitrator can consider, and in turn, the defenses an employee can raise at an arbitration hearing. One of those defenses is whether "the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process. . ." It is readily apparent, however, that the restrictions set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 only apply to decisions on the substantive merits of a tenure charge which occur only after an arbitration hearing has concluded. Thus, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 has no bearing on a pre-hearing motion to dismiss, which seeks a ruling on a procedural arbitrability issue. To conclude otherwise would render the review provisions set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (c) a nullity.

Accordingly, Respondent's motion is properly before the Arbitrator for resolution, as he is vested with the authority to enforce school laws once a "controversy and dispute" has been transferred to him, including ruling on procedural and substantive motions before, during and after a substantive hearing. This is consistent with the Commissioner's authority to appoint an "Arbitrator" to examine the charges and conduct an appropriate hearing provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5 (c)(5).

The District has unequivocally stated that these tenure charges of inefficiency have been filed against Respondent Kelly-Gamble pursuant to Section 25 of TEACHNJ Act. N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3, which mandates the filing of an inefficiency charge in instances where a teacher is "rated ineffective or partially ineffective in an annual summative evaluation" for at least two years. See N.J.S.A. 18A-6-17.3(a) (1) and (2). Where that prerequisite is met, Section 25 effectively divests school superintendents of any discretion in filing tenure charges against a tenured teacher by mandating that "inefficiency" charges be filed against the teacher. Section 25 of TEACHNJ further provides, however, that " . . . [t]he only evaluations that may be used for the purpose of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the Commissioner pursuant to P.L. 2012, c.26 (C. 18A:6-117 et al)." See also N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3(d).

It is undisputed that the Petitioner District's evaluation/observations form and rubric for 2012 - 2013 School Year had not been approved and authorized by the Commissioner, especially since the use and authorization of the new evaluation process and approved rubrics would not begin until the fall of 2013-2014 School Year. Because Section 25 created a new type of "inefficiency" charge, one that is mandatory if a teacher is rated sufficiently poorly under the new evaluation rubrics established by Section 16 of the TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-122, over a specific period of time (at least 2 years – N.J.S.A.18A: 6-17.3(a)(1) & (2)), it is essential that the only evaluations utilized be those which are conducted under the new evaluation rubrics which did not begin until the 2013-2014 School Year. Indeed, it is important to note that N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3(d) clearly states that "[t]he only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section [filing of tenure charges for inefficiency] are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C.18A: 6-117 et al.)".

In the absence of a showing that the Commissioner had approved or authorized the observation and evaluation form & rubrics by the Petitioner District, the utilization of an annual summative evaluation for the 2012 - 2013 School Year by Petitioner School District is plainly inappropriate pursuant to applicable law and the Commissioner's issued Guidance to Districts (See Exhibit C attached hereto) and renders these tenure charges filed against Respondent Kelly-Gamble by the District fatally flawed. It is undisputed that the applicable regulations establishing the guidelines and procedures for the timing and conduct of teacher evaluations and observations pursuant to both TEACHNJ and AchieveNJ – and thus the full implementation of TEACHNJ did not go into effect until the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year, in October 2013. See N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 (e) & N.J.A.C. 6A: 109-1.1 et seq.

These regulations include, but are not limited to, provisions governing the content of evaluation rubrics and components (N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4.1), procedures on rubric approval by the Commissioner (N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-5.1); and critically the development of procedures concerning the timing, form, nature and number of teacher evaluations and observations required (N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-4.4) among other requirements. While TEACHNJ allowed for the adoption of evaluation rubrics by School Districts, including the Petitioner District, as of December 31, 2012 (about midway through the 2012 - 2013 School Year), it does not follow that utilization of evaluations conducted under those rubrics for tenure charges was sanctioned, approved, authorized, warranted or appropriate. See N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3(d). N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-123 (d) provides that the "Beginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program to test and refine the evaluation rubric." [emphasis added]. N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-123 (d).

In fact, utilization of the preliminary evaluation rubrics (by no later than January 31, 2013) was merely developed as a "pilot program" to test and refine those evaluation rubrics – not full implementation of it. N.J.S.A.18A: 6-123(e) specifically provides that the implementation does not occur until the 2013 - 2014 School Year by indicating that: "Beginning with the 2013 - 2014 School Year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric for all educators in all elementary, middle, and high schools in the district". Therefore, it is quite clear that the evaluation rubric used to assess the Respondent Kelly-Gamble's teaching performance during the 2012 - 2013 School Year was simply a "pilot program" not yet authorized or approved by the Commissioner and thus cannot be used in filing tenure charges against her.

Indeed, as noted above, the entire teacher evaluation and observation guidelines and process was not established and approved by the Commissioner until October 2013, after the commencement of the 2013 - 2014 School Year nor did the District have in place, as required by N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-3.1, a School Improvement Panel at Respondent Kelly-Gamble's school during the 2012 - 2013 School Year. The absence of a duly created School Improvement Panel is a critical deficiency in the Petitioner District's tenure charge proceeding in its failure to establish that Panel pursuant to both N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-3.1 to assist and enhance teaching effectiveness.

N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A: 10-3.1 require that each school within a district establish a School Improvement Panel that conducts evaluations and oversees the mentoring program. Specifically, N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-120 provides, in relevant part, that "[t]he panel shall oversee the mentoring of teachers and conduct evaluations of teachers, including an annual summative evaluation, provided that the teacher on the school improvement panel shall not be included in the evaluation process, except in those instances in which the majority representative has agreed to the contrary." How can a School Improvement Panel be responsible for the conduct of evaluations and implementation of TEACHNJ during the 2012-2013 school year when the Panel was nonexistent during the 2012-2013 school year and did not come into existence until late in 2014? The answer is quite simple: It cannot.

As to the Respondent Kelly-Gamble, there is no evidence produced by the Petitioner District that the School Improvement Panel at her school had been in existence in the 2012 - 2013 school year (the pilot year) created as required by statute or even met with Respondent Kelly-Gamble at any time in the 2012 - 2013 and 2013 - 2014 School Year (See Exhibit B Respondent Kelly-Gamble's Response to the tenure charges dated September 15, 2014 /Answer to Notice of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency).

Thus, the statutory and regulatory evaluation and observation process implemented by school districts in the 2012 - 2013 School Year was merely a preview of the "new" process intended to bring both teachers and evaluators up-to-speed on the new evaluation system and its requirements for the upcoming 2013-2014 school year, with formal implementation of those requirements commencing at the beginning of the 2013 - 2014 school year. It, therefore, stands to reason that the Petitioner District's failure and/or inability to meet the standards of the new statutory and regulatory evaluation and assessment process during the 2012 - 2013 School Year renders formal judgment of Respondent Kelly-Gamble's teaching performance for that year, through the "new" tenure removal proceedings, inappropriate, unlawful, de facto arbitrary and capricious.

This is supported by information and guidance disseminated by the Department of Education outlining and explaining the new evaluation process for filing inefficiency charges under TEACHNJ and the new evaluation system (AchieveNJ), which provides that a district's evaluations and observations for purposes of commencing tenure charges must comply with all applicable statutory or regulatory requirements. A copy of this guide entitled "Summary of Legal Requirements for Evaluation and Tenure Cases" is attached hereto as Exhibit C. It provides, in part, that:

> '[t]he TEACHNJ Act outlines a new process for filing inefficiency charges under the new evaluation system (AchieveNJ). This guide outlines the actions required in law before bringing an inefficiency tenure charge based on the new tenure revocation process . . ..' [emphasis added].

The plain meaning of the statute tells us that the 2012 – 2013 School Year was intended to serve as a test run for purposes of all tenure related issues – not only criteria for attaining tenure, but also for completing evaluations and observations under the new evaluation procedures and rubrics, and revocation of tenure. Pursuant to the nature of the testing phase during the 2012 – 2013 School Year under the statute, it was not until the start of the 2013 – 2014 School Year that the revised evaluation law and regulations went into effect. That the District may have opted into a pilot program in the prior year 2011 – 2012 is inconsequential.

Further evidence that the 2012 – 2013 School Year was intended to serve as a test run is found in the voluminous publications issued by the DOE itself, as well as the reports issued by the various committees that were convened by the DOE in anticipation of the implementation of the new law in 2013 – 2014. For example, in a guidance document issued by the Department of Education and entitled "Excellent Educators for New Jersey," the Department explicitly set forth the 2011 – 2012 pilots in which the District participated; the 2012 – 2013 statewide pilots and the then anticipated implementation of both TEACHNJ and its implementing regulations for the 2013 – 2014 School Year. Throughout this document, the State makes clear that the new evaluation system would not be implemented until the 2013 – 2014 School Year.

Moreover, the DOE's 2012 Evaluation Pilot Advisory Committee EPAC Interim Report, which was issued by the Committee appointed by the Department of Education to oversee the pilot program, declared its mission quite clearly, stating in the Executive Summary that "New Jersey is preparing to implement a statewide educator evaluation system in the 2013 – 2014 School Year. That same report provides a plethora of evidence that the 2012 – 2013 School Year was used as a year to prepare for the implementation of the new evaluation system.

While it is undisputed that Petitioner School District did participate in that pilot, it must be made clear that its participation was extremely limited. As detailed in the report and the District's recent submission in opposition to the Motion, only seven (7) Newark public schools participated in the pilot. Based on a review of the Petitioner's website, there are approximately sixty-five (65) schools in Newark. Thus, barely 10% of the Newark schools actually participated in the 2011 – 2012 pilot program. More importantly, the 2012 EPAC Report repeatedly indicates that "[t]here is still a great deal of work to be done... More clarity is needed... And that the decision to push back full implementation to 2013 – 2014 was met with universal acclaim by EPAC members." All are signs that the law was not then in effect anywhere, and was not intended to be in effect.

The 2013 Evaluation Pilot Advisory Committee Final Report similarly explains in great detail, not only the purpose of expanding the pilot to include the 2012 – 2013 School Year, but also the results of that pilot year, with an eye again to implementation of the law for the 2013 – 2014 School Year. The EPAC Report in 2013 stated that extending the pilot for a second year "was critical to many of [its] policy decisions... and provided for districts to learn about SGOs (Student Growth Objectives) and prepare for implementation in the 2013 – 2014 School Year." Notably, the Petitioner School District also participated in the second year of the pilot program for principal and teacher evaluation systems concurrently with the official state evaluation pilot and shared information with the Department during both years of the pilot program.

In addition, the "Summary of Legal Requirements for Evaluation and Tenure Cases definitively frames the minimum requirements for bringing the instant tenure charges, including specific compliance with N.J.A.C. 6A:10- 2.4, 4.4, 4.5 etc., which did not exist during the 2012 – 2013 School Year. Finally, the Department of Education issued *Frequently Asked Questions (*FAQs), which provided as follows:

> Q. Will summative ratings 'count' this year (2012 – 2013) toward tenure decisions?
> A. No the only item 'on the clock' is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012 – 2013 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013 – 2014 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating clock (i.e. teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

Among the "actions required in law" is the regulatory scheme established by the Commissioner – and not adopted until October 2013 – providing for minimum observation requirements for tenured teachers, a mandatory summative evaluation process, minimum Corrective Action Plan requirements and the existence of a School Improvement Panel, among other mandates. Simply stated, the Department of Education's own statutory and regulatory guidance for tenure cases precludes consideration of evaluations conducted prior to full implementation of both the TEACHNJ Act and AchieveNJ for the 2013 - 2014 School Year.

The District, in an attempt at polite subterfuge and confusion, asserts that it conducted its own pilot program during the 2011 – 2012 school year preceding the enactment of TEACHNJ and was thereafter officially authorized to fully implement its own teacher evaluation program during the 2012 – 2013 school year. Thus, the Petitioner School District maintains that it can proceed with the filing of Inefficiency Charges pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. This position, however, completely ignores the express language of the TEACHNJ Act and its implementing regulations; the voluminous DOE issued Guidance Directives, as well as the fundamental principles governing the waiver of statutory rights and the deference that is regularly accorded administrative agencies in interpreting their own regulations.

In conclusion, the District is unable to cite any legal authority or exhibits that would permit the Arbitrator to simply ignore the plain and unambiguous language of the relevant statute and regulations. The District's compliance with evaluation procedures is a prerequisite to proceeding with Inefficiency Charges referred to arbitration. This is a matter of procedural arbitrability and cannot be ignored. Because Respondent Kelly-Gamble's 2012 - 2013 annual summative evaluation is precluded from consideration by the Commissioner or the assigned Arbitrator, the District lacks the required two consecutive deficient performance evaluations necessary to bring tenure charges against Respondent Kelly-Gamble pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(a) (1) & (2). As a result, these tenure charges must be dismissed.

Petitioner State Operated School District City of Newark

TEACHNJ required all New Jersey public school districts to develop "evaluation rubrics" to assess the performance of their teachers, and to obtain approval for their "rubrics" from the New Jersey Department of Education ("DOE") by December 31, 2012. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(c). To comply with that mandate, the District adopted an evaluation rubric as part of a performance evaluation system known as the Newark Public Schools Framework for Effective Teaching ("Framework"), to be implemented beginning in the 2012 - 13 School Year. To inform its teachers and school administrators of the new Framework and to provide guidance on its implementation, the District published a Guidebook to the Framework for use in 2012 - 2013. Id. The Framework clearly describes the new "levels of performance" as highly effective, effective, partially effective and ineffective. Id.

In October 2012, the District and the Newark Teachers Union ("NTU") (the exclusive bargaining representative for the District's teachers, among other employees) entered into a Memorandum of Agreement ("MOA") for a successor collective bargaining agreement. The MOA provided that a new evaluation process would be implemented beginning in the 2012 - 2013 School Year. Id. In particular, Section I.A. of the MOA states:

> NPS WILL IMPLEMENT A NEW EVALUATION SYSTEM BEGINNING SY 2012-2013. In accordance with the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq., teachers will receive an annual summative evaluation rating that designates them as highly effective, effective, partially effective or ineffective. [emphasis added in original].

Section II of the MOA pertains to compensation and benefits. Id. Section II.A.4 states again that "NPS [the District] shall implement a new educator evaluation system with four (4) summative rating categories beginning in school year 2012 - 2013." This section further provides that the entire agreed-upon compensation system would be based on teacher performance as measured by the new evaluation framework. As such, the NTU specifically agreed to a new evaluation system to be used in the MOA.

Moreover, the District had implemented four (4) summative rating categories beginning in the 2011 - 2012 School Year. During the 2011-2012 school year, seven (7) of the District's schools participated in a "pilot" of a new teacher evaluation system ("2011 - 2012 Pilot Program"). The District's 2011-2012 Pilot program was part of the Department's Excellent Educators for New Jersey ("EE4NJ") teacher evaluation pilot in which eleven (11) school districts participated, including the District. The Department of Education approved the District's participation in the pilot program and allowed the District to begin using the new framework and new rating system in the 2011 - 2012 School Year. This framework and new rating system was then used throughout the entire district in the 2012 - 2013 School Year following the adoption of the MOA and the passage of TEACHNJ.

On October 24, 2014, the State of New Jersey Department of Education ("DOE") responded to the District's request for clarification of the DOE's intent in the "Guide to the TEACHNJ Act," as well as the status of the District's evaluation rubric during the 2012 - 2013 School Year. The DOE provided the following clarification with respect to its intent in the "Guide to the TEACHNJ ACT":

> [s]ince August 2012, the Department has published many resources meant to support districts in the implementation of the Act. One such document was a response to questions regarding TEACHNJ's new requirement that teachers must demonstrate four years of teaching within a school district, with a rating of effective or highly effective in two annual summative evaluations within the first three years of employment. . . [many non-tenured teachers requested] that the District clarify how the law applied to their tenure acquisition and the Department responded accordingly:
> No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-2013 school year will impact tenure decisions, 2013-2014 is the first year where the > statewide system will be in place, and the first year when the summative rating "clock"... will start.

>
> [S]uch clarifications did not indicate a prohibition on school districts to use 2012-2013 evaluation data to make personnel decisions, such as the decision to renew or non-renew a non-tenured teacher or the decision to bring a tenure charge of inefficiency against a tenured teacher. . . In fact, the Department issued multiple publications notifying pilot school districts that any personnel consequences connected with evaluations were a matter of local decision and applicable State law. . . The Department did not perceive any limitations to the use of evaluation rubrics in the 2012-2013 school year for personnel decisions as no such limitation is mentioned in the TEACHNJ Act. Id. [emphasis supplied in original document].

Accordingly, the tenure charges filed against the Respondent are valid and should proceed to hearing.

Contrary to Respondent's bald assertion, it is not undisputed that the tenure charges are based on only the Respondent's Annual Summative Evaluation for School Years 2012 - 2013 and 2013 - 2014. Respondent's characterization of the facts in this matter as "undisputed" is simply not a true statement. The Notice of Inefficiency Charges states that: "I hereby file charges based upon inefficiency, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (See, Exhibit A to Certification of Shana T. Don, Esq., hereinafter "Don Cert."). These charges were filed based upon both the "new" inefficiency standard of TEACHNJ's N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 encompassing two consecutive annual evaluations for poor performance and the "old" inefficiency [standard] of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Id. [emphasis supplied in original] separate bases for the Charge of Inefficiency of which the Annual Summative Evaluations for School Years 2012 - 2013 and 2013 – 2014 are only two (2). The Statement of Evidence appended to the Notice of Inefficiency is comprised of twenty-seven (27) exhibits, again of which the Annual Summative Evaluations for School Years 2012 – 2013 and 2013 – 2014 again comprise only two (2). The remainder of Respondent's brief is factually inaccurate. Without belaboring the factual discrepancies between Respondent's allegations and the filed Tenure Charges, the litany of disputed facts demonstrates the necessity of holding a hearing in this matter. Should the Respondent wish to raise an argument concerning the District's filing of tenure charges of inefficiency against Respondent, the proper mechanism is to elicit evidence to support any such contention at a hearing, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2(3) and (4). Moreover, neither statute cited by Respondent, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 nor N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 provide for summary disposition of tenure charges. Therefore, disposing of this matter prior to a hearing on the merits is inappropriate and the Motion to Dismiss should be denied.

The Charges, again contrary to Respondent's assertion, list nineteen (19)

Additionally, Respondent's intertwined argument that the inefficiency charges cannot be brought until after the conclusion of the 2014 – 2015 School Year pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 et seq. is also not properly before the Arbitrator. As a threshold matter – and as Respondent herself notes repeatedly – it is the Commissioner of Education who is solely authorized to determine the sufficiency of the evaluation process and resulting tenure charges. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Thus, a dispositive motion by a teacher subject to tenure charges based upon the failure of a board of education to follow the evaluation process may only be made to the Commissioner prior to the referral to an arbitrator.

The role of an arbitrator in a tenure proceeding is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1. Under TEACHNJ, tenure charges are no longer transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law and are instead submitted to an arbitrator to be evaluated under specific criteria and under strict time lines. Once it is found that the tenure charges are sufficient, based upon appropriate criteria and a referral is made to an arbitrator, an arbitrator's authority is confined to a determination of the following: (a) whether or not the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process; (b) whether there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation; (c) whether the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, or discrimination, or (d) whether the board of education's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2.

Therefore, whether the District acted in compliance with law in filing charges based upon the 2012 – 2013 school year has been answered in the affirmative by the Commissioner of Education and is outside the scope of the arbitrator's authority. This vested authority has been recognized by arbitrators in tenure hearings under TEACHNJ. See, I.M.O. the Tenure Hearing of Edgar Chavez, State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Docket No. 269-9/12 (February 6, 2013) (an arbitrator recognized the Commissioner's statutory authority and provided that "[b]ecause the charges have been deemed sufficient by the Commissioner, I find I need not determine whether or not the District complied with claimed controlling procedures and process or whether the District was required to comply with a tiered evaluation system or other issue"). Id. Thus, the Respondent's Motion should be denied on its face as the Commissioner has deemed these charges sufficient to proceed to hearing and indeed directed that a hearing be held on the merits of the case.

Here, the Respondent is arguing inter alia, that the evaluation process was not followed because the filing of the tenure charges was premature pursuant to the Act. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)(1), the relevant regulation governing a Motion to Dismiss under TEACHNJ provides that an individual who was served with tenure charges is not precluded from filing a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer to the charges. This provision is consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g), which allows a motion to dismiss to be filed in lieu of an answer in response to petitions filed with the Commissioner. The Respondent did not, however, properly file her Motion to Dismiss with the Commissioner prior to the referral to the Arbitrator. Thus, the motion must be denied as a matter of law.

Contrary to Respondent's argument relating to prematurity, the Act was enacted on August 6, 2012, and went into effect prior to the commencement of the 2012 – 2013 school year. The effective date of the Act is provided after each section of the Act and the statutes that established the procedure for adjudicating tenure charges. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-117 to 129 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 through 17.5 respectively. It is therefore indisputable that evaluations conducted in the 2012 – 2013 school year may be used in tenure charges of inefficiency and the charges against the Respondent are not premature.

Further, this conclusion was clearly expressed by the New Jersey State [Department] of Education ("DOE") on October 24, 2014, in correspondence discussed further above, expressly stating that District evaluations conducted during the 2012 – 2013 school year were to be used to evaluate teacher efficiency. See, Exhibit B, Don Cert; see also, the effective date of adoption of each section of the Act and the statutes that established the procedure for adjudicating tenure charges. N.J.S.A.18A:6-117 to 129 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 through 17.5, respectively.

Respondent relies upon the tenure case I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Sandra Cheatham, School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 226-8/14 to suggest that this Arbitrator find that Petitioner's inefficiency charge is premature. However, Respondent failed to cite any statute that indicates that the effective date of adoption of TEACHNJ was a later date. As such, the Respondent's reliance on anything other than the TEACHNJ statute should be given no weight in this matter.

Respondent's reliance on the decision I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Neil Thomas, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 244-

9/14 is also misplaced. The issues here are controlled by statute, not non-binding decisions. It is imperative to note that the practical effect of these decisions, which the District maintains may very well be overturned on appeal, is that Respondent would essentially get a "free pass" for years of poor performance. Simply, Respondent is not entitled to a "free pass" for one (1) year of poor evaluations and ineffective teaching.

Importantly, as a distinction in the Thomas case, this matter was initially [pled] under both sections of the Tenure Law – the old and the new. (The Arbitrator in Thomas provided "[s]ince the District's inefficiency charge was not pleaded in the alternative, but rather bases on TEACHNJ, it cannot amend its pleading at this juncture." While N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 provides for mandatory charges brought on the basis of two consecutive annual ratings of ineffective or partially effective, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 provides for charges when those specific conditions have not been met but dismissal is nonetheless warranted on the basis of inefficiency or any other grounds specified by statute. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Therefore, because the District pled tenure charges under both statutes and the Arbitrator has jurisdiction to decide this matter of inefficiency under either N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 or N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 of the TEACHNJ Act, this case should proceed to hearing.

Furthermore, since TEACHNJ's adoption, arbitrators have not hesitated to consider tenure charges of inefficiency in non-mandatory cases pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. See, e.g., I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Lawrence E. Hawkins, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 243-10/13 (March 10, 2014) (where the Arbitrator sustained the charges of inefficiency and dismissal of Respondent); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Felicia Pugliese, State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 272-9/12 (February 15, 2013) (Arbitrator upheld the tenure charges of inefficiency against the Respondent), confirmed, Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division, Essex County, Docket No. C84-13 (oral opinion September 16, 2013), appeal pending, Docket No, A-000857-13.

In contrast to this trend, in Cheatham, the arbitrator overstepped his authority in making a decision as to the appropriateness of the District's evaluation process, a matter expressly left to the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 and 17.3. As discussed supra, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 requires that once a matter is transmitted to arbitration by the Commissioner, the arbitrator must proceed to a hearing on the merits. The Commissioner alone, had the authority to examine tenure charges once transmitted to the Commissioner by the District. Id.

Respondent has recently submitted two (2) additional cases. At base, the Award entered in I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Sandra Brienza and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 235-8/14, is a wholesale adoption of Cheatham, without consideration of either the Arbitrator's authority or citation to any authority on which basis to wholly adopt the reasoning of another arbitration decision. The same tactic was adopted by Arbitrator Gregory in I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Lorraine Williams and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Docket No. 255-9/14, and as argued above, although these arbitration decisions may be considered by an arbitrator they are neither binding nor the law.

No final decision on the merits has been adopted in these matters and the District has the right of appeal, which it fully intends to invoke in each instance. In each and every decision subsequent to Cheatham, which too shall be appealed, an arbitrator improperly invoked the doctrine of collateral estoppel. Olivieri v. Y.M.F. Carpet, Inc., 186 N.J. 511, 521, 523 (2006), held that the invocation of the doctrine is not permitted to foreclose a party from asserting a legal claim or defense unless that party is unable to appeal it as a matter of law. See also, Lopez v. Patel, 407 N.J. Super. 79 (2009).

In conclusion, under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, the issue before the arbitrator is whether the evidence in the record presented supports the charge of inefficiency. See, Hawkins, supra, pp. 39-43; Carter, supra, pp. 24-27; Pugliese, supra, pp. 8-10. The only issue for the arbitrator is whether the record supports a finding that the charges are true. See, Chavez, supra, pp. 11-12. Accordingly, even if the Arbitrator here concludes, notwithstanding the facts and argument presented herein, that the requirements for inefficiency tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 have not been met, the inefficiency charge against Respondent should not be dismissed. Instead, the charge must be evaluated under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, as initially pled, with the case proceeding to hearing. For the foregoing reasons, the Respondent's Motion to Dismiss must be denied in its entirety.

IV. STATEMENT OF THE CASE

At the outset and as a threshold matter, the Petitioner insists that I lack jurisdiction to entertain the instant motion, as it is the Commissioner of Education who is solely authorized to determine the sufficiency of the evaluation process and resulting tenure charges, per N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. From the District's point of view, therefore, a dispositive motion by a teacher subject to tenure charges based upon the failure of a board of education to follow the evaluation process may only be made to the Commissioner prior to the referral to an arbitrator.

Such a narrow reading of the TEACHNJ Act and its enabling regulations was not contemplated by the framers. The plain language of N.J.S.A.18A:6-16 provides the Commissioner of Education with the discretion to determine that if a tenure charge is sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, "he shall refer the case to an arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of P.L. 2012, c. 26 (C.18A:6-17.1) for further proceedings, except that when a motion for summary decision has been made prior to that time, the commissioner may retain the matter for purposes of deciding the motion."

The pre-Act Administrative Code regulation is found at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(g) in the SUBCHAPTER 1. GENERAL PROVISIONS section, and permits a respondent to file a motion to dismiss in lieu of an answer. It goes on to say that "briefing on the motions shall be in the manner and within the time fixed by the Commissioner or by the ALJ if the motion is to be briefed following transmittal to the OAL. The subsequent regulation found at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)1 under SUBCHAPTER 5. CHARGES UNDER TENURE EMPLOYEES HEARING ACT tracks the prior language and substitutes "arbitrator" for "ALJ."

Read in pari materia, the statute and the regulation therefore clearly contemplate that dispositive motions may be heard by an arbitrator assigned to a tenure dispute. The Petitioner has asserted that neither N.J.S.A. 18A-17.2 nor N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 provide for the summary disposition of tenure charges. Such a position misses the mark, however, as Respondent has correctly maintained, the former limiting arbitral review in inefficiency cases refers to a hearing on the merits and not a pre-hearing motion. And while the latter may not expressly address this situation, it does not proscribe it. Under those circumstances, the AAA Labor Arbitration Rules are controlling, per N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.1c. Rule 27, Evidence and Filing of Documents confers broad discretion on an arbitrator to accept and to determine the relevancy and materiality of evidence, while Rule 47 permits him to interpret and apply the rules insofar as they relate to his powers and duties.

Furthermore, I fully credit the position of Respondent, that arbitrators in tenure hearings are vested with the authority to enforce school laws once a "controversy and dispute" has been transferred to them, including ruling on procedural and substantive motions before, during and after a substantive hearing. This is consistent with the Commissioner's authority to appoint an arbitrator to examine the charges and conduct an appropriate hearing as provided in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1 (c)5. See, I/M/O of the Tenure Charge of Inefficiency Against Neil Thomas and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Agency Docket No. 244-9/14 (Simmelkjaer, 2014 at p. 33).

Nor is Petitioner's reliance upon the boilerplate language in the DOE's transmittal letter that "[t]he Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed," of any moment. Moreover, as Arbitrator Klein has remarked "[i]n other words, the Commissioner is expressly not making a finding." See generally, I/M/O the State Operated School District for the City of Newark and Elena Brady, Agency Docket No. 270-9/14 (Klein, 2014 at p. 8). [emphasis supplied in original].

Furthermore and as a practical matter, Petitioner's jurisdictional position is at variance with the actions of the Commissioner in this very case, and its prior conduct. In that regard, when the District filed its own MOTION TO DISMISS seeking a default judgment, DOE transmitted that application to me for resolution. As previously discussed, no threshold challenges to arbitral authority were lodged at that time by the Petitioner, which thoroughly litigated its position before me. It is accordingly somewhat curious that the District apparently believes I am empowered to hear its own dispositive motion but not Respondent's. Based upon the foregoing considerations, I find that the instant motion is properly before me for resolution.

In deciding this MOTION TO DISMISS this inefficiency tenure charge, any disputed facts have been viewed in a light most favorable to the non-moving party, in the case the Newark School District. As the proponent of this affirmative defense which operates as a threshold consideration, Respondent Kelly-Gamble accepts the burden of making a prima facie demonstration of her entitlement to the same, by a preponderance of the credible evidence. Once that is satisfied, the burden shifts to the Petitioner to attempt to rebut this prefatory showing through its affirmative defenses. Upon my analysis of the respective arguments and case citation exhaustively set forth in the parties' briefs, I find that the instant tenure charges of inefficiency must be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE, as the District has been unable to rebut the Respondent's prima facie presentation.

Petitioner suggests that the TEACHNJ Act went into effect on August 6, 2012 prior to the commencement of the 2012 – 2013 School Year, and that it is "[t]herefore indisputable that evaluations conducted in the 2012 – 2013 School Year may be used in tenure charges of inefficiency." While it is certainly true that evaluation rubrics had to be adopted by a board by December 31, 2012, per N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123 (c), the full implementation of the new inefficiency standards governing teacher evaluations came into existence during 2013 -2014.

2/ N.J.S.A. 18A:6-122-123 provide for the annual submission of evaluation rubrics by New Jersey school districts to the Commissioner for review and approval. N.J.A.C. 6A:10-4.1 details the components of the required rubric. The Guide To The TEACHNJ Act ("Guide") published by the New Jersey State Department of Education indicates that the districts choose their own observation measure, with the following TEACHER PRACTICE INSTRUMENTS available: Danielson 2011; Danielson 2007; Stronge; McREL; Marzano; Marshall; Rhode Island Model; Other. A footnote advises that a district may choose its own model but must seek the approval of the DOE. A board of education was then obligated to adopt an evaluation rubric approved by the commissioner by December 31, 2012, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123 (c).

Indeed, as Respondent has underlined, the comprehensive guidance published by the Department of Education itself severely undercuts the position of the Petitioner. The Guide referenced in note 2 discusses the Intersect of Act and Regulations, as follows:

- TEACHNJ Act, P.L. 2012, c. 26 adopted August 6, 2012
- 2 Rounds of Regulation
  - 1st Round
    - Meant to help districts prepare to launch improved evaluations in 2013 – 2014
    - Adopted in February of 2013 (2/7/2013)
  - 2nd Round
    - Proposed March 6, 2013
    - Is meant to contain "more details on evaluation policies and procedures"
    - To be effective for the 2013 – 14 school year
    - Projected adoption date November 2013
- Practice Point: What is operative at the beginning of the school year will change mid-year

The Parameters of the Act section provides:

Support

- Required training on the evaluation system
- Targeted feedback to drive professional development
- School Improvement Panel conducts evaluations, leads mentoring, and identifies professional development opportunities

- Corrective Action Plan for Ineffective, Partially Effective rating

Evaluation

- Implementation in 2013 – 2014
- Four levels of summative ratings
- Educator practice instruments used for multiple observations
- Multiple objective measures of student learning for teachers, principals, VPs/APs

Tenure

- Teachers earn tenure after 4 years based on effectiveness
- Effective ratings required to maintain tenure
- Dismissal decisions decided by arbitrators

[emphasis supplied in original]

It is the History: Timeline for Implementation section of the Guide that is perhaps most telling, and includes:

EVOLUTION OF EVALUATION REFORM IN NEW JERSEY

2010 – 2011

NJ Educator Effectiveness Task Force work	/	Teacher evaluation pilot opportunity announced

2011 – 2012

Teacher evaluation pilot In progress	/	Capacity-building requirements announced for all districts to follow in 2012 – 2013

2012 – 2013

Cohort 2 teacher evaluation/new principal evaluation pilots in progress; districts building capacity	/ New tenure legislation in effect

2013 – 2014

Statewide Implementation of New Evaluation System

In History: Timeline for Implementation, the Guide identifies the 2013 – 2014 School Year Implementation Guideline. This explained that: "[t]o build capacity leading up to statewide implementation in 2013 – 2014, districts were required to form District Evaluation Advisory Committees and School Improvement Panels, select evaluation instruments, and begin training during SY 12-13. The following timeline depicts additional implementation deadlines for SY13-14:"

By July 1

Train teachers on teacher practice instrument.

By Aug. 31

All teachers hired after May 1, 2013 must be trained on instrument. Districts report to state Department on progress of implementation.

By Oct. 31

Train principals and evaluators on principal practice instrument.

By Nov. 15

Teachers participate in goal-setting conference with their supervisor, finalize SGO(s).

By Feb. 15

Make adjustments to SGOs with approval from a principal and CSA.

By April 30

Complete required observations for non-tenured teachers.

By end of school year[3]

Complete all observations for teachers. Have annual summary conference to review available component scores

The record reflects that seven (7) of the Petitioner Newark District's schools participated in a 2011 – 2012 Pilot Program along with eleven (11) other districts throughout the state, in conjunction with DOE's Excellent Educators For New Jersey Program. Then during the 2012 – 2013 School year, the pilot was continued for the entire District. The parties agree that in both school years, the four (4) category rating system was utilized for teacher evaluations. Based in part upon these facts, Petitioner argues that the "Partially Effective" rating on 3/ The Guide also contained a History Training Timeline, which contained the 2013 – 2014 Training Requirements for teaching staff members, evaluators, and administrators, which included: all teaching staff members being trained on all components of the evaluation rubric by July 1, 2013; all observers being trained on the practice instrument by August 31, 2013 before observing for the purpose of evaluation, as well as participating in 2 "co-observations (at least 1 before December 1st, with the double observation used to calibrate teacher practice instruments and promote accuracy in scoring; all administrators, principals/assistant/vice principals being thoroughly trained on the principal evaluation rubric by October 31, 2013; superintendents/CSAs certifying each year that observers have been trained and can apply the educator practice instruments accurately and consistently.

Respondent's 2012 – 2013 annual summative evaluation along with the "Ineffective" rating for 2013 – 2014 should be utilized to satisfy the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(a)(2).

However, adopting such a position would require that I ignore the foregoing guidance from the very agency tasked with implementation as well as other critical components of TEACHNJ, such as N.J.S.A.18A:6-17.3(d), which mandates that "[t]he only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C. 18A:6-117 et al." It also eviscerates the remedial safeguards in the Act that are designed to assist an educator whose evaluations have been less than stellar.

An example is the School Improvement Panel ("SIP"), which the Guide counsels "is charged with ensuring the effectiveness of the school's teachers by overseeing mentoring activities, conducting evaluations, identifying professional development opportunities, and conducting a mid-year evaluation of any teacher rated Ineffective or Partially Ineffective in the most recent annual summative evaluation." See, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-120 and N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1. Respondent has maintained without challenge that the Newark District did not have a SIP in place during the 2012 – 2013 School Year and rhetorically questions how it can then be responsible for the conduct of evaluations and the implementation of TEACHNJ given that fact. See, ANSWER to NOTICE OF TENURE CHARGES OF INEFFICIENCY.

Several other factors are also worth noting. As Respondent has recognized, the 2011 – 2012 Pilot Program in which the District participated preceded the August 6, 2012 adoption of TEACHNJ. Of critical significance is the fact that the regulatory guidance provided in Title 6A of the Administrative Code only came into effect in 2013, with the 1st Round of regulations adopted February 7, 2013 and the 2nd Round proposed on March 6, 2013 and adopted March 14, 2013. Since the instant tenure charge encompassed the period from December 21, 2012 forward, that begs the question succinctly articulated by Arbitrator Bluth at page 11 of his Award in I/M/O Tenure Charge of Inefficiency of Sandra Cheatham and School District of the City of Newark, Agency Docket No. 226-8/14 (Bluth, 2014) of:

> [h]ow therefore, can the District claim their program was in compliance with the Department's regulations when the 2012 – 2013 School Year began? The clear answer is they could not because the District had no way of knowing what the effects of TEACHNJ would be until March 2013. By that time, approximately seventy percent of the school year had elapsed. This undermines the District's claim its evaluation program, which was implemented in September 2012 was the same as the plan outlined by the Department of Education in March 2013.

The preceding findings of fact establish that the Respondent has made a prima facie showing on her MOTION, that the instant tenure charges should be dismissed with prejudice. That is not to say that I do not recognize and endorse the District's position that Respondent or any other educator should not be afforded a free pass when it comes to inefficiency charges. The obvious caveat, however, is that only procedurally correct annual summative evaluations may be utilized in order to fulfill the mandate of N.J.S.A. 6-17.3(a)(2) and that operates as a condition precedent. Accordingly, because 2012 – 2013 was designed to be a pilot year within the State of New Jersey and the Newark School District, Petitioner's consideration of the same in connection with the subject tenure charge renders it infirm. The burden is therefore shifted to Petitioner to establish its affirmative defenses.

Petitioner initially points to the October 24, 2014 guidance provided by the DOE which stands for the purported proposition that the intent of the Agency all along was to permit teacher evaluations conducted during the 2012 - 2013 School Year to be utilized for inefficiency charges brought pursuant to the TEACHNJ Act. The ex post facto nature of this ex parte communication which was clearly intended to pull an end run around Cheatham, coupled with the fact that the guidance is in direct conflict with DOE's own TEACHNJ literature, however militate against the acceptance of the same.[4]

4/ Respondent has also highlighted in her Reply Brief that Mr. Shulman's position taken in the October 24th correspondence contradicts his prior posture on the subject. See, e.g. July 30, 2012 Memorandum to Chief School Administrators, subject, EDUCATOR EVALUATION SYSTEM IMPLEMENTATION UPDATE, section 1 Capacity Building Requirements for all Districts for 2012 – 13: "[a]s we prepare for statewide rollout of an improved educator evaluation system in 2013 – 2014, all districts will conduct capacity-building activities detailed in previous memos and explained in our FAQs..."

Q. Will summative ratings 'count' this year (2012 – 2013) toward tenure decisions?

A. No the only item 'on the clock' is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012 – 2013 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013 – 2014 is the first year where the statewide evaluation system will be in place, And the first year when [the] summative rating clock will start.

Petitioner's contention that it has pled an alternative statutory basis under N.J.S.A. 6-16 to entitle a hearing on the sufficiency of the inefficiency charges under the "old" tenure law also is unpersuasive. Rather, a cursory reference in a pleading does not obviate the fact that the solitary tenure charge of INEFFICIENCY and the accompanying STATEMENT OF EVIDENCE make it abundantly clear the instant charges were brought under N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3.

In that regard, paragraph a. of the charge contends that "[t]he Respondent was rated as "Ineffective" and/or "Partially Effective" in 2 consecutive annual evaluations. Paragraphs r and s go on to assert that "[t]he Respondent has received a partially effective/ineffective rating for the 2012 – 2013 School Year in an annual summative evaluation; " and "[t]he Respondent has received a partially effective/ineffective rating for the 2013 – 2014 School Year in an annual summative evaluation." Principal Ortiz's STATEMENT OF EVIDENCE states inter alia at # 2. that "[d]uring the period from December 21, 2012 to the present Respondent failed to satisfactorily perform the duties and responsibilities of a classroom teacher despite numerous suggestions and assistance given by the administrative staff."

Instead, as Arbitrator Simmelkjaer reasoned at page 51 of his Award in I.M.O. the Tenure Charge of Inefficiency against Neil Thomas, supra Agency Docket No. 244-9/14:

> [i]n the Arbitrator's opinion, had the legislature intended that a teacher charged with inefficiency for two consecutive years of ineffective or partially [ ]effective ratings on their annual summative

> ratings be evaluated utilizing two different and asymmetric evaluation procedures – one consistent with Section 25 of TEACHNJ and the other consistent with Section 8, N.J.S.A, 18A:6-16 – it had the wherewithal to provide the appropriate statutory language. In the absence of such language, the Arbitrator is compelled to dismiss the charges.

Accordingly, if Petitioner wishes to proceed against Respondent on alternative statutory bases, it must do so via the perfection of new tenure charges before the Commissioner of Education. The Pre-Act arbitration awards relied upon by Petitioner to support its position are also inapposite, as they preceded the full implementation of the new inefficiency tenure standards during the 2013 – 2014 School Year,[5] and are factually distinguishable. See, I/M/O the Tenure Hearing of Gerald Carter, School District of the City of Camden, Agency Docket No. 369-12/12 (Simmelkjaer, 2013); I/M/O/ the Tenure Hearing of Felicia Pugliese and the State Operated School District of the City of Newark, Essex County, Agency Docket No. 272-9/12 (Brent, 2013); I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Dr. Audrey Cuff and Cumberland Regional School District Board of Education, Docket No. 71-3/14 (Gerber, 2014).; I/M/O/ the Tenure Charges Against Vice Principal Lawrence E. Hawkins by the State Operated School District of the City Of Newark, Agency Docket No. 243-10/13 (Laskin, 2014).

5/ In I/M/O the Tenure Charge between State Operated School District, City of Newark and Owen Newson, Agency Docket No. 276-9/12 (Pecklers, 2013), I concluded that the evaluation rubric to be adopted by all boards and approved by the commissioner had a January 2013 submission date, and pursuant to [26] 25.d of the ACT, "[t]he only evaluations which may be used for the purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner." Accordingly, the old standard of "beyond a preponderance of the evidence" was applied. As argued by Respondent, the new inefficiency standard of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17.3 with attendant regulations represented wholesale changes to inefficiency cases heard under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, among them the elimination of the 90 day improvement period. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 limited the discretion of the arbitrator when considering an inefficiency charge. Nothing convinces me that the Legislature intended inefficiency cases filed during and after the 2013 – 2014 School Year to be heard under both.

The District next emphasizes the fact that in October 2012, a Memorandum of Agreement ("MOA") was entered into with the teachers' majority representative, the Newark Teachers' Union. ("NTU"). According to Petitioner, this provided that a new evaluation process would be implemented beginning in the 2012 – 2013 School Year, with four (4) summative evaluation rating categories adopted in accordance with TEACHNJ, N.J.S.A. 18A"6-117. Attention is then drawn to Section II.A.4 of the MOA, which provides that the entire agreed-upon compensation system would be based upon teacher performance, as measured by the new evaluation framework. The argument follows that as such, the NTU specifically agreed to this new evaluation system.

Notice is initially taken, that as urged by Respondent, nothing in the 36 page MOA addresses the issue of the use of the new evaluation system by the District in making tenure-based decisions. Rather, the MOA purely addresses the District's much-publicized merit pay initiative, as well as salary guides and every other related issue. Therefore, while the District may properly argue that the NTU agreed to a new evaluation system that was for the discrete purpose of teacher compensation.[6]

And even assuming without deciding that the MOA addressed the tenure charge at hand, it is axiomatic that the statutory provisions of the TEACHNJ Act would preempt any local agreement to the contrary. See generally, State v. State Supervisory Employees' Association, 78 N.J. 54, 80-81 (1978); see also, I/M/O/ the State Operated School District for the City of Newark, and Elena Brady, Agency Docket No. 270-9/14 (Klein, 2014). Even in the event the NTU would have been permitted to waive a statutory right such as this on behalf of a Union member, Respondent has correctly argued that such a waiver would have to have been clear and unmistakable per Red Bank Regional Education Association vs. Red Bank Regional High School District, 78 N.J. 122, 140 (1978). No such evidence has been provided by the Petitioner Newark School District.

6/ The District adopted an evaluation rubric as part of a performance evaluation system known as the Newark Public Schools' Framework for Effective Teaching, which was implemented during the 2012 – 2013 School Year. According to Petitioner, the accompanying Guidebook clearly described the new levels of performance as highly effective, effective, partially effective and ineffective.

Petitioner also takes direct aim at the post-Cheatham awards of my arbitral colleagues, accusing each of improperly invoking the doctrine of collateral estoppel, in violation of the New Jersey Supreme Court's ruling in Olivieri v. Y.M.F Carpet, Inc., 186 N.J. 511, 521, 523 (2006). See also, Lopez v. Patel, 407 N.J. Super, 79 (2009). Leaving aside any technical definition, it should be made clear that Respondent herein has not relied upon that argument in her moving papers, nor is my AWARD grounded upon collateral estoppel.

Rather, the awards cited have been accorded persuasive and not precedential authority, in keeping with the generally accepted arbitral practice. Parenthetically, they are entitled to substantial deference unless palpably erroneous. See generally, The Common Law of the Workplace, The Views of Arbitrators, Second Edition, National Academy of Arbitrators, The Bureau of National Affairs, Inc., Washington, D.C. 2005, St. Antoine, Ed., at p. 85 § 2.16

Use of Prior Arbitration Awards. Therefore, based upon the totality of the foregoing considerations, Respondent has presented an un-rebutted prima facie case that the instant inefficiency tenure charge should be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. IT IS SO ORDERED.

V. CONCLUSION

Respondent Kelly-Gamble has demonstrated by a preponderance of the credible evidence that the subject MOTION TO DISMISS must be granted.

AWARD

THE INSTANT TENURE CHARGE IS DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. MS. KELLY-GAMBLE SHALL BE IMMEDIATELY REINSTATED TO HER TEACHING POSITION WITH FULL BACK PAY AND SENIORITY AND MADE WHOLE FOR THE LOSS OF ANY CONTRACTUAL OR STATUTORY BENEFITS DURING THE INTERIM PERIOD.

I was appointed to serve as arbitrator on November 20, 2014 pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9 to hear and make a final determination on tenure charges filed by the Ocean City Board of Education [the "Petitioner"] against tenured teaching staff member Eric Baroni [the "Respondent"] pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:10. Upon receipt of that appointment, I conducted a conference call with counsel, at which time the procedure for processing this case was discussed and agreed upon. It was agreed that the matter should proceed directly to hearing.

Arbitration hearings in this matter were scheduled on January 14 and 20, 2015. Prior to the conduct of the January 14, 2015 hearing, Petitioner and Respondent voluntarily agreed to engage in informal discussions and mediation on the issues raised in this proceeding. These discussions led to the development of tentative terms for a Settlement Agreement. Those terms were drafted on January 14, 2015, signed by the Respondent on January 14, 2015 and formally approved and adopted by the Ocean City Board of Education on January 28, 2015. The terms of the settlement are as follows:

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT

WHEREAS, ERIC A. BARONI (hereinafter "BARONI") has been employed by the OCEAN CITY BOARD OF EDUCATION, COUNTY OF CAPE MAY (hereinafter "BOARD") (BARONI and the BOARD are sometimes referred to severally as a "Party" or jointly as "the Parties" in this AGREEMENT) as a tenured teaching staff member pursuant to NJSA. 18A:28-5; and

WHEREAS, BARONI and BOARD mutually desire to terminate amicably BARONI'S employment and/or affiliation with BOARD as of January 14, 2015 through BARONI'S resignation of his employment with the Board and to settle and terminate any and all disputes between them by executing this SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT ("AGREEMENT");

IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between BARONI and BOARD, as follows:

1. BARONI agrees that he shall resign and no longer be employed by BOARD effective January 14, 2015 BARONI further agrees that his signature on this AGREEMENT constitutes an acknowledgment that he is relinquishing any and all present and future rights to employment, recall and re-employment with the BOARD as of January 14, 2015 BARONI has provide his irrevocable letter of resignation, attached hereto as Exhibit A.

2. In full consideration of the mutual execution of this AGREEMENT, and the mutual agreement to be legally bound by its terms, and in recognition that BARONI'S waiver of his tenure rights, recall rights and right to a hearing represents good and valuable consideration, BOARD:

   (a) agrees not to contest any application by BARONI for unemployment benefits. The BOARD will respond truthfully to any inquiry by the Department of Labor and Workforce Development, Division of Unemployment Compensation regarding BARONI's employment or claim(s) for unemployment benefits;

   (b) agrees to provide a neutral letter of reference in the form attached hereto as Exhibit B upon request to employers of BARONI, which shall be limited to the period of BARONI'S employment by BOARD, his salary history and positions held, and upon BARONI' s request and execution of a release, shall only provide to any potential employers a copy of his yearly evaluations;

   (c) agrees to additionally provide neutral references upon request to prospective employers of BARONI, which shall include such information as the period of BARONI'S employment by BOARD, his salary history and positions held. Any prospective employer who inquires as to BARONI'S employment history shall be referred to the Superintendent of Schools or his/her designee and informed of BARONI'S resignation. In no event will the BOARD members, the Superintendent, or the Human Resources Department make any statement to any current or prospective employer, verbal or written, meant to disparage BARONI. All such references will be cleared through the Superintendent of Schools or his/her designee. Upon BARONI's request and execution of a release, the BOARD shall only provide to any potential employers a copy of his yearly evaluations

   (d) The BOARD will cooperate with BARONI to the extent necessary for him to be eligible and receive COBRA benefits. The receipt of COBRA shall be at BARONI'S sole expense and is in no way the responsibility of the BOARD.

(e) subject to the arbitrator's decision approving this Agreement pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, and approval by the BOARD, BOARD agrees that any and all tenure charges filed by it shall be and are hereby withdrawn with prejudice;

(f) agrees that upon execution of this AGREEMENT that BARONI is deemed to be released from his employment with the Board upon fewer than 60 days written notice pursuant to NJ.S.A. 18A:28-8.

3. It is expressly agreed and understood that BOARD does not have and will not have any obligation to provide BARONI at any time in the future with any payments, benefits or consideration other than those recited in Paragraph 2, subsections (a) through (t) above, if any. BARONI hereby waives any claim for back pay from his suspension, dated October 15, 2014 through the date of his resignation, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-7.

4. BARONI hereby agrees and recognizes that his employment relationship with BOARD will be permanently and irrevocably severed as of January 14, 2015 and that BARONI hereby waives any rights to seek any position, paid or unpaid, with the BOARD, and specifically promises not to apply for any position with the BOARD. BARONI agrees that any attempt to obtain a position with the BOARD will constitute a breach of this agreement and the BOARD and may rely on the breach in rejecting the application or refusing to employ, reemploy, appoint, nominate, or contract with BOARD. Moreover, BARONI specifically waives any tenure or recall rights and any right to a hearing. In addition, BARONI will request, the OCEAN EDUCATION ASSOCIATION ("OCEA") to withdraw with prejudice and without costs any and all pending grievances related to BARONI'S employment with the Board, including, but not limited to grievances arising from the increment withholding and discipline.

5. This is a settlement of the instant matter, as such it is a settlement of disputed claims. In settling this matter, neither party is admitting that its claims and/or defenses were correct or that the other party's position was without merit.

6. In consideration of the Settlement Amount and the other promises made herein, BARONI and the BOARD for themselves and (as applicable) their respective heirs, shareholders, directors, officers, employees, agents, attorneys, affiliates, parents, subsidiaries, predecessors, successors, assigns, and all persons acting by, through, under or in concert with any of them (the "Released Parties'), each release the other and their respective Released Parties from any and all charges, complaints, claims, liabilities, obligations, promises, agreements, controversies, damages, actions, causes of action, suits, rights, demands, costs, losses, debts and expenses, and from any claims of any nature whatsoever, known or unknown, which they now have, claim to have, own, hold or which they at any time heretofore had, held, or claimed to have, relating in any manner whatsoever to: (i) any employment relationship between BARONI and the BOARD, and (ii) any other relationship by, among, and/or between BARONI and the BOARD. The Parties further understand, covenant, and agree that neither of the Parties will enter, permit to be entered or cause to be entered, directly or indirectly, any suit or other claim against the each other or any of the Released Parties related to the foregoing. The Parties represent and warrant that they have not sold, assigned, transferred, conveyed or otherwise disposed of any claim, demand or cause of action, including any claim for attorneys' fees, against the each other or the Released Parties. The Parties' release and discharge also includes, without limitation, any contract or tort claim or potential claim, and any claim arising under common law, such as claims for breach of contract, defamation, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, misrepresentation, libel, slander, invasion of privacy, negligence, interference with advantageous relations, infliction of emotional distress, loss of consortium, discrimination, or wrongful termination.

This release shall not apply to any claim arising out of (a) the enforcement of this agreement; (b) any claim that arises after the date of this agreement; or (c) claims that may not lawfully be released, discharged, or waived. In addition, this release specifically excludes claims arising under the New Jersey Workers' Compensation Act, the Teachers Pension and Annuity Fund Act, and any claims arising from any breach of this AGREEMENT. BARONI certifies that he is unaware of any factual basis for such claims.

7. Should BARONI have certain personal property on BOARD premises, he and his designated representative shall be permitted, on notice to school administration, and at a mutually convenient day and time, to come onto school property, and, if deemed necessary, meet with a representative of school administration and accompanied by a representative, designate which property belongs to her and remove her personal property. The BOARD will cooperate in this regard.

8. By signing this AGREEMENT, the Parties certify that they have had ample opportunity to discuss this AGREEMENT with counsel. The parties are entering into this AGREEMENT freely and voluntarily. Neither has been forced or coerced to enter into this AGREEMENT. Neither party was under duress during the negotiation of or execution of this AGREEMENT. The parties have the capacity to understand the terms of this AGREEMENT and at no point during its negotiation or execution has either party been under the influence of any medication or mind altering substance which would have impaired the party's ability to understand the substance of this AGREEMENT. They are fully satisfied with the services of their counsel with respect to both this AGREEMENT and all other aspects of this matter.

9. Should any provision of this AGREEMENT be declared or determined by any court of competent jurisdiction to be illegal, invalid or unenforceable, the Parties will make reasonable efforts to reform that provision to be legal, valid and enforceable. Should the provision remain illegal, invalid or unenforceable, the legality, validity, and enforceability of the remaining parts, terms, or provisions shall not be affected thereby and said illegal, unenforceable or invalid part, term, or provision shall be deemed not to be a part of this AGREEMENT.

10. This AGREEMENT, and all matters arising out of or relating to this AGREEMENT, shall be interpreted under the laws of the State of New Jersey. Any action to enforce this AGREEMENT, or matters arising out of or relating to this AGREEMENT, shall be brought in the Federal or State courts of the State of New Jersey. The Parties irrevocably consent to the personal jurisdiction of such courts.

11. This Agreement sets forth the entire agreement between BARONI and the BOARD. Any other prior agreements between some or all of them are hereby terminated and shall have no other force or effect. The Parties acknowledge and agree that neither of the Parties, or the Released Parties, have made any promises to each other than those set forth in this Agreement. This Agreement may be modified only upon an express written agreement executed by the Parties. Because the Parties' respective and separate counsel have had a full opportunity to review this Agreement with the Parties before they signed it, the language of this Agreement shall in all cases be construed as a whole, according to its fair meaning and not strictly for or against any of the Parties.

12. This AGREEMENT shall be subject to approval by the BOARD.

13. The Parties agree that this AGREEMENT may be signed in counterparts and that facsimiles of signatures will have the same force and effect as original signatures.

14. To the extent permitted by law, the parties agree that this settlement shall remain confidential.

15. The arbitrator appointed by the Commissioner of Education to hear and decide this matter, James Mastriani, Esquire, shall retain jurisdiction.

16. All parties to this AGREEMENT hereby waive any claim to counsel fees.

The arbitrator is required under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 to issue a decision approving the settlement of tenure charges and to explain why the arbitrator is approving the terms of settlement. I have approved these terms for the reasons that follow.

I am persuaded that the issues that were raised in the Statement of Tenure Charges and the Statement of Evidence filed by the Petitioner and the Answer to Tenure Charges filed by the Respondent have been fully reviewed and discussed by all parties and that the issues raised therein have been satisfactorily addressed by the terms of settlement. In addition to the fact that these terms are mutually acceptable to the parties, I conclude that the interests of the public will be served as well.

The parties have agreed that the interests of all concerned will be served by a separation from employment by voluntary resignation and the withdrawal of the tenure charges. The parties have acknowledged that these terms have been agreed upon without admission by either party as to the merits of the claims raised by the charges or by Respondent's defenses to the charges. The Settlement Agreement resolves Petitioner's desire that Respondent no longer be employed by the Board and the Respondent's intention to demonstrate through testimony and certifications that he has served with professionalism and also with character, as evidenced by offers of proof that he would have submitted into the record. The Board and the public will further benefit by the budgetary savings achieved by avoiding the costs of litigation which, based upon the approval of the settlement terms, will no longer be necessary.

Accordingly, and based upon all of the above, this arbitrator has approved the parties' settlement agreement.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE HIGH POINT REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – who had been employed by the respondent Board under tenure as an athletic trainer – challenged the termination of his employment in September 2013, contending that he should have been afforded a tenure hearing and the protections associated therewith prior to his removal. The Board argued that petitioner's immediate removal was mandatory because his license as an athletic trainer – which was required by state law as a term of his employment – had expired in January 2009. Further, the Board contended that once the petitioner was lawfully removed from the athletic trainer position for failure to maintain the required license, his tenure rights ceased and the Board was under no obligation to rehire him.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: in order to hold the position of school athletic trainer, an individual must hold the appropriate certificate from the Department of Education – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4 and N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.17 – and complete requirements established by the State Board of Medical Examiners (SBME) for registration as an athletic trainer – pursuant to N.J.S.A. 45:9-37.37 and N.J.A.C. 13:35-10; licenses are issued by the SBME for a two-year period, and must be renewed following the expiration of each two year license; a license not renewed within 30 days of the expiration date is automatically suspended; if an employee fails to maintain the required licenses for the position, the employing district shall remove the employee; and there is no statute that details circumstances under which a person removed from a teaching position because of failure to maintain the required license will be entitled to reinstatement to their position. The ALJ concluded that the Board proved by a preponderance of evidence that the decision to remove the petitioner, as well as the decision to not re-appoint him after renewal of the license in question, was not arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ affirmed the termination of petitioner's employment as an athletic trainer at High Point Regional High School.

Upon a comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE HIGH POINT REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Petitioner, Shane Hunsicker, challenges the respondent Board of Education's termination of his employment as an athletic trainer. He maintains that before respondent removed him from his position it should have afforded him a tenure hearing and the protections associated therewith. After a June 30, 2014 hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) assigned to the case found that the basis for respondent's decision not to retain petitioner lay outside the laws concerning tenure, and that respondent properly followed regulations pertaining to athletic trainers when it terminated petitioner's employment. Having considered the record,[1] Initial Decision of the OAL, petitioner's exceptions and respondent's replies thereto, the Commissioner agrees with the ALJ.

N.J.S.A. 45:9-37.37 and N.J.A.C. 13:35-10 preclude an individual from working anywhere in New Jersey as an athletic trainer without an up-to-date license issued by the State Board of Medical Examiners. It is undisputed that petitioner's athletic trainer license expired on January 31, 2009. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1(b) and (c), regulations which were operative on

[1] The record presented to the Commissioner did not include a transcript of the June 30, 2014 hearing

September 4, 2013 – the date on which respondent terminated petitioner – require employing school districts to refrain from hiring and, respectively, to remove any teaching staff members who fail to obtain or maintain any license, certificate or authorization that may be mandated by State or Federal law or by a licensing board for the individual to serve in a position. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1(c) [Now recodified at N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-5.1(c)], which provides: "[t]he employing school district shall remove from the position any teaching staff member who fails to maintain the mandated license . . . ." Accordingly, when respondent learned – on or about August 28, 2013 – that petitioner's license had expired, it was required to remove petitioner from his position.

The Administrative Law Judge found that at the time of petitioner's removal from service "there [was] no statutory exemption that provide[d] a tenured licensee with protection from [the] removal [mandated by N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1(c)]." The Commissioner concurs. It was respondent's duty under the above referenced statutes and regulations – which must be seen as safeguards for the welfare of student athletes – to remove petitioner from a position for which he did not hold the required license. The tenure statutes allow teaching staff members to remain employed pending hearings about their fitness to teach, administer or provide special education services under certificates issued by the New Jersey Board of Examiners. However, there is no statutory authority which allows a local Board of Education or the Commissioner of Education to retain an individual whose work is also governed by the Board of Medical Examiners, and who has failed to conform to that Board's practice requirements.[2] Further, as the ALJ found, there is no authority which would have required respondent to rehire petitioner once his employment had been terminated.

[2] Less on point, but nonetheless supportive of respondent's position is the holding in Michael Schailey v. Board of Education of the Southern Regional High School District, Ocean County, Commissioner Decision No. 73-09 (February 19, 2009), wherein the Commissioner adopted the determination in the Initial Decision that a tenured physical education teacher whose teaching certificates were suspended by the Board of Examiners could be terminated from his school employment without a tenure hearing.

The Commissioner is mindful that petitioner experienced a tragedy in 2010 which greatly affected his subsequent personal life. However, petitioner had let his license lapse over a year before the tragic event, and had continued to work without a license for five years. Those circumstances would not present a case for circumventing the mandate of N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1(c), even if the Commissioner had the discretion to do so.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted and the petition is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

SHANE HUNSICKER,

Petitioner,

v.

HIGH POINT REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL, BOARD OF EDUCATION,

Respondent.

Gail Oxfeld Kanef, Esq., for petitioner, Shane Hunsicker (Oxfeld Cohen, attorneys)

James M. McCreedy, Esq., for respondent, High Point Regional High School Board of Education (Wiley, Malehorn & Sirota, attorneys)

Record Closed: August 6, 2014 Decided: December 22, 2014

BEFORE EVELYN J. MAROSE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Shane Hunsicker, challenges the termination of his employment as athletic trainer by respondent, High Point Regional High School (District), Board of Education (Board).

The New Jersey State Department of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on March 27, 2014. A hearing was held on June 30, 2014. The record closed upon the receipt of written summations on August 6, 2014. Due to a voluminous caseload, an extension for filing of the initial decision was requested to December 21, 2014.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

The parties agreed upon the following facts:

a) Petitioner began employment with the Board as an athletic trainer on September 1, 2001.

b) In order to be an athletic trainer in a public school sytem, petitioner was required to pass two separate licenses/certifications. The first, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 45:9-37.37 and N.J.A.C. 13:35-10, is issued by the State Board of Medical Examiners which permits an individual to practice athletic training in both interscholastic and intramural activities. The second, in accordance with with N.J.S.A. 18A:26-2.4 and N.J.A.C. 6A9:13.17, is an Educational Service Certificate together with a school Athletic Trainer Endorsement, issued by the State Board of Examiners in the Department of Education. As the position of school athletic trainer is included in N.J.S.A. 18A:28.5, the position is tenure eligible. See also Bower v. Bd. of Ed. of Salem, EDU 7472-11, Comm'r Decision (June 11, 2012), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal.

c) Petitioner's athletic trainer license issued through the State Board of Medical Examiners expired in January 31, 2009, and, as of the commencement of the 2013-14 school year, had not been renewed by petitioner. The District had no notification of the failure to renew and petitioner continued to act as athletic trainer after January 31, 2009.

d) By letter dated September 4, 2013, District Superintendent Scott D. Ripley (Superintendent) advised petitioner that the Board had been informed by the State Board of Medical Examiners on August 28, 2013, of the expiration of petitioner's athletic trainer license. The Superintendent advised petitioner that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1, he was being removed from the position of athletic trainer.

e) The State Board of Medical Examiners issued a $1,000 civil penalty to petitioner for violating the Athletic Training Practice Act. The penalty was stayed as a result of the mitigation presented by petitioner concerning both medical and personal issues.

f) Within a few weeks of receiving the superintendent's Letter, dated September 4, 2013, petitioner took all the appropriate steps and had his medical license restored.

Based upon a review of the testimony and the documentary evidence presented, and having had the opportunity to observe the demeanor and assess the credibility of the witnesses, in addition to the stipulated facts, I FIND the following pertinent FACTS:

Petitioner was employed by the Board as an athletic trainer. He achieved tenure in that position. Though he initially obtained the two separate licenses/certifications that were required for the position of athletic director and renewed those licenses for some eight years, he failed to renew his athletic trainer license issued through the State Board of Medical Examiners in January 31, 2009, though he continued to be employed as an athletic trainer for the District. Petitioner always kept current in the continuing education requirements for an athletic training.

In late August 2013, the Board was advised by the Athletic Training Advisory Committee of the New Jersey Office of the Attorney General that petitioner, though he was currently performing the duties of an athletic trainer for the District, did not hold an active athletic trainer license. The Committee requested that the Board provide the Committee, within seven days, with the following:

1.) Petitioner's employment history with the District including, but not limited to, his job title, job descriptions, dates of employment, and a copy of any curriculum vitae submitted to the Board by petitioner.

2.) The names and license number of all other athletic trainers on the staff of High Point Regional High School.

3.) The name and license number of each athletic trainer's supervising physician.

4.) A copy of the plan of care used by the athletic trainer. (J-2.)

Scott D. Ripley (Superintendent Ripley), after reviewing and considering a letter from the Athletic Training Committee, called petitioner into his office, verbally terminated him, and provided him with a written letter, dated September 4, 2013, detailing the reasons for the termination. Superintendent Ripley stated that, by statute, petitioner had to be removed since he was not in compliance with the laws of the State of New Jersey regarding appropriate licensure for the the performance of his job duties because his license expired on January 31, 2009. A copy of the Board's job description for athletic trainer was attached to the letter of termination that he provided to petitioner. (J-1.)

Superintendent Ripley opines that he did not have the discretion to allow petitioner to remain in the position of athletic trainer when his license was suspended, regardless of petitioner's tenure position. Superintendent Ripley further opines that once petitioner was lawfully removed from the positon of athletic trainer, his tenure rights to that position ceased. The Board could, and did, appoint another person to the positon of athletic trainer. The Board has no desire to re-appoint petitioner to the position of athletic trainer at this time.

Petitioner acknowledges that it was his responsibility to pay his athletic fees every two years and not the Board's responsibility. He further acknowledges that he did not pay the fees for his license, which was due on or before January 31, 2009, until September 2013. However, he asserts that he had tenure rights to the position of athletic trainer that were not considered and that there are equitable circumstances that mitigate against the harsh remedy of termination.

Sometime in 2009, petitioner's wife became pregnant with their first child. The baby was born on April 17, 2010, and passed away from Sudden Infant Death Syndrone (SIDS) on November 30, 2010. After the couple lost their child, their marriage began to dissolve. Petitioner moved out of the marital home in January 2012. He has no recollection of receiving a bill for his license from 2009 through 2013. From the time that he married in 2002 to the time that he separated from his wife, petitioner's wife paid all of the bills, including his athletic trainer license, which was renewed every two years. She also took responsibility for their income tax filings. During the period in question, petitioner and/or his wife also failed to timely pay some other financial responsibilities, for example his car registration. The day after learning that his license had been suspended for failure to pay the biennial fees, petitioner forwarded a check for approximately $400 to the State to bring his license current. Petitioner's license was re-instated as of September 27, 2013.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

In order to hold the position of school athletic trainer, an individual must hold both the Department of Education certificate and "satisfactorily complete the requirements established by the State Board of Medical Examiners for registration as an athletic trainer pursuant to N.J.A.C. 13:35-10." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-13.7. All licenses issued by the New Jersey State Board of Medical Examiners shall be issued for a two-year licensure period.

A licensed athletic trainer who seeks a renewal of the license shall submit a completed renewal application and the renewal fee prior to the expiration date of the license. N.J.A.C. 13:35-10.4(a). A license that is not renewed within thirty days of its expiration hall be automatically suspended. An individual who continues to practice with a suspended license shall be deemed to be engaged in unlicensed practice and shall be subject to penalties for practicing without a license. N.J.A.C. 13:35-10.4(d). A licensed athletic trainer whos license has been automatically suspended for failure to renew may be reinstated by the Board upon completion of 1.) payment of the reinstament fee and all past delinquent biennial renewal fees; and 2.) submission of an affidavit of employment listing each job held during the period of suspended license which includes the name, address, and telephone number of each employer. N.J.A.C. 13:35-10.4(e).

No person shall practice or hold himself out as being able to practice athletic training in the State of New Jersey unless licensed in accordance with N.J.S.A. 45:9-37.37. If an employee fails to maintain any other license required for a position the "employing district shall remove from the position any teaching staff member who fails to maintain mandated license . . . the district shall also report the names of these individuals to the Board of Examiners." There is no statutory exemption that provides a tenured licensee with protection from removal. N.J.A.C. 6A:9-5.1; N.J.S.A. 18A:28.5; Breitwieser v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of City of Jersey City, 286 N.J. Super. 633, 644 (App. Div.1996). There is also no statute that details circumstances under which a person removed from a teaching position because of failure to maintain a mandated license will be, or might be, entitled to re-instatement to his position.

In the case at hand, The Board removed petitioner from the position of High Point's athletic trainer after receiving notice that petitioner failed to pay the necessary fees and renew one of two licenses that he needed to perform his job duties. N.J.S.A. 45:9-37.37 and N.J.A.C. 6A:9.51. I CONCLUDE that the Board proved, by a prepondence of the evidence, that the District's decision to remove him from his position was not arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable, but rather pursuant to statute. I further CONCLUDE that the number of years that petitioner was employed and his earned tenure did not entitle petitioner to remain in a position for which he lacked current required certificates.

After the Board confirmed, to the Athletic Training Advisory Committee, that petitioner contined to serve as athletic trainer after January 31, 2009, the Advisory Committee issued petitioner a civil penaty of $1,000 for violating the Athletic Training Practice Act. However, the Committee, in its discretion, chose to stay the penalty as a result of the mitigating presented concerning medical and personal issues, and re-instated petitioner's license in less than one month. Once petitioner's athletic license was renewed, the Board did not, in its discretion, chose to rehire petitioner as athletic trainer, though mitigating circumstances were asserted. Among other things, the Board stated that it had not been made aware of petitioner's personal struggles, that the personal struggles that petitioner asserted post-dated petitioner's failure to renew his license, and that petitioner was able to come to work on a regular basis and continue to maintain his athletic trainer educational requirements during the relevant period, from January 31, 2009, to September 4, 2013, despite the personal struggles. Accordingly, petitioner's asserted personal struggles do not justify his failure to pay his licensing fees for some four years, which resulted in the expiration of a license that he had to keep current for his job. I CONCLUDE that the Board proved, by a prepondence of the evidence, that the District's decision not re-appoint petitioner, after his license had been restored, was not arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable or required by statute.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that the termination of petitioner's employment as athletic trainer is hereby AFFIRMED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAZLET, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – employed for many years as an elementary media specialist in respondent Board's school district – sought reinstatement retroactive to June 30, 2010 to a teaching position with the Board based on her tenure rights and seniority status following the elimination of her media specialist position as part of a reduction in force (RIF). Petitioner contended that she had tenure under her instructional certificate with endorsement as a Teacher of English, which – along with her seniority rights – entitled her to a full-time teaching position or assignment in the district. The Board argued that petitioner never achieved tenure under her instructional certificate, and that her tenure rights are therefore limited to the media specialist position – which position was abolished in the 2010 RIF. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner was employed by the Board for approximately 23 years as a media specialist; the Board demonstrated that petitioner taught for only 10 months under her instructional certificate during the 2001-2002 school year, which is not sufficient to qualify for tenure; and petitioner's assertion that her time in the district should be viewed as a dual assignment because she served simultaneously as an educational media specialist and a teacher of language arts literacy is without merit. The ALJ concluded that petitioner has demonstrated only one year's time as a teacher of English under her instructional certificate, which is insufficient to qualify her for tenure in that position. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the case.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that the petitioner did not acquire tenure under her instructional certificate as an English teacher. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this case, and the petition was dismissed.

LINDA TURRELL,	:
PETITIONER,	:

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAZLET, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner and the Hazlet Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

The petitioner's exceptions substantially reiterate the substance of her post-hearing submission at the OAL, recasting the arguments therein to support the contention that the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) erroneously found that the Board did not violate the petitioner's tenure and seniority rights. In her exceptions, the petitioner points out that it is undisputed that she held two certificates throughout her employment in the district, including an educational services certificate with an endorsement as an educational media specialist and an instructional certificate with an endorsement as a teacher of English. Petitioner argues that as a result of her simultaneous instructional and media specialist assignments from September 1, 1987 through June 30, 2010, she acquired tenure as both a media specialist and an English teacher. Therefore, when the Board abolished the district's media specialist position in 2010, it had an obligation to recognize the petitioner's tenure right to claim a position as an English teacher over any non-tenured and/or less senior teaching staff members for the 2010-2011 school year.

In reply the Board also reiterated the positions advanced in its submissions at the OAL, arguing that the ALJ properly determined that the petitioner did not acquire tenure as an English teacher. The Board emphasizes that with the exception of the petitioner's teaching assignment during the 2001-2002 school year, petitioner only served in the district under her educational services certificate as a media specialist. Although petitioner had clearly acquired tenure as a media specialist, petitioner's one year of service as a teacher during the 2001-2002 school year does not come close to meeting the standards for the acquisition of tenure as an English teacher under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge – for the reasons thoroughly set forth in the Initial Decision – that the petitioner did not acquire tenure under her instructional certificate as an English teacher. The objections raised in the exceptions filed by the petitioner mimic the arguments previously raised before the ALJ and were clearly taken into account by her in determining that the Board was entitled to summary decision. Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

LINDA G. TURRELL,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF HAZLET, MONMOUTH COUNTY,

BEFORE LAURA SANDERS, Acting Director and Chief ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner Linda G. Turrell filed a petition of appeal on July 6, 2010, seeking reinstatement retroactive to June 30, 2010, to a position with the Board of Education of the Township of Hazlet, Monmouth County (respondent, or the Board) based on tenure rights and seniority status, following a reduction in force. She contends that her tenure under her instructional certificate and her English endorsement and seniority rights entitle her to a full-time teaching position or assignment, and if neither of these exist, a lesser position. The Board contends that her tenure rights are limited to the media specialist position, and that it has none of these positions. The contested case was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15. It was filed on August 4, 2010.

The matter originally was assigned to Administrative Law Judge John Schuster, and on October 16, 2012, in a letter to Judge Schuster, the parties agreed to a schedule for submission of joint stipulations of facts and exhibits, briefs and response briefs, in relation to cross-motions for summary decision. The parties adhered to that schedule. As ALJ Schuster was delayed in deciding the motions, and no issues of credibility were involved, the matter was transferred to the undersigned on December 10, 2014.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The parties have stipulated to the following facts. Linda G. Turrell has held an Educational Services Certificate with an endorsement as an Educational Media Specialist since April 1984, and an Instructional Certificate with endorsements as a Teacher of English and Teacher of German since 1975. On or about September 1, 1987, Turrell began employment with the Hazlet Board of Education in the full-time position of librarian. From the 1987-88 school year through the 1993-94 school year, she was assigned to the Sycamore Drive Elementary School and the Raritan Valley Elementary School.

Beginning in the 1994-1995 school year, through the 2000-2001 academic year, Turrell was assigned to Raritan High School (the secondary category). During the 2001-2002 school year, she was specifically assigned to teach seventh and eighth grade English at Hazlet Middle School. That assignment was the subject of an appeal to the Commissioner, alleging that the Board violated her tenure and seniority rights as a media specialist by the transfer. On April 22, 2002, the Commissioner of Education approved a settlement agreement, which provided that Turrell would be assigned in the 2002-2003 school year to a media specialist position. It further provided that she would not be "assigned any duties which are outside the scope of her Media Specialist endorsement for this assignment." In addition, the agreement provided that the Board "shall continue to assign Turrell to a Media Special[ist] position in the District, as long as she continues to retain tenure status in the position of Media Specialist."

For the 2002-2003 year, she was assigned to the Sycamore Drive, Cove Road, and Middle Road Elementary Schools. From the 2003-2004 through 2008-2009 school years, she was assigned to the Sycamore Drive, Cove Road, and Lillian Drive Elementary Schools. During the 2009-2010 school year, she was assigned to the Beers Street, Cove Road, and Lillian Drive Elementary Schools.

On or about April 27, 2010, Turrell was informed by respondent that it had determined to abolish her position as an elementary media specialist and terminate her employment effective June 30, 2010, as a result of a reduction in force. The Board voted on April 26, 2010, to approve elimination of two elementary media specialist positions, effective July 1, 2010. It also voted to terminate Turrell effective July 1, 2010. (Exhibit K.) In a letter dated April 28, 2010, Turrell notified the Board of her intention to assert a tenure and seniority claim to another position in the district. She also requested a copy of a seniority list for all certified staff in the school district. By letter dated April 29, 2010, respondent advised Turrell of her placement on a preferred eligibility list for a media specialist position, should the district ever reinstate the position. But it took the position that she had no tenure rights to any teaching position, as she only worked under her instructional certificate "for a few months, several years ago." (Exhibit M.) Turrell then requested copies of the job descriptions for "teacher of library (media specialist)" and English teacher. (Exhibit N.) The Board provided Turrell with an approved job description for teacher (Exhibit P), and one for "High School Librarian." (Exhibit R.) In a letter dated May 7, 2010, the Board stated it has "no approved job description for the position of media specialist." (Exhibit O.)

Throughout her years of service in the district, Turrell was required to prepare and submit lesson plans, and was subject to annual observations and evaluations of her job performance. For all of her years of service, she received annual employment contracts. As the above is drawn from the stipulations, it is FOUND as FACT.

With regard to the lesson plans, most of them refer solely to library-type activities, such as learning how libraries organize information, evaluating websites for reliability, understanding genres, developing literary appreciation, understanding graphic organization, and using an information-management booklet. However, one is about creating sentence outlines, another about how to study for a test, including using a study-skills booklet, and a third, learning how to analyze a story for the main idea, support information, and conclusions. (Exhibit T.) The classroom observations record topics such as creating strategies for test-taking, learning how to do a speech to persuade, and identifying story themes, but the majority of the lessons addressed areas such as using a table of contents, checking out books, evaluating different encyclopedias, and learning how to use three computer databases.

The evaluations, which are positive, include such comments as, "Mrs. Turrell's goals were to empower educators to work with community partners to improve instruction and to use research to increase global and diversity awareness. . . . She wrote and updated several excellent unit lesson plans. Evidence includes copies of web pages, handouts, unit plans, and memos to principals and staff" (from 2009-2010). "In her lessons, Miss Turrell's lesson plans are detailed and aligned with New Jersey Core Curriculum Content Standards" (from 2006-2007). "Ms. Turrell was most instrumental in securing information and allowing and accessing the purchase of classroom library books, dove-tailing the Character Education initiative, Literacy Links. . . . . Ms. Turrell is to be commended for her efforts in getting this project off the ground and completed" (from 2006-2006). "Ms. Turrell conducts a solid Library School Program" (from 2004-2005) "Her lesson plans are aligned with the library curriculum" (from 2003-2004). "Ms. Turrell directs the day-to-day operation of an 18,000+ volume library . . . ." (from 2000-2001). "Ms. Turrell is in the process of preparing the library for automation . . . . She has been published in many educational journals, most recently in Media and Methods, a professional educational technology magazine, regarding library management and concerns and has her own series of writing workbooks available nationwide" (from 2002-2001.) "During the fall semester, Ms. Turrell provided library orientation and usage skills as part of the regular scheduled Language Arts program. Ms. Turrell is instrumental in overseeing the day-to-day operations of the library" (from 1999-2000). "Ms. Turrell is extremely competent in performing her duties as a school librarian" (from 1993-1994). (Exhibit U.)

Although Turrell has a media specialist certificate, she first was appointed as a librarian (Exhibit C) and from 1994-95 through 2000-01, was assigned to Raritan High School. The Job Description for a High School Librarian, requires eligibility for a Permanent School Librarian Certificate or a Limited School Librarian Certificate, along with a bachelor's degree. (Exhibit R.) A master's or doctor's degree is preferred, as is a minimum of three years successful teaching experience in a classroom. The Broad Definition states that, under the direction of the principal, the High School Librarian shall:

1. Coordinate all activities under his (or her) jurisdiction with the established philosophy of the school.
2. Organize, administer, supervise and evaluated (sic) the effectives of the library services designed to meet the needs of the students, the staff and the community.
3. Institute reasonable measures to insure a high degree of professional rapport and the maintenance of the proper atmosphere for a library.
4. Institute reasonable procedures and administer effective programs to be certain the library services reflect sound principles of good public relations.
5. Plan, administer and maintain an adequate information program designed to acquaint school personnel and the community with the library program.
6. Delegate reasonable responsibility, institute equitable rules and regulations, establish satisfactory procedures and make assignments necessary for the efficient operation of an optimum library program.
7. Organize and supervise an adequate instructional program for the students and staff in the purposes, policies, regulations and proper procedures for the efficient utilization of the library.

8. Assist the staff in the selection of reference materials necessary for the enrichment of the instructional program.
9. Organize, administer, and maintain adequate systems for the previewing, requisitioning, processing order on receipt of shipment, and establishing and maintaining an adequate system of card files.
10. Establish, administer, supervise and evaluate adequate systems of records, filing, book-keeping, compilation of necessary statistics, perpetual inventory, and the maintenance and care of property assigned to his custody.
11. Organize, administer and evaluate the effectiveness of an adequate in-service training program for personnel under his jurisdiction.

The job description for teacher requires holding a Teacher Certificate appropriate to the area of instruction, and describes the primary function to be participating "as a member of an instructional team or department in directing the learning activities of pupils in the attainment of established curriculum goals." (Exhibit P.) The specific tasks include:

1. Organizes and plans effectively for the instructional task.
2. Prepares and maintains accurate and up-to-date pupils' records as required by law and Board policy.
3. Report to the school and to the teaching and other duty stations which are assigned, punctually and prepared to carry out his or her assigned duties.
4. Develops, establishes maintains conditions at his/her teaching and or/duty station which are safe and healthful for students and reports promptly to the supervisor in charge upon any undesirable condition which he/she as a teacher cannot effectively control or eliminate.

7. Uses school supplies and equipment efficiently and conserves those resources and encourages students to do so as well by both example and instruction.
8 Demonstrates a thorough knowledge and understanding of the subject matter which he/she is assigned to teach.
9. Establishes and maintains standards of pupil behavior needed to achieve a functional learning atmosphere in the classroom.
10. Plans and implements a program of study that within the resources provided by the district meets the individual needs, interest, and ability of the students.

14. Communicates with parents through regularly scheduled conferences and through other means to discuss pupil's progress and interpret the school program as the need arises.

The employment contracts in Exhibit U refer to Turrell as a teacher.

As the above is drawn from the exhibits which are also part of the stipulations, they are FOUND as FACT.

LEGAL ANALYSIS

Motion for Summary Decision

Summary decision may be granted "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). Additionally, if no response is filed within twenty days, summary decision, if appropriate, shall be entered. Ibid.

The New Jersey Supreme Court has modified and clarified the analysis required when considering a motion for summary decision or judgment. In Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995), the Court adopted the summary judgment standard utilized by federal courts:

> Under this new standard, a determination whether there exists a "genuine issue" of material fact that precludes summary judgment requires the motion judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party. The "judge's function is not himself [or herself] to weigh the evidence and determine the truth of the matter but to determine whether there is a genuine issue for trial." [Anderson v. Liberty Lobby, 477 U.S. 242, 249, 106 S. Ct. 2505, 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d 202, 212 (1986).] . . . If there exists a single, unavoidable resolution of the alleged disputed issue of fact, that issue should be > considered insufficient to constitute a "genuine" issue of material fact for purposes of Rule 4:46-2. Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 250, 106 S. Ct. at 2511, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 213. The import of our holding is that when the evidence "is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law," Liberty Lobby, supra, 477 U.S. at 252, 106 S. Ct. at 2512, 91 L. Ed. 2d at 214, the trial court should not hesitate to grant summary judgment.

The burden is on the moving party to exclude all reasonable doubt as to the existence of any genuine issue of material fact, and all inferences of doubt are drawn against the moving party and in favor of the non-moving party. Saldana v. DiMedio, 275 N.J. Super. 488, 494 (App. Div. 1994). The critical question therefore is "whether the evidence presents a sufficient disagreement to require [a hearing] or whether it is so one-sided that one party must prevail as a matter of law." Brill, supra, 142 N.J. at 533 (citation omitted). If the non-moving party's evidence is merely colorable, or is not significantly probative, summary judgment should not be denied. See Bowles v. City of Camden, 993 F. Supp. 255, 261 (D.N.J. 1998). As there is no genuine, material issue of fact, I CONCLUDE that the matter is appropriate for summary decision.

The issue is whether the tenure rights and seniority gained through approximately twenty-three years as a media specialist in the district apply to the position of teacher in the district. The Board contends that the ten months Turrell taught English in the 2001-2002 school year are the only time relevant to the position of teacher. It also points out that her 2001 appeal complained that the teaching assignment violated her tenure rights, and that she is now arguing the converse. Petitioner argues that, "Although she was originally hired to serve in the position of librarian under her media specialist certificate, throughout almost all of her employment with the Board, Ms. Turrell also taught language arts classes under her English certificate." (Pet'r's br.) "Therefore, her time in the district should be viewed as a dual assignment because she served simultaneously as an educational media specialist and a teacher of language arts literacy." (Ibid.) Petitioner also contends that the written observations and evaluations make clear that during her years in the elementary schools, she taught lessons correlating with the New Jersey Core Curriculum Content Standards for Language Arts Literacy. This area includes reading, writing, speaking, listening, and viewing and media literacy.

"Tenure is achieved within a position and tenure protection as against non-tenured individuals following a reduction in force extends only to assignments within that tenured position for which the individual is qualified by virtue or his or her certification." Wallen v. Rancocas Valley Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670 (citing Howley v. Bd. of Educ. of Ewing Twp., 1982 S.L.D. 1328, aff'd, State Bd. of Educ., 1983 S.L.D. 1554). The State Board of Examiners issues only three categories of educational certificates: Instructional, Administrative, and Educational Services. N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-5.2(a). Each is a separate category with separate standards. Teachers fall within the Instructional certificate (N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-9B-8.1(a) et seq.); school library media specialists fall within the Educational Service certificate. (N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-12.1 et seq.) In order to have tenure in a position related to the certification, one must have served the requisite number of years in the position. For those with more than one certification, it is possible to have tenure in more than one position, provided that the person has served the required number of years in each position. Here, Turrell is arguing that years served in the media specialist position should also count as years toward a teaching position within the Instructional Certificate positions because of the content of what she was actually doing.

In evaluating whether someone has earned tenure time in a particular position, the Commissioner and the courts have focused on the duties of the position. For instance, in Kish v. Elmwood Park Board of Education, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 135, the Commissioner examined the requirements of the Staff Development Departmental Facilitator and the Instructional Supervisor Multi-Discipline and determined that the descriptions "substantially overlapped." Similarly, the New Jersey Supreme Court compared the duties of guidance counselor and a class supervisor and determined that the two were distinctively different because the supervisor evaluated teachers, not students. Dennery v. Passaic Reg'l High Sch. Dist., 131 N.J. 626 (1993).

As the Board notes, Wallen, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 670 involves a situation bearing a substantial similarity to Turrell's, as Wallen was a tenured media specialist who sought to exercise tenure rights under her English certificate. Here, the absence of a job description for a media specialist is unfortunate. Turrell's first full-time appointment in the district was to the position of school librarian for the 1987-1988 year. (Exhibit C.) In 1994-1995 through 2000-2001, she was assigned to Raritan High School. The employment card for those years lists the "grade or subject" as librarian, as it does through 2009 (with the exception of the 2001-2002 year). (Ibid.) However, the settlement recognized Turrell's rights as a media specialist and required the Board "to continue to assign" her to a media specialist position. (Exhibit I.) Thus, at some point, "librarian," morphed into "media specialist," but whether that simply recognized the dramatic technological changes in research and physical resources is in question.

The primary documents concerning Turrell's actual activities are the lesson plans, the evaluations, and the observations of Turrell. With the exception of creating sentence outlines, learning test-taking, and analyzing stories, the lesson plans focus on library-type activities. Similarly, the classroom observation on the lesson about how to do a speech to persuade is notable for its difference from items such as using a table of contents, evaluating encyclopedias for various purposes, and learning to use computer databases. The 1999-2000 evaluation comment about providing library orientation and usage skills as part of the regular, scheduled Language Arts program does refer to the overall English goals, but it is linked to a comment about overseeing the day-to-day operations of the library.

Just as in Wallen, petitioner's position and training as a media specialist "included a significant instructional component," and the materials demonstrate the valuable teaching that went on in the library, but the positions of teacher and media specialist "are substantially distinct." Among other things, the teacher position makes the holder responsible for maintenance of student records, for planning an instructional program related to the individual needs and abilities of each student, and for communicating with parents—none of which appear in any of the documents related to Turrell's position. Thus, the years in the media specialist position cannot be counted toward tenure in a teaching position. For that position, I CONCLUDE that Turrell has demonstrated only one year's time, which is insufficient to qualify for tenure.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that she has not demonstrated tenure rights to the position of English teacher.

ORDER

For the reasons cited above, petitioner's appeal is DISMISSED with PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

Re: Corey J. Lowell v. Geneva Smallwood and Felicia Simmons
SEC Docket No. C 16-14

Dear Parties:

I have reviewed the papers filed in connection with respondent Simmons' request for interlocutory review of the February 11, 2015 denial, by the Acting Director of the School Ethics Commission (SEC), of respondents' emergent applications for a stay of the February 24, 2015 hearing which has been scheduled to adjudicate the above-captioned matter. I note first that the timing of the application does not allow a reasonably adequate response time. Further, upon full consideration of respondent Simmons' papers, I have determined that the application fails to satisfy all of the standards for the granting of emergent relief which were established in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982). Finally, I do not find that the arguments presented by respondent Simmons justify the piecemeal litigation that interlocutory review of the SEC's stay denial would engender.

Accordingly, pursuant to my discretion under N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10, I herewith deny petitioner's motion.

Sincerely,

Re: A.B. on behalf of minor child, L.M.D.-R. v. Board of Education of the Township of Burlington, Burlington County, Agency Dkt. No. 291-11/13, Commissioner Decision No. 180-14.

Dear Parties:

I have reviewed the materials filed in connection with petitioner, A.B.'s Motion for Reconsideration of the Acting Commissioner's May 2, 2014 decision ordering the petitioner to reimburse the Burlington Township Board of Education $18,381.34 in tuition costs for her grandson, L.M.D.-R.'s period of ineligible attendance in the district.

Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2, a motion for reconsideration shall be considered based upon the following:

i. claim(s) of mistake, provided, however, that disagreement with the outcome of a decision, or with the analysis upon which it is based, shall not constitute "mistake" for purposes of this section;
ii. newly discovered evidence likely to alter the outcome of a matter, where such evidence could not have been previously discovered by due diligence;
iii. newly ascertained misrepresentation or other misconduct of an adverse party, where such misrepresentation could not have been previously known; or
iv. reversal of a prior judgment on which the present matter is based.

Upon review and consideration of the submissions, I find that the petitioner has failed to satisfy any of the requisites for granting such relief specified in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)2. The petitioner does not argue that she has satisfied any of the requirements for reconsideration, but rather she requests that the Commissioner reconsider this matter based on the fact that she pays taxes in Burlington Township and that she agreed to co-parent her grandson because of her daughter's economic hardship. The petitioner, however, has not presented any new information indicating that L.M.D.-R was actually residing with her in Burlington Township between February 13, 2013 and June 25, 2013, and September 9, 2013 and February 4, 2014. The fact that the petitioner currently has full custody of L.M.D.-R., and that he is now lawfully attending school in the district does not negate the fact that tuition is owed for his ineligible attendance between February 13, 2013 and February 4, 2014.

Accordingly, the Motion for Reconsideration is hereby DENIED.*

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe
Commissioner

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed an appeal in March 2006, challenging the Board's charging of his accumulated sick leave for absences associated with petitioner's alleged exposure to a contaminated worksite. This matter was the subject of a pending Worker's Compensation case, and was placed on the inactive list in May 2006. A hearing in the matter was scheduled for January 14, 2015, but petitioner failed to appear. A notice was sent to the parties by the Office of Administrative Law on January 21, 2015, which provided the petitioner with an opportunity to submit an explanation for his failure to appear to the Department of Education within thirteen days of the notice. No explanation was filed with the Department.

There being no explanation for his non-appearance filed by the petitioner, the matter was deemed to no longer be a contested case before the Commissioner. Accordingly, the Commissioner dismissed the petition with prejudice.

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on August 12, 2014 for determination as a contested case, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

The parties have agreed to a settlement and have prepared a Settlement Agreement indicating the terms thereof, which is attached and fully incorporated herein.

I have reviewed the record and the terms of settlement and I FIND:

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures or their representatives' signatures on the attached settlement agreement and the attached Board resolution.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and General Release ("Agreement") is made and entered into by and between the MORRIS SCHOOL DISTRICT BOARD OF EDUCATION (hereinafter "the Board" or "the District") and P.D. o/b/o M.D. (hereinafter the "Releasor" or the "Parent"), (collectively the "parties") for full settlement of certain civil and administrative claims that were alleged and/or could have been alleged by Releasor.

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, the Board operates the Morris School District; and

WHEREAS, P.D. and M.D. are domiciled in the Morris School District; and

WHEREAS, on July 22, 2014, P.D. filed for a petition of appeal challenging the discipline imposed on M.D. by the Board on April 28, 2014, which is pending before the New Jersey Commissioner of Education/Office of Administrative Law, bearing Agency Reference Number 181-7/14 and OAL Docket No. EDU 10090-2014 N; and

WHEREAS, the parties desire to amicably resolve this dispute and avoid the additional expenses of litigation.

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the foregoing and for other good and valuable consideration, it is hereby agreed by and between the parties hereto as follows:

1. Non-Admission By the Board. This Agreement shall not be construed as an admission by the Board of any of the acts or omissions alleged or those that could have been alleged by Releasor, or of any acts or omissions alleged or which could have been alleged against the Board. The Board specifically denies any liability whatsoever for any damages, injuries or other claims by Releasor or those which were alleged or could be claimed by Releasor.

2. Return to School. The parties agree that M.D. will continue on home instruction through the end of 2nd marking period. As of February 1, the first day of the 3rd marking period (unless postponed as a result of school closings due to inclement weather), M.D. will be allowed to return to Morristown High School ("MHS") on a limited basis as described herein. M.D. will take two courses, English and Physical Education, which meet on "A" days, from 11:42 AM to 2:27 PM. M.D. will arrive at MHS on such "A" days no earlier than 11:37 AM and will leave the premises of MHS no later than 2:30 PM. He will not be allowed to participate in any extracurricular activities during that time. The parties agreed that M.D. and P.D. will attend a re-entry meeting with Mr. Manning, the MHS Principal, which meeting will be scheduled by Mr. Manning at a date prior to M.D.'s first day back. Assuming M.D. meets the requirements for graduation, he will be allowed to participate in the graduation ceremony scheduled for June 24, 2015.

3. Code of Conduct Violations. The parties further agree that in the event M.D. violates the Board's Code of Student Conduct and/or its policy prohibiting Harassment Intimidation and Bullying, he will forfeit his rights under this Agreement, including the right to participate in the graduation ceremony, and be placed on home instruction for the remainder of the school year.

4. Release. In exchange for the consideration set forth herein, the Releasor releases and gives up any and all claims and rights she may have against the Board for any damages or injuries to Releasor in connection with M.D.'s education, including any claims for full reinstatement, compensatory education, compensatory damages, punitive damages, or any damages or injuries to M.D., arising out of alleged acts or omissions, whether known or unknown, that have taken place through the date of this Agreement. As used in this Agreement, the term "Board" means: the Morris School District Board of Education, its current or former elected or appointed officials, administrators, employees, attorneys, agents, servants, representatives, predecessors and successors, insurance carriers, and all other persons or entities for whom any of the above have been or may be legally responsible. Releasor specifically releases the following claims as to the Board:

(a) Any and all claims that were brought and that could have been brought in the Petition of Appeal, bearing Agency Reference No. 181-7/14 and OAL Docket No. EDU 10090-2014N and any other civil or administrative claims that Releasor could assert now, or in the future, resulting from any action or failure to act occurring prior to the time Releasor signs this Agreement, under any provision of any law, common or statutory, of the United States, New Jersey or any other state, city, county, or locality, including but not limited to all statutory claims arising under the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the Americans with Disabilities Act and Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 as well as any other federal, state, or local statute or regulation; and the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act, 20 U.S.C. § 1400 et seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:14-1 et seq.; and

(b) Any and all available claims for attorney's fees and expert costs under any law or regulation.

5. Agreement Not to Sue. Releasor agrees not to file any lawsuit or claim against the Board, based on any events, whether known or unknown, occurring prior to the date of the execution of this Agreement, in any court or tribunal of the United States, New Jersey or any other state, city, county, or locality, for any claims released in this Agreement.

6. Indemnification and Hold Harmless. The Releasor agrees to defend, indemnify and hold harmless the District and its representatives, insurers, third party administrators and attorneys from any claim that may be brought by or on behalf of M.D., during and at any time subsequent to the term of this Agreement, regarding the subject matter of this dispute, provided the Board has not breached any terms of this Agreement.

7. Confidentiality and Non-Disparagement. The Parent specifically acknowledges and agrees that this Agreement was reached without any admission by the Board of any of the acts or omissions alleged or those that could have been alleged. The parties agree that the terms of this Agreement will be kept confidential to the extent permitted by law and that they will not criticize, denigrate, or disparage each other. The parties further agree that in the event of a discussion about this settlement, the parties shall state, "the matter was amicably resolved without an admission of liability." Releasor acknowledges that this confidentiality/non-disparagement requirement is a material term to this Agreement.

8. Non-Domicile. The Board's obligations under this Agreement shall end immediately upon M.D. no longer being domiciled within the boundaries of the Morris School District.

9. No Precedent. The parties agree that this Agreement may not be used to establish precedent in any future proceeding of any type whatsoever involving the Board and that it shall be inadmissible in any such proceeding, other than a proceeding to enforce or prove the existence of same. This Agreement shall not be construed as an admission by the Board of any wrongdoing.

10. Who is Bound. The parties and their agents are bound by this Agreement. Those who succeed to their rights and responsibilities, such as heirs, the executors of their estate, or their personal or legal representatives, are also bound.

11. Representation. The parties acknowledge that they are fully satisfied with their respective legal representation in this matter and that they have reviewed the terms of this Agreement with their respective counsel.

12. Entire Agreement. This Agreement contains the sole and the entire agreement between Releasor and the Board, and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements and understandings between Releasor and the Board pertaining to the subject matter of this Agreement. Releasor represents and acknowledges that she has not relied upon any representation or statement by the Board, or her counsel or representatives, with regard to the subject matter of this Agreement, which is not set forth in this Agreement. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by Releasor and the Board, and expressly stated to be a modification of this Agreement.

13. Signatures.

BY SIGNING THIS AGREEMENT RELEASOR STATES THAT:

A. SHE HAS READ IT;

B. SHE AGREES WITH EVERYTHING IN IT;

C. SHE HAS HAD THE OPPORTUNITY TO CONSULT WITH AN ATTORNEY PRIOR TO EXECUTING THIS AGREEMENT, NAMELY, SHELLEY L. STANGLER, ESQ.;

D. SHE HAS SIGNED THIS AGREEMENT KNOWINGLY AND VOLUNTARILY.

The record of this emergent matter, the sound recording of proceedings at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), and the recommended Order of the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) have been reviewed. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons set forth in the recommended Order – that petitioner has failed to demonstrate entitlement to emergent relief pursuant to the standards enunciated in Crowe v. DeGioia, 90 N.J. 126 (1982), and codified at N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6.

Accordingly, the recommended Order of the OAL denying petitioner's application for emergent relief is adopted for the reasons expressed therein. Edward Cridge, Esq., for Glenn Ciripompa, petitioner (Mellk O'Neill, attorneys)

Robert J. Merryman, Jr., Esq., for Bound Brook Board of Education, respondent (Apruzzese, McDermott, Mastro & Murphy, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 22, 2015 Decided: January 23, 2015

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Glenn Ciripompa (petitioner) filed a petition for due process seeking an order directing the Bound Brook Board of Education (respondent) to restore his salary and emoluments retroactive to November 15, 2014 through the date that a determination is made in his tenure case. In the current proceeding, petitioner seeks an order on emergent relief granting the sought after relief immediately pending the due process proceeding.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On January 12, 2015, petitioners' petition of appeal was filed with the Office of Controversies and Disputes of the New Jersey Department of Education, along with a request for emergenct relief. On January 14, 2015, the emergent matter was filed along with the due process request with the Office of Administrative Law. The emergent relief request was scheduled for oral argument, which was held on January 22, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Many of the facts do not appear to be disputed. Petitioner is a math teacher employed by respondent, most recently assigned to Bound Brook High School. On July 14, 2014, respondent certified tenure charges against petitioner, and suspended petitioner without pay pending the resolution of the tenure charges in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. The charges were filed with the Commissioner of Education on July 17, 2014. The matter was referred to an arbitrator for disposition in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1. On October 20, 2014 (ninety eight days after the certification of charges and suspension) the assigned arbitrator issued his decision and award, which maintained petitioner's tenure but imposed a one hundred twenty day suspension, without pay. Respondent subsequently moved to vacate the arbitrator's decision and award in the Superior Court of New Jersey, Chancery Division. The Court issued an order vacating the arbitrator's award and remanding the matter to a new arbitrator on January 8, 2015 because the award was procured by undue means in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1e and N.J.S.A. 2A:24-8.

On January 9, 2015 petitioner filed in the Appellate Division seeking reversal of the order to vacate. That appeal is currently pending. On January 10, 2015 petitioner filed the herein matter, seeking an order directing respondent to restore his salary and emoluments retroactive to November 15, 2014 (the one hundred twenty first day after certification of charges to the commissioner) through the date that a determination is made in his tenure case. On January 15, 2015 petitioner filed a motion in the Superior Court seeking to stay any further arbitration proceedings pending the outcome of petitioner's appeal to reverse the order vacating the arbitrator's award. That motion is currently returnable February 6, 2015. A new arbitrator has been assigned, and although he has indicated his availability to hear the matter on February 4, 9 or 13, 2015 (Certification of Robert Merryman, Esq., Exhibit 3) he has since informed the parties that no proceedings will ensue until the motion to stay has been decided.

LEGAL DISCUSSION

The standards which must be met by the moving party in an application for emergent relief are embodied in N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.6 and Crowe v. DeGoia, 90 N.J. 126, 132-34 (1982). Emergency relief may only be granted if the judge determines that:

1. The petitioner will suffer irreparable harm if the relief is not granted;
2. The legal right underlying the petitioner's claim is settled;
3. The petitioner has a likelihood of prevailing on the merits of the underlying claim; and
4. When the equities and interests of the parties are balanced, the petitioner will suffer greater harm than the respondent will suffer if the requested relief is not granted.

The petitioner must satisfy all four prongs of the Crowe test.

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11 states:

> Any charge made against any employee of a Board of Education under tenure during good behavior and efficiency shall be filed with the secretary of the Board in writing, and a written statement of evidence under oath to support such charge shall be presented to the Board. The Board of Education shall forthwith provide such employee with a copy of the charge, a copy of the statement of the evidence and an opportunity to submit a written statement of position and a written statement of evidence under oath with respect thereto. After consideration of the > charge, statement of position and statements of evidence presented to it, the Board shall determine by majority vote of its full membership whether there is probable cause to credit the evidence in support of the charge and whether such charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary. The Board of Education shall forthwith notify the employee against whom the charge has been made of its determination, personally or by certified mail directed to his last known address. In the event the Board finds that such probable cause exists and that the charge, if credited, is sufficient to warrant a dismissal or reduction of salary, then it shall forward such written charge to the Commissioner for a hearing pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:6-16, together with a certificate of such determination. The consideration and actions of the Board as to any charge shall not take place at a public meeting.

Furthermore, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 provides, in pertinent part, that , "Upon receipt of such a charge and certification, or of a charge lawfully made to the Commissioner, the Commissioner or the person appointed to act in the commissioner's behalf in the proceedings shall examine the charges and certification . . . If, following receipt of the written response to the charges, the commissioner . . . shall determine that such charge is sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary of the person charged, he shall refer the case to an arbitrator[.]" N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1b(1) requires that a hearing "be held before the arbitrator within forty-five days of the assignment of the arbitrator, and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1d requires that "the arbitrator shall render a written decision within forty-five days of the start of the hearing."

Finally, N.J.S.A. 18A6-14 provides:

> Upon certification of any charge to the Commissioner, the Board may suspend the person against whom such charge is made, with or without pay, but, if the determination of the charge by the arbitrator is not made within 120 calendar days after certification of the charges, excluding all delays which are granted at the request of such person, then the full salary (except for said 120 days) of such person shall be paid beginning on the one hundred twenty-first day until such determination is made. Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process, the person shall be reinstated immediately with full pay from the first day of such suspension. Should the charge be dismissed at any stage of the process and the suspension be continued during an appeal therefrom, then the full pay or salary of such person shall continue until the determination of the appeal. However, the Board of Education shall deduct from said full pay or salary any sums received by such employee or officers by way of pay or salary from any substituted employment assumed during such period of suspension. Should the > charge be sustained on the original hearing or an appeal therefrom, and should such person appeal from the same, then the suspension may be continued unless and until such determination is reversed, in which event he shall be reinstated immediately with full pay as of the time of such suspension.

As to the second and third prongs required to be met before emergent relief can be granted, petitioner argues that the law is well settled and that petitioner will likely succeed on the merits because once the Chancery Division vacated the arbitrator's award it became a nullity, as though it had never existed. Therefore the timeline was not met and no arbitrator's decision was in place once 120 days had passed since the certification of charges. Accordingly, petitioner asserts that the plain language of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 entitles him to return to pay status effective the one hundred twenty-first day. Respondent, on the other hand, argues that the arbitrator did meet his statutorily imposed deadline and that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 does not contemplate the vacation of an arbitrator's award.

Neither view appears to take into account the complete set of circumstances before us. On the one hand, it is easy to see petitioner's point of view. When the award was vacated it was made essentially as though it did not exist. N.J.S.A. 2A:24-8 provides a judge with discretion in ordering that a vacated matter be reheard by arbitrators. While the language in question seems to contemplate contractual as opposed to statutorily mandated arbitration, if he had not ordered it, the Commissioner of Education potentially could have invoked the provisions which govern what is to occur when an arbitrator does not issue his or her decision within the required timeframe. N.J.S.A. 18A:17.1h provides that, "The commissioner may remove any arbitrator from an arbitration case or an arbitration panel if an arbitrator does not adhere to the timelines set forth herein without approval from the commissioner. If the commissioner removes an arbitrator from an arbitration case, the commissioner shall refer the case to a new arbitrator within five days. The newly-assigned arbitrator shall convene a new hearing and then render a written decision within 45 days of being referred the case." These provisions make no mention of staying or tolling the 120 day rule imposed by N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14.

On the other hand, respondent strikes a resonant argument when pointing out that petitioner, by seeking a stay of further arbitration proceedings until the appeal of the order of vacation is resolved, is potentially delaying resolution of the matter. A new arbitrator was assigned who indicated his availability to hear the matter as early as February 4, 2015, which would require a decision forty-five days later, possibly sooner if the requirements of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1h are invoked. While petitioner notes that Court Rule R.2:9-5(c) requires that when an order compelling arbitration is appealed and a party requests a stay of arbitration proceedings pending the appeal, that request shall be granted absent a finding of exceptional circumstances, he also acknowledges that a request must first be made and that a stay is not executed automatically. In respondent's eyes the matter could be resolved shortly and petitioner's actions are causing a delay, seeking to receive pay without working for a longer period than is necessary.

Without ascribing intentions or motives, it is still apparent that two paths lay before the parties and the practical result of sorting this out may be a longer period of time in which petitioner is suspended with pay due to his request to stay proceedings; a result which may or may not be consistent with the legislative intent of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14. While the statute does provide for pay status while a board appeals a dismissal of charges, it is noted that no dismissal occurred here – rather a vacation of an award which reduced the penalty. Additionally the statute indicates that a return to pay status may not be caused by delays requested by the petitioner, although the request for stay has occurred after the 120th day since certification. Additionally, respondent asserts that discovery is needed to determine what amount, if any, would need to be deducted from petitioners salary to account for substitute employment during the suspension should petitioner prevail, although petitioner's counsel asserts that petitioner has certified that there is none.

All of which is to say that when viewed through the prism of the current emergent relief application, the legal question is at best unsettled and appears to be a matter of first impression with regard to the amendments to the laws governing teacher tenure charges placed into effect for the 2012-2013 school year. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has failed to demonstrate that he has a likelihood of succeeding on the merits of the underlying claim. It is stressed that this analysis does not represent a conclusion that either party is more or less likely to prevail at hearing, but only articulates that the legal questions are not settled to a point that petitioner is deemed for purposes of emergent relief sufficiently likely to succeed at hearing, and that litigation of the underlying petition will be helpful in resolving these issues.

Petitioner argues that irreparable harm will exist if emergent relief is not granted, relying on petitioner's certification as to financial distress. Although petitioner acknowledges arguments against finding irreparable harm where money is at issue, he argues that denying emergent relief or finding no irreparable harm would frustrate the specific intent of the statute requiring a return to pay status, which is designed to be self-executing and not require litigation to be triggered. Respondent counters that return to pay status is specifically a monetary issue which can be addressed satisfactorily if necessary upon conclusion of a plenary hearing, and that finding irreparable harm goes against a vast body of case law on the matter.

"Irreparable harm" is defined as the type of harm "that cannot be redressed adequately by monetary damages." Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 132-33. In addition, the irreparable harm standard contemplates that the harm be both substantial and immediate. Subcarrier Communications v. Day, 229 N.J. Super. 634, 638 (App. Div. 1977). However, pecuniary damages may sometimes be inadequate because of the nature of the injury or the right affected. Crowe, supra, 90 N.J. at 133. For example, in Crowe the Court determined neither an unwarranted eviction nor reduction to poverty could be compensated adequately by monetary damages awarded after a distant hearing. Ibid.

In the present matter, however, the governing statute specifically contemplates the ability to assume substituted employment during suspension as a means of mitigating harm caused by the suspension. While that often may be easier said than done, the record, specifically petitioner's certification, is devoid of any description of efforts undertaken to obtain substituted employment. Petitioner may not merely claim a reduction to poverty to prove irreparable harm without demonstrating the futility of efforts to mitigate or avoid such harm.

Additionally, petitioner has not provided, nor I am aware of, any persuasive controlling authority which stands for the proposition that where a dispute arises over a purely monetary issue which involves determination of whether criteria for a statutorily mandated automatic provision of money has been met transforms the monetary issue to one constituting irreparable harm. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE the issue at hand is one that can be redressed adequately by monetary damages and that petitioner has failed to demonstrate that he will suffer irreparable harm if emergent relief is not granted.

As to the fourth and final prong, each party argues that they will suffer greater harm if they do not prevail on the question of emergent relief. Considering the forgoing, it is apparent that if emergent relief is denied, petitioner still will have the opportunity to be heard and possibly obtain the relief he seeks upon conclusion of a plenary hearing. The same cannot be said for respondent, who if successful at plenary hearing would have to undertake proceedings at public expense to recoup any money paid to petitioner as a result of the award of emergent relief. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that the balance of equities argument favors respondents, and that petitioner has FAILED to satisfy this prong.

Consequently, the petitioners' request for emergency relief is DENIED.

ORDER

For the foregoing reasons, I CONCLUDE that petitioner is not entitled to the requested emergent relief and that the petitioner's request for emergency relief is DENIED. The matter will now be scheduled for plenary hearing on the underlying due process petition.

This order on application for emergency relief may be adopted, modified or rejected by COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who/which by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. The final decision shall be issued without undue delay, but no later than forty-five days following the entry of this order. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this order within forty-five days, this recommended order shall become a final decision on the issue of emergent relief in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on June 12, 2014 for hearing as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. A telephone conference was held on November 14, 2014 and during that time the parties advised the undersigned that a settlement had been reached. The Settlement Agreement indicating the terms of settlement was signed by the parties and forwarded to the OAL on January 16, 2015. A copy of the Settlement Agreement is attached hereto and made part hereof.

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by the signature of the parties and/or signatures of their representatives.
2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.
3. The settlement conforms with the standards set forth in Cardonick v. Brookline BOE, dec'd by the Comm'r, April 7, 1992, aff'd. St. Bd. of Ed., April 6, 1983, 1990 SLD 842, 846.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

RECEIVED
2015 JAN 16 P 1:30
STATE OF NEW JERSEY
OFFICE OF ADMIN. LAW

THIS SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT is made by and between Petitioner, John A. Codomo ("Petitioner"), residing at 416 Chestnut Street, Nutley, New Jersey and the Respondent, Hawthorne Board of Education ("Board"), with offices at 445 Lafayette Avenue, Hawthorne, New Jersey (hereinafter jointly referred to as the "Parties").

WHEREAS, Petitioner has commenced a tenure and seniority claim captioned as, John A. Codomo v. Board of Education of Hawthorne, which is presently pending before the Commissioner of Education and the Office of Administrative Law and docketed as OAL Dkt. No. EDU 07247-2014N, Agency Dkt. No. 129-5/14 (the "Litigation"), the allegations of which are detailed more fully in the Petition of Appeal served and filed in the Litigation; and

WHEREAS, the Petitioner has been voluntarily reinstated by the Board as a full time school counselor for the 2014-15 school year.

WHEREAS, the parties desire to resolve and settle all remaining disputes between them arising out of the Litigation, under the terms and conditions set forth in this Agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants and promises contained here, the parties agree as follows:

1. The Parties mutually agree that Petitioner was tenured as a School Counselor as of March 3, 2014 and is therefore entitled to gross back salary in the amount of $ 9,518.02, for the period from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014. This gross salary amount is subject to reduction by an amount equal to the Unemployment Benefits received by Petitioner during that time period. On behalf of Petitioner, the Board will pay the amount due pursuant to the statutes, regulations and policies of the New Jersey Department of Labor and Workforce Development (LWD) to reimburse that Department for the payment of Unemployment Benefits received by Petitioner during the period from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014. The Board takes sole responsibility for the repayment of all Unemployment Benefit reimbursement due from Petitioner for the period specified and agrees to release Petitioner from any liability to the State, the Board, or any other party for the repayment of Unemployment Benefits received by Petitioner from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014. The Board will indemnify and hold Petitioner harmless as to any such claim to repayment of Unemployment Benefits for that time period. The Parties agree that the total gross amount of Unemployment Benefits received by Petitioner from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014 was $ 4,579.20. Petitioner has received unemployment benefits for July and August 2014. In the event that it is determined by LWD that Codomo has to reimburse LWD for the unemployment benefits during that period, Codomo shall repay the amount to LWD and shall indemnify and hold the Board harmless for any obligation it may have to reimburse LWD for the unemployment benefits received as to the months of July and August, 2014 from the gross back salary paid in accordance with the terms of this Agreement.

2. The Parties agree that said total gross amount of such benefits must be repaid pursuant to the regulations of the LWD. As a result, the remaining gross amount of back pay due to the Petitioner after the reduction for repayment of Unemployment Benefits is $ 4,938.82.

3. Petitioner certifies in accordance with the law that he had no mitigating earnings from other employment during the period from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014.

4. The Final Gross Amount of back salary due to Petitioner shall be $ 4,938.82. Said amount shall be paid to Petitioner, subject to all applicable payroll taxes and normal payroll deductions, in the form of a check made payable to "John A. Codomo".

5. The Parties agree that the payments specified herein shall constitute full and final settlement of all claims to money damages for salary or on any other basis arising out of the claims raised in the Petition in this matter which were or could have been asserted against the Board in the Litigation with respect to the 2013-14 school year. The back pay amount specified represents back salary due (after the reductions and deductions specified above) for the period from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014.

6. The Parties agree that, by virtue of his employment by the Board as a properly certified School Counselor in a non-substitute capacity from March 1, 2011 through and after March 3, 2014, Petitioner achieved tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5 (a) (3). In addition, Petitioner's seniority as a School Counselor will be credited for the period from May 9, 2014 through June 30, 2014 so that his seniority in that category for the 2013-14 school year shall equal a full year. The 2013-14 school year shall be treated as a full year of employment for purposes of all benefits and emoluments of employment which are impacted by years of service (including but not limited to (as applicable), sick leave accrual, other forms of leave, salary guide step advancement, terminal leave, sick leave cash-in and longevity, as well as any benefit or emolument which may become available in the future which is based on years of service) whether it be based upon rights that arise from statute, regulation, contract, policy, practice or otherwise. Petitioner's accrued sick leave will be credited with a full complement of sick days for the 2013-14 school year, less any days used during any portion of the time when Petitioner was actively employed by the Board during that year.

7. The Parties agree that Petitioner's seniority as of June 30, 2014 is:

a) 3 years and four (4) months of secondary seniority as a School Counselor, running from March 1, 2011.

8. Petitioner, in consideration of this Settlement Agreement, hereby agrees to a dismissal of his Petition of Appeal in this matter. Said dismissal shall have no effect on Petitioner's continuing tenure, seniority or recall rights, as well as any other rights he may have as a current or future employee of the Board, or under this agreement.

9. This Agreement shall not constitute an admission of wrongdoing by any party and no party shall be considered to be prevailing party for any purpose. Neither party may seek or claim an award of counsel fees in this matter.

10. This Agreement contains the entire agreement between the parties, and all terms of this Agreement are deemed material. This instrument may not be altered, amended, modified or revoked except by a new instrument executed in writing by the parties.

11. This Agreement is to be construed in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey.

12. Petitioner represents that he is freely entering into this Agreement, that he is acting with the advice of counsel of his choosing, and that he has read and fully understands the contents and effects of this Agreement.

13. The Board represents that it has taken all action necessary for the adoption of this settlement as a binding action of the Hawthorne Board of Education.

14. This settlement is subject to the approval of the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner of Education and shall not be binding until said approvals are received. Upon approval of this Settlement Agreement by the Commissioner of Education, the Board shall issue the payments required herein within 30 calendar days.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties, or their duly authorized representatives, do set forth their hands and seal as of the date(s) set forth below.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF OLD TAPPAN, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured elementary school teacher – alleged that the respondent Board violated her tenure and seniority rights when it assigned her to a part-time position for the 2013-2014 school year after she had taught a full-time schedule during the 2012-2013 school year. Petitioner was originally hired to fill a full-time teaching position for the 2009-2010 school year, and taught full-time through the 2010-2011 school year. For the 2011-2012 school year, however, the Board reduced its staff and re-assigned petitioner as a part-time (0.50 full-time equivalent, or "FTE") teacher. For the 2012-2013 school year, the Board again assigned petitioner to a half-time schedule, but added an additional assignment as a 0.50 FTE family leave replacement teacher for a colleague who had been approved for a maternity leave – thus bringing petitioner's schedule to full-time for 2012-2013. When the Board eliminated the maternity assignment for the 2013-2014 school year and once again employed petitioner on a 0.50 FTE basis, she filed the within appeal, claiming, inter alia, that she had been subject to a reduction in force (RIF). The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; whether petitioner was subject to a RIF prior to the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year depends on what position she held when she achieved tenure on the second day of the 2012-2013 school year. The ALJ concluded that petitioner was a 0.50 FTE teacher on the day that she achieved tenure, and petitioner was not subject to a RIF since the loss of a temporary leave-replacement position does not constitute a RIF. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision, denied petitioner's cross motion, and dismissed the petition.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner found that no RIF occurred when only petitioner's half-time tenured employment was renewed for the 2013-2014 school year, and concurred with the ALJ's determination that the petitioner's rights were not violated. Accordingly, summary decision was granted to the respondent, and the petition was dismissed.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF OLD TAPPAN, BERGEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

Before the Commissioner is petitioner's contention that her tenure rights were violated when, in June 2013, she was offered a contract to teach sixth and eighth-grade language arts on a part-time basis only. In pressing her claim, petitioner alleges that: 1) by the summer of 2013, she had earned tenure; 2) by offering her half-time instead of full-time employment for the 2013-2014 school year, respondent subjected her to a reduction in force (RIF); 3) by June 2013, she had accrued more seniority in the district as a language arts teacher than had a colleague, Virginia Walsh; 4) because she had purportedly been "RIF'd", and had allegedly earned more seniority than Walsh, she was entitled to the full-time position respondent offered to Walsh for the 2013-2014 school year; and 5) in the alternative, being "RIF'd" entitled her to claim a Kindergarten position which had been offered to an untenured teacher. Upon review of the record, Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), petitioner's exceptions and the respondent's and intervenors' replies thereto, the Commissioner concurs with the OAL's determination that petitioner's rights were not violated.

The facts which are critical to the instant controversy can be found in the parties' Joint Stipulation of Facts. Briefly, that document and the exhibits annexed thereto reveal the following. Carew and Walsh were first employed by respondent in June 2009 – on the same day. During the 2009-2010 and 2010-2011 school years, they each served full-time as language arts teachers. Carew's primary assignments for both years were sixth and eighth-grade language arts. Walsh's primary assignments were fifth and seventh-grade language arts in the first year, and fifth-grade language arts in the second year. For their third year of teaching, i.e., 2011-2012, Walsh continued full-time – teaching fifth-grade language arts, as well as the language arts component of sixth and eighth-grade cycle classes. Carew accepted a half-time assignment teaching sixth and eighth-grade language arts.

During the 2011-2012 year, Walsh requested maternity and child-rearing leave for most of the 2012-2013 school year. It is undisputed that the leave request was granted by the respondent Board. On June 25, 2012 the Board voted to renew Walsh's full-time employment and Carew's half-time employment as language arts teachers for the 2012-2013 school year. Subsequently, on July 16, 2012, the Board voted to approve an additional half-time assignment for Carew as a leave-replacement teacher for Walsh for the 2012-2013 school year. The Board minutes approving the replacement assignment for Carew stated:

> EXPLANATION: Ms. Carew was originally a .5 FTE Language Arts teacher for the 2012-2013 school year. In light of the above resolution, she will become 1.0 FTE (i.e. - .5 FTE Language Arts teacher and .5 FTE Language Arts Leave Replacement teacher for Ms. Walsh).

Contracts executed on or about September 1, 2012 reflected the above-referenced Board actions for Walsh and Carew. Walsh's contract recited that she was engaged as a full-time teacher for the 2012-2013 school year, with her salary to be prorated in keeping with her approved family leave, which leave actually commenced on September 13, 2012 and continued for the balance of the school year. Carew's contract provided that she was hired as a .5 language arts teacher and a .5 family leave*+ replacement teacher. On August 20, 2012, the Board approved the employment of another part-time Language Arts replacement teacher, i.e., Kelly Fiedler. Her contract reflects that she was hired to serve as a 40 percent teacher aide (at $15/hour) and a 60 percent leave replacement teacher.

It is undisputed that on the first day of the 2012-2013 school year, both Walsh and Carew earned tenure as language arts teachers in respondent's district. From the commencement of the school year until September 12, 2012, Walsh taught twenty fifth-grade language arts classes, the language arts component of five sixth-grade cycle classes and five eighth-grade cycle classes, and two curriculum extension classes. The record indicates that she trained Fiedler to take over her fifth-grade language arts classes. Carew's schedule included seven eighth-grade language arts classes, twenty sixth-grade language arts classes and three curriculum extension classes.

At the end of the 2012-2013 school year – on June 24, 2013 – the respondent Board approved the re-employment of approximately sixty-five tenured staff members, including Carew and Walsh. Carew was approved for a half-time assignment and Walsh was approved for a full-time assignment.[1] Walsh's weekly schedule included 30 periods of fifth-grade language arts, a period of art history and a period of curriculum extension. Carew's weekly schedule included seven periods of eighth-grade language arts, ten periods of sixth-grade language arts and a period of curriculum extension.

[1] Respondent also, on July 15, 2013, approved the hire of Angela Maida as a full-time Kindergarten teacher for the 2013-2014 school year. Maida had served as a leave replacement Kindergarten teacher during the 2012-2013 school year.

Carew filed her petition on August 28, 2013. In it she alleged that respondent's offer to her of half-time employment for the 2013-2014 school year, after she had been teaching a full-day schedule in the 2012-2013 school year, constituted a reduction in force. Based upon that supposition, petitioner reasoned that she was entitled to any positions – for which she was qualified by certification and endorsement – offered to 1) untenured teachers, or 2) teachers whose seniority was inferior to hers. Petitioner contended that Angela Maida – an untenured teacher who was offered a job teaching Kindergarten – fell into the former category, and Walsh fell into the latter category. The matter proceeded in the OAL by way of motions and a cross-motion for summary disposition. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) ultimately determined that no RIF had occurred in 2013, and that petitioner consequently had no claim to Walsh's or Maida's positions.

In her exceptions, petitioner contends that the ALJ erred in finding no RIF. She relies on two "facts." First, petitioner recites part of the text of a July 17, 2012 letter sent to her by respondent's superintendent after the respondent Board voted to offer her a half-time leave replacement assignment in addition to her regular half-time language arts position:

> The Old Tappan [B]oard of Education took action . . . on July 16, 2012, to approve you as an additional .5 Language Arts family leave replacement teacher (Ms. Vanessa Walsh) for the 2012-2013 school year. Therefore your position for the 2012-2013 school year will be full time. This full time position offers you health and dental benefits > [Exhibit 15, annexed to the parties' Joint Stipulation of Facts]

Second, petitioner maintains that it was Fiedler, not herself, who served as Walsh's replacement leave teacher.

In considering the first "fact," the Commissioner finds it ironic that petitioner urges him to rely on a letter from the district superintendent (who holds no authority to define the terms of her employment) to determine that her two assignments in 2012-2013 jointly constituted a full-time tenure track position, while at the same time urging him to disregard the language of petitioner's legally binding contract for the 2012-2013 school year, which plainly recited that the: "Board has employed and hereby does engage and employ the Employee as a .5 Part Time Teacher and .5 Family Leave Replacement Teacher in the public Schools . . . " See, Exhibit 16, annexed to the parties' Joint Stipulation of Facts.

In attempting to justify the discounting of terms of her employment contract, petitioner relies on language in Platia v. Bd. of Educ. of Hamilton, 434 N.J. Super. 382, 391 (App. Div. 2014), which quoted the Supreme Court in Spiewak v. Bd. of Educ. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63, 77 (1982): "A teacher's right to tenure 'never depends on the contractual agreement between the teachers and board of education.' '' In Platia the central question was whether a special education teacher's assignment during the 2009-2010 school year constituted leave replacement service or a tenure track position. The respondent Board in that case relied, for its contention that Platia's service was 'leave replacement,' on language in her contract characterizing the assignment as "long term substitute" to replace:

> an employee who is on leave of absence and who may be returning to his/her position at the expiration of this contract. This position is non-tenurial and carries no seniority eligibility. You will be assigned to the Substitute Teacher List if no position is available at the expiration of this contract.
> [Platia, 434 N.J. Super. at 385]

However, there were no actual facts which supported the proposition that Platia was acting in place of a teacher who was absent, disabled or disqualified, within the intendment of N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1, the statute which advises that temporary teaching staff members do not accrue tenure.

To the contrary, the record showed that Michele Snyder – the teacher who was supposedly on leave and whom Platia was supposedly temporarily replacing – was actually working in respondent's district as a literacy resource coach while Platia served as a special education teacher. Thus, the Appellate Division found that Snyder was not absent, disabled or disqualified; she was working in another position in the district, rendering her prior tenure track position vacant. By way of contrast, the record in the instant controversy evidences that: 1) Walsh actually was on leave for most of the 2012-2013 school year; 2) respondent created petitioner's part-time leave replacement assignment as a means to help fill the deficit caused by Walsh's family leave; and 3) petitioner was not filling a language arts teaching "vacancy" in the 2012-2013 school year.

As for the Superintendent's letter, even assuming, arguendo, that it could be regarded as legal authority, the Commissioner could not rely on it for guidance about tenure rights. It is clear that the term "full time" was utilized in the letter to recognize that petitioner's total number of scheduled hours would require that she be covered by health benefits. That is an issue which is independent of any tenure calculus.

Petitioner's second factual assertion, i.e., that Fiedler – and not petitioner – was Walsh's replacement leave teacher, is also unsupported by the record of this case. Walsh's assigned teaching load for 2012-2013 included, as referenced above, twenty fifth-grade language arts classes, the language arts component of five sixth-grade cycle classes and five eighth-grade cycle classes, and two curriculum extension classes. It is undisputed that Fiedler only took over Walsh's twenty fifth-grade language arts classes; Walsh's ten cycle classes, two curriculum extension classes, and any other responsibilities she may have had, clearly needed to be covered by other staff. Petitioner has provided no evidence that any other language arts teachers were hired as replacement leave employees for Walsh in 2012-2013; to the contrary, the record supports respondent's contention that the Board hired two part-time staff members (petitioner and Fiedler) as leave replacement teachers in order that Walsh's entire assignment would be covered while she was on family leave.

Nonetheless, based upon her contention that she did not cover any of Walsh's assigned classes, petitioner continues to urge that she was not actually a leave-replacement teacher, but rather a full-time tenure track employee entitled to full-time seniority credit for her service during the 2012-2013 school year. Petitioner relies, once again, on Platia, wherein the Appellate Division found significant the fact that during the period in which Platia was supposedly replacing Snyder she was not teaching in the school where Snyder had taught. This detail, in the Platia court's view, undermined the respondent Board's position that Platia was a temporary substitute for Snyder. No such circumstance is present in the instant case

During the 2012-2013 school year, petitioner was teaching the same subject – language arts – that Walsh taught, and was assigned to the same school in which Walsh taught. The fact that the schedules of other language arts teachers in the school may have been tweaked to cover the exact classes that Walsh had taught, leaving petitioner to teach grade levels with which she was familiar, does not bear upon petitioner's status as a replacement leave teacher. In Giacomazzi v. Board of Education of the South Orange-Maplewood School District, A-5686-07 (App. Div. September 2, 2009) (slip op.), a petitioner claimed that she should not have been regarded as a replacement leave teacher because she had not been teaching the exact courses that the person she was replacing had taught. The Commissioner of Education rejected her argument, finding that the "respondent Board of education ha[d] the discretion to modify teaching assignments and locations [i.e., rooms]. The Appellate Division agreed. Giacomazzi, supra, at 4.[2]

In light of the foregoing, the Commissioner finds that petitioner's 2012-2013 assignment consisted of a half-time tenure track position and a half-time leave replacement position. Consequently, no RIF occurred when only petitioner's half-time tenured employment was renewed for the 2013-2014 school year.[3] Because "an individual's entitlement to claim a position by reason of seniority remains inchoate unless and until that individual is affected by a reduction in force," Benson v. Board of Education of Rockaway, 92 N.J.A.R. 2nd (EDU) 15, 21, no discussion about petitioner's seniority vis a vis Walsh or other employees is necessary or warranted for the resolution of this case.

Accordingly, summary disposition is granted in favor of respondent and the intervenors, petitioner's cross-motion for summary disposition is denied, and the petition is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[4]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 2/25/15
Date of Mailing: 2/25/15

[2] The Commissioner disagrees with the ALJ's finding of tension between Giacomazzi and Platia. The appellate division's conclusion that Platia did not act in place of Snyder was based both on the fact that Snyder was not on leave – as contemplated by N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 – and by the fact that Platia and Snyder worked in different schools. This does not conflict with the holding in Giacomazzi that a replacement leave teacher's assignment may be modified at the Board's discretion and need not be identical to the replaced teacher's duties.

[3] Because the need for a replacement teacher for Walsh no longer existed, petitioner was not offered another additional half-time leave replacement assignment.

[4] This decision may be appealed to the Superior Court, Appellate Division, pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1).

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on September 20, 2013, and was filed for determination as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. Petitioner, Kathleen Carew, alleges that respondent Board of Education Borough of Old Tappan (Board) violated her tenure and seniority rights during a reduction in force (RIF). Prehearing Orders were issued on October 29, 2013, and May 13, 2014. By letter Gail Oxfeld Kanef, Esq., requested authorization to intervene, on behalf of her client Angela Maida, who allegedly holds a position that petitioner is claiming entitlement in the above-referenced matter. Although that request was denied by the undersigned on July 17, 2014, the Acting Commissioner of Education reversed the decision and permitted Maida to intervene.

On September 16, 2014, respondent filed a Motion for Summary Decision. On September 24, 2014, petitioner filed a Notice of Cross-Motion. On September 29, 2014, Intervener Angela Maida filed a letter in support of respondent's motion. On October 8, 2014, Intervener Vanessa Walsh filed a brief in support of respondent's motion.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The parties to the above-referenced action, including both interveners, by and through their attorneys, hereby agree to the following joint stipulation of facts:

1. The Old Tappan Board of Education (Board) operates the Old Tappan School District (District), providing educational services for kindergarten through eighth-grade students from the Borough of Old Tappan.

2. In the summer of 2009, the Board hired petitioner, Kathleen Carew (then named Kathleen Thumn), to fill a vacant full-time teaching position for the 2009-2010 school year, officially approving her hire by way of a resolution adopted on June 22, 2009.

3. On or around that same date, both Carew and the Board signed an employment agreement, dated June 22, 2009, memorializing the nature of their employer-employee relationship.

4. Carew holds certificates issued by the New Jersey Department of Education's Board of Examiners as an elementary school teacher, a teacher of English, and a reading specialist.

5. On the same day it hired Carew, the Board also hired Intervener Vanessa Walsh (then named Vanessa Thorne) to fill a vacant full-time teaching position for the 2009-2010 school year.

6. Walsh and the Board also signed an employment agreement, dated June 22, 2009, memorializing the nature of their employer-employee relationship.

7. Walsh holds certificates issued by the New Jersey Department of Education's Board of Examiners as an elementary school teacher in grades K–5 and teacher of English.

8. During the 2009-2010 school year, Carew taught sixth-grade and eighth-grade language arts classes, as well as four periods per week of curriculum extension classes (see Exhibit 21a), while Walsh taught fifth-grade and seventh-grade language arts classes, as well as two periods per week of curriculum extension classes.

9. The Board renewed both Carew and Walsh as full-time teachers for the 2010-2011 school year.

10. Both Carew and Walsh signed individual employment agreements with the Board in or around June 2010 memorializing the nature of their employer-employee relationships.

11. During the 2010 school year, Carew taught sixth-grade and eighth-grade language arts classes, two periods per week of seventh-grade study skills, and four periods per week of curriculum extension classes as a full-time teacher (see Exhibit 21b), while Walsh taught fifth-grade language arts as well as two periods per week of curriculum extension classes, as a full-time teacher.

12. At the end of the 2010-2011 school year, the board reduced its staff. The Board renewed Walsh as a full-time teacher for the 2011-12 school year, and she was assigned to teach fifth-grade language arts classes, as well as the language arts component of the sixth- and eighth-grade cycle classes (a total of ten periods per week) and two periods per week of curriculum extension. It re-hired Carew for 2011-12 as a part-time (0.50 full-time equivalent, or "FTE") teacher, who was assigned to teach sixth- and eighth-grade language arts.

13. During the 2011-2012 school year, Walsh requested a leave of absence for a portion of the 2012-2013 school year due to her pregnancy and anticipated birth date of her child early in the 2012-2013 school year.

14. The Board also took action on July 16, 2012, and on August 20, 2012, to address the appointment of teachers to replace Walsh during her maternity leave.

15. On July 17, 2012, the Board's then-acting Superintendent of Schools Dr. William M. Ward, wrote to Carew and informed her as follows:

> The Old Tappan board of Education took action Monday evening, July 16, 2012, to approve you as an additional .5 Language Arts family leave replacement teacher (Ms. Vanessa Walsh) for the 2012-2013 school year. Therefore, your position for the 2012-2013 school year will be full time. This full time position offers you health and dental benefits, however, you have informed the Business Office that you will be opting out of health insurance.

16. The Board executed employment agreements with Carew, Walsh, and Fiedler on or around September 1, 2012, memorializing the terms of their employer-employee relationships for the 2012-13 school year.

17. Walsh worked in the district at full salary from September 1, 2013, until she began her maternity disability leave at full pay from September 13, 2012, through October 12, 2012. After that she was on a child-rearing leave without pay through June 30, 2013. During the 2012-2013 school year, Carew taught sixth- and eighth-grade language arts classes, as well as three periods per week of curriculum extension classes. For 2012-2013, Fiedler worked as an aide and also as a teacher assigned to teach twenty periods per week of fifth-grade language arts classes, as well as five hours per week of homework club. Until her leave began, Walsh taught twenty periods of fifth-grade language arts classes and worked with Fielder outside of class time to prepare her to take over the fifth-grade classes when Walsh's leave began.

18. On June 23, 2013, the Board passed a resolution re-emplcying its tenured staff for the 2013-2014 school year, which included both Carew and Walsh.

19. Later that summer, the Board hired Intervener Angela Maida as a full-time kindergarten teacher.

20. During the 2013-2014 school year, Walsh again taught fifth-grade language arts classes, as well as one contact period per week of seventh-grade art history classes and one class period of curriculum extension. She was employed full time. Carew taught sixth- and eighth-grade language arts classes, as well as one period per week of curriculum extension, and was employed on a .5 part-time basis for 2013-14. Maida taught kindergarten on a full-time basis for 2013-14.

During the 2012-13 school year, Carew was actually assigned to teach sixth- and eighth-grade language arts classes, and three weekly periods of curriculum extension classes. Prior to her maternity leave, Intervener Walsh was assigned to teach twenty weekly periods of fifth-grade language arts, and trained Fiedler, not Carew, to assume her responsibilities. On September 13, 2012, Fiedler, not Carew, actually took over Intervener Walsh's classes.

Carew and Walsh agree that a graphic summary of Carew's teaching assignments and Walsh's teaching assignments illustrates the proper calculation of seniority:

Carew:
2009-10 Full Time 6th and 8th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension

2010-11 Full Time 6th and 8th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension[1]

2011-12 Part Time (.5) 6th and 8th Grade Language Arts

2012-13 Part Time (.5) 6th and 8th Grade Language Arts and Part Time (.5) Replacement Teacher[2]

2013-14 Part Time (.5) 6th and 8th Grade Language Arts[3]

Intervener Walsh:
2009-10 Full Time 5th and 7th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension

2010-11 Full Time 5th and 7th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension

2011-12 Full Time 5th and 7th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension[4]

2012-13 Full Time 5th Grade Language Arts, and Curriculum Extension[5]

2013-14 Full Time 5th and 7th Grade Language Arts

[1] Intervener Walsh's chart indicates that Carew taught seventh grade during the 2010-11 school year, as well, though this fact is legally immaterial. (See Intervener Walsh's Br. at 3.)
[2] Carew chart characterizes this assignment as a "full time assignment in both categories," which is the dispositive question of fact. (See Pet'r's Mot. to Dismiss at 5.)
[3] Carew's chart does not include the 2013-14 school year, though she agrees that this was her assignment that year. (See Pet'r's Mot. to Dismiss at 2, 4.)
[4] Intervener Walsh's chart indicates that Carew taught sixth grade during the 2011-12 school year, as well, though this fact is legally immaterial. (See Intervener Walsh's Br. at 3.)
[5] Carew chart characterizes this assignment as "on leave September 13 to schools [sic] end," which again, is the pivotal question of fact. (See Pet'r's Mot. to Dismiss at 5.)

PARTIES' ARGUMENTS[6]

As a threshold issue, the Board argues that no RIF occurred prior to the 2013-14 school year,[7] and accordingly, no teacher's tenure or seniority rights were triggered. Specifically, the Board argues that "the Board employed Carew as a part-time teacher in the middle school during the 2011-2012 school year, and on June 25, 2012, it hired Carew as a part-time (0.50) language arts teacher for the 2012-2013 school year, while hiring Walsh as a full-time language arts teacher for the same year." (Resp't's Motion to Dismiss at 6.) The 2012-13 school year would have been the first year both Carew and Intervener Walsh were eligible for tenure, so their respective positions on the first day of the 2012-13 are critical. Accordingly, the Board reasons that Carew was not subject to a RIF at the beginning of the 2013-14 school year, but rather, was simply renewed in her position as a part-time teacher. (See Resp't's Reply at 1-2.) Carew does not directly contradict this position, but rather, assumes, as a matter of both law and fact, that she was subject to a RIF at the beginning of the 2013-14 school year. (See Pet'r's Mot. for Summ. Decision at 2-6[8]; Pet'r's Reply at 1-2[9].)

Assuming, arguendo, the Board effectuated a RIF prior to the 2013-14 school year, Carew argues that "[I]intervener Walsh, although tenured, had less seniority than [Carew] at the time of the RIF and that Walsh should have been reduced in lieu of [Carew] for the 2013-2014 school year." (Pet'r's Mot. for Summ. Decision at 2.) Intervener Walsh argues that Carew miscalculated their respective seniority, and argues that she is entitled to seniority credit for her leave with pay, and the first thirty days of her leave without pay.

Carew further avers that whether all departmentalized grade assignments should be treated as secondary assignments, or only seventh and eighth-grade assignments, does not change the calculations of seniority. Intervener Walsh agrees that would be true, if both of their assignments were limited to sixth grade or higher. However,

[6] As the four parties to this matter take different positions on numerous issues, raise alternative arguments, and rely in part on one another's arguments, the summary will recount the parties' arguments in the order such arguments become relevant.
[7] The 2011-12 RIF is not at issue, as neither Walsh nor Carew were tenured at that time.
[8] Carew's brief is not paginated. (See Ibid.)
[9] Carew's reply brief is not paginated. (See Ibid.)

Intervener Walsh points out that she was predominantly assigned to teach fifth grade, while Carew was only assigned sixth grade and higher. Accordingly, Carew only has seniority in the secondary category, while Intervener Walsh has seniority in both the elementary and secondary categories. Intervener Walsh reasons that since she was assigned to teach predominantly fifth grade during the 2013-14 school year, and since Carew has no elementary seniority credit, she is not entitled to Intervener Walsh's position.

Carew goes on to argue that though the 2012 Board resolution characterizes half of her assignment as a "leave replacement," she did not actually cover Walsh's classes, and accordingly, was not actually a leave-replacement teacher. Intervener Walsh counters stating that the mere fact that Carew did not actually teach Walsh's classes does not change the fact that Carew was contractually hired as a leave-replacement teacher. Moreover, both Intervener Walsh and the Board argue that if Carew's position as a leave-replacement teacher was automatically converted to a full-time position as of September 1, 2012, because Intervener Walsh actually worked until September 12, 2012, then reduced to a part-time leave replacement teacher on September 12, 2012, when Intervener Walsh began her maternity leave, then Carew's petition is untimely, and violates the ninety-day rule.

Finally, assuming, arguendo, Carew is not more senior than Intervener Walsh, she argues that she was entitled to Intervener Maida's full-time kindergarten teacher position during the 2013-14 school year, since as a tenured teacher, she is entitled to "bump" an untenured teacher, such as Intervener Maida, if her position is subject to a RIF. Intervener Walsh, in the alternative, argues that any claims to her position are mooted by the fact that an untenured teacher, Intervener Maida, was hired for a full-time position for the 2013-14 school year. Intervener Maida adopts the Board's position that Carew was not subject to a RIF, and accordingly, has no right to "bump" any teacher, tenured or not.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Summary decision is appropriate "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits, if any, show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law." N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). To prevail, the adverse party must submit affidavits that "set forth specific facts showing that there is a genuine issue which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding." Ibid. A genuine issue is presented if "the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 540 (1995).

As a threshold issue, the Board argues that Carew was not subject to a RIF prior to the 2014 school year. Whether Carew was subject to a RIF prior to the 2013-14 school year depends on what position Carew held when she achieved tenure on the second day of the 2012-13 school year. The tenure statute provides that > [t]he services of all teaching staff members . . . in the positions of teacher . . . shall be under tenure during good behavior and efficiency and they shall not be dismissed or reduced in compensation except for inefficiency, incapacity, or conduct unbecoming such a teaching staff member or other just cause . . . .

> [N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(a).[10]]

A teacher achieves tenure after she has been employed by a district for "[t]hree consecutive academic years, together with employment at the beginning of the next succeeding academic year." N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5(a)(2). However, a teacher employed in a temporary position may not count such service toward tenure acquisition. N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1. However, that exception "extends only to those who 'act in place of' another employee who is absent or disabled." Spiewak v. Bd. of Educ. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63 (1982).

[10] The recent amendments to the tenure statute are not applicable here, as both Carew and Intervener Walsh were employed prior to 2012, and the parties agree that Intervener Maida has not achieved tenure.

Here, the parties agree that Carew acquired tenure at the beginning of the 2012-13 school year, but dispute whether Carew held a part-time position (.5 language arts) and a temporary leave-replacement position, or a regular full-time position, at the time she acquired tenure.

Carew argues, without citation to legal authority, that the fact that she did not actually replace Walsh renders her 2012–13 school year position a full-time position. Notably, the Appellate Division recently held that a teacher hired as a "long-term substitute" may still count that service toward tenure, if the teacher does not actually substitute for an absent teacher. See Platia v. Bd. of Educ. of Hamilton, 434 N.J. Super. 382, 393 (App. Div. 2014). There, a teacher was hired as a "long-term substitute," and her contract explicitly stated that such employment would not count toward tenure acquisition. Id. at 385. However, in reversing the Commissioner of Education's decision, the Appellate Division noted that the record failed to "show that [the replaced teacher] was 'absent' from her employment or that [the long-term substitute] acted 'in place of' her." Id. at 391-92. Specifically, the replaced teacher was actually transferred to another position within the same district, and the "long-term substitute" did not actually cover her classes. Id. at 392. The Appellate Division expressly held that "[b]oth of these criteria must be satisfied for the temporary employee exception in N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 to apply." Id. at 393.

Here, the Board argues that Platia is distinguishable "because there is no dispute here that Walsh took a leave of absence during the 2012-13 school year." (Resp't's Mot. to Dismiss at 17.) While that is correct, the Platia court clearly held that the exception in N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 only applies if the replaced teacher is actually absent and the temporary teacher is actually assigned to the absent teacher's classes. Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393. The Board relies on an unpublished Appellate Division case decided prior to Platia, Giacomazzi v. Board of Education of the South Orange-Maplewood School District, A-5686-07 (App. Div. September 2, 2009) (slip op.), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>. There, a teacher was hired as a long-term substitute for a teacher on a leave of absence, due to active military duty. Id. at *2. When the absent teacher returned, he was assigned a third teacher's classes, who had just left on maternity leave. Id. at *2-3. The long-term substitute continued to teach his original class, rather than the maternity leave teacher's class, to preserve continuity of instruction. Id. at *3. The Appellate Division concurred with the Commissioner of Education that > although there were teachers on temporary leave during the 2002-2003 school year, there were no actual vacancies in the English department until June 2003 and therefore no tenure-track positions to which petitioner could lay claim; respondent Board has the discretion to modify teaching assignments and locations; and petitioner's claim that by continuing her assignment to teach the same courses in the same rooms for the remainder of the school year—after the permanent teacher she was hired to replace had returned to work—is without merit.

In this matter, the Board argues that Giacomazzi supports the proposition that "the administration always retains discretion to make or modify subject and classroom assignments." (Resp't's Mot. for Summ. Decision at 13.) The Board further asserts that "nothing in Platia suggest that the principles established in Giacomazzi are no longer controlling." Id. at *17. However, Platia clearly and unequivocally held that N.J.S.A. 18A:16-1.1 only applies if the replaced teacher is actually absent and the long term substitute assumes the absent teacher's classes. Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393. Notably, while Platia did not expressly overrule Giacomazzi, an unpublished case, the Platia court rejected and reversed the reasoning of the Commissioner and ALJ Williams, below. Id. at 385. In turn, ALJ Williams expressly relied on Giacomazzi, to conclude that Platia "was not entitled to tenure because she filled a leave of absence, not a permanent vacancy." Platia v. Bd. of Educ. of Hamilton, EDU 9861-11, Initial Decision, (September 17, 2012), adopted, Comm'r (November 2, 2012), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Thus, to the extent Giacomazzi, as an unpublished case, is instructive, Platia is controlling. Cf. Ibid.; Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393.

Moreover, the facts of this matter are clearly analogous to Platia and distinguishable from Giacomazzi. Cf. Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393; Giacomazzi, supra, A-5686-07 (slip op. at *2-3). Like the long term substitute in Platia, and unlike the long term substitute in Giacomazzi, Carew was never assigned to Walsh's classes, but to completely different classes, similar to the classes she was teaching part-time. Another teacher, Fiedler, actually took over Walsh's classes. There was no legitimate reason to assign Carew classes other than Walsh's, such as continuity of instruction after the unexpected return of the teacher on leave. See Giacomazzi, supra, A-5686-07 (slip op. at *2-3).

Nevertheless, this matter is distinguishable from both Platia and Giacomazzi, in that the critical issue is not whether Carew achieved tenure, as all parties agree that Carew is tenured, but what position Carew held when she achieved tenure, and consequently, whether she was the subject of a RIF. (See Resp't's Mot. for Summ. Decision at 5.)

As a threshold matter, "an individual's entitlement to claim a position by reason of seniority remains inchoate unless and until that individual is affected by a reduction in force." Benson v. Bd. of Educ. of Rockaway, 92 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 15, 21. The facts of Benson are analogous to the instant matter; a teacher claimed that she had been the subject of a RIF, because after the historically part-time teacher served as a full-time leave replacement teacher for one year, the school district reassigned her to her original part-time position. Id. at 16-17. However, the same year that the part-time teacher was returned to her part-time position, another teacher who was assigned to a full-time position (not as a leave-replacement teacher) was also reassigned to a part-time position. Ibid. A third teacher resigned that year, and the first and second teachers both asserted tenure rights to the vacancy. Ibid. ALJ Klinger concluded that the fact that the first teacher was not actually subject to a RIF was immaterial, and the vacant position must be awarded to the most senior teacher on the seniority list. Id. at 19-20. The Commissioner reversed, and explained that

> [a]ny seniority list prepared by a district for RIF or other purposes is to be clearly distinguished from the preferred eligibility list to be maintained pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12, as it is from the latter list that vacancies are to be filled irrespective of there being more senior persons in the district who have not been riffed but are interested in the position.

ALJ Klinger had relied on cases that > involve[d] situations where both petitioner and intervener had been riffed, although not in the same year; hence, because they were both on the preferred eligible list at the time of the later RIF, one as a direct result of the current RIF and the other as a consequence of an earlier reduction, the most senior teacher was entitled to the position at issue notwithstanding that that teacher's position had not been directly affected by the particular reduction then at issue.

However, such cases did not support "the proposition that vacancies are to be filled by the district's most senior teacher in the affected category at the time of the RIF (the 'seniority list' as opposed to the Preferred Eligible List) regardless of whether his or her employment has, or had in the past, been reduced." Ibid.

Here, the Board argues that no RIF occurred prior to the 2013-14 school year, as the Board employed the same number of teachers and maintained the same number of positions from the 2012-13 school year through the 2013-14 school year. (Resp't's Mot. for Summ. Decision at 19.) However, a "[r]eduction in hours of employment is considered a reduction in force." Klinger v. Bd. of Educ. of Cranberry, 190 N.J. Super. 354, 357 (App. Div. 1982). Accordingly, if Carew was entitled to return to a full-time position for the 2013-14, then Carew was subject to a RIF, regardless of whether the number of teachers or positions remained the same. Ibid.

A similar factual situation was addressed in Benson, as a part-time teacher served as a full-time leave replacement teacher for one year, then argued that she was subject to a RIF when she was returned to her previous part-time position. The Commissioner explained that the teacher "was consistently a part-time employee except for one year's service in 1988-89 as a full-time replacement for a teacher on leave, after which she returned to her regular part-time employment." Benson, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d at 21. Accordingly, the teacher "was not appointed to a vacant position such as would entitle her to employment rights associated with that position . . . rather, her full-time service as a sixth-grade substitute was plainly a temporary assignment outside her ordinary employment as a part-time supplemental instructor." Ibid. The teacher could not "fairly characterize her return to the same part-time position she had always held, and would held had the temporary assignment not presented itself, as suffering a reduction in force." Ibid. In contrast, the full-time (not leave replacement) teacher's "full-time supplemental position was undisputedly reduced to part-time for 1990-91. That reduction entitled the teacher "to placement on the Preferred Eligible List for full-time positions for which she qualifies and enables her to claim the elementary position herein." Ibid.

Here, Carew was employed as a part-time teacher during the 2011-12 school year, and at least purportedly employed as a part-time teacher (and a part-time leave-replacement teacher) during the 2012-13 school year. While Platia instructs that Carew's part-time leave-replacement position must be counted toward Carew's acquisition of tenure, Platia does not speak to whether a tenured teacher's loss of a temporary position constitutes a RIF. See Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393. Admittedly, Carew achieved tenure in the year at issue, the 2012-13 school year, while the part-time teacher in Benson achieved tenure years prior to the alleged "RIF" of her temporary full-time position. See Benson, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d at 16-21. However, there have been no cases in which a teacher indisputably achieved tenure while working both permanent part-time and arguably temporary part-time positions, and then argued that she was entitled to a permanent full-time position. Nevertheless, the reasoning of Benson is applicable here, that Carew "was not appointed to a vacant position such as would entitle her to employment rights associated with that position." Id. at 21. Moreover, here, unlike in Platia, the allegedly absent teacher, Walsh, was in fact absent (on maternity leave), and returned, as expected, for the 2013-14. While Carew did not actually cover Walsh's classes, that additional prong is less relevant here, as the parties agree that Carew actually achieved tenure, and only dispute the extent of her position.

Although clearly factually distinct, the reasoning of Alfieri may be applied here. See Alfieri v. Saddle Brook Bd. of Educ., EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, Initial Decision (July 23, 2001), adopted, Comm'r (September 17, 2001), aff'd, State Bd. (January 8, 2003), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. There, a school district reduced the hours of tenured, part-time, supplemental teachers (with permanent positions). The teachers' contracts did not expressly state that the teachers were entitled to a minimum number of hours. Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, Comm'r Decision at 17. Of course, the fact that no allegedly temporary position was at issue is factually distinct, but importantly, the teachers argued that pursuant to Spiewak, "[i]ssues of flexibility and administrative convenience have no place in determining whether tenure is acquired." Id. at 15 (citing Spiewak, supra, 90 N.J. at 76-77 ("[w]hether certain teachers are entitled to tenure never depends on the contractual agreement between the teachers and the board of education")) The Commissioner fully agreed that the terms of tenure acquisition are dictated by statute, and are unaffected by a contractual characterization of a position as "part-time" or "full-time." Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, Comm'r Decision at 16. However, the Commissioner continued that the teachers "were not subject to a reduction in force or other adverse employment action which would trigger their tenure and seniority rights." Id. at 17. The Commissioner then looked to the terms of the teachers' employment contracts, noted that the reduction in hours still fell within the terms of their contract, and concluded that accordingly, the teachers were not subject to a RIF. Id. at 17-19. The Commissioner's conclusion implied that while contractual terms cannot contravene the statutory entitlement to tenure acquisition, such contractual terms can establish whether a tenured teacher is subject to a RIF, which invokes the teacher's tenure and seniority rights. Ibid. In affirming the Commissioner's decision, the State Board articulated that implication. See Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 6-7.

Specifically, the State Board reasoned that Spiewak involved tenure acquisition, and "[i]n contrast to Spiewak, there is no question that [the teachers] in this case achieved tenure pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-5." Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 6. Instead, the issue presented in Alfieri was "whether a reduction in staff occurred under N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9 such as to trigger the [teachers'] tenure rights. That issue was not involved in Spiewak, and, therefore, Spiewak does not entitle the petitioners to the relief they seek." Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 6. Critically, and in stark contrast to Spiewak, the State Board reasoned that "[w]hen a teaching staff member asserts tenure rights on the basis of a reduction in staff pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:28-9, consideration of the hours of employment established by the district board upon the staff member's appointment is the starting point for determining whether such a reduction has occurred." Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 5.

Here, Carew does not expressly argue that contractual terms cannot contravene the statutory standard for whether a RIF occurred, but suggests that despite the express terms of her contract, the fact that she did not actually replace Walsh's classes renders her "leave replacement" assignment, together with her existing part-time position, a full-time position. While Platia supports that position for purposes of tenure acquisition, Afieri suggests that the terms of her contract determine whether she was subject to a RIF. Cf. Platia, supra, 434 N.J. Super. at 393; Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 5-7. As Benson concluded that a tenured teacher is not subject to a RIF due to the loss of a temporary full-time position, and Alfieri concluded that contractual terms, not actual service, determine whether a teacher has been subject to a RIF (in contrast to the standard for tenure acquisition), Carew cannot claim entitlement to her temporary leave-replacement position. Benson, supra, 92 N.J.A.R.2d at 16-21; Alfieri, supra, EDU 11677-98 and 1161-99, State Bd. Decision at 5-7. Since Carew was not the subject of a RIF prior to the 2013-14 school year, she cannot assert her tenure or seniority rights.

Even assuming, arguendo, that Carew would have been subject to a RIF due to the loss of the part-time leave-replacement position, Intervener Walsh correctly argues that Carew's claims against Walsh are moot, because Carew is clearly entitled to Intervener Maida's position. (Intervener Walsh Br. at 8.) The parties agree that Intervener Maida is not tenured, and agree that the Board first employed Maida as full-time kindergarten teacher position at the beginning of the 2013-14 school year (though she had served as a replacement kindergarten teacher during the 2012-13 school year). (Joint Stip. ¶ 20.) In the event of a RIF, a > tenured part-time teaching staff member with proper certification can claim, as against a non-tenured applicant, seniority rights in seeking appointment to a full-time position > that is within the specific categories covered by the certification and that has responsibilities identical to those of the part-time position in which employment was actually held.

> [Lichtman v. Bd. of Educ. of Ridgewood, 93 N.J. 362, 364 (1983).]

In Lichtman, a part-time tenured librarian was subject to a RIF, though the district hired a non-tenured librarian for a full-time position. Id. at 364-65. The Board asserted that as a part-time librarian, she had no seniority rights to a full-time position. Id. at 365. The New Jersey Supreme Court held that "[t]he service and experience she compiled in this position—her seniority—properly entitled her to a preference over a non-tenured applicant." Id. at 369. Accordingly, assuming, arguendo, Carew was subject to a RIF prior to the 2013-14 school year, she is entitled to preference over a non-tenured applicant, Intervener Maida. See Ibid.

Moreover, the fact that Intervener Maida taught kindergarten, while Carew taught sixth- and eighth-grade language arts, does not affect Carew's entitlement to preference over Intervener Maida. See Bednar v. Westwood Bd. of Educ., 221 N.J. Super. 239 (App. Div. 1987). On a different issue, Intervener Walsh argues that she has greater seniority than Carew with respect to elementary assignments, (her fifth-grade class) because pursuant to the applicable regulations, Carew only acquired secondary (sixth- and eighth-grade classes) seniority, while Intervener Walsh acquired both secondary and elementary seniority. (Intervener Walsh Br. at 11 (citing N.J.A.C. 6A:32-5.1(l)(17)-(18).) In Bednar, a tenured full time art teacher with seventeen years of elementary seniority, but no secondary seniority, was reduced to a part-time position. Bednar, supra, 221 N.J. Super. at 240. However, a non-tenured full-time high school art teacher was not reduced to a part-time position. Ibid. The tenured teacher argued that his "statutory tenure rights, wholly apart from seniority, bar the school district from reducing his hours while retaining a full-time non-tenured art teacher." Id. at 241. The State Board rejected that argument, and concluded "that tenure does not permit a teacher to claim an assignment in a job category in which he has no seniority against a non-tenured teacher with experience in the category. Id. at 242. The Appellate Division rejected that analysis, and reasoned that the statutory scheme that addresses seniority

"declares only the rights inter sese of tenured teachers in a RIF. Among them, seniority is determinative. But, the statute does not authorize regulatory dilution of tenure rights by affording a non-tenured teacher 'seniority.'" Id. at 243. Accordingly, "tenure as an art teacher [gave the teacher] the right to avoid a RIF by claiming the secondary school job of a non-tenured art teacher with experience in the specific category of secondary art." Id. at 241; see also Gillikin v. Garfield Bd. of Educ., A-1494-11 (App. Div. February 15, 2013) (slip op.), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/> (tenured teacher with endorsements as both a teacher of elementary education and a teacher of Italian, who exclusively taught Italian, was entitled to an elementary teacher position awarded to a non-tenured teacher, because tenure accrues to all a teacher's endorsements, regardless of the actual area of service). But see Aiello v. Bd. of Educ. of Westwood Reg'l Sch. Dist., A-5896-07 (App. Div. June 25, 2009) (slip op.), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/> (a tenured school social worker who held both an educational services certificate and an instructional certificate, who was exclusively employed as a teacher, was not entitled to preference over non-tenured teachers with respect to teaching positions).

Here, Carew is certified as an elementary school teacher, with endorsements as in "nursery, kindergarten, and grades 1-6." (Joint Ex. 3.) She is also certified as a teacher of English, with endorsements in "English 7-12." (Ibid.) Accordingly, only assuming again arguendo, Carew was subject to a RIF, she is indisputably entitled to preference over Intervener Maida, a non-tenured teacher, with respect to the kindergarten teacher position. Intervener Maida and the Board properly focus on whether Carew was subject to a RIF, and Intervener Walsh properly asserts that if Carew was subject to a RIF, she is entitled to preference over Intervener Maida, a non-tenured teacher, prior to preference over Intervener Walsh, a tenured teacher.

Based on the briefs, exhibits, and certifications submitted and for the aforementioned reasons, I CONCLUDE that Carew was not subject to a RIF since the loss of a temporary leave-replacement position does not constitute a RIF.

DISPOSITION AND ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and legal authority, I GRANT respondent's motion for summary decision and DENY petitioner's motion for summary decision and ORDER the petitioner's Verified Petition be and hereby is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. RECEIVED BY
SCHOOL ETHICS COMMISSION
2014 DEC 23 A 11:04

Dr. Sonn Sam, of full age, being duly sworn upon his oath deposes and says:

1. I was formerly the Head of School for the Newark Prep Charter School ("Newark Prep"). I was the Head of School for Newark Prep from June 10, 2013 until my resignation in August 2014.

2. On or around June 27, 2013, I was informed by the Newark Prep School Board that the school was in urgent need of a World Language teacher for the school's summer program, which was set to begin on July 1, 2013.

3. I acknowledge that I recommended my wife, Dr. Daisy Duran, for the one-month position, by submitting her resume to the School Board President. She was the only candidate whose name I submitted.

4. On July 3, 2013, the School Board voted to approve Dr. Daisy Duran's hire. She was the only candidate considered for the position.

5. At the end of the 2013 summer program, my wife's position as World Language instructor ended. Newark Prep did not employ her in any other capacity, and has not employed her since then. For her services to Newark Prep, my wife received approximately $5,600 in remuneration.

6. I acknowledge that my conduct set forth above violated the New Jersey School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(b) and (c), and agree to accept a penalty of reprimand for that conduct.

7. I acknowledge that, in signing this affidavit, I have secured the advice of an attorney and I understand the terms of this agreement.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a pro se residency appeal on behalf of her children in August 2013. A hearing at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) was scheduled for January 24, 2014, but petitioner failed to appear. The OAL returned the file to the Commissioner and the petition was dismissed with prejudice. However, the matter was remanded to the OAL for resolution of the counterclaim for tuition which had been filed by the respondent Board.

A second hearing was scheduled for January 12, 2015 to address the tuition issue. Prior to that date, respondent's counsel filed a letter withdrawing its counterclaim on behalf of the Board. The hearing was held nonetheless. As the within petition had already been dismissed in March 2014, the Commissioner acknowledged the respondent's withdrawal of its counterclaim, and deemed the matter fully resolved and removed from his consideration.

RESPONDENT.	:

The instant matter was originally opened in August 2013 by way of a petition challenging respondent's determination that petitioner's children were ineligible to attend school in its district. Respondent answered and counterclaimed for tuition. When petitioner failed to appear for the January 24, 2014 hearing in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) transmitted the matter to the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4. The Commissioner dismissed the petition but was constrained to remand the matter to the OAL for supplementation of the record regarding respondent's open counterclaim, and for disposition of same.

Prior to a January 12, 2015 hearing scheduled by the ALJ to address the counterclaim, respondent's counsel filed a letter withdrawing same on behalf of his client. Nonetheless, the ALJ elected not to cancel the hearing. The petitioner did not appear. Indeed, since her petition had been dismissed, and the counterclaim against her had been withdrawn, there was little reason for her to do so. It is not clear from the record whether respondent appeared for the hearing.

On January 14, 2015, the OAL sent a notice to the parties concerning petitioner's failure to appear for the hearing and returned the file to the Commissioner. Neither party has filed any further pleadings. Having already dismissed the petition in this case on March 5, 2014, it remains only for the Commissioner to acknowledge respondent's withdrawal of its counterclaim. In so doing the Commissioner deems the matter fully resolved and removed from his consideration.

BARBARA LESINSKI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
v.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
GENEVA SMALLWOOD, ASBURY PARK BOARD OF EDUCATION, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The respondent in this matter appealed the October 28, 2014 determination of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members for taking private action that had the potential to compromise the Board; specifically, the Commission determined that respondent – an experienced member of the Board – took private action by contacting two potential candidates for employment and discussing confidential Executive Session matters with a third party. The Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand.

The Commissioner found, inter alia, that: the factual record fully supports the Commission's conclusion that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g); respondent admitted that she telephoned two potential candidates for employment absent any vote from the Board authorizing her to do so, which exceeded the scope of her duties as a board member and had the potential to compromise the Board; the record includes an e-mail exchange with one of the job candidates which supports the Commission's conclusion that respondent breached the confidentiality of Board Executive Session deliberations, in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g). The Commissioner concluded that the respondent's actions violated the Commission's code of ethics, and accepted the Commission's recommendation that a reprimand is the appropriate penalty in this case. Accordingly, the Commissioner ordered that the above-named respondent be reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

BARBARA LESINSKI,	:
PETITIONER,	:
v.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
GENEVA SMALLWOOD, ASBURY PARK BOARD OF EDUCATION, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

This matter involves an appeal of the School Ethics Commission's October 28, 2014 determination that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members when she took private action by contacting two potential candidates for employment and discussing confidential Executive Session matters with a third party.[1] The Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand for the violation. Complainant filed exceptions, urging the Commissioner to impose a greater penalty. Thereafter, respondent appealed the Commission's findings pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.3(c). Having carefully reviewed the Commission's decision and the record in its entirety, the Commissioner finds that the Commission's decision is supported by sufficient, credible evidence and that respondent failed to establish that the decision is arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law. N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a). Additionally, the Commissioner finds that a penalty of reprimand is appropriate.

At the outset, a brief synopsis of the arguments advanced by the parties on exception and appeal is warranted. Complainant, in her exceptions, asserts a greater penalty should be imposed since respondent – the Board President – is a veteran, certificated Board member with eight years experience.[2] (Petitioner's Exceptions at 1) On appeal, respondent argues her actions were precipitated by a "misunderstanding" and she "legitimately and in good faith believed she had been authorized to contact Candidates 1 and 2 to gauge their continued interest in a position with the District." (Respondent's brief at 3) Contending the finding of violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) should be reversed, respondent denies that she exceeded her duties as Board President or potentially compromised the Board by calling the candidates. Further, respondent maintains that the Commission's conclusion as to a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g) is "nothing more than supposition and conjecture" requiring reversal because she testified that she did not reveal any confidential information to the candidates. (Id. at 11) In short, respondent's arguments on appeal are unpersuasive.

The factual record fully supports the Commission's conclusion that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g). First, as to the violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), respondent admitted that she telephoned two potential candidates for employment absent any vote from the Board authorizing her to do so. (Testimony of Geneva Smallwood, T at 9-12, 60; 24-25, 89; 1-3, 90)[3] Six other board members testified credibly that the Board never authorized respondent – formally or informally – to contact the candidates; instead, they agreed during Executive Session that respondent should contact the State Monitor to determine if her "out of the box" plan involving the candidates was viable.[4] (SEC Decision at 12) Absent a formal directive, respondent's actions exceeded the scope of her duties as a board member and had the potential to compromise the Board. By calling the candidates, respondent could have easily created the impression that she was acting on behalf of her Board when, in fact, they neither authorized her to contact the candidates nor approved her plan to hire them. See Dericks v. Schiavoni, Commissioner's Decision No. 260-09 SEC, decided August 18, 2009, at 5-6 ("communications from individual board members purporting or appearing to represent the full board" violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e)) For the reasons expressed in the Commission's comprehensive decision, respondent's conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e).

[2]Complainant did not file opposition to respondent's brief in support of the appeal.

[3]This citation refers to a transcript of a hearing held before the School Ethics Commission on September 23, 2014.

[4]After the State Monitor overruled the Board's candidate for superintendent in November 2013, respondent hatched a plan to hire both the rejected candidate and another candidate on a trial basis and discussed same with the Board in Executive Session, which led to the present controversy. (SEC Decision at 7)

Second, as to the violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g), respondent's appeal brief fails to address a crucial document that she offered as evidence before the Commission – a revealing e-mail exchange with one of the candidates. (T at 19-24, 67; 4-25, 71; Respondent's Exhibit 3) Simply stated, the e-mails demonstrate that her discussion with said candidate was not limited to gauging his interest in future employment. Rather, at the candidate's request, respondent subsequently arranged an in-person meeting between her "delegation" and the candidate's "group" to discuss his "attributes." (Respondent's Exhibit 3) After the meeting, respondent e-mailed the candidate noting that she "found the exchange interesting and informative," that she would be reporting back to the Board, and that she was "doing everything" she could to "resolve this CSA situation."[5] (Ibid.) These e-mails support the Commission's conclusion that respondent breached the confidentiality of Executive Session deliberations when she called the candidates and discussed her plan "in greater detail than simply gauging the candidates' interest," thereby sharing confidential information with a third party.[6] (SEC Decision at 13) For the reasons expressed in the Commission's comprehensive decision, respondent's conduct violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g).

As to penalty, the Commissioner accepts the Commission's recommendation that a reprimand is appropriate for the reasons expressed in its decision. Moreover, the Commissioner finds that issuance of a reprimand here is in accord with the penalties in prior cases involving violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g). Therefore, the Commission's recommended penalty will not be disturbed.

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that Geneva Smallwood is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a complaint, filed on April 15, 2014 by board member Barbara Lesinski, alleging that Board President Geneva Smallwood, Asbury Park Board of Education (Board), violated the School Ethics Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. The complaint specifically alleges that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a), (c), (d), (e), and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members (Code). The respondent filed her answer to the complaint on June 10, 2014.

By letter dated June 12, 2014, the parties were notified that the School Ethics Commission would review this complaint on June 24, 2014. At its meeting on June 24, 2014, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.8(a), the Commission voted to retain the complaint docketed as C14-14 for a hearing at a later date.

The Commission notified the complainant and respondent by letter of August 1, 2014, that on September 23, 2014, it would conduct a plenary proceeding to hear testimony and consider evidence in support of their respective positions. The complainant, Barbara Lesinski appeared pro se, and the respondent appeared with her attorney, Carl Tanksley, Jr., Esq. Accordingly, the Commission heard testimony on all Counts of the complaints. After hearing all testimony, as summarized below, the Commission voted during the public portion on September 23, 2014 and October 28, 2014 to find a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1 (e) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, to dismiss the allegations that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a), (c) and (d) of the Code and to recommend the penalty of reprimand.

SUMMARY OF THE RECORD

After opening statements, the Commission heard the respondent's Motion to Dismiss the complaint on the grounds that the complaint, and the testimony it will elicit, would violate the confidentiality of Executive Session since respondent's disclosure of her actions occurred during closed session. At no time until that moment did respondent object to the complaint on these grounds. The complainant argued that if the Commission is not able to hear and decide whether a Board member violated the Act in closed session, then there would be no avenue for those filing such a complaint to challenge such conduct. She also argued that the Commission's Executive Session is also cloaked in the same protections; therefore, the testimony would also be safeguarded. After deliberations, the Commission denied the Motion without prejudice since the parties and all of their witnesses were present at the Board meeting and all were privy to the events conducted under the protection of confidentiality.

The tribunal was certain that it could navigate around the restrictions posed by confidentiality by focusing the testimony on the events of the two meetings further limited by the narrow issue of whether the Board gave Respondent Smallwood permission to contact the two candidates for Superintendent. The Commission did not agree, however, that the confidentiality it enjoys in Executive Session transfers to the Board and vice versa. The Commission has determined in Messner & Condo v. Gray, Deptford Twp. Board of Education, Gloucester County, C16-13, 12/19/13 and Berglund v. Gray, Deptford Twp. Board of Education, Gloucester County, C22-13, 12/19/13 (Consolidated) that the protections afforded to the entity and its members in Executive Session are unique to that body and the individuals of which it is comprised. The protections of confidentiality cannot be expanded or transferred to include another person or group even though there exists in that relationship a different and separate protection.

In order to protect the confidentiality of Board members' discussion, the Commission limited testimony and confined the witnesses to the issue of whether they gave the respondent the permission to contact potential candidates for the positions of Interim Superintendent and Interim Director of Curriculum.

COMPLAINANT: Barbara A. Lesinski—Board Member

Barbara Lesinski testified that during Executive Session on February 11, 2014, the Board President, Respondent Smallwood, introduced the idea of two temporary positions to satisfy both factions of the Board. The members discussed her idea of hiring an Interim Superintendent and creating a second position of Interim Director of Curriculum as well as the two individuals under consideration to fill those positions. The respondent was directed to contact the State Monitor to see if she approved of the plan and report back to the Board at the next meeting. At the next meeting on February 25, 2014, the respondent advised the Board members that she had telephoned both candidates to see if they were still interested in the positions. The respondent objected to this testimony, which the Commission overruled, determining that details raised in the testimony were already reflected in the facts mentioned in the complaint. Nothing confidential was disclosed. Ms. Lesinski asserted that on February 11, 2014, the Board did not grant Respondent Smallwood the authority to contact the candidates.

On cross examination, Ms. Lesinski affirmed that she was in attendance at the two meetings in February. When questioned by the Commission, Ms. Lesinski testified that the Superintendent search had begun in January 2013, and the Board hired an individual whose selection the State Monitor overturned.[1] She restated that at no time did the Board authorize the respondent to contact the candidates.

[1]The Board sued the Monitor. In July 2014, five members of the Board again voted to appoint the same individual whose appointment was overturned without prior notice to four of the nine Board members that the vote would be taking place, without advising the County Superintendent for approval and without a background check.

Angela Ahbez-Anderson—Board Member

Regarding the February 11, 2014 meeting, Ms. Ahbez-Anderson testified emphatically that the Board did not authorize Respondent Smallwood to contact the two candidates. She was simply directed to contact the State Monitor. At the February 25, 2014 meeting, the witness stated that the respondent was "thinking out of the box" and when asked who authorized her to speak to the candidates, the respondent said the Board directed her to do so. Ms. Ahbez-Anderson affirmed that the Board did not grant Respondent Smallwood the authority to contact the candidates. On cross-examination, Ms. Ahbez Anderson maintained that the Board members who heard the respondent's reply were uniformly surprised.

Moreover, when questioned by the Commission, Ms Ahbez-Anderson stated that when she was Board President[2], she was never authorized to personally contact candidates for positions of employment.

Corey Lowell—Board Member

Ms. Lowell testified that on February 11, 2014, the respondent discussed with the Board her "out of the box" idea to try out an individual as Interim Superintendent and another individual as Assistant Superintendent, Director of Curriculum on a temporary basis as a compromise of sorts to assuage both factions of the Board. The candidate for Interim Superintendent was the same individual who the State Monitor had rejected. Ms. Lowell further testified that the Board directed the respondent to contact the State Monitor for review of her idea, but nothing more. She was not asked to contact the individuals in any manner at any time.

There were no other questions on cross or from the Commission, except to reaffirm that the Board did not authorize the respondent to contact the candidates

Geoffrey Hastings—Business Administrator

Mr. Hastings, the Business Administrator for nine years, testified that the Board was looking for options to find an individual to fill the position of Superintendent. At a meeting, the witness stated that Respondent Smallwood suggested a plan to temporarily hire an Interim Superintendent with a mentor or Assistant Superintendent and another as someone to help with the Director of Curriculum duties on a trial basis. When asked if the Board authorized the respondent to contact the candidates, he said that there was no formal action directing the respondent to call the candidates. The Board did not establish any course of action at the February 11, 2014. At the February 25, 2014, Mr. Hastings testified that Respondent Smallwood advised the Board members that she had been in contact with the two candidates, and they were amenable to some type of arrangement. (CD File 3, 31:01)

When questioned by the Commission, Mr. Hastings advised that the District now has a Superintendent as of September 11, 2014, pending contract approval. The witness was not sure if the State Monitor was present for the February 11, 2014 meeting, but was certain that she knew about the proposed plan and that she was present for one of the meetings.[3] The Monitor advised that she would review the plan and return her findings to the Board. He had no recollection if the Board directed Respondent Smallwood to contact the State Monitor.

RESPONDENT: Geneva Smallwood—Board President

Geneva Smallwood testified that minutes of the meetings of February 11, 2014 and February 25, 2014 are scant. She does recall that she was "pushing the Board to complete the process" on the overturned superintendent candidate and also pushing the Board for other solutions, to "think outside the box" and offer different modules. (CD File 3, 48:20—29) She suggested having a Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent and would discuss it with the State Monitor when she was present at the next meeting. There were no other options on the table. She stated that the Board did not authorize her to contact the candidates at this meeting but did so at either the meeting on February 25, 2014 or at a meeting on March 18, 2014. Further, she stated that when the Board asked her to contact the candidates it was to determine if they were interested in filling the vacancies during this second round of the search. The respondent believes that the complainant and her witnesses have the wrong dates. (R-1) She further stated that when she contacted the candidates, she had no conversation with the candidates about the dual positions or trial period nor did she reveal any confidential information discussed in Executive Session.

Respondent sought to introduce R-2 to establish that a site visit of the candidate was a part of the selection process. As such, the respondent believes that the respondent's actions were consistent with the process recommended by NJSBA. Over the complainant's objection, the Commission admitted the document into evidence, but would accord it only the weight it deemed appropriate. The Respondent also identified an e-mail dated March 9, 2014 from Gregory Allen to the respondent to set up a site visit. (R-3) This is the same individual whom the State Monitor rejected. It is the respondent's position that all that she did was at the Board's direction.

On cross examination, when asked who had the responsibility to contact the candidates during the first round of the search, Respondent Smallwood stated that Board members did reference checks and that during the second round of the search the Board continued to use the same process as in the first round. She also testified that the BA gave her the phone numbers to contact the individuals to fill the vacancies to see if they were still interested. In addition, she also testified that the Board gave her permission to meet with candidate Gregory Allen in Atlantic City to complete the site visit from the first round. She had contacted all of the members of the personnel committee, but none could attend with her, except Ms. Simmons. She was not sure of the date on which the Board asked her to contact the State Monitor to discuss her "out of the box" plan and asserts that the Board asked her to negotiate with the State Monitor sometime in April. She never discussed her trip to Galloway Township (Atlantic City) with the State Monitor.

When the Commission attempted to resolve respondent's confusion about the date on which she was requested by the Board to contact the candidates, she responded that the dates are muddled and described the dates she has heard in the testimony as "mixy." (CD File 3, 1:20:14—23)

[3] Minutes of the February 11, 2014 meeting indicate that the State Monitor was absent, but that she was present for the February 25, 2014 meeting.

Again, she was not clear about the dates. Also, the record shows that there was no meeting between February 25, 2014 and March 18, 2014, for her to seek approval for the site visit she had planned during this time as indicated in R-3. She does not remember when she contacted the BA for the candidates' phone numbers and testified that she only asked them if they were still interested. She asserted that at no time did she discuss the terms of the "out of the box" idea. She could not recall exactly who directed her to contact the candidates, but said that it was the consensus of the Board members present. She said the other Board members are confused about the dates. (CD File 3, 1:31:34)

Christian Hall—Board Member

Respondent's attorney directed Mr. Hall's attention to the meeting of February 25, 2014. The witness testified that he did not recall the respondent's disclosure that she spoke to any candidates on any date although he did recall a discussion about a replacement candidate after the State Monitor overturned the Board's selection on the first round. He recalled Ms. Smallwood's statement about "thinking outside the box," at the February 11, 2014 meeting in the context of brainstorming of ideas to search for and select a Superintendent. He testified that the Board members divided duties of checking references, backgrounds and work ethic among themselves and that Respondent Smallwood and Ms. Simmons agreed to perform these checks. He did not recall anyone telling the respondent to make phone calls to the candidates or any discussion about contacting the candidates.

On cross-examination, Mr. Hall remembered that he suggested that the State Monitor develop a checklist of items for the Board to follow on the second round search to improve the Board's relationship with the Monitor. The Monitor did create a checklist, which included parts of the earlier process to follow in this second round, but he was not sure if the entire Board complied. He was not sure about the dates of the meetings.

When the Commission inquired whether all those present agreed to the process discussed, Mr. Hall stated that there was no objection to the process, which included performing reference and background checks. He did not remember, however, whether the Board took any affirmative action to revoke the NJSBA process, but that the State Monitor outlined a plan for the Board to follow. He did not remember if the members followed her plan. In response to a question from the Commission, Mr. Hall stated that the Board did not direct the respondent to call the candidates at any time at any meeting for any reason.

Felicia Simmons—Board Member

Ms. Simmons was asked to draw her attention to the February 11, 2014 meeting and whether there was a proposal regarding two candidates to fill the superintendent vacancy. She testified that the idea was suggested by Board member Connie Breech[4] to select one individual for Interim Superintendent and another to fill a new position of Assistant Superintendent. After the proposal, Ms. Simmons testified that the Board advised the respondent to contact the State Monitor to see if she approved of the plan, as well as the candidates to see if they were still interested and willing to accept the proposal. Ms. Simmons stated that all of the members present, including the complainant and her Board witnesses accepted the plan. The respondent was directed to investigate a compromise deal with the candidates and report back. Ms. Simmons accompanied the respondent on one such meet and greet. Ms. Simmons reported her findings to the Board and was confused why certain Board members were surprised that the respondent had spoken to the candidates. Ms. Simmons testified that at the February 11, 2014, there was an affirmative, unanimous, straw vote to have the respondent seek approval of her proposal and to contact the candidates to move forward in its search as suggested. When Ms. Smallwood reported back the results of her contact with the candidates on February 25, 2014, Ms. Simmons testified that some of the Board members were shocked that Ms. Smallwood contacted the candidates and appeared to forget about the straw vote. Ms. Simmons testified that Ms. Lesinski asked, "Who told you to do that?"

[4] The minutes of the Board meeting of February 11, 2014 and February 25, 2014 indicate that Connie Breech was not present for the meeting nor do they indicate that Ms. Breech appeared by telephone. No one else attributed Respondent Smallwood's proposal to Board member Connie Breech.

On cross-examination, Ms. Lesinski asked Ms. Simmons if the State Monitor reported back to the Board regarding her approval of the plan. The witness testified that the she never did and the proposal "fizzled." (CD File 4, 12:23) When asked which Board members directed the respondent to contact the candidates, Ms. Simmons said they all did.

The Commission inquired about the nature of the motion on the straw vote. Ms. Simmons testified the Motion was to have the respondent contact the State Monitor to see if the suggestion of two positions was a viable solution and to contact the candidates, and that the members responded with a unanimous show of hands. She maintained that she did not know that the Board had to get the State Monitor's approval to advance the plan. Ms. Simmons stated that the respondent did not discuss the terms of the plan at the meet and greet with the candidate whose appointment had previously been overturned.

Nicole Harris---Board Vice President

Ms. Harris's attention was drawn to the February 11, 2014 Board meeting and testified that the Respondent discussed the need "to think outside the box"; however, there was no clear direction that night about how to proceed with the plan. Moreover, there was no straw vote to direct the respondent to do anything, but the respondent on her own initiative took action.

The complainant did not cross-examine this witness.

The Commission inquired if she remembered if a straw vote had taken place on February 11, 2014, and the witness testified that she did not remember the vote.

FINDINGS OF FACT

As the Trier of Fact in this matter, the Commission had the greatest opportunity to observe the demeanor of the witnesses and was qualified to assess their credibility. Based on the credible, relevant testimony and documents in the record, the Commission makes the following factual findings on the limited issue of whether the Asbury Park Board authorized Respondent Smallwood to contact two candidates for the positions of Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent:

1. The complainant, respondent, and the witnesses were at all times, relevant to this matter, members of the Asbury Park Board of Education (Board) or employed by the District.

2. The Asbury Park Board has been subject to the oversight of a fiscal State Monitor, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-54 et seq. since September 2013.

3. The Board's search for a new Superintendent since early 2013 has been unsuccessful.

4. In November 2013, the State Monitor overturned the Board's appointed candidate for Superintendent, citing, inter alia, his lack of experience and concerns about his qualifications for the position.

5. Under the leadership of Respondent Smallwood, she and the Board abandoned the NJSBA process, outlined in R-2, which it utilized in its search in 2013 and resorted to "out of the box" proposals to appoint a new Superintendent.

6. The Board meetings at the center of the controversy were held on February 11, 2014 and February 25, 2014. (R-1)

7. No Board meetings took place between February 25, 2014 and March 18, 2014.

8. The parties to this complaint and the witnesses who testified were all present for the February 11, 2014 meeting.

9. Seven of the nine members, who comprise the Board, as well as the Business Administrator, testified at the hearing and had personal knowledge of the events, which took place during Executive Session at both meetings.

10. The discussion on the evening of February 11, 2014 included a proposal advanced by Respondent Smallwood to "think outside the box" and appoint one candidate as Interim Superintendent and the other candidate as Assistant Superintendent on a trial basis to see if either would work out.

11. The candidate under consideration for Interim Superintendent was the same individual whose appointment had been overturned by the State Monitor late in 2013.

12. After she overturned the Board's selection for Superintendent, the State Monitor and the Commissioner of Education established a process for the Board to follow to reopen its search for a new Superintendent.

13. On the evening of February 11, 2014 the Board directed Respondent Smallwood to contact the State Monitor for approval to proceed with her proposal to appoint the two candidates on a trial basis.

14. There was no straw vote of the members in attendance at the meeting of February, 11, 2014, authorizing Respondent Smallwood to contact the candidates to see if they were still interested in the position.

15. The respondent contacted the candidates between the dates of February 11, 2014 and February 25, 2014 without Board or State Monitor approval and at the February 25, 2014 meeting reported back to the members the results of her efforts.

16. At the meeting of February 25, 2014, the respondent was made aware that the Board did not approve of her contacting the candidates.

17. In an email, initiated by the candidate whose appointment was overturned, the candidate invited Respondent Smallwood to conduct a site visit even though his appointment had failed.

18. Respondent's reply on March 9, 2014 to this earlier email from the previously rejected candidate, attempting to schedule a site visit, establishes that the respondent engaged in an expanded conversation beyond merely gauging his interest in the position.

19. Respondent Smallwood and Felicia Simmons conducted the site visit without advising the State Monitor of their plan.

20. After the meeting, Respondent Smallwood wrote to the unsuccessful candidate saying, "I'm doing everything I can to resolve this CSA situation." (Respondent's Exhibit R-3)

21. The Respondent testified that she was "pushing the Board to complete the process" on the overturned candidate and also pushing the Board for other solutions. (CD File 3, 48:20—29)

ANALYSIS

During his closing arguments, respondent's attorney renewed his Motion to Dismiss on the grounds that the subject matter and the discussions which took place in Executive Session were protected by the principle of confidentiality which attaches to closed session deliberations.

As discussed, supra[5], the Commission has previously determined that the protection of confidentiality inures only to the body as a whole and to its members, who are sworn to safeguard it. Here, Respondent Smallwood argues that this complaint must not be heard because to do so would breach the confidentiality of the Board's Executive Session. Yet she maintains that the Board authorized her to contact the two candidates under consideration. If it is true that the Board gave her license to contact the candidates to inquire if they were still interested in the position, then whatever protection that this portion of the discussion, regarding the proposal advanced by the respondent, had was waived by the Board. Once a third party—the candidate—was inserted into the conversation, confidentiality evaporated. Moreover, by injecting a third party into the discussion, the respondent's contact of the candidate by phone is a public act and also not protected by the confidentiality of closed session. Similarly, when Respondent Smallwood reported the results of her conversations, she was sharing an event already made public and, therefore, not protected by the principle of confidentiality.

Conversely, if the Board did not authorize Respondent Smallwood to contact the candidates, and, by her admission, she did, then Respondent Smallwood breached the protection of confidentiality of discussions in Executive Session by insinuating a third party into the Board's protected conversation. She cannot now cloak herself with the very protection she rendered invalid.

For the reasons stated above, the Commission hereby denies Respondent Smallwood's Motion to Dismiss on the grounds of confidentiality.

Although respondent's attorney did not make his Motion to Dismiss the case after the complainant rested, he did so during his closing arguments. He argued that the complainant did not meet her burden of proof nor did she establish a violation of any of the subsections of the Act as alleged in her complaint. Based on the foregoing Findings of Fact, the Commission has determined that the complainant met her burden and established that Respondent Smallwood violated the Code. Consequently, the Commission denies respondent's Motion to Dismiss based on failure to prove a violation of the Code.

The relevant, credible testimony in the case now before the Commission revealed that the respondent, without Board authority and without the approval of the State Monitor, took private action, which had the potential to compromise the Board. She shared the confidential deliberations with at least one of two outsiders, who themselves were not parties to the Executive Session discussion and who would not have been permitted to attend the meeting or be privy to the Board's deliberations. Once shared with these individuals, confidentiality was breached. Consistent with this foregoing reasoning, the Commission reviewed these actions to determine the manner in which the respondent violated the Code.

The Commission again notes that the complainant bears the burden of factually proving any violations of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members in accordance with the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a). See also, N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(b). The complainant asserts that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a), (c), (d), (e), and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members.

The Commission first considers the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a), which states:

> I will uphold and enforce all laws, rules and regulations of the State Board of Education, and court orders pertaining to schools. Desired changes shall be brought about only through legal and ethical procedures.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a) shall include a copy of a final decision from any court of law or administrative agency of this State demonstrating that the respondent(s) failed to enforce all laws, rules and regulations of the State Board of Education, and/or court orders pertaining to schools or that the respondent brought about changes through illegal or unethical procedures. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)1.

The complainant did not produce a copy of a final decision from a court of law or administrative agency of this State which demonstrates that this respondent failed to enforce all laws, rules and regulations of the State Board of Education, and/or court orders pertaining to schools or that the respondents brought about changes through illegal or unethical means. See, David Hollander v. Judith Millman, et al., Springfield Twp. Board of Education, Union County, C33-07 (January 22, 2008); Denise Bouyer v. Rita Owens and Oscar McCoy, Willingboro Board of Education, Burlington County, C37-09 (December 15, 2009); Martha Oramas-Shirey v. Peter Gallo et. al., Bethlehem Twp. Bd. of Ed., Hunterdon County, C43-10 (March 22, 2011). Accordingly, the complainant failed to establish that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a).

The Commission next considers the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c), which states:

> I will confine my board action to policymaking, planning, and appraisal and I will help to frame policies and plans only after the board has consulted those who will be affected by them.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c) shall include evidence that the respondent(s) took board action to effectuate policies and plans without consulting those affected by such policies and plans, or took action that was unrelated to the respondent's duty to:
>
> i. Develop the general rules and principles that guide the management of the school district or charter school;
>
> ii. Formulate the programs and methods to effectuate the goals of the school district or charter school; or
> iii. Ascertain the value or liability of a policy. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)3.

The complainant presented no evidence that the respondent took any particular "board action" so as to implicate this provision of the statute. Rather, respondent's conduct implicates N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), as set forth below. Accordingly, the complainant failed to establish that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c).

The Commission next considers the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(d), which states:

> I will carry out my responsibility, not to administer the schools, but together with my fellow board members, to see that they are well run.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(d) shall include, but not be limited to, evidence that the respondent(s) gave a direct order to school personnel or became directly involved in activities or functions that are the responsibility of school personnel or the day-to-day administration of the school district or charter school. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)4.

Based on the testimony and in accordance with the Commission's findings of fact, the Commission finds insufficient evidence to conclude that the respondent gave a direct order to school personnel or became directly involved in activities or functions that are the responsibility of school personnel or the day-to-day administration of the school district. Accordingly, the complainant failed to establish that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(d).

The Commission next considers the complainant's allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), which provides:

> I will recognize that authority rests with the board of education and will make no personal promises nor take any private action that may compromise the board.

The Commission's regulations require that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) shall include evidence that the respondent made personal promises or took action beyond the scope of his or her duties such that, by its nature, had the potential to compromise the board. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)5.

In finding a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), it is not necessary for the Commission to find that the respondent's action, in fact, compromised the Board. Rather, it is sufficient that the action was of such a nature that it might have compromised the Board. See, Tony John et al. v. Ken Gordon, Willingboro Bd. of Ed., Burlington County, C34-08 (October 27, 2009), aff'd Commission of Education Decision No. 102-10ASEC, decided March 30, 2010.

The Commission determines that based on the preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence, Respondent Smallwood took private action when she contacted the candidates to inquire whether they were still interested in the positions of Superintendent and Assistant Superintendent. Respondent's testimony reveals that she and the Board were frustrated that the process to select a new Superintendent and all of their efforts to accomplish the task proved unfruitful. She asserted that she was "pushing the Board to complete the process" on the overturned candidate and also pushing the Board for other solutions, to "think outside the box" and offer different modules. (CD File 3, 48:20—29) The credible testimony reflects that at the meeting of February 11, 2014, the Board gave the respondent permission to contact the State Monitor to determine if her plan were viable since one of candidates was the same failed contender whose appointment the State Monitor overturned in November 2013. Of the eight who testified, six witnesses stated that the Board did not authorize the respondent, whether formally or informally, to contact the candidates. Only Felicia Simmons testified that a straw vote was taken that evening to permit the respondent to contact the candidates. According to Ms. Simmons, the vote was unanimous and in the affirmative. This Commission finds her testimony lacks credibility since no one, not even the respondent, testified that such a vote took place at any meeting at any time.

Moreover, the respondent set her sights on bringing the old candidate back and arranged for a site visit at the candidate's urging (R-3), accompanied by Ms. Simmons. In her email reply to the candidate, Ms. Smallwood stated to him, "I'm doing everything I can to resolve this CSA[6] situation." When the respondent was asked on cross examination if she contacted the State Monitor for approval of her visit, Ms. Smallwood stated that she had not. Further, the Commission determines that there was no need for the site visit, since this candidate's appointment had already been rejected months ago.

Based on the foregoing, the Commission finds that Respondent Smallwood took private action when she contacted the candidates for Interim Superintendent and conducted a site visit without the approval of the Board. Accordingly, the Commission finds that Respondent Smallwood took private action, which was of such a nature that it had the potential to compromise the Board in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e).

The Commission last considers the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g), which provides:

> I will hold confidential all matters pertaining to the schools which, if disclosed, would needlessly injure individuals or the schools. In all other matters, I will provide accurate information and, in concert with my fellow board members, interpret to the staff the aspirations of the community for its school.

The Commission's regulation requires that:

> Factual evidence of a violation of the confidentiality provision of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g) shall include evidence that the respondent(s) took action to make public, reveal or disclose information that was not public under any laws, regulations or court orders of this State, or information that was otherwise confidential in accordance with board policies, procedures or practices. Factual evidence that the respondent violated the inaccurate information provision of N.J.S.A.

[6] CSA is the acronym for the Chief School Administrator or Superintendent.

> 18A:12-24.1(g) shall include evidence that substantiates the inaccuracy of the information provided by the respondent(s) and evidence that establishes that the inaccuracy was other than reasonable mistake or personal opinion or was not attributable to developing circumstances. N.J.A.C. 6A:28-6.4(a)7. The purpose of executive session is to allow the Board to openly deliberate on select issues without the public being privy to those discussions. It is clear that the topics discussed during that portion of the meeting were confidential and it fell upon those individuals present in executive session ensure those discussions remain confidential.

The purpose of Executive Session is to allow the Board members to openly deliberate on select issues without the public being privy to those discussions. It is clear that the topics discussed during that portion of the February 11, 2014 meeting were confidential, and it fell upon those individuals present in Executive Session to ensure those discussions remained confidential. The Commission determines that Respondent Smallwood breached this duty.

The Commission confines it review to the first portion of this regulation, which requires evidence that the respondent took action to make public, reveal or disclose information that was not otherwise public. It is clear from respondent's actions in telephoning the two candidates to discuss her plan for their potential employment and in further pursuing the site visit for one of them revealed protected discussions. Given the circumstances of her testimony about her "out of the box" plan, it is illogical for her to simply have inquired by phone if they were still interested and then after receiving an affirmative reply, hung up. The conversation would logically require more information to the candidates since her plan envisioned a short-term paradigm to test their skills. One of the candidates was already employed, and the plan would have required him to leave his secure position for an uncertain future. The Commission does not find respondent's testimony credible. By telephoning the candidates, Respondent Smallwood made public Board discussions with individuals who could never be privy to the Board's deliberations without Board approval. In doing so, she took private action to make public, reveal or disclose information that was not public under any laws, regulations or court orders of this State, or information that was otherwise confidential in accordance with board policies, procedures or practices.

As discussed supra, Respondent Smallwood was not authorized to contact the candidates to gauge their interest in the Superintendent position in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12 24.1(e). The Commission's analysis of Respondent's Exhibit R-3 supports the conclusion that she divulged Executive Session conversations and shared far more information, including her "out of the box" proposal as well as the means by which the candidates would be vetted by the Board. There is no other way to explain how the candidate would have known to advocate for his own site visit. The Commission determines that this was a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12 24.1(g) and advances its conclusion supported by the following:

1. At the February 25, 2014 meeting, Ms. Smallwood was put on notice that on February 11, 2014, the Board did not grant her the authority to contact the candidates nor did the members do so at any time.

2. R-1 establishes that there were no meetings between February 25, 2014 and March 18, 2014; therefore, there would have been no opportunity for Ms. Smallwood to have received Board authorization for continued contact with the candidates, including a site visit.

3. The email trail in R-3 commences with a suspiciously undated email from the superintendent candidate the State Monitor rejected, reaching out to Ms. Smallwood to set up a site visit for his candidacy.

4. Ms. Smallwood responded on March 9, 2014, the period between the two meetings during which she was on notice that she did not have the authority to pursue the candidates or to unilaterally conduct the site visit, which occurred on Thursday, March 13, 2014, without the Board's authorization or the State Monitor's approval. As indicated in R-3, Ms. Smallwood planned to report back to the Board at its next meeting on Tuesday, March 18, 2014.

Based on the above, the Commission concluded that Respondent Smallwood discussed in her telephone call in greater detail than simply gauging the candidates' interest and disclosed confidential matters discussed in Executive Session in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g).

The Commission finds that sharing the deliberations of a closed meeting with any third party, who would not have been permitted to attend the meeting, is tantamount to a breach of trust and to the promise and expectation of confidentiality. Accordingly, the Commission finds that the complainant met her burden to establish a violation of the first part of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(g).

DECISION

The Commission finds that the complainant has proved by a preponderance of the relevant, credible evidence that Respondent Geneva Smallwood violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) and (g) of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members, and the Commission dismisses the allegations that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(a), (c), and (d) of the Code.

PENALTY

The Commission recommends a penalty of reprimand.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. Parties may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal, pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4, within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

A.E.T. AND L.T. ON BEHALF OF A.M.T.,:

PETITIONERS, :

V. : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTH HUNTERDON-VOORHEES REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, HUNTERDON COUNTY : DECISION

RESPONDENT.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioners challenged the determination of the respondent Board that their son, A.M.T., was ineligible for school tuition paid by the Board pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1a. In 2004, A.M.T. was placed by the school district at Matheny Medical and Educational Center (Matheny) – a hospital and educational facility for children and adults with medically complex developmental disabilities. In May 2013, the Board notified the parents that A.M.T. was ineligible for continued enrollment in the school district based upon A.E.T.'s employment assignment in the Netherlands from 2009 until 2013. Petitioners contended that their domicile throughout this temporary work assignment remained within the school district. The Board sought tuition reimbursement from the parents in the amount of $277,410 for the period of A.M.T.'s ineligible attendance.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: based on the documentation submitted by the petitioners and their credible testimony at hearing, at all times between 2009 and 2014, petitioners were domiciled in respondent's school district; though they also resided in the Netherlands due to A.E.T.'s temporary work assignment, they maintained a domicile within respondent's district and returned at the end of the assignment; the temporary residence abroad was funded by A.E.T.'s employer and the family never intended to remain in Europe nor to abandon their New Jersey domicile. The ALJ concluded that at all times relevant from 2009 to 2014, the parents were domiciled within the Board's school district and A.M.T. was entitled to receive a free and appropriate education at the Matheny School, paid for by the district. Accordingly, the petitioners' appeal was granted and the Board's cross-petition for reimbursement of tuition was denied.

Upon comprehensive review of the record and the Initial Decision, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings and conclusions. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

PETITIONERS,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE NORTH HUNTERDON-VOORHEES REGIONAL HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT, HUNTERDON COUNTY	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The present controversy involves whether petitioners' temporary residence in the Netherlands eradicated their New Jersey domicile, thereby rendering A.M.T. ineligible for school tuition paid by respondent pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1a.[1] To resolve this dispute, the Commissioner conducted a full and independent review of the record, the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), plus the parties' exceptions and reply exceptions. Upon such review, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge's (ALJ) comprehensive findings of fact and conclusions of law which are wholly supported by the credible evidence in the record. Thus, during the time period in question, A.M.T. was entitled to a free and appropriate education paid for by the respondent.

Following a plenary hearing at the OAL, the ALJ found that at all times relevant between 2009 and 2014, petitioners were domiciled within respondent's district: initially in Tewksbury, New Jersey, and later in Lebanon, New Jersey – after the Tewksbury home was sold. Although petitioners also resided in the Netherlands due to A.E.T.'s temporary employment there – and L.T. frequently traveled between the Netherlands and New Jersey during A.E.T.'s overseas assignment – they maintained a domicile within respondent's district and returned home to Lebanon once A.E.T.'s employment concluded. Petitioners' temporary residence abroad was funded by A.E.T.'s employer; they never intended to remain there, nor did they intend to abandon their New Jersey domicile. Ultimately, the ALJ recommended granting petitioners' appeal and denying respondent's cross-petition for tuition reimbursement.

In its exceptions, respondent argues that: (1) the ALJ erroneously placed the burden of proof on the Board, ruling it failed to demonstrate petitioners had a domicile other than in the district; (2) the ALJ was swayed by petitioners' irrelevant testimony concerning A.M.T.'s severe disability; and (3) to the extent the ALJ determined that Board personnel waived the residency requirement, said finding is contrary to law. In their reply exceptions, petitioners argue that the ALJ utilized the proper burden of proof, that the facts surrounding A.M.T.'s disabilities are relevant, and that the ALJ did not base her decision on any theory of waiver.

The Commissioner finds respondent's exceptions to be without merit. First, the ALJ appropriately placed the burden of proof on petitioners, who demonstrated by a preponderance of evidence that they were domiciled within the district. Second, the ALJ's findings were not unduly influenced by testimony about A.E.T.'s disability and medical needs; on the contrary, the findings were made in accord with applicable law as cited within the Initial Decision. Third, the ALJ did not find that Board personnel waived the residency requirement – and the Commissioner makes no such finding here. Finally, respondent's reliance upon Board of Education of Hunterdon Central Regional High School District, Hunterdon County v. E.F. and G.F., Commissioner Decision No. 321-04, decided August 4, 2004, is unconvincing. In that case, E.F. and G.F. failed to establish domicile in petitioner's district when they rented an apartment in-district, admitted they did so to afford their children a better education, failed to rent out or sell their out-of-district home during the time period in question, and promptly returned to their out-of-district home once their youngest child graduated from high school. The facts herein are completely different.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this matter, petitioners' appeal is granted, and respondent's cross-petition for tuition reimbursement is dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Record Closed: December 5, 2014 Decided: January 14, 2015

BEFORE SUSAN M. SCAROLA, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioners, A.E.T. and L.T. (collectively, "the parents"), the parents of the special-needs child A.M.T., appeal the determination of the North Hunterdon-Voorhees Regional Board of Education ("district") that A.M.T. has not resided within the district since 2009. They seek to invoke the stay-put provisions for the child's placement at Matheny Medical and Educational Center ("Matheny") pursuant to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act ("IDEA"), 20 U.S.C.A. § 1400 et seq., or Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 ("Section 504"), 29 U.S.C.A. § 794a. The district seeks full tuition reimbursement from the parents in the amount of $277,410 for all periods of ineligible attendance of the child at Matheny.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On or about June 11, 2013, A.E.T. and L.T. filed to invoke the stay-put provisions for the child's placement at Matheny. An answer was filed by the district on July 24, 2013. On July 25, 2013, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL") for determination as a contested case and filed under OAL docket number EDS 10161-13. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.

On or about July 22, 2013, the district filed a counter-claim against A.E.T. and L.T. for reimbursement of tuition paid to Matheny for all periods of ineligible attendance. On July 25, 2013, the matter was transmitted to the OAL for determination as a contested case and filed under OAL docket number EDS 10159-13. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.[1]

On or about June 11, 2013, A.E.T. and L.T. filed an appeal of the district's determination that the child was not entitled to special education services at Matheny because of its determination that he was no longer a resident of the state. An answer and counter-claim were filed by the district on July 24, 2013. On July 25, 2013, the matter was transmitted to the OAL for determination as a contested case under OAL docket number EDU 10201-13. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13.[2]

Prior to the hearing, the district moved for summary decision on EDS 10161-13, contending that all issues were within the jurisdiction of the Commissioner of the [1] This matter appears to have been inappropriately labeled as a special education matter, because it does not concern special education, but rather residency, upon which the special education services were based.

[2] Although these matters shall be consolidated for purposes of the hearing, two decisions will be rendered on the EDS and EDU matters, as the former are final decisions while the latter is not.

Department of Education because they related to the child's residency, and did not involve IDEA or Section 504. A.E.T. and L.T. contended that the child's disabilities entitled him to a free and appropriate public education at Matheny paid for by the district for as long as he remained a resident of that district, and to that extent the IDEA and Section 504 were implicated in this matter. The district's motion for summary decision was denied on March 12, 2014.

The hearing in this matter was held on May 19, August 7, and November 12, 2014. Briefs were submitted and the record closed on December 5, 2014. This is the decision in the residency matter.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

It is not disputed that the child A.M.T. has been diagnosed with cerebral palsy, spastic quadriplegia, severe cognitive impairments, a seizure disorder, and cortical blindness. His disabilities interfere with his learning and he has been classified as eligible to receive special education and related services pursuant to the IDEA. Due to the severity of his needs, the child was placed at Matheny by the district in 2004 and he has remained there since. A.M.T. reached the age of twenty-one in 2014 and now receives services through the Department of Developmental Disabilities (DDD).

Testimony

A.E.T. testified that he has three children, A.M.T, Li.T. and N.T. A.M.T. is his and his wife's natural son; Li.T. and N.T. are adopted. A.M.T. has attended Matheny (located in Peapack, New Jersey) since his placement there; the residential component of his placement is paid by New Jersey Medicaid.

A.E.T. is a softwear consultant who does program management. He has been an independent contractor in this field since 1996. It is typical for him to be employed on a project for a company for approximately three to four years, although some projects may take less time.

A.E.T. has lived in three places in his professional life: he lived in Maryland until 1995; in St. Louis until 2001; and in New Jersey from 2001 to the present. He was typically on the road five days a week, and the family stayed at home. While living in St. Louis, he was working in Dallas, Detroit, Toronto, Montreal, and California. He worked for Booz-Allen and commuted from Puerto Rico to Maryland every other week. After he moved to New Jersey, he worked for KPMG in Liberty Corner; then for Canon Long Island, and then for the Icahn group in New York City and later northern Virginia.

A.E.T. came to New Jersey on a project for Canon for a couple of years; he then went to Icahn for four years. In 2008, the economy was not very good and his old boss at Canon became chief executive officer of Canon Europe. A.E.T. went in as a temporary contract employee with the job of reorganizing, fixing sales, and reducing the cost of information technology. This position required him to go to the Netherlands, and ended after the program accomplished its objectives and his old boss retired.

A.E.T. asked Canon for a three-year commitment for this program because he knew his boss was going to retire, and the program would not last forever. A.E.T. had no intention of permanently living there. He had a work visa which expired at the end of March 2014, although the work was essentially concluded in August 2013. Canon paid for their housing in the Netherlands and for the cost of their return. He moved there for his employment and then moved back when the program ended. These programs do not last forever and he was working for a specific person, who retired.

A.E.T. tried to commute from the Netherlands once a month, and his wife, L.T., tried to come back once a month. L.T. went to the Netherlands in 2009 after she retired from work in 2008. Their son, N.T., went to the Valley Forge Military Academy for his senior year of high school, and then to the Netherlands for approximately one year. N.T. is now working in California.

A.E.T.'s daughter, Li.T., also had an individualized education program (IEP). She ended up attending the Netherlands American School in The Hague, but without an IEP. She went to college for a year and is now attending Raritan Valley Community College.

A.E.T. and his wife could not leave two seventeen-year-olds in New Jersey alone, since they needed a stable environment.

A.E.T. never applied for Dutch citizenship. They all had visas related to his work. His wife's visa had to be renewed every year, as the Dutch were very strict with spouses. All visas were terminated when his job ended. A.E.T. could not remain in the Netherlands after that if he were not employed. A.E.T.'s official time at Canon ended in August 2013. A.E.T. and his wife had temporary residents' cards in the Netherlands. He would not even have been eligible for permanent status until after he was there for five years and had passed a test on Dutch, which he does not know. They could not have stayed there permanently and had no intention of doing so. They never abandoned or gave up their New Jersey domicile.

A.E.T. and L.T. never hid where they were living from the district. A.E.T. had contact with A.M.T.'s case manager and Matheny personnel, who also met with his wife periodically when she came back. No one ever expressed concern to them about their residency. The first time anyone raised an issue about residency was in March 2013. They did communicate with their case manager when they rented their apartment in Lebanon. They are very attached to A.M.T. and see him often.

A.E.T. and L.T. originally lived at 6 Floral Mountain Way, Tewksbury, a house they owned. In the fall of 2010 they put it on the market, as it was a big house on a big lot and cost a lot to maintain. They rented a two-bedroom apartment in Lebanon before the house was sold, and advised A.M.T.'s case manager because they wanted to keep her informed. The apartment was furnished with their personal belongings. It had two bedrooms, and was about 1,200 square feet. Their daughter lived there with them, as she continues to do now. They had a storage unit for the overflow of personal possessions from the house, which was finally sold in May 2011.

A Notice of Ineligibility was sent to A.E.T. and his wife, to which A.E.T. responded:

1. He agreed that A.M.T. was a classified student eligible for special education.

2. He agreed that he and his wife were his legal guardians.

3. They always communicated with Shirley DiBrango and Matheny.

4. Although Publicover said she called the number and was told it was not in use, the number was and is active and is still in use.

5. L.T. worked for the school district until she retired and that information was public record.

6. The business number allegedly tried by Publicover was not provided, so he could not know where she was calling.

7. The fax number allegedly tried by Publicover was not provided, so he could not know where she was faxing.

8. The emergency number given to the school was the number of A.M.T.'s grandmother, who lived in Virginia and was the person to contact if A.M.T. had an emergency. They could not give that responsibility to anyone else in the district because they did not know anyone that well.

9. The district knew that Li.T. had gone to the Netherlands and that A.M.T. could not possibly be living with her, since he lived at Matheny. A.M.T. is medically fragile and it takes years to get him settled. A.M.T. has been at Matheny since 2001 and has never moved out.

10. The case manager had all the numbers for A.E.T. and L.T. in both New Jersey and in the Netherlands, because L.T. wrote the contact information down for them. The case manager told L.T. to provide the information to the school district's data person so it could be noted, which she did.

A.E.T and his wife always continued to pay federal and New Jersey state income taxes and property taxes. They continued to pay New Jersey taxes in 2009, 2010, 2011, and 2012, even though their accountant advised that payment was optional. They felt they did everything as if they lived here 100 percent of the time.

They used the UPS store as a mailing address, as it was a safe and secure way to get important mail. Their driver's licenses listed their New Jersey mailing address (which was the UPS store) because the Division of Motor Vehicles selected that address after being advised of both the residential address and the mailing address. Their voter identification cards listed their district address since 2001. Their automobiles were registered and insured in New Jersey. Their handicapped-equipped van was registered and insured in New Jersey for as long as they owned it. They were not hiding anything.

They renewed A.M.T.'s handicapped placard with the State of New Jersey in January 2012 while they were away. They gave up their handicapped-equipped van shortly thereafter, as it had almost 200,000 miles on it and broke down. They had receipts for van repairs from 2009 to 2011 which showed its usage. They had receipts and credit-card bills showing car and van rental receipts, and credit-card bills for rental-van usage after their own van was no longer serviceable. Their other cars were leased and were disposed of when they went to live in the Netherlands, as one lease had ended and one was terminated early. Their apartment in the district had cable and internet service, and all utility bills showed usage and activity from the start of lease until now. They ordered merchandise using that address.

L.T. spent more time in New Jersey than A.E.T. did because his time off from work was more limited. In 2009, her time here was approximately 44 percent; in 2010, 27 percent; in 2011, 21 percent; in 2012, 30 percent; and in 2013, 30 percent.

After he received the letter from Publicover in March 2013, A.E.T. responded. On March 27, 2013, he contacted Publicover, and advised her that he would put documents together. He definitely called her in March.

A.E.T. received a letter on April 10, 2013, and disagreed with the second paragraph and the notice of ineligibility. He and his wife provided the requested documents on April 14, 2013. He and his wife thought of Tewksbury and Lebanon as their home. Both municipalities are in the North Hunterdon-Voorhees regional high school district. A.E.T. believed the district was confusing physical presence with domicile. He was never told what was wrong with or missing from any documents he provided. He was not available for a meeting until his return from the Netherlands. He heard that the Board decided the issue without him being there to present his case.

In July 2013, A.E.T. and L.T. returned to New Jersey. They did not maintain a residence in the Netherlands after his return. They remained living in the same apartment complex in Lebanon, but had to move from one apartment to another because they had brought a dog back with them from the Netherlands.

As for their other children, N.T. went to Valley Forge Military Academy (VFMA). Prior to that he had been suspended from Voorhees; he did not have an IEP or a 504 plan, just behavioral issues. After he graduated from VFMA, he joined them in the Netherlands for one year. He is not likely to ever live with them again, as he needs space. Li.T. was a sophomore in 2008–2009. She could not have stayed alone in the United States, and even today she continues to live with them. Li.T. went to college for one year in the Netherlands, and now attends college here. Holidays were spent in a variety of places. Many times Christmas was spent here, as they were able to fly in and out of Washington, D.C., at a cheaper fare.

Canon paid for their living expenses in the Netherlands for so long as he was working for that company. Canon did not offer to purchase them a home in the Netherlands. Their house and their apartment here were never rented or subleased. The house was sold in 2011 at a short sale for less than the amount of the outstanding mortgage. They started renting the apartment in 2010, and stopped paying the mortgage shortly thereafter so the short sale could be accomplished.

The district contended that there were problems with telephone contact, but the district had used a permanent landline which was not used. The other number was L.T.'s American cell phone which was a working number.

The accounting firm KPMG did their Dutch and American taxes. The tax returns would have listed their mailing address as the UPS box, as this was a secure way to receive his mail. They rented the box around the time they rented the apartment in 2009.

He did not return to the United States immediately once his position ended because it would have caused income and medical-insurance coverage to cease; to receive his salary and benefits, he had to remain overseas until the contract ended. So he and L.T. stayed in the Netherlands and traveled to Russia, Helsinki, and Normandy. When he was offered the opportunity to attend the Board hearing in May, he asked if it could be rescheduled closer to his returning in August because he and his wife had made travel plans months before to spend May in St. Petersburg, Russia.

The JCP&L documents showed their energy use. In April 2014 letters of guardianship were filed for A.M.T. in Somerset County Superior Court because A.M.T. continues to reside at Matheny in Somerset County. They prepared a trust for A.M.T. in Hunterdon County, which is where they resided.

L.T. is A.M.T.'s mother. L.T. testified that A.M.T. has disabilities: cerebral palsy, visual impairments, swallowing difficulties, and an anxiety disorder. He cannot walk and is wheelchair bound. He has a specially built wheelchair that weighs eighty to one hundred pounds and does not collapse. It is manual and has to be pushed. He cannot speak but can make sounds. He has a VMAX device which helps him make choices by voice. There is a time lag, and people get tired of waiting for his speech. He cannot read, do math or write. He is not able to toilet himself. He wears diapers and needs two personal care attendants to put him into bed to change him. He needs help bathing and with his personal care. He is non-functional with his hands.

A.M.T. has had other medical problems. He needed surgery to correct crossed eyes. Both his hips were re-built surgically and he has had surgery on his feet. He requires a gastric tube for feeding and hydrating. He had a spinal fusion about a year ago because his scoliosis was affecting his breathing. He takes seizure medications and wears glasses.

When they first moved to Tewksbury in 2001, A.M.T. went to the Sawmill School, then to another school. He could not be included in the classes. He went to the Lakeview School, a day school, in Edison, for one and a half years, but the one-hour commute was difficult for him. Matheny was a place for education, therapy and socialization. At the Matheny School, A.M.T. receives physical therapy, occupational therapy, speech, music, recreation, and social activities. It is a teaching facility with general pediatric care and experts in all fields. It has a wheelchair clinic and splinting clinics. The district never voiced any objection to the Matheny School as his appropriate placement.

A.E.T. received the job offer from Canon in the Netherlands in April 2009. L.T. thought it would be a three- to five-year commitment. This would not be the first time her husband had worked so far from home. L.T. went over in April to explore, and moved there in July 2009. Their other two children were still in high school. Li.T. was a minor so they could not leave her at home. Li.T. and N.T. went for a visit, but N.T. attended high school at VFMA. A.M.T. did not go to the Netherlands. It takes A.M.T. a long time to get situated and to get to know the program. Netherlands has no Disabilities Act. Dutch is the language spoken in the Netherlands, and A.M.T. speaks English. There are only three such schools in the Netherlands, and two of them would not even accept Li.T., who had only an IEP.

In terms of prior assignments, this was the first time she moved to be with her husband, as typically he would go on assignment within the United States and A.E.T. would commute. One time her husband was working in Canada or Puerto Rico, and she stayed behind in Maryland. In 1998 her husband commuted between Montreal and St. Louis. Canon paid for the shipment of some personal belongings to the Netherlands, but they had to place the rest of their belongings in storage here since they downsized from the house to the apartment and not everything fit.

A.M.T.'s case manager, Shirley DiBrango, was L.T.'s contact person at the school. (L.T. still receives school alerts on her cell phone, which is the phone number she provided to the district.) The school was aware of where they were. When they lived in Tewksbury, they visited A.M.T. about three to four times a week. L.T. travelled back and forth from the Netherlands to see him. The case manager took care of A.M.T. with his IEP, etc. She and the case manager emailed and phoned each other; they would have IEP meetings; they were in contact from the time they moved. DiBrango never raised an issue about their residency. L.T. and A.E.T. never tried to hide where they were living. She included all their addresses and phone numbers so the school could reach her in an emergency. She has had a good relationship with the district and Matheny. Matheny knew she was traveling.

Their house had been located in Tewksbury, but their post office box was in Califon. In November 2010 they rented their apartment in Lebanon, which was within the school district, and they advised the district of their new address. Their house was on the market in the fall of 2010 (and sold in May 2011). When they moved to the Netherlands, Li.T. went to school there and rarely traveled to the U.S. The apartment in Lebanon was big enough for them, as N.T. was a senior at VFMA and lived there. He did not stay at the apartment, but would go with his friends. He never came back to live at home, and now lives in San Francisco. He is an interesting, but difficult, child: he was suspended from the district high school; he thrived in a structured environment like VFMA; he likes to call his own shots. So he took off for California.

L.T. was the one who travelled the most between the Netherlands and New Jersey. She reviewed her airline tickets, and confirmed her husband's testimony about the percentage of her time spent in New Jersey each year from 2009 (44 percent, 27 percent, 21 percent, 30 percent, and 30 percent). Her husband could not get home as often as he would have liked.

L.T. said it was hard to be away. She missed her son and saw him as often as she could. She is his advocate.[3] Sometimes A.M.T. is sick. She goes to educate him, to entertain him, to keep him company. The caregivers are not "Mom." He needs appropriate clothing; she likes him to be well-dressed. She looks at his wheelchair to be sure it is not "out of whack." She stayed at the Lebanon apartment whenever she was visiting him. L.T. used their handicapped-equipped van for transportation until January 2012, when it broke down; then she used a rental car or van.

L.T.'s mother and father live in Virginia. They are attached to A.M.T. and visit him, too. She did not remember staying overnight in Virginia, as Virginia was not her home.

On August 27, 2010, L.T. received an email from DiBrango that A.M.T. was eligible for his triennial evaluation. L.T. was willing to waive it and signed the waiver form. She sent it back in August 2010 when she was in the Netherlands. She and her husband always attended the IEP meetings, which they continued to do after they went to the Netherlands. They did one meeting by phone, and one by FaceTime, and twice she was in New Jersey for the meeting.

At some point, the district challenged their residency. A couple of memos said something about terminating the placement. A letter dated April 10, 2013, stated that if there were no proof of residency, then A.M.T.'s enrollment would be terminated. Matheny became concerned when she advised them of the letter that his out-of-district placement might be effected. A.M.T. remained eligible for services from the New Jersey Commission for the Blind, the DDD and Medicaid.

L.T. and A.E.T. could not have made a permanent home in the Netherlands, as A.E.T. was an A-1 visa worker with specific knowledge and she was his spouse. His visa was good for a one- to two-year period and could be renewed; hers was good only for one year and could be renewed only if her husband continued to be employed with his visa. They never formed an intention to live there. They never intended to give up their domicile within the district. They did not immediately return to the United States after her husband's work ended, but he was still getting paid. It was a great opportunity for them to take an extended vacation and to travel within Europe before returning home.

L.T.'s driver's license showed her district address and was not changed to the Netherlands; she voted in elections in New Jersey by absentee ballot in 2010, 2011, and 2012. She and her husband paid their federal and state New Jersey taxes in 2010, 2011, 2012, and 2013 with a district address.

L.T. was aware that there was a registration process at the school. She believed she told the registrar of her contact information, but was sure she had told DiBrango, as she was the person with whom she had the most contact. L.T. wanted to be sure all her contact information was correct and wanted it on the cover of the IEP. DiBrango said to go to the registrar. When she disenrolled Li.T., she spoke with a guidance counselor, not the registrar. The IEP cover sheet had handwritten information provided by her, but some of it was not her handwriting.

The lease renewal was presented effective July 7, 2012, but was not executed until October 1, 2012. At that time the lease was effectively renewed for twenty months and it expired at the end of June 2014.

Mary Patricia Publicover is the director of special services at the North Hunterdon-Voorhees Regional High School District, where she has worked since 1986. From 2004 through October 2012 she was the supervisor of the Special Education Department. She was responsible for running compliance reports, which are required to insure that IEP meetings are held and IEPs finalized. A compliance run was done at the end of November 2012, and in January 2013.

A.M.T.'s IEP came up, as it was due in the middle of January 2013 and was lapsing, and the district's policy was never to have one lapse. She went to the case manager and asked for her to complete it within one week. The case manager said it was not possible because the parents were not in New Jersey. Publicover found out that the mailing address they had given the district was a UPS store and that the house had been sold. She called cell and work numbers and received no response, and the emergency contact number was in Virginia.

Publicover called all the numbers in the database system and received no reply; she left messages that "[j]ust said contact me about a student in North Hunterdon-Voorhees Regional High School." She did not call the home landline more than once. On March 11, 2013, a notice of initial determination on ineligibility was prepared. She spoke with the case manager after the letter was written and asked for the student's file.

The front page of the IEP was where she found the information on the parents; other information was in the case manager's personal file. Publicover called L.T.'s old work number and found out she was no longer working there.

Publicover spoke with DiBrago about residency; she was told the parents rented an apartment in Lebanon and that they communicated by email. Publicover said the officials have to be notified. On or about March 23, 2013, she received a phone call from A.E.T. and they spoke about the ineligibility letter, including domicile and residency. A.E.T. understood and said he would provide information about both and that he was returning at the end of the summer 2013.

A.E.T. had to provide information to be reviewed by the Board, and he and his wife would have the opportunity to appear before the Board. Publicover received email correspondence which indicated that A.E.T. and his wife were gathering information, and then she received a package of information from them. The Board reviewed the information presented and said that enrollment was in question.

Publicover asked for the emails between the parents and the case manager. The email threads showed that L.T. attended some IEP meetings in person, but some were by conducted by phone or Skype. The State requires attendance by phone call or in person. She noted two addresses on the file: one in the United States and one in the Netherlands.

The Board considered the documentation presented at a meeting held on May 14, 2013. The parents were told they could come to the meeting, but they wanted to postpone it to August 2013 after their return to the United States.

Publicover handled this matter, as it came under special education out-of-district students. Publicover agreed that A.M.T. is well served at Matheny; the district inherited that placement and maintained it. This is the second such case she has handled. In the first case, the principal wrote the letters to the parents. Here, the principal had no correspondence with the parents.

Publicover noted that the parents had an address in-district from 2011. She saw the UPS-store address and the apartment-complex address commencing in November 2010 and did not dispute that. Nor did Publicover dispute the lease or its renewal or that the parents had a house or an apartment in the district at all times in dispute. The district did not believe that any of the documents were falsified or that the information was factually incorrect.

Intent is a factor in domicile, but it was not her decision to make. She just presented the information she had to the Board, but without reaching any conclusion as to whether the parents intended to return. There was nothing that she could point to that would indicate that the parents did not intend to return.

The parents did return in 2013 and moved to a different apartment in the same complex with a new lease, because they needed a different unit in order to keep their dog.

The parents needed to demonstrate they were living within the district with leases and utility bills. This was used for the 2013–14 school year and showed movement in the apartment and utility bills. The parents had the house until May 2011, when it was sold. They had started to rent an apartment in 2009, and maintained the lease at least until 2014. Documents for 2013–2014 showed that services were continued to the family.

Publicover did not know at what point the district contended that the parents abandoned their domicile in New Jersey. The district looked at when the two other children left New Jersey, and the district may have considered that as when domicile was abandoned, which may have been November 2009. She thought the family's domicile in New Jersey was sketchy.

After A.E.T.'s assignment ended and he was no longer working, she wondered why they waited to return. She later saw the parents in New Jersey during conferences and meetings and knew they had returned and had moved to a different apartment in the same complex. She saw the letter from Canon and knew that A.E.T. was released from his employment early in 2013, but was paid through August 2013, when his employment officially concluded. A.E.T. had a right to continued housing and benefits during this period, when he and his wife traveled in Europe.

Findings

In order to resolve the inconsistencies, the credibility of the witnesses must be determined. Credibility contemplates an overall assessment of the story of a witness in light of its rationality, internal consistency, and manner in which it "hangs together" with other evidence. Carbo v. United States, 314 F. 2d 718 (9th Cir. 1963). Additionally, the witness' interest in the outcome, motive or bias should be considered.

A trier of fact may reject testimony because it is inherently incredible, or because it is inconsistent with other testimony or with common experience, or because it is overborne by other testimony. Congleton v. Pura- Tex Stone Corp., 53 N.J. Super. 282, 287 (App. Div. 1958).

I accept the testimony of A.E.T. and L.T. as fact, as indeed the district did not contest or dispute the validity of the leases or the physical evidence presented by the parents, or that the parents presented a valid address within the regional high school district. The district did not contend that any of the documents presented by the parents was falsified or that the information was factually incorrect. Rather, the district focused on the intent of the parents to give up their New Jersey domicile when they moved to the Netherlands while A.E.T. was employed there, questioning why a UPS store was used as the mailing address, and the parents' alleged failure to advise the registrar of the address change until 2013. The district was also concerned that there was no response to telephone calls to L.T. and A.E.T., but the calls were placed only once, and the case manager remained in constant contact with L.T. by email.

I FIND that the parents did use a UPS mailing address for safety and convenience to insure that their mail was safely delivered in their absence. I also FIND that L.T. at all times had provided complete information to the district concerning her whereabouts and the best way to contact her. L.T. notified those whom she thought needed to be notified of the change, including the case manager and the guidance counselor, when she removed her daughter from the school. She immediately notified the registrar in 2013 after she was told to do so. Nothing was withheld from the district about the parents' addresses.

I FIND that the business opportunity to work in the Netherlands was temporary and required a special visa for A.E.T. and L.T. which permitted them to reside in the Netherlands, but not to become permanent residents. The parents did not purchase a residence in the Netherlands; rather, their housing expense was paid by Canon as an employment benefit. The parents left their furniture and other personal possessions in New Jersey, and shipped personal items to be used during their stay in the Netherlands. I also FIND that the parents intended to return to New Jersey and the district when A.E.T.'s work position was terminated, as indeed they did. I do not find the termination date of the lease significant, because the lease was executed approximately four months after the renewal date of July 1, 2012, and so was renewed for a twenty-month term, rather than the twenty-four set forth in the preamble.

I also FIND that the Division of Motor Vehicles was advised of both the home address and the mailing address of the parents, and determined to use the mailing address on the drivers' licenses. The parents filed their taxes in New Jersey even though it was optional, and voted in the district. L.T. was frequently in this state and remained in the apartment when she came to visit her son. A.E.T. visited as he was able, given his work responsibilities.

I FIND that the parents owned a home located in Tewksbury (a Califon mailing address) until it was sold in May 2011. In November 2010 they rented a two-bedroom apartment in Lebanon, which also was within the district. I also FIND that this apartment was of sufficient size for the parents and their daughter, who lived with her parents and returned to Lebanon when they did. There was no need for a larger apartment given that the parties' other child lived at a residential high school on a full-time basis and never returned home after he graduated. They moved to a different apartment within the same complex upon their return from the Netherlands in order to accommodate a dog they had acquired.

I also FIND that the decision to travel in Europe for a few months after A.E.T.'s job concluded was not unreasonable given the circumstances, and had been planned months before the domicile issue arose in the spring of 2013.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

The issue in this matter is whether A.M.T. was entitled to be enrolled in the district for purposes of receiving a thorough and efficient public education under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(a), which provides that public schools shall be free to persons over five and under twenty years of age who are "domiciled within the school district." See V.R. ex rel A.R. v. Hamburg Bd. of Educ., 2 N.J.A.R. 283, 287 (1980), aff'd, State Bd., 1981 S.L.D. 1533, rev'd on other grounds sub nom. Rabinowitz v. N.J. State Bd. of Educ., 550 F. Supp. 481 (D.N.J. 1982) (New Jersey requires local domicile, as opposed to mere residence, in order for a student to receive a free education).[4]

A student is domiciled in the school district when he or she is the child of a parent or guardian whose domicile is located within the school district. N.J.A.C. 6A:22-3.1(a)(1). The parent/petitioner has the burden of proving domicile by a preponderance of the evidence. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1(b)(2).

[4] A student may attend school in a district in which he is a non-resident, with or without payment of tuition, at the discretion of the school district. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-3(a); N.J.A.C. 6A:22-2.2.

The domicile of a person is the place where he has his true, fixed, permanent home and principal establishment, and to which whenever he is absent, he has the intention of returning, and from which he has no present intention of moving. In re Unanue, 255 N.J. Super. 362, 374–76 (Law Div. 1991), aff'd, 311 N.J. Super. 589 (App. Div.), certif. denied, 157 N.J. 541 (1998), cert. denied, 526 U.S. 1051, 119 S. Ct. 1357, 143 L. Ed.2d 518 (1999). A person may have many residences but only one domicile. Somerville Bd. of Educ. v. Manville Bd. of Educ., 332 N.J. Super. 6, 12 (App. Div. 2000), aff'd, 167 N.J. 55 (2001).

Where a person has more than one residence, the following factors are useful in determining his domicile: the physical characteristics of each place, the time spent and the things done in each place, the other persons found there, the person's mental attitude towards each place, and whether there is or is not an intention, when absent, to return. Mercadante v. City of Paterson, 111 N.J. Super. 35, 39–40 (Ch. Div. 1970), aff'd, 58 N.J. 112 (1971). "[A] choice of domicile by a person, irrespective of his motive, will be honored by the court, provided there are sufficient objective indicia, by way of proofs, supporting the actual existence of that domicile." In re Unanue, supra, 255 N.J. Super. at 376). "[D]omicile is 'very much a matter of the mind—of intention.' 'Where there are multiple residences . . . domicile is that place which the subject regards as his true and permanent home.'" Ibid. (citations omitted). The acts, statements and conduct of the individual, as viewed in light of all circumstances, determine a person's true intent. Collins v. Yancey, 55 N.J. Super. 514, 521 (Law Div. 1959).

Furthermore, when a man has acquired a domicile in a particular place, that place remains his domicile until he acquires another domicile. In re Unanue, supra, 255 N.J. Super. at 376 (citation omitted). In considering whether a change of domicile has occurred three elements must be considered: whether there had been an actual and physical taking up of an abode in a particular state; whether the subject had an intention to make his home there permanently or at least indefinitely; and whether the subject had an intention to abandon his old domicile. "The court must evaluate all of the facts of the case to determine the place in which there is the necessary concurrence of physical presence and an intention to make that place one's home." Ibid.

"In accordance with this principle [of one domicile] it has been held that one does not relinquish his domicile by having another residence based on reasons of health, society, business or employment." Id. at 375 (emphasis supplied). "New Jersey courts also consistently hold that once established, a domicile continues until superseded by a new domicile. Accordingly, once one party in a domicile contest establishes firmly that the subject was domiciled in a particular location at a particular time, if the adverse party seeks to establish that the subject was ultimately domiciled in some different location, he must demonstrate . . . that the subject did in fact effect a change of domicile." Id. at 377 (citations omitted).

The district relies on Board of Education of Hunterdon Central v. E.F. and G.F., EDU 6053-01, Comm'r Decision (August 4, 2004), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, in support of its position that the parents were not domiciled within the district. In that matter, the petitioners had not sold their Branchburg home, they admitted that the purpose of their Flemington apartment was to have their children finish high school in the district, and they had actually returned to Branchburg after their youngest child graduated. The Commissioner found that the petitioners satisfied the first element set forth in Lyon v. Glaser, supra, 60 N.J. at 264, when they took up residency within Flemington, but failed to satisfy the second two elements, that of demonstrating an intent to make the residence a permanent or at least an indefinite home, or of demonstrating an intent to abandon the old domicile.

That case can be distinguished and in fact supports the conclusion that A.E.T. and L.T. remained domiciled within the district, as not only did A.E.T. and L.T. spend significant time in Lebanon, they had no plans to stay permanently or even indefinitely in the Netherlands, and, moreover, they had already established a domicile within the district and never gave it up. This is unlike the petitioners in E.F. and G.F., who purposely rented an apartment in another school district to establish residency; here, the parents had already established domicile within the district and there was no demonstrable intent to abandon it, or set up a permanent domicile elsewhere.

The district also cites Samuelsson v. N.J. Division of Taxation, 22 N.J. Tax 243 (May 2005), in which the tax court concluded that the Samuelssons had in fact relocated to Florida and had established a domicile there. The Samuelssons had moved all their furniture to Florida; listed their New Jersey home for sale; enrolled their children in Florida schools; closed their New Jersey bank accounts and opened others in Florida; and obtained Florida driver's licenses. The testimony also indicated that the Samuelssons intended to abandon their New Jersey domicile and decided to return to New Jersey only when things did not work out in Florida. This is substantially different from A.E.T. and L.T., who maintained their district domicile even after their home sold, maintained their driver's licenses and their voter registration in New Jersey, and never intended, nor could they intend, to make the Netherlands their new domicile. Their old domicile was never abandoned as it must be to establish a new domicile. The fact that their daughter attended school in the Netherlands does not lead to the conclusion that district domicile was abandoned by her parents. In fact, after the parents returned to New Jersey, Li.T. continued her education at the county college.

In this matter, the district contends that the parents were no longer domiciled within the district and, therefore, A.M.T. was not entitled to a free and appropriate public education paid for by the district. However, the district did not point to any specific date as to when domicile within the district was abandoned. Was it in 2009, when A.E.T. accepted employment in the Netherlands; was it when his wife left New Jersey to join him; was it when their house was sold in 2011; was it when they rented an apartment in 2010 and used a separate box to obtain their mail?

The first issue to be addressed is whether the parents had in fact established a domicile in New Jersey within the district. There is no doubt that they had. They purchased their home in Tewksbury and lived there for many years. The children attended school within the district; the parents paid taxes, voted, and registered their vehicles in Tewksbury. They owned their home until 2011 and never rented it out. Just prior to the sale of the home, the parents rented a two-bedroom apartment in Lebanon which was sufficiently large to accommodate the parents and their daughter.[5] There was no need for a room for A.M.T., as he was not able to live at home, although he would be continued a resident of the household as the child of his parents, and N.T. lived elsewhere.

The parents continued to maintain their driver's licenses and voting registration within the district. For as long as they owned a vehicle, it was registered in New Jersey. Official government correspondence was addressed to them at their address within the district. They paid their taxes with a district address. The fact that they used a UPS store to secure their mail is not significant, as the use of a post office box to receive mail is not an indication that domicile has been abandoned.

The parents acted as if they lived within the district. They continued to pay significant New Jersey taxes. L.T. returned frequently to the apartment and visited her son. The time spent there ranged from 44 percent in 2009 to 30 percent in 2013.[6] The apartment showed utility use; the credit cards and other bills showed ongoing activity within the district.

Most importantly, the intention of the parents to return to the district and New Jersey was obvious. The job in the Netherlands was temporary; indeed, it could only be temporary. It was not an indefinite position either; it was expected to end and did end once the program was completed and A.E.T.'s supervisor retired as planned. A.E.T. and L.T. could not become permanent residents of the Netherlands: they were there on temporary visas issued to A.E.T. for his work and to L.T. as a spouse. Neither one spoke Dutch nor had an intention to remain in that country after the job was finished. And, indeed, once the job was concluded they returned to their apartment, where they remained for another year.

In applying the test set forth in In re Unanue, the parents did have two residences, one within the district and one in the Netherlands. Each place was capable of maintaining the family members who then resided in the household. While more time may have been spent in the Netherlands, nevertheless, L.T. spent a considerable amount of time in New Jersey. Their daughter Li.T. went to school in the Netherlands because she was underage and could not be left alone, unlike her brother N.T., who attended a residential high school in the United States. The mental attitude of both A.E.T. and L.T. was convincing: each thought of their Lebanon residence as home, the place they had left temporarily for business reasons and the place to which they would return. They were quite explicit that they never intended to take up permanent residence elsewhere. And, indeed, they returned to the apartment when A.E.T.'s contract was concluded.

If the parents were not domiciled within the district, then where were they domiciled? No evidence was presented that the parents had taken up another domicile, whether in the Netherlands or elsewhere. The parents could not live permanently in the Netherlands on their temporary work-related visas. While they may have physically resided in the Netherlands, they never formed an intention to remain there permanently or even indefinitely, as they planned to return to New Jersey once A.E.T.'s job was concluded. Indeed they did return. No evidence indicated that A.E.T, and his wife ever intended to abandon their established domicile within the district.

I therefore CONCLUDE that at all times relevant from 2009 to 2014, the parents were domiciled within the North Hunterdon-Voorhees Regional School District. Accordingly, A.M.T. was entitled to receive a free and appropriate education at the Matheny School, paid for by the district.[7] The petition of the district for reimbursement of tuition for A.M.T. at the Matheny School is denied, and the appeal of the parents is granted.

RESPONDENTS.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a school bus transportation provider – challenged the respondent school district's rejection of its low bids for various transportation routes. In rejecting the bids, the respondent district advised the petitioner that, because of multiple violations of prior contracts with the Paterson school district, Mayor Transportation (Mayor) was disqualified from receiving contract awards for the 2014-2015 school year and would not be permitted to bid on school bus routes in the district for a period of three years. Petitioner alleged that the district violated N.J.S.A. 18A:39-11.3(b)(1) by not holding a hearing before the executive county superintendent (ECS) and obtaining a finding of prior "nonperformance" from the ECS before disqualifying Mayor for "prior negative experience." Subsequently, Paterson requested such a hearing with the Passaic County ECS, which hearing was followed by a determination that petitioner had, in fact, "nonperformed," and petitioner was once again notified that it was disqualified from bidding on district contracts. Respondents then moved for dismissal of the case on the grounds that the issues raised in the petition had been mooted by the ESC hearing and subsequent outcome. Petitioner never responded to the respondents' motions for summary disposition.

The ALJ found that because petitioner failed to respond to the motions for summary disposition, it is in default. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the respondents' motions and ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record of this matter, the Commissioner concurred with the findings and conclusions of the ALJ and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter. The petition was dismissed.

V.	:	DECISION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY, PASSAIC COUNTY EXECUTIVE SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, AND COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION,	:
RESPONDENTS.	:

The instant controversy is a challenge by the petitioning transportation vendor to the respondent Paterson school district's (Paterson) rejection of petitioner's bids on several transportation routes. More specifically, petitioner submitted the lowest bid on 41 school bus routes for the 2014-2015 school year, but did not receive the awards for said routes. Instead, respondent advised petitioner, by letter dated August 15, 2014, that because of petitioner's multiple violations of the terms of its prior contracts with Paterson, it would be disqualified from receiving awards for the 2014-2015 school year and would not be permitted to bid on school bus transportation routes in the future – for a period of three years.

Petitioner's appeal to the Commissioner, filed on August 21, 2014, alleged that by disqualifying its bids, Paterson was violating N.J.S.A. 18A:39-11.3(b)(1) – which requires that disqualification for "prior negative experience" must be preceded by 1) a hearing before the executive county school superintendent (ECS), and 2) a finding of prior "nonperformance" by the ECS. Parallel proceedings ensued.

On August 22, 2014, the petition was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing.[1] On the same date, respondent Paterson applied to the Passaic County ECS for a hearing, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:39-11.3(b)(1), concerning the issue of petitioner's alleged prior nonperformance. That hearing was held on August 29, 2014, and was followed by 1) a September 3, 2014 determination by the ECS that petitioner had, in fact, 'nonperformed,' and 2) a September 4, 2014 letter from respondent to petitioner disqualifying it – once again – from bidding on district transportation contracts. After the ECS issued the 'nonperformance' determination, petitioner amended its petition to add the ECS and the Commissioner of Education as respondents.

Both the State respondents (the Commissioner and the ECS) and the Paterson school district moved for dismissal of the case[2] on the grounds that the ultimate issues raised in the petition were moot. More specifically, respondents urged that since the hearing and determination – which petitioner had alleged was required before Paterson could disqualify it from bidding – had taken place, the grounds for the petition were no longer extant. Petitioner never responded to the summary disposition motions.

After the regulatory period for answering a dispositive motion had passed, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) assigned to the case in the OAL found petitioner in default and issued an Initial Decision granting respondents' motions and dismissing the petition. The Commissioner adopts the Initial Decision.

[1] Petitioner applied for injunctive relief, but that application was denied by OAL order dated September 15, 2014. Said order was adopted by the Commissioner on October 29, 2014.

[2] The State respondents filed their motion on October 27, 2014 and the Paterson school district filed its motion on November 6, 2014.

As noted in the Initial Decision, on December 9, 2014, petitioner submitted to the ALJ a "Stipulation of Dismissal Without Prejudice." The ALJ properly rejected the "Stipulation," as there were no signatures or other indicia of respondents' concurrence with same.

Accordingly, respondents' summary disposition motions are granted and the petition is herewith dismissed.

Record Closed: November 26, 2014 Decided: December 9, 2014

BEFORE JAMES A. GERAGHTY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND FACT FINDING

On October 27, 2014 and November 6, 2014, respondents moved to dismiss on grounds of mootness, lack of jurisdiction, and failure to state a claim upon which relief can be granted. The procedural history is as set forth in the New Jersey Department of Education and Interim Executive County Superintendent for Passaic County, Robert Davis's motion. Petitioner is a school bus transportation provider who challenged the Paterson School District's and State District Superintendent's rejection of his low bids for various transportation routes on grounds that he is disqualified due to prior negative experience involving, inter alia, commingling bus routes. After a hearing, the OAL denied his motion for injunctive relief. By order dated October 29, 2014, the Acting Commissioner of Education ordered the denial adopted and stated "this matter shall continue at the OAL with such proceedings as the parties and ALJ deem necessary to bring it to closure." (R-1.)

Under the Uniform Administrative Procedural Rules, a dispositive motion shall be granted if an adverse party does not respond. N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5. The time to respond is twenty days. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.2.

Petitioner failed to timely respond to the motions and is in default. The motion to dismiss is analogous to one for summary decision.

As petitioner has not responded to the dispositive motions as required by the OAL rules, I FIND that he is in default.

CONCLUSION

Based on the foregoing circumstances, I CONCLUDE that the OAL should grant the respondents' motions to dismiss and deny the petition. This day, the petitioner submitted a "Stipulation of Dismissal Without Prejudice." (P-1.) There is no stipulation executed by the parties before the OAL, and the instant dismissal disposes of the matter.

DISPOSITION AND ORDER

Based on the foregoing findings of fact and conclusion of law, I grant the motions and ORDER the petition DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Respondent's motion for reconsideration of the Commissioner's November 10, 2014 decision, and respondent's reply thereto have been fully reviewed. The Commissioner finds that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.15(b)(2)(i), reconsideration is appropriate due to the commission of a "mistake." More specifically, it appears that the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) sent respondent's copy of the Initial Decision to an incorrect email address, and did not provide respondent with a copy of the decision via the postal service. As these circumstances precluded respondent from submitting exceptions to the Initial Decision prior to the issuance of the Commissioner's final decision in this case, a reconsideration of the matter by the Commissioner is warranted.

Accordingly, the Commissioner grants respondent's motion for reconsideration of his November 10, 2014 decision. The Commissioner will consider the exceptions to the

NEW JERSEY STATE INTERSCHOLASTIC ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner appealed the decision of the Eligibility Appeals Committee (EAC) of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) which found that her daughter, K.C., transferred from Mount Saint Dominic Academy (Mount St. Dominic) to West Orange High School for athletic advantage; the resulting ruling made K.C. ineligible to participate in cross-country, winter track and spring track for a one-year period. Petitioner contended that the one-year period of ineligibility should be changed to the customary 30-day ineligibility period because: she did not receive adequate due process from the NJSIAA; the NJSIAA's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable; and the primary reason for K.C.'s transfer was not for athletic advantage, but rather because of family finances and health issues.

The NJSIAA contended that: the petitioner was provided with due process; the decision of the EAC was not arbitrary and capricious as there was overwhelming evidence in the record that K.C. transferred for athletic advantage; the petitioner made written statements on three separate occasions that K.C. was transferring due to her dissatisfaction with the new running coach at Mount St. Dominic; and petitioner's explanation for the transfer provided at the time of the hearing was not credible, whereas statements made by petitioner at the time of the transfer – which were part of the record – best explain K.C.'s decision to leave Mount St. Dominic in favor of West Orange High School. The NJSIAA urged that it did not apply its rules arbitrarily and capriciously to the petitioner, and as such the Commissioner should affirm the decisions of the EAC.

The Commissioner upheld the NJSIAA's decision and dismissed the petition, finding that petitioner did not meet her burden so as to entitle her to prevail on appeal. In so deciding, the Commissioner – who may not substitute his judgment for that of the NJSIAA on appeal – noted that the NJSIAA's decision ruling that K.C. is ineligible to participate in cross-country, winter track and spring track for a one-year period was neither arbitrary nor unreasonable.

M.C., on behalf of minor child, K.C.,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE INTERSCHOLASTIC ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

For Petitioner, Arthur C. Hopkins, Esq.

For Respondent, Steven. P. Goodell, Esq. (Herbert, Van Ness, Cayci & Goodell, P.C.)

This case involves an appeal of a decision of the Eligibility Appeals Committee (EAC) of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) finding that K.C. transferred from Mount Saint Dominic Academy (Mount St. Dominic) to West Orange High School for athletic advantage, and ruling that K.C. is ineligible to participate in cross-country, winter track and spring track for a one-year period.

Athletic competition in New Jersey's public schools is overseen by respondent, NJSIAA – a voluntary, non-profit organization which promulgates the rules and regulations governing high school athletics. See, B.C. v. Cumberland Reg. Sch. Dist., 220 N.J. Super. 214, 234 (App. Div. 1987). Article V, Section 4 (K)(2) of NJSIAA's Bylaws, Rules and Regulations imposes restrictions upon transfer students' eligibility for participation in varsity sports. Generally, when a student-athlete transfers from one school to another without a bona fide change of residence by the student's parent or guardian there is a 30-day period of ineligibility in any sport which the student has previously participated in. Article V, Section 4 (K)(2) (a).

New Jersey high schools have agreed that students should not transfer from one school to another for athletic reasons. Pursuant to Article V, Section 4 (K)(5),

> Any evidence of a transfer for athletic advantage shall subject the athlete to a prompt determination of eligibility by the Eligibility Appeals Committee and may subject the school and the athlete to disciplinary proceedings as set forth in Article X herein. A transfer for athletic advantage is defined as, but not limited to:
>
> a. Seeking a superior athletic team;
> b. Seeking relief due to a conflict with the philosophy or action of an administrator, teacher or coach relating to sports;
> c. Seeking a team consistent with the student's athletic abilities;
> d. Seeking a means to nullify punitive action by the previous school; or > e. Seeking to be coached by the coach at the new school.

Therefore, if it is determined that the athlete transferred to another school for an athletic advantage, the athlete is subject to an extended period of ineligibility beyond 30 days.

On appeal, the petitioner argues that the decision of the NJSIAA imposing a one-year period of ineligibility on K.C. should be reversed and only the customary 30-day period of ineligibility should be imposed. First, petitioner maintains that she did not receive adequate due process from the NJSIAA. The petitioner contends that she experienced a "trial by surprise" at the October 1, 2014 EAC hearing, in that she had no sense of what the hearing was about in advance. Petitioner argues that: she had little knowledge of what documents had been submitted to the EAC; she had no opportunity to gather countervailing documents in advance of the hearing; and she had no opportunity to structure her testimony to address the eligibility criteria established by the bylaws and rules of the NJSIAA. The petitioner also contends that despite the fact that she waived her right to counsel at the hearing, the waiver is meaningless because she did not have adequate advance notice of the nature of the proceedings and the potential consequences of waiving her right to counsel.

The petitioner also argues that the NJSIAA's decision was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. The petitioner claims that five students who ran on the Mount St. Dominic track team transferred to other high schools coincident with the release of their former track coach at Mount St. Dominic, and three of the students who were superior athletes and transferred to superior track programs were allowed to transfer without untoward consequence by the NJSIAA. Yet K.C. – who is not a superior athlete and who transferred to an inferior track program – received the draconian penalty of a one-year period of ineligibility. The petitioner argues that inconsistent decisions reached in comparable circumstances are inherently arbitrary and the essence of capriciousness. Additionally, the petitioner stresses that the primary reason for her transfer was not for athletic advantage, but rather had more to do with family finances and health issues, and it strains credulity to even suggest that the transfer of K.C. – who rarely ever ran in a varsity meet, never scored in a cross-country meet and simply enjoys running – to an inferior track program was for athletic advantage. Therefore, the petitioner requests that the decision of the NJSIAA be reversed and suggests that only the customary 30-day period of ineligibility be imposed.

In reply, the NJSIAA maintains that the petitioner was provided with due process as the EAC issued its final decision after a hearing on notice to the parties and a full right to be heard. NJSIAA's assistant director scheduled the hearing and spoke directly to the petitioner about the hearing procedures and her right to have an attorney available. The petitioner, K.C., and West Orange High School administrators were able to present their arguments at the hearing, and the only documents that were relied upon by the EAC were drafted by the petitioner herself.

The NJSIAA also maintains that the decision of the EAC was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable as there was overwhelming evidence in the record that K.C. transferred for athletic advantage. The NJSIAA points out that on three separate occasions the petitioner made written statements that K.C. was transferring due to her dissatisfaction with the new running coach at Mount St. Dominic. Additionally, the EAC did not find credible the petitioner's explanations for K.C.'s transfer at the time of the hearing. Rather, the statements made by the petitioner at the time of the transfer best explain the decision to leave Mount St. Dominic and transfer to West Orange High School. With respect to the other students who also transferred, the NJSIAA contends that it treated each student fairly and each case was decided on the merits of the individual case, taking into account the strength of the evidence before the EAC and the credibility of the witnesses. Therefore, the NJSIAA argues that it did not apply its rules arbitrarily and capriciously to the petitioner, and as such the Commissioner should affirm the decision of the EAC.

Upon careful review and consideration, the Commissioner determines to uphold the decision of the NJSIAA and dismiss petitioner's appeal. As explained above, the NJSIAA is a voluntary association of public and nonpublic schools, organized pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3 to oversee athletics for its member schools in accordance with a constitution, bylaws, rules and regulations approved by the Commissioner of Education and adopted annually by member schools – for which they become school policy enforceable by the NJSIAA.

It is well-established that the Commissioner's scope of review in matters involving NJSIAA decisions, including determinations made by the Eligibility Appeals Committee, is appellate in nature. N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3; Board of Education of the City of Camden v. NJSIAA, 92 N.J.A.R. 2d (EDU) 182, 188. That is, the Commissioner may not overturn an action by the NJSIAA in applying its rules, absent a demonstration by the petitioner that it applied such rules in a patently arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable manner.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.5(a)(2); B.C. v. Cumberland Regional School District, 220 N.J. Super. 214, 231-232 (App. Div. 1987); Kopera v. West Orange Board of Education, 60 N.J. Super. 288, 297 (App. Div. 1960). Nor may the Commissioner substitute his own judgment for that of the NJSIAA, where due process has been provided and where there is sufficient credible evidence in the record as a whole to serve as a basis for the decision reached by the NJSIAA. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.5(a)(1); Dam Jin Koh and Hong Jun Kim v. NJSIAA, 1987 S.L.D. 259.

Additionally, the New Jersey courts have spoken as to the narrow scope of "arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable" in the context of challenges such as petitioner's:

> In the law, "arbitrary" and "capricious" means having no rational basis.  Arbitrary and capricious action of administrative bodies means willful and unreasoning action, without consideration and in disregard of circumstances. Where there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached. (citations omitted) Bayshore Sew. Co. v. Dep't of Envt. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199-200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974).

Petitioners seeking to overturn decisions of the NJSIAA therefore bear a heavy burden, and – considering the record of this matter in light of the prescribed standard of review – the Commissioner cannot find that petitioner herein has met her burden so as to entitle her to prevail on appeal.

More specifically, the Commissioner cannot find that the NJSIAA applied its rules in a patently arbitrary or unreasonable manner, in light of its duty to ensure fairness and integrity in athletic competition statewide. Additionally, there is no basis in the record to reject the EAC's determinations of witness credibility. It is undisputed that K.C. was dissatisfied with the new running coach at Mount St. Dominic, and there is substantial evidence in the record indicating that K.C.'s decision to transfer to West Orange High School was in fact for athletic advantage – including the Student/Parent Exit Form in which the petitioner stated that the decision to leave Mount St. Dominic was due to "[K.C.]'s goal to run in college. At present Mount does not have that to offer her." Moreover, the circumstances related to other track students who also transferred from Mount Saint Dominic around the same time as K.C. are not before the Commissioner, and there is no evidence in the record indicating that the NJSIAA applied its rules differently to the other student athletes that transferred from Mount St. Dominic.

Accordingly, the Commissioner – having found that petitioner was afforded the due process to which she was entitled, and that the NJSIAA's decision ruling that K.C. is ineligible to participate in cross-country, winter track and spring track for a one-year period was neither arbitrary nor unreasonable – determines to uphold the NJSIAA's decision and hereby dismisses the petition of appeal.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

NATURE OF DISPUTE

In accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et. seq. and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b), on November 7, 2014, the New Milford Board of Education ("Board") filed with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies & Disputes tenure charges against Lawrence Henchey ("Henchey") seeking to dismiss him from employment as a certificated Language Arts teacher based on five (5) Charges:

Charge No. 1 alleges that Henchey has consistently demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in his teaching skills throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years and as a result of the significant negative impact that his poor teaching performance has upon the quality of education that his students receive, Henchey must be dismissed from his position.

Charge No. 2 alleges that Henchey has consistently demonstrated inefficiencies and ineffectiveness in his teaching skills throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years despite intensive and comprehensive assistance that has been continuously offered to him by the District Administration and his colleagues, and through multiple corrective action plans designed to address and improve his teaching deficiencies, which demonstrates either an inability or an unwillingness to improve, and which inability or unwillingness to improve constitutes inefficiency warranting dismissal from his position.

Charge No. 3 alleges that as a result of Henchey's consistent failure to, among other things, implement District initiatives; implement a more interactive method of instruction; integrate core content in lesson plans and classroom instructional practices;

use effective teaching strategies; implement consistent grading practices; and meet the professional expectancies set forth in the New Jersey Professional Standards for Teachers, Board Policies and his job description, Henchey's increments were withheld by the Board for the 2013-2014 and 2014-2015 school years, and which ongoing inefficiencies and ineffectiveness warrant dismissal from his position.

Charge No. 4 alleges that in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to demonstrate effective and efficient teaching performance during the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, Henchey has failed, since 2002, to remediate certain deficiencies and demonstrate improvement in areas of specific concern, including but not limited to, the use of varied instructional techniques/student-centered activities and the provision of adequate lesson closure, and which inability or unwillingness to improve, and the resulting impact on the education received by his students, constitutes inefficiency warranting dismissal.

Charge No. 5 alleges that, in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to implement effective and efficient teaching strategies, and in addition to his unwillingness or inability to improve upon the same, Henchey has also demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years which has included a lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him, and which unprofessionalism constitutes incapacity and conduct warranting dismissal.

On November 21, 2014, within the applicable 15-day timeline (N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)), Henchey filed with the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies & Disputes, an Answer and Affirmative Defenses to the Tenure Charges. However, Henchey did not file a Motion to Dismiss in lieu of an Answer within the same applicable 15-day timeline. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3(a)1.

On December 1, 2014, Kathleen Duncan, Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes notified the parties' respective representatives (1) that the Tenure Charges have been reviewed and deemed sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary and (2) that the dispute was referred to the undersigned Arbitrator for resolution in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. On December 8, 2014, during a telephone conference, Counsel for Mr. Henchey notified Board Counsel and the undersigned of his intent to file a "Motion to Dismiss" the tenure charges. Ground rules governing the motion and hearing dates were discussed and set. The undersigned memorialized the results of the telephone conference in writing on the same day:

> In addition, Mr. Pincus has notified Mr. LaPira and I of his intent to file a motion to dismiss the certified tenure charges. Since an Answer has been filed, I regard the motion as one for summary judgment and I agree, in an exercise of discretion only, to decide that portion of the motion that is not subject to a genuine dispute of material fact. The motion schedule is as follows: December 10 (motion papers due via email and in MS Word format); December 19 (opposition papers due via email and in MS Word format); and December 26, 2014 (reply papers, if any, due via email and in MS Word format). The motion will be decided in advance of the first day of hearing. I have set down five days of hearing as follows: January 8, 12, 13, 14 & 15, 2015. All hearing days shall begin at 9:30 a.m. and conclude by 5:00 p.m. The hearing will be held at the administrative offices of the New Milford Board of Education. Testimony should be very limited with respect to past incidents, events, etc. that are a matter of record and that were not contemporaneously contested. Finally, the hearing will be governed by the Labor Arbitration Rules of the American Arbitration Association pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.1c.

On January 3, 2015, I granted Mr. Henchey's Motion for Summary Decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 of the November 7, 2014 Tenure Charges. I denied the motion with respect to Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19. On Sunday, January 4, 2015, the Board filed a letter brief/motion for reconsideration. The Board took issue with that portion of my Summary Decision holding that the Board failed to comply with the mandatory evaluation procedures of TEACH NJ for the 2013-14 school year because it did not conduct a mid-year evaluation of Mr. Henchey. On January 5, 2015, Mr. Henchey filed a letter in opposition to the Board's request for reconsideration.

On January 6, 2015, on reconsideration, I reaffirmed my grant of Summary Decision with respect to Charges Nos. 1-4 regarding the 2013-14 school year based on the first of two alternative rationales, i.e., the inapplicability of Section 8 to interfere with the first two operative years of Section 25 (2013-14 and 2014-15). Implicitly, I did acknowledge the accuracy of the Board's objection to the second rationale, i.e., the Board's failure to conduct a mid-year evaluation during the first operative year of TEACH NJ (2013-14).[1] In setting the stage for the hearing process to follow, I reiterated the following Case Management Order (originally set forth at the conclusion of my Summary Decision and Order) to the parties:

Case Management Order

1. The hearing is now limited to the following issue: Did the Board have just cause to dismiss Lawrence Henchey from his teaching position based on his alleged continued incapacity and related conduct unbecoming as specifically set forth by Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19?;

[1] In so concluding, I commented that, unless this matter is remanded, I need not address Mr. Henchey's additional point that the Board failed to comply with other aspects of TEACHNJ, e.g., failure to demonstrate that it timely secured the approval of the McREL rubric by the Commissioner of Education and, thus, could not rely on the 2013-14 evaluation, even if the lack of a mid-year evaluation in 2013-14 was appropriate.

2. All documents relevant to the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming (including rebuttal letters, if any) prior to the 2013-2014 school year shall be admitted without testimony;

3. The parties may simply refer to the Statement of Evidence identifying markers without the need to separately introduce the same documents as exhibits; documents obtained in discovery that are not contained in the Statement of Evidence must be introduced in exhibit format; and

4. Testimony shall be limited to the events of the 2013-14 school year, although the "decision-maker" may testify in summary fashion as to how, if at all, he or she factored in Henchey's overall work record (as reflected in the Statement of Evidence) in connection with the charges of incapacity and conduct unbecoming and the recommendation for dismissal. Mr. Henchey, of course, may refer to those portions of his prior work record that he deems supportive of his continued employment in the District.

I further elaborated upon CM Order #4, above, as follows:

"As to the distinction between inefficiency and incapacity, the latter offenses involve, among other things, a teacher's chronic failure to meet professional expectations, and unprofessional and hostile reactions to supervision by district personnel. See, IMO School District of the Borough of Butler, Morris County, 2010 WL 5624390; Board of Education of the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills v. Greg Molinaro, 96 N.J.A.R. (EDU) 268, 1995 WL 863033 (1995); Bd. of Ed. Lawrence Twp. v. Lester Helmus, 2 N.J.A.R. 334 (1980). The Board may introduce any and all evidence originating during the 2013-14 school year in support of Charge No. 5, pars. 12-19 to prove Henchey's alleged incapacity and conduct unbecoming. Such evidence may include evidence of the assistance and/or constructive criticism provided to (or reiterated to) Mr. Henchey during the 2013-14 school year, no matter what the form – not to demonstrate inefficiency – but to serve as a predicate for the allegation that Henchey's incapacity and conduct unbecoming continued as demonstrated by the manner of his responses, or lack thereof, to such assistance and/or constructive criticisms" (Summary Decision on Reconsideration, dated January 6, 2015, page 5).

On January 12, 13, 14 and 15, 2015, the parties appeared before me for a hearing at the administrative offices of the Borough of New Milford Board of Education. Both parties had a full and fair opportunity to introduce witness testimony and documentary evidence. Whitney Perro, Principal, David E. Owens Middle School, Timothy Coughlin, Vice Principal, David E. Owens Middle School, Antonio Giovinazzo, ScIP officer/teacher, David E. Owens Middle School, Danielle Shanley, ELA Director of Curriculum (K-8), and Michael A. Polizzi, Superintendent of Schools testified on behalf of the Board. Testifying for Mr. Henchey were David Wilson, teacher and NMEA President, Harris Hirsch, NJEA/UniServ representative, and Lawrence Henchey. The Board introduced sixty-eight (68) exhibits. Mr. Henchey introduced sixty (60) exhibits.[2] Post-hearing briefs were received from Mr. Henchey's Counsel on February 6, 2015 and from Board Counsel on February 13, 2015, whereupon I closed the record. At all times, both parties were expertly represented by skilled legal counsel.

THE POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

Summary of Position (Board)

Respondent Lawrence Henchey has, for several years, been incapable of satisfying the professional expectations and responsibilities that the New Milford Board of Education has for all of its teaching staff members. He was placed on a corrective action plan for the 2012-13 school year to address deficiencies observed in the prior year. He not only failed to address them – his performance declined. As a result, the Board withheld his salary increments for the 2013-14 school year – which he did not contest – and placed him on another corrective action plan, which included many of the same items, as well as a new item to address his increasing tardiness to school.

[2] The Exhibit Lists of both parties are set forth in the Appendix to this Opinion and Award.

Again, instead of responding with improvement, Henchey's behavior and performance continued to deteriorate, and the District's witnesses credibly testified that he demonstrated a consistent failure to adhere to the administration's directives during that year: He failed to consistently input his grades into the District's student information system, give students timely feedback, or provide meaningful assignments reflected in his grading distribution, as the administration continually directed him. He failed to implement District initiatives, such as Study Island and Writers' Workshop, despite the administration's repeated directives. He failed to address concerns raised by his evaluators in his observations and the directives they gave him regarding his instructional practices. These were major concerns that directly impact the students that he was teaching, and the administration clearly articulated its concerns to him. But those were not the only problems that he had. He failed to take advantage of the help offered to him by the District. He failed to timely comply with a multitude of other administrative directives, arrived at meetings late, and missed meetings. He even failed to come to work on time, coming in late to school for more than 70 out of 180 school days. His unprofessionalism and inability to meet even simple demands, let alone major ones, demonstrate his unfitness to be a teaching staff member.

These issues alone were significant and demonstrate a repeated failure to follow administrative directives that compromised the instructional program. And then, in April 2014, he publicly embarrassed a student in front of her class. Amazingly, he failed to see the problem with his behavior at the time. Nine months later, he continued to show no remorse or recognition of the impropriety with his actions.

There is no real question that Respondent is guilty of both incapacity and unbecoming conduct. The record is replete with evidence of his failures, many of which he refused to acknowledge. The District's witnesses testified credibly as to these repeated failures, as did one of Henchey's own witnesses. Although Henchey testified on his own behalf, his testimony was not credible when asked about his performance and conduct: he was argumentative, evasive, and dismissive. He, frankly, refused to admit to any deficiencies in his performance, and that is critical, because there is no reason to believe, based upon both the overwhelming evidence, and Henchey's own testimony, that any further action on the Board's part will do anything to improve his performance. Indeed, Henchey demonstrated that even after the Board took major disciplinary action against him, he was incapable of and unwilling to change. As such, there is only one result that is appropriate here: dismissal from his tenured teaching position.

Summary of Position (Henchey)

This four day arbitration follows the grant of a partial summary judgment motion dismissing Tenure Charges 1-4 in their entirety, and Charge 5 ¶¶ 1-11. A Case Management Order was thereafter entered by the Arbitrator, which Order is more particularly set forth on Pages 40 and 41 of the January 3, 2015 Summary Decision. On January 6, 2015, the remaining issues were clarified by the Arbitrator in a Decision that denied the Petitioner Board's Motion for Reconsideration.

The Respondent, Lawrence Henchey, respectfully asserts the following arguments in this post-hearing brief:

1. The charges must be dismissed as the factual assertions set forth in Charge 5 ¶¶ 12-19 were devoid of competent proof.

2. The charges must be dismissed as the Board failed to prove incapacity or conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member.

3. The charges must be dismissed inasmuch as the evidence adduced at best demonstrated alleged inefficiencies on Henchey' s part rather than incapacity or conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member.

4. The remaining charges must be dismissed as they are barred by double jeopardy and/or the concept of double punishment.

5. The charges must be dismissed as the Districts' actions were arbitrary and capricious.

6. The charges must be dismissed as they were based on mistakes of fact improvidently relied upon by the District administration.

7. The charges must be dismissed as they were based on a course of harassment visited upon Henchey by the District administration, rather than a good faith determination to help him.

8. For a remedy, Henchey must be reinstated to his tenured teaching position, together with back pay, seniority and all other emoluments and benefits of employment withheld from him during the course of his suspension.

FINDINGS

Background Leading Up To The 2013-2014 School Year

By way of introduction, and borrowing from the District's website, the "Junior Academy at David E. Owens Middle School" is dedicated to providing high quality educational opportunities for 500 students in grades 6 through 8. The professional staff is comprised of highly qualified teachers and administrators who provide an excellent academic program wherein students are able to reach their maximum potential in accordance with their specific individual needs, abilities, and talents. The curriculum, with an honors program in 8th Grade Language Arts Literacy, Social Studies, Science, and Mathematics, is designed to be comprehensive and varied to provide for individual learning opportunities and learning styles. Curricula offerings include Connected Math, a new, standards-based math initiative in the 6th and 7th grades, and Writer's Workshop in all three grade levels. The middle school is a "focus" school, as characterized by a significant gap in achievement between its highest and lowest student performers.[3]

Lawrence Henchey ("Henchey") has been employed by the Borough of New Milford Board of Education since 2002. He is a member of the New Milford Education Association. After one year teaching at the District high school, Henchey transferred to the David E. Owens Middle School where he has taught 8th grade Language Arts ever since. Henchey holds a teacher's certification in English, K-12.[4] In the 2008-2009 school year, Whitney Perro first served as Principal of the Middle School. Subsequently,

[3] As such, the DOE entrusts a Regional Achievement Center with monitoring and oversight responsibilities.
[4] Prior to becoming a teacher, Henchey worked as an electronic and print journalist for twenty years.

Danielle Shanley became the Director of Curriculum for the English Language Arts program (K-8). In each school year, commencing 2002-2003 until 2010-2011, Henchey received satisfactory performance evaluations and salary and adjustment increments. As late as December of 2011, Principal Perro rated Henchey as an effective teacher and deemed his performance acceptable for the 2011-2012 school year (Exhibits P38 and P39). Having said this, however, Ms. Perro placed Henchey on a Corrective Action Plan ("CAP") during the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years (Exhibits P40 and 46).[5]

At the conclusion of the 2012-2013 school year, the Board voted to withhold Henchey's salary increment for the 2013-2014 school year. It did so for, among other reasons, Henchey's failure to meet the terms of his CAP, more specifically:

- Failure to implement District initiatives, including Writer's Workshop and the Spivey Writing Method, in accordance with our May 2012 Action Plan for Professional Improvement ("Action Plan");
- Failure to implement a more interactive method of classroom instruction in accordance with your Action Plan, resulting in pupil disengagement;
- Failure to display coursework of current students in accordance with your Action Plan;
- Failure to use a cohesive system of thematic instruction in accordance with your Action Plan;
- Failure to use multiple means of student assessment in accordance with your Action Plan;
- Inconsistent grading practices in accordance with your Action Plan;
- Incongruous student feedback practices; and [5] But for Henchey's dismissal, he would have continued to serve under a CAP during the 2014-2015 school year (Exhibit P54). N.J.A.C. 6A:10–2.5 comprehensively describes the respective rights and obligations of an affected teacher and administrator/supervisor with respect to a CAP.

- Inappropriate comments in the presence of students in your classroom.

In addition to these performance-based reasons, which, standing alone, justify the decision to withhold your increments, our records further reflect that you have been tardy forty-one times during the current school year. This figure represents more than twenty percent of the teacher work year (Exhibit P56h).

The 2013-2014 School Year

Henchey's 2013-2014 CAP

In the 2013-2014 school year, Henchey's CAP reflected a continuation of his 2012-2013 CAP. Henchey's 2013-2014 CAP included the following nine points:

1. Implementation of an inquiry-based approach to instruction.
    - Weekly lesson plans documenting effective and authentic thematic units.
    - Lesson Plans will include collaborative group work and reflect authentic and planned student activities and not teacher-directed activities.
2. Implementation of District initiatives.
    - Including but not limited to effectively implementing Writer's Workshop and Spivey Method in a timely and consistent basis.
    - Facilitation and effective assessment of grade level national common core standards in ELA.
3. Assignment of Homework.
    - Homework assignments will be meaningful which correlate to the unit lesson and involve Higher Thinking Skills.
    - Homework assignments will reflect Board-adopted policy.
4. Classroom Instruction.
    - Increase movement and visibility in classroom.

- This includes limiting time sitting at computer when students are present.

- Circulate to allow increased interaction with student, clarification of directions and monitor student progress.

- Develop effective student-centered lessons with high levels of student engagements.

- Avoid long periods of direct instruction, writing or reading tasks.

- Provide daily evidence of active learning.

5. Classroom Environment.

   - Increased presence of current student work displayed around the classroom that is content appropriate and reflects best work or exemplars of the students.

   - The mural at the front of the room must be completed; this has been unfinished for two years.

   - Classroom themes will be changed at a minimum of quarterly.

   - The bulletin board outside the classroom must have background paper and a board including current student work.

6. Independent Reading.

   - Independent reading will be no more than ten (10) minutes.

   - Classroom library must be organized and records maintained for circulation.

   - Teacher must daily model reading independently while the students are reading.

7. Tardiness to school.

   - Mr. Henchey will report to work sign-in at the designated place at 8:00 a.m. each and every teaching day.

8. Discipline Referrals.

- Mr. Henchey will develop and display five classroom expectations by September 11, 2013.
- Expectations will be clear and be enforced consistently throughout the school year.
- Mr. Henchey will be provided with the resource Discipline with Dignity and will apply strategies from chapters 2, 3, 5, 6, 8 and 9.

9. Grading.

- Grades will be entered into PowerSchool no more than two weeks beyond the assignment date.
- Assignments will be graded in a timely manner (within one week) and returned to students with feedback for improvement.
- A variety of assignments will be given including authentic assessments.
- A true curve of grades will be represented.

Assistance Provided to Mr. Henchey

During the 2013-2014 school year, Antonio Giovinazzo ("Giovinazzo"), the District's Teacher of the year in 2013-14, served as the ScIP officer for the Middle School, through which he was expected to assist struggling tenured and non-tenured teachers to improve. Specifically, Giovinazzo would meet with the administration on a monthly basis so it could advise him of teachers needing assistance. In response, Giovinazzo would contact the teacher, introduce himself and offer his assistance. At the start of the 2013-2014 school year, the administration brought Henchey's performance issues to Giovinazzo's attention and requested that Giovinazzo provide him with assistance. Giovinazzo assisted Henchey to, among other things, upload his McREL artifacts, complete his McREL logs and input his grades in a timely fashion.

Giovinazzo's involvement with Henchey extended from September 2013 through February 2014. Henchey was receptive to this assistance.

However, Giovinazzo testified that "towards that period [February] I had checked up on him once and he was kind of curt or short with me, and I felt that he was frustrated, maybe overwhelmed, so I thought, my interpretation was maybe I should back off a little" (2T 160:21-25; 161:1-6). When asked to clarify whether Giovinazzo believed Henchey had a problem with him specifically, Giovinazzo summarized as follows:

> It was an internal feeling that he was just frustrated, you know, and maybe, maybe he was getting it from too many people, like everyone trying to help him and maybe he was overwhelmed you know, and so I was just, like, you, let me just back off a little, and if he needs me he knows where to find me, and he knows that I will always be available for him if he needs me. [2T 175:7-16 (emphasis added)].

In addition, for Henchey's benefit, the administration scheduled two non-evaluative training sessions with Meredith Alvaro, a Reading and Writing Workshop coach hired by the District to provide professional development to all staff members. Since Henchey had expressed an interest in working with Alvaro, the District hoped the training sessions would improve Henchey's teaching performance. Henchey attended one of the sessions. Principal Perro was able to verify that Alvaro actually modeled the entire lesson for Henchey. Principal Perro did not have first-hand knowledge as to whether Henchey was able to execute the lesson. Because Ms. Alvaro did not testify on such a pertinent topic in this type of proceeding, while admitting the testimony, ultimately, I do not accord significant weight to Principal Perro's hearsay statement that Ms. Alvaro told her that Henchey was unable to model her suggested lesson format. On the contrary, Mr. Henchey's testimony and supported documentation (Exhibits R17A and B) show that he did "synthesize" Ms. Alvaro's techniques into a lesson entitled, "How to Write ASK Argumentative/Persuasive Essay – (Incorporating M. Alvaro techniques from Observation)".

Lastly, Principal Perro and Henchey, at Henchey's suggestion, agreed to meet weekly (subject to scheduling) to review Henchey's lesson plans and discuss his efforts to comply with the 2013-2014 CAP. The meetings were voluntary and non-disciplinary in nature (with the exception of April 1, 2014, discussed, infra). Exhibit P59 (a-n) set forth copies of Principal Perro's weekly meeting notes for three (3) meetings during the months of September, October, and November and one in December of 2013; and for one meeting on January 15, 2014, one on April 8, 2014 (after Principal Perro recommended tenure charges) and one last entry for May 14, 2014. Principal Perro authored various memoranda relating back to weekly meetings on February 10, 2014 (P57e), February 26, 2014 (P57f), March 6, 2014 (P57g), March 13, 2014 (P57h), and April 1, 2014 (P57i). Mr. Henchey introduced a copy of his weekly meeting notes as Exhibits R13 (A-M). In addition to the meetings mentioned above, Mr. Henchey documented a meeting on January 29, 2014 (13L) and February 14, 2014 (13M).

Henchey's 2013-2014 Observations and Evaluations

On October 4, 2013 (9:45 a.m. to 10:45 a.m.), Principal Perro conducted the first of Henchey's 2013-2014 performance evaluations. Perro contacted Henchey on September 11, 2013 to schedule a preconference meeting, and directed him to contact her secretary, Mrs. Moat, to set up the meeting by September 20, 2013 (Exhibit P60, p.16).

Ms. Perro then emailed Henchey on September 20, 2013 and advised him that because he failed to schedule the meeting, she set down the preconference meeting for September 26, 2013 (Exhibit P60, p.17). At the meeting, Perro reviewed Henchey's proposed lesson plan and discussed the planned observation with him.

The October 4, 2013 observation was introduced in evidence as Exhibit P48. In relation to Henchey's 2013-2014 CAP and the District's Independent Reading Initiative. Principal Perro did not see Mr. Henchey modeling the ten (10) minutes of reading. Principal Perro also expressed a concern over the pacing of the class. A concern was also noted in the observation that Mr. Henchey was not sufficiently providing a French-speaking ELL student with differentiated learning. In his post-observation conference with Vice Principal Coughlin and Danielle Shanley, Henchey explained that he paired the student with another student who is fluent in French. Ms. Shanley (who was not a co-observer) suggested that Mr. Henchey reach out to Ms. Vacarro to assist him locate materials – referred to by her as "high interest-low readability" texts. She also suggested that the student would benefit from more images or web-based translations until she mastered the foundations for reading English. Perro added under Standard 4, "Teachers Facilitate Learning for their Students" that all students were not engaged in the lesson, that Henchey was talking too much to one student at a time, that his pace was too fast, that he should slow down, stop and confer with a student, that he did not collect exit slips to measure student understanding of the lesson, etc. Perro offered Mr. Henchey additional coaching with Ms. Alvaro, the District's writing/reading trainer.

On November 20, 2013, Vice Principal Coughlin observed Mr. Henchey from 10:15 a.m. to 10:45 a.m. (Exhibit P49). As to pacing, Coughlin writes: "The pacing of the portion of the lesson that was observed was on target. Mr. Henchey took the time to delve into the writer's notebook responses and allowed for a deep discussion and interaction with the students. He set a clear goal for the lesson, which was that all of the information discussed from the various students responses in their writer's notebooks would be used to develop argumentative essays, and the students were able to relate to this objective." Coughlin offered constructive criticism as well: "Mr. Henchey should focus on the use of data to understand the skills and abilities of his students, as well as the notion of how to identify if all of the students demonstrate the ability to understand the topic." Consistent with Perro's observations of October 4, 2013, Coughlin commented that there was no evidence of differentiation for the ELL (French-speaking) student and that only 8-16 students actively participated in the lesson. Coughlin commented: "She could have been provided with modifications since she is a port of entry student." Lastly, Coughlin commented: "Mr. Henchey actively participates in professional development aligned with his professional goal, and considers and uses a variety of research based approaches to improve teaching and learning. He also recognizes the need to improve student learning in the classroom. Mr. Henchey is encouraged to continue implementing district initiatives with integrity and the full intent of the programs."

On February 7, 2014, Danielle Shanley, Director of Curriculum observed Henchey's class for Principal Perro. Ms. Shanley's name is not listed on the District's Observation/Evaluation Schedule as an evaluator of any tenured teacher (Exhibit R23) and, yet she was substantially involved with Henchey's October 4, 2013 post-observation conference, Henchey's February 7, 2014 Observation and Henchey's February 20, 2014 post-observation conference. On the day of the observation, Henchey was preparing his students in their first attempt at writing an Explanatory Prompt Essay for the NJ ASK (believed to have been conducted in May of 2014). Based on her superior ELA skill sets and knowledge of the test (no longer administered due to the PARCC Assessment), Ms. Shanley offered comprehensive suggestions in both contemporaneous email communications with Henchey (Exhibit R24A) and within the text of the formal observation completed on February 20, 2014 (Exhibit P50) to improve upon his existing "Bull's eye" template. She did not direct him to discontinue using the template.

As to the items of observation that concerned Perro and Coughlin, Ms. Shanley observed too much teacher-directed conversation and a failure to model (IRB); instead, Mr. Henchey was setting up the Hovercam to display an explanatory writing prompt. Ms. Shanley encouraged Mr. Henchey to "travel the room to ensure participation and monitor their progress..." Ms. Shanley writes that there was no written feedback. Some students read, some spoke and essentially no students wrote today. In the positive, Ms. Shanley commented: "Mr. Henchey has established a warm classroom environment and treats students with respect. He encouraged them many times during this lesson, reminding them that the goals for this writing task are attainable and that he is sure they can do this... He highlighted the achievements of the 3 students whose work was reviewed by the class, and he provides constructive feedback for improvements." Ms. Shanley was aware that an ELL student was in the class but stated that she was unaware of any modifications, except that Mr. Henchey pointed her out and told Ms. Shanley that "she is progressing nicely."

On March 5, 2014, following a post-observation conference, Mr. Henchey authored a letter of rebuttal as his right to do so (Exhibit P51). He noted that Perro allows teachers to upload artifacts to McREL in advance of the post-observation conference. In turn, the artifacts could be considered by the evaluator in order to, for example, move a checkmark from the "developing" to the "proficient" column (a higher rating). Under Principal Perro's approach, the artifacts did not have to be precisely tailored to the lesson observed. However, Ms. Shanley advised Mr. Henchey that she was only interested in artifacts related to the lesson she observed on February 7, 2014 (i.e., NJ ASK preparation). Since the lesson observed was only the second NJ ASK lesson taught by Mr. Henchey, there were no artifacts to upload in the narrow vein set by Ms. Shanley. Although Perro had agreed to meet with Mr. Henchey to review his concerns, according to Henchey's letter of rebuttal, she cancelled the meeting and ultimately refused to acknowledge the artifacts.

The second concern expressed by Mr. Henchey in his letter of rebuttal is that Ms. Shanley did not give Mr. Henchey any credit for complying with her suggested improvements from the date of observation to the date of the post-observation conference (See, e.g., Exhibit R25C).

On or about April 30, 2014 the Principal Perro completed Henchey's summative evaluation (Exhibit P52). The Summative Evaluation incorporates formal observations by Principal Perro on October 4, 2013 (Exhibit P48); by Vice Principal Coughlin on November 20, 2013 (Exhibit P49); and by Director of Curriculum, Danielle Shanley on February 7, 2014 (Exhibit P50).

On June 9, 2014, Henchey signed off on his Professional Evaluation. Henchey scored 1.9 out of 4.0 which left him with a "Partially Effective" rating under TEACH NJ and ACHIEVE NJ and in the "Developing" category under the McREL rubric adopted by the Board, with the approval of the Commissioner of Education. A score in the range of 1.0-1.85 is deemed "Ineffective" under ACHIEVE NJ and "Developing" under McREL. A score of 2.65 is required to be considered "Effective" under ACHIEVE NJ and "Proficient" under McREL.

The Board's Withholding of Henchey's 2014-2015 Salary Increment

June 5, 2014 Letter from Superintendent Polizzi (Exhibit P57p)

The purpose of this letter is to inform you that on June 9, 2014, at 7:00pm in the New Milford High School Media Center, I will recommend to the New Milford Board of Education (the "Board") that your employment and adjustment increments be withheld for the 2014-2015 school year. I am recommending this action based on your persistent refusal to provide effective instruction to the students in your classes as evidenced by the formal observations which were conducted during the 2013-2014 school year by multiple evaluators as well as the informal observations and walkthroughs.

Your teaching skills and professional performance in all five standards that were assessed are overwhelmingly in the "developing" domain and only secondarily in the "proficient" domain. Not one standard reflects any teaching skill or professional practice in either the "accomplished" or the "distinguished" domain, despite the history of ongoing assistance that you have received by the New Milford School District (the "District") administration. Simply stated, your teaching performance does not meet the professional expectations of a teacher in the District.

Specifically, my recommendation that the Board withhold your employment and adjustment increments for the 2014-2015 school year is based upon your:

1. Failure to plan, pace and organize appropriately for instruction;

2. Lack of effective teaching strategies, such as scaffolding opportunities to demonstrate student learning; modeled, shared and independent practice; use of "Do Now" activities; and posting and referencing the daily agenda as well as objectives and essential questions;

3. Inability to engage all of the students in your class instead of just several students;

4. Failure to motivate and inspire students by using teachable moments effectively;

5. Failure to use classroom assessment data to guide program planning;

6. Failure to make necessary changes to instructional practice for the improvement of student learning;

7. Failure to integrate core content and 21st century content in lesson plans and classroom instructional practices;

8. Failure to apply and implement knowledge and skills attained from professional development activities;

9. Failure to consistently and effectively maintain a positive, productive, and nurturing leaning environment for all students;

10. Lack of consistent and effective differentiation for students of varying skill levels;

11. Lack of student engagement with higher levels of thinking and the integration of technology;

12. Emphasis on teacher directed discussion rather than student participation and teamwork;

13. Failure to consistently and effectively incorporate writing within the students' instructional regimen;

14. Failure to utilize research based approaches to improve teaching and learning; and

15. Consistent refusal to seek out and employ techniques and strategies for the improvement of instruction.

The Decision to File Tenure Charges

On April 3, 2014, Principal Perro recommended to Superintendent Polizzi the filing of tenure charges against Mr. Henchey (Exhibit P57j). Superintendent Polizzi rejected Perro's April 3, 2014 recommendation. In a follow-up document authored on either June 10 or 11, 2014, Perro shared with Superintendent Polizzi her statement to be presented to the Board in connection with the intended increment withholding action. It is clear from a reading of the summary that Principal Perro was not persuaded by Superintendent Polizzi's rejection of her request that tenure charges be filed against Henchey.

Principal Perro summarized what she considered to be Henchey's failure to comply with his CAP, i.e., failure to grade assignments on a true curve or enter grades with any consistency, failure to timely update his grade book, failure to implement district initiatives, failure to assign Study Island, failure to move about his classroom and engage students, failure to bring his Writer's notebooks to a weekly meeting on November 6, 2013, failure to display student work, tardiness to school (70 times), removal from his class on two separate occasions, failure to call in for substitute coverage or leave lesson plans in connection with a personal day granted on April 2, 2014 (and taken on April 14, 2014), failure to timely attend mandatory PARCC training on February 12, 2014, failure to achieve an effective rating on his ACHIEVE NJ evaluation, and failures to improve despite being present for workshops, having individual assistance from the ELA coach, being paired with a strong ELA peer, etc. Perro concludes her presentation: "If under the AchieveNJ system the hardest message we can send is to withhold an increment I truly worry which 70 students will be assigned to his class next year. And what will happen if he begins to further fall apart if that first observation is poor."

Since no determination had been made to file tenure charges against Mr. Henchey, Henchey was advised by Perro on June 9, 2014 that his Professional Development Plan (Exhibit P45) had been completed for the current year and renewal was being recommended with an increment withholding (Exhibit P53). Additionally, a CAP for 2014-2015 had been prepared on May 7, 2014 and given to Henchey on May 29, 2014 (Exhibit P54). Henchey was separately provided with a letter of intent to renew his contract on May 13, 2014 (Exhibit R50).

It is clear from this record that until such time after June 23, 2014, Superintendent Polizzi was amenable to allowing Henchey the opportunity to complete the second year of the TEACH NJ evaluation framework. However, according to Superintendent Polizzi, he reflected on certain concerns over the summer, such as, ten blank pages in the students Writer's Workshop notebooks, concluding that Henchey's intention to have the students go back and fill in the blank pages "seemed like a deliberate attempt at deceit, a kind of cover-up" (3T 29:9-10).[6] Polizzi's change of position was also influenced by further reflection on Henchey's own misperceptions of his actions:

> The perception of his own attendance, 70 days late, and interpreting that as three or four. That's problematic. The perception that his students are doing well and have improved. And in looking at the data and doing the analysis and doing the calculations, that was not the case. I think all of those things cumulatively resulted in a change in my position [3T 29:18-25; 30:1-6].[7]

[6] It is noted that Henchey was not charged in this proceeding with engaging in deceit regarding the ten blank pages in the journals of his students.

Polizzi ultimately testified that after June 23, 2014, his feelings were aligned with Perro's, and both felt that they needed to file tenure charges (Tr. 3, 49:20-50:16).

The Tenure Charges (Post Motion for Summary Decision)

Charge No. 5

That, in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to implement effective and efficient teaching strategies, and in addition to his unwillingness or inability to improve upon the same, Henchey has also demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years which has included a lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him, and which unprofessionalism constitutes incapacity and conduct unbecoming warranting dismissal. . . .

12. During the 2013-2014 school year, Henchey's classroom conduct, attitude towards others, and overall work performance continued to worsen. As a result, and for the reasons set forth more fully herein, the Principal ultimately recommended to the Superintendent that tenure charges be formally filed against Henchey.

13. On September 18, 2013, the Principal had to draft a memorandum to Henchey after he failed to timely submit his "Class Expectations" letter to be sent to the parents of his students.

14. On February 12, 2014 the English Language Arts department scheduled a thirty-minute meeting for an important presentation on the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers ("PARCC") Assessments. Henchey arrived seventeen minutes late without any [7] Most of Henchey's students scored in the proficient range on NJ ASK. In essence, this is what Henchey accurately relayed to the Board during the increment withholding hearing. However, in response, Danielle Shanley took the initiative to analyze Henchey's NJ ASK scores over several years to demonstrate relative insufficient growth, and then she reported the resulting serial data to Superintendent Polizzi who, in turn, accepted the data in support of his belief that Henchey was not forthcoming with the Board.

explanation or apology. As a result, the Principal drafted a memorandum on February 14, 2014, which summarized that "[y]our action of being late was unprofessional and rude to the presenter."

15. After a pattern of habitual late arrivals, on or about March 26, 2014 Henchey arrived to work at 9:45 a.m. – one hour and forty-five minutes after his contractual start time. Henchey missed his assigned morning duty, his weekly meeting with the Principal, and his common planning time. As a result, on or about April 1, 2014 the Principal drafted a memorandum regarding Henchey's lateness to work which stated, among things, that "[y]our action of not calling the school and informing me you would be late was unprofessional."

16. On or about April 9, 2014, K.C., the parent of a student in Henchey's class (L.C.), emailed Henchey asking why her daughter's book was taken away and was sitting on Henchey's desk. Henchey responded to K.C. on April 10. 2014 advising that L.C.'s book had been taken away because she had lent it to another student who had misplaced their copy of the book. Henchey advised K.C. that L.C. has access to the book online. Then, on the following day, Henchey placed a redacted copy of the email on the Smartboard in the front of the classroom, and told all of the students in his class to inform their parents to stop contacting him. Students who were interviewed regarding the incident characterized Henchey's statements as a "rant," and some even added that such behavior was typical. Moreover, students reported that Henchey uttered the following statements, "I came in thirty minutes early and had to waste my time answering parent emails"; "I'm tired of students making up rumors about me..."; "I don't have time to answer questions from parents"; "I'm tired of guidance calling me about this..."; and "I know how to write an email and your parents will never win."

17. In response to this incident, the Principal and Vice Principal met with Henchey and two of his New Milford Education Association ("Association") representatives to discuss the matter. While Henchey admitted to copying and pasting the email and sharing it with the class, and further admitted to spending class time complaining about parental communications, he (amazingly) did not believe he had acted inappropriately because he had redacted the names and gender identifiers in the copied email (notwithstanding the fact that every student in the class was aware that Henchey had L.C.'s book on his desk and could thus easily conclude that the email was from one of L.C.'s parents). As a result, the Administration and the Association representatives agreed that Henchey should take the rest of the day off, get in contact with his therapist and return after the spring recess.

18. On or about April 14, 2014, Henchey utilized a personal day, which had been approved on April 2, 2014. Pursuant to established District practice, all teachers utilizing sick and personal days are required to individually call in and schedule substitute teachers. On April 14, 2014 Henchey failed to call out for a substitute and, as explained by the Principal, "once again we [the District] needed to scramble to cover your classes." Moreover, because Henchey did not leave any lesson plans for his classes, Ms. Carroll was required to create plans and activities for Henchey's students. On April 14, 2014, the Principal provided Henchey with a memorandum to address his failure to follow District protocol, call in for a substitute and leave or email lessons plans.

19. Finally, throughout the entire 2013-2014 school year, Henchey repeatedly and consistently failed to comply with the Principal's weekly directives relating to his 2013 Action Plan. Henchey's consistent failure to do anything requested by the Principal, including such easily achievable requests as "bring your Writer's Workshop notebook to our weekly meetings," constitutes both inefficiency and conduct unbecoming a professional. . . .

OPINION

Synopsis

N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 allows for the dismissal of tenured teachers and other tenured personnel for "inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause." In the present matter, I find that the Board's proofs do not support a finding of incapacity above and beyond inefficiency. However, the Board's proofs do satisfactorily demonstrate that on the heels of two consecutive years of a Corrective Action Plan and one increment withholding, Mr. Henchey engaged in various serious forms of unprofessional conduct during the 2013-2014 school year that support the reasonableness of the Board's ultimate determination to dismiss him from employment. Accordingly, I am constrained to uphold the Board's action under a just cause standard of review.

Disposition of the Charge of Incapacity

After carefully reviewing the experience of the Office of Administrative Law and the Commissioner in addressing the subject matter, I adopt the oft-quoted explanation of the difference between inefficiency and incompetence (or incapacity) set forth in School District of the Township of East Brunswick v. Renee Sokolow, 1982 S.L.D. 1358, 1362, aff'd State Board of Education, 1983 S.L.D. 1645:

> The charge of incompetence, as distinguished from the charge of inefficiency, presumes that the proofs in support of the charge will demonstrate that respondent is so lacking in competency to perform the responsibilities of classroom teacher that the requirements of the 90-day improvement period, required for a charge of inefficiency, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-11, would be a useless exercise. Incompetence requires proof that the affected person regardless of the assistance offered by certified supervisors does not have the ability or capacity to be an effective teacher.

Charges of incapacity may be sustained when a teacher demonstrates a complete unwillingness or inability to correct or rectify significant performance-related shortcomings or improve the instruction provided to his students. See, e.g., Lawrence Twp. Bd. of Educ. v. Helmus, 2 N.J.A.R. 334 (N.J. Admin. Jan. 24, 1980) (tenured teacher with 17 years of experience was dismissed for lack of classroom control and incapacity to teach in his assigned area); Parsippany-Troy Hills Bd. of Educ. v. Molinaro, 96 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 268 (N.J. Admin. Dec. 6, 1995) (incapacity charge sustained because teacher evidenced an inability to plan and implement curriculum and an inability to efficiently utilize classroom period for academic purposes); cf. In IMO Tenure Hearing of Patricia Finn, School District of Bordentown Regional School District, 2000 WL 266441, aff'd in part/remanded (Comm'r) 2000 WL 34401290 (nine year teaching staff member with history of positive teacher-student experience inappropriately charged with incompetency rather than inefficiency based on evidence indicating, over a 17-month period, lack of written lesson plans; disorganization; failure to utilize different teaching modalities; failure to report to class in a timely manner; failure to individualize lesson plans for special needs students; and, general failure to implement lessons which were planned in advance).

In conforming Sokolow and Finn to the present, and without yet addressing Henchey's unprofessional or unbecoming conduct during the 2013-2014 school year, I find that the record evidence does not support a finding of overall incapacity to teach, i.e., that it would be a useless endeavor to have provided Mr. Henchey with a full and fair opportunity under Section 25 of TEACH NJ to demonstrate teacher efficiency. I say this for many reasons.

First and foremost, I observe that the three 2013-2014 observations conducted of Mr. Henchey contain a mix of positive and negative findings that do not leave one with the impression that he is incapable of teaching. While the Board may rely upon its interpretation of the Perro, Coughlin, and Shanley observations to support the summative evaluation and overall rating of partially effective, I disagree that the observations fairly lead to a conclusion of incapacity above and beyond inefficiency.

Second, within the framework of the observations-evaluation conducted, I find troubling certain actions by the administration. For example, although Principal Perro and Vice Principal Coughlin co-observed the October 4, 2013 lesson, Ms. Shanley, who was not present, plainly took the lead in conducting the post-observation conference and her writing permeates the bulk of the post-observation commentary. I am further concerned over the mechanics that left Henchey with no real meaningful opportunity to move the checkmarks by way of uploading artifacts to his February 7, 2014 observation conducted by Danielle Shanley (Exhibit P50). Not only was Ms. Shanley not listed as an observer on the master evaluator schedule but, contrary to Principal Perro's practice. Henchey's artifacts were not credited because they were not lesson-specific. Taken into account that the type of skills observed in a one-hour (or less) observation may be also demonstrated by uploading artifacts encompassing analogous skills or lesson implementation, I find it problematic that Henchey's artifacts were not considered by Ms. Shanley or Perro as a basis to "move a checkmark" on Henchey's behalf. Inserting an evaluator off-script may or may not be an arbitrary and capricious action. I need not determine as much in this case. Rather, what I deem problematic is the difference in practice or policy regarding the breadth of artifacts that may be uploaded to McREL between Mr. Henchey's primary evaluator, Principal Perro and the substitute evaluator, Danielle Shanley. By narrowing the category to lesson-specific artifacts, I agree with Henchey that he was placed at a disadvantage and, at the very least, that he should have been permitted to submit for consideration the artifacts that he did have on file.

Third, contrary to the administration's belief, I am also satisfied that Mr. Henchey did show due diligence with respect to attempting to incorporate the comprehensive suggestions of Ms. Shanley within a reasonable period of time following her formal observation of Henchey on February 7, 2014. Ms. Shanley emailed Henchey certain suggestions that she believed should be implemented (Exhibit R24A). Henchey was receptive to Shanley's suggestions. Indeed, he replied that same day stating he would implement them and, that he looked forward to discussing the matter further when they met for a post-observation conference (Exhibit R24B).

Ms. Shanley sent Vice Principal Coughlin to visit Henchey's class on Wednesday, February 12, 2014 to see if Henchey had implemented the suggestions (Exhibit P60, page 037). Henchey, however, had undertaken to implement the suggestions in his class on Tuesday, February 11, 2014 (Exhibit R45J). He did so because February 12, 2014 was a half-day schedule, the afternoon of which he should have been in attendance at the PARCC lecture by Caitlin Carroll. Because of that schedule, he did not have Language Arts classes in the afternoon. He advised Shanley of this fact on February 12 (Exhibit R45J). To further the implementation of the efforts he had taken on February 11, Henchey worked during what normally would have been his lunchtime on February 12, 2014. He did so in order to prepare additional prompt materials to be used in the unit of studies then being addressed (Exhibit R25B). Accordingly, Henchey's reasonably diligent responses to Ms. Shanley's suggestions indicate, quite frankly, the opposite of incapacity.

Fourth, I believe that Henchey has demonstrated compliance (or the Board has failed to demonstrate a lack of compliance) with regard to certain aspects of both his 2013-2014 CAP and/or comments made in the 2013-2014 observations. In particular, I find the record does not support a finding that Mr. Henchey did nothing to provide differentiated instruction to a French-speaking student. Even Perro acknowledged that as the year progressed, the ELL student developed her English-language skills, thereby implying that she was able to complete the class without any acrimony (Tr. 1, page 107). Additionally, Mr. Henchey testified that he paired the French-speaking ELL student with another student who speaks English-French; he had weekly meetings with his French-speaking ELL student; he provided Google-translate materials to both his French-speaking and Arabic-speaking ELL students; and that he did engage in an ongoing email dialogue with Vice Principal Coughlin and Isaam Helwani to obtain French-English novels.

Indeed, a review of the testimony of Vice Principal Coughlin and Mr. Henchey (as well as supporting email documentation) leaves an air of confusion as to who was responsible for purchasing the books in the first place. On November 27, 2013, Coughlin, referring to a list of novels in French-English suggested by Henchey and Mr. Helwani writes: "Larry, This is excellent! As soon as you get me that list I'll make sure we get her the books!" (Exhibit R47B). On December 4, 2013, Helwani refers Henchey to a list of bilingual novels for sale on Amazon.com. Mr. Henchey replies: "Many thanks! I am including Mr. Coughlin in this reply as he is the one who will actually make the purchase (or approve me to do it)" (Exhibit R47A). On December 5, 2013, Mr. Coughlin advises both Henchey and Helwani that he found a publishing company that makes French/English novels; that he emailed the publisher a copy of the list of novels requested; and that the publisher was going to get back to him with the availability of such books or alternatives just in case they don't have it (Id.). The email trail drops off at this point and Messrs. Coughlin and Henchey essentially fault the other for dropping the ball. Regardless, there does not appear to be a non-arbitrary basis to conclude that Henchey did nothing to help the ELL student in his class.

Fifth, Principal Perro formed a conclusion that Mr. Henchey could not or did not implement the ELA lesson modeled by Ms. Alvaro. With respect to a charge of incapacity, the question becomes not one of qualitative execution, but whether the teacher exercised due diligence and at least demonstrated some progress. Ultimately, Perro did not have first-hand knowledge as to whether Henchey was able to execute the lesson. Because Ms. Alvaro did not testify on such a pertinent topic in this type of proceeding, while admitting the testimony, ultimately, I do not accord significant weight to Principal Perro's hearsay statement that Ms. Alvaro told her that Henchey was unable to model her suggested lesson format. On the contrary, Mr. Henchey's testimony and supported documentation (Exhibits R17A and B) show that he did "synthesize" Ms. Alvaro's techniques into a lesson entitled, "How to Write ASK Argumentative/Persuasive Essay – (Incorporating M. Alvaro techniques from Observation)." Thus, contrary to a finding of incapacity, I find that, similar to his reaction to Ms. Shanley's critique, Mr. Henchey did professionally respond to the assistance provided to him by Ms. Alvaro, he did exercise due diligence, and he was able to document his efforts at compliance, thereby escaping a conclusion of incapacity.

Sixth, Henchey's first year TEACH NJ score of partially effective (1.9) leaves one with an understandable impression that Henchey may or may not have made it past the second year of TEACH NJ, but it does not and cannot support a conclusion that he is a finished product under the current, two-year evaluation rubric. Indeed, if Henchey was able to submit artifacts and if such submission resulted in a movement of the checkmarks with respect to his February 7, 2014 observation, I note, he may have scored higher than a 1.9 in the overall summative rating. Regardless, under TEACH NJ, if Henchey was permitted to continue during the 2014-2015 school year as the Superintendent had initially envisioned, then he may have regressed into the realm of "ineffective" (1.0-1.85) and automatically faced tenure charges, or he may have progressed to "effective" (2.65) and have avoided tenure charges.

In 2014-2015, Henchey would have been the recipient of a fourth observation as well as a mid-year evaluation by the ScIP (consisting of the principal, vice principal and designated ScIP officer (not the Director of Curriculum) elected with the consent of the NMEA) N.J.A.C. 6A:10-3.1. Simply put, in light of some of the deficits pointed out regarding the 2013-2014 observations and summative evaluation, allowing Henchey a second year would have at least provided him with additional formalized observations and an opportunity to receive a first mid-year evaluation by the ScIP -- all designed to help struggling teachers pass muster under a new evaluation rubric, as approved by the Commissioner and implemented for the very first time during the 2013-2014 school year. Thus, given Henchey's first TEACH NJ score of partially effective, the deficits noted in the observation process that lead to that rating, and the conclusions in the summative evaluation not supported by the evidentiary record, I cannot conclude that it would have been a "useless exercise" to allow Henchey a full and fair opportunity to achieve an effective rating in the second of two years of a new statewide educator evaluation model.

Seventh, Henchey has taught in the District since the 2002-2003 school year. The earliest formal sign of significant struggle is embodied by Henchey's CAP for the 2012-2013 school year (signed by Mr. Henchey and Principal Perro on June 21, 2012, Exhibit P40). Even acknowledging Henchey's various shortcomings complying with the CAP during the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years, I observe, Henchey's prior ten years of acceptable service militates against a conclusion that the provision of the aforementioned novel supports would have been a futile exercise (adopting, with modernization, Sokolow and Finn, supra).

Eighth, it is apparent from this record that Henchey became overwhelmed by the amount of scrutiny being placed on him and that this approach backfired during the first year of the administration's adaptation and implementation of the evaluation rubric. Without question, the 2013-2014 school year involved a learning curve for both evaluators and teachers under a new set of evaluation rules. As of February of 2014, the President of the NMEA and Perro discussed Mr. Henchey's feelings of being overwhelmed by the amount of other administrator-teacher contact time, such as, frequent drive by visits from the administration and various observe for success sessions

(10-15 minutes each). Mr. Giovinazzo, the ScIP officer, reported that he too formed the impression that Henchey behaved as if he was inundated by the amount of "assistance" being provided to him.

Ninth, ample support from this record shows that even Superintendent Polizzi was not convinced that Henchey should be precluded from completing the second year of TEACH NJ, i.e., 2014-2015 until well after the Board had voted to withhold Henchey's 2014-2015 increment. The Superintendent's change of heart came not as the result of his perception of Henchey's overall incapacity to teach ELA, but more out of a growing concern over Henchey's alleged deceit, i.e., ten pages left intentionally blank in the journals of Henchey's students (not charged) and Henchey's representation to the Board that his students were performing well on standardized testing (not charged). Polizzi testified that he changed course also due to Henchey's inability to appreciate the magnitude or impact of his chronic tardiness (expressed, in part, and implied, in part under Charge No. 5, par. 15).

Lastly, although I acknowledge that the Board has satisfactorily demonstrated Henchey's more willful disregard of certain aspects of his CAP, as reinforced through weekly meetings with Principal Perro, other similar allegations have not been so demonstrated and the above-mentioned mitigating factors must be considered as well. Accordingly, I do not credit the Board's evidence of Henchey's conduct unbecoming during the 2013-2014 school year as sufficient to support a finding of overall incapacity under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

Based on the foregoing, I find and conclude that the Board has failed to satisfactorily support a charge of incapacity under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, despite the existence of evidence of conduct unbecoming, discussed next.

Disposition of the Charge of Conduct Unbecoming a Professional

In light of the foregoing, I will address Tenure Charge No. 5, paragraphs 12-19 under the category of unbecoming conduct, although par. 19 reads more like a charge of insubordination.[8] Charge No. 5, par. 19 states:

> Finally, throughout the entire 2013-2014 school year, Henchey repeatedly and consistently failed to comply with the Principal's weekly directives relating to his 2013 Action Plan. Henchey's consistent failure to do anything requested by the Principal, including such easily achievable requests as "bring your Writer's Workshop notebook to our weekly meetings," constitutes both inefficiency and conduct unbecoming a professional.

As a general rule, in the area of labor relations, an employee cannot refuse to cooperate with the employer regarding legitimate work-related conduct. To do so is an act of Insubordination, subject to disciplinary action up to and including discharge. See, Prestige Stamping Co., 74 LA (BNA) 163; St. Joe Minerals Corp., 76 LA (BNA) 421; and City of Franklin, 81-1 ARB (¶8069). I will address the major aspects of this allegation below insofar as only the charge of conduct unbecoming/insubordination is at hand. If an item of Henchey's multi-factored 2013-2014 CAP is not addressed below, then the parties can assume that the allegation not discussed would lead to, at best, a finding of inefficiency, but not to a finding of conduct unbecoming/insubordination.

[8] N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 does not include an express disciplinary charge regarding insubordination. However, I am satisfied that the willful failure or refusal of a teacher to comply with significant directives from administrators, in the professional employment context of education, does constitute conduct unbecoming a professional.

Writer's Workshop/Spivey

District-wide initiatives are designed to improve student achievement. Implementation of District Initiatives, such as Writer's Workshop and Spivey method were part of Mr. Henchey's 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 CAPs (Exhibit P40 and P46). Deficiencies concerning the use of Study Island and Smart Responders were not set forth in either of Henchey's two CAPs or within the 2013-2014 increment withholding decision. Conversely, a failure to implement Writer's Workshop and the Spivey (preexisting District Initiatives) were made part of the 2013-2014 increment withholding.

In this matter, I conclude that the Board has failed to convincingly demonstrate that Mr. Henchey was, in essence, insubordinate, with respect to incorporating Writer's Workshop and Spivey. See, Exhibits R8A and B (showing the Spivey Tree and a representative example of the Spivey exercise); Exhibit R38 (showing the Spivey Tree Mural in Henchey's classroom for reference by students during class); Exhibit R32A (showing period submission of Writer's Workshop journals); Exhibit R32B (evidencing prompts created by Henchey to implement Writer's Workshop); Exhibit R13A-M (weekly meeting memos showing discussions, among other things, entries into Writer's Workshop notebook). In addition, during a formal observation of November 20, 2013 by Vice Principal Coughlin, Coughlin commented under Standard #4 that Mr. Henchey demonstrated positive interaction with students and, among other things, demonstrated a proper utilization of the Writer's notebook as an essential tool for the ELA classroom. Under Mr. Coughlin's Standard #1 comments, Coughlin noted that Henchey "took the time to delve into the Writer's notebook responses and allowed for a deep discussion and interaction with the students..." (Id.).

Mr. Henchey testified that Spivey is a "huge book" that can span grades k through 8 or even k through 12. In short, Henchey implemented Spivey chapters 29 and 30 because he believed it was more grade appropriate than other chapters.

In light of the foregoing, I cannot conclude that the Board has demonstrated a knowing failure to implement the administration's directives concerning Spivey and Writer's Workshop to the extent that a charge of unbecoming conduct/insubordination (as contrasted with inefficiency) is warranted.

Smart Responders

In this matter, I conclude that the Board has failed to convincingly demonstrate that Mr. Henchey was, in essence, insubordinate, with respect to incorporating one Smart Responder assessment by the end of the first semester (or by January 29, 2014). Approximately thirty (30) Smart Responders were donated graciously by the PTO for use in the 2013-2014 school year. During the January 15, 2014 weekly meeting, Principal Perro and Mr. Henchey discussed utilization of the District's Smart Responders on Tuesday, January 19, 2014 regarding "Flowers for Algernon" (Exhibit P59l).[9] According to Principal Perro, each teacher was responsible for facilitating one Smart Responder assessment in the first semester (first two marking periods) and an additional assessment in the second semester (or third and fourth marking periods). Importantly, Principal [9] Smart Responders enable students to enter questions at the conclusion of a lesson and receive instantaneous feedback.

Perro did not reject Mr. Henchey's suggestion that he implement the first semester Smart Responder assessment in the form of an exit slip on January 19, 2014, however, she was concerned that he was "cutting it close" based on the end of the first semester, i.e., January 29, 2014.

On February 4, 2014, Mr. Henchey apologized to Principal Perro in connection with her email communication dated February 3, 2014 asking him to submit the data from his Smart Responder assessment as requested for the first half of the year (Exhibit P60, page 33). Mr. Henchey explained that he intended to accomplish the task on January 22, 2014, but he learned on January 17, 2014 that he needed SchoolDude Adobe Flash for his desktop. Mid-term exams intervened and Henchey arranged to do a joint Smart Responder assessment with Ms. Carroll (whose classroom desktop did have SchoolDude Adobe Flash installed). Henchey assured Perro that he would have the data entered by February 7, 2014 – which fell in the second semester (Exhibit P68, page 18). In rejecting a finding of unprofessional conduct/insubordination above and beyond inefficiency, I note that the Board has failed to demonstrate that Henchey exhibited a knowing intent to disregard a directive concerning Smart Responders. Rather, Henchey clearly intended to comply, albeit at the end of the target date range.

Additionally, the Board does not dispute Henchey's assertion that his classroom lacked the technological capability of implementing Smart Responders.

Lastly, the Board makes no allegation that Henchey failed to timely implement a Smart Responder assessment in the second semester. Accordingly, I cannot conclude that the Board's evidence concerning Henchey's belated submission (by eight or nine days) of the first semester Smart Responder assessment rises to the level of conduct unbecoming/insubordination, as opposed to teacher inefficiency.

Study Island

I sustain the charge of conduct unbecoming/insubordination with respect to Study Island. During a faculty meeting on September 4, 2012, among other topics, a weekly use of Study Island was discussed (Exhibit P66, page 1). According to Principal Perro, Study Island is a web-based program that has been in use at David E. Owens Middle School for several years. In Study Island, students can log on to the program and answer approximately ten questions. For example, in language arts, students may be asked to read a paragraph and then answer related questions about the reading. Principal Perro further explained that the Study Island questions at the time mirrored NJ ASK questions (presumably, now geared toward the PARCC Assessment). As discussed during the faculty meeting and periodically by administrators, Study Island was expected to be assigned on a weekly basis to 8th grade ELA students.

In relationship to the weekly meetings between Principal Perro and Mr. Henchey, I observe, Study Island had not been assigned in Mr. Henchey's class as of September 25, 2013 (Exhibit P59d). In handwritten commentary, Perro states: "Study Island needs to start". Notwithstanding Perro's commentary, following the pairs' October 30, 2013 weekly meeting, Perro noted in handwriting: "No Study Island." (Exhibit P59g).

As of the January 29, 2014 meeting between the pair, Principal Perro reiterated to Mr. Henchey, among other items, his obligation to assign Study Island one time per week to his classes and record his results in his grade book (Exhibit P57b). As of the following weekly meeting, i.e., March 6, 2014, Perro reports that she again directed Mr. Henchey to "include Study Island at least once per week." (Exhibit P57g). Then, following a March 13, 2014 weekly meeting, Principal Perro entered the following: "Study Island should be assigned once per week. To date you only have two posted Study Island assignments in over four weeks of the marking period" (implying that Henchey did post two Study Island assignments).

In Perro's April 3, 2014 recommendation of increment withholding memo to Superintendent Polizzi, Perro notes, among other things, "Despite being told in writing that Study Island is to be assigned weekly, Mr. Henchey as of April 3, 2014 has only assigned/graded two assignments in the marking period." In Perro's update in the middle of June 2014, Perro states the following:

> Mr. Henchey was repeatedly reminded to assign/collect and provide feedback on homework. To date in his grade book there are no homeworks assigned including Study Island which is a school initiative. He was directed to assign Study Island at our January 20, 2014 meeting which he did not comply. He was directed again in writing on February 26, 2014 which he did not comply. In a memo dated March 31, 2014, he was reminded again to assign Study Island. (Exhibit P57c).

In handwritten comments to our April 3, 2014 memorandum, as of May 27, 2014, Perro observed that Mr. Henchey had entered no Study Island assignments in the fourth marking period (Exhibit P57j, page 1).

In Mr. Henchey's April 30, 2014 teacher evaluation summary, Perro writes in the comment section under Standard #4 (Teacher's Facilitate Learning for Their Students) "Each teacher was required to assign Study Island once a week and you failed to do this." (Exhibit P52, page 12).

Even Mr. Henchey, on cross-examination, acknowledged that he issued only nine Study Island assignments during the 2013-2014 school year (Exhibit R28).

In light of the importance of the initiative and the number of reminders provided by Principal Perro, I conclude that the Board has demonstrated conduct unbecoming/insubordination on the part of Henchey with respect to a critically important component of the 8th Grade ELA curriculum.

Grades

I sustain the Charge with respect to Henchey's failure to timely enter mid-term grades during the 2013-2014 school year. I dismiss the Charge in all other respects as more appropriately evidencing inefficiency.

On December 17, 2013, Vice Principal Coughlin sent an email communication to Mr. Henchey advising him that seventy (70) students had no grades entered or comments (progress reports) for the 2nd marking period. Coughlin discovered a technical error on Henchey's part in that, Henchey entered grades under the category of "Quiz" and the software program does not count quizzes as part of the grades (Exhibit P60, page 29). In response to Mr. Coughlin's email, Mr. Henchey thanked Mr. Coughlin for bringing the technical discrepancy to his attention and assured Mr. Coughlin that he would enter the progress report comments for all students prior to 12:00 noon and that he would confer with Ms. Carroll for the purpose of properly categorizing grades in the computer system. (Id.). Ultimately, Henchey's second marking period grades and progress reports were entered by December 18, 2013. Although demonstrating inefficiency, I cannot conclude that Henchey's failures rise to the level of insubordination.

The opposite holds true with respect to mid-term grades, that is, Henchey's conduct was more akin to insubordination. In the weekly meeting between Principal Perro and Mr. Henchey on February 26, 2014, Perro documented that "mid-term grades will be posted shortly." Principal Perro explained that contrary to Henchey's CAP, mid-terms were facilitated at the end of the January of 2014 and, yet, Henchey still had not posted mid-term grades as of February 26, 2014. As of the duo's March 6, 2014 weekly meeting, Henchey had not yet posted his mid-term grades (Exhibit P57g). Next, during the March 13, 2014 weekly meeting, Principal Perro expressly directed Henchey to continue updating his grade book and, moreover, to post his mid-term grades on or before the pair's next meeting date of March 20, 2014 (Exhibit P57h). As of April 3, 2014, Henchey still had not posted ten mid-term grades. Henchey's failure to comply with Perro's March 20, 2014 deadline, in light of previous reminders and the importance of the subject matter to students, parents and the administration of the 8th Grade ELA curriculum, in my opinion, amounts to conduct unbecoming/insubordination.

In sum, I find and conclude that, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10, the Board has demonstrated Henchey's unprofessional misconduct/insubordination in the form of his failure to assign Study Island, as directed and his failure to post mid-term grades by March 20, 2014, as directed.

I will next address the anecdotal evidence of Henchey's unbecoming conduct (not involving insubordination or inefficiency) as set forth under Charge No. 5, pars. 12-18.

As both parties can readily observe, par. 12 is introductory and factual resolution is unnecessary. Par. 13 states:

> On September 18, 2013, the Principal had to draft a memorandum to Henchey after he failed to timely submit his "Class Expectations" letter to be sent to the parents of his students.

This charge alleges that Henchey engaged in conduct unbecoming and/or demonstrated incapacity in accordance with a memorandum that Perro wrote to Henchey on September 20, 2013 (Exhibit P57a). The memorandum set forth that Perro had not received a copy of the class expectations letter which was to have been sent to parents and that she wanted a copy no later than September 23, 2013.

In the Weekly Meeting memo for September 18, 2013, Henchey noted that he had sent the letter out to parents on September 17, 2013, and Perro's handwritten notation indicates that she requested Henchey to send her a copy (Exhibit P59c). Henchey did, in fact, send Perro a copy of the letter via email on September 20, 2014 (Exhibit R45T). The Weekly Meeting memo for September 25, 2013 (Exhibit P59d) confirmed this fact. Accordingly, I dismiss the disciplinary specification laid out under Charge No. 5, par. 13.

Par. 14 states:

> On February 12, 2014 the English Language Arts department scheduled a thirty-minute meeting for an important presentation on the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers ("PARCC") Assessments.[10] Henchey arrived seventeen minutes late without any explanation or apology. As a result, the Principal drafted a memorandum on February 14, 2014, which summarized that "[y]our action of being late was unprofessional and rude to the presenter."

[10] According to the PARCC website, the PARCC is a group of states working together to develop a set of assessments that measure whether students are on track to be successful in college and their careers. These high quality, computer-based K–12 assessments in Mathematics and English Language Arts/Literacy give teachers, schools, students, and parents better information whether students are on track in their learning and for success after high school, and tools to help teachers customize learning to meet student needs. The PARCC assessments will be ready for states to administer during the 2014-15 school year. In New Jersey, the standardized PARCC Assessment replaced NJ Ask testing.

On February 12, 2014, Henchey arrived seventeen (17) minutes late to a thirty (30) minute mandatory training session concerning the PARCC Assessment model and implementation in place of NJ ASK. Henchey explained his actions as follows:

> Q: This email is written by you at 1:13 p.m. on February 12, 2014 to Ms. Shanley?"
>
> A: Yes
>
> ....
>
> Q: Now what time was Ms. Collins—Carroll's program due to commence?
>
> A: I believe it was 1:30
>
> ...
>
> Q: And you had done this, and then you concluded this up, and emailed it to her at 1:13, and what did you do at that point, you know, notwithstanding that there was a meeting scheduled approximately 17 minutes later at 1:30?
> A: Well, I was famished, and I estimated I could get to Wendy's in Bergenfield and back, and eat a burger on the way back, within the course of 15 minutes.[4T 37:14-25; 39:15-23 (emphasis added)]

In making the decision to leave school grounds to purchase lunch seventeen (17) minutes before an important PARCC training session, I agree with the Board that Henchey displayed a significant lapse in judgment. Assuming Henchey immediately left the school building after his email to Ms. Shanley and walked to his car, I surmise, he likely had no more than fifteen (15) minutes to make it to and from Wendy's in time for the meeting and that is not factoring in either traffic delays and/or ordinary delays ordering and receiving lunch at Wendy's.

According to MapQuest, the round trip from David E. Owens Middle School (470 Marion Avenue, New Milford, New Jersey) to Wendy's (150 N. Washington Avenue, Bergenfield, New Jersey) is approximately ten (10) minutes without traffic.[11] Any significant delay at either the drive-thru or at the counter inside Wendy's during lunch hours, I observe, would have made it almost impossible for Henchey to make it back for the start of the meeting, even without a train delay, which Henchey assumed the risk of experiencing, and which he did experience. Put simply, Henchey is at fault; that he was preoccupied trying to address his February 7, 2014 observation by Ms. Shanley and did not eat lunch sooner is not an acceptable excuse for his actions. That Ms. Carroll took the additional time and effort to provide individual orientation to Mr. Henchey does not serve as a mitigating factor either. On the contrary, Ms. Carroll was left with little choice but to take unplanned, additional time away from her schedule to accommodate Henchey's belated arrival. In addition, throughout this proceeding, in various ways, Henchey expressed his perception that he was under the microscope throughout the 2013-2014 school year. Feeling this way, one must query why Henchey would engage in such a game of chance when there must have been a food source within the borders of New Milford or even within the Middle School itself? Given the importance of the PARCC Assessment training and the lack of mitigating factors presented, I sustain specification/par. 14 as evidence of unprofessional conduct, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

Par. 15 states:

> After a pattern of habitual late arrivals, on or about March 26, 2014 Henchey arrived to work at 9:45 a.m. – one hour and forty-five minutes after his contractual start time. Henchey missed his assigned morning duty, [11] As a lifelong resident of the area, I am confident in the accuracy of the MapQuest results.

> his weekly meeting with the Principal, and his common planning time. As a result, on or about April 1, 2014 the Principal drafted a memorandum regarding Henchey's lateness to work which stated, among things, that "[y]our action of not calling the school and informing me you would be late was unprofessional."

On March 26, 2014, Mr. Henchey arrived to work at 9:45 a.m. for an 8:00 a.m. start without notice. In relation to Mr. Henchey's daily schedule, he missed hall duty, his weekly meeting with Principal Perro and his common planning time with Ms. Carroll. He did not miss any instructional time. Henchey overslept, explaining that the stress that he was experiencing by this juncture in the school year left him with anxiety and sleeplessness at times. Although I do not disbelieve Henchey's explanation, unlike his typical late arrival at or slightly after 8:05 p.m. (the commencement of hall duty) the March 26, 2014 incident directly impacted the schedules of Principal Perro and Ms. Carroll. As such, I agree with the Board that Henchey's inaction was, nonetheless, an example of his unprofessional conduct during the 2013-2014 school year.

As to the assertion that Henchey's tardiness to that point in time was "chronic", I observe that when the Board undertook to withhold Henchey's 2013-2014 increments, its' action was based, in part, on Henchey's 41 alleged instances of tardiness (Exhibit P56h). However, when the Board again undertook to withhold Henchey's increments for 2014-2015, while tardiness was not one of the listed reasons for the Board doing so (Exhibit P57r), it was nonetheless raised by the Board at the informal hearing and considered when resolving to withhold his increments. Suffice it to say that the issue of Henchey's frequent episodes of de minimis tardiness as of March 26, 2014 does not alter my decision in any significant respect. Importantly, Henchey's day-to-day tardiness was not significantly addressed in real time throughout the 2013-2014 school year, with the exception of a reference by Principal Perro in her weekly meeting minutes of October 30, 2013 (Exhibit P59g). If the issue was truly problematic from an educational or operational standpoint, then one would have expected to see much more prompt remedial action from the administration. Accordingly, while I sustain the charge of conduct unbecoming a professional employee based on Henchey's March 26, 2014 partial no-show, no-call, I dismiss the balance of the charge in all other respects.

Par. 16 states:

> On or about April 9, 2014, K.C., the parent of a student in Henchey's class (L.C.), emailed Henchey asking why her daughter's book was taken away and was sitting on Henchey's desk. Henchey responded to K.C. on April 10, 2014 advising that L.C.'s book had been taken away because she had lent it to another student who had misplaced their copy of the book. Henchey advised K.C. that L.C. has access to the book online. Then, on the following day, Henchey placed a redacted copy of the email on the Smartboard in the front of the classroom, and told all of the students in his class to inform their parents to stop contacting him. Students who were interviewed regarding the incident characterized Henchey's statements as a "rant," and some even added that such behavior was typical. Moreover, students reported that Henchey uttered the following statements, "I came in thirty minutes early and had to waste my time answering parent emails"; "I'm tired of students making up rumors about me..."; "I don't have time to answer questions from parents"; "I'm tired of guidance calling me about this..."; and "I know how to write an email and your parents will never win."

I sustain this charge, in part. Animal Farm is part of the 8th Grade ELA curriculum. The District had purchased new paperback copies of the book. Teachers Henchey and Carroll were experiencing problems with the students losing the books that each of them had individually assigned. Consequently, Henchey and Carroll instituted a policy/practice that, if a student lost his/her book, he/she would not be assigned another one. Instead, that student was required to access the book in the public domain where it was obtainable. And, in the event that Carroll or Henchey found that a student had borrowed a copy of the book from another student, they would take that book and similarly subject the lending student to the terms of the policy.

On April 9, 2014, the parent of L.C. understandably emailed Henchey seeking to have him return the copy of Animal Farm which L.C. had either lost or, had taken away by Henchey because she had lent it to another student who then misplaced it (Exhibit P57k). According to the email communication of L.C., she questioned why the book was taken away, she stated that her daughter had been without the book for two weeks, and she commented that her daughter was falling behind.

On the next day, April 10, 2014, Henchey emailed a polite reply to the mother of L.C. explaining what occurred and the basis for his actions (Exhibit P57k). Unfortunately, Henchey's reaction did not end at this point. Rather, Henchey deemed it useful and not inappropriate to redact L.C.'s identifying information and place the email on a projection screen for all students to take note of. He then commented to the class that he had to waste 30 minutes addressing the email. To me, the combination of Henchey's acknowledged actions and admitted verbiage were plainly designed to send a message to both parents and students alike that parental complaints were not welcome and, in any event, they would not end the policy (Tr. 4, pages 195-196). Additionally, Henchey noted that he had heard from guidance about this issue on too many occasions (Tr. 4, pages 49-55).

Henchey's action in projecting the redacted email was allegedly reported to Vice Principal Coughlin by two students. The students and others who were allegedly interviewed by Coughlin allegedly attributed certain other statements or actions being made by Henchey in class on April 10. These include:

a) That Henchey was in a "rant" on the day in question:

b) That Henchey typically behaved that way;

c) That Henchey complained about having to waste his time responding to parent emails;

d) That Henchey stated he was tired of students making up rumors about him:

e) That Henchey stated he did not have time to answer questions from their parents; and

f) That Henchey stated he knows how to write an email and their parents will never win (Exhibit P57l) (Tr. 4, pages 56 and 60-61).

None of the students who allegedly made the report or were interviewed by Coughlin testified at the arbitration (Tr. 2, page 125). Nor did the Board introduce any written statements from any student. Henchey denied making the statements other than complaining about a waste of time.

In sustaining the allegation of unprofessional conduct, I observe that Henchey's actions/verbiage carried the realistic potential of emotionally upsetting the student whose parent complained, even if Henchey took efforts to protect her identity from the remainder of the class. Imagine instead a teacher reading to the class an example of a poorly written essay without identifying the author. If the author is still a student and in that very class one can easily imagine how upset he or she would be. Henchey's actions on April 10, 2014 carried the realistic potential of causing a similar degree of emotional harm to the student who did not have her Animal Farm book for over two weeks. In addition, Henchey's actions/verbiage likely would be shared by K.C. to L.C. and by other students with their parents. I find it difficult to believe that the parents of students in Mr. Henchey's class would be satisfied with such a mode of teacher-parent communications.

On the contrary, I would doubt that any parent wants to find out that a legitimate communication about his or her son or daughter with a teacher ended up on an overhead projector for the purpose of deterring other students from complaining to their parents and/or for the purpose of deterring other parents from similarly communicating with the teacher of his son or daughter. Even if the end was justifiable (which Principal Perro answered in the negative by directing the cessation of the policy), the means used by Henchey alone on April 10, 2014 to reinforce the policy was unprofessional and properly chargeable in this proceeding.

Lastly, I am troubled that Mr. Henchey engaged his students in such a manner in light of being reprimanded in the 2011-2012 school year for reprimanding a student in front of her class (Exhibit P55a) and after receiving an increment withholding for the 2013-2014 school year for, among other things, "making inappropriate comments in the presence of students" (Exhibit P56h).

Based on the foregoing, I conclude that the Board has demonstrated that Henchey's actions on April 10, 2014 constituted conduct unbecoming a professional teacher within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. Accordingly, I sustain this charge.

Par. 17 states:

> In response to this incident, the Principal and Vice Principal met with Henchey and two of his New Milford Education Association ("Association") representatives to discuss the matter. While Henchey admitted to copying and pasting the email and sharing it with the class, and further admitted to spending class time complaining about parental communications, he (amazingly) did not believe he had acted inappropriately because he had redacted the names and gender identifiers in the copied email (notwithstanding the fact that every student in the class was aware that Henchey had L.C.'s book on his desk and could thus easily conclude that the email was from one of L.C.'s parents). As a result, the Administration and the Association representatives agreed that Henchey should take the rest of the day off, get in contact with his therapist and return after the spring recess.

In light of my findings concerning Par. 16, above, I dismiss this specification due to redundancy.[12]

Par. 18 states:

> On or about April 14, 2014, Henchey utilized a personal day, which had been approved on April 2, 2014. Pursuant to established District practice, all teachers utilizing sick and personal days are required to individually call in and schedule substitute teachers. On April 14, 2014 Henchey failed to call out for a substitute and, as explained by the Principal, "once again we [the District] needed to scramble to cover your classes." Moreover, because Henchey did not leave any lesson plans for his classes, Ms. Carroll was required to create plans and activities for Henchey's students. On April 14, 2014, the Principal provided Henchey with a memorandum to address his failure to follow District protocol, call in for a substitute and leave or email lessons plans.

I sustain the above charge and note the following circumstances for contextual support. Henchey was directed to leave school early on April 11, 2014 as a result of his emotional state following the meetings with Principal Perro and Superintendent Polizzi. He remained out for the week of April 14-18, 2014. When Henchey returned, Perro provided him with a Memo/reprimand that she had issued in his absence (Tr. 4, pages 63-64; Exhibit P57m). Principal Perro testified that the Memo issued for failing to call the substitute service for the scheduled personal day and causing the need "to scramble to cover his classes" (Exhibit P57m). He was further reprimanded for not leaving lesson plans for April 14, 2014. Ms. Carroll had to pick up the slack again. Page 11 of the Teachers Handbook (Exhibit P68) requires teachers to call the substitute service when a personal day is granted. Similar to Henchey's failures to timely attend the PARCC assessment training on February 12, 2014 and to timely call-in a late arrival on March 26, 2014, I cannot credit Henchey's experience of stress caused by other employment-related events as an excuse for his ensuing, separate misconduct. Accordingly, I sustain the charge of Conduct Unbecoming a professional teacher with respect to this allegation.

[12] The Board's allegation (based on Coughlin's testimony) that Henchey demanded the names of those students complaining (implying intent to retaliate) cannot be processed herein because it was not expressly subsumed within the tenure charges. For the record, Henchey testified that he demanded names because he did not trust the accuracy of the administration's complaints against him based on his perception of past experiences. Lastly, I agree with Counsel that references to Mr. Henchey's therapist do not advance the Board's cause in this proceeding.

Summary of Disposition of Charges

The Tenure Charges (Post Motion for Summary Decision)

Charge No. 5

That, in addition to Henchey's consistent failure to implement effective and efficient teaching strategies, and in addition to his unwillingness or inability to improve upon the same, Henchey has also demonstrated a lack of professionalism throughout the 2011-2012, 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years which has included a lack of respect for the Administration and a complete disregard for the high professional standards placed upon him, and which unprofessionalism constitutes incapacity and conduct unbecoming warranting dismissal. . . .

12. During the 2013-2014 school year, Henchey's classroom conduct, attitude towards others, and overall work performance continued to worsen. As a result, and for the reasons set forth more fully herein, the Principal ultimately recommended to the Superintendent that tenure charges be formally filed against Henchey. [Dismissed].

13. On September 18, 2013, the Principal had to draft a memorandum to Henchey after he failed to timely submit his "Class Expectations" letter to be sent to the parents of his students. [Dismissed].

14. On February 12, 2014 the English Language Arts department scheduled a thirty-minute meeting for an important presentation on the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers ("PARCC") Assessments. Henchey arrived seventeen minutes late without any explanation or apology. As a result, the Principal drafted a memorandum on February 14, 2014, which summarized that "[y]our action of being late was unprofessional and rude to the presenter." [Sustained].

15. After a pattern of habitual late arrivals, on or about March 26, 2014 Henchey arrived to work at 9:45 a.m. – one hour and forty-five minutes after his contractual start time. Henchey missed his assigned morning duty, his weekly meeting with the Principal, and his common planning time. As a result, on or about April 1, 2014 the Principal drafted a memorandum regarding Henchey's lateness to work which stated, among things, that "[y]our action of not calling the school and informing me you would be late was unprofessional."[Sustained, in part].

16. On or about April 9, 2014, K.C., the parent of a student in Henchey's class (L.C.), emailed Henchey asking why her daughter's book was taken away and was sitting on Henchey's desk. Henchey responded to K.C. on April 10, 2014 advising that L.C.'s book had been taken away because she had lent it to another student who had misplaced their copy of the book. Henchey advised K.C. that L.C. has access to the book online. Then, on the following day, Henchey placed a redacted copy of the email on the Smartboard in the front of the classroom, and told all of the students in his class to inform their parents to stop contacting him. Students who were interviewed regarding the incident characterized Henchey's statements as a "rant," and some even added that such behavior was typical. Moreover, students reported that Henchey uttered the following statements, "I came in thirty minutes early and had to waste my time answering parent emails"; "I'm tired of students making up rumors about me..."; "I don't have time to answer questions from parents"; "I'm tired of guidance calling me about this..."; and "I know how to write an email and your parents will never win." [Sustained, in part].

17. In response to this incident, the Principal and Vice Principal met with Henchey and two of his New Milford Education Association ("Association") representatives to discuss the matter. While Henchey admitted to copying and pasting the email and sharing it with the class, and further admitted to spending class time complaining about parental communications, he (amazingly) did not believe he had acted inappropriately because he had redacted the names and gender identifiers in the copied email (notwithstanding the fact that every student in the class was aware that Henchey had L.C.'s book on his desk and could thus easily conclude that the email was from one of L.C.'s parents). As a result, the Administration and the Association representatives agreed that Henchey should take the rest of the day off, get in contact with his therapist and return after the spring recess. [Dismissed].

18. On or about April 14, 2014, Henchey utilized a personal day, which had been approved on April 2, 2014. Pursuant to established District practice, all teachers utilizing sick and personal days are required to individually call in and schedule substitute teachers. On April 14, 2014 Henchey failed to call out for a substitute and, as explained by the Principal, "once again we [the District] needed to scramble to cover your classes." Moreover, because Henchey did not leave any lesson plans for his classes, Ms. Carroll was required to create plans and activities for Henchey's students. On April 14, 2014, the Principal provided Henchey with a memorandum to address his failure to follow District protocol, call in for a substitute and leave or email lessons plans. [Sustained].

19. Finally, throughout the entire 2013-2014 school year, Henchey repeatedly and consistently failed to comply with the Principal's weekly directives relating to his 2013 Action Plan. Henchey's consistent failure to do anything requested by the Principal, including such easily achievable requests as "bring your Writer's Workshop notebook to our weekly meetings," constitutes both inefficiency and conduct unbecoming a professional. . . .[Sustained – Study Island and Mid-Term Grades; dismissed in all other respects].

The Penalty Of Dismissal

Arbitrators widely apply the following standard of review when asked to judge the appropriateness of a disciplinary penalty: If a preponderance of the evidence supports the disciplinary allegations, an employer must also show that the penalty imposed is just in light of factors, such as: [1] the gravity of the offense; [2] the employee's overall record and length of service; [3] the provision of proper notice of rules and penalties; [4] an employer's adherence to progressive discipline, if applicable; [5] whether there has been lax enforcement of rules; and [6] whether the employer's actions or failure to act contributed to the disciplinary offense(s). Elkouri and Elkouri, How Arbitration Works, 5th Edition, pages 930, et. seq. The determination as to whether a teacher has engaged in conduct warranting dismissal from a tenured position requires consideration of the nature of the act, the totality of the circumstances and the impact on the teacher's career. I/M/O Tenure Hearing of Molokwu, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 9650-04 (2005) citing In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J.Super. 404, 421 (App. Div. 1967).

In the present case, I have dismissed any allegation proving to be pure inefficiency or that may have been brought about by the evaluative opinion of an administrator(s). What remains, however, is, among other offenses, Henchey's willful failure to comply with Principal Perro's important directives concerning the assignment of Study Island on a weekly basis and to post mid-term grades by March 20, 2014. Henchey's disregard of Perro's directives constitutes serious offenses that impact negatively the District's initiative to assess student feedback and growth (Study Island) and to timely assess student performance (mid-term grades). Henchey further compounded matters by exhibiting other episodes of unprofessional conduct during the 2013-2014 school year, such as his late arrival to a mandatory PARCC Assessment training lead by Ms. Carroll in favor of a failed attempt to timely make it to Wendy's and back; his late arrival to work without notice on March 26, 2014 (missing a weekly meeting with Principal Perro and collaborative planning with Ms. Carroll); his projection of a parent email to all students designed to deter further student/parent complaints regarding his book confiscation policy; and his failure to call in a substitute and leave lesson plans for a personal day absence on April 14, 2014 (leaving the administration scrambling to cover his classes). At the end of the day, Henchey alone had control over his destiny with respect to the aforementioned behaviors.

In addition, I am satisfied that Principal Perro did attempt non-disciplinary interventions in good faith over the course of the 2011-2012-2012-2013-2014 school years, including weekly meetings, two CAPs, and the deployment of the ScIP officer in 2013-2014, etc. prior to requesting the filing of tenure charges on April 3, 2014.

Lastly, although I acknowledge Henchey's service to the District since the 2002-2003 school year, his record is not unblemished. Rather, Henchey has received reprimands and he did not challenge the imposition of an increment withholding for the 2013-2014 school year.[13] Thus, as I observed in my January 3, 2015 Summary Decision and Order, . . . "this means that Mr. Henchey enters the hearing process with a major disciplinary record in the form of an increment withholding under Title 18A for incapacity and related conduct unbecoming. . ." In my opinion, given the precarious position in which Henchey entered the 2013-2014 school year in the New Milford School District, there simply was no room for Mr. Henchey to have engaged in the number and type of professional misconduct incidents that he did. Accordingly, I conclude that the Board's dismissal of Mr. Henchey from employment as a teacher in the New Milford School District was for just cause.

[13] Based on my previous double jeopardy ruling, and the Board's position regarding double jeopardy, I did not consider the Board's withholding of Henchey's increment for the 2014-2015 school year for any purpose in this proceeding.

AWARD

For the reasons more fully set forth herein, I find and conclude that the Borough of New Milford Board of Education has demonstrated just cause to dismiss Lawrence Henchey, a tenured teacher for conduct unbecoming a professional school teacher pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF UPPER DEERFIELD, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

This matter arose when the respondent Board denied petitioner a medical leave of absence prior to her retirement in December 2013, charged her sick leave bank for 59 sick days from September to December 2013, and subsequently stopped paying the petitioner's salary from October 15, 2013 until her retirement on December 1, 2013. Petitioner challenged the Board's authority to make inquiries into her illness beyond the scope of the medical notes she provided in support of her request for a medical leave of absence, and demanded back pay for sick leave charged and for the period when her pay was docked prior to the date of her retirement. The Board contended that sick leave requests are tentative and subject to reasonable verification before approval. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision, which were denied because there were genuine issues of fact in dispute. Thereafter, the parties ultimately reached an amicable monetary settlement following the submission – for in camera review by the ALJ and respondent's counsel – of more detailed information about the medical condition that precipitated petitioner's request for sick leave.

The ALJ's Initial Decision recited the procedural history of this matter, stated that the issues transmitted to the OAL had been resolved amicably, but opined that there might be remaining policy issues for the Commissioner's consideration.

Upon review, the Commissioner concluded, inter alia, that – in light of the settlement entered into by the parties – there are no issues necessitating the Commissioner's review. Accordingly, the case was closed.

V.	:	DECISION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF UPPER DEERFIELD, CUMBERLAND COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The instant controversy began when – shortly before she retired in December 2013 – petitioner requested extended sick leave. Her requests were denied as insufficiently supported because petitioner did not comply with respondent's demands that she 1) provide specific information about her condition, and 2) submit to an examination by the school physician. Respondent stopped petitioner's pay in October 2013, the petition was filed on November 15, 2013, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law on December 3, 2013 – two days after petitioner officially retired.

The parties moved and cross moved for summary disposition, both of which motions were denied on September 25, 2014. Two months later, on November 17, 2014, petitioner's counsel submitted for in camera review – by the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) and respondent's counsel – more detailed information about the medical conditions which had precipitated her requests for sick leave. Said information led to an amicable monetary settlement between the parties.

In their "Settlement Stipulations" dated November 25, 2014, aside from declaring that they had entered into a confidential agreement, the parties wrote:

> Neither Petitioner nor Respondent shall file any exceptions to the opinion of Judge Todd Miller in the underlying case with the full understanding that Judge Miller will be forwarding the decision to the Commissioner for review with a notation that no exceptions were filed by either party[.]

ALJ Miller did indeed forward an Initial Decision to the Commissioner, which appears to approve of the settlement and contemplates the possibility that there might be further issues of policy amenable to consideration by the Commissioner. The Commissioner finds none.

Before the parties settled their differences, the threshold questions in the instant case were 1) what may comprise adequate support for an application for disability leave, and 2) what are the parameters of a Board's right to obtain specific information about the disability underlying an application for disability leave and compensation. These issues were rendered moot by petitioner's in camera submission of medical information. Simply stated, the in camera discovery was apparently deemed by respondent and the ALJ to constitute an adequate foundation for petitioner's application for leave, and respondent was allowed – via the in camera review – access to a greater amount of information than had been provided in the doctor's notes that petitioner had originally submitted with her leave request. Further, the parties' settlement rendered academic any ancillary issues, such as petitioner's contention that withholding her payment for sick leave was a tenure violation.

It is well settled that controversies which have become moot or academic prior to judicial scrutiny are deemed improper subjects for judicial review. See, e.g., Cinque v. Dept. of Corrections, 261 N.J. Super. 242, 243 (App. Div. 1993); Anderson v. Sills, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976). In other words, courts will not usually decide cases in which the issue is hypothetical, a judgment cannot grant effective relief, or the parties do not have concrete adversity of interest, Anderson v. Sills, supra, 143 N.J. Super. 432, 437 (Ch. Div. 1976). An exception to this principle occurs when issues raised in the course of a technically moot controversy are of great public importance, such as procedural requirements relating to involuntary civil commitment (In re Geraghty, 68 N.J. 209, 212), or the validity of a rule adopted by the New Jersey Supreme Court (Busick v. Levine, 63 N.J. 351, 364, appeal dismissed 414 U.S. 1106 (1973)). However, the issues framed by the pleadings in this matter do not rise to that level.

Accordingly, the Commissioner concludes that – in light of the settlement entered into by the parties – there are no issues necessitating the Commissioner's review, and the case is closed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

INITIAL DECISION
OAL DKT. NO. EDU 17329-13
AGENCY DKT. NO. 280-11/13

JEAN M. LANING,
Petitioner,
v.
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWNSHIP OF UPPER DEERFIELD,
Respondent.

Ned Rogovoy, Esq., for petitioner

Frederick A. Jacob, Esq., for respondent (Jacob & Chiarello, LLC)

Record Closed: December 1, 2014 Decided: December 11, 2014

BEFORE W. TODD MILLER, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The present matter involves contested facts as to whether petitioner was legitimately disabled "due to illness or injury" justifying her request for extended sick time or extended leave from her public employment shortly before she retired? Petitioner challenges the Board's authority to make inquiries into her illness beyond the scope of the medical notes she provided to the Superintendent or the Board of Education. The Board contends that sick time requests are tentative and subject to reasonable verification, before approved. Both parties filed motions for summary decision. As indicated herein, there are contested facts regarding the validity of petitioner's sickness or medical condition. By ORDER dated September 25, 2014, the motions for summary decision were DENIED.

DISPOSITIVE PROCEDURAL HISTORY AFTER THE ORDER

The petitioner submitted detailed medical explanation dated November 17, 2014, from a treating physician for an in camera review[1] by the undersigned and opposing counsel. The content was sufficiently more detailed than any prior submissions. The medical details provided after the ORDER was issued were medically sufficient to excuse petitioner from working. Therefore the parties settled their differences after the ORDER denying motions of summary decision was issued. The stipulation of settlement provides that the aforementioned ORDER will become an Initial Decision, reviewable by the Commissioner of Education, because it might contain policy considerations that fall within the Commissioner's expertise. The parties agreed to waive filing exceptions. The remaining contested issues between the parties were resolved amicability and confidentially, due to personal medical concerns and related confidentially requirements.

STATEMENT OF MATERIAL FACTS

1. Petitioner is a ten-month employee with the Upper Deerfield Township School District (Upper Deerfield or Board). Ten-month employees are covered under a bargaining agreement, dated December 7, 2011 (July 1, 2011 to June 30, 2014) Respondent's Brief - Exhibit G. The Board employed petitioner for a total of thirty-eight years.

2. On or about July 22, 2013, Upper Deerfield received a note with written by petitioner's physician Tracy DeBiaso, MD. The letter states as follows:

[1] The medical report dated November 17, 2014, was returned petitioner's attorney to hold as a custodian of the record during the appeal process.

> To whom it may concern:
>
> Jean Laning is under my care, and will not be able to return to work on September 3, 2013. She will need to remain out of work until further notice.
>
> Thanking you in advance for the consideration given to my patient in this matter.
> Respondent's Brief - Exhibit A.

2. On August 12, 2013 the Superintendent of Upper Deerfield wrote a letter to petitioner stating her leave of absence would be granted, contingent upon the following:

> a. You schedule an appointment with our school physician, as a follow-up to certify your condition and treatment. This appointment should be scheduled by August 31, 2013. Dr. Kim is located at 10 Magnolia Avenue, Bridgeton, NJ 856.451.4140.
>
> b. You provide our school physician, as well as our payroll and benefits clerk the specifics of your condition and treatment as the notice from Dr. DeBiaso indicates you are under her care. There is no condition of treatment and it is necessary, given the scope of magnitude of your duties, and the district needs to understand that, based on the conditions and treatment, that the situation is not debilitating to affect performance and/or if specific accommodations are necessary.
>
> c. Any recommendations from our school physician be adhered to, including deeming being fit for work.
> Respondent's Brief - Exhibit B.

3. Petitioner did not challenge the Superintendent's letter or ask for a hearing before the Board.

4. On August 23, 2013, petitioner's leave of absence request was approved by the Board.

5. On September 23, 2013, the Board voted to rescind the leave absence because petitioner did not fulfill the conditions contained in the Superintendent's August 12, 2013, letter including scheduling an appointment with the school doctor by August 31, 2013, or producing documentation detailing the specific nature of her alleged disability.

6. Petitioner retained the services of Ned P. Rogovoy, Esquire. On September 30, 2013, Mr. Rogovoy's advised, in part, as follows:

> Jean Laning will be calling out sick in the short term if she does not have a long term leave of absence and if necessary, we will provide another doctor's note.
>
> ...should her pay stop then we will have no choice but to go to the commissioner...
> Respondent's Brief - Exhibit C.

7. On September 30, 2013, petitioner forwarded a letter to the Superintendent advising that she would be retiring effective December 31, 2013. Respondent's Brief - Exhibit D.

8. On October 3, 2013, Board Counsel submitted a letter to Mr. Rogovoy, Esq. clarifying the Board's obligation to pay sick time through the retirement date. The letter further stated the Board would not allow petitioner to use sick time through her retirement date. The letter states, in part:

> The School Board stands by its decision to revoke Ms. Laning's leave of absence and the process in which it proceeded. The School Board was well within its rights to require additional documentation from Ms. Laning's personal physician and for her to undergo an evaluation by the school physician. Such information is required for the Board to make an informed decision regarding Ms. Laning's request. Ms. Laning's failure to comply with the Board's request is just grounds to deny payment of sick leave benefits.
> Respondent's Brief - Exhibit E.

9. On October 18, 2013, a second letter from Dr. DeBiaso was submitted to the Board. This letter failed to give a specific diagnosis, prognosis or description of petitioner's disability. That note states as follows:

> To whom it may concern:

> Jean Laning is under my care for multiple medical conditions, for this reason she will need to remain out of work until December 31, 2013. For any question or concerns please feel free to contact us.
>
> Thanking you in advance for the consideration given to my patient in this matter.
>
> Sincerely,
> Tracy Debiaso, MD
> Respondent's Brief - Exhibit F.

10. The Board supplied, and petitioner's counsel accepted, a Rice Notice notifying petitioner that her entitlement to a leave of absence would be discussed at its October 22, 2014 meeting (Petition ¶ 8). Petitioner did not appear. The Board again voted to rescind petitioner's leave of absence and voted not to pay sick days.

11. Petitioner was/is a member of the Board of Education in a neighboring district. Evidence supplied to Upper Deerfield indicates petitioner attended scheduled meetings of that Board, in her capacity as a board member, during July, August and September 2013, confirming that she was (apparently) not seriously disabled or ill.

12. The Board issued checks to petitioner every two weeks in the gross amount of $4071.45 (net $2349.08). Her last check or pay period was October 1, 2013, through October 15, 2013.

13. The Board contends that petitioner had, through inadvertence, continued to be paid through October 15, 2013. She has not been paid since this date.

14. Petitioner seeks payment of her salary from October 15, 2013, to November 30, 2013, by drawing down from her accumulated sick time of 121 days.

15. Petitioner officially retired on December 1, 2013. Petitioner avers that her sick time should be allocated as fifty-nine paid sick says from September 3, 2013, to November 30, 2013, leaving a balance of sixty-two accumulated unused sick days.

CONCLUSIONS

Sick leave with full pay for a minimum of ten school days per year is provided by statute for all persons regularly employed by a board of education. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-2 and -3. This includes accumulated sick time. Petitioner's bargaining agreement contains similar provisions. Sick leave is defined as absence from work for "personal disability due to illness or injury" or exclusion on account of a contagious disease. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1. A board of education may require a physician's certificate to be filed with the secretary of the board of education prior to or in connection with approving a request for sick leave N.J.S.A. 18A:30-4.

Calling out sick when a staff member is not sick, is an abuse of sick time that is subject to discipline. State Board of Examiners v. Larry Schumacher, OAL Dkt. No. EDE 07396-03 (Decided 19, 2005); Adopted Comm'r of Ed., (October 13, 2005); In the Matter of the Tenure Hearing of Marcus Miller, School District of the City of Trenton, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 8409-86 (March 6, 1987), adopted, Comm'r. of Ed. (March 31, 1987). Absenteeism impacts morale as well as management's proper and efficient allocation of publically funded resources. Therefore management has an obligation to assure its staff, and the public, that sick time is not abused.

The process of requesting and verifying sick time requests was addressed, in part, in Hynes v. Board of Education, 190 N.J. Super. 36, (App. Div. 1983). Hynes was an expecting mother and tenured teacher that applied for paid sick leave-four weeks before the expected birth and four weeks following the actual date of birth, of her child. Her request was supported by a doctor's certificate.

The local board denied Hynes' request for paid sick leave because she "did not provide sufficient evidence of disability." The superintendent advised Hynes he would reconsider her request if she submitted to an examination by the school doctor. The superintendent indicated that sick leave could be granted if her doctor certified (1) the actual date when the claimed disability or illness started, (2) the nature of the illness or disability, (3) whether such illness or disability prevented the performance of duties as a teacher during the time in question, (4) the treatment prescribed, and (5) the exact date of termination of such illness or disability. Hynes did not supply the requested certifications or submit to an examination by the school physician.

The Hynes court observed, "the statute does not say what the physician's certificate must contains if one is required." Id. at 41. The local board nevertheless demanded a certificate specifying the nature of the disability, notwithstanding her pregnancy. Pregnancy alone was not considered a disability or illness sufficient to be excused for the length time requested by petitioner, in the opinion of the local board.

The State Board recognized a presumption of disability, if the staff member supplied a physician's certification. The State Board reasoned that since Hynes was pregnant with a looming delivery date, and her physician certified as to her inability to work, she must be deemed presumptively disabled. The import from Hynes is that when a staff member supplies a doctor's certificate, they are presumptively disabled. The burden shifts to the Board to overcome the presumption. If the presumption is overcome, paid sick leave may be denied.

In the case at hand, petitioner seeks sick leave pay for the period from October 15, 2013, to November 30, 2013, based upon her claim that she was "disability due to illness or injury." The Board must overcome the presumption that petitioner was personal disability due to "illness or injury" by presenting its own proofs. If the Board is successful, the board may deny petitioner's request for sick leave and compensation during the relevant period. The Board may also file disciplinary or tenure charges for abuse of sick time. The Board may present its own medical evidence during a hearing and also seek discovery[2] from petitioner or her medical provider. Any medical information provided during this process may be submitted with a confidentially order or agreement.

[2] When a client or litigant places their medical history at issue, it has been held that the patient/physician privilege, to a certain extent, is waived. Stempler v. Speidell, 100 N.J. 368 (1985); In re: PPA Litigation, 203 WL 22203734 (N.J. Super., Law Div. 2003). Moreover, private health information may be disclosed in conjunction with judicial or administrative hearings. 45 C.F.R. §164.512. The information may be requested through the discovery process, including use of interviews or subpoenas. The client must be notified of the request and be given an opportunity to respond. If information is disclosed, it still must be afforded appropriate protections. This includes making the PHI non-identifiable, redacting pertinent information, issuing a protective order, reviewing the documents in camera, or sealing the record. Accordingly, the Act provides both the litigants and the Court various options to receive useful and valuable information, while also protecting the litigants from unauthorized or inappropriate disclosure of their medical history.

The bargaining agreement provides that unused sick time is accumulated year to year (Bargaining Agreement - Article Fourteen; 14:1). See also, N.J.S.A. 18A:30-1 et seq. The daily rate of pay for sick days is more than the rate of pay for accumulated sick time pursuant to the bargaining agreement (Article Fourteen; 14:3). Unused sick days are paid to the employees upon retirement at the contractual rate negotiated by the bargaining unit. Manufactured or fictitious sick days may not be used in lieu of working. Sick time may not be "zeroed out[3]" prior to retirement (Article Fourteen; 14:3 – 14.7). Stated differently, staff members are paid more if they get paid for their sick time while they are still employed then if they collect their sick time as part of a retirement package, in accord with their bargaining agreement. The process of calling out sick to "zero out" accumulated sick time as part of a retirement strategy circumvents the bargaining agreement and puts more money in the employee's pocket. Indeed, if proven, it is a subterfuge of the educational statutes and bargaining process by utilizing fictitious sick leave for the purpose of enhanced compensation.

I CONCLUDE that the Board has a statutory right and a managerial obligation as a steward of a tax funded educational operation, to inquiry into sick leave requests it reasonably believes it is not supported by competent medical proofs or which might be an abuse of its sick-time policy. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-4.

Petitioner asserts that tenure procedures are required to invoke a pay stoppage related to sick time, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. I disagree. The purpose of the tenure laws is "to aid in the establishment of a competent and efficient school system by affording teaching-staff members a measure of security in the ranks they hold after years of service." Carpenito v. Rumson Bd. of Educ., 322 N.J. Super. 522, 528-29 (App. Div. 1999). The tenure law prohibits the dismissal or reduction in compensation of a tenured staff member unless it results from inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause, and then only after a hearing held pursuant to the tenure statute. But sick time falls under a separate statute. The board does not have to approve sick time beyond that which is annually provided for by law or bargaining agreement. N.J.S.A. 18A:30-4. If sick leave is denied by the board, no pay will be issued, pending appeal or grievance. The statutory structure indicates that a denial of paid sick time is not the legal equivalent of a tenure charge as it is not a dismissal or reduction in compensation. Tenure charges generally involve disciplinary charges, adjudications and/or penalties fitting the conduct. Tenured staff members are protected against frivolous or political retribution under the tenure laws. Management of sick leave is a ministerial responsibility incumbent upon most employers. It would be illogical to require the filing of tenure charges every time management denies a staff member paid sick leave.

[3] "Zeroed out" suggests that a staff member will call out sick for an extended period to use up their accumulated sick time and be paid the higher rate rather than the lower reimbursement rate paid when they retire. This technique circumvents the terms of the bargaining agreement.

STANDARD FOR SUMMARY DECISION

The OAL rules governing motions for summary decision are found at N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. These provisions mirror the language of R. 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary decision should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits, which may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. I CONCLUDE that the cross-motions for summary decision must be DENIED because there are genuine issues of material facts in dispute.

I CONCLUDE that the remaining issues transmitted to the OAL have been resolved amicable by the parties, that the settlement was freely and voluntarily entered into with the assistance of counsel, and that all contested issue before the OAL are concluded.

ORDER

Based upon the foregoing, it is ORDERED that the cross-motions are hereby DENIED. Thereafter the parties agreed amicably resolve the remaining issues in this matter and agreed to submit the content or substantive rulings in the former ORDER to the Commissioner of Education for review, without filing exceptions.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed an appeal on April 2, 2012 of the respondent's actions regarding her leave time, demanding that certain days of absence charged to her sick leave be re-characterized as days of absence due to injury on the job, and that her sick leave account be adjusted accordingly. The matter was transmitted to the OAL as a contested case, and a hearing was scheduled for July 31, 2014. On the day of the hearing, petitioner contends that the parties reached a settlement agreement, the terms of which were placed on the record. Respondent advised that on October 9, 2014, petitioner's counsel presented a proposed written settlement agreement, which was to be executed bilaterally, first by petitioner and then by respondent.

In December 2012, when no written settlement agreement had been submitted to the OAL, the ALJ issued an Order to Show Cause why the matter should not be dismissed for failure to prosecute. A hearing on the order to show cause was held on December 29, 2014, at which time petitioner's counsel was still unable to produce a signed settlement agreement and could provide no satisfactory explanation for same. Respondent subsequently requested dismissal of the matter. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the instant matter dismissed with prejudice for failure to prosecute.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the matter is appropriately dismissed for failure to prosecute, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter.

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner filed a pro se challenge of respondent's determination to deny his application for teacher certification. Emergent relief was denied following a hearing on July 28, 2014, and the matter was subsequently returned to the OAL for a hearing on the merits. A telephone prehearing conference was scheduled for February 3, 2015, at which petitioner failed to appear. The matter was then returned to the Department of Education for disposition.

Upon review, the Commissioner found that: the record reflects that petitioner did not appear at the scheduled hearing, but did submit his explanation for his non-appearance in writing on February 5, 2015, i.e., that he had been unavailable due to his work schedule; accordingly, if the ALJ – upon review of petitioner's explanation for his non-appearance – concluded that petitioner lacks good cause for his failure to appear and declined to reschedule the matter, an initial decision explaining the basis for that conclusion is required under N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c). For this reason, the Commissioner determined that the matter must be remanded to the OAL pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.7(a), for further action in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c).

RESPONDENT.	:

This matter was returned to the Department for disposition due to petitioner's failure to appear at a February 3, 2015 telephone prehearing conference. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.7(a), the Commissioner remands the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for further action in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c), for the reasons stated herein.

Within the time period specified in the Notice of Return-Failure to Appear issued by the Office of Administrative Law on February 10, 2015, petitioner sent the Department a letter regarding his failure to appear and referenced therein a fax sent to Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) Ascione's chambers that "gave reason" for same. Upon careful review of the record, it is apparent that petitioner called the ALJ's chambers on February 4, 2015 (one day after the scheduled telephone prehearing conference) regarding his failure to appear and explained that he had been working. A staff member then informed petitioner that he should submit his explanation in writing. In response, petitioner indicated that he couldn't fax a letter to chambers on that date because he was working, but that he would do so the following day. The record contains a fax from petitioner – received on February 5, 2015 – indicating he was unavailable due to his work schedule.

N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4 governs the actions to be taken upon a party's failure to appear at any OAL proceeding. When a party fails to appear, the ALJ shall hold the matter for one day before taking any action. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(a). If the ALJ receives an explanation from the non-appearing party within one day and concludes that the party lacked good cause for failing to appear, "the judge may refuse to reschedule the matter and shall issue an initial decision explaining the basis for that conclusion, or may reschedule the matter" and order sanctions at his discretion. N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c)(2).

Here, the record reflects that petitioner was properly notified of the telephone prehearing conference scheduled for February 3, 2015, but failed to appear. The next day, petitioner contacted the ALJ's chambers by telephone to provide an explanation and was directed to submit his reasons in writing; he complied with that request. If – upon review of the explanation provided – the ALJ concluded petitioner lacked good cause for his failure to appear and declined to reschedule the matter, then an initial decision explaining the basis for that conclusion is required under N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c)(2). Because an initial decision was not issued here, a remand is warranted.

Consequently, this matter is remanded to the Office of Administrative Law for further action in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.4(c).

IT IS SO ORDERED.

ELIZABETH BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	DECISION
UNION COUNTY	:

SYNOPSIS

The School Ethics Commission (Commission) found that respondent – a member of the Elizabeth Board of Education (Board) – violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act when he voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC, as auditing firm for the Board. Respondent was engaged in a separate business partnership known as 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC, with Helder Mendonca – a principal member of the auditing firm – at the time he voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners as auditor for the Board. The Commission recommended the penalty of reprimand in this matter.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred that reprimand is the appropriate penalty for the violation found. Accordingly, the Commissioner directed that respondent be reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IN THE MATTER OF ARMENIO MONTEIRO, JR.,	:
a/k/a TONY MONTEIRO,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
ELIZABETH BOARD OF EDUCATION,	:	DECISION
UNION COUNTY	:

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) have been reviewed. This matter involves an appeal of the Commission's June 25, 2014 decision finding respondent-Appellant Armenio Monteiro, Jr. (respondent) violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act by voting to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC, as auditing firm for the Elizabeth Board of Education (Board) while he was engaged in a separate business partnership known as 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC, with Helder Mendonca, a principal member of the auditing firm.[1] The Commission recommended a penalty of reprimand for the violation. Respondent appealed the Commission's finding of a violation pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.3(c). Complainants Sammie Muhammad, Jineen Holmes, Amanda Leon and Brunilda Cruz (complainants) filed opposition, and respondent replied thereafter.[2]

In his appeal to the Commissioner, respondent argues that: the finding of a violation is not supported by the factual record; the Commission acted arbitrarily and capriciously; the

[1] The Commission's written decision summarily disposed of the matter pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.7(c)1 as the respondent admitted the material facts alleged in the complaint.

[2] Along with their opposition, complainants submitted a motion to strike respondent's preliminary statement from his appeal brief. Thereafter, respondent filed opposition. The Commissioner notes that N.J.A.C. 6A:4-2.8, which sets forth the requirements for formal briefs, does not preclude the use of preliminary statements.

Commission improperly interpreted N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c); and the penalty of reprimand should be voided. Because he held only a 10% interest in 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC[3], respondent contends that he did not have a direct or indirect financial involvement that would reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment. In support thereof, respondent emphasizes that the Act requires financial interests greater than 10% to be reported on board member annual financial disclosure statements.[4] Since his interest was not a "disclosable interest," respondent claims that it cannot reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment and urges the Commissioner to interpret N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) "consistently with the financial reporting provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26."[5] (Respondent's brief at 9)

Complainants contend that the Commission's finding of a violation should be upheld and that the penalty of reprimand is appropriate. Since respondent admits he voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC, while he and Helder Mendonca were business partners in 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC, complainants argue that the Commission's finding of a violation is not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Also, citing School Ethics Commission, Advisory Opinion A17-04, dated July 26, 2004, complainants stress that the size of a financial interest is irrelevant when determining if there is "direct or indirect financial involvement" under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c).

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner finds that the Commission's decision as to the violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) is supported by sufficient

[3] 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC was sold on May 30, 2013. (Respondent's brief at 4)

[4] Under N.J.S.A. 18A:12-23, an "interest" is defined as the ownership or control of more than 10% of the profits, assets, or stock of a business, excluding the control of assets in a labor union. N.J.S.A. 18A:12-26a(4) requires interests to be disclosed annually.

[5] Respondent's reply, in large part, reiterates the arguments previously set forth in his appeal brief and before the Commission.

credible evidence and the respondent has not established that the decision was arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law.[6] N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a). The undisputed factual record supports the Commission's determination that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) by voting to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC, as auditing firm for the Board while engaged in a separate business partnership with Helder Mendonca, a principal member of the auditing firm. The size of respondent's interest in 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC is irrelevant. A small financial interest – or no financial interest at all – can nevertheless constitute direct or indirect financial involvement that might reasonably be expected to impair a Board member's objectivity or independence of judgment. See Advisory Opinion A17-04, supra, (employee lacked a financial interest in the firm, but nevertheless had an indirect financial involvement). Regardless of the exact size of respondent's interest, a reasonable member of the public might expect respondent's financial involvement with Helder Mendonca in 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC, to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment when he voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC.

Although respondent asserts that N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) should be interpreted to preclude interests not greater than 10% from constituting direct or indirect financial involvement, his argument is unpersuasive. The proper interpretation of a statute begins with its plain language. See GE Solid State, Inc. v. Director, Division of Taxation, 132 N.J. 298, 307 (1993). Here, the Legislature's use of the word "involvement" cannot be ignored. "Involvement" neither presupposes nor requires a financial "interest." See Advisory Opinion A17-04, supra. On the contrary, a financial "involvement" can encompass a broad scope of business affiliations and is distinguishable from an "interest" under the Act. The Commission's interpretation of N.J.S.A. 18A-12:24(c) supports a result consistent with the overall statutory scheme requiring "[B]oard members...[to] avoid conduct which is in violation of their public trust or which creates a justifiable impression among the public that such trust is being violated." N.J.S.A. 18A:12-22a; School Ethics Commission v. Michael Kilmurray, Lacey Township Board of Education, Ocean County, SEC Decision No. C12-94, decided February 24, 1998, at 3. ("The Legislature's findings and declarations reinforce the notion that the purpose of the Act is to develop standards that avoid not just unethical conduct, but also the perception thereof.").

[6] The Commission also found that the respondent did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25, 12-26 and 12-24(a) and (b).

As to the penalty imposed, the Commissioner also accepts the Commission's recommendation that a reprimand is the appropriate penalty in this matter – for the reasons expressed in its decision. Therefore, the Commission's recommended penalty will not be disturbed.

Accordingly, IT IS ORDERED that Armenio Monteiro, Jr. is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

	:	DECISION SUMMARY DISPOSITION

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

This matter arises from a complaint filed on May 28, 2013 by Sammie Muhammad, Jineen Holmes, Amanda Leon, and Brunilda Cruz, alleging that Armenio Monteiro, Jr., a/k/a/ Tony Monteiro, President of the Elizabeth Board of Education ("Board"), violated the School Ethics Act (Act), N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. The complaint specifically alleges that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-25 & 26 by failing to file and/or failed to disclose the requisite information on the annual statements as well as violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(a), (b) and (c) of the Act. By letter dated June 11, 2013, the Commission notified the respondent that charges were filed against him and advised him that he had 20 days to answer the complaint. On July 3, 2013, respondent's attorney requested and was granted a brief extension of time to file a responsive pleading. Respondent filed a Motion to Dismiss in lieu of an Answer on August 7, 2013, alleging that the complaint was frivolous. Complainants filed a reply thereto on September 9, 2013, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:28-8.2.

By letter dated September 10, 2013, the complainants and the respondent were notified that this matter would be scheduled for discussion by the Commission at its meeting on September 24, 2013 in order to make a determination regarding the respondent's Motion to Dismiss and allegation of frivolousness. At its meeting on September 24, 2013, the Commission voted to deny the respondent's Motion to Dismiss in its entirety and found the complaint not frivolous. The Commission advised the parties that the matter would be scheduled for a probable cause determination at a later date and directed the respondent to file an Answer on all counts of the complaint within 20 days of receipt of this Decision. On November 22, 2014, the respondent filed his Answer.

By letter of February 7, 2014, the parties were advised that the Commission would review the matter at its next regular meeting on February 18, 2014. Because of State closings due to inclement weather, the matter came before the Commission at its meeting on March 6, 2014. The Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the respondent may have violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) in Count 3, but found no probable cause as to all other allegations; and voted to decide the matter by summary decision pursuant to N.J.A.C 6:28-10.7(c)1 since there was no genuine issue of material fact that would require an evidentiary hearing. The respondent was granted 20 days to submit a statement why he should not be found in violation of the School Ethics Act. After a short extension, the respondent filed his statement on April 28, 2014 and served a copy on the complainant, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A28-1.7. The parties were notified by letter of May 2, 2014 that the Commission would review the matter on summary disposition at the regular meeting scheduled on May 27, 2014.

At the meeting on May 27, 2014, the Commission reviewed the record and respondent's statement and determined that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act and recommended the penalty of reprimand.

SUMMARY OF THE RECORD

The remaining issue before the Commission is limited to the alleged violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) in Count 3 of the complaint when the respondent voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners LLC (Mendonca) as auditor for the Elizabeth Public School District. The record is clear that the Mendonca firm (formerly Mendonca and Suarez, LLC) has served the District in this capacity since the 1999-2000 school year. The respondent does not dispute his vote although he asserts that it was unintentional.

The complainants contend that the respondent, though not a member of Mendonca, maintained a membership with the auditor and held an interest in a common property named 147 Westfield, LLC in which the respondent owned and operated a restaurant. The complainants aver that the respondent's vote for the Mendonca auditing firm was a clear conflict of interest because Helder Mendonca, a principal in Mendonca and Partners, LLC is the respondent's business partner in the property known as 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC. Moreover, the complainants aver that Helder Mendonca is also a signatory on the Mortgage and Assignment of the property located at 147 Westfield Avenue West. Consequently, respondent's affirmative vote to re-hire Mendonca violated subsection (c) of the Act.

The record shows that the respondent initially served on the Board between December 14, 2006 and November 20, 2008. In September 2012, the respondent was appointed as a member of the Board to fill an unexpired term, and then elected in November 2012 to serve a three-year term, which expires on December 31, 2015. The respondent argues in his statement that there is no factual basis to support this violation since during his terms of service he had no financial interest in Mendonca and no disclosable interest in 147 Westfield Avenue LLC since he did not own a share greater than 10% and did not derive income from the property in excess of $2000.

Moreover, although the respondent historically abstains from voting on resolutions for payment to the company, on the evening of the reorganization, the respondent became overwhelmed with running the meeting for the first time that he inadvertently engaged in the vote for Mendonca. He does not deny that he voted to retain the firm at the reorganization meeting. Finally, the respondent contends that he is not required to abstain from the vote and that his vote was not the critical vote to secure the appointment.

The respondent does not object to the resolution of this matter on a summary basis.

FINDINGS OF FACT

The Commission finds the following to be undisputed facts:

1. Since 1999-2000 school year, Mendonca and Partners, LLC (formerly Mendonca and Suarez, LLC) has served the Elizabeth School District as auditor uninterrupted for the past 15 years.

2. Respondent did not have an interest in Mendonca Partners, LLC.
3. Respondent was engaged in a partnership with Helder Mendonca, a principal in Mendonca and Partners LLC, in an enterprise known as 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC.
4. Helder Mendonca is also a signatory on the Mortgage and Assignment of the property located 147 Westfield Avenue.
5. The respondent first served the Board between December 14, 2006 and November 20, 2008 and was appointed in September 2012 to fill an unexpired term.
6. During all those times, the respondent abstained from voting to reappoint the Mendonca firm and also abstained from voting on payment to the firm for services rendered to the Board.
7. In November 2012, the respondent was elected to the Board to serve a three year term expiring December 31, 2015.
8. The respondent was sworn in on January 3, 2013 and elected to the office of Board President.
9. At the reorganization meeting, the respondent voted to reappoint Mendonca and Partners, LLC as auditor for the District and failed to abstain from the votes.

ANALYSIS

In cases involving the application of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c), the Commission considers the language in N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) which provides:

> c. No school official shall act in his official capacity in any matter where he, a member of his immediate family, or a business organization in which he has an interest, has a direct or indirect financial involvement that might reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment. No school official shall act in his official capacity in any matter where he or a member of his immediate family has a personal involvement that is or creates some benefit to the school official or member of his immediate family;

No longer is the focus on an interest greater than 10% or on income derived from a business exceeding $2000. Under subsection (c), these elements are irrelevant. Instead, the gravamen is whether the respondent has taken action in his official capacity in a matter where he, or a member of his immediate family had a direct or indirect financial involvement (emphasis added) that might reasonably be expected to impair his objectivity or independence of judgment or whether the school official has a personal involvement that is or creates some benefit to him. As the respondent points out in his statement, the Commission found a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) where an indirect involvement might reasonably be expected to impair a school official's objectivity or independence of judgment. What "might reasonably be expected" is determined by what a reasonable member of the public would believe. (Statement, p.9) See I/M/O Patricia Haines, Haddonfield Board of Education, Camden County, Docket No. C07-00, (September 27, 2000), Commissioner of Education Decision, Docket No. 389-00SEC (November 27, 2000) and School Ethics Commission Advisory Opinion, A17-04 (July 26, 2004).

The record establishes that the respondent engaged in a business partnership known as 147 Westfield Avenue, LLC with Heller Mendonca in which the respondent owned and operated a restaurant on that site. Further, the respondent was sufficiently familiar with the Mendonca firm since the respondent first sat on the Board in 2006 as the Mendonca auditing firm served the Board uninterrupted from 1999 to the present. This relationship was of such significance to the respondent that he voluntarily abstained from any votes to reappoint the firm or to pay for its services. The Commission determines that the respondent and Heller Mendonca were directly linked through this partnership. Under Haines, supra, because a reasonable member of the public might believe that this conflict borne of a financial involvement whether direct or indirect, might reasonably impair the respondent's objectivity or independence of judgment, the Board member should take no official action to benefit the firm and should recuse himself from all matters involving the firm. Failing to do so creates a justifiable impression among the public that their trust is being violated. SEC v. Michael Kilmurray, Lacey Township Board of Education, Ocean County, C12-94 (February 24, 1998).

Moreover, by taking official action in voting for Mendonca, the respondent has provided an additional financial benefit to the accounting firm where one of the named principals is in a separate partnership with this respondent Board member. Finally it is of no moment that the respondent did not intend to vote for the firm. The Commission has determined that it is the responsibility of a Board member to know the items to be voted on in any given meeting and to recuse himself from any vote in which he has a conflict at the time of the vote. See I/M/O Carmelo Garcia, Hoboken Board of Education, Hudson County, C41-05, October 24, 2006.

DECISION

Based on the foregoing, the Commission determines that the respondent, Armenio Monteiro, violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act when he voted to reappoint Mendonca as the auditing firm for the Elizabeth Board of Education when his business partner is a principal in that firm and recommends the penalty of reprimand.

PENALTY

The Commission recommends a penalty of reprimand, as it did in matters where a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) was found and a comparable violation was endorsed. In recommending the penalty, the Commission notes that a reprimand was the appropriate penalty when it found that a personal involvement might reasonably be expected to impair the respondents' objectivity in voting to reappoint the auditing firm. I/M/O Richard Longo and Frank Sedaghi, Toms River Board of Education, Ocean County, C05-98 and C07-98 (October 26, 1998), Commissioner of Education Decision No 56-99SEC, decided March 4, 1999. The Commission also notes that a reprimand is the proper penalty where a Board member was unaware of the item on the agenda in which she has a conflict and inadvertently votes. I/M/O Sheri Scozzaro, Fairfield Twp. Board of Education, Essex County, C09-97 (November 25, 1997), Commissioner of Education Decision No. 17-98SEC, decided January 21, 1998.

Pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29(c), this decision n shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Education for review of the School Ethics Commission's recommended sanction. Parties may either: 1) file exceptions to the recommended sanction; 2) file an appeal of the Commission's finding of violation; or 3) file both exceptions to the recommended sanction together with an appeal of the finding of violation.

Parties taking exception to the recommended sanction of the Commission but not disputing the Commission's finding of violation may file, within 13 days from the date the Commission's decision is forwarded to the Commissioner, written exceptions regarding the recommended penalty to the Commissioner. The forwarding date shall be the mailing date to the parties, indicated below. Such exceptions must be forwarded to: Commissioner of Education, c/o Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, NJ 08625, marked "Attention: Comments on Ethics Commission Sanction." A copy of any comments filed must be sent to the School Ethics Commission and all other parties.

Parties seeking to appeal the Commission's finding of violation must file an appeal pursuant to the standards set forth at N.J.A.C. 6A:4 within 30 days of the filing date of the decision from which the appeal is taken. The filing date shall be three days after the date of mailing to the parties, as shown below. In such cases, the Commissioner's review of the Commission's recommended sanction will be deferred and incorporated into the Commissioner's review of the finding of violation on appeal. Where a notice of appeal has been filed on or before the due date for exceptions to the Commission's recommended sanction (13 days from the date the decision is mailed by the Commission), exceptions need not be filed by that date, but may be incorporated into the appellant's briefs on appeal.

Resolution Adopting Decision – C26-13

Whereas, the Commission found probable cause to credit the allegation that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the School Ethics Act; and

Whereas, at its meeting on March 6, 2014, the Commission voted to resolve this matter by summary decision, pursuant to N.J.A.C 6:28-10.7(c)1; and

Whereas, the School Ethics Commission has considered the pleadings filed by the parties, and the respondent's statement; and

Whereas at its meeting on May 27, 2014, the Commission found that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) of the Act and recommended a penalty of reprimand; and

Whereas, the Commission reviewed the decision recommending a reprimand against Mr. Montiero and finds that the within decision accurately memorializes the Commission's findings of fact and conclusions of law;

Now Therefore Be It Resolved, that the Commission hereby adopts the within decision and directs it staff to notify all parties to this action of its decision.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING :

OF FLORENCE RUFFIN HARRISON, : COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT : DECISION

OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY. :

SYNOPSIS

Petitioning Board filed tenure charges of incapacity against respondent, a tenured teacher, and sought to terminate her employment with the district. Neither respondent nor any attorney acting on her behalf filed an answer to the petition following notice pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4.

The Commissioner concluded that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.4(h), the allegations – which respondent has chosen not to deny – may be deemed admitted and are sufficient to warrant termination of the respondent from her tenured position. Accordingly, the Commissioner granted summary decision to the petitioner, dismissed the respondent from her tenured position in petitioner's school district, and forwarded a copy of this decision to the State Board of Examiners for review and action as that body deems appropriate.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

ISSUED 3/13/15

AGENCY DKT NO. 7-1/15

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING	:
OF FLORENCE RUFFIN HARRISON,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT	:	DECISION
OF THE CITY OF NEWARK, ESSEX COUNTY.	:

For the Petitioner, Rita F. Barone, Esq.
No appearance by or on behalf of Respondent, Florence Ruffin Harrison

This matter was opened before the Commissioner of Education on January 12, 2015, through tenure charges of incapacity certified by Cami Anderson, State District Superintendent of the State-Operated School District of the City of Newark, together with supporting evidence against Florence Ruffin Harrison, a tenured teacher in the District's employ. The District provided respondent with written notice of such certification at the respondent's last known address, via Federal Express, sent on or about January 9, 2015. The District also served a copy of the tenure charges on the respondent's union representative.

On January 13, 2015, the Commissioner directed the respondent – via both certified and regular mail – to file an answer to the charges. This communication clearly provided notice to respondent that, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.3 and 6A:3-5.4, an individual against whom tenure charges are certified "shall have 15 days from the date such charges are filed with the Commissioner to file a written response to the charges with the Commissioner," and that failure to answer within the prescribed period would – absent granting of an extension for good cause shown – result in the charges being deemed admitted. No reply to the tenure charges was received from or on behalf of respondent.

The certified tenure charges and statement of supporting evidence filed by the petitioner in this matter indicate that during the 2013-2014 school year, the respondent was scheduled for an Independent Medical Examination (IME) because the respondent's behavior called into question her ability to perform her duties as a teacher. The IME recommended a thorough neurological workup due to the fast deterioration of the respondent's cognitive ability and her incontinence. According to the IME, the respondent was not fit to return to work. As a result, the District placed the respondent on paid administrtative leave effective April 30, 2014. The District informed the respondent that, as a condition of her leave, she was required to keep the District informed of her status and efforts to return to a position in the District.

By letter dated July 21, 2014, the District advised the respondent that it had not received any report from her physician nor any communication from the respondent advising the District of her medical status. This letter also advised the respondent that she had been granted administrative leave in order to secure medical attention, and that she had an obligation to keep the District informed of her status. By letter dated July 25, 2014, the District again reiterated the conditions under which leave had been granted, and informed the respondent that disciplinary action would be taken if she did not provide the District with an update on her medical status. To date, the District has not received a response from the respondent.

Deeming the allegations to be admitted and noting that respondent has failed to respond to the charges certified against her, the Commissioner finds that the District's charge of incapacity against the respondent has been proven and that it warrants respondent's dismissal. The respondent's IME and her failure to abide by the terms under which she was granted administrative leave demonstrate that she is incapable of fulfilling the demands of her position as a teacher in the District. Accordingly, summary decision is hereby granted to the petitioner, and the respondent is dismissed from her tenured position with the District. This matter will be transmitted to the State Board of Examiners for action against respondent's certificate(s) as that body deems appropriate.

IT IS SO ORDERED.*

WHEREAS, Petitioner, New Jersey Department of Education, School Ethics Commission ("SEC"), and Respondent, Matthew Conlon("Respondent"), have mutually agreed to settle the above-captioned matter, with JOHN J. HOFFMAN, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey, by Caroline Jones, Deputy Attorney General, appearing on behalf of the SEC, and Drew Murray, Esq., appearing on behalf of Respondent; and

WHEREAS, this matter arose from the SEC's decision of June 26, 2013, finding probable cause to credit the allegations that Respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (c); and

WHEREAS, the settlement of this matter shall not constitute precedent or be considered an admission of guilt in other pending or future litigation:

NOW, THEREFORE, the parties hereto agree to settle the above-captioned matter upon the following terms:

1. Respondent acknowledges that his actions constitute a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24 (c).
2. The parties agree that the SEC will recommend that the Commissioner impose the penalty of a reprimand.
3. The Commissioner agrees that he will adopt the SEC's recommendation and impose the penalty of a reprimand for the conduct described in the attached affidavit.
4. By accepting the penalty of a reprimand, Respondent agrees to waive any and all hearings to which he is entitled pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:12-29 and N.J.A.C. 6A:28-10.7, and Respondent further agrees that he will not oppose the reprimand.

Commissioner of Education
As to penalty only.

AFFIDAVIT OF MATTHEW CONLON

I Matthew Conlon being duly sworn according to law upon his oath deposes and says;

1. I was elected to the Board of Education for the Township of West Milford at age 19 in April 2011.

2. My mother, Janet Conlon, has been and continues to be an employee of the school district.

3. My mother's status as a family member and an employee of the district precludes me from certain functions.

4. For example, I cannot vote or participate on the superintendent's renewal, evaluation, goals, bonuses, or any other contractual terms as the superintendent is considered to be my mother's superior.

5. Soon after I was elected I was told by the Board Attorney that I cannot participate in a search for a new superintendent until all internal candidates were removed from consideration.

6. I was also informed that I could vote on whether or not to hire a specific outside candidate as long as all internal candidates were no longer being considered.

7. On or about May 15, 2012 the Board listed agenda items XII part 1 and XII part 2. Item number 1 was to hire a new superintendent and item number 2 was to negotiate contractual terms.

8. Prior to the meeting I received notice from the School Board Association attorney and the New Jersey School Board Association that I could vote on item number 1, to hire the superintendent, but that I must abstain on item 2, confirming the negotiated contractual terms. Unfortunately, item number 1 also listed the superintendent's salary which is considered a contractual term.

9. I never intended to vote on the contractual term as evidenced by my abstaining on item number 2.

10. I acknowledge that my vote on item number 1 violated the New Jersey School Ethics Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:24-12(c).

11. Moreover, and more importantly in the interest of justice and to save the taxpayers of West Milford the time, effort and money to prosecute this matter I will accept the penalty of a reprimand. This Affidavit will be part of the record. I intend to explain the conclusion at a future Board meeting, if the Board does not object.

I hereby certify that the foregoing statements made by me are true. I am aware that if any of the foregoing statements made by me are willfully false, I am subject to punishment.

SUBJECT: Settlement Proposal
I/M/O Matthew Conlon, W. Milford Board of Education
SEC Docket No. C46-12
OAL Docket No. EEC 11175-2013N

Procedural Background

This matter arises from a Complaint filed with the School Ethics Commission ("Commission") on October 23, 2012, by James J. Foody ("Complainant") against Matthew P. Conlon ("Conlon" or "Respondent"). The Complaint alleges violations of the School Ethics Act ("Act"), N.J.S.A. 18A:12-21 et seq. The Complainant asserted that Conlon's mother is an employee of the District. Her direct supervisor is the Business Administrator, who in turn reports to the Superintendent. At the time of the Complaint, Conlon was a minor who lived with his mother and father.

The Complaint alleges two violations of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c). First, the Complaint alleges that Respondent voted on the school budget on March 27, 2012 in violation of the Act. Second, the Complaint alleges that Conlon voted on the appointment and salary of the Superintendent on May 15, 2012 in violation of the Act.

The Commission found probable cause to credit the second violation concerning Conlon's vote on the Superintendent's appointment only.

This matter was transferred to the Office of Administrative Law for a hearing. A hearing is currently scheduled before Administrative Law Judge Candido on November 21, 2014. Respondent has put forth this settlement offer in an attempt to resolve this matter without the need for a hearing.

Factual Background

After completing discovery and speaking with all of the relevant witnesses, the facts relevant to this matter are as follows:

Conlon's mother is an employee of the District. She is employed as a secretary in the Board business office. She reports directly to the School Business Administrator/Board Secretary, Barbara Francisco, who in turn reports to the Superintendent. Ms. Conlon's employment is dictated largely by her membership in a collective bargaining unit. At the time of the vote, Conlon was a minor and he still currently lives at home with his parents. He does not pay rent or assist financially in the support of the family home. He receives health insurance through his mother's plan and Ms. Conlon pays the premium. Conlon pays for his own schooling and his own vehicle payments. He relies upon himself for spending money. To that end, Conlon is guided by Advisory Opinion A06-12, issued on April 17, 2012, in which the Commission advised that it considered Conlon's mother to be included in the term "immediate family member" and that he should not participate in any vote that affected his mother's employment either directly or indirectly or risk a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c).

At the May 15, 2012 Board meeting, the agenda included two votes involving the Superintendent. Resolution XII(1) stated:

BE IT RESOLVED, the West Milford Township Board of Education appoints JAMES V. McLAUGHLIN, Ed.D., to the position of Superintendent of West Milford Township Public Schools, effective July 1, 2012, at the annual salary of $165,500.00.

Conlon voted on Part 1 of the resolution which passed unanimously.

Resolution XII(2) stated:

BE IT RESOLVED, the West Milford Township Board of Education approves a contract with JAMES V. McLAUGHLIN, Ed.D., Superintendent of West Milford Township Public Schools, effective July 1, 2012, through June 30, 2015.

Conlon abstained from voting on Part 2 of the resolution, which passed. The Superintendent's contract, including the salary term, was previously negotiated by a committee of the Board which did not include Conlon. Additionally the contact and salary were approved by the Executive County Superintendent ("ECS") prior to the vote.

The Business Administrator will testify that the vote was split in this manner as to avoid a conflict with Conlon voting on anything other than the appointment of the Superintendent. The Business Administrator will also testify in West Milford, the resolutions for appointment are often written in a manner that includes the salary amount. All Board members received an advance agenda the Friday before the Board meeting which included the proposed resolution with the salary language, although the name of the candidate and the exact salary were blank because the contract had not yet been approved by the ECS. Once the ECS approved the contract and salary, Board members were issued a hand carry which included the resolution with the name and salary terms included. McLaughlin was not an in-house candidate, and there is no evidence that Conlon or Conlon's mother had any familiarity with McLaughlin as a candidate. Prior to the May 15, 2012 vote, both Conlon and the Business Administrator sought legal advice as to which matters Conlon should refrain from voting owing to his mother's employment in the district. The legal advice did not specifically opine on the exact language of the resolution, but advised that a vote on appointment was not a violation. Conlon contends that it was not his intent to vote on any contract or salary terms.

Proposed Terms of Settlement

A draft of Respondent's affidavit, which sets forth his settlement proposal and arguments in support of his proposal is attached for the Commission's consideration.

In his affidavit, Respondent admits that on May 15, 2012 he voted on agenda item XII(1). Respondent admits that a "strict interpretation" of the law concludes that his vote on item XII(1) was not consistent with the New Jersey Code of Ethics.[1] Respondent avers that he never intended vote on contractual term, as evidenced by his abstention from item number 2. Respondent is willing to accept a Reprimand for that conduct. Respondent further proposes that his affidavit be part of the record and that he be permitted to explain himself at a future Board meeting.

Analysis

It is important to note, that the Commission found probable cause in this matter prior to the Commission's decision in Carol Martinez v. Francis Albolino, C45-11 (June 27, 2012). In Martinez, the Commission reaffirmed that a Board member must avoid involvement in the Superintendent's employment issues, once the Superintendent is hired. Additionally, the Commission held that a Board member whose immediate family member is employed in the district may not participate in the search, selection and/or vote for a new superintendent irrespective of whether and to what degree the

---

[1] Please note that I have suggested to Mr. Conlon's attorney that the affidavit be modified to refer to the "School Ethics Act" rather than the "New Jersey Code of Ethics." Mr. Conlon's attorney has agreed to this change, although an updated version was not available at this time of this memo. The recommendations contained herein are with the understanding that this change will be made.

immediate family member is familiar with the candidate. Id. In doing so, the Commission vacated prior decisions that held that the hiring of a superintendent candidate unfamiliar to the Board member's family member was not a violation of the Act. Id. Because the Martinez respondents were guided by prior Commission opinions and decisions, the Commission did not find probable cause to credit a violation of the Act. The Martinez holding therefore was to be applied prospectively only.

Here, it is not alleged that Conlon's mother had any familiarity with McLaughlin. Therefore, under guidance and decisions prior to Martinez, Conlon would not be in violation of the Act for merely voting to hire Superintendent McLaughlin. Indeed, discovery has revealed that Conlon received legal advice to that effect, and it is the reason why the vote was split with a vote on the appointment preceding a vote on the new Superintendent's contract. Accordingly, the mere fact that Conlon voted to hire the Superintendent is not at issue as long as Martinez is not applied retroactively.

Therefore, the sole legal issue in this matter is whether Conlon's vote on the appointment resolution which included the language "at the annual salary of $165,500.00" is a violation of the Act, and if so, what penalty should be assigned. There is not prior guidance or decisions which are directly dispositive of this legal issue.

The Penalty Proposed

However, the proposed penalty of reprimand is consistent with the Commission's penalties in legally and factually similar cases. For example, in I/M/O Charles Carey, C33-08 (March 24, 2010), the Commission found a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24(c) when a board member voted to approve the salary for the Superintendent. The Board member's wife was employed as a secretary to the nursing office of the district's high school. As is the case in the instant matter, the Board member's family member did not report directly to the Superintendent, and the majority of the family member's employment terms were dictated by a collective bargaining agreement. The Commission voted for the penalty of reprimand, finding that such a penalty is consistent with prior matters where, as here, there was a "single instance of voting on matter where they were conflicted." Id. at 4 (citing numerous cases). In I/M/O Charles Carey, the Commission also distinguished School Ethics Commission v. Gunning, C15-93 (September 22, 1994), wherein the Commission recommended the penalty of censure when the board member voted on a salary for the Superintendent and his spouse was the Superintendent's confidential secretary, and not a member of a collective bargaining unit. The facts and circumstances that arise in this matter are factually and legally similar to the Commission's prior matters where reprimand was found to be the appropriate penalty. Accordingly, the penalty of reprimand would likely be the result the Commission could expect at hearing.

Moreover, there are additional factors present here which in past practice the Commission has recognized as impacting the appropriate penalty. Documents obtained in discovery reveal that Conlon did receive legal advice regarding the issue of hiring the Superintendent which is consistent with the Commission's guidance prior to Martinez. See Martinez, supra; I/M/O John Harrison, Ewing Township Board of Education, C13-94 (December 14, 1995) Commissioner of Education Decision No, 78-96 (March 6, 1996)(Commissioner finding mitigating factors to decrease penalty from censure to reprimand). However, it could be counter-argued that this advice is not dispositive of the issue of a violation because the advice did not directly address the "at the annual salary" language. Additionally, Conlon abstained from voting on the Superintendent's contract giving credence to his assertion that he was not aware that he was at risk for a violation on the prior. The vote was a "single instance" of voting on the appointment with the salary language. See I/M/O Charles Carey, supra. Finally, Conlon's mother's employment is guided by her membership in a collective bargaining unit and she does not report directly to the Superintendent. See e.g. Advisory Opinion A10-00; A07-06.

Conclusion

Based upon the foregoing discussion and analysis, it is within the discretion of the Commission whether to accept Respondent's proposal to settle this matter for a reprimand.

WHEREAS, the tenure charges are attached to this Agreement as Exhibit A and incorporated herein by reference; and

WHEREAS, Mulligan acknowledges the validity of the tenure charges and admits certain prior inefficiencies and attendance problems; and

WHEREAS, Mulligan has expressed a sincere desire to improve and would like to remain in the employ of the District; and

WHEREAS, the District would like to continue to employ Mulligan in accordance with the terms of this Agreement;

NOW, THEREFORE, the District and Mulligan agree as follows:

1. Mulligan shall serve a suspension without pay from the date the District certified the tenure charges (December 3, 2014) until the date Mulligan signs this Agreement.

2. Mulligan shall be reinstated at Camden High School, with the understanding that her assignment may thereafter change in accordance with the applicable collective bargaining agreement and New Jersey law.

3. The District shall withdraw its tenure charges against Mulligan without prejudice, and Mulligan shall remain in the employ of the District with all of the same rights and benefits to which she has been entitled to this point, subject to the following terms:

   (a) Absenteeism. Mulligan shall not be absent more than 10 days in any of the next five school years; provided, however, that District-approved professional development leave, District-approved bereavement leave, District-approved jury duty, and District-approved FMLA leave shall not count toward the 10-day limit. If, leaving aside such leave, Mulligan exceeds the 10-day limit in any of the next five school years, that shall constitute a material breach of this Agreement regardless of the reason(s) for the absences. Mulligan acknowledges and agrees that such a breach shall, in light of her prior attendance record and the fact that this Agreement signifies her last chance to correct this problem, constitute just cause for her permanent removal from employment.

(b) Inefficiency. Mulligan acknowledges the District may hereafter file tenure charges for inefficiency in accordance with applicable law. While the District shall not pursue tenure charges at this time, Mulligan acknowledges, agrees, and admits:

i. Her performance to this point has been at times inefficient.

ii. There is a genuine need for her performance to improve.

iii. This agreement signifies Mulligan's last chance to improve her performance.

iv. In the event the District decides or is required to file inefficiency tenure charges against Mulligan at any point hereafter, this Agreement shall be admissible in the resultant tenure proceedings and shall not in any way limit the scope of those proceedings.

4. This Agreement shall not in any way be construed as a limitation on the District's ability to file tenure charges against Mulligan in the future, nor shall it in any way limit the scope of such tenure charges. This Agreement shall be admissible in tenure proceedings, but shall not limit the evidence that the District is otherwise permitted by law to adduce in such proceedings. This Agreement acknowledges Mulligan's serious employment problems to date and provides Mulligan with one last chance to correct those problems; however, it does not in any respect restrict the District's rights or prerogatives.

5. Should any portion of this Agreement be deemed unenforceable, that determination shall not impair the validity and enforceability of the remainder of this Agreement.

6. Mulligan acknowledges that she has consulted with counsel regarding this Agreement and all implications thereof, and that she enters into this Agreement knowingly and with an understanding of her rights.

Re: Request for Docketing of Judgment

Dear Ms. Smith:

In accordance with N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, I am enclosing the March 16, 2015 Order of the Commissioner of Education finding that Sarit Young is subject to entry of a judgment on the docket of the court due to her failure to pay the tuition assessment ordered in the matter of S.Y., on behalf of minor children, E.Y. et al. v. Board of Education of the Township of Wyckoff, Bergen County.[1] By copy of this letter, I am advising Ms. Young, as well as counsel for the Wyckoff Township Board of Education, of the Commissioner's issuance of the enclosed Order.

If you require anything more, please contact this office at (609) 292-5706.

Very truly yours,

On December 15, 2014, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner granted summary decision to respondent Board, assessed petitioner $65,888.96 in tuition to compensate the Board for her children's period of ineligible attendance in the public schools of the district (for the 2007-2008 and 2008-2009 school years) pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1, and dismissed petitioner's appeal. Commissioner Decision No. 484-14. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that petitioner has failed to comply with his decision and it requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessment on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. Petitioner offered no reasons why the judgment against her should not be so docketed, although given an opportunity by this agency to do so.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Sarit Young is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $65,888.96, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the contested case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

The above captioned matter, instituted by way of petition filed on April 1, 2014, was a challenge by petitioners to a residency determination made by the respondent board of education. After the respondent board filed its pleadings and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), but before the scheduled hearing took place, the parties settled their differences. They submitted to the OAL an executed "Stipulation of Dismissal with Prejudice" (Stipulation), and the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) assigned to the case issued an Initial Decision ordering the parties to comply with the Stipulation.

Upon consideration of the record of this matter, the parties' Stipulation, and the ALJ's Initial Decision approving same, the Commissioner concludes that there is no remaining controversy to adjudicate, and dismissal of the matter is warranted.

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

DECISION

SYNOPSIS

The Board filed a petition on July 8, 2014, requesting a declaratory ruling on the issue of removal of respondent Patrice Daley from her position on the Board of Education of the City of Trenton due to a conflict of interest. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a petition of appeal. Prior to a hearing in the matter, the respondent resigned from her position on the Board.

The ALJ found that, based on the foregoing, the respondent has resigned from her position on the Board, and the matter is now moot. Accordingly, the ALJ ordered the petition dismissed.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ 's determination that the petitioner has resigned and the matter is therefore now moot. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this case, and the petition was dismissed.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

Record Closed: January 14, 2015 Decided: February 10, 2015

BEFORE PATRICIA M. KERINS, ALJ:

On July 8, 2014, petitioner Board of Education of the City of Trenton (Board) filed a petition for a declaratory ruling with the Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes (Bureau), seeking the removal of Respondent Patrice Daley (Daley) from her position on the Board due to a conflict of interest. By letter of September 29, 2014, the Bureau determined to treat the petition as a petition of appeal and on October 3, 2014, the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) for a hearing as a contested case.

By letter of September 3, 2014, Daley submitted a letter of resignation in response to the above filed petition. Petitioner did not deem that letter as sufficient proof of resignation as set forth in its letter to the Bureau of September 23, 2014. After assignment to me on November 24, 2014, for hearing the matter was scheduled for a telephone prehearing conference on January 7, 2015. At that telephonic conference Daley stated she had in fact resigned as she had set forth in her earlier letter. Petitioner acknowledged that fact and by letter of January 13, 2015, stated it had no objection to a dismissal of this matter as moot.

DECISION AND ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is clear that as respondent had resigned her position from the Board of Education of the City of Trenton, the matter is moot. I therefore ORDER the within petition DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE CITY OF JERSEY CITY, HUDSON COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured teacher in respondent's employ for approximately nine years – appealed the determination of the respondent Board to withhold her 2013-2014 salary increment, alleging that the Board's actions were arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. Petitioner was certified to teach kindergarten through eighth grade, but had always taught the upper grades until the spring of 2012, when she was reassigned to teach kindergarten. The Board contended that petitioner's increment was withheld for good cause pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-4. Petitioner asserted, inter alia, that she was not provided with mentoring or guidance to assist her adjustment to the kindergarten classroom.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: a salary increment is a reward for meritorious service, not an entitlement; pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14, a board of education may withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the scheduled increments of any staff member in any year; a school board's decision to withhold a salary increment is a matter of management prerogative and is entitled to a presumption of correctness; in challenging the loss of an increment, the petitioning party bears the burden of proof to demonstrate that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious, or without reason; petitioner herein acknowledged that she had difficulty teaching kindergarten during the 2012-2013 school year, despite being certified to teach at this grade level; petitioner's argument that she did not have sufficient support to succeed was belied by her testimony detailing numerous examples of assistance provided to her, both prior to and during the 2012-2013 school year; and petitioner's formal and informal evaluations provide feedback detailing her failure to improve and/or perform at a satisfactory level. The ALJ concluded that petitioner failed to prove – by a preponderance of the evidence – that the Board's decision to withhold her increment was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. Accordingly, the ALJ denied petitioner's challenge to her increment withholding.

Upon independent review and consideration, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ that the petitioner failed to sustain her burden of establishing that the Board's action was arbitrary, capricious unreasonable. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Andrea Golamy-Sadig, and the Jersey City Board of Education's (Board) reply thereto.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record in this matter, the Commissioner concurs with the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) – for the reasons thoroughly stated in the Initial Decision – that the petitioner failed to prove that the Board's decision to withhold her increment for the 2013-2014 school year was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Commissioner also finds the exceptions submitted by the petitioner to be unpersuasive. The petitioner's exceptions largely replicate the arguments advanced at the OAL, which were fully considered and appropriately addressed by the ALJ in the Initial Decision. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

Record Closed: May 19, 2014 Decided: February 3, 2015

BEFORE EVELYN J. MAROSE, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner, Andrea Golamy-Sadig, asserts that the Board of Education (BOE) of the City of Jersey City, Hudson County, was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable when it withheld her salary increment for the 2013-14 School Year. The BOE asserts that petitioner's increment was withheld for good cause pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:29-4.

The New Jersey State Department of Education transmitted this matter to the Office of Administrative Law, where it was filed on October 9, 2013. A hearing was conducted on March 10, 2014. The record closed upon the receipt of written summations on May 19, 2014. Due to a voluminous caseload, the time for the issuance of this Initial Decision was extended to January 2, 2015. The record was re-opened on December 24, 2014, in connection with hearing exhibits and re-closed on January 16, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION AND FINDINGS

Testimony on behalf of the BOE

Robert Bower, principal, (Principal Brower) has been principal of Jersey City Public School #17 (P.S. #17) for three-plus years. Prior to being principal, he served as an elementary teacher, a high school teacher, and as a vice principal. Observing and evaluating teachers and non-instructional staff is part of his job responsibilities.

During Principal Brower's tenure as principal, petitioner initially taught math, science, and social studies to sixth- and seventh-grade students in P.S. #17. Toward the end of the 2011-12 school year, Principal Brower assigned petitioner to teach kindergarten for the 2012-13 school year. Principal Brower made the recommendation after concluding that petitioner had struggled teaching sixth and seventh grade and was not effectively teaching the N.J. ASK test subjects. Kindergarten is not a tested grade level.

Petitioner's new assignment coincided with adoption of a new curriculum for kindergarten, New Jersey Curriculum Common Core Standards (NJ Common Core) and the Reading Street Program—which is a method, tailored to each grade, for delivering components of the NJ Common Core to students. (R-A, R-B.) In late spring of 2012, petitioner, along with other teachers, was provided with mandatory professional development in the new curriculum and with follow-through professional development throughout the 2012-13 school year.

As part of the implementation of the NJ Common Core, a written curriculum guide was set forth by the District of Jersey City (District) and provided to teachers including petitioner. The curriculum guide detailed "everything"; that is, day-to-day and week-to-week where a child was expected "to be" and what a teacher was mandated to teach. The guide utilized CD's, videos, interactive technology, and boards. The curriculum was extremely detailed, to the point of advising a teacher how many minutes he or she should spend on each teaching component. Each grade-level teacher was mandated to follow the guide rather than create their own lessons and/or curriculum. The goal was to have instruction continuous and built on the prior day's assignment. While a teacher could chose to reinforce some lesson component, the teacher could not omit any teaching component.

The teachers, including petitioner, were provided with a Teacher's Edition of the program to assist them. The Teaching Edition detailed what texts to work on, what materials to use, what skills the texts were designed to develop, and what the strategic focus of a lesson was. It included a pacing chart, which clarified what time should be spent on each component. The program was so scripted that, if Principal Brower were doing an administrative walkthrough, each kindergarten teacher should be working on the same unit and skill at the same time. Principal Brower described the program as a "blueprint for success" for even a new teacher.

In addition to written material, the teaching staff of P.S. #17, including petitioner, receive multiple supports. Every September, Principal Brower provides each teacher with a school Handbook that, among other things, details school policies and procedures and how to maintain and record students' progress and performance. In addition, every day from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 a.m., either Principal Brower or another District staff member conducts ongoing professional development, in grade level and/or across grade level. The District also offers two voluntary professional development programs for teachers. Every September the District has workshops, conducted from 4:00 p.m. to 6:00 p.m., that are designed for new teachers and for veteran teachers who need or desire further professional development. The District also provides a voluntary

Teacher Academy, which is conducted in the summer and in September, designed to provide development opportunities for teachers.[1]

Though grade-level teachers had identical mandatory lessons, each teacher was required to create a lesson plan book, which documented a weekly commitment to certain curriculum components. Each teacher was required to place his or her lesson plan book in a basket in the office on Monday morning. After review by an administrator, the lesson plan book would be returned to the teacher, sometimes with lesson plan recommendations, as another means of ongoing professional development.

By State mandate, each tenured teacher, including petitioner, receives a minimum of three evaluations annually. Formal evaluations include a pre-conference where expectations are detailed, the observation itself, and a post-observation conference wherein the evaluator discusses his observations, findings, and recommendations. At the end of the 2012-13 school year, Principal Brower recommended to his supervisors that, based upon petitioner's attendance, performance, and conduct, petitioner not receive an increment for the following school year. Student achievement in petitioner's non-tested grade level was not in any way a factor in Principal Brower's recommendation. (R-G.)

In support of his recommendation, Principal Brower noted that petitioner did not consistently and timely submit her lesson plans, though she was counseled to do so in professional development sessions and "written up" on at least four occasions for failing to submit or failing to timely submit her lesson plans. Principal Brower authored one of the four "write-ups," drafted on September 12, 2012, early in the school term. (R-D.)

Petitioner also failed to successfully progress through the mandated curriculum. Her failure was observed by and/or detailed on evaluations conducted by school administrators and district supervisory personnel, including Principal Brower. In addition, members of the administration, including Principal Brower, received numerous complaints, from parents and school colleagues who questioned the behavior that they observed in petitioner's classroom. (R-E, R-G.)

[1] Principal Brower recommended that petitioner attend the Teacher Academy for the past three years. (R-G.)

During the 2012-13 school year, petitioner also did not meet her responsibilities to supervise students. For example, on one occasion, petitioner allowed her children outdoors for recess, while she remained in her classroom. Petitioner's colleagues who were outdoors with their classes approached her and reminded her of her duty to be outdoors with her class, as they were. Principal Brower later learned, from petitioner's inclusion teacher, of another incident when a child hit his head and suffered an injury, while petitioner was not supervising the child. After investigating the incident, Principal Brower concluded that petitioner had neglected her professional duty. When he discussed the incident with petitioner, she neither showed nor expressed any remorse. (R-F.)

Petitioner's performance throughout the term at issue was evaluated and discussed with her after both formal and informal evaluations. Principal Brower evaluated petitioner early in the 2012-13 school year. He observed her on October 23, 2012, and provided her with a verbal evaluation on November 14, 2012. (R-G.)

Principal Brower noted that, on the day of his observation, while petitioner's lesson plan book reflected a lesson that addressed all the mandated components of the district curriculum, her actual teaching that day was not in accordance with the written lesson in her teacher's plan. After considering all of his observations, he scored petitioner unsatisfactory in two of the domain areas for instruction and classroom environment, and in need of improvement for planning and preparation in student's learning.[2] He also noted areas where petitioner needed improvement or was not performing to at least a satisfactory level, and provided suggestions as to how her performance in those areas could be improved. Principal Brower personally modeled a lesson to assist petitioner. The Principal opined that some of his suggestions, like follow the District mandated lesson plans, were simple to implement. (R-G.)

[2] Principal Brower defined the term unsatisfactory as essentially completely unacceptable and the term in need of improvement as reflecting that there is something about the behavior being evaluated that is acceptable, even if only "by the lightest touch."

Principal Brower assigned specific colleagues to provide a support lesson for petitioner. He also ensured that petitioner was able to observe other grade-level teachers that were performing at a satisfactory or above level in an area where she needed to improve. Marsha Wassersman, reading specialist, and Kate Tyner, inclusion specialist, went into petitioner's classroom and made physical changes, such as seating and desk organization, to create an effective classroom environment. They also provided demonstration lessons, for multiple days, stressing the mandated pacing. Principal Brower further noted that petitioner still had the benefit of the ongoing professional development that was conducted daily from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 a.m., to District professional development workshops, and to District program links.

Despite all the support/assistance that was provided to petitioner, before and after Principal Brower's formal observation, the informal and formal evaluations made by other members of the administration team continued to reflect that petitioner's performance and conduct was not satisfactory. Petitioner received formal evaluations by Joseph Cordero (assistant principal—pre-kindergarten through fourth grade), Margaret Cortelli (assistant principal—fifth grade through eighth grade), Elizabeth Goepel (language arts supervisor) and Jennifer Ambrose (science and social studies supervisor). Principal Brower received and reviewed copies of those evaluation as well as feedback about the informal observations that occurred. (R-G.)

Petitioner's class for the 2012-13 school years was composed of twenty-two students, three of whom were classified. She was assisted by a full-time aide. She also had the benefit of an inclusion teacher, essentially all of the time. When the first inclusion teacher assigned went out on maternity leave, another teacher was assigned to petitioner's class.

Principal Brower does not believe that there is a marked difference between instructing a sixth- or seventh-grade class and a kindergarten class and opined that, if petitioner needed some time to adjust to teaching kindergarten, the adjustment period would be minimal. Principal Brower further opined that being assigned to teach kindergarten was a less demanding assignment than teaching the upper grades since kindergarten is a non-tested grade level.

Principal Brower stated that the mandated kindergarten curriculum was available online from the time that it was adopted, on or about March 29, 2012. Accordingly, the kindergarten curriculum could have been accessed online by petitioner from the time that he reassigned petitioner, in the spring of 2012, to teach kindergarten the following September. The curriculum was also definitely taught during the mandated kindergarten professional development training conducted before the end of the 2011-12 school year and available in written form for petitioner and other staff members in September 2012.

Joseph Cordero, assistant principal, (Assistant Principal Cordero) Jersey City Public School #17, has been employed by the District for twelve years. Prior to being appointed assistant principal, he served as a teacher, literary coach, data specialist, and in the Board of Education testing department.

Assistant Principal Cordero has direct responsibility for pre-kindergarten through fourth grade. He evaluates the teaching staff, is a liaison to the grade parents, and knowledgeable in pre-kindergarten through fourth grade curriculum. He is also in charge of building management, including the maintenance department and custodial staff. Since petitioner is a kindergarten teacher, he is, and was during the 2012-13 school year, her direct supervisor. He has observed her informally and formally.

Assistant Principal Cordero, who was sequestered during Principal Brower's testimony, also described the numerous opportunities for professional development provided to petitioner by the District. He detailed the ongoing professional development provided daily from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. related to grade-level teaching and to other topics such as behavior management, which are of interest to multiple grade levels. He noted that numerous support personnel, including Principal Brower, Assistant Principal Cortelli, Catherine Tyner, crisis intervention teacher (CIT), as well as he were available for all staff, including petitioner. He is certain that petitioner received substantial support, and noted as an example that Ms. Tyner, who is an expert in behavior management and special education, went into petitioner's classroom, gave her ideas and provided her with feedback designed to assist her teaching.

Assistant Principal Cordero described the Reading Street Program for kindergarten, noting that it was selected to provide consistent learning in a district where students frequently move from one school to the next. It is a blanket approach. The curriculum is "laid out for the teacher from Point A to Point Z. It tells the teacher what to do and when to do it. It gives the teacher time allocations. It defines the mandated teaching into components. It tells the teacher what materials are necessary—everything that is needed in order to teach a class." (R-B.)

During his daily walkthroughs, Assistant Principal Cordero observed petitioner's classroom to consistently be a scene of chaos, disorder, and loudness. The classroom was unorganized. Students did not appear to have direction nor did they appear to be acting in accordance with the mandated curriculum. For example, when the mandated curriculum required that they be sitting at their desks, they would be sitting at a rug area. Petitioner was also not consistently in line with the timeframes provided in the mandated curriculum nor was she teaching the required components. (R-E.)

Assistant Principal Cordero spoke to petitioner in an attempt to assist her in her pacing. He had the reading specialist go into her classroom on at least three occasions and model how to keep her on task. He also conducted grade-level meetings, that she and other kindergarten teachers attended, regarding lesson pacing. He noted that the mandated curriculum defines when you should be in a large group, in small groups, or when the children should be working independently. The structure, routine, and rules were designed so that all knew what was expected of them.

Assistant Principal Cordero was also responsible for reviewing teachers', including petitioner's, lesson plans. All teachers were required to drop their lesson plans into a basket at the school office each Monday. The lesson plans should be "pretty much verbatim" of the mandated curriculum. Though petitioner did submit lesson plans, she did not do so consistently in a timely manner. Even when she was spoken to regarding her failure to submit and later written up at least three times by him for failing to submit on time, she continued to not submit the required plans in timely manner. (R-D.[3])

Assistant Principal Cordero authored petitioner's annual performance evaluation. In addition to his own informal and formal observations, he considered the observations of other administrators. He noted that her performance did not improve during the 2012-13 school year. She failed to follow the tasks as detailed on her lesson plans; she did not finish all components of the mandated curriculum; her class was not on task and within the prescribed time allotment; and her classroom was often in a state of chaos. He received complaints from parents, who were not happy with "what petitioner was doing." Parents were concerned that their students were not bringing home any homework and that they did not appear to be learning. In addition, the parents reported that their children told them that petitioner referred to the children as bad and/or that they were yelled at during the day. (R-G.)

Assistant Principal Cordero was also not satisfied with petitioner's attendance record. She was absent approximately seven days that school year and late on several occasions. Her attendance issues were addressed in her performance evaluations. (R-G.)

Petitioner's Testimony

Petitioner noted that she has been employed by the District for about nine years. She earned a B.A. in geology with a minor in finance and French and an M.A. in administration and supervision. She has also completed half the required courses for an M.A. degree in environmental engineering.

Though she was certified to teach kindergarten through eighth grade, petitioner had never taught kindergarten until recently. For one year, she taught eighth grade math in Lincoln Park. When she came to the District she was initially assigned to P.S. #41 for two and a half years and taught sixth-grade science. She resigned for personal reasons, completed her master's degree and volunteered at her son's school before returning to teach for the District. She was assigned to Middle School #7 and taught sixth-grade math for three years. Thereafter, she was assigned to P.S. #17, where she initially taught sixth-grade science and social studies and "covered" seventh- and eighth-grade science and health classes.

Petitioner was advised by Principal Brower at the end of the 2011-12 school year that she was going to be teaching kindergarten in the 2012-13 school year. He did not advise her of any resources that she might have to her help transition to teaching her new grade level. Petitioner, on her own, sought out the kindergarten grade representative, Donna Marion Mason, and asked if there was anything that she should be looking over prior to the fall. The representative told petitioner that the District had changed the literacy program and that they would be starting a new program in September. Accordingly, there was nothing that Ms. Mason, had at the time of the request that would assist petitioner. Prior to the end of the school year, the District did send petitioner to a two-to-three-day workshop strictly on Reading Street.

Petitioner states that in the summer in order to prepare herself to teach kindergarten she consulted with a friend's daughter who taught kindergarten in a private school for seventeen years. The daughter lent petitioner some material and resources about kindergarten and discussed some of the things to expect and how to prepare. She also went online and looked at the Teaching Channel, and tried to speak to and reach out to people she knew who were used to teaching lower grades in an effort to prepare for her kindergarten assignment. She did not contact the District and/or pick up the Reading Street Curriculum Guide for Kindergarten. Petitioner was not aware that the curriculum was on site, or that she had she access to the curriculum online. Petitioner was aware that the District had materials online.

In early August, petitioner went to her assigned room in P.S. #17 and prepared her classroom. She again went to Ms. Mason and asked for teaching materials. Ms. Mason informed her that they were still waiting for written materials to arrive. Prior to the day when the students arrived, petitioner received the cumulative records of her class and was able to see a copy of the kindergarten Teacher's Edition of the curriculum. She was not initially given her own copy of the Teacher's Edition or a copy of the Teacher's Edition to take home to read.

Once petitioner started the academic year, she found that teaching kindergarten was quite different than her prior teaching assignment. She had never taught language arts before and had to learn facets of language arts that she did not know existed. She also learned in the grade-level meetings that her room had to be arranged differently. She asked the grade-level representative many questions and the representative was very cooperative. Petitioner received the kindergarten grade-level curriculum in September 2012, three weeks prior to her evaluation and received other grade materials sporadically for the coming months.

Petitioner's classroom contained about twenty-seven or twenty-eight students during the 2012-13 school year. In addition to her three classified students, petitioner was assigned what she termed three "challenged learners," who had difficulty with the material because their parents did not speak English. Petitioner had an aide in her classroom, Mrs. Williams, and initially an inclusion teacher. The inclusion teacher was to modify and differentiate material for the three students with IEP's or 504's. Petitioner, her aide, and an inclusion teacher were all present at the time of her October evaluation.

Prior to being observed by Principal Brower, on October 23, 2012, no member of the administrative team, no supervisor, or other teacher visited petitioner to find out "how she was doing." Petitioner asserts that she was lacking directives on how to use six or seven of the forms that she was cited and downgraded for in her October evaluation. The forms were new to her and her colleagues. Petitioner also asserts that she was criticized for having the Teacher's Edition in her hand when she was teaching, yet she had been instructed to read directly out of the Teacher's Edition in the District Reading Street Workshop that she attended in late spring. Petitioner acknowledges that her pacing on the day of her October observation was not consistent with the mandated curriculum; however, she states the variation was caused that day as a direct result of a special or activity outside the classroom, which did not allow her to begin the curriculum until somewhere around 9:35 a.m. (P-1 & R-G.)

Petitioner acknowledges receiving a post-evaluation conference after Principal Brower's October observation. She decided to respond to the statements made in her evaluation through a written rebuttal rather than verbally discussing the evaluation with the principal. (P-1.) To petitioner, it was clear that Mr. Brower was not aware of the fact that the forms for which she was cited were not part of the new program and that the teachers had received no directives about them. She also stated that, since the program was new, none of the grade teachers initially knew how to even grade the first weekly test, whether on a rubric scale or as a percentage. Petitioner, who had never taught kindergarten, relied upon a kindergarten colleague with twenty years experience who suggested that they grade as they had last year until they received a directive from the District. In fact, the grade-level representative told them not to start Reading Street until October 2012, so petitioner has just begun to use the program near the time of the evaluation.

Petitioner described how she was unfamiliar with the different approaches to learning between the students in the upper grade and in kindergarten. For example, kindergarten students must be taught numerous classroom behaviors that required only a verbal command for students in the upper grade. She stated that kindergarten students had to be taught where to put their bag and when to put their bag in the designated spot. They needed help taking off their coats and had to be taught where to put their scarf, hat, and gloves. They had to be taught how to sit appropriately in a chair and how to walk from the chair over to the rug. She couldn't just say, "Let's go over to the rug" as she would with older students. Petitioner also noted that it was hard to keep to kindergarten students on task. Even one student requesting to go to the restroom would cause other students to get off task and make the same request. Petitioner estimates that it took her until November for the children's behavior to have some decorum and organization. However, she asserts that kindergarten students, in general, continue to require more verbal instruction and have a shorter attention span.

Petitioner acknowledged that the mandated curriculum did not require that she prepare unique teaching lessons. She stated that the program "is really scripted. You're just reading what is there. You're just repeating what is there. The program tells you what to say, what words to use. Very little actual pedagogy is involved. You're just reading." (R-B.)

Petitioner agreed that in essence completing the Lesson Plan book just required copying the curriculum from Reading Street. She asserts that she submitted her lesson plans and that none were returned to her as unsatisfactory. In response to the four write-ups about not timely handing in her plan book, petitioner acknowledged that on one occasion she did not hand in her Lesson Plan book. However, on the other three occasions where she was written up, she handed in her Lesson Plan book, but submitted it late because of a problem with her printer. On those three occasions, she asserts that she also e-mailed the Lesson Plan book but was told that it had to be submitted in hard copy. Petitioner states that she provided the Lesson Plan book in hard copy, by the end of the day when it was due in the morning. (R-D.)

As to the October observation, petitioner does not agree that Principal Brower observed a group lesson. She states that he observed a small group session where individual weaknesses were addressed. Petitioner also states that during that day the children's behavior reflected their reaction to a change in the positioning of the teaching staff. Previously, petitioner would be the only teacher in front of the class, so the studies would focus on petitioner. The teaching assistant would be in the back by her desk. On the October observation day, both petitioner and the teaching assistant were in front of the class and speaking concurrently. If a child misbehaved while petitioner was speaking, the assistant would say something to the child. (R-G.)

Petitioner agreed that after her first evaluation, Ms. Tyner, the CIT "person," and Ms. Wasserman, the literary coach, came into her room as a team. They rearranged the room to make it more conducive to the Reading Street program. They modeled how to get the children to and from the rug. Ms. Tyner modeled the "Get Ready to Read" first section of the day and Ms. Wasserman modeled another "Get Ready to Read" section, perhaps language or grammar conventions. On another occasion, Ms. Wasserman came in "solo." After petitioner told her that she really needed help with teaching writing to kindergartners, Ms. Wasserman arranged for petitioner and Ms. Wasserman to sit in on a writing lesson conducted by a veteran kindergarten teacher.

On another occasion, Sean Healey, a special education specialist, came into petitioner's room and made some suggestions regarding the tendency of her classified students to touch everything on petitioner's desk and the teacher's assistant's desk. Petitioner, along with other staff members, also had an opportunity to hear Mr. Healey speaking in general on the inclusion of special education students in a classroom.

Petitioner acknowledges that she had a full-time aide in her classroom except for the aide's daily morning and evening breaks and lunch time. She also had an inclusion teacher assigned to her classroom in September. She states, however, that after one month, the inclusion teacher took maternity leave. The substitute provided, though wonderful with the children, had no kindergarten experience and no special education experience. It was not until the end of the Thanksgiving holiday that the designated inclusion teacher returned and remained assigned to her classroom throughout the year. She noted, however, that on about twenty-six days of the school year the inclusion teacher was re-assigned, either part or all of the day, to other classes and so not available to petitioner.

Petitioner states that there were two, not one, "courtyard incidents." On one occasion, petitioner was the only teacher with the class at the time of recess. Her teaching assistant was at lunch and the inclusion teacher had been reassigned to cover another class earlier that day. Of her twenty-eight students, three students' behavior did not merit going out to recess. Petitioner allowed the remaining twenty-five students to go into the courtyard for recess, knowing that there were two other teachers in the courtyard with their classes. Petitioner posted herself at the door of her classroom, which led directly to the courtyard. She was able to see both the courtyard and the classroom. On that day, no injury occurred. On another day, petitioner remained in the classroom working with report card grades while her teaching assistant and the inclusion teacher were supervising the class while they had recess in the courtyard. It was on that day that one of her children obtained a very bad gash. Blood was running down the child's head. Petitioner put a compress on his head, took him to the nurse, and wrote up the incident. The inclusion teacher and teaching assistant remained with the class. (R-F.)

Petitioner states that there was never a problem last year with student homework and she cannot recall ever being told by Assistant Principal Cordero of any parental concerns. She did not keep track of the number of times that the assistant principal came into her classroom over the course of the school year, but estimates that he likely came in twice a month. He never said anything constructive or designed to help her. Instead, he made comments to let her know what she was not doing. For example, "You have to have the kids in their seats."

Based upon the evidence presented at the hearing, and the opportunity to observe the witnesses and assess their credibility, I FIND the following FACTS:

Petitioner was certified to teach kindergarten through the eighth grade. She was reassigned from teaching the upper grades to kindergarten in the spring of 2012. She had never taught kindergarten previously.

Petitioner received mandated training in the spring of 2012, and follow-up training during the 2012-2013 school year. She, along with other kindergarten and school staff, also received daily professional development every morning from 8:00 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. In addition, after a less-than-satisfactory classroom observation in October 2012, petitioner received recommendations/training from the principal, vice principals, and other members of the administration team. Among other things, they modeled lessons for her, rearranged her room, and arranged for her to observe experienced kindergarten teachers.

With the exception of possibly twenty-six days of the school year, petitioner had a full-time aide and inclusion teacher in her classroom. While it is noted that the inclusion teacher did take a maternity leave of approximately forty days, petitioner was assigned a substitute inclusion teacher who, though not trained in special education, was described by petitioner as "wonderful with the children."

Petitioner acknowledges that on at least two occasions, she did not accompany her class to the courtyard for recess. On one of those occasions, she remained at the door of her classroom, where she could alternately supervise the three students that remained indoors and those who were having recess. On that occasion, she also relied upon two other teachers, who had their classes in the courtyard for recess to supervise her class, though the two teachers never agreed to supervise petitioner's class while they had their own classes to supervise. On another occasion, petitioner remained in the classroom working on report card grades. Petitioner's aide and the inclusion teacher were with the class in the courtyard.

Both the District and petitioner testified that on one occasion, when petitioner was not with the children in the courtyard, a child was injured. Petitioner states that the injury occurred while her inclusion teacher and aide were with the children. The District states that the injury occurred when the class was outside in the presence of two other teachers who had not agreed to supervise the class. Neither party presented another witness to the two courtyard incidents at the hearing.

The District asserts that petitioner did not meet her professional responsibilities as to putting her Lesson Plan book in the basket in the office on Monday morning. She was "written-up" on four occasions regarding failing to timely submit her Lesson Plan for review. Petitioner denies not meeting her professional responsibilities as to her Lesson Plan submission, except for one occasion when she did not submit her Lesson Plan. While she acknowledges that on three days her Lesson Plans were submitted at the end of the day rather than in the morning, she asserts that her late submission should have been excused since she had a problem with her printer.

The District states that petitioner was denied her increment, in part, because of her attendance. Petitioner presented no evidence nor denied the District's testimony that she was absent on approximately seven occasions and late on several occasions. The District noted petitioner's need to improve her attendance on her performance evaluations.

The District asserts that petitioner's performance was unsatisfactory during the 2012-13 school year. It submits four evaluations that detail the reasons that petitioner was not rated satisfactory. Two of the evaluators testified at the hearing, Principal Brower and Assistant Principal Cordero. Two of the evaluators did not testify at the hearing and thus the statements on their evaluations were hearsay.

Judicial rules of evidence do not apply to administrative agency proceedings, except for rules of privileges or where required by law. N.J.R.E. 101(a)(3); DeBartolomeis v. Bd. of Review, 341 N.J. Super. 80, 82 (App. Div. 2001); N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10(a) and N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.1(c). Hearsay is admissible subject to the "residuum rule," which mandates that the administrative decision cannot be predicated on hearsay alone. There must be a residuum of legal competent evidence in the record to support it. Weston v. State, 60 N.J. 36, 51 (1972). In assessing hearsay evidence, it should be accorded "whatever weight the judge deems appropriate taking into account the nature, character and scope of the evidence, the circumstances of its creation and production, and, generally, its reliability." N.J.A.C. 1:1-15.5(a).

While I cannot give as much weight to the evaluations performed by staff members that did not testify at the hearing, the statements made on those evaluations are consistent with the statements by the principal and vice president on their evaluations and I will admit those evaluations into evidence. In fact, petitioner herself testified as to difficulties that she had in teaching during the 2012-13 school year and to her need to ask colleagues questions regarding her assignment and to seek and/or accept assistance from the administrative team. The only rebuttal that she represented was as to the accuracy of the evaluation that she received related to Principal Brower's October 2012 evaluation.

Principal Brower credibly testified that the denial of petitioner's increment was not limited to her October 2012 evaluation. He further ensured that she had numerous opportunities to improve. He personally made recommendations as to where she needed to improve and had members of the administration go into her classroom to assist her in making improvements and modeling teaching components.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

A salary increment is a reward for meritorious service, not an entitlement. N. Plainfield Educ. Ass'n v. Bd. of Educ., 96 N.J. 587, 593 (1984). Any board of education may with withhold, for inefficiency or other good cause, the employment increment, or the adjustment increment, or both, of any member in any year. N.J.S.A. 18A:29-14. A local school board's decision to withhold a salary increment is a matter of management prerogative and is entitled to a presumption of correctness. Fogerty v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Jersey City, 97 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 439; Kaska v. Bd. of Educ. of Trenton, 95 N.J.A.R.2d (EDU) 55. Nevertheless, a school board cannot withhold a salary increase from tenured employee with according that employee the minimum procedural due process. See Basile v. Bd. of Educ. of Elm Park, 1 N.J.A.R. 199 (Dept of Educ. 1980). A teaching staff member is responsible to supervise her students. Even brief failures to appropriately supervise students justifies disciplinary action. In re Tenure Hearing of Pariano-Keyser, EDU 11405-09, Initial Decision (March 15, 2010), http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/.

A teaching staff member is entitled to appeal the loss of increment. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-4.1. If the action of the board of education is challenged the petitioning party bears the burden of proof to demonstrate by the preponderance of the evidence that the board of education's action was arbitrary, capricious or without reason. Kopera v. Bd. of Educ. of W. Orange, 560 N.J. Super. 288 (1960).

Petitioner acknowledges that, during the 2012-13 school year, she had difficulty teaching kindergarten. However, while she always taught upper grades, kindergarten is a grade level that she was certified to teach. While she argues that she did not have sufficient support to succeed, her own testimony details numerous examples of the assistance that was given to her, prior to and during the 2012-13 school year.

Petitioner had three formal evaluations. One evaluation was in October, which was early enough to give her notice of areas in which she needed to improve. Though she submitted a written rebuttal to that evaluation, she had two additional formal evaluations and numerous informal observations with feedback detailing her failure to improve and/or perform at a satisfactory level and containing detailed recommendations to improve.

Petitioner also acknowledges that on several occasions she did not timely submit her Lesson Plans. Her assertion that she had difficulty printing her Lesson Plan because of a problem with her printer is not supported by any credible evidence nor does it support three occasions of not timely submitting her Lesson Plans.

Petitioner also acknowledges that on more than one occasion, she was not in the courtyard supervising her class during their recess. No evidence was submitted that petitioner was permitted to delegate her duty to supervise to other teachers in the courtyard with their classes, to her aide, and/or to the inclusion teacher. In fact, the responsibilities of the inclusion teacher were limited in connection with the three classified students in her class. The fact that petitioner might have been performing academic tasks during that recess period also does not excuse her failure to supervise her class while they were in the courtyard. Her grading responsibilities could have been performed at another time. The three students, who petitioner wished to discipline, could have been disciplined in a different manner or at a different time. For example, petitioner could have required that they stay after school. As a result of petitioner's choice of discipline, her attention was divided. In fact, one of petitioners' students was injured when she was not supervising her class during recess.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner failed to prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, that the District's decision to withhold her increment was arbitrary, capricious and unreasonable. Having seen no credible evidence of the exact amount of days that petitioner was absent or late, her attendance bears no part in my decision.

ORDER

It is ORDERED that petitioner's challenge of the withholding of her increment for the 2012-13 school year is hereby DENIED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

The record of this matter, the proposed "Settlement and Release" (Agreement), and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1, have been reviewed.

Upon review, the Commissioner approves the Agreement terms and adopts the Initial Decision as the final decision in this case, with the following acknowledgement. The Agreement has been fashioned by petitioner, the Kearny Board of Education and the New Jersey Department of Education. Prior to the execution of the Agreement, petitioner withdrew his claims against respondent Ferraro by way of a letter dated October 14, 2014 from petitioner's counsel to the Administrative Law Judge assigned to the case.

Thus, the proposed settlement resolves all issues between all remaining parties to the litigation. Accordingly, the matter is hereby dismissed, subject to compliance with the terms of the Agreement.

BEFORE JOANN LaSALA CANDIDO, ALJ:

This matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on December 16, 2014, on remand, for resolution as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F1 to -13. This matter was initially assigned to the undersigned on or about December 2013 under OAL Docket Number EDU 16626-13. After several conferences were conducted the parties reached a resolution in this matter and the undersigned issued an Initial Decision approving the settlement on October 24, 2014. However, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL by Order dated December 9, 2014 which states:

> "Examination of the record of this matter, the Initial Decision and the "Settlement Release" (Agreement, reveals neither the signature of the attorney for respondent Kearny Board of Education, which attorney is the Board's duly authorized representative in litigation, nor, in the alternative, a copy of a resolution by the Kearny Board of Education approving the settlement and bestowing authority on a specific individual to execute and bind the Board to the settlement. Further, the Department of Education's consent to the agreement must be evidenced by the signature of the Deputy Attorney General representing it in these proceedings. . . ."

A telephone prehearing was conducted on January 7, 2015 during which time the parties discussed the Commissioner's order remanding this matter back to OAL. On January 22, 2015 OAL respondent's counsel submitted correspondence from the Kearny Board of Education which re-approved a resolution approving the execution of a settlement agreement in this matter, which is attached hereto for reference. Additionally, on January 23, 2015 petitioner's counsel submitted an updated signature page to the Settlement Agreement as executed by Deputy Attorney General Caroline Jones, as well as a letter, dated October 14, 2014, withdrawing the request for a hearing as to respondent Frank Ferraro as well as a separation agreement between the Kearny Board of Education and Frank Ferraro which specifically includes a waiver of claims against the Kearny Board of Education.

Having reviewed the contents of the Commissioner's Order, the updated signature page reflecting the signature of Deputy Attorney General Caroline Jones, and the resolution approving the execution of the Settlement Agreement, I FIND:

[1] Attached is a separation agreement between the Kearny Board of Education and Franck Ferraro which specifically includes a waiver of claims against the Kearny Board of Education and petitioner is not seeking relief from him. Hence, Mr. Ferraro is not an interested party in this matter.

1. The parties have voluntarily agreed to the settlement as evidenced by their signatures and/or the signatures of their representatives.

2. The settlement fully disposes of all issues in controversy and is consistent with the law.

I CONCLUDE that this agreement meets the requirements of N.J.A.C. 1:1-19.1 and that the settlement should be approved. I approve the settlement and, therefore ORDER that the parties comply with the settlement terms and that these proceedings be concluded.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

SETTLEMENT AND RELEASE

2015 JAN 22 P 12:00

This Settlement Agreement and Release (hereinafter "Agreement") is entered into on this ____ day of _____, 2014, by and between Brian Doran, by and through his attorney, the Kearny Board of Education (the "Board"), and the New Jersey Department of Education, Criminal History Review Unit, ("Criminal History") (collectively, the "Parties").

WHEREAS, Doran was hired as a custodial staff member by the Board on or about April 1, 2003;

WHEREAS, as part of the hiring process, Doran submitted to a criminal history background check required of all public school employees;

WHEREAS, at the time of his hire, Doran disclosed certain offenses which may have disqualified him from employment with a public school district;

WHEREAS, at the time of his hiring, the Board hadnot received notice from Criminal History advising of Doran's eligibility for employment in a school district;

WHEREAS, approximately seven (7) years after the time of Doran's initial employment, Doran's brother, James Doran, became a member of the Board;

WHEREAS, Doran's brother continues to serve as a member of the Board;

WHEREAS, Mr. James Doran has recused himself from all discussions involving the within matter;

WHEREAS, in or around summer of 2013, it was discovered the Criminal History clearance was not in Doran's personnel file;

WHEREAS, on or about September 5, 2013, Doran was placed on a paid leave of absence to allow him time to provide proof of his eligibility for employment with the Board;

WHEREAS, on or about September 6, 2013, Criminal History notified Doran that he was disqualified from employment based on information Doran's criminal history;

WHEREAS, the September 6, 2013 correspondence from Criminal History provided that Doran had "14 days ... to challenge the accuracy of" the determination;

WHEREAS, on or about September 16, 2013, the Board unanimously voted to continue Doran's suspension with pay pending the filing of tenure charges;

WHEREAS, by correspondence dated September 18, 2013, Doran served timely written notice to Criminal History challenging the accuracy of the information upon which the disqualification was based;

WHEREAS, in response to Criminal History's notification of disqualification Doran also filed a Petition of Appeal with the Department of Education, which is docketed as Agency Docket Number 259-10/13, alleging interalia, that the disqualification by Criminal History and Doran's termination was improper;

WHEREAS, on or about October 10, 2013, Doran was granted relief in the form of an expungment order of the disqualifying offenses;

WHEREAS, in the interest of cost savings and uncertainty associated with litigation of this matter, the Parties wish to enter into a voluntary settlement agreement;

NOW THEREFORE, in consideration of the mutual covenants contained herein, the Parties agree to the following terms in resolution of the pending Petition of Appeal.

1. Doran will withdraw his pending appeal docketed before the Department of Education as Agency Docket Number 259-10/13, with prejudice, against all the Parties.
2. The Board shall provide to Doran the necessary documentation so that he may submit to a criminal history review unit background check. Doran shall, within 30 days of the execution of this agreement by the Parties, schedule an appointment for the criminal history review unit background check. Doran shall not assume employment status during the time the criminal history review unit background check being performed.
3. If the criminal history review unit determines that Doran is eligible for employment with a public school in the State of New Jersey, the Board shall process Doran's return to work as soon thereafter as is practicable. The terms of Doran's reemployment shall be governed by the applicable collective negotiations agreement and the individual employment contract annexed hereto. This includes, but is not limited to, placement on the salary guide at the rate of $66,019 per year, subject to all applicable taxes and deductions; eligibility for health benefits; AFLAC and/or credit union membership eligibility; and any other applicable terms and conditions of employment.

4. If the criminal history review unit determines that Doran is disqualified for employment with a public school in the State of New Jersey the terms of Paragraph 3 above shall not apply, the contract attached hereto is null and void, and Doran shall have no entitlement to reinstatement, backpay, or employment with the Board as a result of this Agreement.
5. The making of this Agreement is not intended to be, nor shall it be construed as an admission that any of the Parties violated any federal, state or local law, statutory or decisional, ordinance or regulation, or any express or implied contract of employment, or breached the public policy of the State of New Jersey, or committed any wrong whatsoever.
6. This Agreement shall not be offered, used or considered as evidence in any proceeding except to the extent necessary to enforce the terms of this Agreement or to challenge an alleged breach of the Agreement.
7. This Agreement is expressly conditioned upon agreement of all the parties to this Agreement and the approval of the Commissioner or Education and/or his designee.
8. Doran agrees to unconditionally and forever release and discharge the Board and Criminal History, and each and all of their current, former and future parents, subsidiaries, affiliated entities and successors, and each and all of their respective shareholders, officers, directors, employees, agents, attorneys, and insurances, of and from any and all debts, claims, liabilities, demands, and causes of action of every kind, nature and description, whether known or unknown, including but not limited to, any claim for salary, severance, benefits, bonuses and any other form of compensation, claims for personal injury, breach of contract, negligent or intentional misrepresentation, negligent or intentional infliction of emotional distress, defamation, wrongful termination, and any claims under federal, state or local laws, including but not limited to the New Jersey wage and hour laws, the New Jersey Wage Payment Law, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the New Jersey Family Leave Act, the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the New Jersey Constitution, the common law of the State of New Jersey (including, but not limited to Pierce claims") the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Equal Pay Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay act of 2009, which Doran has or may have or could assert against the Board as of the date on which this Agreement is signed, including but not limited to any claims arising out of or connected with Doran's employment or separation of employment, the Board, excluding any claims Doran may have for unemployment insurance benefits, state disability compensation, and/or a charge filed with the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission challenging the validity of the waiver of rights under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act and the pending Notice of Tort Claim that was filed with the Board.

9. Doran agrees that he was afforded up to twenty-one (21) days in which to consider and sign this Agreement. Doran has had the opportunity to and has had the terms of this Agreement reviewed by an attorney of his choosing. Once the Agreement is signed, acceptance may be revoked within seven (7) days by so notifying the Board. TO BE EFFECTIVE, DORAN'S RESCISSION MUST BE IN WRITING AND DELIVERED TO COUNSEL FOR THE KEARNY BOARD OF EDUCATION, JENNIFER ROSELLE, ESQ., GENOVA BURNS GIANTOMASI WEBSTER LLC, 494 BROAD STREET, NEWARK, NEW JERSEY, 07102, EITHER BY HAND OR BY MAIL WITHIN THE 7-DAY PERIOD; IF SENT BY MAIL, THE RECESSION MUST BE: (1) POSTMARKED WITHIN THE 7-DAY PERIOD; (2) PROPERLY ADDRESSED TO COUNSEL FOR THE KEARNY BOARD OF EDUCATION; AND (3) SENT BY CERTIFIED MAIL, RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED. If not otherwise revoked, this Agreement will become effective on the eighth (8th) day following execution by the parties and approval by the Commissioner of the Department of Education.

10. This Agreement is binding on the parties but does not establish practice or precedent and cannot be relied upon for any purpose other than enforcement of the terms contained herein.
11. This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey and any action to enforce this Agreement shall be brought in the State Court of the State of New Jersey.
12. The terms of this Agreement may not be modified, except by written agreement signed by the parties.
13. This Agreement may be executed by the parties hereto in one or more counterparts, and each fully executed counterpart shall be deemed an original. Any facsimile copy of an executed signature page hereto shall be deemed an original signature page for all purposes.
14. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement between the parties and there are no additional oral or written agreements, understandings, representations or promises that vary from the terms of this Agreement. None of the Parties, their agents, their representatives nor their attorneys have made any additional oral or written agreements, understandings, representations or promises to the other party or anyone else regarding the terms of this Agreement other than those contained herein.
15. By signing this Agreement, Doran states that:

    a. He has read the Agreement;

    b. That he agrees with the terms of this Agreement; and

    That he has been afforded an opportunity to consult with a union representative and/or attorney prior to executing this Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, and intending to be legally bound hereby, Brian Doran, the Kearny Board of Education, the New Jersey Department of Education, Criminal History Review Unit have executed the foregoing Settlement and Release.

IN THE MATTER OF THE TENURE HEARING OF FRANK FERRARO, SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE TOWN OF KEARNY, HUDSON COUNTY	BEFORE THE ARBITRATOR GERARD G. RESTAINO Agency Dkt. #232-8/14 STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

STIPULATION OF SETTLEMENT

WHEREAS, the Board of Education of the Town of Kearny ("Board of Education" or "District") certified and filed tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education against the Superintendent of Schools, Frank Ferraro ("Mr. Ferraro"), on or about August 25, 2014, a copy of which charges and Certificate of Determination are attached hereto; and

WHEREAS, the Commissioner of Education transmitted the tenure charges to Gerard Restaino, Arbitrator; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Ferraro filed a Motion to Dismiss the Tenure Charges in Lieu of an Answer and has filed an Answer to the tenure charges; and

WHEREAS, the parties through their respective counsel, participated in settlement discussions and negotiations; and

WHEREAS, a hearing was scheduled to begin on October 28, 2014; and

WHEREAS, the Board has had a full opportunity to investigate this mater, and based upon that investigation, has determined that this Stipulation of Settlement is fair and just, and causes the least disruption to the District in that witnesses will not be taken away from their normal responsibilities, that the settlement avoids the uncertainty of litigation and an expensive hearing process and a possible appeal, and that Mr. Ferraro has raised defenses and objections to the charges which may be meritorious, and that there is good cause which warrants this Stipulation of Settlement; and

WHEREAS, the Board has determined that is in the best interests of the District, and the public at large to resolve the dispute existing between the Board and Mr. Ferraro in that the long-term cost to the District may exceed the cost of settling the matter in the near term, and a settlement provides stability in terms of certainty in leadership of the District; and

WHEREAS, Mr. Ferraro intended to file a civil action premised upon alleged "whistleblowing" in connection with action taken by the Board against him; and

WHEREAS, the parties have determined it to be in their respective best interests to resolve the case and come to an agreement with respect to the issues presented in this matter and prevent further litigation; and

WHEREAS, the Board has determined that it is in the best interest of the District, and the public at large, to retain the present leadership to provide stability, certainty, and order within the District now and in the future and to avoid a disruption of the administration which would have an adverse impact upon the children of the District; and

WHEREAS, the Board believes that the prosecution of the tenure charges will divert significant financial resources, time and key staff from the mission of the District;

NOW THEREFOR, the parties have agreed to resolve this matter under and subject to the terms outlined in this Stipulation of Settlement.

AGREEMENT

The parties to this Agreement, intending to be legally bound, agree as follows:

1. Upon the execution and approval of this Stipulation of Settlement, the Board of Education hereby withdraws the tenure charges with prejudice, and Mr. Ferraro agrees to the dismissal of same.

2. By executing this Stipulation of Settlement, Mr. Ferraro hereby resigns from his position with the Board effective November 1, 2014. This agreement serves as Mr. Ferraro's resignation of the Chief School Administrator position in the Kearny School District and the Board of Education of the Town of Kearny. It is understood and agreed that Mr. Ferraro's resignation is conditioned upon the Board's formal approval hereof, the Board's fulfillment of the terms hereof, and the Arbitrator's approval hereof, consistent with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6. By approving this agreement, the Board agrees to waive the 90-day notice provision in the parties' employment contract dated December 10, 2012 said contract is terminated effective November 1, 2014 by mutual agreement of the parties, subject to the arbitrator's approval of this agreement.

3. In consideration of Mr. Ferraro's resignation, release of claims, and in consideration of his employment contract rights, the Board agrees as follows:

(a) The Board shall pay Mr. Ferraro his salary retroactively from August 14, 2014 through November 1, 2014; ($34,895.82);

(b) The Board shall pay Mr. Ferraro the sum of $20,937.48 for tendering his resignation effective November 1, 2014 and for a waiver of other valuable rights and claims;

(c) The Board shall pay Mr. Ferraro $12,884.60 for his unused vacation days in accordance with the parties' employment contract;

(d) The Board shall make all necessary payroll deductions and/or withholdings from the foregoing amounts for federal and state taxes and for pension contributions, as appropriate. The payments to Mr. Ferraro shall be made by the Board on or before December 1, 2014.

4. In accordance with Executive Order 11, in response to requests for information about Mr. Ferraro's employment, the Board shall indicate the dates of his employment and the fact that he resigned in good standing from the District. Nothing hereto shall prevent Mr. Ferraro from obtaining letters of reference from former and/or current members of the Board. The Board agrees that it shall not make any disparaging statements in public about Mr. Ferraro's character or performance as Superintendent and Mr. Ferraro shall not make any disparaging comments in public about the Board.

5. The Board and Mr. Ferraro agree to release each other from any and all claims which they have now, or may have in the future against each other relating to Mr. Ferraro's employment with the Board. Excepted from this release are any rights Mr. Ferraro may have to COBRA benefits in accordance with Federal Law, and/or any rights he has under the Teachers Pension and Annuity Fund Act and/or any claim to a breach of this agreement.

6. The parties understand that this Stipulation of Settlement is contingent upon the approval of Gerard Restaino, Arbitrator. It is understood and agreed that, in the event such approval is not granted, then this Agreement shall be null and void and that the parties shall retain all rights they had prior to their execution of this agreement.

7. The parties warrant that they have entered into this Stipulation of Settlement voluntarily, without any duress or undue influence and that, by entering into this agreement, each party waives their right to a hearing and disposition on the merits of the tenure charges.

8. Mr. Ferraro agrees that he shall not file suit against the Board for an alleged violation of the Conscientious Employee Protection Act.

9. The Board agrees that it shall not bring any additional tenure charges against Mr. Ferraro and agrees that it shall take no further action against his New York SDA certificate.

10. Mr. Ferraro agrees to unconditionally and forever release and discharge the Board, its successors, and all of its respective officers, directors, employees, agents and attorneys of and from any and all debts, claims, liabilities, demands, and causes of action of every kind, nature and description, whether known or unknown in connection with Mr. Ferraro's employment as Superintendent, including but not limited to, any claim for salary, severance, benefits, bonuses and any other form of compensation, claims for personal injury, breach of contract, negligent or intentional misrepresentation, negligent or intentional infliction of emotional distress, defamation, wrongful termination, and any claims under federal, state or local laws, including but not limited to the New Jersey wage and hour laws, the New Jersey Wage Payment Law, the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination, the New Jersey Family Leave Act, the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act, the New Jersey Constitution, the common law of the State of New Jersey (including, but not limited to Pierce claims") the Family and Medical Leave Act, the Age Discrimination in Employment Act, the Americans with Disabilities Act, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, the Equal Pay Act, the Fair Labor Standards Act, and the Lilly Ledbetter Fair Pay act of 2009, which Mr. Ferraro has or may have or could assert against the Board as of the date on which this Agreement is signed, including but not limited to any claims arising out of or connected with Mr. Ferraro's employment or separation of employment with the Board, excluding any claims Mr. Ferraro may have for unemployment insurance benefits, state disability compensation, and/or a charge filed with the US Equal Employment Opportunity Commission challenging the validity of the waiver of rights under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act. The exceptions contained in paragraph 5 shall also apply to the releases in this paragraph.

11. Mr. Ferraro agrees that he was afforded up to twenty-one (21) days in which to consider and sign this Agreement. Mr. Ferraro has had the opportunity to and has had the terms of this Agreement reviewed by an attorney of his choosing. Once the Agreement is signed, acceptance may be revoked within seven (7) days by so notifying the Board. TO BE EFFECTIVE, MR. FERRARO'S RESCISSION MUST BE IN WRITING AND DELIVERED TO COUNSEL FOR

THE KEARNY BOARD OF EDUCATION, KENNETH J. LINDENFELSER, ESQ., 570 KEARNY AVENUE, KEARNY, NEW JERSEY 07032, EITHER BY HAND OR BY MAIL WITHIN THE 7-DAY PERIOD; IF SENT BY MAIL, THE RECESSION MUST BE: (1) POSTMARKED WITHIN THE 7-DAY PERIOD; (2) PROPERLY ADDRESSED TO COUNSEL FOR THE KEARNY BOARD OF EDUCATION; AND (3) SENT BY CERTIFIED MAIL, RETURN RECEIPT REQUESTED. If not otherwise revoked, this Agreement will become effective on the eighth (8th) day following execution by the parties and approval by the Board.

12. Mr. Ferraro understands and agrees that the Commissioner of Education may refer this matter to the State Board of Examiners for possible action against his certificate.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the parties acknowledge their agreement to these terms by their signatures below:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

This case arises pursuant to the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ ACT" or the "Act"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, effective August 6, 2012. The Tenure Employees Hearing Law N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. was amended by P.L. 2012 C.26.

On November 14, 2014, the Morris-Union Jointure Commission (hereinafter the "Commission") submitted to David C. Hespe, Acting Commissioner, New Jersey Department of Education, the following: (1) Tenure Charges Against Jennifer Filo, (2) Certificate of Determination, and (3) Proof of Service. Two (2) charges were filed against the Respondent: (1) Unbecoming Conduct, and (2) Other Just Cause. The Commission requested that Commissioner Hespe "deem the charges sufficient to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary and refer the case to an arbitrator in accordance with the Tenure Employees Hearing Law."

On December 1, 2014, the Respondent, Ms. Jennifer Filo ("Filo") filed her Written Statement of Evidence, denying the charges and maintaining, inter alia, that "these charges should be dismissed so that an excellent teacher can continue her service to the students and the parents of this district."

By letter dated December 12, 2014, Ms. M. Kathleen Duncan, Director, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes, New Jersey Department of Education, advised the parties as follows:

> Please be advised that, following receipt of respondent's answer on December 2, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed and deemed sufficient, if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary. Accordingly, on this date, they are being referred to Arbitrator Robert T. Simmelkjaer pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 as amended by P.L. 2012. c. 26.

The Charges, dated October 28, 2014, are as follows:

FIRST CHARGE
(Unbecoming Conduct)

1. The MUJC is a public educational agency that was established pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:46-25 (repealed, P.L. 2007, C. 63) for the primary purpose of providing services for students with disabilities. Currently, the MUJC consists of twenty-nine member school districts.

2. The MUJC operates two Developmental Learning Centers that provide a public school program for students with autism or autistic like behaviors who have been referred to the MUJC by their district of residence. More than 250 children attend the Centers, which are located in New Providence and Warren, New Jersey.

3. Ms. Jennifer Filo (hereinafter "Filo") is a tenured teacher employed by the MUJC. She received a standard certificate as a teacher of the handicapped in September 2006, whereupon, the MUJC hired her to serve in that capacity. Filo had previously worked for the MUJC, initially as a substitute teacher starting in November 2005 and, as of January 23, 2006, a teacher assistant.

4. Though employed on a ten-month basis, Filo elected to work during the MUJC's extended school year ("ESY") program in 2014, which ran from June 24 through August 7, 2014. During that time, she engaged in a pattern of corporal punishment within the meaning of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1, as follows:

   a. On or about June 27, 2014, during integrated speech, she was extremely aggressive with student HM, pulling back the student's fingers and wrists, causing her to cry;

   b. On multiple occasions, she twisted student MC's wrist to one side, while simultaneously bending it severely back, in order to control his behavior;

   c. On or about August 4, 2014, while student MM was in the cafeteria for breakfast, Filo stood over him, twisting and bending back his wrist, and on other occasions, she would twist and bend back his wrist in order to get him to move or sit down;

 Erroneously listed as "MH" in Specification 4(a).

d. On more than one occasion, when restraining students CW or BK, she shoved a table against the student's stomach, longer and more forcibly than necessary;

e. When student MM would swing his arms, trying to hit others nearby, she would swat back at him with an appropriate hit;

f. During a vocational task, when MM swung at her, Filo used a wooden clipboard, not just to block his hit, but to repeatedly hit his knuckles and hands, which later became red and swollen;

g. On or about August 1, 2014, Filo withheld breakfast from students MC and MM because they had not finished their morning schedule;

h. Once, when student HM refused to get up off the floor, Filo bent HM's fingers back in order to make her comply;

i. On one occasion when student TH grabbed Filo's arm and dug his nails into it, Filo bent back TH's fingers with more force than necessary to get him to release her;

j. On or about June 27, 2014, when student CW was acting aggressively in a bathroom stall, Filo held CW's hands and unnecessarily bent her fingers backwards; and

k. When Filo and another staff member were holding student MC, each by one of his arms, because he had become agitated, Filo unnecessarily twisted MC's arm back, and on another occasion, when the student was walking in the hallway and threw his lunch, Filo bent his arm back to punish him.

5. During the ESY program, Filo engaged in other inappropriate behavior, as follows:

   a. Filo screamed at students on a daily basis; and

   b. More than once when students were aggressing toward one another, she encouraged them to hit back.

6. During the 2013-2014 regular school year, Filo also engaged in inappropriate conduct, as follows:

   a. Filo yelled at students and mimicked their autistic-like behaviors, on one occasion, by cupping and screaming directly into the ear of a student BO, causing him to cry.

b. She made derogatory comments to students RM and MH, asking them if they were stupid or an idiot;

c. With regard to student MH, who would play with vocational task items as though they were airplanes, Filo would frequently knock them off the table and onto the floor and make the student pick them up, sometimes forcibly prompting him to do so; and

d. On several occasions, she continued to feed RM, or allowed a teacher assistant to do so, to the point where he was in visible distress, crying or vomiting.

7. The duty of a teacher requires a degree of self-restraint and controlled behavior that oftentimes is not requisite to the other occupations and professions. As evidenced by the incidents described above, Filo has failed to exercise the degree of self-restraint commensurate to her position, has shown herself to be unfit to continue serving as a teacher, and has engaged in unbecoming conduct, warranting her immediate dismissal.

8. Filo's continued presence in the classroom represents a danger to the safety and well-being of her students.

9. Accordingly, and by letter dated August 26, 2014, the MUJC Superintendent notified Filo that with the concurrence of the Board President, the Superintendent was suspending Filo with pay, pending further notice.

WHEREFORE, the Morris-Union Jointure Commission demands the dismissal of Jennifer Filo based upon her unbecoming conduct in accordance with the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq. as amended by P.L. 2012, C.26.

SECOND CHARGE
(Other Just Cause)

10. The MUJC incorporates the foregoing allegations as though fully set forth at length herein.

11. Whether or not her behavior constitutes corporal punishment prohibited by N.J.S.A. 18:6-1, Filo's conduct, as hereinabove alleged, constitutes just cause for her immediate dismissal and relinquishment of her tenure status.

WHEREFORE, the Morris-Union Jointure Commission demands the dismissal of Jennifer Filo for other just cause in accordance with the Tenure Employees Hearing Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 et seq., as amended by P.L. 2012, C.26.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

A hearing in the instant case was held on February 13, 2015, February 23, 2015, February 26, 2015, and February 27, 2015 at the Commission's offices in New Providence, New Jersey.

At the hearing, the parties were given ample opportunity to present their respective positions, including testimonial and documentary evidence, and the cross-examination of witnesses. The parties were represented by counsel and the hearing was transcribed. The record consists of two (2) Joint Exhibits, forty-one (41) Commission Exhibits and twenty-one (21) Union Exhibits. The Respondent submitted a post-hearing audio transcription. In addition, the parties submitted post-hearing briefs dated March 11, 2015. The evidence so submitted as well as the arguments of the parties has been considered by the Arbitrator in his award and accompanying opinion.

STATEMENT OF FACTS

The Charges pertain to the 2013-2014 school year and the extended school year ("ESY") program, which ran from June 24th to August 7, 2014. At all times relevant, Ms. Filo was employed as a teacher of the handicapped. During the 2014 ESY, Filo taught at the Commission School known as the Developmental Learning Center ("DLC") in Warren, NJ. During the 2013-14 school year, she was assigned to the DLC in New Providence.

The Commission's students tend to be more on the severe end of the autism spectrum, including a large group of non-verbal students who were not able to focus and needed lots of physical prompting to do their work. The class was also comprised of aggressive students and students who could become violent. There were eight (8) students in the Respondent's ESY class – all but two of whom were non-verbal. "Of the same eight students, all had some aggressive behavior, but only CW posed a physical threat," according to Ms. Anclien. (Tr. @ 21).

The Commission called as witnesses three of the four teacher assistants, who were assigned to Ms. Filo's ESY class, and a speech teacher for some of the children in the class, namely: Kelly Anclien, Danny LoBello, Karen Romero and Speech Therapist Sandra Furia. With respect to the 2013-14 school year, the Commission called Melissa Olesky, Audrey Weiss, and Jennifer Ferraioli.

The Respondent testified on her own behalf. She also called as witnesses Tom McNamara, Blanca Sadik, Julie Gardner, Damon Murtha, Latonia Hall, Cynthia Vaillant, and Andrea Marmolejos. Ms. Sadik, a teacher assistant in the Respondent's class during the 2013-14 school year, was terminated by the Commission in October 2014 based on conduct similar to that alleged against Ms. Filo.

THE CHARGES

I. Extended School Year (June – August 2014)

Specification 4 (a): On or about June 27, 2014, during integrated speech, she was aggressive with student HM, pulling back the student's fingers and wrists, causing her to cry.

Commission Position

Ms. Kelly Anclien ("Anclien") testified that on or about June 27, 2014, during integrated speech, Filo was extremely aggressive with HM, a female student, for approximately twenty to thirty minutes, pulling back the student's fingers and twisting her wrists extremely hard, causing the student to cry. "So Danny LoBello and Jen physically tried to escort her to the table and she was, you know, being refusing and trying to get away and she even pushed back from the table several times and then she flopped to the floor at this point...but HM was on the ground and Jen went right over to her and took – intertwined her fingers, bent back her wrist and like twisted her and just keep going on with this. I mean speech lasts 30 minutes, it was throughout the entire speech session, and over this hurtful aggression continued." (Tr. @ 26). Anclien observed Filo kneeling, holding back HM's arms and toward the end of the episode, Filo was mimicking the "raspberry noise" made by HM. (Tr.@ 105-106).

According to Anclien, HM had not acted aggressively toward Filo prior to the Respondent's physical response. Anclien believed that HM was being hurt because "immediately upon this behavior HM is crying and at that point when Jennifer had let go of HM's hand." (Tr. @ 28). Neither Anclien nor Filo took HM to the nurse.

Danny LoBello ("LoBello") testified that he observed this incident while serving as a Teacher Assistant. He testified that at one point on June 27, 2014 he observed HM on the ground and Filo attempting to stop HM from picking up hair off the ground and placing it onto her, HM's head. In LoBello's recollection, the incident occurred on August 1st, while he was working with MC (male). "And Jen was attempting to stop that but when she was doing that she got down on her knees and that's when she grabbed her hands to get her to stop and she did again the same twisting motion. And then HM made out a little squeal, she was upset and that is exactly what happened." As he recalled, "...she has made that sound prior but you can see in her face it was definitely like pain."(Tr. @ 126-27).

Teacher Assistant Karen Romero testified that she was not in the classroom when the incident began, but when she returned from lunch between 1:30 and 2:00 p.m. she saw Filo and HM sitting on the floor, Indian-style, with HM crying. HM was slapping at Filo, windmill-style, while Filo mimicked her behavior ("just raspberried her back when HM raspberried her"). (Tr. @ 194).

Speech Therapist, Sandra Furia, saw HM flop on the floor, and Filo try to get her up, as HM was crawling away and crying. Furia did not observe the entire incident. "The only thing I could see was HM trying to get away from her, Jen following her and she did stop her a few times." (Tr.@ 339). The teacher assistants had attempted to get HM to join the group at the table for integrated speech.

Whereas Anclien testified that "everything had to be painful from the fingers all the way through" and that HM was "crying" and "wailing out," neither she nor LoBello took HM to the nurse. (Tr. @ 29). As she put it, "I think I was just in such distress over what occurred, I totally forgot about the nurse."

Respondent Position

For her part, the Respondent focused on the length of time Anclien described the incident entailed, to wit, the "[e]ntire episode of bending back these wrists had to be a minimum of 20 minutes." Filo denied following HM around the classroom and denied bending back her wrists. She recalled the incident as one where she blocked the forehead of HM as HM attempted to bite her. (Tr.@ 892).

Opinion

In the Arbitrator's opinion, notwithstanding the failure of Anclien or LoBello to take HM to the nurse, or report the incident to the authorities, Specification 4(a) has been proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The Respondent's description of her effort to block HM and her general denial of the allegation is insufficient to overcome the testimony of two (2) credible eyewitnesses.

Specifications 4b-4k, 5a

> (4b) On multiple occasions, Ms. Filo twisted student MC's wrist to one side, while simultaneously bending it severely back, in order to control his behavior.
>
> (4k) When Filo and another staff member were holding student MC, each by one of his arms, because he had become agitated, Filo unnecessarily twisted MC's arm back, and on another occasion, when the student was walking in the hallway and threw his lunch, Filo bent his arm back to punish him.

Commission Position

Anclien testified that during the ESY, Filo, intermittently, but on multiple occasions would bend and twist the hands of MC, a male student. In order to prevent MC, who had a tendency to bite his hands, from injuring himself Filo "would stand next to him and she would bend and twist his hands. It was I think her way or means of trying to gain control and make him stop." (Tr. @ 30). Anclien testified that she observed this conduct "at least five or six times throughout the summer." (Tr. @ 107). On one such occasion, McNamara was present, standing on one side of MC while Filo stood on the outside. Anclien was uncertain if McNamara could observe what Filo was doing to MC's wrist. (Tr. @ 107, 109, 113).

Romero was present on one occasion when McNamara and Filo were restraining MC. To prevent MC from biting himself, McNamara held one of his arms down while Filo twisted MC's other arm and bent his arms. (Tr. @ 183-84).

Respondent Position

Respondent called McNamara as a witness. He testified that he did not observe Filo do anything improper. He acknowledged that he was concentrating on what he was doing and not on what Filo was doing or where her hands were in relation to MC. (Tr. @ 645-646). Filo denied the allegation. (Tr. @ 886). She described MC as a "hand biter" who would "attempt to bite you or grab at you or push the table or throw a task." To control him "myself and somebody else would hold his arms down until he was calm." (Tr. @ 861).

(4c) On or about August 4, 2014, while student MM was in the cafeteria for breakfast, Filo stood over him, twisting and bending back his wrist, and on other occasions, she would twist and bend back his wrist in order to get him to move or sit down.

Commission Position

Anclien testified that during the morning of August 4, 2014 she was seated at a table in the school cafeteria feeding a student. At one point, she turned and saw Filo standing over student MM at the next table bending his wrist and twisting it. (Tr. @ 38-39). Anclien also observed Filo use the tactic to get MM to stand up off the track to leave. Filo threw a sweatshirt over MM's wrist, which Anclien interpreted as an attempt to hide what she was doing to MM's wrists. (Tr. @ 40).

. Furia testified regarding this incident of August 4, 2014. She saw Filo standing behind MM, holding his arm and pulling it back. She did not observe MM striking out at Filo, and no children were seated near him. (Tr. @ 326-327).

(4d) On more than one occasion, while restraining students CW or BK, she shoved a table against the student's stomach longer and more forcibly than necessary.

Anclien testified that on two separate occasions, that when Filo used a table to restrain student CW, a girl, and one occasion, student BK, a boy, she "forcefully shoved the table into them really hard." (Tr. @ 32-33). Anclien did not observe any physical injury to the students although they appeared hurt. Neither student was taken to the nurse. In Anclien's view, the teacher who engaged in the restraint was responsible for taking the student(s) to the nurse.

LoBello assisted Filo in holding the table against CW during one of the two restraints. It was Filo rather than LoBello who pushed the table against CW. CW had been restrained because she tried to hit someone in the room. Anclien offered to help, but Filo and LoBello said that they were fine. LoBello testified that he was unable to see what Filo was doing. (Tr. @ 128).

> (4f) During a vocational task, when MM swung at her, Filo used a wooden clipboard, not just to block his hit, but to repeatedly hit his knuckles and hands, which later became red and swollen.

When MM was not seated, he had a tendency to swat his arms at anybody passing him. Anclien testified that Filo would swat back in retaliation at MM when he displayed this behavior. (Tr. @ 35-36). On one of these instances, MM was doing a vocational task, and whenever Filo would hand him a block or figurine, MM would swat at her. Every time he'd swat Filo, she smacked his knuckles really hard with a clipboard – ten possibly fifteen times. Later that day, Anclien noticed that MM's knuckles were swollen and red. (Tr. @ 35-36) (C. Ex. #4). Filo denied repeatedly hitting MM's knuckles with a clipboard. (Tr. @873).

> (4g) On or about August 1, 2014, Filo withheld breakfast from students MC and MM because they had not finished their morning schedule.

Anclien testified that on the morning of August 1, 2014, Filo did not have MM and MC, a female student, join their classmates for breakfast in the cafeteria. Breakfast is from 9:00 to 9:30 a.m. Sometime after 10:00 p.m., Anclien noticed that MM's breakfast bag was full. When she asked Filo if she should give MM the bag, Filo allegedly responded that "MM and MC were not going to get their breakfast until they finished their tasks on their own." (Tr. @ 43).

When Romero returned to the classroom shortly thereafter, Anclien related the situation to her. At this point, Romero gave MC her breakfast. (Tr. @ 117).

Romero recalled the incident. After the fire drill, she returned to the classroom and saw MC holding her breakfast bag. When she noticed that MC had not eaten, she mentioned this aloud, with Anclien providing Filo's reason. Romero testified that she said she did not care whether Ms. Filo had a problem with it, but she was giving the student her breakfast and that food may not be withheld here. "I was like well, no, so I gave MC (female) her breakfast. It was like if Jen has a problem with it she can tell me something. I'm taking responsibility for it." (Tr. @ 191).

Ms. Furia corroborated this incident in part when she testified that on August 1, 2014, she was providing speech services to MM. She entered the class and asked Filo for a reinforcer to which Filo responded that MM had not eaten his breakfast. At this point, Furia took the breakfast from Filo and gave it to MM. (Tr. @ 324, 326).

Respondent Position

Filo recalled the incident as one where MC (female) "brings her breakfast in, she takes it out, she sits at her desk, she does her morning work, then she eats breakfast. That morning she was highly agitated, she came in very, very upset and I told her to finish the small task that she had in front of her and then she could put it aside instead of finishing her morning work like she usually does and she could have her breakfast. It was literally sitting right in front of her..." (Tr. @ 875-876).

> (4i) On one occasion when Student TH grabbed Filo's arm and dug her nails into it, Filo bent back TH's fingers with more force than necessary to get him to release her.

Commission Position

In July 2014, LoBello observed Filo bend and twist TH's fingers back with more force than necessary. (Tr. @ 122, 161). He recalled that TH was engaging in behavior, stood up and started to go after Filo. TH dug his nails into her. LoBello demonstrated at the hearing that Filo was "able to twist, just hold his wrist behind him. TH's reaction was "he looked like he was in pain, his facial, he didn't make a sound or anything but his facial expression." (Tr. @ 123).

Also in July 2014, LoBello testified that he saw Filo engage in similar conduct with CW. CW had become aggressive and was starting to go behind her desk. He testified:

Q. And can you demonstrate again with Ms. Marmolejos what you observed for the record?
A. It was pretty much the same thing, like CW grabbed her pretty hard. She was able to kind of get her hand. I can't exactly – she was able to get her fingers more and she was squeezing her fingers a little bit upturn, I guess.
THE ARBITRATOR: Twisting them to the outside?
THE WITNESS: Yes, yeah. (Tr. @ 125).

LoBello testified that this method of restraining students was inconsistent with their training. "Staff are trained to break a student's hold without hurting oneself or the child and the technique does not involve bending or even holding a student's fingers." (Tr. @ 125).

(4j) On or about June 27, 2014, when student CW was acting aggressively in a bathroom stall, Filo held CW's hands and unnecessarily bent her fingers backwards.

Ms. Romero recalled that as CW began acting out, screaming and kicking, she and Filo pushed CW into a bathroom stall and closed the door. CW shook and kicked the door. Ms. Romero told Filo to push the button in the bathroom for help. Filo instead "put her hands over the door and grabbed the student's hands and twisted her hands back...she grabbed her hands and bent them backwards to try to get her hands off the door." (Tr. @ 178-179).

(4k) When Filo and another staff member were holding student MC, each by one of his arms, because he had become agitated, Filo unnecessarily twisted MC's arm back, and on another occasion, when the student was walking in the hallway and threw his lunch, Filo bent his arm back to punish him.

In continuing her testimony on this incident, Romero testified that students were going to lunch on this day when TH threw his lunch box – a soft container – into the air. She recalled that Filo grabbed his hands and bent them backwards in punishment. TH was not engaging in aggressive behavior at the time other than throwing his lunch box. (Tr. @ 186-188).

5(a) Filo screamed at the students on a daily basis.
5(b) More than once when the students were aggressive toward one another, she encouraged them to hit back.

Ms. Anclien recalled two occasions in July 2014 when Filo encouraged students to be aggressive toward one another. One occasion involved MM and TH. On the day in question, TH had become agitated during a speech session. He threw his water bottle at the ceiling and approached MM. As TH did this, Filo, according to Anclien, encouraged MM to hit TH. "TH grabbed MM and the aides had to intervene to remove TH." (Tr. @ 40-42).

On the other occasion in July, MM had gotten up from his table and walked over to where CW was sitting. Filo encouraged MM to hit CW even though CW was known to be physically capable of hurting someone. (Tr. @ 41-42).

Ms. Romero testified that Filo encouraged MM to "hit" or "get back" at another student, TH. (Tr. @ 188-189).

Ms. Furia also observed Filo encourage TH and MC to fight. (Tr. @ 322-323). She reported her observations to the principal in a report dated September 5, 2014. (R. Ex. #J).

Romero recalled that Filo was loud in the classroom and would yell at the students. (Tr. @ 192). Ms. Audrey Weiss and Ms. Melissa Olesky also testified about Filo's yelling during the 2013-14 school year.

Respondent's Position

In her defense to the specifications, the Respondent has focused on the failure of Anclien, LoBello and Romero to report instances of what they considered to be improper conduct on Filo's part to the principal, DYFUS, or other authorities. Although on cross-examination, Anclien acknowledged that the abuse she observed had made her "wrestle with her moral conscious," she did not come forward until August 4, 2014. The Respondent argues that Anclien's reason for not reporting Filo for her alleged deviation from school restraint policies, based on her concern that she might lose her job, constituted a "weak excuse" given whistle-blower protections.

Similarly, LoBello is criticized for "not reporting the alleged incidents to anyone and providing information to the administration when he was called into the office." Reviewing the Commission policy on "Reporting Potentially Missing or Abused Children," LoBello acknowledged that if he "witnessed something inappropriate" he was supposed to call DYFS. (Tr. @ 131) (C. Ex. #26). LoBello had also attended Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying ("HIB") training every year. LoBello's testimony that "he didn't know if necessarily (his) job would be safe" if he reported "seeing a tenured teacher physically abuse students."

Romero also admitted that she failed to report the incidents, "hoping" that HM would report the incident to her parents. Furia testified on cross that she neither reported Filo until August 5, 2014 nor Ms. Sadik despite her awareness of the district's policies regarding abuse of children, corporal punishment and physical restraint. (Tr. @ 354).

None of the District's witnesses (LoBello, Anclien, Romero) took any of the students who they believed were being abused by Filo to the nurse.

With respect to the specific charges for forcibly pushing a table against the students CW or BK to provide a restraint (4d), the Respondent relies on the testimony of LoBello that "the desk is always pressed up against the cabinet because it was like a natural barrier, L shape." (Tr. @ 145). LoBello further testified that he and Filo had used this restraint each time using their feet to anchor the desk; "[l]asting [no] more than a minute or two before she stood up.

(Tr. @ 146). McNamara's testimony is relied upon that Filo held the table in a manner that was not pressing against CW or was harmful.

The Respondent deems significant LoBello's testimony on cross that while he was aware of his reporting responsibilities, he was "unsure of whether I should report it" (i.e., the excessive force Filo had used to get TH to release her) because "she is a tenured teacher. I am just a TA, job security. He continued:

Q. And you don't think that if you observed more force than necessary being utilized that you were required to ensure that there was a reporting?
A. Can you repeat that?
Q. You don't think you had an obligation to report that activity, so you were unsure whether or not excessive force was used?
A. No, I was unsure of whether I should report it.
Q. Why is that?
A. Like I said before she is a tenured teacher, I am just a TA, job security. I didn't know what the repercussions were if I was wrong in that sense. I know what I saw but I didn't – I don't think I felt that my word wasn't as strong as a tenured teacher. I don't think they would believe me over a tenured teacher, that was my thought, that was the thinking behind not reporting it, so that's why I am unsure.

(Tr. @ 163).

Filo deems supportive of her position McNamara's testimony that during the 2014 ESY when he visited Filo's class two-three times a week for 45 minutes to an hour and he observed no incidents of corporal punishment. He observed her interact with students on approximately three to five occasions without seeing her pull back the wrists or fingers of CW, HM or any other student. He didn't see her swat back at MM or attempt to hit him with a clipboard, withhold food from MM or encourage other students to hit each other. (Tr. @ 610, 620-621, 625).

Similarly, Damon Murtha, a speech language specialist, who visited Filo's class 3-4 hours per week during the 2014 ESY did not observe her abuse any students. (Tr. @ 786-88).

The Respondent denied all of the allegations. Filo denied twisting or bending the fingers or wrists of any students (4a, 4b, 4c). She admitted blocking HM with her body when he fell to the floor to prevent her from engaging in further misbehavior but denied pulling her fingers and wrists back (4h). Filo testified that she removed CW's fingers from the bathroom door in order to dislodge her from the stall door, but denied bending them backwards or using excessive force (4j).

Filo corroborated the testimony of McNamara that she moved a table to prevent CW from hitting another student and when she observed the table was touching CW, she moved the table back (4d). (Tr. @ 866-867).

Opinion

A. Specifications 4(d) and 5(a)

The Arbitrator dismisses Specification 4(d). The testimony of LoBello and McNamara corroborates the Respondent's testimony that the table was pushed against or toward CW in a manner to provide a restraint. The table acted as a "natural barrier" preventing CW from leaving the corner to act aggressively toward other students. The credible testimony of LoBello that he and Filo had performed this maneuver several times without harming CW is sufficient to dismiss this (4d) specification. The Arbitrator is persuaded that any physical contact made with CW using the table was inadvertent.

The Arbitrator also dismisses Specification 5(a). Although there is evidence that Filo occasionally spoke to the students in a loud voice, there is no evidence that she did this on a daily basis during the ESY.

B. Specifications a-c, e-k, 5(b)

With respect to the several other specifications, the Arbitrator is persuaded that they have been proven by a preponderance of the credible evidence. The testimony of Anclien, LoBello, Romero, and Furia collectively established that on more than one occasion, Filo twisted the students' wrists, bent their fingers back and inflicted pain as punishment. A preponderance of evidence established that Filo on June 27, 2014 during the ESY pulled back HM's fingers and wrists, on multiple occasions during the ESY bent MC's arm, and used excessive force to dislodge CW's fingers from the door of a bathroom stall. On or about August 4, 2014, she twisted and bent back the wrists of MM, during a vocational task swatted back at MM when he swung at her, used a clipboard on one occasion to hit his knuckles and hands, and bent back TH's fingers to get him to release her after he dug his nails into her arm

In addition, the evidence established that Filo withheld the breakfast of MC and MM on August 1, 2014. Anclien, Romero, and Furia testified credibly that Filo withheld their breakfast to force them to complete their tasks. Anclien and Furia testified credibly that Furia encouraged students to fight back and hit each other.

Given the weight of the testimonial evidence supporting the foregoing specifications, Filo's general denials constitute an insufficient defense.

The Commission has met its burden of proving that the conduct of the Respondent during the 2014 ESY was unbecoming that of a teacher in that the evidence established a pattern of corporal punishment of students that was excessive and unnecessary either for the purpose of self-defense or for the protection of persons or property. (See, N.J.S.A. 18:6-1). The fact that none of the witnesses to Filo's abusive conduct took the students to the nurse for treatment, notified the principal regarding their observations, or called in abuse allegations to DYFS does not, in the Arbitrator's judgment, detract from their credible testimony at the hearing regarding the specifications.

The Respondent's defense to the specifications, other than her general denial, relies upon the testimony of witnesses who were either not in the classroom or who intermittently taught in the classroom as therapists. Although the Arbitrator has credited the testimony of McNamara regarding specification (4d), which was corroborated by the testimony of LoBello, the fact that he was occasionally in Filo's classroom, approximately 3-5 times per week for a maximum time period of three hours, diminishes the probative value of his testimony regarding the remaining specifications. The testimony of McNamara that he never saw Filo pull back the wrists or fingers of CW, HM or any other student leaves open the probability that this misconduct occurred when he was not present. Therefore, the Arbitrator finds the testimony of the teacher assistants, who were in the Respondent's classroom on a daily and hourly basis, more probative on these specifications.

Similarly not probative of the proven specifications (4a- c, e - k and 5b) is the testimony of Mr. Murtha, a speech therapist, who visited Filo's class 3-4 hours a week during the 2014 ESY. Here again, Murtha's testimony that he did not observe Filo mistreat any of her students constitutes a limited sample of the Respondent's total classroom performance and as a result entitled to less evidentiary weight than the collective and credible testimony of Anclien, LoBello and Romero regarding the specifications.

In contrast to the Respondent's witnesses, other than McNamara, the Arbitrator has accorded more evidentiary weight to the testimony of Furia, a speech therapist, who also visited Filo's classroom sporadically, but gave specific testimony regarding the incidents she observed. She credibly corroborated the testimony of Romero regarding Filo's withholding of MM's breakfast on August 1, 2014 and observed Filo encourage two students, MM and TH, to physically attack each other. On August 4, 2014, she testified that Filo twisted MM's hands backwards while he was seated at a table during breakfast.

C. Fear of Retaliation/Failure to Report Abuse

The Arbitrator credits the testimony of the Commission witnesses who gave fear of retaliation or losing their jobs as their reason for not reporting their observations of student abuse before being called in by the principal. Although Anclien, LoBello, Romero and Furia all acknowledged that they were aware of the District's abuse policies, the Anti-Bullying Act, and that pursuant to state law they were required to report such abuse to DYFS, their principal or immediate supervisor, the Arbitrator is persuaded that they had a genuine, albeit unfounded belief, that the reporting of any abuse incidents could redound to their detriment. As Anclien put it, "there's a lot of things that just don't go right in the world." (Tr. @ 65). At one point, Anclien testified that she approached Filo and said to her that her conduct appeared to be against school policy and encouraged her to be mindful of her actions with the students. Anclien's warning to Filo did not result in a report to the administration and her expectations that Filo would change did not materialize.

Similarly, LoBello testified that he "didn't know if necessarily [his] job would be safe" if he reported seeing a tenured teacher physically abuse students. (Tr. @ 128). Also, Romero testified that she didn't report the incidents out of a fear of getting fired because "I don't know, I just didn't." (Tr. @ 219).

Notwithstanding the whistleblower-type protections afforded those who report abuse under the law, and their protection against retaliatory termination under state laws and district policies, which the witnesses acknowledged, the evidence supports a finding that the untenured teacher assistants had a legitimate fear that reporting Filo would put their jobs at risk. Irrespective of whether the witnesses harbored an unreasonable fear of retaliation and by failing to report violated the Commission policies themselves as well as their legal duty to report, the Arbitrator is persuaded that this aspect of their conduct is properly separated from their credible testimony regarding the specifications. The Arbitrator discerns no nexus between their fear of retaliation when observing the Respondent's misconduct and their willingness to testify when confronted by their principal and the Commission officials.

D. Personality Conflicts

The Arbitrator found no evidence to support the Respondent's assertion that any of the witnesses who testified against her regarding the August 2014 ESY charges were biased due to a personality conflict, adverse supervisor-subordinate relations, or other performance issues. Anclien denied ever being reprimanded by Filo, having a personality conflict with her, or receiving any negative feedback about her performance. (Tr. @ 48, 86). LoBello denied having a personality conflict with Filo or receiving a reprimand regarding his performance. He did not resent her authority as the teacher and followed her orders. (Tr. @ 128, 164).

The Respondent, in her testimony, provided no evidence to support her claim that a personality conflict or her role as supervisor motivated the three teacher assistants to falsely testify against her.

E. Credibility

The Arbitrator is disinclined to apply the "false in one false in all" principle to the testimony of Ms. Anclien. While she may have misconstrued the time frame during which the table appeared to come in contact with CW, the incident undoubtedly occurred. McNamara's testimony that a cabinet blocked the physical contact with CW and lasted only a minute or two as opposed to Anclien's recollection of 20-30 minutes persuades the Arbitrator that she embellished or misremembered this incident; however, for the remainder of her testimony, there is corroboration by LoBello, Romero, Furia and others that Filo twisted the wrists and bent back the fingers of students on multiple occasions as a form of corporal punishment.

With respect to the alleged discrepancy in Romero's testimony regarding the restraint of MC (5b), McNamara testified that he couldn't see what Filo was doing with her hands on the other side of MC. (Tr. @ 645-646).

F. Joint Compression Defense

In her Statement of Evidence and during her testimony, Filo has defended the specifications that she bent the fingers and twisted the wrists of several students by claiming that she was using a technique she referred to as "deep joint compression." She testified that she was taught the technique by an occupational therapist, employed by the Commission. She described it as follows:

Q. Now once again I just want to make sure we have it for the record, you talk about the fingers, what did you mean by compression because I felt, I don't think you articulated it.

A. Compression is when you're pushing against either side of the joints to make the joints compress and then instead of pulling back you would release so it was a natural release. (Tr. @ 881).

Q. The Arbitrator asked you what you referred to the pressure technique and you said deep pressure. But in your statement you refer to it as quote and you have quotes around it deep joint compression, right?

A I performed both deep pressure and deep joint compression.

Q. And the one you were taught by or trained by one of the occupational therapist, which one was that?

A. Both.

Q. So it was both deep joint compression. How is deep joint compression different from the other technique?

A. Deep joint compression you're creating impact to the joint whereas pressure you're impacting the muscles. (Tr. @899)

In the Arbitrator's opinion, the Respondent's claim that the witnesses misinterpreted what they observed as bending back fingers and twisting wrists because she was engaged in deep joint compression or deep pressure was discredited by the testimony of Ms. Audrey Weiss, an occupational therapist.

Ms. Weiss disputed the Respondent's claim in her answer that she had engaged in "deep joint compressions" involving MC and TH. In demonstrating the joint compressions used by occupational therapist, Weiss displayed a gentle squeezing and tugging, distinguishable from the twisting of the wrist and bending back of the fingers described by the witnesses to Filo's conduct. Filo could not recall the name of the occupational therapist who had taught her the joint compression technique and no expert witness testified on her behalf.. (Tr. @ 863-864, 900-901) Weiss further testified that unless the student's IEP authorizes a teacher to use compressions or brushing techniques, it is not appropriate for a teacher to use them.

There is also no evidence that the restraint techniques used by Filo on the students were part of the Crisis Prevention Intervention ("CPI") or SCIP training she received under the auspices of the Commission. Clearly, the teacher assistants received such training and would have recognized approved restraints, holds and control positions to manage aggressive behavior had Filo used them. (C. Exs. #17, 18).

II. The 2013-2014 School Year

Specifications (6a,b, c & d)

Commission Position

Ms. Melissa Olesky ("Olesky"), teacher assistant in the Respondent's class from October 25, 2013 until June 19, 2014, testified that she went to New Providence – DLC Principal Julie Gardner just four days after being assigned to Filo's class to report name calling. (Tr. @ 234-235, 293). She subsequently met with the superintendent on September 17, 2014 and offered to write up what she had observed during the 2013-2014 school year. She omitted from her report to the superintendent that Filo had referred to two students as an "idiot" and "retarded." (R. Ex. #H). On the second day of her cross-examination, Olesky recalled that the incident where Filo had allegedly referred to Student RM as an "idiot" did not occur until January 2014, between 9:00 and 9:15 a.m. and therefore beyond the scope of the instant charges. While Olesky admitted that she may have mixed up the incidents when reporting to Gardner, she reiterated that the incidents had occurred. (Tr. @ 229, 302).

Ms. Olesky testified that she did report an incident to Gardner where Filo mimicked a student's autistic behavior and yelled into his ear. She also complained about Filo's and Sadik's belittling treatment of her as well as their inappropriate conduct toward the students. (Tr. @ 285, 234-235; R. Ex. #4). In her statement to Dr. Janet Parmalee, dated September 19, 2014, Olesky wrote, inter alia, the following:

> For example, on one occasion, within those four days of me being placed into the room, at the back kidney table where vocational > schedules are being done by all four students, Jennifer Filo, was involved with a student (B.O.); she inappropriately mimicked the noise and hand gesture the student was making at the time, proceeding to take it to the next level and imitate him while screaming it into his ear. (At times, this particular student engages in inappropriate noise as a stim). Within those four days, on a separate school day, during academics in the morning, staff member (Blanca Sadik), was working with student (M.H.), staff member abruptly and inexcusably screamed within close proximity of students ear to, in my opinion, force him to listen more effectively. Which in my opinion, is completely unprofessional and unacceptable. In addition, there were several times in which both staff members (Jennifer Filo and Blanca Sadik), would intentionally throw students vocational tasks, during afternoon schedules, off of the kidney shaped table and onto the floor to make student pick each piece up, simply because student was playing with the pieces inappropriately.

> For example, student (M.H.) would occasionally fly his voc task pieces, mostly the plastic large sized nuts and bolts, as if they were airplanes. Instead of intervening professionally, both at different times would intentionally take their one hand and slide it across the table abruptly to knock over all the pieces of the task, and say to the student "You want to fly your task, then fly them all the way over there". Of course, I immediately intervened and picked up the pieces of the task as well as the voc bin myself. That was not well liked by the two of them (J.F. and B.S.), but I did not mind the disrespectful whispers they spoke of me while I was present, in the months following...

In addition to mimicking the hand flapping and vocalizations of BO, Olesky recalled a second incident where BO threw an empty plastic bin and hit Filo with it. In response, Filo, according to Olesky, took BO's fingers and attempted to bend them back as he did the same thing to her. (Tr. @ 232-233, 295-296). Olesky did not report this incident to Gardner.

Ms. Olesky testified that on occasion, Specification 6(d), she observed Filo continue to feed RM although he was visibly distressed. (Tr. @ 309).

Despite working as an aide in the District for nine months and familiarizing herself with the District's student abuse policies, including physical restraint and corporal punishment, Olesky did not report any of the alleged incidents. She also did not take BO to the nurse when Filo screamed into his ear so loud that his own ears hurt and BO began to cry.

Olesky testified that when she reported the BO and MH incidents to Gardner, she was "crying hysterically" while requesting a transfer from Filo's classroom. (Tr. @ 239). Gardner informed Olesky that there were no additional positions available at the time. Following her transfer request around Thanksgiving 2013, Olesky did not make any complaints about Filo to Gardner.

Ms. Audrey Weiss, Occupational Therapist, testified that during her sessions in Filo's class during 2013-2014, Filo would mimic the autistic behavior of students and sometimes yell at them. She observed Filo mimic BO's behavior, repeating his stimming noises loudly in his ear. Ms. Weiss saw Filo do this twice. (Tr. @ 413-414).

Finally, on cross, Weiss testified that Filo had been aggressive with the children, both verbally and physically. (Tr. @ 430).

Respondent Position

Respondent relies on the testimony of Gardner that when Olesky requested a transfer in October 2013, she did not report any instances of abuse, but rather her personal mistreatment by Filo and Sadik. (Tr. @ 663-665).

The Respondent further relies on the testimony of Sadik, who was present in the classroom, that neither Olesky nor anyone else ever complained to her.

The fact that Gardner, to whom the student abuse was allegedly reported, took no action persuades Respondent that Olesky's allegations are false. Respondent argues that "[h]ad there been any truth to her account, one must surmise that the Commissioner would likely have disciplined Ms. Gardner for failing to follow-up on Ms. Olesky's allegations, but she testified that no such discipline was imposed."

Opinion

With the exception of Specification 6(a), which was corroborated by Weiss, the Arbitrator dismisses the remaining specifications preferred against Filo under Charge I by the Commission for the 2013-2014 school year. In support of Specification 6(a), Weiss testified credibly that Filo mimicked the behavior of BO, by repeating his stimming noises loudly into his ear.

Specifications 6(b), (c) and (d), which rely exclusively on the testimony of Olesky, are dismissed. The testimony of Principal Gardner that Olesky did not report these allegations to her when requesting a transfer from Filo's classroom in October 2013 combined with evidence that Olesky's testimony is biased due to the resentment she harbored against Filo and Sadik for their treatment of her convinces the Arbitrator that the Commission has not met its burden of proof regarding these specifications. Although the Arbitrator discounts the testimony of Sadik, who was terminated by the Commission and accused of misconduct similar to that of Filo, Olesky's statement that she was "not well liked by the two of them (J.F. and B.S.), but I did not mind the disrespectful whispers they spoke to me while I was present in the months following" coupled with Gardner's testimony that she had no recollection of Olesky's report of student abuse in October 2013 persuades the Arbitrator that the remaining Specifications, which lack corroboration, should be dismissed.

III. Respondent's Additional Defenses

Having found a preponderance of evidence that the Commission has met its burden of proof with respect to Charge One, Specifications 4a-4k, 5(b) and 6(a), the Arbitrator considers the Respondent's defenses for the purpose of either dismissing any of these specifications on procedural grounds or mitigating the penalty sought by the Commission.

The Respondent has argued that "[d]eficiencies in the Commission's investigation compromises integrity of evidence" and apparently warrants the dismissal of the charges and specifications. The Respondent contends:

> The number and sheer magnitude of these proven-false allegations raises serious concerns that the Commission's handling of its investigation was systematically flawed and corrupted the testimony of its witnesses. A number of the witnesses testified that they were present with other staff members when questioned as part of the Commission's investigation, openly discussing their accounts of what transpired together. They were also handed prepared certifications, drafted by Ms. McMahon, to sign, which often times contrasted markedly with the fact summaries they themselves typed. The certifications also tended to contain more allegations than what was reported in the witness's personally-typed statements, and the notes taken during their interviews.

As an example of the deficiencies permeating the Commission's investigation, the Respondent alludes to the testimony and statement of Ms. Furia. According to the Respondent, the statement Furia prepared on September 5, 2014, "memorializing the alleged inappropriate conduct she witnessed" omitted "the supposed incident in which she accused Ms. Filo of mimicking HM's movements while she was on the floor crying, as well as the incident where Ms. Furia was scratched during her initial therapy session with MM...The same applies to Ms. Romero's certification, which contains rather serious allegations – specifically, that Ms. Filo bent TH's hand and encouraged TH and MH to aggress each other – that were suspiciously left out of her original personally-typed statement."

The Respondent, through her cross-examination of several Commission witnesses, and in her opening statement, has argued that the Commission and its counsel engaged in improper conduct. Counsel for the Respondent in his opening statement stated: "It is rather unprecedented with respect to manipulation, influencing, and tampering of witnesses... I know it is not really right to bring it to you, but during the course of this proceeding... there's been testimony to the effect uniformly from almost every witness ... that counsel for the Commission has met with all of the fact witnesses together on at least two occasions and during those meetings everybody was asked to share their versions of the events, together, not in isolation." (Tr. @ 276).

On the other hand, Commission counsel responds that "[d]espite engaging in repetitive and prolonged cross-examination, Respondent's counsel never established any manipulation, influencing or witness tampering, or anything close to it, at least not on the part of the commission or its counsel."

During Anclien's cross-examination, she testified:

Q. During any of these meetings, okay, particularly the one a month ago and then the one with Ms. McMahon, the superintendent, were you ever given any information other than your personal knowledge of what you observed particularly with regard to what any of the other teachers assistants or teachers, may have had to say about my client, were you told what anybody else said?"

A. No. (Tr. @ 70).

Later, she responded to the question, "[A]t any point during your meetings, have you acquired any knowledge of what other witnesses to this matter may have told the superintendent or told the principal, are you aware of their testimony? Anclien acknowledged that "yes, at our last meeting I was given everyone's testimony, including Ms. Filo's, a copy of that." (Tr. @ 71). Anclien further testified that she was given a packet, including the statements of Romero, LoBello, Olesky and Furia. She testified that she was allowed to take the statements home and "I read them just last night before coming." (Tr. @ 82).

At the end of the meeting in September 2014, where all of the Commission's witnesses were present, Commission counsel told them "what the process would be like, we were being told because we all had questions of what to expect." (Tr. @ 73). With respect to her conversation with Romero, Anclien testified:

Q. When did you speak to Karen Romero?
A. I guess February 1st, I just texted her saying I wonder if we will have school tomorrow, do you think that the thing is still on, she said yes, it should still be on even if school is canceled.
Q. You didn't have any conversation with Karen whatsoever about her statement, her account of this incident or her presumed testimony at the time of the proceeding, nothing about the facts of this case?
A. No, I mean we are still in a classroom together, so we really don't talk about this but we may have asked each other a question her or there. Honestly I can't recall what they were, you know.
Q. Question about what may have happened, what her understanding was of what happened way back, things like that?
A. Like I might have said I remember this happening, were you there that day, you know, something like that.
Q. Did you have those types of discussions with any of the other witnesses other than Karen?

A. No. (Tr. @74).

Anclien testified that she prepared one statement in August 2014 at the behest of Principal Marmolejos. (R. Ex. #B). In September 2014, she typed up a more detailed statement based upon what she could recall. (R. Ex. #C). Approximately one month prior to her testimony on February 13, 2014, she met with Commission counsel and the superintendent.

LoBello presented his handwritten statement, dated 9/8/14. On December 7, 2014, LoBello prepared a certification with the assistance of Commission counsel. (C. Ex. #6). Between September and December 2014, he met with Commission counsel and Marmolejos along with the other witnesses. He then testified:

Q. Where did that meeting take place?
A. It was either in Andrea's office or in there was like a conference room.
Q. Were there any other attendees to that meeting, sir?
A. It was the other TAs that were in the classroom, so it would be Karen and Kelly, and I believe Sandy was there.
Q. And you guys were all participating in the same meeting together?
A. Yes.
Q. And you folks were all providing your accounts in the presence of the others in terms of, you know, what your observations were of the incidents in question?
A. Yes.
Q. Who was overseeing or directing that meeting, sir?
A. It was Robin and Andrea...
Q. This meeting you just talked about with all witnesses there, did you have any after that but prior to today?
A. I believe so, yes.
Q. And when was that subsequent meeting, sir?
A. I don't know, I don't have a date for you.
Q. Who were the attendees at that meeting?
A. I believe it was the same.
Q. Where did that take place?
A. Conference room.

Q. And once again all the attendees including the fact witnesses provide their accounts in the presence of the other witnesses?
A. Yes.
Q. At any point in time were you given the statements of the other witnesses, the written statements that other witnesses had provided to the Commission?
A. Yes.
Q. When was that done, sir?
A. I don't have a date for you.
Q. Do you still have them as you sit here today?
A. Those papers?
Q. Yes.
A. I am sure I do, I don't know where I placed them. I don't know exactly where they are.
Q. At any point in time in preparation for today's proceeding did you have occasion to review the statements of the other witnesses?
A. No, I did not.
Q. After you were given them you never read them?
A. No.
Q. At any point in time during these meetings, did either counsel for the Commission or anybody within the administration address with you the issue of not reporting what you had observed?
A. No, I don't believe so.
Q. At any point in time other than during the course of the meetings that you just spoke of, did you have occasion to have conversations with any of the other aides or staff members who were present in the classroom during any of the incidents that are in question here?
A. We worked together so of course we are going to have contact.
Q. With respect to the fact –
A. Did we meet outside and talk about it?
Q. Not necessarily meet. Did you have any occasion to speak?
A. No.
Q. Either on the phone?
A. No.
Q. Not about the facts?
A. No, no, we kept to ourselves in respect to that. (Tr. @ 155-159).

The Respondent has focused on the discrepancy between Romero's statement "I was not there for the incident with HM" and her certification that on June 27, 2014 "when I returned to the classroom after lunch, Ms. Filo was on the floor with HM. The student was crying hysterically. Ms. Filo copied HM's behaviors, hitting her back and forth when an open hand slap like a two year old and making raspberries when HM made that sound." (R. Ex. #F; C. Ex. #8) (Tr. @ 204-205). In the Arbitrator's opinion, Romero credibly clarified the discrepancy by testifying that she was present for part of the 6/27/14 incident with HM.

Romero recalled the meeting with McMahon, Marmolejos and Parmalee as "We had our statements and we were just told to review them and we just talked about what was going to happen with the trial and stuff like that." Later, she received a packet with a copy of Filo's statement/certification. At a prior meeting, "individual staff members spoke of what they recollected during the summer." (Tr. @ 217-218).

The crux of the Respondent's claim of "witness tampering" is that the Commission and/or its counsel improperly influenced the testimony of its witnesses so that they testified in a manner other than their best recollections of what they observed. Despite extensive cross-examination of Anclien, LoBello and Romero by Respondent's counsel regarding their initial statements to the principal in August and September 2014, subsequent certifications in December 2014, and attendance at a hearing preparation meeting in or about January 2015, the Arbitrator discerns no evidence that the Commission's witnesses altered their testimony to add allegations that they did not personally observe, received information from the Commission or its counsel to bolster their testimony, or as a result of meetings attended by the witnesses significantly deviated from their original accounts.

Although the witnesses received the certifications of the other Commission witnesses as well as the certification of Ms. Filo and provided their accounts of the alleged incidents to each other, they did not change their statements or amend their certification. For example, LoBello, who received the packet of witness certifications, testified that he did not read them or communicate with any of the other witnesses before testifying at the hearing. Ms. Anclien denied receiving any information about what the other witnesses may have said. Romero testified on cross-examination that neither Commission counsel nor anyone else suggested that she "put things in your statement that were untrue." (Tr. @ 221). To the extent that discrepancies can be discerned they were clarified as in Romero's case or corroborated by the testimony of other witnesses. With respect to Furia's omission from her statement that Filo mimicked HM's movements on the floor while he was crying, Anclien, LoBello and Romero, along with Furia, corroborated the particulars of the June 27, 2014 incident. There is no specification alleging that during ESY Filo mimicked HM's behavior while he was on the floor.

IV. Penalty

Having found no evidence of a procedural irregularity or an appearance of an impropriety that would warrant the dismissal of any charges or specifications on procedural grounds, the Arbitrator reiterates his finding that the Respondent, with the exception of the charges dismissed, committed the misconduct set forth in the Commission's tenure charges. Unlike a procedural irregularity that was outcome determinative or harmful to the interest of the Respondent, the Commission's investigation and witness preparation were not problematic.

The Commission has met its burden of proof by a preponderance of the credible evidence that Ms. Filo engaged in conduct unbecoming or other just cause manifested in a pattern of corporal punishment and excessive force prohibited by Commission policy and state statute.

The Commission has cited the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision of the "unbecoming conduct" standard to tenure charges as follows:

> Unbecoming conduct...has been defined as conduct "which has a tendency to destroy public respect for [government] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services." Karins v. City of Atlantic City, 152 N.J. 532, 554 (1998) (citation omitted). Unbecoming conduct may include "any conduct which adversely affects the morale or efficiency of the [department.]" Ibid. (citation omitted). The touchstone of the determination lies in the certificate holder's "fitness to discharge the duties and functions of one's office or position." In re Grossman, 127 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App.Div. 1974). In re Young, 202 N.J. 50, 66 (2010).

Whereas the Respondent has argued that "a number of the accusations made against Ms. Filo would not constitute 'unbecoming conduct' as contemplated by the TEACHNJ ACT even if found to be true," the Arbitrator notes that the charges sustained, as opposed to those alluded to by the Respondent of raising her voice to students, mimicking their behavior, or throwing task pieces on the floor, encompass a pattern of inflicting corporal punishment, including the twisting of students' wrists and bending back their fingers. Moreover, in the Arbitrator's opinion, Filo's unbecoming conduct also entails the withholding the breakfast of MC and MM as punishment (Specification #4g), mimicking the autistic-behavior of student BO while repeating his stimming noises loudly in his ear (Specification #6a), using a wooden clipboard to hit the knuckles and hands of MM (Specification #4f) and encouraging students to fight with each other (Specification #5b).

The Arbitrator has dismissed Specification #4d. The Arbitrator has not sustained the specification (5a) that charged Filo with raising her voice, namely, "scream[ing] at students on a daily basis" or Specifications 6b, 6c and 6d.

As the Commission correctly asserts, the "use of physical force by a teacher to maintain discipline or to punish infractions constitutes conduct unbecoming a public employee." See, In re Fulcomer, 93 N.J. Super. 401, 421 (App. Div. 1967). "Such conduct can adversely affect the morale or efficiency" of the public entity, the Jointure Commission in the instant case, and has "a tendency to destroy public respect for... [public] employees and confidence in the operation of [public] services." See, In re Emmons, 63 N.J. Super. 136, 140 (App. Div. 1960).

Both parties agree that "the touchstone is fitness to discharge the functions of one's office or position." In re Grossman, 27 N.J. Super. 13, 29 (App. Div.). Clearly, a teacher who engages in the corporal punishment of her students has forfeited the right to continue in position requiring public trust.

Although there is case law which recognizes the difficult task a teacher must perform in managing students with disabilities, particularly students with autistic behaviors prone to physical aggressive and verbal outburst, the Respondent's training and certification ostensibly prepared her to management student acting out behaviors without resort to physical force.

Whereas Respondent argues that "it is quite possible that the other staff members, who were not teachers, either exaggerated or misinterpreted her actions," the Respondent produced a paucity of evidence to support this contention. With the exception of Anclien's testimony regarding Specification 5(a), where she exaggerated or misperceived the time period Filo pulled back MM's fingers, the other teacher assistants credibly testified that they observed corporal punishment being inflicted on HM and other students. Their experience as teacher assistants averaged 7 years, they all received CPI and SCIP training in physical restraints and collectively considered Filo's conduct excessive despite their failure to report.

In her defense, Filo was unable to provide any plausible explanation as to how her massage-type pressure could have been misconstrued as excessive force. For example, in describing the technique she use in blocking HM's forehead as HM attempted to bite her – a technique that Anclien purportedly misconstrued – Filo admitted that this was not a technique she acquired from her CPI training. (Tr. @ 893). Filo recalled that she had learned the "tactile or vestibular sensory input" from an occupational therapist at the DLC, whose name she couldn't recall. At no point in applying her deep joint pressure on MC, which she described as akin to a massage, did Filo validate the technique with her supervisors. She never requested retraining, clarification in the use of physical restraint or additional guidance in controlling student behavior. Filo admitted that none of the training she received sanctioned bending back fingers or twisting wrists.

In the absence of any evidence that the teacher assistants collectively misconstrued what they observed Filo doing when she bent back fingers and twisted wrists to obtain student compliance, the Arbitrator is compelled to conclude that she engaged in a pattern of corporal punishment as distinguished from an isolated incident. This behavior constitutes conduct unbecoming or other just cause warranting the removal of the Respondent's tenure. With the exception of the CW and BK specifications, the Respondent's misconduct has been accurately summarized by the Commission as follows:

> 1) HM (pulling back fingers and wrists); 2) MC (twisting his wrists to one side, while simultaneously bending it severely back, and unnecessarily twisting and bending his arm back; 3) MM (twisting and bending back his wrists, using a wooden clipboard to repeatedly hit his knuckles and hands and swatting back at him when he swung his arms at others ... 6) HM (bending her fingers back; 7) TH (bending his fingers back).

In addition to the foregoing misconduct, the preponderant evidence also sustained specifications where Filo encouraged students to hit back at each other, where she mimicked their autistic behaviors, and an incident where she withheld breakfast as punishment.

In the aggregate, the Arbitrator concludes that the Respondent has displayed unbecoming conduct incompatible with the professional standards required of teachers who serve as role models and hold positions where "they teach, inform and mold attitudes and influence the opinions of pupils." See, In re Tenure Hearing of Cotto, EDU 7420-97 (May 10, 2000). Teachers have been dismissed for inflicting physical, mental and emotional punishment. Similar to Respondent here, the teacher in In re Tenure Hearing of Smith, EDU 2838-92

(May 12, 1993) "dug her nails into the student's arms, shoved her into a seat on two occasions and made her stand in the corner from 9:15 until lunch time."

The Arbitrator concurs with the Commission in finding that dismissal is the only appropriate penalty for the Respondent's unbecoming conduct. The gravity of her misconduct, her use of excessive force, and the absence of extenuating circumstances render her unfit to teach. The Respondent's lack of remorse for her use of excessive force and failure to acknowledge that any of her conduct was inappropriate militate against the imposition of a lesser penalty such as a suspension coupled with retraining.

Although the Arbitrator is cognizant of the stressful conditions under which the Respondent has worked as a teacher of autistic students, her experience and training necessitated that she maintain her composure at all times. As Superintendent Parmalee aptly put it, "We cannot guarantee what our students learn and how they progress academically with us ... I have to guarantee our staff does not purposely hurt our kids. I have to guarantee that."

In the final analysis, the Arbitrator concludes that dismissal is the only appropriate penalty that will safeguard the students, ensure accountability for proven misconduct, and serve to deter a similar deviation from the requisite standards.

NOW THEREFORE, as the duly selected Arbitrator, having heard the evidence presented, I hereby issue the following:

AWARD

(1) The Commission proved Charge 1 (Conduct Unbecoming), Specifications 4a-4c, 4e-4k, 5b and 6a and Charge 2 (Other Just Cause).

(2) The Arbitrator dismisses Charge 1, Specifications 4d, 5a, 6b, 6c and 6d.

(3) The Respondent, Jennifer Filo, shall be dismissed from her tenure position with the Morris-Union Jointure-Commission.

Introduction

This matter arises from tenure charges submitted on or about September 24, 2014 by the State Operated School District of the City of Newark (the School District or the District) based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. N.J.S.A.18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.3 and N.J.S.A. 6A:3-5.1 against Edward Newton (Respondent) and an December 22, 2014 referral of the tenure charges to the undersigned by the New Jersey Department of Education, Bureau of Controversies and Disputes pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c. The hearing in the matter was conducted on February 10, 17 and 24, 2015 in Newark, New Jersey. At the hearing all parties were afforded the opportunity for argument, examination and cross-examination of witnesses and the introduction of relevant exhibits. Respondent Newton was present for the entire hearing and testified on his own behalf. At the close of the hearing on February 24, 2015 the parties elected to submit written closing argument, upon the receipt of which by the arbitrator on March 13, 2015 the matter was deemed submitted.

This Award is made following my careful consideration of the entire record in the matter, including the under-sign's observations of the demeanor of all witnesses.

Issues

The issues presented in this matter may be accurately stated as follows:

> Has the District met its burden of establishing the truth of its tenure charges against Respondent, and if not, what is the appropriate remedy?

The Tenure Charge

The tenure charge in this matter are based upon inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10. N.J.S.A.18A:6-11, N.J.S.A. 18A6-17.3 and N.J.S.A. 6A:3-5.1 and states:

CHARGE ONE: INEFFICIENY

During the period from September 2012 to the present, Respondent has demonstrated an inability to completely and responsibly execute her duties as a teacher in the following manner:

a. The Respondent has failed to implement curricular goals and objective(s).
b. The Respondent has failed to design coherent instruction.
c. The Respondent has failed to assess student learning.
d. The Respondent has failed to create an environment of respect and rapport.
e. The Respondent has failed to manage student behavior.
f. The Respondent has failed to manage classroom procedures.
g. The Respondent has failed to establish a culture of learning.
h. The Respondent has failed to communicate clearly and accurately.
i. The Respondent has failed to use questioning and discussion techniques with flexibility and responsiveness.
j. The Respondent has failed to engage students in learning.
k. The Respondent has failed to provide feedback to students.
l. The Respondent has failed to attain student achievement that meets or exceeds performance benchmarks.
m. The Respondent has failed to reflect on teaching.
n. The Respondent has failed to contribute to the School and District.
o. The Respondent has failed to grow and develop professionally.
p. The Respondent has failed to demonstrate promptness and attendance.

Respondent

Respondent has a New Jersey middle school math certification and obtained tenure in or about 2010. He has taught math and science at the elementary and middle school level in the District since 2006 and taught at Lincoln Elementary school from 2008 until the instant tenure charges. At Lincoln, Respondent taught as a classroom teacher in math and science for three years, and more recently as a math problem solving teacher and classroom math teacher. Prior to the 2012-2013 school year Respondent received annual evaluations of satisfactory or proficient. Respondent received Annual Summative Evaluation ratings of "Partially Effective" for the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years. As a result of his receiving ratings of Partially Effective for two consecutive years, the District filed the instant inefficiency tenure charge.

Testimony

Lincoln School Principal Debora R. Weaver

Principal of Lincoln School Debora R. Weaver testified that during the 2012-2013 school year Respondent was evaluated pursuant to the District's 2012-2013 "Framework For Effective Teaching." The Framework includes five "competencies" for which teachers are evaluated: (1) Lesson Design and Focus; (2) Rigor and Inclusiveness; (3) Culture of Achievement; (4) Student Progress Toward Mastery and (5) Commitment to Personal and Collective Excellence. The Framework contemplates that teachers will be evaluated through evidence; evidence of three general types; (a) what can be observed, (b) what cane be seen in artifacts and (c) what can be seen in quantitative data. Teachers may receive ratings at four levels in each competency: Highly Effective, Effective, Partially Effective and Ineffective. Both administrators and teachers received significant and continuing training on the evaluation tool, according to Weaver.

The 2012-2013 Framework provided the following "main components" of the teacher evaluation process under the Framework:

1. Goal-setting meeting and IPDP creation – recommended
2. Partial Period Observation(s) – recommended
3. Pre-Observation Conference(s) – recommended
4. Formal observation(s) – required
5. Post-Observation Conference(s) – required
6. Mid-Year Review – strongly recommended
7. Annual Evaluation – required

The 2012-2013 Framework also provided that tenured teachers "must have a minimum of one (1) formal observation, though the district recommends that all teachers be observed at least 3 times, whether formally or informally," and that a post observation conference "must be held within ten (10) calendar days following the formal observation." The Framework further provides that the time frame for the post-observation conference "may be extended due to the absence of either the observer or the teacher."

Weaver explained that the District's 2013-2014 "Framework" contained some modifications from the previous year. The 2013-2014 Framework continued to have the same five competencies and four ratings. However, the Framework modified the number of observations required for a tenured teachers so that all tenured teachers were required to have three observations and that teachers on a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) were required to have at least one additional observation and that at least one of the observations of a teacher subject to a CAP must have been performed by someone other than the individual who performed the other observations of the teacher. Under the 2013-2014 Framework, teachers with a CAP were required to have at least two short observations and at least two long observations. All observations must be followed up by a post-observation conference within ten working days of the observation and at least one observation must have a pre-observation conference. Finally, midyear conferences were required for teachers on a CAP and all teachers were to receive an annual evaluation.

The 2013-2014 Framework also provided that any teacher who received an annual summative evaluation rating of Partially Effective or Ineffective in the 2012-2013 school year must have a CAP in the 2013-2014 school year. The Framework specifies that a CAP should be developed in the beginning of a school year through a collaborative process between the teacher and supervisor.

Weaver testified that during the 2012-2013 school year she performed observations in her school from grade three down and that grade four and up were performed by her Vice Principal Kishanda Montes. As a result, Weaver did not perform any observations of Respondent during the 2012-2013 school year. But, she testified, she reviewed and approved the observations performed by Montes, including the vice principal's observations of Respondent.

In school year 2013-2014 Weaver performed one short observation of Respondent on April 9, 2014 and held a post observation conference with the teacher. She testified that she rated Respondent as Effective with a score of 11 for the observation. Weaver also testified that she recommended the instant tenure charges against Respondent. Weaver testified that she made the recommendation because:

> This is the second year of him being rated partially effective. And we provide a lot of support in our building, and he only > had one effective observation in that two-year period. And he just wasn't having the positive impact on the students. The lessons - - the areas of his CAP had not really demonstrated growth over some time for someone whose CAP had been basically the same for - - that time. And his competency areas that were – that were weak were the ones that really are the catalyst of a classroom, classroom management and effective planning. And those are like the backbone of a good lesson over time. And we provided, I believe, as – an abundance of support, and it was not consistently being implemented or evident in the classroom.

In terms of the support provide Respondent, Weaver explained, Respondent attended numerous collaborative meetings of teacher teams, the school did a year-round professional development book study on "Teach Like a Champion," the school used "The Skillful Teacher," gave Respondent specific references to pursue in his CAP and asked him to do the follow-ups to demonstrate such. Despite such efforts, Weaver testified, Respondent did not show improvement over the two years at issue and in her opinion there was no more the District could have provided Respondent within reason that could have helped him improve his performance.

Vice Principal Kishanda Montes

Kishanda Montes was Vice Principal of Lincoln School during the 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 school years at issue here and testified that she performed observations and evaluations of Respondent in both school years. In the 2012-2013 school year Montes performed two observations of Respondent a mid-year evaluation and an end-of-year (Annual) evaluation. She testified that Respondent was offered and received a significant amount of professional development during both school years on a group basis as well as from her on an individual basis.

Montes identified professional development attended by Respondent on September 4, 5, 18, 2012. She conducted a partial period (or short) observation of Respondent on October 24, 2012 and testified that the lesson did not go well as the "do now" portion of the lesson intended as a first-five-minutes warm up became the entire lesson. According to Montes many of the students were not paying attention and were carrying on their own conversations throughout the lesson. Montes testified that it is her practice to hold a post observation conference after every teacher observation and that she did so in this case with Respondent. Montes gave Respondent a "Partially Effective" rating for the observation.

Respondent attended "collaborative meetings" with groups of teachers involving ANET data analysis on October 24 and November 7, 8 and 15, 2012. Montes testified that she invited Respondent to an individual December 4, 2012 conference with the Vice Principal to share her observations and support targeted to Respondent's needs; in this case primarily lesson planning and class management.

On December 19, 2012 Montes conducted a formal announced observation of Respondent. The related "Formal Observation Form" reflects that a pre-observation conference was held with Respondent on December 17, 2012 and that the December 19, 2012 observation was an hour and twenty minutes in length. Montes gave Respondent an "Ineffective" rating for the observation. The form also reflects that the post-observation conference was held on January 17, 2013.

Respondent attended another collaborative meeting relating to data on February 7, 2013. Montes also testified that Respondent received quarterly Data Artifacts-Feedback addressing his particularly needs and directing that he analyze why a lesson had not been effective, develop an instruction plan to re-teach the lesson and thereafter submit a reassessment analysis reflecting whether students learned as a result of the re-teaching. According to Montes, Respondent did not submit a reassessment.

Respondent attended February 12 and 26, 2013 collaborative meetings on how to write lesson plans, particularly focused upon writing plan objectives.

Respondent received a mid-year evaluation from Vice Principal Montes on March 8, 2013 in which he received an overall rating of Partially Effective. Montes noted that in competency 1, Lesson Design and Focus, Respondent had submitted only 10% of the required lesson plans for cycles 1 and 2. According to Montes, Respondent would claim he had the plans in his head and would not submit them in writing for her review. As plans are the "heartbeat of teaching" Montes explained, if she receives written plans she is better able to help the teacher plan better lessons; she can help with objectives, components, pacing, review, assessment and feedback. If she can't review plan, she can't give feedback, Montes testified.

Respondent attended collaborative meetings on April 4, 8 and 17, 2013 involving data analysis; an area Montes testified was Respondent's strength.

In his annual summative evaluation and conference in June 2013 Respondent received a Partially Effective. According to Montes, Respondent did not show any improvement in competency number 1 relating to lesson-planning since his March 2013 midyear evaluation.

In the 2013-2014 School year Respondent was on a CAP, a plan that was initially authored by Respondent and revised following review – particularly of the "Professional Growth Plan" - and input by the Vice Principal based upon the teachers 2012-2013

summative evaluation, Montes testified. Among other things, the CAP included Action Steps for both the teacher and Montes relating to improving Respondent's lesson planning and classroom management. Montes explained that Respondent had expressed a desire to have his own culture in a class, rather than being required to observe other teachers in other classes and teaching an elective subject as he had taught problem solving in the 2012-2013 school year. As a result, Montes explained, Respondent was assigned an eight grade class that he taught 100% of the time and he was no longer requested to do as many extra duties such as back-up test coordinator so that he could focus upon his teaching and CAP.

Vice Principal Montes took an active roll in mentoring Respondent relating to lesson planning. She instructed him to submit his Unit plans to her for review prior to his developing lesson plans, directed Respondent to have three weeks of his lesson plans to her in advance, offered him written resources for his review and a template for lesson plans and informed him that he should request a meeting with Montes and she would schedule a conference if he needed "a refresher." Montes also sent Respondent a number of emails reminding the teacher when his plan submissions were late. As was the case in the 2012-2013 school year, Respondent attended numerous faculty meetings and collaborative meetings for professional development purposes, including such meetings on September 4, 5, 17 and 23, October 28, November 21, and 22, 2013, January 29 and March 24, 2014.

Montes conducted an unannounced, Long Observation of Respondent on or about September 25, 2013 and a post observation conference with the teacher on or about October 15, 2013. For this observation Respondent was given an overall rating of Ineffective.

Montes explained that on December 2, 2013, after first quarter report cards had closed, she emailed Respondent and asked him what he believed were the issues that resulted in so many failing grades in his class. In response, Respondent wrote back that the students had a "lack of understanding" in positive and negative numbers and decimal operations, "incomplete responses to questions, linkage of prior knowledge to current content problems and careless mistakes. " In his view, Respondent further wrote, "[s]tudents have demonstrated a lack of commitment in their learning, homework return rate is low." Thereafter Montes and Principal Weaver met with Respondent, reviewed his grade book, and gave recommendations for implementing "power teacher" and ideas on establishing an assertive plan for classroom behavior strategies and getting parents involved. On December 6, 2013 Montes assigned Respondent to observe a "Corrective Instruction Lesson" by another teacher and to provide a list of his "noticing and wonderings" that would be discussed at his next conference with Montes.

Montes conducted a short, announced observation of Respondent on January 6, 2014. Pre-observation and post-observation conferences were held. Montes testified that she noticed some progress in Respondent's lesson design, focus and culture, but that he nevertheless still had a Partially Effective rating overall.

In his mid-year evaluation Respondent was rated Partially Effective. It was noted in the Competency 1 Section of the evaluation that Respondent was not adjusting his lessons to different types of learners and had submitted only 25% of written lesson plans. Thereafter, Montes testified, they paired Respondent with another teacher so that Respondent could benefit from that teacher's abilities in culture and achievement and Respondent could share his abilities in data analysis.

Montes conducted an announced long observation of Respondent on February 28, 2014. Pre and post observation conferences were held. For this observation Respondent received a rating of Ineffective. Montes recalled that she held a post-observation conference with Respondent right after the observation and she asked Respondent to self-evaluate his own performance and that when he did such Respondent gave himself a Partially Effective rating.

Montes evaluated Respondent for his annual 2013-2014 school year summative evaluation and gave Respondent a rating of Partially Effective. Montes testified that Respondent had been given a wealth of information throughout the school year to help him improve; information on lesson plan design, classroom management, professional reading materials, collaborative meetings and frequent one-on-one conversations with administrators. Notwithstanding that Respondent was given significant support throughout the year, Montes testified, Respondent had shown only small growth during the 2013-2014 school year in some competencies and he had not reached effectiveness in any of the areas in which he needed to improve.

Respondent's Testimony

Respondent testified that in his view his December 2012 formal observation was done in a way that did not reflect the overall composition of the class; who the students were in terms of being very challenged and having discipline issues. According to Respondent, the students were not up to the grade level in math and that made it difficult to teach an effective grade level class. Additionally, Respondent noted, there was another visitor in the classroom during the observation – a parent of a student – and he had not been informed that such would be the case before the observation. In terms of the behavior of the students that day, Respondent observed, they were indifferent to the presence of either a parent of the school's vice principal; they behaved poorly regardless.

Respondent testified that he thought his October 15, 2013 long evaluation was a "got you kind of evaluation." Again, to understand his circumstance one has to consider the background of the students in the class, Respondent explained, and this class was composed of regular math students and special education students but without teacher assistants (at least until towards the second half of the year). Like the class of the year before, this class had very low skills in math.

Respondent testified that he attended staff development days and other meetings where subjects relating to teacher effectiveness were taught and that he found the sessions helpful.

In regard to his short observation of January 6, 2014, and resulting Partially Effective rating, Respondent testified that he disagreed with the rating explaining that he believed he had done well and applied all the techniques and concepts that should have been applied, and that this class of students was a relatively good performing class.

For the February 28, 2014 observation, Respondent testified, "that was not my day" and he recalled telling Vice Principal Montes that he had tried something new and it was the worst day he had in his class.

Respondent recalled that his next observation was on April 9, 2014 when he was observed by Principal Weaver and that he was satisfied with the class; the students followed instructions and were engaged. He received an Effective rating for this observation. When describing the class on April 9 and the rapport with the students that day, Respondent testified that it was a very interesting class.

> And quite a few times Mrs. Montes herself had come to my class and found a similar dialogue taking place and has jumped into teaching. You know, she saw we were having a good rapport. We were going through the steps, different concepts. The class became so interesting she would have joined in and, if I'm not overstating now, she practically took over the class, you know, and it has happened a couple of times. So generally, I follow on the patterns of what was reported on April 9th.

According to Respondent, he does not think the observations of his teaching performed by Montes were fair, that in his opinion she did not give the right recognition to the fact that there were troubled students in the school and that the challenge of the students is not addressed by blaming the teachers. He testified that he does not believe he received the support necessary for him to be an effective teacher. He further testified that had he provided Montes his lesson plans on a timely and consistent basis such would not have been a help to him as "the content of the lessons that I delivered were not my weakness. My weakness that was identified was student behavior…"

Positions of the Parties

Petitioner / District

The District argues that it is appropriate under TEACHNJ for it to consider Respondent's 2012-2013 evaluation as well as her 2013-2014 evaluations as they were performed pursuant to an evaluation rubric established consistently with the statute and NJ Department of Education (Department) guidance. In this regard, the District asserts, the District was one of eleven school districts approved to participate in the Department's 2011-2012 teacher evaluation pilot program. As a result, the Department of Education allowed the District to begin using a new "framework" and new rating system on a "pilot" basis to evaluate teacher performance in the 2011-2012 school year. The framework and new rating system was then used throughout the entire district in the 2012-2013 school following the adoption of a related Memorandum Of Agreement (MOA) between the District and Teacher Union and passage of TEACHNJ. The District made a few minor modifications to its framework to comply with Department of Education requirements and again applied the framework to teachers in the 2013-2014 school year. As a result, Respondent was subject to evaluation under the 2012-2013 framework and the 2013-2014 framework.

Contrary to the assertion of Respondent, the District argued, it implemented its 2012-2013 evaluation rubric in a timely manner to be effective under governing law. In this regard, TEACHNJ establishes "deadlines" by which certain requirements must be met. Thus, the statue required school districts to institute pilot programs to test their new evaluation rubrics by January 31, 2013, at the latest. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(d) ("Beginning no later than January 31, 2013, a board of education shall implement a pilot program..."). (Emphasis added). Here, the District did just that; it implemented a pilot program with Department of Education approval in the 2011-2012 school year – thereby complying with the requirement that its pilot program be instituted "no later" than January 31, 2013.

Similarly, the District continued, TEACHNJ required all New Jersey public school districts to develop "evaluation rubrics" to assess the performance of their teachers, and established a deadline to obtain approval for their "rubrics" from NJDOE by December 31, 2012. The District complied with that mandate. The District adopted an evaluation rubric – a rubric approved by the Department - as part of a performance evaluation system known as the Newark Public Schools Framework for Effective Teaching to be implemented beginning in the 2012-13 school year. To inform its teachers and school administrators of the new Framework and to provide guidance on its implementation, the District conducted training and published a Guidebook to the Framework for use in 2012-2013. The Framework clearly describes the new "levels of performance" as highly effective, effective, partially effective and ineffective.

The District further argued that it complied with the deadline established by the Act that school districts implement their evaluation rubrics by the beginning of the 2013-2014 school year at the latest, citing N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123(e) ("[b]eginning with the 2013-2014 school year, a board of education shall ensure implementation of the approved, adopted evaluation rubric"). Again, the District asserted, the District complied with the statute and implemented its framework containing the evaluation rubric for the 2012-2013 school-year; an implementation date that predated the 2013-2014 deadline set by statute. Nothing in TEACHNJ nor any regulations, the District maintained, provides that evaluations performed in 2012-2013 in accordance with an adopted, approved rubric are to be treated differently from those performed in 2013-2014, for purposes of triggering tenure charges under N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3.

Considering the plain meaning of the statute's language and the guidance and actions of the Department of Education, the District argued, neither the statue nor the DOE required school districts to; (a) treat the 2012-2013 school year, and only 2012-

2013, as a "pilot" year and (b) wait a year to implement their evaluation rubrics if the rubrics had been adopted and approved earlier.

Consequently, the District asserted, its efficiency charges against Respondent are appropriately considered by the arbitrator under TEACHNJ.

Respondent's attempt to have the charges dismissed on procedural grounds is inappropriate, the District maintained. In this regard, the District argued, it is the Commissioner of Education who is solely authorized to determine the sufficiency of the evaluation process and resulting tenure charges. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16. Thus, a dispositive motion by a teacher subject to tenure charges based upon the failure of a board of education to follow the evaluation process may only be made to the Commissioner prior to the referral to an arbitrator.

Once it is found that the tenure charges are sufficient, based upon appropriate criteria and a referral is made to an arbitrator, an arbitrator's authority is confined to a determination of the following: (a) whether or not the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process; (b) whether there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation; (c) whether the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, or discrimination, or; (d) whether the board of education's actions were arbitrary and capricious. N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2. Therefore, whether the District acted in compliance with law in filing charges based upon the 2012-2103 school year has been answered in the affirmative by the Commissioner of Education and is outside the scope of the arbitrator's authority.

Moreover, the District asserted, the statute does not contemplate that arbitrators will have the authority to interpret the statute or to evaluate the legislative intent of the Act. That authority is the courts.

Considering all of the evidence presented at the hearing, the District argued, it has met its burden of supporting the charge. The teacher evaluations conducted within the District in 2012-2013 were valid, effective, and "counted" for all purposes, including to support tenure charges such as those presented here, as were the evaluations conducted in the 2013-2014 school year. Respondent's contention to the contrary should be rejected.

The arbitrator's authority under TEACHNJ is limited to a determination of whether the approved evaluation system contained in the District's Framework was "substantially" adhered to when applied to Respondent. In this regard, the relevant evidence offered at hearing by the District including the total number of observations conducted each school year, and voluminous other evidence and testimony of witnesses establishes the Respondent's inefficiency as a tenured teacher to children. The Respondent was offered a collaborative CAP Process and extensive professional development opportunities and recommendations.

Alternatively the District continued, should the rubric of N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.2 be found not to be the appropriate criteria under which to judge the evidence in this matter, the District has met its burden under the long-established efficiency standard of the preponderance of credible evidence. That standard requires that the District offer evidence that would lead a reasonably prudent person to conclude that the Respondent is an ineffective educator. Considering the totality of the circumstances here, including the testimony of the District's witnesses and evaluations a reasonable person could concluded that the ineffectiveness of Respondent as an educator is sufficient to revoke his tenure protections.

The tenure charges are appropriately before the arbitrator and the District has met its burden of supporting its charges and Respondent has failed to rebut the District's case by establishing that; (a) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, (b) there was a mistake of fact in the evaluation, (c) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, or discrimination or (d) that the board of education's actions were arbitrary and capricious. Under such circumstances, the District concluded, Respondent's employment as a tenured teacher within the District should be terminated.

Respondent

The tenure charges against Respondent must be dismissed, Respondent argued, as they unlawfully rely upon evaluations performed during the 2012-2013 school year. In enacting TEACHNJ the Legislature clearly intended the 2012-2013 school year to serve as a "pilot year" for all administrators and teaching staff members in assessing teaching effectiveness. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-123. Under TEACH NJ, it was not until the 2013-2014 school year that the statute was deemed to be in full force and effect and was the first year that evaluations would count for purposes of tenure charges. Try as it might, Respondent maintained, the District cannot avoid that simple and obvious reality and fact. The purpose of 2012-2013 pilot-year was to train certified teaching staff members and evaluators on the District's evaluation instruments and procedures, and for the Department of Education ("DOE") to prepare and finalize its regulations, which later became known as Achieve NJ and which did not become effective until October 2013. The pilot nature of the 2012-2013 school year is further supported by the obvious fact, Respondent asserted, that the implementing regulations were not even promulgated until after the 2012-2013 school year had concluded. Additionally, such a conclusion is further supported by the Department of Education's own guidance on the questions. Thus, in its "Educator Evaluation Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ)" previously published on its web-site in answer to the question "Will summative ratings "count" this year (2012-13) toward tenure decisions?" the Department of Education stated:

> A: No- the only item "on the clock" is the mentorship year for new teachers. No evaluation outcomes in the 2012-13 school year will impact tenure decisions. 2013-14 is the first year where the statewide system will be in place, and the first year when summative rating "clock" (for teachers needing to be rated at least effective for two of three years) will start.

Although the Department FAQ statements were informal in nature and may not rise to the status of regulation, the Respondent argued, the Department's statements nevertheless represent the practical interpretation of the statute by the agency charged with instructing local governmental units on how they were to comply with the new law. As such, Respondent maintained, there is judicial precedent to support Respondent's assertion that the DOE FAQ guidelines should be given substantial deference.

Respondent further argued that numerous recent decisions of arbitrators relating to motions to dismiss efficiency charges filed by the District[1] support its position that the evaluations performed by the District on Respondent during the 2012-2013 year are not appropriately considered for purposes of efficiency tenure charges. In those cases Respondent asserted, arbitrators held that the charge affecting their respective Respondent alleging inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:17.3 was insufficient and/or premature because the TEACH NJ Act was not enacted until August 2012 and not implemented until October 2013, and further because the District presented no evidence that it was somehow exonerated from the requirements of Act.

The inapplicability of the 2012-2013 evaluations to charges of inefficiency are further established by the absence of a School Improvement Panel (SIP) during the 2012-2013 school year. Again, Respondent maintained, the District must be in compliance with all requirements of TEACH NJ as established by the Commissioner of Education and/or Department of Education as a precondition for considering annual summative evaluations as a basis for filing efficiency tenure charges. As the schools in which Respondent was assigned in the 2012-13 and 2013-14 school years did not have SIPs for those entire years, Respondent asserted, the District was out of compliance with TEACH NJ and, consequently, his 2012-13 and 2013-24 evaluations may not be used as a basis to file tenure charges.

Respondent argued that considering N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-17-3(c) provides:

> Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.A. 18A: 6-16 or any other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a of this section, the commissioner shall examine the charge. The individual against whom the charges are filed shall have 10 days to submit a written response to the charge to the commissioner. The commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

And further provides that where a District has filed tenure charges alleging inefficiency premised upon teacher evaluations, but has failed to follow the evaluation development process required by TEACH NJ, the Commissioner may dismiss the tenure charges or simply forward them to an assigned Arbitrator for further assessment of a District's compliance with the evaluation requirements of the TEACHNJ Act. As a result, Respondent asserted, if a matter has been referred to an assigned Arbitrator, then the Arbitrator must have the authority of the Commissioner and is charged with the responsibility to assess a District's compliance with the evaluation and assessment requirements of the TEACHNJ ACT. If the assigned Arbitrator finds that the Petitioner District has failed to follow the evaluation requirements or is deficient for any reason, the Arbitrator is obliged to dismiss the tenure charges. Here, it is undisputed that the District failed to abide by the evaluation process set forth in the TEACHNJ ACT and accordingly, the tenure charges against Respondent must be dismissed.

In conclusion, Respondent argued, the Petitioner School District is unable to cite any legal authority and evidence that would permit the Arbitrator to simply ignore the plain and unambiguous language of the relevant statute and regulation. The District's compliance with the portions of TEACHNJ relating to the establishment and approval of evaluation procedures is a prerequisite to proceeding with Inefficiency Charges and any finding to sustain those charges, Respondent asserted. Accordingly, Respondent's 2012-2013 summative evaluation is not properly the subject of consideration by either the Commissioner or the Arbitrator in this case. Moreover, Respondent argued, if said evaluation is not subject to consideration, then the District's tenure charges are facially deficient in that it includes only one (1) summative evaluation (for the 2013-2014 school year), as opposed to the two consecutive dannual evaluations required by TEACH NJ. Likewise the evidence is clear that (1) the Petitioner District failed to provide Respondent with the required minimum three (3) observations during the 2012-2013 school year even assuming that year was not a "pilot" year for the District and (2) that the Petitioner District failed to provide the Respondent with the required fourth observations in the 2013-2014 school year based on his CAP status. As such, the tenure charges at issue should be dismissed consistent with the procedural defects identified and with other arbitration rulings involving this Petitioner School District.

Moreover, Respondent continued, Respondent's evaluations "failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process." In this regard, even if the 2012-2013 summative evaluation could be considered for tenure purposes, the District failed to comply with its own evaluation system – the 2012-2013 Framework - that was in effect for that school year. In this regard Respondent argued, the record reflects that Respondent did not receive the minimum number of formal observations required by the District's evaluation system. Thus, Respondent maintained, the evidence establishes that rather than the three observations required, Respondent was given to only one formal observation during that school year; a December 19, 2012 observation that did not include a mandatory pre-observation conference at all or a post-observation conference within the time period provided for such. Similarly, when the 2013-2014 school year is considered, the District again failed to observe Respondent the minimally required number of times. As required by the 2013-2014 Framework, because Respondent was subject to a CAP he should have been given at least four observations. He was not, Respondent asserted. Considering that (1) the school did not have an established School Improvement Panel during the 2012-

2013 school year, (2) the District's evaluation rubric for that year had not been approved by the Department of Education, (3) Respondent was not given the required observations in either of the two school years at issue and (4) for some of the observations that were performed the District failed to provide Respondent with a post-observation conference within the time prescribed for such; thus rendering the observations null and void, Respondent concluded, the District has failed to support its tenure charges against Respondent and they should be dismissed.

Discussion

The Referral of the Matter to the Arbitrator

By letter dated December 22, 2014 from the State of New Jersey Department of Education the parties were notified that:

> ...following receipt of Respondent's answer on October 10, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; upon review the Commissioner is unable to determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Timothy J Brown, Esq. as required by statute.

(Emphasis added)

No motions were referred to the Arbitrator by the Commissioner.

Respondent's Argument Relating to the Arbitrator's Authority

Respondent asserts that the tenure charges should be dismissed, because the District has not complied with certain requirements of TEACH NJ relating to the promulgation, approval and implementation of the District's evaluation process; requirements including piloting/testing, approval and establishment of an evaluation rubric, teacher improvement processes and SIPs; and the application of such for a minimum of two school years - none of which school years may have occurred prior to the 2013-14 school year. As part of his argument, Respondent asserts that at least two post-2012-13 school year summative evaluations are a "prerequisite" for; (a) the Commissioner of Education to refer an efficiency case to an arbitrator for hearing and (b) the jurisdiction of an arbitrator to hear and consider tenure charges alleging inefficiency.

Sections 23 and 25 of TEACHNJ

Sections 23 of TEACHNJ, among other things, establishes the extent of the authority of arbitrators relating to their consideration of, and rendering decisions upon, charges of teacher inefficiency. In this regard, Section 23 provides:

> 23. a. In the event that the matter before the arbitrator pursuant to section 22 of this act is employee inefficiency pursuant to section 25 of this act, in rendering a decision the arbitrator shall only consider whether or not:
> (1) the employee's evaluation failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan;
> (2) there is a mistake of fact in the evaluation;
> (3) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law; or
> (4) the district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.
>
> b. In the event that the employee is able to demonstrate that any of the provisions of paragraphs (1) through (4) of subsection a. of this section are applicable, the arbitrator shall then determine if that fact materially affected the outcome of the evaluation. If the arbitrator determines that it did not materially affect the outcome of the evaluation, the arbitrator shall render a decision in favor of the board and the employee shall be dismissed.
>
> c. The evaluator's determination as to the quality of an employee's classroom performance shall not be subject to an arbitrator's review.

d. The board of education shall have the ultimate burden of demonstrating to the arbitrator that the statutory criteria for tenure charges have been met.

e. The hearing shall be held before the arbitrator within 45 days of the assignment of the arbitrator to the case. The arbitrator shall render a written decision within 45 days of the start of the hearing.

Sections 25 of TEACHNJ, concerns the responsibilities of superintendents, boards of education and the Commissioner of Education in evaluating and processing charges of inefficiency. Section 25 of the Act provides:

C.18A:6-17.3 Evaluation process, determination of charges.
25. a. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-11 or any other section of law to the contrary, in the case of a teacher, principal, assistant principal, and vice-principal:
(1) the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency whenever the employee is rated ineffective or partially effective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated ineffective in the annual summative evaluation;
(2) if the employee is rated partially effective in two consecutive annual summative evaluations or is rated ineffective in an annual summative evaluation and the following year is rated partially effective in the annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file with the secretary of the board of education a charge of inefficiency, except that the superintendent upon a written finding of exceptional circumstances may defer the filing of tenure charges until after the next annual summative evaluation. If the employee is not rated effective or highly effective on this annual summative evaluation, the superintendent shall promptly file a charge of inefficiency.

b. Within 30 days of the filing, the board of education shall forward a written charge to the commissioner, unless the board determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

c. Notwithstanding the provisions of N.J.S.18A:6-16 or any > other section of law to the contrary, upon receipt of a charge pursuant to subsection a. of this section, the commissioner shall, within five days immediately following the period provided for a written response to the charges, refer the case to an arbitrator and appoint an arbitrator to hear the case, unless he determines that the evaluation process has not been followed.

>
> d. The only evaluations which may be used for purposes of this section are those evaluations conducted in accordance with a rubric adopted by the board and approved by the commissioner pursuant to P.L.2012, c.26 (C.18A:6-117 et al.).

TEACHNJ Grants Only Narrow Authority to Arbitrators in Inefficiency Cases

Considering the above-quoted language of TEACHNJ, I am not persuaded by Respondent's argument. Section 23 of TEACHNJ establishes the authority of arbitrators in cases presenting questions of efficiency. Section 25 establishes the authority of the Commissioner of Education in cases presenting questions of efficiency. Section 25 c. (18A: 6-17-3(c), (ii)) grants the Commissioner of Education authority to make one of three determinations upon receipt of a charge of inefficiency filed under Section 25 a.; the Commissioner may (1) determine the evaluation process has been followed and refer the case to an arbitrator, (2) determine the evaluation process has not been followed and dismiss the charges, or (3) determine that based upon the submissions of the parties the Commissioner cannot conclusively determine one way or the other whether the evaluation process has been followed and consequently cannot determine that the evaluation process "has not been followed." Where the Commissioner refers a matter to an arbitrator, as the Commissioner has done here, after concluding that he cannot determine that the evaluation process has not been followed, I am of the view that the statute affirmatively directs the arbitrator to "hear the case" pursuant to Section 23 of the Act. Section 25 is focused upon the authority of superintendents, boards of education and the Commissioner and with perhaps the exception of the assignment of a case to an arbitrator to "hear the case" nothing in Section 25 grants authority to arbitrators.

Considering the specifically described authority of arbitrators contained in Section 23 of the Act and the absence of any similarly enabling language in Section 25, I am persuaded that Section 25 does not confer authority upon the arbitrator to step into the shoes of the Commissioner and determine whether the District has complied with statutory requirements in the promulgation and implementation of the District's evaluation process.[2] In this regard, it is widely recognized that an arbitrator's authority is defined by the mutual grant of authority by the parties or, as in this matter, by statute. In either event the authority of an arbitrator is only as broad as the authority granted. In the instant matter, I am of the view that the authority grant to me by statute as arbitrator is limited. Considering the pointed and narrow grant of authority to me in Section 23 of the ACT, the statute offers me no authority to consider and rule upon the District's compliance or non-compliance with provisions of the statute governing the promulgation and establishment of evaluation rubrics, SICs, CAPs, mentorship programs, etc. The Act assigns such tasks to the Commissioner.

The Commissioner's referral of this matter to me was specifically pursuant to TEACHNJ Section 25 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c) and no other Section of the Act, and grants me the narrow authority to determine the case under the provisions of Section 23 and no other.

[2] In this latter regard, I note that the reference in Section 25 d. to the portions of the Act concerned with the promulgation and establishment of evaluation rubrics, like the other portions of the section, is addressed to the activities of superintendents, boards of education and/or the Commissioner, not arbitrators.

The District Has Met Its Burden Under Section 23 of TACHNJ

Of the four permissible areas of arbitrator consideration identified in Section 23 of the Act, I find there is plainly insufficient or no evidence in the record to establish that: (a) there is a mistake of fact in Respondent's 2012-13 or 2013-14 evaluations, (b) the charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination as prohibited by State or federal law, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law or (c) the District's actions were arbitrary and capricious. Based upon the arguments of the parties, the determinative issue here is whether or not Respondent's evaluations; "failed to adhere substantially to the evaluation process, including, but not limited to providing a corrective action plan." Contrary to the argument of Respondent, I find that the District adhered substantially to the District's 2012-2013 and 2013-2014 evaluation processes, including the corrective action plan adopted for Respondent in the 2013-2014 school year.

The Observation and Evaluations Process contained in the District's 2012-2013 Framework identified both required and recommended elements. The required elements for tenured teachers such as Respondent included one formal, full-period observation and Post-Observation conference within 10 calendar days and an Annual Evaluation. The process also included elements that were "Optional," "Recommended" and "Strongly Recommended." Thus, goal-setting conferences early in the school year were "recommended," partial period observations were "strongly recommended," pre-observation conferences were "optional" and mid-year review conferences were "strongly recommended." The record establishes that with regard to its evaluation of Respondent in the 2012-2013 school year the District substantially adhered to the evaluation process. Respondent was given a partial period observation on October 24, 2012, a long observation on December 19, 2012, a mid-year evaluation on March 18, 2013 and an annual evaluation. Although the evidence established that the post-December 19, 2012-observation conference may have been delayed beyond the ten calendar days provided in the Framework, I do not find that any such delay or other minor deviation from the directives of the Framework materially affected the outcome of Respondent's 2012-2013 annual summative evaluation. This is particularly so under circumstances where, as here, the District also performed a short observation of Respondent and provided him a mid-year evaluation, thereby plainly doing more than the minimum required by the evaluation process.

The Observation and Evaluations Process contained in the District's 2013-2014 Framework required that Respondent, having received a Partially Effective for his 2012-13 annual summative evaluation, must have a CAP, and that teachers with a CAP must have at least two short observations and at least two long observations, at least one observation must be completed by a different observer, post-observation conferences after each observation, at least one pre-observation conference, a mid-year review conference and an annual evaluation. I find that with regard to its evaluation of Respondent in the 2013-2014 school year the District substantially adhered to the evaluation process. Respondent was given two short and two long observations not all performed by the same observer, had a corrective action plan that was the product of a collaborative effort between Respondent and vice principal Montes, received a mid-year evaluation and conference and an annual evaluation. Moreover, throughout the two years

INTRODUCTION, PROCEDURAL HISTORY, AND FINDINGS OF FACT

On September 3, 2014, James Smith, the District's Executive Director for School Security, timely filed the Charges with Dr. Donnie W. Evans, the State District Superintendent. I was appointed the Arbitrator. The transcribed hearings occurred in a conference room at the District offices on February 10, 13, 24, 26 and 27, 2015. The parties filed extensive interim briefs on sophisticated issues of justiciability. The parties were superbly represented, and had full opportunity to be heard. All witnesses testified under direct and cross examination. At the parties' mutual request, they filed briefs and reply briefs. I completed receipt of post-hearing briefs on Wednesday, March 18, 2015 and of reply briefs on Tuesday , March 24, 2015. Upon my December 19, 2014 letter request to the Office of the Commissioner of the Department of Education on behalf of the parties' attorneys' extensive trial commitments, the due date for my Award was extended to Friday, March 27, 2015.

There are 19 Charges consuming three dozen pages in the record, on the theme of "conduct unbecoming." The spirit of the legislative intent favors prudential economy in these arbitration proceedings. Ergo, rather than retype the Charges verbatim herein, the Charges are incorporated by reference in their entirety into my Decision.

The Charges span a kaleidoscopic spectrum. They portray Respondent as an accomplished, congenital liar who uses her elusive and calculating prevarications to shrewdly facilitate and enhance her ominous multiple identities for illicit, fraudulent financial gain.

Respondent's lawyer finds the District's malicious profile of Respondent pernicious and wholly ludicrous.

The heart of the matter in this Arbitration involves Respondent's deeply problematic interactions with Teacher Albania Fermin on February 11, 2014 and, especially, with the minor/infant/juvenile 13 year old female student "NC" on February 21, 2014.

The student returned to the computer room in Public School 20 to retrieve her book bag. Respondent was the only other person present at the beginning of the incident at issue. Respondent inquired of NC to present some identifying item from the bag to Respondent before taking the book bag. NC did not comply and, instead, bolted for the door, only to be impeded in her desired egress by Respondent. Within the next few minutes, NC and Respondent were punching and slapping one another. Other than the two pugilist combatants, there were no eyewitnesses to the entire contretemps a la fisticuffs.

Security Officer Gena Warren arrived on the scene within a few minutes. She very credibly testified that she witnessed Respondent repeatedly push NC a distance of approximately fifteen feet backwards to, and ultimately downwards onto the top of, the table. Instructional Aide Ovid Armstrong also credibly testified that he, like Officer Warren, also saw Respondent repeatedly push NC backwards onto the table by restraining NC's arms. Officer Warren and Aide Armstrong are the closest anyone other than Respondent or NC came to being an eyewitness to the entire episode. I find Ms. Warren and Mr. Armstrong were both very credible witnesses.

NC's primary objective was to flee the computer room with book bag in hand, whereas Respondent's primary objective was even more immediate---to grasp NC's wrists in order to restrain NC from landing any further slaps or punches.

NC testified at the Arbitration hearing. I found her relatively forthright, but not entirely credible. She apparently does well in math, science, and computer classes, with B grades in some of these favorite subjects some of the time. NC regrettably is not a novice in the de facto "Fight Club," having herself been twice suspended for earlier indulgence in/resort to the "sweet science." I find it more likely than not that NC indeed told Respondent that NC's mother would be coming to the school for the express purpose of "beating [Respondent's] ass." To date, the mother has yet to appear, and NC remains living with her grandmother. Until the events at issue in February of 2014, Respondent, with the better part of a decade of service, had no labor relations disciplinary history of record with the District.

ANALYSIS AND DISCUSSION

On February 27, 2015, Mr. Albert C. Buglione, Esq., representing the District, conducted one of the more effective cross-examinations I have observed in my thirty two years as a labor and employment arbitrator. Respondent initially and untruthfully contended "I never touched her [NC] at all."(Tr/193, 218/Feb. 27)

I find Respondent's testimony to the contrary. She steadfastly adhered to her own directly opposite, and internally mutually exclusive, testimony---unless, of course, it was not opportune for Respondent to do so. Her absolute testimony that she "never touched NC at all" was completely inconsistent with her claims of self defense, including her endeavor to pin NC's wrists to the surface of the large wooden utility table perhaps 7 to 10 feet inside the doorway of the school's computer room. Respondent surmises that NC collapsed onto the table due to gravitational inexorability, and not due to any push from Respondent.

By her own testimony on cross-examination, Respondent admitted the essence of Charges 1-4: e.g., Charge 2: "CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER (Inappropriate Physical Contact/Assault upon a student [NC] on February 21, 2014 in the classroom.)"

Respondent claims that she was acting in her own necessary self defense against the recalcitrant, insubordinate aggressor NC. (Tr/ 195,220/ Feb 27). Respondent sets forth the unusual remedy that she seeks at page 27 of Respondent's post hearing brief : "This is a strange case because Ms. Barnes does not want to return as a teacher for the Paterson School System. She cannot because she has been found to be permanently disabled by the Social Security Administration...Accordingly, Respondent Barnes requests that you issue your award in a manner as if she was seeking to return to teach at the District."

I find relatively little of Respondent's key testimony credible with respect to the salient facts pertaining to Charges 1-4. According to Respondent , things occurred "too fast" for her to consider and formulate a nonproblematic alternative approach.

Furthermore, on Mr. Buglione's cross-examination of Respondent, it is Respondent, not NC, manifesting all of the behaviors of the prototypical aggressor of tort and criminal law :

Q. " Why don't you [Respondent] just run out into the hallway? If she [student NC] is backing up, why aren't you running out into the hallway?

A. It never occurred to me that I needed to run out into the hallway.

Q. But she's backing up and you're walking forward. You had the opportunity to retreat and you didn't; isn't that correct?

A. No."

This colloquy between crossexaminer Buglione and the cross-examined Respondent continues for several more pages of the transcript. Rather than ameliorate or rehabilitate any small part of Respondent's intransigence, Respondent's contradictory testimony infects other major components of Respondent's defense.

I find that the District has met its burden of proving Charges 1-4, 9, 12, and 18 (e.g., CONDUCT UNBECOMING A TEACHING STAFF MEMBER, Inappropriate Physical Contact/Assault upon a student in the classroom , February 21, 2014.)

I find that the District has also met its burden of proving Charge 4, CONDUCT UNBECOMING, in bullying, abuse, harassment, and intimidation of a co-worker. Albania Fermin was a completely credible witness. She testified very credibly about her understandable apprehensions regarding the intimidating, bizarre conduct and statements of Respondent. Respondent's February 11, 2014 barricading of Ms. Fermin in the restroom while haranguing her throughout, having prefaced the weird episode by stating aloud that Respondent realized Respondent's conduct was indefensible, is far from the friendly meeting of cordial colleagues around the proverbial water cooler.

I find insufficient evidence that the District has met its burden of proving Charges 5-8, 10 -11, and 13-17, and 19. I emphasize that this is not the failure or the fault of the District or any of its employees, administrators, agents, or attorneys. Rather, the governing legislation compels expeditious presentation and conclusion to these proceedings. The District simply did not have enough time available to develop fully these particular Charges. The underlying facts in these Charges demonstrate chronic miscommunications (Charges 6, 7, 8, 11) and a variety of allegations, none of which are central to this case. For some of the Charges (e.g., Charge 10), there is virtually no pertinent fact or legal context whatsoever .

Respondent has due process rights. This compels the District to set forth with specificity the particulars in each of the Charges. Absent such information forthcoming from the District as the custodian of the record from the outset, Respondent's constitutional right to an effective defense may be vitiated. Respondent's lawyer insightfully labels the redundant piling on of the panorama of Charges a variation of the "because the District believes that because they say it is so then it is so" ipso facto." (Respondent posthearing brief at 1) This does not allow the District to dictate where she may live or travel, or to open her interactions with the police ex post facto (e.g.. Charges 13-17) to the searching eye of the District. For decades, the United States Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has been understandably wary of employers using arrest records or credit histories as purported justifications for adverse preemptive or punitive actions against employees.

Assuming arguendo that the District proved all Charges, Respondent contends nevertheless that her seniority, the principle of progressive discipline, and no prior similar incident in her record preclude a six month suspension, let alone discharge. Respondent cites, inter alia, Paterson v. Vincenti (Arbitrator Howard Edelman, June 11, 2014)(six month suspension without pay imposed a second time rather than discharge, anger management classes, psychiatric examination with return to work clearance imposed for numerous intemperate and vulgar outbursts); and, Perez (Arbitrator Timothy J. Brown, December 11, 2014). (Charges dismissed, when District failed to establish the truth of the "conduct unbecoming" charge re: an equivocal "touching" or "grabbing" of wrist of student by teacher)

Not surprisingly, the District cites several cases sustaining discharge in the first instance of assault. I find the cases cited by the District more to the point than the authorities cited by Respondent. I find that Respondent had every opportunity to walk away from, rather than to hotly pursue, the student, and Respondent did not do so---the classic decision of the aggressive civil tortfeasor and the criminal perpetrator to continue trading punches and slaps. In such circumstances, discharge in the first instance is fully in accord with progressive discipline, due process, and just cause.

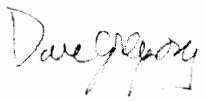
AWARD

For all of the reasons set forth above, I find that the District has met its burden of proving Charges 1-4, 9, 12, and 18. Those proven Charges are sustained and shall be added to Respondent's official record.

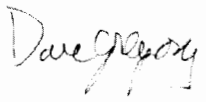
Respondent is hereby released, and discharged for proven just cause from the tenured teaching staff of the Paterson School District.

For all of the reasons set forth above, I find insufficient evidence necessary to prove Charges 5-8, 10-11, 13-17, and 19. Those Charges are dismissed.

So Ordered,



David L. Gregory, Arbitrator



I, David L. Gregory, affirm that I have executed this document as my Decision and Award in this matter on this 24th of March, 2015.

On January 16, 2015, the Manville Board of Education ("Board") referred certified tenure charges against teaching staff member Bruce Reisman. On February 2, 2015, Respondent Reisman answered the tenure charges. After review, the Department of Education appointed the undersigned, pursuant to P.L. 2012, c.26 to hear and evaluate the tenure charges.

The parties, determining to amicably resolve all disputed claims and severe their employment relationship entered into a Settlement Agreement and General Release, attached hereto as Exhibit A. Attached hereto as Exhibit B is the Resolution adopted by the Board at its meeting on March 10, 2015 approving the settlement, certified by Board Administrator/Board Secretary Kimberly A. Cleeland. Therein, the parties submitted the Settlement Agreement and General Release for my review, seeking approval.

The New Jersey Administrative Code contains procedures for filing Controversies and Disputes with the Commissioner of Education, N.J.A.C 6A:3-1.1,et seq. The new Subchapter 5 applies to Charges Under the Tenure Employee's Hearing Act. N.J.A.C. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6 addresses withdrawal, settlement, or mooting of tenure charges. Section (a), identifies the criteria a panel arbitrator must review prior to approving any settlement, as follows:

> 6A:3-5.6 Withdrawal, settlement, or mooting of tenure charges
>
> (a) Once tenure charges are certified to the Commissioner, they may be withdrawn or settled only with approval. Any proposed withdrawal or settlement, whether submitted to the Commissioner or to the arbitrator, shall address the following standards established by the State Board of Education in the matter entitled In re Cardonick, State Board decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846):
>
> 1. Accompaniment by documentation as to the nature of the charges;
>
> 2. Explication of the circumstances justifying settlement or withdrawal;
>
> 3. Consent of both the charged and charging parties;

4. Indication the charged party entered into the agreement with a full understanding of his or her rights;

5. A showing the agreement is in the public interest; and

6. If the charged party is a teaching staff member, a showing the teaching staff member has been advised of the Commissioner's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

Reviewing the instant Settlement Agreement in light of the Administrative Code, I find N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(a)(1),(3),(4),(6) are addressed in the verbiage of the Settlement Agreement. Moreover, the Board's articulation evidencing the circumstances justify settlement and the agreement is in the public interest is persuasive. (See N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6(2)(5)). Accordingly, based upon this review, the attached executed Settlement Agreement is, hereby APPROVED.

Settlement Agreement and General Release

Whereas, Bruce Reisman ("Reisman") is a tenured teaching staff member employed by the Manville Board of Education ("the Board"); and

Whereas, the Superintendent of Schools has filed tenure charges against Reisman, dated December 9, 2014, which charges were certified by the Board on January 13, 2015; and

Whereas, the parties wish to amicably resolve disputed claims, and are desirous of severing their employment relationship on the terms set forth herein;

Now, Therefore, Be It Agreed, as follows:

1. RETIREMENT Reisman shall retire from employment as a public school employee in the State of New Jersey effective on or before July 1, 2015, at which time his employment with the Board shall cease in all respects, and shall promptly file with the appropriate pension authorities, and diligently process, all documentation required to effectuate this result. In the event that Reisman's retirement does not take effect by July 1, 2015, for any reason, this Settlement Agreement shall be deemed an irrevocable notice of resignation effective as of that date, which the Board, by execution hereof, hereby accepts. The Board acknowledges and agrees that it will fully and promptly comply with its obligations to provide the Department of the Treasury, Division of Pensions and Benefits, with any documentation necessary to facilitate the processing of Mr. Reisman's application for retirement.

EXHIBIT A

2 LEAVE OF ABSENCE Reisman shall be placed on a paid leave of absence, retroactive to February 27, 2015, with salary at the level he was being paid as of the commencement of the 2014-2015 school year, with benefits, through the conclusion of the 2014-2015 school year in June 2015. No adjustment shall be made to Reisman's salary regardless of the outcome of pending contract negotiations with the Manville Education Association. In the event that Reisman secures alternate employment for all or any part of the period prior to July 1, 2015, during what otherwise would have been the school day had he not been on a leave of absence, the Board's financial obligations hereunder shall be mitigated by any income received by Reisman in connection with said alternate employment. Reisman shall be obligated to notify the Superintendent of Schools in writing in the event that he secures such alternate employment.

3. FORBEARANCE FROM DISCIPLINARY PROCEEDINGS The Board shall withdraw the tenure charges currently pending against Reisman, with prejudice, and forbear from any other disciplinary proceedings against him; provided, that nothing herein shall affect any of the Board's reporting responsibilities pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:9B-4.4(a). The Board acknowledges that no such obligation will take effect until subsequent to the date of Reisman's retirement.

4. OLDER WORKERS BENEFIT PROTECTION ACT This Agreement and General Release shall be subject to Reisman's right to rescind pursuant to the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act, 29 626(F)(1)(G), within seven (7) calendar days after the signing of this Agreement. If Reisman does not rescind his letter of resignation and this Agreement within seven (7) calendar days of the signing of them, his resignation and this Agreement shall be binding and irrevocable. To comply with the Older Workers Benefit Protection Act of 1990, this Agreement advises Reisman of the legal requirements of the Act, and fully incorporates the legal requirements by reference into this Agreement as follows:

a) Reisman fully understands the terms and conditions of this Agreement;

b) Reisman has been advised to consult with an attorney to review the Agreement;

c) Reisman specifically waives his right to pursue any claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act;

d) Reisman does not waive any rights or claims under the Age Discrimination in Employment Act that may arise after the date the waiver is executed.

e) Reisman is receiving consideration above and beyond anything of value to which he already is entitled;

f) Reisman has been given at least twenty-one (21) days within which to consider this Agreement.

g) Reisman has seven (7) days from the date of the execution of this waiver to revoke it.

5. RELEASE Reisman hereby releases, waives and forever discharges any and all past, present or future claims that relate to any action that predates this Agreement that he may have against the Board, including but not limited to, any and all claims for back pay or any other claim related to his absence from work and/or his employment with the Board. Reisman acknowledges that he has had the opportunity to consult with legal counsel and representatives of his choice regarding this Agreement prior to executing it; and that he represents that he has read this Agreement and fully understands them and agrees to be bound by them. Reisman also acknowledges that he has been given a reasonable period of time within which to consider this settlement and the terms of this Agreement prior to executing them.

6. CONFIDENTIALITY This Agreement shall remain confidential to the maximum extent permitted by law and neither party shall disclose the terms of this Agreement to third parties. A copy of this Agreement shall not be maintained in Reisman's personnel file, nor shall a copy of the tenure charge documents remain in the file

7. EMPLOYMENT REFERENCES Responses to any inquiries as to Reisman's employment with the Board, including but not limited to, job reference inquiries shall be limited to an acknowledgment of his position, length of employment with the Board and his retirement.

8. ENTIRE AGREEMENT This Agreement contains the entire agreement and understanding between the parties and constitutes a full and final agreement on any and all issues relating to this matter, except that the parties reserve their right to enforce this Agreement, if necessary.

9. CHOICE OF LAW This Agreement shall be governed by the laws of the State of New Jersey.

10. SEVERABILITY If, during the term of this Agreement, a specific clause of the Agreement is determined to be illegal or in violation of any Federal or State law, the remainder of the Agreement shall not be affected by such a ruling and shall remain in full force and effect.

11. BINDING EFFECT The parties shall be bound by the terms and conditions of this Agreement, finding it to be in the best interests of the public, consistent with public policy, fair and equitable under all circumstances surrounding this matter.

12. APPROVAL The terms and conditions of this Agreement and are subject to ratification and approval by the Board at a duly convened public meeting, and by the Arbitrator to the extent required by law.

13. NO ADMISSION OF LIABILITY The parties' entry into this Agreement shall not constitute nor shall it be interpreted as an admission of wrongdoing or guilt, or liability in any manner on either of the parties' part. Any such obligation or liability on either party's part is expressly denied. The parties have entered into this Agreement solely to compromise disputed claims.

14. OPPORTUNITY TO CONSULT WITH COUNSEL The parties acknowledge that each has been given the opportunity to consult with an attorney or a representative of their own choosing with respect to this Agreement and reviewed with their attorney or representative all the terms and conditions of this Agreement prior to executing this Agreement. Each party signs this Agreement freely and voluntarily and without coercion or duress. The parties further acknowledge that they fully understand the duties and obligations enumerated herein and have been informed of their legal rights and obligations.

15. COBRA Nothing contained within this Agreement and General Release shall alter Reisman's rights to continuation of health insurance through Federal law, i.e. the Consolidated Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1986 ("COBRA") upon separation from employment with the Board.

16. EXECUTION IN COUNTERPARTS AND FACSIMILE SIGNATURES This Agreement may be executed in two (or more) counterparts each of which, when executed and delivered shall be deemed to be an original, and of which counterparts, taken together, shall constitute one and the same agreement. An original signature transmitted by facsimile shall be deemed to be an original for purposes of this Agreement and for the accompanying letter of resignation.

17. NO REENTRY Upon acceptance of this Agreement by the Board, Reisman shall not enter school district buildings or grounds for any reason, nor shall he attend any school district-sponsored function or activity regardless of where it is held.

Re: L.H. and L.S. on behalf of minor child, L.S. v. Board of Education of the City of Elizabeth, Union County, Agency Dkt. No. 354-12/14.

Dear Parties:

Upon review of the petition of appeal filed in connection with the above-captioned matter, and based upon the board's failure to submit an answer to the petition, I have determined to grant summary decision in favor of petitioners.

On December 8, 2014, petitioners filed a petition of appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-8.1 et seq. claiming that L.S. was entitled to attend school in the District in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. A copy of the petition of appeal was served upon the board secretary via facsimile on December 10, 2014, together with an acknowledgment of filing and notice that an answer to the petition was due within 20 days. N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5. Because the board failed to respond to the initial notice, a second notice was sent to the board secretary on January 8, 2013, via certified and regular mail, clearly indicating that – absent receipt of an answer to the petition of appeal within 10 days – each count in the petition would be deemed admitted and this matter could be decided on a summary decision basis, N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.5(e). Third and fourth such notices were sent to the board secretary, via certified and regular mail. To date, no answer has been filed on behalf of the board.

Accordingly, petitioners' claim that L.S. is entitled to attend school in the District pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-1 et seq. is deemed admitted by the board. The board is hereby ordered to continue to admit L.S. into its public school system, free of charge, so long as there is no change in circumstances that would alter that entitlement.[1]

Sincerely,

David C. Hespe

MELINDO PERSI,	:
COMPLAINANT,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
DANIEL WOSKA, TOWNSHIP OF BRICK BOARD OF EDUCATION, OCEAN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the decision of the School Ethics Commission (Commission) have been reviewed. On November 25, 2014, Respondent-Appellant Daniel Woska (respondent) filed an appeal of the Commission's October 28, 2014 decision with the Commissioner of Education pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:4-1.3(c).[1] The Commission found that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e)[2] of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members because he was found to have taken private action that had the potential to compromise the Brick Township Board of Education (Board), and recommended a penalty of reprimand.

In his appeal to the Commissioner, the respondent argues that the Commission's application of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) to the facts in this matter is contrary to law. The respondent maintains that his issuance of the Rice notice to the Interim Superintendent Melindo Persi (Persi or complainant) was not a private action because the newly appointed Board ratified the prior issuance of the Rice notice at the reorganization meeting of April 29, 2008. It is not the act of the Rice notice being sent which Persi objects to; rather, it is his termination by the majority of the Board. The respondent also

[1] This matter includes a protracted procedural history that was fully outlined in the Commission's October 29, 2014 decision and will not be repeated here.

[2] N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), states "I will recognize that authority rests with the board of education and will make no personal promises nor take any private action that may compromise the board."

argues that even if the issuance of the Rice notice to Persi was a private act, the action did nothing to compromise the board in violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e). The respondent points out that the full Board voted on Persi's termination, and as such it was the Board's action that resulted in the litigation regarding Persi's contract.

Additionally, the respondent contends that no penalty should be imposed given the unique circumstances in this case. The respondent stresses that the Commissioner's June 17, 2014 decision expressly acknowledged that no statute or regulation defined the power of who may issue a Rice notice to a superintendent.[3] The respondent reasonably believed in 2008 that he possessed the authority to request that a Rice notice be issued so that he would be in a position to voice his views on the subject of Persi's employment at the Board meeting. Up until the Commissioner issued the June 17, 2014 decision, there was no authority that required a Rice notice to a superintendent be issued by either the Board president or the full board. Therefore, that decision constitutes new law that should be applied prospectively and not retroactively to the respondent.

In reply, the complainant argues that the Commission's decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record and is consistent with previous long standing decisions. The complainant maintains that the respondent failed to provide any basis to establish that the Commission's decision is arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law, and in fact the respondent's brief in support of the current appeal is duplicative of the brief filed by the respondent in April of 2013. The complainant also points out that the respondent did not appeal the Commissioner's June 17, 2014 decision with regard to who is able to request a Rice notice. As such, any arguments that challenge the legal issues determined in the June 17, 2014 decision should be deemed moot and irrelevant. With respect to the penalty, the complainant contends that this matter does not consist of unique circumstances as alleged by the respondent. Rather, the penalty of a reprimand is consistent with other cases cited in the Commission's October 29, 2014 decision which related to a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e), and should be upheld.

[3] Pursuant to the Appellate Division's instructions on remand, the Commissioner considered the issue and found that a single board member is without authority to direct issuance of a Rice notice to the chief school administrator of a district. Rather, that authority lies with the president of a district board of education or a majority of the full membership of a district board of education. Melindo Persi v. Daniel Woska, Township of Brick Board of Education, Ocean County, Commissioner Decision No. 260-14A, decided June 17, 2014.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner finds that the decision of the Commission as to the determination of a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) is supported by sufficient credible evidence, and the respondent has not established that the Commission's decision is arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law.[4] N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a). The evidence in the record fully supports the Commission's determination that the respondent's private action which involved discussions with three members-elect resulting in the respondent becoming the new Board President – coupled with his plan to terminate Persi's employment contract and to appoint Assistant Superintendent Ceres to Persi's position as Superintendent without the Board's knowledge – were beyond the scope of duties and responsibilities of a board member, and constituted a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e).[5] Moreover, the respondent's private action compromised the Board because it resulted in significant litigation over Persi's contract. As a result, the Commissioner finds that the Commission's determination that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) was not arbitrary, capricious or contrary to law.[6]

The Commissioner also accepts the Commission's recommendation – for the reasons expressed in the Commission's decision – that a reprimand is the appropriate penalty in this matter. In so ruling, the Commissioner is satisfied that, in recommending a penalty for the violation it found, the

[4] The Commissioner is also in accord with the Commission's determination that the respondent did not violate N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(c) and (d).

[5] The Commissioner is mindful that in a footnote in the Commission's February 29, 2012 decision the Commission noted that it "does not find respondent's actions relative to Ms. Ceres, as set forth in the factual findings herein, are sufficient to base a finding of a violation of the Code of Ethics for School Board Members." The Commissioner can only surmise that that finding was limited to the discussions with Ms. Ceres, not the combination of private action by the respondent that amounted to a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e).

[6] In the Commission's February 29, 2012 decision, the Commission found that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) when he took private action which had the potential to compromise the Board by unilaterally directing that a Rice notice be issued to Mr. Persi without consulting the Board President or the Board as a whole. The Commission determined that the remand did not direct a review of that finding and as such the Commission did not further discuss that finding in the October 29, 2014 decision. The Commission instead noted that its prior ruling on that issue remains undisturbed. The Commissioner is also in accord with the Commission's determination that the respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e) for the reasons stated in the Commission's February 29, 2012 decision.

Commission fully considered the nature of the offense and weighed the effects of aggravating and mitigating circumstances. Contrary to the respondent's assertion that there should be no penalty because the Commissioner's June 17, 2014 decision with respect to who has the authority to issue a Rice notice to a superintendent is being retroactively applied to him, the Commissioner emphasizes that it was not just the respondent's unilateral issuance of the Rice notice in 2008 that was a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e). The respondent's private action that involved private discussions with newly elected board members, and his plan to have Persi terminated and Ms. Ceres take over without the full Board's knowledge also constituted a violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:12-24.1(e). Therefore, the Commission's recommended penalty of a reprimand in this matter is fully supported by the record and will not be disturbed.

Accordingly, IT IS hereby ORDERED that Daniel Woska is hereby reprimanded as a school official found to have violated the School Ethics Act.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[7]

Re: Tenure Charge of Inefficiency
Agency Docket Nos. 241-8/14 and 17-1/15

Opinion and Award

Tia Schneider Denenberg, Arbitrator

APPEARANCES

FOR THE DISTRICT:

Teresa L. Moore, Riker Danzig Scherer Hyland & Perretti LLP

FOR THE RESPONDENT TEACHER:

Genevieve Murphy-Bradacs, Zazzali, Fagella, Nowak, Kleinbaum & Friedman

BACKGROUND

This dispute initially concerned charges of inefficiency, dated July 22, 2014.[1] They were brought against tenured teacher Rinita Williams under Section 25 of the Teacher Effectiveness and Accountability for the Children of New Jersey Act ("TEACHNJ"), N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3. as follows:

CHARGE: INEFFICIENCY

Respondent has been rated Partially Effective and Ineffective in two respective annual summative evaluations, as follows:

1. Respondent was rated Partially Effective in her 2012-13 annual summative evaluation.

[1] For ease of reference the arbitrator has cited the date on which each document was created rather than the date on the DOE stamp. In this matter there is no allegation of failure to comply with time limits.

2. Respondent was rated Ineffective in her 2013-14 annual summative evaluation.

WHEREFORE, Respondent has shown that she is unfit to discharge the duties and functions of the position in which she holds tenure in the School District, and she should be dismissed.

Accompanied by a statement of evidence, the charges were served on the teacher on August 4, 2014.[2] The teacher filed a position statement, dated August 11, 2014, alleging that "procedural deficiencies...render the instant charges inappropriate...particularly in light of the fact that full implementation of the new teacher evaluation system did not even begin until September of 2013" [at p. 2]. The teacher also alleged failure to respect her FMLA and workers' compensation leave status, as well as retaliation by her supervisors for filing disability and discrimination complaints.

In a letter dated August 28, 2014, the district notified the teacher that tenure charges were being certified to the New Jersey State Commissioner of Education and that she was suspended without pay for 120 days, effective August 29. At the same time, the file was forwarded to the commissioner, and copies were sent to the teacher and her attorneys. The district asserted that > the only question to be determined by the Commissioner is whether the School District has followed the evaluation process. See N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3(c); N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(c)(6). We respectfully submit that the Commissioner should determine that the School District has complied fully with all required evaluation procedures. In 2012-13, in accordance with regulatory provisions in effect during that school year, Respondent received three formal observations and an annual summative evaluation. In 2013-14 a corrective action plan was developed collaboratively and implemented; that school year Respondent received four observations, a mid-year evaluation, and an annual summative evaluation.

The teacher filed a letter brief, dated September 5, 2014, asking the commissioner to dismiss the charges and grant "a motion seeking the same as well as a stay in transmitting the matter to an arbitrator." Included in the pleading was an answer to the charges, that asserted:

> The implementation of the District's 2012-13 Teacher Evaluation Guidelines and procedures related thereto were part and parcel of a "pilot program" and, as such, summative evaluations relating to that school year may not be utilized by the District for purpose of seeking or bringing tenure charges against Teachers, including, but not limited to Ms. Williams relating thereto.

On September 15, the parties were advised by the commissioner that > following receipt of respondent's answer on September 8, 2014, the...tenure charges have been reviewed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3c; upon review the Commissioner is unable to determine > that the evaluation process has not been followed and accordingly, on this date, the case is being referred to Arbitrator Tia Schneider Denenberg as required by statute.

[2] This ruling takes into account the complete record, which includes numerous submissions. In the interest of economy, not all submissions will be identified individually or summarized.

After consulting with the parties via e-mail and conference call, the arbitrator was granted a two-week extension by the commissioner for the purpose of allowing them to elaborate their positions in regard to the teacher's preliminary motion. The parties agreed to schedule three days of hearing—on November 12, 13, and 14—in the event that the case went forward and to establish a timetable for the required pre-hearing information exchange.

The teacher maintained that the arbitrator was now the designee of the commissioner, which implied that the procedure is governed by New Jersey administrative law precepts, including limited opportunity for parties to respond to each other. On October 17, the arbitrator notified the parties by e-mail as follows:

> Under the traditional principles of arbitration and the AAA rules, I am obliged to ensure the parties have a full and fair opportunity to be heard. In keeping with that responsibility, the District will be permitted to submit a brief reply.

The teacher was also afforded an opportunity to submit an additional reply.

On November 5 the arbitrator informed the parties in another conference call that she would take the preliminary motion under advisement and that the hearings would proceed as scheduled, since there was no mutual agreement to adjourn. During the call, the teacher requested that the arbitrator conduct an initial review of the case as the commissioner's designee. The request was rejected on the ground that it was inconsistent with the role of arbitrator.

In its responses to the motion, the district had argued that if the Section 25 claim were dismissed, the allegations should revert to a non-mandatory tenure removal charge under Section 8. The district withdrew that contention in its opening statement [Tr., p. 14].

Hearings were held in this matter on November 12, 13, 14 and 19. The following witnesses testified under oath or affirmation:

For the District (Petitioner):

Viveca Williams,[3] Principal of 13th Avenue/Dr. MLK School

---

[3] Viveca Williams was hired in August, 2012, as Chief Innovation Officer (CIO), or as the "second hand to the principal." She became interim principal on January 13, 2013, and principal at the end of the school year [Tr., pp. 172-173]. Even though her roles varied over time, she is identified throughout this opinion as Principal Williams to avoid confusion with the teacher, Rinita Williams.

Simone Rose,[4] Vice-Principal
LaShanda Gilliam,[5] Vice-Principal

For the Teacher (Respondent):

Rinita Williams,[6] Teacher
Latifa Graham,[7] Teacher

At the district's request, a transcript was taken. Following the hearing (December 22, 2014), the district asked that the arbitration be held in abeyance in order to take account of an amended charge being filed against the teacher:

> Please be advised that the principal of 13th Avenue School has filed an Amended Notice of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency against Respondent Rinita Williams. The amended charge includes the charge of inefficiency previously filed, served, and submitted to the Commissioner of Education; and on which you have completed an arbitration hearing; and it adds another count of inefficiency pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-1 1 and N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16.
>
> We expect that the Amended Notice of Tenure Charge of Inefficiency will be treated as a new filing, and, accordingly, Ms. Williams will have an opportunity to respond before the charge is considered by the Superintendent and the Commissioner, prior to its referral to arbitration. We therefore respectfully request that this matter be held in abeyance, pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.5(b), so the Amended Notice of Tenure Charge may be properly considered in accordance with applicable statutory provisions.

The next day, the teacher signaled opposition to this motion:

> The present charge before you was filed pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-17.3 (Section 25 of the Act), which applies in cases of alleged inefficiency. That is the only charge before you and no additional amended charge has been transmitted to you by the Commissioner. Therefore, the amended charge is not

[4] This is her third year as vice-principal at 13th Avenue School. She also served as vice-principal in another Newark school for one year [Tr., p. 452].

[5] Ms. Gilliam became an administrator in November, 2006, at Vailsburg Middle School and remained there when that school closed and reopened as Ivy Hill Elementary School. She went to 13th Avenue School in August, 2009 [Tr., pp. 745-746]. In SY 2012-2013 she supervised preschool, kindergarten, and first and second grades. In SY 2013-2014 Ms. Gilliam supervised grades four and five [Tr., p. 747]. She assisted Principal Mackey in training teachers in each of the five competencies in SY 2012-2013 [Tr., p. 749].

[6] Rinita Williams began employment with the District in 1998 and taught at several schools. Her classes included Pre-K, kindergarten, first grade, second grade (as lead teacher), third grade, and fourth grade. She holds a K-5 Certification [Respondent Brief, p. 4]. She was a substitute teacher for three years [Tr., p. 702].

[7] Ms. Graham has been employed by NPS for sixteen years, teaching in a variety of schools including five years at MLK and at MLK/13th Avenue for 2012-2013 as a first grade teacher [Tr., pp. 662-663].

relevant to the proceeding before you, is entitled to no action or consideration on your part (indeed consideration of the District's request would be grossly improper since no amended charge has been transmitted to you by the Commissioner) and the only conceivable relevance of the District's amended charge is to demonstrate that the District is keenly aware that the present charge lacks merit and should be dismissed. I also believe that the District is attempting to prevent the Respondent from being returned to the payroll, as is required after tenure charges have been pending for 120 days. Once these "new" tenure charges are filed, the District will claim that Ms. Williams should be suspended without pay again.

The District's actions are unconscionable. On the first day of the hearing, on the record, the District's counsel specifically withdrew its request that this matter be "convert[ed]" into a "non-mandatory tenure charge claim of inefficiency." (T14). And yet now, after 4 days of hearings and after the submission of post-hearing briefs, the District is attempting to amend the charge to do just that, while also asking you to refrain from deciding this case while it attempts to sneak in through the back door what it could not get in through the front. This is tantamount to plaintiff's counsel advising the trial judge after a week-long trial - while the jury is deliberating - that she has filed an amended complaint before another judge, and that therefore she is requesting that the jury be told go home. Obviously, something so absurd would never be countenanced in any court of law. Nor should it be permitted here.

As the arbitrator in this case, it is respectfully submitted that you are empowered, as is a judge, to decide all issues that arise in this matter, both procedural and substantive. Accordingly, please treat this letter as a formal motion to preclude the District from amending its tenure charges against Rinita Williams at this late date. Accordingly, and in light of the foregoing, it is respectfully requested that you issue an order restraining the District from filing any amended tenure charges against Ms. Williams, and that a decision on the pending motion to dismiss, and on all the substantive aspects of the tenure charge, issue expeditiously.

The submission of corrected transcripts, briefs and attachments was completed on December 26, 2014. The district provided scanned copies of all exhibits on a CD. In view of the complexity of the record and the time taken to complete it, the arbitrator was granted two additional extensions by the commissioner. The award became due on March 30, 2015.

On January 22, 2015, the teacher's counsel wrote the arbitrator as follows:

Today I received an email from Ms. Moore, a copy of which is enclosed, indicating that the District is filing amended tenure charges against Ms. Williams with the Commissioner of Education. I am writing to apprise you of this most recent development, as well to briefly respond to Ms. Moore's most recent letter-brief, dated January 16, 2015, in which she reiterates her request that you stay your decision and opposes Ms. Williams' motion seeking an order precluding the District from filing amended charges against her.

Based upon Ms. Moore's January 22, 2015 email, it is readily apparent that the District does not intend to wait for your ruling on Ms. Williams' motion for an order precluding the District from filing an amended charge. It is also clear that the District does not plan to move before you, the Arbitrator in this case, to amend the charge. Instead, it seeks to circumvent the law - and your authority in this case - by simply moving ahead with its plan to file amended charges with the Commissioner, despite the fact that it has no legal authority to do so. Candidly, I'm not surprised, given that each of the District's actions to date, individually and collectively, demonstrate a belief that it is above the law, and that it is entitled to do whatever it wants, whenever it wants, in pursuit of its unjust and pathological quest to remove Ms. Williams (and many others) from tenured employment.

Given this most recent development, I am reiterating my request that you issue an order precluding the District from filing amended charges against Ms. Williams. After 4 days of hearings and the filing of numerous post-hearing briefs, the record is closed. The proper time to request leave to amend would have been prior to the hearing in this matter, and such a request should have been directed to you, the arbitrator appointed by the Commissioner to dispose of this matter, who is the only person to whom such a request can properly be made. See Elkouri & Elkouri, How Arbitration Works (6th Ed. BNA) at p. 294 (citing John Wiley & Sons v. Livingston 376 U.S. 543, 557 (1964) for the proposition that when "the subject matter of a dispute is arbitrable, 'procedural questions which grow out of the dispute and bear on its final disposition should be left to the arbitrator.'"). Moreover, on the first day of the hearing, on the record, the District's counsel specifically withdrew its request that this matter be "convert[ed]" into a "non-mandatory tenure charge claim of inefficiency." (T14).

The District bizarrely claims that Ms. Williams will not be prejudiced by its amendment of the charges because "[t]he Amended Charge is based on the identical evidence that the School District presented at the hearing." (See Letter from T. Moore dated January 16, 2015 at 1). Nothing could be further from the truth. Ms. Williams undertook her defense of the charges against her within the confines of the extremely limited defenses that were available to her under Section 25 of the Act. For example, under Section 25, Ms. Williams is statutorily precluded from offering evidence that her classroom performance did not warrant the ratings she was given. Had she in fact been the subject of tenure charges brought pursuant to Section 8, she would have presented additional evidence and raised additional defenses to counter such charges. An amendment at this stage would rob Ms. Williams of her opportunity to do so. Obviously, it would be absurd to permit Ms. Williams to be prejudiced in this manner simply because the District now has buyer's remorse over its prior litigation strategy.

Moreover, as the vast majority of arbitrators have now ruled, even if the District had timely and properly moved before you to amend its charge, the amendment should have been denied as futile, as inefficiency charges can only be brought, if at all, pursuant to Section 25 of the Act. To the extent the District seeks to rely upon Henchey, Thomas, and Whitehurst, it is clear that such reliance is misplaced. These cases involved charges that were initially pled in the alternative and did not involve what amounts to unilateral action by the District amending the charge after the hearing has been concluded and the record has closed. Accordingly, these cases have absolutely no bearing on the present issue.

In light of the above, Respondent respectfully requests that the Arbitrator take swift action to preclude the District from certifying these amended charges, which, I am told, are being filed today. Such an order is necessary and appropriate, particularly since, should the Commissioner allow these amended charges to proceed, there is no guarantee that the District will not take the position - or that the Commissioner will not so find - that the amended charges should be transmitted to, and decided by, an entirely different arbitrator.

As the arbitrator in this case, it is respectfully submitted that you are empowered to take such action. Accordingly, and in light of the foregoing, it is respectfully requested that you issue an order restraining the District from filing any amended tenure charges against Ms. Williams, and that a decision on the pending motion to dismiss, and on all the substantive aspects of the tenure charge, issue expeditiously.

On January 22-23, the district reported by e-mail that it had certified "amended" charges to the DOE and had "requested that the amended charge be assigned to you as a matter of case management." The district asked for a conference call that would include Ms. Duncan, but the teacher objected to her participation. On January 26, the arbitrator informed the parties that a conference call was unnecessary. On January 31 the undersigned arbitrator issued an interim award:

> The petitioner's request to hold this matter in abeyance is denied. The arbitrator retains jurisdiction for the purposes of resolving any and all disputes regarding the tenure charges brought against respondent by SOSD of Newark for school years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014.

The arbitrator wrote the parties on February 13, 2015, as follows:

> On February 6, 2015, I was notified by Ms. Duncan of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes that I have been appointed to hear and decide a second matter involving Ms. Williams. At the same time, Ms. Duncan informed the parties that the new matter has been docketed "as new charges...and which are being processed with respect to Charge Two, Section 8 inefficiency charges only, [and] are being referred to Arbitrator Tia Schneider Denenberg to handle as she deems appropriate."
>
> Therefore, I am combining the two matters into a single case for the school years 2012-2013 and 2013-2014. I plan to issue one decision. Each party may submit an additional letter brief of no more than 5 pages by February 20, 2015.
>
> I also acknowledge receipt of various emails and the following documents:
>
> (1) Copy of letter from Genevieve M. Murphy-Bradacs to Ms. Duncan, dated February 5, 2015, enclosing a copy of Respondent's Answer to Amended Tenure Charges.
>
> (2) Letter from Ms. Murphy-Bradacs to the arbitrator, dated February 6, 2015, requesting that her pending motion, seeking an order barring the filing of amended charges be treated as a motion to dismiss. In support of this motion, Respondent relies upon all prior submissions, as well as the post-hearing brief.
>
> (3) Letter from Ms. Moore to the arbitrator, dated February 10, 2015, in response to Ms. Murphy-Bradacs' letter in No. 2 above.
>
> With respect to No. 2, I am granting the respondent's request to consider her submission as a motion to dismiss.
>
> By copy of this letter, I am asking the Commissioner to consider the due date for the consolidated case to be March 30, 2015, which is the extended due date of Docket No. 241-8/14.

The parties each filed a timely letter brief.

At the hearing, Principal Williams testified to the school's troubled history:

> It's a pre-K to eight school located in the west ward of Newark, New Jersey. When I arrived to 13th Avenue, it was known as a RENEW school, RENEW meaning that they closed 13th Avenue because 13th Avenue was a failing school, and they closed Dr. MLK School...because that was considered a failing school as well. The superintendent reopened 13th Avenue, combining both schools, 13th Avenue and Dr. MLK School into one school [Tr., pp. 19-20].

In August, 2012, the school "had to rehire 80 percent of the teachers. They had to be new teachers that were brought to the school to impact and help improve student achievement in the school altogether" [Tr., p. 20]. The teachers were asked to work extra hours, the witness recounted, in order to augment student learning time:

> ...[S]tudies have shown that when students have opportunities to have after-school programs, that they are successful in their academics and they care about that, economics, and also having an opportunity to give teachers more time to teach. One of the things that we were focusing on was developing social and emotional learning for students.... [W]e implemented curriculum that helped teachers and students improve the relationships within the class among each other, among each other in the classroom, to build their relationships. In addition, we had a couple of new curriculums, such as math and focus, which was a math curriculum; expeditionary learning, which was a reading curriculum and core knowledge, which was a reading curriculum for grades K through two, and our creative curriculum program for preschool, preschool teachers as well.
> We also had the opportunity to have our teachers sign something called an extended work agreement, which states that as you are working at 13th Avenue, you are committing to staying past 3:05, so basically the teachers finished at 4:05. You are committing to attending Saturday retreats.... But the goal was so that we can impact student achievement during the course of the day in academics, and in improving social and emotional supports as well [Tr., pp. 20-21].

During the entire period at issue, the students failed to perform well academically. The school needed to be "on the move or better, and we are not there as yet.... Our goal was to hire great teachers to impact and help us to move the students of 13th Avenue Dr. MLK to be future doctors, lawyers, teachers, etcetera" [Tr., p. 22]. Principal Williams estimated that there were 50 teachers, five administrators and "close to 120 staff members" at the school [Tr., p. 23]. The enrollment was "800 to 830. Our school is very transient at times, so our numbers kind of fluctuate " [Tr., p. 20]. The principal maintained that > my number one role is one to support teachers and coach teachers, and help them...with what they do in the classroom to help students. It's to help provide them professional development. It's to help them think about and reflect about their practices and what they do on an everyday basis, and to help them become highly effective and effective teachers, and to move ineffective and partially effective teachers to the next level where they're able to help students in the classroom [Tr., pp. 24-25].

> In addition to that, I'm responsible for not only coaching teachers but also giving evaluations, giving observations to teachers, giving observations to my vice principal or my other administrators in the building, also providing feedback to the teaching assistants as to how they are doing in the classroom. My responsibility is also to take a look at curriculum and see how the curriculum is helping to impact instruction in the classroom, to help move students to -- so that we are a school on the move and they're better at what they're doing to be better readers, writers and mathematicians [Tr., pp. 25-26].

At the beginning of SY 2012-2013, Principal Williams testified the NPS "Framework for Effective Teaching, Teacher Observation and Performance Evaluation, A Guidebook for Teachers and Administrators" [Joint Exhibit 60] was issued to all teachers. The guidebook > talked about what the process would be, how teachers would be observed, when would they be observed, what were the time lines as it pertains to observations, mid-year conferences, end-of-year conferences, that all teachers received, and all teachers had to sign that they received it during that time as well [Tr., p. 32].

The guidebook included the "Framework for Effective Teaching Rubric," which called for rating teachers as Highly Effective, Effective, Partially Effective, or Ineffective in five competencies:

> Competency 1: Lesson Design and Focus > Competency 2: Rigor & Inclusiveness
> Competency 3: Culture of Achievement
> Competency 4: Student Progress Toward Mastery > Competency 5: Commitment to Personal and Collective Excellence
> [Joint Exhibit 60]

The first four competencies would be rated on the basis of observations conducted throughout the year. The fifth competency would reflect the teacher's cumulative performance and would appear only in the mid-year review and end-of-year evaluation. A mid-year review conference was not required but was strongly recommended as > an opportunity for the administrator to discuss the teacher's progress toward student, classroom, school, and district performance goals as well as the implementation and alignment of the professional standards for teachers.

>
>
> The mid-year ratings are formative ratings, rather than summative. The mid-year ratings serve as one piece of evidence for the Annual Review Ratings and as an important element of formative feedback for the teacher.
> [Id., pp. 22-23]

The fifth competency rating may add points for highly effective teaching or subtract points for poor attendance and lateness. For tenured teachers one formal observation was required, followed by a post-evaluation conference within ten calendar days [Id., pp. 21-22]. A performance review "must be completed for each teacher on an annual basis. This evaluation is a summative statement which incorporates the data and evidence gathered throughout the year" [Joint Exhibit 60, p. 23].

Administrators were trained in the rubric before the school year began, the principal said:

> ...[B]etween the first week and the second week of my employment, all of the administrators in the district had to attend a professional development for three days, given by Mitch Center, who was one of the assistant superintendents in Newark Public Schools [Tr., p. 37].

Vice-Principal Gilliam said that post-observation conferences were important, because > every time a teacher is observed on a particular competency, you do sit with them at the post-conference, you're relating all your conversations to the actual rubric and things that they saw you do in that rubric and some things you need to do to be effective there. So every time you observe, you're going back to the rubric. You're going back to look at the language again; and what did I do and what can I do to make effective there? Did I do that? What was the evidence of what I did, and how can I be better? So you are constantly talking about the framework. It's the guideline to the conference [Tr., p. 757].

She also explained the significance of an announced observation and pre-observation conference, which was not required until 2013-3014:

> The purpose is to plan with the teacher. Usually at a pre-conference the teacher will talk with you about a lesson she wants you to do, you can plan a lesson with them. The teacher is only required to have I think one pre-conference a school year, but the rest can be unannounced [Tr., pp. 791-792].

But the framework makes clear that struggling teachers are owed more attention:

> Pre-Observation Conferences are especially recommended for:
>
> * * *
>
> • Struggling teachers to focus on particular areas of growth
> [Joint Exhibit 60, p. 20, Tr., pp. 792-793]

Teacher Rinita Williams was rehired in August, 2012, as part of the school's reorganization and assigned to kindergarten. She began with a 90-day improvement plan, which was a carry-over from the previous school year, when a different evaluation model had been in place.[8] Principal Williams, who was then the CIO, said that "administrators would observe to see...how she was moving student performance within that 90 days, and then determine...what their next steps would be" [Tr., pp. 43-44]. Ms. Gilliam said that only Ms. Mackey who created the plan would have the authority to determine if it was mastered [Tr., p. 811].

---

[8] The teacher maintains that the plan was inadequate as well as incomplete: Previously, the district had utilized the Charlotte Danielson evaluation model. According to Vice-Principal Gilliam, "there was a vast difference in [the Framework for Effective Teaching] as opposed to the Charlotte Danielson evaluation" model. The Danielson rubric focused on "the teacher and what the teacher had to do," while the Framework focused on "what the students had to do." Accordingly, it was necessary for teachers to be trained on the framework. However, Ms. Graham testified that teachers did not receive training in all of the competencies [Respondent Post-Hearing Brief, p. 6]. The 90-day plan received in evidence [Joint Exhibit 41], according to Ms. Gilliam, was incomplete and had no signature page [Tr. p. 761]. The district had provided the plan to its counsel in that form.

Date	Observation Type	Evaluator	Rating	Exhibit No.
09/25/12	Partial	Vice-Principal Gilliam	Partially Effective	Joint 2
11/16/12	Partial	Vice-Principal Gilliam	Partially Effective	Joint 3
11/19/12	Formal	Special Assistant Barbara Evans	Partially Effective	Joint 4
01/02/13	Formal	Vice-Principal Gilliam	Partially Effective	Joint 5
06/7/13	Annual Evaluation	Vice-Principal Gilliam	Partially Effective	Joint 6

On January 13, 2013, Principal Mackey was terminated.[9] Viveca Williams assumed the role of interim principal. By the end of the school year, Principal Williams recalled, the teacher was placed in a Corrective Action Plan (CAP) developed by Vice-Principal Gilliam, because she had been rated Partially Effective in the annual (summative) evaluation [Joint Exhibit 7].

Ms. Graham, who was a first-grade teacher in SY 2012-2013, said that she did not apply initially for a position in the reorganized school but received a phone call in late August, inviting her application. She believed that the school "didn't have the proper number of teachers [and] were just calling people who were still employees on the placement list." She hesitated: "There was a lot of hearsay around the district: No, don't go there" [Tr., pp. 663-664]. After she was hired by Principal Mackey > there was like supposed to be like a two-week orientation for the school, but the majority of that two weeks was spent like looking for furniture for classrooms. The classroom I was assigned to was formally a world language class. I had to get rid of all materials, find tables and chairs for my students. I taught first grade at Martin Luther King. It was told to us if we were assigned to the 13th Avenue School, that the materials we had already would more than likely follow. But when we got there, we couldn't find the materials. We looked all in the basements. We couldn't find them.... I thought they would be somewhere at 13th Avenue School. I thought it's a good fit for me to go there because now I'll have the first-grade materials, but they were not there.... I was left with a classroom that didn't have any age-appropriate materials. The only things that I had that were age appropriate were the things I had, you know, just from my years of teaching, things I had in my basement. Basically, I had to bring in all the supplies that I needed [Tr., pp. 664-665].

[9] December 1, 2014, e-mail from district counsel to the arbitrator and teacher's counsel.

Other teachers experienced similar difficulties, according to Ms. Graham. A co-worker's classroom > was used as a storage room, and like I actually helped her move...the old, big file cabinets and furniture. We were actually moving the furniture ourselves. And then...we didn't have any curriculum materials....In this summer, for two days, they sent the K to two teachers [to] start training for Core Knowledge. We were told this was the program that the district was going to be utilizing for literacy. However, when we returned to the school, we were told this school will not be utilizing that program.... Over the course of the next couple weeks, we saw the materials in the building for the Core Knowledge, but we were not given access to that. Instead, we were given a list. We were given a two-page list. It was e-mailed to us with random topics. We were told spend two weeks on one topic. It was like a skill and strategy; two weeks on a skill, one week strategy, vice versa.... [T]here was nothing to go with it. You had to go online and research. And the same thing for the math. The district had adopted Everyday Math, but we didn't have any tools. We were told use the Common Core standard, and while we know that textbooks are not...used not like a Bible, you use them as a supplemental resource, we had nothing to go with. Everything was Googling topics and trying to figure out what went with the topics. Some of the topics, when we would Google them, you would find material, it would say this is usually a skill that is not taught at the first-grade level...they were very obscure. And this is expected from pre-k...all the way to eighth grade. So whatever pre-k three was doing, first grade, second grade, all the way to eighth, she wanted the same skills and the same strategy taught. At some of these levels, you can't even find materials for these skills and strategies. Some of them, we didn't have a clear understanding [Tr., pp. 665-667].

Ms. Graham found the process frustrating, because > you didn't really know what to do. Then when you would do the lesson plans, you know, it became to the point you would do them and then it's, like, not right. We would submit them to our immediate administrator. We were told we weren't doing them correctly. And then we were told to do them again when the next set would be due, and we were asked to do them a month in advance. It became [very] frustrating to complete that much work, and you didn't have resources. A lot of times we didn't get our prep periods or we would miss our prep periods, so you would find yourself at home, you're up all night. Very stressful. Some teachers after the Christmas break didn't even return. Some teachers left before the Christmas break. It was a constant turnover of teachers. Even within our team, one teacher who had been with the district several years, she quit like maybe in November, so it was very frustrating for teachers at that school [Tr., pp. 667-668].

Ms. Graham also testified that Principal Mackey brought in her own curriculum:

> ...a reading foci which focused on a skill of the week and a strategy of the week. So for instance, you had to talk about main idea, characters, setting, the synthesis, the various things that dealt with literacy and actually implement it into stories with your students and create your own lesson plans [Tr., p. 607].

She was forced to find materials on the Internet:

> We had to rely on pulling from the internet, pulling lesson plans and utilizing the books that we may have had in our classroom to correlate with the type of skill or strategy that we were focusing on. Say, for instance, it was "The Three Little Pigs." We would talk about -- we were dealing with setting.

> We would review the setting of the story, characters, location, plot, various things of that nature, so...we were almost curriculum developers ourselves [Tr., p. 609].

Other NPS schools had implemented Core Knowledge at the beginning of the school year. In January, when Principal Mackey departed and Viveca Williams became interim principal, > all the materials we were denied access to, they showed up. The math curriculum, we got the Everyday Math books. We got the Core Knowledge. We started to get the Core Knowledge units. And what was interesting is that our school...had a different pacing than the rest of the district's because we were so behind the other schools. So like some of the topics we actually had to skip over because our kids weren't going to get the chance to be exposed to those topics because we missed so many months of the program.... It's...what every first grader should know and every third grader should know.... [W]hat they did in kindergarten will connect to first, it was a new program, but -- or what they did in the first domain might come in handy in the third domain. But we had to skip. They went through and they picked out the ones probably my kids skipped and the kids could still move through, because our pacing definitely would be different from the rest of the district [Tr., pp. 669-670].

Ms. Rinita Williams said that the materials were gradually distributed to teachers, but that there was not enough to go around:

> We were able to get boxes that were stored in the basement of the school or found containing the resources, workbooks that we needed to implement this Core Knowledge, that everyone in the district kept talking about.... It took a very long time. Due to the fact that there were two instructional specialists, if I can remember, that were just really literally rolling a cart around to each classroom. We had to sign for them.... [W]e had to share a lot of the materials. We were short a lot of things, so we didn't have full what they call full resource kits [Tr., pp. 610-611]

Ms. Graham recalled receiving some training in the Framework for Effective Teaching during the school year but understood that other schools had more extensive training in August, 2012:

> I remember at 13th Avenue, like once, when that first-week period...2012-2013, we started...to discuss it at one staff meeting, but then we never discussed it anymore. We never discussed it. We never -- even within a framework, I never received my observation back from my immediate supervisor, so we never discussed, like, where I was and how it fit into the framework. I think we only got to it in a staff meeting. We only focused on the first domain,[10] and then I don't think we discussed it anymore.... But I do know that a lot of other teachers in the district stated that they went to a big formal training, but we had no knowledge of that training at 13th Avenue School.... We were never given those training dates [Tr., pp. 671-672].

She attended training on competency one, conducted by Ms. Mackey and Ms. Gilliam in the media center. However, "on some of the training days, the K to two teachers, we were not there because we were sent to the district for the Core Knowledge" [Tr., 673-674].

[10] Under the previous evaluation plan competencies were referred to as domains, according to Ms. Gilliam [Tr., p. 761].

Ms. Gilliam explained that > Core Knowledge is a curriculum that is Common Core aligned.... But the goal, as a state is, that teachers are well-versed in the Common Core standard, and they can read a standard and apply instruction without heavily being based on the curriculum. Any curriculum used has to be Common Core aligned, so Core Knowledge was a new curriculum because the prior curriculums were not Common Core aligned, so it's a Common Core aligned curriculum [Tr., p. 815].

>
> Ms. Mackey was adamant about teachers becoming well-versed in the standard. She wanted them to learn the standards verbatim and learn how to read them and apply practices. Because in this state, there are assessments that have to be given to scholars when they get to third and fourth grade, and there's certain Common Core standards that have to be mastered and taught. And if you're following the curriculum step by step, you may not necessarily cover all of the standards, so you go to the standards to pick what lessons you're going to teach. If they happen to appear in the curriculum, that's fine, but you are relying on the standard, not so much the curriculum. And if you don't know the standards all the way, you might be inclined to rely heavily on the curriculum and you have to base everything statewide on the standard first and only. The curriculum is a resource for it, and it will help you, but you have to know the standards. You have to know the standards [Tr., pp. 816-817].

In SY 2013-2014 a revised framework was adopted to take account of new regulations as well as the district's experience in the prior year. A mid-year review was required for teachers who were subject to a CAP:

> Pre-Observation Conference (required for at least one observation)
>
> Announced observations may start with a pre-observation conference; at least one announced observation each year must have a pre-conference. The pre-observation conference should occur within seven days before an observation. We recommend that for non-tenured teachers and teachers with a CAP, this pre-observation conference take place before a long observation. During this conference, the teacher and observer discuss the planned lesson, including lesson objectives, instructional strategies, anticipated outcomes, assessments such as quizzes and tests, resources, unique class characteristics, specific areas of growth to look for, etc. During this pre-observation conference, the observer can ask guiding questions to help the teacher consider the planned learning experience or suggest possible alternatives to enhance the lesson before it is delivered.
>
> Teachers may upload artifacts such as their lesson plan in the BloomBoard system prior to the pre-observation conference. The most important questions to answer in a pre-observation conference are:
>
> - Is the teacher clear on what students should know and be able to do by the end of the class?
> - Are the strategies and objectives aligned to the standards?
> - Are the strategies the teacher is planning to use likely to ensure student mastery?
> - How will the teacher know whether the students mastered the content?
> - Has the teacher considered all students in the planning?
> - Is there anything in particular the teacher would like feedback on as part of the observation?
>
> * * *
>
> Post-Observation Conference (Required)
>
> Following an observation—whether long or short, announced or unannounced—the observer must meet with the teacher to reflect on the lesson together. This reflection process is the centerpiece of > professional growth, refinement of instruction, and continuous improvement. The post-observation conference must take place within 10 teaching staff member working days after the observation (though it is recommended within 3 days of the lesson in order to provide timely feedback).

> [Joint Exhibit 61, pp. 19-20, 23]

BloomBoard was introduced as > a fully-functional performance evaluation and professional development management platform. BloomBoard is a web-based tool that allows schools to keep track of goal-setting documents, short and long observations, mid-years, and annual evaluations all in one place online. Every teacher and school administrator in the district will have a BloomBoard account and will be logging in to the system on a regular basis [Joint Exhibit 61, p., A.10].

BloomBoard also automatically alerts teachers to scheduled conferences, such as a pre-observation conference with an evaluator [Tr., pp. 144-146].

Teacher Williams was assigned to a first-grade class, the principal testified:

> She told me [in SY 2012-2013] she wanted to remain at 13th Avenue, and she was interested in an upper grade, and she asked me if she could teach second grade. We didn't have any vacancies for second grade. I had some for first grade, and I said, "It would be great if you could go to first grade."... [H]er classroom was a beautiful classroom that was set up. It was a classroom that was set up that if I had my child, just bringing my child in was very warm, engaging, and that's something that was amazing that she was able to do, bulletin boards, you know, set up beautiful for children, and really, they were great. Hearing her ask that question, I said, you know, "I want you to go to first grade," and she said she wanted to go to first grade as well. [Tr., pp. 45-48].

Table B, below, lists observations and evaluations of the teacher during SY 2013-2014. Because there were four changes of assignment during the year, as well as a workers' compensation absence and other periods of disability, those factors are included for context.

05/15/14	Annual Evaluation and Post-Observation Conference for April 30	Principal Williams	Ineffective	Joint 16

An observation was conducted on September 19, 2013, by Vice- Principal Rose, who was responsible for the first grade. Evaluated on the first four competencies, the teacher received six points, which amounted to an overall rating of Partially Effective. A post-observation conference was held the same day. When the vice-principal and the teacher signed the evaluation, on September 23, the teacher was placed in a revised CAP. The program became more focused, the principal said, because the district "got smarter...it really talks about what are the action steps that you're going to use in order to support the teacher" [Tr., p. 55]:

> [W]e're looking at what the teacher's action steps are going to be, and how will the administrator support her in achieving those at that time, and what will be the metrics that will be used. So we learned that it is better to be more concise, because if we give a teacher that we know requires a lot of support so many things to work on, she's not able to identify what the primary areas is that she needs to work on, so that's why we developed another CAP in the beginning of the school year [Tr., p. 54].

A second formal observation was conducted on October 22 by Vice-Principal Rose. The teacher was awarded only four points, which translated into an overall rating of Ineffective [Joint Exhibit 11]. The teacher attended a post-observation conference with the principal and vice-principal on October 28. A few days later (November 1), the teacher requested in writing a transfer to another school:

> The school is not a good "fit" for me. I am unable to receive a fair and objective evaluation. This has now become uncomfortable for me and my career. In addition, my 504 accommodations have not full[y] been met at my school and has caused a physical setback in my foot healing completely.
> [Joint Exhibit 31]

Neither of the two administrators was immediately aware of the request, because transfer is normally a human resources function of the central office. Principal Williams said, "I was not informed that [the teacher] was requesting a transfer from the school. She never asked or said anything to me to release her from the school at any time" [Tr., 84].

Principal Williams described the support given to the teacher:

> [W]e had embedded once a week professional development and coaching, where they actually came into classrooms and gave feedback to teachers on the different areas where they needed to be improved upon....But my master teacher would go in and offer supports, and also...do demonstration lessons for the first grade teacher.... She did demonstration lessons in the new CK curriculum.... Core knowledge curriculum, showing them how they can become more effective in the rubric. So as a school, we identified there were two competencies we needed to work on as it pertained to teacher performance. We needed to work on questions and tasks, rigorous tasks for our students in all areas, and then also how do we provide feedback and ensure that students are mastering the objective and mastering the grade level content that you're providing for them. So at this particular point, my coach went in, Miss Rose went in to observe and give support on things that she needed to do. At this time, there were different things that were reported to me and different things that I saw. It was reported to me that they would walk into a classroom and Miss Williams was on the phone. Children were running all over the classroom. They were not engaged in a morning meeting, which we've told all teachers that your morning meeting needs to be complete by nine o'clock. We've opened the school earlier so that breakfast didn't take away from morning meeting, and it was an opportunity for teachers and students to bond and learn about each other [Tr., pp. 68-70].

On November 18 the teacher was involuntarily reassigned to "provide social studies and science to two first-grade classes" [Tr., p. 67]. One of the classes was taught by Ms. Gooden, the school's math coach or master teacher. The reassignment was necessary, the principal said, "because there was no instruction going on for the first graders, and we needed to act quickly until we were able to get someone in that particular classroom at that time" [Tr., p. 68].

On December 5, the principal visited the classroom that Teacher Williams shared with Ms. Gooden [Joint Exhibit 34]:

> I observed Miss Williams sitting at a desk, working in a box of some sort, and...some children were watching a movie, some kids were running around the classroom. When I came in, I asked Miss Gooden, I said, "Miss Gooden, are you leading the lesson at this time?" She said, "No, I've just pulled this child here for independent practice so that they can complete their work." When I asked Miss

> Williams, she said to me, "Oh no, we made the decision," referring to her and Miss Gooden, "that we were going to split the class and I was going to teach my lesson and Miss Gooden was going to teach her lesson."...I asked Miss Gooden if this was the decision that they came to based upon what she shared with me. Miss Gooden said absolutely not, that she was providing a small group instruction. Miss Williams never said anything to her about splitting the class. So at this point, first off, all teachers know that we do not watch any movies, particularly Christmas movies.... I've said it at numerous staff meetings. I've sent emails that that is not effective practices in our building. Children can watch movies at home, they do not watch it at school, unless there is a connection that allows the teacher to provide a snippet of five minutes or less to connect to the lesson. In this case, the students were watching the movie and they were not engaged in a lesson at all at this particular time.... I wrote her up for neglect of duty because she was not instructing.... I wrote her up for conduct unbecoming for lying to the principal, because when I come in and I ask you what's taking place and you tell me that, oh, you and the other teacher made a decision to split, that is conduct unbecoming. You do not lie. And this would be the second time that she had lied to me about something she was doing inside her classroom. The first time was with the email, when she said she was doing -- she was checking -- she was doing attendance, when I could clearly see that her email was up on the screen...That was during one of my walk-throughs in the morning, and I did not write her up for that. But now this would have been the second time where she had lied to me, not telling the truth [Tr., pp. 84-86].[11]

On December 10, an e-mail from Ms. Rose to Principal Williams reflected another change in the teacher's assignment. Attached was > the revised schedule for the 8th grade class that includes Ms Marlene Davis and Ms Rinita Williams. Both teachers will be assisting the lead teachers (Clanton and Ferrara) during the designated block with small group instruction: guided reading groups and project-based learning groups. Both teachers have signed for and have copy of their new schedule and will begin tomorrow 12/11/13.

>
> [Respondent Exhibit 36.a]

Although Teacher Williams lacked certification to work with eighth-grade students, she was assigned two periods a day in that capacity [Respondent Exhibit 36.b].

On December 11, the first day of the new assignment and a new schedule, the principal conducted an unannounced observation. The principal found the teacher giving a science lesson, involving beetles. The teacher had to > send the students to another classroom to go get the beetles and bring them back so she could provide this instruction to the students at this time, so it's almost last minute. I know I'm supposed to be doing social studies, but I'm not doing that. You know what, I'm going to pull this science lesson so let me send someone over. That's what's lacking and why this is not effective. But she starts off having the students list some of the things that beetles have, and the students were instructed to copy off of the chart paper. She mentions a couple of vocabulary words during that particular time. Some students drew beetles. Some students played with the dead beetles during that particular time. But at the end of the lesson, what did they take away from what they learned? What new did you teach them? What was the whole focus and premise of the lesson based upon what you were supposed to plan for them, that they're able to take away? And that is not evident in this lesson [Tr., p . 98].

[11] The teacher was never charged with conduct unbecoming.

Other deficiencies, according to the principal, were the absence of an agenda on the board and the lack of a lesson plan. As a result of the observation, the teacher received six points, which amounted to a rating of "Partially Effective."

Teachers were expected to post lesson plans on a specially designated website that the principal termed > an opportunity for the staff, for me as an administrator to observe what's taking place, and to kind of have an idea what this teacher's planning and how she's going to deliver her lessons. So I can give feedback and support her on what things she should change or what things that she's doing well. There are no lesson plans that are submitted [by Teacher Williams]. I can go and find her name, click on it, look for the date, can't find a lesson plan for Miss Williams [Tr., p. 93].

The principal could not recall seeing plans from the teacher in the previous two years, even though she had scheduled sessions to help her prepare them [Tr., pp. 94-95]. However, evaluators Rose and Gilliam testified that the teacher did in fact provide them with lesson plans [Tr., pp. 561, 800-801].

Another observation was scheduled for December 19 [Plaintiff Exhibit 5]. Ms. Rose testified that she had given the teacher through BloomBoard about a month's notice of a pre-observation conference on December 18. Ms. Rose received an e-mail reply, "saying she did not want me. She did not feel comfortable with me...observing her any more" [Tr., p. 477]. Neither the conference nor the observation was rescheduled.

A conference was held on January 13, 2014, to discuss the December 11 observation [Joint Exhibit 12]. On January 31 the teacher met with Principal Williams and Vice-Principal Rose for a mid-year review and rating [Joint Exhibit 13]. She was rated Ineffective. On March 3, the teacher was injured by a student in the eighth-grade classroom and missed almost two months of work while recovering.

On April 30, the day that she returned to work after the lengthy absence, the teacher was observed by the principal—unannounced—in a fourth-grade guided reading class. The teacher was rated Ineffective at the post-observation conference on May 15 [Joint Exhibit 14], and on that occasion her annual evaluation rating was declared to be the same.

After her annual evaluation, the teacher was observed on another occasion by Ms. Jackson, an outside Peer Validator (evaluator) and rated Ineffective [Joint Exhibit 15]. The report form was computer generated by Bloomboard and bore no signature. Ms. Jackson did not testify, and her rating played no part in the summative evaluation, according to the principal. [Tr., pp. 139-142].

DISCUSSION

TeachNJ was signed into law on August 6, 2012, and became effective on August 12. AchieveNJ, the procedure for evaluating teachers followed. When fully implemented, the legal framework created by these enactments would require a superintendent to file a charge of inefficiency if a rating of Partially Effective in one year is followed by a rating of Ineffective in the following year. The new scheme diminished a tenured teacher's allowable defenses against removal and provided for a forum of arbitral review whose scope was relatively narrow,[12] as outlined in a state publication:[13]

> TEACHNJ clearly defines the criteria that arbitrators may consider in rendering their decisions. Specifically, the arbitrator may only consider the following four aspects:
>
> - Whether the evaluation failed to adhere to the evaluation process.
> - There is a mistake of fact in the evaluation.
> - The charges would not have been brought but for considerations of political affiliation, nepotism, union activity, discrimination, or other conduct prohibited by State or federal law.
> - The district's actions were arbitrary and capricious.
>
> [TEACHNJ Guide (Updated 6-14), p. 6]

In order to resolve this dispute, the arbitrator has addressed below the three salient issues.

I. Is a Charge of Inefficiency in SY 2012-2013 Valid Under Section 25?

The teacher whose removal is being sought received ratings of Partially Effective and Ineffective in SY 2012-2013 and SY 2013-2014 respectively. The district maintains that filing a charge thus was mandatory. The teacher, however, denied that performance in SY 2012-2013 could be a basis for removal, since the new evaluation system was not yet fully formed. Poor ratings during a trial period should not count, the teacher maintains.

Determining procedural rules for removal under a complex statute has been a considerable task. Many aspects of the new system were ill-defined, challenging stakeholders to devise a suitable scheme for evaluation. At various points in the transition to the new framework, DOE has attempted to deal with ambiguities by issuing "guidance"documents and delivering less formal advice by means of websites, letters to districts, and press releases.

[12] Tenure cases previously were decided by administrative law judges.

[13] The teacher noted: "This procedure is substantially different from the procedure for filing tenure charges alleging 'incapacity,' 'conduct unbecoming,' or 'other just cause,' which is set forth in N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16 and N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.1(b). Letter Brief, October 10. 2014, fn. 2.

Local approaches to evaluation that would be consistent with the law have been fostered. Stakeholders in each district were encouraged to create Teaching Practice Evaluation Instruments. A three-year, statewide effort was planned, beginning before TeachNJ was even enacted. It involved a "pilot year" (SY 2011-2012) for some school districts, including Newark. Pilot status was announced by DOE in a press release on September 1, 2011:

> 10 districts have qualified to participate in Excellent Educators for New Jersey (EE4NJ) teacher evaluation pilot program over the course of the 2011-12 school year.... An eleventh District, Newark, will also participate in the pilot through a separate grant.
> [District Submission, October 3, 2014]

Larisa Shambaugh, Executive Director of Strategic Initiatives in the Newark district's Talent Office, oversees implementation of the process to "evaluate the teaching performance of NPS teachers," according to the requirements of TEACHNJ [Id.]. The certification issued by Ms. Shambaugh on September 29, 2014, stated: "In the 2011-12 school year, seven NPS schools participated in a 'pilot' of a new teacher evaluation system."

The parties agree that removal was not to be based on evaluations during the pilot year (SY 2011-2012). The dispute focuses on the next school year (2012-2013), when the legislature and DOE were still shaping the new system. In that period, minimum standards for evaluations were supplemented. The DOE Evaluation Pilot Advisory Committee (EPAC), a group of stakeholders who joined in a consensus-based process, was tasked with defining "best practice" under TEACHNJ in order to guide each district in refining its evaluation procedure. The arbitrator takes judicial notice of EPAC's Interim Report (2011-2012), which specified the goals of the project:[14]

> Based on the recommendations offered in the March 2011 Educator Effectiveness Task Force Report, the Department launched a teacher evaluation pilot program in the fall of 2011. This project was designed to enable the experiences of pilot districts to inform the development and implementation of the evaluation system to be launched statewide. Having successfully applied for grants through a competitive Notice of Grant Opportunity (NGO), 10 districts were selected to participate in the pilot program, splitting $1.1 million in funds. Newark Public Schools also participated in the pilot using funding provided by another grant. In addition, 19 schools receiving federal School Improvement Grant (SIG) funds were required to participate.[15]

[14] The interim report was cited [at p. 5] in the final EPAC report (2013), which was submitted in argument by the district on October 10, 2014 [Exhibit C].

[15] Seven NPS Schools were listed as SIG Schools: Newark Central High School, Dayton Street School, Newark Vocational High School, Malcolm X. Shabazz High School, Brick Avon Academy, Barringer High School, and West Side High School [Appendix A, p. 29].

All participating districts were instructed to adopt the following elements of a teacher evaluation system during the 2012-13 school year:

- Thorough training of evaluators and teachers in effective teaching practices based on professional standards;
- Annual teacher evaluations that include multiple observations and result in clear, actionable feedback for improvement;
- Multiple measures of teacher practice and student performance, proven to be valid and reliable, with student academic progress or growth as a key measure;
- A summative rating that combines the scores of all the measures of teaching practice and student achievement;
- Four summative rating categories that clearly differentiate levels of performance; and
- A link from the evaluation to professional development opportunities that meet the needs of educators at all levels of practice [p. 7].

The EPAC report acknowledges that building a proper evaluation mechanism would be time-consuming and that full implementation would not be achieved until 2013-2014. Under the heading "Extension of the Pilot Program and Implementation Timeline," the report recorded that > EPAC members provided ongoing input on pilot implementation and preparation for statewide rollout. Several concerns surfaced repeatedly in the course of the year. These included local districts' capacity for meeting heightened expectations for educator evaluation, broad stakeholder input into local evaluation decisions, and the timing of full implementation. In early spring 2012, the Department decided that the timeline for statewide implementation of the new evaluation system should be extended. In addition, the Department decided that a second year of pilot implementation would be valuable to ensure the success of the new evaluation model. Both of these decisions were codified in the TEACHNJ Law enacted in the summer of 2012. According to Peter Shulman, Assistant Commissioner, Division of Teacher and Leader Effectiveness, this course correction was made in large part due to the feedback received via the EPAC from pilot districts and EPAC members. The decision to extend (and expand) the pilot program into 2012-13 and push back full implementation to 2013-14 was met with universal acclaim by EPAC members. One commented that she was "impressed when the EPAC pressed for the extended year and the Department took the recommendation [Emphasis added, pp. 21-22]."

The report's conclusion offered the following caution:

> While the theory behind the evaluation initiative is sound, it is clear from the deep work of the EPAC and the Cohort One pilot districts that the task of bringing these goals to fruition is difficult and complex. Even with an extended implementation timeline, an extra year of piloting, and additional districts engaged in trial runs of a new system, this work is just beginning and promises to present challenges for years to come [Emphasis added, p. 28].

By December 31, 2012 (SY 2012-2013), all public school districts, including NPS, had to develop and obtain approval for the rubric, which is the > specific tool for use in implementing the Framework for Effective Teaching in observations or evaluations. Depending on the rubric, it may include competencies, indicators, and descriptors that specify what each competency and indicator looks like in practice at different levels of performance.

[NPS Framework for Effective Teaching: A Guidebook for Teachers and Administrators, 2012-2013, Appendix A: Glossary of Terms, p. 30]

In short, SY 2012-13 was seen as a time for refining and establishing the new evaluation procedure. A variety of deadlines were set to occur during the course of that school year for

- finalizing evaluation rubrics (December 31, 2012—extended until January 31, 2013, for some districts)
- promulgating regulations (March, 2013)
- putting regulations into effect (October, 2013)

EPAC's final report noted: "The Department recognizes that statewide implementation of AchieveNJ in SY13-14 is just one step on the path to improving student achievement in New Jersey" [p. 43]. This sentiment was echoed in the DOE Guide to the TEACHNJ Act: "The law mandates statewide implementation of stronger, more rigorous evaluation systems starting in the 2013-2014 school year" [TEACHNJ Guide (Updated 6-14) p. 3].

The district maintains that it had taken advantage of SY 2011-2012, designated as a pilot year, to fine-tune the new evaluation system. By the summer of 2012, according to Ms. Shambaugh, the evaluation instrument (the rubric) was complete, evaluators were trained in its application, and a guidebook for teachers and administrators had been made available. In September the district applied for DOE approval, which was granted the next month [Shambaugh Certification, September 29, 2014, Exhibit C]. Therefore, the district argues, its program was not merely preliminary but fully functional when the teacher was evaluated in SY 2012-2013. The district considers that the ratings were valid grounds for removal under Section 25.

Nevertheless, in a well-reasoned decision involving Newark schools (Whitehurst), Arbitrator Simmelkjaer carefully analyzed the statutory language and its context, concluding that SY 2012-2013 "was intended as a test year in preparation for the 2013-14 school year wherein all tenure related issues, including the establishment of the criteria for completing evaluations and observations...would be implemented" [at p. 39]. He noted that state officials had described SY 2012-2013 as "a planning and capacity building year" [at p. 46]. The undersigned arbitrator concurs with the Simmelkjaer analysis.

This decision and others in the same vein are supported by the foregoing review of the historical record, which demonstrates that the state's educational planners strove to introduce the new tenure removal framework incrementally over a period of years, allowing stakeholders to assess the innovations and make necessary adjustments. The EPAC report cautioned districts against rushing the process and encouraged them to first improve metrics for judging teacher performance. Each district was empowered to develop its own approach, adapting the law to conditions on the ground. Experimentation did not necessarily end with SY 2011-2012, the initial pilot year.

The wisdom of incrementalism was evident in the deviations from the evaluation process that marred the tenure removal effort at the 13th Avenue/MLK School in SY 2012-2013. In opting to begin the charge in that year, the school clearly acted prematurely. It was in the throes of reorganization, striving to meld two failed schools into a single coherent entity. Students were performing poorly, and there was turnover of leadership.

Teachers were recruited hurriedly and thrust into conditions that bordered on chaotic. They were abruptly handed assignments for which they were ill-prepared. Key curriculum materials were not even shared with teachers until mid-January—that is, after the observations of Teacher Williams had been completed. She received no more support than other teachers, according to the principal, even though a 90-day improvement plan had been imposed on her.

Although not required by regulation until the next school year, pre-observation conferences and announced observations were regarded as important by the district for assisting struggling teachers. Yet the benefits of these measures were denied to Teacher Williams. The circumstances thus demonstrate that the school was not ready to properly carry out its responsibilities under the new tenure removal framework in SY 2012-2013.

The year was also marked by other irregularities, including the following:

- All the observations of the Teacher Williams were incomplete, were labeled draft or near final draft. In the annual evaluation she is referred to in one place by the wrong name [Joint Exhibits 2-6].
- Academic performance data to benchmark student learning was lacking.

II. Did the Evaluation in SY 2013-2014 Meet the Requirements of Section 25?

The arbitrator's interim award retained jurisdiction for the purpose of resolving any and all disputes regarding the tenure charges brought against the teacher by SOSD of Newark for SY 2013-2014. The teacher's evaluation rating for that year was Ineffective. Having provided the parties with a full and fair opportunity to present evidence and argument, the arbitrator finds that the evaluation failed to adhere to the prescribed process in SY 2013-2014, because it was replete with arbitrary and capricious actions that materially affected the outcome by placing the teacher at a distinct disadvantage.

Lack of an Announced Observation. AchieveNJ mandates at least one announced observation each year, and the district's framework emphasizes the utility of announced observations for struggling teachers. The record demonstrates that announced observation provides crucial support in planning and executing a teacher's responsibilities. Yet the principal acknowledged the lack of an announced observation for Teacher Williams in SY 2013-2014.

A pre-conference had been scheduled for December 18, 2013, but it was cancelled because the teacher had filed various complaints against Ms. Rose, who had been her evaluator. There was no attempt to reschedule a pre-conference or an announced observation [Tr., pp. 270, 689], and no satisfactory rationale for the omission has emerged.

The district offered two questionable explanations. First, it asserted that the teacher sought the cancellation [Brief, p. 22], but she merely objected to Ms. Rose as the evaluator. By the time Principal Williams conducted the unannounced observation on December 11, she was aware of the cancellation; nothing precluded her from conducting the pre-conference herself on December 18 and following with the announced observation scheduled for December 19 [Tr., 479, Plaintiff Exhibit 5].

Second, the principal pointed to the teacher's attendance record, which she regarded as substandard.[16] She contended that persistent absenteeism ruled out rescheduling of the pre-conference and announced observation. She testified that on the day the teacher > was scheduled for the announced observation, she was absent, so there was no way we could conduct an announced observation if you are absent on the day we're telling you we're coming to observe you. The other thing is, too, is that she had quite a few absences throughout the school year. So it was pretty much we had to—you know, when she was there was the opportunity when we had to come in and work and give feedback during that particular time [Tr., p. 167].

In recommending to Superintendent Anderson that both the initial tenure charge and the second charge be brought, Principal Williams sent letters (identical and undated) that included the following sentences:

> Ms. Williams did not receive an opportunity to have a pre-conference prior to an observation because of her absences. Every time a pre-observation conference was scheduled she would be absent on that date [Joint Exhibit 1 and Attachment one in the second tenure charge submission].

[16] Points were deducted for absences and tardiness in the teacher's annual Summative Evaluation.

Among the teacher's interrogatories, which were certified by Principal Williams in November, 2014, is a somewhat different explanation:

> 9. How many announced observations (short or long) did Respondent receive during the 2012-2013 and 2013-14 school years, respectively?

> Answer: ....The School District responds: Vice Principal Simone Rose scheduled an announced observation for Respondent for December 18, 2013. The observation did not occur because Respondent objected to Ms. Rose evaluating her since Respondent had filed a complaint against Ms. Rose.
>
> [Respondent Exhibit 38]

The district argued:

> As to 2013-14, an announced observation was scheduled for December 18, 2013 but was cancelled at Respondent's request and was not rescheduled. (V. Williams, T270; Rose, T479.) It would be unreasonable to conclude that a lack of one announced observation was arbitrary or capricious, or materially affected her summative evaluation for that year.
> [Petitioner Brief, p. 22]

Nevertheless, the shifting reasons for ignoring the teacher's right to at least one announced observation for the year are less than compelling. The notion that it was not worthwhile to schedule a pre-conference and announced observation because the teacher would be absent is presumptuous, to say the least. Given the assignment changes to which the teacher was forced to adapt during the year, the possibility that the observation would have significantly improved her evaluation results cannot be lightly dismissed. Eliminating the prescribed observation must be viewed as a serious failure to adhere to the evaluation process .

Unannounced Observation on Return from Extended Leave. The teacher returned from almost two months of leave on April 30, 2014, and was greeted with an unannounced observation early that day. A teacher normally could expect to be allowed time to discover what had happened in her absence and determine the priorities for resuming her workload. An observation at the very moment she returns from a lengthy absence seems calculated to catch a teacher before she has re-acclimated herself to the classroom and gotten her bearings. In this instance, the teacher discovered that her teaching materials were not organized in the way she left them, and the classroom appeared > almost like ransacked, because the teacher who I shared it with, she had gone out on a family leave like weeks before, so the classroom was open, and it was just being utilized. I don't even know what was happening while I was gone, because when I came back, it was just me in the classroom, and there was just stuff everywhere [Tr., p. 679].

Moreover, although the district contends that she was never evaluated while teaching eighth grade, the teacher has argued persuasively in her post-hearing brief that she was indeed rated for that ability:

> In the certified answers to interrogatories provided by Principal Williams in this case (R-38), Principal Williams claimed that although Ms. Williams was not certified to teach 8th grade, "Respondent was never observed in Room 330 for the purposes of evaluation." (R-38 at 11, Answer to interrogatory no. 21). However, this is not true. In Ms. Williams' annual summative evaluation Principal Williams stated the following under "evidence based growth areas" in connection with Ms. Williams' rating for Competency 3:
>
> Ms. Williams provided guided reading instruction to students in 8th grade, and was not clear with expectations to students. As a result, students walked out of class, ran away from her while she transitioned them to her classroom. There were no consequences established with students, and behavior earning system was not used or established with students. As a result of norms not followed and established by teacher and students, classroom community was negative.
>
> (J-16A at 5). As a result, Ms. Williams was rated "partially effective" in this competency. Id. Accordingly, and contrary to Principal Williams' claim, Ms. Williams was evaluated in connection with her instruction of the 8th grade students, despite the fact that she was not even certified to teach this grade.
> [Brief, at pp. 13-14]

The annual evaluation for SY 2013-2014 also was deficient because it was not based on student achievement data. The administrators gave conflicting testimony about which data could be utilized. The principal suggested that data from her SY 2012-2013 kindergarten students could somehow provide a basis for evaluating student mastery the next year. But there was only one student in common, not many, as the principal asserted [Tr., p. 824]. Finally, as in SY 2012-2013, extraordinary support from the school, other than the CAP, never materialized. The reassignments actually kept her from other sources of support: the accompanying change of preparation period prevented her from attending Turnaround for Children workshops and other professional development activities provided to her grade-level colleagues [Tr., 691-692].

Multiple Involuntary Re-Assignments. During SY 2013-2014, the teacher received four classroom re-assignments, involving various age groups and subjects. The most detrimental to the teacher was the assignment, beginning on December 11, to teach eighth-grade math, even though she lacked certification for that grade and considered herself ill-equipped to deal with older students who chronically misbehave. In the class she was asked to teach, the students were so lacking in self-control that they required escorts to the bathroom. Sadly, her concerns were validated by the subsequent physical injury she suffered at the hands of a student. The principal manifestly believed the teacher to be exaggerating her injuries, even though they qualified for workers' compensation, and regarded her a malingerer, despite a lack of concrete evidence. Those groundless views contributed to an unfavorable impression of the teacher's abilities and efforts.

An unannounced observation in December, 2013, is emblematic of the district's prejudicial approach. The principal faulted the teacher for not putting December 12 on the board for a first-grade class. That date could not have been correct, however, because the teacher's attendance record shows that she was absent on December 12, as the principal conceded in her testimony [Tr., p. 226, Joint Exhibit 39]. The observation must have taken place on December 11, the day she learned of the re-assignment . It was the principal who mistook the date but the teacher who was blamed for poor performance.

It is noteworthy that, on a day when she was already under stress from an unexpected change of assignment to a higher grade, she was also subjected to an unannounced observation in a lower-grade class. The new arrangement entailed a physical obstacle: her two eighth grade classes (Period Three and Period Six) were on a different floor than the lower grades, and her ankle was injured. Although she was allowed to use the elevator as a disability accommodation, changing classrooms quickly was difficult.

The post-conference for this observation did not occur until January 13, so that shortly after gaining the feedback her assignment changed again. On January 15 she was ordered to teach guided reading to four different grades, including two eighth-grade periods. As a result, the mid-year summary evaluation (January 30) occurred amid drastic disruption of her schedule. She testified > [E]very time I was getting ready to get into like a groove of teaching the kids, getting to know them, starting to get the day rolling, I was immediately switched to another role, so I never got an opportunity to master or be effective, I should say, in that particular role because it seemed like a couple weeks, a couple months later, I was changed into another role. So I pretty much felt like I was just—just out there, kind of just feeling my way through; you know, along with other things that were happening at the same time. But focusing on what you just asked me, I just felt like I never got a chance to master—to become the effective or highly effective teacher that I feel that I am capable of being [Tr., pp. 678-679].

III. Can the Charge Be Amended and Brought Under Section 8?

In Whitehurst, Arbitrator Simmelkjaer declined to consider under Section 8 a charge of inefficiency that had been brought originally under Section 25, because the two provisions were asymmetrical in their purpose and procedure:

> [H]ad the Legislature intended that a teacher charged with inefficiency for two consecutive years, with ineffective or partially effective ratings on their annual summative ratings, be evaluated utilizing two different and asymmetric evaluation procedures—one consistent with Section 25 of > TEACHNJ and the other consistent with Section 8, N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16— it had the wherewithal to provide the appropriate statutory language. In the absence of such language, the Arbitrator is compelled to dismiss the charge [at p. 50].

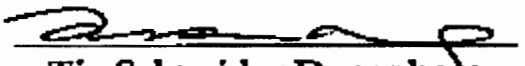
Similarly, Arbitrator Brent held in Thompson, another Newark case, that he could not "permit a charging party to add a new cause of action that was not included as part of the original tenure charge" [at p. 6], because "[p]leading two separate causes of action, each invoking different standards of proof, requires adequate prior notice." He reasoned that it would be a denial of due process to allow the district to "materially increase the exposure of the Respondent to culpability and penalty by adding a cause of action during the hearing phase of a tenure charge proceeding, and certainly not after the record has been closed" [at p. 7]. The undersigned arbitrator agrees with these holdings and therefore must reject the concept of rehabilitating[17] the charge as an Article 8 claim.

CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed above, and after considering the arguments and the entire record, the arbitrator concludes that all charges against the teacher must be dismissed.



Tia Schneider Denenberg
Arbitrator

DATED: March 30, 2015

Re: Center for Education v. New Jersey Department of Education, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 14525-14, Agency Dkt. No. 280-9/14.

Dear Counsel:

I have reviewed the materials submitted by the Department of Education on March 27, 2015 that include a request for interlocutory review of ALJ Schuster's Order of March 26, 2015 requiring the Department to disclose certain documents, and a request for emergent relief in the above-captioned matter.[1]

Upon review, I find that any further proceedings in this matter shall be stayed pending review of the Department's request for interlocutory review. Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-14.10 (h):

> An agency head's determination to review interlocutorily an order or ruling shall not delay the scheduling or conduct of hearings, unless a postponement is necessary due to special requirements of the case, because of probable prejudice, or for other good cause. Either the presiding judge or the agency head may order a stay of the proceedings, either on their own or upon application.

[1] Pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.6(d), once a matter has been transmitted to the OAL, any subsequent motion filed with the Commissioner "shall" be forwarded "for determination by the OAL in accordance with applicable rules of the OAL." Accordingly, no decision will be made at the present time on the motion for emergent relief by the undersigned.

In light of the fact that the documents that are the subject of ALJ Shuster's March 26, 2015 Order have already been released to the Center for Education, it is necessary to stay the proceedings to prevent any potential prejudice that may be derived from the entry of the those documents into evidence at the next scheduled hearing date of April 1, 2015. A determination as to whether the Department's request for interlocutory review will be entertained cannot be made until the request is evaluated after both parties have an opportunity to submit the materials outlining their respective arguments, and the Assistant Commissioner who will be making that determination has until April 6, 2015 to do so. Therefore, due to the special requirements in this case, it is necessary to preserve the status of the case pending the outcome of the request for interlocutory review.

Accordingly, this matter is hereby stayed pending the review of the Department's request for interlocutory review.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Sincerely,

Peter Shulman

WHEREAS, M.B.W. o/b/o N.H.W. (hereinafter "Petitoners") live within the jurisdiction of the Rancocas Valley Regional High School District Board of Education (hereinafter "District")., and

WHEREAS, the District is the local educational authority with the responsibility of providing Petitioners with a thorough and efficient education; and

WHEREAS, Petitioners have filed a petition of appeal before the Commissioner of Education regarding the District's discipline of Petitioners, and

WHEREAS, the District and Petitioners have engaged in settlement discussions; and

NOW, THEREFORE, the Parties desire to settle the Proceedings in an amicable way, they hereby agree as follows:

1. N.H.W. will be placed at the Burlington County Alternative High School (BCA) for the remainder of the 2014-2015 school year.

2. At the end of the 2014-2015 school year, the District shall hold a meeting with N.H.W.'s mother, M.B.W., to discuss N.H.W.'s placement for the 2015-2016 school year, including the possibility of having N.H.W. return to the Rancocas Valley Regional High School if he does well behaviorally at BCA.

3. Respondent and Petitioners each hereby verify, affirm, and represent that they have had the opportunity to discuss the terms of this Agreement with counsel and that they are fully satisfied with the advice and representation provided by their counsel. Both Parties fully acknowledge that they are entering into this agreement knowingly, freely, voluntarily, without coercion and not under the influence of anything or anyone.

4. In exchange for the consideration set forth herein, the Petitioners dismiss, release, and discharge the District from any and all claims asserted, and which could have been asserted, whether known or unknown, in the Proceedings, arising out of acts or omissions occurring through the date of this Agreement, including, but not limited to, claims concerning an alleged denial of a free and appropriate public education, special education services, homebound instruction, independent evaluation, out of district placement, discrimination, inappropriate discipline, reimbursement for educational costs, reimbursement for medical/counseling services, compensatory education, and damages or injuries to N.H.W. As used in this Agreement, the term "District" means: the Rancocas Valley High School Regional School District Board of Education, its current or former elected or appointed officials, administrators, employees, attorneys, agents, servants, representatives, predecessors and successors, insurance carriers, and all other persons or entities for whom any of the above have been or may be legally responsible.

5. Petitioners represent that they have sole authority, as N.H.W.'s parents, to enter into this Agreement.

6. The Parties mutually waive any claims for attorney's fees with the understanding that each Party shall be responsible for their own fees and costs, including physicians', experts', and attorneys' fees and costs, incurred in connection with this dispute, to the extent applicable. No party shall be deemed a "prevailing party."

7. This Agreement shall be interpreted, enforced, and governed under the laws of the State of New Jersey. The language of all parts of this Agreement shall in all cases be construed as a whole, according to its fair meaning, and not strictly for or against any Party. The Parties agree and acknowledge that this Agreement is the product of mutual draftsmanship and any rule of law requiring that it be construed against the drafter shall not apply.

8. This Agreement constitutes the entire agreement of the Parties with respect to the subject matter hereof, and supersedes all prior written or oral and all contemporaneous oral agreements, understandings and negotiations. CHARLOTTE EVANS,	:
PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – employed for many years as a teacher in respondent's school district, prior to her promotion to the position of "acting vice principal" in April 2011 – filed an appeal asserting that her tenure status gave her entitlement to other vice principal positions in the district after her position was eliminated in a reduction in force (RIF) in June 2013. Petitioner contended that the district later hired non-tenured candidates for vice principal positions at other district schools, and claimed she should have been offered one of these position because of her tenure status. The respondent filed a motion for summary decision, asserting that petitioner had never earned tenure in the position of vice principal. Petitioner never filed an answer to the respondent's motion.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there are no material facts at issue herein, and the matter is ripe for summary decision; petitioner has been employed by the Board since 1998, but was only promoted to the position of vice principal in April 2011; petitioner did not obtain the necessary provisional certificate for the position of vice principal until May 2012; petitioner's vice principal position was eliminated as part of a RIF in June 2013; petitioner did not complete the requirements for tenure in the position of vice principal, as she did not serve the required two year residency. Accordingly, the ALJ granted the Board's motion for summary decision and dismissed the case.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that the petitioner has not proven the allegations in her appeal. Accordingly, the summary decision was granted to the respondent and the petition was dismissed.

PETITIONER,	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
V.	:	DECISION
STATE-OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN, CAMDEN COUNTY,	:
RESPONDENT.	:

The controversy now before the Commissioner was instituted by way of a petition alleging that petitioner's tenure rights were violated when respondent abolished the vice-principal position she had held, reassigned her to a teaching position, and hired "less senior" personnel to serve in vice-principal positions in other district schools. Respondent answered by way of a motion for summary decision, which motion petitioner never answered.

In its motion, respondent alleged that petitioner had never earned tenure in the position of vice-principal. More specifically, respondent contended that although petitioner had been issued a provisional certificate in May of 2012 -- which allowed her to serve as a vice-principal – she did not complete the two-year "residency" which is a prerequisite to earning a standard certificate. See, N.J.A.C. 6A:9-12.5(d). In fact, she served only one year in the position after she obtained her provisional certificate, which is insufficient to obtain tenure. See, N.J.S.A. 18A:28-6; Spiewack v. Board of Educ. of Rutherford, 90 N.J. 63, 73 (1982). Having earned no tenure in the vice-principal position in respondent's district, petitioner had no greater rights to obtain open vice-principal positions than did other qualified, non-tenured applicants.

Taking the facts set forth in the petition as true, and noting that no papers were submitted by petitioner to rebut the facts recited in respondent's motion, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) assigned to the case in the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) found that the facts supported respondent's position that petitioner had never completed the requirements for standard certification for the position of vice-principal as she had served in the position only one year after obtaining her provisional certificate. Thus, she had not achieved tenure in that position and could not claim the benefits which attend same. The ALJ concluded that respondent was entitled to summary disposition, and the petition should be dismissed.

Upon review of the record and Initial Decision of the OAL, the Commissioner concurs that petitioner has not proven the allegations in her appeal. Accordingly, summary disposition is granted to respondent and the petition is dismissed with prejudice.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[1]

Robert M. Schwartz, Esq., for petitioner

Edward D. Milavsky, Esq., for respondent (Brown and Connery, attorneys)

Record Closed: January 21, 2015 Decided: February 25, 2015

BEFORE ROBERT BINGHAM II, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

On November 21, 2013, petitioner Charlotte Evans, whose position was abolished by respondent, filed a petition of appeal with the Department of Education ("DOE") asserting that her tenure status gives her an entitlement to the position of vice principal that respondent filled with non-tenured staff. The DOE transmitted this matter as a contested case to the Office of Administrative Law ("OAL"), where it was filed on January 7, 2014. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. On February 4, 2014, respondent filed a motion for summary decision. In the absence of any opposition filed by petitioner, a telephone conference was held on May 8, 2014, followed by a letter from petitioner's attorney, dated May 9, 2014, indicating that despite respondent's motion, petitioner did not wish to withdraw her appeal. By letter order dated May 16, 2014, petitioner was to file a response to respondent's summary-decision motion no later than May 23, 2014, and a hearing date was scheduled for November 18, 2014.

By letter dated October 29, 2014, respondent confirmed that no valid opposition to its motion had been submitted, and reiterated its entitlement to summary decision. A telephone conference was held on November 18, 2014, and petitioner's attorney, who candidly described many unsuccessful attempts to reach petitioner, agreed that either a response or a withdrawal of appeal would be submitted by November 21, 2014. The record closed as of January 21, 2015, the time for such further submission having passed, and none having been filed.[1]

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner began working for the district in 1998 (P-A) and was promoted to the position of acting vice principal on April 11, 2011 (P-B). In May 2012 she obtained a provisional certificate for the position of vice principal (P-C) and began serving a mandatory two-year residency under the provisional certificate (P-D). However, she failed to complete the residency and never obtained a standard certificate. She thus served in the vice-principal position only under the provisional certificate until June 30, 2013, when the district abolished her position, following a reduction in force, and reassigned her. Petitioner subsequently appealed, asserting that her tenure status gives her an entitlement to the position of vice principal that respondent filled with non-tenured staff. (Petition of Appeal.)

[1] The record was held open for an additional sixty days, ensuring more than ample time for petitioner to respond.

I FIND as FACT, only for the purpose of deciding respondent's motion for summary decision, the above uncontested evidence.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

A motion for summary decision may be granted if the papers and discovery presented, as well as any affidavits that may have been filed with the application, show that there is no genuine issue of material fact and that the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law. N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b). If the motion is sufficiently supported, the non-moving party must demonstrate by affidavit that there is a genuine issue of fact that can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding, in order to prevail in such an application. Ibid. These provisions mirror the summary-judgment language of R. 4:46-2(c) of the New Jersey Court Rules.

The motion judge must "consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party, are sufficient to permit a rational factfinder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party." Brill v. Guardian Life Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995). And even if the non-moving party comes forward with some evidence, this forum must grant summary decision if the evidence is "so one-sided that [the moving party] must prevail as a matter of law." Id. at 536 (citation omitted).

Here, the question is whether petitioner has a tenure entitlement to the vice-principal position that respondent filled with non-tenured employees. Respondent correctly argues that to obtain tenure, a school employee must, among other things, hold the appropriate certificate. Zimmerman v. Bd. of Educ. of Newark, 38 N.J. 65, 72 (1962). In that regard, a school employee's service under a provisional certificate does not count toward the accrual of tenure unless the employee ultimately obtains the standard certificate while serving in the position. Ruiz v. Bd. of Educ. of Fort Lee, No. A-4443-11 (App. Div. July 8, 2013), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>; Jackson v. State-Operated Sch. Dist. of Camden, EDU 14058-13, Initial Decision (Feb. 21, 2014), aff'd, Comm'r (April 10, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

Here, petitioner only held a provisional certificate, and never obtained a standard certificate for the position of vice principal. At no point did she complete the applicable requirements for that certificate. Accordingly, as she never obtained the required standard certificate, she did not obtain tenure. Though her attorney's letter references the possibility that the failure to obtain the standard certificate was not her fault, that assertion is not supported by either a certification or other competent evidence. And, in any event, as accurately stated by respondent, the fact remains that petitioner never fully qualified for tenure in the vice-principal position.

Therefore, I CONCLUDE that there is no genuine issue of material fact, and respondent is entitled to summary decision as a matter of law.

ORDER

Accordingly, I hereby ORDER that respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED, and the petition of appeal is DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF TINTON FALLS, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON REMAND
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

The petitioning parent, J.M., appealed the decision of the respondent Board that certain acts of the head cheerleader coach, Meredith McGee, did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) as those terms are defined under New Jersey's Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq. The petitioner sought a finding that McGee did engage in acts of harassment, intimidation, bullying and retaliation, and that the coach be relieved of her coaching duties. During the pendency of the appeal, the Board notified the Office of Administrative Law and the petitioner that McGee had been relieved of her coaching duties effective September 25, 2013. The Board subsequently moved for summary decision, contending that the case had been mooted by the removal of McGee as a coach. The ALJ issued an Initial Decision in the matter on December 12, 2013, finding the matter moot and granting summary decision to the Board. On January 23, 2014, the Commissioner remanded the matter to the OAL for proceedings to resolve petitioner's allegations regarding McGee's actions and whether the Board properly conducted an HIB investigation.

On remand, the ALJ found that: the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of a local board, whose exercise of its discretion may not be disturbed unless shown to be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable; the petitioner bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the credible evidence; petitioner herein presented no credible evidence that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner; and it has not been established that McGee's actions were motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic such as, inter alia, race, religion, gender, sexual orientation, or mental or physical disability. The ALJ concluded that the petitioner has not met her burden of proof that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner in determining that McGee's actions did not constitute HIB, and recommended dismissal of the petition.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in finding that McGee's conduct did not constitute HIB. Accordingly, the Initial Decision was adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition was dismissed.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE TOWN OF TINTON FALLS, MONMOUTH COUNTY,	:	DECISION ON REMAND
RESPONDENT.	:

This controversy returns to the Commissioner following a remand to determine whether conduct displayed by Meredith McGee (the district's former cheerleading coach) constituted harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) under the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq. (Commissioner's Decision No. 39-14, decided January 23, 2014)

In accordance with the Commissioner's remand, a hearing was held at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on January 9, 2015. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) issued his Initial Decision on February 23, 2015. Because the exceptions submitted by J.M. lack any indication of service upon either respondent or the ALJ as required by N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4, the Commissioner did not consider them in rendering his decision. Muench v. Bd. of Examiners, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 08369-06, Commissioner's Decision No. 9-07, decided January 9, 2007.

Upon a comprehensive review of the record[1], the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ – for the reasons stated in his decision – that petitioner failed to sustain her burden of establishing that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in finding that McGee's conduct did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying under N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted as the final decision in this case, and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

BEFORE JOHN S. KENNEDY, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, the mother of T.M., alleges that her daughter was subject to acts of harassment, intimidation or bullying (HIB) by a teacher and cheerleading coach in violation of the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Law, N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13 et seq. The Board of Education of the Town of Tinton Falls (District) conducted an investigation and determined that the teacher's conduct did not constitute HIB. Petitioner seeks an order reversing the Board's determination.

The Department of Education transmitted the matter to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL), where it was filed on June 7, 2013. N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15; N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 to -13. A hearing was held on January 9, 2015 and the record closed on that date.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Tony DeOrio testified on behalf of the District. At all times relevant, he was the Athletic Director for the District. In 2012, Meredith McGee was the head Cheer Coach for the high school cheerleading program. In September 2012, DeOrio received complaints regarding McGee which included her tone when addressing members of the cheer team, excessive use of her cell phone and tending to her young child while supervising the cheer team. These complaints were discussed with McGee and an Action Plan was developed to address the concerns (R-1). DeOrio conducted an annual evaluation of McGee and rendered an evaluation report on February 17, 2013 (R-3). While McGee was found to meet performance standards, DeOrio commented on the complaints made against her. He wrote, "You did receive a reprimand for circumstances that involved how you chose to communicate with your athletes during a practice. Although your intention was to use upperclassmen to demonstrate how the girls looked during their performance, a few took this as an insult." (R-3, page 3). The Action Plan and the annual evaluation became part of McGee's personnel record. None of the complaints made against McGee, which gave rise to the creation of the Action Plan, alerted the District to a concern that would trigger an HIB investigation. The complaints in September 2012 did not allege any HIB violation. In November 2012, DeOrio was made aware of an allegation of bullying by McGee towards four female students. This complaint was turned over to the District's HIB specialist, Brian Evans.

Brian Evans is an Assistant Principal and HIB specialist for the District. He received HIB training through the New Jersey Principals and Supervisors Association. All staff members receive mandatory HIB training and the HIB policy is in the student handbook. Mr. Evans received HIB Complaint Number 158 from the school principal on December 3, 2012. This complaint alleged HIB by Ms McGee against four cheerleaders, including T.M. He conducted an investigation and interviewed the four girls. As a result of the interview process, several concerns were brought up by the students. The girls felt that giving freshmen the opportunity to be on the varsity squad was unfair since they had not "paid their dues" (R-4). The girls also believed that the coach had her "favorites" on the team and those girls received preferential treatment (R-4). The coach set up a demerit system wherein girls were given demerits for dressing improperly, coming to practice late or leaving early. Two of the complaining cheerleaders felt this system was unfair and the coach's "favorites" would not get demerits (R-4). One particular event that all of the complaining cheerleaders described involved a practice before the Band Dance. The coach had the varsity captains point out the mistakes that the junior varsity (JV) cheerleaders were making in front of the whole group. The varsity captains demonstrated those mistakes and the four complaining cheerleaders felt they were being made fun of (R-4).

After concluding his investigation, Mr. Evans felt that the coach should not have had the captains point out the JV team's flaws and could have found a more positive way to have them learn the routine. Although he felt that these methods were not the best way to handle the situation, Evans determined that none of the coaches or the varsity captains' actions constituted bullying (R-4). He felt that the girls he spoke with were truthful and forthcoming. He submitted his investigation report to the Superintendent on January 4, 2013 (R-4).

After the parents received his report, Evans was asked to amend his decision and consider additional facts brought to his attention by the parents relating to an incident that occurred in the parking lot. It was alleged that McGee placed the safety of students at risk while operating her vehicle in the school parking lot in a further act of retaliation. Evans reviewed the surveillance video recording of the incident in question and found no safety issue to exist. Furthermore, Mr. Evans could not determine from the video if McGee was involved in the parking lot incident. After reviewing the additional facts, Mr. Evans did not amend his decision. He did not receive any investigation reports from any other administrator and was not aware of prior complaints that parents had made against Ms. McGee. Mr. Evans stated he conducted his investigation in accordance with the state regulations.

Meredith McGee-D'Alessio (McGee) also testified in this matter. She has been employed with the District since 2007 as a Special Education teacher and has also taught drama classes. She started as a cheerleading coach in 2007 and coached for the Middletown Township School District prior to 2007. She is also a certified personal trainer.

In the fall of 2012, McGee was the only cheerleading coach as no one applied for the assistant coaching position. T.M., an eleventh grade student at the time, was on the JV cheer team. She was also on the JV team the year prior. There were approximately forty-eight students on the cheer team. Students were selected for either varsity or JV based on scores they received from three outside judges at a tryout. She did not take part in judging the tryouts or picking the teams. The tryouts were judged by certified teachers or other cheer coaches from outside the district. McGee prepared an evaluation form and provided it to each judge. The evaluation form was broken down into six different categories and sixteen subcategories. Each judge would evaluate the students based on the sixteen subcategories using a scale from one to five with five being the highest score for each subcategory (R-5). If a student had a total score over a predetermined amount of points, she would be asked to participate on the varsity team. Students scoring under that predetermined score would be entitled to participate on the JV team. The students were assigned numbers so that the judges did not know their names or ages. All students did the same routine at tryouts. Ms. McGee was not involved in the tabulation of the final scores for tryouts. This was the process used for the winter sports tryouts that took place in November 2012. At the November 2012 tryouts, T.M. did not score high enough to make the varsity squad.

In September 2012, her athletic director, Tony DeOrio, approached McGee about complaints made against her by some of the parents of students on the cheer team.

She was never advised which parents complained about her. These complaints resulted in an Action Plan being prepared to address the concerns of the parents (R-1). She discussed the Action Plan with DeOrio and agreed to its terms. From the time she was informed by her athletic director that parents had complained about her until the winter tryouts took place, McGee did not know which parents made the complaints. She was not involved in the tryout process or the determination that T.M. did not make the varsity squad for the 2012-2013 winter season.

As a result of this incident and the ongoing criticism she received from some of the parents, McGee agreed not to return as Cheer Coach after the spring 2013 season. This was a mutual decision between her and the District. She was not fired from the position but felt victimized and agreed not to coach the team. She considered the team a family and was always concerned for the best interest of the students. McGee continues to teach Special Education for the District. During the relevant time relating to this case, McGee was also a member of the School Safety Committee but was not involved in the HIB investigation against her and did not have access to the complaints filed against her.

Dr. Charles Ford, Superintendent for the District for the past six years, explained that McGee was a member of the School Safety Committee. This committee discusses safety procedures and ways to improve them. They do not review HIB complaints and do not get involved with HIB investigations. HIB complaints are handled by the School Safety Team which is headed by Brian Evans. McGee is not a member of the School Safety Team and would not have access to information regarding the complaint filed against her.

From September to December 2012, Dr. Ford had many meetings with J.M. and other parents to discuss concerns about the way the cheer team was being run. On October 22, 2012, he received an email from J.M. expressing her concern over the events that occurred at the Band Dance practice (JM-H). He relayed this concern to Mr. DeOrio but did not consider it a violation of HIB as no accusation was made at that time that this incident amounted to a violation of HIB. He was later advised by the County Department of Education that the October 22, 2012 email should have been treated as an HIB complaint. It was not until December 2, 2012 that J.M.'s allegations were considered to be an HIB complaint against McGee. He referred this complaint to Mr. Evans and directed him to conduct an investigation pursuant to the District's HIB policy. Dr. Ford reviewed Mr. Evans' findings and relayed them to the Board of Education.

J.M. appealed Mr. Evans' determination that McGee had not violated the District's HIB policy to the Board of Education. The Board of Education reviewed the matter and conducted its own investigation at a subcommittee meeting on January 29, 2013. The subcommittee was not composed of a quorum of the full Board of Education so no minutes of the hearing were recorded. Dr. Ford was not present at the January 29, 2013 hearing and did not participate in those proceedings. The full Board of Education affirmed Mr. Evans' findings based on the subcommittee's recommendation and J.M. appealed to the Monmouth County Department of Education. On November 8, 2013, the Monmouth County Board of Education rendered its Investigation Findings and Determinations for J.M.'s appeal (R-7). The County Department of Education found that the District failed to investigate the HIB complaint in a timely manner in accordance with the statute (R-7, page 6). Specifically, the County Department of Education found that documentation shows that J.M. reported potential bullying by McGee on October 22, 2012, but an HIB investigation was not initiated. Once the investigation was conducted, however, the County Department of Education determined that all timelines in the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights were followed (R-7, page 7). The County Department of Education found no evidence that McGee retaliated against the students whose parents complained and that she did not violate any of the provisions of the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights (R-7, page 7).

J.M. testified on behalf of T.M. T.M. graduated from the high school in May 2014 and is now in college. She wants to put this whole issue behind her and does not wish to relive the events that occurred in 2012 and 2013. As a result, T.M. was not present and did not give testimony at this hearing. J.M. asserted that the District mishandled the HIB investigation from the very beginning, did not interview all of the witnesses and covered up McGee's actions to protect her. It is her belief that McGee retaliated against T.M. and other students because parents stepped forward and complained about McGee. This retaliation was exhibited in the coach casting dirty looks at students, mocking them at practice and cutting them from the varsity team. The Board of Education did not conduct a thorough enough investigation and should have permitted the parents to speak at the appeal hearing held by the subcommittee. The appeal conducted by the Monmouth County Department of Education was also tainted because Dr. Ford is friendly with the individuals that conducted the investigation on behalf of the County. J.M. is seeking a finding that McGee violated the District's HIB policy and should be terminated.

FINDINGS OF FACTS

Having carefully considered the relevant evidence, including the testimony, and observed the demeanor of the witnesses, I FIND:

In September 2012, certain parents, including J.M., complained to the District regarding McGee. These complaints included her tone when addressing members of the cheer team, excessive use of her cell phone and tending to her young child while supervising the cheer team. The complaints were discussed with McGee and an Action Plan was developed to address the concerns.

HIB specialist Brian Evans received HIB Complaint Number 158 from the school principal on December 3, 2012. This complaint alleged HIB by Ms. McGee against four cheerleaders, including T.M. He conducted an investigation and interviewed the four girls. As a result of the interview process, several concerns were brought up by the students. The girls felt that giving freshmen the opportunity to be on the varsity squad was unfair since they had not "paid their dues" (R-4). The girls also believed that the coach had her "favorites" on the team and those girls received preferential treatment (R-4). The coach set up a demerit system wherein girls were given demerits for dressing improperly, coming to practice late or leaving early. Two of the complaining cheerleaders felt this system was unfair and the coach's "favorites" would not get demerits (R-4). One particular event that all of the complaining cheerleaders described involved a practice before the Band Dance. The coach had the varsity captains point out the mistakes that the JV cheerleaders were making in front of the whole group. The varsity captains demonstrated those mistakes and the four complaining cheerleaders felt they were being made fun of (R-4).

After concluding his investigation, Mr. Evans felt that the coach should not have had the captains point out the JV team's flaws and could have found a more positive way to have them learn the routine. Evans determined that none of the coaches or the varsity captains' actions constituted bullying (R-4).

J.M. appealed Mr. Evans' determination that McGee had not violated the District's HIB policy to the Board of Education. The Board of Education reviewed the matter and conducted its own investigation at a subcommittee meeting on January 29, 2013. No minutes of the hearing were recorded. The full Board of Education affirmed Mr. Evans' findings based on the subcommittee's recommendation and J.M. appealed to the Monmouth County Department of Education. On November 8, 2013, the Monmouth County Board of Education rendered its Investigation Findings and Determinations for J.M.'s appeal (R-7). The County Department of Education found that the District failed to investigate the HIB complaint in a timely manner in accordance with the statute but once the investigation was conducted, all timelines in the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights were followed (R-7, page 7). The County Department of Education found no evidence that McGee retaliated against the students whose parents complained and that she did not violate any of the provisions of the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights (R-7, page 7).

Ms. McGee was not involved in the tabulation of the final scores for tryouts that took place in November 2012. She is still employed by the District but is no longer coaching the cheerleading team. T.M. graduated from the District in May 2014.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSIONS

Petitioner challenges the determination of the Board of Education of the Town of Tinton Falls that the conduct of Meredith McGee-D'Alessio, Head Cheerleading Coach, towards T.M. did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying.

New Jersey enacted the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act to "strengthen the standards and procedures for preventing, reporting, investigating, and responding to incidents of harassment, intimidation, and bullying" occurring both on and off of school grounds. N.J.S.A. 18A:37-13.1(f). Definitions relative to adoption of harassment and bullying prevention policies are found in N.J.S.A. 18A:37-14, which states in part:

> "Harassment, intimidation or bullying" means any gesture, any written, verbal or physical act, or any electronic communication, whether it be a single incident or a series of incidents, that is reasonably perceived as being motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic, that takes place on school property, at any school-sponsored function, on a school bus, or off school grounds as provided for in section 16 of P.L.2010, c.122 (C.18A:37-15.3), that substantially disrupts or interferes with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of other students and that:
> > (a) a reasonable person should know, under the circumstances, will have the effect of physically or emotionally harming a student or damaging the student's property, or placing a student in reasonable fear of physical or emotional harm to his person or damage to his property;
> >
> > (b) has the effect of insulting or demeaning any student or group of students; or
> > (c) creates a hostile educational environment for the student by interfering with a student's education or by severely or pervasively causing physical or emotional harm to the student.

Tinton Falls' HIB Policy #5131.2, "Prohibiting Harassment, Intimidation and Bullying," essentially mirrors the New Jersey law (R-8). Additionally, the Policy also sets forth a detailed process by which complaints are investigated to see whether an action meets the definition of HIB as set forth in the Policy and Act. (Ibid.)

Petitioner alleges that the HIB investigation was conducted improperly. She asserts that Evans failed to interview witnesses who observed McGee harass and demean T.M. Petitioner further asserts that McGee retaliated against T.M. and other students because parents stepped forward and complained about McGee. This retaliation was exhibited in the coach casting dirty looks at students, mocking them at practice and cutting them from the varsity team. Petitioner urges this tribunal to conclude that the HIB investigation was conducted improperly and therefore the determination should be reversed.

The Board argues that incidents of HIB must be based on a distinguishing characteristic and substantially disrupt or interfere with the orderly operation of the school or the rights of students. Further, the incident must have physically or emotionally harmed the student, insulted or demeaned the student, or created a hostile educational environment for the student. The Board asserts that petitioner has failed to show that T.M. was mistreated by McGee based on her race, gender or any other characteristic. Moreover, petitioner has not shown that T.M. was insulted or demeaned, or that she was physically or emotionally harmed.

Respondent urges this tribunal to conclude that the Board was not arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable in its determination that the HIB investigation was conducted properly and that McGee's conduct did not constitute HIB. Therefore, the Petition of Appeal should be dismissed.

The Commissioner of Education will not overturn the decision of a local board in the absence of a finding that the action below was arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. T.B.M. v. Moorestown Bd. of Educ., EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008) (citing Thomas v. Morris Twp. Bd. of Educ., 89 N.J. Super. 327, 332 (App. Div. 1965), aff'd, 46 N.J. 581(1966)), adopted, Comm'r (April 7, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Further, the Commissioner will not substitute his judgment for that of the board of education, whose exercise of its discretion may not be disturbed unless shown to be "patently arbitrary, without rational basis or induced by improper motives." Kopera v. W. Orange Bd. of Educ., 60 N.J. Super. 288, 294 (App. Div. 1960). New Jersey courts have held that "[w]here there is room for two opinions, action is not arbitrary or capricious when exercised honestly and upon due consideration, even though it may be believed that an erroneous conclusion has been reached." Bayshore Sewage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Prot., 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199–200 (Ch. Div. 1973), aff'd, 131 N.J. Super. 37 (App. Div. 1974). Thus, in order to prevail, the petitioner must demonstrate that the Board acted in bad faith, or in utter disregard of the circumstances before it. T.B.M., supra, EDU 2780-07, Initial Decision (February 6, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; see W.C.L. and A.L. ex rel L.L. v. Tenafly Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. EDU 3223-12 (2013) (The petitioner challenged the school board's decision that a student committed an act of HIB. The administrative law judge (ALJ) found that the board's actions were consistent with the letter and spirit of the law and were not taken in bad faith or in disregard of the circumstances. The ALJ concluded that the petitioner failed to establish that the board's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable. The Commissioner affirmed the ALJ's decision to dismiss the petition of appeal.); J.M.C. ex rel A.C. v. E. Brunswick Bd. of Educ., OAL Dkt. No. EDU 4144-12 (2013) (The petitioner challenged the board's determination that the actions of the petitioner's son constituted HIB. The board found that the student called another student "gay" and said he "danced like a girl." The demeaning remarks constituted HIB.). In both cases, the petitioners failed to satisfy their burden to show that the board's actions were arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

Here, petitioner filed a complaint and school personnel responded to J.M.'s HIB complaint. While the District failed to investigate the HIB complaint in a timely manner in accordance with the statute, once the investigation was conducted all timelines in the Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights were followed. Petitioner asserts that the initial investigation omitted interviews of key witnesses. She points to inconsistencies in the reports and testimony. Petitioner bears the burden of proof by a preponderance of the credible. Atkinson v. Parsekian, 37 N.J. 143, 149 (1962); DYFS v. M.R., 314 N.J. Super. 390, 414 (App. Div. 1998); In re Allegations of Sexual Abuse at E. Park High Sch., 314 N.J. Super. 149, 168 (App. Div. 1998). This tribunal has the duty to decide in favor of the party on whose side the weight of the evidence preponderates, and according to a reasonable probability of truth. Jackson v. Del., Lackawanna and W. R.R., 111 N.J.L. 487, 490 (E. & A. 1933). Evidence is said to preponderate "if it establishes 'the reasonable probability of the fact.'" Jaeger v. Elizabethtown Consol. Gas Co., 124

N.J.L. 420, 423 (Sup. Ct. 1940) (citation omitted). The evidence must "be such as to lead a reasonably cautious mind to the given conclusion." Bornstein v. Metro. Bottling Co., 26 N.J. 263, 275 (1958).

I have carefully reviewed the record. Petitioner has presented no credible evidence that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner. I am mindful of J.M.'s strong desire to protect her child from harm. Indeed, a parent's most basic instinct is to protect their children. However, petitioner provided no testimony from T.M. or any other eyewitness to refute the testimony of the respondent's witnesses. I am more persuaded by the evidence presented by the respondent than by that presented by petitioner. Furthermore, it has not been established that McGee's actions were motivated either by any actual or perceived characteristic, such as race, color, religion, ancestry, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or a mental, physical or sensory disability, or by any other distinguishing characteristic.

Based on the whole of the credible evidence presented, I CONCLUDE that petitioner has not met her burden of proof that the Board acted in an arbitrary manner in concluding that Coach McGee's conduct did not constitute harassment, intimidation or bullying under the New Jersey Anti-Bullying Bill of Rights Act.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, I ORDER that the petition be DISMISSED.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SUSSEX WANTAGE REGIONAL SCHOOL, DISTRICT, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

This matter involves a request by the petitioner for damages based on the respondent Board's failure to timely remit pension contributions required under N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a). Petitioner was employed as a school nurse by the school district when she slipped and fell at work in August 2010, sustaining a head injury. Petitioner filed her appeal on May 14, 2014, seeking to recoup lost pension payments she allegedly would have received had the Board properly made timely pension payments while she was out of work on temporary disability leave. The respondent Board contended it had based its action upon advice from the Division of Pensions, and that the petitioner did not timely file her appeal pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i). The Board asserted that the 90 day period for filing of the appeal must be counted from December 15, 2013 – the date when petitioner received notice of the Board's non-payment of pension contributions from the Division of Pensions. Petitioner asserted that she never received this notice from the Division of Pensions, and that the 90 day period for filing should be counted from March 13, 2014 – when she received a letter from respondent's counsel confirming that no contributions had been made for the period in question.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: petitioner's appeal was timely filed; the respondent Board should have been aware of the governing regulation applying to this matter, and its reliance on verbal direction from the Division of Pensions was not reasonable and justifiable; respondent failed to abide by the mandates of N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a) when it did not remit payments to the retirement system on petitioner's behalf during her period of disability; however, neither the OAL nor the Commissioner has the authority to award the remedy sought by the petitioner, which is essentially a money judgment. Accordingly, the ALJ dismissed the appeal.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's determination that the petition must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. In so determining, the Commissioner noted that his jurisdiction over school laws does not extend to pension disputes arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a). Further, the Commissioner noted that it is well established that the authority to decide pension disputes lies squarely with the Board of Trustees of the Teachers Pension and Annuity Fund. Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL was adopted as the final decision in this matter, and the petition was dismissed.

CHRISTINE PALING,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE SUSSEX WANTAGE REGIONAL SCHOOL, DISTRICT, SUSSEX COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Christine Paling, and the Sussex Wantage Regional School District's (District) reply thereto.

This matter involves a request by the petitioner for damages based on the District's failure to timely remit pension contributions required under N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a) during a period of time that the petitioner was receiving temporary disability payments. The petitioner alleges that she would have had the requisite 25 years of service credit for retirement in December 2013, and if the District made the proper pension contributions, she could have started receiving pension benefits in January 2014. However, the District's failure to timely make the requisite pension contributions resulted in a delay in her retirement from January 2014 until June 2014, resulting in a loss of five months of pension benefits. The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) found that the petitioner filed her petition in a timely manner; however the ALJ determined that neither the Commissioner nor the OAL have the authority to award the monetary judgment sought by the petitioner. Therefore, the ALJ recommended that the petition be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Upon review, the Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's determination that the petition of appeal must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The petitioner is seeking damages in connection with the five months of pension payments that she could have received if the District did not delay its obligations under N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a).[1] Despite the petitioner's contention that the Commissioner has the authority to provide her relief because the District violated a provision found in Title 18A: Education, the Commissioner's jurisdiction over school laws does not extend to pension disputes arising under N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a). It is well established that the authority to decide pension disputes lies squarely with the Board of Trustees of the Teachers Pension and Annuity Fund. See, Board of Trustees of the Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund of the State of New Jersey v. Alex A. La Tronica, et al., 81 N.J. Super 461, 467-470 (App. Div. 1963). Furthermore, the Commissioner is without power to award consequential damages. T.B. and M.B. on behalf of minor child S.B. v. Board of Education of Park Ridge, May 24, 2007, aff'd, State Board, September 5, 2007. Consequently, the ALJ correctly concluded that the Commissioner and the OAL lack jurisdiction to award the petitioner the relief sought in this case.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision of the OAL is adopted as the final decision in this matter and the petition of appeal is hereby dismissed.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[2]

Record Closed: February 11, 2015 Decided: February 17, 2015

BEFORE JOANN LASALA CANDIDO, ALAJ:

STATEMENT OF CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Christine Paling, petitioner, filed a Petition of Appeal on May 14, 2014, with the Acting Commissioner of Education, challenging the determination of the respondent, the Sussex Wantage Regional School District, to not provide pension contributions from January to May 2014 into petitioner's pension fund with the Division of Pensions.

Respondent filed its Answer to the Petition on June 4, 2014, and the matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 through -15 and N.J.S.A. 52:14F-1 through -13. On October 7, 2014, petitioner filed a motion for summary decision pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. October 24, 2014, respondent filed its response and cross-motion for summary decision seeking the matter to be dismissed pursuant to the ninety-day rule defined in N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i), requiring a party to file a petition no later than ninety days from receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling, or other action. A telephone conference was conducted on February 11, 2015 to determine if a document was available. It was determined that no document existed as to the period of January to May 2014, and the record closed on February 11, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

The majority of the facts surrounding this matter are not in dispute. Prior to the commencement of the hearing, the parties submitted a Joint Stipulation of Facts stipulating to most of the facts (J-1) and the admission of various documents in evidence as follows. Therefore, the Stipulation of Facts and briefs in support of its motion for summary disposition and in respondent's opposition brief and cross-motion, I FIND as FACT:

1. Petitioner was hired by respondent as a school nurse.

2. On or about August 31, 2010, petitioner suffered a closed-head injury when she slipped and fell while at work.

3. From September 1, 2010, to September 1, 2011, petitioner received maximum temporary disability benefits, and again from September 1, 2011, to September 1, 2012.

4. From September 6, 2012, to May 23, 2013, petitioner received maximum temporary disability benefits pursuant to a Workers' Compensation determination.

5. For the period September 1, 2011, through May 2013, respondent failed to make pension contributions for petitioner.

6. On December 16, 2013, petitioner's counsel wrote to respondent regarding its payment of pension contributions on petitioner's behalf from September 1, 2011, through May 23, 2013. (See correspondence from Michael T. Barrett to Christina Riker, dated December 16, 2013 (Joint Ex. A).)

7. Respondent did not make pension contributions on petitioner's behalf during September 1, 2011, through June 30, 2012, and September 1, 2012, through May 23, 2013.

8. On December 16, 2013, a Workers' Compensation judge entered an Order on petitioner's behalf awarding her thirty-seven weeks of temporary disability.

9. Petitioner's counsel followed up by letter dated February 11, 2014, to Christina Riker (business administrator) (Joint Ex. B) and dated February 28, 2014, to Yaacov M. Brisman, Esq. (attorney for respondent) (Joint Ex. C).

10. Respondent contacted the New Jersey Department of Treasury, Division of Pensions and Benefits (Division of Pensions), to arrange for payment of petitioner's pension contributions. (See correspondence from Yaacov M. Brisman, Esq., to Michael T. Barrett (counsel for petitioner) dated March 13, 2014. (Joint Ex. D).)

11. The Division of Pension instructed respondent that it should not make payment of contributions at that time, since the petitioner was collecting Workers'

Compensation. (See correspondence from Brisman, Esq., to Barrett dated April 25, 2014 (Joint Ex. E).)

12. On May 15, 2014, respondent made the outstanding pension contributions on petitioner's behalf in the amount of $10,570.34 based upon calculations provided by the Division of Pensions. (See correspondence from Christina Riker to the Division of Pensions dated May 15, 2014. (Joint Ex. F).)

13. Petitioner did not return to work.

14. Petitioner retired in May 2014 and started receiving her pension payments and benefits in June 2014.

LEGAL DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSION

Summary decision is governed by N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), which provides that "if the papers and discovery which have been filed, together with the affidavits . . . show that there is no genuine issue as to any material fact challenged . . . and the moving party is entitled to prevail as a matter of law," then summary decision should be entered in the moving party's favor. See Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Co. of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954); see also Brill v. Guardian Ins. Co. of Am., 142 N.J. 520 (1995) (holding that a material issue of fact exists when the papers and discovery, together with all the legitimate inferences therefrom, would require submission of the issue to a trier of fact). Courts do not easily grant these motions, and the standard is "applied with discriminating care, so as not to defeat the motion if the movant is justly entitled to [summary decision]." Judson, supra, 17 N.J. at 74. The underlying rationale for summary decision is to provide a prompt, businesslike, and inexpensive method of disposing of any cause which the movant clearly shows should be decided as a matter of law. Ibid. Here, the parties agree that there are no material issues of fact in dispute, and both have filed cross-motions for summary decision.

After careful review of the record, I am satisfied that the material facts giving rise to this matter are not in dispute. Therefore, in accordance with N.J.A.C. 1:12.5 and Brill, supra, 142 N.J. 520, I find that this matter is ripe for summary disposition.

Petitioner seeks to recoup lost pension payments she alleges that she would have received had her employer properly made pension payments timely on her behalf while she was out of work on temporary disability leave. Respondent contends that petitioner did not comply with the ninety-day-limitations period pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) and the appeal must be dismissed.

N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.3(i) states that

> [t]he petitioner shall file a petition no later than the 90th day from the date of receipt of the notice of a final order, ruling or other action by the district board of education, individual party, or agency, which is the subject of the requested contested case hearing.
> [Emphasis added.]

Title 6A of the New Jersey Administrative Code provides that a petitioner may challenge the action of a board of education by filing a petition conforming to the requirements of N.J.A.C. 6A:3-1.4. However, the Code provides for a limitation of action for the commencement of a contested action pertaining to the Commissioner's determination of a controversy or dispute arising under the school laws.

Generally speaking, limitations of actions serve two salutary purposes, as expressed in Ochs v. Federal Insurance Company, 90 N.J. 108, 112 (1982). There, the Supreme Court expressed that the initial purpose is "to stimulate litigants to pursue a right of action within a reasonable time so that the opposing party may have a fair opportunity to defend, thus preventing the litigation of stale claims" and to "penalize dilatoriness and serve as a measure of repose." Id. at 112 (quoting Farrell v. Votator Division of Chemtron Corp., 62 N.J. 111, 115 (1975)).

The Supreme Court affirmed the validity of the ninety-day rule as applied to school law cases (then codified as N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c)) in Kaprow v. Berkeley Township Board of Education, 131 N.J. 572, 588 (1993). There, the Court held that N.J.A.C. 6:24-1.2(c) represents a fair and reasonably necessary requirement for the proper and efficient resolution of disputes under the school laws, concluding that even an unofficial, informal note from respondent secretary to the petitioner stating that two positions had been created and filled was sufficient to trigger the start of the ninety-day period. The Kaprow Court stated that the time limitation, while arguably short, provides a "measure of repose, an essential element in the proper and efficient administration of the school laws." Kaprow, supra, 131 N.J. at 582. In addition, the limitation period gives school districts the security of knowing that administrative decisions regarding the operation of the school cannot be challenged after the expiration of ninety days. Ibid.

Respondent asserts that the "triggering action" occurred on December 15, 2013, when petitioner "received adequate notice of Respondent's non-payment of pension contributions direction from the Division of Pensions yet delayed five months to file her petition." (Resp't Br., p. 8.) Petitioner responds that she never received notice from the Division on December 15, 2013, as evidenced by various correspondences submitted as exhibits with her brief. (See Pet'r's correspondence Ex. A (December 16, 2013); Ex. B (February 11, 2014); Ex. C (February 28, 2014); and Ex. D (March 13, 2014).) Petitioner, therefore, contends that the "triggering action" date is March 13, 2014, based upon the letter from respondent's counsel finally confirming that no contributions were made.

Respondent asserts that "[t]he significant factor used in measuring the start of the ninety-day period is 'adequate notice.'" Campbell v. Bd. of Educ. of Camden, EDU 480-12, Initial Decision (July 27, 2012), adopted, Comm'r (Aug. 30, 2012), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. The form of notice deemed adequate to place someone on notice can be either formal (e.g., a letter from respondent informing petitioner directly of their action) or informal (e.g., circumstantial evidence—the example given in Campbell is a paycheck that does not contain a salary increase). Ibid.

Given the reasoning in Campbell, the respondent has offered no proof of notice being provided on December 15, 2013, either formally or informally, despite its position that this occurred. Rather, the correspondence cited by the petitioner indicates that petitioner was only put on notice on March 13, 2014, when petitioner was advised that the Division of Pensions was going to update her pension contribution. I agree. I therefore CONCLUDE that the ninety-day time limit is not applicable here.

Petitioner contends that had respondent made the pension contributions following the Workers' Compensation order in December 2013, she would have retired at that time and not have waited until May 2014 when the contributions were finally paid. She is seeking those five months of retirement payments that she would have received but for the action, or better stated, the inaction of respondent.

The parties do not dispute the fact that respondent failed to make these payments on petitioner's behalf until May 15, 2014.

Respondent asserts that it is not liable for failing to make the required pension payments because it received and relied upon an erroneous direction from the Division of Pensions, which verbally instructed it not to remit payments on petitioner's behalf. This is somewhat analogous to situations where petitioners argue that they relied on a misrepresentation by the Division of Pensions that they were entitled to benefits, and changed their position (to their detriment) based on the Division of Pension's representation. See, e.g., O'Reilly v. Bd. of Trs. of the Pub. Emps.' Ret. Sys., A-0071-12T1 (App. Div. Jan. 8, 2015), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/courts/>; Checchio v. Bd. of Trs., Pub. Emps.' Ret. Sys., TYP 1679-09, Initial Decision (Feb. 18, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; Feigenbaum v. Bd. of Trs. of the Pub. Emps.' Ret. Sys., TYP 2685-12, Initial Decision (May 2, 2014), adopted, Bd. of Trs. (June 19, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>; Burke v. Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund, TYP 8625-04, Initial Decision (Dec. 5, 2005), adopted, Bd. of Trs. (Feb. 3, 2006), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>. Only here, it is the employer who is asserting that it relied on erroneous information given by the Division of Pensions.

However, here the Division of Pensions is not a party to this matter. Respondent cannot assert that petitioner is estopped from recouping payments based on respondent's detrimental reliance on a third-party's directive. Although the Uniform Administrative Procedure Rules (UAPR) do not specifically address the issue of joinder of parties, except as occurs by consolidation of contested cases for one hearing (see N.J.A.C. 1:1-17.1 to -17.8), the regulations do provide that "in the absence of a rule, a judge may proceed in accordance with New Jersey Court Rules" [N.J.A.C. 1:1-1.3(a)], with, however, one caveat: the "[c]ourt rules regarding third-party practices . . . may not be applied unless such procedures are specifically statutorily authorized in administrative hearings." Ibid. (emphasis added). Here, there is no specific statutory authorization, and, therefore, the Division of Pensions cannot be joined. Had the Division of Pensions been involved by a separate action, consolidation would have been the appropriate remedy to have all parties before me. Accordingly, respondent's argument is ineffective.

Based upon the above, I CONCLUDE that the respondent has not met its burden of demonstrating detrimental reliance. In Rakoff v. Board of Trustees of the Public Employees' Retirement System, TYP 5643-96, Initial Decision (Apr. 21, 1998), adopted, Board of Trustees, <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>, Rakoff was employed by the City of Passaic for nearly thirty years when she retired. Immediately following her retirement, she was reemployed by the City in a part-time position. While considering her retirement, she was verbally advised by the Division that she could collect her full pension so long as her new position was "provisional hourly." Relying on this information, she retired. Subsequently, the Division of Pensions informed her that she needed to re-enroll in the Public Employees' Retirement System, could no longer collect her full pension benefits, and had to repay all her service benefits the Division of Pensions alleged that it had paid her, totaling over $70,000. She argued that the Division's representation estopped the agency from recouping the overpayments. The administrative law judge concluded that equitable estoppel did not bar recoupment of the funds, and ordered repayment. Among the reasons given were no misinformation was really given to petitioner, because in her part-time employment, she was not technically "provisional hourly." Similarly here, although at one point the Division of Pensions instructed respondent not to remit payment, petitioner's attorney was simultaneously directing it to the applicable regulation. Because respondent was aware, or should have been aware, of the governing regulation, I cannot CONCLUDE that its reliance on the Division's direction was reasonable and justifiable. Additionally, it was significant to the administrative law judge in Rakoff that the petitioner relied on oral advice from the Division, noting that she "should have asked for written confirmation before making a major decision to jeopardize her pension benefits." Ibid. Similarly here, there is no indication that respondent requested written confirmation from the Division of Pensions before deciding not to remit payment.

Notwithstanding the foregoing analysis, N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a), entitled "Periodic benefits payable under Workers' Compensation law; salary deductions paid by employer; retirement benefits application," reads:

> a. If any member of the retirement system receives periodic benefits payable under the workers' compensation law during the course of his active service, in lieu of his normal compensation, his regular salary deductions shall be paid to the retirement system by his employer. Such payments shall be computed, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:66-29, at the rate of contribution on the base salary subject to the retirement system, just prior to the receipt of the workers' compensation benefits. The moneys paid by the employer shall be credited to the member's account in the annuity savings fund and shall be treated as employee contributions for all purposes. The employer will terminate the payment of these moneys when the periodic benefits payable under the workers' compensation law are terminated or when the member retires.
>
> The member for whom the employer is making such payments, will be considered as if he were in the active service. The regulation does not contemplate the remedy sought by petitioner since the Commissioner of Education does not have authority to award the type of equitable relief sought coming from the Division by way of back pension benefits she avers she is entitled to.

While the Commissioner of Education has jurisdiction to hear all controversies and disputes arising under the school laws (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9; N.J.A.C. 6A:2-1.2(a)(1)), this matter predominantly involves the Division of Pensions since, if we accept respondent's contention, and I do for purposes of this motion, it was its decision to stop pension payments from respondent. However, the Division of Pensions is not directly involved as a party. There is no precedent in administrative law for an employee to collect damages from an employer due to its failure to follow the directives of Teachers' Pension and Annuity Fund (TPAF) law. To seek this remedy, petitioner might consider an action in a different tribunal, as suggested in In re Estate of Levinson, TYP 2794-10, Initial Decision (Aug. 21, 2014), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

In Levinson, petitioners appealed a denial of their claim for life insurance benefits under their son's plan provided by the Division of Pensions. The employer never paid into their son's TPAF fund, which was one of the reasons his estate was denied benefits upon his death. Petitioners brought an action against the employer in Superior Court, which resulted in a settlement. Similarly, it may have been appropriate for the petitioner to seek redress from the Division of Pensions in this forum, but it is unclear how she could obtain relief from her employer, absent any statutory or regulatory grounds for such a remedy without the Division being a party to this action.

In this matter, although I CONCLUDE that respondent violated N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a), and that its reliance defense fails, petitioner's appeal cannot, nevertheless, be sustained under the facts presented here and for the legal discussion above.

Because N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a) does not contemplate the remedy petitioner is seeking, her claim in this matter must be dismissed. Administrative agencies have no common law or inherent jurisdiction or powers. Rather, they have only such jurisdiction or powers as have been conferred by the legislature. Equitable relief is generally not available in the administrative forum unless conferred by statute or regulation. See, e.g., Commissioner v. Gooch Milling and Elevator Co., 320 U.S. 418, 420, 64 S. Ct. 184, 186, 88 L. Ed. 139, 142 (1943); Lockwood v. Walsh, 137 N.J. Eq. 445, 448 (1946); New Jersey Dep't of Envtl. Prot. v. Owen Props., ECE-LU 12164-07 and ECE-LU 1497-08 (consolidated), Final Decision (October 17, 2008), <http://njlaw.rutgers.edu/collections/oal/>.

Respondent failed to abide by the mandates of N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a), when it did not remit payments to the retirement system on petitioner's behalf while she was receiving benefits payable under the workers' compensation law during the course of her active service, in lieu of her normal compensation, the regular salary deductions shall be paid to the retirement system by his employer. Respondent's argument that it detrimentally relied on an erroneous directive from the Division of Pensions fails. Petitioner cannot be estopped from recovering payments from respondent on grounds that respondent detrimentally relied on a third party's information, particularly in light of the fact that there is no third party named. Additionally, respondent has not demonstrated that it justifiably relied on erroneous advice from the Division of Pensions, where it is undisputed that petitioner's attorney had brought its attention to the governing regulation. Despite respondent's violation of N.J.S.A. 18A:66-32.1(a), neither the OAL nor the Commissioner of Education has the authority to award the remedy sought by petitioner—essentially a money judgment.

ORDER

Based on the briefs, exhibits and certifications submitted, it is ORDERED that the appeal is dismissed for the reasons set forth above.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

On September 18, 2014, State Superintendent, Paymon Rouhanifard, sent a Certificate of Determination to Namibia Burke, hereinafter referred to as the Respondent. That Certificate of Determination with charges of excessive absenteeism was sent to Ms. Burke on September 22, 2014, and she responded to the charges on October 8, 2014

On November 14, 2014, the Petitioner determined there was probable cause to credit evidence in support of the charges and notified the Respondent of their determination to certify tenure charges with the Commissioner of Education. They also determined that effective December 1, 2014, in accordance with N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14 the Respondent should be suspended without pay.

On November 17, 2014, Louis Lessig, counsel for the Petitioner, submitted tenure charges to David C. Hespe, the then Acting Commissioner of Education in accordance with N.J.S.A. 7A:45. Crystal Holmes-Bowie, counsel for the Respondent, submitted a response to the tenure charges.

On December 12, 2014, M. Kathleen Duncan, Director of the Bureau of Controversy and Disputes at the Department of Education notified the undersigned that he had been appointed Arbitrator in the instant matter. The letter indicated,

"Please be advised that, following receipt of Respondent's answer on December 2, 2014, the above-captioned tenure charges have been reviewed and deemed sufficient, and if true, to warrant dismissal or reduction in salary."

Furthermore, she indicated that the charges were referred to the undersigned pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-16, as amended by P.L. 2012, c.26.

Hearings were held on January 23 and 30, 2015 at the offices of Brown and Connery, counsel for the Petitioner. The parties submitted post-hearing briefs on March 2, 2014.

On February 3, 2015, the undersigned requested an extension of time to submit the award in this matter. That request was granted by M. Kathleen Duncan, Director of the Bureau of Controversy and Disputes at the Department of Education, and my award would be due on or before April 30, 2015.

SUMMARY OF FACTS

The Respondent began working in the Camden School District in 1999 when she was hired as a teacher for grades K-8. At that time she was assigned to the Parkside School and taught Language Arts Literacy. For the years 2003-2006 she taught grade 4, and for the years 2006-2011 she taught grade 3.

Parkside School closed in 2011, and the Respondent was assigned to the Cooper B. Hatch Family School where she taught third grade. In 2013-2014 she was again assigned to teach third grade at the Cooper B. Hatch Family School. In August of 2014, the Respondent received an assignment to again teach third grade at the Cooper B. Hatch Family School.

The years at issue in the instant matter are 2010-2011, 2011-2012, 2012-2013, and 2013-2014. At the Parkside Elementary School for the 2010-2011 school year, the Respondent's Principal was Claudia Cream. During the 2012-2013 school year at the Cooper B. Hatch Family School, the Respondent's Principal was Norris Bacon, Jr. During the 2013-2014 school year, the Respondent's Principal was Laura Boyce.

The record reflects that each of the Principals submitted documentation to the Respondent about her absences, and her tardiness.

In May of 2010 the respondent and her then Principal, Claudia Cream, agreed to an attendance improvement plan, which continued into the 2010-2011 school year.

David M. Corvi, Principal of the Forest Hill Elementary School, submitted a Certification which indicated that he was Principal of the Forest Hill Elementary School for the entire 2013-2014 school year and that during that school year, the Forest Hill Elementary School opened its doors at 8:15 a.m. That Certification was signed on February 24, 2015. As evidenced by Exh. R-2, the Respondent requested and received five (5) bereavement days from December 17-21, 2013, due to the death of her brother. As evidenced by Exh. R-3, the Respondent was on an FMLA leave from February 27, 2013 through March 23, 2013. Furthermore, as evidenced by Exh. R-9, the Respondent was on jury duty on December 4, 2012.

The Collective Negotiations Agreement (CNA) between the parties references sick leave and temporary leaves of absence. Article XII – Sick Leave, establishes that all teachers shall be entitled to thirteen (13) accumulated sick leave days as of the first official day of the school year, whether or not they report for duty that day. Unused sick leave days shall be accumulated from year to year with no maximum limit. Additionally, up to three (3) days of accumulated sick leave may be utilized as family leave days.

The record reflects that on January 15, 2014, the Respondent was injured while breaking up a fight between two students. From that day to February 13, 2014, she received physical therapy from Worknet Occ Med-Camden. After each workup, she was allowed to return to work without restrictions.

These are the essential, uncontroverted facts in the matter at bar and the issue now comes to me for resolution.

POSITIONS OF THE PARTIES

For the Petitioner

The Petitioner argued that they provide teachers with generous leave benefits and that they have proven that the Respondent abused her leave time over the past four (4) school years "with a shameful pattern of excessive absenteeism and tardiness to which she offers no credible excuse." During that time period, the Respondent admitted that she was absent a total of 95.5 days and late a total of 159 days and also admitted that her supervisors consistently counseled and warned her of her absenteeism and tardiness. The Petitioner argues that they have established through credible evidence and testimony that the Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness has damaged the continuity of instruction of her students. Based upon the Respondent's history, the Petitioner contends that:

"It is extremely doubtful she would improve if given the opportunity. Accordingly, the tenure charges against the Respondent must be sustained as the School District has proven her excessive absenteeism and tardiness constitute conduct unbecoming a school employee, incapacity, and/or other just cause warranting her permanent dismissal from employment. Any other result would be detrimental to the students of the School District."

During the 2010-2012 school year, while at Parkside Elementary School and working with Principal Claudia Cream, Ms. Cream notified the Respondent that her absenteeism and tardiness was a problem. The record reflects that the Respondent's absences consisted of sixteen (16) sick days and one (1) personal day, and she was late twenty-six (26) times. Ms. Cream issued a Teacher Evaluation Observation Report dated March 1, 2011, (see Exh. P-3) in which indicates that the Respondent received an unsatisfactory rating for failure to maintain and have available written lesson plans; failure to monitor student progress and utilize intervention strategies; failure to complete and use records and reports; failure to be prompt with routine written assignments and written reports; and failure to demonstrate responsibility for punctuality in the performance of assigned duties. On June 17, 2011, Ms. Cream submitted an Annual Performance Report for Tenured Teaching Staff to the Respondent (see Exh. P-4), in which she indicated "Attendance and punctuality at work is unacceptable."

In May of 2010, Ms. Cream and Respondent signed an Individual Attendance Improvement Plan, indicating that it was developed jointly and agreed upon.

In the 2011-2012 school year, the Respondent was at the Cooper B. Hatch Family School and her Principal was Norris Bacon, Jr. The Petitioner argues that the Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness did not improve and, in fact, got worse. During this school year, the Respondent was absent seventeen (17) days and late forty-one (41) times. There were no personal days taken during that school year. Gladys Naticchione, secretary to the principal at the Cooper B. Hatch Family School, testified that teachers are allotted ten (10) lateness grace periods on a yearly basis. For example an employee's pay is docked for any lateness that exceeds five (5) minutes or a lateness of five (5) minutes or less that exceeds the ten (10) grace periods. Thirteen (13) of the Respondent's lateness of five (5) minutes or less were beyond the allotted grace periods.

During the 2012-2013 school year at Cooper B. Hatch Family School, the Respondent was absent thirty and a half (30.5) sick days, used one (1) personal day, utilized five (5) bereavement days and five and half (5.5) absences were docked from her pay because she was in excess of her allotted sick leave time. She was also late fifty-eight (58) times during that school year.

On February 26, 2013, Mr. Bacon issued the Respondent a letter of reprimand for chronic absenteeism and tardiness (see Exh. P-6). He indicated that as of February 22, 2013, the Respondent had been absent sixteen (16) days and late seven (7) times. That reprimand informed the Respondent that consistent absenteeism or tardiness is unacceptable and subject to a disciplinary warning.

During the 2013-2014 school year, the Respondent was absent fourteen (14) days of which two were personal days and three and a half (3.5) days were absences that were docked from her pay for being in excess of her allotted sick time. During that year she was late thirty-four (34) times. During that school year her Principal was Laura Boyce, who was new to the school system. Ms. Boyce testified that she consistently counseled and warned the Respondent about her excessive absenteeism and tardiness during the course of the school year both verbally and in writing. On November 21, 2013, Ms. Boyce issued the Respondent a letter of reprimand about her excessive absenteeism (see Exh. P-16). On February 6, 2014, Ms. Boyce also indicated that the Respondent had an insufficient amount of substitute plans in the main office (see Exh.

P-8) and on April 9, 2014, she again informed the Respondent that she did not have any substitute plans in the main office.

The Petitioner argues that the tenure charges against the Respondent for excessive absenteeism and tardiness must be sustained and references that excessive absenteeism and tardiness may constitute incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause sufficient to warrant dismissal. The Petitioner argues that through credible evidence and testimony, the circumstances of the Respondent's absences and lateness detrimentally impacted the continuity of instruction and how she persisted despite being given ample warning and opportunity to improve.

The School District has proven that it considered the number of Respondent's absences and lateness and the circumstances of same when they prepared the tenure charges.

The Petitioner argues that Respondent "vaguely blamed each of the twenty-six (26) days she was late to work because of marital problems." The Petitioner argues that is simply not credible because "the Respondent had the opportunity during direct examination to elaborate on why marital problems precluded her from arriving at work on time but provided no detail whatsoever." The Petitioner also argues that the Respondent admitted it is her professional responsibility to arrive at work on time. However, she failed to fulfill that responsibility during the 2010-2011 school year.

The Petitioner argues that the Respondent's absences during the 2011-2012 school year were extended weekends as they fell on a Monday or a Friday and that the doctors' notes contained in the record only account for five and one half (5.5) of the seventeen (17) sick days Respondent took during that school year. The Respondent testified that many of her absences during the 2011-2012 school year were attributable to tonsillitis, but none of the notes in the record reference tonsillitis. The Petitioner argues that even if all of the Respondent's absences during the 2011-2012 school year were attributable to tonsillitis, the Respondent testified that she chose not to have her tonsils removed, which would have lessened the number of her absences. The Respondent never testified that any of her absences during the 2011-2012 school year were attributed to a debilitating illness or injury.

Again, the Respondent used the vagueness of marital problems as a reason why she was late to work forty-one (41) days during the 2011-2012 school year. The Petitioner continues to argue that this excuse is not credible and the Respondent never elaborated on her marital problems or why those marital problems precluded her from arriving at work on time.

The Petitioner argues that they considered the circumstances of the Respondent's absences and tardiness during the 2012-2013 school year. Even excluding the five (5) days Respondent took due to the death of her brother and an eighteen (18) day leave of absence she took for coping with depression, she was still absent nineteen (19) days that school year. Of those absences, six (6) fell on Monday or Friday and three (3) fell next to a holiday or administrative closing.

For the 2013-2014 school year, the Respondent still blamed her marital problems as the reason why she was late fifty-eight (58) times during that school year. In defense of her position, the Respondent argued that during the 2013-2014 school year, some of the days that she was late were due to the fact that she was talking to Ms. Boyce about school-related matters. However, Ms. Boyce credibly testified that the comments to Respondent in the morning were made in passing and would not have caused her to be late. The Petitioner argues that the Respondent's attempt to blame Ms. Boyce is a weak attempt to validate her tardiness.

The Petitioner has proven that the Respondent's excessive tardiness disrupted her students' education, resulting in a diversion of resources and had a detrimental impact on student behavior. Ms. Boyce testified that the Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness did have a detrimental impact on the continuity of instruction. In fact, Ms. Boyce testified that the Respondent's students math scores on the New Jersey Assessment of Skills and Knowledge (NJASK) were lower than the other elementary students at Hatch Family School. In fact, the evidence submitted by the Petitioner shows that Respondent's students' suffered due to her absenteeism and tardiness. Fourteen (14) of the eighteen (18) of the Respondent's students who took the NJASK scored less than proficient in Language Arts and Literacy and eleven (11) scored less than proficient in math. (See Exh. R-1 at NB2-NB4).

Ms. Boyce also testified that the Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness negatively impacted student behavior – which again would impact the continuity of instruction. Ms. Boyce also testified that the "school district only has a limited opportunity to instruct the students and needs as much instructional time as possible to maximize student achievement." The Petitioner argues that every time the Respondent was late, students lost instructional time to which they were entitled.

The Petitioner argues that the testimony of Julia Benjamin in support of the Respondent was perjurious as Ms. Benjamin's daughter was in the fifth grade during the 2010 school year and was no longer attending Parkside School. Even though Ms.

Benjamin testified that her daughter was in Respondent's third grade class for 2010-2011, the record clearly established that she was not. The Petitioner asks that Ms. Benjamin's entire testimony be stricken from the record.

The Petitioner has proven that it provided Respondent with ample warning – both written and verbal – that her excessive absenteeism and tardiness was unacceptable and could result in disciplinary action, but she still failed to improve. The Petitioner strongly argues that the appropriate penalty for Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness is dismissal from employment. The Petitioner further argues that during the four year period the Respondent was absent or late to work an astonishing total of 254 times. Putting that number into perspective, there are approximately 180 days in a school year, which means the Respondent was either late or absent well over the equivalent of an entire school year. The Petitioner argues that withholding the Respondent's increment would be an insufficient penalty as it is not a necessary precursor to dismissal and she has already shown that financial penalties have no impact upon her. Moreover, the Respondent has not offered any credible evidence indicating that her attendance or punctuality will improve if she were to be returned to work. In fact, there is no basis to believe that she can be reinstated without negatively impacting the continuity of instruction for her students as she has done for the past four (4) school years.

Accordingly, the Petitioner asks that the Respondent's excessive absenteeism and tardiness constitutes incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause warranting permanent dismissal from employment.

For the Respondent

The Respondent argues that the Petitioner has failed to prove the charges by a preponderance of the evidence. In addition, the Respondent contends that her record does not justify dismissal.

The Respondent does not deny the number of absences or tardiness identified in the Petitioner's records; however, her position is that "the absences were taken for legitimate reasons, for which she provided documentation to the Petitioner, which it accepted." Furthermore, the Respondent admits that there has been an issue with her tardiness; however, she submits there were reasons beyond her control with respect to the tardiness.

She has been a teacher in the District since 1999 and has an elementary K-8 Certificate, Supervisor Certificate and Principal Certificate. She has primarily taught third grade with an emphasis in Language Arts Literacy, and she has a Bachelor's degree in communications and two Master's degrees, one in Administration and one in elementary K-8 curriculum education.

The Respondent argues that Ms. Boyce's testimony about her abilities and impact upon students and teachers directly contradict the testimony of Ms. Cream who supervised her for ten (10) years, including the 2010-2011 school year. She acknowledges that her attendance was discussed with Ms. Cream in 2010-2011, and she admits to receiving an attendance improvement plan that was in part authored by her. She also acknowledges the memo from Mr. Bacon in the 2012-2013 school year and recalls receiving a memo in or about November 2013 from Ms. Boyce regarding attendance.

The Respondent strenuously argues that outside of those notices she did not recall meeting with Ms. Boyce to discuss attendance except when the Principal would stop her on the way into the school main office to tell her she was late.

The Respondent testified that she believed she did not abuse her leave time because she was out for valid reasons such as illness, bereavement or her children's' illnesses. Moreover, she frequently provided doctors' notes. (See Exhs. R-2/R-8). The Respondent argues that in providing the doctors' notes, she often went beyond the requirements for providing those when she would have been out of work for more than three (3) days. (See Exh. R-6 and B-120 and R-8 and B-61). When she was out beyond her allotted sick time, she requested and was granted an FMLA leave. (See Exh. R-3). She also testified that her illness was frequently attributed to tonsillitis and that she had surgery in December 2014 to remove her tonsils and expects to continue to be in good health.

The Respondent contends that even though Ms. Boyce testified at length about perceived difficulties she had with the Respondent, "none of those allegations were raised as tenure charges for inefficiency or unbecoming conduct, nor should they be considered here." She further argues that all of her actions with the Principal were professional and respectable, if not agreeable, to Ms. Boyce. The Respondent further contends that the Petitioner attempted to characterize her email communication with Ms. Boyce as unbecoming conduct when in fact Ms. Burke would copy others on emails where there is no policy or prohibition against such conduct. When Ms. Burke's email responses question certain practices of Ms. Boyce, it was characterized as unprofessional and disrespectful, yet there is nothing in the record to establish such an allegation.

The Respondent argues that the school where she drops off her children is up the street from Hatch School, admitting the fact that children are not to be left alone in the school without an adult before 8:15 a.m. She also testified that there is no before school care in the Forest Hills School where her children attend. She must drop her children off to their classes and get back to her own school and check in by 8:25 a.m. The Respondent further testified that she was required to drop her children off by 8:25 a.m. Nevertheless, she understands that the current Principal of her childrens' school will certify that children may be left at the school unattended by a parent or guardian by 8:15 a.m. However, this would allow for only ten (10) minutes to drop off her children at school or with their teachers, drive to her school, park and report to the second floor office for check-in to avoid being late. She does admit that her attendance and her tardiness needs improvement.

However, her marital difficulties frequently contributed to her frequent lateness, which has also been resolved by her recent divorce granted on or about December 2014.

In spite of all of these difficulties, the Respondent's former Principal, Ms. Cream, characterized her as an excellent teacher. Ms. Cream testified that she has served as a Principal for over thirty (30) years in the School District, including the last ten (10) during which Ms. Burke was assigned to her school. Ms. Cream testified that she did not believe the charges against Ms. Burke were appropriate and also testified that when staff were tardy she allowed them to make up the time with students, by tutoring them for example, after school. While this was voluntary, Ms. Burke did participate in tutoring students after school. Additionally, Ms. Cream testified that where she noted in Ms. Burke's evaluation about her attendance and referenced the attendance improvement plan, it was merely an effort to bring it to the staff member's attention. Those comments were simply to inform Ms. Burke what the record reflected, and it was not to be punitive.

Contrary to that practice of Ms. Cream, "Ms. Boyce testified that she did not know, nor did she care to know, the reasons for tardiness and absence and that her only concern was the effect upon the students." Ms. Cream also testified that the Respondent maintained direct contact with parents of her students with respect to learning and disciplinary issues. The Petitioner argued that there was difficulty with student behavior when the Respondent was not present; however, it was clarified that the students' behavior issues arose primarily during specials or sessions where the students were taught by other staff. In fact, when Ms. Boyce noticed that the "Respondent was checking on her students while they were at the special, she was scolded and had to justify to the Principal her reason for doing so."

The Respondent testified that she checked on students as suggested in professional development training and that if necessary she would check in with students at their homes and required and maintained regular contact with parents. The Respondent is from the community, lives in it, and is familiar with the students and the parents as indicated by her relationship with Ms. Benjamin, a mother of six students who matriculated through and are presently in the District.

The Respondent admits that she received notice of the attendance issues from her Principals, yet there was no evidence presented of disciplinary action taken for a violation of the attendance policy prior to these tenure charges. She argues that N.J.S.A. 18A:6-10 requires that no person who acquires tenure may be dismissed or reduced in compensation, except for inefficiency, incapacity, unbecoming conduct, or other just cause. The Petitioner has the burden to prove the allegations by a preponderance of the credible evidence, and they have failed to do so.

The Petitioner is attempting to characterize the Respondent as having unbecoming conduct and creating poor morale; however, that assertion is made by Ms. Boyce only because no other staff members who testified for the Petitioner supported allegations of any improper, unprofessional or unbecoming conduct.

Respondent argues that while she did use her sick leave, there are only 3.5 days for which she was docked in 2013-2014 for which she would not have sick leave or personal time to cover it. (See Exh. P-2). She was docked for 5.5 days in the 2012-2013 school year. However, during those days she had taken FMLA, which was approved by the District. (See Exh. R-3). The Petitioner has attempted to present a pattern of absences; however, the record clearly and unequivocally establishes that the Respondent presented a doctor's note indicating that she had been seen by a doctor or a physician's assistant for illness. In fact, she submitted twenty-eight (28) doctors' notes to the District over the period in question.

The Respondent argues that while she used the time allotted to her, she denies abusing her sick leave time but was forthcoming by admitting that she had a problem with tardiness. The allegations presented do not rise to the level of unbecoming conduct necessary to prove the tenure charges by a preponderance of the credible evidence.

DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The issue before me is to determine whether or not the Petitioner has proven its charge that the Respondent's absenteeism and tardiness was so excessive that it constitutes incapacity, unbecoming conduct, and/or other just cause warranting permanent dismissal from employment. What this case is not about is the issue of lesson plans. There was testimony in the record and documentation submitted about the Respondent's lesson plans not being in the main office when they were supposed to be and her inability to get those lesson plans into the main office properly. That is absolutely irrelevant to the matter before me because the statement of charges submitted by State Superintendent Rouhaniford, only references chronic and excessive absenteeism and lateness. The lesson plans have nothing to do with the instant matter. All of the documentation submitted based upon memos that Principal Boyce sent to the Respondent are irrelevant because the charge before me, as evidenced by the November 17, 2014, packet of materials sent to the Commissioner of Education by counsel for the Petitioner stated, "I, Paymon Rouhaniford, State Superintendent of the Camden City School District, do hereby charge that Nambia Burke, a tenured employee of the District, should be permanently dismissed from employment for chronic and excessive absenteeism." The Petitioner certainly can argue if the Respondent is not at work or is tardy to work there is a direct correlation between student learning. It is obvious that if a teacher is not in the classroom then learning will not take place. It is basically a symbiotic relationship. Students are in a classroom to learn, but they need a teacher to be in that classroom.

The Petitioner wove in tardiness as part of its argument and arguably absenteeism/tardiness do in fact go hand-in-hand with whether or not an individual, and in this case the Respondent, is properly performing her teaching duties or is flagrantly violating the requirement to be in the classroom and teach students.

The following chart shows the Respondent's absences and tardiness for the period of 2010-2011 through 2013-2014:

YEAR	ABSENCES	TARDINESS
2010-2011	17 (includes 1 personal day)	26
2011-2012	17 (all sick days)	41
2012-2013	30.5, plus 1 personal day, 5 bereavement days, 5.5 absences - pay was docked) 42 days in Total	58
2013-2014	14 , plus 2 personal days, 3.5 absences - pay was docked 19.5 in Total	34
TOTAL	95.5	159

The five (5) bereavement days must be deducted from the total days absent because she is entitled by the Agreement to utilize bereavement days and, additionally, the December 4, 2013, jury duty day must also be deducted from the total. Therefore, the Respondent was absent from work 89.5 days during that four year period or 22.34 days per year. (Emphasis applied). Respondent's 159 days being tardy divided by 4 shows that the Respondent was tardy 39.79 days each year during that four year period.

The testimony of Gladys Naticchione, the secretary to the Principal at the Hatch Family School illuminates the method utilized for marking a teacher late. Ms. Naticchione testified that the grace period ends at 8:30 a.m. She testified that the sign-in book is open between 8:25 and 8:30 a.m. She records a lateness after 8:25 a.m. Each teacher is allowed ten (10) lateness's per year with a five (5) minute grace period. If you go beyond the five (5) minute grace period (8:25 and 8:30 a.m) it does not count toward the ten (10). If you are late eleven (11) days, then you are docked pay. The record reflects that the Respondent was late 159 times and some of those were a few minutes and some of those were more five (5) minutes. Nevertheless, she was late. If we deduct the ten (10) per year and accept that every one of those lateness's was five minutes or less we come out with a different number. Deducting 40 days from the 159 days creates a number of 119 days divided by 4 which results in the Respondent being late 29.75 times per year.

The Petitioner has an absolute right to mandate that teachers will be in the classroom on time to teach students. We all will agree that occasionally someone will be late to school and that is why there is a grace period. It is interesting that this District does provide a grace period where many districts do not. If a teacher has to be at work at 8:25 a.m. and a teacher comes in at 8:26 or 8:27, they are late in many school systems. Here, this District has given the teachers a grace period. In spite of the grace period established by the Agreement, the Respondent still was late 29.75 times a year, taking into account the ten (10) day period for each year that the District has in its policy.

The Petitioner's argument that the Respondent's absences due to tonsillitis is more compelling and credible than the Respondent's testimony that she had her tonsils removed in December 2014. She was suspended with pay in September of 2014, and tenure charges were filed against her in November of 2014, and she was suspended without pay effective December 1, 2014. No matter how I look at this, the surgery was after the Respondent had been suspended without pay and tenure charges were filed against her. It is not a credible argument. In fact, it is a horrible argument. The Respondent, a professional individual with three college degrees (a Bachelor's and two Masters') had a tonsillitis problem and did not have surgery. That led to her being absent from work. That is on her, not on a marital problem.

The marital problem issue cannot be controlling in the instant matter because nothing was presented other than she had a marital problem. I fully recognize that the Respondent probably felt uncomfortable about discussing personal issues and did not want to do so during the hearing. Nevertheless, if you are going to raise an issue in defense of why you are absent or late (mostly late) because of marital problems, then you have to be more explicit and explain what you meant about marital problems. Here, the Respondent chose not to do so.

The most vexing problem I have in this matter is the utilization of Ms. Claudia Cream versus Ms. Laura Boyce. Ms. Cream testified she was no longer a Principal or employee of the District. Whatever professional relationship she had with the Respondent cannot be controlling or overshadow the professional relationship Ms. Boyce had with the Respondent. However, even though Ms. Cream testified to her approach to working with teachers, nevertheless she, in fact, informed the Respondent about her attendance issues.

In fact, the second page of Exhibit P-3, which is a conference form, Ms. Cream informed the Respondent that improvement is needed in reporting to work on time and attendance. That document is dated March 16, 2011. On June 17, 2011, (see Exh. P-4), Ms. Cream indicated that her attendance and punctuality at work is unacceptable. That document referenced that the Respondent had been absent sixteen (16) days and was late twenty-six (26) times. Exhibit P-5 is the individual attendance improvement plan jointly developed and agreed upon by Ms. Cream and the Respondent on June 22, 2011. In that document, Respondent agreed to have better time management, leave the house with more time to account for any delays, making leave on time a priority, and leave work on time to focus on home responsibilities.

Even though Ms. Cream talked about a different approach to working with teachers than Ms. Boyce testified to, the fact remains that Ms. Cream did notify the Respondent that her attendance and punctuality were unacceptable and had to improve. On February 26, 2013, Mr. Norris Bacon, the Principal of the Cooper B. Hatch Family School, sent a memo to the Respondent concerning attendance policy. That memo indicated in part,

"Our records indicate that as of February 22, 2013, you have been absent a total of 16 days and late 7 times.

Given your number of absences and lateness, you are hereby requested to submit an improvement plan that will address how you intend to improve both your absences and latenesses. This improvement plan is due in my office by the close of business March 6, 2013."

The record does not reflect if the improvement plan was submitted by the Respondent to Mr. Bacon.

On November 25, 2013, Ms. Boyce sent a memo to the Respondent concerning tardiness. That memo indicated in part,

"Lateness to school greater than five minutes will result in docked pay. In addition, any tardies of five minutes or less will result in docked pay once a staff member surpasses the ten grace tardies allowed by the contract. Continued tardiness will result in disciplinary action."

That memo also indicated at the bottom that the Respondent was tardy five minutes or less eight times and was tardy more than five minutes once.

On November 21, 2013, Ms. Boyce sent another memo to Ms. Burke also dealing with attendance in which she stated,

"...our school-wide attendance goal for this year is 96%.
The purpose of this memo is to notify you that your attendance is currently below the 96% goal."

The Respondent's statistics up to that point for the 2013-2014 school year were 4.5 absences with an attendance rate of 91.2%. Since the goal was 96% and the Respondent was only at 91.2%, there is a difference of 4.8%.

The above clearly and unequivocally establishes that three separate Principals all commented about attendance and lateness. Even though the Respondent believes that the testimony of Ms. Cream was helpful to her in the area of attendance and lateness, candidly it was not helpful because as a result of her lateness in the 2010-2011 school year, the Respondent agreed to an attendance improvement plan. Why would you agree to an attendance improvement plan if there is no attendance problem?

It is commendable that the Respondent acknowledges her absences and lateness's and asks for an opportunity to go back to work because she believes she has addressed those issues and will continue to address them. Unfortunately, that is not the record before me. Since 2010-2011, there has been a consistent absence and lateness pattern. It certainly appears to me that Ms. Boyce has a different approach to dealing with teachers than Ms. Cream had. Nevertheless, that is also irrelevant because I am not here to evaluate the methodology that any administrator employs working with teachers. The Respondent consistently reported to work late and was consistently absent. I deducted the number of days that should not be counted such as bereavement and jury duty, but we still have a considerable number of days where the Respondent was out from work, which does negatively impact upon the students.

The focal point of Ms. Boyce's testimony is that if the teacher is not in the classroom or is late to the classroom, it has a negative impact upon students in that classroom. I don't know of any statistics that would say that is not accurate. I have talked about the symbiotic relationship, and I cannot in good conscience put aside the charges against the Respondent and put her back to work.

There is nothing in the record for me to mitigate against the absences and lateness's of the Respondent.

For the foregoing reasons and having duly heard the proofs and allegations of the parties, I Award the following:

AWARD

The Petitioner has met its burden by establishing that the Respondent was excessively absent and late to work during the time period of 2010-2011 through 2013-2014. Accordingly, the tenure charge shall be upheld and she shall be dismissed from employment with the State-Operated School District of the City of Camden.

STATE OPERATED SCHOOL DISTRICT OF THE CITY OF CAMDEN, Petitioner, v. EDWARD W. BROWN, Respondent.	BEFORE THE COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION OF THE STATE OF NEW JERSEY Agency Ref. No.: 290-9/14 CONSENT ORDER TO WITHDRAW TENURE CHARGES

WHEREAS, the State Operated School District of the City of Camden ("District") or ("Petitioner") opened the above captioned matter by certifying tenure charges against Edward W. Brown ("Respondent") with the Commissioner of Education ("Commissioner");

WHEREAS, the Commissioner assigned this action to be adjudicated before Arbitrator Joseph Licata;

WHEREAS, the parties mutually desire resolution of the matter in terms of withdrawal of the tenure charges, and approval of the proposed settlement agreement, attached hereto;

WHEREAS, the parties submit this Consent Order pursuant to N.J.A.C. 6A:3-5.6, and the Cardonick standards established by the State Board of Education in the matter of In re Cardonick, State Board Decision of April 6, 1983 (1990 School Law Decisions (S.L.D.) 842, 846).

Now it is on this 2ND day of ~~March~~ April 2015, ORDERED and AGREED as follows:

1. Petitioner originally charged Respondent, a certificated and tenured Principal of the District with inefficiency following three (3) performance evaluations conducted during the 2013-2014 school year pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:7A-45;

2. On or about February 6, 2015, Petitioner received information pertaining to the performance evaluations upon which the original charges of inefficiency were based. At this time, based upon the information received, Petitioner does not believe moving forward with the charges against Respondent is appropriate;

3. Thus, withdrawal and settlement of the matter are justified;

4. The parties mutually desire the charges be withdrawn and the proposed settlement agreement approved;

5. Upon execution of the proposed settlement agreement, Respondent will simultaneously provide Petitioner, through its counsel, Brown & Connery, LLP, with an irrevocable letter of intent to retire effective December 31, 2017;

6. Upon execution of the proposed settlement agreement Petitioner shall reinstate Respondent into a Guidance Counselor position, a position in which he previously served;

7. Respondent seeks to enter into the proposed settlement agreement, and acknowledges that he has;

a. Read the proposed settlement agreement;

b. Understands it and knows he is giving up important rights;

c. Agrees with everything in it;

d. His attorney negotiated it with his knowledge and consent;

e. He has consulted with his attorney about it, and;

f. He shall sign it knowingly and voluntarily;

8. The proposed settlement agreement is in the public's interest, as the circumstances in the matter justify resolution, because Petitioner's underlying basis in filing the charges is no longer present;

9. Respondent acknowledges that he has been duly advised by his attorneys, of the Commissioner of Education's duty to refer tenure determinations resulting in loss of position to the State Board of Examiners for possible suspension or revocation of certificate.

SETTLEMENT AGREEMENT AND RELEASE

This Settlement Agreement and Release ("this Agreement") is entered into by and between Edward Brown ("Brown") and the Camden City School District (the "District"). Together, Brown and the District may be referred to herein as "the Parties."

WHEREAS, Brown is a tenured Principal with the District;

WHEREAS, the District served Brown with tenure charges on or about July 15, 2014;

WHEREAS, the Parties mutually desire to resolve this matter;

NOW, THEREFORE, IT IS HEREBY AGREED by and between the Parties as follows:

1. Effective Date: This Agreement shall take effect on the date it is fully executed by the Parties.

2. Separation from Employment:

(a) Brown shall, simultaneously with his execution of this Agreement, provide the District, through its counsel, Brown & Connery, LLP, with an irrevocable letter of intent to retire effective December 31, 2017;

(b) Brown will voluntarily agree to be reinstated into a Guidance Counselor position effective Monday April 13, 2015;

(c) The District will reinstate Brown into a Guidance Counselor position effective Monday April 13, 2015;

(d) His salary of $109,685.00 per year will be increased 2.5% to $112,427.13, and then red-circled until the guide catches up to him or he retires;

(e) The District shall pay Brown a sum of $38,942.32, less withholdings, including all pension payments due, which represents 120 days of his pay pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:6-14;

(f) On December 31, 2017, Brown shall retire and/or resign from the District.

3. Withdrawal of Tenure Charges: The District shall withdraw the tenure charges against Brown subject to Brown's agreement and the approval of the Arbitrator. The District shall not take any further disciplinary action against Brown in relation to the underlying activities prior to the execution date of this agreement.

4. General Release: Brown releases the District from all known and unknown charges, complaints, claims, grievances, liabilities, obligations, promises, agreements, controversies, damages, actions, causes of action, suits, rights, demands, costs, losses, debts, penalties, fees, and expenses (including attorneys' fees and costs actually incurred) of any nature whatsoever that Brown has, ever had, or may have had, against the District, whether or not apparent or yet to be discovered, or which may hereafter develop, for any acts or omissions relating to or arising from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. This includes, but is not limited to, any claims Brown asserted, or may have asserted, under the following: the National Labor Relations Act; the Civil Rights Act of 1964; Sections 1981 through 1988 of Title 42 of the United States Code; the Employment Retirement Income Security Act; the Immigration Reform Control Act; the Americans with Disabilities Act; the Age Discrimination & Employment Act; the Fair Labor Standards Act; the Occupational Safety & Health Act; the Family & Medical Leave Act; the Equal Pay Act; the New Jersey Law Against Discrimination; the New Jersey Wage Payment Law; The New Jersey Minimum Wage Law; the Equal Pay Law for New Jersey; the New Jersey Worker Health & Safety Act; the New Jersey Family Leave Act; the New Jersey Conscientious Employee Protection Act; any constitution, statute, regulation, ordinance, executive order, public policy or common law; any written, verbal or implied contract; and any other authority or basis for seeking damages or relief of any kind. This release is intended to be broadly construed and applies to any and all claims and potential claims whatsoever, including those of which Brown is not aware, resulting from anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement.

5. Covenant Not to Sue: Brown warrants he has not commenced any legal proceedings of any type (including but not limited to charges filed with any governmental agency) against the District. Further, Brown agrees that he will not commence any legal proceedings against the District arising from or relating to anything that has happened up to the Effective Date of this Agreement. Should any such legal proceedings be commenced on Brown's behalf, Brown agrees that he will not seek or accept any relief or recovery therefrom. In the event of a violation of this paragraph, Brown agrees that the District shall be entitled to immediate dismissal of the legal proceedings, and that he shall be responsible for the District's attorneys' fees and costs incurred in connection with those legal proceedings. Should any entity, agency, commission, or person file a charge, action, complaint or lawsuit against the District based upon any of the above-released claims in Section 4, Brown agrees not to seek or accept any resulting relief whatsoever, in accordance with this section.

6. Claims Not Released: Notwithstanding Sections 4 and 5 of this Agreement, it is understood and agreed that Brown is not waiving claims filed under any state workers' compensation or unemployment law or challenges to the validity of this Agreement under the Older Workers Benefits Protection Act.

7. No Admission of Liability: This Agreement is not, and may not be construed as, an admission of liability by either Party.

8. No Eligibility for Re-Hire: Brown acknowledges and agrees that his employment with the District is irrevocably severed upon the effective date of his retirement and that he is ineligible for re-hire with the District. Should Brown re-apply for employment, the District shall have no obligation to consider or review his application.

9. Reference: Should any potential employers or any other third parties contact the District in regard to Brown, the District will only provide what is required by law, namely, his employment time period, where he was employed and his salary. The District will provide no other information in regard to any dispute or any action taken involving Brown's employment with the District.

10. No waiver of Tenure or Seniority: By entering into this Settlement and Release, Brown does not waive any tenure or seniority rights or entitlements to any position he has held in the District.

11. Entire Agreement: This Agreement encompasses the sole and entire agreement between the Parties and fully supersedes any and all prior agreements or understandings pertaining to the subject matter hereof. No other promises or agreements shall be binding unless in writing, signed by the Parties, and expressly stated to represent an amendment or supersession to this Agreement.

12. Severability: If any portion of this Agreement is deemed unenforceable, the remainder will be fully enforceable.

13. Applicable Law and Construction: This Agreement shall be construed and interpreted in accordance with the laws of the State of New Jersey; however, since each party to this Agreement and their counsel have reviewed and negotiated this Agreement, the general rule of construction that any ambiguity or uncertainty in a writing shall be interpreted against the party drafting the writing shall not apply to any action relating to this Agreement. Any action to enforce or interpret this Agreement shall only be brought in a court of competent jurisdiction in Camden County, New Jersey.

14. Breach: Brown understands that if he breaches any provision of this Agreement, the District will file an action to enforce this Agreement.

15. Notices: Any notice given or demand made pursuant to this Agreement shall be made by certified mail, return receipt requested, to the following persons at the following addresses:

STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS
DOCKET NOS. 1213-138 AND 1213-139
COMMISSIONER APPEAL NO. 6-4/14A

NANCY KANKA-HARVEY,	:
APPELLANT,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
NEW JERSEY STATE BOARD OF EXAMINERS,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

For the Petitioner-Appellant, Edward Cridge, Esq.

For the Respondent, State Board of Examiners, Lauren A. Jensen, Deputy Attorney General (John Jay Hoffman, Acting Attorney General of New Jersey)

For the Respondents, Lawrence Parker and Brenda Torrence, Robert M. Schwartz, Esq.

Appellant challenges the New Jersey State Board of Examiners' (Board of Examiners) decision declining to take action against the certificates held by school administrators Lawrence Parker and Brenda Torrence. In her verified petition, appellant alleged that Parker and Torrence displayed a pattern of unbecoming conduct toward her, warranting revocation or suspension of their certificates.

The Board of Examiners – in its discretion – may take action to revoke or suspend the certificates of any certificate holder "on the basis of demonstrated inefficiency, incapacity, conduct unbecoming a teacher or other just cause." N.J.A.C. 6A:9-17.5. Upon careful review of the record herein, the parties' submissions to the Board of Examiners, and their appellate briefs and appendices, the Commissioner concurs with the Board's decision declining to revoke or suspend the certificates at issue here.

In reviewing appeals from decisions of the Board of Examiners, the Commissioner may not substitute his judgment for that of the Board so long as appellant received due process and the Board's decision is supported by sufficient credible evidence in the record. Additionally, Board decisions should not be disturbed unless appellant demonstrates that the decision is arbitrary, capricious, or unreasonable. N.J.A.C. 6A:4-4.1(a); Bayshore Sewerage Co. v. Dep't of Envtl. Protection, 122 N.J. Super. 184, 199 (App. Div. 1973).

Initially, the record reflects that appellant was afforded due process throughout the proceedings before the Board of Examiners. Furthermore, the Commissioner finds that the sufficient credible evidence in the record adequately supports the Board of Examiners' determination. Finally, appellant failed to sustain her burden of establishing that the Board acted arbitrarily, capriciously or unreasonably in rendering its decision – and there is nothing in the record to support her claim. Appellant's obvious disagreement with the Board's decision is an inadequate basis upon which to disturb it.

Accordingly, the decision of the State Board of Examiners is affirmed.*

Re: Request for Docketing of Judgment

Dear Ms. Smith:

In accordance with N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, I am enclosing the April 10, 2015 Order of the Commissioner of Education finding that Angela Barrett is subject to entry of a judgment on the docket of the court due to her failure to pay the tuition assessment ordered in the matter of A.B., on behalf of minor child, L.M.D.-R v. Board of Education of the Township of Burlington, Burlington County.[1] By copy of this letter, I am advising Ms. Barrett, as well as counsel for the Burlington Township Board of Education, of the Commissioner's issuance of the enclosed Order.

If you require anything more, please contact this office at (609) 292-5706.

Very truly yours,

On May 1, 2014, a final agency decision was rendered in this matter, wherein the Commissioner found A.B. liable for tuition in the amount of Eighteen Thousand-Three Hundred and Eighty One Dollars and Thirty Four Cents ($18,381.34), representing tuition for a period of ineligible attendance by her grandson, L.M.D.-R., in the Board's school district between February 13, 2013 to June 25, 2013, and September 9, 2013 to February 4, 2014. The Board subsequently notified the Commissioner that A.B. had failed to comply with the decision and it requested that the Commissioner seek entry of the assessments on the judgment docket of the Superior Court pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10. A.B.'s response to the Board's request offered no reasons that have not been fully and fairly adjudicated as to why the judgment against her should not be so docketed.

Accordingly, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 2A:58-10, Angela Barrett is now subject to entry of a judgment by the court in the amount of $18,381.34, which represents the payment ordered at the conclusion of the case before the Commissioner, with interest to accrue as provided by law.

BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SADDLE RIVER BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner – a tenured pre-kindergarten (pre-K) teacher – alleged that the respondent Board violated her tenure and seniority rights when it did not assign her to a full-time position held by non-tenured and/or less senior teaching staff members following a reduction in force (RIF) for the 2013-2014 school year. Petitioner had been teaching in a .8 full-time equivalent (FTE) position during the 2012-2013 school year. The Board implemented budgetary cutbacks during 2012-2013, and in April 2013 petitioner was notified that her pre-K position would be reduced from .8 FTE to .6 FTE for the 2013-2014 school year. Subsequently, after petitioner notified the Board on October 17, 2013 that she intended to assert her right to a full-time tenured position, the Board restored petitioner's position to .8 FTE and retroactively paid her the difference in salary from September 1, 2013 through October 31, 2013. Petitioner filed her appeal in November 2013. The parties filed cross motions for summary decision.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: there were no issues of material fact in this case, and the matter was ripe for summary decision; the issues to be determined were whether petitioner was adversely affected by a RIF and if so, whether she was entitled to one of the full-time positions held by non-tenured and/or less senior staff following the RIF; because petitioner was restored to her position in October 2013 and retroactively paid for the difference in salary from September 1 until October 31, 2013, she did not experience a loss of salary or employment benefits and was therefore not the subject of a RIF; further, petitioner was offered a full-time permanent kindergarten teacher position, with an increase in salary, but rejected that offer. The ALJ concluded that petitioner was not the subject of a RIF, and therefore could not assert rights to the positions in question, and accordingly granted the respondent Board's motion for summary decision and denied petitioner's cross motion.

Upon comprehensive review, the Commissioner rejected the Initial Decision of the OAL, finding, inter alia, that tenure and seniority rights are fixed as of the date of a RIF decision; accordingly, petitioner's tenure rights were triggered at the time of her RIF in April 2013; moreover, there appears to be a factual issue in dispute in this case. Accordingly, the Commissioner remanded this matter to the OAL for complete development of the record and a determination of petitioner's tenure and seniority rights as a result of the RIF in April 2013.

CLAUDIA CAVANAGH,	:
PETITIONER,	:
V.	:	COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION
BOARD OF EDUCATION OF THE BOROUGH OF SADDLE RIVER BERGEN COUNTY,	:	DECISION
RESPONDENT.	:

The record of this matter and the Initial Decision of the Office of Administrative Law have been reviewed, as have the exceptions filed pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4 by the petitioner, Claudia Cavanagh, and the Board of Education's reply thereto.

This matter involves a claim by the petitioner – a tenured teaching staff member – that she was entitled to a full-time teaching position held by non-tenured and/or less senior teaching staff members following a reduction in force (RIF) for the 2013-2014 school year. In April 2013, the Board notified the petitioner that her tenured pre-kindergarten (pre-K) position would be reduced from .8 full-time equivalent (FTE) to .6 FTE for the 2013-2014 school year. [1] The Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) determined that the petitioner was not the subject of a RIF in April 2013 because in October 2013 the Board restored the petitioner's position and retroactively paid her the difference in salary from September 1, 2013 until October 31, 2013. As a result, the ALJ determined that the petitioner did not experience a loss of salary or employment benefits, and granted summary decision in favor of the Board.

[1] On April 4, 2013, the Board reduced the petitioner's pre-K position from .8 FTE to .5 FTE for the 2013-2014 school year, but on April 29, 2013, the Board notified the petitioner that her pre-K position would be reduced from .8 FTE to .6 FTE.

Upon review, the Commissioner finds that the ALJ erroneously determined that the petitioner was not the subject of a RIF in April 2013 simply because the Board attempted to make the petitioner whole in October 2013 when it restored the petitioner to her pre-RIF status, and paid the difference in her salary retroactive to September 1, 2013. The Commissioner also finds that, based on the current record, there appear to be material facts in dispute that may preclude the disposition of this matter by summary decision.

It is well established that tenure and seniority rights are fixed as of the date of the RIF decision. See, Francey v. Board of Educ. of the City of Salem, 286 N.J. Super. 354, 358-361 (App. Div.1996) (Tenure rights are fixed as of the date of the RIF decision; therefore, any subsequent endorsements obtained by a teacher are not afforded any tenure protections) Boards of education have historically argued that the date of the employee's RIF is the only reasonable date upon which the employee's rights are established, otherwise it would be impossible for the Board to properly maintain order and efficiency for reemployment purposes. Likewise, boards of education must also adhere to that fixed date. Here, it is undisputed that the petitioner has obtained tenure in the district and that in April 2013 she was notified that her pre-K position would be reduced from .8 FTE to .6 FTE. As a result, her tenure and seniority rights were triggered at the time of the RIF in April 2013. The fact that the Board subsequently attempted to make petitioner whole by retroactively restoring her to her pre-RIF status in October 2013 does not negate the fact that the petitioner was in fact RIF'd in April 2013.

Additionally, the petitioner's rights were not limited to her .8 FTE pre-K position, but rather all other positions held by non-tenured or less senior teaching staff members within the scope of the petitioner's teaching certificate, and endorsements thereto, at the time of the RIF. Although the ALJ stated that the petitioner would not be entitled to the fifth grade position even if she was RIF'd based upon the fact that the fifth grade position was a temporary leave replacement position, the ALJ made no mention of the petitioner's right to the second grade position. It should be noted that it is irrelevant for tenure and seniority purposes whether the non-tenured teacher who was assigned the second grade position was familiar with the students. Furthermore, the Board's alleged offer in October 2013 to transfer the petitioner to a full-time kindergarten teacher position when the current teacher began maternity leave in February 2014 similarly did not negate petitioner's bumping rights.

Moreover, there also appears to be a factual issue in dispute as to what position the Board designated as a leave replacement position, either the second grade position or the fifth grade position. It appears that the Board originally designated the second grade position as a leave replacement position, then removed that designation and in turn made the fifth grade position a leave replacement position. Certainly it is essential to make factual findings with respect to the nature of the positions in question in order to properly evaluate the petitioner's potential right to these positions.[2]

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is rejected; this matter is remanded to the OAL for complete development of the record, and a determination of the petitioner's tenure and seniority rights as a result of the RIF in April 2013.

IT IS SO ORDERED.[3]

COMMISSIONER OF EDUCATION

Date of Decision: 4/10/15

Date of Mailing: 4/10/15

[2] Petitioner has alleged that the Board may have changed the designations in order to defeat her seniority rights. It therefore may be necessary for the ALJ to make credibility determinations in order to reach the necessary factual findings.

[3] Pursuant to P.L. 2008, c. 36 (N.J.S.A. 18A:6-9.1), Commissioner decisions are appealable to the Superior Court, Appellate Division.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE AND PROCEDURAL HISTORY

Petitioner, Claudia Cavanaugh (Cavanaugh), asserts that the Board of Education of Saddle River (Board) assigned her to a part-time position as a result of a reduction in force. The matter was transmitted to the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) and filed on November 27, 2013. On September 27, 2014, respondent filed a motion for summary decision. Petitioner filed a motion for summary decision on October 22, 2014. Respondent filed a response to petitioner's motion on December 10, 2014. A hearing is scheduled to begin on February 9, 2015.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Based upon a consideration of the documentary evidence presented, I FIND the following FACTS:

On September 1, 2006, Cavanaugh was hired by the Board as a pre-school aide. On August 10, 2009, petitioner status was changed to a .75 full-time equivalent (FTE) pre-K-3 teacher. A 1.0 denotes a full-time position. A number below 1.0 denotes a less than full-time position. On October 28, 2009, petitioner's pre-K position was increased to .8 FTE. On August 28, 2012, petitioner was granted tenure effective September 1, 2012. During the 2012-2013 year, respondent implemented budgetary cutbacks. On April 4, 2013, petitioner was notified that her pre-K teaching position would be reduced from .8 FTE to .5 FTE for the 2013-2014 school year. On April 29, 2013, the Board increased petitioner's pre-K position from .5 FTE to .6 FTE for the 2013-2014 school year.

In the 2013-2014 school year the following teacher positions opened up: fifth grade, kindergarten, and second grade. These positions were all posted on the NJ-HIRE website from August 18, 2013, to August 26, 2013. An email was sent to the staff on August 17, 2013, regarding the opening of a full-time fifth-grade teacher position. Petitioner was omitted from this email. The kindergarten position was filed by Jill O'Flaherty (O' Flaherty), a tenured teacher who had more seniority than petitioner. The second-grade teacher position was filed by Aubree McLean (McLean), a non-tenured teacher who possesses the required certification and was familiar with the students. The fifth-grade teacher position was filed by Kevin Lane (Lane), a new hire with the necessary mathematics experience for the position. McLean's position was made a full-time tenure-track position and a leave replacement designation was assigned to Lane.

Lane was a temporary teacher replacement due to the maternity leave of Christyn Pellearino.

On October 17, 2013, petitioner notified the Board that she wanted to assert her right to the full-time tenure-track position created when Mr. Stokes was hired as the head teacher. The positions in question are the teacher positions for second and fifth grade held by McLean and Lane. On October 29, 2013, the Board increased petitioner's position from .6 FTE to .8 FTE for the 2013-2014 retroactive to September 1, 2013. On October 31, 2014, petitioner recouped the difference between .6 FTE and .8 FTE from September 1, 2013, until her retroactive restoration. Petitioner was offered a permanent full-time position as a kindergarten teacher, a position made vacant when O'Flaherty went on maternity leave, which she refused. Had petitioner accepted the position as kindergarten teacher, her salary would have increased.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

Both parties seek summary dismissal in this matter. The rules governing motions for summary decision in an OAL matter are embodied N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5. These provisions mirror the language of Rule 4:46-2 and the Supreme Court's decision in Judson v. Peoples Bank and Trust Company of Westfield, 17 N.J. 67 (1954). Under N.J.A.C. 1:1-12.5(b), the determination to grant summary judgment should be based on the papers presented as well as any affidavits, which may have been filed with the application. In order for the adverse, i.e., the non-moving party to prevail in such an application, responding affidavits must be submitted showing that there is indeed a genuine issue of fact, which can only be determined in an evidentiary proceeding. The Court in Brill v. Guardian Life Insurance Company of America, 142 N.J. 520, 523 (1995), set the standard to be applied when deciding a motion for summary judgment. Therein the Court stated:

> The determination whether there exists a genuine issue with respect to a material fact challenged requires the Motion Judge to consider whether the competent evidential materials presented, when viewed in the light most favorable to the non-moving party... are sufficient to permit a rational > fact finder to resolve the alleged disputed issue in favor of the non-moving party.

In this matter there is no question of fact. The issues are whether petitioner was adversely affected by a reduction in force (RIF) and if so whether she was entitled to the positions that either McLean or Lane occupy.

N.J.S.A. 18A:28-12 states:

> If any teaching staff member shall be dismissed as a result of such reduction, such person shall be and remain upon a preferred eligible list in the order of seniority for reemployment whenever a vacancy occurs in a position for which such person shall be qualified and he shall be reemployed by the body causing dismissal, if and when such vacancy occurs and in determining seniority, and in computing length of service for reemployment, full recognition shall be given to previous years of service, and the time of service by any such person in or with the military or naval forces of the United States or of this State, subsequent to September 1, 1940, and the time of service of any member of the American Merchant Marine during World War II who is declared by the United States Department of Defense to be eligible for federal veterans' benefits, shall be credited to him as though he had been regularly employed in such a position within the district during the time of such military or naval service, except that the period of that service shall not be credited toward more than four years of employment or seniority credit.

In Carpenito v. Board of Education of Rumson, 322 N.J. Super. 522 (App. Div. 1999), the court stated:

> We agree with the NJSBA and hold that, absent allegations of bad faith or unlawful purpose, a tenured teacher's seniority rights are not triggered when a school board abolishes the teacher's position and assigns the teacher to teach different subjects within his or her certification without reducing the teacher's salary or other employment benefit.

Although the Carpenito case involved a transfer of a teacher from one position to another, there was no loss of salary or other employment benefits. In this matter Cavanaugh did not suffer the loss of any salary or employment benefits. On October 29, 2013, Cavanaugh's position was increased from .6 FTE to .8 FTE for the 2013-2014 retroactive to September 1, 2013, which is what her hours were for the 2012-2013 school year. On or around October 31, 2013, petitioner was paid the difference in compensation from .6 FTE to .8 FTE from September 1, 2013, to her retroactive restoration. Petitioner was not RIF'd because she did not experience a loss of salary or other employment benefits. In addition petitioner was offered a full-time permanent kindergarten teacher position which would have increased her salary. She rejected that offer.

I CONCLUDE that petitioner was not entitled to the second-grade or fifth-grade positions held by McLean and Lane because she did not experience a loss of salary or other employment benefits and therefore she was not RIF'd. I Further CONCLUDE petitioner would have had a full-time permanent position with an increase in salary had she accepted the kindergarten teacher position.

Even if petitioner had been RIF'd, Lane was assigned the fifth-grade teacher position as a temporary leave replacement teacher due to the maternity leave of Christyn Pellegrino. The Court in Lammers v. Board of Education of Point Pleasant, 134 N.J. 264 (1993), held that a position left open by another teacher's leave of absence was not a vacancy which a RIF'd teacher could assert any rights. Since Lane was a temporary leave replacement teacher, no RIF'd teacher could assert any rights to the position.

I CONCLUDE that even if petitioner had been RIF'd she would not have been entitled to Lane's position because Lane was a temporary leave replacement teacher.

ORDER

Based on the foregoing, it is ORDERED that respondent's motion for summary decision is GRANTED and petitioner's cross-motion for summary decision is DENIED.

I hereby FILE this Initial Decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended summary decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, P.O. Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

RESPONDENT.	:

SYNOPSIS

Petitioner Merchantville Board of Education (Merchantville) sought severance of its sending-receiving relationship with respondent Pennsauken Board of Education (Pennsauken) and establishment of a sending-receiving relationship with the Haddon Heights Board of Education (Haddon Heights). Merchantville currently sends its students in grades 9-12 to Pennsauken High School via the existing send-receive relationship. Pennsauken Board of Education opposed the severance of the agreement, arguing that removal of Merchantville students from Pennsauken schools would, inter alia, negatively impact the racial diversity of the district.

The ALJ found, inter alia, that: N.J.S.A. 18A:38-11 mandates that any school district that lacks high school facilities must designate a high school for its pupils through a sending-receiving relationship; change or severance of a send-receive relationship requires the approval of the Commissioner; pursuant to *N.J.S.A.*18A:38-13, the Commissioner must make equitable determinations based on all of the circumstances, including the educational and financial implications for the affected districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils, and the effect on racial composition of the pupil population, and shall grant a requested change if no substantial negative impact will result therefrom; severance of the relationship with Pennsauken and establishment of a new one with Haddon Heights would not result in a substantial negative impact upon the quality of education, nor upon the financial state of either district; here, it appears that a racially diverse, majority-minority subset of students would be removed from a similar, though not identical, diverse school population and be placed into another diverse school setting. The ALJ concluded that granting Merchantville's petition to sever its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken would produce no substantial negative impact on the quality of education, the financial condition and the racial composition of the student population of the districts. Accordingly, the ALJ granted Merchantville's petition for severance of the agreement with Pennsauken, subject to its entering into a new sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights for a minimum duration of five years.

The Commissioner concurred with the ALJ's findings of fact and conclusions of law, and adopted the Initial Decision as the final decision in this matter, finding that – absent a showing of substantial negative financial, educational or racial impact herein – the Commissioner is required to grant the requested severance pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13.

This synopsis is not part of the Commissioner's decision. It has been prepared for the convenience of the reader. It has been neither reviewed nor approved by the Commissioner.

The voluminous record[1] in this matter and the Initial Decision issued by the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) have been carefully reviewed. Neither party filed exceptions with the Commissioner pursuant to N.J.A.C. 1:1-18.4.

Petitioner, Merchantville Board of Education (Merchantville), initiated this action to request severance of its sending-receiving relationship with respondent, Pennsauken Board of Education (Pennsauken) in favor of establishing a new sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights Board of Education (Haddon Heights). Pennsauken opposed severance, arguing that removal of Merchantville's students[2] from Pennsauken High School will result in a substantial negative impact upon the quality of education, the financial condition, and the racial composition of the student body at the high school under N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13.

Following nine days of hearing at the OAL, and additional briefing to address the effect of Board of Education of Longport v. Board of Education of Atlantic City, Commissioner's Decision No. 238-14, decided June 5, 2014, the Administrative Law Judge (ALJ) granted Merchantville's petition and determined that severance of its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken will not result in a substantial negative impact upon the quality of education, the financial condition, or the racial composition of any of the districts involved.

The Commissioner concurs with the ALJ's findings of fact and conclusions of law – which are fully supported by his credibility determinations[3] as well as the sufficient credible evidence in the record – for the reasons stated in his extensive Initial Decision. Because the ALJ's determination is sustained by the record and consistent with applicable law, the Commissioner finds no reason to disturb it. Absent a showing of substantial negative financial, educational, or racial impact herein, the Commissioner is required to grant the requested severance pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13.

Accordingly, the Initial Decision is adopted and Merchantville's application for severance of its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken is hereby granted, subject to establishment of a sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights for a minimum duration of five years.[4]

BEFORE ELIA A. PELIOS, ALJ:

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

Petitioner Merchantville of Education seeks severance of its sending-receiving relationship with respondent Pennsauken Board of Education and seeks to establish a sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights Board of Education.

PROCEDURAL HISTORY

The petitioner requested a fair hearing and the matter was filed at the Office of Administrative Law (OAL) on February 14, 2012, to be heard as a contested case pursuant to N.J.S.A. 52:14B-1 to -15 and 14F-1 to -13. The matter was heard on September 11, 12, 16, 17, 19, 20, 24, and 25, 2013 and on October 7, 2013. The record was held open to allow the parties to submit closing arguments in writing and was closed on March 24, 2014. The record was reopened to allow the parties to provide additional briefing after a final agency decision was issued in a similar matter and was closed again on June 23, 2014. Orders were entered in this matter to allow for an extension of time in which to file the initial decision.

FACTUAL DISCUSSION

Petitioner Merchantville Board of Education (Merchantville, petitioner) is a body politic, which operates a Pre-K through 8th school district, and educates its students in grades 9th-12th by way of a sending-receiving agreement with the Pennsauken Board of Education (Pennsauken, respondent). Respondent Pennsauken Board of Education is a body politic, which operates a Pre-K through 12th school district. Haddon Heights Board of Education (Haddon Heights) is a body politic, which also operates a Pre-K through 12th school district. In or around July 6, 1988, Merchantville filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. See generally Bd. of Edu. of the Borough of Merchantville v. Bd. of Educ. of the Twp. of Pennsauken, 1992 N.J. AGEN LEXIS 5260 (Sept. 16, 1992). The State Board of Education denied Merchantville's petition in a decision issued on January 7, 1998. Bd. of Educ. Of Borough of Merchantville v. Bd. Educ. Of Twp. Of Pennsauken, OAL Dkt. No. EDU 5702-88, 4064-89 (Jan. 7, 1998).

In or around 2011, Merchantville commissioned Statistical Forecasting, LLC and James L. Kirtland, CPA to study the feasibility of Merchantville's termination of its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. One of the options explored was the establishment of a sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights for Merchantville students in grades 9th through 12th. In January 2012, the Feasibility Study was finalized and the results shared with Merchantville. (P-28). On January 17, 2012, Merchantville filed a petition with the Commissioner of Education seeking to sever its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken and to establish a new sending-receiving relation between Merchantville and Haddon Heights wherein Merchantville's students in grades 9th-12th would be educated at Haddon Heights High School.

The preceding statements are not in dispute and are hereby FOUND as FACT.

The following is a summary of the witness testimony in this matter:

Stephen Morrone:

Mr. Morrone testified that he has been on the Merchantville Board of Education for eight years, since 2005. He is a Detective Sergeant in the Merchantville Police Department and has been in the Department for twenty-eight years. He is a graduate of Lasalle University. With the exception of about 18 months, Mr. Morrone has lived continuously in Merchantville since 1989 and raised two children and three step-children who all attended Pennsauken High School.

Mr. Morrone recounted problems that his children had at Pennsauken High School, including school violence, problems with the IEP process and bullying to demonstrate that he felt the high school did not meet his children's needs despite that he was in contact with school officials during the children's attendance there. All five of the children either did not attend, or were not adequately prepared for, community college and subsequently none of them have degrees. His own and the community's dissatisfaction with the sending-receiving relationship are the impetus for his interest to serve on the Board of Education.

There is no formal liaison between the Pennsauken and Merchantville School Boards and past efforts by Merchantville to establish communication have been rebuffed by Pennsauken. This includes Mr. Morrone's own outreach to a specific member of the Pennsauken Board of Education. Mr. Morrone testified that in his experience, despite any racial and socio-economic differences, every person he knows in Merchantville is in favor of changing its receiving district from Pennsauken to Haddon Heights because of a general sense of dissatisfaction with the high school.

Anthony Arcodia

Mr. Anthony Arcodia has been the Superintendent of Schools for Barrington Board of Education for four and half years. He has a Master's in Education Administration from Rutgers. Prior to becoming superintendent, he was a teacher in the district and has been there for thirty-five years. Since he has been there, Barrington has always sent their students to Haddon Heights for high school.

He testified that the professional relationship between Barrington and Haddon Heights school districts is "highly effective" and that the quantity and quality of communication between sending and receiving districts are "essential ingredients for effective schools."

Communication between the districts happens regularly between Mr. Arcodia and the Haddon Heights Superintendent. Mr. Arcodia stressed the importance of communication between the districts at all levels, not just between administrators. He states that good communication also occurs between the district secretaries, the respective directors of special education and between Barrington teachers and the curriculum coordinator for the districts.

Although recently retired, the previous Curriculum Coordinator from Haddon Heights would ask to come into Barrington schools to see the educational practices of even lower grades, like in first grade, and try to change the programs to make sure all the students in the two districts were learning the same curriculum. Additionally, calendars between the districts are coordinated and in-service trainings for teachers are conducted in similar fashions.

Resources such as the Haddon Heights auditorium and the Barrington sports fields are shared between both districts.

He regularly requests and obtains timely information about Barrington students' performance in the high school to target areas of improvement. He keeps track of students' rank and placement in specific tiers. When Barrington students were not performing well in one area, Haddon Heights offered a summer bridge program for 8th graders who needed assistance in certain areas to catch up.

He asks for academic information, all of his students went on to college and one went to the military last year, in many cases he gets a response from Haddon Heights to inquiries on the same day.

Recently, when the Haddon Heights superintendent told him about four or five special education Barrington students who were not performing well at Haddon Heights, a meeting was arranged with Barrington administrators, Haddon Heights administrators, appropriate teachers and parents to correct the issues. Mr. Arcodia testified that the students were redirected and the issues were ironed out. The issue involves Barrington because an out-of-district placement for Barrington students will increase the amount of tuition Barrington owes Haddon Heights for that student and the difference could greatly impact their budget.

There is some social interaction among the two districts' students before high school though sports and participation in dances and plays. Additionally, there is an orientation program in place for all three districts before high school.

Mr. Acordia felt that if there was in increase in racial diversity as a result of Merchantville sending its students to Haddon Heights that this would be a positive experience for Barrington students. Although the Barrington district is two-thirds white, there are programs in place to prepare students for the more diverse student body which is present at Haddon Heights since the Lawnside also sends students to Haddon Heights.

Jacquelyn Fuentes

Ms. Fuentes, a current Merchantville resident, has been on the Merchantville Board of Education since November 2012. She described her ethnic and racial background as mixed race and Latina. Ms. Fuentes and her son, now twenty-years-old, resided within the Pennsauken and Merchantville school districts but they both decided that he would not attend Pennsauken public schools from grades five to twelve. During that time, he attended parochial schools since both Ms. Fuentes and her son believed that there was a lot of violence happening in the schools and that he would not be appropriately challenged in his academics. Her son is currently serving in the military overseas.

Ms. Fuentes' son had two girlfriends in high school; one is his current wife, Amber. Both young women attended Pennsauken high school, at least for part of high school and stated to Ms. Fuentes that they did not feel safe at the school; that they were not academically challenged; and that students regularly left school early. Ms. Fuentes described her experience of going to Pennsauken High School to assist Amber in withdrawing to attend another high school. The scene in the administrative office was chaotic packed with students obtaining late passes, people screaming between offices and fights breaking out.

Ms. Fuentes was inspired to run for the School Board to change the sending-receiving relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken. She states that there is no contact with the Pennsauken Board of Education but that the Merchantville and Haddon Heights School Boards already have had some communication about coordinating curriculums in anticipation of the new sending-receiving relationship. Ms. Fuentes collected signatures to support severing the sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken and she did not encounter any Merchantville parents who were against severing the relationship. The parents she spoke with were of diverse racial backgrounds such as black, Vietnamese, Asian, Latino and mixed race. She does not know if she spoke specifically to parents whose of Merchantville students who graduated from Pennsauken High School with high rankings.

Scott Strong

Mr. Strong has a Master's degree in Educational Leadership and has served as the Chief School Administrator for Merchantville Board of Education for about a year and half at the time of his testimony. This position includes the role of superintendent and principal since it is such a small district. Merchantville offers education from pre-k to eighth grade and then for high school students can either go to Pennsauken, local vocational schools, parochial schools, the Audubon school through the New Jersey School Choice program or pay tuition in other public school districts. In Merchantville just fewer than forty percent of students are on the free and reduced price lunch program. About 57% of the students are white, 23% are African/American, 14% Hispanic and other races make up the remaining six percent. The eighth grade class is normally about thirty-five students. In the past, before Audubon became an option, most graduating eighth graders would go to Camden Catholic parochial school and other vocational schools. He understands that the Merchantville and Pennsauken sending-receiving relationship has been in place since the 1950's, but he is not aware of the exact start date.

In the eighteen months since he has been there, the only communication between the Merchantville and Pennsauken Boards of Education have been two letters stating that Merchantville does not meet the minimum requirement for the number of students attending Pennsauken to have a position on the Pennsauken school board. Additionally, the Merchantville members were invited to attend the graduation ceremony in Pennsauken.

In November 2012, he attended a Camden County Department of Education meeting to start a dialogue with Pennsauken Superintendent Dr. Marilyn Martinez. He opened discussions with her and expressed an interest in better communication between the districts. As follow-up to meeting, he sent email to Dr. Martinez requesting info about Merchantville student rankings, how many AP courses Merchantville students were taking, how many Merchantville students took the SATs and other demographic information. He did not receive a response to this email and he was unable to retrieve a copy of the email because it has been deleted.

In May 2013, Mr. Strong sent an email asking about how the Merchantville Algebra I students were placed at Pennsauken. Martinez responded that she would get back to him but she never did. He did not follow up since he ultimately no longer required the information.

He called Martinez one time on the phone and left a message with a secretary and did not receive a call back. He has not made any other attempts to reach out to her. The Pennsauken district has not reached out to him regarding coordinating school calendars, workshops or trainings. There is no coordination or "articulation" regarding the curriculum between the two districts. There are no shared programs between the schools. Around the end of the school year, a counselor from Pennsauken comes to Merchantville to assist eighth grade students in registering for high school classes. Other than that, he has not seen or heard of a Pennsauken staff person coming to Merchantville. The special education programs at Merchantville and Pennsauken do stay in regular contact though. This is the only area where the two districts do communicate.

Since he has been unable to gain any data regarding Merchantville students' performance at Pennsauken, he tries to obtain anecdotal information from high school students who return to pick up younger siblings and walk home. In general they have told him that high school was not as hard as they thought it would be.

Mr. Strong has maintained regular contact with Superintendent Adams at Haddon Heights. He has found Mr. Adams to be very responsive and he attempts to answer any questions Mr. Strong has within twenty-four hours. Mr. Adams has also provided Mr. Strong with his cell phone number to make himself accessible.

Based on the data available to Mr. Strong, he states that more high school students at Haddon Heights than at Pennsauken take the SATs and on average they perform better on the test.

Currently, Merchantville provides busing for high school students who attend Pennsauken and transportation issues would have to be worked out between Merchantville and Haddon Heights since the distance is further. It is his hope that he could work together with Haddon Heights on "late buses" to allow students to participate in after-school activities.

Although the actual tuition per student is less at Haddon Heights than Pennsauken, Mr. Strong expects more interest in Haddon Heights and, given that the transportation issue may be more involved, the cost total cost to the district could be greater. This cost would be phased in over time, just as the students would be phased into Haddon Heights one class year at a time.

He could not evaluate if educating students in a more racially diverse environment could directly positively impact their overall performance but he felt that diversity is positive and it is part of educating the whole child.

Dr. Ronn Johnson

Dr. Ronn Johnson is the Superintendent of the Lawnside Board of Education. He lives in Pennsauken and has two children in the school district, ages eleven and seven. He has a Master's degree in School Administration and a Doctoral degree from Wilmington University.

He has been working in the field of education for approximately twenty years and he has been with Lawnside for fourteen years. Four of those years, he has been the superintendent. The eight years prior he served as the Vice Principal. He previously taught in Camden City for eight years. When he learned that he would be asked to testify in this proceeding, he contacted Ms. Martinez to learn why no one from Pennsauken had reached out to him regarding the petition.

Lawnside's school is Pre-k through eighth grade with 287 students. Approximately 97% of the students are African American, 1% are Hispanic and the other 2% are Asian, Latino or other races.

Dr. Johnson believes that Lawnside has been sending its children to Haddon Heights for high school since 1926. He testified that there is a high level of communication between his district and the Barrington and Haddon Heights districts. There is "vertical articulation" among the three districts, meaning that teachers at the middle school level will work with the teachers at the high school level to discuss the skills the students are going to require. Additionally teachers of the same grade levels will work collaboratively to coordinate curriculums. The three superintendents work together to create a consistent school calendar and coordinate professional development. Additionally, Lawnside will get involved if there's a Lawnside special education student at Haddon Heights where there is an issue or a risk of out-of-district placement.

All three special education directors develop training and in-service training days where all districts work together. They also use the same type of special education software to develop IEPs. The districts provide parent nights for special education students for all three districts so that they may interact.

Dr. Johnson will occasionally go outside of his job description and speak with high school students who came from Lawnside if there is a discipline or motivational issue. Although this is outside of what is required from him, he is happy to do it when Haddon Heights requests it since he is vested in the success of his students at that school. Since he was previously the Vice Principal at Lawnside, he has experience with disciplinary issues.

There are share services agreements with Barrington and Haddon Heights. For example, Lawnside and Haddon Heights have share members of the child study team. Additionally, Haddon Heights has assisted Lawnside when they had to bus a child from outside the district to Haddon Heights when DYFS placed a student outside the home. The districts also share facilities. The Summer Bridge Program for eighth graders is hosted in all three districts. The Haddon Heights athletic teams occasionally use the Lawnside gym. Additionally, in the past Dr. Johnson has sat on a hiring panel for the child study team director at Haddon Heights.

Dr. Johnson is very aware of the academic performance of Lawnside students at Haddon Heights. He knows their graduation rates, the AP class participation, and proficiency test scores. On average, Lawnside students do not perform as well on the NJ ASK test as students in the other two districts, but overall his students are successful at Haddon Heights.

He has had conversations with Haddon Heights to eliminate some of the standardized requirements to take AP or college prep classes to potentially allow more Lawnside students to enroll in these classes. He is not certain if they have done that at this time. Lawnside is part of the Delaware Valley Consortium, which is a group of schools aiming to close the academic achievement gap between schools which are primarily minority and those that are made up of primarily Caucasian students. Eliminating the standardized requirements for these courses was an idea presented by the Consortium.

Haddon Heights and Lawnside have taken steps for Lawnside students' social integration into the high school. There is a mentoring program in place run through a local church. The Haddon Heights athletic department coaches and former students from Lawnside come back to speak with Lawnside students about the athletic transitions they will face. An organization called SADD, Students Against Destructive Decisions, is facilitated through the guidance departments and students will to come and speak with Lawnside eighth graders about drugs and alcohol. The Haddon Heights administration also speaks with the eighth grade students about the transition to high school; they entertain student questions and quell any rumors.

He believes that Lawnside students are provided with a diverse educational experience when they go to Haddon Heights because they are leaving a primarily African American community and culture and gaining exposure to students and staff members of another socioeconomic status and culture. This is a realistic exposure to a real-world setting. He has not had any founded complaints of racial problems or issues regarding Lawnside students at Haddon Heights.

Ronald Corn

Mr. Corn is the Principal of grades seven through twelve for the Haddon Heights Board of Education. He has twenty years of experience in education including as a social studies teacher for thirteen years, then as Vice Principal at Haddon Heights.

He testified that Haddon Heights has a "hometown feel" with not too many disciplinary programs. There are less than 800 students in total and 650 in the high school. He believes the school has a unique feel because of the diverse cultural and socioeconomic backgrounds present at the school. About twenty-five to thirty percent of the students in the high school are of minority backgrounds, the remainder are white.

The high school is geared toward preparation for a college education. The lowest level is college prep courses, then honors courses and next AP courses. There are rich opportunities for students, given the budget. Mr. Corn estimates that over 85% of the high school students go on to either two or four-year colleges or the military.

The three best things about Haddon Heights High school is that it is an active community and many parents are very involved in the school, there is not a lot of teacher turnover and the three districts blend well to be known as the "Garnets," the school mascot, instead of three distinct communities.

The school did something called a "lipdub" or a video of the students set to music to show school spirit. They took an entire school day to organize and film the video. The students selected music to represent the different musical interests, clubs and teams at the school. Mr. Corn felt that the video, although it was a scary moment for the faculty since there were no structured classes that day, was a positive experience and made the students feel vested in the school as a whole.

Some things that make Haddon Heights unique are that they do a monthly report to highlight specific activities by teachers and students. Also, Haddon Heights has two Professional Learning Communities a month with the faculty so that teachers who all teach a particular subject, such as algebra, can discuss and improve the curriculum. It allows time for teachers to talk to each other, which doesn't normally happen within the school day. Also, Mr. Corn has a Site-Based Council which is an avenue for teachers to volunteer to participate in the decision-making process at the school. It is a leadership model to help keep him informed about teacher's views.

He characterized the academic relationship with Lawnside and Barrington districts as tremendous. Vertical articulation between Haddon Heights High School and the sending middle schools is heighted since Michael Adams took over as Superintendent.

He communicates very often with Dr. Johnson and Mr. Arcodia and believes that communication on all levels of the faculty is extremely important. He will involve Dr. Johnson and Mr. Arcodia when important issues arise such as residency or major discipline issues. They are also involved in graduation.

Compared to five years ago, Lawnside and Barrington students are more prepared for high school. This is due to improved communication among the districts.

Some things they have implemented to close any achievement gaps and to integrate the three districts are the Summer Bridge Program which allows rising freshman to gain more skills, mentoring programs, an orientation program involving all three districts that includes the parents with events in the spring and summer, and they specifically arrange homerooms to include students from each district in the homeroom for social integration.

To widen cultural and racial understanding among students and staff, Haddon Heights has required teachers to read the book "Black Students, White Teacher," and they have had professional development regarding how to meet the needs of different learners and the discipline program was revised. For students, they have had guest speakers on the topic, they have an organization called Multicultural Student University that hosts dinners, performs skits and dances based on a various cultures, and they have "Mix it Up" day which pairs students of different cultures or communities together to have conversations about diversity issues and they have a Holocaust curriculum. Additionally, the school has also offered a Multicultural Art class and an African American history class.

Mr. Corn does not see any logistic problem with incorporating roughly 300 more students from Merchantville into the building.

Michael Adams

Mr. Michael Adams is the Superintendent of Schools for the Haddon Heights Board of Education. He has been in the field of education for nineteen years including as a middle school and elementary school teacher, a vice principal and a principal. He has been Superintendent at Haddon Heights for four years.

Every five years, the district does a strategic plan. These are not state mandated, but they are voluntary on the part of the district.

Some of the educational aspirations in the strategic plan for the Haddon Heights School District were: for the Special Education director, who also serves Lawnside students, to work with the Barrington Special Education director to try to bring back out-of-district placements and meet those students' needs in-district, and for there to be vertical and horizontal articulation among the three districts. Articulation means engaging in constant communication and bringing teachers together from various grade levels, such as 7th, 8th and 9th grade teachers to determine the educational goals for 9th grade students at Haddon Heights and gear the 7th and 8th grade curriculums to ensure that students are meeting those goals. It also means that the three districts implement the same evaluation standards for the teachers. He believes all goals in the last strategic plan have been met.

Mr. Adams testified that there is excellent communication among the three districts. For example, he provided a bus to Lawnside when a busing issue arose. Additionally, Lawnside and Barrington have allowed Haddon Heights to be on a payment plan for years where the districts have over-paid tuition. The three superintendents are in touch several times in a month. The districts have decided to combine their CPAG meetings for Special Education and they rotate which school will host the meeting. When the superintendents from Lawnside and Barrington have questions for him, he gets back with them, or he has another staff person get back with them immediately.

One way the three districts have been able to work together and save money is to buy only one set of the five required novels for all eighth graders and to rotate them among the districts.

Given his past communication with Mr. Strong from Merchantville he believes Mr. Strong will fit right into the mix of the superintendents from the other two schools. He has spoken with him enough to get a sense of his style and work ethic.

The Haddon Heights Board of Education has eleven members, nine from Haddon Heights and then one from each Lawnside and Barrington. He believes the Haddon Heights members are open to receiving feedback from Lawnside and Barrington. At each Board meeting, he recognizes accomplishments by staff and students in addition to discussing issues. Each Friday he emails a Board Brief to each of the members and the Lawnside and Barrington members are free to forward this onto their own Boards. If Merchantville did not have enough students to make up the 10% legally required to have a seat on the Board, he would still recognize the students and staff and address Merchantville concerns at the Board meeting.

The Board resolution and contract regarding the potential sending-receiving relationship with Merchantville was passed unanimously with the Haddon Heights Board of Education. No one has expressed to him that this would be a negative change for the school. Some teachers who reside in Merchantville have expressed to him that this would be a positive change.

Haddon Heights has applied for the New Jersey Choice Program whereby they would accept tuition students from other districts.

Approximately 26% of 9th-12th graders at Haddon Heights are minorities and about 12% of 7-8th graders are minorities. Mr. Adams maintains his position that adding Merchantville students will not change these demographic statistics significantly. He sees value in racial diversity at his school since it is representative of what students will later find in the workplace and they are able to learn about one another and other cultures. He stated there is no required score on the NJ ASK in order to be considered for an AP course at Haddon Heights.

He does not see a logistical problem of housing the students if there are more Merchantville students at Haddon Heights than have traditionally attended Pennsauken. He estimates that Lawnside and Barrington pay approximately $13,000 in tuition per student. He sees value in retaining all students at the school regardless of whether they are high or low achievers on standardized tests since standardized tests are not the best predictor of what students can offer in the classroom.

James Kirtland:

Mr. Kirtland was qualified at the hearing as an expert in School Finance. He performed a feasibility study on behalf of Merchantville to predict the impact of severing the sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken and establishing the new relationship with Haddon Heights.

Mr. Kirtland has conducted many New Jersey feasibility studies in the past for schools seeking to dissolve or withdraw from another district. His resume was reviewed and admitted into evidence. He is aware of two dissolutions of Regional Districts in New Jersey, Union County and Lower Camden County and he has been involved with both of them. Mr. Kirtland is a certified CPA in many states now retired, after twenty-six years, from the firm now known as Deloitte & Touche. He has a bachelor's degree and an MBA from Columbia University. He has a tax practice and does consulting mostly in the area of school board finance. He served on the Berkley Heights, New Jersey school board for about fourteen years. He has been performing statistical and mathematical studies since 1995. He performed feasibility studies in North Haledon and Oradell school districts where there was an issue of withdraw or dissolution.

Normally in feasibility studies of school districts, he looks at the last three years of audited finance information. He does not use projected budgets since they are only planning documents. The documents in New Jersey that reflect what districts actually spent are known as the CAFR. He also obtains the equalized property value reports published by the state of New Jersey and the School Report Card. His end result will be a calculation of the projected new tax levy and tax rate after the districts have dissolved or withdrawn.

In this case, he also spoke with the Board Secretaries of Haddon Heights, Pennsauken and Merchantville to obtain the approved tuition rates from the state for those particular sending-receiving relationships. Additionally, he uses past enrollment data, data given to him by the demographer, Dr. Grip, and mathematical calculations to predict enrollment. He prepared three reports.

He has to make assumptions to determine what is going to happen. The main assumption he makes is that this is going to be a permanent change. He does not take into account changes that would have occurred regardless of whether the school dissolved. Additionally, he assumed that the maximum tuition rate will be charged by Haddon Heights to Merchantville since Lawnside and Barrington already pay that amount. Although this amount is different than the amount in the contract signed between Merchantville and Haddon Heights, in his experience, this number can change from the date of the agreement.

To determine the new tax levy for a community, he looks at the revenue items, state aid, federal aid, projection those against the expenditures and come to a tax levy. He does that for five years and gets the totals and takes an average to determine the projected impact on the tax levy. He uses a five year average in case there is an unusual year.

He uses the available tuition rate and he estimated the total tuition loss to Pennsauken will be $800,000 at approximately $200,000 per year during the four-year phase-out period. Given that Pennsauken's expenditures are less than $800,000, he estimates that in the first year of full implementation, it will cost tax payers in Pennsauken $259,000. Since the average property value in Pennsauken is $90,000, he estimates that the tax burden on Pennsauken tax payers on the average home would be $4.00 per year, for a total of $16 over the four years of implementation. This is utilizing an equalized tax levy which is calculated according to the full tax levy of the town so it is a rough estimate for the individual tax payer, not taking into account many individualized circumstances. Additionally, since Pennsauken has a surplus, it could use that first before charging tax payers the offset amount.

This increase in tax levy will not violate the new law that places a 2% annual cap on raising property taxes. This is because the increase will be over time and not all in one year and additionally, the past three years of tax levies in Pennsauken have remained the same. Since the 2% cap can carry over from previous years, in the fourth year, there will be an 8% cap, not a 2% cap and Pennsauken will never go above that. The opposing expert, Mr. Higgins calculated that this increase will go above the 2% cap, but that would only happen if the severed relationship occurred all at once in one year and unused caps could not be carried forward, but that is not the current plan and he reads the legislation to allow a town to "carry over" unused caps.

In his opinion, severing the sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken will therefore not have a significant negative impact on Pennsauken. Merchantville will actually "break even" since the tuition rate is marginally lower for Haddon Heights than Pennsauken but he factored in an increased transportation cost since Haddon Heights is a few miles farther than Pennsauken. Therefore, Merchantville will not be negatively impacted and Haddon Heights, Barrington and Lawnside will actually benefit from lower tax levies as a result. Since there will be more students at Haddon Heights, this will distribute the tax burden over a larger population and taxes will actually go down somewhat in Haddon Heights, Lawnside and Barrington.

Additionally, he believes that home values in Merchantville will probably go up if they establish a sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights since home prices in New Jersey have been traditionally linked to the quality of education available in the community. He had no hard data to rely on when making that assumption.

He also disagrees with Mr. Higgins about what is the "real bottom line" in this situation since he believes the net impact will be on the tax payer, not the loss in revenue to the Pennsauken. Mr. Kirtland assumes there will be an offset in expenditures in Pennsauken since there will be approximately sixty fewer students. When this occurs, Boards usually respond by laying-off teachers or reducing expenses in another way. He makes the assumption that school boards will always try to maintain the current teacher/student ratio. Under that rational, upon losing sixty students, Pennsauken will likely lay off 5.4 teachers to meet the reduced need.

On cross examination, Mr. Kirtland admitted that if Pennsauken did nothing to address the loss in revenue and it actually lost $800,000 all in the first year that the cost to the taxpayers would be $16.00 per year, according to his calculations. Therefore, this would be a total increase of $48.00 over four years. Mr. Kirtland stated that this would not happen though because of the phase-out period where Merchantville students would be phased out of Pennsauken one grade level at a time over four years.

Richard Grip:

Dr. Grip was qualified as an expert as School Demographer and Psychometrician. His CV was entered into evidence. A Psychometrician is a statistician specializing in the field of education, psychological and sociological fields particular to those fields using quantitative techniques. His main goal is project enrollment and to conduct racial analyses when requested.

Dr. Grip holds a Bachelor's degree in civil engineering, a Master's degree in science and education and a Doctoral degree in Educational Statistics and Measurement. He has performed about twelve educational feasibility studies over the course of his fifteen years in the field and he is also the demographer for New York City schools. Additionally he has performed statistical analyses for universities and he has worked with New Jersey districts in Watchung, Carlstadt, Oradell as part of the Riverdell Regional case, South Hunterdon and Cape May. He was first hired by Merchantville in 2007 to do a preliminary racial impact analysis and he then also wrote the January 2012 expert report for Merchantville. Racial impact is an element of demography.

When Dr. Grip does statistical analyses for school districts he looks at statistics regarding birth rates, census data, and economic data. The data for Merchantville shows a historically stable population from 1940 to 2010 so there is not a lot of change predicted in the number of people there. It is between 3700 and 4400 people. In 2010, sixty-five percent of the population was white and the average family income was $88,000.

In Pennsauken, there was a lot of growth between 1940 and 1960 and then population has remained stable since that time. The general population is about 36,000. Pennsauken was 47.6% white and the average family income was $69,000 in 2010.

The best way to predict future enrollment in schools is to first look at historical enrollment. He also looks at birth rates and what type of housing exists in the community. He uses the Cohort Survival Method which shows how many children are progressing, or surviving, to the next grade level. This is the preferred method by the New Jersey Department of Education. When the grade level falls below thirty-five students, it becomes more difficult to predict with accuracy.

For all five districts involved, including Lawnside and Barrington, he projected enrollment for all races combined and then broke it down by race. During his testimony, Dr. Grip went through tables appearing in his expert report and in Dr. Fine's, the Pennsauken expert, and corrected incorrect numbers. Additionally, he wondered if Dr. Fine is factoring in Choice students into her calculations since her numbers were not correct. Additionally, he pointed out that Choice students should not factor into calculations since they are students that attend Merchantville schools but do not reside there. All values regarding the number of Merchantville students attending Pennsauken were obtained from Mr. Strong.

He calculated the average cohort survival for all students in eighth grade in Merchantville going to Pennsauken was 31% over the past six years. Overall he found that Merchantville students generally make up only 4.1% of all students at Pennsauken high school.

He analyzed student populations in all five districts in question. Over the past six years, the population at Pennsauken schools has been stable for Pre-K to eighth grade students but it has been declining at the high school. There is a low survival rate for Pennsauken 8th graders to 9th grade.

There is no increasing or declining trend with regard to births in any of the five districts. They are all relatively stable; therefore there is no indication that there will be a surge in kindergarten students. There are no major housing changes to effect enrollment projections.

For Pennsauken High School he is projecting a decline over the next two years from 1477 students to 1463, but then after that he is predicting an increase of about fifty students to 1527. For Merchantville, he is not predicting an increase or decrease in enrollment. For grades 9^{th}-12^{th}. He predicts about fifty-five to sixty-five students. For Barrington, he predicts stable high school enrollment at about 270 students. For Lawnside the projected range at the high school is stable around 110-120 per year. Haddon Heights Elementary School is projected to increase enrollment slightly but the high school enrollment is projected to come down to 600 students in 2017 and 2018.

Therefore since Merchantville sends about sixty students each year and Pennsauken is projected to increase its population by about fifty by the time a phase in would occur, then he predicts that overall Pennsauken will only have about a ten-student differential and therefore only a loss of .7% students. In his opinion, that is incredibly small compared to the overall 1477 population of the high school. Even if Merchantville withdrew all of its students at once, it would not be as great some of the natural declines that have occurred at Pennsauken. For example in the 2008-2009 school year there was a decline of 120 students and from 2011-2012, there was a decline of approximately sixty students.

In his opinion, Haddon Heights has the ability to house Merchantville students since their facility houses 1777 students and they are about 300 students below that number at the moment. They may have to increase some student/teacher ratios, but housing should not be a problem.

In terms of a racial composition analysis, over the past six year, the white population in Merchantville has comprised between 52% and 58% of the population. This is very different than twenty years ago, the last time Merchantville attempted to sever its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. At that time, the population was about 95% white. He pointed out that since Merchantville and Pennsauken have both increased their minority populations since that time, and given Haddon Height's diverse environment, that this is an entirely different analysis.

The percentage of white Merchantville high school students that attend Pennsauken has declined over the past six years from 51% to 28%. In the 2012-2013 school year 72% of the Merchantville student who attended Pennsauken were minorities.

At Pennsauken, for the entire district over the past six years, the white and black populations have declined and the Asian and Hispanic populations have increased. Hispanic students now make up almost 40% of the district. Overall, the minority population in the district went from 81% to 84.66%. It is very unusual to see a district without at least one race occupying at least 50% of the population, but this is what is occurring at Pennsauken. This suggests that you have an unusually diverse environment at that school.

In the past six years, there has been a decline in Pennsauken High School students. First, only 91% of Pennsauken 8th graders actually go to Pennsauken High Schools. Also, the average annual loss of minority students from 8th to 9th grade for the past eleven years is thirty-eight students. The average annual loss of white students from 8th to 9th grade over that time is twenty-five per year.

At Haddon Heights High School, the population is 27% minority and 73% is white. The minority population is primarily due to the Lawnside population, which is predominantly black. Therefore, this school is also diverse.

Overall, he projects a .72% loss, less than 1%, of white students at Pennsauken. To arrive at this number, he took the number of white Merchantville students compared to the entire Pennsauken High School population over five years into the future. This differs from Dr. Fine's analysis where she claims a 12% difference since she looked at only the number of white Merchantville students compared to the entire white sub-population. Dr. Grip disagrees with that type of analysis since it does not take into account the entire population.

The most recent count of white students who attended Pennsauken from Merchantville was in the 2012-2013 school year. That count was seventeen students. Dr. Grip points out that Pennsauken is losing more white high school students from its own district, on average twenty-five a year. He projected a loss of two white Merchantville students after the fifth year of the phase-in process. He believes with a reasonable degree of certainty that this is not a significant negative impact on Pennsauken school. He did concede that these students would be in addition to any additional loss of white students, which averages twenty-five per year and that the loss of Merchantville students would slightly exacerbate this trend.

Dr. Grip did agree that if in the 20112-2013 school year, the white Merchantville students were removed from the Pennsauken High School; it would have constituted 6.7% of the white subgroup. He believes that Pennsauken will have the ability to absorb the loss of approximately sixty Merchantville students since he expects an increase in the student body of about fifty students.

Peter Carter

Mr. Carter was certified before the court as an expert in the field of Educational Administration and Curricular and Co-curricular programming and New Jersey Public School Administration.

His education includes a Bachelor's degree from Fordham University in Classical Languages and a minor in Philosophy. He also holds a Master's degree in Educational Administration from Hofstra University. He has experience teaching Latin and English in a parochial high school in New York. He then went on to hold various assistant principal, principal and superintendent positions through the region in New York, Delaware and New Jersey for approximately thirty-six years. He served as an assistant principal for an alternative high school in Brooklyn New York for young men who had criminal records. He worked as a principal in Newark, Delaware during a time when there was court-ordered desegregation in the district and he had to combine two racially-diverse schools. He served as a principal in Metuchen, New Jersey in a primarily white school. He went on to become an assistant superintendent in Irvington schools and improved the HSPT scores for the students there from a passing rate of 15.4% to 50%. He then served as superintendent of Roselle Schools in Union County during a time when the racial and economic make up of the population was in flux. He was then asked to serve as the Essex County Superintendent and he remained there for six years. This was during a time where there was a state take-over of the Newark School District and also during the Abbott decision. He then returned to Irvington school district as superintendent and reduced an $8 million deficit to a $3 million surplus.

Mr. Carter then went on to become the superintendent of the K-8 district in Ringwood, New Jersey. He collaborated very closely with the Lakeland District, which is where his eighth graders attended high school. In his semi-retirement, he has served as the interim superintendent in Plainfield and Hoboken in recent years. He has extensive experience reviewing and adjusting school budgets.

He was hired by the Merchantville District to consult with them on the process of severing its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken and establishing a new relationship with Haddon Heights.

As part of his services, he spoke with Marilyn Martinez, the Superintendent of Pennsauken schools and she did not express any concerns with him regarding severing the relationship. The district was not receptive to him actually visiting the school. He also spoke with Haddon Heights administrators and visited the school.

In his opinion, the education offered by Haddon Heights is better than Pennsauken High School. In reaching this conclusion and evaluating what the effects of the new relationship could be Mr. Carter reviewed test scores, attendance rates, the number of SAT test-takers, class size, AP course scores, drop-out rates, instructional time, curriculums, co-curricular activities offered, outreach to students before high school, experience of the administration, social integration of the sending districts and cultural diversity.

Mr. Carter felt that Haddon Heights High School lends itself to a very fine and positive educational experience for the students. He believes the instruction, the curriculum, and the sense of oneness with the other two communities that send students all contribute to this assessment.

The scores on the High School Proficiency Assessment (HSPA) are better at Haddon Heights with 73% of the students score "adequately" or "proficiently" whereas Pennsauken students have 50% of students scoring in this range. On average, Haddon Height's SAT scores are better than Pennsauken's and there are more students at Haddon Heights actually taking the exam. About 23-26% of Pennsauken students take AP classes, but about 50% of Haddon Heights students take them. Of the Haddon Heights students who take the AP test, 83% of them scored a three or better whereas only 22% of the Pennsauken students scored in that range. A score of three, out of a possible five, is usually considered a passing score and could allow the student to obtain three college credits.

Additionally, Merchantville students' performance in grades 6 and 7 on the NJ ASK test are more in line with the Barrington, Lawnside and Haddon Heights students - with proficiency scores between 63-70% whereas Pennsauken was 50.9% proficient.

Mr. Carter analyzed the language arts and specifically the Persuasive Writing curriculum at both schools. He found that although both schools meet the core standards set by the state, the Haddon Heights curriculum had the state standards more purposely mentioned and incorporated in the school curriculum. Additionally, staff members were named on the document as contributors to the curriculum. He felt this created a "buy in" by the teachers. He felt the Pennsauken language arts curriculum does go to the same lengths and depths as that of Haddon Heights'. In the Persuasive Writing curriculum, he felt that the Haddon Heights' curriculum was easier to understand and also went into greater depth and will produce a better performance by students.

Additionally he determined academic rigor between schools by analyzed course offerings, course descriptions, and whether there are prerequisites for upperclassmen course. Overall he felt that although there was a good deal of rigor in some of Pennsauken's courses, Haddon Heights had a greater number of rigorous courses based on the description of the course and prerequisites needed. He felt there was more rigor and challenge in the lion's share of the Haddon Height's courses.

According to his findings, Pennsauken is evolving and trying to improve its current status. The school had a Comprehensive Assessment Performance (CAPA) evaluation by the State of New Jersey. These assessments are only done in districts where there the School Report Card indicates some issues. The CAPA report for Pennsauken indicates that the high school especially needs a lot of work. Mr. Carter is familiar with these reports since the district of Irvington received one when he was there. Action Plans are required when a district receives a CAPA report. Mr. Carter did not see an Action Plan from Pennsauken.

In extra-curricular activities, Pennsauken and Haddon Heights are relatively equal except that Haddon Heights offers the additional suburban offerings of tennis, swimming and golf. He believes that if Merchantville students leave Pennsauken it will have no negative impact upon on the sports programs since the largest number of students in one activity are four students on the football time over a four-year period. This number is so small it would not be influential.

The club offerings and participation by the Merchantville are unclear but Merchantville students participate in clubs in a very low number.

Overall, the Haddon Heights class size is a bit smaller than Pennsauken. Merchantville students would benefit from this since they are already accustomed to small class sizes. If Merchantville students left Pennsauken and the teaching staff is not reduced, there would be no educational impact on the Pennsauken students.

Haddon Heights reports thirty to thirty-five minutes more of instructional time per day than Pennsauken. This is equivalent to an extra period in the day and it would extend the number of courses per semester that Merchantville students could enjoy.

Overall, more Haddon Heights students come to school when comparing attendance rates. There is a 92.7% attendance rate at Haddon Heights and a 90.4% attendance rate at Pennsauken.

The graduation rate at Haddon Heights is better since it is 88% and Pennsauken is 81%. The drop-out rate at Pennsauken was 2.5% in the previous year, which is 1.1% over the state average. This is compared to Haddon Heights' drop-out rate of .3%.

Mr. Carter asserted that Haddon Heights does better outreach to its sending districts than Pennsauken currently does for Merchantville, currently the only sending district there. Pennsauken did not indicate any outreach activities for the Merchantville students; they only stated that contact with the Merchantville students was left to the guidance department.

Additionally, there is an established operation for articulation for curriculum between Haddon Heights and its sending districts. Pennsauken did not tell him about any curriculum articulation happening between itself and Merchantville when he spoke with administrators and therefore he believes none exists.

From his experience of performing curriculum articulation between the Ringwood and Lakeland district, he believes that this has a direct impact on students. This is because middle-school students met with teachers from the high school and they understood what was going to be expected of them in high school. Some advanced students were sent to the high school to take algebra courses where it was appropriate.

There is a positive an apparent social integration at Haddon Heights High School which he felt from the school video and when he visited the building. He expects the same type of social integration that occurs for Lawnside and Barrington will occur for Merchantville students as well. Pennsauken did not mention what they were doing to make Merchantville the totality of the high school building.

In terms of racial diversity, he felt that the current Merchantville composition is diverse in its own right and therefore this is different than the previous instance when Merchantville sought to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken. He believes since Merchantville, Pennsauken and Haddon Heights are all diverse districts that there will be no negative educational impact due to a decreased diversity. He conceded that the diversity at Pennsauken will decrease in a miniscule fashion. He does not agree that Pennsauken is or would be a segregated school if Merchantville left.

There will be a positive educational impact on Merchantville students because they will receive a better education. There will be no negative impact on Pennsauken students since Merchantville students occupy only 4% of the high school and they are there in such low numbers.

The loss of Merchantville student will not be noticed since the Pennsauken students never met them and also because the number of students has traditionally been so small in comparison with the Pennsauken high school students. Losing students from a high school is different than losing students from an elementary school where they have only twenty to twenty-four students in the class and they spend all day together. In the high school, the class size is normally larger and students see a variety of different student all day when they change classes. Although the high school students may better perceive why the Merchantville students are leaving, they will likely not care. If the students were concerned, he would present the issue to them openly and celebrate why Pennsauken is a good place to be.

Since in the past twenty years, which is the last time Merchantville attempted to sever its relationship with Pennsauken, there have been many changes in the choices students have for education in New Jersey. This includes more Vocation-Technical high schools with more technology-oriented courses, charter schools and the New Jersey School Choice Act which was passed in 2010. These choices nullify any impact which could have been felt from the Merchantville students leaving Pennsauken.

Overall, Superintendent. Martinez at Pennsauken gave him the impression that they were moving forward and they were most concerned with increasing the amount of students who were prepared for higher education. He feels that Haddon Heights has already achieved some gains where Pennsauken is still striving.

Mr. Carter testified that the loss of Merchantville's tuition would not greatly impact Pennsauken's school budget of over $90 million. There would be very limited educational impact due to the reduction of revenue due to the loss of Merchantville's tuition monies. He estimates that there would be a loss of $260,000 in the year following Merchantville students leaving Pennsauken. Given Mr. Carter's experience with adjusting school budgets, he made adjustments to Pennsauken's budget to account for the reduction. He did not make any specific suggestions of where those deductions could be made. He reduced the "Regular Programs" line by $165,000, the "Essential Services, Administration and Information Technology" line by .5% or $9,300, the "Special Education" line by $35,000, "Speech, OT, PT and Related and Extraordinary Services" line by $8,300, and the "Operation and Maintenance of Plant Services" by .5% or $43,000. He relied on Mr. Kirtland's report for the total amount.

Marilyn Martinez

Ms. Martinez has been the Superintendent at the Pennsauken School District since October 2011. She attended elementary school and Girls High School in Philadelphia. She then earned her Bachelor's degree in Education, a Master's degree in Educational Administration and her Superintendent's letter. She is certified to be a superintendent by the state of Pennsylvania and reciprocally in New Jersey as of 1999.

After teaching English as a Second Language in the Philadelphia School District, she then held various Superintendent and Principal positions in the Philadelphia School District. She then went to Baltimore to serve in the Area Academic Office and returned to the Philadelphia School District in 2010 to serve as Principal to an urban troubled high school with the purpose of improving the academic experience there.

There are eleven schools in the Pennsauken district and they serve approximately 5600 Pre-K to 12th grade students. The racial breakdown is 38% Latino, 34% African American, seventeen or 18% white and a lower-teens count of Asians and then the remainders of the students are multiracial. In the high school, there are a lower percentage of white students and more Latino and African-American students. There is a relatively large Vietnamese population at the school. On cross examination, Martinez admitted that the white population at the high school in the 2012-2013 school year was 17.05% and 15.43% in the elementary population.

Since her arrival at Pennsauken, the Board of Education asked her to improve the perception of the school. She first implemented a code of conduct with earlier consequences for misconduct and more strict enforcement of the school uniform. She met with the young people in town-hall style meetings. This helped to build relationships. She also set high bars for the administration to ensure that students were in their classes on time in the high school. If students were lingering in the hallways, parents would be called. Additionally, the use of cell phones in the hallways is no longer permitted.

Martinez highlighted some further initiatives she created at Pennsauken High School. She identified overaged students and implemented a "credit recovery" program aimed at these students. She has also improved the drop-out rate from 18.2% to 15.3% in the two years she has been there. She initiated partnerships with Camden County College for a Gateway to College program and enabled her students to obtain an Early Childhood certificate through the College upon graduation. She implemented a mentoring program with fifty teachers donating their time to become trained. For the first time, every sophomore in the school will be taking the PSAT to encourage college readiness, even for military-bound students.

With access to Title 1 dollars, which is grant money to support students at risk, she initiated intensive interventions to increase the reading levels of some students. There is also a new partnership with the Pennsauken Library to make sure all textbooks are accessible.

She made personnel changes by hiring a new principal at the high school Without regard to whether or not Merchantville withdrawals from Pennsauken, she laid off nine teachers, seven of which were at the high school, and is now proposing to lay off nine more teachers. This is to correspond with the reduction in the student population over the past five years. Additionally, she eliminated a director position.

Martinez testified that there is no way to differentiate who are the Merchantville students in the high school since they are a part of the fabric in the community. Both Merchantville and Pennsauken students attend the same 9th grade orientation programs in the Spring and in September when school beings. She has never been asked to create a separate program for Merchantville students.

Martinez testified that the communication between Merchantville and Pennsauken regarding special education students is a continuous dialogue about the welfare of the children and placement. On cross-examination, Martinez stated she has not actually participated in these conversations.

Martinez stated that no parent or student has ever complained to her specifically about the situation of Merchantville students at Pennsauken. If Merchantville leaves the high school, they are considering reducing the staff by laying-off a counselor, a social work and possibly other staff. She believes there will be a substantial economic and educational impact if Merchantville severs its relationship with Pennsauken. The economic impact will be felt because 65% to 70% of the students are from low socioeconomic situations and the resources and materials to address this deficient, such as partnering with social service agencies like Twin Oaks, will be compromised.

She has not implemented any programs specifically geared toward Merchantville students. She has no documentation regarding curriculum articulation or any efforts of such made between Pennsauken and Merchantville students. She has not specifically spoken to any Merchantville students regarding whether they feel a sense of belonging in the school.

She testified that the diversity at Pennsauken would disappear if the seventeen white Merchantville students were removed from the high school since it decreases the other students' chance to have relationships with those students and pointed out that white students are already in the minority at Pennsauken.

Martinez could not specifically pinpoint which of her initiatives would be compromised if the district experienced the loss of Merchantville tuition. She admitted that despite the lay-off of the nine teachers, she has still been able to implement the initiatives she introduced. She has not considered a strategy to reduce overtime costs for custodians, secretaries or bus drivers since she is not planning on Merchantville withdrawing from the district. She disagreed with the Board of Education's plan not to increase taxes in the 2012-2013 school year.

She admits that she did not choose to hire either one of the assistant principals for principal when she terminated the tenured principal. She is aware of a discrimination and harassment lawsuit pending against the current principal from her previous district.

She was aware that some Pennsauken and Merchantville students have been choosing Charter Schools, NJ Choice Schools and Vo-Tech schools instead of Pennsauken High School in recent years. She was unsure of the numbers but did not disagree with any of the numbers the schools provided in response to Merchantville's OPRA requests.

Gary Higgins

Mr. Higgins was qualified as an expert in School Finance and related school financial issues. He was retained by the Pennsauken School District. He has a Bachelor's degree in Accounting in 1980 and he has held a CPA and a Public School Accountant's (PSA) license in New Jersey for thirty years. He is a member of various accounting organizations. He assists in budget projection and analyzing financial transactions for public entities. All of his work has been in the state of New Jersey.

He worked at John J. Eckelsten Accounting Firm for ten years and then opened his own firm with two partners in 1990 and is still employed there. Since 1980 he has worked with many school districts, municipalities and other authorities in the state of New Jersey. His firm currently works with eighty school districts, fifty towns and thirty other authorities in the state and he is the named Auditor for many of them. His financial analyses have never been criticized by the NJ Board of Education and a complaint has never been filed against him.

He was asked by Pennsauken to review the Merchantville expert reports and give his opinion. In order to do his analysis in this case, he looked Pennsauken's Comprehensive Annual Financial Report (CAFR) for the fiscal years ending in 2010, 2011 and 2012, the Pennsauken school budget for the 2013-2014 school year, the most recent tuition contract between Pennsauken and Merchantville, and the Merchantville feasibility reports.

Mr. Higgins noted that the actual revenue loss to Pennsauken will be $830,000 not $800,000 and the actual tax increase to the average tax payer at the end of the four-year phase-in period will be $47 per year forever into the future. Therefore, given that number, Mr. Higgins stated that in his opinion there would be a substantially negative financial impact on Pennsauken if Merchantville students leave.

In Mr. Higgins' opinion, there were no sources to validate the source of some of numbers representing the tax rates in the district. Nevertheless, he utilized those numbers and the calculations using those numbers were done correctly by Merchantville experts. He does not understand how Merchantville arrived at the conclusion that that by cutting 5.4 teachers this would close the budget gap created by the loss of Merchantville students, he assumes it is related to the student/teacher ratio but he cannot be sure.

In Mr. Higgins's opinion, there is nowhere in the Pennsauken budget where they could cut $200,000 as Mr. Carter attempted to do in his offered budget reduction which he discussed in his testimony. He disagrees with Mr. Carter's proposed cuts because it does not provide any narrative as to which specific account could be cut. Flexible accounts would require more detail that what Mr. Carter provided as to exactly what would be cut. He feels that Mr. Carter crossed two "bridges" without explanation. First he reduced the revenue loss from $800,000 to $260,000 without accounting for the rest and then Mr. Carter cut $260,000 from the Pennsauken budget without a detailed analysis.

The Pennsauken budget surplus has only $2,370,171.80 available in the "unassigned fund balance" and that amount would be depleted in three years if it is charged with the $800,000 each year over a three year period. The only sustainable way to make up for the loss of the Merchantville tuition revenue to Pennsauken is to pass on the charge to the taxpayers which would be an average of $47 each year to the taxpayer with the average home value of approximately $90,000. On cross examination, Mr. Higgins conceded that his analysis did not consider what expenses could be cut if the sixty Merchantville students no longer attended Pennsauken. Additionally, he did not refute that there would be a financial benefit to the tax payers of the four other districts involved, that was outside the scope of what he was asked to analyze.

On cross examination he agreed that in its 2011-2012 budget, Pennsauken budgeted to pay $2 million in charter school tuition and $712,500 in tuition to county vocation schools for Pennsauken students who attend these schools, but he had not reviewed that document prior to his testimony.

As a result of the recent law that imposes a 2% tax levy cap, districts are now using any surplus for cash flow and contingency purposes. Therefore, in his opinion, there is less money readily available to districts than before the tax levy cap. Districts are only allowed to 2% of their adjusted general fund expenditure if it is a surplus. Mr. Higgins agreed with Mr. Kirtland in that the 2% cap could be carried over or "banked" from one year to the next for either three or four years. He clarified that a district will lose the "compound effect" of the 2% over the years, if it banks the levy cap. Theoretically, if a district banks for four years, then it could charge an 8% increase to the tax payers in the fourth year, but it could not charge 2% of what the total increase would have been in the previous years had the district incrementally raised the tax levy by 2% in the preceding four years.

Michelle Fine:

Dr. Fine was admitted as an expert in Social Psychology of Education, Race Relations, and Youth Development as they pertain to Education and Psychology. She obtained an undergraduate degree from Brandeis University and a Master's degree at Columbia University in psychology and philosophy. She holds a Ph.D. in social psychology from the Teacher's College of Education at Columbia. She was first employed at the University of Pennsylvania in 1981 as a professor in the human development program and was there until 1992. She worked with the public schools of Philadelphia by assisting in the major transition of separating large high schools in smaller schools.

Dr. Fine has conducted thirty years of research on schools, racial stratification in schools and she evaluates educators' and students' reactions to school changes. She focuses on youth development and the relationship of student outcomes to policy change. She has taught at universities from undergraduate to doctoral level. She is a past chair of her department and currently a Distinguished Professor of Social Psychology and Urban Education at the City University of New York Graduate Center since 2002. She conducts ethnographic studies inside high schools in New York and New Jersey. Additionally Dr. Fine has consulted with the New Jersey and New York Departments of Education to determine the impact of standardized testing on English language learners and has worked in an effort to keep charter schools accessible to the public.

Dr. Fine was retained by Pennsauken. As part of her charge, she read the studies and materials provided by Merchantville to offer another perspective. She did not conduct interviews of students or administrators.

Dr. Fine found that severing the sending-receiving relationship in this case will have a substantial negative impact on race and class distribution and a substantial negative educational impact. She differentiated between "diversity" and "segregation." Diversity is a term used to talk about various groups, they may be racial, national, ethnic, first language groups, or special education groups. The word segregation is usually used in an analysis of white groups compared to black, Latino, and Asian groups. There can be racial imbalance at a school despite its diversity.

Pennsauken as a town is much more racially and ethnically diverse than the high school. Students who move from Merchantville 8th grade to 9th grade at Pennsauken do not represent the full racial and ethnic compositions of Merchantville. Far fewer white students at Merchantville are choosing to go to Pennsauken high school. Educational research shows that New Jersey schools are becoming increasingly segregated, which means there is heavily one race at a school. Dr. Fine agreed with Dr. Grip's changes to the student statistics in her report.

When the school becomes less white, usually middle class black and Latino families also move out. When this happens, an unpleasant dynamic historically occurs. As the white students leave, the high level courses are harder to fill, AP classes are harder to sustain, and attracting highest quality educators becomes more difficult as the student body becomes less diverse or elite. Additionally, it is her position that this case is not just about a loss of sixty-one Merchantville students, but that other families will leave the district based on the perceptions generated by allowing Merchantville to sever the relationship.

Numerically, Pennsauken High School is a segregated school and this would increase if Merchantville students were removed. She pointed out that Dr. Grip's statistics project that Pennsauken will be at 90% minority in the fourth year of the phase out. Since a disproportionate number of white students at Merchantville already choose not to go to Pennsauken, severing the relationship would have a substantial negative racial impact both on the loss of the literal bodies but also in the stigma associated with that school. She projects that as a result of severing the sending-receiving relationship; there would be a loss of ninety-nine white students, which would be 12% of the white student body, after completion of the phase-out period. Dr. Fine concluded that severing the relationship would in essence create a subsidy to Merchantville families who would have otherwise opted for private high schools.

Dr. Fine believes the New Jersey Interdistrict School Choice program exacerbates segregation. More white students are availing themselves of a Choice option than the black and Latino students. Economically disadvantaged students are less likely to take advantage of choice options because of language barriers, knowledge of the programs, potential transportation issues and the loss of the free lunch program in charter schools.

Dr. Fine looked at the annual yearly progress (AYP) in Haddon Heights and Pennsauken. Often, larger schools and schools with a substantial number of students under the poverty line are less likely to meet AYP. In New Jersey 29% of schools did not meet AYP in 2006 and this number increased to 50% in 2011. If Merchantville leaves, this would continue to hamper Pennsauken's capacity to meet AYP.

Dr. Fine compared the performance of economically disadvantaged students at Haddon Heights to those at Pennsauken. The data for language arts shows that Haddon Heights' students are outperforming their Pennsauken counterparts, but Pennsauken has more English language learners.

Contrary to the arguments made by Merchantville, the data does not show that students will excel beyond their current achievement levels if they attend Haddon Heights. For example in mathematics, the Lawnside students are performing lower than the Haddon Heights and Barrington students on the HSPA and in AP classes. Additionally, the Lawnside students are mostly in the lower level math classes are also disproportionately in the ASHA class. The ASHA is the test administered for New Jersey students who do not perform well on the HSPA.

Additionally, at Haddon Heights High School, white students are more likely to be in the high level math classes and African American students are much less likely to be represented in these classes. At Haddon Heights, 70.5% of the students are white and 68% of the students in the advanced math classes are white.

When Dr. Fine looked at economically disadvantaged students in both schools, the Pennsauken students are more likely to be advanced proficient in mathematics than their economically disadvantaged counterparts at Haddon Heights.

With regard to SAT averages, students from Haddon Heights have the highest average verbal, math and writing scores. They score better than students from Barrington, who in turn scores better than students from Lawnside.

Dr. Fine disagreed with Mr. Carter's statements that Pennsauken students will not care about Merchantville students leaving Pennsauken. She has found that in general lower-income students are much attuned to educational decisions which are made by adults on their behalf.

On cross examination, Dr. Fine admitted that as an expert in a previous case involving Englewood Cliffs school district, there were a lower percentage of white students at the school and she determined as an expert that it was an integrated district. Dr. Fine stated that she made the determination that Pennsauken was segregated in part because the racial makeup of the school does not match the overall Pennsauken community. Additionally, she admitted that the largest decrease in any one racial group at Pennsauken high school recently has occurred amongst black students.

Hypothetically speaking, if there were only a total of ten Merchantville students attending Pennsauken and they were all minorities, she would say the loss would still be a negative racial impact to Pennsauken but it would not be substantial. It could still create another layer of social stigma. There would be an educational impact, but she would have to know more about the students to determine if it was a substantial impact.

She is not aware of any action taken by Pennsauken Board of Education to limit the number of children who leave the school through the Choice program.

James Kirtland – Rebuttal

Mr. Kirtland was called as a rebuttal witness after the testimony of Mr. Higgins was presented. There are two reasons why he believes Mr. Higgins' opinion about the $47 tax levy increase is not correct. First, Mr. Higgins incorrectly started off by talking about the cumulative effect over four years. This is illogical because increases are not normally presented to tax payers in this way; they are normally presented in yearly increments. Second, Mr. Kirtland disagreed with the concept that there would only be revenue loss and that expenditures would not be reduced in response to that loss. This reasoning defies logic. There are ways that schools can reduce expenditures like privatizing services or controlling overtime. Mr. Higgins only defended this position by stating that he was not hired to investigate other ways of reducing expenditures.

Mr. Higgins also admitted that he did not review the total taxes for Pennsauken. He uses inappropriate comparisons in order to make the tax levy appear more significant since he compared the tuition only to the school tax levy, $35 million, and not the overall tax levy for the town, which is $77 million.

In his experience on school boards, when enrollment is down the normal practice is to lay off teachers. The testimony of Mr. Higgins and Superintendent Martinez did not address declining enrollment. Although the district recently laid-off some teachers, neither witness testified that the district had issued the layoffs in response to declined enrollment.

Upon analyzing the video of a recent Pennsauken Board of Education meeting, Mr. Kirtland surmised that the reason for the layoffs was declining enrollment and it was not a purely financial decision. This was because the County Superintendent wanted the Board to raise taxes and to address the problem of declining enrollment in recent years. Since the County Superintendent recommended a $700,000 increase in tax levy, this goes against Dr. Higgins' argument that a $65,000 increase in tax levy to address the Merchantville tuition shortfall, after reducing expenditures, is substantial.

Additionally, Mr. Kirtland pointed out that the projected $800,000 loss in tuition from the Merchantville students may actually be less if other school choices in the area become more prevalent in the coming years.

Camille Zubrinsky Charles

Dr. Charles was admitted as an expert in Sociology specifically related to the study of Racial Inequity in Public Institutions. She holds a Ph.D. in sociology from University of California in Los Angeles. She also holds a Master's degree in sociology and two undergraduate degrees, one in sociology and the other in communication studies. She is profession of Sociology, Africana studies and Education at the University of Pennsylvania where she is also the Director for the Center of Africana Studies. She teaches many classes in her areas and she has been the principle investigator on national and regional sociological research studies on race and education. She is on the editorial board for the American Sociological Review and was invited to be a fellow at the Strauss Institute for Advanced Study of Law and Social Justice at NYU School of Law. In that fellowship, she produces research on racial, ethnic, and economic segregation in neighborhoods and schools. She has been admitted as an expert in sociology in various legal contexts.

Dr. Charles was retained by Merchantville to be a rebuttal witness to Dr. Fine's report. She reviewed Dr. Fine's report and other legal documents, the feasibility studies in this matter and other literature on segregation and diversity as it relates to AYP. She is of the opinion that there will not be a substantially negative racial or educational impact on Pennsauken if the sending-receiving relationship is severed.

In her review of the statistics, Dr. Charles found that all five of the districts involved in this case are undergoing racial transition. This transition is felt differently in communities that have more land and less population such as Merchantville, as opposed to more densely populated towns like Pennsauken.

In Merchantville, she noted that in 1990 the population was 96% white and is now just over 75% white. The black population has increased six fold from 2% to 13%, the Asian population has doubled and the Hispanic population increased five times.

Pennsauken is also transitioning racially. There is a larger decline in their white population which was 80.5% in 1990 and more recently at 47.6%. There is a much steeper decline of the black population, a slower decline of the Hispanic population and an increase in the Asian population. The high school is experiencing the same declines and increases as the larger community.

Removing Merchantville from Pennsauken High School is not a traditional story of "white flight" since there has not recently been one group leaving the school. Statistically speaking, removing the white Merchantville students from the school will not result in any change regarding racial composition at the school since the change in in the minority population would be less than 1%. This is not a school with just two racial groups. The Merchantville students that attend Pennsauken are more black and Hispanic. They are a diverse set of students, but not identically diverse to the Pennsauken high school student body.

She disagrees with Dr. Fine's argument that it would be predominantly white families exiting Pennsauken High School – it would be predominately minority families. There is a loss of all populations at the school except Asians. Therefore, severing the relationship would not set a precedent for allowing "white flight."

Usually segregation is measured by the presence or absence of white students and there is virtually no change in the racial composition of Pennsauken High School if Merchantville students are not there. There will not be a loss to the Pennsauken students since they would not have known the Merchantville students before they were to attend. Dr. Fine's arguments about loss are not supported since she did not interview any Pennsauken students about this subject.

There would be a 3.5% increase in the minority population at Haddon Heights High School over the five-year phase in of Merchantville students. Additionally, the addition of Merchantville will also increase the class diversity at the school because Merchantville is not as affluent as Haddon Heights, but more affluent than Lawnside. Overall, she believes the new relationship at Haddon Heights will have a positive racial and educational impact on Haddon Heights and by extension also Barrington and Lawnside.

Dr. Fine's comparison of economically disadvantaged students at Pennsauken and Haddon Heights is lacking information since compiling statistics of students based only on the free or reduced-lunch program is a crude measure of economic disadvantage. More information about the students would require a higher security clearance since it would include private information about students and therefore would be difficult to obtain. Additionally, there is no precise information about test scores available to determine if some students were close to proficient on the standardized tests. Dr. Fine's statistical analysis of the racial groups at Pennsauken and Merchantville is not reliable because she uses statistical methods that require large sample sizes and she is not satisfying the basic numeric assumptions in order for the data to be reliable. Also, Dr. Fine's opinion about how Merchantville students will perform at Haddon Heights is based on unclear data.

Dr. Charles disagrees that severing the relationship will necessarily lead to the departure of additional white students since there is already an increasing tendency among many Pennsauken and Merchantville students to make choices outside of Pennsauken High School that do not require financial resources.

After considering the testimony offered and the exhibits entered, factual determinations and conclusions of law must be made regarding the impact severance of the relationship will have on the quality of education, the financial condition and the racial composition of the student population of each district.

With regard to the quality of education, the credible testimony of Anthony Arcordia, Dr. Johnson, Ronald Corn and Michael Adams regarding the existing sending-receiving relationships Barrington and Lawnside enjoy with Haddon Heights, coupled with the credible testimony of Scott Strong, Corn and Adams as to their vision for adding Merchantville to the Haddon Heights student population compel me, in the absence of any evidence to the contrary, to FIND that no negative impact will be visited upon Merchantville with regard to the quality of the educations its students receive if severance is granted.

Considering the expert testimony of Peter Carter and Dr. Fine, I assign greater weight to the testimony of Mr. Carter with regard to the impact severance will have on the quality of education offered by Pennsauken in light of he vast lifelong accumulation of practical hands on experience in operating schools and school districts. Accordingly, I FIND that severance of the sending-receiving relationship between Merchantville and Pennsauken will not result in a negative impact on the quality of education offered by Pennsauken.

Regarding the financial condition of the school districts, the credible testimony of Strong, Adams and Johnson paint a picture wherein even though petitioner would face higher transportation costs if severance were granted, that the districts have many opportunities of trying to mitigate costs through the use of shared services agreements and book rotations.

The parties offered expert testimony by Mr. Kirtland and Mr. Carter, on behalf of petitioner, and Mr. Higgins, on behalf of respondent to opine as to whether either district would suffer substantial negative impact if the petition is granted. Kirtland and Carter concluded that there would be no negative impact on the financial condition of either district, while Higgins asserted that there would be a substantial negative impact on the financial condition of respondent.

I give the most weight to the testimony of Mr. Kirtland. He demonstrated vast depth of experience in the area of school finance and particularly in the area of the impact of dissolution of regional school districts and the severance of sending-receiving relationships. He thoroughly and meticulously delineated each of his findings and conclusions, and explained in detail the methodology utilized to obtain those findings and conclusions, walking through each set of data reviewed.

Mr. Higgins, while certainly knowledgeable and practiced in his field of expertise, did not appear to provide a similarly rigorous analysis. He appeared to adopt a linear approach, indicating by his testimony that the loss of tuition dollars by itself constituted a substantial negative impact on respondent. Were that the standard to be applied, no petitioning district would ever be able to clear the bar to obtain severance. Higgins also seemed to not fully appreciate the mitigating effect that the phase-in plan would have on any impact to the financial condition of respondent, at first overstating the impact on the tax levy and ultimately acknowledging that respondent has and will have the ability to bank a levy increase under the 2% cap provisions.

Accordingly, I adopt the findings of Mr. Kirtland and FIND that granting petitioner's petition for severance will create no substantial negative impact to either district.

Regarding the impact on the racial composition of the districts, petitioner offered expert testimony by Dr. Grip and Dr. Charles, while respondent offered expert testimony by Dr. Fine. All three presented as experienced and learned with significant experience in their respective fields and considerable bodies of accomplishment. Dr. Grip, like Mr. Kirtland earlier, offered a thorough detailed analysis of his findings accompanied by explicit explanation as to methodologies used and weight given to specific data. Dr. Fine did not offer the same thorough presentation, and her testimony was undermined to some degree by her acknowledgement that she had relied on some incorrect data; her agreeing that she had concluded in another proceeding that a school with a lower percentage of white students than respondent currently has was diverse and not segregated while concluding that respondent is; and her admission that she did not employ in the current matter certain methods which she characterized in a prior hearing as essential to validating her expert opinions.

Given the forgoing, I assign greater weight to the testimony provided by Dr. Grip and Dr. Charles. Accordingly, I FIND that the racial composition of the Merchantville students who attended Pennsauken High School during the last year data was available, the 2012-13 school year, is seventeen white, three Asian, and forty-one African American and Hispanic. I further FIND that 72% of the students Merchantville sent to Pennsauken High School were minorities. I further FIND that were Merchantville's students removed, at once, during the 2012-13 school year, the change in the racial composition at Pennsauken High School would have been only a .47% increase in the minority student population. I further FIND that if Merchantville students are phased-out over the course of four years, the total change would be only a .72% increase in the minority population. I finally FIND that since the 2007-2008 school year, the black student population at Pennsauken High School has decreased more rapidly than the Caucasian student population.

LEGAL ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

N.J.S.A. 18A:38-11 mandates that any school district that lacks high school facilities must designate a high school for its pupils through a sending-receiving relationship. The "sending" and "receiving" districts then enter into a contract where the "receiving" district accommodates the out-of-district students while the "sending" district pays a fixed rate of tuition. N.J.S.A. 18A:38-8. To subsequently change or sever such relationship between school districts requires the approval of the Commissioner of Education. Bd. of Ed. of Englewood Cliffs v. Bd. of Ed. of Englewood, 257 N.J. Super. 413, 458 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd 132 N.J. 327 (1993), cert. den. 510 U.S. 991 (1993) ("termination of a sending-receiving relationship is subject ... to the approval of the Commissioner of Education") (citing N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13). Approval requires satisfaction of the criteria of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13, which provides in pertinent part:

> [To change a sending-receiving relationship requires an] application made to and approved by the commissioner. Prior to submitting an application the district seeking to sever the relationship shall prepare and submit a feasibility study, considering the educational and financial implications for the sending and receiving districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils in each of the districts, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of each of the districts. The commissioner shall make equitable determinations based upon consideration of all the circumstances, including the educational and financial implications for the affected districts, the impact on the quality of education received by pupils, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population of the districts. The commissioner shall grant the requested change in designation or allocation if no substantial negative impact will result therefrom.

"[W]hen a local board of education applies for permission to alter or terminate a sending-receiving relationship with another board [,the] commissioner is required to grant the requested change in designation or allocation if no substantial negative impact will result." Bd. of Educ. of Borough of Englewood Cliffs v. Bd. of Educ. of City of Englewood, 257 N.J. Super. 413, 459 (App. Div. 1992), aff'd, 132 N.J. 327, cert. denied, 510 U.S. 991 (1993) (citation omitted). The statutory analysis pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 for evaluating a modification request does not follow a traditional balancing process. Id. at 462. Instead, any finding of a substantial negative impact, regardless of the benefits or positive impacts in other areas, defeats the petition for termination of the sending-receiving agreement. Ibid. "The focus of the Commissioner's inquiry is whether a substantial negative impact exists at all; if it does, severance is to be denied. . . There is simply no place in this analysis for the weighing of positive impacts once a substantial negative impact has been found." Ibid. In determining the impact of changing a sending-receiving relationship, N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 specifies the factors to consider "including: the educational (offerings) and financial (budgetary) implications for both districts, the impact on the quality of education in both districts, and the effect on the racial composition of the pupil population in both districts. Ibid. (emphasis in original). Therefore, once a party has established that there would be a substantial negative impact on the racial composition, quality of education, educational offerings, or the financial standing of either district, the petition must fail.

Englewood is the seminal case regarding termination of sending-receiving relationships and its effect on the racial balance of public schools. Englewood Cliffs (Cliffs) was an affluent, predominately white, borough that sought to terminate its sending-receiving relationship with the neighboring Township of Englewood (Englewood), and filed a petition with the Commissioner of the Department of Education. The Commissioner transmitted the matter to the OAL as a contested case. At the time of the hearings, Cliffs was sending only twenty-one students to Englewood, fifteen of whom were white. However, the Englewood public school, Dwight Morrow High School (DMHS), had an increasing population of black and Hispanic students. Englewood claimed that Cliffs sought to terminate the sending-receiving relationship because Cliffs was engaged in "white flight," as opposed to the educational reasons cited by the Cliffs board. After ninety-nine days of hearings on the matter, the administrative law judge (ALJ) made numerous findings and determined that severance of the sending-receiving relationship would have a substantial negative impact on both the racial composition and the quality of education at DMHS. Englewood, supra, 257 N.J. Super. at 439–40.

The ALJ found that the number of Englewood Cliffs students who would be departing DMHS constituted a relatively small portion of the student population. But the ALJ held that the minimal number of students affected was outweighed by the fact that the termination of the sending-receiving relationship between the two schools would give the appearance of white flight. The Commissioner affirmed.

The State Board of Education affirmed the finding below, but for different reasons. The State Board's decision focused more on the State policy that "[e]ducational considerations are primary in eliminating school segregation. The elimination of racial imbalance is not to be sought as an end in itself but because such imbalance stands as a deterrent and handicap to the improvement of education for all." Englewood Cliffs Bd. of Educ. v. Englewood Bd. of Educ., 12 N.J.A.R. 566, 688 (1990). Though the Board stated that the State policy against segregation sought to avoid a concentration of students in a school such that it would be characterized as a "minority school with the attendant 'sense of stigma and resulting feeling of inferiority,'"

> [s]uch educational considerations do not include the beliefs and social values of the individuals attending a particular school. Rather, as set forth above, resolution of the legal and policy questions with which we have been presented rests on fundamental educational principles applicable in all educational settings as those principles have been expressed in the decisions of the United States and New Jersey Supreme Courts.
> [Ibid.]

In other words, the Board rejected the reliance on the mere appearance of white flight as a foundation for the finding of a substantial negative impact on the quality of education. Instead, the Board focused on the connection between racial imbalance and the quality of education, noting that when there is a substantial negative impact on racial composition of a school, there is also a substantial negative impact on the quality of education at that school due to both the inherent benefits of an integrated learning environment as well as the stigma attached to "minority schools." This was made plain by the Appellate Division, which after affirming the holding of the State Board, declared that a mandate of N.J.S.A. 18A:38-13 was "to avoid withdrawals for discriminatory purposes which would have the effect of recreating segregated school systems with their inherent inequality of educational opportunity." Englewood, supra, 257 N.J. Super. at 464. "More to the point is the interrelationship between racial balance and education . . . These are not isolated factors. They are different sides of the same coin." Ibid.

In a recent decision considering a petition seeking severance, the Commissioner of Education noted that "Englewood and its progeny establish that a de minimis statistical change may constitute a "substantial negative impact" when coupled with certain aggravating circumstances. Examples of such aggravating circumstances include, inter alia, a trend of rapidly declining Caucasian enrollment, evidence of projected symbolic loss, and a high percentage of projected change in the gross Caucasian population upon severance." Board of Education of the Borough of Longport, Atlantic County v. Board of Education of the City of Atlantic City, Atlantic County, and Board of Education of the City of Ocean City, Atlantic County, OAL DKT. NO. EDU 8152-12, AGENCY DKT. NO. 112-4/12 (2014).

In the present matter, the record reflects that whether the Merchantville Students were to move to Haddon Heights all at once or phased in over a four year period, as is expected, the resulting increase in the minority population at Pennsauken High School would be less than one percent. I CONCLUDE that this constitutes a de minimis statistical change which much nonetheless be scrutinized for aggravating circumstances.

The record reflects, per the credible expert testimony of Dr. Charles, that departure of the Merchantville students will not statistically significantly change the racial composition of Pennsauken High School, thus there cannot be said to be a high percentage of projected change in the gross Caucasian population should severance be granted. Additionally, Dr. Grip noted that an anticipated subsequent change in racial composition (also less than one percent in 2017-2018 school year) will occur after the phase-in has completed and cannot be attributed to severance. Similarly, Dr. Charles noted that the population of black students has decreased more rapidly in Pennsauken since 2007-2008 than the Caucasian student population. This would tend against a finding of a consistent and rapid decrease in Caucasian enrollment at Pennsauken over time. Dr. Fine's assertion that this is because any Caucasian students who could leave have already left, either to Parochial Schools or through School Choice is unsupported net opinion.

Similarly, the record does not contain evidence of projected symbolic loss. To the contrary, Dr. Charles and Mr. Carter offered credible expert testimony that the phase in to be employed, by which Merchantville Students currently enrolled at Pennsauken High School would remain so until graduation while Merchantville students entering high school would attend Haddon Heights rather than Pennsauken would guarantee that students at Pennsauken would not be noticing an absence of former classmates. Essentially, these students, having attended separate middles schools, would not have met and their absence would be neither noted nor felt. Dr. Fine's testimony that students are perceptive and generally aware of policies affecting their education appears to also be unsupported net opinion.

The record does not reflect the existence of aggravating circumstances which would render an otherwise de minimis change in the racial composition of Pennsauken High School a substantial negative impact. It appears that a racially diverse, majority-minority subset of students would be removed from a somewhat similarly (although not identically) diverse school population and be placed into another diverse setting. Accordingly, I CONCLUDE that granting Merchantville's petition would not have a substantial negative impact on the racial composition of either district.

The foregoing demonstrates that severing the sending-receiving relationship between petitioner and respondent would produce no substantial negative impact on the quality of education, the financial condition and the racial composition of the student population of districts. I therefore CONCLUDE that Merchantville's petition must be GRANTED.

ORDER

Merchantville's application for severance of its sending-receiving relationship with Pennsauken is hereby GRANTED, subject to its entering into a new sending-receiving relationship with Haddon Heights for a minimum duration of five years.

I hereby FILE this initial decision with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION for consideration.

This recommended decision may be adopted, modified or rejected by the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, who by law is authorized to make a final decision in this matter. If the Commissioner of the Department of Education does not adopt, modify or reject this decision within forty-five days and unless such time limit is otherwise extended, this recommended decision shall become a final decision in accordance with N.J.S.A. 52:14B-10.

Within thirteen days from the date on which this recommended decision was mailed to the parties, any party may file written exceptions with the COMMISSIONER OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, ATTN: BUREAU OF CONTROVERSIES AND DISPUTES, 100 Riverview Plaza, 4th Floor, PO Box 500, Trenton, New Jersey 08625-0500, marked "Attention: Exceptions." A copy of any exceptions must be sent to the judge and to the other parties.

SYNOPSIS

On February 24, 2015, petitioner appealed the decision of the Eligibility Appeals Committee (EAC) of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA) which found that her son, K.F., transferred from Williamstown High School to Delsea Regional High School for athletic advantage, and was accordingly deemed ineligible to participate in basketball for a one-year period. Petitioner subsequently failed to submit a brief in support of her appeal, as required by N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3(a); furthermore, petitioner did not request additional time to file her brief under N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3(d).

The Commissioner found that the petitioner did not file the required brief in a timely manner, nor has she provided any reason for her failure to do so. Accordingly, the Commissioner concluded that petitioner has abandoned her cause of action, and dismissed the petition.

RESPONDENT.	:

For Petitioner, Amy R. Guerin, Esq. (The Guerin Law Firm, P.C.)

For Respondent, Steven P. Goodell, Esq. (Herbert, Van Ness, Cayci & Goodell, P.C.)

This matter concerns a decision rendered by the Eligibility Appeals Committee of the New Jersey State Interscholastic Athletic Association (NJSIAA), finding that K.F. – a high school senior – transferred from Williamstown High School to Delsea Regional High School for athletic advantage. Consequently, K.F. was deemed ineligible to participate in basketball for a one-year period under NJSIAA bylaws.

On February 24, 2015, petitioner appealed the NJSIAA's decision to the Commissioner on her son's behalf, pursuant to N.J.S.A. 18A:11-3. Via letter to the parties dated March 2, 2015, the Director of the Bureau of Controversies and Disputes acknowledged receipt of the petition, directed the NJSIAA to file its answer within 10 days of its receipt of same , and issued a briefing schedule in accordance with N.J.A.C. 6A:3-7.3. The NJSIAA answered the petition on March 9, 2015. To date, petitioner has failed to submit a brief in support of her

Board Policy 3362, Sexual Harassment, states that "[s]exual harassment includes all unwelcome . . . verbal contacts of a sexual nature that would not have happened but for the employees gender." Policy 3362 further states that "when such conduct is severe and pervasive and has the purpose or effect of unreasonably altering or interfering with work performance or creating an intimidating, hostile, or offensive working environment, the employee shall have cause for complaint."

Board Policy 3281, Inappropriate Staff Conduct, states in relevant part that "[I]nappropriate conduct by a school staff member outside their professional responsibilities may be considered conduct unbecoming a staff member. Therefore, school staff members are advised to be concerned with such conduct which may include, but is not limited to, communications and/or publications using emails, text-messaging, social networking sites, or any other medium that is directed and/or available to pupils or for public display."

Board Policy 3211, Code of Ethics, indicates that "the educator shall exert every effort to raise professional standards to promote a climate that encourages the exercise of professional judgment, to achieve conditions which attract persons worthy of the trust to careers in education."

Board Policy 1140, Affirmative Action Program, establishes that the program shall "promote the acceptance of persons of diverse backgrounds regardless of race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status." Further, this Policy provides that the Board's affirmative action program will "foster a learning environment that is free from all forms of prejudice, discrimination, and harassment based upon race, creed, color, national origin, ancestry, age, martial status, affectional or sexual orientation, gender, religion, disability, or socioeconomic status in policies, programs, and practices of the Board of Education."

Board Policy 3321, Acceptable Use of Computer Network(s)/Computers and Resources by Teaching Staff Members, advises employees that the Board retains the right to have the Superintendent or designee monitor network activity, in any form necessary, to maintain the integrity of the network(s) and ensure its proper use." Policy 3321 further states that "the Board provides access to computer network(s)/computers for administrative and educational purposes only." Moreover, the foregoing policy, in relevant part, states that "any individual engaging in the following actions declared unethical, unacceptable or illegal when using computer network(s)/computers shall be subject to discipline or legal action: (1) using the computer network(s)computers for . . . inappropriate or obscene purposes."

Finally, Board Policy 3351, Healthy Workplace Environment, requires that "employees interact with each other with dignity and respect" and further states that "repeated malicious conduct of an employee or group of employees directed toward another employee or group of employees in the workplace that a reasonable person would find hostile and offensive is unacceptable and is not conducive to establishing or maintaining a healthy workplace environment."

On October 23, 2014, during a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training, Ms. Lechelt actively participated in a group chat on the Today's Meet website (https://todaysmeet.com/engraderocks) through the District's computer network. Today's Meet is a public web forum, accessible by all Board employees and students. The group chat spanned for a period of roughly two and a half hours and served no instructional purpose. Rather, the chat was graphically sexual in nature; discriminatory to women, homosexuals, elderly persons and special education/handicap students; highly offensive to anyone not involved with same; and created a hostile work environment to other Board employees who were able to view, at any point in time, the content of the discussion.

The nature of the foregoing conversation is egregious beyond the bounds of decency. No persons and/or classifications of persons were spared. Ms. Lechelt's behavior, as set forth more specifically below, illustrates a complete and shameful disregard of her responsibilities as an employee of the Edison Township Board of Education and a member of the teaching profession, including, but not necessarily limited to, violations of the above mentioned policies. Ms. Lechelt's conduct has caused both members of the Board's Administration and members of the staff grave concerns over her intentions and capabilities, to the point of no longer feeling comfortable to be in her presence and/or permitting her to interact with other Board employees or students.

I hereby charge Maryellen Lechelt with conduct unbecoming a teaching staff member, misbehavior and/or other just cause, including but not necessarily limited to insubordination; all of which warrant her dismissal, pursuant to N.J.S.A.18A:28-5, and 18A:6-10.1, et seq. As more specifically set forth below, it is clear that she has exhibited a callous disregard for the expectations of her employer, as well as the rights of other employees of the Board, to conduct their daily activities in an environment that is free from harassment, discrimination, bullying and inappropriate conduct and communications, as well as an egregious breach of the professional standards imposed upon her as a member of the teaching profession.

SPECIFICATION OF CHARGES

CHARGE I

Unbecoming Conduct and/or Other Just Cause
Inappropriate Staff Conduct With Other Staff Members

On October 23, 2014, while attending a voluntary Engrade Chromebook Training at the Board's Offices, Maryellen Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct that violated New Jersey Law, as well as Board policies, regulations and procedures regarding staff interaction with and/or concerning other staff members. More specifically, Ms. Lechelt actively participated in a conversation through the District's network, in a public chat room ("Today's Meet"), that was visible to those present in the room and obtainable by any District employee and student through the Today's Meet website, which was discriminatory, offensive, rife with sexual innuendo and ultimately created a hostile work environment (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). This misconduct by Ms. Lechelt is unconscionable and constitutes unbecoming conduct, misbehavior, neglect, insubordination, and/or other just cause for dismissal.

Count 1 - Inappropriate comments about Sara Bleekinger – Engrade Trainer

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct directed towards Ms. Bleekinger, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive, harassing and sexual in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments about Ms. Bleekinger:

1. "the eyebrows are distracting";
2. "im [sic] trying to have her look at you";
3. "your [sic] making her nervous";
4. "this is essentially like a robot teaching the class";
5. Regarding the trainer, Ms. Bleekinger, allegedly looking at Mr. Van Pelt, Ms. Lechelt stated, "lets make it a drinking game";
6. "im [sic] starting to get a bit of a fargo accent from her";
7. "still interested tvp???"

8. "I have a feeling shed rather go out with me"

9. "I think her car is parked behind him and she's seeing if she left her windows open"

10. "im [sic] worried you'll catch something from her backchannel"[1];

11. "lets take her to lunch tvp . . . you can share a burrito";

12. "theres [sic] not enough room in her repository for two";

13. "no hes [sic] going to have to take it slow, . . . no backchannels yet . . . that's his signature move too";

14. "I'm going to use the bathroom now . . . I think I like her too";

15. In response to Mr. Van Pelt's statement that he was "thinking of a super smart question to ask that will make her melt," Ms. Lechelt stated, "what is it? Do you want to blow me?"

Ms. Lechelt's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

Count 2 - Inappropriate comments about special education/handicap students

On October 23, 2014, Ms. Lechelt engaged in a course of misconduct directed towards special education/handicap students, which was inappropriate, foul, discriminatory, offensive and harassing in nature (the content of which is set forth more fully in Exhibit B of the Sworn Statement of Evidence). Such conduct resulted from a group chat through "Today's Meet" that was visible to Alysia Battista and others who were present in the Training, as well as to the entire Edison Township School District community, as "Today's Meet" is a public chat room which maintains a transcript of each conversation and is accessible to all Board employees and students.

More specifically, Ms. Lechelt made the following comments concerning special education/handicap students:

- "I like the group name 'morons'";
- "they take the tart cart home";
- "I also prefer my lows 'jesus Christ, why the fuck did they place you with me?'";

[1] A reference to anal sex.

- "middle group = 'just shut your mouth and do your work.'"

Ms. Lechelt's conduct resulted in a disruption of the October 23, 2014 Engrade Training, created a hostile school environment for anyone who has had occasion to review her comments and made it unpleasant for Ms. Battista and other staff members to be in her presence for fear that they will either be harassed, discriminated against and embarrassed; made to feel uncomfortable; and/or forced to hear and or view Ms. Lechelt make further inappropriate and offensive comments to them, about them and/or about others.

Count 3 - Inappropriate comments about Superintendent of Schools, Dr. O'Malley
